Sanderson Eagles Take Both Games

On Saturday, October 12, the Sanderson Eagles met the Fort Davis team in their initial basket ball game of the season. Two games were played, one at Fort Davis Saturday morning at eleven o'clock, and the second at Alpine Saturday afternoon. Both games were in favor of the Eagles, the score of the morning game being 22 to 8, and the score for the afternoon game being 23 to 3 in favor of the Eagles.

The boys deserve much credit this being their first game of the season, and having only such a small amount of practice. Several from here attended the game.

Proceedings of District Court

District court convened Monday morning at 10 o'clock in the new court house. It was an adjourned session from the regular July term of court. District Judge Joseph Jones, District Attorney Julian LaCrosse, official court stenographer Miss Belle Sutherland, and District Clerk Luella Lemons were all at their post of duty. The grand jury was impaneled and after some instructions from the Judge, who appointed Jim Kerr foreman, they retired to the jury room and immediately got down to business. Sheriff Cook presented deputy J. J. Nance and Jerry Spencer for bailiffs and they were sworn in and went on duty at once.

The following men had been summoned to act as grand jurors: C. H. Arvin, J. D. Nichols, B. E. Tate, J. C. Mitchell, E. W. Hardgrave, Jim Kerr, Roy Barksdale, P. E. Dishman, Tip Frazier, A. F. Buchanan, C. F. Stavley, W. C. Vaughn. Joe Brown who had previously been summoned was unable to get here.

At 5 o'clock Monday evening the grand jury adjourned, having finished its business. They brought in three indictments as follows:

J. E. Morris was indicted for assault with intent to rob. Morris is the man who attempted to hold up the Loma Alta filling station a few days ago and shot Lupe Escamilla with a 22 calibre pistol.

An indictment was returned against Francisco Carrasco, charging murder. Carrasco was formerly a Mexican deputy under former Sheriff Banner and is charged with killing Juan Postes on Feb. 4, 1930.

Manuel Nieto was indicted for bigamy.

The petit jury was convened Wednesday and the first case called was that of the State of Texas vs. Francisco Carrasco, charged with murder. Alfred E. Creigh Jr., represented the defendant. This case was given to the jury late Wednesday evening. After being out all night the jury came in about 9:30 Thursday morning with a verdict of not guilty; finding that Carrasco shot Postes in self defense.

The case of Manuel Nieto for bigamy was continued to next term of court.

Today a civil suit, Clyde Deaton vs. Ben H. Brown, is being tried.

Austin Nance and Harry Dishman left Thursday noon for Bryan Texas, where they will witness the T. C. U. A. and M. foot ball game Saturday.

October 22 the American Legion will stage a dance and supper at the Masonic Temple. All are invited.

Mrs. Helen Daniels is helping at the Empress Drug Store this week.

Newsy Notes From The High School

American Education Week is to be observed this year from Monday, November 10, through Sunday, November 16. This week should be of great significance to every American citizen. To the child it should mean the appreciation of his obligation to match the privilege of free schooling with good spirit and hearty endeavor. To the teacher it should be a call to serve the children of the community and to work on the problems of his profession. To the parent this week should be a fuller understanding of the great adventure of parenthood, its duties, privileges, and opportunities. To the citizen it should mean an intelligent faith in the school as our greatest collective enterprise, the foundation of our liberties, the protector of our achievements of our glorious past, and the promise of fuller life for tomorrow.

Each day of this week is to be devoted to some special topic that concerns our education problem of today. The subject for Monday has to do with the schools and the enrichment of human life. The question of how schools promote patriotism and world understanding is to be the subject for Tuesday. The schools of yesterday and the schools of today are to be discussed on Wednesday and Thursday. The theme for Friday is the question of what the school has helped the individual to achieve, and on Saturday what the school has helped America to achieve. The last day of American Education Week is to be devoted to the discussion of our schools of tomorrow and the future of America.

There are forty-two youngsters enrolled in the primary department of the Sanderson Public School this year. This is the largest number that this section has ever had. The larger percent of this group is boys, there being 27 boys and only 15 girls. Those enrolled in this department are: James Blackwelder, Martin Bodkin, John Louis Breg, Billy Cargile, Alfred Creigh, Jesse Daniels, Harold Lee Grigsby, Walter Haass, Karlton Halbert, Earl Hurst, Robert Johnson, Campbell Kerr, Gene Lock, Bobby Mason, Earl McDonald, James McDonald, Theo McDonald, Cherry Miller, Terry Miller, Julian O'Bryant, Bobbie O'Dell, Orvy Roy Roberts, Bill Stirman, Loyd Utterback, Jimmie Wilkinon, Tom Young, Bruce Hoog, Margaret Arrington, Charlotte Caruthers, Mary Pearl Caruthers, Doris Cochran, Mary Cook, Helen Ruth Harrell, Marzee Haynes, Inez Lester, Lois Luellen, Roberta Lochausen, Mary Lois McAnally, Anna Rosa Milan, Earline Stirman, Joyce Yeates, and Virginia Senney.

These young boys and girls are under the supervision of Mrs. K. C. Parker and Mrs. M. K. Sandifer. Mrs. Parker has her degree from Sul Ross State Teachers College of Alpine, and has since attended the University of Texas. Mrs. Sandifer came to us from Denton, where she attended the College of Industrial Arts.

Big Time Here On October 22

You have been looking the whole season for that big time. Well it is going to happen at the Masonic Temple, October 22, when State Commander Brennan of the American Legion Department of Texas comes to Sanderson to install the "Clarence Hallie Mulkey Post No. 106" of the American Legion and deliver the charter.

This is going to be a big affair and you must not miss it. Everyone is invited throughout the entire evening. You are invited to attend the dancing, supper, installation, and the entire program, and the tickets will be $1.50 per couple.

Subscribers to Sanderson Times

Again we are going to remind you that you must pay your subscription to The Times before November 1. There will have to be a limit. We have insisted that you give this your attention, some of you have even failed to acknowledge receiving a statement to the effect that you owe on your paper. This must be attended to. The law of Texas is that your paper be paid in advance. We favor none. Wish we could, as we feel positive that it is a thing that you have neglected.

Please come in and pay your dues to The Times, we must have it before November 1, if not, all that are six months or more in arrears will be discontinued.

Methodist Ministers Change Pastorates

At the annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, Rev. W. M. Justice, pastor of the church at this city was appointed pastor of the church at Tularosa, New Mexico, and with his family left this week for his new church.

It is with regret to the many friends of the Rev. and wife that they will no longer be among us, for we are sure that by leaving Sanderson they leave many warm friends.

The Conference appointed Rev. B. M. Stradley as pastor of the Sanderson church, who comes highly recommended by the Conference and by the people he has served, coming here from Tularosa. Rev. Stradley is expected to take up his duty here October 19th.

All parents and all others that wish to attend are invited to meet at Sanderson High School Wednesday, October 22, at 3:30 p. m. for the flag raising and to hear State Commander Brennan of the American Legion, Department of Texas, speak. Do not miss this occasion.

Morris Gets Five Years in the Pen

Thursday morning the case of the State of Texas vs. J. E. Morris charged with assault with intent to rob, was called. Testimony and arguments in the case were concluded in the forenoon and the jury received the case at 12:00 o'clock. Alfred Creigh represented the defendant. After being out only a short while the jury in this case returned a verdict of guilty and assessed Morris' penalty at five years in the penitentiary.

O. H. McAdams left Thursday of this week for San Antonio.

Mrs. Laura Bless will be at Loucile Beauty shop Monday and Tuesday, Oct. 20th. and 21st. All those wanting permanent waves phone the beauty shop for appointment.

B. C. Moreland and family were expected to arrive in Sanderson the latter part of this week from Fort Worth. B. C. is a son of C. A. Moreland. The Morelands will be residents of this city.

Pine for Pulpwood
A great potential source of pulpwood for paper manufacture in this country is the pine belt of the South, as southern pine grows seven to ten times faster than red spruce, long used for paper manufacture.

You should know this about oil, says mechanic

The proper oiling of household devices presents a problem different from any other form of lubrication. Sewing machines, vacuum cleaners, lawn mowers, the electric motors of washers, fans, refrigerators and similar devices have a tendency to collect dirt and rust when not in service. Consequently oil intended for general household use should clean and protect as well as lubricate.

3-in-One Oil will do these three things. For, unlike ordinary oil, it is really three high quality oils in one—animal, mineral and vegetable. It penetrates quickly, cleans the metal surfaces, "stays put", reduces wear and saves repairs. It also prevents rust and tarnish.

Don't make the mistake of thinking "any kind of oil will do." Play safe; insist on 3-in-One Oil. Sold everywhere, by good grocery, hardware, drug and general stores, in 15c and 30c sizes. For your protection, look for the trade mark "3-in-One" printed in Red on every package.

Can I Learn to Fly?

by William R. Nelson

How to Taxi

AIRPLANES do not zig-zag when taxiing along the ground because they are unruly. The snake-like course is a safety measure.

"Now I want you to taxi out," my instructor said through the phones connected to my helmet. "To start, open the throttle slowly, until the plane begins to move, then cut the motor speed. Never taxi rapidly."

"You have many things to watch for—ground obstructions, other planes, chuck holes, people—and you have a 'blind spot' in front of you. Constantly turn first one way, then the other, gently, zig-zagging enough to uncover the area directly ahead."

I pushed the throttle lever on the left side of the cockpit forward—forward is open, back is closed—slowly. Soft earth momentarily held the wheels. My instructor "kicked" the rudder pedals back and forth slowly. The slipstream of air from the propeller striking the huge rudder surface pushed the tail from side to side. The movement started us forward.

"To turn right while taxiing, move the stick right, but put on left rudder," came through the phones. "We cross the controls—right stick and right rudder turn the plane to the right in flight—on the ground because they are more sensitive that way."

I did as he instructed and the plane turned slowly to the right. A movement of the stick to the left and a full forward movement of the right rudder pedal brought it back and turned us to the left. But instead of a "gentle" grapevine movement my first attempts were like a block letter "S."

Having just learned how to use the stick and rudder pedals to make turns in flight, I found it awkward to "cross" them. Then, too, a plane once it does start turning it seems determined to keep right on doing so.

As we reached the starting point my instructor spoke again.

"Now turn left and blast the motor, then 'cut' it."

I did so and we wheeled around to the left and stopped.

"Now look all around to see if the air and ground ahead are clear, then hold the controls and blast the motor until you head into the wind."

By some rather jumpy blasts I finally managed to "kick the tail" around, took another look around, and we were ready to "give 'er the gun."

The Correct Take-Off

MODERN airplanes appear to take off so easily, when an experienced pilot is at the controls, the maneuver seems simple. Just getting the plane into the air is easy, but there is a knack to it, the same as there is to shifting gears on an automobile.

"The secret of a good take-off is holding the plane in a straight line while running along the ground," my instructor began as we were about to start.

"Your rudder movements will have to be more pronounced on the ground because it has less effect there. We kick the rudder first one way, then the other, to hold to a straight course."

I opened the throttle and at the same time pushed the stick forward. As we started the tail came up to flying position, which brings the fuselage parallel to the ground. As we picked up speed I was cautioned to let the stick come back slowly to neutral. It will do so of its own accord if not held forward. As it reached neutral we bounced slightly once or twice, then were in the air and climbing slowly.

"Keep the wings level. Kick the rudder pedals quickly if the nose swings away from your course. Try to keep aimed at that red barn over there," came through the speaking tube.

Holding a straight course both on the ground and in the climb was more difficult than I had suspected. Just as I'd get the plane back on its course a wing would "drop," and in making the sidewise movement of the stick to bring it up I'd forget about the rudder and the nose of the plane would veer to one side or the other.

"You will notice you have to hold pressure on the right rudder pedal to keep to your course," my instructor said. "That is necessary to offset torque caused by the propeller. Kick the rudder quickly and at the first sign of turning. If the nose starts to swing right, kick left rudder. If left, kick right rudder. But do it quickly and repeat it if necessary. Keep the wings level. Don't climb too rapidly."

We leveled out, made our turns about the pattern, and cut the motor to idling for the glide to land. He made the landing with me "following through" on the controls.

Peace Portal

The Portal of Peace is a massive concrete structure in the form of a gateway. It is located at Blaine, Wash., and was dedicated September 5, 1921, in honor of the peace between the United States and Canada, which had lasted for more than 100 years without a break. The memorial, which cost $40,000, stands 100 yards from the international boundary, where the forty-ninth parallel meets Boundary Bay.

Warts Cause of Big Loss Yearly

Estimated That From 15 to 25 Per Cent of Cattle Hides Are Hurt.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

At last the United States Department of Agriculture has stripped the inelegant wart of some of its mystery by proving that it can be transmitted from one animal to another.

Warts Are "Catching."
Dr. Gilbert T. Creech, veterinarian who proved that warts are "catching," says they are probably caused by a filterable virus, which is the scientist's term for a form of life so small that it cannot be distinguished in any way except by its damage. Positive evidence that some form of life causes the warts, however, is yet lacking.

Warts from the hides of slaughtered cattle were finely ground with salt solution and applied to the scratched skin surfaces of calves. In some cases the solutions were injected into the skin with a hypodermic needle. Nearly three out of four calves thus treated contracted warts.

Many Warty Hides.
One large slaughter house has estimated that 15 to 25 per cent of the cattle coming through its abattoir at certain seasons have warty hides. Each wart means a hole in the leather. The yearly loss because of warty hides is of considerable importance to the leather industry. Large, pendulous warts on calves often sap their strength and interfere with their growth.

Save Best Cockerels for Future Breeders

Many people make the mistake of selling the most rapidly growing and early maturing cockerels. This is a mistake and the following of this practice will run down any flock rapidly. A few of the fast growing and early maturing cockerels should be saved from which to select the future breeders.

At the same time, however, the exceptionally early maturing bird is also to be avoided. Males which develop over-sized combs and mature too early sexually will not prove as desirable in breeding flock. It is the larger birds with wide backs and deep bodies which have a uniform growth of comb with that of the body that should be selected. Careful attention should also be given to health. Good health is indicated by a bright eye and a bright red comb and wattles.

Limberneck Is Usually Due to Meat Poisoning

Limberneck in poultry, so-called, is usually due to poisoning from eating dead carcasses, maggots from carcasses and spoiled food from the kitchen, according to Dr. L. P. Doyle, Purdue university. Instances are common where large lots of chickens had access to one of these sources of poison.

Strangely enough all fowls are not poisoned by eating spoiled feed. Doctor Doyle states, but no one can tell when it will be poisonous and his recommendation is that birds be confined to lots or when not practicable make sure that no carcasses lie around the yards.

Grubs Cause Loss

Control of cattle grubs or heel flies is one of the most important insect problems with which owners of cattle of all classes have to deal, says the United States Department of Agriculture. The cattle grubs, or as they are otherwise known, "warbles" or "wolves," cause losses estimated at $50,000,000 to $100,000,000 annually. The adult form of the insect, the heel fly, is rarely seen, although its presence terrifies cattle.

Farm Hints

A few rods of tile may make a whole field tillable.

When corn is cut at the right stage of maturity, good silage can be made without tramping, except, perhaps, the last few feet.

A weak place, perhaps, in swine husbandry is the fact that little reliable data is kept concerning the comparative feeding qualities of pigs of different parentage.

Good market and hatching eggs are excellent show eggs. They should be uniform in size, shape and color. To reach the show in good condition they should be packed carefully.

It is time to dip the old hens for lice. Pullets will soon be moved into the laying quarters with the old hens. Delousing the hens will prevent the pullets from becoming lousy.

Although the work is still in the experimental stage, evidence is being accumulated to support the view that for certain purposes first generation crossbreds in poultry may be more economical than pure breeds.

Poultrymen who use galvanized sheet iron drinking fountains should empty out the older water each morning and replace with fresh water. The same practice, of course, is good with any type of fountain.

Lesson for October 19

SIMEON AND ANNA: THE INSIGHT OF THE PURE IN HEART

LESSON TEXT—Luke 2:25-35.
GOLDEN TEXT—Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Being Glad for God's Best Gift.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Simeon and Anna See Jesus.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Know Jesus.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How Wisdom Depends on Character.

The lesson title is somewhat misleading in that it implies that the insight of Simeon and Anna was due to their purity of heart, whereas it was due to the fact of the indwelling Holy Spirit. Those indwelt by the Spirit will be pure in heart, but not all the pure in heart have such insight.

1. Simeon (Luke 2:25-35).
(1) His character (v. 25).

(2) He was just.
That is, honest and upright in all his dealings with men. We are not told what his occupation was, but we are assured that he was a man trusted by all who knew him. If he were a merchant, his customers got the kind of goods represented with full weight and measure. In spite of the corruptions of his time, he did not take advantage of his fellow men in business deals.

(3) Devout.
He was just because he was God-fearing. Many boast of their morality while unwilling to bow their knees to God in prayer.

(4) He looked for the Messiah.
God's word had promised that Christ should come. He believed in the truthfulness of that word. The same word that told of Christ's first coming tells of his second coming (Hebrews 9:28). While waiting for the Messiah, he kept faithfully discharging his duty. Intelligent looking for the coming of Jesus Christ means diligence in daily duties, not idly gazing into the heavens.

(5) The Holy Spirit was upon him.
This was the secret of his godly and practical living. The Christ-like life is only possible to those who are filled with the Holy Ghost.

2. His reward (vv. 26-28).

The Holy Spirit revealed unto him that he should see the Messiah before he died. At the appointed time the Spirit led him into the temple where Joseph and Mary came to present Jesus to God. Simeon took him in his arms and blessed God. The most important event in every life is to see Christ. One has missed the greatest experience of life if he has not seen Christ.

3. Simeon's song (vv. 29-33).

This is the Nunc Dimittis sung by Christians since the Fifth century. A. D. Simeon was now ready to die because he had seen God's salvation. Salvation is in and through Christ's atonement on the cross. No one is ready to die until he has seen God's salvation which was wrought out on Calvary's cross.

4. Simeon's prophecy (vv. 34, 35).

(1) The meaning of Christ to the world (v. 34).
Everyone is affected by Christ's coming. His presentation to man either results in their salvation or condemnation. There is absolutely no neutral ground. Personal attitude toward him determines all.

(2) He shall be spoken against (v. 34).
This has been fulfilled in every generation since its utterance.

(3) Meaning to Mary (v. 35).

This began to be fulfilled when she was obliged to flee Egypt in order for Jesus to escape Herod's sword. It was an intimation of what the end would be when she clasped her child to her bosom. Her heart was pierced again and again as human hate swept against her son. Its culmination was reached when she stood below his cross.

II. Anna (Luke 2:36-39).

1. Her character (vv. 36, 37).

She was irreproachable. After a married life of only seven years, she had lived as a lonely widow for about eighty-four years, during which time she devoted herself to God. She was what Paul called "a widow indeed" (I Tim. 5:5). During these long years she endured many trials and temptations, leading a life of self-denial for the sake of others. She was a woman of much prayer.

2. Her testimony (v. 38).
She gave thanks and praise of him to all who were looking for redemption. She thus had fellowship with others who had this blessed hope. Though surrounded by wickedness, many were looking for the Messiah.

No Room for Both
How foolish are we if we attempt to entertain two guests so hostile to one another as Christ Jesus and Satan! Rest assured, Christ will not live in the parlor of our hearts if we entertain Satan in the cellar of our thoughts.—Charles H. Spurgeon.

Cure for the Blues
The best cure for the blues is some devoted work for souls in the white light of God's presence.—Gospel Banner.

Dismal Prospect Faces the Future Generation

A prominent phonograph company announces that a device will soon be on the market by means of which home recording of "the voices of the children, family reunions" and the sounds attendant on every household event will be made cheap and easy.

Alas, the melancholy days are here, the mewlings of the infant on its mother's knee will make hideous the nights for many years to come.

Surely one of the strangest expressions in common use nowadays is "Thanks very much," which seems likely to pass unchallenged into the language. Why not, one wonders, "Thanks very many," or "Thanks very much," either of which forms would seem to be more intelligible.—London Times.

An Old Friend In a New Dress

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND is now prepared in convenient, palatable, chocolate coated tablets packed in small bottles.

During the three trying periods of maturity, maternity and middle age, this remedy proves its worth. 98 out of 100 report benefit after taking it.

These tablets are just as effective as the liquid.

Dancing Taught by Squares Dancing steps are being taught by means of a checkerboard floorboard recently invented by a dancing master of Berlin, Germany.

To "Point-Up" Appetite Just Stimulate Bowels

Whenever the end of the day finds you out-of-sorts; food doesn't tempt you and you don't digest; breath is bad; tongue coated, just chew a candy tablet before bedtime.

A candy Cascaret clears up a bilious, gassy, headachy condition every time. Puts appetite on edge. Helps digestion. Activates bowels.

"I know. It's like them mountains that he called after you. Ever so often, on the field, I'd used to look at them, at sun-up; there they was, the Pia Lauriers, high up and cold, with the light on them, and you'd see them for a little while, all gold, and then, when the sun was gettin' warm, and they looked sort of homelike, and not so far away, the mists would come up like cloaks, nuns' white cloaks, hidin' them, and they were gone."

The tears were near Pia's eyes. "Why, you're a poet," she said, lightly, to hide her emotion. "I'm not; I'm not even musical. . . . It's what I said; you have so much that I haven't, and there are things he'll miss. But, Jinny, we've got to remember that we love him, and want to do the best for him, and he would just hate it if we couldn't be friends."

"You mean you'll be my friend—real dinkum—no nonsense about doin' me good and improvin' me and gettin' me into 'a nice place where they'd be kind to me'?"

"I want to be your friend just as one girl to another. If I may."

"If you may," said Jinny, and flung her arms about the other's neck.

Pia's kiss, given without reserve, was still on her lips, when Jinny, without warning, sprang away, leaped to her feet, listened a moment, and then, in frantic hurry, began to put on her clothes.

"What's the matter?" asked Pia. "Matter? Hark at that!"

"I hear nothing."

"Nothing, b—! That's rain."

A sudden memory leaped into Pia's mind—

"What happens if rain comes?"

"Him say, altogether we die."

She did not quite understand—yet. But she ran out of the tent, and under the few faint drops that were beginning to fall, looked up and down the gorge. Camp had been made on a slope of barren sand and gravel at the bottom of a rock wall. There was driftwood there, and plenty of water, and, when they had halted, just before dark, it had been impossible to see any better place behind them or ahead, all the gorge, for miles, was steep-to, with a bottom almost level, that made good going, in spite of boulders and moraines of loose stone. The thread of water that here represented the Romilly, had not seemed—then—of any importance.

But already that thread was making its import felt; already a small, growing voice was audible among the boulders; tinkle and tripping of water, that came from somewhere far away. Simol had heard; already he was up, out of his tent, and running round among the other tent-flies with a stick in one hand and a lantern in the other. "Get up, you —s," they heard him shout; he wielded his stick with a powerful arm, and many a carrier woke, shrieking, under his blows. He tumbled them out; he did not waste time on Pia and Jinny, seeing them already up and dressed. Lanterns were hurriedly lit all over camp. The rain was not yet heavy, but it was increasing in the slow steady fashion that presages a downpour.

"Leavem altogether you load, get down along creek blanky quick," shouted the sergeant. "We go back."

"What is it?" asked Pia, as he came running up to her tent.

"Rain," answered the sergeant. "He fullum up this place quick time. You get down along creek, you two-fellow Sinabada, you run like hell!"

"Where to?" demanded Pia, coolly. "I show you. You go first, lightem torch." He was away again, driving the boys like cattle. Some of them wanted to collect their little belongings, their betel-bags, their pipes, their blankets. . . . Simol cracked them over the head, over the legs, hustled them without mercy. "You want to die here, you blanky black swine?" he shouted. "Get on."

The Tatata boy had already vanished into the darkness behind the camp. He needed no one to tell him what was coming. Through a rattle of rocks, Pia and Jinny hurried, backward along the way by which they had traveled earlier in the day.

"He knows some place we can get up. It must be pretty near," gasped Jinny, as they pressed forward. Running was impossible, walking not easy. One had to balance and scramble. Pia nodded, saving her breath. In the minds of both was the thought—"It may not be near enough." Simol, according to his lights had acted wisely; he had pitched camp in the one place where there was driftwood for fires and standing ground for tents; he had left behind him a way out, in case of necessity. . . . Doubtless the proper place for ascending to the heights above was on ahead, too far to reach in the dark. Doubtless one could have got back to the other way out, in the face of any ordinary rain-burst. But—was this ordinary?

In the minds of both women there was a fear that it was nothing of the kind. Where they were, the rain was now heavy, hissing on the stones, thrashing the bent shoulders of the two girls; the thread of water in the river bed was rising so that they had to walk knee-deep in many places. But that was not all; that was by no means all. Behind them, chasing, threatening, thundering, like some colossal "dragon of the prime," in search of prey came something infinitely worse. They could hear it more distinctly with every minute. It was not like a dragon now; it was like a railway train running away; like three trains; ten trains, roaring through one tunnel all together. And they were like people trapped in a tunnel, who couldn't find the refuges in the walls. In truth, the walls of the Romilly canyon were as much a trap as any tunnel; and Jinny, at least, well knew that, between those walls, you might be beaten and battered to fragments by the thing that was coming, just as you might be battered under the furious wheels of a train.

The darkness and the rain were terrible. The torch was a mockery. "To be drowned in the dark!" thought Pia, sliding over boulders, splashing in and out of pools that deepened with every minute. Then—"Oh, sweetheart, will you ever know?" Then, as she struggled through water nearing her waist, staggered against the clawing current, felt that the end of the fight was very near, came thoughts that she has never told to any; broken and breathless prayers that remain between Pia and her God.

And still, in the roaring darkness, in the rising water, the tiny ray of the torch showed no sign of Sergeant Simol.

A gust of wind came suddenly, sweeping the canyon; she did not need Jinny's clutching hand, Jinny's half-heard shout, to know that it was the outsider of the flood. . . . the end.

They flung themselves again the merciless rock wall. For the last time, Pia's torch swept up the dark. She saw—they both saw—a rope dangling down the wall. Through the shout of the coming flood pierced Sergeant Simol's bull-voice from up above—"Takem rope!"

He had found some all but impossible place of ascent, torn a liana from one of the trees that clung to the slope above the rocky wall, and was flinging it down to the "two-fellow Sinabada."

The wall sloped upwards. The rope, seen in the stream of torchlight, was very long. In a single tense instant, both girls realized that only one could be saved, and each, in the same moment, determined that it should be the other.

But Jinny, Jinny the gypsy, the dancer, unstable in all things, swift in all things, was in that last moment swift to seize and hold the glorious chance of death. While Pia, more deliberate, cooler, was endeavoring to force the rope into the other's hands; while the wall of water and tumbling rock, before which no human thing could live, was sweeping down upon the two, Jinny, crying, "Take him that!" kissed Pia, and flung herself into the flood.

There was but a second left. The rope swung Pia clear of the roaring Romilly, just in time.

Above—Sergeant Simol and the greater part of the carriers (some had been swept away, but some had followed the Tatata boy, and climbed safely out), pulled heartily, landing, in a few minutes, one white Sinabada, who, strange to say, wept and cried at being rescued. . . .

CHAPTER XIV

The sun was climbing high above the proclaimed goldfield of Tatata, now changed indeed from the lonely basin that held all its treasures untouched for so long. Light blazed from the intolerable silver of tinned roofs clustered low down in the valley—magistrate's house; licensed "hotel"; store; small field hospital. Light danced on running water that was led from springs higher up, and flumed into the various claims, dotting the whole extent of the basin—the basin that was gold bearing almost everywhere, but, nowhere, carried anything to touch the wealth accumulated in one prospecting claim at the very bottom. On new clean tents, on old soiled tents, on "bush" huts made of

Abundant Proofs That Sound Waves Can Kill

Living creatures can be struck dead by sound waves too highly pitched for the human ear to hear them, writes T. C. Bridges. These high frequency waves—called super-sonics—have been tried on animals and produced instant death. The sound appears to shatter the blood corpuscles, and death is as sure and sudden as if the creatures had been struck by lightning. Sound can do many things which seem mysterious and almost miraculous. For instance, fire can be extinguished by sound. Some little time ago Mr. Charles Kellogg of California gave a demonstration of the power of sound over flame, and by drawing a violin bow across a piece of aluminum extinguished a burning gas jet at 50 feet. Sound vibrations can not only break a wine glass but can damage a building. It is suspected that the deep, vibrating notes of organs can cause vibrations which may actually weaken the structure of a church or cathedral.

Long, Long Chance Our idea of a smart man is one, if any, who has a wife who has a higher opinion of him after they are married than she had before.—Hillsboro News-Herald.

Summing It Up There is only one time that is important—Now. It is the most important time because it is the only time when we have any power.

Fertilizing Cover Crops Helps Soil Not Enough Vegetable Matter Grown on Poor Land.

Cover crops are grown in winter to be used in improving the soil but not enough vegetable matter will be produced on a poor soil unless some fertilizer is added to secure good growth of the crop.

"Some of our farmers, who believe in cover crops, make the serious mistake of planting them on such poor land that a good growth is not secured," says E. C. Blair, extension agronomist at North Carolina State college. "It is true that the purpose of cover crops is to improve the land but they must have enough available food to produce a good growth before they can do so. Rye and oats are dependent on the soil for their supply of nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash. Legumes, which get their nitrogen from the air, must take all of their phosphoric acid and potash from the soil. Legumes also require enough nitrogen from the soil to begin growth."

Mr. Blair has found that many of the disappointments in growing winter cover crops could be eliminated by the use of moderate amounts of fertilizer at planting time. In the long run, he states, this fertilizing will not add greatly to the expense of growing the crop. Part of the amount applied in the fall may be deducted from the application next spring, especially if the cover crop itself makes a good growth and is turned under for soil improvement.

Cutting Alfalfa Hay at Opportune Moment

"There is no single stage or date on which alfalfa should be cut," says L. F. Graber, field crops specialist at the University of Wisconsin College of Agriculture. "It has been found, however, that cutting the crop too early will reduce future yields and cutting it too late causes hay of low quality."

For a permanent stand of alfalfa it should be cut later in its growth period, while if it is to be plowed down in the fall it may be cut as early as desired, Professor Graber states. In states where winter killing is a serious problem the crop should be cut only twice, as this allows for more storage of plant food in the roots and the plant will live longer. When the crop is to be cut twice a year there is no particular time that is best to cut the hay. The quality of the hay should be the guide. If the first crop is inclined to grow too coarse it should be cut when the blossoms appear. The second crop is not inclined to grow so coarse and can be cut when in full bloom without impairing the quality of the hay.

Storing Cabbage and Celery Before Freezes

Cabbage and celery should be stored before the ground freezes. Turnips, beets and similar root crops will not dry out so readily if placed in a box and covered with a little dry dirt.

Onions should be well dried before storing and should not be bruised in handling. They should be spread in single layers on shelves in a dry place.

If tomato vines are pulled before heavy frost and suspended from the ceiling in the cellar, the green fruit will ripen and if these are wrapped in paper as they ripen they will keep several weeks. When tomato vines are still bearing heavily in the garden, if the vines are well covered with straw at night, and this removed during the day the vines and fruit will be uninjured by many frosts. Squashes and pumpkins when stored without bruising will keep well.

Farm Hints

Most fungus or bacterial parasites thrive best where moisture is plentiful.

Feed cost is about 60 per cent of the total expense of producing eggs.

There is no better way than summer fallowing to control false wire worms.

Intermittent pasturing, first on one fenced-off lot, then on another, will maintain the stand for a longer time.

Pasturing lightly and cutting a hay crop does the least immediate damage, although it will eventually shorten the life of the stand.

One hundred hens will eat about 24 pounds of grain each day. At this time of year the ration should be about half grain and half mash.

Honey is a destroyer of disease germs that afflict the human family, particularly those that cause typhoid fever, dysentery, and various diarrheal affections.

Rye not only is a good feed in itself, but when pastured makes an ideal means of getting a good stand of legumes and grass which will provide pasture on through the summer after the rye is gone.

The difference between the average cost of 100 tons of kale and 100 tons of corn silage is nearly $400 in favor of the kale, while feeding experiments indicate that there is little difference in feeding value.

Happy Again

"Nothing seemed to please Betty Jean," says Mrs. James W. Nolen, 113 Ceunter St., Dallas, Texas. "She was feverish and fretful. Her appetite was poor; she seemed bilious."

"A child specialist recommended California Fig Syrup and it certainly made my little girl happy, well again in a hurry. We have used it over three years for all her upsets."

Mothers by thousands praise this pure vegetable product. Children love it. Doctors recommend it for feverish, headachy, bilious, constipated babies and children; to open the bowels in colds or children's diseases.

Appetite is increased by its use; the breath is sweetened; coated tongue is cleared; digestion and assimilation are assisted; weak stomach and bowels are strengthened.

For your protection the genuine always bears the name California.

NEVER HAD ANY

The oldest inhabitant was being interviewed by a newspaper reporter.
 "And to what do you attribute your longevity?" he was asked.
 "Eh?" queried the old man, who was rather deaf.
 "Your longevity," repeated the reporter.
 "Oh, so far as I remember," was the reply. "I've never had one."

The Magician's Loss

Conjuror—Open your hand and you

A Grave Source of Danger

The Doctor—Young man, you should

 The Patient—Then you think my

 The Doctor—No. It's trifling. But you never can be cured of your habit

TICK-TOCK!

First Mouse—What a queer place to live. How do you manage to sleep?
 Second Mouse—Very comfortably.
 I sleep between the ticks!

An Egoistic Inquiry

Why is it what I have to say

Still Patiently Waiting

Mr. Knox—I think some time during

 Mrs. Knox—Oh, I hope so! I have been waiting for years and years for yours to come to the surface, John.

Something Missing

Martin—If you refuse to marry me
 I'll blow out my brains.
 Mabel—Why, that's impossible.
 Martin—Perhaps you think that I haven't a pistol?
 Mabel—Oh, no doubt you have a pistol.

Contrast

Poore—I read somewhere that a man ought to marry exactly his opposite. Blondes should marry brunets, short people should marry tall and so on.
 Flshe—Then I ought to marry a woman with money.

She Makes Greater Use of It
 Johnny Bostonbeans—Why do they

Closed Contract With Proffer of Iced Pears

New stories about O. Henry seem almost as constant as his fame as a short-story writer. One of the best concerning his charming idiosyncrasies is related by Bob Davis, newspaper man and editor, in the Golden Book magazine.

In his early New York days O. Henry had a quaint way of changing addresses without notice to anyone, disappearing from his friends for weeks. Davis, then a stranger to the author, had been instructed to find him and to offer him first $40, then $50, and, as a limit, $80, to write introductions to a series of stories. After searching five buildings he finally found the author in a dark, cheap hall bedroom—but with a half dozen fine pears buried in a bowl of ice, as a relief from the heat.

"I have three propositions," he announced. "But I shall make the last one first." And he made the $80 offer. "If that last one is the best, you needn't make the other two," drawled O. Henry. "And moreover, mister, you can have the rest of the pears."

Mutton Dear to Both Stuart and Hanoverian

Mutton used to be regarded as having a definite if somewhat indefinable association with loyalty to the throne. When "thirty-nine noblemen and gentlemen zealously attached to the Protestant succession of the house of Hanover" founded the Kit-Kat club for the furtherance of their principles, they ordained that the standing dish at all their dinners should be mutton pie, to which they attached symbolic significance.

Why mutton should be thus identified with the Hanoverian dynasty is far from clear, but possibly George I, like George II, esteemed boiled mutton and turnips the daintiest dish that could be set before the king. The Kit-Kats, however, must have overlooked a similar fondness on the part of the Stuarts, especially in the case of Charles II, whom Rochester dubbed "our mutton-loving king."—Manchester (Eng.) Guardian.

Wooden Bowl Has History

An extravagant sum of money, the exact amount of which has not been made known, was paid for the famous bowl known as the Pepys mazer, for four centuries the property of the Edward VI almshouses at Saffron Walden, Essex, England.

The Pepys mazer is a small bowl of maplewood standing 2 3/16 inches in height and 7 3/4 inches across. Around the lip is a plain band of silver-gilt, a little deeper outside the bowl than inside. It bears the London half-marks of 1507-8 and the head of the maker's mark, which is the head of a saint. Inside the bowl is a circular medallion, a plate of silver-gilt, and an engraving of the Virgin and the Child in a glory of long rays. It now comes to America. It is so called because it was referred to in the writings of Pepys.

Coleridge's "Dream Poem"

Coleridge himself told how he came to write the poem "Kubla Khan." In consequence of a slight indisposition, an anodyne had been prescribed, from the effects of which he fell asleep in his chair, at the moment when he was reading a sentence in Purchas "Pilgrimage," beginning "Here the Khan Kubla commanded a palace to be built and a stately garden thereunto." He slept for about three hours and on awakening wrote down all the lines of the poem that have been preserved. Then he was called away on business, and on his return was unable to recall the remainder of the lines that had been composed by him in his dream.

Use of Nutgalls

Nutgalls are hard nut-like galls, especially those from the Asiatic oaks, which are produced largely in Asia Minor, Syria, Persia, Cyprus, Italy, etc. The Chinese and Japanese nutgalls of commerce, however, are from trees of the species Rhus, and they are large and irregular in form. The nutgalls are rich in tannin, which makes them valuable in the leather and dyeing industries, in the making of inks, the preparation of medicines, etc. Several New York firms are listed as importers of nutgalls from China and other countries.

Punishment

The lady of the house was telling the maid about the woman across the hall who had become extremely disturbed over the playing of the radio all night and who had gone so far as to complain to the police.

"Ain't that awful!" exclaimed the maid. "Sure, an' she ought to be put in the home they have out in the country."

"What home is that, Norah?" "Sure, ma'am, an' they call it th' Home for Indignant Women."

British Sailors in 1812

Histories of the British navy indicate that the British frigates were manned principally by Englishmen during the War of 1812. They are described as a mixed class of men, being secured in various ways. Bounties were offered for enlistment in the navy and when this did not bring enough recruits each county was required to raise a certain number in proportion to population. They were known as quota men. In addition, numbers were pressed into the service.

The Spirit of Halloween

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

Pale tapers glimmer in the sky, the dead and dying leaves go by; dimly across the faded green, strange shadows, stranger shades, are seen— It is the mystic Halloween.

ALTHOUGH this writer is no seventh son of a seventh son and therefore possessing "second sight" and the gift of prophecy, he feels perfectly safe in making a prediction. It is this:

On the night of October 31 there will be unusual activity among the juvenile population of the United States of America. Parties of them will gather in houses in which the decorative scheme will include grinning jack-o'-lanterns, dry and yellowed stalks of corn, black cats, witches et cetera. But the principal activity will be outdoors rather than indoors. In the cities and towns white-sheeted figures will roam the streets, and other figures, lacking any special costume, will flit furtively among the shadows in alleys and back streets. In the country the roads and lanes will see more night traffic than usual and dogs will bark at shadowy intruders in farm yards.

The next morning merchants in city and town will find the front windows of their stores decorated with long crawling lines of white—soap put there, but not to clean the panes. Gates will be missing from their accustomed places, benches and chairs will have disappeared, water will be gushing forth from unguarded taps and in general there will be such a transposition of any object left outdoors by the careless householder as to cause one to wonder by what strange magic have hitherto-inanimate things come to life. Farmers, finding wheels missing from their wagons—hung, perhaps, high up in a tree, or even, perhaps, discovering the wagon itself perched astride the ridgepole of the district school—will mutter the same thing that the merchant is muttering under his breath—"The little heathens!"

They shouldn't call the children that, however. "Pagans" is the word, rather than "heathens." For October 31 is Halloween and on that night young America is a throw-back to their pagan ancestry of thousands of years ago. For the boys and girls who go about on Halloween playing pranks on their elders, even though probably not one out of a hundred knows it, are simply keeping alive a custom born in England in the far-off days of the Druids—with this difference: their ancestors of ancient days observed this custom to keep away or propitiate evil spirits, whereas their descendants assume the characters of evil spirits, or at least, mischievous ones, and act accordingly.

The origin of Halloween goes back to the respect and homage paid by ancient nations to the sun. The pagans of those days, whether Egyptian, Greek or Roman, assigned a place of great importance in their pantheon to the sun god, the giver of light and heat and life. The sun marked out for them the time of work and the time of rest; it divided the year into seasons; it made possible bounteous crops of grain and fruits and under its warming rays flourished all that was beautiful and splendid and wonderful on this earth.

So it was only natural that the early pagan should set aside a day of grief for the ending of summer when his beauty and splendor declined under the frosts and winds of the coming winter, when the earth fell under the spell of the evil powers and was not to be free from them again until the coming of spring. But mingled with this grief over the passing of summer was the joy which he felt as he beheld the golden harvest of the autumn and in his heart he felt a song of thanksgiving for the ripened grain and fruit. The deity to whom the Romans were accustomed to render their thanks for these gifts was the goddess, Pomona, and they were accustomed to set apart October 31 or November 1 in her honor as a festival day in which nuts and apples, representing the winter store of fruits, figured prominently.

The Celts, the original inhabitants of the British Isles, worshiped the spirits of the forests and streams. Their priests, the Druids, held their rites beneath the great oaks which are characteristic of that land, since this tree was held in special veneration by the Celts. The Druids in time became skilled prophets in interpreting the will of the gods. They kept their sacred lore from the people and handed it down only among themselves. They taught that souls were immortal and that they passed from one body to another when life became extinct.

On October 31 the Druids taught that the Lord of Death gathered together the souls of all those who had died during the year just passed and assigned to them bodies of the animals they were to inhabit the coming twelvemonth, according to their condemnation.

Samhain, "summer's end," was November 1 to the Druids. Flocks were the Roman Pantheon to the Virgin and all the saints and martyrs of the church. The latter day assignment was made by Pope Gregory IV in 825 in order that the crowds which came up each year to Rome for the religious services might be fed sufficiently from the bountiful harvests of the year. In the Tenth century November 2 was made All Souls' Day.

Since America is the melting pot of the nations it is only natural, perhaps, that this observance, like so many others, partakes of the customs and traditions of many lands. Hence our Halloween lore is a combination of Irish, English, Scotch and German traditions, not to mention contributions from the French, Dutch, Spanish, Portuguese, Austrian, Italian and Slavie states as well as Nordic. The original celebrations in this country were mainly English in origin, even though in Colonial times, the day was not much celebrated. A few of the English in the colonies kept up the mother country tradition but for the most part it was left pass. This was due largely to the wide settlements, the hardship of communal association and the necessity for the colonists to be busy at this time of the year laying in the harvest and provisions for winter. But despite this one could find now and then old Halloween customs in full force. There followed then such games as apple ducking and apple snapping as well as apple peeling and throwing the peel over the left shoulder, comb and mirror tests and ballads topped off by a round of ghost stories.

A party of twelve may learn their future if one will get from a churchyard a clod of earth and set twelve candles in it, naming them as he lights them. The future of each is governed by the light the candle emits, wavering, steady, sputtering or going out.

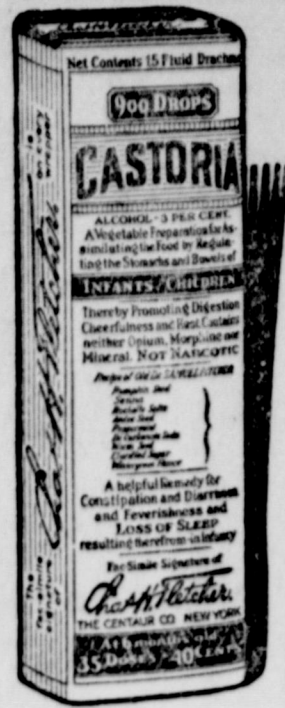

Fairies come in for especial attention in Ireland. Good and bad they hold the Irish their in their power, and, so the story runs, St. Patrick was not immune to their wiles. One lulled him to sleep before Samhain. These spirits dwell in grassy mounds and in streams and on the eve of All Saints' Day troop forth to work their will on countryside. To this day one may hear authentic accounts of the appearance of fairies in Ireland and the necessity of doing certain things in order to hold their good will.

Scottish Halloween traditions seem to be more clearly defined and more purposeful than the Irish ones. There is a lightness in Irish character that is not to be found in the Scottish, and for this reason the Scots take more seriously the traditions in regard to witches, evil spirits and fairies, all of whom they believe to be abroad on Halloween.

The Scotch invented the idea of "Sambhainach," a goblin who comes out just at "Sambhain." It is he who in Ireland steals children. The fairies pass at crossroads, and in the Highlands whoever took a three-legged stool to where three cross-roads met, and set upon it at midnight, would hear the names of those who would die in a year. He might bring with him articles of dress, and as each name was pronounced throw one garment to the fairies. They would be so pleased by this gift that they would repeal the sentence of death.

All Hallows, or All Saints' Day, on the church calendar, was assigned to November 1. In the beginning it was celebrated in May, the month in which Pope Boniface IV, in 610, consecrated

Castoria corrects CHILDREN'S ailments

WHAT a relief and satisfaction it is for mothers to know that there is always Castoria to depend on when babies get fretful and uncomfortable! Whether it's teething, colic or other little upset, Castoria always brings quick comfort, and, with relief from pain, restful sleep.

And when older, fast-growing children get out of sorts and out of condition, you have only to give a more liberal dose of this pure vegetable preparation to right the disturbed condition quickly.

Because Castoria is made expressly for children, it has just the needed mildness of action. Yet you can always depend on it to be effective. It is almost certain to clear up any minor ailment and cannot possibly do the youngest child the slightest harm. So it's the first thing to think of when a child has a coated tongue, is fretful and out of sorts. Be sure to get the genuine, with Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the package.

Vegetables Adding to Wealth of California

One hundred thousand freight cars were required to move the vegetables that were shipped out of the state of California last year. This represents a valuation of $75,000,000, and the crop was 50 per cent more than it was five years ago.

California is not only conceded to be the first state in vegetable production, but outstanding in the science and practice of vegetable production and marketing. Since the late 180s, when the first shipments of vegetables were made to the East from the Los Angeles basin, methods of growing, packing and loading have been constantly improved until at present the vegetable products of California and Arizona set the standard of quality on the East and Middle West markets.

Get His on Earth
Anne W. Armstrong tells a little story which reveals the psychology of the southern mountaineer. When she was a child her father took one grim old mountaineer from Yancey county, North Carolina, to visit the finest house in town. The mountaineer gazed at everything without comment, but as they came away he remarked, "Won't no man what lives in a house as fine as that there ever go to heaven?"—Washington Star.

Indigestion Spells

"WE have used Theford's Black-Draught ever since I can remember in our family. My mother gave it to us children for a general medicine. I grew up thinking it was the only medicine to take.

"I have used Black-Draught for constipation for a long time and find it gives relief for this trouble. I think it is good for nervousness and spells caused from gas on the stomach. If I get up in the morning feeling dull and sluggish, a dose of Black-Draught taken three times a day will cause the feeling to pass away, and in a day or two I feel like a new person.

"After many years of use, we would not exchange Black-Draught for any medicine."—Mrs. Frank (Emma) Champion, Wynne, Ark.
