Strait, Judd tunes

While much of the nation is just getting around to discovering country music, West Texans have long been fans of "the Nashville sound."

Country superstar George Strait has set a stop on his national tour for March 28 in the Ector County Coliseum, while Wynonna Judd has selected Midland's Chaparral Center as the site for her solo debut concert on April 2.

Both artists have been responsible for dozens of hits, but which are your favorites?

Would you rather make "Amarillo by Morning"? Or, is "The Chair" more your speed?

Was Wynonna on target when she sang "Momma, He's Crazy"? Or is your sentiment "Love Can Build a Bridge"?

The Cityline COMMUNITY PULSE wants to know. Call 560-2400 and select category 1890 to express your opinion on your favorite song by each artist.

One free call to the COMMUNITY PULSE will allow you to vote twice — once for each singer, as well as leave a brief comment about either artist.

This special survey will remain open until March 26, and results of your calls will be tallied and reported in the March 27 edition of the Reporter-Telegram.

Buchwald lawsuit

LOS ANGELES — Paramount Pictures was ordered Monday to pay Art Buchwald $150,000 and his partner $750,000 for their contributions to the hit 1988 Eddie Murphy movie "Coming to America." Judge Harvey Schneider, who ordered the award, had ruled in January 1990 that the movie was based upon a screenplay idea submitted by Buchwald. The humor columnist and his producing partner Alain Bernheim had sought a joint award of $6.2 million. They said their legal fees exceeded $3 million. The long-running breach-of-contract trial exposed Hollywood's bookkeeping practices and revealed how Murphy and Paramount claimed the idea was their own.

School board selects new MHS head football coach

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

The search for a new head football coach at Midland High ended at 7:30 p.m. Monday night when the Midland school board picked Greenville's Ronnie Reeger to succeed Davis Corley.

The board met for one hour in executive session with Reeger before announcing the final decision. He was approved by a 6-1 vote. It wasn't known Monday night who cast the dissenting vote.

"It's a done deal," said Jack Tayrien, Midland athletic director. "The board voted on him and he has accepted the position.

"I feel like we've got an excellent coach and I'm excited that we have him coming to Midland. He cares about kids, and has great football knowledge and background. I think we're fortu-

Michigan, Illinois races roar to an angry close

By Robin Toner
N.Y. Times News Service

CHICAGO — The Michigan and Illinois primary campaigns came to an angry close Monday with former California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. and former Sen. Paul E. Tsongas of Massachusetts struggling to raise doubts about Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton's ability to win in a general election.

Brown, who some Democrats believe could knock Tsongas out of second place in Michigan, pressed a fierce new attack on the ethics of Hillary Clinton's working for a law firm that does business with

Yeltsin act rocks army joint control

■ Russian president creates a separate Ministry of Defense, thus taking the first step toward establishing a potentially powerful military.

N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — President Boris Yeltsin on Monday began to set up an independent army for Russia, signaling that the 11-member Commonwealth of Independent States may not be able to maintain the former Soviet Army under a single joint command.

At the same time, Kazakhstan President Nursultan Nazarbayev ordered the creation of what that former republic's official news agency called "a special military force" under his personal control. The size of the guard was not disclosed.

The two actions come amid growing conflict between the former Soviet states and raise the possibility that they each will decide to create their own military force.

CIS members Ukraine, Moldova and Azerbaijan already have begun setting up independent armies.

Russia and Kazakhstan, the two largest former Soviet republics, had been strong supporters of a united military. But they appear to have decided that the breakup of conventional armed forces, led by Ukraine, is inevitable.

Monday's decrees by Yeltsin and Nazarbayev came as the leaders of the CIS, which replaced the Soviet Union last December, prepared to meet Friday in Kiev, the Ukrainian capital, to discuss their disputes over the military question.

The breakup of the former Soviet Union has demoralized the 3.7 million

State faces spring flood threats

FORT WORTH (AP) — Parts of Texas face the threat of unprecedented flooding, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration said Monday in its annual spring flood and drought forecast.

The potential for spring flooding in the eastern two-thirds of Texas is unprecedented and dangerous, the agency said. "Soils are completely saturated and streamflows are running high already, so any future rainfall will run off quickly into streams and rivers."

Dr. Michael D. Hudlow of NOAA's Office of Hydrology added that similar, though less extreme, conditions exist over much of the remainder of the Southeast.

North and East Texas have experienced chronic flooding since 1990 and spring is a traditionally wet time along the Gulf Coast. Fifteen people were killed during Christmastime flooding in North Texas that caused several millions of dollars in damage downriver in

Panel to evaluate city's structures

By Debbie Lincecum

More than 90 buildings — from the five-story City Hall to an outhouse-sized water pump station — will come under the scrutinizing eye of a new committee.

A 10-member facilities committee, formed early this month, has been charged with developing a detailed inventory of all city structures, be they buildings, sheds or water towers. The group will make recommendations about changes and ultimately develop a long-term plan for facilities usage.

Professor: Walt Whitman tape found at MC is authentic

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff Writer

Midland College professor Larry Don Griffin believes he's found an authentic tape recording of the voice of Walt Whitman reportedly made in 1890 at the urging of Thomas Edison.

Griffin discovered the tape in the college library while doing research for his dissertation on the quality of Whitman's voice.

Ed Folsom, editor of the Walt Whitman Quarterly Review, said Monday he's heard the tape of the poet and is convinced it is real.

Folsom, also chairman of the University of Iowa English department, said the tape apparently was taken from an NBC radio broadcast some 40 years ago before becoming part of a private collection that eventually was auctioned.

Both Griffin and Folsom agree that the cassette tape was sold as an educational tape in 1974 by a now-defunct California educational company.

"Evidently they (Midland College) purchased it sometime back without having any idea what they really had," Griffin said.

Griffin first heard about the existence of a recorded Whitman reading while in a graduate course at the University of Oklahoma.

"My professor mentioned there was a tape of Whitman reading a poem that he had once heard. After class, I asked him where he had heard it and he said he wasn't sure. I didn't think any more about it," Griffin said. "I certainly didn't expect to find it here, but I thought I might come across it one day."

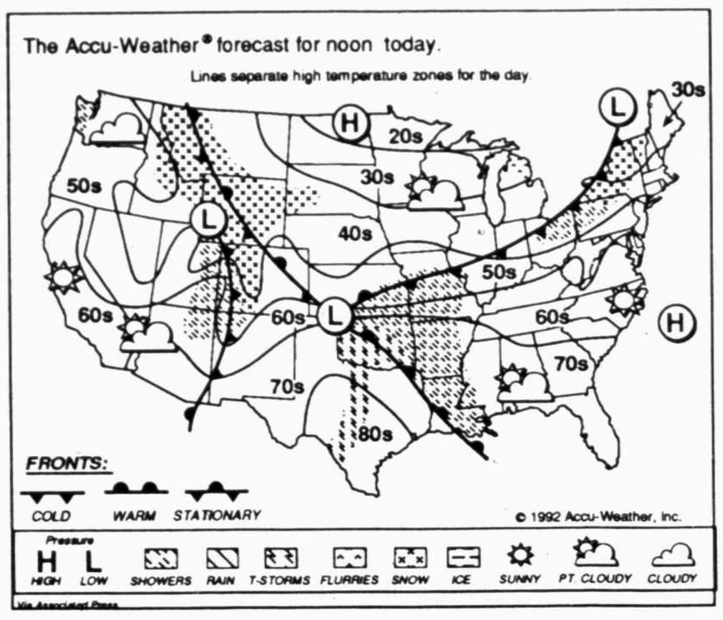

According to Griffin, there has been much debate regarding the quality of Whitman's voice. His article on the subject will appear in the next issue of the Walt Whitman Quarterly Review.

"A lot of biographers said Walt Whitman did not become a great orator because he had a high, squeaky voice. But this thinking seems to have been the result of an elitist attitude toward Whitman because he did not attend school and had a lower class background," Griffin said. "This seems absurd to me. Many of Whitman's contemporaries said positive things about him."

"In the 1840s, he was a local-focal Democrat who opposed Tammany Hall. He

RACES: Rivals seek to raise doubts about Clinton

(From 1A)

the state of Arkansas.

"There is only one issue," he told reporters outside Detroit on Monday, pushing accusations that he raised at fever pitch in Sunday night's debate. "It's Mr. Clinton and his electability and what are we going to do about this scandal-a-week."

Tsongas, trying to take the edge off expected losses to Clinton in both states on Tuesday, told reporters in Moline, Ill., Monday that he would stay in the race until the Democratic National Convention.

"At the convention, there will be one question: Who can beat George Bush?" said Tsongas, who is already trying to redirect attention to the next major contests in the Northeast, the March 24 primary in Connecticut and the April 7 vote in New York.

"Who has an economic message that can attract Republicans and independents? That is the question; you are looking at the answer."

Clinton, whose aides seem at once flustered by the latest attacks and euphoric over the prospect of taking a major step toward the nomination Tuesday, fought back Monday against Brown, as Clinton did in the debate Sunday night in the most venomous exchange of the campaign.

Campaigning in Chicago, Clinton asserted, "If somebody jumps on my wife, I'm going to jump them back."

Hillary Clinton, with more of a new age appeal, sought to make it an issue of women's rights.

"I suppose I could have stayed home and baked cookies and had teas," she said. "But what I decided to do was pursue my profession, which I entered before my husband was in public life."

Brown's attack, stemming from a Washington Post article Sunday, revolves around Mrs. Clinton's position as a partner with the Rose law firm, a major institution in Little Rock, Ark., that represents numerous business clients with potential interests before the state, as well as, on occasion, the state government itself.

Brown maintained that Clinton "funnels" state business to his wife's law firm and that the fact of her being a partner is an inherent conflict of interest.

The Clintons flatly dismiss the accusation that the state funnels business to the firm and maintain that there is nothing wrong with Mrs. Clinton's position because she accepts no income from the firm's direct representation of state agencies.

They also maintain that Mrs. Clinton does not lobby the state or its agencies, although she was listed on one occasion as representing a friend's savings and loan that was subject to state regulation. Clinton campaign officials say she did not play an active role in the case.

The bitterness of Monday's exchange reflects the intense struggle under way to slow Clinton, who had a double-digit lead in both states in polls released this past weekend.

There are 295 pledged delegates up for grabs Tuesday, and Clinton enters the contest with an already formidable lead from his Super Tuesday sweep: According to a compilation by The New York Times, he has 728 delegates to Tsongas' 343 and Brown's 89.

Clinton campaign Manager David Wilhelm said Clinton could emerge from Tuesday with nearly half the 2,145 delegates needed to win the nomination and, because of Democratic primary rules, would be hard to overtake.

The rules of proportional representation make it difficult for a candidate to catch fire late in the game, win several big states and catch up with the front-runner, Wilhelm and several other analysts said.

Many Democrats agree that twin victories for Clinton on Tuesday will begin a new phase of the campaign.

"We're at a transition point in the campaign," said Geoffrey Garin, a Democratic poll-taker, "where the process becomes much more of a referendum on Bill Clinton than a choice among candidates."

Clinton's rivals are trying to make "electability" an important part of this referendum.

Brown, in particular, argues that Clinton has been embroiled in far too many controversies to be a strong opponent against President Bush. "What are we supposed to do?" Brown demanded. "Wait for George Bush to bring it up?"

The Clinton campaign counters that it has shown, again and again, its ability to take punches and keep on winning.

For example, Wilhelm asserted that Clinton's angry defense of his wife on Sunday night, when he seemed close to veering from finger-jabbing to actual contact with Brown, would serve Clinton well with the voters.

"Here's a guy who at the 11th hour does a cheap shot of going after Bill Clinton's wife, and Bill Clinton forthrightly defends her," Wilhelm said. "He certainly does not have Mike Dukakis' problem."

YELTSIN: President creates Ministry of Defense

(From 1A)

troops of the old Red Army and split their loyalties among the newly independent members of the Commonwealth.

CIS leaders repeatedly have pledged to maintain strict, unified control over nuclear weapons, and there was no indication that Monday's decrees would affect that.

When the CIS was formed last December, Yeltsin — as a gesture to show his support for maintaining a joint command over the former Soviet army — swore that Russia would be the last to establish its own army.

But in his decree Monday, he created a Russian Defense Ministry and named himself acting defense minister.

The Russian leader stopped short of saying a Russian army was being formed. However, Russian Deputy Prime Minister Sergei Shakrai suggested that those Russian soldiers now under the unified command could quickly be shifted under the control of the new Russian Defense Ministry.

For the time being, he said, Russian soldiers will stay under the control of the commonwealth's military commander, Marshal Yevgeny Shaposhnikov.

CIS members are also tied together by a shared economy. But many have begun to make bilateral agreements, thus lessening the need for CIS membership.

Ukraine has shown no willingness to stop creating its own military. The rift between Ukraine and Russia widened last week when Ukraine refused to continue sending tactical nuclear weapons to Russia for destruction, arguing that it needed additional guarantees that Russia would not simply redeploy the missiles.

If joint control of the former Soviet army is ended, Russia would emerge with the largest military force — both conventional and nuclear.

Experts believe Russia would have an army numbering 1.5 million within two years. Ukraine has said the army it is creating would have only some 200,000 to 400,000 soldiers defending it.

Ukraine has already demanded that CIS soldiers on its territory take an oath of allegiance to Ukraine. Many Russians have refused.

Russia and Ukraine have been having a war of words for months now over which will ultimately control the Black Sea fleet of the former Soviet navy.

The effectiveness of a CIS army has become more questionable in recent weeks as its soldiers have either pulled out of zones of conflict or become victims in them. The CIS joint command recently withdrew its troops stationed in the disputed territory of Nagorno-Karabakh, where Armenians and Azerbaijanis have been battling each other. And in Armenia and Georgia, CIS soldiers have been held hostage and killed.

These incidents have increased the clamor here in Russia to bring the boys home — meaning Russian soldiers home to Russia.

THREATS: Wet season nears

January.

He said experts at the National Weather Service's river forecast center in Fort Worth consider the flooding potential in eastern Texas the worst in the last 30 years.

In addition the entire Gulf Coast, except South Florida, is potentially flood prone this spring, the forecast said.

A storm sweeping across the southern United States Tuesday and Wednesday is expected to dump between 1 and 1½ inches across the eastern two-thirds of Texas.

"Now, for the whole spring, the ground across much of the region is already saturated," said forecaster Jesse Moore of the NWS Fort Worth office.

"Our outlook for the next three months is calling for above-average precipitation. With that type of pattern, of course, the chances for more flooding are extremely high," he said. "The soil moisture is high, the reservoirs are already high. . . ."

San Antonio already has 15.87 inches of rain this year, nearly 12 inches higher than the year-to-date average. Houston has had 18.26 inches, more than 10 inches above what is normally expected by this time of year.

The Dallas-Fort Worth area is at 7.87 inches, two inches ahead of pace, and Austin is at 14.08 inches, more than nine inches higher than normal, the NWS said.

Meanwhile, drought continues to threaten the West, despite recent rains in California.

"In the United States, we are either blessed or cursed, depending on how you look at it, with a wide range of weather," Hudlow said.

COACH: School board names Greenville's Reeger

nate to have him."

Tayrien was not sure of the exact salary figure, but he did say it would be in the mid-$50,000 range.

"I don't know the exact figures off the top of my head, but it is equivalent to what Coach (Earl) Miller is making at Lee," Tayrien said.

Reeger will replace Corley, who resigned as head coach at Midland High on Jan. 31 to accept reassignment as an elementary intern within the Midland Independent School District. MHS suffered through an 0-9 season in Corley's last season with the Bulldogs.

Reeger set a meeting for this morning with the Midland High football team and he plans to be in Midland for most of the day before returning to Greenville to wrap up his responsibilities there. The exact date of when Reeger would assume his full duties was not known at press time.

Reeger emerged as the choice for Midland High from a list of over 40 applicants. By March 3 that list had been thinned to the Big Three — Reeger, David Browning, an assistant coach at Appalachian State University, and Levelland head coach Buster Leaf.

Last Wednesday, MISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi, Tayrien and three unnamed board members made a trip to Greenville for an on-site investigation of Reeger and apparently liked what they saw.

"We came back from the trip ready to make a recommendation to the board," Baressi said.

Reeger started his coaching career in 1967 as an assistant coach at Vernon. He has also been an assistant coach at Spring Branch, L.D. Bell and Fort Stockton.

His first head coaching job came in 1971 at Petersburg before taking the head coaching position at Cleburne in 1976. His greatest success came at Big Lake's Reagan County High School from 1984 to 1989 where the Owls made annual playoff appearances.

In 1990 Reeger moved to Alpine and led the Fightin' Bucks to their first winning season in 10 years.

He spent only one season at Greenville, posting a 2-8 record last fall.

Overall, Reeger has won or shared eight district championships, posting three bi-district championships, one area title and one quarterfinal crown.

PANEL: City creates 10-member committee

(From 1A)

"We're sending out a survey this week to department heads, asking them to assess their building use now and project their needs for the next five years," said Rick Menchaca, assistant to the city manager. He will chair the committee, working with seven city staffers and two council members.

City Manager Fred Poe said the committee was formed because the city is in a relatively unique situation with regard to facilities.

"At this time, we have had three properties offered to us, and several other areas have come up .. buildings we have vacated recently," Poe said. "We thought we needed to look at these, get a group together to evaluate the situation."

Individual department needs, costs and future expectations will be balanced with available resources, officials said.

"A lot of people have building needs they want to get in," Menchaca said. "We're going to be looking at some particular interests."

One of the first issues to be tackled by the committee is an analysis of the Cogdell property, under consideration for use by the police or other city departments. The building at 201 W. Florida Ave. has been offered to the city as a gift, but the question of need remains.

"We are offered property all the time, but it's not always something we can use," Menchaca said. "We don't want to take something off the tax rolls unless it is really going to fit into our plan."

Two old service stations have been offered to the city as well, Menchaca said. They were considered for fire stations, but the location of fire substations is critical, so no decision has been made yet.

Understanding a department's future needs is important, Menchaca said, to avoid wasting time and money.

"We don't want to make a significant investment if two or three years down the road we're not going to be in there," he said.

City building concerns range from dilapidated structures that should be demolished, to restructuring office space still in use, Menchaca said.

At City Hall, for example, some departments are split between several floors, and two related offices may be floors apart. At the city garage, at least three departments share one workspace.

Some currently vacant buildings have alternate uses, like the former home of the Midland Police Department, 404 E. Texas Ave. Half of the structure may become a storage facility, although the other side may be closed permanently.

The city also owns the old Ritz Theater downtown, and a former Girl Scout Hut at Elkins Park — both with uncertain futures. The recently vacated animal control shelter, 1601 Orchard Lane, is on a list of structures expected to be demolished during the next fiscal year.

"We're trying to be realistic about our needs and streamline the process," Menchaca said.

OFF-DUTY: Officers may apply after a year's duty

(From 1A)

were rented for $25 each.

When not protecting the public or being featured in commercials, some officers can be found hanging around at social events and going to funerals.

Out of the 154 Midland police officers, about 80 percent have permits to work off duty and about 60 percent to 70 percent participate in such work, Sgt. Price Robinson said.

"Mainly just security work like dances at the Midland Center, funeral escorts, private parties, stuff like that," Robinson said.

After one year with the department, officers are allowed to apply for an off-duty work permit, Robinson said. Off-duty employment must be approved by the chief of police.

"Usually everyone fills out a permit even if they don't work — something might come up," he said.

"The majority (who) work off duty are going to be patrolmen, detectives and sergeants," Robinson said.

Funeral escorts and security for social events are the most popular type of work, although anything "within reason" is permissible, he said. The department is in the process of phasing out off-duty officers working at bars and nightclubs.

The pay — $12.50 an hour — is comparable to what officers earn working for the city.

Robinson said he occasionally takes an off-duty job to supplement his income.

"I feel pretty sure if you asked them all (officers), it's the extra money," he said.

Patrol officer Jose Perez, who works security at Team Bank and the apartment complex where he resides, agreed.

"It's the only way to keep going with the cost of living around here," he said.

Sgt. B.K. Lann, who accepts off-duty employment every now and then, said he was dependent on after-hours work at one time.

"Because I had four sons and my wife didn't work and I needed the extra money. I think that's why a lot work," he said.

"Now my wife works and I don't do as much as I used to," Lann said.

Robinson said the employment somewhat reflects what police officers do on duty.

"In a way, it's like your own work because it's providing security," Robinson said.

When it comes to employing police cars, requests are few.

"Normally we let the officer work and the car is part of him working," Deputy Chief John Smith said.

The use of police cars must be approved on an individual basis by the chief of police, Smith said.

A regular car fee is charged at the Greentree subdivision, where an off-duty officer works. A homeowners' association pays the city $6 a night for the vehicle in addition to paying the officer for his time.

POET: Professor says he believes tape is real spoke regularly on many issues. Even after the Civil War when he had a stroke he gave a yearly speech called 'The Death of Abraham Lincoln.' He also gave the commencement poems at Tufts (University) and Dartmouth (College)," Griffin said.

On the tape, which also contains the recordings of other poets, broadcaster Leon Pearson identifies himself and introduces what he says is a wax cylinder recording of Whitman. The technique of wax cylinder recording was well established by 1890, but Whitman never mentioned making such a cylinder, and the cylinder used in the broadcast has been lost, according to Folsom.

Folsom has a copy of the tape, which contains a recitation of a few lines from Whitman's poem, "America."

He said sound technicians have managed to remove much of the background noise and several versions of the 32-second recording will be played March 26 at the university, which is hosting a five-day conference on Whitman. The poet died 100 years ago March 26 at age 72.

"I'm quite sure it's authentic," Folsom said. "We have evidence from the Edison Society that Edison and Jesse Lippincott, his assistant, were both very interested in making the recording."

"I'm convinced simply on the basis of the work I've done with Whitman and the descriptions of Whitman's voice. People who knew Whitman at that time — 1889-1890 — the way they described his voice is exactly the way it appears on the recording," Folsom said.

He also said he's convinced it's Whitman's voice because of the choice of poem.

"It's a very late, little-known Whitman poem and just a fragment at that. If somebody were going to go the trouble of having some sort of forgery here, one, we would imagine they would've gotten more mileage out of it than they did since nobody's known about it until now.

"And two, that they would have chosen a more recognizable Whitman poem . . . something that people would recognize as Whitman. Unless you're a Whitman scholar, you probably wouldn't recognize this poem as one of his."

On the cylinder attributed to Whitman, the voice recites these lines from the poem "America":

Centre of equal daughters, equal sons.

All, all alike endear'd, grown, ungrown, young or old.

Strong, ample, fair, enduring, capable, rich.

Perennial with the Earth, with Freedom, Law and Love.

Griffin said he is amazed that the recording process has effectively endured so many transfers.

"It was first recorded in 1890 and then ended up on radio over half a century later and finally went to a cassette tape. I'm sure the tape has been cleaned up to sound wonderful. It's fascinating," Griffin said. "Books and words simply don't work that way."

■ Algeria asks Iran to find new embassy

WASHINGTON — Algeria, which has handled Iranian diplomatic interests in Washington, has asked Iran to find another embassy to represent it because of what Algeria describes as Iranian interference in its affairs.

Last week Pakistan, which has maintained good relations with Iran even while differing with its religious politics, agreed to take over the Iranian Interests Section. Pakistani diplomats have asked the State Department to approve the new arrangement.

Iran has not had an embassy in Washington since 1979, when Iranian religious militants seized power and took dozens of hostages at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

■ U.S. presses Israel on technology transfer

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney pressed Defense Minister Moshe Arens of Israel on Monday to explain U.S. intelligence reports that Israel had illegally shared American-made Patriot missile technology with China, senior Pentagon officials said.

In a 30-minute meeting at the Pentagon, Cheney presented Arens with intelligence indicating that Jerusalem had shared the technology in violation of U.S.-Israeli agreements that ban such sales.

Israeli officials have strongly denied such technology leaks since reports about them surfaced last week. Speaking to reporters after meeting Cheney, Arens repeated the denials.

■ Ship with U.S. food aid arrives in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon — A ship carrying food assistance from the United States docked on Monday at Beirut harbor after Prime Minister Omar Karami warned the country of "economic hard times ahead."

The freighter brought 7,500 tons of rice, wheat, navy beans, lentils, and vegetable oil to help 135,000 needy Lebanese families. The consignment will be distributed by charitable institutions in all parts of the country.

Oldest cow turns 48

KENMARE, Ireland (AP) — Bertha, the world's oldest and most prolific cow, stood aloof Monday as humans toasted her 48th birthday.

Dozens of residents celebrated at the village hall with songs, poems, a few drinks and a blessing from a priest.

Bertha, listed in the Guinness Book of Records both for her age and her 39 calves, was given a bucket of apples to chew in her pen.

Jerome O'Leary, who bought Bertha in 1946 at a St. Patrick's Day fair in nearby Sneem, said the outdoor life in County Kerry is the secret of her longevity.

Fear grips South Africa on eve of vote

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (NYT) — A mood of trepidation and foreboding has gripped South Africa as whites prepare to vote today in the referendum that President F.W. de Klerk has called to gain a mandate to negotiate an end to minority rule.

The proponents and opponents of political change have both played to white fears in the referendum campaign, leaving some potential voters jittery or confused. Others are expected to vote no as a protest against rising crime and economic stagnation as well as to show their discontent with the course of negotiation that de Klerk has chosen.

A newspaper advertisement showed a white beggar in a business suit holding a piece of cardboard with the hand-lettered plea: "No work. No money. No food. Please help. Family starving."

"You can vote yourself out of a job," read the accompanying message from the governing National Party. "Or you can vote 'Yes' for a solution that will work."

On Monday night, on the eve of the referendum, de Klerk made a final appeal for white participation and support.

"This is a decision that can make or break South Africa," he said. "Nobody will be able to avoid the consequences. Therefore, nobody can afford to sit on the sidelines, uninvolved."

If the president loses, he has promised to resign and run in a new election against the right-wing Conservative Party, a vote that he could lose, too. If he carries the referendum with a slim majority or if a large number of whites do not vote, the Conservatives may contend that he lacks a sufficient mandate to press ahead with change. Consequently, the South African president has appealed for a landslide to give him the authority to negotiate South African power-sharing with black leaders.

The polls will close at 9 p.m. today, but complete results of the voting will not be announced in Cape Town until Wednesday afternoon.

The outcome of the referendum is considered too close to predict. A heavier turnout could help de Klerk because fence-sitting whites seem likelier to approve negotiations, however grudgingly, than to reject them.

"A no vote cannot bring about justice," the president told whites on Monday night.

Survivors, workers: Bungling hinders relief effort

ERZINCAN, Turkey (AP) — Hundreds of frightened men left without jobs and homes by a devastating earthquake besieged the provincial governor's office Monday, demanding help for their families.

"We have no food and our children are hungry," cried Yilmaz Karayazi, who said he lost his home and the tea house that provided his living. "I am left without hope."

There are growing complaints that government bungling has hindered relief efforts since the quake hit eastern Turkey on Friday. Officials estimate at least 800 people were killed and 180,000 are homeless. The quake, the most deadly to hit the area since 1983, measured 6.8 on the Richter scale and was followed by strong aftershocks.

There were reports of looting and the theft of aid shipments. Soldiers patrolled some main streets and storeowners guarded their shops.

Complaints about the chaotic relief effort also came from doctors who were furious a 200-bed field hospital promised by the Turkish Red Crescent didn't arrive until Monday and wouldn't be ready before today. More than 100 surgeons sent by the government have been unable to perform operations without the field hospital.

Mustafa Kul, the city's deputy in parliament, tried to calm the fears of the crowd outside the governor's office.

Kul said steps had been taken to improve organization and ensure that aid is fairly distributed in this city of 150,000 people, where an estimated 2,000 houses and apartment buildings were wrecked. But he also conceded that about 1,000 of the 8,675 tents sent were stolen.

The Istanbul newspaper Milliyet reported that relief supplies were being sold on the black market, with tents going for $330 and blankets $15.

Kul said 376 bodies had been recovered and a still unknown number of others had been dug out by their own relatives. The government and relief workers estimate 800 people died.

"The death toll will rise. But I'm sure it won't be more than a thousand," said Kul.

J.B. Hoskins

All of our Associates at Dunlaps would like to especially recognize J.B. Hoskins during our 50th Anniversary Sale. It is our belief that his 50 years of service to our company has been instrumental in the growth and success of our stores.

In 1942 the Dunlap Co. bought Addison Wadley Co. in Midland, Mr. Hoskins was one of the principal owners of Addison Wadley. He was then made general manager of the same store under the Dunlap Co.

In January 1945, Mr. Hoskins moved to Lubbock to manage the Dunlap department store on Avenue H. He moved to their new store on Broadway on February 14, 1955. He remained there until 1966, when he moved to the General Offices as Executive Vice-President.

In 1977, the General Offices were moved to Fort Worth. He elected to remain in Lubbock to look after the Dunlap company's interest in Lubbock. He is still active and continues to serve as an officer on the board of Directors and major stockholder of the Dunlap Co. In 1984 he was inducted into the Retha R. Martin Hall of Fame.

TUESDAY, MARCH 17, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Generosity and tolerance will serve you well. Projects you begin in late spring will start to pay off by July. Copyright or patent your clever ideas before developing them further. Travel looks especially rewarding in November. Pay more attention to your mate as the winter holidays set in. The year 1993 will bring fresh financial gains and a new feeling of security. A change of residence becomes more desirable.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actors Patrick Duffy and Kurt Russell, ballet great Rudolph Nureyev, actress Leslie-Anne Down.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Some long-awaited good news arrives today. Rejoice! Household purchases mean greater comfort and efficiency. Stay cool when under fire. Higher-ups are swayed by facts not emotion.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Spend time with your loved ones sorting out a domestic problem. A favorite hobby could become a real money-maker. Join a community group if time and energy permit. Browse in a bookstore.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be on the lookout for possible errors — your own or other people's. A self-reliant attitude is your best asset now. A face-to-face meeting with a critical associate could work wonders.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A discussion of joint interests proves lucrative. A financial merger makes everything fall into place. You have a sixth sense about getting other people to work for you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Being a trailblazer appeals to you. See which way the wind is blowing before bucking someone in authority. Travel puts you in touch with valuable new allies. Renew your passport.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): New doors open to you now. You enjoy traveling in elite circles. Timely visits and phone calls reveal your business savvy. Seize an opportunity to do a favor for someone influential.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Regular exercise helps you keep in shape. Walk everywhere! Returning phone calls promptly wins you points with those in authority. Keep the evening open.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You may be asked to make a special appearance or presentation. See things as they really are, not as you might wish them to be. Constructive changes are long overdue. Take action!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Act boldly where a creative venture is concerned. Seek publicity for your latest efforts. With so much going for you, it is almost certain you will be triumphant.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You can make a first-class impression today. Refuse to settle for less than the best in romance. Whether you are the host or the guest, you are sure to be on center stage.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Prestige and power will be yours when you learn to assert yourself. A climate of sharing fosters mutual respect. You make new gains on the business front.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Pooling your resources with a friend or relative could be the best answer to rising costs. Assess your financial strategy — it can be fine-tuned. A gift or favor helps mend a quarrel.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are confident, outgoing and assertive. Easily distracted, these youngsters tend to start many more projects than they finish. With greater self-discipline, they can become top achievers. Although these Pisces' friendly manner attracts people like a magnet, they are highly selective when choosing their confidants. They put a lot of energy and effort into their personal relationships and prefer quality to quantity. The ideal romantic partner will share these Pisces' values and strong sense of commitment.

The biggest advantage declarer has is that all his side's assets are in full view, whereas the defenders' are partly hidden. That fact played a key role in this deal from a team game.

The auction is a straightforward transfer sequence. North's bid of two hearts promised at least five spades and three clubs was natural and forcing. When South confirmed three-card support by preferring to three spades, North selected the suit game.

Under normal circumstances, declarer could expect to lose one or two diamonds and one or two clubs—there were several finesse possibilities to limit the minor-suit losers. The only problem that was likely to arise was a bad trump break combined with the diamond king offside, and one declarer found a pretty way to increase the percentages in North-South's favor.

Instead of winning the first trick with the ace, declarer allowed West to hold the trick, falsecarding with the six from hand. Consider West's predicament. If East did indeed hold the ace of hearts, that was the only significant high card that defender could have. Therefore, any shift was likely to be disastrous. So West continued with a heart, and declarer was able to shed two of dummy's diamonds on the ace and jack of hearts.

Declarer was rewarded when a spade to the queen and back to the king revealed trumps were indeed 4-1. Although the first club finesse lost to East, a repeat finesse allowed declarer to pick up the suit and lose only one trick each in trumps, hearts and clubs.

German newspaper releases skater's 'secret police files'

BERLIN — Germany's largest-circulation newspaper claims to have former East German skater Katarina Witt's secret police files, revealing a star who made plenty of demands on her Communist state and had most of them fulfilled.

Witt

Among the favors the two-time Olympic figure-skating champion requested from the now-defunct East German state, the tabloid Bild listed: cars for herself and her family, an apartment and a vacation home, travel permission for her parents and repairs of her television set.

Ms. Witt paid for everything herself, Bild said Monday in what it claimed was the first detailed report on her privileges.

"I am not surprised that such files were kept," Ms. Witt was quoted as saying. "I always knew that everything was being registered."

Ms. Witt made her demands to the local Communist Party leadership in her native Chemnitz, then known as Karl-Marx-Stadt, which then informed the Stasi secret police, Bild said.

The 26-year-old skater is now retired from competition. She was a commentator for CBS-TV during the recent Winter Olympics.

LONDON — David Bowie, Elton John and George Michael will headline a star-studded charity tribute to Queen singer Freddie Mercury, who died of AIDS last year, organizers said.

The April 20 concert at Wembley Stadium, already sold out, also will feature Annie Lennox, Seal, Roger Daltrey, Ian Hunter, Robert Plant, Paul Young, and U2 playing live via satellite from California.

Mercury's Queen colleagues, Brian May, John Deacon and Roger Taylor, will star in the show. Mercury died Nov. 24 at the age of 45, the day after he anounced he had AIDS.

The tribute show will raise money for AIDS research.

It is to be broadcast live on British Broadcasting Corp. television and radio. Fox Broadcasting Co. will show two hours of the show on the same day, and MTV will broadcast the entire show the following weekend.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rock 'n' roll pioneer Carl Perkins credits his family, friends and fans with pulling him out of a depression after he was diagnosed with throat cancer last year.

"Everybody gathered around me," he said. "I got a lot of love. I got a lot of great get-well cards from all over. It was a combination of things that made me say, 'I can't leave here.'"

After 37 cobalt radiation treatments, Perkins' cancer has slipped into remission, but the after-effects remain.

"My tastebuds were burned off. My saliva glands were burned," said Perkins, who turns 60 next month. "But I'm like a racehorse at the Kentucky Derby. Everyone's gate fell except mine, so I'm ready to get back out there."

Perkins, the singer-songwriter who penned the 1956 hit "Blue Suede Shoes," recently returned to the stage, performing a handful of songs at the Hard Rock Cafe in New York.

He said he hopes to do more performances, although doctors have warned him that overworking his throat could lead to permanent damage.

NEW YORK — Yet another dangerous woman is haunting Michael Douglas on screen.

In "Basic Instinct," being released Friday, Douglas plays a San Francisco detective investigating the murder of a rock star. The prime suspect, played by Sharon Stone, keeps ice picks around the house, writes novels about murder and ends up in bed with Douglas.

"There does seem to be a chord here between sex, violence and death," Douglas said in Sunday's New York Times.

The last time the 47-year-old actor mixed those three elements was in "Fatal Attraction," the 1987 hit in which he played a married man who has an affair with a woman who turned out to be a psychopath.

"'Fatal Attraction' was a picture close to home for a lot of people because you could identify with those characters," Douglas said. "It was a reality tale, while 'Basic Instinct' is like a detective novel that people like to read in the privacy of their homes.

"It's almost Gothic. It's certainly more dramatic. And the real question here is, is anybody really worthy of redemption?"

SAO PAULO, Brazil — Prince Philip, president of the World Wildlife Fund, favors controlled hunting in the Amazon rain forest of animals not in danger of extinction, a newspaper reported Monday.

The husband of Britain's Queen Elizabeth II arrived in Brazil on Sunday for a five-day visit.

The Folha de Sao Paulo newspaper quoted Philip as saying he favored establishing hunting seasons to control populations of animals not in danger of extinction — the subject of a heated debate in Brazil.

Trade agreement not better for all

A disgruntled Detroit autoworker last week complained about candidates Bill Clinton and Paul Tsongas, "Yeah, they'll create jobs. In Mexico." Clinton and Tsongas are supporting the North American Free Trade Agreement. The autoworker's anger is undeserved.

The proposed agreement would eliminate most trade barriers between the U.S. and its neighbors. The U.S. would benefit because the treaty would create more jobs than it would destroy and lower consumer prices for everyone.

Not everyone will come out ahead. In fact, autoworkers in the Midwest would be threatened. That explains why candidates willing to pander to protectionism — Democrat Jerry Brown and Republican Patrick Buchanan — are suddenly finding friends.

Neither is likely to win nomination. Yet in the battle for votes, they might pressure their opponents to back away from supporting the trade agreement. The danger is not merely hypothetical. In a recent debate, Clinton soft-pedaled his support. And Tsongas, after repeating his allegiance to free trade, quickly added a list of difficult conditions.

Buchanan's protectionist calls pose graver problems. President Bush has already shown he is quick to cave in when Buchanan touts his protectionist philosophy. These capitulations invite fear that he will backtrack on trade too.

Getting lost in the debate is the value of freer trade. According to estimates by the respected Institute for International Economics, the agreement would create on balance about 130,000 U.S. jobs and raise net exports by about $10 billion annually. Those aren't whopping numbers, but they are in the right direction.

The pact is more important to Mexico. Its government has embarked on radical market reforms, overturning decades of stifling bureaucracy. By guaranteeing access to the huge U.S. market, the trade pact is the best signal the U.S. can send that it stands behind the Mexican reforms.

Freer trade with Mexico can't hurt the U.S., whose economy is 20 times larger. But not everyone wins. About 100,000 U.S. workers, mainly in autos and apparel, are expected to lose their jobs. The compassionate remedy would be generous dislocation assistance.

What would be truly costly is for government to cave in to election-year expediency. To maintain trade barriers would penalize hundreds of thousands of workers in industries, notably computers, pharmaceuticals and agriculture, that could pick up export sales and millions of consumers.

Clinton assembles coalition Reagan killed

Fragment by fragment, Bill Clinton is assembling something like the old Roosevelt coalition that Nixon and Reagan demolished — blacks, Southerners, union members, Jews, to some degree Catholics and big-city types.

Murchison

The bait is out as well for two prospective coalition members, Hispanics and feminists.

Can a small-state governor immortalized by the supermarket tabloids bring off this fabulous stunt? Let us just say that George Bush, to this point, hasn't thrown any transverse blocks in his path.

Clinton, as Super Tuesday demonstrated, has a breadth if not necessarily a depth of appeal. The governor's political skills are formidable, his personal moxie engaging enough to make you want to sweep off your hat. Does he care whether we think he engaged in a 12-year adulterous affair? Not so as he acknowledges. His political philosophy is Rorschachian: Whatever you expect it to look like, why, that's the very thing it looks like.

Various Democrats and independents who joined the Reagan coalition out of concern for social and economic issues are pausing to look Clinton over: the more intently with nobody yee-haw, hallelujah enthusiastic over the Bush administration's record. (Forty-one percent of Republican voters in Florida — Republicans! — told pollsters they disapprove of the job Bush so far has done.)

The Clinton coalition, if in fact it forms up, would rest chiefly on thwarted ambition to use the levers of White House powers. It's been a long time since Jimmy Carter tossed out red meat — jobs, dollars and favors — to hungry Democrats.

The point, in upcoming primaries, may not be which Democrat is abstractly The Best for America, but which one enjoys the best chance of beating the Bushes. Clinton, with all the scalps from Super Tuesday dangling at his belt, looks and talks like a mighty warrior indeed. He could bedazzle Democratic voters who might otherwise incline to Paul Tsongas or Jerry Brown.

What of President Read-My-Lips meanwhile? Ironically his best friend and most valuable ally is the man most hated by smug, bland GOP establishmentarians — Pat Buchanan.

Buchanan, to such as these, is the smart aleck who dumps the rubbing alcohol in the punch bowl just to liven up the party. What a spoilsport, what an ingrate — by the reasoning of the regular Republicans who regard the president as more sinned against than sinning.

Well, guess what. Had Buchanan not run, George Bush would be much nearer defeat than he is today. His campaign would be more enervating, his message and syntax more tangled.

Look what our bulldog pundit has done to the president — bite him on the ankles, spoil his shoeshine, bark out the bad news that legions of the faithful consider themselves betrayed by the president who slid deftly away from commitment after commitment.

The president, thanks to Buchanan, is awake. He says violating his word and raising taxes was the biggest mistake of his presidency. He knows the Buchananites, still seething, are looking over his shoulder. Maybe he'll be careful now.

Hospital actions raise questions

After reading the editorial page for the last week I am astonished that I have not seen a letter regarding the purchase of Drs. Viney and Wiesenfeld's clinic by the hospital (Midland Reporter-Telegram, Feb. 27).

Without making any derogatory statements, I would like to ask some questions pertaining to the acquisition.

Why is the hospital spending $3.2 million in tax dollars for a board member's business?

Why do they have to spend money to make money when the rest of us have to cut our budgets?

Why did Drs. Viney and Wiesenfeld agree to sell this thriving business?

Why did your newspaper indicate that Drs. Viney and Wiesenfeld had nothing to do with this transaction when, most certainly, they were in on the negotiation stage?

How do we know that this business will make money for a county hospital? Indigent care has not effected Drs. Viney and Wiesenfeld.

Why does the hospital need another separate facility when beds are vacant?

What happens if Surgi-Care does not generate revenues sufficient to pay off the $1 million dollar note?

Why can't the hospital do same day surgery at its present facility?

Why does the hospital think it can turn this business when it fails to perform in the operation of its present facility (My mother-in-law has had three bills for the same hospital visit, none of them are the same and when she calls, she is given a fourth figure!)?

Thank you for printing my letter and if anyone can answer these questions, I would appreciate an update in your paper.

Valencia shows appreciation

I want to thank all the voters who voted in the Precinct 3 Democratic Primary for retaining me as the Democratic candidate for county commissioner. I also want to thank my volunteers who worked to distribute literature and yard signs, as well as those who showed their support by displaying signs and writing letters to the newspaper.

My victory ensures that a qualified and experienced businesswoman will be on the ballot representing the Democrats in the only two-party contested race in Midland County this fall.

Again, many thanks for your support. I look forward to continuing the duties of commissioner and will see you at the ballot box this November!

Devenport's doors are open

Voters let us know yesterday (March 10) that they are not yet ready for a substantial change of leadership in the office of county tax assessor-collector. I congratulate Kathy Reeves on her primary election victory, and wish her well in the role of successor to Frances Shuffield.

I want to especially thank the Midland Reporter-Telegram for their endorsement, and to thank the many friends who generously supported my campaign. I will be pleased to serve as city councilman for my District 1 throughout the full term which will be through May 1993.

And I will continue to appreciate hearing from the public, whether or not they live in my district, on any matter having to do with administration of the City of Midland.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702.

CHARLEY REESE

Slow learner makes switch

My last act as a registered Republican was to vote for Pat Buchanan — not that I want to see old Pat in the White House. I don't. I want President Bush to know that as far as I'm concerned he's been a poor president.

Reese

My state has a closed primary system so I could neither change registration in time to vote for Jerry Brown in the first primary nor write in his name and have the vote count. Thus, my last Republican vote went to Patrick J. to at least soften up George for a Democrat — hopefully Brown — in November.

Some readers want to know what happened. Why I have changed? Well, I don't think I have changed. I've learned some things. I've always been a slow learner but I never stop trying.

Every now and then I stop to check my basic premises, to see if the data still supports the conclusions. In some cases, I found out it didn't and so I changed the conclusions.

Even so when I thought of myself as a conservative, I never defined that term to mean a mouthpiece for big business, a partisan toady for the Republican Party, or a person who didn't like people of color.

My conservatism was always based on the principles of George Washington and Thomas Jefferson. When we had an external enemy able to destroy us, I wanted a defense establishment strong enough to deter aggression — just like Washington and Jefferson wanted. Unless a country volunteered itself to become a platform for Soviet weapons aimed at us, I had no interest in what kind of government they had.

But one of the things I learned was how the incessant meddling by the U.S. into the affairs of other countries often created such frustration and desperation that they turned to the Soviet Union as the only alternative to our meddling. Usually this meddling was covert and done for private economic reasons.

I do not want to withdraw from the world. I want to offer the world the hand of friendship and trade. But I do not want my country to act like a secular 19th century missionary spreading the salvation of democracy even if we have to kill the people in the process. How many people have we killed or financed the killing of in the name of spreading democracy? Worse, how many dictators have we propped up in the name of democracy? More than enough to weigh on the conscience of anyone with a conscience.

Washington and Jefferson believed you spread democracy by setting a good example, not by overthrowing governments or financing crooked elections in other people's countries. So do I. And we're not setting a good example.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Madonna seems to be in a league of her own

I normally don't do columns on anything having to do with rock stars. It's because I've got all this space to fill up and what I have to say about rock stars is only one sentence long.

That sentence is, "Rock stars are demented and spoiled people with little musical talent who are getting rich off people who are even more demented than they are."

Grizzard

But I've been following closely the relationship between rock star Madonna, who used to have a last name but apparently forgot it, and the city of Evansville, Ind.

I don't recall ever going to Evansville, Ind., but it's probably a nice, middle-sized city with mostly good people in it who work, play, raise families and go to church. It's probably the sort of place one of the TV networks would send a news crew to to do a story on the American heartland.

Madonna spent three months in Evansville recently, filming a movie with Tom Hanks and Geena Davis. The movie is called, "A League of Their Own."

I have no idea what the movie is about, but I'm willing to bet it will include several scenes where Madonna struts around in her underwear, including the bra with rivets in it. When it comes to strutting around in underwear, Madonna is in a league of her own.

The problem was Madonna did not have a good time filming the movie in Evansville. In fact, she later told TV Guide, "I may as well have been in Prague."

Prague, for any of you rock fans out there who don't know, is an eastern European city where you don't want to go. There's a lot of things they don't have in Prague that you need. Like good zit medicine.

The main reason Madonna didn't care for Evansville, it seems, is the house in which she was staying during the filming didn't have MTV.

For those same people out there who don't know, MTV is a cable channel that shows strange things called rock music videos.

Rock groups and rock stars bellow their cacophonies while doing such things as having sex with 17 other people, not to mention an occasional duckbill platypus or two.

Your children watch this and that is why they have a ring in their noses and resemble duckbill platypi more than human beings.

With no MTV to sit catatonically in front of, Madonna told TV Guide, "I just turn on the TV and sit catatonically in front of it, and, like, watch commercials."

I know the feeling. I spend a lot of time on the road, too. And if I happened to check into a Holiday Inn somewhere and there's no MTV I find myself having to sit catatonically in front of, like, a book.

And that is, like, booooring . . . when I have to read instead of being able to watch people from the planet Mungo beat on musical instruments.

I also miss not being able to see the rap videos on MTV, as well. That's where a guy with his hat on backwards chants about blowing the heads off anybody who doesn't happen to agree with his personal world view.

In a hotel room recently, I didn't have MTV and wound up having to read a newspaper and its report on the presidential primaries.

"What are presidential primaries?" Madonna might ask.

To explain it in terms she might understand, it's where a bunch of grown men go around from state to state trying to find out the location of each other's dirty underwear. By the way, Madonna, you've never had anything going with Gov. Bill. No, of course not.

Anyway, I hate to see a place like Evansville, Ind., get trashed in the press for doing absolutely nothing wrong by somebody so shallow as to whine about not being able to see MTV.

Why didn't you spend the time cleaning out your toe-jam, Madonna? You could stick it in your ears the next time you can't get MTV and get stuck having to watch the news.

Or, better yet, go sit under the hole in the ozone.

Federal investigators weigh criminal probe in banking scandal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal prosecutors said Monday they were trying to determine if there was any criminal activity at the House bank — a new turn in the scandal that already has lawmakers scrambling to explain their thousands of bad checks.

The lawmakers sifted through sloppily kept records from the bank in hopes of finding evidence that could soften the political damage from an epidemic of check kiting.

Rep. Robert Mrazek, D-N.Y., listed by the House ethics committee as the author of 972 overdrafts in 39 months, brought his lawyer and accountant to a meeting with government auditors to review the records.

"I have never bounced a check," said Mrazek, a candidate for the Senate in New York, in a statement that complained he was being lumped with "congressmen who chronically and deliberately wrote huge overdrafts when there were no funds in their account."

If Mrazek was in a fighting mood, Reps. Charles Wilson, D-Texas, and David Obey, D-Wis., were in a giving frame of mind.

Wilson told a news conference he would donate more than $2,000 to charities — $25 for each check listed as an overdraft. Information from the House ethics committee list provided to The Associated Press said he had 81 of them.

And an "upset and embarrassed" Obey said he had paid $1,300 to the House clerk reflecting about $20 each for 64 bad checks he said he and his wife had written.

"I don't care where it goes," Obey said of the money. "I simply wanted us to pay the same overdraft fee that would be paid by anybody else."

While many lawmakers combed through microfilm and paper records, others decided to stay in their districts to confront the problem with constituents and local media.

A spokesman for Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., who has admitted writing a large number of bad checks, said, "Reaction from the district has been mixed, but a number of people said 'hang in there.'"

Solarz was not claiming innocence, but his spokesman, Robert Hathaway, said the 743 bad checks that sources said he wrote "do not correspond to the figures we have. Our figures are somewhat lower."

Rep. Robert Davis, R-Mich., also felt there were errors but was "putting his emphasis on getting in front of his constituents," said spokesman William Blaul. Davis, who has admitted writing 878 bad checks, was stressing "the level of ineptness" of the bank's record-keeping, Blaul said.

It appeared at one stage Monday that the U.S. attorney in Washington, Jay Stephens, was conducting a full-scale criminal investigation of the bank.

Stephens' spokesman, Mark Liedl, initially said a criminal investigation was under way. But only hours later, the Justice Department and the prosecutor's office issued a clarifying statement that downgraded the procedure to a "preliminary inquiry."

A preliminary inquiry is an early stage probe that includes reviewing documents and conducting voluntary interviews. But unlike a full-scale investigation, it does not involve presentation of evidence to a grand jury, surveillance or compelling testimony or documents.

The clarifying statement said prosecutors had reviewed a General Accounting Office audit of the bank issued last fall. The office now is reading last week's House ethics committee' report on the bank "to determine what, if any, additional action may be appropriated," the statement said.

Senior Dems call for truce in sniping

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senior Democrats on Monday called for a truce in the increasingly nasty presidential primary race. Party chairman Ron Brown voiced concern over a "lack of accuracy" in charges leveled during Sunday's Democratic debate.

"Obviously, I wish there wouldn't be personal attacks by any Democrat on another Democrat," Brown said. "Frankly, more importantly, if there are any attacks, they ought to be accurate."

In an hour-long debate in Chicago, Jerry Brown accused Bill Clinton of involvement in a "scandal of major proportions" and said the Arkansas governor was "funneling money to his wife's law firm for state business." Clinton shot back that Brown's charge was a "lying accusation" from a desperate candidate.

Ron Brown said in an interview that he was concerned by the "tone and lack of accuracy" in the allegations raised by candidate Brown. The party chairman did not criticize the former California governor by name, however.

Rep. Vic Fazio, D-Calif., chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, called on the three Democratic candidates to stop taking swipes at each other as well as at the Democratic-controlled Congress.

Fazio said he would borrow from TV character Archie Bunker in giving advice to the three contenders: "stifle yourselves."

After Sunday's debate, Jerry Brown said Clinton has a "scandal a week going here." Clinton kept up the intensity Monday, saying Brown should "be ashamed. ... If he does it again, I'll stick it to him again."

The third Democratic contender, former Sen. Paul Tsongas, stayed out of the feud during the debate but later told reporters Clinton's involvement in a real estate deal with a man who owned a state-regulated savings and loan was "indefensible."

The bloodletting among Democratic candidates could hurt the party's chances in November and hand Republicans ready-made ammunition, suggested senior party members clearly uneasy by the recent developments.

"Our candidates need to lower their voices a little bit," said former Democratic National Committee chairman John White. "These rather snide exchanges may be entertaining, ... but it sure doesn't help us in the fall."

"It was not our finest hour," said former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, a 1988 Democratic hopeful. He urged a cease-fire among all three candidates.

Party leaders are mindful of how special-interest allegations used in 1984 by Democratic challenger Gary Hart against Vice President Walter Mondale came back to haunt Mondale in the general election campaign.

They also remember how Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's sharp attacks on President Carter in 1980 weakened Carter and may have contributed to his overwhelming defeat by Ronald Reagan.

Gays plan protest march before New York parade

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal judge refused Monday to order St. Patrick's Day parade organizers to accept a homosexual group in the event, but the gays said they'll be on Fifth Avenue anyway — to demonstrate.

"We're not going to go away," said Paul O'Dwyer, spokesman for the Irish Lesbian and Gay Organization. "We're going to keep fighting."

Members planned a symbolic march past the reviewing stands one hour before the 231st annual parade begins today.

The event, the world's largest parade to honor Ireland's patron saint, is sponsored by the Ancient Order of Hibernians. The Hibernians, a Catholic fraternal group, had threatened to call it off rather than let the homosexual organization march as a separate unit.

The Hibernians said letting gays march under their own banner would be an affront to the Catholic Church's stance against homosexuality.

The gay organization maintains the parade is a public forum and their free speech rights are being violated.

Police were finishing up parade security plans Monday, said Officer Kim Royster, a police spokeswoman.

Homosexuals allowed to march Sunday in Boston's parade under court order were given police escorts but were showered with cans and insults.

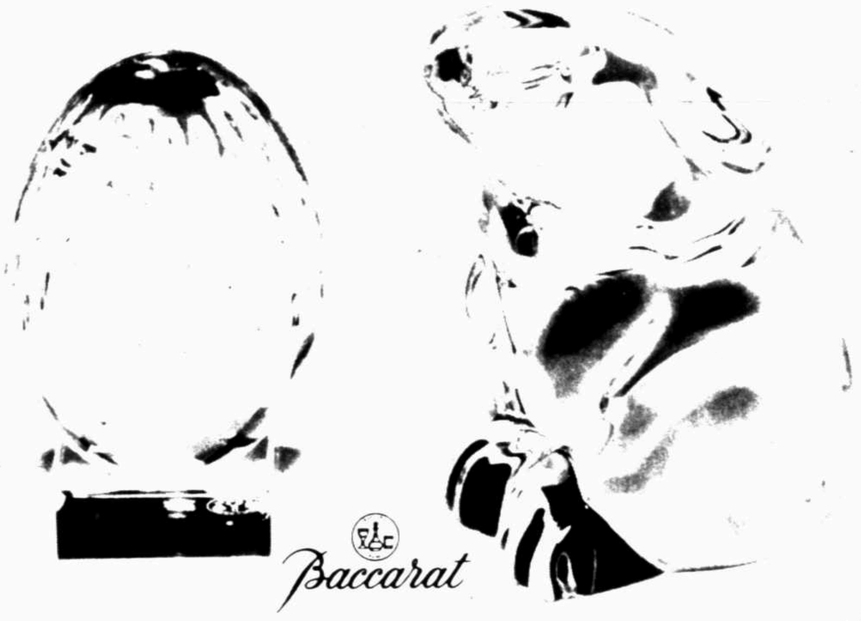

U.S. District Judge Pierre Leval apparently closed the New York homosexual group's last legal chance for getting into today's parade.

Leval said the group could not be bumped ahead of others on the parade waiting list, regardless of any alleged discrimination.

Odessa, Big Spring make prison 'short list'

■ Cities selected by Texas Board of Criminal Justice as possible new prison sites don't include Lamesa.

Associated Press

HUNTSVILLE — Forty-seven communities, including Odessa and Big Spring, Monday made the so-called "short list" selected by the Texas Board of Criminal Justice that keeps them in the hunt for putting a new prison in their areas. Lamesa did not make the latest list.

The board began with a list of 63 communities offering 67 sites for some of the 25,300 prison beds to be constructed this year. Representatives of the cities, towns and counties have been lobbying the prison board for months in hopes of winning a bid.

Monday's announcement left 47 communities representing 51 sites. A public hearing at each community will be held between now and April 2. Prison system officials at those meetings will report to a board subcommittee.

Still in the running for a prison unit are:

Abilene, Agua Dulce, Amarillo, Anderson County, Beaumont, Big Spring, Borger, Bowie County, Breckenridge, Brownfield, Brownwood, Bryan-College Station, Burnet, Carrizo Springs, Childress, Cuero, Dalhart, Dimmit, Edinburg, El Paso, Fannin County;

Fort Stockton, Gatesville, Hereford, Hondo, Jasper, Karnes County, Liberty, Lubbock, Lufkin, Mitchell County, Muleshoe, Odessa, Overton, Pampa, Plainview, Ranger, Refugio, Rusk;

San Diego, Shamrock, Snyder, Starr County, Upshur County, Wichita Falls, Willacy County and Wood County.

Abilene, Amarillo, Carrizo Springs and Lubbock each have two sites under consideration.

Monday's announcement left 47 communities representing 51 sites. A public hearing at each community will be held between now and April 2.

The winners will be announced at a special board meeting April 10, prison system spokesman David Nunnelee said.

The corrections system estimates it will spend nearly $642 million over the next four to five years to build the prisons. Each unit will take between 18 months and two years to complete.

The new prisons will include three 2,250-bed maximum-security facilities, six 1,000-bed minimum- or medium-security beds, and an undetermined number of units to house and treat 12,000 substance abusers.

Prison board Chairman Selden Hale has said he was leaning toward breaking up a maximum-security unit into four separate smaller "pods" to be scattered around the state but would defer to the recommendation of the department staff. He also said drug abuser units could house as many as 1,000 inmates, as few as 500 or have some mixture.

The communities are offering various financial, educational and social incentives to the corrections system and view a prison as an economic stabilizer.

A new prison could provide a community with 800 jobs and an annual $16 million payroll for a 2,250-bed unit and a $6 million annual payroll and 317 jobs for a smaller 1,000-bed unit.

Those communities that failed to make Monday's short list were: Aransas Pass, Beeville, Brooks County, Hardin County, Itasca, Lamesa, Levelland, Littlefield, Lockhart, Marlin, Pleasanton, Seymour, Stamford, Trans-Pecos, Woodville and Zapata.

Population hits 90,954, study shows

Staff Report

At the beginning of the year, Midland's population was just 46 people shy of reaching 91,000, according to new estimates from the city's planning and development division.

In an annual report, the department has estimated the total city population at 90,954 as of Jan. 1. That number tops the department's 1991 count of 89,763, by 1,191 — or a 1.3 percent increase.

The number of homes has also increased in the last year, according to the report, while the vacancy rate has dropped.

With 38,853 homes counted this year — topping last year's 38,568 — 12.7 percent are believed to be vacant. The 1991 vacancy rate was 13.2 percent, dropping from 1990's count of 13.8 percent.

Homes for sale in 1991 numbered 600, half the number for sale in 1990.

The race for mayor of Midland had a new entry Monday, two days shy of the filing deadline.

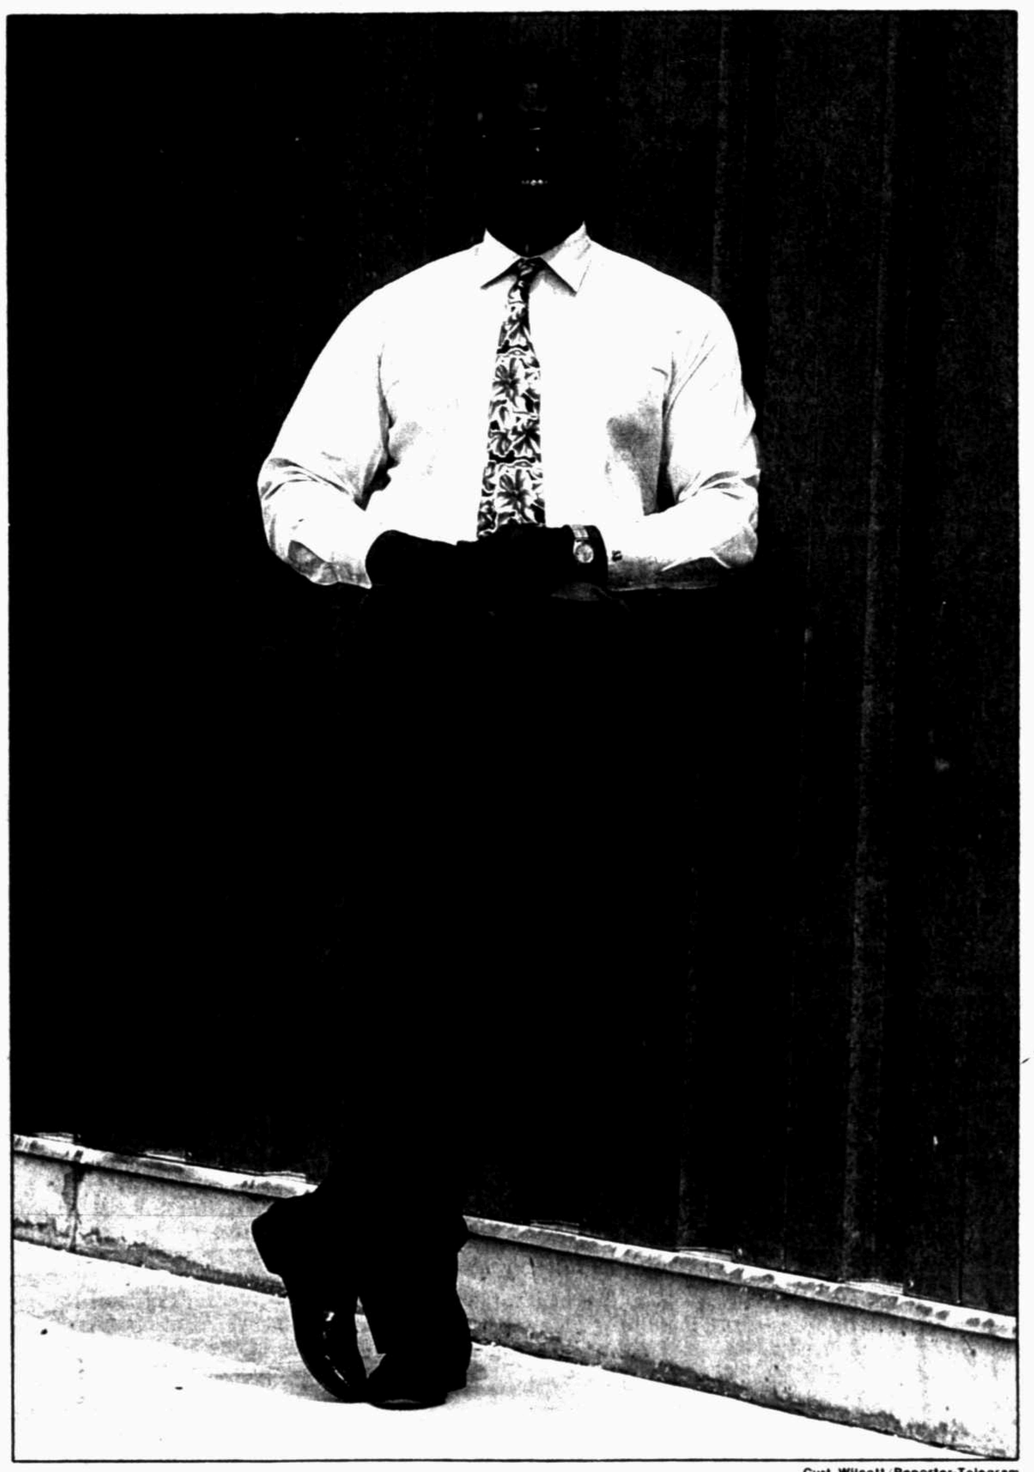

Don K. Kyser, a 24-year resident, said he has strong opinions about a number of political issues, a major one being the need for responsive government.

"I believe the city administration should respond to the City Council and the City Council in turn respond to the taxpaying citizens," Kyser said in a prepared statement. "Somehow this process has been reversed in Midland. If elected, I will work to get the process of city government operating as it should, representing the citizens."

Brown sees unification as his goal

■ Black chamber president plans intensive membership drive.

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff Writer

Junior Brown believes his past leadership experience has fully equipped him to handle his new position as president of the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs, and he has a clear vision of what goals he hopes to accomplish during his reign.

"The community is tired of us always saying we're going to do something," Brown said. "Now we're going to walk what we talk. We want to bring unification to the community. There are numerous organizations out there, and no one knows what's happening between them.

"When we get the community unified, we'll be able to get an awful lot accomplished," he said.

Brown, a 44-year-old installation and repair manager for Southwestern Bell Telephone, has served as president of the John Russworm organization, which promotes academic excellence among high school students, and the Breakfast Optimist Club. He also has served on the Plainview City Council for eight years.

Brown plans to immediately begin an intensive membership drive to increase the current membership log of 64 individuals, businesses and corporations.

He believes there are two keys to ensuring success for the chamber.

"We will be working with getting people familiar with computers," Brown said. "We want to train them and erase the stigma associated with computers and the 'modern-age' difficulty. Com-

Judge plans to release Thompson's secret deal

PECOS (AP) — A federal judge in Dallas will unseal an agreement made between former Presidio County Sheriff Rick Thompson and prosecutors in exchange for Thompson's guilty plea to a drug trafficking charge.

The agreement is scheduled to be unsealed at 3 p.m. Thursday, the Pecos Enterprise reported.

Thompson pleaded guilty last month to one count of conspiracy to import a ton of cocaine into the United States from Mexico. His original sentencing date of April 17 has been rescheduled for May 8.

Judge Jerry Buchmeyer of Dallas sealed the agreement at the request of prosecutors who said publicizing the information would interfere with an ongoing investigation.

The Dallas Morning News filed a motion on Feb. 13 to unseal the agreement, claiming the government didn't prove an overriding

Fire officials investigate tank blaze

Staff Report

The cause of a Monday afternoon fire that burned two salt water tanks in Midland County is still under investigation, according to Midland Fire Department officials. No one was injured in the blaze.

Employees of 5 Point Salt Water Disposal notified the fire department at 12:08 p.m. that there was smoke emanating from the tanks, officials said.

Twelve firefighters, emergency medical service workers and Greenwood fire volunteers responded to the call.

The fire had already started to burn itself out and was brought under control at 2:26 p.m., officials said.

Howard declares trustee bid

Staff Report

William C. Howard today announced he is a candidate for Place 3 on the Midland College Board of Trustees. He is seeking the place currently held by John Cooper, who has announced he will not seek re-election.

Howard

The election is May 2. Midland College trustees serve six-year terms without pay.

Active in numerous community activities, Howard is a sales representative for the Jack Sherman automobile dealership. He has been a resident of Midland the past eight years and with the auto dealership the past six years.

"Midland College is a vital educational force for this community. Its record of service has been excellent. During the next few years Midland College should be even more active in guiding the future direction of this community and this area," Howard said. "Its plans to expand into other segments of the city can provide educational opportunities for even more of our citizens. It has taken the lead in providing needed training for economic diversification, and this must be continued.

"In my areas of volunteer service I have made valuable contacts with all segments of the community. I am offering to represent all those segments through service on the Midland College board," he said.

Howard, 35, is serving his second term as president of Project Blueprint, a program of the United Way of Midland to develop minority leadership skills. He is co-chair of the Steering Committee for Project Blueprint in addition to serving on the executive board and board of directors of United Way of Midland.

He also serves on the board of directors for the Midland High and Midland Lee youth centers and on the board of the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs.

He attended Huntington Business College in Huntington, W.Va.

City Christmas decorations fall victim to time

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

It wasn't the Grinch who stole Christmas from the streets of downtown Midland, it was Father Time.

The city's downtown holiday decorations are not scheduled to make an appearance again this year. The double-candle, garland-wrapped decorations are frayed, broken and just plain worn out.

"They're too old," said Gary Saunders, city traffic engineering coordinator. "They've got frayed wires, and when we hang them, we attach them to metal poles." At 220 volts, "each time we hung them, they were getting more dangerous," Saunders said.

But repairing the decorations was estimated at $12,600; and buying new ones at $14,700. With their eyes on a tightening budget, City Council members were not willing to make either investment.

City Manager Fred Poe said the decorations are at least 10 or 15 years old, inherited by the city from the Midland Chamber of Commerce. Through the years, responsibility for their annual hanging was passed to Saunders' signal technician staff, and the activity heralded the unofficial start of the holiday season.

But the decorations may be symbols of a bygone era.

"Downtown used to be the primary retail merchandising area," Mayor Carroll Thomas said. "I think the decorations' original point was to draw people to downtown." With the advent of shopping malls and strip shopping centers, "that era has largely passed," Thomas said.

But don't expect Scrooge to take up residence in Midland — holiday adornment won't be eliminated altogether. City celebrations and decorations this year are expected to focus on Centennial Plaza, where the live Christmas tree is planted.

'They're too old. They've got frayed wires, and when we hang them, we attach them to metal poles. . . . Each time we hung them, they were getting more dangerous.'

Services for David Cross of Midland are set for 3 p.m. Wednesday at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Don Mitchell officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Monday at a local hospital.

He was born Aug. 5, 1926, in Pawhuska, Okla. He attended schools in Wewoka, Okla. He received his bachelor's of science degree in marketing from Oklahoma A&M in 1948.

After graduation he returned to Wewoka before moving to Weatherford, Texas, and Chickasha. He moved to Midland in 1959.

He worked for Featherlite Block Co. and Jack Gober & Sons. He has worked for Odessa Block and Supply since 1983.

Survivors include his wife, Keda Cross of Midland; three sons, Phil Cross and Gary Cross, both of Houston, and Wayne Pinkerton of Tarzan; two daughters, Jan Cross of Midland and Judy Nutt of Gilmer; a brother, Guy L. Cross Jr. of Houston; a sister, Carolyn Herrin of Duncan, Okla.; eight grandchildren; one great-grandchild and several nieces and nephews.

Abdon Pena

Services for Abdon S. Pena of Midland were Monday at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel. Burial followed at Resthaven Memorial Park under the arrangement of Ellis Funeral Home.

Survivors include his wife Anna C. Pena of Midland; one son, Roland Pena of Presidio; two stepsons, Mal Hayes, Jr., and Richard Hayes, both of Lakeland, Fla.; two daughters, Lenore Constancio and Lydia Pena, both of San Angelo; three stepdaughters, Marsha Whalen of Cleveland, Ohio, Jeanie Lomas of Del Rio, and Patty Hayes of Midland; three sisters, Patsy Najar, Ramona Ramirez and Angelina Daniels, all of Ozona; 12 grandchildren; two great-grandchildren and numerous nieces and nephews.

Ray Hoyle

BROWNWOOD — Ray A. Hoyle, 80, of Brownwood, father of a Midland woman, died Saturday at a Brownwood hospital.

Services were Monday.

Hoyle was born Jan. 3, 1912, in Mulberry, Ark. He was a retired supervisor for the Railway Postal Service, and was a veteran of World War II. He attended Temple Junior College as well as the University of Oklahoma and George Washington University in Washington, D.C.

Hoyle, who was a member of First United Methodist Church, had lived in Brownwood since 1946.

He married Ruth Clement in 1936.

Survivors include one daughter, Raye Ann Embrey of Midland; three grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Roy Miller

Services for Roy A. Miller are set for 9:30 a.m. today at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with Alan Williams, hospital chaplain, and Jeff Hassell of Fort Worth officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park.

He died Saturday in a local hospital.

Pallbearers are to be Paul Arnold, Gary Shumskie, Larry Boler, Floyd Boler, Carroll Murphee and S. Leon Scrader.

Samuel McCumber

Graveside services for Samuel McCumber are set for 2 p.m. Wednesday at Fairview Cemetery with the Rev. Jim Fields of Cottonflat Baptist Church officiating. Ellis Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

McCumber died Friday at a local hospital following a car accident.

Pallbearers are to be John Horrell, Ed Burger, Jim Wilmes, Eugene Kayser, Rudy Bryant and David Hopkins.

Ulysee Fuller

Services for Ulysee Fuller, 56, are to be 3 p.m. Wednesday at Macedonia Baptist Church. Burial is to follow at Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Thomas Funeral Home.

He died Saturday at his home after a lengthy illness.

Cheryl Bowman

Funeral services for Cheryl Bowman, 37, are set for 2:30 p.m. Friday at Macedonia Baptist Church. Burial is to follow at Farview Cemetery under the direction of Thomas Funeral Home.

She died Sunday at a local hospital after a short illness.

information for the office's annual report came from a variety of sources, including Midland Independent School District, utility companies, city water accounts and local Realtors.

"We get a lot of requests for population information," she said. "Other city departments may need it, and the general public asks for it at times, for the work they do. So our annual report is designed to provide that."

The report says measures of economic stability, including school enrollment, utility connections and birth rate, have all increased since 1990. That indicates "modest growth," according to the report.

Total Midland County births in 1991, for example, topped deaths by 1,136. New households formed during the year (in-migration to the city) totaled 1,064.

needs for the facility's future. Improvements should proceed on an as-needed basis, he said.

Above all, Kyser said he wants to get government back in touch with the citizenry.

"I'll take citizen input very seriously. I'll be open and accessible," he said. His statement says he will "commit to no backroom deals or private appointments and no executive session actions detrimental to the citizens of Midland."

Kyser proposed a two-term limit on the mayoral post, saying new mayors probably spend about one year learning the work and could then have three years to serve the city with that knowledge. Mayors serve two-year terms.

"I'm just concerned the government is listening to each other, not the people," said Kyser, a former member of Objectives for Midland.

interest for keeping the information secret.

Buchmeyer agreed with the newspaper and notified prosecutors March 6 that he planned to unseal the agreement this week.

U.S. Attorney Tom Beery filed a motion asking the agreement be kept secret but also asked that his request not be open to the public. Beery was not in his office when called for comment Monday by The Associated Press.

Thompson was indicted on four charges of drug trafficking, but three were dropped when he pleaded guilty to the conspiracy charge. The case stems from the seizure last December of 2,400 pounds of cocaine from a horse trailer parked at the Presidio County fairgrounds.

Thompson is free on $5,000 bond while he awaits sentencing. Although he withdrew from the sheriff's race after pleading guilty, he received seven votes during the primaries.

His co-defendant, Glyn Robert Chambers, is being held without bond at Reeves County Jail.

puters," Brown said. "We want to train them and erase the stigma associated with computers and the 'modern-age' difficulty. Computers are very prevalent in businesses today, and nearly everyone will eventually need to know how to work with them. That's where we step in."

Brown also wants more interaction between the black chamber and the other local chambers.

"Networking is important to us," he said. "We also want to develop relationships with the small businesses in the city. There are a lot of Texas businesses that will bring their operations to Midland if we can get out there and let them know about us."

Brown plans to visit with local businesses to address mutual needs.

"Finding out how we can serve them will help us both," he said. "But if nothing else is accomplished, they will know that we are here."

Businesses wishing to join the black chamber must pay a yearly fee ranging between $65 and $100. Corporation fees vary from $200 to $500 a year. Individuals seeking chamber membership are billed $25 a year.

"There is a misconception that persons must be involved in business to join us. That is simply not so. We'll take anyone," he said.

Brown believes it is important the black chamber help set an example for the rest of the community.

"Visibility comes from being a positive role model in the community. I'm not saying I'm the Messiah, but I know there are a lot of things I see can be done to improve us. In a year, I think there will be some noticeable changes."

Brown has worked for Southwestern Bell for 20 years and has spent 17 years as a manager.

His wife Betty is a drafting clerk for the company.

The couple has three children and four grandchildren.

Congress' check bouncers anger El Paso residents

EL PASO (AP) — There could be a number of reasons why El Paso Congressman Ron Coleman bounced thousands of dollars in checks at the House bank:

"I thought it was a contest to see how many I could write."

"That's the last time I give my checkbook to my wife."

"I still had checks, so I thought I had money."

Those are some of the reasons KLAQ-FM personalities Big Al (Jones) and Courtney Nelson gave El Paso listeners Monday morning. With the seventh-worst hot check writer in Congress in their own hometown, Jones and Nelson said they couldn't resist compiling "The Top 673 Reasons Democrat Ron Coleman Might Have Had For Writing Bad Checks."

Coleman is one of 355 current and former lawmakers who wrote bad checks over a 39-month period at the House Bank. He wrote 673 rubber checks for $275,849.

"He's given us 673 great one-liners," Nelson said Monday.

But El Paso residents were angry that their congressman was one of the worst abusers of the check writing privilege.

"When you're in a leadership position, I think you should set an example because I pay too much taxes for him to do that and get away with it," said Ceola Randle, a case worker with the Department of Human Services.

Ms. Randle said she believes Coleman should go to jail and that she planned to vote against him in November.

Some saw the check bouncing as a politician playing by his own rules. One CPA said Congress was just providing itself interest free loans, something it told the public it couldn't do when it rewrote the tax law in 1986.

Marcie Mershier, a teller at El Paso-owned State National Bank, said balancing a checkbook is so simple that she believes Coleman's bounced checks were mere stupidity.

"They'd be paying a lot of money in service fees if they had bounced that many checks here," Ms. Mershier said. "We have a balance inquiry system here that allows you to check your balance so you can always know if your check bounces. There's no excuse."

Not only did some feel they were betrayed, others in this largely Democratic town were in a quandry about who they should vote for in the general election.

Coleman defeated three challengers in the Super Tuesday primaries by garnering 60 percent of the vote, but he won with a margin of victory slimmer than other Texas incumbents who faced primary challenges.

Police charge man with burglary

Staff Report

A 37-year-old Midland man was charged with burglary of a building Monday night after police saw him carrying some of the stolen items as he walked down the 500 block of E. Missouri Street, according to police reports.

Norris Cornette was taken to the Midland County jail. Bond had not been set by late Monday night, jail officials said.

Earlier Monday, Billy Jackson, of the 100 block of N. Mineola Avenue, told police someone had broken into his garage through the roof and taken several tools and a portable stereo, according to reports.

USDA releases parasite in efforts to kill whitefly

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists on Monday released thousands of tiny parasitic wasps over the fields of Texas' Rio Grande Valley in hopes they will check the whitefly's appetite for vegetables and cotton.

The microscopic, stingless wasps from Europe are harmless to humans and animals, but deadly to many species of the whitefly, which feeds on a host of crops.

The Agriculture Department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service earlier this month released the wasps in California's Imperial Valley.

The wasp, Eretmocerus mundus, lays its eggs in whitefly larvae and pupae, which ends up killing the parasitized whitefly. The wasp can also kill by directly feeding on its host.

"E. mundus measures only about one-fortieth of an inch long — smaller than the period at the end of this sentence — and it occurs naturally over large areas in North Africa, Southern Europe, the Middle East, India and Pakistan," said Ron Hennessey, supervisory entomologist with the agency's Biological Control Laboratory in Mission.

He said the wasp completes its entire life cycle in about 19 days at warm temperatures, about the same as the whitefly. "E. mundus adults attack the whitefly at each stage of the whitefly's development from tiny crawler to pupa."

Hennessey said he hopes that E. mundus and other parasitic wasps will become permanently established in the United States.

Wife hopes to end husband's tango with dancing teacher

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I need your help, and hopefully soon. My husband has been taking dancing lessons for two years. His teacher is two years older than our oldest grandson.

Van Buren

This teacher phones my husband day and night — at all hours. She always needs money. He has given her money for a car, a down-payment on a house, a TV for her kids, money for trips to visit her sick mother, and the list goes on. (He has plenty of money; all inherited.)

Yet he won't give a penny to help our children or grandchildren. It makes me so angry, I could pull his gray hairs out!

I want this business with that dancing teacher to stop, but I'm not sure how to do it. We're Catholic, so divorce is out. — MISERABLE IN MOLINE

DEAR MISERABLE: You need more help than I can give you in a letter. You don't say how you feel about your husband. Talk to your priest. Also to a family counselor. If your husband refuses to see a counselor, go without him.

Do you want to stay with him? Perhaps when he finds out how much it will cost if you decide to leave him (I didn't say "divorce" — I said "leave"), he may change his tune.

DEAR ABBY: I have been a widow for six years. My late husband and I were friendly with a couple who were our neighbors for many yeas. The wife died last year, and I gave "Harold" a lot of attention — as any longtime friend would do.

We have so much in common and would make a wonderful couple. I have been teasing Harold about getting married — but he refuses to take me seriously.

The other night when I mentioned marriage he said, "Oh, stop talking about marriage — I'm impotent!" Then I flat out told him it was fine with me because I never cared much for sex anyway. Even that didn't budge him.

Abby, I know there is no other woman in his life. How can I get Harold to realize I am serious? I am not interested in his money, because my husband left me as well off as he is. I am 68 and Harold says he is 70. — LOVING MY NEIGHBOR

DEAR LOVING: Invite Harold over for a candlelight dinner and tell him that you are serious — that both your lives would be much richer if you had someone to share them with. Assure him that you are not after his money, and the matter of impotence doesn't bother you as long as he enjoys cuddling. Then stop talking and listen carefully to what he has to say, and you'll have your answer.

DEAR ABBY: Years ago, you printed a quote by Thomas Jefferson concerning religion.

I clipped it and misplaced it. I read through many Jefferson biographies and found several quotes on religion, but not the one you cited. Will you please run it again and cite the source? — MAURICE T. IN PALM SPRINGS, FLA.

DEAR MR. T.: According to my records, from a letter written by Thomas Jefferson to Mrs. H. Harrison Smith in 1816, came this gem.

"I never told my own religion nor scrutinized that of another. I never attempted to make a convert, nor wished to change another's creed. I am satisfied that yours must be an excellent religion to have produced a life of such exemplary virtue and correctness. For it is in our lives, and not from our words, that our religion must be judged."

IRAs are still alive, well and available at local broker's office

"Contrary to popular belief, the Tax Reform Act of 1986 was not the end of the IRAs," said Van Pearcy, a local broker. "I would estimate that 58 percent of working West Texas taxpayers are still eligible to deduct their entire maximum annual contribution. Unfortunately, few people realize that the IRA is still a viable tool for retirement planning.

The fact is, in the case of couples, when neither spouse is covered by an employer-sponsored retirement plan, they can deduct their entire annual IRA contribution up to the current limit. The maximum deductible annual contributions are $2,000 for individuals; $2,250 for couples when one spouse is not employed, and up to $4,000 for couples when both individuals are employed.

There are several attractive investments available for IRAs. The key is finding the right one. "I take the time to know the client and to understand his or her investment goals. This will usually tell us which investment is best for their IRA," Pearcy said.

Van Pearcy, who is an MBA graduate from the University of Notre Dame and a native West Texan, said that taxpayers who are already covered by an employer-sponsored plan can also take heart. Individuals with adjusted gross incomes under $25,000 or couples with combined adjusted gross incomes under $40,000 still qualify for a full deduction regardless of whether or not they participate in an employer-sponsored retirement plan.

Beyond the $25,000 and $40,000 limits, taxpayers who are covered by an employee-sponsored retirement plan are still eligible for a partial IRA deduction. Couples lose $200 of their deductible contribution for each $1,000 of income over $40,000. "This means West Texas couples with adjusted gross incomes below $50,000 — or individuals below $35,000 — are still eligible for a partial tax deduction," Pearcy said.

Couples and individuals with adjusted gross incomes of more than $50,000 or $35,000, respectively, who are covered by an employer-sponsored retirement plan, cannot deduct any part of their IRA contributions. Nevertheless, they can still benefit from the tax-deferred growth of their earnings, which, over time, can add up to substantially more than similar taxable investments.

Pearcy said that for most investors, the IRA is still a vital piece in the retirement planning puzzle. "Most of the retired individuals I work with all say that of they had to do it over again, they would have saved more money for retirement. And in this case, I don't feel a few rules should deter West Texans from securing a better financial future," Pearcy said.

If you're interested in visiting with a conservative investment professional who is concerned about each individual's financial well-being, call Van Pearcy at 683-1516. Or drop by his E.D. Jones office at 1509 West Wall (next to Buddy's Flowers). There is no charge for a consultation.

During tax season, Van Pearcy (center) goes over James and Dianne Chambers' investment account. Pearcy stresses the importance of retirement planning for all his clients.

Supreme Water Treatment takes pride in service, know-how

An investment in a quality reverse-osmosis drinking water system contributes not only only to good taste, but good health and on-tap convenience. Supreme Water Treatment has been serving Midland since 1981 with condjtioned water systems, certified equipment and professional service. The company is well known for its dependability and quality service.

With its Reo-Pure reverse-osmosis system Supreme Water removes up to 95 percent of dissolved mineral salts, dead bacteria, chlorine and other foreign material that give water a bad taste.

We live in an area where pure water is of great concern.

Midland water contains 1,800 to 3,000 parts per million of total dissolved solids. Supreme Water's system drops the solids to 200 parts per million. Some other systems' water, after treatment, contains 1,200 parts per million. This doesn't meet Texas law's requirement for bottled water, which is under 500 parts per million. But Supreme Water's system drops it significantly under state requirements.

The Reo-Pure system also protects health by providing water appropriate for low-sodium diets. And, it saves money by replacing expensive bottled water, by operating more efficiently and saving 1,000 gallons or more as compared to other reverse-osmosis systems.

An automatic shut-off valve is responsible for the water savings. Most systems on the market use a check-valve system that allows pure and waste water to pass down the drain when the tank is full whereas the automatic shut-off valve does just what its name implies.

Other benefits include computerized technology, spring-fresh flavor, tastier beverages, more flavorful cooked foods, clearer ice cubes. Also, mineral-free water for steam irons, car batteries, humidifiers and other home appliances.

Other reverše-osmosis water benefits include the elimination of such annoyances as dry skin, spotty or white glassware, clothes that turn yellow after one washing and higher energy costs caused by scaling in the water heater.

Supreme Water Systems also specializes in service. In fact, the qualified, factory-trained technicians service all brand of water equipment. This company, a member of the Water Quality Association, services over 60 Midland area restaurants.

The company also offers salt delivery service for water softener systems. For about the same price you'd spend on salt at the grocery store, Supreme Water delivers it and puts it in.

Supreme Water also services all brands of reverse-osmosis systems and water softeners.

They offer free estimates, a 24-hour answering service and honest, dependable service.

"We built our company on service and quality products at a fair price," said spokesman Brad Hamilton. "And when you buy a system from us, your money stays in Midland.

Stop by Midland Park Mall this Thursday, Friday, Saturday or Sunday, March 26 through 29, and visit Supreme Water System's booth at the Spring home and garden show. They'll be happy to show you just how their system works

Or drop by to visit them at their offices at 1207 S. Garfield in Midland. Hours are Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to noon and 1 to 5 p.m. Call 689-8868 for more information.

Supreme Water treatment technicians are qualified to install or repair reverse-osmosis systems in Midland homes and businesses. The staff is (from left) Jerry White, Duane St. Clair, Brad Hamilton and Jeannette Shannon.

Mansfield Chiropractic & Rehabilitation offers pain relief

"Chiropractic is a branch of the healing arts that relieves pain and restores normal body function by influencing the nervous system through the manipulation of the spine," said Dr. Dale Mansfield of the Mansfield Chiropractic & Rehabilitation Center.

The majority of the doctor's patients have spinal-related problems such as headaches, neck and back pains and/or numbness of the hands and feet.

New patients at the Center undergo neurological and orthopedic tests to determine the cause of their pain. Once Mansfield, or his new associate Dr. Terry Hamilton, determine that an individual will indeed benefit from chiropractic care, a program is created for that specific person.

"To relieve pain you need to create flexibility and strengthen the involved area," Mansfield said. "Flexibility comes through chiropractic manipulation and strengthening comes through rehabilitation."

Once the desired flexibility has been achieved through manipulation, the patient is ready for rehabilitation therapy. This is done in addition to spinal manipulation for an overall favorable spinal condition. The doctors supervise and provide a restricted exercise program working with Rick Allard and other members of the staff. Allard has six years experience in rehabilitation therapy, which inspires a great deal of confidence in his patients. In addition to exercise, massage therapy is used to help relax the patient and restore circulation.

Experience abounds at Mansfield Chiropractic & Rehabilitation Center. Mansfield, a graduate of Texas Chiropractic College, is also a Board Qualified Chiropractic Orthopaedist. He has been in practice for 19 years, 11 of them in Midland.

Among his staff are two Certified Chiropractic Assistants. Lyn Anderson and Edith Williams who have 13 years of combined experience.

New on board is Terry Hamilton, a graduate of Parker College of Chiropractic. He is very enthusiastic about his work and community. Also his upcoming nuptials — he and Marla Carlson will soon be married.

In addition to assisting individuals who are in pain, Mansfiled Chiropractic and Rehabilitation Center is going the extra mile in helping individuals avoid unnecessary physical damage.

They offer a course called "The Back School," every Thursday at 6 p.m. The class is held at no charge. Designed to educate individuals on how to avoid back injury, this course is also available to employers on their own premises. Call 682-2572 for information.

Though most patients come to Mansfield Chiropractic & Rehabilitation Center through either physician or personal referral, they are currently accepting new patients.

Mansfield Chiropractic & Rehabilitation Center accepts Worker's Compensation and personal insurance. They are located at 3100 North "A" St., Bldg. B, Suite 100 in Midland. Hours are 9 a.m. to noon and 2:30 to 6 p.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays and Thursdays. Hours Tuesdays and Fridays are 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Rehab is also open 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Saturday.

Could chiropractic care benefit you? "If we can help we'll let you know. If we can't we'll tell you that also," Mansfield said.

Judge withdraws after castration case crumbles

CITYLINE 560-2400

CIRCULATION 688-2700

HOUSTON (NYT) — A state judge's plans to punish a man accused of rape with castration collapsed Monday as several black leaders accused the judge of bigotry and he accused them in return of polarizing the city.

Judge Michael T. McSpadden of State District Court, removed himself from the case at a hearing Monday morning as he had said he would if the castration could not be carried out.

He acted after a lawyer for the defendant, who is black, reported that no doctor could be found to perform the operation because the plan had touched off such intense news coverage.

The defendant, Steven Allen Butler, 28, who is charged with the aggravated sexual assault of a 13-year-old girl, volunteered to undergo surgical castration at a hearing March 6, and McSpadden agreed that once the procedure was performed he would sentence Butler to 10 years of a form of probation, deferred adjudication.

The court action Monday in effect canceled that arrangement, but it appeared likely that the controversy surrounding the case would continue.

State Rep. Ron Wilson, a prominent black Democrat, said after the hearing that he would review the case to determine whether impeachment proceedings could be brought against the judge, who is white.

"That's the whole issue, Butler's race, that is the issue," Wilson said. He said proof of the judge's racism lay in the fact that "in the hundreds of cases that have come before this judge, you have never seen him offer this kind of probation to anyone who is not black."

A major issue in the dispute is whether Butler made a free and informed choice to seek castration in place of a prison term, and whether he is competent to make such a choice.

During the 15-minute hearing Monday morning, Butler's lawyer, Clyde Williams, said that her client had been found competent in four individual psychiatric examinations and that he had received detailed medical information on the consequences of castration.

But at least one of the experts who examined Butler has questioned his mental capacity to understand the full implications of the procedure.

At the hearing Monday, McSpadden asked Butler whether Ms. Williams or anyone else connected with the court had influenced his decision to ask for surgical castration as an alternative to a prison sentence.

The judge also asked whether he had been encouraged or coerced into seeking castration.

"No, sir," Butler replied to both questions.

When Butler was arrested last April, he was on probation for a previous conviction for indecency with a child.

Lee playoffs

Midland Lee's bi-district soccer playoff against Burkburnett has tentatively been set for 7 p.m. Monday at Hardin-Simmons University in Abilene.

Lee coach Eddie Bull said there was a slight possibility that the HSU field will not be available and a change in site might be needed.

Lee is 14-1 on the season while Burkburnett is 14-4-3.

Abilene High is set to meet Wichita Falls Rider at 6 p.m. Tuesday in Wichita Falls.

UT loses AD

NEW YORK (AP) — The new executive director of the Women's Sports Foundation is Donna Lopiano, who was women's athletic director at the University of Texas for the past 17 years.

The appointment was announced Monday by Lyn St. James, president of the Foundation.

"We're thrilled to have someone with Donna Lopiano's experience and knowledge of the women's sports world," St. James said. "Her vision will be critical in moving the WSF into the future. Her knowledge of the needs of women in sports is crucial to formulating programs that will effectively meet those needs."

At Texas, Lopiano guided a program that produced 18 national championships in six sports.

"I've enjoyed my tenure at the University of Texas and am proud of the strong women's program there," Lopiano said. "My greatest pleasures have been doing things people said could not be done, like demonstrating you could have a top 10 program with athletes who are also committed to academics."

4-5A baseball arrives

■ Midland Lee meets Midland High in the 6 p.m. district opener with both teams searching for a return trip to the state playoffs.

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

The names are the same, only the game time has changed.

Midland High and Midland Lee will kick off the District 4-5A baseball season against each other at 6 p.m. today in Angels Stadium, a departure from the originally scheduled 4 p.m. start because of umpire unavailability.

However, the time change will have no affect on the cross-town rivals, who are probably aching to get back at each other after Lee came from behind to win a wild 13-12 game over MHS March 7 at the same venue in the Tournament of Champions.

After a pre-district season that has been disappointing for both teams (Lee is 5-4 and MHS 4-9), the Rebels and Bulldogs are both anxious to prove their mettle. And if their last meeting was any indication, there could be plenty of fireworks. MHS head coach Rick Wood just hopes that this St. Patrick's Day brings the 'Dogs a little more luck than in the last game against Lee.

"The key for us will be consistently putting the bat on the ball. They're as good a hitting team as we've seen all year and we have to hit the ball just to keep up with them.

"If there's anything we learned from that last game is that they have kids who can consistently hit with power (the Rebs homered three times in the previous meeting) and we can't change out approach just because they hit the ball out," Wood said of the contact hitting Bulldogs.

For the Rebels, an emotional carry-over from the March 7 game is expected. Lee head coach Jesse Benavidez just hopes it doesn't turn into overconfidence.

Laettner tops list

Associated Press

Christian Laettner, who led Duke to the national championship last year and back atop the rankings this season, was a unanimous choice Monday for The Associated Press All-America team.

Shaquille O'Neal was the lone repeater from 1991, giving LSU its fourth first-team selection in as many years.

Georgetown's Alonzo Mourning and Laettner were the only seniors selected as O'Neal was joined by fellow juniors Harold Miner of Southern Cal and Jimmy Jackson of Ohio State.

Maryland guard Walt Williams led the second team and was joined in the backcourt by Missouri's Anthony Peeler. The frontcourt was Byron Houston of Oklahoma State, Don MacLean of UCLA and Adam Keefe of Stanford.

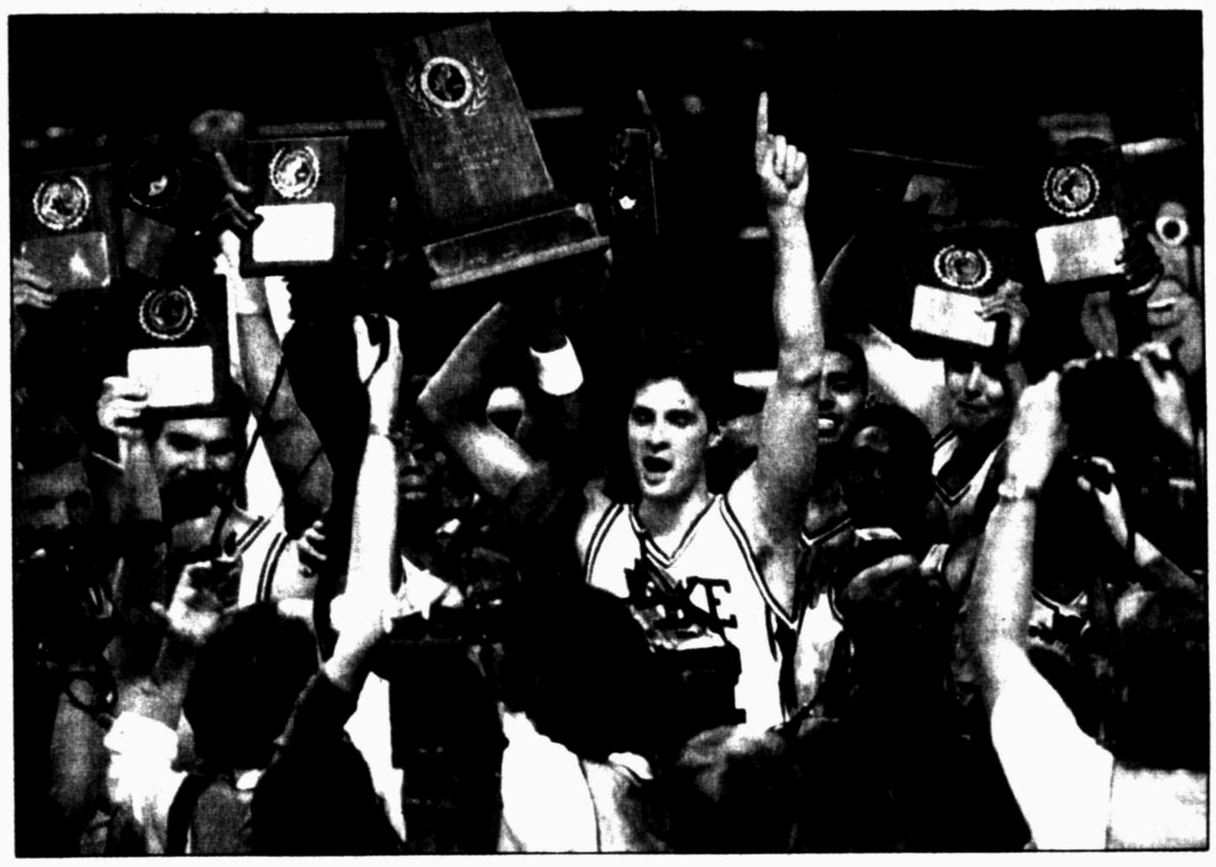

Arkansas teammates Todd Day, a forward, and Lee Mayberry, a guard, highlighted the third team. They were joined by Duke guard Bobby Hurley and forwards Malik Sealy of St. John's and Calbert Cheaney of Indiana. Day was a second-team pick last season and Cheaney was on the third team.

The 6-foot-11 Laettner, a second-team selection as a junior and the MVP of last year's Final Four, was named to the first team on all 63 ballots by the same nationwide poll of writers and broadcasters which selects the weekly Top 25. Voting was done on a 5-3-1 basis.

Laettner averaged 21.9 points and 7.9 rebounds for the Blue Devils, the wire-to-wire No. 1 team this season as defending NCAA champions. His game has been augmented of late with a new weapon — the 3-pointer. Laettner has made 47 of 82 attempts, 57 percent.

"I think I practice as hard or as long as anyone on our team or anyone that I've come across in four years," Laettner said. "I think that is a strength of mine. It's something I need to keep in my personality for the rest of my life."

O'Neal averaged 23.6 points, was the nation's second-leading rebounder (14.1) and tied for the top spot in blocked shots with Mourning (5.0). O'Neal became the 40th player to repeat as an All-American.

NCAA: Easy as 1-1-1-1

■ Duke, UCLA, Ohio State and Kansas are the top NCAA tournament seeds and should be the Final Four.

By Hal Bock
AP Sports Writer

OK, you've got the NCAA tournament grid spread out in front of you, waiting to be analyzed. Now what? How do you translate these 64 teams sprinkled over eight regional sites across America into a Final Four at Minneapolis?

No problem. It's as easy as 1-1-1-1.

The tournament committee has doped the whole thing out for you, right there in the grid. The four No. 1 seeds — Duke in the East, UCLA in the West, Ohio State in the Southeast and Kansas in the Midwest — are the projected Final Four.

They were annointed by the nine athletic directors and conference commissioners who spent last weekend in a Kansas City hotel, dining on room service and dissecting computer printouts, power ratings, strength of schedules, tournament results and the rest of the recipe for seeding the field.

If that's what these guys who make college basketball their business think, who are you to disagree?

Well, history tells us that despite the best intentions of the committee and the easiest path through the tournament minefield, the top seeds often go astray. That's why this exercise is called March Madness. Since the seeding system began in 1979, all four favorites never have managed to weave their way through this jungle as a group, to reach the

New Ranger shortstop Dickie Thon ...making another move to Texas

Rangers hoping Thon can add infield stability

■ Texas doesn't need a Gold Glove, just a glove.

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. (AP) — Dickie Thon moved fluidly to his left, fielded the grounder over second base, and gunned down the runner.

It was a play most major league shortstops can make but not one Texas Rangers fans have often viewed.

The Rangers haven't had many major-league quality shortstops in their 20-year history.

While the 33-year-old Thon has limited range, he still brings competence to an infield that has never been a pitcher's best friend.

"We haven't had a season with a veteran shortstop and I'm looking for him to be in the right spot and do the right things for us," said manager Bobby Valentine. "He doesn't have to win a Gold Glove. His experience will help bring us stability."

The Rangers were 12th in the American League in fielding and turned the league's second fewest double plays. Texas allowed the third most unearned runs.

Thon can field. He had the fifth best fielding percentage among National League shortstops last year for the Philadelphia Phillies. The 12-year veteran also has a lifetime .265 batting average.

The Phillies tried to sign Thon again this season for more money than the Rangers offered but Thon wanted to get back closer to his Houston home.

"I just wanted to come to Texas," said Thon, who used to play for the Houston Astros. "There are a lot of Latin players on the Rangers and they made me feel right at home."

Of primary concern to the Rangers, is the injury to second baseman Julio Franco, who had a league-high in errors last year.

Franco's bursitis in his right knee has kept him on the sidelines.

"We need to work together," Thon said. "The more we can play together the better. You've got to learn how someone reacts in different situations. It's very important to have that communication between a second baseman and a shortstop.

"If Julio and I can get going I think this team could really have a good defense up the middle. Juan Gonzalez can play a great centerfield and Ivan Rodriguez is a great catcher with a great arm."

Franco is expected back with about two weeks left in the spring training season.

"I can't wait to get together with Dickie," Franco said. "We should be OK if we can work the last 10 to 14 days of spring training together. The timing is really important turning double plays."

"That could be enough time if we work hard," Thon said.

Thon has completely recovered from the 1984 incident while playing for the Houston Astros in which he was hit just above the left eye by Mike Torrez.

"I'm glad to be making a fresh start with the Rangers," he said.

Johnson ends Spurs' streak

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Former Odessa College star Larry Johnson scored 27 points as the Charlotte Hornets fended off a fourth-quarter rally to defeat San Antonio 117-112 Monday night, snapping the Spurs' 10-game home winning streak.

San Antonio trailed 80-56 late in the third quarter, then gradually pushed back, closing to 106-103 with 2:20 left before the Hornets held on.

David Robinson led the Spurs with 31 points, and Terry Cummings had 22. But the night belonged to the Hornets, who snapped San Antonio's five-game overall winning streak. Tyrone Bogues scored 22 points and Kendall Gill 20 for Charlotte, which has won eight of 10 games in an effort to get into the Eastern Conference playoff race.

The score stayed close early, with Charlotte holding a 31-26 edge at the end of the first period.

But the second quarter was a different story, as Bogues sparked a 14-4 run late in the period that helped the Hornets take a 66-46 halftime lead.

The Hornets outshot the Spurs 61 percent to 42 percent from the field in the first half and were led by Bogues' 14 points.

Pacers 98, Lakers 85

INDIANAPOLIS — Reggie Miller scored 24 points as Indiana earned its first 2-0 season sweep of the Los Angeles Lakers.

Detlef Schrempf scored 21 points for the Pacers, who are in their 16th NBA season.

The Lakers, battling for the eighth Western Conference playoff spot, finished 3-2 on their current road trip. Reserve Vlade Divac led Los Angeles with 23 points.

The victory ended the Pacers' two-game losing streak and helped them beat Los Angeles at home for the first time since 1985. In January, the Pacers gave the Lakers their worst defeat at the Forum in 18 years, 114-87.

Bulls 116, Heat 100

MIAMI — Michael Jordan scored 37 points and keyed two fourth-quarter surges as Chicago won its sixth straight game.

The Bulls led 96-81 before two baskets by Willie Burton, a 3-pointer by Steve Smith and a three-point play by Rony Seikaly closed the Heat to 96-91 with 6:17 left in the game.

Then Jordan hit a 17-footer, passed to B.J. Armstrong for a 3-point basket and scored on a dunk to rebuild the margin to 103-91 at the 3:53 mark.

After three Miami baskets, two by Burton, Jordan sandwiched a dunk and two free throws around a jumper by John Paxson, giving Chicago a 109-97 advantage with 1:31 to go.

Seikaly had 21 points and 18 rebounds for Miami, 0-14 in the all-time series against Chicago.

The Heat, whose home record dropped to 23-10, have beaten every Eastern Conference team except the Bulls this season.

NBA Roundup

The Bulls took control in the third quarter with an 18-5 run that featured seven points and three steals by Horace Grant and six points and three assists by Jordan, making it 79-61 with 2:51 left.

Grant had 12 of his 20 points and Jordan 11 points in the quarter, which ended with Chicago ahead 86-72.

Chicago had 11 first-half offensive rebounds, only five less than the Heat's total rebounds, and took a 54-45 lead at halftime.

Hawks 89, Pistons 77

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Backup forward Duane Ferrell scored 22 points as Atlanta snapped Detroit's seven-game winning streak.

The victory also ended the Pistons' nine-game winning streak against the Hawks, who last beat Detroit on April 13, 1990. The win was Atlanta's second straight after breaking a seven-game losing streak Saturday night.

The Hawks led 55-39 at halftime and increased the lead to 62-42 early in the third quarter before Orlando Woolridge scored six points during a 12-2 that pulled the Pistons within 10. But Atlanta responded with six consecutive points and led 73-59 after three.

The Pistons narrowed the gap to 87-77 with 3:10 left, but got no closer.

The 77 points was Detroit's lowest output of the season, and the best defensive game for Atlanta.

John Salley led Detroit with 13 pts. Kevin Willis had 19 points and 10 rebounds for Atlanta.

Rumeal Robinson scored six of the Hawks' first eight points as Atlanta opened a 10-2 lead. The Hawks led 26-18 after one quarter and scored the first seven points of the second to take a 15-point lead.

Atlanta led 40-33 in the second period and Ferrell's tip-in of a missed free throw with 3.3 seconds left gave the Hawks the 16-point edge at halftime.

Cavaliers 111, Bullets 102

LANDOVER, Md. — John Battle scored 12 points in the fourth quarter as Cleveland, playing without ailing center Brad Daugherty, rallied to beat Washington.

Daugherty, the Cavaliers' leading scorer and rebounder, left the game late in the first half with a stomach virus and finished with three points, ending his string of 169 straight games in double figures.

Williams had 25 points and 11 rebounds for Cleveland, which has won five straight and 10 of 13. Mark Price added 18 points, while Battle and Mike Sanders each had 16.

Ledell Eackles led Washington with 26 points and Pervis Ellison had 21.

MC owns tourney lead

Staff Report

GALVESTON — Midland College fired a team score of 287 to take the first day lead in the Intercollegiate Invitational golf tournament at the Galveston Country Club.

McLennan Community College was one stroke back at 289 while Navarro Junior College was tied for third place with Western Texas College at 297 in a tight field.

Midland College's Grant Thomson also took the lead in the medalist chase with a 69 while Stephen Dundas wasn't far back at 71.

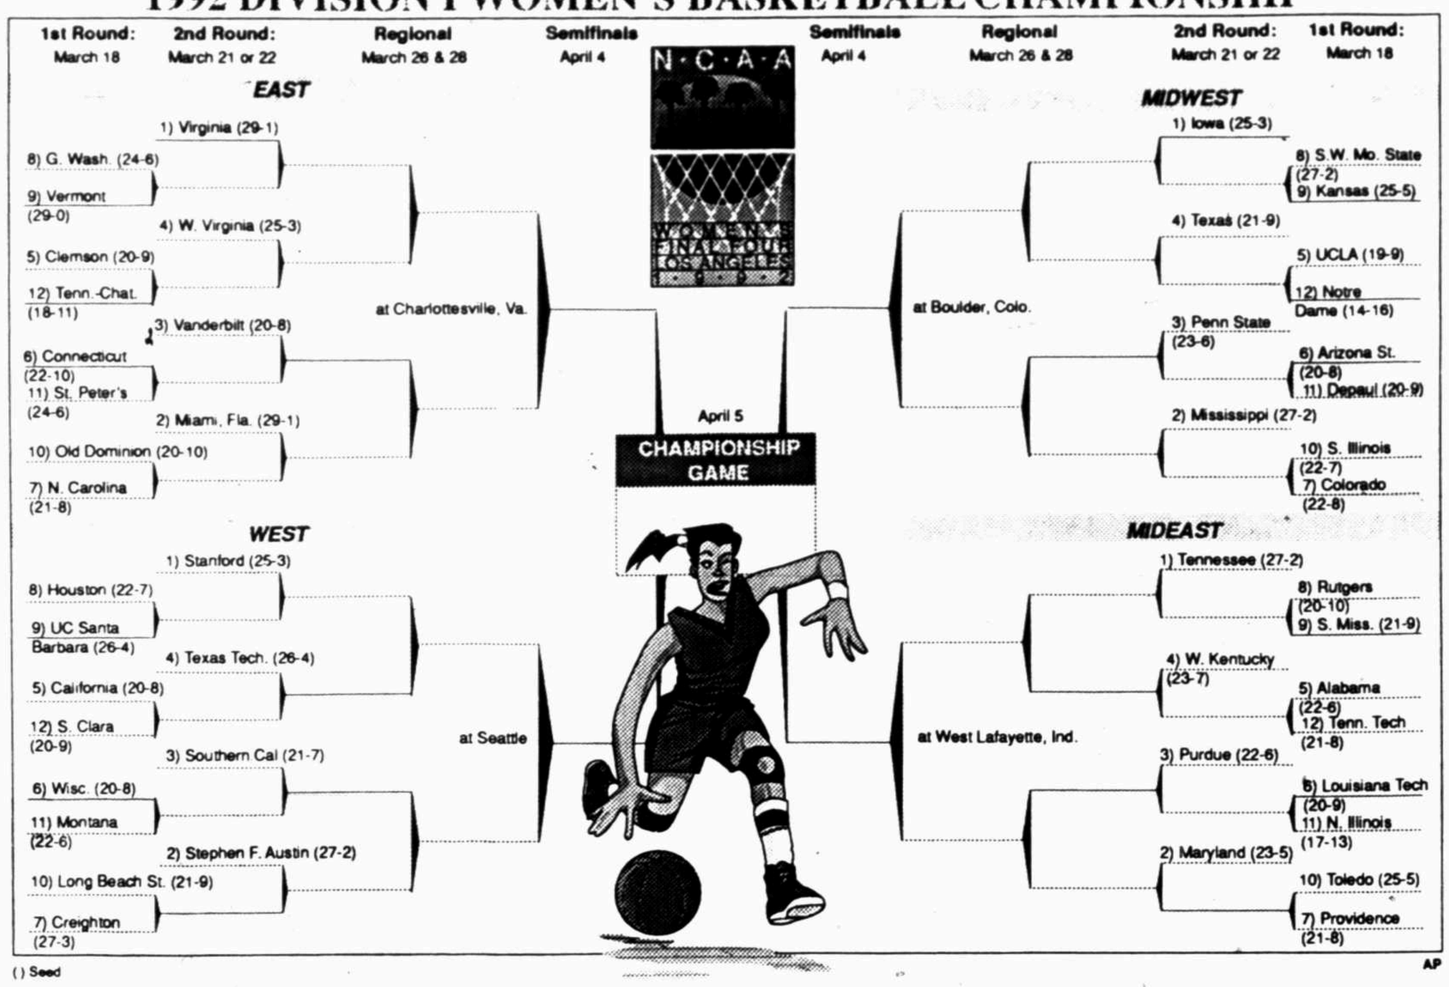

The Western Junior College Athletic Conference is also using this tournament as a conference match, so MC owns a two-stroke lead over Western Texas in that competition while New Mexico Military and Odessa College are both five strokes off the MC pace.

Action concludes today with the final 18 holes of play.

Team Totals: Midland College 287, McLennan 289, Navarro 297, Western Texas 297, New Mexico Military 302, Odessa College 302, Garden City, Kan., 306, San Jacinto 306, Lon Morris 308, Tyler 306, Bossier 311, New Mexico JC 312, Weatherford 313, Paris 314, Grayson 322, Dodge City 324, Texarkana 326, Brookhaven 343.

Midland College (287): Grant Thomson 69, Stephen Dundas 71, Guy Redford 73, Justin Jacobsen 74, Darren Griff 77.

NCAA: Committee getting better at seeding game

(From 1C)

national semifinals together.

The trick, then, is to figure out which of them will tumble and just when that will happen.

Don't bet on the first game. Never has a No. 16 seed — almost always an automatic qualifier from one of the smaller conferences — been able to topple one of the heavyweights in one of those charming David vs. Goliath matchups. Princeton threw substantial scares into Georgetown and Arkansas over the last few years, which may explain why the committee decided to make the Tigers a No. 11 this year. The No. 16's track record, though, should take care of Campbell's Fighting Camels, Howard, Mississippi Valley State and Robert Morris in this year's draw.

Only once — last year when Richmond sent Syracuse packing — has a No. 15 knocked off a No. 2. That would seem to make the prospects for Eastern Illinois against Indiana, Old Dominion against Kentucky, Georgia Southern against Oklahoma State and Northeast Louisiana against Southern Cal slender at best.

In addition to the talent gap, the task of the No. 15s is further complicated by non-basketball issues. Indiana won't be in the best frame of mind after losing the Big Ten title and a probable No. 1 seed on the final Sunday of the season against Purdue. Kentucky has something to prove, returning to the tournament after sitting out two years on probation. Southern Cal came within a whisker of the Pac-10 title and maybe the No. 1 seed in the West on the last day of the season.

That gets you through eight games. After that, things get less predictable, so you're on your own.

Perhaps the most confusing issue is how to separate a No. 8 seed from a No. 9. In the East, does Texas (23-11) have an edge over Iowa (18-10)? What do you do with Louisville (18-10) vs. Wake Forest (17-11) in the West, or Evansville (24-5) against UTEP (25-6) in the Midwest? No. 8 Nebraska comes in at 19-9 against No. 9 Connecticut, also 19-9, in the Southeast.

Warning: The committee is getting better at this seeding business. Last year, two No. 1s — North Carolina and UNLV — made it to the Final Four, joined there by a No. 2, Duke, and No. 3, Kansas. That tied the best ever performance for the tournament committee, matching 1981.

Further warning: The 1981 best ever came a year after the committee's worst showing, when the Final Four was composed of a No. 2, Louisville; a No. 5, Iowa; a No. 6, Purdue; and a No. 8, UCLA.

Happy picking.

Rice wins 20 games, but it doesn't impress NIT

HOUSTON (AP) — Rice coach Scott Thompson says he believes his team's performance in the Southwest Conference tournament kept them out of the National Invitation Tournament despite their 20-11 season record.

Rice posted its first 20-win season since 1953-54. The Owls had 12 non-conference victories, including wins over Arizona State and Fordham, two teams that received NIT bids.

The Owls had finished their conference schedule with an emotional 103-97 victory over the Texas Longhorns, but lost to Texas Tech, 65-62, in a first round game at the SWC tournament.

They fell behind 52-39 midway through the second half, rallied to within 61-60 with 14 seconds remaining, but lost 65-62.

That loss, more than the slide near the end of the season, cost the Owls an NIT berth, Thompson said Sunday.

"I think the telling blow was losing in the first round," Thompson said. "We were sluggish and just didn't play well."

The Owls learned first Sunday afternoon that they didn't make the NCAA tournament. Then they learned Sunday night that they didn't make the NIT either.

"I just talked to the (NIT) selection committee, and they told us we're not in," Thompson said.

"Extreme disappointment," he said in describing his mood. "I'm disappointed that a 20-win team cannot get into the NIT."

Notre Dame and Villanova both made the NIT field with 14-14 records.

4-5A: Urquidez, Rounding expected to be starters

(From 1C)

"I hope not, though I do feel that we should win the game. It's going to go to whoever wants it the most, but if we hit the ball like we're capable of hitting it we'll be in good shape," Benavidez said.

Today's probable starting pitchers will be Lee's Julian Urquidez (2-0) and MHS' Brian Rounding (1-3), though their coaches say that is not set in stone. The Bulldogs also have at their disposal Dewayne Culpepper (1-2), Richie Greth (1-3), Joe Urquidez (1-0) and Adan Saldana (0-1). Other Lee pitchers are Jimmy Patton (2-0), Alex Hale (1-0), Brian Cordova (0-2), Jason Baker (0-1) and Mark Dworsky (0-1).

In their previous matchup, Patton relieved Cordova in the second for Lee while Greth went the distance for MHS. Urquidez last threw Saturday, when he tossed three innings and was no-decisioned against Odessa Permian in a 13-5 win at the Del Rio tournament. Rounding's most recent pitching appearance was a three-inning relief stint Friday in a 5-3 loss to Frenship at the Lubbock tournament.

"It really depends on how their arms feel, but I'm planning right now on using Brian," Wood said Monday. "But whoever we throw, they're still going to hit the ball."

"Julian should be fine because we had him on a 40-pitch limit Saturday. They have seen Jimmy a little bit, but they might see him again. And Brian Cordova threw his first complete game against Laredo Martin in the Del Rio tournament. We lost 4-3, but we should have won that game and Brian threw well," Benavidez said.

Last year both teams made the playoffs. Lee is the defending district champion, but Midland High went farther in the playoffs, gaining the area round.

Duke is No. 1 in final AP poll

Associated Press

Duke can now try to do what UNLV couldn't last year — run the season as No. 1 and defend its national championship.

The Blue Devils were ranked No. 1 in the preseason and stayed there through Monday's 17th and final regular-season voting.

Last season UNLV was able to do the same thing, and like Duke this season, was the defending champion. UNLV's only problem was Duke, which beat the Runnin' Rebels in the national semifinals.

The last team to go No. 1 start to finish and win the national championship was Indiana in 1976, the last team to go unbeaten, something UNLV missed last season by that one game.

Duke is followed in the latest voting of a national panel of sports writers and broadcasters by the other three No. 1 seeds in the upcoming NCAA tournament — Kansas, Ohio State and UCLA.

The Blue Devils (28-2), the top seed in the East, received 64 of 65 first-place votes and 1,624 points to easily beat the Midwest's top seed, Kansas (26-4), which had 1,543 points.

Ohio State (23-5), the top seed in the Southeast, had 1,461 and was followed by UCLA (25-4), the West's No. 1, which had 1,390. Both teams won the two major conferences which don't have postseason tournaments — the Big Ten and Pac-10 — on the final weekend of competition.

Indiana (23-6) dropped one spot to fifth and was followed in the Top Ten by Kentucky (26-6), UNLV (26-2), Southern Cal (23-5), Arkansas (25-7) and Arizona (24-6).

NFL sentiment still supports instant replay rule

PHOENIX (AP) — Instant replay appeared headed for approval for a seventh straight season by NFL owners as the rule-making competition committee approved it and commissioner Paul Tagliabue said he sensed sentiment behind it.

"I sense there's a strong majority in favor of instant replay," Tagliabue said Monday after giving his "State of the NFL" talk to the owners.

Replay has been approved by the minimum vote, 21-7, the past two years — it needs approval by three-fourths of the teams. It has received just one-year mandates the past six years and Tagliabue said there's little or no chance of putting it in permanently this year.

Monday's meetings concentrated on television and labor, but little was resolved — or at least announced.

Tagliabue again said he is very hopeful a new labor agreement can be reached before the players' antitrust suit over free agency goes to trial in Minneapolis this summer. He also said that regardless of a settlement, there would be a draft in 1993 even though the current draft has been approved only through this year.

The owners also continued to discuss a proposal that would extend the television contract for two years for an additional $1.3 to $1.5 billion in exchange for a reduction of between $5 million and $7 million per team for 1993.

Tagliabue also endorsed the offer by James Busch Orthwein, a St. Louis advertising man and financial consultant, to buy 51 percent of the New England Patriots from financially strapped Victor Kiam. Kiam would say only that "I have received an offer and I am seriously considering it."

Orthwein's offer would involve paying $23.5 million to cover Kiam's debts and assuming the $45 milllion debt of the team. Orthwein also is chairman of the group seeking a team for St. Louis and hopes to keep the Patriots only until he can find another buyer.

As for instant replay, the latest renewal was approved 4-3 by the competition committee, a reversal of last year, when the group voted against the proposal.

The majority came from Bill Polian, general manager of the Buffalo Bills, who voted against it a year ago. Others for it were Jim Finks of New Orleans, the committee's chairman, and coaches Don Shula of Miami and Tom Flores of Seattle.

The opponents on the committee were George Young of the New York Giants; Harry Gamble of Philadelphia and coach Marty Schottenheimer of Kansas City.

Young has been the most consistent opponent of replay since it was instituted.

But he declined to make any long pitch against it.

"I'm not a leader of the anti-replay front," he said. "I'm just one vote that doesn't happen to like it."

Cardinals betting on Galarraga year

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Andres Galarraga's 1991 statistics don't suggest he's the man the St. Louis Cardinals moved the outfield walls in for.

But the previous four years do.

So does his spring training production. Galarraga just can't wait to prove his critics wrong and quiet the booing he heard last season.

"The general manager in Montreal, Dave Dombrowski, said my career was over," Galarraga said. "I'll try to show the people I can still play for a long time."

Some might say the Cardinals took a gamble trading right-hander Ken Hill to Montreal for Galarraga after his disastrous 1991 season. He played in only 107 games due to an injured left knee and hit .219 with nine home runs and 33 RBIs. He also struck out 86 times in 375 at-bats.

But Cardinals manager Joe Torre doesn't think so. He's hoping the 30-year-old Galarraga is just the guy to take advantage of the shortened fences, which have been moved in 12 feet in center (now 402 feet) and eight in the power alleys (now 375) after the team trailed the major leagues with 68 home runs last season.

From 1987-1990, Galarraga averaged 21 home runs and 88 RBIs, and Torre is doing everything he can think of to get him back on track. Galarraga arrived in camp with pitchers and catchers to get extra tutoring from new hitting coach Don Baylor and the results, thus far, have been impressive.

Baylor worked to eliminate a hitch in Galarraga's swing and through Sunday, he was 10-for-22 with six extra-base hits and tied for the team lead with six RBIs. He hit for the cycle on Friday against the Kansas City Royals, working wonders for his shaky confidence level.

"You had to see him," Torre said. "His face was just lit up. All of a sudden he's got that familiar feel back again."

Torre also eased Galarraga's transition after seven years in Montreal by handing him the first base job and moving Pedro Guerrero to left field.

"I made it a point to tell him that," Torre said. "I wanted to tell him it's your job and don't feel like you need to hit 12 hundred."

As a result, he's much more relaxed.

"I'm very happy," Galarraga said. "It's been going very good."

Especially after what he went through last season with the last-place Expos. He was relieved to be traded after being booed for the first time in his career and second-guessed by management.

Royals manager Hal McRae was the hitting coach at Montreal in 1990 and part of 1991. He said Galarraga had been under tremendous pressure in Canada.

"He was criticized constantly up there," McRae said. "If the team didn't win and he was punching out a lot, the weight of the ballclub was on his shoulders."

Although he had no choice in the matter, St. Louis has always been one of his favorite places to play. He hit his first career home run to straightaway center field in Busch Stadium in 1985, at the old 414-foot Death Valley dimensions.

"I'm really lucky to be coming to St. Louis," Galarraga said. "I really like it here and it's a great town for baseball. Montreal is a hockey town."

Galarraga liked it that the St. Louis fans recognized him in public when he played for the Expos.

"They know me in Montreal, too, but people forget anything we've done," he said.

As for the Cardinals, they're willing to forget last season.

"Don Baylor told me it's a new team, a new uniform, a new number," Galarraga said. "That's really what I needed. Hopefully, I'll be here for a long time."

Foul ball hits Matt Keough

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — California Angels pitcher Matt Keough underwent emergency surgery to relieve pressure on his brain Monday after being struck in the right temple by a foul ball.

Keough, 36, was listed in critical condition at Scottsdale Memorial Hospital following an emergency craniotomy to relieve pressure caused by a blood clot.

Dr. Gordon Deen performed the surgery after a brain scan revealed an epidural hematoma, a blood clot or pool of blood inside the skull.

Keough was struck by a foul ball hit off the bat of San Francisco's John Patterson.

Keough, attempting to make a comeback with the Angels, was sitting in the dugout when the ball hit him. Conscious, he was taken from Scottsdale Stadium via ambulance as his father, Marty, a scout for the St. Louis Cardinals, stood and watched.

Keough seemed woozy and may have lost consciousness for a few seconds, according to Angels trainer Rick Smith.

"It was awful. It sounded like it hit a squash," Angels manager Buck Rodgers said. "Matt was scared, real scared."

The game was interrupted for 20 minutes while paramedics immobilized Keough's head and neck and strapped him to a stretcher.

"It hit him flush in the face," Angels pitcher Don Robinson said. "He didn't have a chance to get out of the way."

Keough, 36, is trying to come back from two rotator cuff surgeries, the latest 11 months ago. He was scheduled to pitch three or four innings Monday.

Keough, who hasn't pitched in the big leagues since 1986, was with the Hanshin Tigers in Japan from 1987-90. He was a 16-game winner for the Oakland Athletics in 1980.

Sanders should think baseball

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Deion Sanders' play this spring has his teammates and manager thinking he should stick to baseball.

Sanders isn't saying what his long-term choice will be ... yet.

With Bo Jackson facing hip replacement surgery and possibly the end of his career as a super athlete, Sanders is the only professional two-sport star around.

"If Deion really concentrated on baseball all year, I think he could be near a .300 hitter and steal 50 or 60 bases at least," Atlanta manager Bobby Cox said. "He has the ability to really make things happen out there ... sort of like Rickey Henderson."

Since Otis Nixon will still be serving his drug suspension at the start of the season, Sanders will get a chance to play more. Come July, however, Sanders will be back in the camp of the Atlanta Falcons hitting wide receivers instead of baseballs.

"I know someday soon I'll have to make a choice," Sanders said. "Nobody could keep doing this for 10 years. The toughest part is staying sharp mentally. I need a vacation, too."

When Sanders broke into baseball in 1989 with the New York Yankees, it was clear his talents as a defensive back far exceeded those as an outfielder.

He hit .158 (21-for-133) for the Yankees in 1990 and was released because of his contractual obligations to the Falcons. The Yankees were concerned about a lawsuit if Sanders violated his football deal.

The Braves signed Sanders as a minor-league free agent and still believe his future is in baseball.

"He's just starting to learn how to steal bases," outfielder Lonnie Smith said. "With his speed, if he could just hit about .250 he would steal more than 50 bases easy."

Sanders has nine hits in his first 23 at-bats this spring and leads the Braves with six stolen bases. But the former Florida State football star had a solid exhibition season last year only to get off to a 12-for-61 (.197) start for the Braves.

Atlanta sent Sanders to Richmond on May 23 and he was recalled on June 28 when right fielder David Justice went on the disabled list.

"There were times I've felt overpowered playing in the major leagues," Sanders said. "But hey, I've felt that way playing against Joe Montana and Jerry Rice, too."

Sanders pulled off a bit of history last season when he became the first pro athlete to simutaneously play two sports. After Nixon was suspended for violating his drug aftercare program, the Braves wanted Sanders' speed heading into the final days of the pennant race.

After practice with the Falcons, Sanders took a helicopter ride right onto the outfield of Atlanta Fulton County Stadium. Sanders also has the distinction of hitting a home run at the park and scoring a touchdown, too.

But the serious injury to Jackson does have Sanders thinking about his future as a two-sport athlete.

"Bo was a running back so there was more risk of injury," Sanders said. "But all football players — because of the contact — are more at risk than baseball players. For a long career baseball would be better."

Like Jackson, Sanders gets a thrill at succeeding in both sports.

"There's nothing like running back a punt return or interception for a touchdown," said Sanders, a member of the AP's second team All-Pro squad for 1991. "But stealing a base or hitting a home run is special, too. Not that I'll ever hit many homers."

In September 1989, Sanders achieved another first when he hit a home run for the Yankees and a few days later returned a punt 68 yards for a touchdown on Sept. 10. He has also scored a TD and hit a homer at Atlanta Stadium.

"Deion's never had a full season of baseball at the professional level and that has hurt him," Cox said. "But he is making a lot of progress. It's getting to a time, however, when he may have to make some hard decisions."

Prices steady

West Texas Intermediate for April delivery slipped 3 cents Monday on the New York Mercantile Exchange, closing at $19.15 per barrel.

Sour crude slipped 7 cents to close at $16.40.

April contracts for natural gas rose 1.5 cents to $1.227 per thousand cubic feet.

Dollar falls

NEW YORK — The dollar was marginally lower against most major currencies Monday as traders awaited the release of new economic indicators. Gold prices also fell.

The U.S. currency ended the day in New York at 133.90 yen, up from 133.625 on Friday.

The dollar fell to 1.6620 marks in New York from 1.6685 Friday.

The pound gained against the U.S. currency, rising to $1.7220 in New York from $1.7085 Friday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Friday's quotes included: 1.5070 Swiss francs, down from 1.5100; 5.6425 French francs, down from 5.6660; 1,249.75 Italian lire, down from 1,253.00, and 1.19875 Canadian dollars, up from 1.19735.

Stocks steady

NEW YORK — Stock prices were narrowly mixed Monday on concern that a sharp decline in the Tokyo stock market overnight would spill over into U.S. markets.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which traded lower throughout the session, rallied late in the afternoon to close up 0.45 at 3,236.36.

T-bills rise

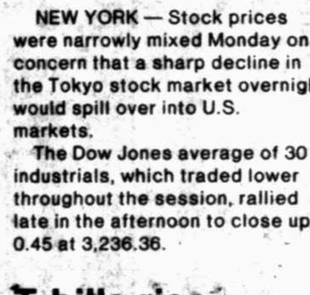

WASHINGTON — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities rose in Monday's auction to the highest level since December.

The Treasury Department sold $11.4 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 4.09 percent, up from 4.02 percent last week. Another $11.4 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 4.27 percent, up from 4.13 percent last week.

Continental bid

HOUSTON — An investors group led by Houston financier Charles Hurwitz is negotiating a deal to buy controlling interest in Continental Airlines, according to the The Houston Post.

In a copyright story Monday, the Post quoted sources who said the investors were "very close" to an agreement with the beleaguered Houston-based carrier.

GM's Eaton to take Chrysler helm

Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee Iacocca jokes with reporters during a new conference Monday in Highland Park, Mich., after announcing his successor, Robert J. Eaton, right.

■ Automaker goes outside for Iacocca's successor.

Associated Press

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. — The head of General Motors Corp.'s profitable European operations joined Chrysler Corp. on Monday as heir apparent to the flamboyant Lee Iacocca.

Robert J. Eaton's appointment as chief executive marked a personal triumph for Iacocca, who plans to relinquish full control at the end of 1992. Iacocca had lobbied for the talented outsider to help steer the troubled automaker through turbulent times, just as Iacocca himself was hired to do at Chrysler 14 years ago.

Iacocca also apparently retained the loyalty of President Robert Lutz, widely considered the favorite to succeed him. There had been speculation that Lutz would have quit if passed over, adding to an executive brain drain that has been one of Chrysler's nagging problems in recent years.

Eaton, 52, a rising star caught in a crowd of highly regarded GM executives, had been talking with Chrysler for months.

He accepted the offer of vice chairman and chief operating officer on Saturday night. He will become chief executive and chairman on Jan. 1.

"Having the chance to lead Chrysler at this particular point in time has to be the best job in the whole auto industry, period," Eaton told reporters. Iacocca and Lutz were at his side at Chrysler headquarters.

The announcement capped weeks of speculation about who would replace the 67-year-old Iacocca.

Iacocca, an outspoken corporate statesman whose name became synonymous with Chrysler, will remain a director and chair the board's executive committee.

Eaton, who has spent the last four of his 29 years with GM in Europe, was the most recent name to surface in the succession process that Iacocca said included a dozen candidates. Only Eaton was offered the job.

Eaton was responsible for generating $1.76 billion in profits last year for GM, which overall lost a record $4.5 billion.

High-profile chairman Iacocca steps down

By Stefan Fatsis
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Best-selling author, television pitchman, relentless Japan critic, amateur economist, once rumored presidential material — Lee Iacocca is a mouth that roared into America's consciousness.

The man chosen Monday to succeed the 67-year-old Chrysler Corp. chairman said he wouldn't even try to play the roles that made Iacocca one of the world's best-known businessmen.

"His experience in building this company into what it is and his previous experience at Ford Motor Co. have made him a national figure," said heir apparent Robert J. Eaton, a General Motors Corp. executive. "I don't aspire to that and never have."

"First of all, I'm a lousy writer," he said. "Lee's Lee and I'm me."

More than just the auto industry's leading spokesman, Iacocca is a media personality whose moves are watched, whose face is familiar to millions, whose from-the-hip musings have rankled political and financial capitals.

He first gained notice as the Ford vice president who introduced the Mustang in 1964. He leaped to national prominence when he talked the government into bailing out Chrysler in 1980.

His 1984 autobiography, "Iacocca," sold more than 6.5 million copies and he led a panel that raised money to restore the Statue of Liberty.

His tough-sounding talk, often laced with profanities, seemed to win over Americans. In a 1985 Gallup poll, Americans rated Iacocca their third most-respected individual, behind then-President Reagan and Pope John Paul II.

"I, for one, am fed up hearing from the Japanese, and I might say some Americans, too, that all our problems in this industry, all of our problems, are our own damn fault," Iacocca said in a typically blunt speech after returning from President Bush's trade mission.

Former senator, astronaut to speak about Apollo 17

Schmitt

Staff Report

Former U.S. Senator Harrison Schmitt is scheduled to be the keynote speaker at Thursday's Dinner Social of the Society of Petroleum Engineers' biennial Permian Basin Oil and Gas Recovery Conference. The dinner will be at the Petroleum Club.

Schmitt, who holds a doctorate in geology, also served in the Apollo scientist-astronaut program, was lunar module pilot for Apollo 17, the last Apollo mission to the moon. He was the last of 12 men to walk on its surface.

Offering "A Field Trip to the Moon," Schmitt recounts the 13-day Apollo mission to the moon that took him and fellow astronaut Gene Cernan to the Valley of Taurus-Littrow in the southeastern rim of the basin filled by Mare Serenitatis. The mission returned to Earth with over 250 pounds of samples.

These samples, along with visual observations, photographs and geophysical data, completed documentation of the first human exploration of the moon. Studies resulting from these missions have given international scientists a first-order understanding of the evolution of the moon as a small planet and has enhanced understanding of the Earth's early history as well.

According to Schmitt, the moon's proximity to Earth, its lack of atmosphere, gravity one-sixth that of the Earth's, planetary position as the smallest of the terrestrial planets and potential resources should ensure a role for future lunar activities in support of human exploration and utilization of space.

The moon's proximity, low gravity and potential resources essential to sustaining human life call for its consideration as both a stepping stone toward Mars and the outer planets and as a low-cost supply depot for exploration and settlement, he said.

Its lack of atmosphere and planetary characteristics justify its use as a natural laboratory for comparative planetology and for solar and stellar astronomy, Schmitt said.

Finally, resources on the moon, in addition to their potential use in space, may become an essential part of future helium-3 fusion or solar energy alternatives to the use of environmentally unacceptable hydrocarbons as fuels on Earth, he said.

19th SPE oil, gas recovery meeting to begin this week

Staff Report

Wednesday marks the first day of the 19th SPE Permian Basin Oil and Gas Recovery Conference, to be held through Friday at the Holiday Inn Country Villa. The conference is being hosted by the Permian Basin and Trans-Pecos sections of the Society of Petroleum Engineers.

The theme of this year's conference is "Technology: The Permian Basin's Answer to the Energy Challenge." A number of guest speakers and panelists will touch on various aspects of the technology theme.

Ganesh C. Thakur of Chevron U.S.A. Inc. will moderate panel discussions Wednesday and Thursday on horizontal drilling and CO_2 flooding. Panelists on horizontal drilling include Sada Joshi, Gunter J. Lichtenberger and Frank Schuh. Panelists on the CO_2 flooding include Fred I. Stalkup, Robert E. Hadlow, Mike H. Stein, F. David Martin and John Pitzer.

"These panel discussions will emphasize these highly publicized subjects," said Dominic Bazile of Plains Petroleum Operating Co., meeting chairman.

He added: "The technological advances in these areas can be characterized as astonishing. Producers realize today that technology equals opportunity. Innovative technology is helping the industry conquer existing environmental challenges to produce oil and gas more efficiently and economically."

In addition to the panel discussions, approximately 71 papers are to be presented throughout the conference on topics ranging from drilling to the environment and safety.

Keynote speakers include SPE Past President Arlie M. Skov of BP Exploration Inc. He will speak at Wednesday's President's Luncheon.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Savings-minded teen should keep passbook

By Bill Doyle

Doyle

Q: I am a 17-year-old who is working at her first job and would like to start saving for my future. I already have a passbook savings account, but I would also like a long-range account with a higher yield. I have $300 to save and will be able to add $25 a month to that.

What do you advise?

A: That you stay with the passbook savings account, unless you find a bank or savings and loan association paying higher interest on a money market deposit account – MMDA, for short.

When MMDAs hit the banking business in the late 1970s, they were quite different from passbook savings accounts. Back then, MMDAs paid much higher interest and usually required larger deposits.

In recent years, however, MMDAs and passbook savings accounts have picked up many similarities and shed many of their differences. These days, it's hard to tell them apart, although most MMDAs still yield a bit more. But even that can vary among different banks and S&Ls. Some depository institutions have come up with strange names for the two types of accounts.

My suggestion is to visit the bank or S&L where you have the savings account and ask, point blank, what kind of higher-interest account from which money can be withdrawn without restrictions is available there. Then do the same thing at other banks and S&Ls. You might be surprised to learn that some depository institutions pay higher interest than others.

In my opinion, it would be a mistake for you to open a certificate of deposit now. It would pay higher interest than an MMDA but your money would be locked away for a long term. Go that route in the future, when you have more money available.

As an intelligent young person, you'll see I am not suggesting you stray from the safety of Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. coverage. Risk-taking – by investing in such things as mutual funds and individual stocks – in hopes of greater financial rewards can wait until you have a cash cushion put aside.

Q: I am enclosing a financial services firm's advertisement that offers CDs that pay interest approximately 3 percentage points higher than is available at local banks and CDs. How can the company do this?

A: That firm and many others are in the deposit brokerage business. They keep track of what interest is being paid on CDs by banks and S&Ls around the country and place customers' money in the highest-yielding CDs.

Most of the banks and S&Ls offering CDs with exceptionally high interest are in financial trouble. They have to pay high rates to attract depositors and keep from going bust.

If you put money in a bank or S&L that later fails, in most cases the FDIC sees to it that you won't suffer any loss – up to the limit of $100,000 per depositor per institution. But you will have the fuss and bother of finding another place to put your money.

You'll lose some money if you paid a premium price – higher than face value – for a CD issued by a depository institution that goes belly up. The FDIC insures CDs' face values, not premiums paid over face value.

Q: Last year, I considered making an early withdrawal of $3,000 from a five-year, 10.5 percent CD. I was told the following procedure would take place:

The entire amount of the CD would be transferred to a money market deposit account. The $3,000 would be removed and given to me. A new CD at the 7 percent current interest rate would be started with the rest of the money from the old CD.

Needless to say, I declined. Can a bank do this?

A: Certainly. A CD is a contract under which you agree to leave a certain amount of money on deposit for a fixed period of time and the bank agrees to pay a set rate of interest.

By taking money out before the CD's maturity date, you would break the contract. You and the bank would then enter a new contract, for a CD paying 7 percent.

It's surprising the bank didn't inform you that it would levy an early-withdrawal penalty.

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?

Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:

1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key (*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
- You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
- You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*).

Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
- You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

ANALYSIS

By ROB WELLS
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices were narrowly mixed Monday on concern that a sharp decline in the Tokyo stock market overnight would spill over into U.S. markets.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which traded lower throughout the session, rallied late in the afternoon to close up 0.45 at 3,236.36.

Stock prices fell in the broader market.

Scientists gain clues to 'missing link' species

John Noble Wilford
N.Y. Times News Service

Ever since Darwin postulated a close relationship between humans and apes, scientists have found little more than false leads and true frustration in their search for the common ancestor, some "missing link" species that immediately preceded the evolutionary split giving rise to chimpanzees, gorillas and humans.

Where it counts, the period from 14 million to 4 million years ago, the fossil record is a virtual blank, a terra incognita on the map of prehuman antiquity.

No one knows whether the split occurred as early as 10 million years ago or as recently as 5 million.

No one has yet uncovered pre-split fossils that promise a ready resolution of the mystery.

But paleoanthropologists, who can find encouragement in the merest scraps of bone, think they may soon be able to tease some important evolutionary clues out of assorted ape-like fossil specimens that have turned up in recent years in Africa, Europe and southern Asia.

The discovery last summer of a 13-million-year-old fragment of a lower jaw has inspired a more concerted examination of these enigmatic creatures, known collectively as Miocene dryopithecine hominoids.

These animals, remotely resembling Old World monkeys without tails, lived in the middle of the Miocene geological period, which extended from 24 million to 5 million years ago, and belonged to the superfamily of hominoids, which includes humans, apes and their many ancestors.

The jawbone will be the centerpiece of study and debate at an international conference of paleontologists at the American Museum of Natural History in New York on March 28. The fossil will go on public exhibit three days later.

Scientists are not suggesting the jawbone represents the long-sought missing link or is necessarily part of any direct ancestral line leading to apes and humans.

They sense, however, that an understanding of this and other dryopithecine discoveries may be their only hope of identifying the earliest steps in prehuman evolution.

They concede that their task will not be easy, with only some teeth and a few bones to go on — nothing close to a full skeleton.

"It's almost like trying to identify a creature emerging from the shadows," said Dr. David Pilbeam, a paleontologist at Harvard University. "First, all you see are teeth, little else. That's about where we are, but the teeth are telling us there's a lot of diversity among these species at any given time."

Dozens of dryopithecine specimens have come to light in the last two decades. They seemed to proliferate 16 million to 13 million years ago. The best-studied ones are found in East Africa and named Kenyapithecus.

Others include Afropithecus from Kenya and Saudi Arabia, 16 million years ago; Ouranopithecus from Asia Minor, 13 million to 10 million years ago; Dryopithecus from Spain, France and Central Europe, 14 million to 9 million years ago, and Sivapithecus from Pakistan and India, 12 to 7 million years ago.

The newly discovered jawbone, found in Namibia in southern Africa by a team of American and French scientists, was described in the current issue of the journal Nature as belonging to a previously unknown species of hominoids.

The specimen has been named Otavipithecus namibiensis, or Otavi ape, for the Otavi Mountains where the fossil was plucked out of mine tailings.

"Now we can look at all these different species and try to figure out their relationship to each other, if not to modern forms," said Dr. Eric Delson, a member of the American Museum staff who is a professor of anthropology at Lehman College of the City University of New York.

Otavipithecus is the first of these fossil species to be discovered south of the Equator, providing further evidence that they were more abundant, widespread and diversified than had been thought.
