Polly Klass city wins 'spirit'

'94-95 Midland award goes to Petaluma, Calif.

From Staff Reports

Community efforts to find 12-year-old Polly Klaas and sustained efforts to assist other missing children after the girl's death has earned Petaluma, Calif., the Midland Community Spirit Award for 1994-95.

The award is sponsored by Leadership Midland Alumni Association and is presented each year to a community whose citizens have unified to fulfill a pressing need or to respond to a crisis. The award was created following the rescue of Jessica McClure when Midlanders joined forces in a spirit of volunteerism to make the rescue a reality.

Polly's disappearance made national headlines after she was kidnapped from her bedroom and later found murdered. In the wake of her death, the Petaluma community and Polly's father Marc Klaas formed two foundations aimed at finding missing children, according to Iris Foster, volun-

Mother of slain girl grapples with loss

Editor's note: Julianne Powell was slain Feb. 10 in Midland. Her mother, Lynn Fisher, agreed to an interview to remember her only child on what would have been her 11th birthday.

Jury selection in the capital murder case of Henry Lopez Ortiz is scheduled to begin Sept. 28 in Potter County. Ortiz, 41, was arrested following the discovery of Julianne Powell's body in a laundry hamper in a spare room of his apartment. Julianne Powell would have been 11 today. Instead, her life was cut short at the hands of another.

The red-haired, fair-skinned child had a certain energy that attracted people to her.

She was not only Lynn Fisher's only child, but her best friend.

It was not easy for Ms. Fisher to agree to talk about the pain still on her mind constantly. Her daughter was killed on Feb. 10, a little more than six months ago.

Reminders of the child are everywhere in her modest home.

She embraces a photo of Julianne, holding it as she would the child when she was upset or not feeling well.

"This is my baby," she said as she tightly held the photo close to her heart.

"This was going to be her best birthday. I was going to take her and a couple of her friends to Six Flags," said the 44-year-old registered nurse.

"I don't know what I'll do. I'm scheduled to work that day, but I don't know if I can do it," she added.

Commuter flight crash kills three; 26 survive

Associated Press

CARROLLTON, Ga. — A commuter plane flying from Georgia to Mississippi crashed in a hay field and cracked open Monday, killing the pilot and two others and injuring 26, many of whom fled the wreckage with their clothes on fire.

"I thought I was going to die and I was just hoping it was going to end real quick," a passenger, Chuck Pfisterer, told Atlanta television station WSB.

"And the next thing I knew, after sustaining bumps and bruises, I opened my eyes and saw that, hey, I'm alive, and the plane is in pieces and I'm hanging by my seat belt."

The Atlantic Southeast Airlines turboprop went down around midday about five miles from Carrollton, breaking into three large pieces as it plowed across the green field.

The pilot had radioed that he was having engine problems, and may have been trying to land at West Georgia Regional Airport, six to eight miles from the crash site, said Christy Williams, a Federal Aviation Administration spokeswoman.

But a passenger, Air Force Maj. Chuck LeMay, told WSB that, after passengers heard a "loud bang," they were told the plane would try to return to Atlanta for an emergency landing.

Polona Jeter, who lives nearby, said she saw the front of the plane "rolling and tumbling and on fire" as the aircraft came apart.

"I could see about 10 people getting out," she said. "Some were burning. They were running. People were trying to get them down and get it out."

One injured man arrived on her front porch and used the phone to leave a message for his wife in Maine. "His clothes were burned off. His undershorts were all that was left," she said. "The skin just rolled off his body."

Firefighter Keith Lovvorn holds his head at the scene of the crash.

The pilot and a passenger were dead at the scene, the FAA said. Atlanta Southeast Airlines President John Beiser said the pilot was from Macon, Ga., but would not release his name. The passenger who died at the scene was not immediately identified.

Another passenger died later at Erlanger Medical Center in Chattanooga, Tenn., hospital spokeswoman Carolyn Peak told WTVC-TV.

Ms. Peak identified the victim as Lucille Burton of Asheville, N.C., whose age was not immediately known.

The 26 survivors were all hospitalized. At least 10 were in critical condition with burns.

The plane left a scarred path in the field indicating it barely cleared trees before hitting the ground.

Bridge death: Motorist stripped, crowd cheers

DETROIT (AP) — As dozens of onlookers gathered, and some cheered, three men pulled a woman from her car, ripped off her clothes, then chased her until she either jumped or was forced off a bridge to her death.

None of the 40 or so passersby tried to help Deletha Word during the confrontation that began with two minor traffic accidents early Saturday on Belle Isle, said police Sgt. John Morel.

A man who arrived late tried to rescue her from the Detroit River but couldn't reach her. The 33-year-old woman's body, missing a leg, was found several miles downstream later that morning.

"My baby was down there all by herself. I know she was scared to death," the woman's mother, Dortha Word, said as she cried Monday. "How could they be so cruel?"

Trouble started around 3 a.m., Morel said, when Word was involved in two minor traffic accidents on Belle Island. One car with three men inside chased her onto the bridge connecting the island to the city and rammed her car, forcing her to stop.

One of the men smashed her car with a crowbar and pulled her from the car, ripping off some of her clothes, Cmdr. Gerald Stewart said. The man pushed her against the car and beat her, he said.

One of the men weighed nearly 300

teer chairman of Leadership Midland.

"The foundations form a network between police department and missing persons' bureaus to better coordinate information on missing children and to get the information out quickly," Ms. Foster said.

Representatives of Petaluma, including Mayor Patricia Hilligoss, Polly's father Marc Klaas, the Petaluma Argus Courier Publisher Barry Blansett and former vice mayor and councilman Brian Sobel, will be flown to Midland on Oct. 2. The group will be presented a bronze bas relief, featuring Jessica McClure and her rescuers, during the annual Midland Chamber of Commerce meeting and luncheon on Oct. 3.

The three finalists behind Petaluma were Christian United, Inc., of Asheboro, N.C., for raising funds for medical expenses and disaster victims; Oklahoma City, Okla., for the heroic and compassionate deeds following the Oklahoma City bombing; and Taylor, for ridding a neighborhood of a drug house, Ms. Foster said.

The first city to receive the award was Sioux City, Iowa, in 1988, for the city's response to plane crash victims' families.

Other cities that have received the award are Yakima, Wash., Bangor, Maine and Warren, Ind./Southern Well School Community.

so much."

"I'm just a woman, just a mother who has lost her child. I have black moments.

"Some nights I wake up shaking, sobbing, holding her picture, curled up in a ball ... other nights I would swear I hear her voice calling me and I walk down the hall thinking 'she needs me,' " Ms. Fisher said.

Then she gets up and realizes the truth.

She said she was in shock those first few weeks after Julianne was gone.

"It was a feeling of non-reality. I couldn't connect with normal people. I had some moments I was just sure it was a nightmare and I was going to wake up," she said.

Ripples in a pond

"I feel like my life is just ripples in a pond ... it just resonates and you have to let it flow or else you'll get drowned."

Ms. Fisher's father died five years ago. She was married three years ago. Her mother died last year. She was divorced last year.

"All those things prepared me for this loss. With each loss I acquired tools ... but there is no comparison. This is the worst loss.

"I can never be hurt this bad again and there is a small, strange comfort in that. Nothing can hurt any worse than this."

Joys of motherhood

Ms. Fisher married at 32, and gave birth to Julianne the following year.

"She was the most incredible thing to happen to me. She was unique and she renewed my fascination and awe in life," she remembers happily.

As Julianne experienced discovery, Ms. Fisher shared in that.

"She allowed me to participate in her wonderment and live that with her."

Julianne dreamed of being an ice skater and in-line skating was her way to live that dream daily. While they lived in California, Julianne took ice-skating lessons.

"She would say 'It's like flying on earth, mom, without falling,' " Ms. Fisher said.

Fun-loving child

"She had a flair for the dramatic, she would turn and give a pose," Ms. Fisher said as she displayed a photo of Julianne on some rocks.

Looking at the picture, Julianne seemed be saying "ta-da."

Photos of the lovely little girl decorate the apartment.

Her mother describes the child in each picture.

"In this one, she was 7. She was already a very independent child."

Julianne enjoyed learning new things and wanted to share those joys of discovery, her mother recalled.

"She would come up and say 'Mom, guess what I learned today?' and she was also very well-spoken. I didn't allow her to say she couldn't do something so she would tell me, 'I simply cannot do it' or 'It is extremely difficult for me,' " Ms. Fisher said with a smile.

Julianne's fifth-grade teacher Judy Schmidt remembers Julianne in similar ways.

Ms. Schmidt said Julianne was conscientious in everything she did.

"She was very fun-loving and cooperated with other children and she accepted other children and they accepted her," she said.

The teacher described Julianne as "bubbly."

Sacrifices

Ms. Fisher said that following her divorce last year, she and Julianne had a hard time making it day-to-day while Ms. Fisher went to nursing school.

"We had three lists: a wish list, a want list and a need list. Needless to say the need list went first and the wish list went last. This was the year we were going to be able to reap the rewards for our sacrifices. I have finally gotten a good paying job," she said with remorse.

The two shared a one-bedroom apartment with Ms. Fisher sleeping on the couch.

The path to Midland

Several reasons brought the mother and daughter to Midland in August 1994.

Jury selection in Ortiz capital murder trial to open Sept. 28

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

Jury selection in the capital murder case of Henry Lopez Ortiz has been scheduled to begin Sept. 28 in Potter County. More pretrial hearings in the case will begin Thursday.

Ortiz, 41, was arrested following the discovery of Julianne Powell's body in a laundry hamper in a spare room of his apartment.

He was indicted Feb. 15 on charges of capital murder in the Feb. 10 sexual assault, kidnapping and slaying of the 10-year-old.

Ortiz has pleaded not guilty in the case. He has been denied bond.

The trial was moved to Potter County because of extensive publicity in the case here and the public's interest.

The state is seeking the death penalty.

The pretrial hearings slated for Thursday will help 238th District Court Judge John Hyde rule on the defense motion to suppress photos of the defendant's body and evidence from the body search of the defendant and on the state motion to determine if Ortiz's oral statements were given voluntarily.

The prosecution indicated in court records that it does not intend to use any statements Ortiz may have made unless they need to impeach Ortiz's credibility.

However, prosecutors requested a pretrial hearing on whether the statements were given freely, to prevent any court delays should the need to use the statements arise during the trial.

The defense has filed a motion to suppress all oral statements Ortiz may have made. He reportedly made four statements to police as well as speaking to the mother of Julianne during the mother's search for her missing child.

Julianne was last heard from by a friend about 4 p.m. Feb. 10 and her mother arrived home about 4:30 p.m. to discover her missing. Police were called out about 5 p.m. after an initial search was conducted.

Officers were led to Ortiz after questioning the girl's mother and their neighbors about the girl's disappearance. Officers had been questioning Ortiz since shortly after 5 p.m. The girl's body was found just before 7 p.m. in spare room of Ortiz's apartment.

The indictment charges Ortiz with suffocating and strangling the girl before stuffing her body in a laundry hamper while in the course of kidnapping and sexually assaulting her.

Both suspect and victim lived in the same building at The Park at Caldera, formerly known as Quinten's Walk apartments, 3100 W. Caldera Blvd. Julianne and her mother lived upstairs from Ortiz and his wife.

Ms. Fisher graduated from nursing school, and her mother died two weeks after she graduated.

"There was no reason to stay. Jobs were hard to find and on the day my mother died she insisted I send some resumes to Texas," Ms. Fisher said.

"Plus, it would be 2,000 miles from my ex-husband," she said jokingly in a lighter moment.

The mood turned back toward sadness as she added, ironically, "plus it was a safer place."

"It was the best time of our life and it was easy to get used to with her. She found the best in everyone, she had friends immediately and she absolutely loved having her own room.

"She loved school," Ms. Fisher said. Her grades improved with the move here.

"She fit in immediately. She was an instant Texan, even more so than I, and I was born here."

Ms. Fisher also has family here — her sister, Maridell Fryar.

Ms. Fisher said her first intent was to come to Midland, get nursing experience at the hospital and then return to California, but that plan changed.

"I began to think maybe we'd stay here. Her grades were better and she was more interested in school. So I thought, maybe we'd stay to give her some roots.

"Coming from California to the desert, I thought I could handle anything as long as I had her," Ms. Fisher said before pausing to hold back the emotion.

"I miss the woman she would have become. I grieve for her as much as I do for the child I lost."

As she is talking, she can hear the music of the "ice cream truck" driving by.

"She loved ice cream. When she would hear that truck she would come to me and say 'I'll buy one for you if you'll buy one for me.' Of course, I wound up paying for both of them.

"She really was my best friend," the mother said.

Why?

"There will never be an answer to why," Ms. Fisher said. "I have been dealing with not being there to protect her when she really needed me. But, I know this could have happened just as easily if I had been home. She could have been outside playing. Julianne was one of the most protected children I knew."

"I now have the knowledge that there are monsters anywhere. I know now they could reach out and snatch people and change your entire life.

"I thought 'I have no future or I couldn't plan one without her in it,' " Ms. Fisher added.

The future

She said she won't have any more children.

She will never have grandchildren to carry on her family traditions or have her eyes or her smile.

"There is a legacy you leave behind with descendants. You always think you'll go before your children and they'll carry on through them and you're immortal.

"She's the only child I'll ever have. I'll never be immortal. There will be none of my traits carried on and that's a hard concept to accept," Ms. Fisher said.

But, despite that lonely realization, Ms. Fisher said thoughts of not going on never entered her mind.

"The alternative is not an alternative. ... I'm a survivor and I always have been.

"Two weeks before she died she told me 'I want you to promise to live till you're 90.' I asked her why till 90 and she said 'I need you.' So I promised her I would live as long as I can.

"That was the last promise I made to her and I'll never break it. She was a very intuitive child."

Feelings and pain

"I can't even describe the things I feel."

Ms. Fisher writes letters to Julianne so she can feel close to her. Not a moment passes when the child isn't in her thoughts.

Julianne is buried in California next to her grandparents.

"I would have had her cremated and spread her ashes to replenish the earth, but I had to consider other people like her father," Ms. Fisher said.

Time doesn't ease the pain as the old cliche claims. At least, not so far.

Aug. 10 marked the six-month anniversary of her daughter's death.

"It was really difficult. I had to work that day and I'm scheduled to work on her birthday. ... Mother's Day was bad, too. It was my first year without my mom and without my daughter.

"I don't know what I'll do on Christmas. Maybe I'll get away and go to Arizona or Mexico. The hospital has been so supportive and understanding and has allowed me to take my time away and know I'll have a job when I return," she said thankfully.

Much-needed support

Ms. Fisher has found some solace through the Survivors of Homicide support group.

"They are like another family for me. I wish I would have met them under other circumstances, but meeting them has given me a safe place to voice anything without fear.

"It's an incredible place to be. Their experience in court has prepared me for a lot of what is in store," Ms. Fisher said.

She said the first few weeks after losing Julianne she was in shock most of the time.

"It took a while to go. That first night I was afraid of being drawn into a situation I couldn't control or where I wouldn't fit in."

Snickers the cat

Close to the end of Ms. Fisher's conversation, Julianne's cat Snickers jumps on the front window ledge. She opens the door and lets the cat come inside.

The cat is a reminder to her of the love Julianne had for everything and a reminder of the child's death, too.

"She loved that cat more than anything," Ms. Fisher said. "She would try and make it stay in bed with her and I had to tell her a cat won't do that, but if she would leave him alone he would come back to stay with her."

Reports indicate Julianne was searching for her cat when she was abducted and slain.

"She told me 'I would give my life for him.' Little did we know, she would," Ms. Fisher said. "He was her baby."

The end of a child

Ms. Fisher said she is proud of her daughter — proud for fighting back against her attacker's sexual assault.

"She knew that wasn't right and she wasn't going to go along with it," Ms. Fisher said, the anger overriding the hurt for a brief moment.

The mother knows only a small portion of information regarding the circumstances surrounding her child's death and that is the way she wants it.

She didn't want to talk about the case or the upcoming trial because she doesn't want to jeopardize the state's case against the accused man.

"I'm going to be realistic here. I know I can't prevent this from happening to another child. At least he won't be able to do this to another child. I don't care if he gets life or death, just so he is put away so he can't hurt another child," Ms. Fisher said.

Forever

"You always think you have forever ... but, you've got to make sure people know you love them. I never missed an opportunity to tell her 'I love you.'

"That child knew she was loved ... but, there's not much comfort in anything these days," she said sadly.

Around her home are angels. Angels spell JULIANNE on one wall.

"I need to have them near me. I view her as my guardian angel. I have them all around me and it is a comfort to have them all. It gives me peace when I feel there never will be," she said.

Life continues

"It still amazes me that the sun comes up and things are growing all around me," Ms. Fisher said.

"My path will lead away from Midland. There are not enough good memories here to overcome the bad. But, I have an obligation to complete something she and I started. I have an obligation to the hospital and my sister needs me and I need her, too.

"Maybe I'll live somewhere where I have only my good memories and I can start all over again. It is so amazing how many beginnings you can make in one lifetime."

CHEERS: 'It seemed like people didn't care' pounds, according to a police source quoted in The Detroit News. Word, who was 4-foot-11, weighed 115 pounds, her mother said.

When Word tried to run away, police said the man with the crowbar chased her. What happened after that is unclear.

Police are not saying whether Word jumped or was forced off the bridge, but Mrs. Word said she is sure her daughter was forced into the Detroit River.

"They ... made her leap over that bridge and beat her hands. She was holding onto the bridge, and beat her hands away from that banister," she said said, citing an account she said police gave her.

Word's cousin Carol Neely said Word would have never jumped because she did not know how to swim.

Lawrence Walker, 21, was in the bumper-to-bumper traffic that had formed on the bridge when he noticed a crowd running to the edge. He got out of his car and followed, jumping into the river after her.

"I wasn't trying to be Superman or anything," he said. "I just saw something and jumped in without thinking about it."

But Word moved away from him and a friend in the water and he quickly lost sight of her. He worried afterward that perhaps she thought he was one of the people after her.

'They made her leap over that bridge and beat her hands ... away from that banister.'

— mother of victim

"I think my trying to help her maybe made her swim a little further out than she could," he said.

Walker said about 50 people were gathered when he ran up, many of them laughing about the men beating Word. He said one person had a cellular phone but would not call police.

"It seemed like people didn't care," he said.

By Sunday afternoon, police had arrested three men, two age 20 and one age 19. It was not clear what charges they faced.

Relatives described Word, who had a 13-year-old daughter and worked at a grocery store while earning a bachelor's degree in marketing, as the backbone of their close-knit family. When her brother, James, was shot to death in May, she had been the family's support.

"If she had been on that bridge, and somebody was beating somebody, she wouldn't have stood and watched," Mrs. Word said. "She would have helped them. She might have got hurt trying but she would have helped."

WORLD IN BRIEF

■ India opens probe of train disaster

NEW DELHI — The Indian government Monday announced an official investigation of the country's worst train disaster in decades as the death toll edged the 400 mark while rescue workers, with the aid of cranes and gas cutters, continued to pull mangled bodies from the wreckage.

"Heads will roll," declared Prime Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao to Parliament, referring to plans to fix responsibility for the tragedy.

Rao said that he was concerned about the high density of passenger trains at night and that the schedule of the two trains which crashed Sunday morning at Firozabad, 185 miles south of here, were separated by barely nine minutes.

■ Zairians step up Rwandans' expulsion

NAIROBI, Kenya — An estimated 26,000 Rwandan and Burundian refugees fled their eastern Zaire camps to surrounding hills Monday to escape troops who were rounding them for a forceful repatriation, the United Nations said.

It was not immediately clear if Zaire planned to expel all the estimated 1 million Rwandan refugees who fled to Zaire last year.

Peter Kessler, a spokesman for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees in Kenya, said the refugees who fled to the hills were around the town of Uvira, near the Burundi border.

Fernando del Mundo, a spokesman for the UNHCR in Geneva, said close to 3,000 refugees were expelled during the day.

■ Mexico talks drug lord's surrender

MEXICO CITY — The government of President Ernesto Zedillo has begun to negotiate seriously for the conditional surrender of one of Mexico's most powerful drug traffickers, United States officials said Monday.

The trafficker, Juan Garcia Abrego, became the first major international drug kingpin to be placed on the FBI's 10-most-wanted list in March. He is believed to have smuggled hundreds of tons of Colombian cocaine into the United States, operating primarily out of Houston and New York.

Discussions between senior Mexican law-enforcement officials and intermediaries for Garcia Abrego have continued over more than a month, the officials said. American officials said the Mexican federal police have also pressed ahead with efforts to capture the 51-year-old smuggler.

One of Garcia Abrego's conditions, the officials said, was that he not be extradited to the United States, where he faces a series of drug, money laundering and racketeering charges.

■ Russians storm Chechen-held station

MOSCOW — Using tanks, helicopters and ferocious mortar fire, Russian special forces Monday stormed a police station which had been seized by 250 Chechen rebels in the Russian-held town of Argun on Sunday.

Russian authorities announced that though a few rebels escaped, its troops had retaken control of the building and the town. But there were reports tonight that fighting continued in other parts of Argun, 8 miles from the capital of Grozny.

Before the assault, Moscow said the rebels had held four Chechen policemen hostage, a charge denied by the rebels and independent witnesses.

The Chechen raid — and Moscow's fierce retaliation — was a dramatic setback to an already unraveling disarmament agreement reached on July 30th as well as fragile peace negotiations going on in Grozny. It was not known if anyone died during Sunday's attack, and there was no word of casualties from the Russian counter-assault.

■ Muslim refugees stranded in Croatia

MIHOLJSKO, Croatia — A three-mile stretch of black top road that winds through a narrow, shallow valley, is strewn with 25,000 Bosnian Muslim refugees, living in makeshift shelters on the edge of cornfields and woods. Women cook on white porcelain stoves they brought with them, children sought protection from Monday afternoon's torrential downpour under tractors that line the road.

The refugees — farmers with their cows and horses, city dwellers with memories of the good life — have been trapped for two weeks, largely forgotten by the international community, which has focused on the Serbs hounded out of the Krajina, the Croats expelled from Banja Luka.

"We are nothing," said Robert Karajic, a soft spoken lanky 24-year old, as he put his arms around his wife, an elementary school teacher, before walking down the road in the downpour to take their 15 month old son to a clinic. He was diagnosed as having diarrhea, as do many of the children here.

The United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees cannot begin to build a refugee camp until the Bosnian government gives its approval.

But the Croatian government has made it clear that these Bosnian Muslims are not welcome here.

■ Moody's cuts Japanese banks' ratings

TOKYO — In a blow to the nation's already battered financial institutions, Moody's Investors Service Monday announced a new set of weaker ratings for Japanese banks that in part reflect the heavy burden of bad debt many are carrying.

The new assessment by Moody's, an international credit rating agency, comes at the heels of a bank run earlier this month that led to the failure of the nation's fifth largest credit institution. It essentially deems the banks, some of the world's largest in assets, as only "adequate" in financial strength, and this could hinder the role of Japanese banks in the global marketplace, analysts here said.

Bus bomb kills 5, sets back PLO-Israel talks

Despite danger, Americans say they won't leave

By Moshe Arenstein
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Judy Shulewitz had just squeezed into the back of bus No. 9 on her way to class at Hebrew University. Hadassah Segal was on the same bus, despite her father's warnings to stay off buses while visiting Israel.

At 7:55 a.m., as the two Americans sat waiting to continue their trip, another bus drew along No. 9 in the northern Jerusalem neighborhood of Ramat Eshkol.

A bomb exploded on the second bus, turning it into a pile of twisted metal and setting fire to No. 9. Body parts, glass splinters and pieces of metal flew as screaming, panicked passengers pushed their way out of the vehicles or jumped through shattered windows.

"A lot of people fell on top of me, screaming, 'Let us out of here,'" said Shulewitz, a 19-year-old from Jamison, Pa.

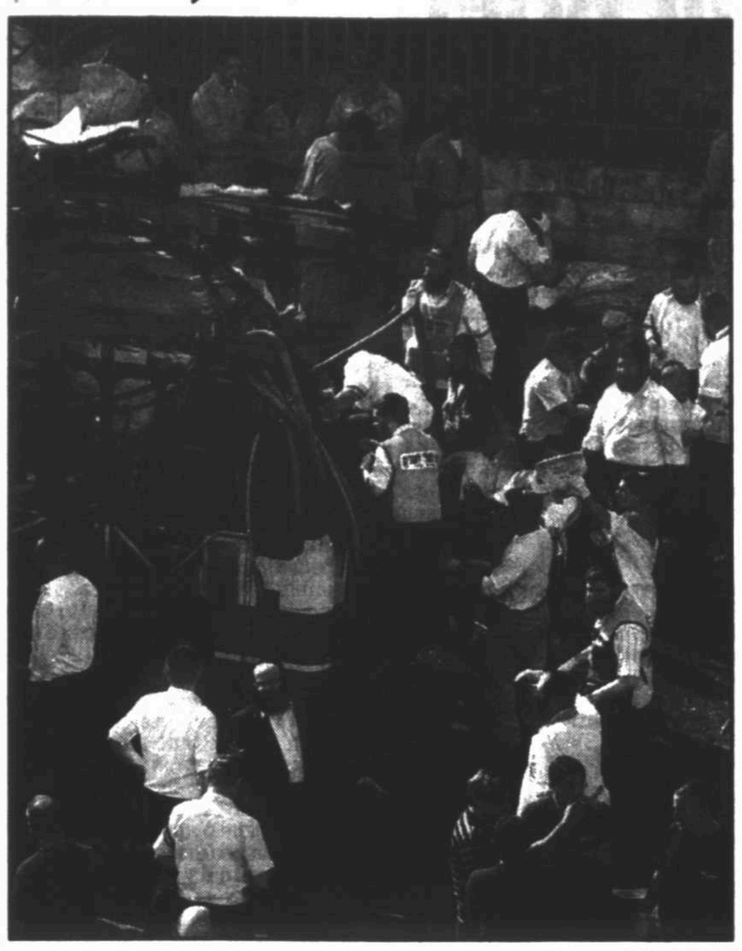

Speaking from her bed at Shaarei Zedek Hospital, her head bandaged, her hands and knees cut by flying glass, Shulewitz recalled: "A man was lying on the floor of the bus. I could see body parts everywhere."

Her mother Sherry, who had been visiting her daughter in Israel, stood by comforting her sobbing daughter.

Segal, 27, from New York City, said she fainted after the explosion, woke to see bodies next to her and jumped out of a window.

"My father said when you come to Israel, don't get on a bus," said Segal, who suffered slight injuries from cut glass.

Marilyn Cooper, of Morgantown, W.Va., was concentrating on Hebrew quiz as she rode on a third bus that was traveling behind No. 26. The force of the blast slammed her head against a window.

Israeli rescue workers mill around the torn hull of a Jerusalem bus after a suicide bomber exploded a pipe bomb on Monday.

"There were no bruises or cuts, just a big headache," said the 25-year-old Princeton University student.

London-born Esther Chipman described the scene from her apartment across the street. "We heard screams coming from the bus, people shouting 'Mommy, mommy.' We saw sooted faces."

Both the No. 9 and No. 26 were headed to Hebrew University's Mount Scopus campus on a route that passed police headquarters, and many of the passengers were students and police officers.

Hebrew University spokeswoman Margalit Baranes Appelbaum said that among the more than 100 injured were 17 foreign students attending summer Hebrew classes at the university. They included students from Australia, France and Germany.

Despite the shock, Shulewitz said she will complete the year at Hebrew University before returning to Cornell University to finish a degree in Middle Eastern Studies. Her mother concurred.

" This can't be a reason for me to bring her home," said Sherry Shulewitz.

JERUSALEM — An Islamic militant, possibly a woman, set off a suicide bomb Monday that tore through two crowded Israeli commuter buses headed for Hebrew University. The blast shredded one bus into a twisted metal cobweb and killed five people, including an American tourist.

The police investigation focused on two mutilated and unidentified bodies. Police Chief Arieh Amit said the condition of the woman's body suggested she could have been holding the TNT bomb.

"I could see body parts everywhere," said Judy Shulewitz, a Cornell University student who was one of at least three Americans wounded in the explosion. "There was blood all over the place."

The Muslim militant group Hamas claimed responsibility for the blast, which injured more than 100 people during morning rush hour in Jerusalem and forced the suspension of Israel-PLO talks on expanding Palestinian self-rule.

In a leaflet issued in Syria, Hamas said: "The Israeli government will pay for the war declared against Islam and Muslims." Hamas, which opposes the peace talks, has demanded a complete Israeli withdrawal from the West Bank and Gaza Strip, including all settlements, and a bigger role for itself in representing Palestinians.

The dead were identified as Joan Davenny, a Hebrew school teacher from Woodbridge, Conn., Rivka Cohen, a 26-year-old Israeli, and Noam Eizenman, an Israeli policeman. Davenny had been gathering material for her class on the history of Israel.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin suspended peace talks with the PLO and ordered the West Bank and Gaza Strip sealed, barring Palestinians from traveling to Israel.

Rabin said the talks would resume after the Israeli victims' funerals which, according to Jewish tradition, must be held as quickly as possible. Mrs. Cohen was buried Monday night.

Seoul police: Deadly fire set to mask reform-facility breakout

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Young women desperate to escape from a church-run reform school apparently set fires in their rooms Monday, hoping to flee when guards unlocked the dormitory doors.

The early morning fires swept out of control, however, and 37 women died before the doors were opened to let firemen in.

Many of the dead were packed into restrooms, and news reports said bloodstains and fingernail scratches on the barred windows showed their frantic efforts to escape the flames.

The victims — all but three in their teens — either burned to death or suffocated. One was only 13. Sixteen others were injured.

The school had a history of escape attempts and was known for strict discipline of the women, most of them runaways caught working in brothels and bars. It was run by the Korean Presbyterian Church in Yongin, 35 miles south of Seoul.

Police questioned security guards on why it took so long to unlock the doors, after firefighters complained they could not get in before the victims suffocated.

Lee Yun-kun, the chief police investigator, said the fires were planned by a group wanting to escape the center where courts sent them for 10 months of vocational training as hairstylists or tailors.

Diaries found in the wreckage of the Kyonggi Women's Technical School told a bleak tale. One girl wrote of beatings, and said she wanted to escape or die. Another wrote of exhaustion and fear.

"They beat me again today..... Life here is so hard that I don't think I can make it through. Sometimes I want to cry. I want to escape .... I want to go out. I thought again about killing myself," a teenage girl wrote in her diary, which was shown on television.

"It's stifling here. I want to see my friends outside .... God please help me! I am so tired. I want to tell it all to Mom next time she comes to see me, but I am afraid to worry her," another girl, whom the Hankook Ilbo newspaper identified only as a 17-year-old Kim, wrote in her diary.

A 13-year-old wrote to her father that she was behaving herself at the school and promised not to disappoint him again. She died in Monday's arson. Another victim kept a neat stack of letters her mother sent and crossed out each passing day on her calendar.

Media reports said fires had been set in two other breakout attempts in the past year. Women had complained of poor facilities and harsh treatment for behavior such as smoking and chewing gum.

Contact with the outside world was limited, with phone calls banned, letters inspected and visits with relatives monitored.

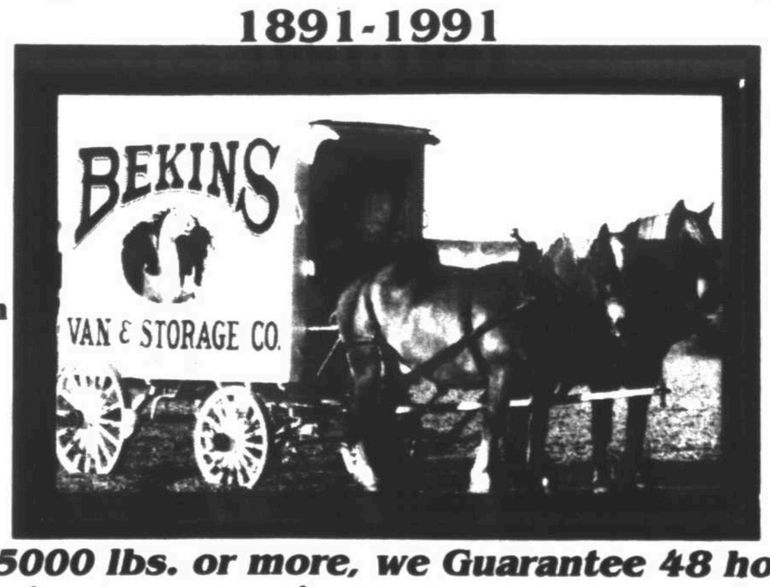

Bullying also was common, and women caught trying to escape were beaten, had their hair cut and were subjected to forced labor.

Nation In Brief

■ Ex-senator to plead guilty to charges

WASHINGTON — Former Sen. Dave Durenberger said Monday that he will plead guilty in a deal with federal prosecutors to settle a criminal case that crippled his political career.

The Minnesota Republican has agreed to plead guilty to five misdemeanor counts, said Justice Department spokesman John Russell. He had been facing trial in October on felony charges.

He is scheduled to enter the plea today before U.S. District Judge Stanley Harris.

The Justice Department on Monday filed a five-count criminal information in U.S. District Court here, which signals that a defendant has reached a plea bargain with prosecutors.

Durenberger, who is now a consultant in Washington, confirmed that he had reached a plea agreement but declined to give details. He said he wanted to settle the case before his wedding Friday in Minnesota to a former staff member.

"It's kind of nice to have everything behind you. It was judicious timing," Durenberger said.

■ Kevorkian attends woman's suicide

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. — Dr. Jack Kevorkian attended the suicide Monday of a woman with multiple sclerosis whose body was left in the back seat of an old car outside a hospital emergency room.

"As things went from bad to worse and I was nothing more than a bed veg, I knew it was time to say, 'See ya,'" 46-year-old Esther Cohan of Skokie, Ill., had written in an Aug. 9 letter addressed "to all."

The suicide was at least the 25th in which Kevorkian has taken part since 1990.

Kevorkian's lawyer, Geoffrey Fieger, would say little about how Cohan died except that it was "consistent" with other suicides Kevorkian has attended and that it happened in Oakland County, north of Detroit.

The medical examiner's office ruled the death a homicide by carbon monoxide poisoning. In most of the previous suicides, the person inhaled carbon monoxide from a canister.

Cohan's body was left in a gray car parked outside William Beaumont Hospital in Royal Oak, not far from where Kevorkian once lived.

■ Felix continues to weaken

MIAMI — Feeble Felix, downgraded to a tropical storm and growing still weaker, moved up the Atlantic Ocean on Monday toward Canada's Maritime Provinces.

"It will gradually be losing tropical characteristics as it moves into cold water," said Max Mayfield, a hurricane specialist at the National Hurricane Center.

The storm, which had threatened Bermuda and the East Coast for a week, weakened from a hurricane to a tropical storm on Sunday.

It was expected to spare New England as it continued northnortheast on a course expected to bring it close to the southeastern tip of Newfoundland sometime today, Mayfield said.

At 11 a.m. EDT Monday, Felix's center was about 380 miles southwest of Sable Island, Nova Scotia. The storm was moving at 25 mph, and its maximum sustained wind speed was about 65 mph. To be a hurricane, a storm's winds must blow at a steady 74 mph.

Judge blasts O.J. defense for shabby paperwork

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The anxiously awaited disclosure of tape recordings in the O.J. Simpson trial was mired in confusion Monday, with the judge rejecting defense paperwork as incoherent and a prosecutor saying some of the most volatile material had been destroyed.

Although the judge turned away the bungled defense motion, his ruling included quotations confirming that Detective Mark Fuhrman repeatedly used a racial slur, advocated police brutality and said one of his superiors "should be shot."

In an unusual written ruling heaping scorn on Simpson's high-powered defense team, the judge said he searched the transcripts for 10 incendiary Fuhrman statements that were cited in the motion by their page numbers.

But when Superior Court Judge Lance Ito tried to correlate the recordings with transcripts, he couldn't find the quoted passages and eventually gave up. He blasted the defense for submitting such shabby paperwork.

"Given the fact that there are more than a dozen attorneys working for the defense, it is not too much to ask that there be some basic correlation between the quoted proffer, the reported transcript and the audio tapes," Ito wrote. "The proffer is incoherent. It will not be further considered by this court in its current form."

A proffer is a written offer of proof to support the admissibility of evidence. The defense has said it offered Ito 30 separate racially charged statements by Fuhrman, but the judge sealed the documents.

Ito left an opening for the defense to refile its papers — which Simpson's lead attorney said would be done — and warned sequestered jurors yet another delay might be looming.

To complicate matters further, prosecutor Marcia Clark asserted that the reason the judge couldn't find some cited passages was because some taped material had been destroyed.

Those passages, she said, are some of the most inflammatory because they involve racial epithets.

"All of those portions are not on tape," she said. "That tape has been destroyed. ... If you are listening for it on tape, you will not find it."

Outside court, Clark said Fuhrman's interviewer, North Carolina screenwriting professor Laura Hart McKinny, had destroyed tape of some of her conversations with Fuhrman after transcribing them. The interviews were for a McKinny project on the Los Angeles Police Department.

One of McKinny's lawyers, Ronald Regwan, confirmed that his client inadvertently taped over her first interviews with Fuhrman after they were transcribed. As a result, there is no audio to accompany the first 45 to 48 pages of a transcript that totals about 300 pages, he said.

Clark is expected to oppose use of any passages unavailable on tape. She will also fight to keep large sections of the tapes away from the jury.

Defense lawyer Johnnie Cochran Jr. said outside court that 10 of Fuhrman's 30 racially charged comments and about half of 18 passages dealing with alleged police misconduct are in written transcripts of the erased tape.

Cochran also said the defense would deliver to the judge first thing today a new, complete set of transcripts that corollate with the defense motion.

Fuhrman's use of racial epithets flies in the face of his trial testimony that he had not uttered the word "nigger" in the past decade. But the tapes also include volatile accounts of police brutality that now threaten to ignite a major scandal.

Ito's written ruling quoted several passages in which the word "nigger" is used by the 43-year-old detective, who is now retired and living in Idaho.

While Ito told jurors to expect "substantial" time away from court this week so he can deal with a legal issue — they are unaware of the tapes — he allowed testimony to go forward Monday. The defense called John Larry Ragle, former head of the Orange County crime lab, who told jurors the LAPD forensic work in the Simpson case was substandard.

On cross-examination, prosecutor Hank Goldberg elicited from Ragle testimony that he has not been to a crime scene since he retired in 1989 and had not been the primary investigator on major crimes since 1976. The prosecutor also tried to show that Ragle was not familiar with key textbooks on crime scene investigation.

Meanwhile, Ito's ruling on the defense proffer confirmed that sections of the tape transcripts that were leaked to the news media were accurate.

Effort at peace in Yugoslavia will continue, Clinton says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Insisting peace can be brought to the Balkans, the Clinton administration's senior foreign advisers planned a resumption of shuttle diplomacy Monday even as the bodies of three Americans who died in the pursuit came home to solemn eulogies.

"The effort to bring peace to Bosnia will continue," Secretary of State Warren Christopher pledged on the steaming tarmac of Andrews Air Force Base, as families and friends of the three dead peacemakers dabbed at their eyes with handkerchiefs and suppressed sobs.

"They gave their lives in a noble effort to save the lives of others," Christopher said in tribute to Robert Frasure, the chief U.S. negotiator for Bosnia; Joseph Kruzel, a deputy assistant secretary of defense; and Samuel Nelson Drew, an Air Force colonel at the National Security Council.

The frustrating attempt to open negotiations between warring ethnic factions has not succeeded, but Defense Secretary William Perry said Bosnia-Herzegovina was closer to peace than ever before.

He likened the U.S. effort to the mythological Corinthian King Sisyphus striving to push a large stone up a hill. National Security Adviser Anthony Lake, concluding the sad ceremony at the air base near Washington on a positive note, vowed that "unlike Sisyphus, we will put that rock on top of the mountain."

The three Americans died Saturday when part of the road to Sarajevo, the Bosnian capital, collapsed, sending their French truck careening end-over-end into a ravine where it burst into flames.

An honor guard carried the flag-draped caskets off the huge, gray C-141 transport plane as an Air Force band played "Nearer My God to Thee." Family members and friends sat in folding chairs on the tarmac.

"The effort to bring peace to Bosnia will continue with a new sense of commitment," said Christopher, who interrupted a California vacation to participate in the ceremonies and to meet with Perry, Lake and Madeleine Albright, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, on the next diplomatic moves. Perry broke away from a visit to Scott Air Force Base in Illinois to participate.

Prosecutor: Reynolds lured girl, 16, 'like hunter stalking'

CHICAGO (AP) — A prosecutor accused Rep. Mel Reynolds on Monday of luring a 16-year-old campaign volunteer into a sexual relationship "like a hunter stalks his prey."

"He used everything he had, his position ... his office, to get her to have sex with him," Assistant State's Attorney Colleen Hyland told the jury during closing arguments at the 43-year-old congressman's sex-abuse trial.

The jury began deliberations around 4:30 p.m.

After four weeks of trial, both sides focused final arguments on just two witnesses — Reynolds and Beverly Heard, the former campaign worker who says she had sex with the congressman when she was an underage 16 and 17.

The Illinois Democrat has denied having had sex with Heard, now 19, saying they engaged only in fantasy sex talk on the phone.

Defense attorney Ed Genson said Reynolds was targeted by a lying, "bizarre" teen-ager who tried to use telephone sexual fantasies to extort money from the two-term lawmaker.

His voice rising, Genson shook his fists and shouted to the jury that Heard "lied in this courtroom in front of your very eyes!"

"A whole life is being taken down by this girl, a girl who cannot be believed, who they cannot believe!" Genson shouted.

Genson earlier noted that Heard had at one time recanted her story of having sex with Reynolds. She agreed to testify after being jailed for 11 days.

Genson also urged jurors not to accept at face value tape recordings of phone calls between Reynolds and Heard. The recordings were made with police help after Heard went to authorities.

'He (Reynolds) can't escape his own words. They may be stupid and immoral, but under our law they are criminal.'
— Colleen Hyland, assistant state attorney

"When is she telling the truth? When is she telling you the same malarkey she told Mel Reynolds on those tapes?" Genson said. He told jurors he wasn't there to defend Reynolds' sins, ethics, hormones or "middle-age crazies."

Reynolds is charged with sexual abuse, sexual assault, child pornography and obstruction, for allegedly trying to get the girl to recant.

Conviction on the most serious charge, sexual assault, carries a mandatory sentence of at least four years in prison.

"Much like a hunter stalks his prey, Mel Reynolds was driving his Cadillac down the street" when he met Heard, Hyland told the jury.

The prosecutor reminded jurors that in one of the conversations, Reynolds spoke with Heard about how he "used to" have sexual relations with her.

"He can't escape his own words," Hyland said. "They may be stupid and immoral, but under our law they are criminal."

ABC settles multimillion-dollar lawsuits with 2 tobacco giants

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — ABC News settled two multimillion-dollar libel lawsuits Monday by apologizing to Philip Morris and R.J. Reynolds for reporting the companies manipulated the amount of nicotine in their cigarettes.

ABC's "Day One" newsmagazine reported in February and March 1994 that tobacco companies including Philip Morris Cos. and R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. "spiked" cigarettes with extra nicotine to addict smokers.

"ABC News agrees that we should not have reported that Philip Morris and Reynolds add significant amounts of nicotine from outside sources," Diane Sawyer, one of the anchors of "Day One," said midway into Monday night's broadcast of "World News Tonight."

"That was a mistake that was not deliberate on the part of ABC but for which we accept responsibility and which requires correction," she said. "We apologize to our audience, Philip Morris and Reynolds."

The statement also was to be read during the telecast of a National Football League preseason game Monday night, and again during prime-time hours Thursday — the night "Day One" airs.

R.J. Reynolds and Philip Morris denied adding nicotine for any reason during manufacturing, and said their finished cigarettes have less nicotine than in the raw tobacco from which they are made.

The statement said the two sides still disagree about whether the focus of the reports was on the use of nicotine from outside sources. The companies said they believe that was the main thrust, but ABC said the focus was on whether cigarette companies use reconstituted tobacco to control the levels of nicotine to keep smokers hooked.

The companies denied that allegation, while "ABC thinks the reports speak for themselves on this issue and is prepared to have the issue resolved elsewhere," the statement said.

Philip Morris sued in Richmond, where it has a cigarette factory, in March 1994 seeking $10 million in damages; R.J. Reynolds sought unspecified damages of more than $10,000.

New York-based Philip Morris' cigarette brands include Marlboro, Benson & Hedges, and Virginia Slims. R.J. Reynolds, based in Winston-Salem, N.C., makes Winston, Salem and Camel cigarettes.

ABC denied reports in June that it planned to issue an apology to settle the lawsuits.

Judge orders lawyers to find plan to avoid sequestering jury

N.Y. Times News Service

OKLAHOMA CITY — The judge in the Oklahoma City bombing case Monday ordered lawyers for the prosecution and the defense to propose ways to shield the trial jury from outside interference and avoid sequestration.

"Use your imagination," urged Judge Wayne E. Alley of U.S. District Court, whose name was drawn as the trial judge at the time Terry Nichols and Timothy McVeigh were indicted in the April 19 blast that killed at least 167 people in the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building.

The judge gave both sides until Sept. 28 to come up with proposals, adding that it would not be acceptable to respond that "outright sequestration and only that is required."

Jeffrey Abramson, professor of politics and legal studies at Brandeis University and author of "We, The Jury: The Jury System and the Ideal of Democracy," called the judge's order "extremely intelligent on his part, since it's likely to be a long trial."

"Basically, it makes it possible to have a fair jury, a cross section of the community rather than that rare section that can withstand the financial and emotional hardships of sequestration."

Alley also directed the lawyers to propose a two-part questionnaire for jurors. The first part would have core questions for use wherever the trial is held, while the second would have additional questions "to be used if and only if the trial is held in Oklahoma City."

Without commenting on his reasons, Alley also restricted to three the number of lawyers for each party who will be permitted to sit at the counsel table during the trial, adding that they may not be changed without permission of the court.

'Basically, it makes it possible to have a fair jury, a cross section of the community rather than that rare section that can withstand the financial and emotional hardships of sequestration.'
—Judge Wayne E. Alley, Oklahoma City bombing case judge

He also ordered that for each witness only one lawyer for each party could examine the witness, state objections to testimony or take part in a bench conference about the witness.

"In other words," Alley ordered, "there will be no double-teaming of opponent parties or the court."

The judge gave all parties until Sept. 28 to name the three counsels and told them to designate one as lead counsel. He also said that the government "will designate one, and only one, case agent who may sit at counsel table." Without the permission of the court, he said, there may be no substitutions later.

In other developments Monday, lawyers for Nichols filed a lawsuit Monday in Washington against the Bureau of Prisons, the U.S. Marshals Service and Attorney General Janet Reno, asking that Nichols be allowed to visit with his wife, Marife Torres Nichols, who was flown to Oklahoma City from her home in the Philippines on Aug. 16 to be interviewed by defense lawyers.

Mrs. Nichols will return to the Philippines on Wednesday, but Nichols has not been allowed by officials at the El Reno Federal Correctional Institution to speak with her.

Park's renovation will boost 'oasis'

Midland city officials are wise to proceed with plans for renovating Wadley-Barron Park. The project will include a hike-bike trail system, increased landscaping, bank stabilization, irrigation work, sidewalks and trees. Wadley-Barron, which includes the city's duck pond, has been increasing in popularity as a Midland "oasis" over the past several years.

It's only logical to assume that the park's popularity will continue to grow and as it does, it will come into even heavier use by Midland residents seeking a relaxing, natural setting where they can "get away from it all."

In past years there may not have been such a need for the city to develop parks, but as Midland has continued to grow, that need has certainly increased. Now with nearly 100,000 residents, Midland needs to provide natural park settings in which residents can find places to relax, commune with nature or merely exercise for health or enjoyment.

The project, which is being funded with 80 percent state and 20 percent local tax dollars, will link Wadley-Barron to Lamesa Road via a bike trail at DeZavala Elementary School. The trail is a continuation of a hike-bike trail running from Fairgrounds Road at the Reyes-Mashburn-Nelms Park, to Lamesa Road at DeZavala.

The renovation will help to give Midlanders an "escape" from the city inside the city limits — and that will be well worth it as Midland continues to grow.

Neighborhood meetings this fall to get public input on the project are important, we believe. The views of those whose homes border the increasingly popular public facility should be heard and we commend the City Council for taking that into consideration.

'Koobs' bring energy to lifeless books

The summer is rapidly drawing to a close, and you haven't done the reading you were planning to do during the "dog days" to make you a better reader and writer. (That expression is rooted in the summertime rise of Sirius, the Dog Star.)

In these dog days, then, has your reader's eye been seduced by the easy thought-bite layout of news magazines and the colorful bezazz of active matrix computer screens? Do you now expect even your most solid tomes to be enlivened by charts and graphs, quotations set off in banks of type, every double-truck spread a red-light district of sidebars?

Safire

Welcome to the world of koobs. A koob (palindromists will spot a book spelled backward) is a presentation of prose in a way that battles boredom. It is book publishing's answer to the nervous new layout of wired news magazines, competing with zingy graphics on television and space-age simulation on active matrix color screens. It is Word for the windowless.

The Cambridge Encyclopedia of the English Language, by the British philologist David Crystal, bedazzles you with an eye-popping presentation of the cluck-clucking of the mother tongue. It may be the wave of future publishing: "Superb colour illustrations, charts and highlighted panels," burbles the publisher's brochure, "fascinating insights, anecdotes and examples on every page" (with booksellers offered a "stunning 3-D window display kit" with "poster to match dumpbin header"). If you like fireworks with your information, this is a worthwhile language book, though the sizzle drives the price of the steak up to $49.95.

A lower-key book-as-magazine technique is seen in "The Four Seasons," a delicious history of the New York restaurant by John Mariani with Alex von Bidder (Crown, $35). Photographs are stripped across pages throughout, not bunched in the middle. An occasional light sepia page with darker brown print breaks up the run of white pages and signals a stop for recipes. Page margins are treated as a place for art (as in the American Heritage Dictionary) — a George Lang menu for the 1964 World's Fair is fascinating — and the only off-putting touch to a reader is that the columns of text are too wide, tiring the reader's eye. But the book is meant for diners.

Economics, long the dismal science, can also present itself as a lively art. In "The New Illustrated Guide to the American Economy," second edition, by Herbert Stein and Murray Foss (AEI Press, $14.95 paperback), every statistic comes to life on colored graphs; almost every page has a "bank" with a key fact in purple, green, or gold type. The data are accurate, the prose is authoritative and the publisher's purpose of bringing clarity and interest to a complicated and often dull subject cannot be faulted. But I am reminded of the joke of the old ethicist who gussies himself up in a mod outfit and is suddenly afflicted with an avalanche of troubles; he looks heavenward and asks, "God, how can you do this to me?" and a voice from above booms back: "Is that you, Herb? I didn't recognize you."

To define soft landing, used by every stockbroker today, I called Herb Stein. The phrase first landed, gently, in space flight, referring in 1958 to the putting-down of an unmanned vehicle on the moon, and was applied first in 1973 to a reduction in the rate of growth that does not result in recession. "It's not a good analogy," says Stein. "The opposite of the airplane metaphor is a bumpy landing. But if the economy didn't have a soft landing, it wouldn't have a bumpy landing — it would be as if the plane were to go beneath the runway."

Let us turn from koobs to other new products that are unillustrated, are printed in black type on white pages and fail to feature oversize pages or eye-catching inserts. These are still called books — the 1375 term is still in use — by writers, not "content providers." They offer no help to readers suffering from contraction of the attention span other than the style and power of their prose.

George V. Higgins, author of "The Friends of Eddie Coyle," turned professionally helpful with "On Writing: Advice for Those Who Write to Publish (or Would Like To)."

Sprint gives unfair deal to many of its workers

I wonder how Murphy Brown would cover this story. In December 1992 the Sprint Corp. bought a small Spanish-language telemarketing company in San Rafael, Calif., called La Conexion Familiar (the family connection). The company's specialty was selling long-distance telephone service to Latino customers.

One of the first things Sprint did at its new subsidiary was lay off 70 workers, claiming their Social Security numbers were "irregular." The workers sued and in an out-of-court settlement Sprint agreed to pay $3,000 to laid off part-time workers and $4,000 to full-time workers. None of the workers were rehired.

In July 1993 Sprint moved the company, commonly called LCF, to San Francisco. Sprint executives gave stirring pep talks to their new employees, urging them to sign up new customers as quickly as possible and promising them a solid future in the dependable embrace of their new family, the Sprint family.

Meanwhile, Sprint's long-distance competitors, AT&T and MCI, were making their move into the Latino market. Candice Bergen's Sprint commercials may have cheered us with their glimpses of sweet domesticity, but the behind-the-scenes reality was a coldhearted all-out war for control of the nation's multibillion-dollar telecommunications turf.

After the pep talks, Sprint's LCF employees, most of them women, were pushed very hard. Some complained. They were discouraged from going to the bathroom, they said, because that took them away from the phones, which could mean a customer would be lost. And while their job required them to talk all day, they were discouraged from drinking water because that increased the need to go to the bathroom.

The women said they were paid less than other Sprint employees who did the same or similar work, and there were many complaints of commissions going unpaid.

Having discussed their grievances among themselves, the employees did something in February 1994 that was perfectly legal but in recent years has seemed increasingly radical. They decided to try to join a union, the Communications Workers of America.

Uh-oh.

Now you have to understand this about Sprint. Many of the workers at its local telephone companies have been organized for decades, belonging either to the CWA or the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. But Sprint's high-profile struggle against AT&T and MCI is for the hearts and minds and dollars of America's long-distance customers. And none — repeat, none — of Sprint's 18,000 long-distance employees belong to a union.

A successful union-organizing effort by a tiny group of Spanish speaking employees in San Francisco (less than 200) would have been a blot on that perfect anti-union record, and there is always a danger that a blot will spread.

The National Labor Relations Board set July 22, 1994, as the date for the union election at LCF.

On July 14, eight days before the scheduled election, company officials summoned all of the LCF employees to a large room and locked the doors. The announcement was swift and brutal. La Conexion Familiar was being shut down. Immediately. "Your position," the workers were told, "will cease as of this date."

Teresa Rosario Dadin fainted. Other workers burst into tears. Sandra Gonzalez-Zoubi remembers her whole body and all of her emotions going numb. It was only later that she would fall into a deep depression.

A spokesman for Sprint told me on Friday that the union activity had nothing to do with the decision to fold LCF just 19 months after it was purchased. The subsidiary was losing money, he said.

I asked if it was just a coincidence that the shutdown occurred eight days before the election.

"Yes," he said.

Following an investigation, the NLRB filed a complaint against Sprint, charging it with more than 50 violations of law. Sprint has admitted several violations and a Sprint vice president has been fired for fabricating evidence that was submitted to the NLRB. Sprint insists, however, that its closing of La Conexion Familiar was legal.

And a release from Sprint's media relations headquarters in Washington goes out of its way to assert that "Sprint's commitment to the Latino market is stronger than ever."

Honoring acts of fair play enriches sports, fans

At the winter Olympics last year, the coach of the Swedish four-man bobsled team asked the Australian captain if he could spare five kilos — about 11 pounds — of ballast. He could and did.

Sweden then beat Australia, and the accommodating Australian, Justin McDonald, won a Pierre de Coubertin Fair Play Trophy. Another trophy went to Francesco Panetta of Italy, who stopped to help a fellow countryman who had fallen on a hurdle in the 3,000-meter steeplechase at the 1993 World Cup.

The man he helped went on to win. Panetta, had he not stopped, might have taken a medal, but finished seventh.

The International Committee for Fair Play, based in Paris, has been saluting acts of fair play every year since 1964, largely unnoticed. It recognizes the most outstanding with a trophy named for the father of the modern Olympics, and runners-up with citations.

American and French athletes have won the most awards. Chris Cole was cited this year for his sportsmanship at the U.S. Olympic Festival. Playing a match point in racquetball, he volunteered that he had returned the serve on the second bounce. His honesty ended the match and his shot at the national team.

In a time when baseball stars charge fans for autographs, and then fail to report the income on their tax returns, the world is enriched by unsung good sports and the unsung committee that honors them.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Aug. 22, the 234th day of 1995. There are 131 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Aug. 22, 1485, England's King Richard III was killed in the Battle of Bosworth Field, ending the War of the Roses.

On this date:

In 1762, Ann Franklin became the first female editor of an American newspaper, the Newport, R.I., Mercury.

In 1775, England's King George III proclaimed the American colonies in a state of open rebellion.

In 1787, inventor John Fitch demonstrated his steamboat on the Delaware River to delegates of the Continental Congress.

In 1846, the United States annexed New Mexico.

In 1851, the schooner America outraced the Aurora off the English coast to win a trophy that became known as the America's Cup.

In 1902, President Theodore Roosevelt became the first U.S. chief executive to ride in an automobile, in Hartford, Conn.

In 1911, it was announced in Paris that Leonardo da Vinci's "Mona Lisa" had been stolen from the Louvre Museum the night before. (The painting turned up two years later, in Italy.)

In 1956, President Eisenhower and Vice President Nixon were nominated for second terms in office by the Republican national convention in San Francisco.

In 1978, President Jomo Kenyatta, a leading figure in Kenya's struggle for independence, died; Vice President Daniel Arap Moi was sworn in as acting president.

In 1989, Black Panther cofounder Huey P. Newton was shot to death in Oakland, Calif. (Gunman Tyrone Robinson was later sentenced to 32 years to life in prison.)

New Bears owner to solve all team's problems

There is a workable solution to the bitter dispute between Michael McCaskey and Mayor Richard Daley over the issue of a new football stadium for the Bears.

It is a way for the Bears to remain in Chicago, where they belong, rather than moving to a suburb or another state, as McCaskey regularly threatens.

Royko

And it would not require the taxpayers to be stuck with the cost of building a stadium, unless they want to, which is unlikely.

My plan is simple. I will buy the Bears. And I'll close the deal right now or tomorrow or next week or whenever McCaskey wants to sit down and agree to a fair price.

And I promise to keep them here and to never pester Mayor Daley or Gov. Plastic to subsidize my business.

I also promise to introduce a revolutionary approach to running a football team, which I will explain a little later.

But first, I'll answer the obvious question that my offer inspires:

Q: Do I have enough money to buy the Bears?

A: Of course not. I don't even have enough cash for a down payment on one of those stupid skyboxes.

That is irrelevant. In a big-money deal, you don't need your own money. All you need are enough rich people who have big money but want something more — public recognition that they are big shots.

These millionaires buy $100,000 cars, huge mansions and vacation homes. Some can even afford the newest Big Bertha driver.

But that isn't enough. They have lots of money, but not the inner spiritual happiness of being instantly recognized as among the city's big enchiladas and top bananas. They yearn for a mention by INC., Kup, Sneed or, for the shamelessly desperate, Zwecker.

So rounding up investors will not be difficult. They will all be named associate team presidents, which will allow them to share the team weight room and whirlpool with the players and play in golf outings with Mike Ditka.

Oh, I forgot to mention that I will restore Ditka as head coach and part owner. I haven't told Ditka about it yet because he has had another hip operation and I don't want to make a firm offer until I'm sure he can walk. If he can't, I can probably get him cheaper.

Now for my stadium plan: Yes, there will be a new 100,000-seat stadium.

I will finance it by selling every seat to the highest bidder. If you buy a seat, you own it, just like a condo. You can leave it to your heirs or resell it at a profit. Or you can rent it to others for an outrageous price. I don't care what you do, so long as you pay for the tickets and the annual maintenance fee.

Depending on the purchase price of the seat, you will be given passes that will get you prompt entry into the washrooms. Those owning the most expensive seats will have VIP urinals.

If you are just an ordinary Joe and can't afford to buy a stadium seat, too bad. Instead of going to football games, you should get a weekend job.

Some fans are asking what kind of team we will have. Can I afford to pay the big salaries many star players demand?

Frankly, no. But I don't think we'll have to.

One of the mistakes made by owners is drafting players from college teams.

That makes little sense. The idea of football is to knock down your opponent, hurt him, maul him, inflict pain and suffering on him.

You don't need a college education for that. I would require college training only in my payroll department and maybe the team doctor.

My approach will be to draft players from America's vast prison system. It is filled with fine iron-pumping physical specimens who would welcome an opportunity to get paid for knocking people down and inflicting pain and misery.

And they would probably work cheap, knowing they could maim and maul without fear of arrest.

I also will invite fan participation in key decisions.

We will have a boo meter in the stadium. Before each game, the announcer will call out the names of the Bear quarterbacks.

The quarterback receiving the fewest boos will start the game.

This process will be repeated at the end of each quarter.

At the end of the game, the announcer will recite the names of all the players. Those receiving the most boos will be fired, unless they agree to take a cut in pay.

There is my plan and my offer. I will give McCaskey a few days to think about it.

It's possible he thinks I'm just kidding about wanting to own the Bears.

I can understand that. When he took over the team, I thought he was joking around too.

Documents show tobacco industry's inventiveness

By Lauran Neergaard
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Call it the candy that never made it: "a confection with nicotine."

When U.S. Tobacco gathered its top scientists in 1968 to ponder future products in a world suddenly scared of tobacco's health risks, edible nicotine was one resulting — and ultimately rejected — brainstorm. They even came up with a slogan to push snuff products: "Tobacco — too good to smoke."

Not until the government last week laid bare the closed-door debate did it become known how the tobacco industry fought to keep its grip on a market under growing attack.

The industry was inventive, according to some 100,000 documents released Wednesday by the Food and Drug Administration. Handwritten notes and minutes of private meetings detail attempts to "start a fad" with moist snuff and plans by companies to carefully pluck tobacco leaves from the very top of the plant — because they contain the most nicotine.

There was great need to be inventive. As the FDA quoted one Philip Morris memo: Without nicotine, "the cigarette market would collapse, P.M. would collapse and we'd all lose our jobs and our consulting fees."

What sparked this fear in such a huge industry? Consumers frightened by steadily growing reports of the dangers of tobacco were starting to demand cigarettes with less tar and nicotine.

Giving them what they wanted was risky. "The nicotine deliveries of these products may be low enough to constitute a partial weaning of the smoker," wrote F.J. Ryan of Philip Morris in 1975.

Like any industry under siege, the companies hunted a way out.

At that 1968 meeting of U.S. Tobacco, the largest chewing tobacco maker, officials advocated pushing new moist snuff products to counter cigarette concerns.

"We must sell the use of tobacco in the mouth and appeal to young people," Vice President L.F. Bantle was quoted in the meeting's minutes. "We hope to start a fad. The theme will be: 'Tobacco -- too good to smoke.'"

Then a top scientist suggested creating a "swallowable chew: a confection with nicotine." The formal rejection came two years later, when the company said it "would not contemplate the incorporation of nicotine in edible products."

But the creativity was here to stay.

The documents show companies learned to make cigarettes that delivered more nicotine in the first few puffs and to add ammonia to boost nicotine levels.

Supplements aren't food substitutes, panel says

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government advisory panel's recommended guidelines for eating right argue against routinely using supplements instead of food to get vitamins, mineral and fiber.

The committee of physicians and nutritionists also put greater stress on the importance of combining healthy eating with exercise to control weight. And the committee acknowledged the growing interest in vegetarian diets by noting that a diet free of meat, eggs and milk can be a healthy one.

But the basic message remains the same as it was five years ago: Eat a variety of foods, including lots of fruits, vegetables and grains; go easy on alcohol, cholesterol, fats, salt and sweets; watch your weight.

The recommendations are contained in a report completed this summer by the Dietary Guidelines Advisory Committee. The report, obtained Monday by The Associated Press, revises the 1990 edition and is the first required by law.

The Agriculture and Health and Human Services departments will decide as early as November which of the recommendations to adopt when it revises the Dietary Guidelines for Americans to reflect current scientific understanding. The guidelines are used largely to educate the public.

The pyramid-shaped guide to daily food choices, issued in 1992, is based on the last set of recommendations. Since the last report, the government has required nutrition labels on most foods.

Vitamin and mineral supplements may be needed for the elderly or for pregnant women, but 'the use of supplements cannot substitute for proper food choices,' the committee said.

Although the previous guidelines recommended food rather than supplements as a way to provide good nutrition, the new proposals are stronger.

"Some of the health benefits associated with a high-fiber diet come from other components present in these foods, not just from fiber itself," the committee recommended saying. "For this reason, fiber is best obtained from foods rather than supplements."

Vitamin and mineral supplements may be needed for the elderly or for pregnant women, but "the use of supplements cannot substitute for proper food choices," the committee said.

The recommendation comes as the House Agriculture Committee debates whether to let people buy vitamins and minerals with food stamps. The change is recommended by the supplement industry but opposed by the fruit and vegetable industry as well as anti-hunger activists.

The report recommends that vegetarians who eat no animal products supplement their diets with vitamin B-12, found only in animal foods. These so-called vegans, especially children, should take care to find sources of vitamin D and calcium, the report says.

The message to exercise is made stronger, with a reminder to "try to maintain your body weight by balancing what you eat with physical activity."

The committee tried to strike a balance between giving simple guidelines and giving people the right amount of data without information overkill.

The guidelines are built around variety, but the committee notes that variety "does not necessarily yield an eating pattern that is low in fat, cholesterol or sodium, or sufficient in fiber."

Consumers should check the nutrition labels required on most foods to help get the right mix, the committee said.

But the committee gave no exact guidelines on how much cholesterol, salt, sugar, fiber, monounsaturated fats, polyunsaturated fats or antioxidants they should consume.

Clues to Oklahoma bombing may be in McVeigh's, Nichols' belongings

By John Kifner
N.Y. Times News Service

OKLAHOMA CITY — The Aug. 10 indictments charging Timothy McVeigh and Terry Nichols with the bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building make no mention of possible motivation, but books found among the belongings of the two suspects strongly suggest a conscious attempt to imitate the racially motivated crimes described in two books about far-right extremist groups — one a work of fiction, the other a journalistic account.

Federal investigators have long known of McVeigh's fondness for "The Turner Diaries," a novel by William L. Pierce, writing under the pseudonym Andrew McDonald (National Vanguard Books, 1978). It tells the story of an armed overthrow of the U.S. government by a covert group of white supremacists. McVeigh apparently kept a copy with him at all times and hawked the book at gun shows.

Now an evidence log filed with the indictments shows that another book, "Armed and Dangerous: The Rise of the Survivalist Right" (Hill & Wang, 1987), was found on Nichols' coffee table.

The book, a nonfi... work by James Coates, a r...cted Chicago Tribune repo...r, had been checked out of the Mohave County Library in Kingman, Ariz., by McVeigh. A librarian said the book was so long overdue that the library's computer system no longer indicated when McVeigh had checked it out.

A person closely involved in the case said that McVeigh had frequently cited Chapter Two of "Armed and Dangerous," which describes how The Order, a far-right band of criminal terrorists, grew from a small band of bumblers into a heavily armed, well-financed terrorist cadre that used the proceeds of crimes to funnel hundreds of thousands of dollars to other far-right groups and bought themselves land, guns, vehicles and guard dogs.

The Order staged armored car robberies in 1984 that netted more than $4 million. It also ran a counterfeiting ring and gunned down a Jewish talk show host, Alan Berg, in Denver. The group's leader, Robert Jay Matthews, died in December 1984 in a shootout with the FBI; other known members were captured and jailed.

When McVeigh saw his dream of a guerrilla attack on the government nearly slip away as his key confederate, Nichols, lost his ardor for the bombing, the evidence suggests, he gave "Armed and Dangerous" to Nichols to re-inspire faith in the plot.

Whatever role "Armed and Dangerous" played in the relationship of the two men, the indictments charge that Nichols helped mix the ingredients of the bomb — two tons of homemade explosives — which McVeigh then drove in a rented truck to the front of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building on April 19. The explosion killed at least 167 people including 19 children, 15 of whom were in a day care center.

Since Pierce, a neo-Nazi former physics professor, wrote "The Turner Diaries" 17 years ago, it has become an underground classic among white supremacists and Christian identity survivalist cults.

McVeigh peddled copies of the book at gun shows around the Southwest after leaving the Army in 1991. One person involved in the case, who asked not to be identified, recently called the book McVeigh's "bible."

The Order not only made the "The Turner Diaries" required reading for its recruits but also based its campaign of robbery, counterfeiting and murder on the exploits of the novel's white revolutionaries.

In fact, the group took its name from "The Turner Diaries," in which the top-secret group of supreme commanders is called The Order. In the novel, The Order of the novel wears hooded monks robe's and holds rituals that include prayers to the sanctity and future of the white race before they set off on their crime sprees.

The Oklahoma City bombing bears an uncanny resemblance to the first big attack by the novel's white-supremacist guerrilla fighters, who drive a truck carrying a homemade bomb made of fertilizer and oil inside the headquarters of the FBI early one morning, wreaking destruction, death and havoc. The book calls this act a "propaganda of the deed," an example intended to inspire others to strike their own blow.

Evidence suggests that McVeigh and Nichols might have followed The Order's guerrilla crime tactics. The federal indictments accuse the two of preparing for the bombing by robbing an Arkansas gun dealer last November and by stealing blasting caps and explosives from a Kansas quarry.

And it sketches a flurry of activity during a period of about eight weeks in the fall of 1994, in which the two men are accused of renting four storage lockers under various false names, stealing the explosives, planning the Arkansas robbery and purchasing 40 50-pound bags of fertilizer that could be turned into explosives by adding fuel oil.

Nichols' lawyer, Michael Tigar, has argued in court papers that Nichols had a falling out with McVeigh and was trying to distance himself and establish a normal family life.

And Nichols' first wife, Lana Padilla, said in an interview that her former husband had told her "Tim and I are going to go our separate ways, and I am going to do the shows myself."

A federal investigator confirmed that around early April, investigators believe, McVeigh was of the opinion that Nichols might not go along with the bomb plot.

In early spring, McVeigh was growing increasingly upset and angry, a person familiar with the case said, because after all the months of planning and preparations, "Terry had bailed out on him."

City finalizes use of federal funds

■ Allocations for $1.4 million have been approved for 1996 projects including street paving, housing renovation and repair, a community swimming pool and other social programs.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

The city has finalized allocations of $1.4 million in federal Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) funds — generally used to benefit low to moderate income residents — for the 1996 fiscal year.

This year's projects include funding for street paving, housing renovation and repair programs, weedy lot clearance and dilapidated structure removal, a community swimming pool and various social service programs. The allocations generally follow historical uses of the money in Midland.

The City Council-approved allocations have been forwarded to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development for auditing. This year, the city was also required to submit a formal document outlining priority of needs based on public input.

The submission to HUD is largely a formality — provided allocations meet standard CDBG guidelines, city officials said.

"We should hear from them by the end of September," said Sylvester Cantu, the city's community development coordinator. "I don't expect any problems."

CDBG allocations are required to meet one of three objectives: benefit low and moderate income people, prevention and elimination of slum and blight, or address urgent community development needs.

Typically, the majority of CDBG-funded improvements — such as street paving — are city-initiated.

Public services — such as child care programs — are eligible for 15 percent of CDBG funds. That's the area non-profit agencies generally seek for program funding.

Not more than 20 percent can be allowed for administrative costs.

This year's grant will be available for use between Oct. 1, 1995, to Sept. 30, 1996. "Some projects could begin as early as October 1st," Cantu said.

Allocations — which include $40,000 program income — are: Southeast Senior Center Nutrition Program, $64,000; Citywide Home Cleaning Program, $17,000; YMCA Prime Time After-School Care, $20,000; YMCA Summer Child Care Program, $20,000; police substation, $50,000 (this money is expected to be reallocated to another eligible program; funding for the substation will come from the city's general fund); lot clearing program, $45,000; dilapidated structure removal program, $30,900; target area code enforcement program, $40,585; Homeownership Incentive Program, $50,000; Housing Emergency Repairs Program, $50,000; Housing Rehabilitation Program, $276,000; Neighborhood Street Paving Program, $350,000; community swimming pool and youth ball field, $250,000; Business Loan Program, $12,000; CDBG administration costs, $161,400; contingency, $19,115.

Last year, the city received $1.38 million. The largest allocations went toward paving streets, park improvements and housing programs.

Prevention unit receives honor for state award

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Midland Police Department's Community Relations/Crime Prevention Unit was recently selected as being the best of its kind in the state, gaining the department an award from the Texas Crime Prevention Association (TCPA).

The three officers in the unit, David Garcia, Ron Sartor and Phyllis Spinuzzi, are being further honored by a mayoral proclamation in today's meeting of the Midland City Council.

"The three of us are kind of like the nucleus of the deal, but we can by no means take all the credit," Garcia said.

"We get a lot of support — from the chief on down ... it's a complete team effort," he added.

The multitude of community involvement and education programs run from the department made an impact on TCPA officials at a recent statewide conference in Corpus Christi.

Blockbuster offers KIDPRINT program

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

A missing or kidnapped child is something no one wants to think about. However, each year, more than 1.4 million children are reported abducted, are runaways or are otherwise missing, according to U.S. Department of Justice statistics.

In the past 11 years, 42,573 children have been reported missing, almost 11 per day, according to the department statistics.

When a child is missing, recent photographs and identification are of the upmost importance to the parents and law enforcement officials.

In an effort to help parents keep up-to-date identification of their children, Midland and Odessa Blockbuster Video stores are offering free videocassette recordings of children through the month of August.

The program, called KIDPRINT, is free to parents who bring their children

Caregiver Melinda Patino feeds one of the infants she cares for at Mrs. Irene's Christian Daycare. Her day is non-stop activity from feeding, diapering, cleaning and playing with babies.

Daycare worker lavishes love on young charges

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff writer

While many women consider feeding and diapering infants a chore, caregiver Melinda Patino does it cheerfully.

Although the 29-year-old woman has no children of her own yet, she cares for the children of others at Mrs. Irene's Christian Daycare as if they were her own.

She works as a team with Vita Ochoa caring for 10 babies ranging in age from newborns up to 12-month-olds.

She started out in child care 10 years ago working for a family as a nanny. That family moved to Arizona and when she needed a new job, she went to Mrs. Irene's, where she has been for five years now.

"I liked being a nanny because it was one-on-one with the children I cared for and I just like taking care of kids," she said.

A typical day for Miss Melinda, as she is called there, starts off at 7 a.m. The children begin arriving and the chaos starts.

The day is fairly non-stop from then on. She starts wiping noses, changing diapers, calming fussy babies and feeding children.

When all the children have had their diapers changed and none are crying for a bottle or some food, then she can enjoy playing with the children.

If Ms. Patino has favorites among the children, it is not apparent as she dotes on each child and provides them with lots of affection and attention.

Before nap time, Ms. Patino works in some fun-time with the infants. A typical playtime may include some hugs and a brief demonstration to the children on how a particular toy works.

As she sits on the floor with them, Jasmine crawls up the side of her and holds onto her arm. DeAmber is sitting in her lap while she reaches over to comfort Kayden who was frightened by a flying toy thrown by

Constable's Office clears cases in an early morning roundup

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The old Monday morning blues abruptly greeted about a dozen Midlanders who repeatedly had ignored misdemeanor charges against them for such offenses as writing hot checks, driving without a valid driver license, and driving while intoxicated (DWI).

Beginning at dawn, they were arrested at their homes, handcuffed, and transported to the Midland County Jail for booking, jailing, and making arrangements to make bail, see the judge, or pay their fines.

"It was the bright, early twilight when we got started," said Chief Deputy Constable Benny Matlock. "We haven't had any resistance or anybody run so far. It's been very, very effective."

While the Constable's Office "clears" about 250 misdemeanor cases per month through serving arrest warrants, all told there are more than 3,000 outstanding misdemeanor warrants in Midland County. Some of those warrants date back to Midland's boom days in the early 1980s.

The numbers increase or decrease, as arrests are made and cases "cleared" and

OTT: Aliens must think dogs run our planet of lemonade on a steamy afternoon.

(From 1B)

— I like the word, "steamy."

— I'm always slightly offended when I have to show additional identification before being allowed to purchase an item with a check.

— And today's final quote comes from Jerry Seinfeld, who once wrote: "On my block, a lot of people walk their dogs and I always see them walking along with their little poop bags. This, to me, is the lowest activity in human life. Following a dog with a little scooper. Waiting for him to go so you can walk down the street with it in your bag. If aliens are watching this through telescopes, they're going to think the dogs are the leaders of the planet. If you see two life forms, one of them's making a poop, the other one's carrying it for him, who would you assume is in charge?"

He's got a point.

KIDPRINT: Blockbuster continues videotaping children for parents to the store, according to Blockbuster officials. The child is videotaped on a complimentary VHS videocassette.

(From 1B)

It is the sixth year Blockbuster has offered KIDPRINT to Midland and Odessa residents. Officials estimate that 1.4 million children have participated in the program since its inception in 1990.

"The KIDPRINT program continues to grow each year as the word spreads that this service is available," said Terry Young, director of operations for Blockbuster Videos.

If a child has been videotaped in recent years, Blockbuster officials encourage parents to have the tape updated so that, in case the child is missing, law enforcement officials and other personnel will have a recent record of the child's appearance.

"It is very important in this day and age to keep up-to-date records of your children," said Midland Police Community Relations Officer Ron Sartor. "Hopefully, this will only turn out to be a preventive measure that most parents will never have to use."

Sartor said parents should not only videotape their child — either through the KIDPRINT program or on their own — but they should also have the child fingerprinted each year.

"If a child is under the age of seven, we will take a palm print," Sartor said. "It is important to have the fingerprints updated each year because the print will become readable as the child gets older."

He said the police department has several fingerprinting programs each year.

LOVE: Daycare job is full of fun with children

(From 1B)

Dylan.

Ryan and Kristina are swinging in the swings while Vita finishes giving a bottle to Michael. Moneice and Kaleena sit in feeding chairs watching all the activity while Vita prepares to check Marissa's diaper.

This activity may last only a few minutes as the routine starts all over again with getting each child to take a nap, to keeping the crawlers from using one another as an obstacle to climb over and preparing their lunches.

The children are lined up in feeding chairs, each patiently and, sometimes not so patiently, waiting for their turn to be fed.

Then the diapers are checked again and its time to give medicine to those who have ear infections or whatever the cause may be.

If time allows, the children are treated to some reading. She lists the children's daily activities on a log recording when they ate, when they napped and even when they have a dirty diaper.

"We also try to work with the kids to help them sit up or walk," Ms. Patino said.

In between times, she is again wiping noses, playing, soothing tears and cleaning spit-up from burping babies.

So, when she gets the children back down for another nap does she get a rest? No, then she is washing and folding crib sheets and blankets.

As the babies wake from their naps they need to have their diapers checked again and some take an afternoon bottle or snack.

But, through it all, Ms. Patino said she enjoys caring for babies.

"I was scared at first because they are so little and I was afraid I would drop them or not know what to do. Now, they're my favorites. I love to watch them grow and learn," she said.

She said it is hard for her to watch the babies move up to the bigger class because she has cared for those babies 40 hours a week from the time many are 1-month-old up until their first birthday.

But, her affection is not in vain.

In return, the children love her and come back to see their Miss Melinda.

Recently, a child she cared for years ago who isn't at the daycare any more returned to pay her a visit just to say hello.

When she treks from the "baby house" to the "big house" she is bombarded with hugs from the youngsters she cared for as babies.

"They'll come up to me and say 'Miss 'Linda, do you remember taking care of me as a baby?' And I always do. How could I forget any of them," said said. "I just saw my second group of kids start kindergarten this week. That makes me feel old."

Oops, its time again to wipe a nose, check a diaper, feed a baby ....

Bush's appointments please some Dems, concern GOP

FORT WORTH (AP) — Republican Gov. George W. Bush has pleased some Democrats with his early appointments, despite a 15 percent drop in minority choices from his predecessor.

But supporters and detractors alike note that Bush's appointments resemble himself in many respects. Nearly 60 percent of the choices made over the first seven months are white males, and 43 are from the governor's home area of Dallas, the highest of any city.

Their average age is 50 — Bush is 49.

Bush's willingness to retain many of former Gov. Ann Richards' appointments and to name a couple of Democrats to state office has received mixed results from the GOP.

"The important thing is that the people appointed be in sync with the governor and the governor's philosophy," said prominent Midland Republican Ernie Angelo.

Even though Bush's minority appointment rate of 15.7 percent is off the pace of Richards, a Democrat who vowed her hires would reflect the state's population, minority lawmakers have praised his willingness to install nonwhites in key roles.

"Generally speaking, the sentiment is that he's doing fairly well in appointing African-Americans," said Rep. Sylvester Turner, D-Houston, who is black. In particular, Turner lauded Bush's appointment of four blacks to the bench.

The chairman of the House Mexican-American Caucus is also pleased.

"I think he's made some real good, quality appointments of Hispanics," said Rep. Hugo Berlanga of Corpus Christi.

AWARD: Crime prevention unit receives recognition

(From 1B)

Some of these programs are products of the imaginations of MPD officers, while others are similar to successful programs from other cities. "We're always looking for a new and fresh program that gets our point across," he said.

It is, however, the citizens of Midland who make all of the programs work, Garcia said.

The Citizens Police Academy imparts considerable hands-on and classroom knowledge to its participants. The alumni from this course further assist the department in other programs such as child identification and McGruff the Crime Dog presentations.

There is always a waiting list for this course and others, such as MPD's self-defense classes.

"In a way, we're victims of our own success — because our dance card is always full," Garcia joked.

The new Hispanic Citizens Police Academy, the first of its kind in the state, was a resounding success in its early classes and has caught the attention of Houston officials who wish to observe future classes, Garcia said.

The unit also has benefitted from luck, since trying new programs usually means some failures, he said. "So far, everything new we've tried has been a success."

Neighborhood watches throughout the city number into the mid-200s, greatly assisting the MPD officers on patrol.

"That's a really good number and we hope to get more," he said.

Garcia also credited the department's positive relationship with local news media, which helps inform Midland citizens of the various programs and how these programs can be of benefit.

The proclamation honoring the unit's success will be read at 10 a.m. today in the City Council Chambers at 300 N. Loraine. Officers Sartor, Spinuzzi and Garcia will be on hand to receive the proclamation.

The original TCPA award was one of 46 awards for excellence in various categories. TCPA is comprised of more than 600 member police departments throughout the state.

Government agents charge 20 with money laundering in sting operation

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Twenty people, including a banker and a prominent businessman, were charged Monday in a sting set up by undercover agents posing as drug dealers.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Mark Dowd said undercover agents provided $500,000 in what they represented to be drug profits. The money was commingled into accounts of front businesses to make it appear legitimate, he said.

Dowd said the indictment represented the second phase of the government's case against associates of Francisco Herman, past president of Zaring Computers in Corpus Christi.

Herman and 20 associates were prosecuted last year in an earlier money laundering and drug trafficking case.

Among those indicted Monday were Severiano Flores Sr., owner of the Portairs Furniture & Appliance Co., and Benny Dominguez, an executive at First Commerce Bank of Corpus Christi.

Flores was charged with 24 counts, including money laundering and conspiracy; Dominguez was charged with 12 money laundering counts.

Dowd said the defendants laundered some of the government-supplied money through front businesses, including Zaring Computers and Portairs Furniture & Appliance.

State in Brief

■ Ex-councilwoman sues over term limits

SAN ANTONIO — A former San Antonio councilwoman has gone to federal court to have the city's term limits law overturned.

Helen Dutmer, who served seven terms on the San Antonio City Council, from 1977 to 1991, filed as a candidate in municipal elections earlier this year. She was told she couldn't run because she previously had served at least two terms of office.

Attorney Chris Gros said the law, approved by voters in 1991, violates the federal Voting Rights Act because it prevents voters from casting ballots for the candidates of their choice.

Gros says he particularly objects to a portion of the law that calls for a lifetime ban after two terms on the council.

Ms. Dutmer's lawsuit, filed Monday, seeks no monetary damages and waives attorney fees.

■ Labor union targets 2 congressmen

AUSTIN — The Texas AFL-CIO joined a national effort Monday that labor leaders said seeks to defend labor safety regulations from Republican cuts. The group is aiming television ads critical of GOP proposals at two Texas congressmen.

"This brazen agenda of the new Republican leadership is painfully clear to the AFL-CIO," Texas president Joe Gunn said. "You can't say anything other than it's mean-spirited."

Gunn accused Republicans in Congress of seeking to end the 40-hour work week, gutting job safety enforcement, busting unions and making the minimum wage "a poverty wage" while giving tax breaks to the rich and corporations.

"In short, this Congress wants to sell working people down the river so a privileged few can sail their yachts," he said.

Nationally, the AFL-CIO said it plans to spend $1 million on television and radio commercials targeting selected congressmen. In Texas, the ads will begin airing this week and are aimed at Reps. Greg Laughlin, who switched from the Democratic Party to the GOP this summer, and Steve Stockman, a Republican elected for the first time last November.

■ Survival is slim for conjoined twins

AUSTIN — The medical staff seeking to surgically separate twin baby girls joined at the head said survival chances were slim for one if not both of the infants.

Michelle and Nichelle Tejeda were to become only the sixth set of twins to undergo separation surgery worldwide since 1991 when neurosurgeons Gordon White and Lee Berland initiate the day-long procedure Tuesday.

Experts estimate that as many as 70 separations have been done on twins joined at the head. Two-thirds of the time, one or both children have died.

The Tejeda twins have been critically ill since they were born 13 weeks premature at St. David's Hospital on May 15.

Alicia Tejeda, 31, the mother of the girls, won release from a Travis County jail in July after being arrested and charged with a parole violation.

Soldiers to leave for Kuwait despite delays

FORT HOOD (AP) — After two days of delays, about 1,300 soldiers from Fort Hood's 1st Cavalry Division are scheduled to board four commercial aircraft today for military exercises in the Middle East to deter Iraqi aggression.

An advance party of about 80 soldiers in battle-dress uniform left Fort Hood aboard a C-141 cargo plane Sunday, but got only as far as McGuire Air Force Base, N.J. Other planes didn't get off the ground at all later Sunday and Monday.

The delays reportedly were related to the refusal of one unspecified nation to allow the U.S. planes to fly over its air space so as not to incur the wrath of Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein.

"We had some coordination problems, but they've been cleared away," Pamela Goodman, public affairs spokeswoman for Fort Hood, said Monday.

"The advance party at McGuire Air Force Base should be in the air again now," she said late Monday afternoon.

Troop deployment from Fort Hood, near Killeen, for "Operation Intrinsic Action" will be completed with flights now scheduled for 6:45 a.m., noon, 4 p.m. and 9 p.m. today, Ms. Goodman said.

AP Laserphoto

Pfc. Norberto Midgett of Dallas holds his 7-month-old daughter Marcella, as he prepares to leave Fort Hood, Monday morning.

One Iraqi-bound plane left the Army base about 4:30 p.m. Monday, but it carried only cargo and eight people. Other troops stood by all day, waiting for clearance that never came.

Ms. Goodman said she didn't have information on which airlines are involved in today's planned troop movement.

The four- to six-week exercise was planned for October but was moved up because of increasing instability in Iraq.

A son-in-law of Saddam's who defected to Jordan said Sunday that his departure foiled an Iraqi plan to invade Kuwait and Saudi Arabia earlier this month.

In a separate U.S. show of force against Saddam, members of the 1st Marine Expeditionary Force left March Air Force Base in Riverside County, Calif., Monday for the Persian Gulf, said 1st Lt. Dave Griesmer. The Camp Pendleton Marines will prepare combat equipment aboard ships.

Their departure is the first of a planned three-phase operation that would deploy 16,500 Marines from Southern California bases, including Camp Pendleton, Griesmer said.

A similar deployment last year never reached the third phase because U.S. officials thought Iraq was backing down from a military threat.

Fort Hood was a major player in Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm five years ago. The base sent 26,500 troops for those missions to ward off Iraq's last attack on Kuwait.

Fort Hood soldiers have made trips to the Persian Gulf routinely for training purposes twice a year since 1992, base officials said.

ROUNDUP: Constable clears misdemeanor cases

(From 1B)

then new charges are filed.

In some cases, the defendants have moved outside Texas or returned to their home states, Matlock said. However, "there's no money for us to extricate prisoners from other states."

"Of the cases we actually targeted (for Monday's roundup)," Matlock said, "We cleared 26 out of 52. That was 13 individuals, so there were multiwarrants on some of the individuals. We are going to continue on. When the ball is rolling, I want to keep the motivation as long as I can."

Matlock said the warrants are being served "all over town and the county.

"We've arrested them from Greenwood to Air Terminal (Midland International Airport), Matlock said. "It's not drugs and stuff like that. It's your everyday crime stuff."

Midland County Attorney Mark H. Dettman, Constable Ron Rice and Matlock are hoping that the show of the arrests will convince other Midlanders named in arrest warrants voluntarily to surrender to the constable or his deputies.

They may make arrangements to turn themselves in to "the law" by telephoning the Constable's Office at 688-1153.

Every few years, Dettman and the Constable's Office join forces in their round-up of wayward misdemeanor offenders who have not answered charges against them.

"We've notified them or, at least, attempted to notify them at least a dozen separate times through the different agencies," Dettman said. "I hope the word (about the round-up) gets around. If you can arrest one and get 20 to clean up their act, you sure cleared 21 cases at a cheap cost to the public."

Dettman observed that "the criminal-justice system is not complete until they have been through 100 percent of the system," Dettman said on Monday. "It doesn't do anybody any good just to have warrants sitting there with no bodies to account for their misdeeds or errors in judgment. Nobody is going to like a system that doesn't follow through with its duties."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, AUGUST 22, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Trying to force issues will only slow you down. Pursue your goals in an indirect manner. Your finances receive a welcome boost around Thanksgiving. Resist the urge to go on a buying spree. Early in 1996, a friendship turns romantic. Your priorities change. Do not give your co-workers access to your special contacts. Protect your information sources.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: author Dorothy Parker, actress Valerie Harper, blues singer John Lee Hooker, baseball player Carl Yastrzemski.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Do not blame yourself for missed opportunities or growing doubts. Someone may have misled you. Rely on the advice of trusted professionals when making new investments.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Focus on travel and education, reaching beyond your previous expectations. A friend seeks your advice about a financial or career matter. Avoid sounding critical.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): An unusual encounter tests your ability to roll with the punches. Stay alert. A longtime friend or former neighbor gives you a warm reception. An old romance could be rekindled.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Higher-ups are assessing your job performance. Be willing to burn the midnight oil. A possible overseas trip has you updating your passport. Ignore any gossip you hear. Others may talk about you next!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Patience and perseverance will bring pending negotiations to a successful conclusion. Be very careful when handling money — your own or someone else's. Important business or employment news comes through confidential channels. Keep your own counsel.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Do not allow a heavy workload to impair your health or good humor. Co-workers may be waiting for a signal. Adopt a take-charge attitude if you sense a leadership vacuum. Go for the gold!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Make important decisions now before it is too late. A talent for writing or painting should be developed further. Sign up for a special class. A financial venture shows every sign of being successful.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You gain additional information concerning the safety or financial security of your family. Light is shed on areas previously cloaked in secrecy. Stress your independence at work and home. Romance on the rebound could falter.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The outlook is good for salvaging a partnership. Be conciliatory. Making payments and collections will improve your financial standing. Accept someone's generosity with good grace. Romance looks brightest for those who are considerate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A promising relationship could be up in the air. Avoid asking too much too soon. Information from close friends can be trusted. Join the social scene tonight. Kick up your heels! Others watch admiringly.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Take the advice of your mate or a close ally when evaluating hard-to-believe information. Your popularity is on the rise with people who have influence. Heed your intuition where romance is concerned.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Postpone travel and overseas communications until further data becomes available. An acquaintance's warning may be based on faulty information. An older person has a beneficial influence on your decision-making. Avoid acting hastily.

Opening lead: Ten of ♠

Sometimes you double a contract with no great conviction that you are going to defeat it. Your intention is to direct a specific lead which you figure gives you the only chance to set the opposition. The extra price you pay should the opponents make their doubled contract is small in comparison with what you can gain if you succeed in defeating an enemy game.

With partner marked by the auction for no more than 3 or 4 points, East's three aces are not enough to guarantee the contract's defeat. Since the bidding indicated South probably held a distributional hand, East felt that the best hope for the defense was to negotiate a spade ruff, and to accomplish that it was imperative to get a spade lead, hence the double. The defender hoped that partner would read the double as lead- directing, and attack with dummy's first-bid suit.

West duly led a spade, and the most difficult part of the defense was accomplished. All that remained was for East to find an entry to partner's hand to obtain the ruff. To do that, East had to find West with a minor-suit king.

At trick two East shifted to a low diamond. Declarer inserted the ace, and West discouraged by playing the five. A trump to the king lost to the ace, and East continued with the master plan, now playing West for the king of clubs by underleading the ace. After capturing declarer's queen with the king, West had no problem in returning a spade, and East ruffed with the deuce to secure a one-trick set.

Actor Tony Danza certainly shows who's the boss; case goes forward

MALIBU, Calif. — Tony Danza knows how to show who's the boss.

Danza smashed a car window and grabbed a video camera from two men who had taped the actor and his kids on the beach, authorities said Monday.

Danza smashed a car window, grabbed a video camera.

Chris Williams, 25, and Alan Zasi, 34, told deputies Danza pursued them Sunday and got them to pull over by bumping their car with his Cadillac.

Danza kicked and broke the window and made off with the camera after a struggle in which Williams received several scratches, the sheriff's report said.

Danza wasn't arrested, but the case will be forwarded to prosecutors for possible robbery and battery charges, Deputy Fidel Gonzales said.

Calls to Danza's publicist Kate Chester were not immediately returned.

The former star of "Who's the Boss?" and "Taxi" will star this fall in the new ABC series "Hudson Street," in which he plays a divorced New Jersey detective sharing custody of his son with his ex-wife.

AUBURN, Ind. — O.J. Simpson's white Bronco isn't available, but devotees of his televised trial can bid for Johnnie Cochran Jr.'s Cadillac.

The defense attorney's 1985 Eldorado Biarritz will be among the celebrity vehicles up for sale at the Auburn Collector Car Show and Auction on Sept. 4.

"We know there has been someone out there watching the trial every day who would be proud to call this car theirs," said Julie Rosoff, a spokeswoman for Kruse International, an auction company.

The white luxury car with a stainless steel roof and burgundy interior is in mint condition, Rosoff said.

"The value of the car is estimated at $15,000," Rosoff said. "Considering who owns it, though, it could double or triple in value."

LOS ANGELES — Former "Saturday Night Live" comedian Julia Sweeney has learned to laugh in the face of death.

She has made her bout with cervical cancer the subject of a stand-up comedy routine.

"They took out everything — lymph nodes, gall bladder, anything that could be there that could have it, cause it was spreading," Sweeney, 35, said in an interview last week. "Then I went through about nine weeks of radiation, so that's what the year's been like. A nightmare."

The nightmare had absurd moments, though, that provided comic material about doctors, dates and family members.

After a performance, the actress best known for her gender-ambiguous character Pat said she was approached by a relative of "Saturday Night Live" comedian Gilda Radner, who died of ovarian cancer in 1989.

"This guy came up," Sweeney recalled, "and said, 'I'm Gilda Radner's cousin, and I was very close to her, and I just want to say that had she lived, she would have done exactly what you're doing. She would have gotten up and she would have talked about it.'"

SAN JOSE, Calif. — The inner-city school program that inspired the new movie "Dangerous Minds" with Michele Pfeiffer may wind up on the budget cutting room floor.

School program that inspired Pfeiffer movie has troubles.

Federal funding is shrinking for programs that combine academics with job training, as Carlmont High School's Academy does for 125 handpicked students considered very bright but in danger of dropping out.

The San Jose Mercury News reported Sunday that there might not be enough money to sustain the program's $100,000-a-year cost.

LouAnne Johnson, the Marine-turned-teacher who wrote the book on which the movie is based, said the story of dwindling funding for successful school programs is all too familiar.

"They start chipping away at it until it's gone," she told the newspaper.

Fiesta is a 'smash'ing success for Bynum

Children's Service League happy with this year's success, already beginning work on next year's event

By Elizabeth Edwin Lifestyle Editor

With all the color, music, fun and frolic of a Mexican Fiesta, Smash Fiesta was once again a "smash" Saturday evening at Midland Country Club.

While some participants "raised a racquet" others just "had a ball' during the annual event.

Culminating a day on the tennis courts in the hot summer sun, the light breeze that drifted over Midland Country Club Saturday evening was welcomed by guests. In the "almost Mexican Riviera" climate, about 500 Permian Basin supporters made their way to the 11th annual Smash Fiesta benefit for Bynum School.

The event, sponsored by the Children's Service League (CSL) to raise funds for Bynum School's operating expenses, generated approximately $53,000 for the school, according to Pam Kirby, CSL treasurer.

"We were extremely successful this year," said Paula Morrison, a member of the board of directors for CSL. "We had a lot of Silent Auction items. There were so few people who said 'no' when we called asking for donations. The Silent Auction tripled in size from last year."

The additional items in the Silent Auction helped replace revenue which in the past has been raised during a live auction, which CSL decided not to sponsor this year.

As is the tradition, Smash Fiesta day began at 9 a.m. Saturday with about 60 teams playing tennis throughout the day at various locations. That evening, the Fiesta began at 7 p.m. with drinks and stuffed jalapenos hors d'oeuvres offered by roaming staff members of MCC.

Wood cutouts of cacti wearing sombreros adorned with twinkle lights — also a Smash Fiesta tradition — were placed at the drive-in entrance and the lobby entrance to MCC. Panels painted by jo du Fo, a cactus shaped from balloons, paper flowers and a rainbow of balloons created a festive atmosphere in the lobby.

MCC's BALLROOOM was filled with over 70 Silent Auction items on display, ranging from rustic wood bird houses and brass jewelry to tickets for sports events and trips. The highest value items included a seven-day/six-night stay at a three-bedroom condo in Purgatory, Colo., compliments of Joseph and Jan O'Neill; four luxury box seat tickets for Texas Rangers baseball courtesy of Ted Collins with deluxe hotel accommodations compliments KGEE-100; a framed original oil painting by Mel Harrera from Midland Gallery; a studio sitting and 20x24 custom family portrait by Sam Hollis Photography; and two tickets to anywhere in the continental United State courtesy of American Airlines.

The outdoor tent was adorned with twinkle lights, streamers, balloons and pinatas, and sponsors' tables were decorated with terra cotta pots filled with paper flowers surrounded by confetti.

By 7:30 p.m., guests were filling their plates from the Mexican buffet, which included tossed salad, taco salad, chili con queso and tortilla chips, flour tortillas, smoked chicken and beef with onions and bell peppers, Spanish rice, refried beans, guacamole, salsa and cheese enchiladas. A table with assorted desserts, including pecan pralines, were also available for those who had a hungry sweet tooth.

The dance floor was soon filled with couples dancing to the tunes of "Custom Made" of Dallas, produced by Wemus Entertainment. The seven-piece band kept the dance floor full with a variety of sounds ranging from Van Halen's "Start Me Up" to Melissa Ethridge's "I'm the Only One," which was dedicated to the staff at Bynum School. On occasion, members of the audience would even offer their talents to the band, joining them on stage to sing.

Custom Made is a new group to the area. "I like to rotate the bands for these functions when we can," said Dennis Grubb, owner of Wemus Entertainment. "We've had 'Lindy and the Look' the last few years — who are very popular — and they are scheduled to be here next week for a function at Green Tree, so we brought in Custom Made. They are a real upbeat group who can play a wide variety of music from the '60s, '70s and '80s."

The Silent Auction was closed around 10 p.m. and winners were notified of their purchases.

Dancing continued until well past midnight, with the dance floor vacant only when the band took a break.

KOSA news co-anchors Randy Lynn and Pamela Hamm served as master and mistress of ceremonies.

Due to the community's support of Smash Fiesta, the Bynum School has grown and improved during recent years. In her program letter, Executive Director Karen Wentworth said that in August 1994, a new building was added to house the school's program for students who have Attention Deficit Disorder (ADD) or who have difficulty in traditional school settings. The school recently acquired a new greenhouse, completed this summer by the employees of Santa Fe Energy. This new greenhouse will enable the school to double the output from its vocational horticulture program.

Ms. Wentworth also noted that many area companies and foundations have been generous in providing funds for scholarships and financial assistance.

BYNUM SCHOOL provides specialized services for developmentally disabled children in the Permian Basin. It has been in operation 11 years and its programs are designed to teach students who have significant educational challenges, those who may be a risk of dropping out of school, and students with learning differences, as well as those students with developmental disabilities.

The school has a low student-to-teacher ratio, allowing for individual curriculum plans for students and hands-on learning experiences.

The school's hours are 8:30 a.m.-3:30 p.m. with after school care available until 5:30 p.m.

The Children's Service League is already making plans for next year, with a few changes possibly in the works.

"We are already planning for next year. We are really looking forward to it. This year, we just had a committee who put this together; we didn't have a chairman. But Carolyn Epple has already offered to be chairman for next year's event," said Ms. Morrison. She added that the committee is hoping to be able to add some celebrity and professional tennis players to the event as well.

"For this year, we'd really like to thank the Bynum School staff and the parents of the kids. They helped up with a lot of the decorating," Ms. Morrison said.

Grand Slam sponsors for this year's Fiesta were Tom Brown Inc., H.W. and Elizabeth Davidson and Jan and Joseph O'Neill.

Champion sponsors were Dr. and Mrs. Robert A. Bennett/Dr. and Mrs. William L. McGavran/Mr. and Mrs. Allen McGuire; Mr. and Mrs. Jack E. Brown; Mr. and Mrs. Richard W. Campbell; Bruce and Robin Insalaco; Ann A. Morrison; Navajo Crude Oil Marketing; Mickey Ray; Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Wagner; Dr. and Mrs. Stephen Wiesenfeld, and Dr. and Mrs. Charles Younger.

Sponsors in the Aces category included Baytech Inc.; Harry and Marsha Bettis; Boyd & McWilliams; Laree and Steve Cole/Sara and Buddy Gieb; Collins & Ware/Brett and Alison Smith; Enron Oil & Gas; Gates-O'Brien Incorporated; Johnson, Miller & Co. CPA's; Morgan & Leeton P.C.; Paula and Howard Morrison; Parker and Parley Petroleum U.S.A. Inc., and Gary Thomas.

DEAR ABBY

Family's love positive support for man with HIV

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: About six years ago, you printed a letter from a young man infected with HIV. He wanted to tell his family, but he was afraid of the repercussions.

Van Buren

You told him in a firm but gentle way that he should inform his family immediately because he needed their love and support. This response affected me profoundly.

Seven years ago, I was diagnosed as HIV-positive. After reading that letter and your response, I felt compelled to inform my family of the diagnosis. First, I discussed it with my companion (who is also HIV-positive), then I spoke with my oldest brother, who has been a buddy to me since childhood.

Upon his visit from the Midwest, my whole family was together, except for one brother. It was difficult to tell them, but their reaction was wonderfully warm, loving and supportive.

A year later, when my other brother returned from overseas duty, he was also informed. It was more difficult to tell him, because he is my twin.

Since then, my companion and I have received much-needed emotional support from my family. Without it, I never could have made it.

If you print my letter, please sign me ... LOVED AND LUCKY IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR LOVED AND LUCKY: God bless you. You are indeed lucky. Unfortunately, not all families are as loving and supportive as yours.

DEAR ABBY: My wife, "Alice," and I need to settle a serious difference of opinion.

"John" and "Mary" were our closest friends. My wife recently informed me that she had a "thing" for John. (She called it a "crush.") John became obsessed with her when he was having trouble at home. During the day, John would call me at work to make sure I wasn't home, then he'd jog over to our house to see Alice. These visits were unsolicited and unplanned on her part, but she didn't exactly discourage him. To make matters worse, our children and theirs are very close.

One day after calling me, and lying to his wife, John jogged over to our place, and his wife followed him. When he saw her, he ran out the back door and jumped the fence. Needless to say, even though we have openly discussed the situation, I no longer trust John.

My wife sees nothing wrong with continuing our friendship with this couple as though nothing has happened. Now I can't stand the sight of John and don't want to socialize with him, but we can't avoid seeing them at church, school activities and sporting events.

I say, with friends like these, who needs enemies? Am I wrong? — BURNED BY A "FRIEND"

DEAR BURNED: No, you're not wrong; your feelings of betrayal are justified, and no one could fault you for wanting to distance yourself from this couple. To continue the friendship as though nothing has happened would be tempting the fates.

You and your wife would be wise to make new friends, and make sure things remain strictly on a friendship basis.

DAY-BRIGHTENER: An anonymous reader sent me the "joke" page of her church bulletin. On that page was a cute story with a terrific message:

Mother Mouse was crossing the street with her three little children. She got about halfway across the road when she spotted a cat, crouched and ready to pounce upon them. The cat and Mother Mouse eyeballed each other for two to three minutes. Finally, Mother Mouse opened her mouth and let out an enormous "WOOF." The cat quickly scurried away.

Mother Mouse turned to her three little ones and said, "NOW do you see the advantage of a second language?"

Tyson vs. Foreman

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bob Arum, the promoter for George Foreman, proposed Monday that Foreman and Mike Tyson meet in what he believes would be "the biggest fight by far of all time" with a neutral party handling the money.

The winner, Arum said, could conceivably earn $80 million or more.

Arum's proposal is that each fighter is guaranteed $15 million with the winner receiving whatever remains of the proceeds after promotional expenses are deducted.

"I say the fight will bring in at least $100 million, so the winner will earn $85 million minus expenses, about $5 million," Arum said.

Mesa tops in AL

NEW YORK — Cleveland closer Jose Mesa, who broke the major league record for consecutive saves in a season, was named the AL's player of the week Monday.

By preserving the Indians' 8-5 victory over Milwaukee on Sunday, Mesa registered his 37th save, breaking the previous record of 36 set by Oakland's Dennis Eckersley in 1992.

Mesa appeared in four games last week, giving up one hit and allowing one walk in four innings. He struck out three.

Others considered for the weekly award were Cleveland's Albert Belle and Manny Ramirez, Seattle Edgar Martinez and Detroit's Robert Higginson.

Sosa tops in NL

NEW YORK (AP) — Chicago's Sammy Sosa, who hit five homers last week, was named the NL player of the week Monday.

The Cubs' outfielder hit .400 (12-for-30) in seven games last week with 14 RBIs and nine runs scored. His slugging percentage was .933, and he homered in four consecutive games.

Sosa leads the Cubs with 24 homers and 84 RBIs.

Others considered for the weekly honor were Pittsburgh's Kevin Young, Los Angeles' Ismael Valdes and Cincinnati's Barry Larkin and Dave Burba.

Broncos down Dallas by 20-17

■ Backup quarterback Bill Musgrave leads Denver to a third quarter touchdown to hand the Cowboys another exhibition loss.

By John Mossman
AP Sports Writer

DENVER — After his team lost to the expansion Carolina Panthers in its last exhibition game, Denver Broncos coach Mike Shanahan might have thought trimming his roster to 60 players would be easy. Not any longer.

The Broncos beat the Dallas Cowboys 20-17 Monday night, completing a sweep of arguably the NFL's two best teams; Denver defeated the San Francisco 49ers twice to start the preseason.

"This kind of game makes our job very difficult," Shanahan said. "We've got 80 guys who have really been committed. It's the best group I've been around. It appears there are some players who made the team tonight based on what we saw."

Cuts must be made on Tuesday.

Bill Musgrave, battling Hugh Millen for the backup quarterback job, and rookie Terrell Davis, bidding for the starting halfback job, both figured to make the team anyway. Their stock soared after this game.

Musgrave completed 14 of 23 passes for 155 yards, including a third-quarter touchdown pass to tight end Jerry Evans. Davis carried 10 times for 73 yards, including a 38-yard romp in the fourth quarter.

"One game is not the final test, but Bill didn't hurt himself, I'll say that," Shanahan said. "We have two excellent backup quarterbacks. We're not going to make a decision until after the Jacksonville game," the final exhibition game on Friday.

"Terrell did some nice things. He broke some tackles and showed us he can catch the ball."

Musgrave's 1-yard TD throw to Evans produced a 17-17 tie, and Jason Elam's 27-yard field goal with 9:37 left accounted for the difference.

The Broncos' 455 total yards was the high for an NFL exhibition this year. Denver (3-1) had 233 yards at the half against the Cowboys' No. 1 defense.

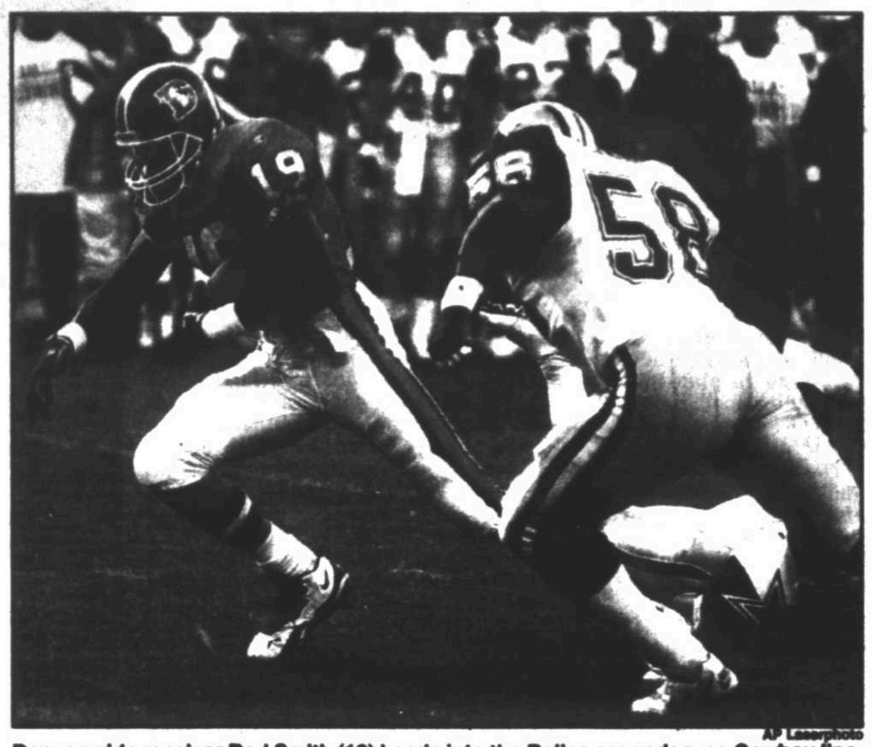

Troy Aikman and Michael Irvin hooked up on two touchdown passes to stake the Cowboys (1-3) to a 17-10 halftime lead.

Aikman and Denver's John Elway, who both played only the first half with the other starters, had identical 12-for-17 passing statistics, with Aikman throwing for 194 yards and Elway for 165.

"We accomplished what we wanted to tonight," Cowboys coach Barry Switzer said. "We went out and played hard and won the first half, and we came out of the game healthy. The offensive line protected Troy and Wade very well. On special teams, we blocked a field goal and had some good returns."

On his first series, Musgrave drove the Broncos 76 yards in 13 plays for a 17-17 tie with 7:17 left in the third quarter. He completed seven passes on the drive, including a 22-yarder to Evans. On second-and-goal from the 1, Musgrave faked to a back into the line, then hit a wide-open Evans in the right corner of the end zone.

"We really fooled them on the quarterback keeps," Musgrave said. "The fake plays worked because we ran the ball so well. We called some pretty basic plays because we didn't want to show them everything since we play them in a couple of weeks (Sept. 10)."

NOBODY'S BUD

Houston fans shoot down Adams

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Maybe Bud Adams would find more friends in Nashville, Tenn. A new poll shows the Houston Oilers owner has had little luck in his team's hometown.

Seventy-five percent of Harris County residents say they have an unfavorable opinion of Adams, according to a poll published Monday in the Houston Chronicle.

The poll of 428 adults interviewed by telephone Thursday and Friday found 18 percent with a neutral opinion and 7 percent who have a favorable opinion of Adams. The margin of error was 5 percent.

An image problem is nothing new for Adams, who founded the Oilers 36 years ago as one of two original American Football League franchises.

But public opinion for the oilman has spiraled downward since his most recent push for a new $235 million downtown dome funded mostly by taxpayers. Adams has said he will take the franchise elsewhere if his demand is not met and has negotiated to move the Oilers to Nashville.

Oilers spokesman Dave Pearson said Monday that neither Adams nor the team had any comment on the unflattering study.

The poll, conducted by Mason-Dixon Political/Media Research Inc. for the Chronicle and television station KPRC, found that 58 percent of area residents oppose spending public money to keep the Oilers, even if that did not involve a tax hike.

Thirty percent said they would support the spending of public money, while 12 percent were undecided.

When asked whether they'd support spending public money to attract another NFL franchise if the Oilers leave for Nashville, 41 percent said they would. Another 41 percent said they would oppose that, while 18 percent were undecided.

According to the poll, Adams might be his own worst enemy. Sixty-eight percent of those polled said Adams was the Oilers' biggest liability.

"It's obvious that the Oilers could make a stronger case for a new stadium if Adams was not the owner," said pollster Brad Coker. "The key is animosity toward Adams."

Most of those surveyed also opposed spending public funds to upgrade or build facilities for other Houston sports teams such as the NBA Rockets, who also have lobbied for a new arena.

The poll was conducted before the cancellation of Saturday night's scheduled exhibition game with the San Diego Chargers at the Astrodome.

The Oilers say NFL officials called off the game because the artificial surface was unsafe. Astrodome officials blame the team for the decision and say the surface was playable.

Some say Adams, who calls the Astrodome insufficient for professional football, was trying to get out of his contract with the facility by setting up a breach-of-contract claim. The Oilers deny that.

About 25,000 people who showed up for the canceled game have been offered refunds or credits to their season-ticket accounts.

Spring rallies for LL victory

By Michael A. Giarruso
Associated Press Writer

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. — Spring, Texas, lost the lead on a grand slam in the final inning, but the Little Leaguers didn't lose heart.

"We hoped the game would already be over, but these guys never doubted," manager Don Turley said after his team came back to beat Toms River, N.J., 11-10 on a wild pitch in the bottom of the sixth.

Saudi Arabia beat Canada 5-4 in the first game in the international bracket of the Little League World Series. Two other games were scheduled for Monday night.

Trailing 9-6 in the top of the sixth with the bases loaded, Toms River took its first lead when Chris Cerullo hit a line drive over the left field fence to make it 10-9.

Toms River, the Eastern champ, trailed 9-5 going into the sixth inning, but Spring relievers Kristopher DuConge and Kyle Foster couldn't get anybody out.

Before giving up the grand slam, Foster had five RBIs, including a 225-foot 3-run homer.

"Foster was having a career game and then we had to throw him out there on the mound," Turley said. "If we didn't come back, he would have been hard to put to bed tonight."

With one out and men on first and second in the bottom of the sixth, DuConge singled in Christopher Conway to tie the game. After a single by Brandon Bartlett loaded the bases, Toms River replaced starting pitcher Jeff Frazier.

Colin Gaynor's first pitch was way outside and got past the catcher, allowing Wardell Starling to score the game-winner for the Southern champs.

The Canada-Saudi Arabia game almost as dramatic. Canada led 4-2 going into the final inning, but pinch hitter Brian Chu hit a two run-double with one out to give Saudi Arabia the victory.

"Brian's a clutch kind of player," Saudi Arabia coach Cornell Seymour said. "In the Saudi Arabia national championship, he hit a grand slam that won a game for us."

Football: 1995 is out with the old and in with the new

■ An overtime rule, a new bowl alliance and new coaches at national powers has the college football scene in a changing mode.

By RICK WARNER
AP Football Writer

From coaches to bowls and conferences, it's out with the old and in with the new.

While the 80-year-old Southwest Conference plays its final season, a new overtime rule, a new bowl alliance and new coaches at several national powers will make their debuts in college football.

The SWC, which produced five national champions, five Heisman Trophy winners and some of the sport's fiercest rivalries, will disband after the 1995 season following a long period of decline triggered by a series of NCAA scandals.

Texas, Texas A&M, Texas Tech and Baylor will join the Big Eight, which will be called the Big 12. SMU, TCU and Rice will enter the Western Athletic Conference, and Houston will be a member of the new Conference USA.

"Some of these schools won't ever be playing each other again, and that's sad," said former Baylor coach Grant Teaff.

Texas A&M, coming off NCAA probation along with Auburn and Washington, is heavily favored to win the SWC's last title and also is considered a strong contender for the national championship.

The Aggies are ranked third in The Associated Press preseason poll, behind Florida State and defending national champion Nebraska.

Florida State is the preseason No. 1 for the fourth time in eight years, while Nebraska will try to become the first team in 16 years to win consecutive national titles.

Florida State, Nebraska and Texas A&M all have talented, experienced quarterbacks, Heisman-caliber running backs, and only a few dangerous opponents on their schedules. Rounding out the preseason Top 10 are Penn State, Florida, Auburn, Southern Cal, Tennessee, Notre Dame and Alabama, which can't go to a bowl this season because of NCAA probation.

The postseason bowl picture will have a new look. The bowl coalition has been replaced by the bowl alliance, an agreement under which the Fiesta, Sugar and Orange bowls will rotate as the site of a likely national championship game.

The Fiesta will host the top alliance game this season on the night of Jan. 2. The game will match No. 1 against No. 2, unless one or both is from the Big Ten or Pac-10, which will continue to send their champions to the Jan. 1 Rose Bowl.

Rangers score 11, hit three bombs in very first inning

Associated Press

■ AL Roundup

ARLINGTON — Juan Gonzalez hit a grand slam and RBI single during an 11-run first inning that included three home runs Monday night, powering the Texas Rangers past the Minnesota Twins 12-5.

Rusty Greer hit a three-run homer and Benji Gil connected for a solo shot as the Rangers sent 15 batters to the plate in the opening inning against rookie pitchers Scott Klingenbeck and reliever Oscar Munoz.

The big burst featured eight hits and three walks and came a day after Texas scored six runs in the first inning of a 6-4 win at Chicago. The Rangers, leading the AL wild-card race, won for the seventh time in nine games.

Gonzalez's five RBIs in an inning was one short of the major league mark accomplished 11 times. Boston's Carlos Quintana most recently had six in 1991.

The Rangers' record for runs in an inning is 12, done in the 15th inning against Oakland on July 3, 1983. The 11 runs tied a Twins' mark for most allowed in an inning.

The post-1900 major league record for runs in an inning is 17 by the Boston Red Sox in 1953 in the seventh against Detroit. In that game, Gene Stephens became the only player since 1900 to get three hits in an inning.

Will Clark had an RBI triple and Ivan Rodriguez added a run-scoring singles to help the Rangers to the second-highest scoring inning in club history. Gonzalez also doubled in the fourth.

White Sox 7, Tigers 3

DETROIT — Robin Ventura singled home the go-ahead run in the seventh inning and homered in the ninth, leading Chicago past Detroit.

Alex Fernandez (8-8) improved to 5-1 lifetime at Tiger Stadium and Kirk McCaskill got his second save. Mike Moore (5-13) lost his eighth straight decision and has not won in three months.

Cecil Fielder hit his 25th homer, highlighting a three-run sixth that put Detroit ahead 3-1.

The White Sox came back with three runs in the seventh. Ozzie Guillen singled and scored on a double by Dave Martinez, setting up RBI singles by Tim Raines and Ventura.

Indians 7, Blue Jays 3

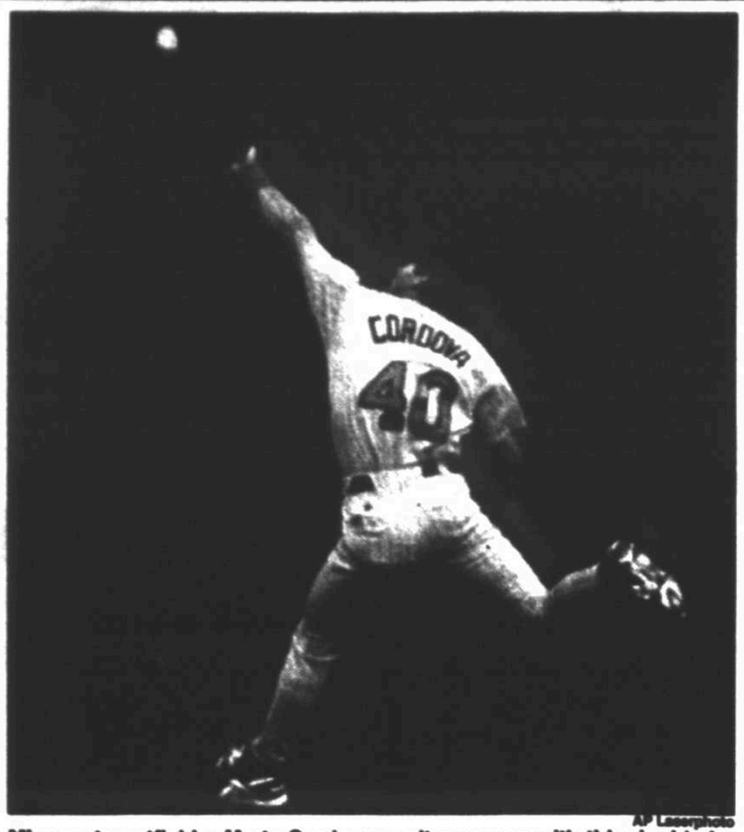

TORONTO — Paul Sorrento homered and drove in four runs as Orel Hershiser and Cleveland defeated Toronto for their fourth straight win.

Hershiser (11-5) pitched seven innings, allowing three runs while striking out eight and walking none. He is 4-0 in his last five starts and 6-2 since coming off the disabled list July 7.

Edwin Hurtado (5-2) gave up six runs on just four hits in five innings. He walked seven.

Brewers 3-18, Royals 1-9

MILWAUKEE — Johnny Damon hit a bases-loaded triple in an 11-run fourth inning that led the Kansas City Royals past the Milwaukee Brewers 18-9 Monday night for a split of their doubleheader.

AP Laserphoto

Minnesota outfielder Marty Cordova can't come up with this double by Texas' Otis Nixon, a hit that started an 11-run inning for the Rangers.

The Royals tied a team record for runs in an inning reached twice before, most recently at Boston on Aug. 2, 1986. The 11 runs, all of them earned, were the most ever allowed in one inning by the Brewers.

Milwaukee won the opener 3-1 when Angel Miranda earned his first major league save by getting Jon Nunnally to hit into a game-ending double play with the bases loaded.

Red Sox 6, Angels 4

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Jose Canseco hit a tiebreaking home run in the sixth inning and Boston beat California for its 20th win in 24 games.

The Red Sox won the opener of a three-game series between the AL East and West leaders. Luis Alicea atoned for an earlier error with a home run for Boston.

Canseco put Boston ahead 4-3 with one out in the sixth with a home run off Brian Anderson (6-5). Canseco connected for his 16th homer of the season, and 23rd lifetime against Angels — 15 of them at Anaheim Stadium.

Athletics 13, Yankees 4

OAKLAND, Calif. — Geronimo Berroa homered, tripled and drove in three runs as Oakland scored 10 runs in the first two innings to beat error-prone New York.

The Athletics scored six unearned runs while batting around in each of the first two innings. Every A's starter had a hit by the second inning.

Two Yankee errors and three wild pitches helped the A's score six in the first.

Astro losses mounting as Braves rally to win

Associated Press

■ NL Roundup

HOUSTON — Ryan Klesko went 3-for-4 and hit an RBI double that broke a seventh-inning tie as the Atlanta Braves beat Houston 5-4 Monday night and extended the Astros' losing streak to five games.

The Braves trailed 4-3 entering the seventh. Jeff Blauser reached on Ricky Gutierrez's second error of the game, and went to third when Chipper Jones doubled off Craig McMurtry (0-1).

Dean Hartgraves came on to face Fred McGriff, whose grounder to first scored Blauser with the tying run. Klesko's double scored Jones with the go-ahead run.

Atlanta reliever Mark Wohlers entered the game with runners on first and third and one out in the eighth, and struck out Tony Eusebio and Dave Magadan.

In the ninth, the Astros had runners on first and third with no outs when Craig Shipley led off with a double and pinch-hitter Milt Thompson popped a bunt over Wohlers' head for an infield hit.

Shipley was thrown out at home when pinch-hitter Derrick May grounded to third baseman Jones for the first out. Brian Hunter grounded sharply to first baseman McGriff, moving runners to second and third. James Mouton flied out to right to end the game for Wohlers' team-record 18th consecutive save.

Dodgers 7, Expos 2

MONTREAL — Ismael Valdes pitched eight strong innings, and Mike Piazza, Raul Mondesi and Delino DeShields all homered in the seventh inning as Los Angeles beat Montreal.

The Dodgers, who snapped a four-game losing streak, moved into first place in the NL West, one-half game ahead of the idle Colorado Rockies.

Valdes (11-7), who turned 22 Monday, scattered six hits, struck out six and walked none before Todd Worrell pitched the ninth. Valdes is 6-1 with a 1.74 ERA in his last seven starts.

The homers, off reliever Willie Fraser, gave the Dodgers a 7-1 lead. Piazza and Mondesi hit their 19th homers, Mondesi's being a two-run shot. DeShields followed Mondesi's homer with his sixth of the season and second in two games.

The Dodgers scored three runs in the sixth to take a 3-1 lead against Tavo Alvarez, who was making his major-league debut.

Phillies 3, Padres 1

PHILADELPHIA — Sid Fernandez allowed five hits in eight innings and drove in the go-ahead run as Philadelphia beat San Diego for its fifth straight victory.

In winning his fourth straight decision, Fernandez (4-1) struck out seven, walked two and allowed only two hits after the second inning. Toby Borland allowed two hits with two outs in the ninth but struck out Brad Ausmus for his fifth save.

Andy Ashby (9-7) allowed four singles in seven innings and one earned run. In his last three starts covering 24 innings, Ashby has not given up an extra base-hit.

The Padres took a 1-0 lead in the second on back-to-back doubles by Archi Cianfrocco and Brian Johnson. Andujar Cedeno then singled to center, but Andy Van Slyke's throw caught Johnson trying to score.

Pirates 5, Marlins 3

PITTSBURGH — Carlos Garcia's two-run double in the seventh inning broke a tie and helped Pittsburgh complete a five-game sweep of Florida.

The Pirates have a season-best five-game winning streak and completed their first series sweep since they beat the Mets three times in New York from June 24-26, 1994. It is their first five-game sweep since July 12-15, 1984 against San Francisco.

With the score tied at 3 in the seventh, Jacob Brumfield and Al Martin singled off Mark Gardner (5-5). Garcia then hit an 0-2 pitch that bounced off the warning track in left-center field to score both runs. Garcia also extended his hitting streak to 13 games.

Mets 5, Giants 4, 11 innings

NEW YORK — New York rallied for two runs in the bottom of the 11th inning to win its fifth straight game, beating San Francisco as Rod Beck blew a save for the 10th time this season.

The Mets fell behind 4-3 on a bases-loaded balk by rookie reliever Paul Byrd (1-0) in the top of the 11th, and Beck was one out away from his 23rd save in the bottom of the inning.

But Joe Orsulak doubled to the wall in left-center, scoring pinch-runner Damon Buford from first, and Jose Vizcaino followed with a game-winning RBI single off Beck (5-6), who also blew a save Sunday at Philadelphia.

Carl Everett hit two solo homers for the Mets, whose five-game winning streak is their longest since they won a season-high six in a row Aug. 6-11. The Giants lost their fourth straight.

Cardinals 8, Reds 6

ST. LOUIS — Brian Jordan hit a three-run homer with two outs in the ninth inning off Mike Jackson, giving St. Louis a victory over Cincinnati.

The Cardinals have the worst record in the National League, but have won three of their last four against division leaders. They took two of three from Atlanta during the weekend.

The NL Central-leading Reds had a four-game winning streak stopped despite reaching double figures in hits for the seventh consecutive night, including home runs from Reggie Sanders and Hal Morris. St. Louis beat the Reds for only the second time in seven meetings.

Madden still thinks of Raiders as in Oakland

By John Nelson
AP Sports Writer

What's the big deal? As far as John Madden is concerned, they were always the Oakland Raiders.

"I never considered them the LA Raiders and I never thought they should have moved in the first place," Madden said.

After all, before Madden began his TV career, he coached the Raiders for 10 years and won a Super Bowl, all in Oakland.

In his second season as Fox Sports lead NFL analyst, Madden is firmly convinced that, by moving the Raiders back to Oakland, team owner Al Davis has done the right thing, even if only by accident.

"When football needed Oakland, Oakland was always there," Madden said. "I was there for 10 years, and every game was a sell-out — every preseason game, every regular-season game, every postseason game.

"So I think the Raiders are back where they belong, and it'll be a good experience. I think the Raiders will be a better team playing where they belong, and everybody is going to be happy with that."

All but a few diehard Los Angeles football fans, that is.

Although Los Angeles is the second-largest television market in the country, and there's no team there, TV can't really gripe. It was a rare occasion when either the Raiders or the Rams, before they moved to St. Louis, sold out. So it was a rare occasion that either could be televised in their home town.

Now, at least, Los Angeles' football fans will be able to watch the Raiders and Rams.

"It'll be interesting to see what happens because I know, living in the Bay Area, we've always been against LA teams," Madden said. "I don't know if LA fans have that same feeling against Bay Area teams.

"If you lived in the Bay Area, you wouldn't watch an LA team. But I don't know that they feel that way in LA about Bay Area teams. I think they'll probably watch the Raiders."

Madden said he suspected Los Angeles would get another team soon. The problem is, there's no place to play. The city talks about building a new stadium, and it's little wonder the Raiders abandoned the LA Coliseum.

It isn't in much better shape than the one in Rome. And if Hollywood made a movie about its plight, they might call it, "Honey, I Shrunk The Coliseum."

In 1990, seating capacity was listed at 92,488. Last year, it was 67,800, losing seats to such things as earthquakes, poor visibility and simple pressures to create a realistic sellout target.

"The only existing stadium that would be any good, really, is Dodger Stadium, and they won't allow it," Madden said. "When they build a stadium, a team will come. There's going to be one team in LA awfully soon, and eventually there will be two in LA again."

OUT TAKES: HBO's "Inside The NFL," longest-running series on cable TV, makes its season premier on Thursday, Sept. 7. The 1995 schedule calls for 22 episodes.

Analyst Jimmy Johnson, who actually joined the HBO show before he was hired by Fox, returns for his second year.

Johnson on the $40 million Pepsi deal signed by his former boss, Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones: "I've always said he's the best I've ever seen at making money."

Azinger-Stewart take Meyer lead

■ Golf Roundup

WEST LINN, Ore. (AP) — Paul Azinger, with a little help from teammate Payne Stewart, held a one-stroke lead Monday halfway through the Fred Meyer Challenge golf tournament.

Azinger and Stewart combined for a 7-under-par 64 on the 6,889-yard Oregon Golf Club course.

Three teams were at 6-under-par 65, including defending champions John Cook and Mark O'Meara, Greg Norman and Brad Faxon, and Tom Lehman and Bob Gilder.

The tournament, not an official PGA stop, has 12 two-man teams competing for $750,000 in prize money. Nine of 12 members of the U.S. Ryder Cup team are entered.

Given the format, the scores were expected to be lower, but the fast greens gave the players trouble. Expect the scores to drop in Tuesday's final round, several players said.

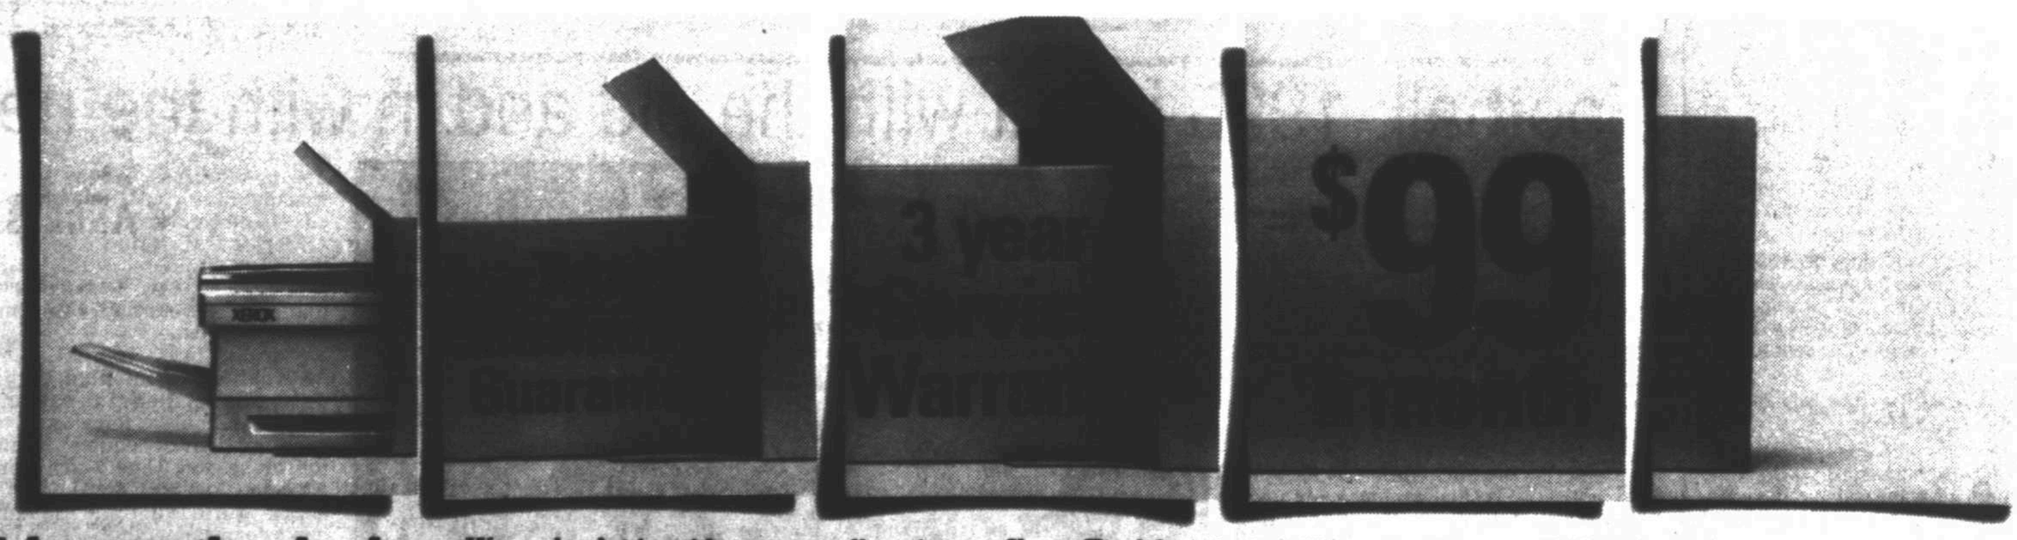

Azinger, who has won 11 times on the PGA Tour but not since coming back from a successful fight against cancer last year, had five birdies.

"He was the star today," Stewart said. "I was the motivator. I kept pumping him up and he kept doing what I was telling him to do. He's a very coachable person."

Watson tied for TIDA lead

AUSTIN — Midland's Jay Watson fell into a first-place tie for the points lead in the Texas International Drivers Association Late Model Series when defending Series champion David Umscheid thrilled a maximum capacity hometown crowd to win Race No. 13 here Saturday at Longhorn Speedway.

Watson finished second in the race and he and Umscheid, of Cedar Park, both have 165 points. Slick Yoemans of High Point, N.C. is third with 141 while pole sitter Tommy Grimes is third with 128.

The 75-lap race saw Grimes take the early lead but 12 laps later, Umscheid passed Grimes, who lost real wheel traction in turn four. Umscheid never relinquished the lead.

On lap 28, Watson, running third, made contact with second-place Grimes which sent Grimes spinning into the infield of the quarter-mile asphalt oval. Both restarted at the rear but Watson managed to pass all cars except the leaders for second while Grimes was third. Yoemans, racing in a borrowed car, finished fourth.

With five races remaining, the series heads to Sooner International Raceway in Altus, Okla. for a major two-day Labor Day event highlighted by a 100-lap feature race on Sunday. The half-mile facility is the fastest track on the series' schedule.

NFL to review cancellation game

HOUSTON (AP) — The NFL will hold a hearing Thursday to review the circumstances surrounding the cancellation of Saturday night's exhibition game between the Houston Oilers and San Diego Chargers.

The NFL said Monday it canceled the game after league officials consulted with the officiating crew and the officiating observer. They concluded the Astrodome playing surface was unsafe for a game.

Oilers representatives and league officials who were present for the scheduled game will attend the hearing.

The league also said it has notified both teams that they must reduce their rosters to 63 players for the scheduled Tuesday cutdown.

All other non-expansion clubs have to reduce their rosters to 60.

Commissioner Paul Tagliabue made the decision because the teams couldn't see their players in action in a third exhibition game before the squad reduction.

Save thousands when you refinish tub, tile and kitchen

So your tub is chipped, the tile is dingy and you hate the bathroom color scheme. But the estimate for remodeling the bath is out of sight. Ditto on replacing your out-of-style kitchen appliances and remodeling the kitchen.

BUT— did you know that NASA space-age technology now lets you refinish your porcelain, fiberglass or tile bath and shower in six hours and in any color you choose...or redo your kitchen cabinets and appliances— at tremendous savings over replacement?

It's true, thanks to Tim Wooten who has brought to Midland a franchise of Worldwide Refinishing Systems—established 25 years ago and rated the Number One refinishing franchise by Entrepreneur three years running.

Worldwide Refinishing was originated in 1970 by two partners who had purchased research material on catalyzed polyurethane, a material that came to the attention of NASA at a critical time in the development of space travel.

"After the fire on the launching pad that killed three astronauts, NASA was looking for a coating that was totally non-toxic, non combustible and highly flexible regardless of changes in temperature and pressure," said Wooten.

"That product is catalyzed polyurethane. Our product is the same material that coats moonbuggies."

It is acid proof and corrosion resistant, as well as high gloss, easy to apply and does not crack.

The material will refinish any surface (except soft plastic) including porcelain tubs and sinks, ceramic tile, cultured marble, fiberglass and acrylics. The substance also coats such appliances and stoves, refrigerators and dishwashers.

"You can choose a new color or two, or go with the same shade. Worldwide has 54 decorator colors and we can mix and match for you," said Wooten.

"We can refinish stainless steels sinks to make them look like porcelain, or refinish over wood. We can also do Formica countertops in a high-gloss or matte finish. We even put non-skids in the tub surface," he added.

The refinishing process used is environmentally friendly, EPA and OSHA approved. Some companies use a strong acid when etching the surface of porcelain tubs. To dispose of it, they dilute it and flush it down the drain. Worldwide uses a substance called Etch #3, which acts like an acid but is milder and is neutralized so it is inert when it goes down the drain.

Worldwide offers a five-year guarantee on tubs and tiles that the surface won't peel or crack. It offers a life-time guarantee that the white color won't yellow and the colors won't fade.

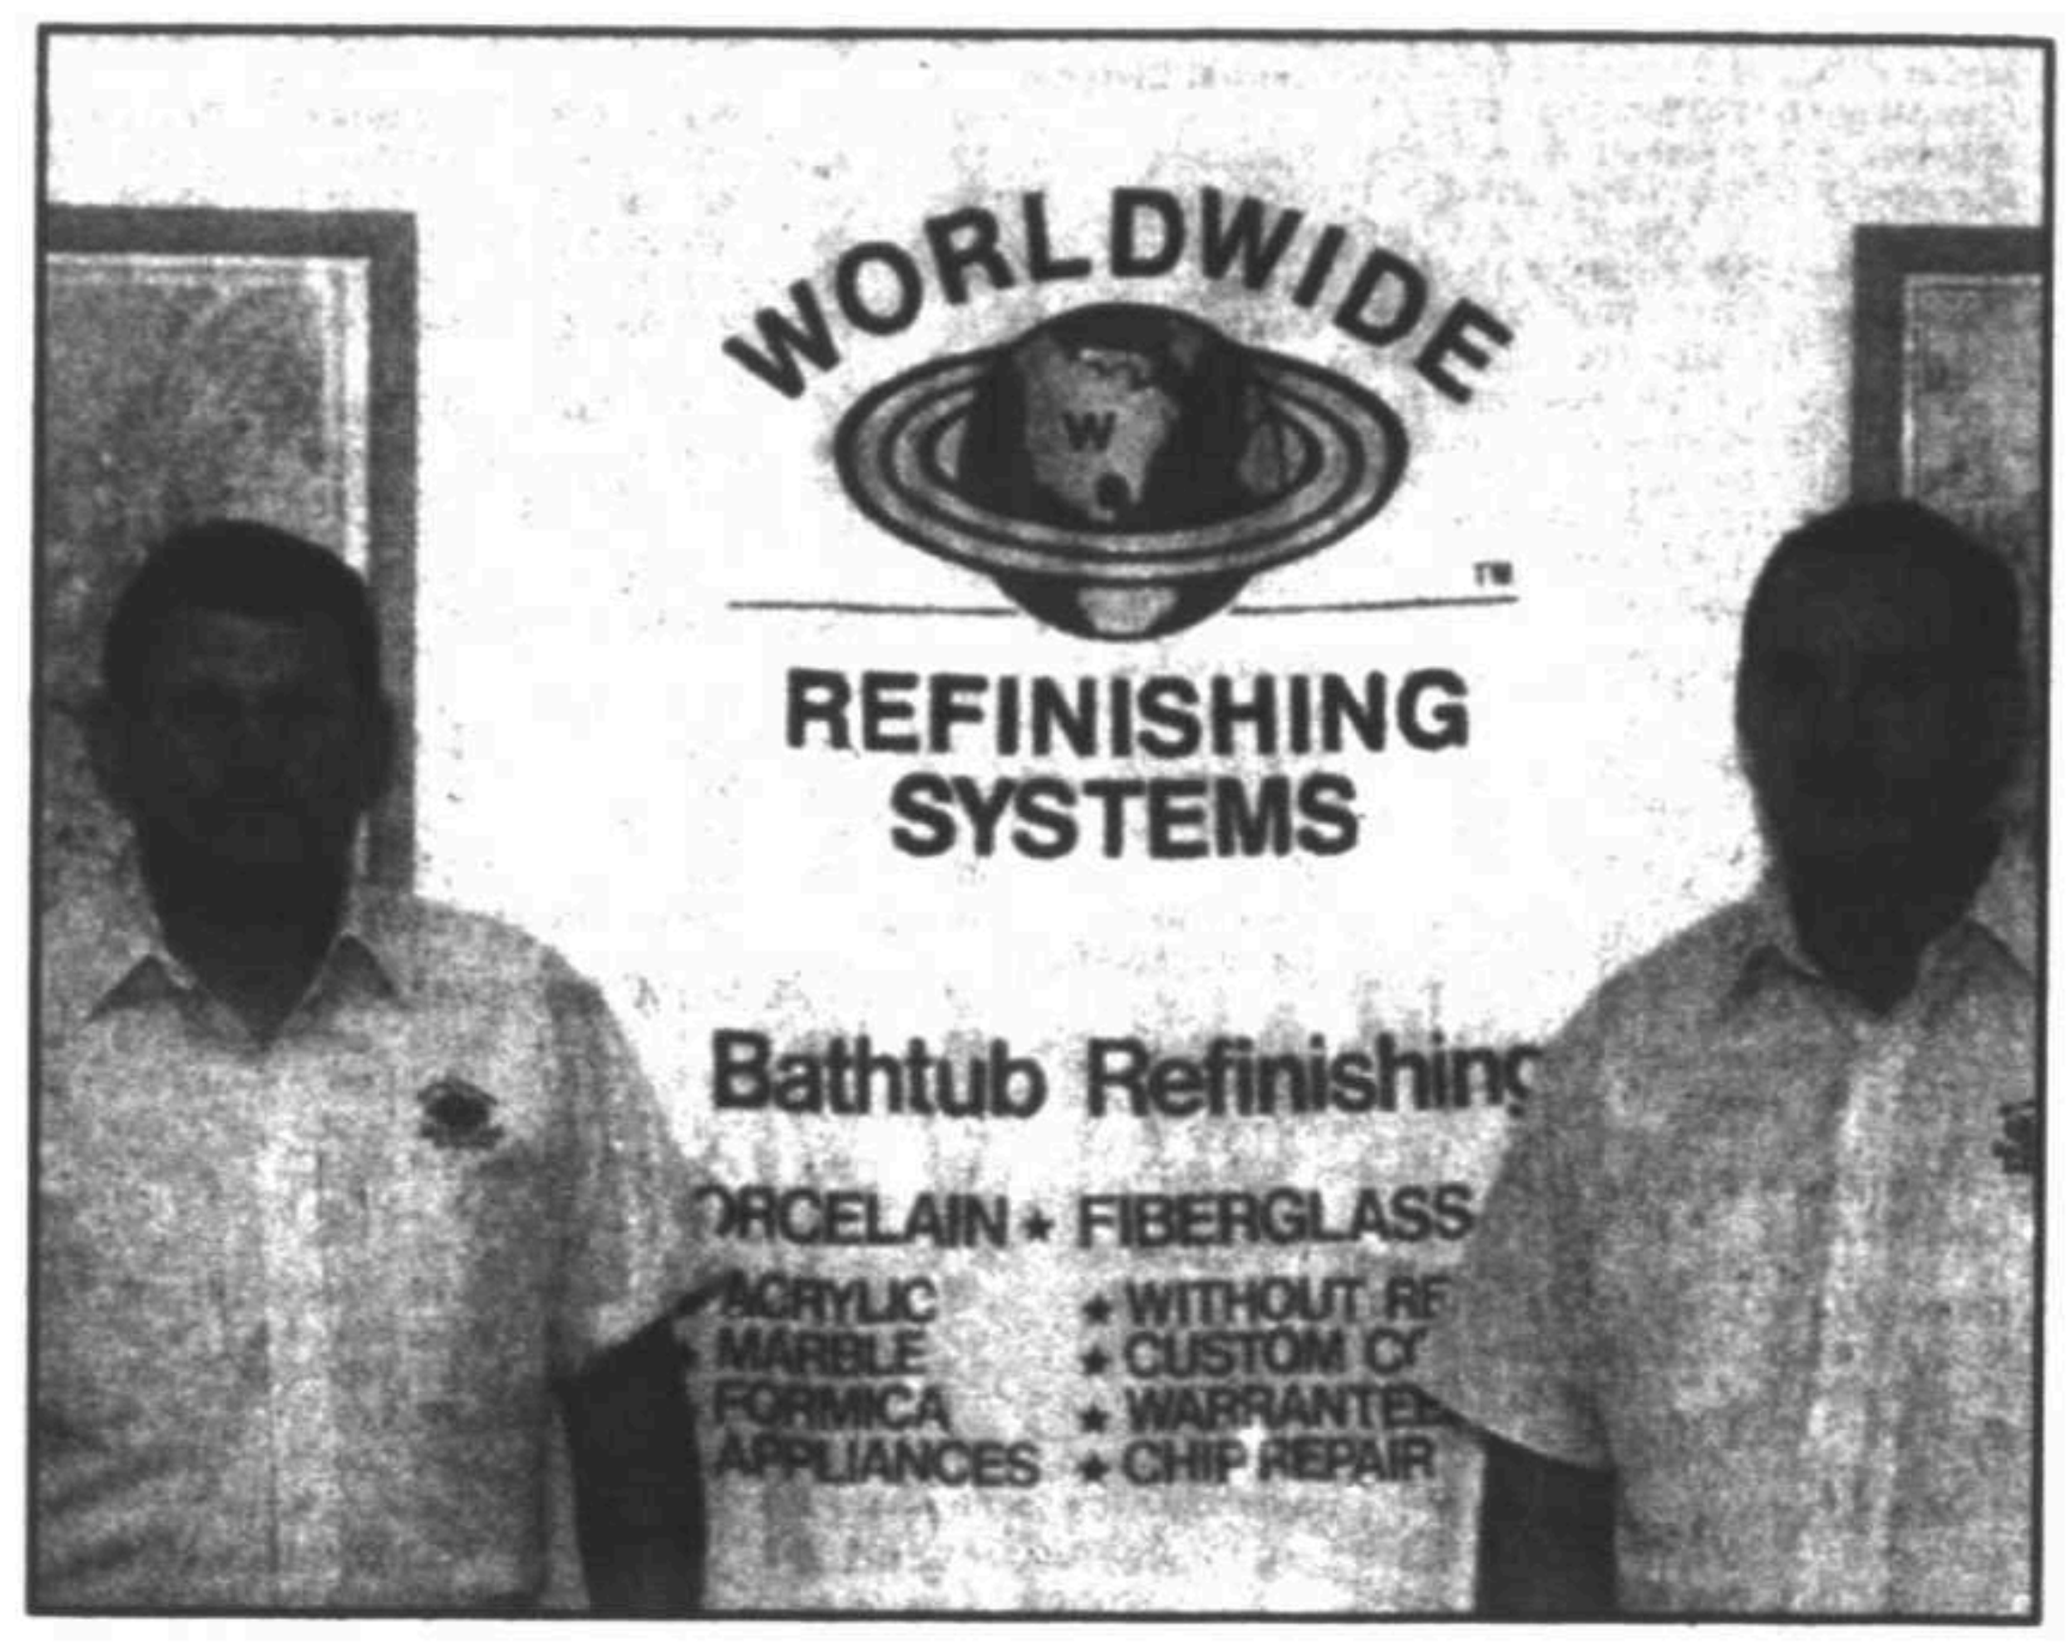

"People still remember the first efforts to refinish tubs that didn't use space-age materials and didn't last too long," Wooten said. "We have a completely different product and an entirely new process that does last and last."

This is the only bathtub refinishing process that has been tested and approved by the National Bureau of Standards.

"In addition to superior products, we offer superior service," Wooten added. "As a local business backed by a large national franchise, we offer individualized attention with product and process that are proven and guaranteed. We maintain the highest professional standards and offer free in-home estimates."

Worldwide Refinishing can refinish antiques such as clawfoot tubs and pedestal sinks; matte finishes for formica countertops; install non-skid finishes on tub bottoms; repair chips and cracks in fiberglass tubs and showers; refinish lavatories, fiberglass shower-tub combinations, toilets and tile, eliminating mildew forever.

Worldwide Refinishing is a national company whose local franchise is owned by Tim Wooten. Their phone number is 570-7114.

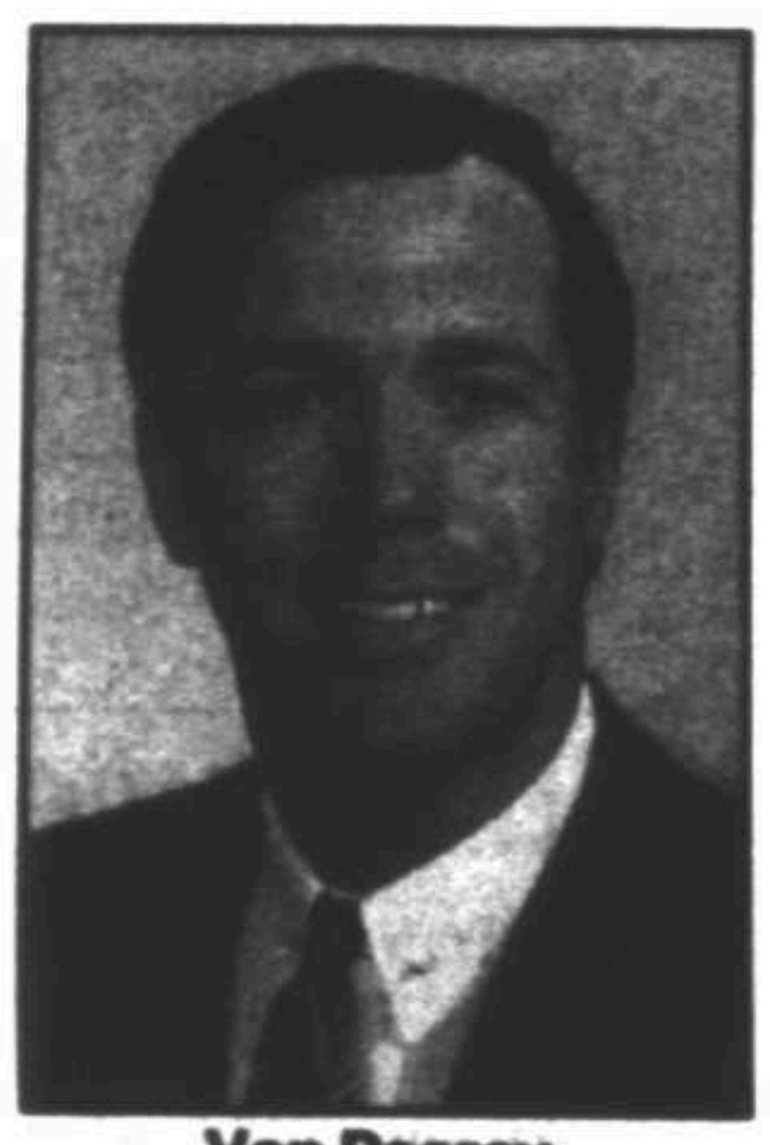

Franchise owner Tim Wooten (right) and service technician Ron Tucker are the local representatives of Worldwide Refinishing.the company uses space age technology to refinish tubs, sinks, showers and toilets.

VAN PEARCY of Edward D. Jones & Co.

The stock market: how high is too high?

4000. 4200. 4500. 4700.

Van Pearcy

These days the Dow Jones Industrial Average seems to be climbing faster than the mercury on a hot West Texas day. In fact, the Dow has already reached new highs 44 times this year.

All this upward movement has everybody wondering if stocks have become overpriced. The answer to that question could be YES, or it could be NO, depending on which indicator you follow.

Rather than trying to decide whether stocks are a good buy today, I find it's better to step back and take a look at the bigger picture. Historically, stocks have been a good buy regardless of the market's short-term ups and downs. In fact, over the past 68 years, stocks have generally outperformed all other financial investments.

Still troubled by the high level of today's stock market? Investors have been concerned during every bull market that's occurred, and that led some people to make mistakes. About a year and a half ago, when the Dow first reached 3600, financial wizard Peter Lynch listed five of the most common mistakes investors make in times like these:

1. Thinking that this year will be different

It really doesn't matter whether the market is overvalued or undervalued or whether interest rates are high or low. History shows that the basic rule of investing always applies: If you purchase the stock of a well-managed company and hold it for the long haul, your investment is bound to appreciate.

2. Becoming too concerned about the direction of the market

Instead of becoming so afraid of a market decline that you avoid investing altogether, you should expect periodic drops and make the most of them by purchasing additional shares of high-quality stocks at lower prices.

3. Trying to time the market

Attempting to forecast the market whether the market is at a peak or in a valley and whether to buy or sell stocks is a waste of time. The only thing we know for sure is that drops are inevitable, and over time, the market should advance more than it declines. Therefore, it's important to stay in the market rather than continually getting in and out of it in an effort to "time" the market.

4. Not knowing the story behind the company in which you are buying stock

You should be able to explain in less than three minutes or on one page why you like the company. Some people spend more time pondering the purchase of a microwave oven than they spend researching a stock tip from a friend.

5. Buying stocks for short term

Over a period of one or two years, stock prices tend to be unpredictable. However, quality stocks are an attractive investment for people who plan to hold them 10 years or more. Over that time frame, companies' earnings and dividends should increase, which leads to higher stock prices.

No matter what the level of the stock market, investors who want to own high-quality stocks can always find good values. Among the stocks that are attractive today are a number of high-quality makers of household-name consumer products. Also appealing are industries that offer the potential for attractive current income through dividend growth, such as utility stocks. Today, returns on these income-producing stocks are comparable to those of long-term bonds. Unlike bonds, however, these investments offer potential for rising income through increasing dividends.

So don't be scared away by a rising stock market. Keep a long-term focus, invest in quality, and you'll be rewarded.

El Dorado Trading Co.
makes history

As a living history store and frontier outfitter, El Dorado Trading Company is a gathering place for collectors of civilian and military memorabilia of the late 1800's. Owner David Bartko said the focus of the store is of such interest that people actually volunteer to come in and work without pay.

El Dorado carries both authentic articles and replicas of items such as packsaddles, furniture, clothing, glass and bone Indian beads, Indian blankets and black powder rifles.

Decorators, along with history buffs, revel in the opportunity to discover accent items at El Dorado which are perfect for the popular Southwest decorating theme.

An accomplished craftsman, Bartko does repair and restoration of black powder guns and other period items worked from metal, wood or leather. He also gives school presentations as part of the Partners in Education program.

El Dorado Trading Company is located at 350 N. Midland Drive, Suite F, on the north edge of the K-Mart parking lot. The store is open 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Saturday. The phone number is 689-4677.

Mesa finds nice niche with Tribe

CLEVELAND (AP) — When Jose Mesa finally picked a niche, he didn't pick an easy one. He just made it look easy.

Right now, Mesa is the best closer in baseball and no small part of the Cleveland Indians' huge success.

"It's a lot easier for us to do our jobs, knowing that he owns the ninth inning," fellow reliever Eric Plunk said. "That's still an awfully tough inning, the toughest inning of all."

Mesa, 29, signed his first professional contract at age 15, and it took him 14 years to find his calling. On Sunday against Milwaukee, Mesa set a single-season major league record with his 37th save in 37 opportunities, breaking the record of 36-in-36 Dennis Eckersley set in 1992 with Oakland.

San Francisco's Rod Beck converted a record 41 chances in a row over three seasons from 1993-95.

In one sense, there's nothing shocking about Mesa's sudden emergence as the game's dominant reliever. His fastball is frequently clocked in the upper 90s and he generally keeps it over the plate.

Yet the Indians, and the Baltimore and Toronto organizations before them, were never quite sure what to make of the big right-hander who threw so hard but produced such mediocre results. A so-so starter for most of his career, Mesa also got mixed reviews after moving to the bullpen last year. And he blew four of his six save chances in 1994.

Desperation — they had no one else — led the Indians to try him as their closer again this spring. They first kicked around the idea of trading for a big-name reliever such as Rick Aguilera or Bryan Harvey, but their budget forced them to see if Mesa was up to it.

"I think it's the most improbable thing anybody can imagine," manager Mike Hargrove said. "But you have to understand the kind of stuff Jose has, and when you really examine it, this is what we were hoping for.

"Jose has always been a strike-thrower, and he was always very durable as a starter. He was always good for six innings, and then he would start tiring and his ball would straighten out."

Now the Indians let Mesa pitch for one inning at a time — no more, no less. He has worked exactly one inning in his last 40 appearances.

The results have been stunning:

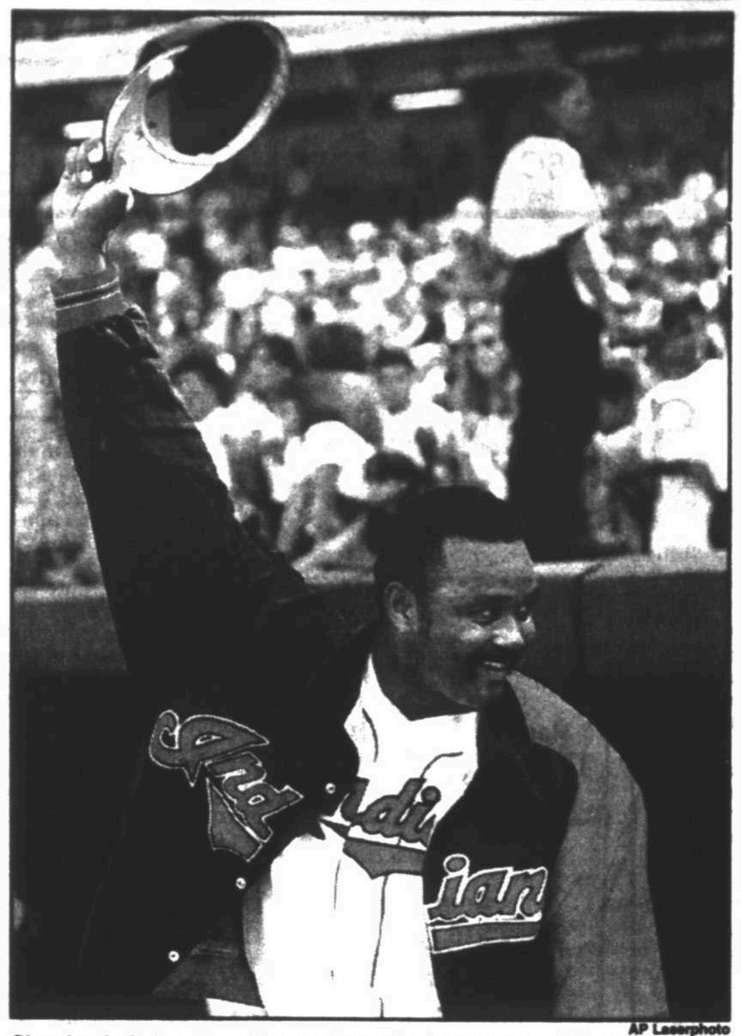

— He hasn't given up an earned run since June 8.

— He hasn't allowed a run of any sort since July 14.

— He has more saves by himself than any other TEAM this year.

— He has twice saved both ends of a doubleheader.

— His ERA is 1.12.

Cleveland pitcher Jose Mesa set a major league record for consecutive saves in a single season with his 37th against Milwaukee Sunday.

Henke now member of 300-save club

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The more he thinks about it, the more Tom Henke seems to like the idea of going out on top.

Henke became the seventh member of the exclusive 300-save club on Friday, is 26-for-27 in save chances and has a 1.71 ERA for the St. Louis Cardinals. He could easily top the $1.5 million contract he's making this year.

Then again, baseball was never just a payday for him. And at age 37, he's wondering if it's time to settle down and be a father and husband. His four children, ranging in age from 14 to 6, are growing up fast and pretty much without him.

"Yeah, I could turn my back on this very easily," Henke said. "People don't understand that this game takes a lot away from your life. You're gone eight months a year."

The Cardinals hope he postpones the inevitable at least one more year. Manager Mike Jorgensen, who had an 18-year playing career, said there was no way he would have retired after the type of year Henke is having.

"Absolutely not," Jorgensen said.

But he also understands that this was initially the plan. One of the reasons Henke signed a free-agent deal with St. Louis is he lives in Taos, Mo., a town of about 800 about a two-hour drive from Busch Stadium. He figured it would be a perfect way to go out, close to home and playing for the team he rooted for as a kid.

"He might have been thinking, 'Wow, this is a great way to finish,'" Jorgensen said. "But he's having an outstanding year he's making the decision tough.

"I'm sure if he's interested, we'd be very interested."

Who wouldn't be? Henke converted a team-record 22 save chances in a row before finally blowing one July 25 at New York.

He has far surpassed last season, when he was hampered by back problems and had only 15 saves for Texas. He needs four saves for his sixth career 30-save year.

COLLEGE: 13 in running for Heisman

(From 1C)

Southeastern-Sugar, SWC-Cotton) have been scrapped, greatly improving the chances of a true national championship game.

"It's the closest we've gotten to a playoff," said Florida State coach Bobby Bowden. "If we could just get the Big Ten and Pac-10 to join in, we could have a 1-2 game every year."

The Fiesta and Rose will pay their teams about $8.5 million apiece, the highest payout in bowl history. While payments are up, the crowded New Year's Day lineup is down to six games — the Rose, Orange, Cotton, Gator, Citrus and Outback (formerly Hall of Fame). The Sugar Bowl, traditionally played Jan. 1, has been moved to New Year's Eve.

If any bowl game is tied at the end of regulation, overtime will be used for the first time. Instead of an NFL sudden-death system, the bowls will use the tiebreaker popularized in lower-division NCAA playoffs.

In overtime, each team gets an offensive series starting at the opponent's 25-yard line. The possession continues until a team scores, turns the ball over or fails to convert a fourth-down play. They keep playing until the tie is broken after each team has had a possession.

Another new rule, designed to reduce taunting and showboating, prohibits players from removing their helmets on the field. A violation results in a 15-yard penalty.

Twenty-one teams have new head coaches, including seven schools that have won national championships in one of the major polls.

Butch Davis takes over at Miami, Lloyd Carr at Michigan, Rick Neuheisel at Colorado, Howard Schnellenberger at Oklahoma, Nick Saban at Michigan State, Gerry DiNardo at LSU, and George O'Leary at Georgia Tech.

Schnellenberger, who coached Miami to the national title in 1983, says job turnover "goes with the territory." But Bowden, who guided Florida State to the national championship in 1993, thinks the growing pressure to win makes it more difficult for coaches to stay in one place for a long time.

"It keeps growing and growing, and I don't see it turning around the other way," he said.

The season opens Aug. 26 at Michigan Stadium in Ann Arbor, where the Wolverines play Virginia in the Pigskin Classic. The following day, Ohio State meets Boston College in the Kickoff Classic at Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J.

All four teams are expected to go to bowls. The expectations aren't quite so lofty at Ohio University and Iowa State, which meet Aug. 31 in a contest between the only two winless teams in Division I-A last season.

Another noteworthy date is Sept. 30, when Notre Dame visits Ohio State to mark the 60th anniversary of the first "Game of the Century." The Fighting Irish rallied to beat the Buckeyes 18-13 in that battle of unbeatens on a last-minute touchdown pass by Bill Shakespeare, a name and a game for the ages.

Being mentioned as Heisman Trophy contenders are quarterbacks Tommie Frazier of Nebraska, Ron Powlus of Notre Dame, Danny Kanell of Florida State, Danny Wuerffel of Florida, and Peyton Manning of Tennessee; running backs Lawrence Phillips of Nebraska, Leeland McElroy of Texas A&M, Warrick Dunn of Florida State and Stephen Davis of Auburn; and receivers Keyshawn Johnson of Southern Cal, Kevin Jordan of UCLA, Bobby Engram of Penn State and Derrick Mayes of Notre Dame.

They're all offensive players, which shouldn't be surprising. No one-platoon defensive player has ever won the Heisman, and there's no reason to believe this year will be any different.

Dollar falls

NEW YORK — The dollar fell against the Japanese yen Monday and rose against the German mark in thin trading as the market anticipated the possible moves of the U.S. and German central banks this week.

By late Monday in New York the dollar was quoted at 96.87 yen, down from 97.40 yen late Friday. The dollar also was changing hands in New York at 1.4771 marks, up from 1.4760 marks.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Friday: 1.2260 Swiss francs, up from 1.2235; 5.0585 French francs, up from 5.0560; 1,623 Italian lire, down from 1,629; and 1.3593 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3588.

The dollar fell slightly against the British pound, with sterling quoted at $1.5405, up from $1.5404.

Markets dip

NEW YORK — Blue chips tripped over tumbling technology stocks Monday, dumping a sizable gain, and the market ended mostly lower in volatile trading.

The Dow Jones industrial average — which sported double-digit increases for most of the day and was up about 40 points in the morning — abruptly reversed course and ended off 2.82 at 4,614.78.

Gainers outpaced losers by about 13 to 9 on the New York Stock Exchange where volume amounted 303.19 million shares compared to 312.09 million Friday.

Broader indicators similarly deteriorated. At the close, the NYSE composite index was barely ahead at 286.91, up 0.12 while Standard & Poor's 500 list was down 1.10 to 558.11. The American Stock Exchange market value index slid 0.99 to 528.21.

Heavy selling in semiconductor, software and related computer stocks took a toll on the Nasdaq Stock Market. Its composite index lost 11.58 to 1,019.70.

Small firms become more insurable

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

Hundreds of small business owners in the Permian Basin will find the door to insurability open a little wider come September 1, when a provision of the Small Business Health Availability Act of 1993 kicks in.

After that date insurance companies will not longer be able to refuse to write policies for individuals and small businesses because of preexisting conditions or current health status.

"The bottom line is that it will mean some older workers and workers with preexisting conditions will not be left out in the cold when it comes to insurance. They will have an option. It may be a more expensive option, but it will be an option," says Jim Weldman, a spokesman for the National Federation of Independent Businesses (NFIB), which lobbied heavily for the health reform legislation, which was passed in 1993 but deferred guaranteed coverage until September 1 of this year.

Robert Howden, director of the Texas chapter of NFIB said the long-awaited advent of guaranteed issue would lower the barriers for thousands of small business operations seeking access to affordable health care.

Weldman said it would be of benefit to independent geologists, engineers and other consultants in the oilpatch who were displaced by downsizing and without insurance. "While many left corporations with COBRA coverage, it was a bridge to nowhere. This legislation provides a bridge to somewhere — to affordable health coverage."

He said he would like to think that the insurance companies would not try to jack the rates up to make it unaffordable. "We would like for insurers to maintain lower rates, even with the guaranteed issue, but we would also like world peace. ." Weldman said he did not think the rates would go out of sight because other states had demonstrated that guaranteed coverage was not an excuse for excessively higher rates, and insurance companies in Texas would face a hard sell if they tried it.

He added that purchasing alliances would provide individuals and small businesses the buying clout they needed to getting affordable rates, and suggested that businesses interested in joining a purchasing alliance contact the State Insurance Commission in Austin. He also suggested that small businesses contact professional and trade associations to secure the best price for coverage.

He said small business owners should take more time shopping for insurance, that they often spend more time shopping for a copier than insurance.

"At this time we do not see any red flags indicating that rates will be exaggerated by 50 percent or more. But we will just have to wait and see how the insurance companies respond with prices." With more people in the pool and the risk spread wider, Weldman says the rates should remain within reason, even though that will be 15 to 40 percent higher than a corporate rate.

Two important provisions to the bill that will make it possible for more small groups to have insurance coverage are provisions that reduce minimum employee participation from 90 to 75 percent, and a provision that no longer requires employers to pay at least 75 percent of employee premium costs.

Before, noted Howden, a "no" vote by one employee in a four-man business would have meant the entire business would be disqualified — even if the employee voting no was already covered under a spouse's insurance plan. Also, employers willing to pay 50 percent of premium cost, but unable to pay 75 percent often elected not to cover anyone.

The bottom line is that the door to providing Texans with affordable insurance is opening a little wider. "It has been opening slowly for the past two or three years; it is not wide open yet, but it is progress."

Judge signs Microsoft settlement

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge signed a 13-month-old antitrust settlement between Microsoft Corp. and the Justice Department on Monday, ending judicial review made unusually long by another judge's rejection of the agreement.

U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson's order covered a deal under which the software company halted some incentives to computer makers that prosecutors said reduced competition.

The first judge to review the settlement rejected it, but was overturned by an appeals court that sent the matter to Jackson.

Under the deal, Microsoft agreed to stop giving personal computer manufacturers a discount if they paid the company a royalty for each PC sold, even those that didn't have Microsoft's DOS or Windows software. The practice gave PC makers little incentive to install competing programs since they would have had to pay a royalty to both the competitor and Microsoft.

Jackson's approval of the settlement does not free Microsoft from scrutiny, however. A Justice Department attorney, Donald Russell, told Jackson that the government is "investigating certain Microsoft practices to determine whether those practices are in compliance" with the July 1994 bargain.

After the hearing, Microsoft's chief counsel suggested that the government would find nothing wrong.

"We've been in compliance since we entered into the consent decree with the government last July, and we intend to make every effort to continue to be in compliance," William Neukom told reporters.

No immediate interest rate cuts expected

By Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top Federal Reserve policy-makers will not cut interest rates when they meet this week and there may be only one further rate reduction in store before the end of this year, private economists now believe.

If that assessment proves correct, it will be a disappointment for millions of American borrowers who had hoped interest on their home-equity loans and other variable-rate loans might be headed down more quickly.

"I don't believe there will be any change in interest rates this week although there will be a lively discussion on Fed policy in light of an improvement in the economy and better-than-expected inflation prospects," said Allen Sinai, chief economist at Lehman Brothers Global Economics in New York.

The central bank's Federal Open Market Committee, composed of Fed governors in Washington and five of the Fed's 12 regional bank presidents, convenes Tuesday to review economic developments since the last meeting July 5-6.

At that time, the central bank announced its first reduction in interest rates in nearly three years, cutting its target for the federal funds rate, the interest that banks charge each other, from 6 percent down to 5.75 percent.

The move triggered euphoria in financial markets with the stock market rallying by 48 points on the day of the announcement.

The Fed's move was quickly matched by a similar cut in the prime lending rate, the benchmark for millions of business and consumer loans. Analysts predicted further rate cuts were on the way, probably as early as the Fed's next meeting in August.

But the central bank barely had made its announcement when the economic storm clouds began to clear.

On July 19, Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan told Congress he believed the economy had passed "the point of maximum risk" of a recession. Those comments and other signs that the economy is rebounding after coming to a near halt in the spring have convinced analysts that the central bank will not cut rates much further.

Turner board plans CBS bid

By N.Y.Times News Service

Atlanta — Turner Broadcasting System Inc.'s directors scrapped a plan to acquire King World Productions Inc. and agreed to explore a bid for CBS Inc., according to two people close to the company.

During a special meeting that lasted more than two hours, Turner's board decided not to proceed with a $1.7 billion stock swap purchase of King World, which syndicates the "Oprah Winfrey Show" and "Jeopardy!" television programs.

The acquisition would have given Atlanta-based Turner an almost $500 million cash hoard and enough cash flow to help the company borrow additional money.

That money was to be earmarked either to help Turner launch a challenge to Westinghouse Electric Corp.'s planned $5.4 billion acquisition of CBS or to buy back Time Warner Inc.'s 18.4 percent stake in Turner.

Turner's board scrapped the acquisition of King World because Turner has received Time Warner's support to plan a bid for CBS, eliminating the need to buy Time Warner's stake, according to one executive close to the company.

The board, controlled by executives at Time Warner and Tele-Communications Inc., which owns 21 percent of Turner stock, gave Chairman Ted Turner the green light to plan a bid for CBS.

Turner has been trying for more than 10 years to add a network to his array of cable TV holdings that include Cable News Network, Turner Network Television and the Cartoon Network.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Gift to Minors act regulate stock bought for child

By Bill Doyle

Q: My 10-year-old granddaughter has a birthday coming up. I would like to buy one or two shares of stock in her name, in order to further her education.

How can I do this? Can I do it without paying a broker's fee?

Doyle

A: When buying stock for a youngster, you should have the shares registered in the form specified by the Uniform Gifts to Minors Act or the newer Uniform Transfers to Minors Act — in an adult's name, as custodian for the child.

Although used by other relatives and family friends, so many grandparents use the Gifts to Minors and Transfers to Minors laws that those pieces of legislation have been nicknamed "grandparents' best friends."

You can always buy one or two shares of any stock by placing an order with a broker. However, unless that broker is a dear friend, you can expect to pay a commission, which might be stiff, and an odd-lot fee of either 12 1/2 or 25 cents per share.

Some companies — about three dozen, and their ranks are growing — sell shares directly to new investors, thus avoiding brokers and their costs. But most of those companies insist on initial investments of $250 or more — which might be stiff for your purposes.

You can buy shares of true no-load mutual funds. Most such funds ask for $1,000 to open an account, but some accept $250 or less.

My recommendation is to go the true no-load fund route. Besides avoiding all brokerage costs, your gift money would buy full and fractional shares to the third decimal place. Set up the account to reinvest dividends and capital-gains distributions.

See to it that your granddaughter reads the fund's prospectus and shareholder reports. She'll get an education and, most likely, a profitable investment.

Q: When setting up a savings or investment account for two young children, should they both be named on the account?

A: No. Both the Gifts to Minors Act and the Transfers to Minors Act specify that only one minor and one custodian be named on each account. With two children as recipients of gifts, you would have to set up to two accounts.

Q: I have accounts in two tax-free unit investment trusts and would like to leave one to each of my two nieces.

Does this have to be stated in my will?

A: That's one way to do it — probably the best way. When your estate is settled after you leave this vale of tears, each niece would become the owner of the investment trust units you willed to her.

You could name each niece joint owner of one of the unit trust accounts right now. Then, each would become sole owner upon your death.

But, if you ever have a falling out with a niece, you would not be able to remove her name from joint ownership without her consent.

My advice is to leave the accounts and any other assets to your nieces and other heirs via your will.

Q: In a recent column on gift-giving by a husband and wife, you wrote, "Each of you can give up to $10,000 annually to each of as many people as you please, without any requirement for filing a federal gift tax return. Make the gifts jointly — so-called split gifts — and that number doubles to each gift recipient annually."

I don't quite understand. How do the words "jointly" and "split gifts" allow a person to increase the limit on nonreportable gifts from $10,000 to $20,000?

A: They don't allow one person to do that. But they do permit a husband and wife to do so.

You can give up to $10,000 in cash, securities or any other assets to as many people as your generosity allows each and every year without filing a federal gift tax return, Form 709.

Your spouse can do the same thing. So, if you each give $10,000 to the same person, that fortunate recipient gets a total of $20,000 from two separate gifts.
