Reagan to comment on Reykjavik summit

■ Americans react to arms talks — 5A

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON — President Reagan reports to the American people tonight on the frustrating failure at the Reykjavik summit, where potential agreement on a sweeping arms treaty fell apart over "Star Wars" testing and dashed plans for another meeting between Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

The two-day meeting at the little house on Reykjavik Bay was one of the most disappointing superpower encounters of the post-war generation, and in the downbeat aftermath, there were recriminations all around.

Following the suspenseful final act, Gorbachev said it "would have taken a madman" to accept Reagan's proposals. Soviet official Georgi Arbatov blamed the United States for an arms control "dead end."

White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan said: "The Soviets are the ones who refused to make a deal. It shows them up for what they are. The Soviets finally showed their hand."

After bidding farewell to Gorbachev, Reagan flew back to Washington late Sunday. Asked for comment on his trip upon returning to the White House, Reagan said: "Tune in tomorrow night."

The Communist Party chief and his wife, Raisa, flew back to Moscow today aboard their Aeroflot flyushin 62 M. He did not make a departure statement.

Reagan plans to deliver a speech today from the Oval Office of the White House, beginning at 8 p.m. EDT.

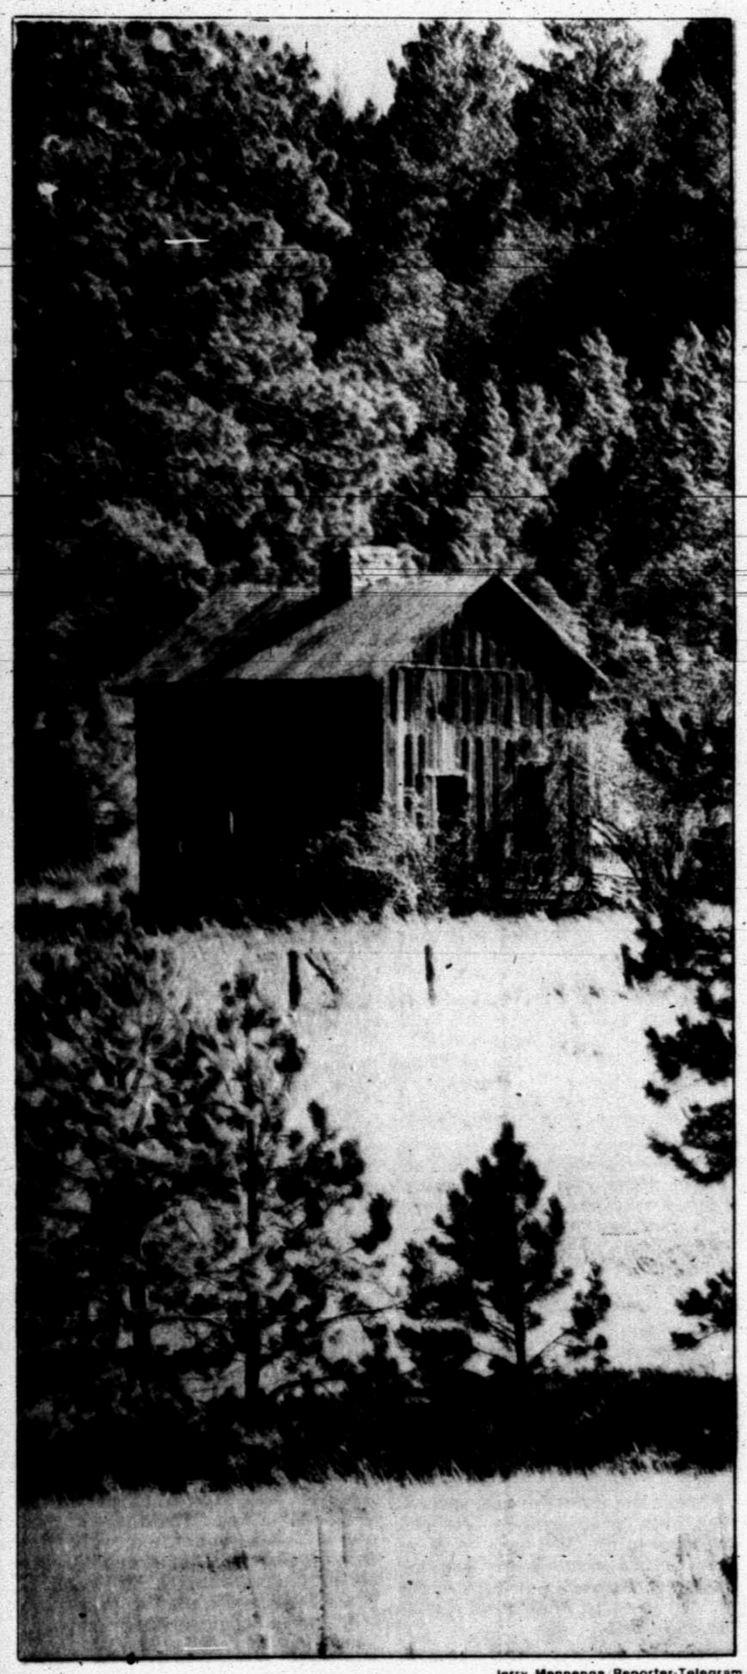

The dramatic discouraging climax of the summit came after the two sides had reached a surprising agreement to eliminate all nuclear ballistic missiles within 10 years only to have this understanding evaporate over the issue of testing "Star Wars," the president's Strategic Defense Initiative.

Still, amid the mutual blame fixing, the president's adviser for national security affairs, Vice Adm. John Poindexter, suggested the two sides do not regard Reykjavik as the last word.

Poindexter, fatigued, rumpled and unshaven as he spoke to reporters after the marathon talks in Iceland, said the United States will reassess what happened and has received assurances the Soviets will do the same.

Said Gorbachev: "Let us not despair. I'm sure that not everything has been lost."

Texans move to aid quake victims

Associated Press

Texas merchants, mindful of the relief needs after last year's devastating Mexico City earthquake, moved quickly to begin collecting supplies and donations to aid the victims of Friday's tremor in El Salvador.

The official death toll now stands at 890, with many still missing and more than 1,000 injured.

"We helped the people of the Mexico earthquake and we want to help the Salvadorans as well," said Eddie Garcia, the owner of a Fort Worth record store.

Many of the people making donations were Salvadorans, Garcia told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

He collected several hundred dollars from customers in just a few hours on Saturday. Clothing, food and other items also were piling up in his shop, which stayed open on Sunday.

Several other locations in the Dallas-Fort Worth area also were accepting contributions of money and goods for eventual distribution by the Red Cross.

Spanish language radio station KESS-FM was interrupting regular programming with news updates about the Salvadoran quake and pleas for donations.

More than $6,000 was collected by late Saturday at a restaurant where the station was conducting a remote broadcast.

In Houston, where the Salvadoran community numbers about 80,000, radio stations also were helping coordinate the relief effort.

"We've had a great response," said Nohemy Rios, a spokeswoman for El Salvador's consular office. She said one Cuban businessman donated $50,000 worth of medicine.

"We're asking for things the Red Cross wants, like oxygen, anesthesia and antibiotics," Rios explained. "Right now, blood and plasma are one of the major things."

Luis Escalon, a member of the consulate's economic committee, said today that donations included $50,000 in medical supplies from a Houston businessman.

The consulate also had collected more than $65,000, which it planned to use for buying more medical supplies for the quake victims, he said.

Salvadoran refugees in Houston also sought information from the consulate on the fate of their relatives in the Central American country.

The International Red Cross estimates at least 350 people were killed, 6,800 injured and another 20,000 left homeless.

"People are very scared," Rios said. "There is still a lot of tragedy in El Salvador, but they're responding well. They're helping."

She said the Houston consulate would collect the inquiries and inform residents after hearing from authorities in El Salvador.

Telephone service and other communications disrupted by the quake were gradually being restored on Sunday.

"One always imagines the worst," said Eduardo Martinez Angel, as he donated to relief efforts at a Dallas location.

One Texan among police chief finalists

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Finalists for the job as Midland police chief include one Texan and a colonel in the Miami Police Department, according to city officials who received the names of the finalists and background information on them early today.

City Manager James Brown said this morning that he had not had a chance to study the files of the four men, who were recommended for the job by personnel consultant Bruce Jensen.

"No, I really haven't had a chance — we just received the information here (at City Hall) a little while ago," Brown said.

He said the finalists would be in the city later this week for interviews.

The finalists for the position are James McLaughlin, Jr., 42, who is currently the director of police service in Longview. McLaughlin has a bachelor of science degree from the University of Texas at Tyler.

The second finalist is 44-year-old Kenneth R. Harrison, Sr., currently a Miami police colonel. Harrison received a master of science degree with a major in management in 1979 from Biscayne College in Miami. He received a bachelor of business administration degree from the University of Miami in 1975, and in 1969 he received an associate degree from Miami Dade Community College.

The current police chief of Durham, N.C., also is a finalist. Talmadge Herdon Lassiter, 51, received a bachelor of science degree in criminal justice from Guilford College in Greensboro, N.C.

The fourth finalist for the job is Richard L. Czech, 53, currently commander of the operation support bureau in the Tucson Police Department. Czech has a bachelor of science degree in public administration from the University of Arizona, and a master's degree in management from St. Mary's College.

Jensen, who was hired by the city for $15,000 to select the finalists, said a fifth finalist for the job withdrew his application for personal reasons.

Brown said the finalists will be in Midland probably Wednesday, and said interviews with he Deputy City Manager Fred Poe, and members of the City Council will be conducted Friday in a special executive session.

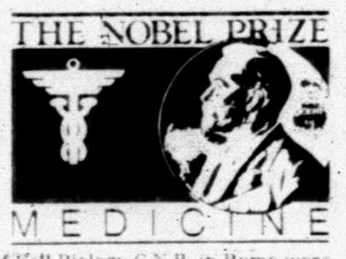

Brown said he hopes a new chief can be chosen by this weekend.

Jensen, partner in the Bellevue, Wash., firm Jensen-Oldani, conducted the four-month search. He said the firm sent out more than 600 letters to law enforcement officials nationwide advertising the position, and received more than 70 applications.

The search was initiated after the resignation of long-time chief Wayne Gideon. Gideon, who left office July 1, was replaced by Maj. Sid Corley who has served as interim chief since then.

Corley, 53, was one of four local applicants for the position, but none were recommended by Jensen as finalists. The others were Capt. Clayton McKinney, 46, head of criminal investigation at the Midland County Sheriff's office; Bob Peetz, 38, coordinator of the criminal justice program at Midland College; and Patrick Fuller, 36, investigator in the Midland County District Attorney's office.

Biochemist, biologist share medical prize

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — An American biochemist and an Italian-American developmental biologist won the 1986 Nobel Prize in medicine today for their work contributing to the understanding and eventual treatment of cancerous tumors, senility and other conditions.

Stanley Cohen, a researcher at the Vanderbilt University School of Medicine in Nashville, Tenn., and Rita Levi-Montalcini of the Institute of Cell Biology C.N.R. in Rome were cited by the Nobel Assembly of Stockholm's Karolinska Institute for their discoveries of mechanisms regulating cell and organ growth.

The two, who worked together during the 1960s, have discovered bodies called "growth factors."

The awarding assembly said the discovery of growth factors was expected in the near future to result in new drugs and improved treatment of various diseases.

The two winners will split a cash stipend of 2 million Swedish kronor, about $250,000 at the current rate of exchange.

Wet cold front carries season's first snow to Texas Panhandle

AMARILLO (AP) — A cold front that moved into Texas brought an early winter to the Panhandle, trapped several San Antonio residents in high waters and left as many as 60,000 Houston residents without power.

At least one storm-related death was reported — a drowning in Austin.

The National Weather Service said the front moved into Brownsville late Sunday afternoon abruptly ending the South Texas city's 90-degree weather. But by late Sunday night, the chilly polar air moved out to sea and warmer readings were expected to return.

Scattered snow showers fell off and on Sunday afternoon, especially from just east of Amarillo to north of Tulia. The heaviest snow showers were falling near Palo Duro State Park.

Temperatures plummeted below freezing and snowflakes laced ice-gray skies.

In most Panhandle communities, the big chill was accompanied by scattered snow flurries though none of the flakes lingered long on still-warm streets, businesses, lawns and homes.

Media aides give race high-tech flavor

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Like 19th century Texas politicians, the candidates still troop to turkey shoots in Troup, shake hands and kiss babies in Happy, eat barbecue and deliver courthouse speeches in Cotulla.

Like 20th century Texas politicians, they still buy millions of dollars of advertising time and space on radio and television stations and newspapers from Amarillo to Brownsville, El Paso to Orange.

But 14 years before the 21st century, the multi-million-dollar campaign for the Texas Governors Mansion has taken on a decidedly high-tech tone. Advertising still consumes much of the money, but over the past three months Mark White and Bill Clements have spent at least $900,000 on sophisticated voter surveys, highly targetted direct mail, phone banks and media consultants.

Each camp has hired a high-priced consultant to coordinate the space-age campaign. The two men — both in their mid-30s, both fast-talking, both highly enthusiastic about the key role they play — at first appear surprisingly similar. Deeper digging reveals two zealots as different as White and Clements themselves.

Usually quiet and busy behind the scenes, Karl Rove and Harris Diamond burst into public this week as campaign issues in their own right with the discovery of an electronic bug in Rove's office.

Rove, the Austin-based "direct-mail guru" who also supervises media, polling and strategy for Clements, traces leaks of campaign intelligence to Diamond. Diamond, White's $11,000-a-month consultant from Brooklyn, claims the Republicans' secrets are really public knowledge.

A black smudge of leftover Federal Bureau of Investigation fingerprint dust surrounds a naked picture hook on a pillar behind Rove's desk. Until last Sunday, a red, white and blue needlepoint picture of a Republican elephant hung on that hook. A Fort Worth security firm found the matchbook-sized bug attatched to the bag of the picture.

"I cannot say to you, 'This action by somebody is evidence that they knew about a particular phone conversation,'" Rove says when asked what motivated him to order the electronic sweep of his office last weekend.

"I can say to you that there are specific instances of people talking about things — Harris Diamond being the key example — that are evidence to me that somebody conveyed information that was available only by listening in on a conversation between (Clements campaign manager) George Bayoud and me."

Diamond says he wanted to "break the telephone" Tuesday when he heard the Clements campaign had linked him to the bugging. "It was a bunch of B.S.," he says.

"This is public information, and they were trying to claim it wasn't. It was an upsetting point. It's probably the most upsetting point I've had in six years, actually."

Diet Pill System Sweeping U.S.

Super Dream Pill
Guaranteed Weight Loss

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH — An amazing new super Dream Pill System has recently been perfected that guarantees rapid weight loss. Best of all, it allows you to eat your favorite foods while losing weight from the very first day until you achieve your ideal weight and figure.

The Dream Pill System features the extraordinary Dream Pill. The Dream Pill combines natural substances L-arginine, L-lysine and L-ornithine which can stimulate the body's production of growth hormone. Dr. Robert Harris, a specialist in nutritional medicine was recently quoted as explaining: "Growth Hormone may be what's responsible for allowing teenagers to down thousands of calories in hamburgers and other foods and still be thin as a rail."

"Growth Hormone is present in people up through the teenage years, then slowly diminishes with age. But L-arginine and L-ornithine make the body 'think' it belongs to a teenager again, allowing adults to eat as much as they want — and still be thin and wiry."

Life Extension Authors Confirm Results

Durk Pearson and Sandy Shaw, graduates of MIT and UCLA respectively, introduced these miracle substances to the public in their runaway best selling book, Life Extension. They discovered the weight-loss effects by accident. Sandy fell and broke her foot and started taking L-arginine because of its well-known healing qualities. Much to her amazement Sandy lost 25 pounds of fat and put on 5 pounds of firm-toned muscle in six weeks. According to Durk's calculations, the pill caused Sandy to lose 400 times as much fat as she would otherwise have lost — without dieting!

Extraordinary Guarantee

Yet, the sense of disappointment Sunday was palpable. White House spokesman Larry Speakes, using terminology appropriate to the autumn season, said the two sides "went 99 yards...but we didn't cross the goal line" despite Sunday's five-hour overtime session between Reagan and Gorbachev.

Western allies, briefed in Brussels today by Secretary of State George Shultz, urged the superpowers to resume talks in areas where progress was achieved before the summit collapsed.

The 16-member NATO Council said, "Opportunity to make progress in some areas should not be made hostage to difficulties in other, unrelated ones."

Meanwhile, White House communications director Pat Buchanan predicted today the Soviets "will drum up the international communist propaganda apparatus" to create pressure for abandoning Star Wars.

"If the American people and the American Congress will move right now to give Ronald Reagan full funding for SDI, the Soviets will come back to the bargaining table," Buchanan said on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America."

Kenneth Adelman, director of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, called the summit "a big step forward — if the Soviets follow through on what they agreed on at Reykjavik.

"They gave us the outlines of something that is very workable and do-able in a relatively brief period of time to get us on the road to eliminate this entire class of weapons systems (medium-range missiles)," Adelman said on NBC-TV's "Today" show.

He said the Soviets are still "very interested in dealing with this president and this presidency. They know that he has the confidence of the American people on security issues and they know he can deliver the goods."

Iceland had been billed as an interim stop en route to a full-blown Reagan-Gorbachev summit, but Sunday's failure appeared to squelch that possibility for now.

Said Regan, "There will not be another summit in the near future that I can see at this time."

The failure was all the more disappointing given the progress the two sides had made during the initial stages of the talks toward an agreement to slash nuclear armaments.

The first hint that a breakthrough might be at hand occurred Sunday morning when Soviet arms control expert Yevgeny Velikhov broke the news blackout. He told a British Broadcasting Corp. interviewer that American and Soviet staff aides had made progress toward an agreement on reducing long-range and intermediate nuclear missiles.

The interview was broadcast in London, picked up by news agencies and sent around the world. These high expectations were fueled by the announcement that Reagan and Gorbachev were extending their Sunday meeting beyond the planned two-hour session.

But the high expectations were quickly dispelled in the evening when, after 7½ hours of meeting, Reagan and Gorbachev bade each other farewell with a pro forma handshake and no smiles.

A short while later, Shultz confirmed the collapse of the talks. Speaking in somber tones, he gave the good news first, noting that the two sides had verbally agreed to slash long-range missile and bomber aresenals in half in five years and completely by 1996.

In addition, they were prepared to eliminate all but 100 warheads on medium-range missiles on each side — including all those deployed in Europe — during the first five-year phase and the balance of those in 1996 as well, Shultz said.

He then gave the disappointing news. "A tremendous amount of headway was made," he told a news conference, "but in the end we couldn't make it."

In Gorbachev's account, he said he had made "very serious, unprecedented concessions and accepted compromises that are unprecedented." In the end, he said, there was a "rupture" over American insistence on being allowed to test space weapons outside the laboratory.

"Who was going to accept that?" he said. "It would have taken a madman to accept that."

Reagan, talking to American military personnel at Keflavik Naval Air Base just before he boarded Air Force One for the nearly six-hour ride back to Washington, said the two sides had "moved toward agreement" on drastic weapons reductions.

But, the president said, "There remained at the end of our talks one area of disagreement.... The Soviet Union insisted that we sign an agreement that would deny to me and to future presidents for 10 years the right to develop, test and deploy a defense against nuclear missiles for the people of the free world.... This we could not and will not do."

The meeting showed that Reagan is as committed — and the Soviets as opposed — as ever to his Star Wars proposal, first unveiled 3½ years ago, to make nuclear weapons obsolete through the creation of an impenetrable defensive shield.

The Soviets have maintained consistently that Reagan's secret agenda is to make Soviet weapons impotent and give the United States a first strike capability.

Shultz said that during the talks it became "more and more clear that the Soviet Union's objective was effectively to kill off the SDI program, and to do so by seeking a change in the ABM treaty that would so constrain...that research would not be able to proceed forcefully."

Poindexter denied that Reagan was inflexible on Star Wars, noting that the president was willing to withhold deployment for 10 years.

He said the administration fails to see "how defensive systems could possibly be seen as a threat in the Soviet Union."

"We do not understand what the Soviets are afraid of and why they would not agree to the president's proposals," he said.

Reagan and Gorbachev went to Reykjavik hoping to make arrangements for a more formal summit meeting in the United States. But amid the discussions on arms control, Shultz said, there was almost no discussion of a U.S. visit by Gorbachev.

The way for the formal summit appeared to have been cleared in late September when the two countries resolved a diplomatic dilemma brought on by the arrests of a Soviet physicist, Gennadiy Zakharov, in New York, and an American journalist, Nicholas Daniloff, in Moscow.

Since the two were swapped to freedom, Shultz had hinted that prospects for a Gorbachev visit were bright, and both sides seemed eager to set a date.

The 33-year-old Diamond, who runs a one-man political consulting firm in Brooklyn, hired on to the White campaign in early June. He sits behind his desk with collar open and hair mussed, his hands moving almost as fast as his mouth, describing his job.

"In areas, nowadays, campaigns have become very technologically oriented, like anything else, they've become specialized to a tremendous extent," Diamond says. "For example, direct mail — how you do it and where it's done is a technical process more so than any type of a political process. The same with polling.

"Putting together all the different components of the campaign today requires somebody who has the sense and the knowledge of all these different areas. We specialize in doing this."

Rove, 35, served as deputy chief of staff to then-Gov. Clements until 1981, when he left to start his own direct-mail and consulting firm. His first assignment: the kickoff for Clements' unsuccessful 1982 re-election bid against White.

His firm, Rove + + Co., now employs 13 and provides sophisticated direct-mail services to more than 40 clients — political and otherwise. Rove says the increasing cost and declining audience of network television means candidates must spread their message over other media — and turn to specialists such as him for help.

"It's forcing a lot of campaigns to think of other ways to deliver their messages, whether it's radio or, direct mail or by more-carefully honed TV," he says. "That's making our business more complex. It's good for me."

Over the past three months, secretary of state's office records show, Clements has paid Rove $320,000 for his consulting and direct-mail work.

In horn-rimmed glasses and a starched, pink, buttoned-down shirt, Rove enthusiastically shows visitors the massive computer system in the process of spitting out 88,000 personalized letters for Missouri Gov. Kit Bond's campaign for the U.S. Senate.

Like Rove's other political clients, Bond is a Republican. "I'm philosophically motivated," Rove says. "I'm motivated in this because I believe in the broad, general principles that you identify as Republican."

At White headquarters, Diamond responds in kind. "I only do Democrats," he says bluntly. "(Clements') philosophy, his political leanings and his record would preclude me from working for him."

Diamond and Rove keep close tabs on each other, particularly in terms of TV advertising purchases. That's where the bug in Rove's office comes back into the story. Rove maintains that Diamond knew and told a reporter information about Clements' "media buys," information that could have come only from conversations overheard in Rove's office.

He worries that other sensitive information concerning Clements' polls, advertising plans and campaign strategy may have leaked as well: "All of that would be useful information for somebody to know."

Diamond denies any link to the bug, claims the advertising detail is public knowledge and disputes Rove's claim about the value of a consultant's secrecy.

"The business is one nowadays where the campaign's in the public," he says. "It's what the candidate has to say, it's what you're putting on the air and that's information that's publicly available."

"It's not confidentiality," Diamond adds. "But I'd be appalled if somebody bugged my office."

Endocrinology professor Kerstin Hall, a member of the Nobel Assembly, said at a news conference that the prize was awarded to the two researchers decades after their discoveries because "only in the last 10 years or so have the meaning of these results been investigated."

"We now stand at the threshold of being able to use this clinically," she said.

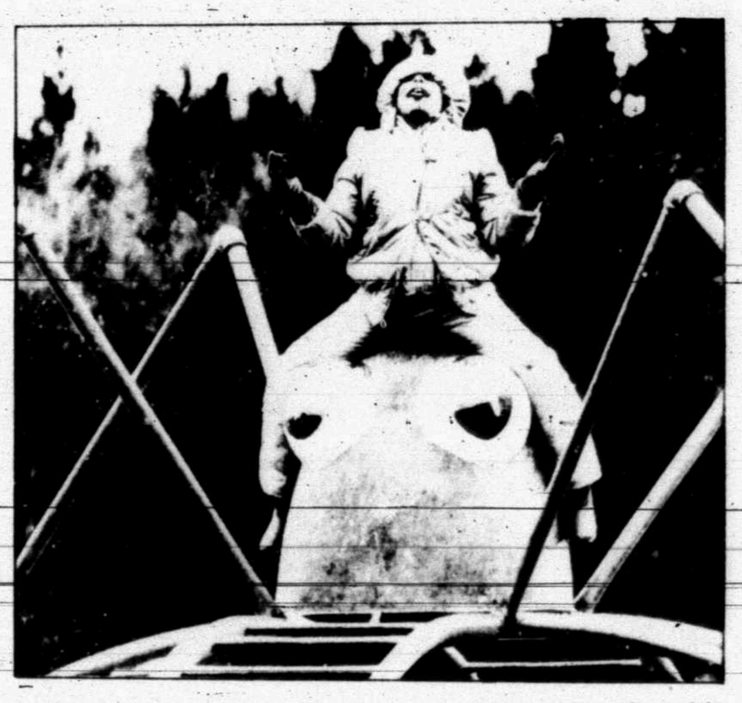

"Also, in the last decade the number of growth factors discovered has risen explosively." She said medical science now knew of 40 to 50 growth factors, thanks largely to the pioneering research of this year's winners.

The citation said Levi-Montalcini's discovery of "nerve growth factor," or NGF, was "a fascinating example of how a skilled observer can create a concept out of apparent chaos."

Ms. Levi-Montalcini, 77, was born in Italy but worked for many years in the United States. She holds dual Italian and American citizenship.

When Ms. Levi-Montalcini moved from Italy in the early 1950's to join the Viktor Hamburger Laboratory in St. Louis, Missouri, neurobiologists did not understand how the development of the nervous system was regulated, Nobel officials said.

She demonstrated in 1952 that when tumors from mice were transplanted to chicken embryos they induced rapid growth of the embryonic nervous system, the statement said.

The body of a man was found in the floodwater of a creek after thunderstorms dumped more than 3½ inches of rain on Austin on Sunday. Police said today the man had been identified but the name was withheld until relatives were notified.

Detectives said the man was found face down Sunday afternoon in a creek off Riverside Drive in South Austin. Officers said there were no signs of violence.

The storms sent as much as four feet of water into some streets of East Austin and flooded several units of a housing project.

The front brought more than 2 inches of rain to San Antonio Sunday, sending firefighters to rescue as many as eight people stranded in flood waters.

An hour-and-a-half before a 9 a.m. train, San Antonio firefighters dropped ropes from a railroad trestle to rescue a 30-year-old man and his 9-year-old daughter trapped in Salado Creek.

The crossing was the site of a June 8 train derailment that officials say was caused by heavy rains that weakened the trestle.

In Houston, as many as 60,000 were without electric power because of high winds packed with gusts as high as 55 mph, Jeri Konigsberg, Houston Lighting & Power spokeswoman, said Monday.

She said the high winds toppled a transformer at a substation, shutting off power to the residents at about 6:30 a.m.

At 1 p.m. Sunday, an hour after the start of the Chicago Bears-Houston Oilers football game, 40,000 Houston residents were without power.

"The complaints were not too bad during the Oilers game," she said.

Section of North A collapses during rain

From Staff Reports

Heavy rains over the past several weeks have caused a 400-foot strip of pavement in the 2600 block of N. A Street to collapse and it may be more than a week before workers can repair the damage, Midland city officials said today.

Public Works Director Fred Baker said the pavement has collapsed as much as 18 inches since the rains began to fall last month.

"We were putting in a storm sewer and that was open when the rains came, Baker said. "The ditch for the storm sewere connected with the sanitary sewer line and when the water drained into the backfill area, it caused the cave-in that we're seeing.

Baker said engineers currently are surveying the damage, but he could not estimate the cost of the repairs.

Workers should begin repairing the street within the next few days, he said.

OPEC resumes talks on oil controls

GENEVA (AP) — OPEC entered a second week of deliberations over production controls today amid mixed signals on the eventual outcome of a meeting that could determine the course of oil prices for the next several months.

Some officials said the cartel had made modest progress toward a new production agreement during the first seven days of talks. Yet there seemed to be little prospect of a final agreement before mid-week, if at all.

Without some sort of production control agreement by OPEC members, oil prices were expected to fall again, possibly below $10 a barrel, from their current range of $14 to $16 a barrel, economists say.

Today's session began with the ministers of Nigeria, Indonesia and the United Arab Emirates reviewing the results of weekend deliberations by OPEC's technical advisers. The full conference was expected to resume in the afternoon or on Tuesday morning.

While the 13 oil ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries relaxed in their hotel rooms or travelled outside Geneva over the weekend, their advisers prepared a set of recommendations on how to end the cartel's costly deadlock.

But the recommendations included a variety of scenarios and were not expected to receive quick approval from the ministers, according to sources speaking on condition they not be identified.

In an apparent effort to intensify the pressure on its OPEC partners to reach agreement, Kuwait issued a formal statement Sunday underscoring its refusal to abide by a temporary OPEC production accord beyond its Oct. 31 expiration.

Many of the cartel leaders had said during last week's talks that as a last resort they would be willing to extend the temporary accord, which covered September and October only, to Dec. 31 in order to avert a possible new price decline.

Members would prefer to reach a permanent agreement on oil production controls.

Kuwait has stood alone in publicly rejecting the idea of extending the interim accord, although the nation is believed to be supported by Saudi Arabia. Kuwait says it must be given a bigger share of OPEC's overall production, starting Nov. 1.

OPEC currently produces an estimated 16.8 million barrels daily, or about 35 percent of world supplies.

Fawzi Shakshuki, the Libyan oil minister, told reporters Sunday that he felt the cartel had been making progress toward agreement on a permanent system of production controls. He declined to predict how long the ministers would continue their talks.

"We have nice weather, sunshine," he said. "Nobody is in a rush to leave."

A ministerial committee created last Tuesday on the second day of the OPEC meeting — comprised of representatives from Nigeria, Indonesia and the United Arab Emirates — was to meet today to review the recommendations of the cartel's technical advisers.

Man dressed like Rambo leads chase, finally apprehended

PORT ARANSAS (AP) — A man dressed in combat fatigues and armed with three knives and a rifle shot a policeman, led authorities on a wild, 100 mph auto chase on a beach, then escaped for about five hours by diving into a canal and swimming away, officials said.

"Officers on the scene said he looked like Rambo," Corpus Christi Police Capt. Primitivo Rodriguez said. "He was dressed in fatigues and had knives strapped all over him."

Robert Lynn Cooper, 31, a Port Aransas police officer, was shot four times in the back around 4:30 a.m. Sunday after stopping the Rambo-like character for driving erratically on the beach, Port Aransas Police Chief Don Perkins said.

Cooper was listed in good condition today at Memorial Medical Center in Corpus Christi, about 20 miles west of Port Aransas.

Two men, one 20 and the other 25 and described as brothers from Killeen, Texas, with criminal records were taken into custody Sunday morning, police said. Charges were expected to be filed against them today, Perkins said. Both were in cars that had been reported stolen, Perkins said.

Authorities said Cooper had stopped the first car and noticed the Rambo-like appearance of the driver when a second car drove up. Its driver shot Cooper two or three times in the back with a .22-caliber pistol, officers said.

Cooper returned fire, striking the second man once in the leg and once in the foot, but the first suspect then opened fire, hitting Cooper again in the back before driving off, Perkins said.

STATE

Backup units from at least five law enforcement groups joined in the chase, which reached speeds in excess of 100 mph on the beach, said Dee Wayne Mathews, a constable. Other officers took the man who remained behind into custody.

Mathews' deputy chased the fleeing car south on the beach for about 10 miles, the constable said.

"My deputy was going in excess of 100 miles per hour on the beach and he couldn't keep up," Mathews told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times.

Corpus Christi Police units tried to set up a roadblock at park roads 53 and 22, but the suspect made no attempt to stop, Mathews said. The man lost control of his car, and it flipped over as it entered a subdivision, Mathews said.

The man then got out and ran, and was wounded superficially with a shot by a Corpus Christi police officer, but escaped by jumping into the water, officers said.

Texas Rangers, police department scuba divers and a helicopter from the Department of Public Safety joined in a manhunt. At 9:20 a.m. police officers spotted the suspect hiding beneath a canal seawall, officers said.

The suspect again jumped into the water and tried to swim away, but an officer jumped in after him and captured him, officers added.

The man was treated for his gunshot wound at the same hospital as Cooper, then was taken to Corpus Christi City Jail. The other suspect was listed in satisfactory condition at the hospital.

The brother clad in camouflage gear carried a 22-caliber rifle, an 11-blade Swiss Army knife, a 9½-inch hunting knife and a camouflage knife strapped to his leg, officials said. Officers also found a camouflage makeup kit in the man's pocket, they said.

The second man was arrested at the scene by backup police units from Port Aransas. Officers found burglary tools and plastic explosives in his car, Perkins said.

Perkins said he was still trying to determine why they were carrying explosives and weapons.

"I assume they were going after a safe somewhere," Perkins said of the confiscated explosives. "We have information that they may have been ready to steal a boat."

Salvage yard keeper of sad auto stories

By DAVE SAELENS

SILSBEE (AP) — Spencer Armour's back yard is full of stories — nearly 1,000. They're sad stories, full of twisted steel and broken glass.

"Every car you see out there is probably a heartache," the soft-spoken businessman says of his 24-acre salvage yard off Texas 327 where flattened Fords and crumpled Chevrolets form a patchwork of mangled metal.

"People get real attached to their cars, like puppy dogs sometimes." But the story behind Armour and his giant auto graveyard is anything but sad. It's a tale of a Louisiana native who bought a wrecked 1953 Oldsmobile from its owner 26 years ago for $16.50. The simple transaction prompted the youth to invest every nickel and minute in a risky business venture that became one of the largest auto salvage yards this side of Waco.

"I guess like any other business, you just can't be afraid to take risks now and then," Armour says from a giant warehouse that has stored parts off everything from Ramblers to RX7s. "But what you really need to make it in this business is a good memory."

Take a look down the giant warehouse at Armour J. Auto Salvage and you'll know why. Everything from hub caps to engine blocks neatly line steel and wooden shelves throughout 13 buildings that make up the storehouse. Dusty tires fill one room, stacked in long black rows up to the roof. A path of disk brakes resembling a million rusty Frisbees leads into another room where exhaust pipes hang in rows like iron curtains.

"Really, I'm a perfectionist. And of all things for a perfectionist to get into but a salvage yard," Armour laughs.

The "zoot" of a drill removing bolts from a car echoes in the distance, and the clash of metal against a cement floor shatters the stillness inside the dimly-lit warehouse. Though he's quick to take credit for the business side of his business, Armour says he's mostly thumbs when it comes to being a grease monkey.

"You give me a box of wrenches and I probably wouldn't be able to fix a thing," he laughs, describing how engines have become so complicated that it now takes skilled mechanics to take them apart.

A car enthusiast at heart, Armour has watched the auto industry change drastically through the years along with the contents of his yard. Bodies of '57 Chevies gave way to '65 T-birds and '73 Pinto bodies were replaced by '85 Camaros.

"I guess the hardest part of the business is keeping current with all the new kinds of cars," he says, surveying a room of engine blocks stacked to the aluminum ceiling like Tinker Toys. "You've got to be a pretty sharp cookie to keep up with all the new changes."

It's a fickle market that keeps Armour in business. "Just about the time I couldn't keep enough big cars in stock the economy switched and I couldn't give them away," he said. "And for a while we looked like Pinto headquarters," he said, reflecting on when Ford recalled the cars for defective gas tanks that sometimes exploded on impact.

Though Armour admits the business often carries the stigma of being slightly shady, he's learned over the years who to deal with. "There are some pretty good businessmen out there," he says, "but there's also a lot of water moccasins."

Armour buys just about all of his cars from insurance companies — cars totaled from accidents or recovered from thefts. "You find all kinds of things inside these cars, from marijuana on," he says recalling how one mechanic found a wrist watch caught under a car's crumpled hood. "I look at some of these wrecks and there's just so much exposed jagged metal, it's amazing to me sometimes to see how anyone got out alive," he says, describing how mechanics often find whiskey bottles and beer cans in the totaled cars.

Students help janitor join his Vietnamese family

AUSTIN (AP) — The students at Lanier High School were in grade school and knew little about the Vietnam War a decade ago when Minh Le escaped from the Southeast Asian country without his family.

Now the student council has started a drive to raise $10,000 to help reunite Le, their school janitor, with the family he was forced to leave behind when he fled Saigon in 1976 as South Vietnam fell to the Communists.

The money would be used to bring Le's family to the United States if they get permission to leave.

Hispanic group opposes immigration compromise

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas state and local governments cannot afford to pay the cost of enforcing proposed new regulations for undocumented aliens, some Hispanic leaders say.

"We need 100 percent reimbursement to state and local governments," Rep. Al Luna, D-Houston, chairman of the Mexican American Legislative Caucus, told a news conference Saturday.

Luna and other Hispanic spokesman held the news conference to voice their opposition to several provisions of the immigration reform measure now in a House-Senate conference committee in Washington.

The Saturday session came after the conference committee in Washington recessed until Tuesday. One of its last moves was to reach tentative agreement limiting how much federal money would go to states and cities for enforcing the act.

"This will still leave state and local government holding the bag for the rest of the cost," Luna said, "after all we have been through in this economic crisis."

Luna said Hispanic organizations want the federal government to pay the entire cost of any compromise bill.

Luna told the news conference he expressed the feelings of the caucus, the Southwest Voters Registration Project, Mexican American Democrats of Texas, and Mexican American Chambers of Commerce concerning the compromise talks.

Willie Velasquez of the voter registration project criticized the House-Senate conference committee for refusing to allow Hispanic organizations to take part in the negotiations.

"They should listen to people from the fastest growing population in the United States," he said.

Luna said Texas Mexican-American leaders will support the immigration bill only if House-Senate negotiators make important changes.

Both House- and Senate-approved bills contain employer sanctions that would make it illegal for employers to hire undocumented persons, Luna said.

"The net result of this provision will be to create a pretext for job discrimination against U.S. citizens like Mexican-Americans who share common ethnic and cultural characterictics with undocumented Hispanics," said Luna.

The Mexican American Legislative Caucus proposed that a House-Senate compromise include anti-discrimination provisions in the employer sanction program and that the program be limited to five years.

The other major objection, Luna said, is a program in the House bill that would permit up to 350,000 alien farm workers who have lived here the past three years to apply for 90-day temporary residence, but not permanent residence.

"Any type of program to import foreign workers to harvest perishable crops must provide full protection of the law, including permanent residence to the workers," Luna said.

The caucus proposed amnesty for undocumented workers who have lived in the United States since 1982.

Luna said the caucus supports a provision of the House bill that would suspend detention and deportation of Salvadoran and Nicaraguan refugees for two years while the problem is studied.

After controversy, ex-mayor still not interested in politics

HOUSTON (AP) — A year after his comments on AIDS stirred a storm of controversy during the mayoral campaign, Louie Welch says he has no desire to return to the political spotlight.

The former five-term mayor told the Houston Chronicle that he has stayed out of the political limelight because he wanted time "to get a little different perspective and a little less pressure."

"I also wanted to remove any possibility from anybody's mind that any speaking I was doing was either politically motivated or politically colored," he said in the Chronicle's Sunday editions.

Welch opposed gay rights and made the moral health of Houston a campaign issue when he ran for mayor last year. The city's gay community was enraged when Welch said one way to control Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome was "to shoot the queers."

The remark was made Oct. 24 as he waited for a live television interview on a four-point program he had suggested to control the spread of AIDS. Welch later said the inadvertently televised wisecrack created a controversy that stripped his campaign of momentum at a crucial point.

"I regret the mike was on," Welch replied when asked if he regretted the incident. "I was joking, killing time. I'm not alone in that. I understand the president does that occasionally."

Welch said he remains angry at the media because reporters focused on his opposition to gay rights instead of the issues he believed were important.

"I could talk about the removal of esplanades and the widening of roads and the recycling of traffic lights, and it wouldn't make a paragraph. But they would go back and recite and recite and recite, over and over again, everything that had ever been said about that incident," he said.

The 67-year-old Welch said he is working as a private consultant or board member for companies ranging from an accounting firm to a hospital. He has just recently started to venture again in the public arena by giving several speeches. Others are scheduled in the next two weeks.

"I'm not looking for issues, but I suspect if we had a crying need for a bond election at this time that I'd be out there beating the drums for support," he said.

But Welch is adamant that his name will never again appear on a ballot.

"I am not in it as a candidate, nor will I ever be," he said. "I can't even think of an appointive job that I would seek or any circumstances that would ever put me in elective office."

If given the chance to repeat the last campaign, Welch said, "I think I would keep on until I got somebody else to run instead of me."

And if that failed, "I'd check the mikes to see when they were on."

Lawyer seemed fatherly, supportive but was convicted in baby selling

DALLAS (AP) — Robin Leann Clark was 21 and pregnant with a third child she didnt' think she could support.

She turned to Robert Kingsley, a 61-year-old lawyer who seemed fatherly and supportive. He said he'd help her find adoptive parents for the baby.

"I trusted him at first," Ms. Clark said. "The first time I met him, we went to the 7-Eleven to get a Coke. It was chilly outside, and he let me wear his coat. And then he paid for my Coke."

But four months later, after she said she told Kingsley she wanted to keep her baby, Ms. Clark, who is separated from her husband, had her baby.

Although she says Kingsley pressured her to sign adoption papers, she refused.

But two days later, Ms. Clark said, without her knowledge, her baby daughter was discharged to Kingsley.

"I didn't even get to see her. I have never seen her," Ms. Clark testified in state district court last week.

In that trial, Kingsley was convicted on a felony charge of baby-buying and sentenced to seven years in prison.

Prosecutors claim he was part of an illegal adoption scheme involving at least 26 mothers over two years.

Kingsley was arrested in July 1985 and adoption documents were confiscated at his office. He is free on $10,000 bond while is case is appealed.

Defense attorney Mike Gibson sought probation for Kingsley, who never took the stand during the trial and who has repeatedly refused requests for interviews.

> "I trusted him at first. ...The first time I met him, we went to the 7-Eleven to get a Coke. It was chilly outside, and he let me wear his coat. And then he paid for my Coke."
> — Robin Leann Clark

Gibson portrayed the silver-haired attorney as a good Samaritan who paid birth mothers their living expenses because they needed the money.

He also said Kingsley didn't know such payments are restricted to medical and legal fees in Texas.

A graduate of the University of Pittsburgh's law school, Kingsley was licensed to practice law in Texas in 1967. He became a general practice lawyer who handled mostly bankruptcy cases.

By 1984 he had expanded his practice to include private adoptions.

He had no previous criminal record but was reprimanded by the state bar in February for accepting payment from a client for services not performed.

Most of his clients were young women who had conceived illegitimate children and who found him either word of mouth or through telephone listings, authorities said. Kingsley paid their living and medical expenses.

Authorities allege the private adoptions turned into a black market baby-brokering scheme.

William Aycock, who investigated the case for the State Department of Human Services, said, "We interviewed them and they all had the same basic story.

"They said he seemed like a real nice man at first, the fatherly type. But later on, he wasn't very friendly. He became kind of cold. More or less, he got what he wanted, he kind of turned against them."

Assistant District Attorney Marcus Busch said the first few adoptions Kingsley did at the beginning of 1984 were "relatively innocuous. But by 1985, he was forging documents, threatening women with jail and making them sign documents up front.

"I think he became greedy and was not going to let any of the cases slip by. There was too much money involved," Busch told the Dallas Times Herald in its Sunday editions.

Evidence in the case shows Kingsley paid the mothers $2,000 or $3,000 and turned the babies over to adoptive parents for as much as $20,000.

'Ray Hill Prison Radio Show' touted by participants as only one of its kind

By RUTH RENDON

HOUSTON (AP) — It's 3 o'clock on a Sunday afternoon and Bobby Bare is singing "Back Home In Huntsville Again" as Ray Hill sits in front of a radio station console in Houston to speak to a literally captive audience.

"It's time for you to rattle down the bars, the 'Prison Show' is on the air," says cohort Shan Donaldson.

The "Ray Hill Prison Show" to be exact — a five-year institution on KPFT-FM and touted by its participants as the only show of its kind in the nation.

The two-hour program, aimed at thousands of Texas prison inmates and their families and friends, can be heard at 12 of the 26 Texas Department of Corrections units. On a clear day, however, inmates outside the station's 90-mile radius are able to pick up the weekly show.

Hill, 45, an ex-con and gay activist, started the program in 1981. Its popularity, however, soared after a woman on her way to visit her imprisoned son called Hill and asked if he could give her son a message on the air.

"She said, 'I haven't seen my son in two years and I finally managed to go visit him. I've been listening to your show and he listens to your show and we've been in an automobile accident and now I can't go (visit)," Hill recalls.

The message, relayed by Hill, triggered a flurry of similar requests.

"After that, the phones were ringing off the hook from family members," says the show's co-producer, Hugh B. Callaway, also an ex-con, who wants to become a lawyer.

Instead of delivering the messages himself, friends and relatives of inmates telephone the show and give their messages personally.

"We get calls from literally all over the world," Hill says. "They take about 12 to 20 seconds each."

The program's first hour consists of criminal justice news and interviews and tape recordings from inmates, followed by an hour of phone calls.

"A lot of these individuals need to know there is someone who cares about them," says the 30-year-old Callaway, who served four years in Texas prisons for a Dallas robbery conviction.

While Texas prison inmates are not allowed to make calls, prisoners at city and county lockups do have telephone access and also call the show.

The station offers editorials against gangs, violence and prejudice, Hill says. Wardens, prosecutors and attorneys are frequent guests.

"I frequently make appeals to inmates for racial harmony," Hill says.

Many inmates look forward to the program, particularly because most of them have recreation time or visiting time during the Sunday afternoon time period, says Charles Brown, a Texas prisons spokesman.

"I think Ray does a good job," Brown says. "The inmates enjoy it quite a bit. They try to project something good for the inmates."

Hill, who helped start public radio station KPFT five years ago after being released from prison for commercial robberies, does most of the talking on the program. Callaway, Ms. Donaldson and Ethyl Hodges also are regulars.

STATE IN BRIEF

Ship Channel traffic still jammed from barge fire

DEER PARK (AP) — Traffic in the Houston Ship Channel remained restricted today in the area where a barge fire burned for several days, U.S. Coast Guard officials said.

Lt. Christopher Roberts said no passing restrictions remained in effect today in the channel where a fire and two explosions erputed on board a barge early Tuesday. One seaman was killed, officials said.

The restriction was implemented because officials wanted to reduce water disturbances and also avoid traffic problems in case the fire reignited, Roberts said.

The blaze burned out late Saturday night, but a fire boat remained at the site this morning as a precautionary measure, Roberts said.

Officials planned to try and remove any remaining methyl tertiary butyl ether off the barge. Workers were transferring the volatile gasoline additive when the fire broke out on the barge.

Roberts said authorities were not sure how much of the product remained on board the barge. Most of the barge sunk during the fire, and only part of its cargo remained above water.

Escapees remain at large

BURNET (AP) — Three prisoners who cut through a chain link fence at the Burnet County jail remained at large Sunday, two days after making their escape, authorities said.

Sheriff's officials continued their search for the escapees Sunday, dispatcher Pat Wall said. Authorities have received several calls about the men since they fled the jail's exercise area Friday.

Burnet County Sheriff Weldon Buck said a helicopter was used in the search for the escapees Friday afternoon.

The sheriff identified the escapees as Arturo Moreno, 37, charged with attempted murder; Jose Martinez, 23, charged with unauthorized use of a motor vehicle, and Terry Herron, 23, held on a charge of aggravated robbery.

Moreno and Martinez are Mexican citizens and Herron is from San Antonio, Buck said.

Houston highways watched

HOUSTON (AP) — A $275 million computerized traffic "cop" system designed to watch the city's busiest highways will soon be on the lookout for hazardous traffic conditions of one freeway, officials say.

By using cameras, sensors and overhead message signs, the system can close lanes and alert drivers to accidents or vehicle breakdowns, which together cause half of all traffic delays, said Dick McCasland of the Texas Tranportation Institute.

Although the first leg of the surveillance system will be operational in about a month on the Katy Freeway transitway, a section of Interstate 10, city officials said it will take nearly 20 years before the system can command some 514 miles of Houston's busiest highways.

"The magnitude of it is what sometimes boggles my mind," said Dexter Jones, a traffic design engineer for the Texas highway department's Houston district.

Jones has spent a dozen years planning "probably the most comprehensive system in the world...and we've got about 17 or 18 years to go. I won't ever see it finished in my working life. The max I can work is 11 more years."

The system involves buried sensors that can detect a car slowing because of a problem such as a blown tire. The sensors prompt a nearby television camera to focus on the incident.

Next, a human controller watching a TV monitor miles away eyes the problem, sends electronic warnings for drivers and dispatches help.

Gorbachev: Reagan stumbling over 'testing'

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev says President Reagan asserted the Iceland summit collapsed because of one word: "testing" Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative, the so-called "Star Wars" program for defense against Soviet missiles.

While the two leaders were at loggerheads over Star Wars, an idea that Reagan says may be impossible to realize, they abandoned their near agreements to eliminate all 50,000 nuclear weapons already pointed at each other over the next 10 years.

Reagan said Gorbachev's insistence that the United States restrict research for the Strategic Defense Initiative to the laboratory "would have killed our defensive shield."

Many of the ideas for Star Wars can be tested in the laboratory, but Pentagon officials say tests in the atmosphere and space will be necessary before the system can be deployed.

It is that testing outside the laboratory, which already is under way, that Gorbachev sought to halt.

"The Soviet Union insisted that we sign an agreement that would deny to me and future presidents for 10 years the right to develop, test and deploy a defense against nuclear missiles for the people of the free world," Reagan said. "This we could not and will not do."

Gorbachev said he made "very serious, unprecedented concessions and accepted compromises that are unprecedented" on other arms-control issues, but that U.S. insistence on testing space weapons outside the laboratory caused the talks to rupture.

"Who was going to accept that?" Gorbachev said. "It would have taken a madman to accept that."

"When we were saying goodbye, the president said that he was disappointed and that from the very beginning, I — that is Gorbachev — had come to Reykjavik with no willingness to reach agreement," the Soviet leader said.

"'Why,' he (Reagan) said, 'because of just one word (testing), are you so intransigent in your approach as regards SDI and as regards testing?'

"It's not just one word that is the point here," Gorbachev said. "It is the substance that is the key to understanding what the U.S. administration really intends."

When Reagan proposed SDI in a March 1983 speech, he said the idea was to create a high-technology, impenetrable shield against nuclear attack and free the world from the threat of nuclear weapons by the end of the century.

A decision on whether to deploy the system couldn't be made until after it was evaluated, and that that would be in the 1990s, he said. There is some skepticism that a total strategic defense is possible.

Administration officials also argued that SDI would overcome the numerical edge the Soviets have in warheads. The Soviets contend it is an American ploy to put weapons in space, greatly expanding the arms race.

From Reagan's initial proposal, the initiative has taken shape and some details of the ideas and weapons being tested have emerged.

The proposals include laser beams bounced off mirrors in space to shoot down enemy missiles in their "boost phase" — the three minutes after they are launched while they are rocketing into space.

Tested so far — outside the laboratory — has been a ground-based missile tipped with a non-nuclear projectile aimed at a rocket flying in a known orbit. The Pentagon claims its tests so far have exceeded expectations.

These superfast missiles would destroy enemy warheads that escape destruction by the laser weapons.

The proposal envisions a three-phase defense against enemy missiles. The first phase, with weapons based in space and on the ground, would detect and destroy enemy warheads during the boost phase.

Weapons for the second phase would be aimed at missiles that reach the longer "mid-course" period, when they are through space and release warheads and decoys.

The "terminal" phase defense is for those warheads that were missed during the first two phases and reenter the atmosphere approaching their targets.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said progress in testing already has been made toward producing "small, inexpensive (rocket) boosters needed in quantity" for the third phase.

A "hypersonic" missile — one flying in excess of 2,000 miles per hour — used its built-in radar to guide it to a small target earlier this year.

Weinberger also said a computer program had been developed that can distinguish between an enemy missile and the large plume of smoke and fire it gives off, thus increasing the accuracy of defenses aimed at the missile.

Last year, U.S. scientists for the first time succeeded in firing an intense electron beam in a straight line through the atmosphere. Such directed-energy weapons could be used against enemy warheads as they descended into the atmosphere from space toward their targets.

Among weapons being studied are similar missiles that would destroy nuclear warheads by colliding with them instead of using explosive charges. Other ideas include electromagnetic rail guns and various types of lasers.

Much Star Wars research involves laboratory testing of chemical and free-electron lasers, or concentrated beams of light. X-ray lasers could be powered by nuclear explosions.

Laboratories are also working to develop computers and programs complex enough to run the Star Wars system without what could be a fatal error. Much of the other hardware associated with the SDI also can be developed indoors.

Skepticism towards Star Wars is one reason why neither the Senate nor the House would go along with Reagan's proposal that the United States spend $5.2 billion on SDI research during the current year.

The final version announced by congressional leaders on Friday will provide $3.6 billion, a compromise between the $3.1 billion approved by the House, the same amount as spent in the fiscal just ended, and the $3.95 billion passed by the Senate.

Congress has whittled more than a third off administration proposals to spend about $26 billion over five years on SDI research.

Summit failure giving Democrats ammunition

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional Democrats say the failure of the arms talks in Iceland gives them new ammunition to fight President Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative and could help them pick up seats in next month's elections.

But Republicans are applauding Reagan's decision to walk away from a Soviet "trap," and saying the Soviets' eagerness to scuttle the space-based anti-missile system shows just how important it could be to the defense of the United States.

A disappointed Rep. Edward J. Markey, D-Mass., said Sunday night, "This weekend President Reagan had a chance to cash in 'Star Wars' for the best deal the Russians have offered us since they sold us Alaska, and we turned it down."

"I predict that the failure in Reykjavik will give the arms control issue razor-sharp edges that will cut against the Republicans in November," said Markey, a liberal who has sponsored a nuclear freeze resolution.

But Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., an SDI stalwart, expressed relief that Reagan "walked away from an agreement that violated one of his highest goals: the development of a strategic defense for ourselves and our allies."

"The Soviets are going to have to come back to the table," Kemp predicted. "The impasse in Iceland could be a plus for Republicans who stand by Reagan, but I know that will not be a universally held view," he added.

Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia, the top Democrat on the Senate Armed Services Committee and a major figure on arms control, said SDI "is going to be under more scrutiny and more fire now than ever before, and I say that as one who has supported it and still support a robust research program."

Nunn said Reagan has shifted his arms control goals, making SDI his top priority "even at the cost of giving up deep cuts in Soviet weapons." And Nunn said it was "bad news" that the Soviets had tied any reduction in intermediate nuclear weapons to progress on the strategic arms and space issues.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations, strongly defended Reagan's handling of the talks. He said the United States needs SDI as a safeguard against the Soviets and nuclear threats from any other quarter.

"You can't give the store away until you are sure that you are able to destroy those things that are now aimed at us," said Lugar. He said the Soviets "attempted to trap the president and put the United States into perpetual jeopardy."

"Their proposal would have prohibited the United States from developing any defensive deterrent while the Soviets would be able to maintain their offensive superior capability." When faced with this cold stare by the Soviet leader, President Reagan refused to blink, Lugar said.

Praise for Nicaraguan gunrunning may have adverse results

WASHINGTON (AP) — Praise for private gunrunning operations in Nicaragua, such as that voiced by a high State Department official over the weekend, will only lead to more Americans being captured, killed and put on trial, the vice chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee says.

Eventually, Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said Sunday, "nobody is going to see a distinction of whether they are there officially working for the United States or only with the encouragement of the United States."

Congress in 1984 barred military aid from the United States to the Contra rebels battling the leftist Sandinista government of Nicaragua, but later authorized nonmilitary aid.

The question of whether the U.S. government has gone beyond that has come under renewed scrutiny since Eugene Hasenfus, an ex-Marine who once flew for Air America, a CIA-operated airline in Vietnam, was captured in Nicaragua after his arms-loaded plane was downed Oct. 5 by a Nicaraguan missile.

Hasenfus told a news conference in Managua on Thursday that a man named Max Gomez and another Cuban-American "work for the CIA (and) did most of the coordination" for the gunrunning flights he took part in.

Published reports on Friday said Vice President George Bush's national security adviser, Donald Gregg, helped place Gomez at a military airfield in El Salvador from which Hasenfus's plane took off.

The Los Angeles Times said Saturday that Gomez told associates that he reported to Bush in his role as head of the Contra air supply operation.

Bush said Saturday he had met Gomez three times, and "he's a patriot," but the vice president denied directing the gunrunning operation.

"To say I'm running the operation that Hasenfus is involved in...it's absolutely untrue," Bush said during a campaign stop for Rep. Tommy Hartnett in Charleston, S.C.

Gregg, in a telephone interview, also denied directing Gomez.

"Neither the vice president nor I coordinated operations in Central America," Gregg said.

At the U.S.-Soviet summit in Reykjavik, Iceland, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said he knew nothing about whether Bush and Gomez had met.

Leahy said most members of Congress feel the U.S. government has overstepped its bounds by giving a "wink and a shrug" to private supporters of the Contras.

"I don't think we've had adequate answers whether the administration was involved with more than verbal encouragement of these people," Leahy said in a telephone interview from his home in Vermont.

"The question that hasn't been answered fully to all the congressional inquiries is whether they stepped over the line from political encouragement to illegal cooperation," he said.

Sen. John F. Kerry, D-Mass., a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said that "(the administration didn't want people operating that way, believe me they wouldn't be."

He added: "These guys are being recruited, being paid. Somebody is paying them and somebody is permitting their recruitment. I think they (the administration) are culpable as policy-makers and planners that sit around and think these things up. It's not the way to conduct foreign policy."

Elliott Abrams, assistant secretary of state for Inter-American affairs, denied that Hasenfus worked for the CIA. But he said it is possible Hasenfus thought there was some connection.

"This series of people who are, in fact, engaged and have been for the last couple of years in helping the Contras, they came in when the Congress abandoned the freedom fighters in Nicaragua and they've been keeping them alive for two years," he said on Cable News Network's Evans and Novak program.

"They looked around and said, 'Who's got some experience for this kind of work?' And they came up with some people who were in Air America, which had connections with the CIA in Vietnam. You'll find a close pattern of relationships here. You'll find some old school ties. But you won't find any current ties."

Leahy said as long as people like Abrams openly encourage Americans going to Nicaragua, "more and more Americans will become involved, there will be some captured, some killed and some put on trial."

Also over the weekend, former CIA director Stansfield Turner was asked about the extent of the agency's involvement in Nicaragua.

"I think there's very little question that the CIA is providing help and the support and advice to these people who are freebooters and doing things down there," Turner said. "They're doing it on the verge of the law. I don't think they're doing anything technically illegal."

In Managua, President Daniel Ortega said documents found in the wreckage of the C-123 proved the U.S. role. "There are no doubts about the involvement of the United States in all these actions," Ortega said. He said U.S. officials "stimulate terrorist actions such as this, but when people die they do not take responsibility for the action. They just call them heroes."

Two Americans and a third man who has not yet been identified were killed in the crash.

Ortega said Hasenfus will be tried soon, and other officials have said if he is convicted, he might receive a 30-year sentence.

Students plan history of trail used by '49ers to California

MADERA, Calif. (AP) — Using a long-forgotten, 137-year-old diary, 200 Southwestern students plan to publish a historical account of the southern overland route used by the 49ers to get to California's Gold Rush.

The group of mostly eighth-graders in six schools in California, Arizona and Texas is editing the unpublished, 500-page memoirs of William P. Huff, adding maps and hundreds of footnotes throughout.

"This year Mr. Huff is our teacher," said Michelle Badella, 13, of Easton-Arcola School in Madera, where students held a news conference to announce the project. "Although he died 100 years ago next month, his genius will live on."

Anna Brandenburg, also 13, of O'Henry Junior High School in Austin, Texas, said the project would give the students a chance to contribute to their heritage.

"This will be a little bit of history that we've saved from being lost," she said in a telephone interview Thursday.

Besides the long-lost diary, the teen-agers are using hundreds of primary and secondary historical resources such as census tracts, letters and contemporary biographies to verify Huff's colorful tales and his detailed observations of much of the 2,000-mile trail from eastern Texas to Mariposa County, Calif., in Gold Rush country east of Madera.

"We've got a sleeping historical giant here, and these kids have been charged with bringing it back to life," said William Coate, the Madera teacher who started his pupils on the project last month.

A class Coate taught two years ago published "The Minturn Chronicles," a fictionalized diary of the lives of a real-life pioneer family in nearby Chowchilla.

The Huff diary recently was rediscovered by his great-great-grandson, David Stewart of Austin. It contains what some believe may be among the best records ever kept of the Southwestern 49er trail.

Stewart heard about Coate when the teacher was in Texas working on another class project. He contacted him and offered his great-great-grandfather's diary.

"Your hope as a historian is to find this kind of journal," said Thomas Andrews.

Conclusion of Yom Kippur leaves Jews making call to aid hungry

BOSTON (AP) — When Jews end their fast at sundown today at the conclusion of Yom Kippur, the holy day of atonement, hundreds of rabbis across the United States will urge them to help feed the world's hungry.

"People want to do the right thing. You've just got to give them a vehicle," said Leonard Fein, founder of a group called Mazon: A Jewish Response to Hunger. Mazon is the Hebrew word for sustenance.

Fein said in an interview last week that more than 300 rabbis in 37 states have pledged to supplement the traditional Yom Kippur service with a special sermon about Mazon and an appeal for funds.

"We're asking them to say, 'Look folks, our fast ends at sundown. It is a voluntary fast. We're asking that on this day you stop and think about those people whose fast is involuntary and will not end tonight or tomorrow night,'" Fein said.

Fein, 52, of Boston, is a former professor of political science at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He publishes a nationally circulated Jewish monthly magazine, Moment.

"It's the only 'Eureka' idea I ever had in my life. It came to me in a parking lot of a synagogue in Encino, California," he said of Mazon.

As he stood in the synagogue parking lot talking to a rabbi, Fein said he noticed an opulent sports car pull up. The rabbi told him the car belonged to the temple's caterer.

Fein made some inquiries about the caterer, who also served a number of other area temples and calculated the size of his business.

"I then generated an estimate of American Jews' annual spending on catered celebrations, and it came to not less than $500 million," he said.

"It occurred to me that if we could encourage people voluntarily to add a 3 percent surcharge to the cost of those celebrations, we could generate a very significant fund for the battle against hunger. With some friends, we put together a national board, raised seed money and started Mazon."

The organization has been operating for 12 months out of an office in Los Angeles under its executive director, Irving Cramer.

FBI: Massachusetts holds title for most auto thefts

BOSTON (AP) — Massachusetts regained the ignoble title as the nation's hot spot for hot cars, according to FBI statistics.

The FBI reported 50,346 cars stolen last year in Massachusetts, up 2.87 percent from 48,705 in 1984, when Michigan led the nation — the only year in the past nine that the Bay State hasn't been No. 1.

Secretary of Public Safety Charles V. Barry says he is reviewing the FBI's figures, which differ from state numbers because the FBI includes estimates for municipalities that haven't reported statistics.

The state figure for 1985 was 46,991.

Mark against UN

A report by the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence on the United Nations may draw some scoffing and lofty disdain from abroad, but it is certain to be regarded with the utmost gravity by the American people. Rightly so.

The report is a disturbing one. Not only does it fully support the Reagan Administration's charge that the UN serves as an operational base for the Soviet's KGB in this country, but it confirms suspicions that the KGB has infiltrated the entire UN bureaucracy.

One of the more shocking disclosures in the report identifies an assistant to the UN Secretary-General as a high-ranking KGB officer. In fact, this sensitive post appears to have been reserved exclusively for the KGB for 25 years, starting with the secretary-generalship of the Burmese U Thant in 1961.

On the basis of the committee's revelations, which draw upon recently declassified intelligence documents, it can be assumed that a KGB officer was the trusted assistant of Kurt Waldheim during his 10 years as secretary-general. Waldheim, of course, has since been unmasked as a former officer in a Nazi punitive force which terrorized the Balkans in World War II. Thus he and his KGB aide formed an odd couple to shepherd a world organization supposedly dedicated to peace and justice.

Whatever effectiveness the UN ever had suffered severely years ago when it degenerated into a debating society dominated by the Third World and its Iron Curtain colleagues. Its prestige sank out of sight with the exposure of Waldheim's scandalous past. The new evidence of KGB infiltration will lead an increasing number of Americans to be concerned anew about U.N. effectiveness.

With that in mind, it's obvious that the UN's future moves will be regarded skeptically by all those who cherish truth, honor and human dignity.

Another View:
Crash in Nicaragua

It looks bad enough for the United States to have an airplane packed with arms for Nicaragua's rebels and flown by an American crew crash inside that country's borders. It makes it look unacceptably worse to have one of President Reagan's chief advisers on Latin America use the incident to encourage free-lance attacks a sovereign government with which we are officially at peace.

There will be more details in the days to come on the activities of Marine Corps veteran Eugene Hasenfus, the Wisconsin man who is the sole survivor of the four-man crew aboard the C-123 transport that Nicaraguan troops shot down Sunday near the Costa Rican border. Two other U.S. citizens, and a Nicaraguan, were killed when it crashed. Hasenfus has reportedly admitted his mission was to resupply anti-Sandinista contra rebels.

The U.S. government has disavowed any official connection with the airplane or its crew, but there can be little doubt the flight was part of a pattern of covert operations, either overseen directly or encouraged indirectly by the Central Intelligence Agency, in support of the contras, who Reagan considers freedom fighters. That an administration irrationally obsessed with Nicaragua is linked to such activities is no surprise. What is amazing is how consistently U.S. officials, and their contra allies, botch up these operations and embarrass themselves before the world.

Take the way Assistant Secretary of State Elliot Abrams, the chief coordinator of Reagan administration policy in Central America, praised the work of private U.S. groups that aid the contras, going so far as to call the downed plane's crew "heroes." They probably were brave men. But there are serious questions as to whether such activities are even legal under the Neutrality Act of 1972. Quite apart from their legality, there are millions of Americans who consider such activities improper and unwise. Even the Republican chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, Minnesota's David Durenberger, is asking whether the CIA could bring free-lance contra aid operations under control if Congress were ever to allow it to go after Nicaragua unhindered. For Abrams to go out of his way to praise that kind of activity reflects profound arrogance.

But then, ignorance and a belief that we know better than the rest of the world what to do in Central America runs through all of the administration's tactics and pronouncements with respect to Nicaragua. Reagan, Abrams and the rest are apparently determined to wage their war there regardless of what it costs in human lives or damaged U.S. prestige. The only way their campaign to overthrow the Sandinistas will be forced into a more constructive channel — like the Contadora negotiations suggested by our Latin American allies — will be if Congress flatly refuses to go along with it.

Congress should now delay final approval of the $100 million in contra aid it voted recently, until the administration answers the many questions raised by the aircraft's downing. Congress must find out if the administration is already using the contra aid money despite the fact it has not been finally approved, or whether the CIA is using its operating funds against Nicaragua, a strategy Congress specifically banned two years ago when it was revealed that CIA operatives had mined Nicaragua's harbors.

Congress must have a clear answer to those questions before allowing Reagan and his fellow adventurers to plunge deeper into the jungles of Central America.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1792, the cornerstone of the executive mansion, later to be known as the White House, was laid during a ceremony in the District of Columbia.

In 1843, the Jewish organization B'nai B'rith was founded in New York.

In 1845, Texas ratified a state constitution.

In 1943, Italy declared war on Germany, its one-time Axis partner.

In 1960, the third presidential campaign debate was broadcast, with Republican nominee Richard M. Nixon in Hollywood and Democrat John F. Kennedy in New York.

In 1962, the Edward Albee play "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf" opened on Broadway, with Uta Hagen as Martha and Arthur Hill as George.

In 1982, the International Olympic Committee announced it would restore the two gold medals Jim Thorpe won at the 1912 Stockholm Olympics.

In 1984, the space shuttle Challenger and its seven astronauts glided to a perfect landing at Cape Canaveral, Florida, ending a journey that featured the first space walk by an American woman, Kathy Sullivan.

Union U. fizzles Dr. Pepper's degree

WASHINGTON — Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., has received the ultimate rebuke from a mail-order "university" that he exposed for awarding him a Ph.D after he sent in four book reports and a check for $1,780. His "alma mater," Union University of Los Angeles, has asked Pepper to mail back his diploma.

Jack Anderson

In a three-page letter explaining the decision, a member of the board of the now-defunct institution blamed the original award of the degree last December to misplaced respect for the 86-year-old representative and an excess of Christmas spirit. The school officials responsible were of Japanese heritage, the letter explained, and were simply treating Pepper with the traditional veneration that Japanese give their elderly.

"They also thought the degree would be a great Christmas gift for the gentleman, who may not have too much time left to enjoy his doctorate," the letter added. "Shakespeare called it the milk of human kindness. A group of people acting in good faith made an error, and they would have committed a hari kari had it occurred in the old Japan."

In short, the letter explained, "human frailty played an important part in swaying the minds" of the suicidal school officials who decided to give Pepper his mail-order degree.

Pepper, who holds two legitimate academic degrees (University of Alabama '21, Harvard Law School '24), worked with Postal Service inspectors and his own Subcommittee on Health and Long-Term Care to get his Ph.D. in a much-publicized sting operation last year. Their intention was to show how absurdly easy it is to get a highfalutin degree by mail.

At a hearing on Dec. 11, postal inspectors told how the caper began when they answered an ad in Popular Mechanics that offered "university degrees by special evaluation of existing job experience, education, achievement, fast and inexpensive." A questionnaire soon arrived, on which Pepper indicated that he wanted a Ph.D. as soon as possible and for no more than $950.

The cost turned out to be nearly double, but Pepper had no difficulty meeting Union University's academic requirement: four book reports of about three pages each on any of the 44 books (many of them best-sellers) that the doctoral candidate said he had read.

A postal inspector picked up Pepper's sheepskin at the university, which was also a center for acupuncture and Oriental medicine. At a mock-solemn ceremony in the congressional hearing room, Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., awarded Pepper his diploma.

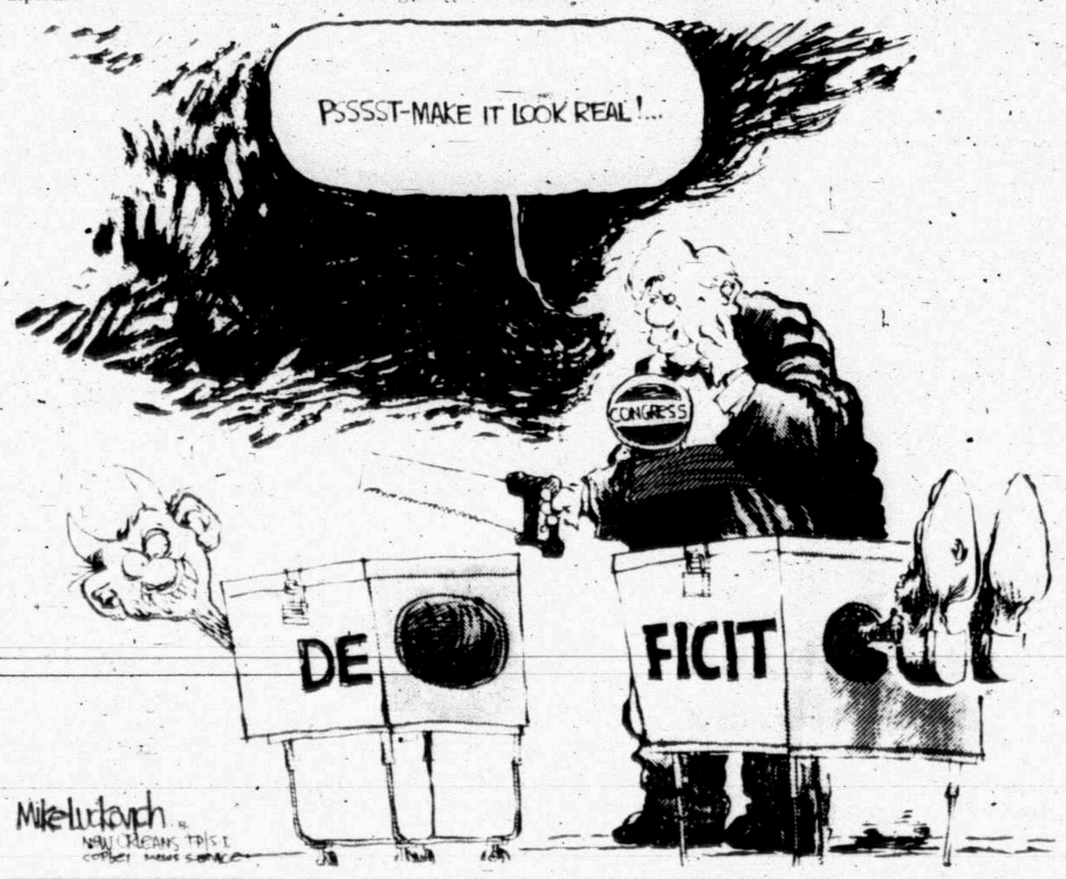

"Well, well, well," said Pepper, "I have always wanted to be a Dr. Pepper."

He told our associate Stewart Harris he hasn't decided whether he'll return the degree as requested. Union University closed down last month, shortly after demanding the return of Pepper's diploma.

Unfortunately, not all diploma mill operations are has harmless as Pepper's Ph.D. In 1983, postal inspectors learned that 98 people had received spurious medical degrees from a man in Alexandria, Va., after paying $20,000 to $28,000 and attending graduation ceremonies in the Dominican Republic. At least five of these phony doctors then got licenses to practice medicine in the United States.

In 1980, the FBI organized a "Dipscam" investigation that turned up medical diplomas that could be had for as little as $28, diplomas from fictitious schools and others forged to look like degrees from Harvard, Yale, Emory, Alabama and other reputable schools. Checking the alumni rolls of its "Dipscam" targets, the FBI found holders of fake degrees working in the Defense, Justice and Commerce Departments and several other federal agencies.

Farm Belt senators put hopes on Iceland

WASHINGTON — Farm Belt Republican Senate candidates may get a boost at the Reykjavik summit: arrangements for a big U.S. grain sale to the Soviet Union on terms at least as favorable as those rejected by Moscow this past summer.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Major grain-exporting nations have been tipped to the new deal. One Senate Republican insider says privately that the deal is being camouflaged so that President Reagan will escape charges of playing politics in his meeting with Mikhail Gorbachev. Even so, suspicious Democrats are wondering out loud what Reagan's return political gift to Gorbachev will be.

The previous grain deal expired Oct. 1 without Soviet purchase of a single bushel. Any grain sale that worked would shore up hard-pressed Republican Senate candidates in the Dakotas, Idaho and Washington as well as Wisconsin and Missouri.

PERLE'S PEARLS

State Department diplomats are not happy that their boss, Secretary of State George Shultz, has been spending unpublicized private time with Assistant Defense Secretary Richard Perle, who as the Pentagon's top arms control expert opposes pro-detente sentiment.

Word has filtered down from the Seventh Floor of the State Department that Shultz and Perle have had confidential discussions on half a dozen occasions. Main topic: how the U.S. should handle the current arms talks, at the summit between President Reagan and Mikhail Gorbachev and in the Geneva negotiations as well.

Perle was the only Defense official to accompany Reagan and Shultz to the Reykjavik mini-summit. Not even retired Gen. Edward Rowny, a former top Geneva arms negotiator and a Reagan administration adviser, was invited.

CHRISTIANS FOR LAXALT

Sen. Paul Laxalt's prospective presidential campaign received a boost when he hosted prominent evangelists, including Oral Roberts, in a private luncheon at his Senate office.

Despite speculation that a divorce and Nevada casino ownership in Laxalt's past would turn off the religious right, nobody questioned — much less criticized — his record. After the lunch, several Pentecostal leaders informed Laxalt he is their first choice for president over their co-religionist, Pat Robertson.

The biggest surprise may have been the presence of Oral Roberts, the famous faith-healer who until now has avoided politics. He was not on the original invitation list for the luncheon but, when he heard about the event, asked to be included as an ardent admirer of Laxalt.

KEMP'S STRIKEOUT

Rep. Jack Kemp personally tried to persuade Henry Kissinger to sign a letter to President Reagan calling for early deployment of a defense system against Soviet missile attack, but got only sympathy and a "no."

Kemp and Rep. Jim Courter of New Jersey did obtain signatures from several prominent national security specialists outside the conservative Republican camp. Heading the list was Democrat Zbigniew Brzezinski, like Kissinger a powerful national security adviser.

Kissinger told Kemp he agreed with the proposal to deploy parts of Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) without waiting until all research is finished. But, he added sadly, he does not sign round-robin letters or petitions.

'THE PALACE FILE'

A new book containing secret letters written by President Nixon and his top advisers to South Vietnam's President Nguyen Van Thieu in the closing days of the Vietnam War is destined to become a hot political expose about unfulfilled U.S. promises to Saigon.

The author is Jerrold Schecter, press aide for the National Security Council in Jimmy Carter's White House. "The Palace File" will reveal for the first time the full measure of emotional, but unkept, pledges of support to Thieu to induce him to end the war.

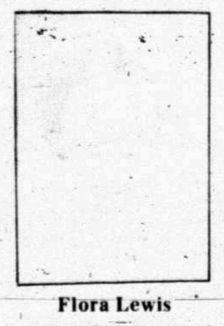

South Vietnam's last president was promised immediate American intervention if communist North Vietnam broke armistice agreements that ended the war and non-stop military aid to enable Saigon to fight on its own if necessary.

Reform needed at UN, but that isn't all

BONN — While it isn't the kind of crisis that has senior leaders locked in situation rooms and the public glued to the screen, the state of the United Nations is now a grave worry for people concerned with long-term international developments.

Flora Lewis

The immediate issue is the budget, menaced by a sharp cut in U.S. contributions. But that is only a signal. A group of Western foreign affairs specialists gathered here showed furthermore that there are already enough good, concrete suggestions on what can be done to repair the structure, but nowhere near enough determination for an effort to save the system.

Maurice Strong, a Canadian veteran of U.N. operations, said bluntly, "The worst thing that could happen would be to solve the money crisis without big reforms." That is impossible from the Secretariat, he added. Reforms can only be brought by pressure from governments.

The goal has to be to make the U.N. work effectively, which means focusing on the things it can do — "It's a service organization providing services the world needs," says Strong — and not on things it can't do such as solving major political conflicts.

Over the years, the U.N. has got itself such a bad name on some highly visible issues that a lot of people, particularly in the U.S., think it could collapse without much loss. This is the plain delusion of nose-cutting to spite a disorderly world's face.

The founders of the U.N. made a number of mistakes and failed to foresee some key world changes. But they were concentrating on not repeating the mistakes of the League of Nations, whose demise was soon followed by World War II. On that they succeeded, leaving foundations for a world system that has evolved but also endured.

The alternative is unrestrained nationalism, along a preposterous gamut of countries running from flyspecks to giants, when no nation can any longer solve the major issues alone.

"Multilateralism," a word fallen into absurd disrepute among conservatives, as though Rambo could handle everything from the population explosion to the queasy dollar by himself, is the only possible way out. It means simply consent to arrange concessions of mutual advantage instead of everybody bashing everybody to rival pulps. That did happen in the 1930s and 40s. The object of a world system is to head it off.

Some of the U.N.'s faults could make it the least effective multilateral body on certain issues: currency, finance and trade, for example. It must also be admitted that the founders simply failed to establish a system of collective security, enforcement of peace and solution of disputes, as they had envisaged. They never really supposed this function would work on issues that directly divided the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. But neither did they suppose that the East-West conflict would inflate to such global dimensions, and almost automatically block U.N. effectiveness on local issues. The persistence of the Iran-Iraq war is an example. Washington and Moscow aren't on opposite sides, but neither can they agree on sanctions to face the war's end.

In any case, the U.N. never was and never was intended to be more than the sum of its member governments. It has no governmental powers of its own, no way of raising money, no way of raising forces, no way of overriding belligerents to impose peace. So critics of U.N. impotence are really only saying governments don't want it to work effectively, at least not in any way except to their own specific demands.

Over the years, the degradation of its highest organs to empty platforms for rhetoric has encouraged some pernicious habits, putting point-scoring ahead of problem solving. There is a closed circle of log-rolling, where countries vote not in terms of their real views or interests but in order to win equally meaningless support when they want to score a point.

But the deformation can't be allowed to destroy the only structure there is for a reasonably organized world. It is clearly impossible now to change the charter and make it more realistic. Perhaps it is even undesirable because hopes and illusions can play a constructive role at a time of widespread bewilderment and loss of direction.

What can be done is to insert new intermediary groups, what Prof. Richard Gardner of Columbia calls "modified bicameralism," which would tie decisions to responsibility. Thus a small budget and policy group, where major contributors could not be outvoted by mini's, could be the only authorized source for money and spending proposals to the General Assembly. The possibilities exist. The issue is whether countries want to save the only system there is, or let it gradually fall apart in decrepitude.

Father's decision to use Agent Orange may be killing his son

By RITA BEAMISH

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Vietnam War was raging and the casualty rate for Navy river patrol crews had soared to almost 75 percent a year when Adm. Elmo Zumwalt Jr. ordered the dense riverbank jungles sprayed with Agent Orange.

The chemical defoliant burned away the ambush cover where enemy snipers hid, and Zumwalt felt confident he had minimized the risk for his men, including his own son, Elmo Zumwalt III, commander of a "swift" boat.

Today the Zumwalt family is haunted by that decision, convinced that Agent Orange exposure caused two forms of cancer that may kill the younger Zumwalt, and a brain disfunction suffered by his own young son.

But in their newly published autobiography, both the retired admiral and his cancer-stricken son say although they didn't learn until after the war that Agent Orange was carcinogenic, they would make the same decision to use it even with that knowledge.

In fact, the elder Zumwalt said in a recent interview, he feels that as commander of naval forces in Vietnam, he helped his son live longer by destroying enemy cover with Agent Orange.

In "My Father, My Son," which also contains passages written by other family members and friends, the 66-year-old admiral and his 40-year-old son tell of their admiration for one another and the close family bond sustaining them through the cancer crisis.

"He's always been a fighter and courageous beyond measure," Zumwalt said of his son. "I have found myself for 35 of Elmo's 40 years tremendously inspired by his courage," he added in reference to his son's childhood bouts with polio and a heart ailment.

Elmo III suffers from two rare cancers, the deadly, fast-spreading Hodgkins disease, and lymphoma, a slow-moving cancer of the lymphatic system. Both were contracted within the last three years, 13 years after his return from Vietnam.

The Zumwalts also believe the father's exposure to Agent Orange caused his 9-year-old son's learning disability, called sensory integration dysfunction.

The admiral and his son have crisscrossed the country in recent days to promote their book and to tell their tragic story.

"I've been absolutely amazed," at the supportive reaction from veterans, cancer victims and others, the younger Zumwalt said in a telephone interview as he headed back to his wife and two children in Fayetteville, N.C.

He accompanied his father on the 10-day book tour even though he is still undergoing the slow recovery from a February bone-marrow transplant that he described as "the most physically agonizing thing anybody can put himself through."

His purpose, he said, is to focus attention on the plight of Vietnam veterans and the Agent Orange issue, and to show that "even in this day and age, deep feelings can make a difference," whether in the brotherhood of Navy comrades or the family support for a cancer victim.

Both Zumwalts still feel many more American servicemen were saved by Agent Orange than stricken by it.

"There's absolutely no doubt in my mind that thousands avoided death or maiming as a result of the use of Agent Orange. There's absolutely no doubt in my mind that the number who will die from the use of Agent Orange is far less. Therefore it's one of those least-worst alternatives," the elder Zumwalt said in an interview at his Arlington, Va., office.

He said when the spraying began, anyone serving a year on a swift boat crew stood a 70 percent to 75 percent chance of being killed or wounded.

"In the case of my own son, should he not survive this tragedy, he will have had 15 or 16 more years of life, the opportunity to marry and have children and see his children at least halfway to adulthood, as opposed to lying dead in the jungles of Vietnam."

"Since I saved the lives of thousands he could quite probably be one of them," added Zumwalt, who went on to become a member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and now is a private consultant on defense and business matters.

He said he feels no guilt about it, but eventually came to feel "I had become an instrument in my son's own tragedy."

The younger Zumwalt says his concern as commander of a swift boat was "day to day survival" and writes that his crew felt safer when the enemy snipers could not hide so close to the river.

His bone-marrow transplant, in which his younger sister's marrow was injected into his bones, was his only hope for survival following months of unsuccessful chemotherapy and radiation treatment.

Now he is "like a Chernobyl victim" who "went through the tortures of the damned," and is coming back from the dead, as his father described it.

Although the book tour tired him, he is progressing well ahead of the typical recovery rate, his father said.

His statistical chance of survival is now 55 percent. He won't be pronounced cured until a year has passed without recurrence.

Described by family and friends as relentlessly determined, Elmo III plans to return to his law practice on Nov. 20, because he said, "I want to do my share of the load" in the 10-member firm.

The marrow transplant has given him new hope for survival, but he has had to struggle to keep from dwelling on the nearness of death.

"You are forever changed. In your mind, your heart, your stomach, there is a sickening feeling," he said of the emotional impact of a terminal illness.

Arkansas, others weighing abortion issue two weeks before election day

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Two weeks before Election Day in 1984, a proposed amendment prohibiting state money for abortions was ruled off Arkansas ballots because the state's highest court termed its title, the "Unborn Child Amendment," misleading.

This November, an identical measure is on Arkansas ballots, but with a different name: Amendment 65, the "Limitation on Abortion and Abortion Funding Amendment."

The name may have changed, but the debate is no less heated.

Amendment 65 would prohibit spending state money for the estimated 6,000 abortions performed in Arkansas each year unless a mother's life is in danger. If approved, the amendment would make it state policy to promote the health, safety and welfare of unborn children and direct the Legislature to enforce the policy.

Voters in three other states — Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Oregon — will also consider abortion measures on November 4.

In Massachusetts, Boston's Cardinal Bernard Law is urging Catholics to back a proposed amendment which would allow lawmakers to end government funding of abortions through Medicaid.

In Rhode Island, a proposed amendment would ban abortion except to prevent the death of a pregnant woman and would prohibit government funding for abortions.

Measure 6 on Oregon ballots would ban state welfare funding of abortions except when the mother's life is endangered. A September poll conducted by The Oregonian newspaper indicated 41 percent were in favor and 50 percent opposed, with 9 percent undecided.

"We face a situation where the state is providing about one out of eight abortions in the state with taxpayers' money," said Jim Bunn, chairman of the Taxpayers for Responsible Government, which sponsored the voter initiative appearing on the Nov. 4 ballot.

Supporters of the Arkansas measure say state protection is needed for unborn children. They contend it would not restrict legal abortions as provided for by the U.S. Supreme Court's 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision.

Backers include former Gov. Frank White who is running against incumbent Bill Clinton for the governorship this November. Clinton has been less committal, saying that he has "no problem with the stated purpose of the amendment," but adding that the wording might open the way to problems.

Opponents, including the American Civil Liberties Union, the National Organization for Women, and the Arkansas Women's Political Caucus, contend that the measure is vaguely worded and grounded in religion, will trigger lawsuits and cost the state millions.

Last imprisoned Bay of Pigs veteran to be freed soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ramon Conte Hernandez, believed to be the last Bay of Pigs veteran still held in a Cuban prison will be freed soon, bringing the final chapter of the failed U.S. government operation to an end, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said.

"The decision to release this brave soldier marks the end of a long and tragic chapter in the history of relations between Cuba and the United States," Kennedy said in a statement Friday. He said the release could come within a week but did not give details of how it would take place.

"I am gratified the government of Cuba has made this gesture," Kennedy said. "I hope that in now closing this final chapter on the Bay of Pigs with the release of Conte Hernandez, we can begin a new and more hopeful chapter in the relations between our two countries."

Last June, Fidel Castro's government released another Bay of Pigs veteran, Ricardo Montero Duque.

Vote-trade miffs Democrats

WASHINGTON (AP) — A vote by Sen. Slade Gorton, R-Wash., in favor of conservative Daniel A. Manion to the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the 7th Circuit has opened the way for Reagan administration support for Gorton's choice for a federal judgeship in Washington.

But some Democrats were miffed by the vote-trading and spiked the nomination of Seattle lawyer William Dwyer for a vacancy on the U.S. District Court.

The Justice Department had been delaying approval of Dwyer's nomination, said David Endicott, a spokesman for Gorton.

Manion won approval 50-49.

Last week, Democrats on the Senate Judiciary Committee pulled Dwyer's name from a list of judicial nominees to be considered before Congress adjourns this year, according to Mark Goodin, a spokesman for Judiciary Committee Chairman Strom Thurmond, R-S.C.

Third Yugo-American freed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yugoslavia has released a third Yugoslav-American citizen held on charges of hostile political activity, the State Department says.

Gradimir Hadzic of Los Angeles was freed Saturday, said department spokeswoman Anita Stockman. She gave no further details on the case.

The Belgrade government earlier freed two men jailed on similiar charges, after members of Congress threatened retaliation against Yugoslav trade.

On Friday, Yugoslavia released Pjeter Ivezaj, a Detroit school system employee residing in Sterling Heights, Mich., and Veroljub Radvivojevic of Thousand Oaks, Calif.

Ivezaj was reunited with his wife in Titograd and planned to return to his suburban Detroit home today or Tuesday, after authorities return his passport, according to his brother, Frank Ivezaj.

County forecasts

Midland, Ector, Glasscock, Upton, Reagan, Crane, Gaines, Andrews, Dawson, Borden, Martin and Howard counties: Tonight, mostly fair, low mid 30s with light variable wind. Tuesday, fair, high upper 60s and wind south 5 to 10 mph.

Fair skies expected

From Staff and Wire Reports

Fair skies and warmer temperatures are expected as the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal predicts Tuesday's high will reach the upper 60s.

Forecasters say tonight will be fair, with a low in the mid 30s. Winds will be light and variable.

Tuesday will be fair, with a high in the upper 60s. Winds will be from the south at 5 to 10 mph.

Sunday's high of 45 was 53 degrees cooler than the record of 98, set in 1979. The low of 34 was 1 degree warmer than the record of 34, set in 1969.

STATE

Temperatures around the state were well below the seasonal normal today and numerous showers and isolated heavy thunderstorms lined the Texas-Louisiana border.

Readings over the eastern two-thirds of the state plunged into the 40s and 50s while temperatures in the northern Panhandle dipped below the freezing mark. The South Plains were struggling in the middle 30s.

The South Plains struggled in the middle 30s.

The cool Canadian air lingering over the state was reinforced by a northerly 5 mph to 15 mph wind. But in the Panhandle, winds were generally light and variable.

Thundershowers extended across the Gulf Coast and South Texas early today. A band of heavy thunderstorms were reported near Del Rio.

In the forecast, North Texas should receive scattered showers and thunderstorms late today with highs in the 50s in the west and in the low 60s in the east. But at night, temperatures in the west should drop to the upper 30s and to near 50 in the east. Highs Tuesday should be in the 60s.

NATION

Unseasonably cold temperatures swept through the Plains today, with readings dipping into the teens in parts of Colorado and Nebraska.

Freeze warnings were posted for the western two-thirds of Iowa, southeast Nebraska, central and northeast Kansas and northwest Missouri, with temperatures expected to drop into the 20s and lower 30s overnight.

A light freeze warning also was issued for northwest Texas, where low temperatures were expected to be near 30 degrees.

It was 19 degrees this morning in North Platte, Neb., breaking the 1970 low of 26, and Dodge City, Kan., tied its previous record low of 32.

Rain halts Pensacola

PENSACOLA, Fla. — Heavy rain Sunday delayed the finish of the $300,000 Pensacola Open golf tournament until today and forced the event to be shortened from 72 holes to 54. Left-hander Ernie Gonzalez leads into the third and final round of the tourney at the Perdido Bay Resort by a stroke over Joey Sindelar, while Bob Tway will be gunning for the $500,000 Vantage Cup championship.

Failure to complete the third round Monday would give Gonzalez, of Chula Vista, Calif., three-quarters of the $54,000 first prize with a 14-under-par score of 128. If the round is played, the winner will get the full prize.

Tway, of Edmond, Okla., could clinch the first Vantage Cup title, which would give him the biggest payday in golf history. He also could move ahead of Greg Norman, who is not competing here, on the money list if he earns more than $6,052.

Barbazza first

MONTEREY, Calif. — Fabrizio Barbazza of Italy outdueled Steve Millen of New Zealand to win the American Racing Series race Sunday at Laguna Seca Raceway. The Italian driver added to his season point lead with his first triumph in the last four races. Juan Manuel Fangio II of Argentina was third, followed by Albert Naon and Dave Simpson in the race for Buick-powered Wildcat race cars.

The winner beat Millen to the finish line by just .574 seconds as he averaged 110.442 mph in the 40-lap event on the 1.9-mile course.

Rahal Spark victor

MONTEREY, Calif. — Bobby Rahal held off Danny Sullivan to win the Champion Spark Plug 300-kilometer Indy-car race, his third straight victory at Laguna Seca Raceway. The Indianapolis 500 winner picked up his sixth victory of the season, the fourth in his last five starts and gave himself a bit of breathing room at the top of the CART-PPG season standings with two races remaining. Rahal beat Sullivan by 1.41 seconds.

Michael Andretti, who came into the race trailing Rahal in the title chase by just two points, ran a solid third, followed by his father, Mario, and Roberto Guerrero of Colombia.

McEnroe at best

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — Top-seeded John McEnroe, playing what he called his best match in the $279,000 WCT Scottsdale Open, beat third-seeded Kevin Curren 6-3, 3-6, 6-2 Sunday to win the singles championship in this first-ever event. The title was McEnroe's third straight and was worth $44,000 and 220 computer ranking points.

Douglass on top

MELBOURNE, Fla. — Dale Douglass shot a final-round 4-under-par 68 Sunday to win the $175,000 Fairfield-Barnett PGA Senior Tour Classic by one stroke over Miller Barber, who bogeyed the last hole. Douglass led or shared the lead in each of the three rounds while winning his fourth Seniors event in his rookie season on the tour. His 54-hole total of 13-under 203 earned him a paycheck of $26,250.

Barber, who finished with his third consecutive 68, was second at 204. Barber, the all-time leading money winner among seniors, missed four-foot birdie putts at 12 and 17, then bogeyed 18 when his long approach shot missed the green.

Walker, Pelleur lead Cowboys to easy win

IRVING (AP) — Herschel Walker put on a show for the Washington Redskins Sunday as the Dallas Cowboys knocked their old rival out of the ranks of the NFL unbeaten with a 30-6 win Sunday.

Walker scored two touchdowns, caught six passes for 155 yards and rushed for another 45 to amass 200 yards in offense.

And quarterback Steve Pelleur bore little resemblance to the confused, harried performer of a week ago when he was thrust into the starting lineup on short notice against the Denver Broncos.

"Herschel is a great catalyst," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "He's just so big and so tough that he breaks tackles. He just gives you a lot of incentive."

Landry said the Cowboys had to have the victory.

"If we go 3-3, we're in a mighty tough situation," Landry said. "At least we are back in the race again. Of course, you don't expect to score 30 points against the division leader, but we needed it after last week."

Dallas came into the game after being blown out 29-14 by Denver.

Washington Coach Joe Gibbs credited Walker and Dallas quarterback Pelluer, who had 323 yards passing, with beating the Redskins.

Gibbs said, "I think Walker is an exceptional back. You don't do all the things he's done in football and not be a great back. He's a complete player."

Gibbs praised Pelluer's mobility. "He was great the way he moved around and got out of trouble," Gibbs said. "That's what you want a quarterback to do."

Gibbs said it just wasn't the Skins day.

"A lot of bad things happend to us all day long," Gibbs said. "We didn't make the plays we needed to."

He added, "Dallas is a heckuva team and has a lot of talent."

Landry said Pelluer "has a great command of the game and will get better with experience."

Pelluer subbed for starter Danny White, who had a pulled groin. Landry said if White's ready, "he'll start next week."

Cowboys

Walker said he just wants to help any way he can.

"I just want to help where I can," said Walker, who played running back, tight end and flanker during the game. "Winning is the important part."

Washington dropped to 5-1 while the Cowboys got back into the division race with a 4-2 ledger.

Walker scored on two one-yard runs, but killed the Redskins with his six pass receptions. Washington was also flagged for interference on Walker to position the Cowboys for a field goal.

The Redskins, burdened by three missed field goals, a lost fumble and an interception, couldn't get their offense untracked. George Rogers scored on a two-yard run in the third period but suffered a sprained ankle and was lost for the day.

Rafael Septien kicked three field goals for the Cowboys and rookie wide receiver Mike Sherrard made a spectacular 27-yard touchdown catch of a Pelluer pass.

Walker set up his own one-yard touchdown run in the first quarter with a 69-yard reception of a lobbed Pelluer pass.

Walker played a big part in two Septien field goals in the second quarter.

He was involved in a 36-yard pass interference penalty to the Washington seven. Septien kicked the field goal from 21 yards out.

Red Sox stay alive

By MICHAEL MARTINEZ
N.Y. Times News Service

ANAHEIM, Calif. — The California Angels, just one out away from savoring their first American League championship, let an improbable victory slip away in the ninth inning Sunday, and then they finally lost it in the 11th. Dave Henderson's sacrifice fly sent home Don Baylor, who had reached base when he was hit by a Donnie Moore pitch, and lifted the Boston Red Sox to a 7-6 victory.

The Angels lead the four-of-seven-game series, 3-2. Game 6 will be played in Boston Tuesday.

Henderson had delivered a two-run homer in the ninth, giving the Red Sox a 6-5 lead. But the Angels, whose season has been marked by remarkable rallies, scored once in the last half of the ninth to send the game into extra innings.

The Angels and the Red Sox also went 11 innings Saturday night, and that game ended in a 4-3 California victory.

SUNDAY'S contest seemed to keep turning. California began the ninth with a 5-2 lead, just a half-inning from their first pennant, but lost it when Baylor and Henderson hit two-run homers.

Then, just two outs away from a loss, the Angels pulled themselves back into the game. Rob Wilfong hit a single past Marty Barrett at second base and Ruppert Jones, a pinch-runner, sprinted home from second base. He dived head first, touching the top corner of the plate as Rich Gedman took the throw from Dwight Evans on a short hop and tagged late.

But California could not score the winner, loading the bases off Steve Crawford — the Boston right-hander walked Brian Downing intentionally to create a force play at home — but failing when Doug DeCinces flied out to shallow right and Bobby Grich hit a soft liner back to the mound.

In the 10th, the Red Sox had runners at first and third with one out against Donnie Moore. But they got nothing as Jim Rice grounded into a double play.

THE ANGELS came tantalizingly close in the home half of the 10th, with Rice taking Gary Pettis' long fly ball off the top of the fence in left with two outs and a runner at first.

So they proceeded to the 11th.

Henderson could have easily been the goat of the day. In the sixth, he knocked Bobby Grich's fly ball over the fence, turning an out into a two-run homer and a 3-2 California lead.

The Angels added two more in the seventh on a high bouncer through the middle by Wilfong that sent home Devon White, and a sacrifice fly by Downing that scored Pettis.

With Mike Witt on the mound in the ninth and the crowd of 64,223 on its feet, the Angels appeared to be on the verge of the World Series. But Witt gave up a single to Bill Buckner and a one-out homer to Baylor, and then he was removed with two out and Gedman coming to the plate. The move seemed appropriate since Gedman had reached Witt for a home run, a double and a single in his first three times at bat.

Gary Lucas hit Gedman with a pitch on his right hand, and Donnie Moore was summoned from the bullpen. His 2-and-2 pitch to Henderson, who was a replacement in center for Tony Armas in the fifth, was deposited over the fence in left, handing the Red Sox their second lead of the game, 6-5. They earlier had a 2-0 lead that vanished.

GRICH CAME to the plate in the sixth inning having reverted to familiar form. He struck out in the second and again in the fourth against Bruce Hurst, and the count was 1-2 in the sixth with two out and DeCinces on second base after a double.

This time, Grich connected. It appeared to be a deep fly ball to left-center field, clearly catchable by Henderson, who replaced Tony Armas in the bottom of the fifth. Henderson faded back, had the ball in his glove, then inadvertently pushed it over as he collided with the fence. It went for a home run and a 3-2 California lead.

Scott convinces NY Mets he cheats

BY CLAIRE SMITH
Los Angeles Times

NEW YORK — Mike Scott did it again. Got inside the Mets' heads, made them a little crazy and, in the process, made the National League Championship Series one game longer, a game that will be played in Houston.

Scott, using what the Mets' Wally Backman called a "split-finger whatever," stopped the Mets 3-1 to tie the best-of-seven series at 2-2 Sunday night and assure a sixth game in the Astrodome.

Scott, creating baseball history with every strikeout in the postseason, pitched a three-hitter. He flirted with his second straight shutout in his first postseason before losing his bid in the eighth. He had pitched 16 consecutive scoreless innings, snapping a record of 15 set in 1974 by Don Sutton. Scott's five strikeouts, added to his record-tying 14 in the opener, also gave him a league championship series record total of 19, eclipsing the mark of 18 set by Toronto righthander Dave Stieb last year.

"He is one of the most dominating pitchers in baseball," Houston Manager Hal Lanier said. And who's to argue?

THOUGH A big, bad break led to the Astros' winning runs — a two-run homer by catcher Alan Ashby in the second — it was the big, bad righthander and the big, bad scuffs that had the Mets in a tizzy. And it was Scott who seems to have rattled baseball's most confident team.

In order to win the National League, both teams have tasks of major proportions cut out for them.

A victory Monday in Game 5 by Dwight Gooden would send the Mets to Houston on a winning note. No matter how confident, cocky or whatever, going to Houston just one defeat from elimination would be as unpleasant a situation as the Mets have faced all season.

Then, the Mets' second priority would have to be to end their obvious dread of Scott. Twice now, the righthander has beaten them. And twice the Mets have questioned the legality of his pitches, this time going so far as to produce "evidence" — six balls that appeared to be scuffed, all scratched in the same spot, balls the Mets say they took out of play and collected on the bench.

THE METS know Scott's MO, but more importantly they know the umpires' MO. And since the umpires are showing a tendency to exonerate the pitcher, the Mets have to figure Scott out, whether he cheats or not. For surely, as night follows day, Scott will follow Game 5 starter Jim Deshaies and then Nolan Ryan to the mound, should this series go to seven games.

And, if Scott — the pitcher who has pitched 18 playoff innings, allowed only eight hits, one run and seemingly struck out every player in the Mets' organization — appears in the seventh game, the Mets face a formidable task.

"I swear, I don't think he can do it again," said Backman, as the entire Mets' club looked ahead three games. "We have a lot of confidence in ourselves, and we really don't care who's on the mound."

Starting Monday, with Deshaies, the Mets get to try to prove that. And the Astros also have some proving to do.

What Houston has to do is find a volunteer to help Scott just a tad. Houston now has two victories. Both belong to Scott. Ryan has lost. Bob Knepper had a commanding 4-0 lead in Game 3 only to see the Mets pull into a tie, a collapse that cleared the way for a comeback victory Saturday.

So, as of Sunday, the Series officially stood at a draw. Mets 2, Scott 2.

SCOTT DIDN'T repeat his record-tying pace by chalking up 14 strikeouts, as he did in a 1-0 victory in Game 1. But he did have the Mets talking about him, nevertheless, some in praise, some in anger.

"That was the best split-finger fastball I ever saw," said an 0-for-4 Keith Hernandez. "Ever...I pride myself on having a good eye at the plate and Scott made me swing at bad pitches. I mean, I was looking for it and I still missed it."

A seething Backman chose to repeatedly show a collection of six scuffed balls he and his teammates collected during the game.

"There were so many of them we would have needed a ballbag to carry them in," Backman said. "It's sandpaper, definitely. I would assume it was in his glove."

Scott's retort? "That's a good idea," the pitcher said. "I'll have to try that."

Sure, Scott said, he saw the Mets rolling ball after ball over to their dugout. He also saw the Mets' reluctance to take the evidence to home plate umpire Dutch Rennert. And if that weren't a confidence-builder, what was? "People have been accusing me since last year," Scott said matter-of-factly. "It's nothing new."

And, as Scott and a slightly peeved Rennert pointed out, where were the actual charges? "There wasn't one batter who asked to check the ball tonight except after one hit in the dirt," the umpire said.

AS TO the half-dozen balls, Rennert expressed annoyed surprise. "Well, that's amazing, because I didn't see a ball that was scuffed and I checked the balls all night, every inning."

The Mets did prove Scott could be scored upon, but only with the use of Mookie Wilson's speed. Wilson led off the eighth with an infield hit over second base, moved from first to third on a grounder to third and the threw to first, and then scored on a sacrifice fly by pinch-hitter Danny Heep.

But that was it. And the three runs surrendered by Mets starter Sid Fernandez seemed monumental by comparison.

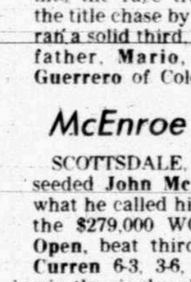

Ironically, it was a home-field disadvantage that cost the Mets two runs early as VIP boxes, installed at the field level along both foul lines, came into play.

In the second inning, with one on and two out, Fernandez got Ashby to loft a foul ball down along the third-base rail. Both third baseman Ray Knight and shortstop Rafael Santana gave chase. Knight peeled off after Santana called him off. Then the shortstop shied away from the newly installed seats and the ball dropped harmlessly into the first row.

The missed opportunity hurt by way of the reprieve received by Ashby, who, two pitches later, cranked a two-run homer.

Three innings later, shortstop Dickie Thon hit a solo homer off Fernandez.

Now it's the Mets vs. Deshaies and Ryan. And then? Well, let's just say every Texan is hoping Scott gets one more chance to show he truly has the right "scuff."

TED BATTLES

Red Sox play with halos

It started out as a bush league yawner, but the Red Sox-Angels American League playoff series has turned into a heart grabber, one in which the emotions are at odds.

It's one where you may pull for the Red Sox and Roger Clemens, but one in which old allegiances make you root for Kirk McCaskill and the ex-Midland Cub Donnie Moore to do well.

At times Fenway and The Big A at Anaheim have resemble pastures normally utilized by goats and just when one is convinced some of these guys should be sent back to the minors, they are the toast of the town.

CALVIN Schraldi gave away Saturday's game, hitting a batter with the bases loaded and two out in the ninth to force home the tying run, with, get this, a change up. Someone call Sal Maglie, quick.

Jim Rice misjudges a fly ball Saturday and Dave Henderson has one go off his glove and over the wall for a homer Sunday, but before it's over, both are save the day heroes, no one more dramatically than Henderson, a homer with two out and two strikes in the ninth.

And who nails it Sunday's Playoff Answer to the 1975 World Series game, no other than Calvin Schraldi, two strikeouts and a pop in the eleventh.

After Saturday's loss, one viewer figured the Sox were dead and just tuned in the last of the eighth Sunday to confirm his belief, found Boston sure enough was three behind and flipped back to the boring football game. About an hour later, it was mentioned that the AL playoff game was still going on.

That's one way to miss the game-of-the-year.

DO YOU ever get the feeling that maybe Off-the-Mark Moseley might be in the wrong profession. It's a wonder someone by now hasn't explained to him that he's doing it all wrong...

Sunday's game in Irving's Texas Stadium was a classic illustration of home field advantage....

The Steve Pelleur we saw yesterday was the Steve Pelleur who came off the bench to spark the Cowboys in a winning drive over the Giants at Texas Stadium, last year. Give him another start and he could create another Quarterback Controversy...

We could have had Texas Tech or Baylor, but what do we get on TV ....Oklahoma-Texas and Texas A&M-Houston.

Sure, Tech-Arkansas was a mismatch, but it was the biggest upset of the season in the SWC....And SMU-Baylor annually is a better game than UT-OU, even when the Horns and Sooners play a close one. It just lacks the hoopla that rubes, like me, go for every time....

AS ONE disgruntled caller remarked, "Oklahoma, whenever they are on TV they're either getting beat up by some better team or beating up some weakling. What it all adds up to is boring, boring, boring..."

Don't blame Barry. He tried to make it interesting, but his bench wasn't that deep....

Now watch, this guy will call back and snort, "If he'd recruit a few more Oklahomans, he wouldn't have that problem."

I don't know, Rice may not be that bad a Cotton Bowl representative for the SWC after all. The Owls beat TCU and would have beaten Texas if, according to Coach Jerry Berndt, the team hadn't been barbecued by the men in stripes in their own stadium...

Semms like the World Series is getting later and later. Next year they may start in November...I hope it's Montreal against Toronto...

Game of Week: Abilene-Midland

Midland travels to face Abilene

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

For the first time since 1981, the fall skies over Midland's Memorial Stadium will be dark.

Midlanders will have to travel to Abilene and P.E. Shotwell Stadium if they want to see a local team in action. Midland Lee is open as the Rebels prepare for the all-important matchup at Memorial Stadium next week against Odessa Permian.

Midland High, which has lost back-to-back games by a margin of 42-0 and have been outscored 122-6 in the last three games, will take to the road to face Abilene High at 8 p.m. Friday in an effort to turn their misfortunes into fortunes.

Prior to 1982, all District 4-5A teams had an open date, leaving all cities in the league without football on one weekend during the season. Now that Big Spring has left the league, one 4-5A team is open from district play each week and this is Lee's week.

The Rebels elected to keep the date open since games with Permian and San Angelo follow on back-to-back weekends. Since MHS must travel to Abilene, Memorial Stadium is without a tennant.

The Bulldogs' worst fears have been realized with the worst district schedule in the league. MHS had to open the district season against Lee, Permian and San Angelo in consecutive order and it hasn't been pretty.

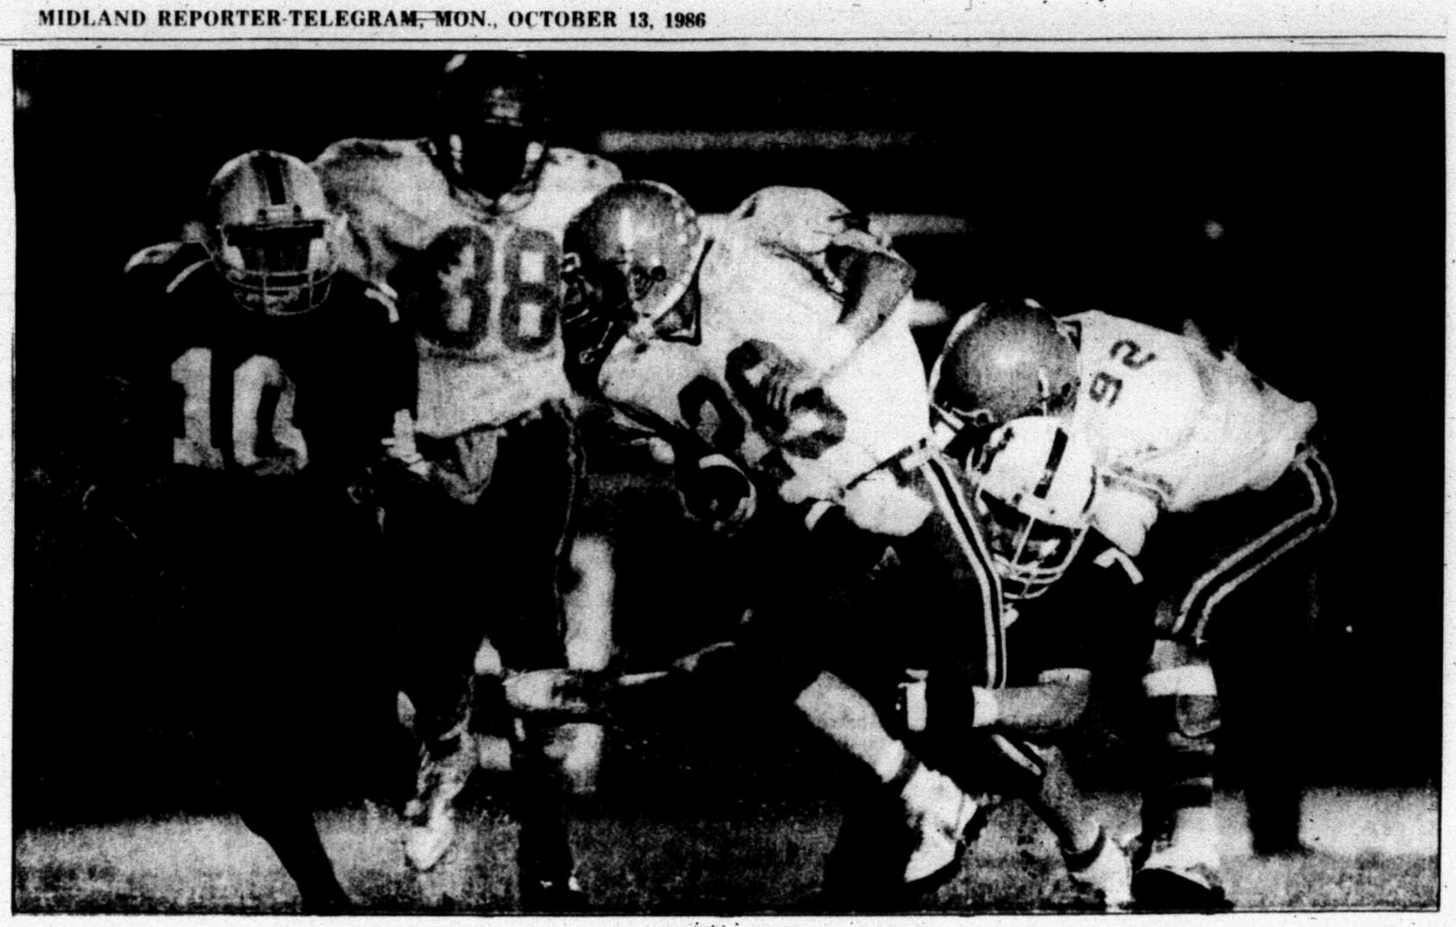

MHS was picked to lose all three of those games, but were picked to finish fourth in the district. Abilene High appears now ready to make a move for that fourth place finish.

The Eagles suffered a big loss to Permian in the first week of 4-5A play, but played San Angelo off its feet, losing in the closing seconds, 28-26. MHS dropped a 42-0 decision to the Bobcats on a very wet and miserable Bulldog Homecoming Friday.

MHS will have a week off following the Abilene High game before closing the season against Odessa High and Abilene Cooper.

If the Bulldogs can rebound from huge losses to the "Big 3", MHS could finish with a 6-3 season record. Most feel the Bulldogs can compete on even terms with the remaining opponents.

However, the first thing on the Bulldog agenda this week is finding some offensive momentum. MHS has scored only six points in the last 12 quarters of play. That will have to change.

College Quotes

Associated Press

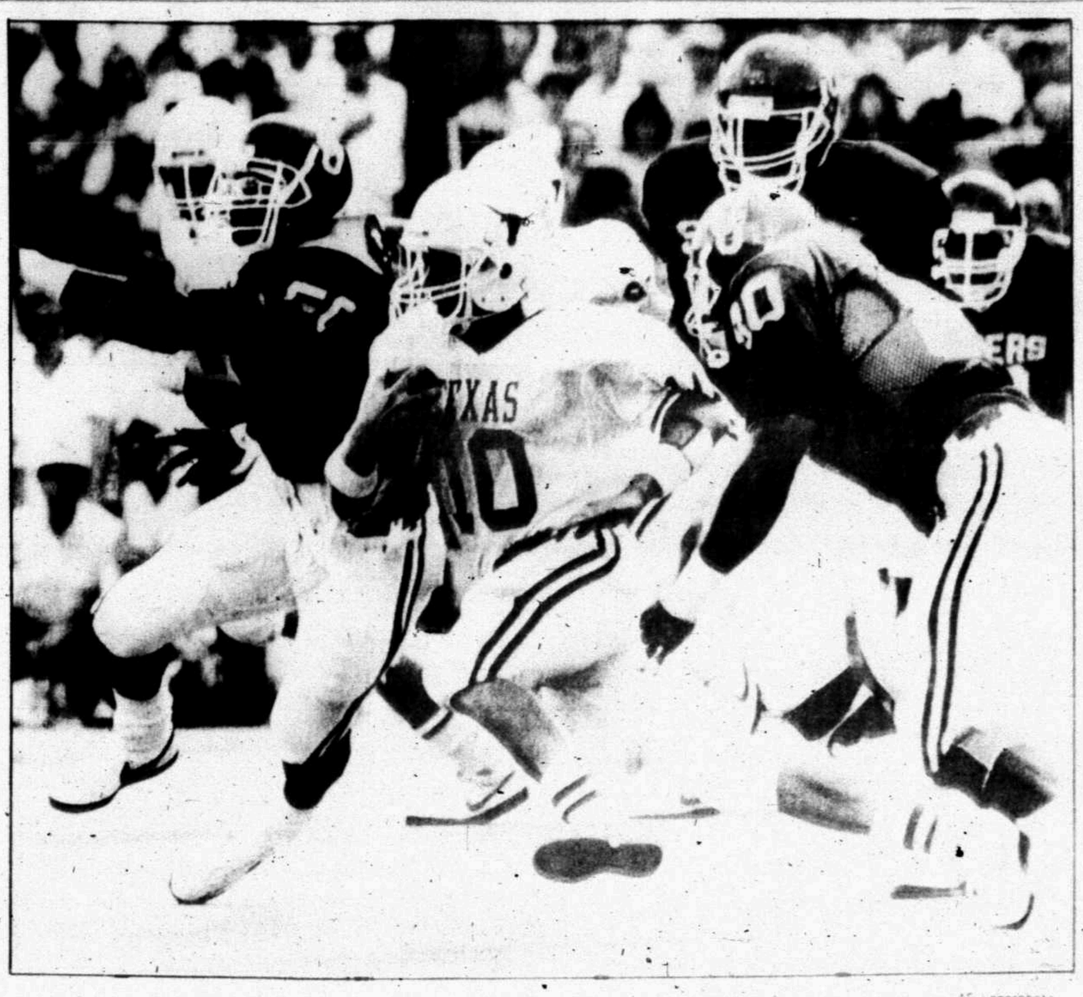

"We went in thinking nothing bad could happen, but it did. I think they (State) had a lot of courage. We obviously needed a game like that" — Penn State Coach Joe Paterno after his fifth-ranked Nittany Lions scored a touchdown Saturday with 3:07 to beat unranked Cincinnati 23-17.

"There was too much Paul Palmer out there today. I have a tremendous amount of respect for him. We had a tough time stopping him. All he needs is that little seam and he's hard to stop" — East Carolina Coach Art Baker on Palmer.

"We took my better plays and ran them and we took his better plays and ran them, and it seemed to work well" — Illinois quarterback Shane Lamb who alternated with Brian Menkhausen on nearly every play in the Illini's 34-27 victory over Purdue.

"I wanted the record pretty bad and I guess my teammates wanted it even more than I did. It really hurt at the end when I realized I had my last chance and didn't get it. I shed a couple of tears, but everybody gave it their best" — Temple running back Paul Palmer after he gained 349 yards in the Owls' 45-28 victory over East Carolina, ending eight yards shy of the NCAA single-game rushing record.

"It was one of those games where you want to win and get out of town" — Arizona State John Cooper commenting on Oregon after his 15th-ranked Sun Devils beat the Ducks 37-17.

Hungry Raiders feast on Hogs

By HARRY KING

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Defensive tackle Desmond Royal and his Texas Tech teammates meant what they wore. Royal was among the Raiders sporting T-shirts that said, "We're hungry."

The Raiders were just that on Saturday. After giving up 151 points to three other top-20 teams, the Raiders outplayed and outhustled eighth-ranked Arkansas and won 17-7.

The victory was the Raiders' first against Arkansas in 10 tries and the first against a top 10 team since beating Houston in 1978.

"We had to take the game away from the guards," said Artis Jackson, one of five defensive tackles used by the Raiders. "If we could control the guards, we could control their whole offense."

HE SAID it was the defensive tackles' responsibility to stop the fullback, the first phase of the triple option.

"If they had gotten that (the fullback) going, that would have killed us," said Royal, who did not play in a 45-8 loss to Texas A&M or a 45-14 loss to Baylor because of a sprained knee. "We put the pressure on their outback blocks. Once we did that, it was nothing after that."

Arkansas fullbacks Derrick Thomas and Marshall Foreman netted 70 yards on 22 carries.

Royal was in on nine tackles, including three for losses. Linebacker Brad Hastings took part in 13 tackles.

"WE JUST outplayed them," Hastings said. "Arkansas has a good ball club and they deserve their ranking. But from the first snap today to the last, we kept the pressure on them. I think that was the key to our success."

He said the Raiders didn't play like they were capable against Baylor and A&M. "This is the biggest win since I've been here," said the three-year letterman.

Arkansas averaged 410 yards per game while putting together a 440 start, but the Razorbacks made only 231 yards against Tech and were never able to establish anything. Not once did they make more than three first downs in a row.

They crossed the Tech 40 twice — late in the second quarter when David Dudley recovered a fumble at the Tech 37 and late in the fourth quarter when Greg Thomas threw to James Shibest for 32 yards and the Raiders got flagged for a personal foul at the end of the play. Dudley's fumble recovery led to Arkansas' only touchdown and Donnie Centers lost a fumble one play after the Shibest pass.

WAYNE WALKER'S 33-yard reverse started the Raiders' first scoring drive. Two passes by Billy Joe Tolliver, who completed 19 of 34 for 168 yards, produced 20 of the final 25 yards and Bouvier Dale scored from the 1. That was the first rushing touchdown Arkansas had allowed a Southwest Conference opponent since the final game of 1984.

Scott Segrist's 49-yard field goal made it 10-7 with 11:58 left in the third quarter. It stayed that way until 5-foot-3 Tyrone Thurman returned a punt 27 yards to the Arkansas 35. Six plays later, Tolliver sneaked in from the 1.

"We finally played a complete game," said Tech Coach David McWilliams. "We started off moving the football and playing solid defense and that made a lot of difference."

Ags-Baylor tops this week' slate

Associated Press

Maybe not quite, but losses to Miami, Baylor and Texas A&M by outlandish margins were almost worth it, that is, Texas Tech's 17-7 upset of Arkansas at Fayetteville, no less.

It came 20 years after a Tech victory over the Razorbacks cost Arkansas the SWC title and a Cotton Bowl berth.

It was a day of upsets in the SWC as all the road teams won in a bizarre SWC Saturday in which Texas A&M emerged with the inside track to the Cotton Bowl. A&M is 2-0, the best record of a team not on probation.

The Aggies moved into the driver's seat for a Cotton Bowl return as SMU pulled the rug from under Baylor, but the Bears can snarl the issue this weekend when they play the Aggies. Reeling Texas, stunned by Oklahoma's big win Saturday, tries to bounce back against Arkansas in another game packing SWC championship Cotton Bowl significance.

SMU is 3-0 followed by Texas 1-0, Baylor 2-1, Arkansas 1-1, Texas Tech 1-2, Rice 1-2, Houston 0-2, and TCU 0-3.

Texas Tech killed off an old ghost that had haunted its football team with perhaps the biggest upset of the decade for the Red Raiders.

The 17-7 upset victory over the No. 8 rated Arkansas Razorbacks in Fayetteville couldn't have come at a better time for new Coach David McWilliams, who had seen his Red Raiders blown out by Miami, Baylor and Texas A&M.

In other games, Texas A&M won its first game in history in the Astrodome 19-7 over Houston. Texas was slaughtered 47-12 by Oklahoma, Rice upset Texas Christian 37-31, and Southern Methodist surprised Baylor 27-21.

"We finally played a complete game," said McWilliams. "We didn't do any thing differently. We just did it better."

Arkansas Coach Ken Hatfield couldn't believe the Tech upset.

This loss is as disappointing as any I've ever been a part of," Hatfield said. "Most losses have something to be gained from them, but this one didn't.

"Tech physically whipped us. That hasn't happened to an Arkansas team in I don't know how long.

"Arkansas needs to start avoiding Tech in years that end in six."

Tech has upset Arkansas in 1966, 1976 and 1986.

Baylor Coach Grant Teaff said SMU's upset puts the Bears "back to the wall. It really makes it tough."

The Bears lost wide receiver Darnell Chase with a fractured arm in the game.

Next Saturday, Baylor meets Texas A&M at 2:30 p.m. in Kyle Field on ABC-TV.

In other games, Arkansas is at Texas in a 6:45 p.m. ESPN-TV game. Houston is at SMU at 2 p.m. Texas Tech is at Rice at noon (Raycom TV) and TCU hosts North Texas State at 2 p.m.

SWC Roundup

Akers promises Longhorns will come back

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Coach Fred Akers did little for his job security with a 47-12 wipeout by the Oklahoma Sooners.

But Akers wasn't worried.

"We'll come back," Akers said after Saturday's game. "We're not going to quit. We still have a chance to win the conference. We're not a bunch of thumbsuckers."

The sixth-ranked Sooners ran up their fourth largest margin of victory in the 81-year history of their rivalry with the Longhorns.

Patrick Collins scored three touchdowns in the second worst defeat inflicted on an Akers-coached team at Texas.

Akers, who is now 5-4-1 against Oklahoma, said, "I really believe this is the best Oklahoma team I have seen and I have been on that field a lot of times. I don't know if a team can play better. They played flawless football."

Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer had sympathy for Akers, his former teammate at the University of Arkansas.

"I just wish Fred well," Switzer said. "I've been on the other side of the ball, too. We just have better players this year.

"Obviously, the game was over after the first half. Our offense played better than I expected. We performed extremely well," he said.

SWC Superlatives

Associated Press

Longest Streak Broken — Texas Tech's 17-7 victory over Arkansas was the Red Raiders' first in Fayetteville. The Raiders hadn't beaten Arkansas since 1976. Tech hadn't beaten a Top Ten team since Houston in 1978.

Career Record — Texas A&M's Kevin Murray set a school career record for completions with 408, beating Edd Hargett's old mark of 400.

Best Play of the Day — SMU's Mitchell Price returns Baylor's opening kickoff for 102 yards for a touchdown on a reverse.

Best Quote of the Day — Texas Coach Fred Akers vowing the return of the Longhorns after a 47-12 blowout by Oklahoma: "We'll be back. We aren't thumbsuckers."

Worst Start — Texas' 2-2 record is the Longhorns' worst beginning in 13 years.

Best Return Man — Sophomore Tyrone Thurman, the smallest player in major college football at 5-3, 130 pounds, returned five punts for 68 yards including a 27-yarder that gave the Red Raiders great field position.

Game of Week: Abilene-Midland

Midland travels to face Abilene

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

For the first time since 1981, the fall skies over Midland's Memorial Stadium will be dark.

Midlanders will have to travel to Abilene and P.E. Shotwell Stadium if they want to see a local team in action. Midland Lee is open as the Rebels prepare for the all-important matchup at Memorial Stadium next week against Odessa Permian.

Midland High, which has lost back-to-back games by a margin of 42-0 and have been outscored 122-6 in the last three games, will take to the road to face Abilene High at 8 p.m. Friday in an effort to turn their misfortunes into fortunes.

Prior to 1982, all District 4-5A teams had an open date, leaving all cities in the league without football on one weekend during the season. Now that Big Spring has left the league, one 4-5A team is open from district play each week and this is Lee's week.

The Rebels elected to keep the date open since games with Permian and San Angelo follow on back-to-back weekends. Since MHS must travel to Abilene, Memorial Stadium is without a tennant.

The Bulldogs' worst fears have been realized with the worst district schedule in the league. MHS had to open the district season against Lee, Permian and San Angelo in consecutive order and it hasn't been pretty.

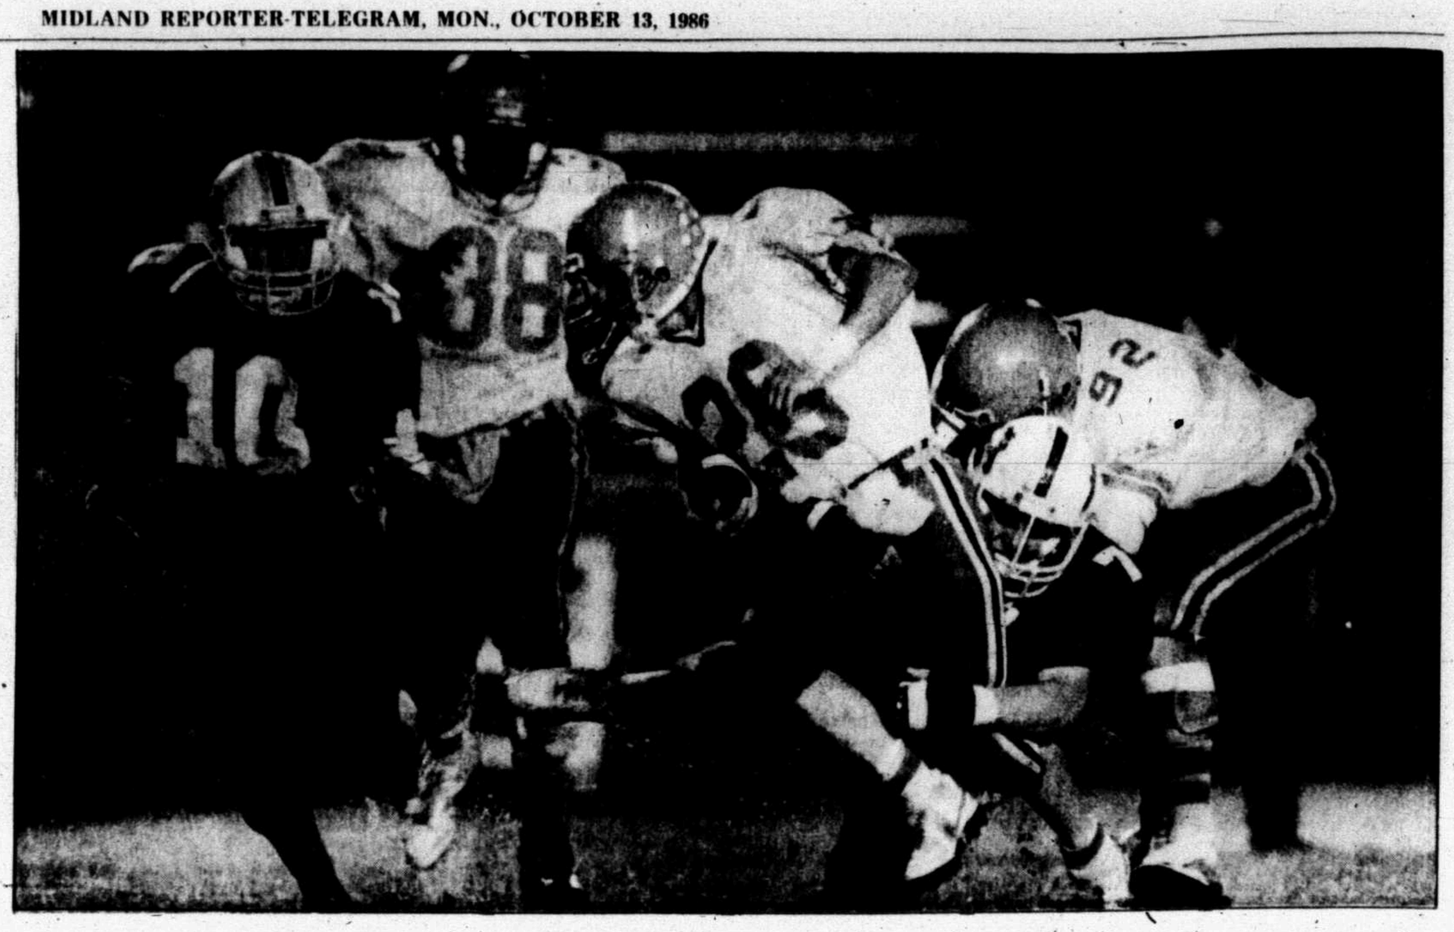

MHS was picked to lose all three of those games, but were picked to finish fourth in the district. Abilene High appears now ready to make a move for that fourth place finish.

The Eagles suffered a big loss to Permian in the first week of 4-5A play, but played San Angelo off its feet, losing in the closing seconds, 28-26. MHS dropped a 42-0 decision to the Bobcats on a very wet and miserable Bulldog Homecoming Friday.

MHS will have a week off following the Abilene High game before closing the season against Odessa High and Abilene Cooper.

If the Bulldogs can rebound from huge losses to the "Big 3", MHS could finish with a 6-3 season record. Most feel the Bulldogs can compete on even terms with the remaining opponents.

However, the first thing on the Bulldog agenda this week is finding some offensive momentum. MHS has scored only six points in the last 12 quarters of play. That will have to change.

Long punt return gives AHS win

From Staff Reports

AUSTIN — After three-plus quarters of scoreless football, Abilene High, 2-4, stole a victory from Austin Johnston with an 85-yard punt return by James Amost for a 7-0 non-conference win here Saturday.

The victory gives the Eagles a 2-4 overall record and ties them with Odessa High and Abilene Cooper for the worst season marks of the District 4-5A teams.

Friday, AHS hosts Midland High at P.E. Shotwell Stadium at 8 p.m.

College Quotes

Associated Press

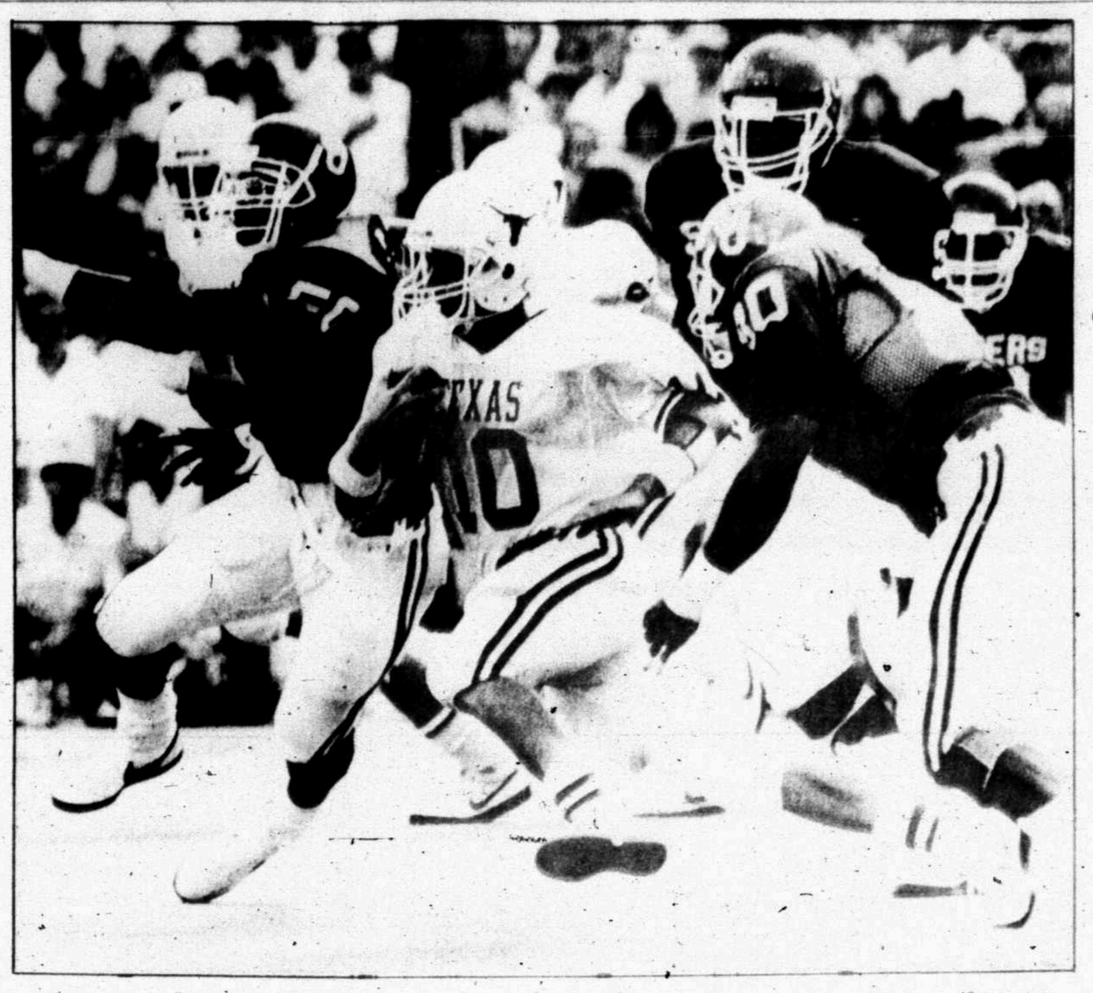

"We went in thinking nothing bad could happen, but it did. I think they (State) had a lot of courage. We obviously needed a game like that" — Penn State Coach Joe Paterno after his fifth-ranked Nittany Lions scored a touchdown Saturday with 3:07 to beat unranked Cincinnati 23-17.

"There was too much Paul Palmer out there today. I have a tremendous amount of respect for him. We had a tough time stopping him. All he needs is that little seam and he's hard to stop" — East Carolina Coach Art Baker on Palmer.

"We took my better plays and ran them and we took his better plays and ran them, and it seemed to work well" — Illinois quarterback Shane Lamb who alternated with Brian Menkhausen on nearly every play in the Illini's 34-27 victory over Purdue.

"I wanted the record pretty bad and I guess my teammates wanted it even more than I did. It really hurt at the end when I realized I had my last chance and didn't get it. I shed a couple of tears, but everybody gave it their best" — Temple running back Paul Palmer after he gained 349 yards in the Owls' 45-28 victory over East Carolina, ending eight yards shy of the NCAA single-game rushing record.

"It was one of those games where you want to win and get out of town" — Arizona State John Cooper commenting on Oregon after his 15th-ranked Sun Devils beat the Ducks 37-17.

Hungry Raiders feast on Hogs

By HARRY KING

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Defensive tackle Desmond Royal and his Texas Tech teammates meant what they wore. Royal was among the Raiders sporting T-shirts that said, "We're hungry."

The Raiders were just that on Saturday. After giving up 151 points to three other top 20 teams, the Raiders outplayed and outhustled eighth-ranked Arkansas and won 17-7.

The victory was the Raiders' first against Arkansas in 10 tries and the first against a top 10 team since beating Houston in 1978.

"We had to take the game away from the guards," said Artis Jackson, one of five defensive tackles used by the Raiders. "If we could control the guards, we could control their whole offense."

HE SAID it was the defensive tackles' responsibility to stop the fullback, the first phase of the triple option.

"If they had gotten that (the fullback) going, that would have killed us," said Royal, who did not play in a 45-8 loss to Texas A&M or a 45-14 loss to Baylor because of a sprained knee. "We put the pressure on their outback blocks. Once we did that, it was nothing after that."

Arkansas fullbacks Derrick Thomas and Marshall Foreman netted 70 yards on 22 carries.

Royal was in on nine tackles, including three for losses. Linebacker Brad Hastings took part in 13 tackles.

"WE JUST outplayed them," Hastings said. "Arkansas has a good ballclub and they deserve their ranking. But from the first snap today to the last, we kept the pressure on them. I think that was the key to our success."

SWC Spotlight

He said the Raiders didn't play like they were capable against Baylor and A&M. "This is the biggest win since I've been here," said the three-year letterman.

Arkansas averaged 410 yards per game while putting together a 4-0 start, but the Razorbacks made only 231 yards against Tech and were never able to establish anything. Not once did they make more than three first downs in a row.

They crossed the Tech 40 twice — late in the second quarter when David Dudley recovered a fumble at the Tech 37 and late in the fourth quarter when Greg Thomas threw to James Shibest for 32 yards and the Raiders got flagged for a personal foul at the end of the play. Dudley's fumble recovery led to Arkansas' only touchdown and Donnie Centers lost a fumble one play after the Shibest pass.

WAYNE WALKER'S 33-yard reverse started the Raiders' first scoring drive. Two passes by Billy Joe Tolliver, who completed 19 of 34 for 168 yards, produced 20 of the final 25 yards and Bouvier Dale scored from the 1. That was the first rushing touchdown Arkansas had allowed a Southwest Conference opponent since the final game of 1984.

Scott Segrist's 49-yard field goal made it 10-7 with 11:58 left in the third quarter. It stayed that way until 5-foot-3 Tyrone Thurman returned a punt 27 yards to the Arkansas 35. Six plays later, Tolliver sneaked in from the 1.

"We finally played a complete game," said Tech Coach David McWilliams. "We started off moving the football and playing solid defense and that made a lot of difference."

Ags-Baylor tops this week' slate

Associated Press

Maybe not quite. But losses to Miami, Baylor and Texas A&M by outlandish margins were almost worth it, that is, Texas Tech's 17-7 upset of Arkansas at Fayetteville, no less.

It came 20 years after a Tech victory over the Razorbacks cost Arkansas the SWC title and a Cotton Bowl berth.

It was a day of upsets in the SWC as all the road teams won in a bizarre SWC Saturday in which Texas A&M emerged with the inside track to the Cotton Bowl. A&M is 2-0, the best record of a team not on probation.

The Aggies moved into the driver's seat for a Cotton Bowl return as SMU pulled the rug from under Baylor, but the Bears can snarl the issue this weekend when they play the Aggies. Reeling Texas, stunned by Oklahoma's big win Saturday, tries to bounce back against Arkansas in another game packing SWC championship Cotton Bowl significance.

SMU is 3-0 followed by Texas 1-0, Baylor 2-1, Arkansas 1-1, Texas Tech 1-2, Rice 1-2, Houston 0-2, and TCU 0-3.

Texas Tech killed off an old ghost that had haunted its football team with perhaps the biggest upset of the decade for the Red Raiders.

The 17-7 upset victory over the No. 8 rated Arkansas Razorbacks in Fayetteville couldn't have come at a better time for new Coach David McWilliams, who had seen his Red Raiders blown out by Miami, Baylor and Texas A&M.

In other games, Texas A&M won its first game in history in the Astrodome 19-7 over Houston. Texas was slaughtered 47-12 by Oklahoma, Rice upset Texas Christian 37-31 and Southern Methodist surprised Baylor 27-21.

"We finally played a complete game," said McWilliams. "We didn't do any thing differently. We just did it better."

Arkansas Coach Ken Hatfield couldn't believe the Tech upset.

"This loss is as disappointing as any I've ever been a part of," Hatfield said. "Most losses have something to be gained from them, but this one didn't.

"Tech physically whipped us. That hasn't happened to an Arkansas team in I don't know how long."

Arkansas needs to start avoiding Tech in years that end in six.

Tech has upset Arkansas in 1966, 1976 and 1986.

Baylor Coach Grant Teaff said SMU's upset puts the Bears' "back to the wall. It really makes it tough."

The Bears lost wide receiver Darnell Chase with a fractured arm in the game.

Next Saturday, Baylor meets Texas A&M at 2:30 p.m. in Kyle Field on ABC-TV.

In other games, Arkansas is at Texas in a 6:45 p.m. ESPN-TV game. Houston is at SMU at 2 p.m. Texas Tech is at Rice at noon (Raycom TV) and TCU hosts North Texas State at 2 p.m.

SWC Roundup

Akers promises Longhorns will come back

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Coach Fred Akers did little for his job security with a 47-12 wipeout by the Oklahoma Sooners.

But Akers wasn't worried.

"We'll come back," Akers said after Saturday's game. "We're not going to quit. We still have a chance to win the conference. We're not a bunch of thumbsuckers."

The sixth-ranked Sooners ran up their fourth largest margin of victory in the 81-year history of their rivalry with the Longhorns.

Patrick Collins scored three touchdowns in the second worst defeat inflicted on an Akers-coached team at Texas.

Akers, who is now 5-4-1 against Oklahoma, said, "I really believe this is the best Oklahoma team I have seen and I have been on that field a lot of times. I don't know if a team can play better. They played flawless football."

Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer had sympathy for Akers, his former teammate at the University of Arkansas.

"I just wish Fred well," Switzer said. "I've been on the other side of the ball, too. We just have better players this year.

"Obviously, the game was over after the first half. Our offense played better than I expected. We performed extremely well," he said.

SWC Superlatives

Associated Press

Longest Streak Broken — Texas Tech's 17-7 victory over Arkansas was the Red Raiders' first in Fayetteville. The Raiders hadn't beaten Arkansas since 1976. Tech hadn't beaten a Top Ten team since Houston in 1978.

Career Record — Texas A&M's Kevin Murray set a school career record for completions with 408, beating Edd Hargett's old mark of 400.

Best Play of the Day — SMU's Mitchell Price returns Baylor's opening kickoff for 102 yards for a touchdown on a reverse.

Best Quote of the Day — Texas Coach Fred Akers vowing the return of the Longhorns after a 47-12 blowout by Oklahoma; "We'll be back. We aren't thumbsuckers."

Worst Start — Texas' 2-2 record is the Longhorns' worst beginning in 13 years.

Best Return Man — Sophomore Tyrone Thurman, the smallest player in major college football at 5-3, 130 pounds, returned five punts for 68 yards, including a 27-yarder that gave the Red Raiders great field position.

Astros' Mike Scott impresses Mets with heat.

ABC puts Jackson in wrong arena

By MICHAEL GOODWIN
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Keith Jackson is the finest college football broadcaster in America. His Southern smoothness, the folksy description "hoss" for a big, strong player, the excitable call of "Fuuummmble," the hurried tempo to match speeded action — these are some of the trademarks and talents of a skilled craftsman.

Unfortunately for Jackson, and television audiences, his current assignment is ABC's telecast of the National League Championship Series. He is badly miscast.

THE SAME qualities that make him right for college football make him wrong for major league baseball. This is, after all, the age of specialization. Jackson is perfect for fall Saturday afternoons in the Sun Belt, conveying the rah-rah spirit as young men, many of them teenagers, most of them amateurs, butt heads before the student body. Bobby socks, cheerleaders, marching bands and dear alma mater — that's Jackson's turf.

It's too bad, then, that Jackson is teamed with Tim McCarver for the Mets-Astros series. For the athletes here are adults, some middle-aged, all professionals. The game is deliberate, even heady, with controlled energy and few raw explosions. Especially for the playoffs, it requires broadcasters with discrimination, knowledge and a willingness to probe beyond soft generalizations.

Take Game 1, on Wednesday night. When an Astros runner did not try to score from second on a single to left, Jackson said the runner was "respecting Mookie Wilson's arm." In fact, Wilson's arm almost never gets respect, especially since shoulder surgery in the spring. Jackson merely saw the runner stop and drew a standard conclusion.

DURING GAME 2, Jackson said twice that Bob Ojeda "takes a healthy cut" at bat, once calling him "the big fella." If that is true, then why did Ojeda have a .113 batting average with no home runs and no runs batted in during the season? Maybe he swings hard in case he hits it, but the facts would indicate his cut is not healthy.

Curiously, McCarver has not stepped forward to fill the breach. The one notable exception came in Game 2, when Rafael Santana was safe at first after hitting a ground ball force-out at second. Jackson said Santana had "good speed." McCarver, over a replay, said Santana has "average speed" and that the ball was hit too slowly for a double play. There is a big difference between those two descriptions.

Perhaps it is out of respect for Jackson, but McCarver, who knows the Mets inside and out, seems to be satisfied to let his partner do too much of the talking. The result was a corn pone quality to the first two games, with little of the erudite insight and humor that mark McCarver's work on Met regular-season games on WOR-TV and SportsChannel. Maybe McCarver is holding back so as not to appear partial to the Mets, or maybe he's just feeling his way with a new partner, though he and Jackson have worked together before.

WHATEVER the reason, McCarver could improve the telecasts by speaking up more during the remaining games. Besides, modesty does not become him any more than it does the Mets or most New Yorkers, so there's no sense trying to change now.

As for pictures, Peter Lasser, the producer, and Craig Janoff, the director, have given us some good ones. The most memorable involved the contrasting fortunes and moods of Keith Hernandez. In Game 1, after he was called out on strikes, Hernandez was so livid, teammates had to console him. Close-up pictures of the dugout showed two players with their arms on him as he muttered, his eyes flashing. His anger continued as he took the field, and the cameras followed him.

In Game 2, after he tripled, knocking in two runs, Hernandez was bursting with fist-pumping enthusiasm. The cameras followed him then, too. Together, those twin images capture the drama and results of the first two games more than all the words we've heard.

ABC'S team for the American League series, Al Michaels and Jim Palmer, has produced better-balanced work, albeit with some curious moments. Unlike Jackson, Michaels is versatile, switching from "Monday Night Football" to baseball without fumbling a line. Perhaps the key is that he is dealing with pro athletes in both cases.

Regardless, his work during the first two Boston-California games has been easy on the ears and stimulating. He said, for example, that Jim Rice is mellowing after being "acerbic" for most of his career and that Mike Witt had been "truculent" with reporters. And on the play in Game 2 when Bobby Grich rounded third and was caught in a run-down, Michaels immediately pointed out that the third-base coach, Moose Stubing, had not given Grich a signal.

Palmer, the former pitcher, brings a range of talent and intelligence, especially about pitching patterns. Otherwise his work has been weak, full of lame excuses and rationalizations, often delivered in a tired monotone.

Payton first to reach 20,000-yard plateau in NFL

Associated Press

Walter Payton of the Chicago Bears became the NFL's first 20,000-yard man as Chicago survived Sunday as the only Chicago one of the two remaining NFL unbeaten teams with a 20-7 win over Houston.

Denver, a 31-14 winner over San Diego, was the other.

Payton, a 12-year veteran, finished with 76 yards rushing and caught one 30-yard pass, giving him a combined 20,045 career yards on rushing, receiving and returns.

His one-yard touchdown run in the third quarter gave the Bears a 14-0 lead and put him exactly at the 20,000-yard mark.

Meanwhile, the New York Jets upset the New England Patriots 31-24 to strengthen their hold on first place in the AFC East and Atlanta downed the Los Angeles Rams 26-14 in a key NFC West game.

Payton seemed more concerned about what he thought was an off performance for the defending champion Bears, who became 6-0 and winners of 12 straight, than about reaching the plateau.

"When we come to a game, it seems to raise the level of intensity of the other team," he said. "It wasn't one of our better efforts."

Steve Fuller was announced as Chicago's starting quarterback, but Jim McMahon trotted on to the field for the Bears' first possession and completed 13 of 33 for 209 yards as the Oilers lost their fifth straight for a 1-5 record.

Jets 31, Patriots 24

The Jets built a 24-0 lead, then withstood Steve Grogan's three second-half touchdowns and a career-high 401 passing yards for their fourth straight victory. It gave New York a 5-1 record in the AFC East and a two-game lead over second-place New England, 3-3. Johnny Hector ran for a career-high 143 yards, including three one-yard touchdowns.

Pat Ryan, subbing for the injured Ken O'Brien at quarterback for the Jets, completed 14 of 25 for 148 yards. Grogan was filling in for the injured Tony Eason.

Falcons 26, Rams 14

Gerald Riggs rushed for 141 yards, including a four-yard touchdown, to give Atlanta a 5-1 mark and send the Rams to 4-2.

Mick Luckhurst hit on field goals of 32 and 49 yards. Buddy Curry and Bret Clark each made 34-yard returns to set up the three-pointers. Luckhurst later added a 41-yarder.

The Rams' Eric Dickerson, who entered the game as the NFL's leading rusher, gained only 73 yards, including a one-yard touchdown.

Raiders 14, Seahawks 10

The Raiders' defense stopped Seattle's usually potent offense and got two touchdown passes from 38-year-old Jim Plunkett, subbing for the injured Marc Wilson. The Raiders improved to 3-3 with their third straight victory and dropped Seattle to 4-2.

Plunkett's scoring tosses, nine yards to Dokie Williams and 49 yards to Jessie Hester gave Los Angeles a 14-0 lead at 4:13 of the second period. Curt Warner's one-yard touchdown cut the margin to 14-10 midway through the third period but the Raiders defense then took over.

Giants 35, Eagles 3

The Giants, 5-1, gained their fifth straight triumph — their longest winning streak since 1970 — behind Phil Simms' two touchdown passes. The New York defense, led by linebacker Lawrence Taylor, held the Philadelphia offense to 117 yards and sacked quarterbacks Ron Jaworski and Randall Cunningham six times.

Solomon Miller, 10 yards, and Lee Rouson, 37 yards, caught their first career touchdown passes as the Eagles fell to 2-4.

Browns 20, Chiefs 7

Bernie Kosar passed for 287 yards, including touchdown passes to Earnest Byner and Ozzie Newsome, against the Chiefs who played without five starters. Both teams now are 3-3.

Newsome's six-yard touchdown catch broke a 7-7 tie five minutes into the third quarter, extending his streak of catching at least one pass to 104 games. Matt Bahr kicked field goals of 34 and 36 yards.

Lions 21, Packers 14

Detroit, led by the rushing of rookie Gary James and James Jones, dropped Green Bay to 0-6. James rushed for 140 yards and scored his first NFL touchdown and Jones added 99 yards.

Eric Hipple's two-yard toss to David Lewis wrapped up the game with 7:07 remaining before Green Bay scored with six seconds left. The Lions are 3-3.

Dolphins 27, Bills 14

Miami, whose defense was blamed for its worst start since 1969, forced four turnovers, handing Buffalo its 20th straight road loss. Two of the turnovers set up Dolphin scores.

Lorenzo Hampton scored on runs of one and four yards, Dan Marino hit Mark Duper for a 30-yard touchdown and Fuad Reveiz kicked field goals of 22 of 36 yards for Miami, which improved to 2-4 as Buffalo dropped to 1-5.

Cardinals 30, Bucs 19

The Cardinals, giving Stump Mitchell more work since trading Ottis Anderson to the Giants, broke a seven-game losing streak and gave Coach Gene Stallings his first NFL victory.

Mitchell scored on runs of three and 31 yards and Neil Lomax passed for 228 yards and two touchdowns — 30 yards to Earl Ferrell and 38 yards to Chas Fox. Both teams are now 1-5 this season.

Saints 17, Colts 14

A fumble recovery set up New Orleans' clinching touchdown and a fumble recovery by Johnnie Poe ended Indianapolis' final rally. The Saints are 2-4, the Colts 0-6.

Buford Jordan's third-quarter nine-yard touchdown following an Indianapolis fumble gave the Saints a 17-0 lead. Quarterback Jack Trudeau rallied the Colts on scoring passes of 24 and 15 yards to Matt Bouza.

Vikings 27, 49ers 24

Four minutes into overtime, Chuck Nelson connected on a 28-yard field goal giving Minnesota, 4-2, the victory. San Francisco's Ray Wersching missed a 38-yard field goal try, with the ball hitting the left upright, as regulation time expired.

Minnesota had trailed 24-14 early in the second half after three touchdown passes by San Francisco's Jeff Kemp. But Nelson hit a 26-yard field goal and Tommy Kramer combined with Anthony Carter on a 35-yard scoring pass with 8:23 remaining. The 49ers fell to 4-2.

Norm Cash drowns in Lake Michigan boating accident

CHARLEVOIX, Mich. (AP) — Norm Cash, a first baseman for the Detroit Tigers for 15 years and the American League batting champion in 1961, apparently drowned Sunday while boating in northern Lake Michigan, authorities said.

The body of Cash, 51, of Bloomfield Hills, Mich., but a native West Texan, was positively identified by his wife, Dorothy, shortly after 3 p.m.

The body was discovered about 11 a.m. in about 15 feet of water just offshore from Beaver Island, located 32 miles northwest of Charlevoix in Lake Michigan.

"His boat was over at Beaver Island," Gokey said. "He's known to frequent the Charlevoix area. He's got a big pleasure boat, a cabin cruiser."

Cash, nicknamed "Stormin' Norman," was remembered Sunday for a sense of humor that didn't overshadow his gritty competitiveness.

His sense of humor occasionally surfaced on the field. In 1973, he came to bat at Tiger Stadium with a table leg instead of a bat to face California's Nolan Ryan, who was throwing a no-hitter against Detroit.

Tigers publicist Dan Ewald recalled that Cash, challenged by the umpire, responded, "I can't hit him with a regular bat."

Cash, born in Justiceburg, Texas, started his major league baseball career in 1958, playing two seasons for the Chicago White Sox before being traded to Cleveland and then to Detroit.

He won the American League batting title in 1961 with a .361 average. Cash also led the league that year with 193 hits, and his 41 home runs in 1961 is a record for a left-handed Detroit batter.

Cash hit all but four of his 377 career home runs for the Tigers. In 1961, he became the first Tiger — and only the third player — to hit a home run over the roof at Tiger Stadium. He repeated that feat three other times.

He played for the 1968 World Series champions in Detroit, batting a team-high .385 against the St. Louis Cardinals. He also had played on the 1959 White Sox World Series team.

Cash retired from baseball in 1974 with a lifetime .271 batting average. He worked afterward as a manufacturers' representative in the Detroit area and was a color commentator for one season on Tiger's subscription TV telecasts. Cash suffered a slight stroke in June 1979.

A month after winning the batting title in 1961, Cash was inducted into the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics Hall of Fame. Cash was an All-Lone Star Conference football player at Sul Ross College. He also played on the baseball team at the college in Alpine, Texas.

Cash is survived by his wife. He had two children by his first marriage, both of whom live in Texas, Campbell said.

DALLAS

Septien kicked a 38-yard field goal after Walker made a one-handed catch on a 26-yard pass from Pelluer to the Redskin 28 in the second period.

Walker made a spectacular 27-yard run with a screen pass to the Redskins one-yard line and followed it up with the Cowboys' final touchdown in the fourth period.

Pelluer passed for 323 yards, the most by a Cowboys' quarterback since Gary Hogeboom had 389 yards in 1985.

Washington, which only had six first downs in the first half, drove 65 yards in 11 plays in the third period for its only touchdown. Schroeder's 21-yard pass to Clint Didier was the key play as Rogers scored from 2 yards away.

Washington placekicker Mark Moseley missed a 37-yard field goal attempt and an extra point after Rogers' 2-yard scoring run. Steve Cox missed field goal tries of 50 and 51 yards.

The Cowboys got a big break at the start of the game. Dexter Manley sacked Pelluer for an apparent safety, but officials ruled Dallas was guilty of illegal procedure and the olock was dead.

Then Barry Wilburn, subbing for the injured Vernon Dean, was flagged for interference on third and 14 and Dallas eventually drove 95 yards for a touchdown.

A 36-yard interference penalty on linebacker Rich Milot, who bumped into Walker at the Washington 7, positioned the Cowboys for Septien's 21-yard field goal to make it 10-0.

Walker's one-handed catch on a 26-yard pass from Pelluer to the Washington 28 set up Septien's 38-yard field goal for a 13-0 second period lead.

Tailback Paul Palmer gained 349 yards on 43 carries, eight yards short of the NCAA single-game rushing record, in Temple's 45-28 victory over winless East Carolina. The record of 357 was set by Washington State's Rueben Hayes in 1984 against Oregon. Palmer gained only three yards in his final three carries. Palmer tied an NCAA record with 417 all-purpose yards, set in 1981 by Florida State's Greg Allen against Western Carolina.

Gordie Lockbaum scored six touchdowns in Holy Cross's 48-7 victory over Dartmouth. Kenny Gillum duplicated that feat in Indianapolis' 58-12 victory over Valparaiso.

Missouri's Tom Whelihan and Ball State's John Diettrich kicked 62-yard field goals, five yards short of the NCAA record set by Texas' Russell Erxleben and matched by Arkansas' Steve Little and Wichita State's Joe Williams. The college football record is 69 yards, set in 1976 by Ove Johansson of Abilene Christian, an NAIA school.

Speaking

"Sure I knew we'd win. I predicted 63-0." — Brian Bosworth after Oklahoma defeated Texas 47-12.

"It's 14-0 and I haven't even finished my second sip of water. It's a tough way to start and I think it rattled us." — Vanderbilt Coach Watson Brown after Auburn took a 14-0 lead in the first 66 seconds on the way to a 31-9 victory.

Pointers

Oklahoma has outscored opponents 220-53 in its five games. Iowa has outscored opponents 210-44 in its five games. Nevado-Reno has a 268-88 advantage in its six games.

Dartmouth has been outscored 180-26 this year, including 159-19 in its last three games. Northern Illinois has been outscored 203-47 in six games. Morgan State, which has the longest Division I losing streak at 27 games, has been outscored 216-75 in six games.

Harvard has been shut out in three consecutive games for the first time since 1939.

Backpedaling

Houston had minus-17 yards rushing and minus-one yard of offense in the first half of its 19-7 loss to Texas A&M. ... Bowdoin ran for minus-27 yards against Williams. ... Tiffin rushed for minus-39 yards in its 41-6 loss to Wayne, Mich.

Numerology

Washington State defeated Southern California 34-14 for its first victory over the Trojans in 16 games since 1957. ... Hamilton, N.Y., scored its most points since 1899 in defeating Wesleyan of Connecticut 64-7. ... Georgia Tech upset No. 17 North Carolina State 59-12, its most points since a 59-0 victory over Presbyterian in 1939. ...

Clarion must win its five remaining games to extend its streak of 25 straight winning seasons, the longest in Division II. ... Nebraska has won 43 consecutive Big Eight games against teams other than Oklahoma.

Lamar slump reaches No. 13

Associated Press

Lamar University lost its fifth straight game of the year, a school record 13th straight game overall and a near record 12th straight Southland Conference game, as the Cardinals allowed the clock to run out while lining up for a field goal attempt in a 22-21 loss to Northeast Louisiana.

The Cardinals, with timeouts remaining, were caught by a rule change that allows the captain of a team awarded a penalty in the final 25 seconds of the first or second half the option of starting the clock when the ball is ready for play.

Hurst, watching from the mound, collapsed to his hands and knees in disappointment. Grich, heading toward third base, thrust both fists into the air and shouted. He responded to a curtain call from a crowd of 64,223 by taking several steps from the dugout, holding up his index finger and pumping his right fist.

The Red Sox gave up two more runs after Bob Stanley replaced Hurst to start the seventh. Rob Wilfong's pinch-hit double past second base — Spike Owen and Marty Barrett each missed chances to stop the ball — sent in Devon White, and Brian Downing's sacrifice fly to shallow center was enough for Gary Pettis to sprint home for a 5-2 lead.

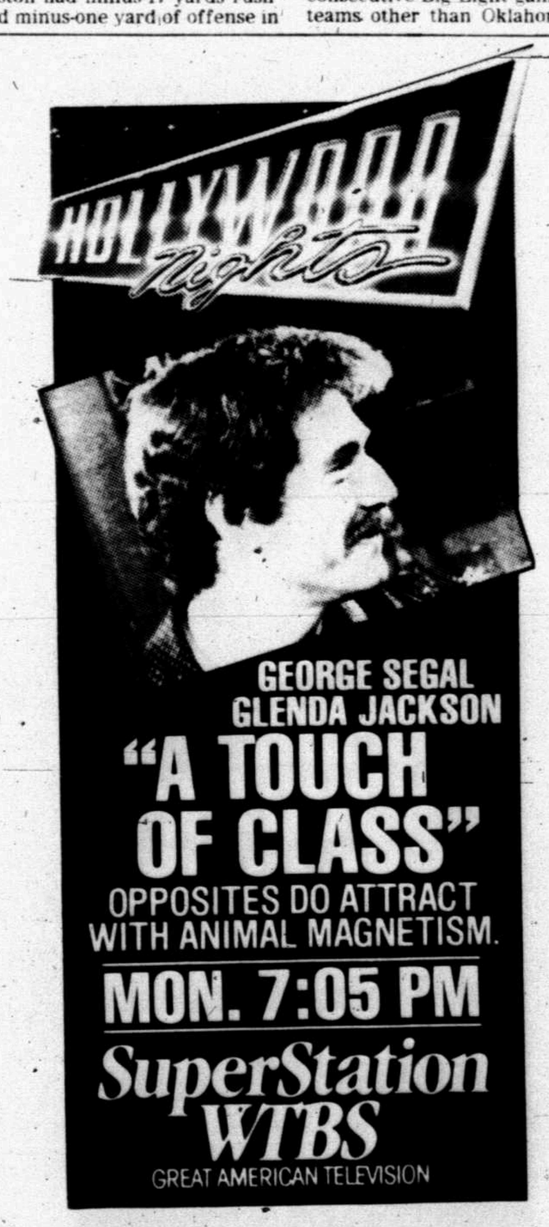

Witt, who beat Roger Clemens in the series opener, giving up just one run while pitching a complete game, surrendered two quick runs Sunday on a single by Jim Rice and a line-drive homer by Rich Gedman in the second. In between the hits, Witt had struck out Baylor and Dwight Evans, but Gedman took a 1-and-2 pitch and hit a rope to right that landed in the first several rows of the stands.

He then retired 10 of the next 11 batters with only one ball reaching the outfield.

The Angels kept themselves close, getting a bases-empty home run from Bob Boone in the third but failing to mount any reasonable threat until Grich's startling shot put California in front.

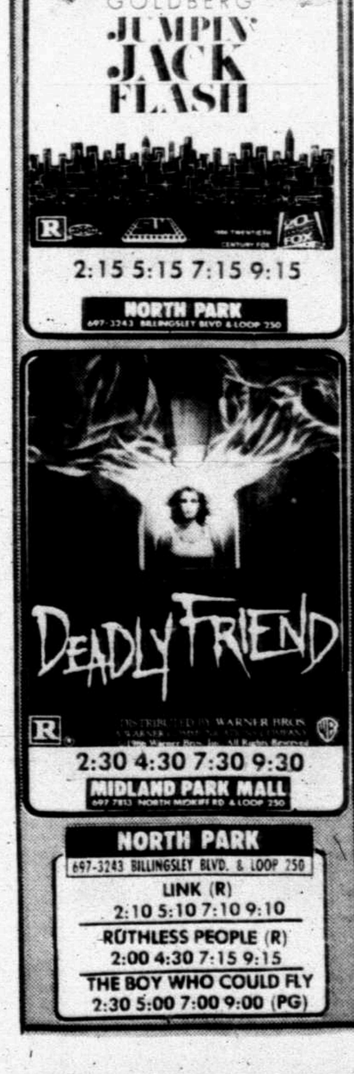

One day later, the two clubs were still dissecting Saturday night's improbable comeback by the Angels, who were losing by a 3-0 margin in the bottom half of the ninth inning but won the game in 11, 4-3. The late rally was nothing new to California, which won six games this season after trailing in the ninth.

October is apple harvesting month and Tom Runyan, left, continues a family tradition by selling apples from his roadside stand near Hope, N.M.

Apple for apple's sake

Fall wouldn't be the same without them and there's nothing better than apples fresh from the orchard during cool October days.

Tom Runyan of Hope, N.M., carries on a family tradition every fall by operating an apple stand in front of his 100-acre apple orchard.

The stand and orchard have been run by the Runyans for the past 25 years.

The Runyans operate their roadside business about 52 miles west of Artesia on State Highway 82.

Produce from the Runyan orchard includes Red Delicious apples, Jonathans and Wine Sap apples.

Along with apples, the Runyan's peddle apple cider, honey and various vegetables.

The Runyans do not rely solely on produce from their orchard, which is sold wholesale to area supermarkets.

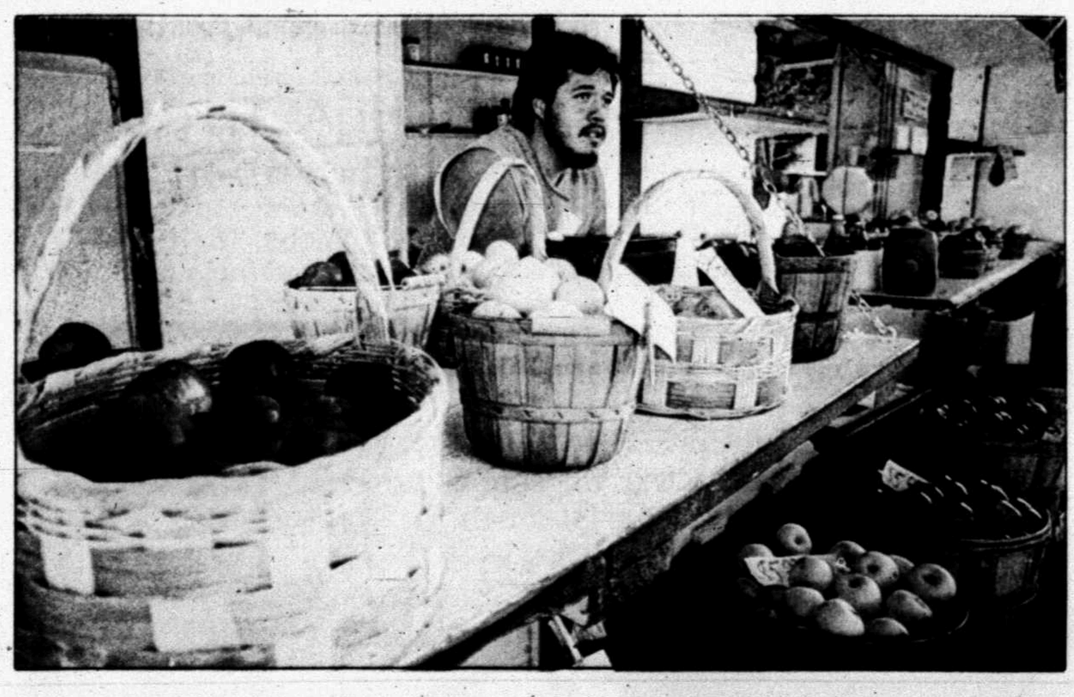

They also operate a goat and sheep ranch, Runyan said.

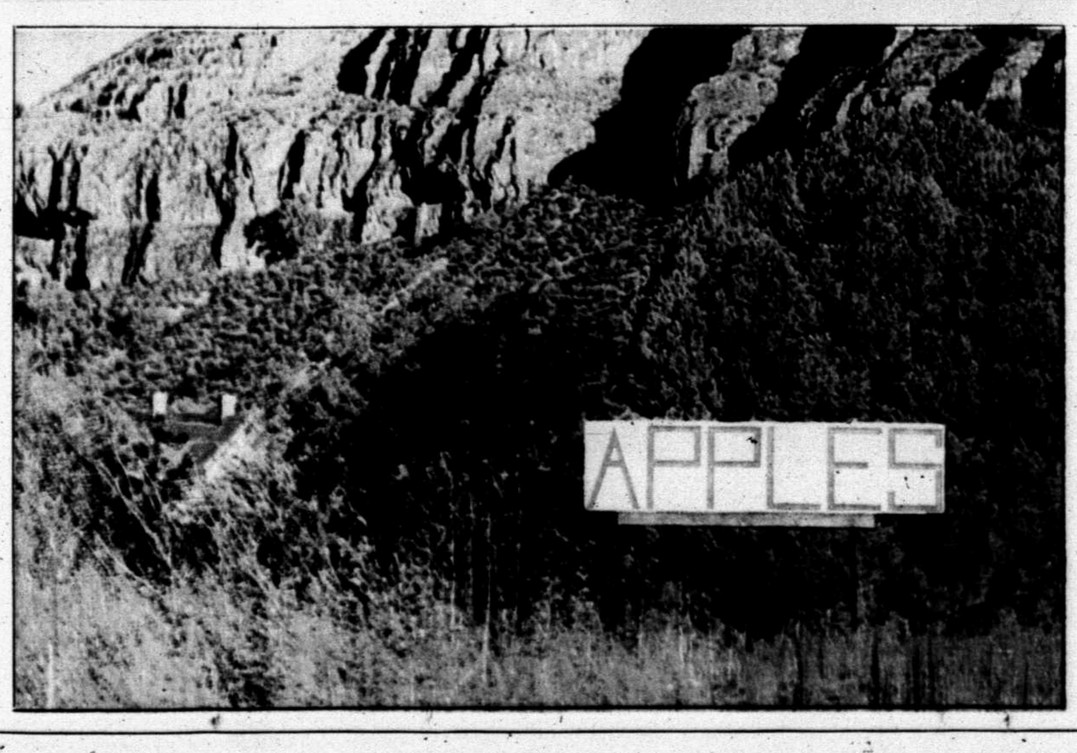

The price of apples varies from $1 a bushel to $12 a bushel, depending on the type, he said.

The Runyans are among four main growers in the area ideal for apple growing. Temperatures are cool, there is plenty of irrigation and the altitude is about 5,200 feet.

While roadside business has been a little slow this year with tourism down, wholesale sales have been up, Runyan said.

Despite the encroachment of supermakets, roadside sales will problably never die out, he said.

Police seek man who robbed Midland woman

Police Roundup

From Staff Reports

Midland police are looking for a suspect who wore a stocking over his head when he robbed an 82-year-old Midland woman late Saturday at the woman's home.

According to reports, the man, described as a black male between 30 and 35 years old, entered the house in the 800 block of W. Michigan Avenue about 9:30 p.m. Saturday. The suspect took $72 cash from the woman's purse, and also searched a safe in the residence, but did not take anything.

The victim described the man as about six feet tall, weighing approximately 240 pounds. He was last seen wearing a dark short sleeve shirt and faded blue jeans.

Police and the Midland County Sheriff's office are also investigating several burglaries of residences and businesses that occurred over the weekend.

A videocassette recorder valued at $1,100, a video game valued at $150, assorted jewelry, a .22 caliber rifle and .25 caliber automatic pistol of undetermined value were stolen from a residence in the 3900 block of Crestgate Avenue. Police said the items were taken sometime between Friday and Sunday. Police said someone entered the residence through the front door.

The Sheriff's office is investigating the burglary of items valued at more than $1,000 from a mobile home. Dennis Mitchell, who reported the burglary, told deputies a videocassette recorder valued at $550, a color television valued at $250, a stereo valued at $200, and several cassette tapes valued at $65 were reported stolen from a mobile home near County Road 116. Reports said the items were taken sometime between 3 a.m. Saturday and 1 p.m. Sunday.

Police have a suspect in the theft of a 13-inch color television valued at $175 from a residence in the 1300 block of S. Johnston Street. Reports said the item was stolen sometime Saturday between 7 p.m. and 11:20 p.m. The suspect was described only as a Hispanic male.

A 19-inch color television with remote control valued at $400 and an air conditioner valued at $400 were reported stolen from a building in the 3600 block of N. Big Spring, police said. The complainant, Esperanza Guvara, told police the items were taken sometime between Oct. 5 and Oct. 11.

Two leather jackets, a television and a stereo valued at $900 were reported stolen from a residence in the 4200 block of Andrews Highway. According to reports, the items were taken sometime between noon Oct. 9 and 4 p.m. Oct. 12.

In other reports, several toys valued at $500 were reported stolen from Toys N More, 2310 W. Michigan Ave. The manager of the business, Trina Bridgeman, told police someone entered the store through the front door sometime early today, between 2 and 4 a.m.

Dare to place classified ad ends in marriage

LONGVIEW (AP) — It started out as a sort of dare, but it ended with a romance and marriage.

That's what happened when a single woman placed a classified ad in the Longview (Texas) News-Journal last May.

It read: "25-year-old woman seeks gentleman for companionship who enjoys outdoors, travel, new adventures. Photo preferred."

"It was done more or less in a dare," Sandra Marley said. "A girlfriend of mine had read one of the ads someone had put in the paper and I said, 'I wouldn't have the guts to do that.' But she kept daring me to, so we both wrote the ad.

"I didn't put any age preference in the ad," Mrs. Marley said. "But I was really looking for somebody older than me because I like the older music and the men tend to dress more conservatively. But as it turned out, I met and married someone younger."

Mrs. Marley moved to Longview from Florida 2½ years ago and said she "found there is very little to do if you're single in Longview."

"I tried the single clubs, blind dates, that whole scene. You feel pressured to make blind dates work since friends went to such trouble setting the two of you set up," she recalled.

She said she was surprised by the number of responses she received from the ad.

"I got about 15 letters from various walks of life. Most of the men who responded were very nice-looking guys and real down to earth," she said. "Most dressed very well and were businessmen. They were not like the people you meet at bars. They seemed to be of a much more sincere nature and they had a nice outlook on life."

Some of the responses resulted in surprises.

"It turned out I knew the ex-wife of one man I met through my ad, and I'd already gone out a couple of times with another man who responded. We laughed about that," she remembered.

"One guy wrote that he hoped I liked to ride around in pick-up trucks and drink beer," she said. "I didn't respond to that one. I don't think he even worked."

Two weeks after she first placed the ad, she met the response that resulted in her marriage. And that response had a strange twist at the start.

The letter had a woman's name on the return address.

"As it turned out, the woman was someone I knew, but who didn't know she was writing me. She was writing for a friend she felt I would like," Mrs. Marley said.

The woman arranged for her male friend to meet with Mrs. Marley, and "the rest is history."

"We met on May 30. He proposed to me on July 30 at the Galleria in Dallas," she said. They were married on Aug. 30.

"My husband is handsome, personality-plus and enjoys going out," she said. "I wondered why I didn't put an ad in the paper a long time ago."

Two young men bonded through life by blood of one beating heart

TYLER (AP) — A year ago Michael Drummond of Phoenix and the family of Tarro Griffin in East Texas had little in common.

But over the weekend, Drummond and relatives of Griffin met for the first time, drawn together by an emotional bond.

The heart of Tarro Griffin beats in Michael Drummond's chest and is the reason he is alive today.

"From the beginning, I wanted to meet them," Drummond said of the Griffin family.

Last year, Griffin, 19, was killed in a motorcycle wreck. His heart was transplanted into Drummond's chest. Drummond, 37, had been kept alive by an artificial heart and made headlines in September 1985 when he became the youngest person to receive an artificial heart.

On Saturday, the Phoenix grocery store worker met the Griffin family in their Lindale home. Afterward, they talked with reporters at Tyler's Mother Frances Hospital.

"I was nervous before he got there. I was walking and doing this," said Mrs. Griffin, wringing her hands in exaggerated style. "But after he came in and we met, we just relaxed and sat and talked.

"I feel like he's my son," said Mrs. Griffin, who turned to smile at Drummond.

The fact that Drummond is white and the Griffins are black was a matter of irrelevance. "I'm part of their family," Drummond said.

Drummond says he feels great and has been back at work eight months, working 40 hours a week.

His trip to East Texas was taken on his vacation time.

When he received the Jarvik-7 artificial heart last year in Tucson, Ariz., Drummond had been within hours of death. But a series of small strokes after the artificial heart was implanted continued to make his survival tenuous, and the Griffin family gave their consent to donate Tarro's heart.

The Griffins view Drummond's visit to East Texas as an affirmation of their religious faith.

"This is something only God could do," said Tarro's father, Willis Griffin.

Fred Mays, 74, learned the watch trade in 1938. Mays has since sold his business, but old customers still mail him broken hopes from Nevada, New Mexico, Minnesota and Missouri.

Retired clock fixer still receives 'broken hopes' from all points

By RICK SMITH

BELLS (AP) — Fred Mays watches clocks.

He watches the way their pendulums swing, back and forth, back and forth.

He notices how their double hands sweep, ticking off days and decades and lives.

"I like to work on clocks," said Mays, 74.

"I like fixing clocks."

Retired, his jewelry shop sold, he lives with his wife of 52 years on a swatch of land.

Old customers mail him broken hopes from Nevada and New Mexico, Minnesota and Missouri.

Mays passes his time fixing their clocks.

He learned the trade in 1938 from his father-in-law, a jeweler.

For seven years he studied the springs, the wheels, the gears with tiny brass teeth.

That's how long it takes to learn to work on clocks, he said.

A long time.

"But that son of a gun, he taught me. He really taught me. I learned all there was to know about clocks."

Young people today don't have time to fix clocks, he said.

Their lives are too busy; too fast, he said.

So when he sold his store to a younger person and left California, he took his tools: tiny screwdrivers and ancient old gauges, odd bits of old metal that are no longer made.

Clocks followed him in time. Customers mailed them first to his vacation home in Minnesota.

Now, the UPS man brings them to Bells.

"One woman wrote: 'I hope you never die. Who will fix my clock?' "

Mays shook his head.

"I wonder, too. Who will look after their clocks?"

There has never been a clock that he could not fix.

Never. Not a time.

Once at a bridge party, a Sherman man asked Mays if he could fix a cuckoo clock he brought from Europe in 1940.

"I've never found anyone who could fix it," he told Mays. "Do you think you could?"

"Certainly," Mays replied without a moment's hesitation.

"Don't you need to see it? Don't you want to know what's wrong?"

"I don't have to know," Mays said with a nod. "If it's a clock, I can fix it."

Cardboard boxes hold his spare parts: main springs and bushings and brass plates and wheels.

Most of the parts are no longer made: a treasure trove scavenged from a lifetime of Ingrahams and Waterburys and Seth Thomas Regulators.

When he sits to work, Mays is like a surgeon or a painter.

"You get a clock that won't run, there's got to be something wrong with it. You've got to find it."

Years have weakened his eyes; he dons magnifiers, bends close, aims a light, dabs at a clock works with a 60-year-old screwdriver.

"This doesn't strike the hours. I'm going to have to take it all apart. Polish the wheels one at a time. That's the only way I can find what's hanging up. Probably a burr on a wheel. It's painstaking. It takes time, about six hours. But it's not bad, if you enjoy it."

Cheap new clocks, throwaway clocks, make him a little sad.

"It's a waste. Stamp them out, throw them away."

DEATHS

Elizabeth Pittman

Services for Elizabeth Pittman of Midland will be 11 a.m. Tuesday in the Ellis Chapel with Elder Elvis Barrington, pastor of the Primitive Baptist Church, officiating.

Interment will be at Resthaven Memorial Park with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Pallbearers will be Bob Drummond, Nelson Mahurin, Oscar Crawford, Bill Hosey, Dennis Walker and Bill Higgins.

Mrs. Pittman died Friday evening at a local hospital.

White, Clements continue attacks in campaign to sway black voters

FORT WORTH (AP) — Gov. Mark White warned black voters that his Republican opponent, former Gov. Bill Clements, would close two predominantly black collges.

Clements, meanwhile, spoke at a black church in Houston as the two candidates continued their attacks on each other in Sunday campaign stops in black communities.

White, who visited eight churches in Fort Worth, accused Clements of using "code words" like consolidation and duplication to disguise his plans to close Prairie View A&M and Texas Southern University in Houston.

Responding to the attack, Clements said, "I did more for Texas Southern than any governor in modern times."

Endorsed by about two dozen black ministers at a stop at St. Agnes Baptist Church in Houston, Clements pledged to increase jobs in Texas, particularly for black youth.

Tennis tournament, 'Smash Fiesta' raise funds for DDC

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

Neither rain, nor snow, nor sleet, nor even the recent West Texas monsoons can stay dedicated tennis players from their favorite sport — not when the event was the second annual Charity Tennis Tournament and Smash Fiesta to benefit the Developmental Disabilities Center.

"We expanded the tournament this year to include men and women's doubles, as opposed to just women's doubles," said Kelly Hubley, co-chairman of the event. "Last year we had women's doubles in the morning and lunch and a style show."

This year, in addition to the expanded tournament, a "Smash Fiesta" dinner and dance also was presented. Although the fiesta was originally planned for the grounds of the Racquet Club, it was moved to the American Legion Hall when the weather became blustery. An estimated 275-300 people were expected to attend the event, said Ms. Hubley.

Highlight of the fiesta was the auction of a tennis racquet donated by tennis superstar Martina Navratoleva. The racquet — used by Ms. Navratolova in the Virginia Slims tournament earlier this year — was, in fact, auctioned twice. Kelly Baxter, whose successful bid was $2,000, donated the racquet back to be auctioned again. Roger Jarvis was the second successful bidder, again with a bid of $2,000.

With the one auction item and two generous men, an added $4,000 was raised for the DDC. Ms. Hubley and DDC parent and committee member Cindi Mladenka were responsible for a videotape which was sent to Ms. Navratolova, resulting in the donation of the racquet.

In spite of the weather, the charity tennis tournament was played as scheduled Saturday morning. According to Racquet Club tennis-pro Joe Dan McBeth, winners were: Men's pro-am — Rex Elmore and Jack Sayers, first; David Eckley and Ronnie Haudek, second; Men's B — Jarvis and Lee Hobbs, first; Jim Woodcock and Toby Engleman, second; Men's C — Fred Shantz and Lee Grigson, first; Stanley Saikin and Harold Schneider, second; Women's A — Sharon Seay and Chris Thomas, first; Lisa Smith and Betty Smith, second; Women's B — Group 1: Paige Innerarity and Ms. Hubley, first; Jean Banks and Sue Conner, second; Group 2: Peggy Eckley and Linda Green, first; Eva Jo Milby and Billy McKinney, second; Group 3: Norma Webb and Jan Schneider, first; Sherry Davison and Wendy Logan, second.

The charity tennis tournament and fiesta was expected to raise about $15,000 for the DDC, Ms. Hubley said.

Kay Bynum, executive director of the DDC, said the funds would be used for "operating expenses and scholarships." The DDC serves children from the entire Permian Basin, she said, though "all our students are from Midland at the present time."

Currently the DDC is housed at High Sky Children's Ranch, Ms. Hubley said.

"Someday we hope to have our own building," added Ms. Bynum. "And we have to have a residential program" for the older students who have completed their schooling.

The DDC was founded in 1984 "on the philosophy that every person deserves the opportunity to develop his or her full potential," according to information from the center. It operates 12 months a year, serves children 18 months to 18 years old, and maintains a four-students-to-one-teacher ratio. "The DDC is a place where special children receive individual attention are met with educational challenges and are offered love and guidance to reassure them that they truly are special."

Illustrations 'age' missing children

Associated Press

DALLAS — Lewis Sadler draws pictures of children.

Sometimes they help locate missing boys and girls. Sometimes it's already too late.

The medical illustrator sketches children abducted and missing for several years, projecting how they might look today to help parents and law enforcement officials find them.

But a Sadler drawing sometimes can be a poignant specter of an age never reached.

"The worst is when the child turns up dead," said Sadler, an associate professor and director of medical illustration services at the University of Texas Health Science Center at Dallas.

He recalls drawing a 3-year-old girl reported abducted in the Garland area. Investigators later found her body where it had been buried by the mother's boyfriend. The kidnapping report was a hoax.

"You do get the feeling you know the person a little bit," Sadler said of the drawings. "You get a chance to see that growth — you see that life that never had a chance to be. It's very eerie ... and sad."

Other drawings lead to happier endings.

Janet Hicks cried when she saw the drawings of her two daughters. Missing for more than seven years after they were abducted by their father following a divorce, Kathy and Debbie Caruso were found within hours after their "aged" drawings were shown on a television program.

SADLER, WHO developed a technique to project the future appearance of children with facial deformities, began doing the missing child sketches after a former co-worker, Scott Barrows, drew the now teenage Caruso girls for the show, "Missing: Have You Seen This Person?"

In the year and a half since then, Sadler and Barrows have done 40 drawings. Ten of those children have been found. The bodies of two others were identified.

"We were thrown into it innocently," Sadler said of the sometimes traumatic work. "But once you do have a technique like this that works, I don't see how you could get out of it," he said.

For his drawings of the Caruso sisters, Barrows drew on Sadler's seven years' studying facial growth. It was an interest sparked when he was at the University of Michigan with a plastic surgeon who asked him to predict the appearance of young patients following surgery to correct abnormal cranial development.

Abnormal facial growth is often caused by chromosome damage, such as drugs taken during pregnancy, or by disease.

"I was to come up with drawings of what the child would look like" after the surgery and in future years, Sadler said. "That's when I began collecting information on how faces grow."

Children's faces change — not like they're "painted on a balloon and someone blows it up" — but in fits and starts, he said.

Using 43 different points of reference on a face, measurements as small as one-hundredth of a millimeter and averages on how fast each facial area grows, Sadler can project how a child will look as much as 15 years in the future, he said.

FOR EXAMPLE, a photograph of a missing child is blown up to life size, then a key measurement — usually the bridge of the nose — is taken as a reference point. Measurements all over the face then can be projected according to Sadler's data on how much each measurement grows each year in a normal child.

The child's race and sex will affect how his or her face changes, he said. "In general, a woman's (eye) area is much more rounded and smooth. Men are more angular."

The teeth and jaw of a Caucasian are shaped differently than those of a black, he said.

Drawings of a child under 3 years of age are discouraged because growth during this time is too rapid, Sadler said.

Others perform similar work.

A woman in New York City uses photographs of parents and siblings to predict how a missing child will age. Sadler says the complex collection of genes which determine appearance bring no guarantee a child will look like his or her immediate family.

"We had a little boy who was missing, and when we did the drawing, he had a real peculiar nose. Scott (Barrows) called me and said it didn't look at all like the parents' pointy noses. I said to recheck the measurements and trust them," Sadler said.

"He was found. And in one of the photographs taken then, he has this funny blob of a nose, and he's being held by his grandmother, who has a blob of a nose."

DEAR ABBY

Topless career controversial

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I was disappointed in your answer to "Concerned and Praying," the young single mother who says she is a good Christian, yet she supports her children by dancing topless in a nightclub. I admire her for going to college and living a respectable lifestyle, but when she asked you if a person could believe in God and dance topless, you should have replied with a firm no!

This woman is mistaken if she considers her job harmless to her spiritual life. No woman can dance topless and be a Christian. If she reads her Bible, she will know that merely believing in God does not make her a good Christian — it's how she lives in front of others that counts.

This woman is actually instilling lust in men, and the Bible tells us that any man who looks upon a woman with lust has already committed adultery in his heart. So even if (as she says) she doesn't go out with anyone after work, she has already done the damage. I will pray for her.

I am a Christian counselor. Please forgive this poorly typed letter, but it isn't easy sitting in an office trying to write a letter while the phone is ringing and people keep bursting in unannounced. Perhaps you can pray for me, too. Ha ha! — SINCERELY IN CHRIST IN OHIO

DEAR SINCERELY: My mail has been running 100-to-1 in your favor. But in the interest of fairness, let's give the other side a chance to be heard.

DEAR ABBY: I read in our local paper, The Daily Reflector, the letter from "Concerned and Praying," who was concerned about her topless dancing. In my opinion, all good things cometh from the Lord. I also believe that a thing of beauty is a joy forever.

May I also add that there is none of us righteous. No, not one, and if there be in us any righteousness whatsoever, it is not in ourselves, but we are made righteous through the sacrifice of the blood of Jesus who died on the cross.

If "Concerned and Praying" never does anything worse than dancing topless, she is a better Christian than many of those she sits beside in church. — MARVIN TURNER, GREENVILLE, N.C.

DEAR MARVIN: Amen, brother.

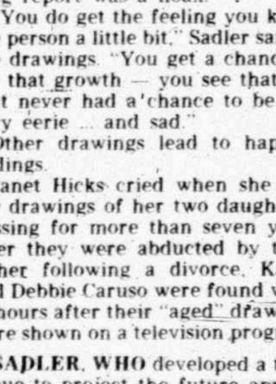

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of a handsome, popular teen-age son who has girls calling him at all hours. He has to catch the 6:45 a.m. school bus as he commutes to a private school, so he tries to get to bed by 9:30 on school nights, but girls call him at 10, 10:30 and 11 p.m. This disturbs everyone in the house. At first, the calls were great for his ego, but it's a source of irritation now. He doesn't want to hurt their feelings, but he really wishes they wouldn't call him. He says some of them keep him on the phone for 30 and 40 minutes about something they could have said in 10 minutes.

Don't suggest that we turn down the bell on the phone or take the phone off the hook, because my mother-in-law is elderly and in poor health, and if she needs to reach us, our line must be open for her. This is really an open letter to girls who call boys after 9 p.m. Please print this, Abby. I'm sure other mothers have this problem. Just sign me ... MASSACHUSETTS MOM

DEAR MOM: Here's your letter, but don't expect miracles. Encourage your son to communicate his "irritation" to the girls who call him at all hours and disturb the family. He could tell those who babble too long that the line must be kept open in case his grandmother tries to reach the house ... it's true — and not to call after 9 p.m.

JEANE DIXON'S your horoscope

© 1986, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

By Jeane Dixon
Tuesday, October 14, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Your family takes precedence over everything else in the year ahead. Spend money on making your home more comfortable. Love prospers. A business turnaround has a positive influence. Partners draw closer together, enjoying a new rapport. Singles develop an urge to settle down. Foreign travel is possible in January. You make big personal and financial gains before December.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Actor-magician Harry "Night Court" Anderson, actress Lillian Gish, actor Roger Moore, slugger Al Oliver, 34th U.S. President Dwight "Ike" Eisenhower, Pennsylvania founder William Penn, poet e.e. cummings, actor Greg Evigan, football's Charlie Joiner, fashion designer Ralph Lauren, golf's J.C. Snead, author Katherine Mansfield.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You will find greater satisfaction by pushing ahead with a favorite work endeavor. New financial rewards are likely. A relative asks important questions. Do not be afraid to share your thoughts.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): New information means changing your approach in business or romance. Joint monetary concerns require further discussion with mate or partner.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You could attract some unusual companions. Stick to a conventional approach in business or romance. A long-time conflict abates if you take the first step -- compromise!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Spend time on details and figures. Students find that financial aid is available, but they must fill out endless forms. Persist! Your diligence impresses those who count.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Concentrate on one thing at a time and productivity will rise. Taxes, insurance matters and investments require special attention. Turning over a new leaf will promote marital harmony. Admit any past mistakes.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Unexpected rewards, bonuses and scholarships are featured. Couples have good luck with their commitments. Family concerns lead you to reevaluate the benefits of your work. A romance intensified.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Joint financial ventures are favored. Some important decisions will have to be made. Consult mate or partner. Lend a sympathetic ear to parents or children.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A promising start could bog you down due to financial problems. Be more realistic about spending. A marital or family relationship is more rewarding than in the past.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Financial problems that have created marital discord come to an end. Profit-sharing plan brings new security. Be punctual. Romance puts you in a joyful mood.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Do not give up when those in authority do not listen to your ideas. Increase your earning power by taking special seminars or enrolling in night school.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠Q10762 ♡A9862 ◇95 ♣3
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—If you could bid a non-forcing two hearts, that would be our suggestion. But that action would be forcing, and there's no telling where partner would propel you on what you suspect is a misfit. Pass while the going is good.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠74 ♡AQJ6 ◇985 ♣AKJ10
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one diamond. What action do you take?
A.—You have a good hand, but that does not mean you should bid recklessly. Suppose you double. What do you intend doing when partner bids one spade, his most likely response? Anything you choose is seriously flawed. You can avoid that problem by simply overcalling one heart.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AJ862 ♡K87 ◇6542 ♣3
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	1 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—You have a very useful hand for partner and, had you had a fourth trump, we would have proposed an invitational jump raise to three hearts. Under the circumstances, however, a conservative two hearts seems the wiser course. With a trump lead, partner might get only one ruff in your hand.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AJ862 ♡K87 ◇6542 ♣3
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Dble	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—Sitting in front of declarer, you need more solid trumps to convert partner's takeout double to penalties by passing. As it is, you might not make more than two trump tricks. We suggest you bid one no trump.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ985 ♡K7 ◇83 ♣AJ104
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	1 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—It is quite likely that your side has a game, but where? You need room to explore while being certain that partner won't suddenly drop the bidding. The first step, therefore, must be to cue-bid two clubs to create a force. Thereafter, partner can't pass as long as you keep introducing new suits.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKQ83 ♡AQ5 ◇AK10 ♣J3
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—There is no need to rebid your spades to tell partner you have a good five-card suit—he knows that from your opening bid. More important is to describe a strong, balanced hand with no particular liking for clubs. Bid three no trump.

Douglas drops by to see son

SEALY, Texas (AP) — It's not all that unusual for a father to drop by and visit his son at work.

But this particular Dad's weekend visit turned some heads in this Southeast Texas town.

Actor Kirk Douglas came to town to watch his son, Peter Douglas, direct a new motion picture. The movie is "A Tiger's Tale," starring Ann-Margret, C. Thomas Howell and Charles Durning.

The production crew was here for only day of filming.

Director Douglas persuaded his father to take a cameo role and the elder Douglas donned a western style hat and boots to portray a pool player in a scene being filmed in the downtown area of Sealy.

Howell was the only one of the main characters who took part in the scene filmed here, observers said.

Duffy

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Script writers brought Bobby Ewing back from the dead, but Buddha gets partial credit for bringing Patrick Duffy back to "Dallas."

Duffy, who has practiced Buddhism since 1972, says he chanted with his wife before their Buddhist altar for several weeks to obtain guidance before agreeing to return to the TV show this fall.

Duffy reportedly received a $1 million signing bonus and a raise from $40,000 to $75,000 an episode, plus an agreement allowing him to direct three episodes. TV Guide reported in this week's edition.

The resurrection of his character, Bobby, was accomplished by saying his violent death at the end of the 1984-85 season was just a bad dream by his wife, Pam.

Duffy says he left "Dallas" because he feared burnout and never felt appreciated. In leaving, he said, he also turned to his religion, seeking advice from a spiritual mentor who works as a greengrocer.

"He told me that a good farmer looks at a crop and knows when to pick it. It might not appear to be the right time to others, but the farmer knows best," Duffy said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Latin musician Tito Puente jammed with a few well-known associates to drum up support for a scholarship in his name.

Puente, playing timbales and drums, was joined Saturday night in Harlem's newly renovated Apollo Theater by electric violinist Noel Pointer, flutist Dave Valentin, sax player Paguito D'Rivera, master drummer Ray Barretto on congas and drum legend Art Blakely.

The packed house cheered wildly when Puente brought out Celia Cruz, another Latin legend, who spoke and sang in Spanish and threw in some English for those who required translation.

During the concert, the sponsors, the New York Urban Coalition, passed out $3,000 worth of money from the Tito Puente Scholarship Fund to the Ballet Hispanico and the Boys' Harbor Performing Arts Center.

Puente said he called his group the Tito Puente Latin Jazz Orchestra in order to get bookings, but added, with a laugh, that this night "we're going to play what we always play — salsa."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Veteran performer Willie Nelson, vie against a pack of upstarts tonight at the 20th annual Country Music Association awards show.

Nelson, an entertainer for a quarter-century, is a finalist for the top award, entertainer of the year. The other four nominees are comparatively youthful: the Judds, Reba McEntire, Ricky Skaggs and George Strait.

The live show at the Grand Ole Opry House with Nelson and Kris Kristofferson as hosts, will be broadcast on CBS from 9:30 to 11 p.m. EDT.

Strait, the reigning male vocalist of the year, is up for that award again, along with veterans George Jones and Hank Williams Jr., newcomer Randy Travis and actor-singer Gary Morris of the television series "The Colbys."

Miss McEntire seeks to become top female vocalist for the third straight year, an achievement accomplished only by Tammy Wynette in the late 1960s. The other finalists are Rosanne Cash, Janie Frickie, Emmylou Harris and 15-year veteran Anne Murray.

The Judds, a mother-daughter duo, are finalists for five awards, as is Miss McEntire, a former rodeo barrel racer.

Rossellini

NEW YORK (AP) — Isabella Rossellini, a star of the film "Blue Velvet" in which she appears naked, says she was nervous seeing it with her family.

"I thought it would be too difficult for my jealous Italian brothers, the daughter of Ingrid Bergman and director Roberto Rosselini said in an interview in this week's People magazine.

"I thought they'd want to lock me in the house because I was naked and a man raped me," she said.

But they were so captured by the style of the film and the intrigue. They loved it.

In the film, Miss Rossellini plays a nightclub singer in a small town who regularly dresses in a blue velvet robe while a sadist played by Dennis Hopper brutally beats and rapes her.

The actress, who is a model for a line of skin-care products, said she would never have done the nude scene if she had been photographed in a more sensual way.

"When I came out of the bushes totally naked, I felt like a slab of beef hanging," she said. "There was nothing sexy about it."

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The only person to receive two artificial hearts died on the operating table when a newly transplanted human heart failed, but her surgeon called her struggle a milestone in medicine.

Dr. Jack Copeland said it could be several weeks before doctors know why the donor heart failed shortly after it was placed Saturday into Bernadette Chavrez, 49, of Phoenix, who lived 244 days on her second mini-Jarvik heart.

Infections may have caused the failure, or her supersensitive immune system may have ferociously attacked the heart, the University Medical Center surgeon said.

Ms. Chavrez had been kept alive although her heart deteriorated to the point of total failure, providing a unique insight into the cause of that destruction to the heart, Copeland said.

Ms. Chavrez also survived for nearly seven days on the Jarvik before she suffered a stroke, a common problem faced by artificial heart recipients.

Her case provided doctors with data that may help prevent strokes in other artificial heart patients, Copeland said.

He also said Ms. Chavrez's case reinforced his belief that artificial hearts should be used only as a bridge to keep patients alive while donor hearts are sought.

Dollar mostly lower

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar drifted lower against most foreign currencies in light European trading early today. Gold bullion edged up to around $431.50 an ounce.

Currency traders said there was little activity because of the closing of U.S. markets for the Columbus Day holiday.

The dollar's morning losses were modest, and traders said they expected a further slight decline during the week.

They said the dollar remained under pressure from a comment by a West German banking official Friday that recent interventions by the central Bundesbank were intended to slow, but not reverse, the dollar's decline.

The failure of Icelandic superpower summit also was cited as possible factor in the dollar's decline on the theory that it might set the stage for more large-scale U.S. defense spending.

Midmorning dollar rates compared with levels in Europe late Friday:

—1.9845 West German marks, down from 1.9850.

—1.6193 Swiss franes, down from 1.6210.

—6.4995 French francs, down from 6.5150.

—2.2420 Dutch guilders, down from 2.2465.

—1,374.50 Italian lire, down from 1,376.50.

—1.38725 Canadian dollars, up from 1.38605.

The British pound rose to $1.4323 from $1.4285.

Earlier, in Tokyo, the dollar edged up to 154.78 Japanese yen, compared with 154.23 yen Thursday. Tokyo markets were closed for a national holiday Friday. The dollar was quoted at 154.65 yen in London at midmorning today.

London's five biggest bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price of $431.40 a troy ounce, up from $431 late Friday.

In Zurich, gold was bid at $431.50, up from $431.25.

Hong Kong markets were closed for a public holiday.

Silver bullion was quoted in London at a bid of $5.64 an ounce, down from $5.66 late Friday.

Top businessmen discuss unbalanced economy

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — The country's top business leaders are expressing unease about the future, reflecting the fact that while some segments of the economy are doing well, many industries are in difficulty.

The 66-member Business Council, composed of executives from many of the nation's largest corporations, met here this past weekend to assess economic prospects.

In a report, they predicted the economy will continue growing over the next two years but at a sluggish rate. While not predicting a recession, the business executives said there was little to suggest economic growth will improve much from the weak pace of the past two years.

"The economy overall continues to be spotty with frustrations in the industrial sector and serious problems in energy, real estate and farming," James D. Robinson III, vice chairman of the council and head of the American Express Co., said in presenting the group's economic outlook.

The individual reports from the business leaders reflected the unbalanced nature of the recovery at present.

Firms specializing in consumer goods reported continued strong sales.

But executives from manufacturing companies said they were battling stiff foreign competition with only faint signals that America's trade problems are showing any signs of turning around.

This year, oil companies have suffered the steepest slump, with massive layoffs forced by plunging energy prices.

"All you have to do is visit Louisiana, Texas or Oklahoma to see that things are pretty tough in the oil patch," George M. Keller, chairman of Chevron Corp., said.

He said his company had drilled only two exploratory wells all year long, compared with 19 last year. He predicted that Chevron and most other U.S. oil companies would be in such a slump that they would not make enough profits to pay federal taxes other than the minimum tax this year or next year.

The Business Council said one area of continued strength will be consumer spending, which has been the driving force behind the four-year-old recovery.

Roger B. Smith, chairman of General Motors Corp., said GM enjoyed record sales this year and expected 1987 sales to be almost as strong.

Philip M. Hawley, chairman of the giant department store chain, Carter Hawley Hales Stores Inc., said his company was looking for continued growth in sales despite the fact that Americans are carrying all-time high levels of debt.

Hawley said consumers shouldn't count on the extensive pre-Christmas price-cutting which has occurred in the past two years. He said this time around, department stores seem to have their inventories more in line with sales expectations.

The Business Council predicted that factory operating rates, which have been essentially flat this year, will climb 3.2 percent in 1987, reflecting a slightly better trade performance.

However, the executives warned that if trade does not improve, then their forecast for economic growth of 2.9 percent, as measured by the gross national product, won't come true either.

The economic outlook, which was prepared by chief economists from 20 corporations, said about one-third of the manufacturing firms were reporting increased orders, including gains in export sales.

Clausen returns as BankAmerica chairman

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A.W. Clausen, who began at BankAmerica Corp. as a clerk counting cash in a vault and oversaw the company's expansion in the 1970s, is returning to the top post of the embattled financial giant.

"I am eager to get at the job," said Clausen, 63, after he was named Sunday as chairman and chief executive officer for both BankAmerica Corp. and its Bank of America unit. "I don't intend to waste time looking back."

Clausen, who retired this year as president of the World Bank, replaces Samuel H. Armacost, who succeeded him and resigned Friday after five stormy years as chief executive of the nation's second-largest banking concern.

"Clausen is a strong executive who knows the company inside and out," said Don Crowley, a banking industry analyst for Keefe, Bruyette and Woods. "He's got probably as good a chance as anyone to turn it around as quickly as possible."

Joseph Arsenio of Birr, Wilson & Co. said, "Analysts, at least, are going to view Clausen's return to the bank with mixed feelings."

Clausen joined the company in 1949 as a clerk and quickly rose through its executive ranks, displaying a penchant for hard work and attention to detail.

Under Clausen's leadership from 1970 to 1981, Bank of America grew to 83,000 employees, 1,106 branches in California and 116 overseas, and had assets of $110.7 billion.

Back in his cavernous office on the 40th floor of the corporation's headquarters, Clausen faces several problems that have hit BankAmerica in recent years.

From 1981 through the first half of this year, the company suffered loan losses of about $4.6 billion, and earlier this year eliminated its common stock dividend for the first time since the Depression.

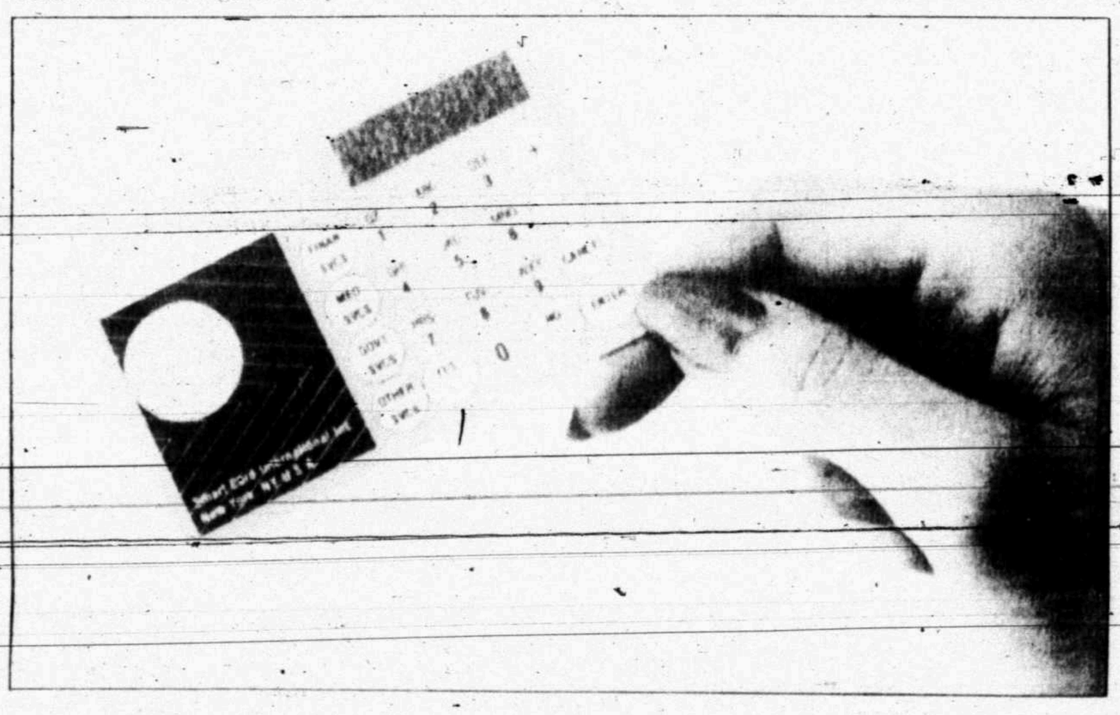

In addition, BankAmerica was slapped with a record $4.75 million fine in January by the U.S Treasury Department for violating currency transaction reporting requirements.

Clausen "will bring the authoritative and calming management direction that is necessary to the bank's success," said John R. Beckett, chairman of the executive committee of BankAmerica's board of directors.

An unidentified, high-ranking bank official quoted by the San Francisco Examiner in its Sunday editions said Clausen's appointment would be temporary, possibly only six months; while the company sought a long-term replacement.

Analyst predicts slump in gas prices

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gasoline prices will slump at the pump through fall, thanks to a surplus and the end of the peak summer driving season, an oil industry analyst says.

The average price for all grades of gasoline dropped about 2 cents in the past three weeks, according to the latest Lundberg Survey of 15,000 gas stations nationwide.

The Friday survey put the average price, including taxes, at 85.44 cents per gallon, compared with 87.85 cents during the last poll on Sept. 19.

"This is really a drop. It is much bigger than expected," Trilby Lundberg, publisher of the twice-monthly survey and the weekly Lundberg Letter, said Sunday. "There is a consistent historical lower consumption of gasoline after the peak summer driving season and the latest drop is in reponse to an over-supply compared to the lower seasonal demand.

"Further drops can be expected because of the time lag in the difference between wholesale and retail prices."

Wholesale and retail prices each dropped a little more than 2 cents a gallon in the past two weeks, Miss Lundberg said, and it usually takes several weeks for retail prices to reflect the wholesale drop.

The latest Lundberg Survey shows that at self-service pumps, regular leaded gasoline cost 72.27 cents a gallon, regular unleaded cost 77.51 cents and premium unleaded was 92.22 cents. Pumps at full-service islands charged $1.026 for regular leaded, $1.087 for regular unleaded and $1.175 for premium unleaded.

Economists say ban on exporting crude is invalid due to falling prices

DALLAS (UPI) — The ban on exporting U.S. crude oil is invalid today because of the growing glut and falling oil prices, two economists contend.

Professors Bernard Weinstein and Harold Gross of the Center for Enterprising at Southern Methodist University said when Congress imposed the export ban in the early 1970s, the conventional wisdom was that the world was running out of oil and that the United States should keep whatever oil it discovered at home.

But events since then have shown there is plenty of oil available in the world and no imminent threat of a shortage, they said.

The professors said with the collapse in oil prices, the domestic oil industry is facing a crisis and thousands of wells are being shut in.

Weinstein and Gross said if the country were allowed to export its oil, it would stimulate domestic production and keep those wells in operation.

Japan, Taiwan and South Korea would be ready markets for U.S. crude, they said, especially oil shipped from Alaska because of its geographical proximity. They pointed out that these countries always have been eager to buy oil from a reliable supplier like the United States.

"If the U.S. could export its oil, it would stimulate domestic production and allow the country to narrow its trade deficits with those countries," Gross said.

"When the Alaskan field was being developed in the early 1970s, the original objective was to export the oil to Japan, Taiwan and South Korea. But the developers got caught in the politics of the time that resulted in the ban. If we had been exporting our Alaska crude from 1975, I would say our current trade deficit with Japan and other countries would have been consideraly less," Gross said.

Weinstein said there is nothing inconsistent about a net oil-importing country like the United States becoming an oil exporter.

"Britain is both an importer and exporter. Also, you can be an exporter when your producing areas are far removed from your consuming areas. It is a long way from Prudhoe Bay to Philadephia.

"The Japanese have wanted to buy that oil for 10 years. If we can develop a firm market for our Alaskan crude, we might see fresh exploration activity in Alaska. The Japanese are under political pressure to reduce their trade surplus with us, so they would be willing to buy our oil," Weinstein said.

Weinstein and Gross said it is unlikely the exports would have an adverse impact on U.S. domestic consumption because the oil exported would mainly come from wells that are being shut in. Additionally, they said the United States would always remain a net importer of oil.

> "If the U.S. could export its oil, it would stimulate domestic production and allow the country to narrow its trade deficits with those countries."

"I am not sure that the exports would necessarily mean a withdrawal of oil from our domestic market," Gross said. "In fact, the opposite might be the case. By allowing the producers to export, we will be keeping those wells open that otherwise would be closed. We should also be able to reduce our dependence on foreign sources of oil."

He said Canada, North Sea producers Britain and Norway and Mexico now are this country's major foreign oil suppliers.

"So even if we continue our dependence on foreign sources, I don't think we will run the kind of geopolitical risks that we ran a decade ago," Gross said.

News broadcasters reach tentative agreement

NEW YORK (AP) — A network proposal that news reporters operate cameras and other equipment has been rejected in a contract settlement between ABC, CBS and NBC and the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists, union officials said.

But the three-year contract, retroactive to Nov. 16, 1985, allows the networks to reopen negotiations on the point if its technical unions agree to give up some of their duties, officials on both sides said.

The tentative agreement, reached Saturday, affects about 900 union members who are news broadcasters, said AFTRA spokesman Dick Moore. The union has 66,000 members, including actors, broadcasters, singers, dancers and talk show hosts.

Chrysler's '87 models to cost 1.6 percent more

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. has announced that its 1987 models will cost an average 1.6 percent more than its 1986 models.

Price changes by the nation's No. 3 automaker will range from a 11.6 percent cut on the subcompact Dodge Omni and Plymouth Horizon America to a 7.2 percent increase on Plymouth Caravelle four-door sedan, spokeswoman Karen Stewart said Friday.

Base price for 1987 Omni and Horizon cars will be $5,799, Chrysler said, down from $6,893 in 1986. The Caravelle will cost $10,527 in 1987, Ms. Stewart said.

Chrysler's most expensive offering will be the $15,666 base-priced Chrysler Fifth Avenue, she said.

Survey reveals 'typical' corporate executive

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — A survey of top officers of U.S. corporations shows they are mostly in their mid-40s, married, slightly overweight and take home $175,000 yearly in salary and perquisites.

And mostly, they are men, according to the 16th annual survey by the University of Michigan.

According to the study, a typical executive drinks a little alcohol, seldom smokes, is about 10 pounds overweight but otherwise healthy, and values family ties. Most of the executives studied business administration or engineering in college.

Allied adopts 'poison pill' to discourage suitor

NEW YORK (AP) — The battle over Allied Stores Corp., one of the nation's largest retailers, has gotten hotter.

Both sides launched new offensives Friday.

Allied, which has agreed to be acquired by the nation's biggest mall developer for $3.55 billion in cash, or $67 a share, said its board of directors had adopted a "poison pill" to discourage the efforts of persistent and hostile suitor Campeau Corp.

Allied also said it would seek a federal court order against Campeau's latest offer.

Earlier in the day, Campeau said it would proceed with its $66-a-share cash tender offer for control of Allied in a deal that would be worth $3.5 billion.

Campeau, which has failed in repeated attempts to take over Allied on both friendly and unfriendly terms, said its latest offer no longer was conditioned on approval from Allied's board.

E.F. Hutton to sponsor seminar

The Midland office of E.F. Hutton will sponsor a financial seminar, featuring Hutton New York-based energy analyst Laurie Law. Law will address the current state of crude oil prices and provide political and economic analysis on world oil producers and consumers.

A respected market commentator, Law most recently authored an article in Petroleum Management, an international oil trade publication. She appeared on the Cable News Network, commenting on the Chernobyl nuclear accident and its effect on Soviet commodities. In 1985, Law was elected president of the Futures Industry Association, research division and to the board of directors of The Forum for U.S.-Soviet dialogue.

The seminar, scheduled for 5:30 p.m. on Tuesday, will be held at the atrium in ClayDesta National Bank Building. It is open to the public and free of charge, but seating is limited. For further information and reservations, call the E.F. Hutton office, Midland.

Hutton officials say Law's seminar will be of particular interest to people attending the Oil Show in Odessa this week.

Stock Market Mixed

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose .56 to 1,793.73 in the first half hour of trading.

Losers outnumbered gainers by about 4 to 3 in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Volume on the Big Board came to 8.07 million shares by 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Many traders took the day off because of Columbus Day and Yom Kippur.

International Business Machines reported this morning that it earned $1.76 a share in the third quarter, down from $2.40 in the comparable period last year.

Brokers noted, however, that investors had had ample warning that the company's figures would be weak. IBM shares, which have fallen sharply of late, recovered 1 to 124⅜ in active trading today.

Bankamerica dropped ½ to 14⅜. Over the weekend the company named A.W. Clausen to return as its chief executive after Samuel Armacost resigned.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks slipped .05 to 135.65. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .14 at 264.51.

On Friday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 3.65 to 1,793.17, trimmming its gain for the week to 18.99 points.

Declining issues slightly outnumbered advances on the NYSE. Big Board volume totaled 105.06 million shares, down from 153.39 million in the previous session.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Transfer of securities in 'street name' between brokerages should be simple

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Our broker moved from one big brokerage firm to another in November 1984. He asked to take my account and my wife's account with him. We consented and signed all the necessary forms, never realizing all the confusion and wasted time that would result.

It took several months to get our mutual fund shares and stocks transferred from the first brokerage to the second. To this date, our real estate limited partnership participation has not been transferred. At least three dozen phone calls have been made. I have received every excuse imaginable and a complete run around from both brokerage firms.

What is the best course of action to take?

A. Take your story to the Office of Consumer Affairs, Securities and Exchange Commission, 450 Fifth Street, N.W., Washington, DC 20549, as should everyone with a gripe against a brokerage firm.

Doyle

Yours is a familiar lament. Getting securities left with one brokerage firm transferred to a different firm sometimes is more painful than going to a blind dentist with a hangover. The worst problems and delays seem to involve moving individual retirement accounts.

There were so many complaints about this that, back in 1984, the New York Stock Exchange said it would have an automated account transfer system set up for its member firms by the end of that year. That system finally went into operation on Feb. 2, 1986. But letters such as yours continue to come to this column.

The transfer of securities held in "street name" at one brokerage firm to another should be a simple thing. Shifting an IRA can be somewhat more involved and moving a real estate or other partnership participation can get very complicated.

Nonetheless, there is no legitimate reason for delays such as you have encountered. You and your wife are very patient folks. In your shoes, I would have done some desk pounding at the offices of both those brokerages, long ago.

* * *

Q. I have stocks and bonds in a "self directed" individual retirement account at a brokerage firm and wish to transfer it to another brokerage. Can the IRA be moved without selling the stocks and bonds? My present broker says the account must be turned into cash before it can be moved.

A. That broker is wrong. Unless his firm has some odd-ball rule of its own, there's nothing to prevent you from moving your IRA to a different brokerage with your securities intact. "Trustee-to-trustee" IRA transfers such as that happen all the time.

A suspicious mind comes up with the thought that your present broker wants you to sell the securities in your IRA, so that he will collect commissions.

* * *

Q. In a few years, after I pass age 70½, I will be required to start making withdrawals from my IRA. How does one apportion the part of the withdrawn money that is subject to tax and the part that is not subject to tax?

A. You won't do any apportioning. All the money you withdraw from an IRA must be reported on your income tax return as ordinary income.

You didn't pay any income tax on the contributions you made to the IRA. That money, plus everything it earns in interest, dividends and/or growth in value, remains deferred from income tax — until you make withdrawals.

Once you start taking money out of your IRA, every dollar, dime and penny you withdraw becomes taxable income.

* * *

Q. The $10,000 certificate of deposit I have in an IRA at a savings and loan association will mature soon. Will it be possible to put that money into three mutual funds in a mutual fund "family" and still have it in my IRA?

A. Sure. That will be a typical trustee-to-trustee IRA transfer. Just contact that mutual fund organization and explain what you want to do. You'll get the necessary papers to fill out, sign and return. The mutual fund organization, as your new IRA trustee, will arrange the transfer.

Michelin tire plant closing leaves questions, opposition parties sore

By RAF CASERT

ZUUN, Belgium (AP) — For the 1,034 workers at the Michelin tire plant in Zuun, July 25 meant the start of the long-awaited summer holidays.

But that Friday, the French multinational company dismissed them all and shut down the profitable plant in this economically depressed area on the outskirts of Brussels.

The government protested, opposition parties called for economic sanctions and the unions were outraged at Michelin's surprise action, which they contended bypassed Belgium's legal procedures for closing factories.

The unions tried protest actions in an attempt to reopen the plant, but Michelin was not swayed and the unions then agreed with the company on a generous compensation settlement.

Critics of Michelin said the factory's closure left lasting questions about the conduct of multinational companies and their responsibility toward employees.

"Can you imagine the devastation of some 1,000 families as they are preparing their holidays, to hear they lost their means of living," said Marcel Sommeryns, spokesman for the Christian Democrat Union party.

Michelin closed its plant after two years of healthy profits from the operation — $4.2 million in 1984 and $5.2 million in 1985. In recent years, its workers had agreed to wage cuts as part of an austerity drive and the company was given millions of dollars in government aid.

Michelin argued, however, that the future looked bleak in view of worldwide competition, a contention disputed by financial analysts.

Asked to comment on the situation, Guy Adenot, head of Michelin's Belgium subsidiary, said he was prepared to discuss only the compensation settlement and refused to address other issues on the record.

Critics said Michelin's move was further evidence that multinational corporations live beyond the law, have no regard for their workers and opt for profits over all other considerations. The French concern sells its tires in 142 countries, has 53 factories in 11 nations and employs 110,000 people worldwide.

"Multinationals have the power to take little account of national laws," said Jacques Vilrokx, a sociologist at Brussels University. "Even if there are sanctions, they gladly pay because in the overall budget the penalty is still minimal."

In mid-September, the European Parliament condemned Michelin for ignoring Belgian and Common Market law on plant closings as well as a moral code of conduct of the Organization of Economic Cooperation and Development. It urged the 12 Common Market countries to pass sanctions against such practices by multinationals.

When it shut down its plant, Michelin argued the closure was inevitable, referring to plummeting sales and greater competition from low-wage countries in Asia.

But based on the company's business figures for the first half of 1986, financial analysts said the Michelin group could end 1986 with earnings exceeding $400 million this year, almost three times the 1985 figure.

Critics also noted Michelin is increasing production at its home operations in Clermont Ferrand, France.

"The gist was that they wanted to maintain Clermont Ferrand and somewhere else they had to shut down," said Louis De Troyer, a senior official in Belgium's Employment Ministry.

Michelin closed the Zuun plant after two years of profits and an accord with workers to cut payroll costs to $32.3 million in 1985 from $39.1 million in 1983. In that period Michelin's revenues from the plant rose to $221.4 million from $202.1 million.

Michelin also profited from some $6 million in special government incentives in the 1980s to make companies competitive again, said Baudewijn Moyersoen, a senior official in the regional government of Flanders, Belgium's Dutch-speaking northern half.

The regional government now wants Michelin to reinvest this money into the economically devastated area, but Moyersoen conceded it "has no legal basis to demand that."

He said Michelin circumvented Belgian law on company closures but added there were no adequate penalties against such offenders. De Troyer of the employment ministry argued for "more severe restrictions on a national and European level."

Pending tax law to deal blow to many cherished 'miscellaneous deductions

By CHET CURRIER

NEW YORK (AP) — The tax law now awaiting final action by Congress deals a blow to the many cherished little writeoffs known as "miscellaneous deductions."

A lot of the proposed changes in the tax system presumably hit hardest at upper-income individuals — for example, restrictions on tax shelters and the elimination of special rules for long-term capital gains.

But miscellaneous deductions are a different story, in that they include a grab bag of expenses that are now written off by nearly everybody who files an itemized return.

To wit: union or professional society dues; subscriptions to publications related to your work or your money-management activities; costs of uniforms or equipment; safe-deposit box rentals; and tax-preparation fees.

Under the existing tax code, all these expenses are fully deductible. Even if they add up to only a few hundred dollars a year, they might tip the scales at tax-return time to a refund instead of a balance due on the bottom line.

The new bill provides that starting in 1987, miscellaneous deductions can be taken only to the extent that they exceed 2 percent of your adjusted gross income.

In other words, if you have $30,000 of taxable income next year, your "floor" is $600. Someone who pays, say, $500 in union dues and $50 to a tax-preparer and has no other miscellanous outlays gets no deduction at all.

If that same person can scrape together $1,000 worth of miscellaneous expenses, he or she can deduct only $400.

All this is in keeping with the general theme in the bill of de-emphasizing spending and investment decisions based on tax considerations rather than the economic benefits to be gained.

But in the interim it is likely to set off a flurry of activity between now and yearend, the seeds of which are just now being sown in many people's minds.

As an employee of an investment advisory service remarked this week, "We should be offering three-year subscriptions." And indeed, it's a good bet that the firm and others like it probably will, and soon.

The idea is to pack as many miscellaneous expenses as possible into 1986, when they are still fully deductible.

A 2 percent cutoff point may seem only a minor problem to someone with a lot of miscellaneous expenses. But it should be borne in mind that Congress, once it has constructed a floor, has demonstrated a facility for raising it in subsequent years.

The floor on medical expenses was 3 percent just a few years ago. Now it is 5 percent, and the pending bill would raise it to 7.5 percent.

In addition, some types of miscellaneous expenses have been singled out for extra limitations. Writeoffs for most travel and entertainment expenses would be allowed only up to 80 percent of the amount spent.

In other words, take your boss to dinner for $125, and the amount eligible for deduction is $100. Even that total only goes into the pot that is subject to the 2 percent floor.

Some forms of miscellaneous deductions are eliminated altogether: Travel for educational purposes, for example, and the costs of attending investment seminars.

In summary, says the accounting firm of Deloitte Haskins & Sells, "Congress has found a new willingness to attack and limit deductions that have historically been viewed as business expenses."

Britain's Queen Elizabeth II and her host, Chinese President Li Xiannian, left, review an honor guard in Peking.

Chinese welcome Queen Elizabeth II

PEKING (AP) — Dancing children, an honor guard and a 21-gun salute today officially welcomed Queen Elizabeth II on the first tour of China ever made by a reigning British monarch.

The queen and her husband, Prince Philip, were greeted by President Li Xiannian and given flowers before they met with other Chinese and British officials in ceremonies held outside Peking's Great Hall of the People.

Elizabeth, wearing a red coat and matching hat with black trim, strolled to a reviewing stand with Li. The two stood as members of a People's Liberation Army honor guard played "God Save the Queen" and the Chinese national anthem, followed by a 21-gun salute.

Elizabeth and Li strolled down a red carpet to review the guard and went past more than 300 children and teenagers, who were dancing, singing "Welcome, welcome, a warm welcome" in Chinese, and waving flowers, pom poms and tamborines.

The 60-year-old monarch was escorted inside the Great Hall of the People. There Li, the chiefly ceremonial head of state who had formally invited her to China, said her visit was "a very important milestone in the advancement of Sino-British relations."

Li said previous visits by the British foreign secretary, Sir Geoffrey Howe, had played an "important role" in the settlement of the future of Hong Kong.

The success of Chinese-British negotiations on the return of the British colony to Chinese sovereignty in 1997 paved the way for the queen's visit.

The queen arrived in Peking on Sunday and is staying at a specially remodeled traditional Chinese villa at the Diaoyutai state guesthouse.

Today's agenda calls for her to visit the Forbidden City, the former palace of China's last emperor who was overthrown in 1911, and the circular Temple of Heaven.

Elizabeth planned to plant a tree at the British Embassy, meet with Commonwealth ambassadors and embassy staff and attend a reception for Commonwealth and British guests.

Philip was to tour the Chinese-British joint venture Peking Heavy Duty Truck Plant.

A state banquet was scheduled for the evening, followed by a cultural show that the official Chinese press would include an excerpt from William Shakespeare's play "Much Ado About Nothing," performed in the style of Chinese opera.

Elizabeth was expected to meet Tuesday with top Chinese leaders and travel to the Great Wall and Ming Tombs outside Peking. She was almost certain to meet top leader Deng Xiaoping.

Gorbachev assesses arms summit

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet radio and television today broadcast Mikhail S. Gorbachev's assessment of the collapsed superpower summit, but had no comment beyond the remarks the Soviet leader made at a news conference in Iceland.

News programs repeated excerpts of Gorbachev's remarks Sunday night in Reykjavik, in which he blamed President Reagan's intransigence on the space weapons issue for the failure of the superpowers to agree on sweeping reductions in nuclear arms.

The Soviet leader was to return to Moscow later in the day.

Gorbachev's meeting with reporters in Iceland's capital took place too late for his remarks to appear in today's morning newspapers, several of which published front-page pictures showing the two smiling superpower leaders together outside the Reykjavik villa where they met.

The newspapers carried a brief report from the official Tass news agency that the summit had ended and that Gorbachev discussed the results at a news conference, but gave no other details.

Soviet television broke into late evening programming Sunday night for a live broadcast of Gorbachev's Reykjavik news conference.

It was shown in full, running well past midnight Moscow time, with questions to the Kremlin leader in English being translated into Russian.

Tass also carried extensive excerpts from Gorbachev's remarks, emphasizing his assessment that the United States was to blame for the summit's collapse.

AP Laserphoto

Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev gestures while addressing a news conference in Reykjavik, Iceland.

No film was shown on Soviet television of Secretary of State George P. Shultz's news conference following the summit, and no report was made of American statements in the wake of the stalemate.

Reagan's commitment to his Strategic Defense Initiative, a plan for a space-based missile defense system popularly known as "Star Wars," proved to be the stumbling block at the superpower leaders' meeting.

Reagan said he could not agree to a Soviet proposal that the United States sign an agreement to limit Star Wars research to the laboratory for 10 years.

Gorbachev said he had made "very major concessions" on arms reductions, and even softened his stance on a Kremlin call for a treaty ban on nuclear testing.

He said the two sides had virtually agreed on a plan to cut strategic weapons by 50 percent in five years, eliminate medium-range missiles in Europe and reduce the number of warheads on Soviet medium-range missiles in Asia to 100.

But he said Reagan's refusal to ban "Star Wars" research outside the laboratory was the final impasse that could not be overcome.

"Who was going to accept that?" Gorbachev said of Reagan's firm stand on space weapons. "It would have taken a madman to accept that. I don't see madmen in leading positions in government."

There also was no agreement on on terms or a date for a full summit in the United States, on which Reagan and Gorbachev had agreed at their first encounter last November in Geneva.

Before the summit ended, Soviet newspapers were on the street with prominent coverage of its first sessions and criticism of U.S. proposals to limit nuclear weapons testing instead of agreeing to an outright test ban.

Articles in several newspapers reported peace demonstrations in Reykjavik, including the arrival of members of the Greenpeace environmental activist group.

'Remarkable day' ends in gloom

By MARCUS ELIASON

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — It was a day that began looking boringly predictable, turned feverishly expectant and ended in gloom.

President Reagan on Sunday tried to cheer things up as he departed nearly five hours late with a joke about Nancy keeping dinner for him, and promised: "We're going to continue the effort" to abolish nuclear weapons.

Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, who was staying until today, said, "We can still do business with Reagan."

As the supersummit circus began packing up its wires and satellite dishes and leaving Reykjavik to its quiet ways, there was no question that a remarkable day had passed into history. The two superpower leaders had come close to agreements that would all but banish nuclear weapons, only to see them collapse over the "Star Wars" issue.

The second and last day of the Reykjavik summit promised no surprises. Both sides had agreed to a news blackout, and the general feeling was that nothing earthshaking would be announced.

In the morning, Reagan drove from his lodgings at the U.S. Embassy to the Hofdi, the house on Reykjavik Bay chosen for the summit, to meet with Gorbachev, who was coming from the boat on which he was staying in Reykjavik harbor.

The atmosphere was so relaxed that security was loosened to allow a 100-yard-wide line of peace demonstrators to stand opposite the Hofdi behind a phalanx of police and orange-coated volunteer guards.

As midday approached, a dozen campaigners for Soviet Jewry arrived. They inflated slogan-daubed balloons, stood behind a makeshift cage symbolizing the Iron Curtain, and sang Hebrew folk songs.

Gorbachev's limousine had its engine running, a sign that the meeting was ending. But it dragged on.

"Let's go somewhere else," one of the Jewish demonstrators said to a friend. "There's not enough media here."

At the White House press center in the Loftleidir Hotel across the city, reporters wishing to cover Reagan's departure were told to board a bus. Moments before the bus was to pull out, Reagan was seen on live TV saying he would meet Gorbachev again at midafternoon.

White House officials began running from the bus back to the press center, walkie-talkies jabbering.

Larry Speakes arrived to brief the media. He had heard that a Soviet spokesman was talking about his government making a proposal "of historic importance," and he lashed out at the Soviets for allegedly violating the blackout.

Then Speakes said "progress" had been made. At a summit that had promised only "frameworks" and "impulses," "progress" was a magic word, and an atmosphere of high expectations set in.

Back at the Hofdi, the meeting stretched into the night. After nearly four hours, Reagan looked grim as he left.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Pope mentions quake

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II expressed his solidarity with the people of El Salvador, saying he felt particularly close to them following the earthquake that shook their Central American country.

Following his regular Sunday blessing, the pope told more than 40,000 people gathered in St. Peter's Square that he prayed "fervid prayers for the eternal rest of the poor victims, for the healing of the injured and comfort for those who lost houses and relatives."

The earthquake struck El Salvador's capital Friday.

John Paul also referred to the worldwide day of truce he has called for Oct. 27, coinciding with the meeting of the leaders of the world's religions in Assisi, saying it should be a time to begin "continued commitment to prayer and action for peace."

Survivors search rubble

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Hundreds of Salvadorans searched this earthquake-shattered city for missing children, parents and other relatives who may be buried in the wreckage of collapsed buildings.

"We haven't seen them since the earthquake, but we want to find them alive or know they are dead by seeing their bodies," Corina Elizabeth Retana Zavaleta said Sunday as she watched five bodies being placed in a common grave at the Bermeja cemetery in downtown San Salvador.

Mrs. Retana Zavaleta, 25, was looking for her 5-year-old daughter and 20-year-old sister. When the earthquake jolted the city Friday, they were near the five-floor Ruben Dario building, which collapsed into a pile of concrete and twisted steel.

"They were in that area shopping, I don't know if they were in the building," she said with tears in her eyes. "Anything is possible, but I have not seen them since then."

Just after the five bodies were buried, other people arrived asking what the victims had looked like, their height, weight and the color of their clothes.

Hasenfus will be tried

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Eugene Hasenfus, the American who survived the shooting down of a rebel supply plane, will soon be tried in a People's Court, President Daniel Ortega said.

Ortega, who commented publicly for the first time on the capture of Hasenfus during a nationally broadcast town meeting Saturday, did not say what charges the 45-year-old American would face or precisely when he would stand trial.

Hasenfus was captured by Sandinista troops after they used a surface-to-air missile to shoot down a C-123 transport plane Oct. 5 on an arms drop mission to Contra rebels fighting Ortega's leftist government.

Hasenfus, of Marinette, Wis., had bailed out when the plane was hit.

The aireraft's American pilot and co-pilot were killed in the crash. Their bodies were handed over to the U.S. Embassy in Managua and returned to the United States.

A fourth crew member, believed to be American, also died but has not yet been identified and his body has not been given to U.S. authorities.

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Early results from Sunday's local elections showed mayors backed by Premier Andreas Papandreou's socialist government trailing conservative challengers in three major cities including Athens.

More than 6 million voters went to the polls to elect mayors of 291 cities and towns and community presidents in 5,733 villages.

With nearly 6 percent of the vote counted, Athens' socialist Mayor Dimitris Beis, running for a third four-year term, lagged 47-28 percent behind ex-Cabinet minister Miltiades Evert.

In the port city of Piraeus, conservative challenger Andreas Andrianopoulos, another former Cabinet minister, led socialist Mayor Yiannis Papaspyrou by 42.7 percent to 30.5 percent.

Salonica Mayor Theochares Manavis was trailing Sotirios Kouvelas, a Parliament member for the conservative opposition New Democracy party, by 48.4 percent to 26.3 percent.

A comparison of Sunday's early results with last year's national election returns showed Papandreou-backed candidates losing some ground nationwide.

'Segregation' blasted

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — An Anglican synod called on all Christians to oppose apartheid, but a priest who took part in the policy-making congress condemned what he called effective segregation in the church's own parishes.

The Anglican church, South Africa's most influential denomination after the Dutch Reformed Church, also approved a resolution at its weekend synod containing what was termed "implicit support of sanctions" designed to force an end to apartheid.

Roman Catholic Archbishop George Daniel raised the issue of de facto segregation — in effect a sort of apartheid — at a meeting of Catholic laity in Pretoria. He said on Saturday: "Let's be honest. Before the Group Areas Act came into effect, (white and black) Catholics were living apart, and not only geographically. If the act were lifted tomorrow, would we mix freely?"

The Group Areas Act establishes exclusive residential zones for whites.

Brazil will import coffee

RIO DE JANEIRO (NYT) — Brazil, the patriarch of coffee and long a mainstay of the world's drinkers of the brew, startled markets at home and abroad with the announcement that it would import up to 1.5 million bags of coffee this year.

Brazil said a severe drought has caused greater damage than expected in the coffee fields, ruining more than half of the country's crop.

Government officials said that Brazil would buy inferior quality coffee from Africa and perhaps Indonesia for domestic use and would send abroad as much as possible of its own premium-grade product. The plan is intended to maintain Brazil's 30 percent share of the world market.

Though coffee traders said that consumers in Brazil and the rest of the world would not see shortages, the announcement last month of the import plan set off panic buying in the stores here.

But the reaction on the international market has not mimicked that of the Brazilian consumer. The December futures contract on the New York Coffee, Sugar and Cocoa Exchange, which had a high of $2.87 a pound on Jan. 10, 1986, had fallen to $2.1950 a pound by Sept. 24, after Brazil's import announcement. By last Friday, the price had plummeted to $1.8035 a pound.

While a poor crop this year had been expected, the Brazilian Coffee Institute disclosed that the harvest concluded in August had been even more disastrous than thought.

Billions in drugs taken

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The federal Attorney General's Office says it has confiscated drugs with a street value of $10.27 billion in the first nine months of the year, including 4.6 metric tons of cocaine.

The report, carried Sunday by the government newspaper El Nacional, said the federal anti-drug campaign also has netted 70,000 kilograms of marijuana, 466 kilograms of marijuana seed and 23 kilograms of hashish.

The report also said the campaign destroyed seven heroin laboratories and four labs manufacturing other drugs. It said 5,558 people were arrested on drug charges in the first nine months of the year.

Re-election applauded

MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Miguel de la Madrid congratulated Javier Perez de Cuellar on his re-election as secretary-general of the United Nations.

"We are aware of the difficult political and financial situation that the organization is experiencing and, however, we trust that... we will be able to overcome those difficulties, at the same time that we strengthen the irreplaceable international forum in favor of peace and development," de la Madrid said in his message.

The text was released by the Foreign Ministry.

De la Madrid also noted that the re-election of Perez de Cuellar, who is Peruvian, "is cause of particular pride for Latin American countries, as well as other developing countries, who, without a doubt, will continue supporting you strongly and actively in your difficult work."

Ecology section added

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Textbooks distributed in Mexico will include information about ecological issues starting next year, including instruction on how to combat pollution, the government news agency Notimex reported.

It said the step was included in the Urban Development and Ecology Department's 21-step plan to improve Mexico City's environment. That plan was issued after a wave of thermal inversions last winter caused air pollution here said to be the worst ever.

Notimex said the National Commission of Free Textbooks was preparing the new material.

Actress presents honor

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Silvia Pinal, one of Mexico's best known actresses, presented to the National Cinematheque international awards she received for her performances in films directed by Luis Bunuel.

"I give you a part of my life," she said in the ceremony at the cinematheque's new four-theater complex in the Coyoacan district of southern Mexico City.

Among the awards were the Golden Palm from the Cannes Film Festival in 1961 for her performance in "Viridiana" and a 1965 medal from the Venice Film Festival for "Simon of the Desert."

"Viridiana" was screened as part of the ceremony Friday night.

She also presented a copy of the script by Nobel Prize-winning author Gabriel Garcia Marquez of a planned movie that will mark her return to the screen. It is to be directed by Jaime Humberto Hermosillo.

Bunuel was born in Spain but later lived here in exile, making some of his most famous films in Mexico. He died in 1983, at the age of 83.

AUTOMOTIVE REPORT

1986½ Nissan "Hardbody" Pickup

By Tom Cooper

Nissan's 1986 "Hardbody" is boasted by the company as the first totally new pickup line in 25 years. Whether that claim is true or not one thing is for sure, they have created a lot of confusion with the name Hardbody.

With a name like that you'd think the explanation would be on the front cover of the Nissan brochure, but its not. There is an explanation of sorts on the inside covere. The company tells us that it has a stronger body with increased corrosion resistance.

That helps, but the inquiring mind wants to know what is different about this body that makes it stronger? Perhaps its the double steel walled bed and the increased use of galvanized steel to improve corrosion resistance that is revealed on page 19. Page 19? You've got to be kidding! We don't want to read through 19 pages to find out that its called "hardbody" because it has a double steel wall bed. We want that on page one, or better yet on the front cover. But perhaps it is cautiously that Nissan is counting on to get us to read the rest of their marketing material.

Fact is, that by the time we get to page 17 we are beginning to believe that this is a neat little truck.

Nissan tells us that it has more cargo volume than any leading compact truck.

But it is really not a compact truck. It approaches the medium range with many of the best features of both the small and large pickups.

A five-speed manual overdrive transmission is standard on this pickup. That combined with the 2.4 liter overhead cam engine provides the kind of acceleration that is even uncommon in some larger pickups. And, you can have the acceleration and economy too.

The smooth and quiet ride is also not what you would expect from a small vehicle. The ease of handeling, on the other hand, is small car through and through.

The Nissan pickup is offered in both two and four wheel drive models, a king cab, and a cab & chassis model that can be adapted to a variety of needs. A wide selection of options are also available including the normal luxury features and even a sun roof. Some of the more unusual features include pop up tie downs and quick release tailgate; standard, and an optional engine heater for faster starts on cold winter mornings.

This feature appears each Monday as a reader service of the Midland Reporter-Telegram

THIS DOESN'T FIGURE IN VOLVO'S 3-YEAR NEW-CAR WARRANTY.

When you buy one of our Volvos there's no limit to how far you can go. Because Volvo is the only car sold in the U.S. backed with a 3 year new-car limited warranty* that puts no limit on mileage.

And unlike some other car warranties, the Volvo warranty is not limited to the engine and drivetrain. It covers every part of your new Volvo against defects in material or workmanship...which means you won't have to worry about a single thing.

Even if another carmaker were to offer a warranty this good, they wouldn't have what it takes to back it up. In 1986 Volvo

LET'S TALK ABOUT CORPORATE PROPERTIES...

This Sunday, Many of our corporate properties will be featured on open houses, giving rise to the question, "What are corporate properties?" Simply put, they are homes bought by an employer, at an appraised value, from transferred employees.

While these transactions are costly to employers, they may save money in the long run because they enable Corporations to have transferred employees on the job, where and when needed, without the worries of homes than must be sold, and usually with the family units intact.

Some Corporations have "in house" departments to negotiate these purchases and resales, but most contact with banks or third party companies to handle these transactions. That way you may also hear these homes referred to as third party properties.

Because purchases of employe homes tie up valuable business dollars, and because each day of holding time adds to the costs of purchase, corporate homes are usually priced most competatively and are put in top condition so that they will resale as quickly as possible.

Corporate homes are among the best buys on the market, drop by and see for yourself this Sunday!
