Economy may bite Bush, Republicans

WASHINGTON — After one of the most battering weeks of his presidency, George Bush faces crucial decisions on starting up his re-election campaign, the political viability of his chief of staff and how to heal a division that threatens the Republicans' image as the party best able to manage the economy.

If there is one piece of information that illuminates the difference between this presidential campaign and the last one, it is this: by October 1987, Michael S. Dukakis had raised $8 million for his primary campaign. By October 1991, the six Democratic presidential candidates together had raised one-quarter of that amount.

Hampered by a late start, a recession and an incumbent in the White House, several of this year's Democratic candidates are heading into the presidential primary season with less money than it

Former pilot recalls Pearl Harbor fight

■ Phil Rasmussen will speak at the 'Prelude to Pearl Harbor: The Interwar Years' here in December.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

It was almost 50 years ago when Phil Rasmussen, donned in his pajamas, was firing away over Kaneohe Bay in his Curtiss P-36 Hawk fighter.

He and three of his fellow American fighter pilots were "jumping" Japanese aircraft in the second wave of Nipponese warplanes to attack Pearl Harbor.

The date was Dec. 7, 1941. And the United States was on the eve of its official plunge into World War II.

Quickly, America was losing its "innocence" and its isolationist stance.

And Rasmussen, then 23, was into his first air-combat battle.

"I didn't know what was going on," Rasmussen recently reflected. "I knew that we had been attacked. That's all I knew. I guess that was enough to know."

He was to score his first air victory that Sunday morning.

Rasmussen, now a 73-year-old watercolor seascape and landscape artist and a retired real-estate broker living in Fort Myers, Fla., will be in Midland in early December at the American Airpower

Phil Rasmussen, an American P-36 fighter pilot who scored an aerial combat victory by shooting down a Japanese Zero warplane in the Dec. 7, 1941, attack on Pearl Harbor, will be in Midland for the American Airpower Heritage Museum's symposium "Prelude to Pearl Harbor: The Interwar Years" in early December.

And Rasmussen's air battle over Kaneohe Bay, Hawaii, is the subject of a museum-commissioned painting by Jerry Crandall, an aviation artist and historian from Sedona, Ariz.

Sales tax increase will help, panel says

■ Committee looking for ways to revitalize Midland's economy proposes a sales tax after a year-long study.

This is the first of a two-part series dealing with the prospect of an economic development sales tax, a ¼-cent increase to local rates that would be used to encourage business expansion and recruit new industry. With Midland City Council approval, the issue would come to a citizen vote Jan. 18.

Today's installment examines why supporters think the tax is vital for Midland's competitive edge as cities compete for the chance to grow. It also looks at one current effort toward development and how tax revenues might add fuel to the fire.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

Adding ¼ cent to the local sales tax rate, with revenues slated to fund economic development, could revitalize the local economy and sharpen the city's competitive edge, supporters say.

"We're down to the wire, we need the chance to compete. This will give us a way to help ourselves," said Wayne Merritt, president of Texas National Bank and chairman of a committee that has been studying the tax.

Forward Midland brings jobs here

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

In the economic development game, Midland's team has had a number of players, including contract agencies using hotel-motel tax money, educational programs and efforts of the existing business community.

But the largest local endeavor has been Forward Midland — a 15-member committee that raises private funding for business support and attraction. It operates in association with the Midland Chamber, which utilizes city funds.

COMPETING FOR JOBS:
The case for Economic Development Sales Tax

Launched in 1989 with an ambitious four-year schedule for job creation and business recruitment, Forward Midland set a long-term goal of pumping $120 million into the economy. Leaders say while the group has met many of its goals, its funding sources have proved not to be enough.

They say the development game has changed, as more players enter armed with the high-dollar investment capability of sales tax revenues.

Now supporters of a ¼-cent sales tax in the local community say its estimated $2 million annual revenues would make Midland a more formidable rival. Already 52 Texas cities are using a similar tax to fund their efforts.

Newborn galaxy found

N.Y. Times News Service

A vast cloud of gas molecules has been detected near the fringe of the observable universe, giving astronomers a revealing glimpse into the earliest stars in the firmament and the creation of galaxies.

Astronomers reported in The Astronomical Journal, being published this week, that the cloud had at least 100 times the mass of the Milky Way galaxy, making it the largest such object ever observed. And it appears to be the most distant object found to harbor molecules — in this case, carbon monoxide.

The cloud is estimated to be 12 billion light-

Hospital chain focus of many complaints

By Peter Kerr
N.Y. Times News Service

Investigators looking into psychiatric hospitals operated for profit have uncovered evidence of fraud and abuse in the filing of insurance claims that could run into millions of dollars.

Authorities say these investigations, coupled with earlier findings, suggest that insurance fraud and abuse may permeate the entire medical field and contribute significantly to the country's soaring health-care costs.

Officials in the federal government and six states focused initially on complaints of patients at one leading chain, Psychiatric Institutes of America. But Texas officials have now named three other national chains.

The investigators say the complaints under review are essentially about private for-profit hospitals as opposed to the non-profit private or public institutions.

At Psychiatric Institutes of America, investigators say they have identified the following types of practices:

■ Inflated bills for medications and services — $1,100 a person for three hours of group therapy, or $4.15 for a single Advil tablet, which costs 11 cents in drug stores.

■ Billing for services never rendered, as in the case of a woman who says she was charged for group therapy at $80 an hour when she was at lunch, at dinner, or was being inspected for lice.

■ Diagnoses and treatments altered to match insurance coverage.

■ Admitting children to psychiatric hospitals even though experts say they do not need hospitalization.

stances of abuse but says the practices are not widespread.

The cases raise questions, experts say, of why in even the most extreme examples of general medical insurance abuse, the institutions that should be responsible for preventing or correcting it — the insurance companies, regulatory agencies and professional medical societies — have appeared either unwilling or unable to do so.

And they come to light as members of Congress and some leaders in the insurance industry and medical profession express growing concern.

"Insurance fraud and abuse are weeds that are growing fast and if they are not stopped they will suffocate the health-care garden," said James L. Garcia, the director of Health Plans for Aetna Insurance Co. and one of the nation's leading experts on insurance fraud. "The whole system is in dire need of reform."

Patients and former employees have described their experiences to investigators in Texas, New Jersey, Florida, Alabama, Louisiana and California and in interviews with The New York Times.

Major L. Harper of Fort Worth, for one, told how his 70-year-old wife, Jean, had received a $5,000 pharmacy bill, after a one-month hospital stay. She was charged $3.75 a tablet for Tylenol with codeine, a drug that sells wholesale to pharmacies for 42 cents a tablet.

"The testimony we have heard from hundreds of members of the public indicates that fraud and abuse in the medical field can be extremely blatant and may be extraordinary widespread," said Texas State Sen. Mike Montcrief, the chairman of an investigative committee that has taken testimony from more than 200 witnesses in the past six weeks.

"This is one of the major reasons that health-care costs are going through the roof while insurance companies just continue to raise our rates."

Psychiatric Institutes is a subsidiary of National Medical Enterprises Inc. of Santa Monica, Calif., which operates 74 psychiatric and substance abuse centers nationally. At least 26 hospitals or treatment centers are under investigation, officials said.

A spokesman for Psychiatric Institutes of America, David Olson, said troubling practices did exist at a small number of its hospitals but he insisted that the chain was devoted to high-quality care and high ethical standards.

"A few instances of difficulty have been magnified into larger problems that simply don't exist," he said, adding the company has begun its own audit and investigation. "If we find anything wrong, we're going to fix it."

Friday, the attorney general of Texas, Dan Morales, disclosed that his investigation had expanded to include the hospitals of three other chains, Charter Medical Corp., Hospital Corporation of America and Community Psychiatric Centers.

A spokesman for the attorney general, Gray McBride, said the state was examining significant evidence of "fraudulent activity, misapplication of funds and fundamental errors in the provider-patient relationship."

Spokesmen for the three companies said Friday that they were not aware of any wrongdoing or serious allegations against their hospitals. They said they would cooperate with Texas investigators.

Robert Thomas, executive director of the 325-member National Association of Private Psychiatric Hospitals, which includes both for-profit and non-profit institutions, said, "Most of our hospitals are fine, medical institutions, providing upstanding medical service and high quality. This is an honorable, care-giving industry."

What follows is a look at categories of complaints under investigation and some specific cases.

Shortly after Jean Harper came home from the hospital, Psychiatric Institutes of Fort Worth, Major L. Harper examined her itemized bill and blew up. The hospital, he said, told him not to worry, that his insurance would cover the bill. But Harper, a retired state nursing-home investigator, told the Texas State Senate that he remained perplexed and enraged.

And he was not alone.

Dozens of patients this fall have complained to investigators and a congressional subcommittee investigating the markups of drugs and supplies often by more than 10 times the cost.

In another example of such markups at another Psychiatric Institutes hospital in Florida, Fred Flintstone vitamins were billed at $3.60 a pill, compared with 13 cents in a drug store, and Advil at $4.15, compared with 11 cents, a markup of 37 times the cost.

High markups are not illegal. But experts say they are common and hurt everyone because they are passed along in higher premiums or in expenses for employers and in turn in reduced income for employees or lower earnings for shareholders.

Harper said his wife was overcharged for services, too, billed $1,100 for a three-hour session of family therapy, for instance.

"That just about made my eyes fall out," said Harper, 73.

The therapy was said to be part of a two-day program in April when patients and their families met with a social worker and a counselor, according to the company that provided the therapy for the hospital, Metro & McGee Associates. Metro & McGee said it was paid only $105.21 a patient for each three hours of treatment.

Spokesmen for Psychiatric Institutes, as well as other health-care companies, say the high markups at hospitals are used to offset the sharply increasing costs of running a hospital, ranging from staff salaries to supplies.

They say, too, that the majority of patients do not pay the full charges because so many insurance plans have discounting agreements with hospitals.

In Mrs. Harper's case, the Psychiatric Institutes spokesman said, the $1,100 entries for three hours of family therapy were the result of a billing error, which the spokesman said had later been corrected. Harper said he had received no such correction. The charge was $1,100 for six hours of therapy, the company said.

The chain's markup of drugs, he said, is no different from other hospitals.

Though the hospitals and doctors are known to try to reassure patients about the high bills, saying the insurance companies will pay, the markups disturb some officials.

"A $1 Tylenol, that certainly troubles me," said Larry D. Morey, the deputy inspector general for the federal Department of Health and Human Services and the president of the National Health Care Anti-Fraud Association. "In many cases, you are paying for greed."

Sept. 6, Mindy Jo Horvath spent the morning with other female patients at Willowbrook Hospital in Waxahachie. They were taken, she said, into a padded room and searched for lice.

The 34-year-old electronic technician who was being treated for depression said she went to lunch that day at noon, and at 1 p.m, she entered group therapy that lasted until 9:30 p.m., with a one-hour break for dinner. She was in therapy, she said, for a total of no more than seven and a half hours.

But Ms. Horvath said later that she was overwhelmed by a $32,538 bill for her 28-day stay; that the charges included 10 hours of group therapy on Sept. 6, at $80 an hour; a $1,600 battery of tests by a psychologist she says she never met, and $160 an hour for individual therapy she says she was never given.

"I may be crazy, but I'm not stupid," Mrs. Horvath said. "How could anyone believe that I got all these treatments in just one day?"

Although Olson said his company was limited by law from commenting on patient cases, he said Psychiatric Institutes did not purposely charge for any service not given.

Ms. Horvath's bill was reviewed by the president of the Texas Society of Psychiatric Physicians, Dr. Deborah Peele, at a state Senate hearing. "This is clearly abusive corporate practice," she said. "I'm puzzled that insurance companies don't challenge these kinds of things."

Blue Cross paid a total of $14,723, the full amount that its policy with Ms. Horvath covered. Under a contract with Blue Cross, the hospital accepted the money as payment in full. Blue Cross made no inquiry into the claim, though other experts say the combination of more than 12 hours of group therapy, individual therapy and tests was highly unusual.

Dr. Rogers Coleman, Blue Cross president, said that Ms. Horvath did not complain.

STARS: Distant gas cloud points to evidence of galaxy formation years away, 10 times farther than any other molecular gas cloud seen.

The two discoverers, Dr. Robert L. Brown and Dr. Paul Vanden Bout, both of the National Radio Astronomy Observatory in Charlottesville, Va., said the huge volume of gas being detected at such a great distance was strong evidence that they had observed a galaxy still in the formation process.

The cloud is being seen as it existed about 3 billion years after the presumed birth of the universe in the Big Bang, and no galaxy had ever before been caught in the act of forming so relatively early in cosmic history.

The observations, they also said, demonstrate that galaxy formation is preceded by the gravitational accumulation of an enormous reservoir of molecular gas that occurred surprisingly soon after the Big Bang.

In an announcement of their discovery, Brown and Vanden Bout said Friday that the findings were "in keeping with models of galaxy formation, never before confirmed, that galaxies form by the gravitational accumulation of pre-existing clouds of gas."

Dr. Greg Bothun, an astrophysicist at the University of Oregon and specialist on galaxy studies, agreed that the cloud represented a nascent galaxy.

"This confirms what we expected," he said. "But it is nice to finally see it."

The astronomers made the discovery in July, using a radio telescope at Kitt Peak, Ariz., to detect the presence of carbon monoxide, one of the most stable molecules, in a cloud of interstellar dust. The dust cloud had been discovered a few months earlier in analysis of data from the Infrared Astronomy Satellite showing faint emissions of heat at far-infrared wavelengths. The object was in the constellation Ursa Major in the northern night sky.

The signature for the carbon monoxide molecule was detected in the extremely short radio wavelengths. It was coming from the same region as the dust cloud, known as IRAS 10214+4724.

Brown said the quantity of the molecular gas was astonishing.

"I can't think of another object in the universe that has anything like that mass of molecular gas," he said.

Dr. Richard B. Larson, an astronomer at Yale University, said: "This combination of molecular gas and strong infrared signals is a sure sign for very intense star formation. It's perhaps the best evidence for a galaxy in the process of star formation."

From observations of quasars, the extremely bright and distant objects assumed to be associated with early galaxies, astrophysicists had determined that stellar and galactic formation must have occurred much sooner after the Big Bang than had previously been thought.

Since both the elements carbon and oxygen are produced in stars, the carbon monoxide observations showed that, though this galaxy is in its formative stage, there has already been at least one generation of stars to have completed its life cycle.

RASMUSSEN: Man recounts Pearl Harbor days

(From 1A)

Heritage Museum's symposium "Prelude to Pearl Harbor: The Interwar Years" from Dec. 3 through Dec. 6 in the Midland Holiday Inn Convention Center.

Over Kaneohe Bay almost 50 years ago, Rasmussen scored his air-combat kill by shooting down an Imperial Japanese Navy Mitsubishi A6M3 Zero (Zeke) fighter.

It was after 9 a.m. Hawaiian time on Dec. 7, 1941.

About 15 minutes earlier, Rasmussen and three of his comrades, Gordon Sterling, Lew Saunders and John Thacker, had taken off in P-36s from the flaming Wheeler Field in a lull between waves of attacks by 423 Japanese fighters, torpedo bombers and dive-bombers which had been launched from the carriers Akagi, Kaga, Hiryu, Soryu, Zuikaku and Shokaku off the coast of Hawaii.

Rasmussen recalled the air battle.

"We flew over to Kaneohe Bay, four of us, and we jumped a bunch of Japanese aircraft that were attacking.

"I shot down one — a Zero.

"Lew (Saunders) got one.

"Gordon Sterling, I think, got one, but I did see Gordon Sterling going in flames himself.

"And John Thacker's guns were all jammed, and he couldn't fire his weapons."

Through the brief battle, "There was a great deal of confusion about the type of aircraft we had shot down, because we had not seen these types of aircraft before. They were brand new. We had no silhouettes, no information about them," Rasmussen said. "At first, I thought I had shot down a bomber. The consensus was that it was a Zero that I shot down."

Rasmussen described the battle in detail:

"We made one pass at these people" — the Japanese pilots.

"Thacker got into a dogfight and couldn't do anything about it, as his weapons were jammed. Sterling was attacking an aircraft, and he, in turn, was attacked, was set on fire, and went down.

"And I saw Saunders jump an aircraft.

"And I shot mine. I saw this one aircraft coming by, perpendicular to my course, and I started to fire at him. I saw the bullets hit the fuselage, smoke started coming out, and he dived down.

"At that time, there was another Zero that I thought was going to ram me. He headed right for me. At the last moment, we both chickened and pulled away.

"And then, at the time, I was hit by another Zero that blew my canopy off and put two 20-millimeter explosive cannons in my fuselage and knocked out my hydraulic system and severed my rudder controls, shot off my tail wheel, (and) pretty much screwed up my airplane."

After he was hit, Rasmussen headed for cover in the clouds.

"When I was hit, I thought I was physically injured, because I was just wearing a headset; I was not wearing a helmet. I tucked into a cloud and felt rather gingerly up there and found out that it was just crumbled Plexiglas. Anyway, I was fighting for control of the airplane in the clouds. I finally got control and headed back to Wheeler Field and landed."

At the moment of touchdown, he had just hand-pumped his main landing gear down. His hydraulic system was out of service.

His P-36 ground looped. The right tire on the main landing gear had been shot out. And the grass landing field was wet with dew.

The P-36, which was far less agile and less maneuverable than the Zero, was powered by an air-cooled radial-engine. The P-36 was the forerunner of the P-40 Warhawk, which was powered by an in-line 12-cylinder V-engine.

In Rasmussen's P-36 fighter were 450 bullet and cannon holes from 7.7 millimeter and 20-millimeter ammunition. Saunders' P-36 sustained 500 holes.

"On top of that," Rasmussen said, "this particular P-36 that I had had no armor-plating. So I had no protection. The only thing that saved my life was the fact that the 20-millimeter cannons buried themselves in the radio compartment (behind the cockpit) and expended their energy there rather than coming through into the cockpit."

Back on the ground, Rasmussen was "madder than hell.

"Everybody was mad. We couldn't get back at those guys. In fact, a lot of us volunteered to go over to New Guinea to get into the battle, because we felt that we were in the back-wash in Hawaii, that the battle lines were being formed further west in the Pacific. We were very impatient."

The reason Rasmussen was flying, and fighting, in his pajamas was because he happened to be up early, about 7:50 a.m. on Sunday on Dec. 7, 1941. He was in the latrine and looking out the window at the hangars and rows of P-36 and P-40 fighters when Japanese aircraft starting attacking Wheeler Field.

The American bombers, most twin-engine Douglas B-18s, were on the ground at Hickam Field. A flight of 12 four-engine B-17 Flying Fortresses were en route to the field.

Immediately, Rasmussen yelled out about the air attack, strapped his web belt and his .45-caliber pistol over his pajamas, put on the first pair of shoes he found, and ran to the flight line and "to salvage one of the aircraft before it exploded."

Fifteen Japanese warplanes had attacked Wheeler Field, a fighter base, in the initial attack shortly before 8 a.m.

At Wheeler Field, the P-36 and P-40 pursuit fighters, unprepared for combat, were without ammunition and were parked wing-tip to wing-tip to discourage sabotage by Japanese or by Japanese sympathizers.

Most were on fire.

The Japanese were strafing the aircraft and igniting them. One would explode. It was so close to the next one that it would ignite the aircraft next to it, Rasmussen said.

"I grabbed one of the planes (at the end of the line) that was not on fire, taxied it over to an earthen revetment, and we loaded it with ammunition, and I took off during a lull in the attack."

All but Sterling returned from battle.

At the Pearl Harbor symposium at Midland and another symposium at Pearl Harbor, Rasmussen and other Pearl Harbor veterans will be "trying to reconstruct events and trying to reconstruct the timing" of the air battles at Pearl Harbor.

PEARL: Symposium set Dec. 3-6

cuss the "Battle at Kaneohe Bay" the morning of Wednesday, Dec. 4, in the Holiday Inn Convention Center in Midland.

The four-day symposium will be held there from Tuesday, Dec. 3, through Friday, Dec. 6. It begins at 8 a.m. each day.

Crandall has been commissioned to produce five paintings that depict major air battles during World War II.

Tuesday, Dec. 3, Rasmussen and the artist will be co-autographing prints of Crandall's painting that depicts Rasmussen piloting the Curtiss P-36 Hawk fighter in a "swirling air battle" between four U.S. Army Air Forces P-36s and a squadron of Japanese Zero fighters over Kaneohe Bay, Hawaii.

The autograph session will be held from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. on Dec. 3 in the Blue Gem Shop & Gallery at 321 Dodson St. in Midland.

"We are really excited" about Crandall's Pearl Harbor painting of Rasmussen and his pursuit aircraft, said Blue Gem proprietor Dorothy Davis. "We have some aviation art that we carry all of the time."

Then, from 6:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. Dec. 3 in the Holiday Inn, Rasmussen and Crandall will be at Crandall's art exhibit which will feature "Battle at Kaneohe Bay," which is the first in the symposium's commemorative art series.

"We have a lot of faith in Jerry Crandall," Tami O'Bannion, director of the American Airpower Heritage Museum, said. "David Smith (symposium co-chairman) was very impressed" with his aviation art works.

Crandall will produce five commemorative paintings for the Confederate Air Force and the American Airpower Heritage Museum. The paintings will presented at each of the annual symposiums beginning this year.

Each print will be autographed, numbered and registered, Ms. O'Bannion said.

During the four-day symposium, about 50 concurrent sessions on various aspects of the pre-war years and the Pearl Harbor attack will be held, noted Ms. O'Bannion.

"The symposium is going to bring the interpretative museum, the American Airpower Heritage Museum, into the modern age of museum education," Ms. O'Bannion said.

Scholarly papers on events leading up to World War II and on the war itself are to be presented at the first-annual symposium, which is jointly sponsored by the American Airpower Heritage Museum in Midland and by Hardin-Simmons University in Abilene.

Principal speakers at the symposium include:

■ David Eisenhower, political scientist and author of "Eisenhower: At War 1943-1945," a biography of his grandfather, Dwight David "Ike" Eisenhower, who was Supreme Allied Commander for the D-Day Invasion of Europe on June 6, 1944, and two-term president of the United States in the 1950s. Eisenhower is to speak at 7 p.m. on Thursday, Dec. 5.

■ Joseph Jacob "Joe" Foss, the spirited U.S. Marine Corps ace who later became the first president of the American Football League and governor of South Dakota in the 1960s. Foss is to speak at noon, Friday, Dec. 6.

■ Tom Hatfield, University of Texas historian. He is to discuss Japanese strategy at Pearl Harbor at noon on Wednesday, Dec. 4.

■ Edward L. "Ned" Beach, naval historian and author of "Run Silent, Run Deep" and "The United States Navy." Beach's talk is to be at noon on Thursday, Dec. 5.

Registration for the symposium or tickets for individual symposium events at the Holiday Inn may be obtained by telephoning Midland College at 685-4756.

The symposium will bled into the grand opening and dedication of the Confederate Air Force International Headquarters and the American Airpower Heritage Museum at Midland International Airport at 11 a.m. on Saturday, Dec. 7.

Copter crash creates unrest

MOSCOW (AP) — Thousands of people marched in Azerbaijan on Saturday to mourn victims of a helicopter crash that officials warned could escalate bloodshed between the republic and neighboring Armenia.

Azerbaijan claimed the helicopter was shot down by Armenians over the disputed territory of Nagorno-Karabakh that is claimed by both southern republics.

The crash Wednesday killed all 23 people aboard, including several Azerbaijani officials.

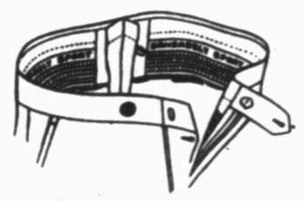

Armenian reports said the helicopter, which also was carrying officials from Russia and Kazakhstan trying to seek a peaceful solution to the ethnic conflict, crashed in heavy fog in the mountainous region. Soviet investigators say it is too early to tell the cause.

Hundreds of people have been killed in the dispute between mostly Muslim Azerbaijan and Christian Armenia over Nagorno-Karabakh.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze appealed for calm.

WEATHER SUMMARY

West Texas can expect sun

Staff Report

Sunny skies should prevail over most of West Texas today.

The National Weather Service at Midland International Airport is forecasting a bright and mild day with the temperature peak in the upper 50s.

The wind is to be light early today, but later it is to pick up speed from 5 to 15 mph from the south-southeast.

Fair weather is expected tonight and Monday with the low temperature in the lower 30s. The high is expected to be in the lower 60s.

Saturday's peak temperature was 49 degrees, and the low reading was 30 degrees.

The record high temperature for Nov. 23 is 84 degrees in 1965, and the record low for Nov. 24 is 10 degrees in 1938.

STATE

Texas was crisp and clear Saturday as high pressure in the wake of a cold front kept clouds away.

Winds continued to blow from the north to northwest at speeds of 15 to 25 miles per hour. At 3 p.m., Waco reported gusts to 36 miles per hour.

Temperatures remained cool with readings warming only into the 40s and 50s. South Texas had highs in the 60s.

The North Texas forecast was for sunny days and clear nights through Monday, when temperatures were expected to warm slightly. Highs Sunday were predicted to be in the mid 50s with Monday's peaks near 60. Sunday night's lows were to range from 25 degrees in the southeast to 37 in the southwest.

West Texas was expected to be fair through Monday. Highs Sunday were to be in the 40s in the Panhandle and Mountains with 50s elsewhere. Lows Sunday night in the lower 20s in the Panhandle and mountains to the mid 30s in the Concho and Big Bend valleys.

Forecasters said South Texas would have sunny and cool days with clear and cold nights through Monday. Lows both nights from 20s in the Hill Country to near 30 north and near 40 south. Highs both days from 50s north to 60s south.

NATION

Storm systems that dumped up to 10 inches of snow in some places blanketed an area that stretched from the Plains to the Great Lakes Saturday. Light rain fell in New England and the Pacific Northwest.

In Iowa, heavy snowfall and winds gusting to 40 mph made travel difficult for Democrats attending a party fundraising event where all six of its 1992 presidential hopefuls were to speak. In Cedar Falls, a University of Northern Iowa football game was postponed after the stadium's domed roof began sagging under the weight of the snow.

Wisconsin got the heaviest snowfall. Ten inches had accumulated by daybreak in Westby and nine inches fell in La Crosse, Tomahawk, Rhinelander and Stevens Point.

The snow was bad news for Wisconsin hunters on the first day of the state's annual gun deer hunting season. The Department of Natural Resources said a weekend forecast of heavy snow and cold temperatures could hamper attempts to reduce Wisconsin's oversized herd of whitetail deer.

In Nebraska, icy roads were blamed for more than 100 traffic accidents Saturday and high winds that followed a Friday snowstorm plunged wind chills into the single digits.

At midday, snow stretched from the Dakotas and Nebraska, across Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan, and into Iowa and other parts of the Mississippi Valley.

Rain extended from central New England into northeast New York state. Rain also was falling along the coast of Washington state and in parts of Indiana, Michigan and Wisconsin.

The Asscoiated Press contributed to this report.

Tax money could return by June, 1992

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

With voter approval of a ¼-cent sales tax increase Jan 18, 1992, merchants would begin charging the new rate April 1.

By June 10, the revenue would begin returning to Midland to fund the work of an economic development corporation.

"This is a way citizens can make an investment in their community," said Gregg Owens, past chairman of the Midland Chamber of Commerce. "Their contribution stays here to be plowed back in to the economy."

Owens is part of a committee that — after studying the tax issue — has asked the City Council to set a city-wide vote. Revenues would be used for business expansion and attraction.

Laws have allowed cities to levy sales taxes for economic development since 1989, but the amount was limited to ½ cent. Midland representative Tom Craddick sponsored legislation in June of this year to allow the rate to be adjusted to ⅛, ¼, ⅜ or ½ cent.

Members of the local committee, studying the sales tax proposal for more than a year, only decided to move ahead with the idea after lesser tax amounts were allowed.

Midland's total tax rate — including state and local charges — is 7¾ cents per dollar. The state allows cities no more than 2 percent in local sales taxes, to be added to the state's 6¼ cent.

The Memorial Hospital and Medical Center already announced has its plans to call a vote on a ¼-cent tax for indigent care costs. If that proposal and the economic development tax are approved by voters, the local tax will reach its allowed limit of 8¼ cents.

Revenue from an economic development sales tax must be controlled by a non-profit corporation of members designated by the City Council. In cities whose total county population is 500,000 or less, that board should be five members, three of whom represent the local business community.

Corporation board members are held accountable to the community, their activities subject to the Open Records and Open Meetings Acts.

Limits are set on the uses of tax funds. Specifically, it may not be used to improve the infrastructure of the city — sewage or solid waste disposal, water transport — unless those projects are direct benefits or incentives to industry.

Loans and investments are expected to be two major uses of the revenue. Low-interest loans could help existing industry grow or entice new business to the area.

Supporters said they expect funding will be focused on "basic" industries — where a product is manufactured primarily for export from the community. By law, retailers and wholesalers are not eligible for sales tax revenue assistance.

Funds may be used for purchasing real estate, renovating buildings for use by companies, as well as buying machinery or services that are used as an incentive for industry.

Corporation board members will not be paid, but some cities with the tax have used part of its revenue to fund the hiring of one staff member or more.

The tax and its resulting corporation may be repealed with a vote, but citizens must first petition the City Council with signatures of at least 10 percent of the city's registered voters.

TAX: Panel asks council for January election

has asked the City Council to set a vote on the issue.

Councilmen will consider an ordinance on first reading Tuesday that would set a vote for Jan. 18. If the tax is approved by vote, the council will create an industrial development corporation to use the funds for local business expansion and recruitment of new industry to Midland.

Merritt

At-large Councilman J.D. Faircloth predicted the council on Tuesday would approve putting the issue on the January ballot.

He also said he was unaware of any organized opposition to the proposal, though he added that he knew of "a couple of retailers who have expressed some concern."

Still, he supports the plan.

"If we don't do something to stimulate the economy, ... we're just going to die," said Faircloth, who was a member of the committee. "I know it's more money, and taxpayers are hesitant to do that, but I don't think we have a lot of choice. I think it would be a slow death.

"Midland has got to do things and take care of itself."

Committee members have been considering the issue for more than a year, but decided only recently to ask for a vote. They said through the work of one local development group, the benefits of economic investment have now become clear.

King

Forward Midland, a chamber organization that has raised private funds for economic development, recently brought three industries into the community cited as direct contributors of more than $6 million annually to the local economy.

"The proof is in the pudding," said Doug Henson, chairman of the Midland Chamber and a committee member. "We've determined we're getting an excellent return on investment."

Another reason they've decided to move ahead is an increasingly intense competition, committee members said. Fifty-two cities have approved similar measures — most for a ½-cent tax — and are using those funds.

Cities with the tax include Amarillo, Abilene, Big Spring, Sweetwater and Brownfield. Lubbock is scheduled to vote on the issue in January as well.

"Those are some key cities in West Texas," said Jana King, Chamber president. "Right now we don't have the capital to be in the aggressive mode other cities have."

Although opinions differ about the current state of Midland's economy, most agree an aggressive stance toward development is key. But can local residents afford the extra cost?

"We're now behind those other cities. We need to do what we can to catch up," said David Diaz, a vice president of the Midland Hispanic Chamber. "We're only talking about a quarter cent more, and that's something everybody can afford."

A $10 purchase now totals $10.78 with tax. The increase would raise the total cost to $10.80.

In this case, money, supporters say, is the bottom line.

"We want to have money available to get into the game," said Merritt. "With all those other cities doing this, you can see we'd better have some resources and we need money to get them.

"I'd say we can't afford not to do this," Merritt said.

Abilene is estimated to have at least $3.8 million in annual tax revenues available, while Amarillo expects $6 million added to its development coffers each year.

With local sales tax revenues estimated at $2 million, the city can develop "hard assets" to support local businesses and attract new ones, Ms. King said.

The corporation could buy local buildings for lease to industry, purchase other enticements and make loans of large and small size.

"On $2 million a year we can do some real good," Ms. King said.

"There are some advantages we have," Merritt said, "We have great people, a good climate. But that's not enough. We need an edge."

Committee members plan a campaign to gain support from local businesses before voters might go to the polls.

"Businesses are going to support this," Merritt said. "It broadens the tax base, spreading the burden out among more tax businesses. It's going to arrest the decline in property values. It's the best chance we've had."

"We think the proposition sells itself," said Gregg Owens, past chamber chairman and a committee member. "We want to give the public enough information to help them understand it and let them decide."

Monday: Creating diverse jobs.

GROUP: Forward Midland helps community

(From 1A)

"Forward Midland been very successful," said chairman Clarence Scharbauer III. "We're pleased with what it's been able to accomplish. But relying on private contributions, we would not be able to raise money in keeping with the amount of the sales tax."

In four years, the organization has raised $1.6 million in private funds for economic development. The group's successes have included the relocation of three industries, support of a job training program, goal-setting for the city's growth and a promotional package designed to "sell" Midland. Forward Midland is also credited with monumental efforts toward the Confederate Air Force's move to the city.

"To give you an idea what caliber of investment we're talking about, it took about $4 million to relocate the CAF," Scharbauer said.

Although the tax increase is not expected to replace Forward Midland, supporters said its revenues could provide much-needed backing to private funds.

"The statistics are there. We've proven this kind of investment is worthwhile," said Gregg Owens, past chair of the Midland Chamber. "We can say with confidence that we're going to get a good return on our investment."

New employers Jacobs Electronics, Isotrol and Fuel Harvesters — relocations credited to Forward Midland — have jointly created 115 new full-time equivalent jobs in the community. Of those positions, chamber leaders say 30 percent went to minorities.

Other economic benefits include $2.7 million in payroll expenditures, $2.3 million in purchases of materials and supplies locally, and other direct contributions to the local economy for a total of more than $6 million each year.

Chamber President Janna King said based on a multiplier of five, the new companies' payroll dollars have the potential for a $14 million annual contribution to Midland's economy.

Those three business relocations are considered a great success, but development proponents say with sales tax revenues they could do more.

"In order to continue to attract new business, you've got to have some incentives," said Powell Clinton, president of Fuel Harvesters. He said his relocation decision was based on the availability of a large building for a very low price, a resource chamber officials say is running out.

"You say it's a nice place to be, a great family town — that's all true and I love it here," Clinton said. "But it's also a hard place to sell. If you don't see that, you can't appreciate it.

"I hate taxes just as much as anybody else, but in order to encourage business growth here, you've got to have some incentive. I don't see any way around it."

BUSH: President starts trips to repair image

political associates, hopes to start his political rebound Monday with the first of a quick series of damage-control trips intended to show that he does not have a detached attitude about domestic problems.

But as an increasing number of Republican lawmakers and members of his administration urge Bush to take quick action on the economy, the trips may serve to underscore the way in which the president and the top White House aides have decided to treat the economy as a public relations problem, not a policy issue.

So far, Bush has stuck to his decision to wait until his State of the Union Message in late January to offer economic proposals and try in the meantime to convince voters that he is engaged on issues that matter to them and that the economy is not as bad as it seems.

To that end, the White House is counting on an effort by House Republicans to force a vote on an economic growth package to shift attention from Bush's political problems to what one aide Saturday called "a nice, distracting partisan brawl on Capitol Hill."

In the same way, Bush advisers are hoping his announcement of a campaign staff will give them a chance to reframe the political debate over the economy, so far dominated by Democrats and Republicans dissatisfied with Bush's leadership on the issue.

Republican strategists and administration officials said Saturday that Bush was now expected to name his campaign team as early as the first week of December because of mounting political pressure from Democratic attacks, the debate within his own party about tactics and the prospect that he will face challenges in the New Hampshire primary in February.

But Bush still faces a central problem in choosing a campaign team: what to do about his chief of staff, John H. Sununu, whose action last week overshadowed White House efforts to change the subject, as it sought to do last Friday by scheduling a meeting between Bush and some leading economists.

A White House adviser suggested Saturday that while there was "an awful lot of consternation" about Sununu, staff shake-ups could only further delay efforts to appear empathetic about the economy. "The present cast of characters, even though they may have stumbled, stands as good a chance or better than a totally new cast," this adviser said.

MONEY: Democratic candidates run low on campaign funds takes to run a credible campaign for mayor of New York City.

Some of the candidates, like Gov. L. Douglas Wilder of Virginia, are having so much trouble raising cash that they have already publicly revised their fundraising goals. Others have done the same thing more quietly.

The candidates' relative poverty, political analysts say, is clearly a hindrance to the Democrats as they try to rally support against a well-financed president. Not only are the candidates fighting the incumbent's power and popularity, they are fighting their own obscurity, a battle best waged with heavy, and expensive, television exposure.

But some Democrats, struggling to make a virtue of necessity, insist that there are advantages to a cheaper primary campaign. They say that the early primaries are at least likely to be a throwback to the days when the presidential nomination was won not through television but through talking to voters.

"We're looking at a resurgence of retail politics," said Ann Lewis, a Democratic political consultant. "We're talking about going to coffees and answering questions. These candidates are going to have to earn the free media, because they can't buy the paid stuff."

Many prominent Democrats also predict that the bargain-basement nature of the campaign will amplify the importance of early primaries. Only those candidates who show strength early on, they say, will attract enough money to survive. This is particularly true because federal matching campaign money is running low.

New Hampshire holds the nation's first primary, and "the big kick comes this time after that," said Charles Manatt, the former chairman of the Democratic National Committee. "Whoever wins that can expect a big lift both politically and financially."

The last time the presidential candidates disclosed their financial condition was Sept. 30, just a few weeks after some of them announced that they were running.

Filings with the Federal Election Commission show that as of that date, former Sen. of Paul E. Tsongas of Massachusetts, who was the first Democrat to declare his candidacy, was leading the pack with $792,000 in contributions.

Sen. Tom Harkin of Iowa was second with $713,000. Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas, Sen. Bob Kerrey of Nebraska and Wilder each had roughly $200,000. Former Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California, who has vowed not to accept any contribution over $100, had $48,000.

In the weeks since the last filing, most of the candidates have devoted at least half their waking hours to raising money, either on the cocktail circuit or on the telephone.

"Fund-raising is a very important part of the schedule, and anyone who tells you otherwise is not telling the truth," said Lorraine Voles, press secretary to Harkin. "I know it's 50 percent of the schedule; I just don't know if it's 70 percent."

All of the Democratic candidates say they have made advances in fund-raising since the end of September, although most refuse to give specifics.

Syria stalls on talks

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Syria is stalling on accepting a U.S. invitation to attend peace talks in Washington because it first wants Israel to agree to discuss surrendering war-won Arab land, Arab diplomatic sources said Saturday.

Amid increased Arab wrangling over the peace process, Syria appeared to be toughening its stand that without negotiations on territory, the talks are futile.

So far, only Jordan has said it will attend the one-on-one talks between Israel and its Arab foes, scheduled to start Dec. 4 in Washington.

The Palestinians have not responded, but prospects for their attendance look favorable. "As far as we are concerned the chances are very good, provided there is a seriousness of intent on the side of all the parties involved," said Hanan Ashrawi, an adviser to the Palestinian negotiating team and its spokeswoman at the first round of talks in Madrid.

Israel was also expected to respond favorably, although it has made clear its displeasure over the Washington venue. Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said after a meeting with President Bush on Friday that there would be more discussions on the site.

Lebanon also has not responded. But since it is allied with Syria, the main power broker in the Mediterranean state, it is likely to follow the lead set by Damascus.

Lebanon's foreign minister, Fares Bweiz, said Saturday that Lebanon had received the U.S. invitation and would respond soon. The Americans have set Monday as the deadline for accepting the invitations.

The hard line taken by Syria appeared to be aimed at squeezing the Americans to pressure Israel into softening its position. It also came amid indications that efforts by Damascus to forge a common Arab stand were coming undone.

The sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the Syrians and the Palestinians are now expected to boycott a planned meeting in Amman.

Iraq frees British prisoner as London releases funds

LONDON (AP) — Iraq on Saturday freed British businessman Ian Richter, who had served 5½ years of a life sentence for bribery, and Britain released $125 million in Iraqi assets so Baghdad can buy relief supplies.

Richter, a 45-year-old chemical engineer, told Independent Television News from a Baghdad hotel that he was abruptly told in the morning: "you've got five minutes to pack your bags — you're going."

He was turned over to visiting U.N. envoy Prince Sadruddin Aga Khan, who was in Baghdad to discuss relief efforts for the war-ravaged country.

Sadruddin told a Baghdad news conference that Richter's release was "in response to several petitions made by King Hussein of Jordan and his (Sadruddin's) own personal requests," the Iraqi News Agency reported. It did not elaborate.

Britain, meanwhile, denied that the release of the frozen Iraqi assets was part of a deal to free Richter.

The assets were frozen as part of U.N. sanctions against Iraq following its Aug. 2, 1990, invasion of Kuwait. Iraq broke diplomatic relations with Britain on Feb. 6 and withdrew all but one diplomat.

"We have said for months that we would be prepared to release assets for humanitarian purposes if Mr. Richter was released," said David Gore-Booth, assistant undersecretary of state at the Foreign Office.

Serbs, Croats agree to 14th cease-fire

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) — Yugoslavia's rival leaders agreed to a new cease-fire on Saturday, the 14th of the civil war, but Serb-led forces pressed their attack on eastern Croatia's biggest city.

U.N. special envoy Cyrus Vance told reporters after a U.N.-mediated meeting in Geneva that the presidents of Croatia and its rival, Serbia, had agreed to a truce to take effect today.

The United Nations wants to send peacekeepers to the secessionist republic, but it demands a firm cease-fire as a precondition. Thirteen previous truces brokered by the Economic Community have failed to stop the 5-month-old civil war, which began after Croatia declared independence on June 25.

Vance said talks would continue to try to reach agreement on a peacekeeping force.

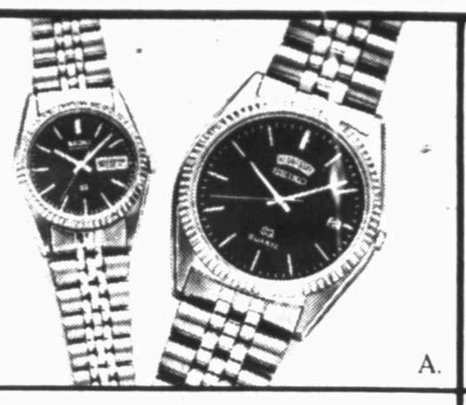

Meanwhile, fighting raged on around Osijek, the capital of the eastern Croatian province of Slavonia.

Croatian radio reported that the city of 140,000 and nearby villages along the Drava river were being shelled heavily with mortars and multibarreled rocket launchers.

Libya gets indictment in Pan Am case

ROME (AP) — Diplomats representing U.S. interests have formally presented Libyan officials with legal documents accusing two Libyans in the bombing of Pan Am Flight 103, the Libyan Foreign Ministry said Saturday.

The Libyan government is studying the documents and will reply to the charges, the ministry said. It did not say when.

The United States and Britain are demanding the extradition of two Libyans they charge arranged the 1988 bombing over Lockerbie, Scotland that killed 270 people. They say the two Libyans were intelligence agents who worked for the national airline.

The United States and Britain have said they are considering what sanctions to employ against Libya if it does not hand over the suspects. Washington has not ruled out military action.

Libya so far has denied any government role in the Lockerbie attack. It has called for a "neutral" investigation of the charges by an international body.

Saturday's Foreign Ministry statement, carried by the official Libyan news agency JANA and monitored in Rome, said the documents contained an accusation "against two Libyan nationals in relation to the ... destruction of the Pan Am aircraft" over Lockerbie.

The documents were delivered Thursday by the Belgian ambassador, the statement said. Belgium represents U.S. interests in Libya since Washington and Tripoli have no diplomatic relations.

The U.S. documents were passed along to Libya's Justice Ministry which planned "to study and analyze them in accordance with ... Libyan laws.

Canada re-examines health care policy

CITYLINE - 560-2400; NEWS - 1210

By Clyde H. Farnsworth
N.Y. Times News Service

TORONTO — An unparalleled round of hospital staff layoffs and bed closings has hit Canada's national health-care system as it struggles against the biggest crunch in resources since the Medical Care Act came into effect in 1966.

Ontario, the richest and most populous province, where more than a third of Canadians live, has lost nearly 5,000 hospital jobs and 3,500 beds over the past two years. In Toronto, the provincial capital, 2,900 of 15,000 acute-care beds have been taken out of service.

Other institutions in other regions have introduced similar cutbacks as budget deficits, high debts and spending ceilings at both the provincial and federal level are shutting off flows of new money for the free health program, which costs $60 billion a year.

Judy Darcy, national president of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, representing 90,000 health-care workers, said: "Medicare is being dismantled before our very eyes."

Although not everyone agrees, shrinking government revenue caused by Canada's recession, combined with exploding medical costs, are suddenly raising profound questions about the future of a health-care system that is almost as much a national symbol as the maple leaf and red-coated Mountie.

The soul-searching over new ways to finance medical care comes as the United States is going through its own debate about whether to adopt a Canadian-type system — in which everyone is promised equal access to doctors and hospitals through provincial insurance plans covering practically all medical expenses.

For years, the system has been cited as a sign that Canada is a kinder, gentler country than its neighbor to the south.

In the Pennsylvania Senate election earlier this month, the victor, Harris Wofford, a Democrat, came from behind with a campaign advocating free health care. If people have a fundamental right to a lawyer when accused of a crime, he argued, they should have a right to a doctor when they get sick.

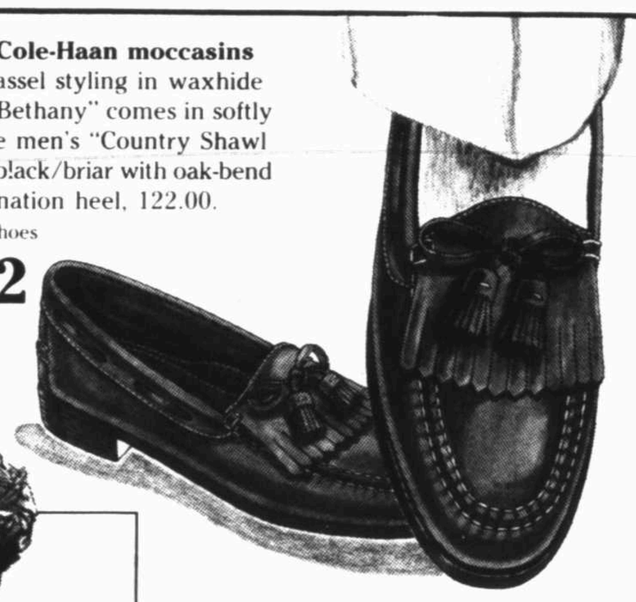

In Canada, that right has existed for a quarter-century and has produced a high level of basic care for most Canadians. Yet today as hospital staff and beds are cut back, a number of influential commentators are warning that the system is beset by contradictions.

Thatcher increases criticism of Major

By Craig R. Whitney
N.Y. Times News Service

LONDON — Relations between Prime Minister John Major and Margaret Thatcher, who praised him as her protege when he succeeded her a year ago, have come close to the political breaking point after a series of vintage Thatcher outbursts over both foreign and domestic policy.

Major, who has to call a general election by next July, needs to be his own man, and did not much relish Mrs. Thatcher's promise when she resigned to be an excellent back-seat driver.

Since then, Major has made so many U-turns — jettisoning Mrs. Thatcher's unpopular per capita "poll tax" for local government services, promising a kinder, gentler society after her decade of starched self-reliance, and now threatening to let Britain join a common European currency if his conditions are met — that she has begun saying openly that she is fed up.

After a fellow guest at a diplomatic dinner a few weeks ago said he missed her, Mrs. Thatcher, in her typically forthright style, said: "Well, I miss me, too." Then she launched into a series of criticisms not only of Major but also of George Bush, for not being imaginative or firm enough in dealing with either the Soviet Union, Yugoslavia, or the European Community "federalists" in Brussels.

What has pushed her "over the top," as the British say, is Major's evident willingness to agree to go along with a single European currency if the 12 members of the European Community will concede the right of Parliament to make the final decision on the matter.

It is not yet clear that the 11 other Community partners will accept either this condition or Major's insistence that a single currency is not part of a move toward an eventual federal European union. The issue will be one of the key items at a European summit meeting to be held in Maastricht, the Netherlands on Dec. 9 and 10.

But if they do, Mrs. Thatcher made clear in a television interview Friday night that she will oppose it.

Soviet discovers secret Kremlin bank accounts

By Francis X. Clines
N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — On the suspicion that plunder goes hand in hand with chaos, Alexander K. Orlov, a deputy in the forgotten national Parliament, has begun tracking missing masses of the Soviet gold supply and in the process uncovered secret Kremlin bank accounts worth 52 billion rubles.

"Neither the president nor the Parliament knew of this money — it did not even exist, statistically," Orlov said, sounding like a cosmologist tracking glitter across the swirling mess of post-communism.

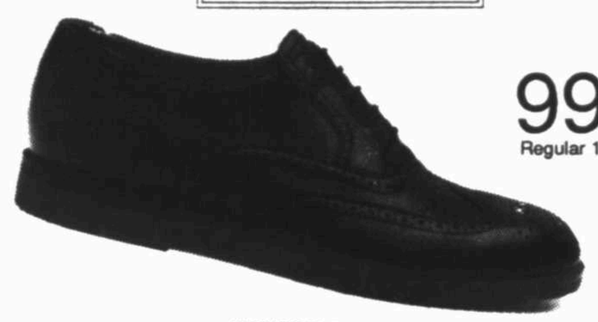

What he has found so far, he says, is not so much personal corruption in the defunct Kremlin monolith as what he calls official malfeasance in which one or, at the most, two ranking officials systematically sold off state gold over the last five years to plug widening budget deficits as the Soviet Union tottered on the brink and finally crashed.

Thus were the perestroika go-go years bolstered, by Orlov's accounting. The newspaper Izvestia estimated recently that the Gorbachev government had secretly "squandered and misused" more than $25 billion worth of gold reserves, but Orlov would spare President Mikhail S. Gorbachev culpability.

He estimates the secret gold sales averaged 100 tons above the normal 240-ton annual average sale in the last two years as the government's officials fought the final crash and sought to keep their enormous patronage and bureaucratic network nourished.

The precise extent of the Gorbachev-era gold sales have not been fully tabulated.

HDTV pictures hazy future as full-scale broadcasts begin

By David Thurber
Associated Press writer

TOKYO — A high-definition television set with a crystal-clear picture greets customers at the entrance of a showroom in Tokyo's bustling electronics district. Almost everyone stops to look — but few customers are buying.

Japan begins the world's first full-scale HDTV broadcasting on Monday, and HDTV sets have been on sale for a year here. But only about 200 reportedly have been sold, mostly to businesses.

The reason: even in wealthy Japan, the price is simply too high. At the Yamagiwa TV showroom, an HDTV set sells for $35,000, while a high-definition VCR sells for $154,000.

"They're not selling at all," laments Yoshio Tanabe, a salesman at Yamagiwa. "People stop and admire the picture, but then they see the price and walk away."

Japanese companies have spent about $1.5 billion over the past 20 years developing HDTV, according to Toshiba Corp.

That head start, analysts in the United States and Europe have said, may give Japanese companies a chance to strengthen their domination of the world electronics industry.

But some of the optimism about HDTV is fading. Several years ago, advocates of HDTV envisioned a $15.4 billion annual market in Japan for receivers by the year 2000. Now industry officials say those forecasts were overly rosy.

In addition, some analysts say that in pursuing HDTV technology, Japan may have ended up with a system that's inferior to the all-digital ones currently being evaluated in the United States.

Starting this week, a satellite will beam about eight hours of HDTV programming each day directly to Japanese viewers, up from the one-hour daily test broadcasts that began in 1989.

About half the programs will be supplied by the Japan Broadcasting Corp. NHK, the public broadcasting network that developed Japan's HDTV system. The other half will be supplied by private television stations that belong to an HDTV promotion group.

The HDTV programs can also be seen on normal televisions, with normal quality, with the purchase of a $1,700 decoder, a $190 satellite dish and a $230 tuner.

Senate passes $270 billion defense bill; House members squabble

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate sent President Bush a defense spending bill Saturday that nudges the Pentagon toward the post-Cold War era, but House members squabbled as much as they voted as Congress pushed to adjourn by Thanksgiving.

"A great deal of the rhetoric we hear today is just end-of-session nonsense and nothing more," grumbled Rep. Al Swift, D-Wash., in a reflection of the sour mood that characterized the final days of the session.

Both the House and Senate adjourned until Monday after working well into the evening in essentially housekeeping matters.

The $270 billion Pentagon spending bill, sent to Bush nearly two months behind schedule, preserved most of the big weapons programs begun in the past decade. But it also pointed the way toward a smaller military and fewer new weapons as the nation adjusts to the reduced Soviet threat.

Right up until the 66-29 final vote, senators bickered over specifics in the plan. The Senate then moved on to debate a treaty to reduce conventional military forces in Europe, although no vote was expected before Monday.

Approval of the spending bill followed by one day congressional approval of a companion $291 billion authorization bill. Federal budget procedures require both a legislative authorization for various programs and a separate bill actually appropriating the money. The authorization amount typically exceeds the amount appropriated.

For their part, House members worked through a series of minor measures, including one declaring portions of Pelican Island, Texas, non-navigable and another directing tourism promotion by the Commerce Department.

House Republicans demanded a vote on their newly drafted package of tax cuts, including their long-desired cut in the capital gains tax and an increase in the amount of money Social Security recipients can earn without suffering a reduction in benefits.

But Democrats refused, noting that President Bush had refused to meet with the Republicans. The GOP proposals were little more than an attempt to evade blame for the faltering economy and the administration's response to it, they said.

"This is the most openly cynical move I've seen in a long time," Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., told reporters.

The Senate spent several hours on the defense spending bill, with Bush's signature seeming certain once it passed.

Spending on the Strategic Defense Initiative was boosted to more than $4 billion.

Nuclear plant shuts down after leak

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — A nuclear reactor at a northwestern South Carolina power plant was shut down Saturday after radioactive water began leaking inside its containment building, prompting an alert, officials said.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission said all reactor safety systems were functioning properly at Duke Power Co.'s Oconee nuclear plant near Seneca, and no threat to public safety or plant personnel was expected.

"It is being contained in the reactor building," said NRC spokesman Ken Clark. "The building is sealed, so they know there's no radioactive material coming out of the building."

Monitors outside haven't detected unusual radiation levels, he said.

However, the South Carolina Emergency Preparedness Division activated its emergency operations center as a precaution, as did emergency officials in Oconee and Pickens counties.

"We don't know where the leak is coming from specifically," Clark said. "But it is in the form of steam."

The steam, which is sealed in the building, turns to water as the reactor cools, he said.

The plant was on alert status for more than 15 hours until the Unit 3 reactor was cooled down to below 200 degrees, Duke Power spokesman Joe Maher said.

Duke Power reported the alert to the NRC at 2:14 a.m. after discovering the leak. Water was leaking at a rate of about 90 gallons per minute, NRC administrator Stewart Ebneter said in a news release.

About 24,000 gallons of radioactive water had leaked by 7:30 a.m., Clark said. The leak then slowed to 30 gallons per minute as the reactor was cooled and depressurized, said Ebneter, who works in the Region II office in Atlanta.

Inspectors can't go inside the building until it reaches cold shutdown — when the building depressurizes and cools, Clark said.

The temperature early Saturday was around 600 degrees. A cold shutdown, by definition, is under 200 degrees, Maher said

Officials will decide today when inspectors will enter the reactor building to find and repair the leak, he said.

"We still have to plan how we're going in, and there is water on the floor of the reactor building," Maher said.

Advocates go to Haiti to monitor interviews

MIAMI (AP) — Human rights advocates packed their bags Saturday for the Guantanamo Bay Naval Base in Cuba, where U.S. immigration officials were interviewing more than 1,000 Haitian refugees seeking political asylum.

Four attorneys and four translators from Miami's Haitian Refugee Center were to leave today to monitor the interviews.

"The longer they're out there, the worse shape they're going to be in, and the harder it will be to articulate their concerns," said Cheryl Little, an attorney for the center. "From a humane standpoint, we're worried about them."

Hundreds, and perhaps thousands, of Haitians have died at sea in recent years trying to reach Florida aboard overcrowded and ill-equipped vessels.

A new wave of boat people has followed the Sept. 30 coup that drove President Jean-Bertrand Aristide into exile, and conditions in Haiti have worsened after an international embargo was imposed to pressure for his return. Aristide, Haiti's first freely elected president, held his first full day of face-to-face talks Saturday with parliamentary opponents in Colombia. He is offering concessions to secure his return.

Since Oct. 29, the Coast Guard has intercepted 50 boats from Haiti carrying a total of 3,351 Haitians, Petty Officer Joe Dye said Saturday.

He said 459 refugees were rescued off the coast of Haiti Friday and Saturday, he said.

A sailboat overloaded with about 200 Hatians capsized Tuesday. At least 35 bodies had been recovered by Saturday and about 100 refugees were missing and feared dead.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service rejected asylum requests of 538 refugees and returned them to Haiti before a federal judge in Miami blocked further deportations.

Woman agrees to settlement in fight over Cape Cod cottage

BOSTON (AP) — A woman ordered to give up her summer Cape Cod cottage has agreed to settle the nation's oldest continuous federal lawsuit for $58,000 and permission to use the primitive shack for another 25 years.

Grace E. Bessay was a holdout among owners of cottages in a small compound inside the Cape Cod National Seashore. The government was declared legal owner of the land in 1967, when Bessay began battling the National Park Service.

Bessay, who says she is in her 60s, was to have been evicted from the two-room dwelling Thursday, but settlement talks forestalled the action.

She reached agreement with the park service Friday and will be allowed to continue using the cottage for 25 years, though it is on park service land, said her attorney, Nancy Kaplan.

Bessay also will receive $58,000 for the property, said Kathleen Griffin, spokeswoman for the U.S. attorney.

The cottages in the dunes of Provincetown and Truro have provided refuge for such artists as Eugene O'Neill, e.e. cummings, Jack Kerouac and Norman Mailer. Most of the 17 shacks, built by the Coast Guard in the 1920s and 1930s, lack telephones, electricity and running water.

The owners of the 16 other cottages inside the 43,527-acre National Seashore already had agreed to give them to the park in 25 years.

Bessay said she inherited the land in 1981.

"We are pleased to have worked out an agreement which justly compensates Ms. Bessay for her interest," U.S. Attorney Wayne Budd said.

EPA tests for radiation near factory

EAST LANSDOWNE, Pa. (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency is checking thousands of homes in a 12.5-square-mile area for traces of radioactivity from a 70-year-old radium processing plant.

The EPA advised one family Friday to leave their home. Gerald and Catherine Trainor and their two daughters were the third family to receive such a warning in the past eight days.

Officials said radiation levels in the East Lansdowne house were 23 times above the recommended standard for residences but below the maximum limits for workers in the nuclear industry.

They were advised to leave while tests are conducted to decide whether the radioactive material can be removed from their house.

The EPA said Friday its mobile detection van was testing within a 2-mile radius of the old industrial site and the search could eventually reach into West Philadelphia.

It now encompasses nearly all of Upper Darby, Clifton Heights, Aldan, Yeadon and Lansdowne. The radium plant is believed to have produced hundreds of tons of sand-like residue from 1915 to 1922.

The industrial waste apparently was used to make cement, stucco and plaster for homebuilding and repairs.

Radiation levels found so far could cause illness in healthy adults if they are exposed over decades.

At the Trainor home, the EPA found contamination in exterior stucco and interior plaster walls that combined would produce an average annual radiation exposure of 2.3 rems. The Nuclear Regulatory Commission limits workers to five rems a year.

Report shows government jobs slight minorities

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite all the talk about affirmative hiring, inaction speaks louder than words when it comes to minorities on the payroll at the White House, in Congress and at the Supreme Court.

At the White House there are only two blacks of any prominence on the president's staff. At the Capitol, black staffers hold only about 300 of the 8,200 jobs that influence legislation and political decisions. Hispanics have only 150, Asian Americans 45.

"They're saying, 'Don't do what I do, do what I say,' " the Rev. Joseph Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, says in a report prepared for publication today by Newhouse News Service.

There is only one black law clerk at the Supreme Court — working for retired Justice Thurgood Marshall. Justice Clarence Thomas' four clerks are white males.

Last week's passage of the Civil Rights Act, signed by the president, allows employees of Congress and the White House to claim job discrimination protection, but it does not require affirmative action.

The Newhouse survey says blacks are in 68 of the 2,700 most important Senate staff jobs.

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, told Newhouse that as recently as 15 years ago, some senators and representatives told the Congressional Placement Office that they wanted no blacks.

"We have made progress, but not fast enough," Glenn said. "The changes have been too slow and grudging. . . . We should be matching in our own actions here whatever it is we are trying to get everyone else to do across the country."

"We're not in the game," said Jackie Parker of the Black Senate Legislative Staff Caucus. "There is minuscule input from African-Americans in the day-to-day policy-making up here."

Sam Thornton, president of Congressional Black Associates, says 240 of the 5,500 most important staff jobs in the House are held by blacks and more than half of them work for the 26 black members of Congress.

There are no black or Hispanic senators. Two members of the Senate and three in the House are Asian-American.

House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., has six blacks among his 33 aides and said more minorities should be represented on congressional staffs.

Louis Sullivan, secretary of Health and Human Services, is the only black in President Bush's cabinet.

'Keating-Five' hearings send mixed message to senators

By Richard L. Berke
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — After two years of Senate Ethics Committee inquiries that sought to spell out the propriety of sometimes-tangled relationships among politicians, constituents and lobbyists, some Senators are still baffled about when their behavior crosses from upright to improper.

Lawmakers say they were shaken, and perhaps are now more cautious, because of the committee's range of rebukes of five senators for their efforts on behalf of Charles H. Keating Jr., a savings and loan operator and major political donor.

In interviews, several lawmakers, lobbyists and academics argued that the only way to prevent transgressions in how politicians and their backers interact would be to make fundamental changes in federal campaign finance laws and Senate ethics rules.

Not everyone agrees that such changes are needed. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who departed the Ethics Committee when the Keating matter concluded, dismisses the idea that the case will have much impact, saying that most members are already careful about their contacts.

"I think the behavior of members is a heck of a lot better in most areas than senators are given credit for," Helms said. He conceded, though, that "unless they overdose on dumb pills some morning," lawmakers will be painfully cautious to make sure they do not do anything that looks improper.

The conflicting views over the practical impact of the Ethics Committee's recent verdicts comes perhaps because the panel has sent mixed messages to senators.

In February, the committee dispensed only mild rebukes to four senators — Donald W. Riegle Jr. of Michigan, John Glenn of Ohio and Dennis DeConcini, all Democrats, and John McCain of Arizona, a Republican — for intervening with federal regulators on behalf of Keating's collapsing savings and loan.

Then in August, the panel vindicated Sen. Alfonse M. D'Amato, R-N.Y., who had been accused of steering federal grants to developers who supported his campaigns.

This week, after being attacked for a "whitewash" in the Keating case, the committee issued a more severe rebuke of the fifth senator in the Keating case, Alan Cranston of California.

While the committee stopped short of seeking the full Senate to reprimand Cranston, D-Calif., it brokered a political compromise, chastising him for "improper and repugnant" behavior for collecting donations from Keating while also seeking to protect his savings and loan, and presenting its findings to the full Senate.

Among other examples, the committee cited how Cranston used his fund-raising staff members to make contacts with Keating.

The action was far short of what many Republicans wanted, but it put lawmakers on notice that it does not take bags of money under the table for them to run into trouble.

Senators learned that they could be punished for the way they conduct activities that are vital to their political survival: soliciting contributions, doing favors for constituents and even interacting with their aides.

Robert S. Bennett, the Ethics Committee's special counsel who had singled out Cranston for the most extreme behavior, had called for the Senate to vote to censure him but said he was pleased with the compromise.

Credit card fiasco hits American way of life: Paying with plastic

By Walter R. Mears
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Nowadays, it seems, the business of America is credit, on plastic cards, and never mind whether the customers can afford to pay the bills.

One senator said the family dog could qualify for a credit card in this market.

After collaborating in the credit card fiasco, President Bush and Congress got the message: Force bank card interest rates down and a lot of people won't be permitted to buy on plastic any more because the banks that issue cards will have to be more choosy about their credit risks.

Common sense suggests that would be a good idea — but the consumer economy is slumping, the banking industry is having trouble, and tighter credit would be bad for business.

The futile exercise on credit cards was a display of government bungling that contributed to a stock market plunge and ended where it began, with bank card interest rates running at about 19 percent, despite Bush's minicampaign to talk them down and a Senate attempt to do it by law.

It began Nov. 12, when Bush said in a fund-raising speech that reducing credit card interest rates could help perk up the economy. "I'd frankly like to see the credit card rates down," he said. "I believe that would help stimulate the consumer and get the confidence moving again."

That was it, but that was enough. Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., bidding for reelection, grabbed the issue and had it before the Senate the next day. His amendment, effectively cutting credit card interest rates by about 5 percent in current circumstances, was approved 74 to 19. House leaders said it was likely to sweep through there, too.

But the administration opposed a legal limit; Bush was trying to jawbone rates down, not compel cuts. He said later it hadn't occurred to him that anybody was going to put the idea into legislation, although there have been attempts at it before, most recently in 1988.

By the weekend, after the stock market dropped sharply, one Cabinet member was saying Bush would veto the ceiling and another called the legislation wacky.

NASA worries about astronaut stamina, aims for future autopilot landings

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Astronauts will surrender the controls and let the space shuttle land itself beginning in 1993, a humbling reality for some pilots but one that may be inevitable if Americans hope to one day live in space.

"There are advantages of the computer and advantages of the human," said James Wetherbee, a shuttle pilot assigned to the project. "It's not a competition of one against the other."

NASA's space flight director, William Lenoir, said last week he has ordered shuttle managers to test an automatic landing system during a 1993 flight in preparation of month-long missions that could impair the flying ability of human crews.

Medical studies indicate astronauts would be in no shape to land shuttles following long flights. Even now, after less than 1½ weeks in orbit, some astronauts are "just flat not functional" when they get back, Lenoir said.

Lenoir said no one has actually passed out — yet.

Weightlessness causes blood to shift to the upper part of the body. Gravity rapidly pulls blood back into the legs, resulting in a plunge in blood pressure and, for many, dizziness.

Astronauts try to avoid it by drinking lots of salt water before landing. They also, during two missions, spent hours in a vacuum container that forces blood into their legs.

The crew of Atlantis, scheduled to blast off tonight on a 10-day flight, will repeat the blood-shifting experiment. Terence "Tom" Henricks will be the first shuttle pilot to be wired with blood pressure monitors during descent.

Soviet cosmonauts return from the Mir space station, after half a year in orbit, in Soyuz capsules equipped with parachutes. Piloting skills are optional.

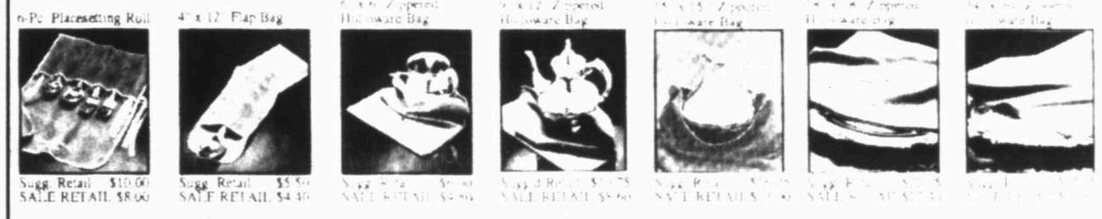

America's Mercury astronauts descended in capsules in the early 1960s, but insisted on some piloting amenities like a window and degree of manual override. They still were regarded as "Spam in a can" by the hard-core test pilots of Edwards Air Force Base in California.

Today's astronauts are no less protective of their piloting prowess. For Wetherbee, "it boils down to a simple benefits vs. risk assessment that every individual is going to have to make."

Former shuttle commander Bryan O'Connor worries about what might happen as missions get longer.

EPA chief calls for change in Bush's wetlands definitions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration will have to redo proposed new definitions of wetlands in light of evidence that vast wetlands tracts would be lost under the proposals, EPA chief William Reilly said Saturday.

"The field testing data makes clear we've got to go back to the drawing board," the Environmental Protection Agency administrator told The Associated Press.

But other administration officials made clear the battle between Reilly and more conservative White House forces over the definition of wetlands is far from over.

David Beckwith, spokesman for the Council on Competitiveness, a White House panel overseeing the wetlands regulatory process, said Saturday that until the field testing data "is evaluated and fully reviewed, no conclusions can or should be drawn by officials about the results."

No action can be taken until the Dec. 15 conclusion of the period for public comment on the government's proposed new guidelines.

Beckwith said Saturday the administration will honor President Bush's campaign pledge to permit "no net loss of wetlands." Bush has been accused of reneging on that pledge by allowing a re-definition of wetlands that wipes out millions of acres.

Reilly said it is technically premature to make determinations before Dec. 15 but asserted "it is clear" revisions will be needed.

He said the proposed guidelines have been found "too restrictive" based a series of field tests conducted throughout the country by agencies involved in wetlands protection.

Reilly said that not only would the current proposal wipe out millions of acres of wetlands, but it appears too time consuming for officials to determine what qualifies as a wetland.

Gorbachev repudiates communism

WASHINGTON (AP) — Communism destroyed incentives to work and left the Soviet Union with a worker class that didn't care, Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev said in an interview with U.S. News and World Report.

Gorbachev said that by the early 1980s "the command system of economic management had shown that it had totally exhausted its potential, and the people did not gain the appropriate benefits from the enormous resources that were expended," U.S. News reported in its Dec. 2 edition.

"The total grip of state property destroyed the natural motivation, the natural incentives, to work," Gorbachev said. "It also generated the mentality of equalization, lack of initiative, and it gave birth to a certain kind of worker who is not interested in much of anything."

The Soviet leader said the Cold War arms race "resulted in an enormous distortion of our economy," a reference to emphasis on military production rather than meeting consumer demands.

He said his goal now was to "go forward above all by reforming property ownership, by creating a mixed economy with various forms of property and by making room for competition."

"There is no way we can turn back," he said.

Gorbachev also stated that a potential problem involving Moscow losing control of its nuclear arsenal to breakaway republics "does not exist."

"Let me assure you that so far as the problem of control of nuclear weapons is concerned, there is no danger at all that there has been any weakening of that control."

He asked the United States to share its technology in the elimination and destruction of nuclear, chemical and other weapons.

New York court rules golfers free of blame

By Sam Howe Verhovek
N.Y. Times News Service

ALBANY, N.Y. — New York State's highest court has ruled that Arthur McGovern and his golfing partner botched their drives on the 11th hole but that they could not be sued for it.

In a unanimous decision released Thursday, the Court of Appeals ruled that McGovern and his unnamed fellow golfer, who both hit shots well off the fairway of an Erie County course and onto an adjacent road, could not be held liable by a passing motorist who said her back was injured when her car windshield was cracked by one of the errant balls.

"Although the object of the game of golf is to drive the ball as cleanly and directly as possible toward its ultimate intended goal (the hole), the possibility that the ball will fly off in another direction is a risk inherent in the game," wrote Judge Vito J. Titone.

While golf balls have been flying off in unintended directions and causing damage ever since humans started whacking at them, this decision marked the first time that the question of the golfer's liability ever reached the state's top court, a Court of Appeals spokesman Dick Zander, said.

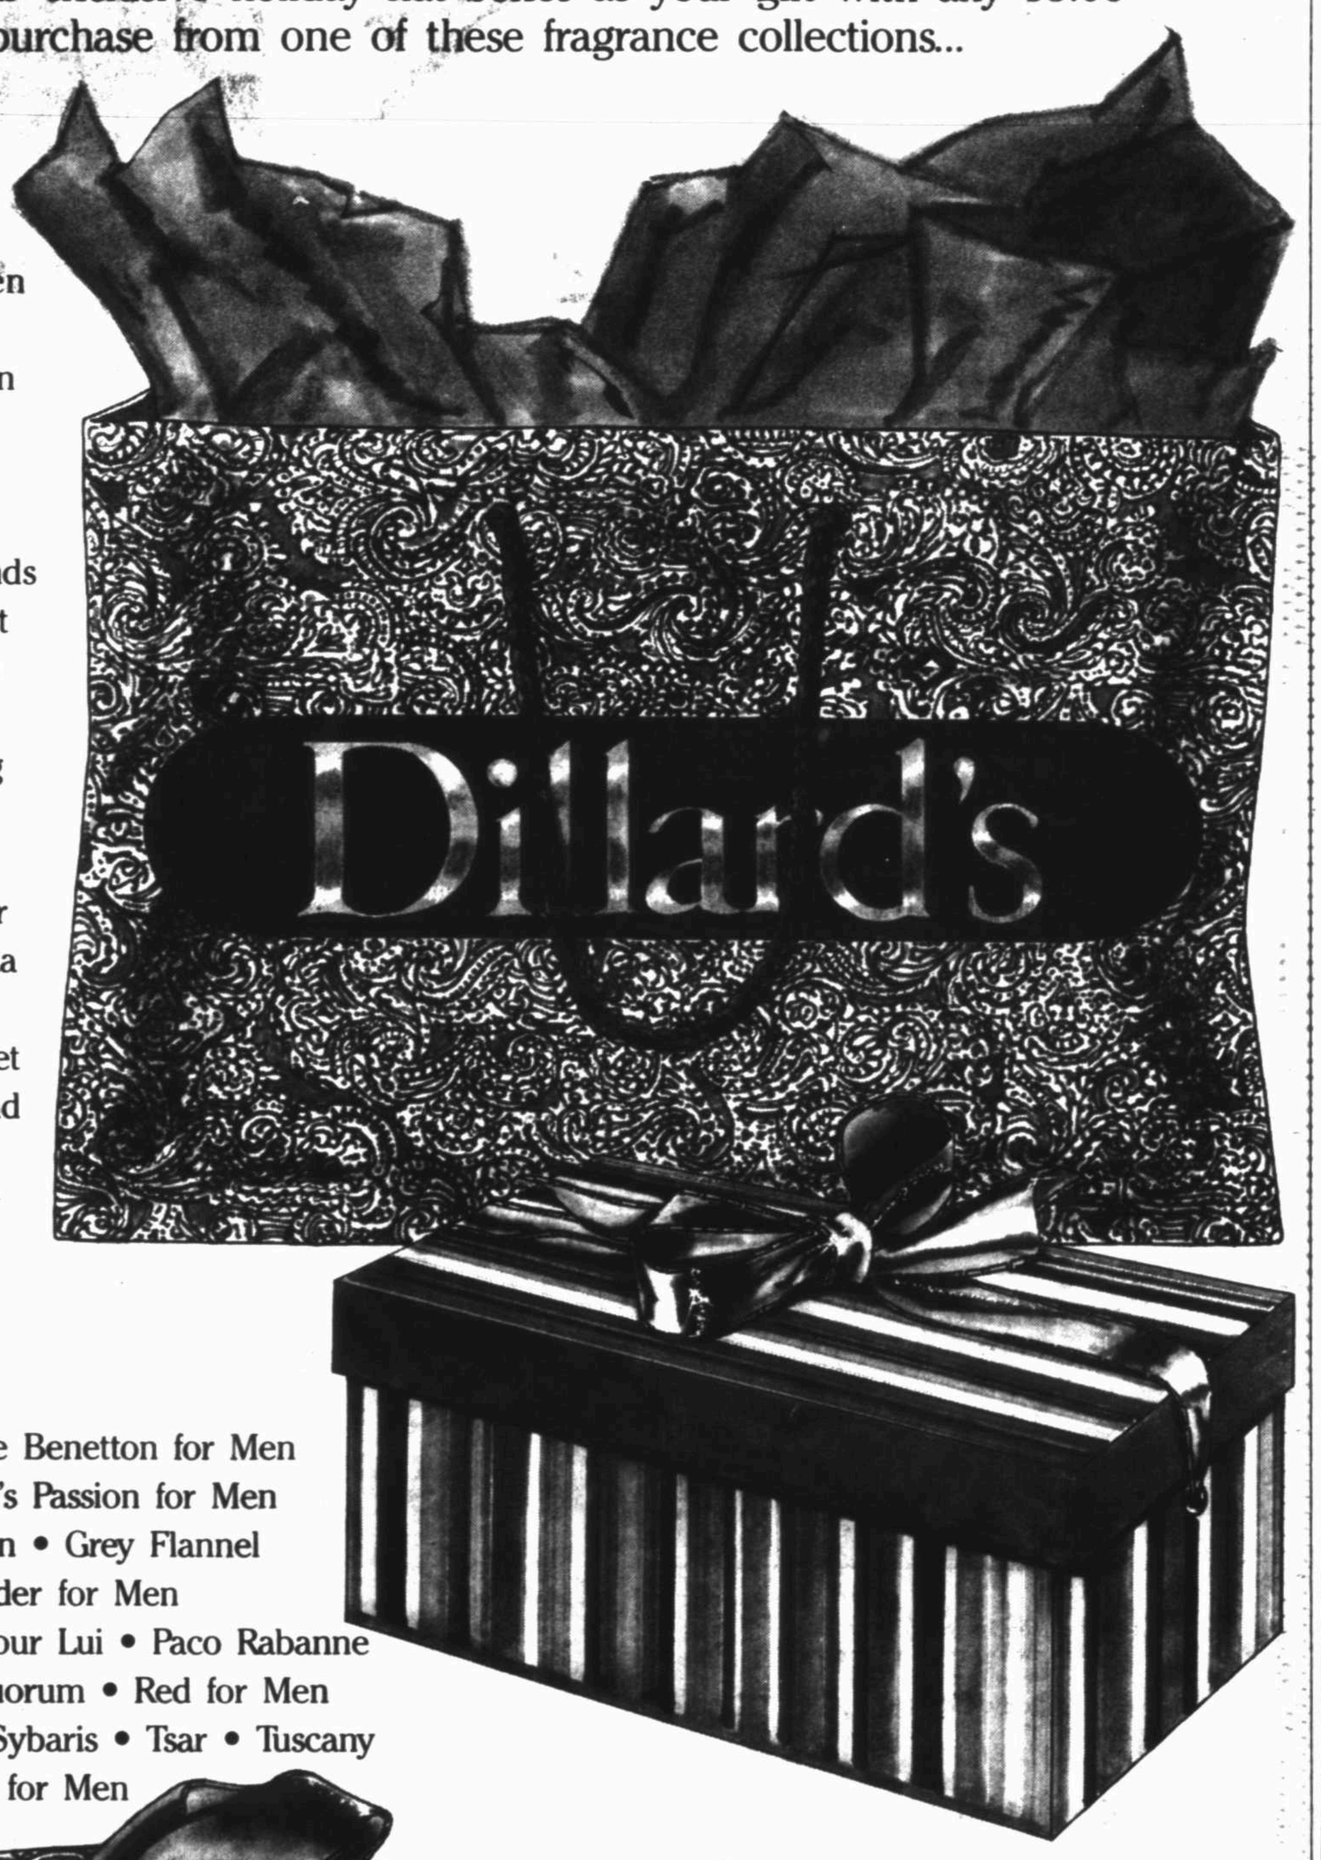

The court's decision, arising from an August 1980 incident at the Springville Country Club, about 25 miles south of Buffalo, did not address the issue of the club's liability.

The club settled out of court with the driver for an undisclosed sum.

The seven-page decision included a rather vivid description of the ill-fated drives, although it did not disclose either golfer's final score for the day.

LEE LAYS IT ON ANDRESS, 28-7

Joe D. Williams/Reporter-Telegram

El Paso Andress' Richard O'Quin (33) forces Midland Lee quarterback Courtney Turner to make a pitch to some waiting arms during Lee's 28-7 Class 5A Small School area playoff victory at Memorial Stadium Saturday afternoon.

Rebs claim area title

Sherman next in line for Lee after 28-7 win over Andress

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

While Midland Lee's Wishbone offense provided two long trademark drives for touchdowns, it was Rebel defensive back Mike Brackens who will long be the demon of El Paso Andress' nightmares.

Brackens intercepted three Eagle passes and returned one for a 92-yard touchdown Saturday afternoon at Memorial Stadium, as the Rebs stayed alive in the Class 5A Small School football playoffs with a 28-7 area victory.

The win gives Lee an 11-1 record as it prepares for next Saturday's regional game against Sherman at Wichita Falls, while Andress ended its season at 10-2, with both losses coming at the hands of the Rebels. Lee won the season opener against Andress, 13-3.

While the two team were relatively even statistically on Saturday, two first-half plays proved to be of obvious importance.

Lee fumbled on the second snap of the game, as sophomore quarterback Courtney Turner bobbled the exchange from center K.C. Jones and Andress' Gilbert Ramirez fell on the ball at the Rebel 27-yard line. Three plays later, the Eagles faced a fourth-and-one at the Lee 18 when Reb linebacker James Ward stuffed quarterback Joe Hayward for no gain, turning the ball over the Lee.

Then with about one minute left in the first quarter, the Lee offense, which had gained but one first down on three previous possessions, asser-

Thief and bully tandem chiefly responsible for victory party

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

The El Paso Andress Eagles must have left Midland Saturday feeling like a victim of a daylight robbery.

If it's possible to pinpoint the reason for Midland Lee's 28-7 Class 5A Small School area playoff victory, you can probably focus on three key plays by a Rebel thief and a back alley bully.

The thief is Rebel safety Mike Brackens and the bully is linebacker James Ward. If there was a playoff game ball, these two should have to cut it in half.

Brackens had three interceptions, but two of them were inside the Lee 20-yard line. One of the interceptions possibly produced a 14-point swing in the game as he robbed Andress quarterback Joe Hayward for a 92-yard interception return for a touchdown. He stopped another Andress drive by intercepting an Isiah Lee pass at the Lee 14-yard line. Brackens alone was responsible of either scoring or eliminating 21 possible points. That just happens to be the exact margin of victory by the Rebels.

Brackens also felt that there should have been more than three interceptions.

"I had a chance at four more and I thought I had one of them," Brackens said. "The reason I had so many chances at interceptions is, I think, because Andress was trying to focus passing on the side of the field I was playing. I was concentrating and breaking on the ball better than I have all season."

Hanks nips Lady Rebs in finals

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

Midland Lee claimed second place and Midland High won the consolation game Saturday, as the Tall City Girls Basketball Tournament concluded at the Chaparral Center.

Lee's appearance in the championship may have been a bit unexpected, but once there the Lady Rebels made the most of it before falling 36-31 to undefeated El Paso Hanks (4-0). The Lady Rebels defeated Pecos 44-42 and Lubbock Estacado 69-38 en route to the championship game.

Meanwhile, MHS overcame an opening round loss to El Paso Bowie Friday to grab victories over Lubbock Dunbar (59-34) and Pecos (54-40) Saturday.

Though the Lady Rebels ended the tournament with a loss and a 2-2 record, first-year head coach Elise Kail said the team was feeling good about itself.

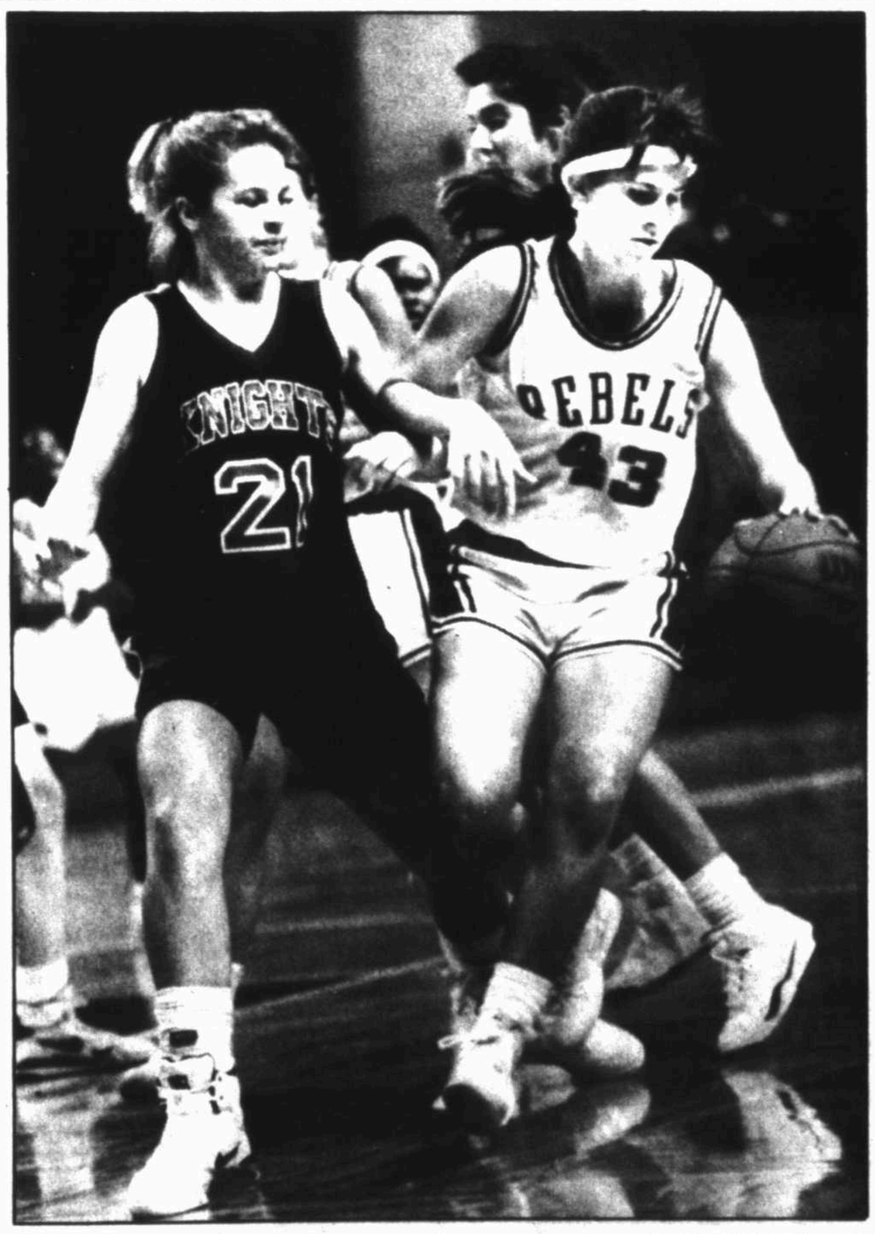

"They played a great tournament. The seniors are just nuts because they said it's the first time they've ever been on the championship side of the bracket. We showed some good things and I thought we really came together this tournament," Kail said.

Lee led Hanks 12-9 after the first quarter and trailed by a single point at halftime, 18-17. But Hanks began to pull away in the third period, as Marlee Webb connected for six of her game-high 18 points.

Webb scored only one field goal in the first half, but was 6-for-9 from the free throw line in the first 16 minutes. Lee kept her off the stripe in the second half, but she sank five buckets in the process.

"We wanted to try to contain her, and

Closed-door sessions give 'Skins chemistry

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — There are transcripts for just about every meeting in Washington, from White House press conferences on down. But the CIA would probably start revealing its private conversations before the Redskins divulge what goes on in their weekly players-only gatherings.

"Man, these guys would hang me from the goal post if I talked about what went on in there, because it's kind of sacred," says Monte Coleman, a linebacker whose Redskins are bidding to extend their record to 12-0 Sunday with a matchup against Dallas.

"Generally, they bring us closer together, but beyond that, I'm not going to say."

There are multiple statistical reasons for the Redskins 11-0 start. The team is near the top in every important statistical category.

■ Dallas Cowboys at Washington Redskins, noon, CBS (Cable Ch. 8).

But coach Joe Gibbs keeps talking about the chemistry his team has and weekly players-only motivational meetings.

"There has been something special about this year, and that's where it comes from," Gibbs said. "A lot of the focus has come from those meetings."

Such gatherings are nothing uncommon in the NFL, and even the Redskins have done them for a while. But the tone of the meetings changed last season, just before the Redskins played Miami after a loss to Dallas left them in danger of missing the playoffs.

The normally reserved Art Monk stood up in that session and talked about what the Redskins had to do to make the playoffs. Washington whipped the Dolphins, won four of its final five games and gained a Wild Card berth.

And before each of those games and every contest this season — with one planned for before this Sunday's contest against the 6-5 Cowboys — veterans like Monk, tight end Don Warren and linebacker Monte Coleman have led the meetings.

Coleman is as tight-lipped as any CIA operative.

Others only less so.

"It gives us a chance to say what's on our mind ... if some players aren't doing what's expected of them, we let that be known," said wide receiver Gary Clark. "It's more like a family meeting — if something isn't going right in the family, we call a meeting and get it right."

One result of the meetings, Clark said, is an increased emphasis on teamwork.

"Guys are putting aside their personal goals for more-team oriented goals, and I think it is making us a better football team," Clark said. "We know that if we play great as a team, the individual accolades will come later on."

The Redskins are largely a veteran team, with just two rookies on the active roster. The more experienced players — many of whom played on Washington's two Super Bowl winners — help provide the perspective younger players need by warning during those meetings about the pratfalls than can beset an undefeated team.

"It's like a reminder, a stay-focused type of thing," said offensive tackle Raleigh McKenzie. "For example, 'This is Week 12, let's not look past this week to the playoffs. Let's do what we have to do to win.'"

"It helps the players get focused and zero in on the opponent," added first-year running back Ricky Ervins. "It also brings the team closer together."

But Gibbs said that from what he gathers, the most consistent message the veterans bring to those meetings is a sense that this kind of magical season — a combination of outstanding performance, good breaks and a seemingly limitless sense of momentum — doesn't come along very often.

"Our guys, coaches, and players, we all have a little bit of that feeling for some of us it may be a last real good opportunity to do something," Gibbs said. "Some of the players have been here for 11, 12 years, some of the coaches have been here for 11, 12 years, and you just don't get that many opportunities where you get everything together."

The Redskins are close, like any 11-0 team would be. And there are other, more frivolous things that build an esprit de corps — like the daily drinking sessions in a grubby equipment shed behind the practice field. But the laughs and jocularity are for there — not the pre-game sessions.

Holyfield survives knockdown, beats Cooper

ATLANTA (AP) — Evander Holyfield survived the first knockdown of his professional career Saturday night to batter and bloody a relentless Bert Cooper before finally stopping him in the seventh round to retain his world heavyweight title.

Holyfield landed about 20 blows to the head of a seemingly defenseless Cooper before referee Mills Lane stepped in to stop it at 2:58 of the seventh round.

Cooper, a 32-1 underdog, wasn't expected to give Holyfield much of a fight, but the journeyman who took the bout on a week's notice ended up giving the champion the toughest fight of his professional career.

Cooper was bleeding from the mouth and a cut over his right eye and offered no resistance when Lane moved in to stop the fight after a series of punches, including a half-dozen crunching right uppercuts.

"He was in bad shape. He was in really bad shape," Lane said.

A Cooper cornerman rushed over to the referee and said, "Thanks, Mills" for stopping the bout.

ed itself.

Tackles Max Stuart and Danny Smith, guards Keith Boyd and Rafeek Haseeb, Jones and tight end Jeb Honeyman began blowing the Eagles off the line of scrimmage and mounted a 66-yard drive that culminated with 9:12 left in the first half on Sherman Dedrick's 1-yard run.

Andress came back with a drive of its own, though, and took the ball from its 20-yard line to the Lee 9. Andress running back Isiah Lee, who entered the game as the state's leading 5A rusher with 1,880 yards, gained 28 yards on nine carries in the march, while a 23-yard pass from Hayward to Tony Tate and a roughing the passer penalty on Lee aided the Eagles.

Then Brackens, who had stopped an Andress drive in the first quarter with an interception of Hayward at the Lee nine, struck again.

Andress was again at the Rebel nine-yard line and opted for a pass on second-and-goal.

Hayward was in trouble from the start, as Nathan Lambert chased him left of the pocket. Just trying to get the ball off, Hayward threw straight into the hands of Brackens, who was off to the races for a TD that represented a 14-point swing.

"I thought I could get some yardage out of it, but I never realized I could go all the way for the touchdown," said Brackens, whose third interception of the day stopped the Eagles next possession at the Reb 23. "I was hoping I could have a game like this, especially since I've been practicing so hard."

"He stepped in there real nicely. On that play we usually have a guard out there, but he couldn't get there. They had good pressure on the quarterback," Andress head coach Allan Sepkowitz said of Brackens' score.

In the third quarter, the Rebel offense mounted another long drive (63 yards) that started with 9:59 on the clock. Dedrick and Scott McLeod each ripped off 11-yard runs while Turner connected on an 18-yard pass to Roy Robinson, highlighting the drive that ended on Brett Sullivan's 2-yard run to put Lee on top 21-0 with 5:06 to play in the third period.

After the Lee defense stopped Andress on the following possession, it looked like the Rebel wishbone might be able to run the clock for a few minutes and put the game out of reach.

But Dedrick fumbled with 1:32 still left in the quarter, and one play later Andress' Lee ran eight yards for the touchdown that brought the score to 21-7.

Despite a 20-yard punt and another fumble in the fourth quarter, the Lee defense was able to shut the Eagles out in the final 12 minutes, and the Rebels iced the game with 1:27 left as Turner found Honeyman for a 5-yard scoring pass.

It was Honeyman's first career TD.

"I can't tell you how good it felt. I might have bobbled it a little bit, but it came down for six points," he said.

BRACKENS: Safety has 3 interceptions

(From 1B)

On the 92-yard TD return, Brackens said, "(Defensive end Nathan) Lambert was putting good pressure on the quarterback and he was looking right at the tight end. I was reading his eyes and read it all the way. I thought I could return it for some yards, but I never expected to go all the way. That was a surprise — and it was fun."

Then there is Ward, the track-them-down, show-no-mercy mercenary, who helped rub away another Andress scoring threat in the first quarter by crunching Hayward for no gain on a fourth-and-one at the Lee 18 yard line when there was no score in the game.

Andress coach Allan Sepkowitz felt that was a key part of the game.

"I could kick myself for not kicking the field goal on that play," Sepkowitz said. "Ward made a great play and we just didn't score when we had the opportunities."

Ward said, "I think the defense set the tone of the game on that play. All day, I was just trying to get everyone pumped up and I feel like we played pretty good. We don't get too concerned when a team gets inside our 20-yard line. However, (Isiah) Lee did get a touchdown on us after they got that fumble inside the ten. He's got good speed and just got outside on us."

Lee coach Earl Miller said his team was hot and cold against Andress and Miller was also hot and cold on his assessment of the game.

"We did some great things and some poor things," Miller said. "Brackens had a great game for us and Ward's play on fourth down was a big, big play early, but we can't continue to make the mistakes of fumbling and letting teams convert on third down plays like we did today if we want to continue to play.

"However, I'm extremely proud of these kids. If you had told me we would win 11 games this year, I would have thought you were crazy. That's a credit to these kids and my coaches. There's just 16 teams left.

"Anytime we beat Andress, I'm pleased, no matter how it's done. There is no question that they are the best team by far in El Paso. They are comparable to the teams in this district.

"I was also pleased with our sophomore quarterback (Courtney Turner). He fumbled on our first series of the game and didn't let it bother him. He went on to do a good job and ended up throwing a touchdown pass."

Now Lee moves on to the Class 5A Small School region playoff against 10-2 Sherman, a game that will be played Saturday in Wichita Falls.

"We've got to step it up a notch now," Miller said. "I talked to the kids about this after the game and I think they understand what's ahead."

Sacramento's dark road loss streak finally over

Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. — The Sacramento Kings ended the NBA's longest road losing streak ever at 43 games, getting 27 points from Lionel Simmons in a 95-93 victory Saturday night over the Oralando Magic.

Sacramento trailed 92-92 with 1:27 left when Pete Chilcutt made two frree throws. The Kings shut out the Magic over the final 1:48.

The Kings' last road victory came Nov. 20, 1990, at Washington. The league's longest road drought now belongs to Denver at 24 games.

Jazz 109 (OT)

DALLAS — Fat Lever scored 32 points, including six in overtime as the Dallas Mavericks beat the Utah Jazz.

The Mavs' three-guard offense paid big dividends. Derek Harper added 30 points, five in overtime, and Rolando Blackman added 24 points.

It was the first time this season that all three Dallas guards chipped in 20 or more points. Dallas improved to 5-7.

Dallas scored the first eight points in overtime.

Celtics 125, Nets 107

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Larry Bird and rookie Rick Fox put on a first-half exhibition when Boston made 66 percent of its shots.

Boston hit 16 of 24 shots in the first quarter, opening a 36-26 lead. The Celtics made 13 of 20 shots in the second period, stretching their advantage to 67-47.

Fox finished with a career-high 25 in helping Boston win for the fifth time in six games. Reggie Lewis added 21 points, but Bird's streak of 20-point games was snapped at five when he sat out the fourth quarter and finished with 19.

Bullets 126, Hawks 115

LANDOVER, Md. — Atlanta's Kevin Willis reached the 20-rebound mark for the fourth consecutive game, but it wasn't enough to stop Michael Adams and Washington.

Adams scored 13 of his 30 points in the third quarter.

Willis, who scored 22 points, had 24 rebounds, his second career-high in as many nights.

Cavaliers 96, Pistons 89

RICHFIELD, Ohio — John Williams scored the first and last baskets of a 10-1 surge at the start of the fourth quarter, and Cleveland handed Detroit its fifth straight loss.

Brad Daugherty led Cleveland with 19 points and 12 rebounds. Larry Nance had 13 points, nine rebounds, eight assists and six blocked shots.

Pacers 119, Heat 83

INDIANAPOLIS — Chuck Person scored 24 points as Indiana beat Miami, keeping the Heat winless at Market Square Arena, where the Pacers have never lost to an expansion team.

Rik Smits scored all of his 18 points in the first half for the Pacers. Grant Long led the Heat with 16 points and 10 rebounds, and Steve Smith added 13 points.

Indiana led the entire game with the final margin of 36 points its largest. The Pacers were just the sixth team this season to score more than 100 points against Miami, which had not lost previously by more than 10.

Timberwolves 102, Rockets 89

MINNEAPOLIS — Randy Breuer scored 18 points and Tony Campbell 17, and Minnesota's bench outgunned Houston's 63-15 to help Jimmy Rodgers to his first home victory as Timberwolves coach.

In addition to Campbell and Breuer, reserves Tyrone Corbin, Scott Brooks and Tod Murphy played most of the fourth quarter against the Rockets, who were without hospitalized Hakeem Olajuwon. Minnesota, which snapped a six-game losing streak, trailed 71-67 entering the fourth before outscoring Houston 35-22.

The Timberwolves are 2-9 overall and 1-5 at Target Center under Rodgers, who replaced the fired Bill Musselman during the offseason.

Bulls 107, Nuggets 100

DENVER — Michael Jordan scored 37 points and the Chicago Bulls beat the Denver Nuggets for their ninth straight victory.

Jordan hit 15 of 28 shots and all seven of his free throws.

The Nuggets built a 46-39 lead with 3:08 left in the first half, before Jordan's three buckets in the last 2:20 of the half rallied the Bulls, and gave them a 51-50 halftime lead.

Chaps take rare win on Raven home floor

Staff Report

PASADENA — The youthful Midland College Chaparrals put a feather in their cap here Saturday night, beating San Jacinto 92-89 on the Ravens' home court.

San Jacinto had not lost a home game since 1989, and prior to that had won 181 consecutive games on the home hardwood. San Jac now has only two losses in its last 183 home games.

Chris McKinney poured in 24 points to lead MC while Morris Conley had 18 and Kelon Haynie 17. But the real trouble for the Ravens was a 14 of 29 effort from the charity stripe while MC hit 27 of 38 from the foul line.

MC was down by eight points in the first half, but rallied back to take a 61-45, 16-point lead early in the second half. San Jac tied the game at 81 with six minutes left, but the Ravens missed seven of nine free throws down the stretch.

Bill Burnett led San Jac with 18 points.

MC will face Lamar, Colo., in the first round of the Odessa College Thanksgiving Classic Thursday at 4:30 p.m. in its next outing of the season.

Howard moves closer to Heisman

Associated Press

Top 25 Football

Stanford won the Big Game, Michigan won the Big Ten and Desmond Howard may have won the Big Award. But Tony Sands had the biggest day of all.

Howard gained 213 all-purpose yards as No. 4 Michigan routed No. 18 Ohio State 31-3 Saturday and clinched the outright Big Ten title.

Howard may have locked up the Heisman Trophy with his sensational performance in Ann Arbor, which was highlighted by a school-record, 93-yard punt return. The triple-threat star also caught three passes for 96 yards, gained eight yards rushing and returned a kickoff 16 yards.

"Desmond Howard is a phenomenal athlete," said Ohio State coach John Cooper, who got a three-year contract extension before the game. "I think they ought to give him the Heisman Trophy right now."

Sands rushed for 396 yards on 58 carries — both NCAA records — as Kansas clobbered Missouri 53-29 in Lawrence. Sands, the Jayhawks' all-time leading rusher, broke the one-game yardage record of 386 set by San Diego State's Marshall Faulk earlier this season and topped the carry mark of 57 set by Minnesota's Kent Kitzmann in 1977.

"The guys told me to go out there and try hard and go for it," said Sands, who scored four touchdowns. "I told them I'll run it if you can open it up."

Tommy Vardell ran for 182 yards and three scores and Steve Stenstrom threw two touchdown passes as No. 21 Stanford beat No. 6 California 38-21 in the 94th Big Game.

Vardell, who has scored 20 touchdowns this season, set a school record for rushing yards in a season with 1,084, breaking the mark of 1,069 by Darrin Nelson.

No. 2 Washington 56
Washington St. 21

At Seattle, Billy Joe Hobert passed for three touchdowns as Washington (11-0) completed its first perfect regular season since 1915.

The Huskies' highly touted defense was unusually porous, but the offense rolled up 460 yards. Backup quarterback Mark Brunell passed for a touchdown and ran for a score, while Beno Bryant rushed for 127 yards and one score.

Aggies sew up Cotton berth

SWC Roundup

COLLEGE STATION — Bucky Richardson threw three touchdown passes and 12th-ranked Texas A&M University rolled to the Southwest Conference championship and a Cotton Bowl clash against No. 3 Florida State with a 65-6 victory over Southern Methodist.

The Aggies, winning their 16th SWC title, increased their overall record to 9-1. They can go through the conference undefeated for the first time since 1956 if they defeat Texas at Kyle Field on Thanksgiving night.

SMU, losing its 25th consecutive SWC game since the NCAA death penalty in 1986, dropped to 1-9 overall and 0-8 in league play.

It was the second worst defeat Texas A&M had inflicted on SMU in the 72-year history of football between the two schools.

SMU avoided its worst defeat to the Aggies on a 4-yard touchdown from Todd Ritz to Mick Rossley with seven seconds left in the game.

Richardson only played the first half and completed 7 of 12 passes for 161 yards. He rushed 10 times for 33 yards.

The 35-point favorite Aggies charged 53 and 85 yards against a stiff 20 mph wind for touchdowns on their first two possessions on the cold day to warm the crowd of 52,523 which braved a 31-degree wind chill factor.

Baylor 21, Texas 11

AUSTIN — Linebacker Lee Bruderer of Baylor recovered a Texas fumble at the Longhorns 15, and 240-pound Robert Strait scored on a first-down carry early in the fourth quarter as Baylor defeated Texas.

Baylor (8-3, 5-3 in the Southwest Conference) warmed up for the Copper Bowl at Tucson, Ariz., on Dec. 31 with an impressive defensive effort, almost clipping Texas' scoring string, which now stands at 129 games, a SWC record.

Texas (5-5; 4-3) was last shut out by Baylor in 1980.

Texas' first score came on a 28-yard field goal by walk-on Craig Dickey with 6:57 left in the game. The Longhorns scored a meaningless touchdown with 46 seconds left on a 1-yard pass from quarterback Peter Gardere to flanker Darrick Duke.

FORT WORTH — Matt Vogler threw three touchdown passes, the last to Stephen Shipley with 28 seconds remaining, and Texas Christian capitalized on a punter's nightmare to escape with a victory over Houston.

Vogler winged scoring shots of 4 and 16 yards, sneaked in once himself and hit Shipley in the end zone with a 15-yarder as the Horned Frogs (7-4, 4-4) recorded their first winning season since 1984.

The Cougars fell to 4-6 and 3-4, despite a spectacular record-breaking afternoon by David Klingler, who completed 30 of 62 passes for 429 yards overall and four touchdowns, all in the second quarter.

Arkansas 20, Rice 0

LITTLE ROCK — E.D. Jackson became the first Arkansas player to rush for more than 100 yards this year and the defense shut down Trevor Cobb as the Razorbacks played their way out of the Southwest Conference and into the Independence Bowl with a victory over Rice.

Jackson finished with 120 yards on 20 attempts, but did not play after a third-quarter fumble. Cobb, the nation's leading rusher with 159 yards per game, managed 90 yards on 21 tries, including a 25-yard gain late in the game.

Woman's death cries for justice

It was only a week and a half ago when the harsh reality of violent crime descended onto Midland in the form of a brutal stabbing death at a church office.

The Rev. James E. Whitaker of The Living Way church at 419 Alta St. left the church office for an hour to run some errands. When he returned, he discovered the bloody body of the church secretary, 28-year-old Brenda Branch, in a back storage area. She had been stabbed to death.

During the ensuing investigation, police arrested a 20-year-old prison parolee, but no charges have yet been filed.

The senseless crime shocked and horrified the people of Midland. They were left asking why a young woman in the prime of life would be savagely murdered in, of all places, a house of God?

No answers have yet been forthcoming.

The Rev. Whitaker has appropriately called on local residents to maintain their faith in Midland as "a good place to live. This is just one isolated horrible incident that has struck our lives," he said, "but I hope people aren't afraid to live here now."

The reverend is correct in asserting that Midlanders should not lose their confidence in this city as a good place to live and raise a family. One violent crime should not create that fear.

What Midlanders — and others — should do, however, is to look on the murder of Brenda Branch as an indication of a fault with our society that should and must be corrected if we are to reduce violent crime and restore to Midland and other good places like it the security known in earlier times. Bringing that quality back to Midland is still possible, but the proper priorities must be set at all levels of our judicial and criminal justice systems.

According to past statements by both local and state officials, county jails are literally full of prisoners and the state prison system is having to release convicts early in order to make room for new arrivals. In fact, officials say that pressures on the prison system have rendered it common for a petty criminal to serve only one month in the Texas Department of Corrections for every year of confinement assessed.

Violent criminals serve longer sentences, amounting to at least one-quarter of the term to which they were sentenced. But even prison authorities cannot say whether a petty criminal will turn to violent crime.

That all translates into more criminals on the streets nowadays and, when compounded with the economic problems plaguing the nation currently, the likelihood of more crimes such as the Branch killing.

The problem extends even deeper. Can a society that cannot decide whether it believes in the death penalty ever hope to minimize violent crime? If the petty criminal sees that society will not carry out ultimate justice against a murderer, what is there to deter any criminal from further crimes or from turning to more violent acts?

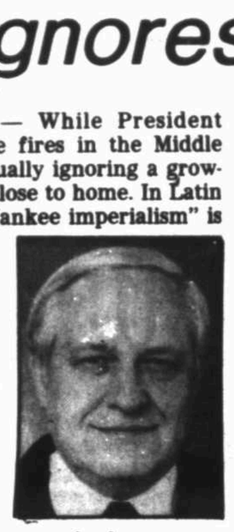

Crime exacts a cost on society, whether it is in money for construction of more prisons or the violence of brutal crimes when criminals are turned out onto the street. Reducing that crime is part of our social responsibility.

Our criminal justice system needs the concern and support of every person who hopes to one day live in relative safety. The death of Brenda Branch is a tragic reminder of that fact.

JACK ANDERSON

Bush ignores terrorism close to home

WASHINGTON — While President Bush tends the fires in the Middle East, he is virtually ignoring a growing terrorism problem close to home. In Latin America, the fear of "Yankee imperialism" is such a potent force that radical groups are turning to terrorism against any American target they can touch.

Anderson

Those targets are increasingly the most accessible, most vulnerable, most trusting element of Latin American society — churches that the terrorists perceive as promoting U.S. values and lifestyle.

The annual State Department report on terrorism reveals that two-thirds of all anti-U.S. attacks worldwide took place in Latin America last year. They didn't have the drama of an airplane blown out of the sky as is the signature of Middle Eastern terrorists. But they inspired terror nevertheless.

The State Department report does not catalog every anti-U.S. incident in Latin America, nor are its records complete. Our own research, with the help of a private firm, International Security Management, reveals that the No. 1 target is the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormons). The Catholic Church has taken a beating too by guerrillas who see Christianity as a stumbling block to radical reform in Latin America.

The State Department report pegged the terrorists as "radical leftists (who feed off) a visible U.S. presence in the region and historical antipathy toward the United States." And terrorists identify the Mormon Church almost exclusively with the United States.

Intelligence analysts report a variety of reasons why the Mormon Church has been singled out, all of them traceable to the fact that the church originated in the United States, although the vast majority of Mormons in Latin America are natives.

An Army intelligence officer who studied the problem of terrorism against the church concluded that the church "is seen as an aggravation, a slap in the face and a symbol of unacceptable American entanglement in their nations' sovereignty."

The most virulent terrorist groups see both the Mormon and Catholic churches as threats against the "Indianism" of some Latin American peoples. In Peru, Sendero Luminoso (the Shining Path) Marxist guerrillas are trying to stir up a rural peasant movement that promotes a return to the religious and social traditions of the Quecha Indians. Christianity is a threat to them.

The Mormon Church has tried to cope with the threat without stirring up the waters because it doesn't want to compromise its aggressive missionary approach in Latin America. Native Latin Americans are replacing U.S. imports in the missionary force and public relations campaigns have been launched in several countries presenting the church as a nonthreat.

This struggle against a rising tide of terrorism has gone on without much notice from the Bush administration. Bush should look south and realize that his closest neighbors have been feeling neglected lately. It is inevitable that resentment in those poverty-stricken countries will eventually spill over into the United States if the president continues to pay more attention to the Soviet Union, Eastern Europe and the Middle East.

As the Army intelligence officer concluded after studying the situation in Latin America, it is time for the United States to work on reforming the image it has in Latin America that it is "an immense and often mindless behemoth which seeks primarily to serve its own interests while hiding behind a thinly concealed veil of good will and sincere intent for all."

Harkin roars, but tax problems still loom

WASHINGTON — Iowa's Sen. Tom Harkin recently roared to a labor audience that when he is president "every double-breasting, scab-hiring, union-hurting employer in America will know the working people of America have a friend in the White House." But Lane Kirkland, the soft-spoken South Carolinian who heads the AFL-CIO, was more to the point: Too few working people are working.

Will

Recalling that candidate Bush promised to create 30 million jobs, Kirkland said: "Giving him full credit for a small growth in jobs before his recession began to destroy them, he now owes us about 29,750,000." Harkin's hot rhetoric is a frivolous response to the cold numbers that tell, in grim new installments each day, an old story: Without economic growth, politics is embittered.

Last summer California's Gov. Pete Wilson pushed through a combination of spending cuts and $7 billion of tax increases to close a $14.3 billion budget gap. But the gap will not stay closed. It is now $3 billion and growing.

If spending cuts alone are going to close California's budget gap, they must come primarily from the health, education and welfare programs that consume the lion's share of the $44 billion general funds budget. Because the fiscal year is five months over, even an across-the-board cut of 10 percent might not suffice.

Only spending cuts will be considered, according to leaders of both parties. A 10 percent cut in education would save $1 billion. Welfare? Last summer benefits for poor women and their children were cut 4.4 percent. Another cut like that would save just $55 million. If such a cut is made — or is not made — social tensions will deepen. The state says that by June 1993, children born in the United States to parents who are illegal immigrants will account for 25 percent of California's caseload.

Now Democrats, many of them lame ducks, may make the fruits of victory bitter for Republicans. Democrats may rush to repeal the whole $2.8 billion by enacting, as they sashay out the door, a "sunset" provision causing the taxes to expire next June. This would force Republicans to re-enact most of them or inflict spending cuts that would call the voters' bluff.

In April 1968, President Johnson told some urban policy experts: "Here's the number one problem ... You've got to figure out how to raise the taxes to pay for these social programs ... I'm sure you're all smart enough to tell us which programs work and which don't. What we need is someone smart enough to tell us how to convince the American people that they should ante up."

Harkin, who relishes the role of roughneck, believes tough guys don't dance away from the liberal label. Fine. When he has had his fill of the fun of tough talk, he can turn to the problem that the last liberal president defined for liberalism almost a quarter of a century ago.

Harkin will find working people swelling the ranks of the tax revolt because federal, state and local taxes are taking the largest percentage of GNP since the Second World War. Two thirds of all families pay more in regressive Social Security taxes than income taxes.

Finally, Harkin may find that many working people cannot find work because taxation is smothering the private sector.

School financing plan remains a mess

AUSTIN — Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, in a speech before the Senate approved his school finance equalization bill earlier this year, told senators that when he began, he had thought he could write a bill and guarantee it would be constitutional.

"But I can't," Parker said. He told senators he believed the bill was constitutional.

Plaintiffs and the state argued the case before the court Tuesday. The court may not issue its decision for several months. But don't be surprised if it rules the new plan is unconstitutional.

I can see at least four of the nine justices voting against the plan, based on hostile questions they asked the state's attorneys. I believe three are in favor of it. If only one of the remaining two joins the opposition, the state is back where it started in one big mess.

Parker, chairman of the Senate Education Committee, is probably the most knowledgable legislator about school financing in the history of the state. And after two years of proposals, hearings, arguments, negotiations, lobbying, committee meetings, amendments and trade-offs, he is ready to say to heck with it. Let the court write its own plan.

The simple answer would be for the state to provide 100 percent of the financing for schools. But that would take a huge tax increase.

You can't blame Parker for being exasperated. Any plan that relies on local property taxes is going to be challenged in the courts by one side or the other.

If the Supreme Court rules the current state plan is unconstitutional, not many options remain.

One is a statewide property tax, and the other is a state income tax.

Latvia must learn to live with immigrants

RIGA, Still-Occupied but Independent Latvia — Sarmite Elerte, 34, strikes me as the most fascinating woman in the former Soviet union.

In the dangerous early days of breakup, she was a key agitator for the Latvian Popular Front; in the recent period of new independence, she took time out to have a baby; in the sobering time of building a nation, she is becoming managing editor of Diena, the most adamantly independent major new daily among the nations of post-Soviet Europe.

Safire

Ms. Elerte's fascination lies neither in her Audrey Hepburn looks nor her Clare Luce style but in her grasp of the central issue of the days to come: how to bring disparate ethnic groups together in nationhood after the centralizing fervor for independence dissolves in success.

The prevalent urge is just the opposite: to get even by getting "pure." For two generations, Moscow has been pouring Russians into conquered Latvia until they make up half the population. These immigrant-invaders had most of the privileges, disdaining to learn the local language, many treating the native Latvians as second-class Soviet citizens.

Even today, with Latvia independent, 100,000 Soviet troops are still stationed in this nation, with an additional 60,000 officers "retired" here — altogether an oppressive foreign presence, occupying much of the best property. Dainis Ivans, the intrepid Popular Front leader who is now vice chairman of the Council of Ministers, is unsympathetic to the excuse that Red Army soldiers have no homes to return to, and need years of delay: "It took a day for them to move in, it should take a day to move out."

This reasonable resentment at the presence of unwanted outsiders in uniform, or at Russian newcomers who reject the native language, culminates in the citizenship issue: Who is a Latvian, with the right to vote? The Russian-speaking "minority" is as numerous as the majority; native Latvians do not want to lose at the ballot box the national identity lost to Hitler's tanks and Stalin's deals.

Accordingly, a citizenship law is being debated, based on the notion that the takeover 50 years ago is invalid, and that only those who were Latvian before 1940, and their descendants, are automatic Latvians now. No Red Army soldiers, former KGB men or dope addicts need apply; that's reasonable, as is no dual citizenship. But then it gets mean: Russians who have lived here more than 16 years can be naturalized, but only if they learn Latvian and renounce Soviet citizenship.

That turning-back of the clock may be satisfying to nationalists, and a desire to settle scores is surely understandable, but getting even is no way to build a country.

Ex-Communists who were opposed to independence, who rooted for the coup in Moscow and some who collaborated with KGB goons in Red Army uniforms are now pleading for "human rights" to Russians in Latvia. Coming from them, the plea is the height of hypocrisy — but their cause happens to be right.

You should end the era of privilege, but you cannot kick near-newcomers out. You have to give full recognition to their human rights, phrase that now embraces political rights. That goes for Russians in Latvia, Ukrainians in Russia, Hungarians in Romania, Croats in Serbia, Slovaks in Bohemia, Arabs in Judea-Samaria.

Enter mediating forces like the journalist Sarmite Elerte. Diena, "The Day," has a Russian-language edition. The former agitator and editor-to-be reminds her Latvian compatriots that "most Russians here supported independence, and we must reward them." This means a 5-year residency for citizenship, not 16, and a conversational language requirement for younger people. "We not only have to make them citizens, but make them feel like citizens."

"Now we are free," says Ms. Elerte, "but that means we must solve our own problems, and the first is living together."

Regional Bell ruling would enhance service

I read with interest your editorial on HR 3515 regarding the seven regional Bell companies entering the information services market. I thought it might be helpful for me to bring another perspective to some of the issues you touched on.

I understand why the Midland Reporter-Telegram and the American Newspaper Publishers Association would be concerned about the information services ruling. No business wants to think about a host of good, strong competitors coming into the field. But, I think it's important to point out that this ruling will not, and cannot, move the Bell companies toward a monopoly in this industry. As a matter of fact, it does just the opposite. Already, there are numerous major competitors in the information services business, including many daily newspapers which are part of giant media companies with print, broadcast and cable TV properties. Other strong players include big companies such as Sears, IBM, General Electric, American Express, ITT and General Motors to name a few.

Given this already aggressive competitive marketplace, the entrance of seven new contenders will only help to ensure American consumers of increased innovation, better service and lower prices. And full participation by Southwestern Bell and the other Bell companies can only speed up the day when Americans can benefit from a wide range of exciting new services offered by a myriad of providers.

Further, it would be totally counterproductive for any Bell company even to attempt to monopolize information services under the extremely close scrutiny of the Federal Communications Commission, the Department of Justice, the federal courts, state public service commissions, competitors, consumer groups and the public in general. We have neither the desire nor the ability to do so. We do, however, have both the desire and the ability to be a fair and successful competitor — and we will be. And most importantly, consumers and other capable competitors will share in the benefits associated with the growth of the information services industry.

Right now, American consumers and small businesses are still losing by not having the same helpful information services as those in France, Japan and other countries. And, unfortunately, until all the able players are allowed to work to that end, Americans will continue to lag behind technologically.

I appreciate your consideration of our point of view.

Safire, Murchison miss mark in columns

William Safire and Bill Murchison have been fast and loose with the truth to serve the administration positively. They ignore the attempt to make the Supreme Court an appendage of the White House.

"Handlers" of Clarence Thomas from the White House — coaching as to what to say and not say — stretched freedom and independence of the nominee. Thomas told the committee that he had given no thought to Roe vs. Wade. What a whopper!

Anita Hill appeared and testified as to her personal experiences with Thomas. She spoke deliberately and with great poise — even the "Three Stooges" couldn't discredit her. She listed friends in whom she had confided. She took and passed a lie-detector test. Safire poked fun at that. They don't call them "lie-detectors" for nothing! Thomas, in his anger and desperate attempt to "clear his name," did not even suggest he would take one.

Newsweek magazine reported that mail showed more support for Anita Hill than for Thomas. I don't understand the criticism that the democrats in the Senate received. They heard witnesses on both sides.

Your newspaper cited the fall of communism as "the Ronald Reagan legacy." Wrong! Mikhail Gorbachev is the one person who led in the dismantling of communism!

Reagan's legacy: a virtual mountain of national debt caused by running deficits every year. His legacy includes the Iran-Contra scandal (Murchison's column "Congress gets the blame for Iran-Contra" is so outlandish it doesn't deserve an answer. People KNOW who caused Iran-Contra), the HUD scandal plus many individual misbehaviors.

I remember hearing in the '30s the republican's opposition to Social Security, TVA, REA and to most of the New Deal, Reagan's radio was mostly in opposition. Murchison's column reminded me of the GOP's mentality toward the working class. He was giving reasons why a national health program isn't needed. It's about like Bush's "The recession is over."

The obscene earnings of chief executive officers while laying off employees says a great deal about republican values. There are hardly any columns about these.

Term limitations for Congress! How ridiculous! The republicans are trying to get control of Congress by amending the Constitution.

People need to take a stand, not get stung

He looked to be about 16 years old. He was standing in front of me at a local restaurant. He was wearing clean Levis and a stark white T-shirt with the sleeves rolled up. I noticed the very beginnings of a beard where whiskers were replacing a slight case of acne. He was with a young lady.

What drew my attention to them was their conversation. It consisted of 50 percent profanity and neither of them appeared to be angry. It was obviously just their normal way of conversing. Due to their loud voices, their comments were not restricted to each other but instead, permeated and fouled the entire restaurant like an obnoxious odor.

Oh, you bet I thought of saying something. I am in the daily business of working with teenagers and years of professional training and experience were at my disposal. Hadn't I heard the same or worse before, you wonder? Of course. Am I a religious zealot on a private crusade? Nope! Perhaps even I had said similar things myself? Perhaps. So what!

There are two things which bother me about this incident. The first is the behavior of the young people, and the second is my own behavior! Maybe I just didn't want to deal with the confrontation. I didn't want to get involved. I've always hated people like that.

One incident such as this certainly doesn't bring civilization to its knees anymore than one bee sting kills a normally healthy man. So, I came to a decision. I decided that I was tired of being stung! I am tired of being stung repeatedly, each day, by television programs attempting to entertain me with disfunctional families with disrespectful children. I will write to the sponsors of those shows. I am tired of being stung by politicians who operate without regard for social conscience or moral integrity, and who win repeated terms in office! I am tired of our children being stung by images of so called role models who model all the wrong roles. I will do what I can to be a better role model.

Like a bee keeper who regularly gets stung, one begins to build up a tolerance for the stings. If I ever again have the opportunity to get involved with anyone of any age in a situation similar to what I experienced in the restaurant, I will be certain that I explain to them about bees and bee stings. One sting doesn't usually kill, but strong men have fallen due to the collective stinging of hundreds.

I won't be stung anymore!

Midland city officials ask too much with raise

So now, in times like these, our city officials want a raise. To put it crudely, how have they got the guts to ask for more money when people are being laid off?

As just one example of layoffs, Arco announced recently that 1,500 are being let go, not all from Midland. All told there are about 2,000. Stores have closed all over Midland.

A few new places have popped up, but some have closed already.

Since our national government slipped a raise through tied to another bill onto this country's people is it "anything goes?"

At least our city officials are trying to do it out in the open.

My question is if these officials cannot get along on their good salaries by prudently investing it or spending it, are they fit to manage our tax money? What do you think?

My mother told me as a child, "It isn't what you earn, it's what you do with what you earn." That goes for our tax money also.

These men knew what the salary was when they begged and stood on their heads and did everything they could think of to get the job. This is no secret.

If they are not happy why not leave and go to one of the comparison places. No one is tied to Midland.

In my opinion limited terms should cover all government officials and it's just a matter of time because most of us are fed up.

There are two courses that must be taught in college that are never listed. 1: Planned stupidity; and 2: The joy of spending someone else's money.

Black Chamber gets thanks for dance group

Sincere thanks goes to the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs Inc. for bringing to Midland Wednesday night the marvelous talents of Les Ballets Africains. The evening's performance was a resounding celebration of living through dance and music.

The troupe's performance was a tremendous feast for the eyes, the ears and the hearts of all those attending. After delivering us Alvin Ailey last year and Les Ballets Africains this week, I can only look forward and marvel at what the Black Chamber can do for an encore next year. Thanks again.

Spain needs Cajuns to get rid of crawfish

The Spaniards are understandably concerned about the infestation of their rice fields by the imported Louisiana crawfish. The destruction of their rice crops does go against the grain.

To date, efforts to control the numbers of these crustaceans have been ineffective. However, there is a simple and logical solution. All the Spanish have to do is import some Cajuns. Soon they'll run out of "mudbugs" and when the crawfish are gone, the Cajuns will be, too.

Parents search for daughter

Lynn and Ralph Henry

Elizabeth Henry has been missing for three months. Her parents are asking anyone with any information about her to come forward.

Three months have now passed since our daughter, Elizabeth, was abducted from our home on Aug. 19th. She has now been missing for almost half of her senior year at Lee High School. During our ordeal, our neighbors, family, friends, law enforcement officers and even strangers have been comforting and supportive. Unfortunately, we still don't know where our daughter is or what happened to her.

We do believe that someone in Midland must have some knowledge of her whereabouts. Why haven't they come forward? When Elizabeth called 911 she stated that her "boyfriend" had tied her up, then the phone went dead. There is evidence that this "boyfriend" was apparently with her in the house for as long as 20 minutes before the 911 call was placed. Police responded within six minutes to find our house empty and her Bronco II missing. The Bronco II was later found at the airport, having been parked there approximately 45 minutes after the 911 call.

It was apparent that Elizabeth had been placed in the back storage area, under a blanket that was taken from our house. Her purse was recovered, intact, from the Bronco. No personal items were missing from our house except Elizabeth and the clothes she was wearing.

The police have no physical evidence which would connect an ex-boyfriend with her disappearance. It appears impossible that only one person could be involved with Elizabeth's abduction. Why have certain people refused to cooperate with the police and the grand jury? What do they know?

The police need someone to come forward. We desperately need someone to come forward. Elizabeth is our only child and her loss is deeply felt. If you have any information at all about Elizabeth's abduction, please help us and Elizabeth by calling Lt. Earl Luckey at the Midland Police Department.

The National Center for Missing and Exploited Children is distributing nationwide a poster of Elizabeth.

Political decisions rest on whims

Mighty matters in the U.S. government often turn on small principles and on the whims of powerful men like Dan Rostenkowski and Richard Darman. An eight-month tiff between the imperious chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee and the devious White House budget chief explains why Congress still has not approved a key ingredient of U.S. foreign policy — the bill to establish most-favored-nation trading status for the Soviet Union.

Gelb

In June, President Bush decided that Moscow had finally removed barriers to emigration and was thus qualified for normal, or MFN, trade rank. His hope was to reduce tariffs quickly for Soviet exports, as one of the few inexpensive ways to help the deteriorating Soviet economy.

But the fates would not have it done so easily. They tapped two men renowned for jousting and jockeying and turned matters of high policy into a legislative pie-throwing contest.

Actually the fates intervened two years ago when the Jesuit Fathers of Loyola University of Chicago asked their most influential alumnus, Rostenkowski, to help secure federal funds for a library and business school. Like any creative legislator, he gazed upon the Pentagon budget and unearthed an odd $8 million. And who was to tell him no?

Well, the fathers told him no. They said they did not want money from the very source that was financing bloody Central American dictators. Ever the good alumnus, Rostenkowski switched the $8 million in March from the defense budget to the Education Department budget.

Richard Darman, ever vigilant against scams he did not conceive, told the chairman he could not do that. The move violated the sacred budget covenant of 1990, which barred transferring money between military and domestic spending accounts. But, replied the chairman, it was only a few million and surely Darman could find some extra dollars lying around domestic accounts to cover the small excess.

No, said Darman. A deal was a deal, and no matter how small the amount, any deviation from the covenant would cause the whole temple of government to tumble down.

You're kidding, said the chairman.

Darman wasn't kidding. He did what he was empowered by law to do — he sequestered or set aside the necessary funds to cover the excess from every domestic budget account. This came to 0.0013 percent or an average of 10 cents from each domestic program.

In August Bush sent Congress MFN legislation, and it went to Rostenkowski's committee. He immediately wrote to Darman, inquiring whether the U.S. Treasury would lose money as a result of the lowered tariffs, and whether this loss would be covered by sequestering funds from other international accounts.

Darman said it was only a little amount. Rostenkowski said a deal was a deal no matter how tiny the sum, and unless Darman produced the necessary funds ($20 million for loss in revenues from the Soviet Union and another $20 million for other countries), he would not take action on the MFN bill.

There matters stood until Tuesday. The budget chief wrote to the chairman announcing he had found extra money, and that if the committee acted "promptly," there would be no need for sequestration. His point made, the chairman's committee passed the MFN bill.

China becomes dangerous with sales of nuclear technology

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor in Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

NEW YORK — Beijing's tyrannical communist regime has now made China the world's most dangerous power.

By refusing to give Secretary of State James Baker a firm, no loop-hole commitment to stop selling nuclear and chemical warfare technology to Iran, Algeria, Pakistan and other Third World countries, the Chinese Stalinists have brought Sino-American relations to the lowest point since the Tiananmen Square massacre in 1989 that crushed the students' democracy movement.

Hearst

In the most difficult of his many exhausting diplomatic missions, Baker, whose brilliant diplomacy brought about the historic Middle East peace conference, was blocked by Chinese double-talking duplicity from getting a definite breakthrough on any major issue.

The two most important issues were China's sale of mass-destruction technology to radical and/or unstable governments and Beijing's shipment of Chinese M-9 and M-11 missiles to Third World countries earlier this year. These missiles were capable of carrying powerful warheads and endangering peace in South Asia and throughout the Middle East.

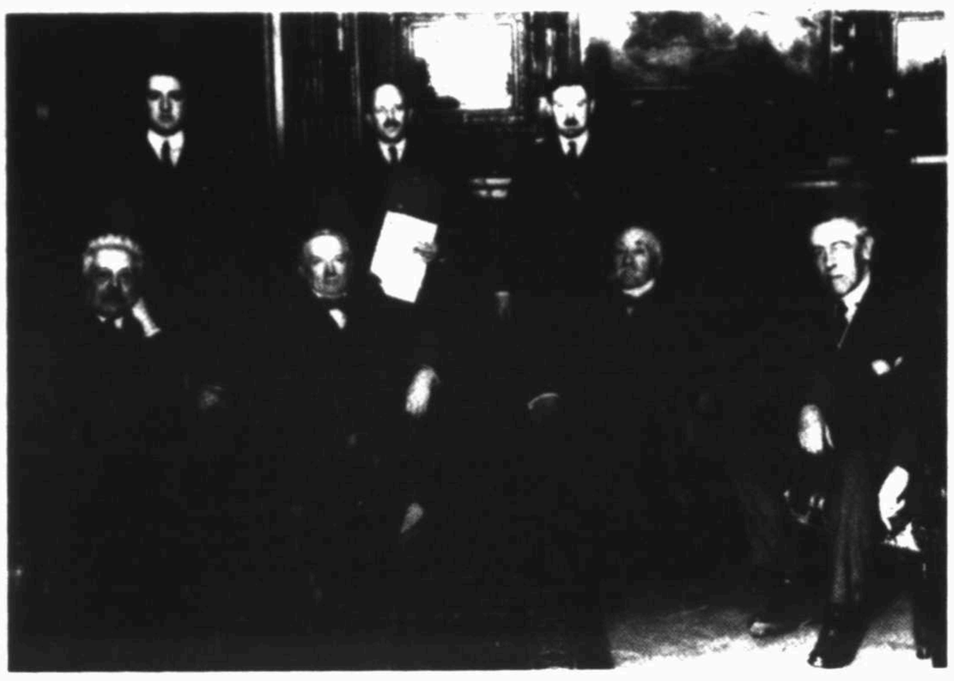

Secretary Baker succeeded in getting the Beijing government to agree "conditionally" not to ship any more M-9s to Syria and M-11s to Pakistan and to abide by the existing international pact barring export of nuclear-capable technology. The tricky condition, however, turned out to be a demand that Washington lift sanctions imposed in June on the U.S. sale of equipment to two Chinese arms firms and on high-technology computer sales as well as joint satellite launches. Baker rightly balked at such a deal, saying it needed further discussion in Washington. It is estimated China nets nearly $15 billion annually on its arms sales.

The sanctions were imposed after a mobile launcher for the M-11 missile was sighted in Pakistan earlier this year. Pakistan has been striving to build a nuclear weapon for the past decade. The Reagan administration did not apply strong pressure to restrain the Pakistani nuclear program because Pakistan enabled us to monitor strategic bases in the Soviet Union and allowed us to pass supplies through its territory to Afghanistan guerrillas fighting Soviet invaders.

Both the Bush administration and the United Nations non-proliferation agency have accused China of secretly selling nuclear weapons technology to Algeria and Iran. Sales to Iran are most dangerous because its lunatic Islamic leaders' ambition is to gain control of the Middle East and create an Islamic empire.

According to columnists Rowland Evans and Robert Novak, the supposedly moderate Iranian President Hashemi Rafsanjani recently told his fanatics: "We must fully equip ourselves" with chemical, biological and radioactive weapons, and the United States must accept "the reality that we intend to stand on our own feet" and "definitely make use of China's resources." Iran is reported to have bought $5 billion worth of Chinese weapons in the past three years.

Our willingness to lift sanctions on U.S. sale of equipment for China's conventional weapons and on computer and satellite technology should be strictly conditioned on the right of the United States, the United Nations, and the International Atomic Energy Agency to have complete freedom to monitor and inspect all such exports before they are shipped out of China. This could make it more difficult, if not impossible, to convert such exports into nuclear and chemical warfare technology. It's time the United States and its United Nations allies stop the proliferation of mass destruction weapons.

NEWTON, Mass. — Top-ranked Miami survived the early loss of leading rusher Stephen McGuire and a rash of penalties to beat stubborn Boston College 19-14 Saturday night.

It was the Hurricanes' 16th straight victory, the longest winning streak in Division I-A.

Miami, a three-touchdown favorite, was penalized 20 times for 143 yards but still managed to hold off the Eagles after they closed to 16-14 in the third quarter. The Hurricanes wind up the regular season against San Diego State next Saturday, then head to the Orange Bowl for a Jan. 1 game against Nebraska or Colorado.

"It happened so fast," Howard said. "I thought about fair-catching it because they were coming so fast. But I thought, 'This is the Ohio State game.' The last block was able spring me and it was a foot race after that."

No. 10 Tennessee 16, Kentucky 7

At Lexington, James Stewart rushed for 149 yards and a touchdown and John Becksvoort kicked three field goals for Tennessee.

Stewart's 8-yard TD run gave the Volunteers (6-2 overall, 4-2 SEC) a 16-0 lead with 9:47 left in the third quarter. Kentucky (3-8, 0-7), completing its worst season since going 0-10-1 in 1982, finally scored on Craig Walker's 1-yard run with 13:50 remaining in the game.

No. 13 E. Carolina 30
Cincinnati 19

At Cincinnati, Jeff Blake passed for two touchdowns and Dion Johnson ran 3 yards for the go-ahead score as East Carolina (10-1) won its 10th straight.

Ronnie Dixon and Vaughn Booker sacked Blake for a safety with 4:48 remaining to cut East Carolina's lead to 21-19. Cincinnati (4-7) got the ball back with two minutes remaining, but Jerry Dillon intercepted Lance Harp's pass and returned it for the clinching touchdown.

No. 14 Clemson 41, S. Carolina 24

At Columbia, Clemson's DeChane Cameron set a school record for passing accuracy and accounted for 322 yards.

Cameron completed 12 of 14 passes for 206 yards and rushed for 116 yards. His 322 yards in total offense was the third highest in school history and his 85.7 completion percentage broke the single-game Clemson mark of 81.8 set by Bobby Gage in 1947 and tied by Mike O'Cain in 1975.

No. 15 Colorado 17, Iowa St. 14

At Ames, freshman Lamont Warren sprinted 74 yards for one touchdown and set up the go-ahead score as Colorado remained in the running for an Orange Bowl berth.

Playing in blowing snow and a minus-15 wind chill, Colorado (8-2-1 overall, 6-0-1 Big Eight) clinched at least a tie for its third straight conference title by beating Iowa State (3-7-1, 1-5-1) for the eighth straight time.

However, the Buffaloes must wait until Friday's Nebraska-Oklahoma game to learn their bowl fate. If Nebraska wins, the Cornhuskers go to the Orange Bowl and Colorado to the Blockbuster Bowl. If Oklahoma beats Nebraska, Colorado goes to the Orange Bowl for the third consecutive year.

ANDREWS: Injuries, ineligibilities hurt 'Stangs

but Mustang head coach W.T. Stapler was not making excuses after the game.

"We got mauled," Stapler said. "We didn't lay down. They just physically beat us down."

Pampa, 10-2 and the District 1-4A champion, advances to the regional playoff round against Saginaw-Boswell, which was a 15-13 winner Saturday over Stephenville. That game is slated for 2 p.m. Saturday in Wichita Falls and will be the first-ever Pampa plunge into Week 3 of the playoffs.

Before last week's 31-15 bi-district win over Snyder, the Harvesters had not won a postseason football game since 1933. Their only playoff win previous to that was in 1924, so Saturday's victory over Andrews was only Pampa's fourth playoff win all-time and it marks the first time the Harvesters ever have won two playoff games in the same year.

"We're in untrod waters for us," said fifth-year Pampa coach Dennis Cavalier, whose son Andy led the Harvesters to a 14-0 halftime lead with TD passes to Phillip Sexton and Marc Hampton. The first of those came on a fourth-and-two from the Mustangs' 17-yard line late in the second quarter.

Hampton's TD came just over a minute later, following an Andrews fumble at the Mustang 33-yard line.

"We're at least a 90-percent running team, but we like to look for the play-action pass and we make people defend against it," Coach Cavalier said. "As soon as the don't we come to it.

"We've got a gritty bunch of guys who are willing to blend their talents and go out their and do their best."

Two that did their best were Laury, the tailback, and Thomas the fullback. Laury skirted the outside of the Andrews defense for 132 yards on 22 carries, and Thomas did him one better, working the middle for a game-best 133 yards, including a 20-yard TD burst that put the final nail in Andrews season.

The Mustangs, District 3-4A co-champions with Sweetwater, ended the season 8-3 after reaching their first playoff game under Stapler, who finished his fifth campaign at the school.

"It was a great year," Stapler said. "Of course every week we had to find replacements for people we lost along the way, but it's a credit to the kids that fought through it."

The Mustangs showed no quit against Pampa, even after the Harvesters controlled the ball for 17:05 of the first-half clock and held a 14-0 lead at the break.

Pampa's opening drive in the second half stalled at its own 46-yard line when Thomas ran into a host of Mustangs for no gain on a fouth-and-one try. Andrews followed up on the play with an eight-play effort capped by quarterback Al Gonzalez' one-yard TD dive.

Backup quarterback Bryan Lepard then hit Jay Harper with a two-point pass to narrow the margin to 14-8 with 5:56 left in the third quarter.

"I really thought when we made it 14-8 that we had a chance," Stapler said. "But the trouble was we could never get the ball away from them (Harvesters).

Pampa used the rest of the third-quarter time and a good portion of the fourth, marching 80 yards in 14 plays to up the lead to 20-8 on Cavalier's one-yard dive. It was one of three drives Pampa amassed in the game of 61 yards or better.

The Harvester's final drive was exactly 61 yards. It ended nine plays after it began, with Thomas breaking loose up the middle for a 20-yard TD with 5:04 left to play.

MCS advances to TAPPS title game

Staff Report

ABILENE — For the second year in a row Midland Christian's Mustangs have moved into the six-man TAPPS state championship finals.

The Mustangs ripped Christ Way of Duncanville 54-8 here at Elmer Gray Stadium on the campus of Abilene Christian University Saturday, earning the right to face Jesus Chapel in the finals, a rematch of last year's state championship game in which Jesus Chapel won in Midland.

MC will have to travel to El Paso this week at a date and time still to be determined since Jesus Chapel played in Midland last year. Jesus Chapel won the other TAPPS semifinal game with a 45-0 victory over Allen Academy of Bryan, making both semifinal matchups end with the 45-point rule.

MC's Drew Akins scored three touchdowns against Christ Way while Aaron Awtrey scored one TD on an interception and threw for another.

Midland Christian also got TD runs from Don Gilbreath and Jay Dallas while Kyle Jackson scored on Awtrey's TD pass.

Midland Christian scored early in the third quarter to end the game after leading at the half by a 46-8 margin. MC scored the first 38 points in the game.

The Mustangs had 271 yards total offense in less than three quarters of action while Christ Way managed a meager 103 yards.

GIRLS: MHS takes consolation

we did that from the floor in the first half, though not from the line," Kail said.

Still, the Rebs were down by just five points as the fourth quarter began, but after the Lady Knights took a 36-29 lead with 4:53 to play in the game, Hanks went to a four-corners offense that consumed the clock in bunches before Lee could retaliate. Ranee Franklin was Lee's top scorer with eight points.

In MHS' 14-point win over Pecos for the consolation title, the Lady Bulldogs (3-1) were down 20-8 entering the second quarter but pulled to within six points at half time, 29-23. In the third period, MHS outscored the Lady Eagles 18-5 to take the lead, as Julie Chancellor nailed two three-pointers and Ashley Chase added another.

Chase was the Lady 'Dawgs' top scorer in the game with 16 points, while Sally Gibson added 12 and Chancellor 11.

Wadkins, Purtzer lead Shootout

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Lanny Wadkins and Tom Purtzer fired a 65 Saturday for a seven-shot lead after two days of the Shark Shootout.

Wadkins' and Purtzer's 7-under-par round, combined with Friday's 11-under put them at 126 entering Sunday's final round.

First prize in the $1 million event is $250,000.

Mark O'Meara and Steve Elkington fired a 69 for a 133 and sole possession of second place. They had an eagle at the par-5, 537-yard 16th hole.

Host Greg Norman and his partner, Jack Nicklaus, fired a 66 to pull into a three way tie at 134.

Steve Pate and Hale Irwin matched the team of Tom Kite and Davil Love with second round 69. Those duos also are at 134.

Purtzer and Wadkins started their round with five birdies on the front nine. After a birdie at the 10th hole put them 6-under par for the day, they made their only bogey in two rounds.

Defending champs open with win over Soviets

Associated Press

DURHAM, N.C. — Cherokee Parks gave top-ranked Duke an impressive view of the future Saturday in leading the Blue Devils to a 90-70 victory over the Soviet National Team in the final tuneup for the national champions.

Parks, one of coach Mike Krzyzewski's prized recruits, scored 19 points, grabbed eight rebounds and blocked four shots. He put an exclamation point on his effort with an over-the-head dunk with a defender on his back with 1:56 left.

Parks will take over the center's job from Christian Laettner, who will move to the power forward position and likely give the 1991 national champions more firepower.

Laettner scored 12 points. He played with an undetermined leg injury, but he's expected to be in the lineup against East Carolina when Duke starts the regular season Monday night.

Grant Hill soared above the Soviets for 22 points, including a high-flying dunk in which he took off from near the free-throw line. Most of Hill's dunks came courtesy of Bobby Hurley, the floor leader who also had 22 points. Hurley also had seven assists.

No. 12 Kansas 122
Md.-Baltimore County 58

LAWRENCE, Kan. — Richard Scott scored a career-high 22 points as No. 12 Kansas crushed Maryland-Baltimore County for its 19th consecutive homecourt victory.

Scott, who was 9-for-10 from the floor, surpassed his previous career high of 15 points with a layup 30 seconds into the second half. Scott's basket came amid an 11-3 run that gave the Jayhawks a 70-32 lead.

Kansas' point total was the fourth-highest and the margin of victory the third-greatest in school history.

Kansas used 13-0 runs in each half and capitalized on 33-percent shooting by Baltimore County to win its 19th straight home opener. The Jayhawks improved to 76-18 all time in season openers and have never lost a November home game.

No. 17 Alabama 76
Davidson 59

DAVIDSON, N.C. — Robert Horry scored 22 points, and 17th-ranked Alabama used a 13-0 run early in the second half to defeat Davidson in the opener for both teams.

Dixon-Dixon win Mission Shootout

Staff Report

ODESSA — Brett Dixon and E.B. Dixon teamed up to win the first flight Saturday in the Turkey Shootout Golf Tournament here at the Club at Mission Dorado.

The Dixons shot a 60, while Rick Seaton and Kendall Shetter claimed second place with a 64.

Sprewell then sank a pair of 3-

No. 21 Iowa 101, Md.-E. Shore 45

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Rodell Davis scored 14 points and Troy Skinner added 13 in a reserve role, pacing No. 21 Iowa over Maryland-Eastern Shore.

Iowa (1-0) used a 25-5 spurt midway through the first half to open a 45-21 lead at halftime over the Hawks (0-1). Davis scored 13 of his team's first 19 points, but saw limited playing time the rest of the way because of an upset stomach.

Wade Lookingbill's basket capped a 9-2 spurt to start the second half and gave Iowa a 54-23 lead that grew to more than 40 points with about seven minutes remaining.

No. 22 Wake Forest 87
N.C.-Greensboro 59

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. — Chris King scored 26 points and Rodney Rogers added 20, leading No. 22 Wake Forest to a season-opening victory over North Carolina-Greensboro.

The Demon Deacons took the lead two minutes into the game and never trailed, shooting 74 percent in the first half. The closest the Spartans came in the second half was 59-40 with 14 minutes left.

It was the Division I debut for N.C.-Greensboro, which had played 24 seasons in Divisions II and III. It was also the first time the Spartans had played an Atlantic Coast Conference team or a team in the national rankings.

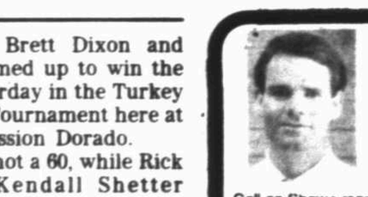

No. 25 Louisville 102
Howard 73

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Greg Minor scored 16 points and grabbed 10 rebounds in his collegiate debut to lead six players in double figures as 25th-ranked Louisville trounced Howard.

The Cardinals (1-0) led 25-21 with 7:37 left in the first half, but outscored the Bison 20-1. The Cardinals scored the final 16 points of the run.

Louisville put on another spurt to begin the second half, outscoring Howard 16-7 to lead 64-34 with 16:08 to play. Howard could get no closer than 23 points, the last time at 81-58.

The Cardinals' biggest lead was at 97-63 with 4:06 to play when Brian Hopgood connected on a three-point play.

Feeder system: Is it the wave of the future?

■ With the addition of a fourth junior high school, Midlanders are split on whether a pure feeder system will enhance 'total' education.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Midland will soon have a fourth junior high school. How the new junior high will fit into the system — or change the system — is fraught with controversy.

The issue has been brought up at both community meetings hosted by the Midland Independent School District. One of the agenda items for discussion at the meetings concerns "boundaries for MISD junior highs."

The addition of a fourth junior high school, giving MISD an even number, raises the possibility that the school district could change to a pure feeder system.

In a pure feeder system involving Midland's four junior highs and two high schools, two junior highs would "feed" their students directly into MHS and two junior highs would have their students attend LHS.

The system currently in place in MISD features mixed junior highs, or rather, students from both high school districts attending each junior high.

Many school administrators said that there is no doubt that the feeder system enhances extracurricular activities such as band, drama and athletics.

"Mojo magic starts in the seventh grade," said MISD superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. at a recent community meeting.

Baressi's statement refers to Odessa's football furor and training program for potential Permian High School "Mojos," which begins in seventh grade.

Midland coaches complain that other school district's in District 4-5A have a "two-year headstart" with their athletes compared to MISD.

Some MISD educators in Midland and Odessa say that a feeder system could enhance academics as well, by allowing a continuity of programs and making schools accountable for SAT (Scholastic Aptitude Test) scores from the seventh grade through high school.

Raymond Starnes, principal of Odessa High School, said that Odessa's feeder system has three junior highs sending students to OHS and three feeding them to Permian.

"The system benefits academics because of the continuity of programs if they are coordinated," he said. "It allows for longitudinal studies and better tracking of students and allows teachers to enhance the strengths and pinpoint the weaknesses in students.

"Good communication is the key element for this to work," Starnes noted. "We have junior high school teachers working with high school teachers. They have to have the same commitment to promote programs from elementary school through high school. This is easy to say, but hard to do."

Ron Cravey, director of computer services for Abilene Independent School District, said the school district has two high schools (grades nine through twelve) and five middle schools (grades six, seven and eight). "Two junior highs feed students directly to one high school and two feed to another. Then one junior high is split, with students going to both high schools," he said.

Next year Abilene will have a sixth junior high school built, and the district will implement a pure feeder system.

"There is no hard data indicating that a pure feeder system has any academic advantages," Cravey said. "There may be social advantages in keeping students all in a group from seventh through 12th grade. But then again, there is no data on that either."

Another Abilene administrator, who asked that his name not be used, said, "Pure feeder systems are a big enough of a controversy that I don't want to be drug into anything happening in MISD. But I can tell you there are social and curriculum advantages to keeping students in one group for six years." The administrator did not elaborate.

Some freshman students have decried the fact that MISD's system has broken up school friendships since many of their junior high friends may live in a different high school district.

This means, after three years of junior high school, and establishing friends through the cluster system (integration system which groups schools in clusters

Midland High School seniors Gavin Hudgeons and Janna Fulfer work on the proposal they plan to present at a mock United Nations assembly in Washington, D.C.

Class enhances 'window on world'

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Many miles separate Midland's flat semi-desert plains from the rolling grasslands and sandy beaches of Uruguay, but 13 Midland High School students are set on closing the distance between the West Texas city and the South American country.

Students in Geoff Walker's Model Organization of American States (MOAS) course have been researching the country and writing proposals to better the quality of living for Uruguayans.

Their proposals offer suggestions on everything from implementing the D-FY-IT (Drug Free Youth In Texas) program, to promoting human rights, enforcing environmental regulations, forming an inter-American common market (in Brazil, Argentina, Paraguay and Uraguay), to establishing pen pals.

The students will take their proposals to Washington, D.C., Dec. 10-15, and present them at the MOAS General Assembly, a student simulation of the proceeding of the Organization of American States — an actual regional agency within the United Nations.

The young ambassadors from MHS have the distinction of being one of the two public school teams in the United States selected to participate in the MOAS General Assembly.

"Each team was given a different country to represent," said Walker. "Uruguay is one of the member nations of the OAS."

During their short stay in Washington, the students will experience a whirlwind of activities. Their agenda includes several days of intensive meeting, caucusing, lobbying, and consulting with student delegates, faculty advisors and foreign dignitaries. Also on the agenda will be trips to various landmarks in the nation's capital.

"Simply said, MOAS gives these students from West Texas a window on a much larger world," Walker said.

"You meet a lot of people in a short amount of time," said Geoff Simmons, MHS senior and veteran MOAS delegate. "And we will be sightseeing the first day we are

Mediation offers court alternative

■ A program, sponsored by the local bar association, gives litigants a chance to use a third party mediator to reach a settlement.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Although courts settle disputes, justice doesn't always remedy severed relationships between the parties involved.

And if litigants need to work with one another in the future — such as parents following a child custody settlement — lingering anger from the courtroom battle can lessen their cooperation.

But when parties in a lawsuit are able to settle the dispute among themselves, rather than by a judge or jury, the outcome is often more amiable.

One way to do that is through Alternative Dispute Resolution (ADR), which, in one procedure, uses mediators to help litigants reach a settlement agreeable to both sides.

"This is a way for people to be in charge of their own destiny ... settle disputes based on needs rather than power," said W. Burgess Wade, a local attorney active in such a program sponsored by the Midland County Bar Association in conjunction with judges in Midland County.

"It's a procedure available for litigants whereby they can have a settlement conference with a neutral third party," Wade said.

The point is to help people avoid litigation costs, time and the frustration of having to go to court, Wade said.

Such a program, Settlement Days Project, sponsored by the local bar association, began in October and will continue into December. This is the first time the association has conducted an ADR mediator project.

About 10 attorneys, who have had 40 hours of mediator training, are working in the program.

"Twenty cases so far ... will ultimately be disposed off the docket in Midland," Wade said.

"It can happen that the attorney for the party can request it. Or the judge, on his own motion, can direct the parties to mediation," Wade said.

Most of the cases in Midland — all from state district courts or state county courts at law — have been court directed, Wade said.

Following such a court order, parties have up to 10 days in which to object to the mediation.

"So far we've received a very cooperative attitude from attorneys involved," Wade said.

Practiced nationwide, ADR, with about an 80 percent success rate, doesn't please everyone.

Those who aren't responsive to mediation "go back and have their day in court ... there are cases where parties have to have a third party — a judge or jury — decide for them," Wade said.

Where mediation does work, the outcome is usually more satisfying to both parties than a court-determined settlement, Wade said.

"Overall it's better than taking it to court because parties can structure their own settlement," Wade said.

"They leave with a sense of 'Look what I did.' In a courtroom, they walk away and think 'Look what they (a judge or jury) did to me,' " Wade said.

As in a courtroom, a mediation session has its own set of rules that must be abided by. One overall rule is "convenience and courtesy," Wade said.

"You don't have that combative attitude" sometimes found in the courtroom, Wade said. Mediation sessions, which usually last a day, are more open, informal, and the parties come in with a good faith effort to resolve the dispute, Wade said.

And instead of letting the attorneys argue a case in court or hash out a settlement out of court, in mediation the actual litigants are

We would be sitting in the den watching a sporting event, usually a football game, on TV. We'd each be working on a drink of some kind and a bag of chips would be ripped open on the coffee table in front of us.

Ott

I'd be smoking.

He wouldn't.

A steady stream of chatter, dealing with a variety of unimportant subjects, would be flowing from our lips. All the while, our eyes would be darting back and forth to the TV, particularly when a loud roar would emerge from the set.

When my team would do something foolish, which seemed to be every five minutes, I would slam my fist into the table and utter a naughty word or two.

"Can you believe that (fill in the blank)?" I would groan while staring helplessly at the heavens.

My dad would shrug his shoulders, smile knowingly and change the subject.

I would eventually calm down, prepare myself another drink and we would continue our father-son conversation.

The above scene would then be repeated. Over and over.

Finally, the game would end. My team would lose. Another childish outburst would result. I would slam my fist into the table and kick whatever happened to be handy, usually an expensive piece of furniture.

"They ought to fire that wimpy little (fill in the blank)," I would fume. "He can't coach his way out of a paper sack."

It was at that point that my dad would invariably offer up his words of wisdom.

He would say, "As you get older, Gary, you'll realize that the world doesn't end just because your favorite team loses a game."

I thought he was nuts. And told him so. Repeatedly.

The idea. Me? Not caring who wins the big game? Get outta here.

A funny thing happened to me on my relentless journey to hitting 39. My dad turned out to be right. Why is it that the older we get, the smarter our parents become?

Games just don't seem all that important any longer. In fact, they have become just that — games. You win some, you lose some.

No longer do I lose sleep over the outcome. Rather than screaming insults at the TV screen, I now find myself yawning and looking for an old black-and-white Fred Astaire movie to watch. Instead of marveling at a wide receiver's uncanny ability to make a one-handed catch, I now watch in awe as Ginger Rogers glides down a spiraling staircase while a Cole Porter song tumbles out of the sky.

I'm not sure when this change first occurred. It didn't happen overnight. That, I'm sure of. It was more gradual. Slowly but surely, though, I began to lose interest.

The so-called "big" game wasn't really all that big.

I began concurring with Duane Thomas, the old Dallas Cowboys malcontent, who once said of the Super Bowl: "If this is the 'ultimate' game, why are they playing it again next year?"

That was becoming my way of thinking. I was adopting a so-what attitude. I'm even feeling it today, as those bitter rivals — Dallas and Washington — prepare for yet another shootout in the nation's capital.

Excuse me, I feel a yawn coming on.

This peculiar brand of boredom probably peaked during last month's World Series. Atlanta and Minnesota went head-to-head for seven glorious games, three of which went into extra innings.

Sportswriters were calling it the greatest of Fall Classics. TV ratings soared. Millions of viewers sat on the edge of their seats in anticipation of the next pitch. Jane Fonda was at the ballpark alongside Ted Turner. So were Jimmy and Rosalyn Carter. Every game, it seemed, had a suspenseful ending.

It was baseball at its best.

A nation was captivated. Little boys dreamed of being future stars. Old men fantasized about their pasts. In business offices across the nation, Americans stood around coffee machines debating the previous night's action.

Before, I would have been in the middle of the discussions, arguing my beliefs with great fervor, even ridiculing those who would dare disagree with me.

This time I didn't. Instead, I sat on the sidelines and let others voice their opinions. When someone would direct a question my way, I would merely shrug and say, "It looked like a bad call to me."

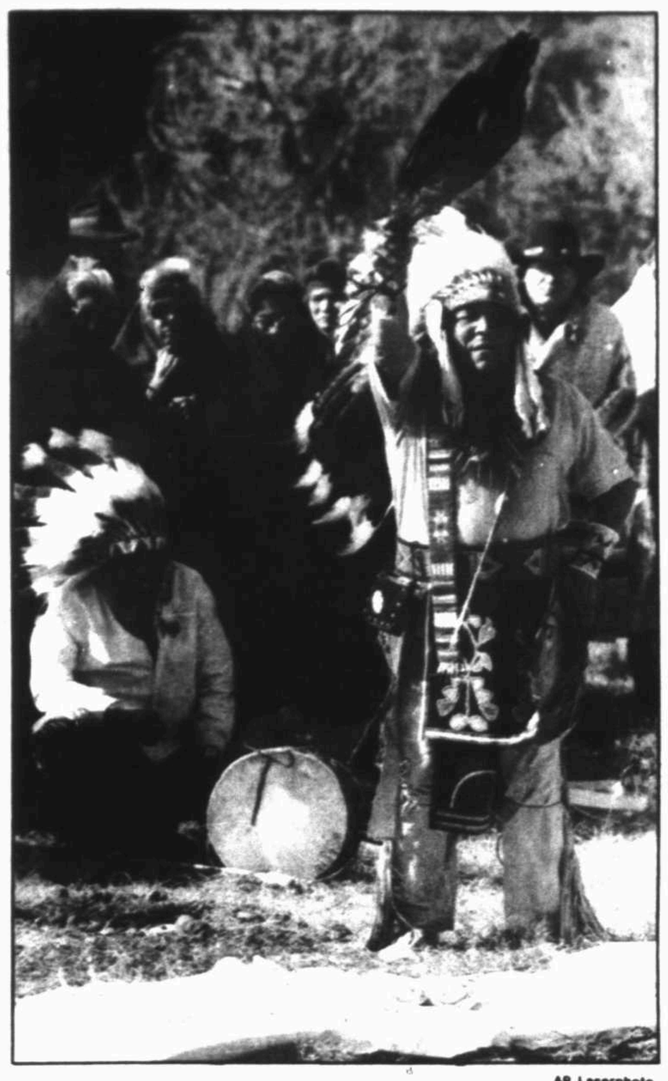

A safe response in any baseball discussion.

The fact is, though, I didn't see the call. I couldn't. I had switched channels in the sixth inning.

Something about Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers co-starring in "Top Hat."

Lord help me. I do believe I'm getting old.

Fort hosts reburial of Indian children

FORT HOOD (AP) — Centuries-old skeletal remains of more than 40 American Indian children were reburied Saturday in a Comanche ceremony.

It was believed to be the first reburial of Indian remains on Army property.

Indians from across Texas and Oklahoma participated in songs, prayers and poems and then wrapped the bundled remains with toys, blankets, and beads before placing them in a mass grave near a sacred Comanche site on the huge Army post.

George "Woogie" Watchetaker, a Comanche medicine man from Elgin, Okla., conducted the service. He wore tribal clothes and a war bonnet.

Using an eagle wing, he fanned the embers from a small fire of cedar twigs to draw smoke over the grave and children's remains. Lucas Greywolf, a Choctaw Indian from Corpus Christi, said the smoke purifies the area.

Addressing the crowd of about 75 people, Watchetaker, said he was brokenhearted over the deaths of the children, but added that their lives proved that, "the Native American will always be here — forever."

"These ancestors, they have taught us to keep going and to learn. We have to learn how to live with one another," the 75-year-old man said.

The remains had been discovered near the Army post by an off-duty soldier about five years ago. The bones apparently had been unearthed by looters trying to peddle artifacts on the black market.

Since the discovery, the remains had been stored at a laboratory on the military installation.

Fort Hood archaeologist Jack Jackson said the bones were mostly of children who could have died up to 750 years ago. But, he said, that he did not know exactly how old they were. He said the tribal origin of the remains is unknown, but Comanches had lived in the area until the late 1850s.

Jackson said there was no way to know how the children died, but said the cause could have been an epidemic.

Comanche tribal leaders in Oklahoma and the Austin-based American Indian Resource and Education Coalition reached an agreement this month with Fort Hood to allow the remains to be reburied near a "medicine wheel" discovered on the post in 1989.

The medicine wheel consists of two large circles of stone, one inside the other, connected by 14 pairs of stone spokes or "rays." The wheel is believed to have been used for a type of solar or astrological observance. There are about 50 to 60 wheels known in existence, but this is the only one of its kind in Texas.

Fort Hood has set aside five acres where the wheel and gravesite are located for use by the Indians. The site was declared a Comanche inter-tribal cemetery.

The children's remains were bundled in white cloth and carried to the gravesite on a traditional "travois," a kind of sled dragged by a horse. The procession included tribal elders and women wrapped in black blankets.

Although the ceremony was Comanche, there were Indians from different tribes attending the service. Tim Perkins, a Fort Hood fireman, who is of Iroquois descent, led the horse.

Al Mouse, a Cherokee Indian from Austin, said it was the first time he had been to such a ceremony. "It gave me a real spiritual feeling. These traditional ways are getting lost. This ought to help to let people know its OK to be an Indian," he said.

Angelina Mendez, also of Austin, said, "It was sad in one way because it reminds us of the genocide of Native Americans.

MISD: Debate could boil down to opinion in grades four, five, and six) students could find themselves in new surroundings (a freshman school) without the circle of their junior high schoolmates.

On the other hand, some parents say mixing the junior highs with students from both districts fosters friendships which prevents divisiveness between the MHS Bulldogs and the LHS Rebels in later years.

Becky Mims, a parent with two children in MISD, said that her husband recently celebrated a combined 20-year-reunion of MHS and LHS students.

"Friends from his junior high, which was San Jacinto, went to both high schools," Ms. Mims said. "They had friends from both districts."

She said having friends at a "rival" high school would be less likely if "that rivalry starts at the seventh grade instead of the ninth grade."

Lydia Jones, a mother with two children in MHS district, said, "The Bulldogs have it hard enough with a smaller band and less enthusiasm for their football team. The things you remember from high school are not always the academics. You remember the teachers and the extracurricular activities. I would hate to see us develop into a situation like Odessa where football is emphasized from the first day of school in junior high."

"In a pure feeder system, coaches start grooming quarterbacks and athletes as early as possible," said Ricardo Torres, MISD executive director of secondary education.

"Coming up through the instructional ranks, I feel like we are in the business of preparing kids to be productive, not to be a tremendous trumpet player or quarterback. I want to see students achieve academically, to be competitive academically and become National Merit Scholar Finalists."

Torres allowed that strong extracurricular programs "enhance the total picture" and are not without merit.

He said that no matter how the junior highs feed the high schools, the only variable should be "teacher resources."

"I don't buy the argument that a pure feeder system enforces greater accountability. Teachers are accountable from Day One. They are appraised to see how they respond to students and students respond to them," Torres said.

"The mixed system we have now keeps students academically competitive," Torres said. "It doesn't identify or single them out and make it a foregone conclusion that one school will be better than the other. I have been here 21 years and I think the district has a commitment to keeping those two high schools equal."

Torres said studies on cooperative learning indicate that "students are more successful when they learn from each other in a cooperative and congenial setting."

"We don't want things to get like they are in Odessa where one school is perceived to be better than another," he said. "If a school is perceived to be mediocre then that is the aspiration the students will go for. We don't want them to aim for the brass ring, we want them to aim for the gold ring every time."

Ms. Jones said, "Will a pure feeder system be better for our kids? It depends on who you ask. It's boiling down to merely a matter of opinion. Show me the studies that prove one system is better than the other."

"From my standpoint all kids will not benefit equitably from a pure feeder system," Torres said. "And we have a commitment to all kids, more than 21,000 as a matter of fact. It's an awesome responsibility. We need to quit tallying up win and lose columns and look at the total picture."

MOAS: Course prepares students for world

there — which is a lot of fun."

David Barkley, a junior, said that a lot of hours of preparation went into drawing up the proposals. "Geoff and I worked on the internal budget of the OAS, how they fund things, the cost of living, personal costs and other budget considerations proposed by the general assembly."

"We were trying to find excess funds and decide how they should be allocated," David said.

Geoff noted that he was ready for a good debate.

"I really enjoy the debating," he said. "And this (MOAS) class gives you good research skills."

Gavin Hudgeons, another senior who participated in last year's MOAS convention, said, "We will meet a lot of students from the prep schools in the east and the northeast. We will also be the only Texas delegates from a public high school." Gavin said one or two other students in Texas may be delegates.

Gavin said the students will take proposals and "set an example for the other countries."

"You can talk all you want to about changing things," Gavin said, "but setting an example is another thing."

MHS senior Janna Fulfer said that she and Gavin worked on a proposal to implement Texas' D-FY-IT program. The drug abuse prevention program — which began in Smith County and is branching out nationwide — was recently begun in Midland schools.

The voluntary drug testing program awards students with incentives for staying drug free.

"In Uruguay, they have drug programs based on illegal trade and trafficking, basically on enforcing the drug trade," Janna said. "We wanted to stop the demand for drugs by hitting on abuse and education."

Walker said the students prepared proposals on issues as simple as establishing pen pals to foster cultural awareness to more complex issues such as promoting political and economic stability.

Several students noted that the addition of the seventh period at MHS this year allowed them to take the MOAS course during school hours, rather than "trying to find time to do this after school."

Students said they benefited from the course even if it wasn't in their field of study.

"I plan to be a physical therapist," Geoff said.

"And I plan to get into premed," David said.

Other MOAS students at MHS are Dani Brune, Ashley Bunnell, Cara Hendrickson, Josh Knight, Burns McKinney, Herd Midkiff, Rob Patrick, Roseanne Sheffield and George St. Clair.

MHS teacher Walker is the club sponsor.

RESOLVE: Mediator acts as basically the communicator

(From 1C)

allowed to express their feelings, thoughts and perspectives on the matter.

Mediation usually begins with a joint meeting in a large conference room to review the ground rules. Depending on the case, parties may then be mediated together, separately or a combination.

The sessions are confidential, and one party can elaborate on why he feels a certain way to the mediator without that information being passed to the second party if so desired.

The parties reach the settlement; the mediator basically only acts as communicator.

Attorneys involved in the Settlement Days Project are donating their time to act as mediators. The local bar association plans to sponsor another such session in the spring.

Duke considers running in Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — David Duke, the former Ku Klux Klan leader, is considering a run for president in the Republican Party primary in Texas, where his campaign advisers say he could "do quite well."

Texas GOP officials say Duke has no chance of winning the primary, but are concerned that Duke's presence in the March 10 ballot could "contaminate" President Bush's message, the Austin American-Statesman reported Saturday.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Driver injured

Staff Report

Jerry Lynn Warren, a 50-year-old dispatcher for the Texas Department of Public Safety in Midland, was listed in satisfactory condition late Saturday in Midland's Memorial Hospital and Medical Center following injuries suffered in a head-on collision of two pickup trucks.

Warren, who was driving southbound on Loop 250 north of the U.S. Highway 80 overpass on his way to work, collided with a north-bound pickup that was traveling in the wrong lane of traffic at 3:20 p.m. Saturday.

The 57-year-old driver of the truck traveling the wrong way is expected to be charged with driving while intoxicated (DWI), according to Midland police. He was treated at the hospital and was released.

Father fights off would-be kidnapper

Jaime Salgado attacked and fought off a would-be kidnapper who had tried to unstrap his 11-month-old daughter from her car-seat late Saturday in the parking lot at Midland Park Mall, Midland police reported.

The 32-year-old father, who had taken his daughter strolling while he was shopping in the mall, had placed his daughter in his car and had strapped her in her protective car-seat, police said.

While he was putting away the stroller, a masked man got out of a 1975 dark-blue Chevrolet van, which had pulled up beside Salgado's car, ran to the passenger side of the car, opened the door and was trying remove the child, police reported.

Salgado promptly ran after the would-be kidnapper, police said, and a fight ensued.

Salgado fought off the masked man, who returned to the van and its awaiting driver and fled the mall.

Police were continuing to investigate the incident late Saturday night.

DEATHS

William Cooper II

Davis inaugurated

PLAINVIEW (AP) — Dr. Wallace Davis Jr. was inaugurated Saturday as the 11th president of Wayland Baptist University.

Janice Davis, his wife, held the Bible as James Henry of Midland, chairman of the board of trustees, officially proclaimed Davis president of the 84-year-old institution.

In his response, Davis called for Wayland to serve as an example to other institutions.

"Wayland Baptist University stands uniquely positioned to serve as a model for university reform," he said.

TV program spurs investigation of Tilton's ministry

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — The attorney for evangelist Robert Tilton said Saturday he would invite Texas, Oklahoma and federal authorities to review the ministry's records.

J.C. Joyce told reporters that he would open financial records of Tilton's Word of Faith Family Church in Farmers Branchto "anyone who wants to investigate this criminally."

Joyce did not contact authorities' offices individually; he instead made the offer during a news conference.

The invitation is in response to an unflattering profile of Tilton on ABC-TV's news program PrimeTime Live, which Joyce said suggested that Tilton had committed mail fraud.

"I've got a client who has a bigger audience than they do, and I have the truth," Joyce said. "I say, 'Come ahead and make the investigation.'

"This is 'Pick on the Christian Day.' The evangelist is so easy to pick on, but they picked on the wrong evangelist because this evangelist has done nothing wrong."

Joyce's announcement came the day after the Dallas district attorney's office said it would investigate how donations to Tilton's ministry are spent and collected.

The Texas attorney general's office also said it would look into Word of Faith expenditures and contributions.

Joyce said he would open the ministry's records for the Dallas district attorney, Tulsa district attorney, U.S. attorneys, FBI and any state attorneys general. But not the media.

"This is 'Pick on the Christian Day.' The evangelist is so easy to pick on, but they picked on the wrong evangelist because this evangelist has done nothing wrong.'

— J.C. Joyce

"We've seen what the media does. No church has the obligation to tell the media anything about anything," Joyce said.

Ted Steinke, assistant district attorney in Dallas, said Friday that information broadcast Thursday night on "Prime Time Live" was "so compelling" that a thorough investigation into the matter is necessary.

"We're not accusing anyone of anything," Steinke said.

Steinke's announcement came a day after an assistant Texas attorney general said his office will investigate.

"Our inquiry is going to be directed primarily at learning whether or not this money is going to help people's souls or just line Brother Bob's wallet," Steve Gardner told WFAA-TV Thursday after previewing the program.

The program said Tilton has the fastest-growing ministry in television. Tilton received $80 million a year from his followers, PrimeTime estimated.

Tilton likened the media to Satan in an address to his viewers Friday.

"Go ahead and listen to those negative newspaper, magazine and television articles," said Tilton. "Go ahead and listen to all that negativism. The devil would not be making a play for God's servants over the last couple, three, four, five years if there wasn't something God's trying to do.

"... I'm taking the sword of our television, bless God, and I'm telling you what God says. Take that devil. Take that devil. It is written," Tilton said while clutching a Bible in his hand.

Joyce said he will file a complaint Monday with the Tulsa district attorney's office accusing ABC employees of stealing documents from a Tulsa bank.

Joyce said the documents created the impression that Tilton had committed mail fraud.

The program used hidden cameras to penetrate his ministry. Jim Moore, president of Response Media, which handles Tilton's direct-mail campaign, said computers help target donors whose responses are opened by an Oklahoma bank.

The donors' pleas are thrown in the trash, PrimeTime said.

According to the network program, Tilton spends more money on Dallas-area billboards than he spends on missions he claims to support around the world.

Tilton was not available early Saturday, according to a worker at his ministry.

Judge refuses to drop indictments

AUSTIN (AP) — A judge has refused to dismiss one of two misdemeanor ethics indictments against House Speaker Gib Lewis.

Lewis, D-Fort Worth, was indicted by a Travis County grand jury in December 1990 on charges of accepting an illegal gift by allegedly allowing a San Antonio law firm to pay taxes for a Fort Worth company in which he owned a half-interest.

Lewis also was indicted on a charge of violating the state's financial disclosure laws by failing to list his ownership of that company. He has denied any wrongdoing.

Lewis' attorney, Tim Evans, argued two weeks ago before State District Judge Bob Perkins, that the indictment was not valid because it was improperly worded.

Perkins, who had taken the matter under advisement, rejected that argument, according to the ruling released Friday. He earlier had denied a request by Lewis' attorneys to dismiss the other indictment on similar grounds.

Lewis faces a Jan. 27 trial in the case.

Proposal would give employees stake in airline

HOUSTON (AP) — A proposed reorganization plan by Continental Airlines would give employees and creditors a stake in the beleaguered airline.

Robert Ferguson, Continental's chief executive officer, said in a taped telephone message Friday night to employees that the plan calls for the conversion of unsecured creditors' claims into part ownership and would include a share in ownership for Continental's workers.

Ferguson said the plan would wipe out the holdings of existing common and preferred shareholders, the Houston Chronicle reported Saturday.

Houston-based Continental filed for federal bankruptcy protection last December. Since its filing, the carrier has laid off hundreds of employees and arranged to sell millions of dollars in assets.

It recently reached an agreement to sell its Air Micronesia partnership for $290 million and some of its operations at New York's LaGuardia Airport for $61 million.

Continental has the exclusive right until Thursday to file a reorganization plan without facing competing proposals from other parties.

Its proposed reorganization plan calls for a flight schedule, at least initially, that would be comparable to the company's existing schedule, Ferguson said.

Continental has had negotiations with Northwest Airlines about a possible merger. But Ferguson said Friday that while Northwest officials are still interested in Continental, the Minnesota airline cannot promise to complete a deal anytime soon.

"Northwest continues to express an interest in a merger," Ferguson said. But, he said, in a meeting with Northwest officials in New York this week, "a Northwest spokesman expressed the sentiment they were not confident that any transaction could be completed in the near term."

Northwest is embroiled in a dispute with Midway Airlines over a botched deal under which Northwest would have purchased the now-defunct Midway.

In addition to Northwest, Continental has had discussions with a number of other possible investors and merger partners, including USAir, Ross Perot Jr. and Los Angeles tycoon Marvin Davis. However, those talks were fruitless.

Most recently, Continental has had discussions with Houston financier Charles Hurwitz about making an investment in the company. Continental officials have declined to comment on the status of those talks.

Continental officials met through the week with the carrier's creditors to discuss its proposed reorganization plan.

Typo is culprit in phone glitch for 12 million customers

DALLAS (AP) — A Plano, Texas communication firm says a single mistyped character is what led to last summer's disruption in phone service for more than 12 million customers around the country.

The typographical error was contained in a line of instructions distributed nationwide by magnetic tape by DSC Communications Corp. of Plano.

It contributed to the phone outages in Pittsburgh, Washington, D.C., San Francisco and Los Angeles from June 26 to July 2.

"We're very, very embarrassed that it happened," DSC chairman James L. Donald told The Dallas Morning News in Saturday editions.

"It just wipes you out. It's just such a little bitty difference there, but such a large effect upon other things. We just wish it had never happened," he said.

The error was contained in computer coding that was supposed to fix an earlier problem.

But instead of the "D" needed for the code "patch," a "6" was typed in accidentally.

However, the error alone did not take down the Pacific Bell and Bell Atlantic systems last summer.

The error, which occurred in software that controlled signals regulating telephone traffic, was the catalyst.

Operators at signal transfer sites who loaded the mistyped patch unknowingly sabotaged their own systems, according to the studies performed by DSC and Bell Communications Research.

The final result was that for several days phone companies in those four cities lost control of phone traffic.

The error triggered backed up phone calls which eventually caused outages in several cities, according to the DSC and Bell research.

Other problems uncovered by the company's report to the Federal Communications Commission include faulty data that could not be recognized by signaling equipment and failed clocks used to synchronize events in the system.

The DSC employee responsible for the error is known by the firm, but his name was not disclosed by company officials.

"He's conscientious, he works hard, he wants everything to be right," said Donald.

DSC designed and installed switching networks for Bell Atlantic and Pacific Bell.

DSC is a young, but fast-growing company that provides equipment and computer software programs for telephone networks.

The firm started as a six-person company in 1981. It grew rapidly in the mid-1980s developing the so-called "intelligent networks" that emerged as phone companies switched from analog to digital technology. Its customers include most of the Bell operating companies.

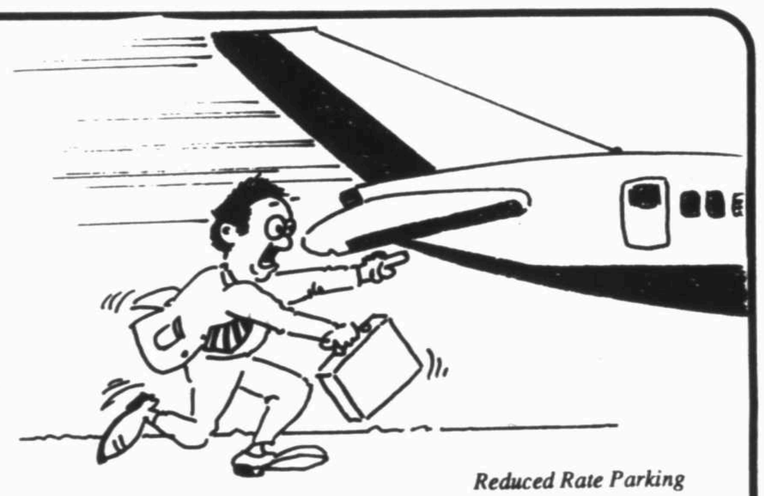

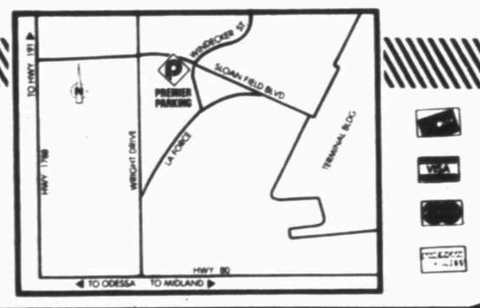

DSC now employs about 4,000 people, including 3,000 in the Dallas area. The company earned $20.1 million on revenue of $519.3 million last year.

The Bell and DSC report will be sent to the FCC next week.

County investigates dumping of animal carcasses

AZLE (AP) — Authorities are down playing speculation that the dumping of at least 100 animal carcasses in a wooded Parker County area is related to cult activity.

Some of the gutted remains — from goats, sheep, turkeys and deer — had been dead only a few days when authorities found them along two rural roads Thursday. Humane Society of North Texas investigator Reed Young said he believed the other remains were placed in the area as far back as a year ago.

Parker County Sheriff's Department spokesman Allen Beadel said Saturday that a cult specialist from the Haltom City Police Department did not find any cult markings at the site. Officials have not ruled out cult involvement entirely, though.

"To be real honest, we're still puzzled by it," he said. Authorities are pursuing a few leads in the case, but Beadel declined to elaborate.

Young, whose group estimates that 500 to 1,000 animal carcasses were dumped in the area, said he was astounded by the number of animals and the variety of animals involved.

"I don't think anybody's seen anything like this around here. It's a real puzzle," Young said.

Officials from the Parker County Sheriff's Department put the number at closer to 100 animals.

"It's really hard to tell. There are so many skeletal remains," Beadel said. "It's not like we can go out there and count bodies."

Sexual organs from some of the carcasses had been removed; other animals appeared to have been starved to death.

Carcass samples have been sent to a local veterinarian to test for communicable diseases, Beadel said.

The remains were discovered about five miles northwest of Azle after a property owner in the area called the Humane Society. Azle is 17 miles northwest of Fort Worth.

Some remains were found near creeks that are part of the Trinity River watershed, which feeds much of Tarrant County's water supply.

Jo Schweikhard, county emergency management coordinator, said no threat existed to water supplies.

Sheriff Ben Whiteman said his department has not heard any recent reports of large numbers of missing animals. Beadel said the animals appeared to be farm animals rather than pets.

Marijuana supporters lead vigil

SAN MARCOS (AP) — A man arrested for marijuana possession continued his hunger strike Saturday, a day after about 30 protesters shouting "Let Joe go" demonstrated outside the Hays County Jail.

Joe Gaddy, 30, was arrested this spring after walking into the San Marcos police station and lighting a marijuana cigarette. He was sentenced to four months in jail and began serving a 120-day sentence for possession of marijuana on Nov. 14. He has refused all meals since then.

A dispatcher at the Hays County Jail said Saturday that Gaddy was still in the jail's infirmary and still refusing to eat.

"We feel Joe is a martyr for the environmental movement," said John Gibbs, president of the San Antonio chapter of the National Organization to Reform Marijuana Laws.

Supporters at Friday's vigil wore green armbands made to look like marijuana leaves. They carried signs and milled around near the jail parking lot, talking about the need to legalize marijuana for environmental purposes.

Gibbs described the protest as a "joint effort" by his, Austin, and the Bryan-College Station area chapters.

Those who favor legalizing marijuana say it can be used for environmentally sound purposes such as helping to make paper, rather than cutting down trees, and as a clean-burning fuel.

Larry Haynes, jail administrator, said Gaddy was transferred Tuesday to the jail's infirmary.

EDUCATION

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Busy but short week on tap for college

By H.A. Tuck

This is a busy week, but a short one for both students and faculty. The college is closing on Thursday and Friday for the Thanksgiving holidays.

Tuck

But before leaving, most of the final touches will be made for the fifth annual "Midland College Merry Christmas", which starts on Tuesday, Dec. 3. Just mark down the date and the time, 6:30 p.m., and we'll tell you more next week.

While most of the students are taking it easy for Thanksgiving, a few will be almost too busy for turkey and dressing. Those are the Chaparral basketball players who will be competing in the Whataburger Odessa College Classic, which begins Thursday and lasts through Saturday.

It's a great place to retreat from an overdose of football as well as the last opportunity for most fans to see the team before the Christmas break.

MC plays Lamar, Colo., at 4:30 p.m. Thursday, takes on Conners State College of Oklahoma at 8 p.m. Friday, and finishes against Ranger Junior College on Saturday at 2:45 p.m.

Final game of the fall campaign for the team is scheduled in Roswell on Saturday, Dec. 7. It's also the conference opener for the Chaparrals.

Early registration for the spring semester is limited this week to Monday and Tuesday. With the alphabetical system being used, those whose last names begin with S-Z should come on Monday and those who are M-R on Tuesday.

If there are unusual circumstances, you may come one of those days, even if your last name begins with A-L.

After Thanksgiving, early registration resumes for one week. The schedule for that week is: Dec. 2, A-E; Dec. 3, S-Z; Dec. 4, M-R; Dec. 5, F-L; and Dec. 6, A-E.

Dec. 6 is the final day to register and pay fees before the regular day of registration on Jan. 8. Spring semester classes start Jan. 13.

Presentation of awards for the fourth annual Hilda Simmons Levitt Poetry Contest is scheduled for 10:15 a.m. Wednesday. David Daniel, college president, will make the awards of cash and plaques to the three winners.

The ceremony takes place in Chaparral Hall of the Student Center.

There's no exhibit on display right now at the McCormick Gallery.

The next show also is the final one for the fall semester. It's the traditional student show, which is scheduled Dec. 3-15.

Some of you might have noticed that the spring course bulletin didn't list anything about Aviation Maintenance Technology classes. That's because the Federal Aviation Administration will not allow such information or advertising prior to final approval of facilities, instructional personnel, and some other requirements. There were more than 130 persons on a list to receive applications which were to be mailed out this week. However, there are only 48 planned student slots for the spring semester.

The FAA is due to make its final inspection in mid-December on the facilities at the leased hanger at Midland International Airport. If the remodeling, and other requirements, meet FAA specifications, the college will notify selected students just prior to the start of the Christmas holidays. Those selected then would enroll for the Aviation Maintenance Technology classes which would start in January.

It's a very tight timetable, but everything seems to be progressing on schedule right now.

The list of topics and speakers for the First International Symposium sponsored by The American Airpower Heritage Museum is breath-taking.

"Prelude to Pearl Harbor — The Interwar Years" takes place Dec. 3-6 at the Holiday Inn Conference Center. It's being coordinated by Hardin-Simmons University, with Midland College handling all the registrations.

Brochures about the Symposium are available from several Midland sources, including MC. Or call the special registration number at Midland College, (915) 685-4756, for more information.

Donna Thompson is offering a new course during the spring on "Psychology of Women". It's listed as Psychology 2308 and will meet on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday from 9-9:50 a.m.

This is a course for both men and women that focuses on the psychological topics related to sex differences and sex roles in our society.

Just register for the class in the Student Services area of the Student Center or call 685-4501 for more information.

Only seven classes remain on the Continuing Education Department's schedule for the fall semester. This week's listing is just one class: Christmas Candy Making meets once, on Nov. 25, from 7-9 p.m.

Coming Dec. 2 and 3 is First Aid/CPR, from 6-10 p.m. both nights.

Aerobics two-week class that meets from 7-8:30 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays from Dec. 3-Dec. 12.

Solving the Dilemma of Fabrics and Patterns is a one-night class, Dec. 5, from 7-9:30 p.m.

Infant and Child CPR meets Tuesday and Wednesday, Dec. 10-11, from 6-10 p.m.

Jitterbug (how to do that dance) is Tuesday, Dec. 10 and 17 from 7:30-9:30 p.m.

Finally, there is a CPA Professional Education course on Dec. 17 from 7:30-9:30 p.m.

Registration for these, as well as spring semester non-credit courses, is handled in the Continuing Education Office, Administration Building, or call 685-4518 for more information.

H.A. Tuck is public relations director at Midland College.

Mine warfare operations may be moved

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Navy and congressional sources say the Navy's mine warfare command and training operations may be moved to Ingleside from Charleston, S.C.

A Navy plan expected to be released by mid-December will include ship assignments to all Navy ports, including Naval Station Ingleside, the Corpus Christi Caller-Times reported Friday.

The plan is expected to further consolidate mine-warfare operations and training at Ingleside, and will include specific vessels to be assigned to the South Texas Homeport.

"We expect that over time the mine-warfare command may locate here," said Naval Station Ingleside spokesman Lt. Cmdr. Bruce Cole. "There is a consensus that would make sense, and they could transfer some training functions here as well."

The Charleston Naval Base spokesman told The Associated Press he had no comment.

"There is a lot of discussions of the mine warfare command looking at different options," Lt. Cmdr. Max Allen said Saturday.

Cyclists plan Earth to Venus trip

PLAINVIEW (AP) — Texans are used to astronomical distances, but the 425 miles from Earth to Venus is a long haul on a bicycle.

Rick Wilson and Clare Riepman plan to make the trip between the two Texas towns in two days, setting a mixed tandem record while pumping up their marathon abilities in a grueling trip on a bicycle built for two.

Most point-to-point events are marked by state borders, but there's a lot of space between borders in Texas and some of the towns even have out-of-this-world names.

So, instead of riding from one side of the state to the other, the cyclists plan to ride from Earth to Venus, said Wilson, 38.

The cyclists are starting their ride today in Earth, about 40 miles west of Plainview. They hope to arrive Sunday morning in Venus, about 20 miles south of Dallas-Fort Worth.

Traveling with them will be a three-member support team and a judge who will authenticate the point-to-point record.

No one has ever documented a point-to-point mixed tandem ride from Earth to Venus, so the couple should have no problem setting the record.

The point-to-point ride is sanctioned by the Ultra Marathon Cycling Association, which sanctions the Race Across America and other long-distance cycling events.

Both riders are experienced cyclists, having competed in many events.

MC offers special psychology course

Staff Report

Women are different from men. But what makes them different? That's the subject of a special topics psychology course being offered at Midland College during the 1992 spring semester.

Psychology 2308, Psychology of Women, is planned as an in-depth discussion course which will meet from 9-9:50 a.m. Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. Dr. Donna Thompson is the course instructor.

"This is a course for both men and women which will focus on the psychological topics related to sex differences and sex roles in our society," Dr. Thompson noted.

Among the questions to be explored are the ways in which men and women differ, the ways they are alike, and where the differences originate. For instance, why is it expected that boys play football and girls play with dolls.

The course also will deal with such issues as teen-age pregnancy, abortion, rape, battered women, job discrimination, and sexual harassment.

"We would like to have both men and women enrolled in the course so we might have a balanced discussion of the issues which will be raised," Dr. Thompson said.

Persons interested may enroll through Dec. 6 at the Student Services area, Student Center.

More information may be obtained by calling Dr. Thompson at 685-4649 or the Student Services office at 685-4501.

Longtime Midland tradition comes to an end

By Lyn Miller

A tradition comes to an end in Midland.

No longer will the giant 55-foot Christmas tree, with its oil pipe trunk and 400 Douglas fir branches, be erected in the Centennial Plaza by city of Midland Parks Department employees.

That tradition, which began with the construction of the first of the giant trees in Dennis the Menace Park in 1967, has been a focal point in Midland each holiday season.

In its place will stand a new "live" Christmas tree, an Alderica pine approximately 20 feet tall, sparkling with Christmas lights, to be enjoyed this Christmas season and seasons to come, as well as throughout the year, by all who drive by or visit the Centennial Plaza.

The planting of the "live" tree by the city is in conjunction with efforts by Keep Midland Beautiful, Inc., to encourage citizens to "buy" a "live" tree this year for Christmas, and when the season is over, to plant the tree on private or public land.

"Cut" Christmas trees may not be discarded in city parks this year, and to do so may result in a fine of up to $500. Those trees may be taken to one or two locations where they will be mulched for use in public landscaped areas. The locations are Wild River Canyon, 5200 Princeton; or Hogan Park, Softball Field No. 7 (behind the Armory on Lamesa Road).

The buying of live or artificial trees is encouraged by the city for the purpose of reducing the amount of valuable landfill space utilized unnecessarily by the discarded trees each year.

The "new" Christmas tree in Centennial Plaza will take on a festive glow at the Midland Jaycees' Annual "Tree Lighting Ceremony" on Dec. 6, at 6 p.m. Holiday music will be provided by the Goddard Junior High band and the Dellwood Sunshine Singers, filling the air in downtown Midland with the spirit of the Holiday Season. Master of ceremonies for the occasion will be Wayne Counts of the Jaycees.

The crowd will be treated to hot wassail, candy canes, hot chocolate and hay rides, with the highlight of the festive event being the arrival of a very special guest on a big fire engine ... Santa Claus.

The city, co-sponsor for the event, is pleased to help usher in the holiday season by providing the beautiful Christmas display and ceremony for the citizens of Midland and surrounding areas, and extends a very special Holiday greeting to everyone for a very Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Lyn Miller, an employee at City Hall, coordinates the information for this column.

140 Card Of Thanks

The families of Brenda Branch want to say Thank You with grateful hearts to a loving, giving community.

The only other place we find such compassion is recorded in Luke 10:30-37. You certainly have done likewise.

Our hearts ache over the loss of our beloved Brenda but you, as our neighbors and friends, have made this time a little easier.

On behalf of the entire family and her one-year-old daughter, we say Thank You.

NO. B-38,215
DAPHNIE BLEDSOE AND WILBERT BLEDSOE
vs.
RODNEY CARL POOL AND KAREN POOL
IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF MIDLAND COUNTY, TEXAS
238TH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

CITATION BY PUBLICATION
"STATE OF TEXAS"

TO: RODNEY CARL POOL AND KAREN POOL FRANKLIN, Defendants:

Your are hereby commanded to appear and answer before before the MIDLAND COUNTY DISTRICT COURT 238TH JUDICIAL DISTRICT, in the MIDLAND COUNTY COURTHOUSE in Midland, Midland County, Texas at or before 10 o'clock a.m. after the expiration of 42 (forty-two) days from the date of issuance hereof, being at or before 10 o'clock a.m. on Monday, December 30, 1991, then and there to answer the petition of DAPHNIE BLEDSOE AND WILBERT BLEDSOE, Plaintiffs, in Cause No. B-38,215 styled DAPHNIE BLEDSOE AND WILBERT BLEDSOE VS. RODNEY CARL POOL AND KAREN POOL in which DAPHNIE BLEDSOE AND WILBERT BLEDSOE are Plaintiffs and RODNEY CARL POOL AND KAREN POOL are Defendants. The said petition, filed September 13, 1990, discloses that the nature of said suit is as follows:

On or about December 2, 1988, Plaintiff, Daphnie Bledsoe, was a passenger in an automobile, driven in a careful and prudent manner, in Midland, Midland County, Texas when suddenly and unexpectedly she was involved in a violent vehicular collision. Plaintiff alleges that Defendants would submit that the Defendant, Karen Pool was negligent in failing to exercise the degree of care, which a reasonable prudent driver should have observed. The Plaintiff would also submit that the Defendant, Rodney Carl Pool negligently entrusted said vehicle to Defendant, Karen Pool.

The Court has authority in this suit to enter any judgment.

Issued and given under my hand and seal of said Court at Midland, Texas, this the 13th day of November, 1991.

HOMES & CLASSIFIED

Warm and Welcoming

By Sonja Merrick Photos by Joe D. Williams Design by Phil Huchton

The door to this fine Old Midland home opens to a series of rooms that emit a sense of warmth and serenity. Of peace and tranquility after a long, stressful day. It says "welcome home."

The polished-brick foyer floor gleams, to the left formal living and dining areas beckon. Floors are covered by plush fawn-colored carpeting. A large window boasts a dramatic criss-cross wooden design, which allows light to flow through the room in an entrancing geometric pattern. Cornices, chair-back railing, carefully coordinated wallpapers show careful, loving attention to detail.

Straight ahead from the foyer is a gloriously large, yet cozy and informal living area. Floor-to-ceiling brick embraces a fireplace with heatolator. Other walls are wood-paneled. Cabinets and shelves are built-in. A wood-framed French door leads to the private, fenced-in back yard. Light streams in from a skylight

A left turn leads to a spacious kitchen with myriad storage. Recently updated, it has pullouts and all manner of organizational gadgetry within the drawers and cabinets.

The kitchen flows into a sunlit breakfast area. A festive leaf-motif wallpaper creates a feeling of a never-ending spring. A door opens to the back yard. Another door leads to a very large utility room, with cabinets, shelves, a built-in ironing board and space enough for a freezer.

To the left again is a huge bedroom. Large enough to be a master, it's ideal as a guest area, room for an older child or aging parent. It has its own large three-quarter bath.

Back to the foyer — a right turn leads down a hallway that has a row of closets on the left. To the right are two good-sized bedrooms, both with windows facing the beautifully landscaped front yard. A full bath lies between them.

To the left again, a gracious, spacious master bedroom complete with its own fireplace. There's plenty of room for a king-size bed and private sitting area. The master bathroom has a separate shower (marble, with its own skylight), marble tub and vanity.

A three-car garage has more than parking space. A half-bath and work area are situated there as well.

Other amenities in this four-bedroom, four-bath home include built-in range and self-cleaning oven, covered patio, ceiling fans, insulated windows. Also, circular drive and garage door opener.

The home is being offered By ReMax Realtors for $130,000.

Don Harvey: today's real estate market

Midland's real estate market has undergone a number of dramatic changes over the last few years. During the late 70s and early 80s, we experienced a demand which far exceeded the supply of homes available. This imbalance caused prices to reach an all-time high. Then, around 1982, came the downturn for the oil industry and things reversed.

Within a short time, following the onset of the downturn, we found ourselves with over 1700 homes on the market. Suddenly, our supply was far in excess of our demand and prices began to fall. The decline in values was pronounced through most of the remainder of the 80s. Values began to level off significantly in 1989 and were virtually level in 1990.

Year-to-date, 1991 has been a year with a slightly different complexion. We experienced a very strong market through July. With the increased demand and our inventory of homes in the 800 range, we began to see the average sales price start to move in a positive direction for the first time in a long while.

Unfortunately, the strong market did not continue through August and September, according to the figures furnished by the Multiple Listing Service (MLS). Causes for the strong market through July and the sudden weakness through August and September are primarily related to our oil industry-dependent economy and a change in the profile mix of active buyers.

Our real estate markets have always pivoted on the fortunes of the oil industry and their level of activity in our area. When oil companies are transferring more employees in than out, demand gets ahead of supply and prices rise. Conversely, when they are transferring more employees out than in, supply gets ahead of demand and prices tend to level off or decline.

In addition to our transfer activity, first-time buyers and upgrade buyers make up all but a very small part of our total activity. With interest rates lower this year, the first-time and upgrade buyers entered the market in greater numbers than we've seen for quite some time. Their activity gave us our strong market through July. However, these discretionary buyers typically plan to have their moving over before the school term begins. This meant that by the time August and September rolled around, they were, for the most part, through. And the incoming transfers were apparently too few to sustain the level of activity we had been blessed with through July.

October's activity was a pleasant surprise as our market posted about the same number of closed transactions as last year. This was due to a slight increase in incoming transfers as a result of Arco's restructuring as well as activity from a number of smaller companies. With these changes, we saw shifts in the demand level also changing within the different price ranges.

Having a clear, accurate and detailed understanding of our market at all times is critical to effective planning and marketing. Accordingly, we are constantly analyzing all the market data we can obtain on a regular basis. We feel we have the most detailed, updated and comprehensive analysis available on the Midland real estate market. We regularly produce new charts, graphs and tables which display the results of our ongoing studies and make them available for our customers and clients. We also review the information regularly with our agents so that they will be better prepared to assist their customers and clients in designing the best possible strategy for their specific needs.

We believe the importance we've placed on a detailed and accurate understanding of our market at all levels has been a critical part of our ongoing success. This has certainly been true again this year. For example, the MLS reports show that Don Harvey, Realtors has closed over 120 more transactions than our closest competitor. Our effectiveness in selling our listings has been even more dramatic. Through October we had sold 369 listings which is an average of 16 per agent. By comparison, we've closed nearly 49 percent more listings year-to-date than our closest competitor, who averaged less than six closed listing transactions per agent.

We don't have a crystal ball to predict what will happen tomorrow, but we do feel we have the best information available for making decisions today. If you would like copies of any of our reports, just call 683-5333 or stop by our office at 702 Andrews Highway. We can even put you on our regular mailing list, if you would like. We're always available to help you better understand the information and thereby devise the best strategy to achieve your particular objectives.

This information is based in whole or in part on data supplied by the Midland Board of Realtors or its Multiple Listing Service. Neither the Board nor its MLS guarantees or is in any way responsible for its accuracy. Data maintained by the Board or its MLS may not reflect all real estate activity in the market. This report contains only the units and sales which were disclosed by the various companies through the MLS sales reports.

REAL ESTATE FACTS

by: Bill Jackson

ADOBE INC., REALTORS, 3303 N. Midkiff #114

694-9548

Just the Facts!

Remember the old "Dragnet" series on TV? In every episode, Detective Joe Friday would say "Give us the facts. Maam, just the facts!"

When selling real estate, two types of buyers are generally encountered. One is interested in the overall look and feel of the home, the way it fits the family's lifestyle.

The second want "just the facts" - specific details about the cost of heating the home, copies of itemized bills for repairs which may have been made, plans and specifications from when the home was built, and numerous other bits of precise information.

This second individual makes his or her buying decisions only after careful consideration of individual facts. Each fact is weighted according to its importance, then entered into a buying equation thought to be of value to the buyer.

At times, it may seem like too much trouble to accomodate the many requests for additional information, yet this detail-conscious buyer may be just as qualified and motivated as any other.

When selling, owners play a critical role in providing this information. For example, it is wise to provide copies of monthly utility bills to the real estate agent. The amounts can be compiled into a table illustrating the costs related to operation of the home. This can be provided to buyers, upon request.

Other important items might include property tax bills and assessments, hazard insurance costs, repair bills, deed restriction and community association by-laws, if any. The more details provided, the better.

The real estate agent may also prepare a list of exact room sizes, to the inch. All of this information may be combined into a loose-leaf notebook which is displayed for buyers in the home, and given out to buyers as a printed flyer.

Don't neglect the details when selling your home. Work closely with your agent to provide complete information to buyers.

ReMax, Texas honors Smith, a top producer

Marilyn Jo Smith

Marilyn Jo Smith of ReMax Midland has been named a Top Producer for the third quarter of 1991, according to recently released statistics from ReMax of Texas.

Smith, a native of Midland, has been a top listing agent and producer for ReMax Midland since joining the firm in April 1990. A realtor since 1984, she has been a consistent multi-million dollar producer, She was inducted into the coveted ReMax 100 Percent Club based on her eight-month earnings in 1990 and has again qualified in 1991.

"I sincerely enjoy working in the real estate profession" Smith said. "And I take great pride in providing caring and personalized service to every one of my clients and customers."

Smith is involved in the community through charity work and children's programs and serves on committees of several real estate professional organizations. As a ReMax realtor, Smith enjoys the freedom to grow and develop her own business with the support of the fastest growing real estate organization in the country.

The Top Producer awards are based on commissions earned. ReMax of Texas agents who have been with the company for more than 12 months average more than $72,000 in annual commissions, three times the industry average.

Texas financial institutions sell 1,806 properties

In eight Texas cities, 1806 properties went on the auction block Oct. 26 through Nov. 5. Fisher Auction Company of South Florida, and ERA Real Estate Brokers joined forces to conduct this mammoth real estate auction which is believed to be the largest ever held.

The properties sold included 395 single family homes, 62 town houses and condominiums, 56 multi-family dwellings, 61 commercial properties, 89 acreage and land parcels and 1,143 residential lots.

The auctions were conducted in Midland, Houston, Austin, Dallas-/Fort Worth, Longview, Abilene, Amarillo and Wichita Falls. More than 7000 people attended the auctions.

Louis Fisher, executive Vice President of Fisher Auction Company said, "The auction-marketing method turned properties into cash, and was primarily selected by these financial institutions because an auction can rapidly and effectively determine a property's true market value."

For more information, call Louis Fisher of Fisher Auction Company at 1-305-942-0917.

Langston Realtors Speak

Midlanders have much to be thankful for

In a season of being thankful for our families, friends, health and many other good fortunes of our lives, I think we can also be grateful for this community. A veteran world-wide traveler from England that I met on a plane several years ago described Midland as "the most energetic, vivacious young city I've ever had the pleasure of visiting!" And he was so right!

While so many cities in our nation are experiencing trouble with their economies, growth, racial relations, quality of life, environments, etc. consider what is happening in Midland:

■ The opening of the International CAF Headquarters and American Airpower Heritage Museum on Dec. 7. This organization and museum are truly the greatest tributes you will ever see to the patriotism, courage, cohesiveness and strength experienced by our nation during World War II. Churchill could well have said it was our "finest hour," too.

Do plan to be a part of the Grand Opening festivities — Opening Ceremony and Commemoration of 50th Anniversary of Pearl Harbor begins at 11:55 a.m. Saturday, Dec. 7, followed by a reenactment of the raid on Pearl Harbor, then by barbecue served by the Chuck Wagon Gang of Odessa. Barbecue tickets at $6.50 for adults, $4.50 for children 11 and under, must be pre-purchased by Dec. 2. Drop by our north office or CAF headquarters to pick some up. For more details on the opening call the CAF Hotline at 564-0427 or the CAF at 563-1000.

■ The most successful season ticket drive of the Midland-Odessa Symphony in many years of the organization's existence — "while other symphony groups are suffering, ours is growing and growing!" The concert, "Christmas 41" planned for Dec. 6 and 7 in conjunction with the CAF opening is nearly sold out for both nights. Again, don't miss out; call the symphony office for your tickets to these marvelously patriotic and Christmassy evenings.

■ A sold-out crowd at last week's Chamber of Commerce Annual Luncheon. An appreciative audience was reminded of the Chamber's successful recruitment of three light manufacturing firms from California; assistance in retention of the offices of at least one major oil company and another 60-member firm; ongoing recruitment efforts; cooperation with Midland College in establishing the new aircraft maintenance curriculum; participation in a community rally to neutralize the efforts of an outside group to create racial dissension, and many other exceptionally community-boosting programs.

■ Growth of Midland as a Regional Medical Center. The recent announcement of a new regional rehab hospital was welcomed by a medical community already in a growth mode as a result of successful doctor and specialist recruiting programs.

■ The many awards received by Keep Midland Beautiful. This outstanding group is consistently recognized on both state and national levels for its aggressiveness in creating a cleaner, prettier, safer community.

■ A strong real estate and new construction market. Last week's article by our Commercial Services Director Penny Willhite detailed the strengthening in our commercial market. Couple this with all the new residential real estate construction, the (finally!) sign of appreciation in values and the extremely active resale market and you will see that we are really more fortunate in housing and real estate than most areas of the country.

■ The many additions being made to churches all over Midland. This, to me, is one of our most positive signs of a healthy community. Practically every church has just completed or is in the midst of new additions or buildings.

These are but a few of the signs of strength and progress currently underway in our city. We know you'll think of many others during this next week. Have a happy and grateful Thanksgiving!

Scott receives award for excellence in sales

Sandy Scott

Sandy Scott of Midland has been awarded the Certified Residential Specialist (CRS) designation by the Residential Sales Council (RSC) of the Realtors National Marketing Institute, affiliated with the National Association of Realtors.

The award was announced during the RSC national meeting held from Nov. 7 through 12 in Las Vegas.

The nationally recognized CRS designation is a symbol of excellence in residential sales. Those receiving the CRS must complete the required courses offered by the Residential Sales Council and must demonstrate expertise in applied residential marketing. The more than 16,000 individuals now recognized as Certified Residential Specialist benefit by greater awareness of the latest sales methods. They are better able to serve clients and represent properties professionally. Less than 2 percent of Realtor-Associates have received the honor of being a CRS.

Scott is a sales associate with ReMax of Midland, and is also president of the Midland Association of Realtors. Additionally, she is on the strategic planning committee for the Texas Association of Realtors.

The RSC and the Realtors National Marketing Institute is dedicated to the education of sales associates. It offers texts, magazines and services to help the sales associates' careers.

Association of Realtors: make homes safe for holidays

"The stockings were hung from the chimney with care . . .," as the famous holiday poem reads, but did that care include making sure those stockings were fire retardant? The Midland Association of Realtors and its members offer the following home safety tips to ensure a happy and safe holiday season for you and your family.

Decorating your home or apartment for the holidays should be a joyous event, but at this time of the year, it's important to pay extra attention to safety factors, particularly those involving possible fires. Most homes are dryer during the winter months due to heaters and fireplaces. This dryness, combined with increased electrical usage, open flames from holiday candles and a generally busier household, necessitates extra careful attention.

Carefully check all electrical decorations, particularly those that have ben sitting in a damp basement for the past 12 months. The National Fire Protection Association reports that during the 1980s there were 560 structural fires annually involving Christmas trees. A dry tree and poorly wired lights can cause disaster. Make sure that all electrical cords, lights and ornaments are approved by a testing agency, such as Underwriters Laboratories (UL), and are in good condition. Check for frayed ends or loose connections. Make sure that all extension cords are placed out of the normal traffic path in your home and that no furniture or other objects are resting on the cords. If you have pets, keep their traffic patterns in mind as well, and plan accordingly.

Keep your Christmas tree moist by checking the water level daily, selecting decorative lights that do not generate large amounts of heat and placing the tree away from direct sources of warmth such as radiators, televisions and hot air ducts. Tree lights should be on only when an adult is present. Never leave tree lights on overnight. If you have an artificial tree, make sure it's fire retardant. Fire retardant spray is available for both artificial and live trees.

Scented holiday candles can make a home warm and festive. Like tree lights, though, it's important never to leave a candle lit when an adult is not present to supervise its burning. Make sure the base or candleholder is sufficient to maintain dripping wax and take care that there is nothing near the burning flame that could ignite. Carefully extinguish the flame when leaving the room, and keep all matches and lighters out of the reach of small children.

The kitchen is often one of the busiest rooms in the house during the holidays. Take careful note that stove top burners have not inadvertently been left on. If you have small children in the house, you may want to keep them away from the kitchen during the busy meal preparation times. It is easy to become distracted when trying to prepare a number of food items. Ask an older child, visiting friend or relative to keep small children occupied while a meal is being prepared.

If there are no cigarette or pipe smokers in your household, but you anticipate entertaining guests who smoke, have an adequate number of ashtrays available, or request that guests not smoke in you home. A stray ash can smolder for hours before igniting in a piece of furniture or carpeting.

Following the opening of gifts, bag all excess wrapping paper and ribbons, and remove them to a metal garbage can or dump site. In the event of a household fire, excess paper will increase the speed at which a fire will spread.

If your home or apartment does not have smoke detectors, now is the time to have them installed. If you do have smoke detectors, check the batteries. If you're not sure how old the batteries are, replace them. It's better to be safe than sorry.

A small fire extinguisher is an important household items as well. Purchase one that will extinguish all types of fires, including electrical and grease fires. Keep it in a handy place in your home. In the event of a fire, you don't want to spend time searching for it. Review its proper usage with all members of your household. You may even want to practice outside on an imaginary fire. Make sure, however, that the extinguisher is fully recharged.

Discuss escape routes with all household members and overnight guests in to prepare them in the event of a fire. Consider alternate routes if a preferred exit, such as the front door, is blocked. Check with your local fire department for important information on escaping safely from a burning home. Is the fire department's number posted in plain sight near each phone? If you have small children, help them memorize the number and instruct them on how to call the fire department in an emergency.

The holiday season can be one of the most enjoyable times of the year if you take precautions against accidents which could cause a fire. By following these tips from the Midland Association of Realtors, the voice of real estate in Midland, you are guaranteed a safer home for you and your family and friends with promises of ". . . a Merry Christmas to all, and to all a good night."

MOONLIGHTING!
The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with responsible individuals.
OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:
Is it worthwhile for adults also? Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
• ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
• MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!
• COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
• SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.
How much money can I make as a distributor?
Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!
How long does it take?
The actual delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!
When do papers have to be delivered by?
6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.
Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
RESERVE YOUR DISTRIBUTORSHIP NOW!

Enjoy the extras.

"Under promise-over deliver!" That expression gives special meaning to the term "value-added" service, the giving of more services than clients and customers expect to receive.

We strive to provide a full range of real estate services when you choose our company, along with some extras we've added. Special attention to detail and attentive listening are two we think you will appreciate. Many more are behind the scenes as we research and provide answers to your real estate questions.

When you call or come by for real estate information, you will receive a double-handful of valuable services provided by us. Enjoy the difference with our compliments.

Rig count

A sunny view taken from a rig floor this summer. The drilling outlook, however, is still not sunny, as the rig count in the Permian Basin remains substantially under last year's activity.

Scholarships

The Permian Basin Chapter of the National Society of Professional Engineers is currently offering scholarships and grants for high school seniors applying to engineering colleges.

Students may apply for one of over 200 awards ranging from $1000 for one year to full tuition for four years.

NSPE's scholarship program is the largest of its kind sponsored and administered by an engineering society with annual disbursements exceeding $1 million.

Plant sales

HOUSTON — Union Texas Petroleum Holdings, Inc. has finaled the sale of its U.S. gas processing business to Western Gas Resources, Inc. for approximately $135 million. Western Reserves, which recently purchased select El Paso Natural Gas operations, including the Midkiff plant, has extensive operations in the Permian Basin.

Union Texas recorded a one-time net gain of approximately $41 million it its 1991 third quarter results, reflecting a $67 million gain from the sale of its U.S. onshore oil and gas business in September and a $26 million loss from the gas processing sale.

Union Texas said that the gas processing transaction did not include the company's U.S. petrochemicals business, which the company is seeking to sell.

Union Texas' petrochemicals business includes a 42% interest in an ethylene manufacturing plant in Geismar, Louisiana.

HOUSTON — The difficult business conditions facing the petroleum industry today can best be met by stressing technology and individual creativity, two of the fundamental characteristics that underlie the industry's long record of success, says Bill Stevens, president of Exxon Company, U.S.A.

Domestic reserves shrinking

■ Oil reserves throughout the U.S. are beginning to show significant signs of shrinkage.

Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — For 100 the United States has been the most-drilled oil producing province in the world, and now it's prolific reserves are beginning to show signs of shrinkage.

Proven U.S. oil reserves have fallen more than 10 percent over the past two decades, to less than 26 billion barrels. That accounts for only about 4 percent of the world's oil stocks, even though Americans last year consumed nearly a third of the world's energy.

The drop in reserves has been particularly sharp in the oil patch states, America's energy pantry for the last half-century.

Texas' reserves have fallen by nearly half in the past 20 years, from 13.1 billion barrels in 1970 to less than 7 billion barrels today. Louisiana's reserves are down 87 percent since 1970, and Oklahoma's have dropped 43 percent.

Those losses have been somewhat offset by new oil powerhouses offshore California and Florida.

And Alaska has zoomed into prominence in the past 20 years to become the nation's top oil province, thanks to the 1968 discovery of crude in Prudhoe Bay.

World reserves still abundant

Associated Press

What is the status of world reserves? At the recent 13th World Petroleum Congress in Buenos Aires, Argentina, three U.S. governmental experts reported that throughout history 629 billion barrels of oil and 1,595 trillion cubic feet (TCF) of natural gas have been produced.

In paper presented at a session on crude oil and natural gas reserves at the Congress, Charles D. Masters, David H. Root and Emil D. Attanasi, all of the U.S. Geological Survey, said that another 1,053 billion barrels of oil and 4,500 TCF of natural gas are in the category of identified reserves, while another 489 billion barrels of oil and 4,417 TCF of natural gas are the modal estimates of undiscovered recoverable resources.

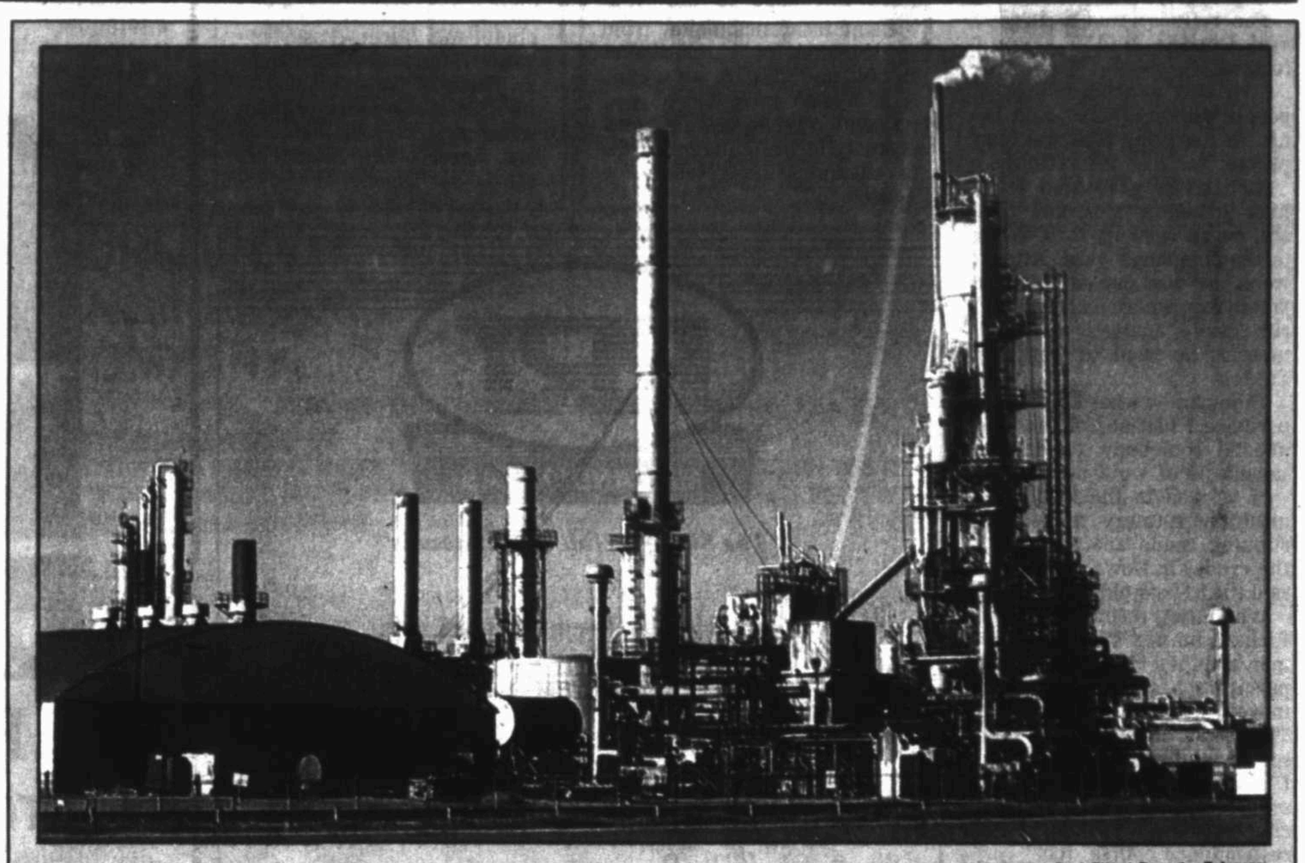

The paper noted that from 1985 to 1990 identified reserves of oil increased by 258 billion barrels - 203 of them in the Middle East. Of these, 100 billion barrels were in Saudi Arabia and 50 billion in Iraq.

With regard to undiscovered resources, the authors estimated that 63 percent of the undiscovered oil and 70 percent of the undiscovered gas will be found in three area - the Middle East, the U.S.S.R. and North America.

The paper noted that "in 1989 about 62 percent of world crude oil production came from non-OPEC countries." However, it asserted that "OPEC's share of the crude oil market will exceed 50 percent by the year 2010."

In recent years, the paper said, "Significant discoveries (of oil and/or gas) have been recorded in five established areas and in three generally new basin areas.

Big Spring's Fina refinery has operated under a number of corporate banners in its long history.

Fina refinery has proud past

Big Spring's Fina Refinery has a colorful history and has proven to be a major survivor.

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — In 62 years, the Fina Refinery in Big Spring has survived more ups and downs than the Texas Twister.

It has survived several bankruptcies, seen a owners come and go, and ridden out more booms and busts than can be listed. Still, it remains a major Permian Basin industry and a mainstay to the Big Spring economy.

The refinery opened on Aug. 4, 1929, as the Cosden Refinery, the second of four that opened in Big Spring during that time, and the only one continuing to operate.

The refinery was the brainchild of Joshua S. "Josh" Cosden, a Maryland native who went from a $20-a-week drugstore clerk to owner of a Oklahoma refinery eventually worth approximately $50 million.

Cosden had relocated to Bigheart (Barnsdall), Okla., on the advice of his doctor. He operated a small refinery on a shoestring budget, obtaining oil by skimming waste crude from the surface of ponds and rivers. His main product was kerosene, which he sold house to house and shop to shop.

After the huge oil fields opened near Tulsa, he sold his first refinery and built a new, much larger one in Tulsa that, thanks to a flood of crude, good transportation facilities, strong market and efficient operations, evetually became worth approximately $50 million.

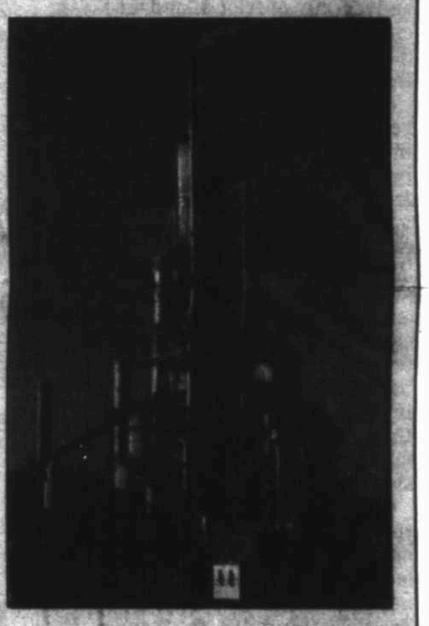

Cosden built an elegant penthouse for himself and his bride, as well as a riverfront home, estate in Newport and a home at Palm Beach. He bought a stable of 32 race horses at Saratoga, Fla., and took trips to Europe.

Unfortunately, Cosden also felt that trading on Wall Street was part of his image, and during trading he pledged the stock of his refining company on extended margin accounts. When the market declined in 1921, he lost heavily, reportedly as much as $300,000 in one hour. His board of directors stripped him of his control and renamed the company Mid-Continent Oil Co.

He left Oklahoma to make a comeback, and settled in Texas, spending 1924 through 1927 operating a lease business in North Texas. Then he obtained several leases in Brown County, which he later sold to Prairie Oil Co. for $975,000.

With the money from that sale and

Russia opens lease bidding

■ Competitive bids expected to create hard cash.

DENVER (AP) — The Russian Federation, one of the world's largest petroleum producers, has opened a round of competitive bidding here for its oil and gas as part of an effort to convert to a free-market system.

It's the first time a Soviet republic has conducted Western-style bidding for foreign contracts.

About 40 companies have signed up for a conference today and Friday at which the bidding process will be detailed, said Edward Gendelman, president of Wavetech Geophysical Inc., the Denver company coordinating the bidding.

Wavetech is the Western partner of Geointertech, a joint venture with the Russian government. The venture is an effort to reap hard currency and is part of Russian President Boris Yeltsin's goal of transforming the republic's economy.

Russia, which covers two-thirds of the territory of the Soviet Union, is one of the world's largest producers of oil and gas. Like many Soviet republics, it has begun wresting control over its natural resources from the central government.

Nearly 4 billion barrels of oil and 22 trillion cubic feet of gas were produced in 1990 — more than 90 percent of Soviet fuel production and export. To date, 1,715 oil and 670 gas fields have been discovered in the republic.

"It has vast developed and underdeveloped reserves which may outstrip those of even the Middle East," Gendelman said Wednesday.

Despite the vast reserves, Russian oil production has dropped in recent years, in part because of aging equipment and inefficient management.

"Business relations with Western companies are one of our highest priorities," said V.A. Dvurechensky, deputy chairman of the Russian Federation's State Committee of Geology and Utilization of Energy Resources and Raw Minerals.

Why not locate Exxon USA to Midland?

Pitts

What would it be like if the corporate headquarters of two, three or four major oil companies were located in Midland? Better for the Permian Basin, certainly, but probably better for the majors as well.

I am reminded of a trip to Los Angeles a few years back. I had graduated from a college in the Los Angeles area and lived there for 15 years, but this was my first trip back in 20 years. It was a shock.

The traffic, the smog, the hassle, the treachery were all bad 20 years ago, but I had no idea how bad it could get. What I found was, for all practical purposes, an environment unfit for human habitation.

As I rode in from LAX to downtown L.A., inching along the freeway, and choking on smog, I found myself wondering how much money it would take to get me to leave Midland and move back to Los Angeles. A lot more than I am worth, I concluded.

Downtown Los Angeles, is headquarters to Unocal and Arco. At the hotel downtown, I chanced upon a meeting with a high-level (but not high enough) executive for one of those firms, who had seen Midland, Texas on my name tag and had served a tour here. I asked him: "How do you like working in downtown Los Angeles?"

Taken back, his disdained look told me that he didn't appreciate the foolishness of my question. "Ask me how I would enjoy cancer," he admonished.

I felt small for asking, but having opened the door, decided to follow up with a more sympathetic question. "Can you give me one good reason why any corporation would put their headquarters in a place like this and subject their employees to this quality of life?"

"Absolutely none!" he said without hesitation. I had found an employee who loved his job, but hated his location, and who seemed genuinely resentful that I would be going back to Midland and he had to stay.

One might think that there are compelling reasons corporations locate their headquarters in crowded, dirty and unsafe cities then require their employees to spend hours in congested, hostile traffic to get there. Actually, there are no compelling reasons.

In this modern world of telephones, conference calls, faxs, overnight mail, satellite communications, corporate jets, and Southwest Airlines it would be just as easy — probably easier — to run Arco, Unocal or even Exxon from Midland as it would be to run it from Dallas, Houston or Los Angeles.

The main reason corporations locate in large cities is that top management has the mistaken perception that big fish belong in big ponds. Big fish belong in nice ponds.

Phillips Petroleum has demonstrated very well that a major oil company can be managed effectively from a small town. I called an official of Phillips in Bartlesville, Oklahoma and asked: "Has Phillips ever thought about moving out of Bartlesville for Houston, Tulsa or Dallas?" He confessed that the thought had occurred several times over the years, but each time the trades-offs were considered, Bartlesville won hands down. "There was not that much to gain," he said.

REFINERY: Is a survivor

a promise from Texas and Pacific Railway that it would buy a large share of fuel oil produced by Cosden, he bought leases on the ranches of Dora Roberts and G.C. Stewart. He built the Cosden Refinery after he began producing on the Roberts property.

The refinery was a success, and Cosden had a second fortune.

"We had a good bunch of people working there," said Ernie Richardson, who was employee No. 2 at the refinery.

Richardson graduated from high school in Colorado City and began working for Col-Tex in the company's yard. After a week, he was moved into the laboratory, where he learned to run crude analysis. After 18 months, he went to work for Cosden.

"They knew what kind of experience I had at Col-Tex, and needed somebody to do the same kind of work over here."

"I worked in the laboratory until the refinery started up, running crude analysis on all the crudes in Howard County," said the 83-year-old Richardson.

When the refinery started, Richardson was made lab foreman and then chief chemist, supervising a chemist who was moved into the plant in 1932. "That was unusual for a high school graduate," he said. "But I had taken chemistry in high school and had a real good chemistry teacher; I took a correspondence course, too."

Richardson eventually moved up the ranks, being named superintendent of the Cosden refinery. He retired in 1970 after 41½ years at the refinery.

Cosden continued to reap money from the refinery until 1929, when the stock market crash cut the value of Cosden stock to a fourth of what it had been. The company eventually was placed into receivership and a group of friends and associates raised $500,000 for Cosden to buy back the refinery at the receiver's sale in 1933.

He modernized the plant and returned it to profitability, but in 1935 the refinery was again in receivership, and was taken from Cosden's control for good.

"We had an awful time in the early 1930s," Richardson said. "We were selling fuel oil to the railroad at 50 cents a barrel, after the East Texas Field had come in and crude oil and gotten down to five to 10 cents a barrel. The railroad had a big interest in the refinery because they had built 12 80,000-barrel tanks on the hill, so it was essential (to them) that we run."

After the company entered receivership in 1935, it was reorganized into Cosden Petroleum Corp. and turned over to new management. Henry W. Zweifel of Fort Worth, former attorney for the Cosden interests, became president in 1938. In 1940, he brought in Raymond L. Tollett, an attorney, certified public accountant and former FBI agent, as executive vice president and manager.

Tollett, raised in Burkburnett, left school at age 12 to go to work as a Western Union messenger boy. A year later he returned to school and in 1924 graduated from high school as valedictorian. Though he had an appointment to the U.S. Naval Academy, he turned it down because appointees had to buy their own wardrobes.

He attended Cline's Commercial College and first became involved in the oil business in 1925, when he went to work as a clerk in the accounting department of Panhandle Oil & Gas Co. He then joined Clint Murchison in the partnership of Murchison & Fain.

He took a correspondence course and law classes at Dixie University (later Dallas University) and passed the Texas Bar by reading law in the office of company counsel. He took a correspondence course from the International Accounting Society and became a certified public accountant in 1933. To help a client interested in the FBI, Tollett took the entrance examination and passed, becoming head of the FBI's New Orleans office two years later.

He left the FBI in 1935 to join Wrightsman Oil Co. He joined Cosden in 1939.

Richardson credits Tollett with much of the refinery's success.

Helen Green, a secretary at Cosden from 1933 until her retirement in 1977, agreed with Richardson. "He was a marvelous boss and a workaholic," she said, pointing out that Tollett managed to move the company's stock from the American Stock Exchange to the New Using insurance money from the burning of a furnace at Dubbs' unit, Tollett got a catalytic cracker built that opened up some new processing possibilities. He made several deals to custom-refine gasoline for Texaco.

Here's to another 75 years of profitable business partnership.

We've been working with forward-thinking Permian Basin oil producers to help them solve production-related problems and make the most of their investments for 75 years now.

Our original chemical method for breaking oil-water emulsions, developed by William S. Barnickel, found quick acceptance here in the Permian Basin.

And you were among the first to see the advantages of our TOTAL SYSTEMS APPROACH® program for efficient and effective chemical treatments. Your help has made the Permian Basin a cornerstone for technological advances. And among the first to benefit.

We're grateful that you've chosen us as your business partner for 75 years. We're looking forward to the next 75.

PARAFFIN FIGHTER

Now that cold weather's here, fight paraffin build-up through biological well management.

Conventional hot oiling may cause formation damage, is expensive, and in time, paraffins build up again. Chemicals are usually costly and toxic, sometimes threatening the health of field operators.

Alpha West's AE-PetroLogic® 1 is a safe, effective biological product which controls deposition of paraffins from well bore to tank battery, and is cost-effective and non-toxic.

Paraffin control is accomplished through the aerobic microbial metabolization of oil and the formation of biosurfactant. The aerobic microbial treatment for paraffin control is a new approach. Please contact Alpha West for the answers to your paraffin control problems.

PITTS: Where to locate?

(From 1E)

Earlier this year when Arco was restructuring and trying to decide whether or not to headquarter its newly organized Central District in Dallas or Midland, Arco Senior Vice President Ken Thompson, armed with facts, went head to head with Dallas and was successful in getting the District located in Midland.

Basically, it was Midland's quality of life that made it able to win over Dallas. Ten out of 11 of Arco's local top management team picked the quiet life in Midland over the night life in Dallas.

Midland really is "a good place to raise kids," with a documented list of amenities long enough to be fiction. It has low crime, safe streets, short commutes (10 minutes to anywhere), no congestion, no smog, nice neighborhoods, fine homes, excellent schools, a productive stable work force, a strong work ethic, government sympathetic to business, extraordinary cultural opportunities, adequate health care, abundant and cheap office space, a lower cost of living and exceptional air travel.

But perhaps best of all, Midland is an oil town with a fraternity feeling of belonging to the same club...one for all and all for oil. Then there is the Midland mystic - rich in can-do tradition and steeped in wildcatter lore and legend - Midlanders are just naturally proud. It is a pride reflected in the giving of time and money for community causes, that has made the town famous worldwide.

Midland is unlike any other oil town in the world. There are bigger oil towns but not better oil towns. Midland could do any major oil company proud.

So, with such impressive credentials, maybe it is time we set our sights a little higher. Instead of going after just the district or division offices of major oil companies, why not go after the corporate world headquarters? Corporate headquarters tend to stay a little longer than district and division offices. Midland has never been corporate headquarters to a major oil company, maybe it was time.

It should be no difficult task to make a convincing case that: Unocal would be better off in Midland than L.A.; that Texaco would be better off in Midland than White Plains, New York; and Amoco would certainly be better off in Midland than Chicago.

What about Houston? A humid version of Los Angeles, it is the undisputed oil capital of the world, but almost any oil executive in soggy Houston will tell you that he had rather be in Midland.

I am not surprised that Arco located its Central District in Midland, I am surprised that Arco Oil & Gas Corp. in Dallas did not follow.

Compressor Systems, Inc. (CSI), of Midland has announced the promotion of two employees.

Allen Stults has been promoted to Executive Vice-President. He joined CSI in 1975 and has developed a wide range of experience in the gas compression industry during his 17 years of employment. He has served in a variety of positions including Vice-President and General Manager of CSI's Pittsburgh, PA subsidiary, McKenzie Corporation from 1983-1988, Vice President of Sales and, most recently, Vice President of Operations.

David Murdock, a 15-year employee, has been promoted to Vice-President, Sales and Service. Mr. Murdock, a graduate of Southwest Texas State University, preciously served as Vice President and General Manager of McKenzie Corporation before being promoted in 1989 to his most recent position of Manager of Sales and Service in CSI's home office located in Midland.

Compressor Systems, Inc., headquartered in Midland, Texas, is one of the largest manufacturers of gas compression equipment in North America.

RESERVES: Shrinking

(From 1E)

Yet even there, the story is distressing. Alaska's reserves peaked in 1970 at 10.1 billion barrels and have since dropped nearly 40 percent.

The problem, say geologists, is not simply that America is pulling more oil out of the ground than it is finding. Rather, it's that much of the oil that remains is untouchable, given the price of crude.

With oil priced at about $23 a barrel on world commodity markets, it costs more to pull it out of the ground than the fuel is worth.

As a result, new drilling has screeched to a halt and spending on domestic exploration has slowed to a trickle.

The economics have shifted, according to the experts, because the nation has run out of "easy" oil, or crude that can be coaxed out of the ground in large amounts at relatively low cost.

Even if oil is found, it most likely won't be enough to offset the costs of locating the crude and drilling for it.

Petroleum accountants slate meeting

Petroleum Accountants of the Permian Basin will meet Tuesday, November 26 at the Plaza Club.

Occidental revenue to increase

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — Newly explored oil fields in Ecuador and Yemen are expected to boost Occidental Petroleum Corp.'s crude production by 48,000 barrels per day, eventually increasing revenue by up to $200 million annually, company chairman Ray Irani said.

Irani, meeting with analysts in New York on Thursday, declined to say when Occidental expects the new cash flow. Development plans calls for production from the Ecuador field to begin in 1993 with the Yemen fields coming on line a year later.

In the meantime, Irani said Los Angeles-based Occidental's domestic crude oil production would be flat. He expects world oil prices to hold steady over the short term, then rise gradually at a pace slightly ahead of inflation.

Potential increases in oil flow from the Middle East would be offset by Soviet cutbacks in exports as that country seeks cash to boost production, Irani told analysts.

Occidental is interested in making such an investment but has no plans to do so in the foreseeable future because of the Soviet Union's unstable political climate, he said.

Irani also told analysts that Occidental has sold $2.6 billion in assets since January as part of a previously announced plan to reduce debt by $3 billion before the end of 1992.

SMITH ENERGY SERVICES

The Spraberry Experts

Over the last 18 months, Smith Energy Services has completed more than 250 Spraberry stimulation treatments.

We lead the industry in this area.

The reason we've been selected to do nearly all of the frac jobs in this area is because we save the operator time and money.

Time, because we often do two- or three-stage treatments in one morning.

Money, because we gel "on-the-fly" with our patented CMG unit eliminating wasted tank bottoms and avoiding environmental clean-up problems.

Let us contribute to your saving of time, money and the environment.

Smith Energy Services. We work best under pressure.

Coastal Corp. chief takes swipe at service bundles

Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — A federal proposal forcing gas pipelines to "unbundle," or sell supply and transportation services separately, would hurt small producers and put local utilities at risk of running short during cold snaps, according to Coastal Corp. President James S. Paul.

Paul told the Natural Gas Association of Houston on Thursday that customers should be able to buy those services separately if they want, but that pipelines "should have the choice" to sell them in a package.

"Most of our customers rely on bundled service," Paul said, referring to local distribution companies that depend on pipelines like Coastal to gather gas from large and small producers, put it in the pipeline and ship it to various cities.

Those local distribution companies don't want the burden of lining up gas supplies from individual producers, he said.

If they did contract for their own supplies, the major producers would be the biggest winners, because local distributors aren't going to negotiate with dozens of little producers, Paul said.

Paul added that he's puzzled by the fact that the Independent Petroleum Association of America has filed comments with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission in support of the proposed order.

ACTIVITY HIGHLIGHTS

Yates opens Wolfcamp in Eddy field

Yates Petroleum Corp., Artesia, has recompleted a former Morrow producer to flow 447,000 cubic feet of gas per day.

The Eddy County producer, No.1 Estelle "TA" Federal Com, is in the Logan Draw field, 18 miles west of Loco Hills, and opens Wolfcamp pay in the field.

Located at se sw section 21-17s-17e, the well was test through a 1/8 inch choke from perforations at 6336-6340 ft, with a flowing tubing pressure of 1275 psi.

Total depth is 9430 ft., plugged back to 8895 ft with 4-1/2 inch casing set on bottom.

Melzer to reenter 1955 Lea Co. failure

Midland based Melzer Exploration says it will reenter a 9570-ft wildcat failure in New Mexico's Lea County, and attempt to recomplete it in the Yates-Seven Rivers.

The well is the No.1 Amanda Wise, which is located half mile northwest of Halfway. It is located 1980 ft from north line, 660 ft from west line of section 14-20s-32e.

It was originally plugged and abandoned in 1955 by Ralph Lowe.

New producers added South Dagger Draw

Peak Performer

By Georgia Todd Temple

Most people have experienced the sinking feeling that comes when the words they were about to say vanish from their memories. Often, it's possible to admit what has happened right as it happened.

Sometimes, it's not.

Such was the case for Judith Dow Alexander, who was singing patriotic songs one Veteran's Day on a two-hour live telecast of "Good Morning, Boston."

"The very last song I was singing was 'America the Beautiful,' and I forgot the words. I got in the middle of it; I couldn't think of a single word, so I made up the words to the song."

Later, Miss Dow couldn't remember a single word she made up that morning. All she could recall was that the words "had a lot to do with America."

As she walked out of the studio, the telephone was ringing.

"I said, 'It must be people calling asking, 'How did you get that stupid woman on your program?' "

She now knows that what happened to her is not all that unusual.

"I have since learned this happens. Your mind will stop tracking when under pressure," she said. She laughed, then added, "I do have bad dreams about things like that."

Miss Dow, a native of Ann Arbor, Mich., is guest artist with the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale Dec. 5 and 6 for the pops concert "A 1941 Christmas," being held at the Confederate Air Force Hangar, Midland International Airport.

Her invitation to West Texas came from Don Th. Jaeger, conductor of the MOSC. The two can trace their professional association back to a Halloween concert "years and years ago" with the symphony in Midland, Mich.

"Don invited me to come. He had no idea what I would sound like. My uncle (architect Alden Dow) had suggested to him that he do it. He thought, 'Oh, my goodness, I have a dilettante on my hands.'

"I started to sing in the first rehearsal, and his mouth dropped open, and he said, 'Oh, Thank God.' I said. 'What do you mean?' And he said, 'You're wonderful. I didn't know what you'd sound like.'

"So it turned out beautifully for all of us. Since then we've done, maybe this is our fifth concert together. We actually did a recording together. We just love working together. He's so talented, and he's grown so much as a conductor over the years. He has this wonderful sense of adventure."

When Jaeger called Miss Dow to see if she would come, he asked her if she had any Christmas arrangements. She said, "No, but let's get one done."

So she did. Her accompanist, Jerry DePuit, has done a new arrangement of all 1940s Christmas songs which will be performed at the Midland-Odessa performances.

The concert is part of the week-long festivities at the Confederate Air Force Headquarters commemorating the 50th

SINGING SURVIORSHIP

By Georgia Todd Temple

When singer Judith Dow Alexander went to New York City to pursue her career, she was asked the same question time and again.

"Everybody said, 'What's a 40-year-old doing in New York City?' I had one newspaper writer who wrote this article about how I was making my comeback at 40. I laughed because nobody could conceive the idea that someone was beginning their musical career at 40," said Miss Dow, who performs as guest artist with the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale during the pops concert "A 1941 Christmas" planned for Dec. 5 and 6 at the new Confederate Air Force Hangar at Midland International Airport.

"I decided there was no point in even trying to explain," Miss Dow said, referring to her late started career.

While she was in New York City, she worked in night clubs and cut three recordings. One of the recordings, "I Love America," began the path which would eventually lead her to her Midland-Odessa performances.

"When the New York Daily News wrote a review of it, they said I was the Kate Smith of the '80s. My manager decided that if I was to be the Kate Smith of the 80s, I should do some of her music so we did another recording called, 'When the Moon Comes Over the Mountain.'

" 'God Bless America' is not her only song," said Miss Dow, adding that Miss Smith had recorded, among others, "White Cliffs of Dover," "The Glory of Love," "Don't Fence Me In" and "Dream a Little Dream of Me."

Miss Dow spent about 18 months traveling the country performing a night club act based on Miss Smith's life.

"We did little speeches that she'd done on the radio. It was mostly talking about the depths of her talents and the things that she had done. Word has it that she was in love with her manager so she always thanked him profusely about 87 times when she did a radio program. He was married. If he told her she could sing five octaves, she sang five octaves.

"She was a very lonely woman so when I traveled around talking about her, I got myself very lonely, too. That was difficult. Now, I've got her in perspective, but it was hard when I was on the road," said Miss Dow, who added that Miss Smith's life did not end on a happy note.

"She had a sister who had two daughters, and they fought over who was going to run the estate once when she was in a diabetic comma. Her sister preceded her in death. I don't even know if the estate is settled now."

Miss Dow, a native of Ann Arbor, Mich., had worked with Don Th. Jaeger, conductor of the MOSC, when he was in Midland, Mich.

"When you all decided to do this concert, he said, 'Oh. Let's see if we can't get Judy to come down and do the Kate Smith work.' "

Miss Dow has performed, produced and directed several groups in her native state of Michigan, including the University of Michigan Gilbert and Sullivan Society.

She has appeared on the "Today" show as well as many local "Good Morning" television shows around the country. While in New York City, she co-produced the Tony Award winning Broadway musical "Sweeney Todd."

Although she hasn't been in Midland, her husband of almost 10 years, Bob, who works as a fund-raiser for mostly arts organizations, has.

"My husband lived in Midland for nine years when he was growing up," she said, adding that he was not yet in elementary school when he and his mother moved to the Tall City. "They lived on West Wall Street, two blocks from city hall. He remembers it well. He and Don Jaeger have the best time telling stories to each other."

The marriage marks Miss Dow's third.

"I was married for 15 years the first time, then finally decided it was better for me to be a single mother than a very unhappy housewife," Miss Dow said. "I had denied all my life that I wanted to go out and do all these things. My second husband understood all that, but it was very hard to maintain a marriage and be a mother and be on the road. Our marriage just dissolved more than anything else.

"But then I met Bob Alexander, and my life changed. I had vowed I would never get married again, but when I met Bob I knew I was getting married again, and that it was probably the last time."

The two met through Miss Dow's manager.

"Bob was a good friend of my manager. They had both worked very hard with the American Symphony League and my manager introduced me to him. I don't think he ever thought we were going to fall in love. He just thought we'd be great buddies, and we were more than great buddies," Miss Dow said, adding, "I was destined to marry a Texan. That's what it's all about."

CHECKING OUT THE LIBRARIES

Library acquires geology index

By Sandra Wegner

The Petroleum Department has cause to celebrate. Thanks to the Friends of the Library and contributors to the Sci-Tech Fund, a new CD-ROM geology index has been acquired.

Geo-Ref, the computer alternative to manually searching over 150 volumes of the Bibliography and Index of Geology and its predecessors, is a major addition to geology research in the Permian Basin.

Ordinary public libraries and most colleges do not have this index. Ordinary public libraries do not have petroleum libraries such as Midland County Public Library, 301 W. Missouri.

The staff is busy learning the possibilities this index to geological literature offers. Public use will be limited to hours that Petroleum Department staff are on duty.

Christmas comes in the form of a puppet show to the Children's Department at the downtown library, 10 a.m. Wednesday, Dec. 10. No pre-registration is necessary and attendance is limited only by the fire code. The program is for pre-school and early elementary age children. Normally, elementary age children are in school at this time of day and week but Midland has many home-school students who use the public library.

You're not likely to hear these books described as scholarly, but for a public library, they are perfect. These attractive volumes appeal to a wide range of interests, and material in them is always presented in an interesting and easy to read format. You've seen the Time-Life series advertised in magazines and on television. You order that first volume and then only Time-Life and heavenly providence know how many more could come before the series ends.

The downtown library, 301 W. Missouri, has a standing order for all series that are published in appropriate bindings, (which means most of them).

If you like the bizarre, take a look at the Library of Curious Unusual Facts. Select from Voyage Through the Universe if astronomy is your interest. How Things Work is a series that covers a broad range of subjects from the brain to structures (tunnels, bridges, etc.). Military buffs will like The Face of War. My favorite among the later series is Time Frame, a lot of history in small doses. It begins with the dawn of human life and works its way through time to the nuclear age. These titles are like the tip of the iceberg. The library has many Time-Life series.

If you are the kind of traveler that hates to pass a historical marker without stopping, the downtown library has a set of travel guides for you. You won't find hotel or restaurant rating in the Smithsonian Guide to Historical America but you will find great places to visit.

Dividing the nation into twelve geographic regions, the guides give general background information for areas and more specific information on museum and historic sites. Architecture gets special interest as the entire series was under the editorial direction of a noted author on American architecture.

When are you going to start work on the library addition? I have heard that question several times. Here is a brief, progress report. Construction documents are being prepared. Architect, Larry Connolly expects bids to be requested in February and dirt to start flying in April.

FYI: The down town library has Cliff's Notes and Masterplots. After you've read all the book, you might want to compare notes with these study guides.

Print exhibit starts long tour at museum

WASHINGTON (AP) — A lively range of prints from gaudy to monotone, from "primitive" to sophisticated, spark an exhibition starting a long tour at the National Museum of Women in the Arts.

Artists such as Jennifer Bartlett, Squeak Carnwath, Helen Frankenthaler and Elizabeth Murray are represented in "Presswork: The Art of Women Printmakers," on view here through Dec. 1.

A colorfully simple monoprint, "The Dance of Life," by Hollis Sigler is presented in its own painted frame. In contrast, there is one of Barbara Kruger's punchy lithographed messages, "Savoir c'est pouvoir," blazoned in red across a black-and-white photo.

Judy Pfaff's wood relief print "Las Margaritas" mixes jaunty suggestions of daisies with bright jigsaw and crossword-puzzle shapes. Other works include a variety of etchings, aquatints, woodcuts, screenprints and monotypes, with embellishments of silk, gold leaf and hand coloring.

The prints, a collection of about 60, are on loan from the Lang Communications Corporate Collection.

After its showing in Washington, the exhibition will be shown in Minneapolis, Madison, Wisc., and Atlanta next year; in Youngstown, Ohio, Kansas City, Mo., Wichita, Kan., and Portsmouth, Va., in 1993; and in Joplin, Mo., in 1994.

Actress doesn't take job seriously

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — Teri Garr's eyes roll as if her sockets are oiled at Jiffy Lube. It's her version of a wink: Don't take this seriously. It's only show biz.

In person, she comes across exactly as she does on all those "Late Night With David Letterman" and "The Tonight Show" appearances — either a bubble-headed blonde or a latter-day Gracie Allen who says silly things with several grains of truth.

"Everyone said, 'Oh, you shouldn't do these (talk) shows so much, because it's not good for you.' And I think we're all going to be dead some day, and I'm going to my grave going, 'You know, I could have done Letterman and Carson a lot but I didn't because it wasn't good for me.'

"I can't go out now and play Madame Curie that easily, because everyone goes 'Oh, wasn't she that ditz on 'The Tonight Show?' "

"But on the other hand, I'm not going to be cast as Madame Curie anyway, so I let it go."

Ms. Garr made her TV series debut this year in the spoofy sitcom "Good & Evil." Surprisingly, she plays "evil" Denise, a cosmetics manufacturing queen whose latest product makes people's faces dissolve when tested.

Assembly awards grants

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

Arts Assembly of Midland has moved a number of local groups closer to their goal of raising funds for 1992 projects through its sub-granting program.

The total funds requested for the 1992 assistance cycle was $36,179. Of that amount, $17,500 was granted.

"Last year, a total of $17,550 was requested by six organizations," said Junanne Brock, Arts Assembly executive director. "We are happy to see such growth in this program after just one year. The arts are vital to Midland's quality of life, and the Arts Assembly is proud to contribute to the projects of these organizations."

This year, grants were awarded to the following organizations:

- St. Paul's CME Church, "New arts Six" performance, $3,000;
- Midland Community Concerts, performance for MISD students, $1,000;
- Smocking Arts Guild, workshop and trunk show, $500;
- Casa de Amigos, "Family Night Out" program, $3,000;
- Community and Senior services, Senior Citizen's Arts and Crafts Fair, $2,500;
- Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale, "Harmony" program, $2,000;
- Midland Opera Theater, "La Boheme," $1,000, and Opera in the Park, $1,000;
- West Texas Jazz Society, "Soprano Summit" performances, $1,500;
- Midland Community Theatre, classes in cooperation with Casa de Amigos, $500;
- and the Museum of the Southwest, "Spotlights: Paintings by Dick Mason," $1,500.

"The decisions were made by a grants review panel," said Ms. Brock.

Requests for assistance were evaluated through a review panel process which considered Organizations quality, demonstration of community involvement and outreach, capability, administrative and fiscal responsibility, contribution to local economy and tourism, distribution of funds among various art disciplines and the amount of Arts Assembly funds available, Ms. Brock explained.

Requirements include the organization to be located in Midland and the activity to take place here.

"They are eligible to apply for project assistance only for a particular project, program or performance," Ms. Brock said. "The event must be open to the public."

The applicants must match their request.

"All grants require that grant funds awarded be matched by the applicant so they were eligible to apply for up to 50 percent of the total project expenses," Ms. Brock said.

The Arts Assembly is Midland's umbrella organization for the arts. The monies for the sub-granting program come from three sources.

"Part of it came from our portion of the City of Midland hotel-motel tax, and part of it came from the Texas Commission on the Arts, which we matched," Ms. Brock said.

"We are required by the TCA to match their funding. We matched dollar for dollar what the TCA granted to us. The remainder of the sub-grant fund came from our hotel-motel tax allocation — 25 percent of the total allocation from the city goes toward our sub-granting program. The other 75 percent goes toward various programs, like Celebration of the Arts."

Grant provides new roof for museum

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

Staff and volunteers at the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum And Library Hall of Fame face the winter months confident no matter what rains come, the facility's roof is secure. The facility's north wing roof is being resurfaced by Lydick-Hicks Roofing Co.

The project was made possible through a $25,000 grant from the Meadows Foundation, Dallas.

"We had applied to the Meadows Foundation and gotten a grant two years ago, and we were turned down last year on the basis that they do not ordinarily fund operating budgets," said Gloria Munson, director of development.

"So this year when we were awarded the challenge grant for the Mabee Foundation, we felt like it was a good opportunity to go back to the Meadows Foundation. And we did. We got it, and we were so happy."

The Meadows Foundation is among the largest private foundations in Texas. Its contribution was prompted by a challenge grant from the J.E. and L.E. Mabee Foundation in Tulsa. The Mabee Foundation pledged to the Petroleum Museum $25,000 toward a $101,000 renovation project if the Petroleum Museum raised the remaining monies from other sources.

"We have $16,000 remaining on the challenge grant that we need to raise before April 16, 1992," said Ms. Munson, explaining the problems which occur if the museum does not succeed in raising the money.

"We lose the challenge grant, but I feel real optimistic that we've gone this far this quickly that we will raise it," she said.

Other foundations pledging support for the Mabee Challenge Grant are Burlington Resources Foundation, Seattle, Wash., and the Davidson Foundation, Midland.

"El Paso Natural Gas and Meridan Oil have been supporters of the Petroleum Museum since 1977, and Burlington Resources bought those two companies out so we appealed to them on the basis of their local interest here in the oil industry," Ms. Munson said.

The Davidson Foundation is a regular contributor to the facility's operating budget.

"The gift they gave us toward the challenge grant was above their regular contribution."

The challenge grant also will help meet the museum's goals to upgrade fatigued electronic exhibit equipment and to recoat and reseal its driveways and parking lots.

Without funds from private foundations most non-profit facilities would have great difficulty keeping their doors open in the 1990s.

"It'd be extremely difficult. Foundations provide approximately one-third of our budget," said Ms. Munson. "We would have to go to corporations and individuals and raise it, and we're already doing that.

"There's so many generous people in the Permian Basin but a lot of times it's the same people giving to a lot of organizations. You see the same names, so private foundations play an extremely important role."

The Petroleum Museum does not receive any government funding.

"We are totally dependent on private funding whether it be from private foundations, corporations or individuals."

Admission, rentals and gift sales make up a third of the facility's operating budget.

Regardless of whether the facility raises the matching funds or not, a new roof is guaranteed.

"The Meadows Foundation specifically wanted to make sure that we got the new roof," Ms. Munson said. "They were very specific about that. Although they were responding to the challenge grant, they gave us the $25,000 outright."

■ Artist paints murals

MONAHANS — West Texas artist Bob McClellan is painting a series of historical murals for the new Thriftway store at 601 N.W. I-20 here.

McClellan

The muralist, who also is known as "Bob the Painter," has appeared twice on Bib Phillips' "Texas Country Reporter." His extensive works have been televised nationwide and appeared in numerous newspapers and corporate advertisements. Last year, one of his murals was filmed by an international film crew for a documentary.

Ward County celebrates its centennial next year and Thriftway, in support of the celebration, has commissioned McClellan to depict historical events and landmarks on the store's walls.

The project is expected to take around two to two and a half weeks to finish. McClellan began Nov. 18. Most of the work will be done while the store is closed to avoid customer inconvenience. The public is invited to view the work in progress during store hours.

■ Workshop offered

A workshop to explain Texas Committee for the Humanities guidelines and grant programs will be held beginning at 10 a.m. Dec. 4 at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave.

The workshop will be conducted by Monte Youngs, program officer of the Texas Committee for the Humanities. The TCH is a state program of the National Endowment for the Humanities.

The workshop is free to all interested persons.

The TCH cannot fund individuals, for profit-organizations, or non-humanities programs. For more information call Enid Davis, 683-2882.

■ Parade televised

Foley's Thanksgiving Parade will be televised on KPEJ-TV, Channel 24, at 11 a.m. Thursday.

More than 700,000 spectators are expected to line the streets of downtown Houston. This year's parade celebrates the premiere of Houston's Grand Opera's production of "Babes in Toyland."

■ Nominees elected

OKLAHOMA CITY — Nominees elected for induction into the National Cowboy Hall of Fame's Rodeo Hall of Fame have been announced. The Rodeo Hall of Fame, sponsored by the Rodeo Historical Society, is one of three halls of fame at the national museum.

The induction ceremony will take place following a brunch at 10 a.m. Dec. 1 in the museum's Founders Hall. Tickets are $20 per person. The induction will cap off the annual meeting of the Rodeo Historical Society, Nov. 30-Dec. 1 at the Oklahoma City Marriott Hotel.

Reservations may be made by calling Judy Dearing at the National Cowboy Hall of Fame, 1-405-478-2250.

Texans inducted in 1991 include Bobby Estes, Baird, and Juan Salinas, Encinal.

■ Sea World closes

SAN ANTONIO — Sea World of Texas here will conclude its 1991 operating season Thanksgiving weekend.

The final day of operation for the San Antonio marine life park will be Dec. 1. The park will open for its fifth season March 7, and will be open weekends and holidays in the spring, daily in the summer from Memorial Day to Labor Day and weekends again in the fall.

For more information call 1-512-523-3611.

■ Series announced

FORT WORTH — Casa Manana Children's Playhouse announced a series of film workshops for adults and children Dec. 8 and 9 at Casa's rehearsal hall, 3101 W. Lancaster, Fort Worth.

The workshops will be led by Randy Clark, owner of the W. Randolph Clark Co, a talent agency in Los Angeles.

Cost of attending is $25 and each session is limited to 20 people. Application deadline is Dec. 2.

Participants will work on film acting techniques as well as read and perform various scenes from actual projects. A discussion afterward will include film acting opportunities, audition techniques and a question and answer period. All performances will be videotaped.

For more information call Deborah Brown, 1-817-332-9319.

■ ACT IX hosts event

ACT IX, auxiliary to Midland Community Theatre, will present the Beaux Arts ball Jan. 18 at Clay-Desta Atrium.

The festivities will include Southern and Creole cuisine in a dinner theater atmosphere with a retrospective of past and present theater productions performed by the MCT Singers and favorite local stars.

A new band from Dallas, Lindy and the Look, will provide a variety of dance tunes to top off the evening. Proceeds will benefit the theater.

Tickets for the event are $100 per couple for MCT members and $125 per couple for non-members. For more information call 682-2544.

■ Final exhibit shown

ODESSA — The White-Pool House, 112 E. Murphy, has its final exhibit of 1991 on display.

Pictures, articles and memorabilia tell the history of medical services in Ector County. Coordinator of the White-Pool House is Barbara A. Baker.

ODESSA — Life in the Soviet Union is the subject of a photography exhibit at Odessa College through Dec. 15.

The exhibit, "Changing Realities: Recent Soviet Photography," is on display in the Instructional Building Gallery from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday.

The work of 11 amateur Soviet photographers covers 1983 to 1989, depicting Russian people in everyday settings. One striking similarity among the photographs is that the children in are usually smiling while the grownups look old and solemn, said a release from OC.

Unlike Western photographers who have been experimenting with new techniques in black and white and color manipulation, Soviet photographers seem to have preferred the stark realism reflected in the black and white photograph, the release said.

For more information call Steve Goff, 1-335-6497.

■ Holiday concert set

A Thanksgiving concert is set for 4 p.m. today at First United Methodist Church, Main Street at Ohio Avenue.

The concert is being presented by the Chancel Choir of First UMC, Midland, and the Sanctuary Choir of First UMC, Odessa.

Included in the program will be two Thanksgiving oriented choral works. These include "O Sing Unto the Lord" by George Frederic Handel and a contemporary setting of the "Te Deum" by John Rutter. Also on the program will be the anthem entitled "Sing to the Lord of the Harvest" and Rutter's setting of the familiar hymn, "Now Thank We All Our God."

The Handel composition is one of a group of 12 anthems which Handel wrote between 1717 and 1720 for an English nobelman James of Chandos. It is based on Psalm 96 and features soprano and tenor soloists. The "Te Deum" is one of the most ancient and inspiring of Christian liturgical texts, probably originating in the early fourth century. Rutter is a contemporary English composer.

In addition to the music, each concert will feature a Thanksgiving homily by the host pastor. The Rev. Charles Graff will deliver the message in Odessa and the Rev. Russell Parchman will speak in Midland.

The Midland concert will be a benefit for Area Methodist Outreach Services. All concert-goers are requested to bring a can of soup to help stock the AMOS food shelves.

For more information call the music office, First UMC, 682-3702.

■ Craft bazaar held

Manor Park will be sponsoring a Crafty Christmas Shopper's Bazaar from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Dec. 7 at 2208 N. Loop 250 West.

Handmade craft items, baked goods and ceramics will be available for purchase. Proceeds will go to benefit Midland Presbyterian Homes Endowment Fund. Admission is free.

Refreshments and entertainment will be provided. For more information call 689-9898.

■ Club host exhibit

Paintings of landscapes and floral arrangements by Midlander Greg Price are on display from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. weekdays this month at the Midland Woman's Club, Hogan Park.

The one-man exhibition includes 19 paintings primarily painted from life and memory. Price paints "en pliene aire" in an effort to capture the ambience of light and color in the landscape. His stated goal is to paint the poetry or mood of nature through the relationship of color notes as they are observed by the artist.

Price has studied art in Carnegie Hall, New York City, and with the Russian master Sergei Bongart. Price graduated from McMurry College with a bachelor of art degree. While a student at McMorry, he was awarded a scholarship by the New York Watercolor Society. He was a recipient of a first place award for oil painting in a nationwide competition at the ASI National Arts Competition.

In addition, he is a past recipient of the Grumbacher Award for outstanding art and has won numerous other regional Best of Show and first place awards in various competitions.

■ Exhibit presented

ODESSA — "Aspects of British Painting: 1550-1800," from the collection of the Sarah Campbell Blaffer Foundation of Houston, will be exhibited at the Art Institute for the Permian Basin, 4909 E. University, until Feb. 2.

This exhibition includes portraits in the "grand manner," conversation pieces, genre paintings, landscapes, Marien paintings, carvings, illustrations, maps and Elizabethan royal sealed documents.

Paintings by such British masters as Sir Joshua Reynolds, Thomas Gainsborough, H.M.W. Turner, George Stubbs, Benjamin West and Sir Peter Lely are included in the exhibition.

Covering the broad range of types of British painting, the exhibition is a reflection of British life from the period before Henry VIII's rule to the first quarter of the 19th century. A small alabaster religious carving dates back to the 15th century.

A posthumous portrait of Henry VIII with his daughter, Mary Tudor, also depicts his favorite jester, Will Sommers. Paintings of nobility, wealthy merchants and military personages also reflect changes in the British class structure during this period.

For more information call the Institute, 1-368-7222. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday. No admission is charged.

■ Exhibit to close

"Bits and Pieces," an exhibit by Pam Price, closes Wednesday in the Options Gallery at Odessa College.

The Options Gallery is located in the Learning Resource Center at OC. Gallery hours are 7:30 a.m.-10 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 7:30 a.m.-5 p.m. Friday and 2-5 p.m. Sunday.

■ Exhibit presented

Gallery 1114, 1114 N. Big Spring St., is showing its "Invited Artists Exhibit" through Dec. 5.

This annual exhibit featured artists from the area and region. The 1991 show is of photographs by M. Andrews, Michael Banschbach, Steve Goff and Kent Moss.

Gallery 1114 is an artist-supported center for modern and contemporary art. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday through Saturday and 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

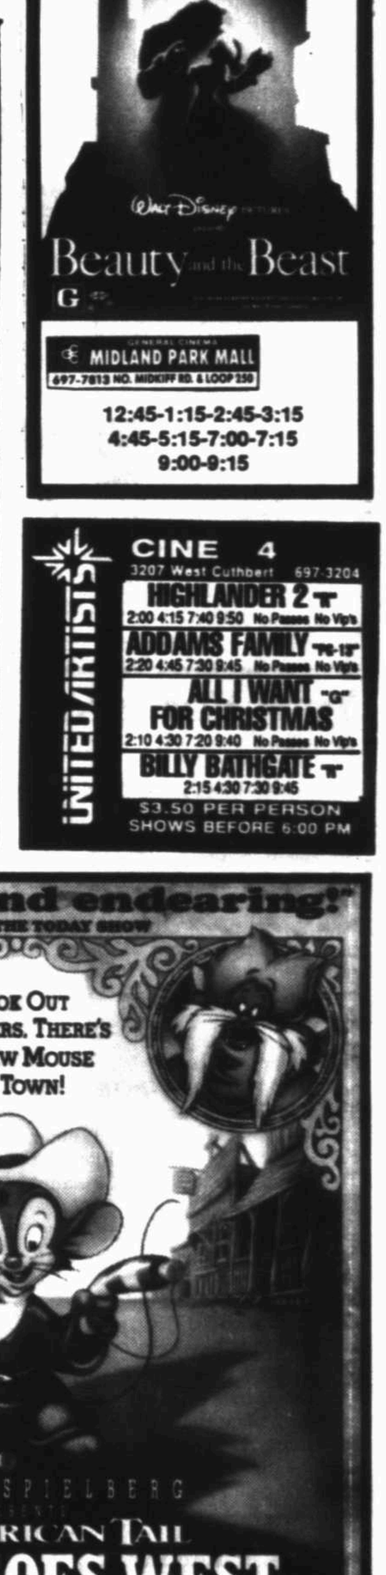

Cowboy Hall acquires frontier clothing

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A private collection of frontier clothing that includes the workclothes of pioneer women and the hats, boots and saddles of cowboys has been acquired by the National Cowboy Hall of Fame.

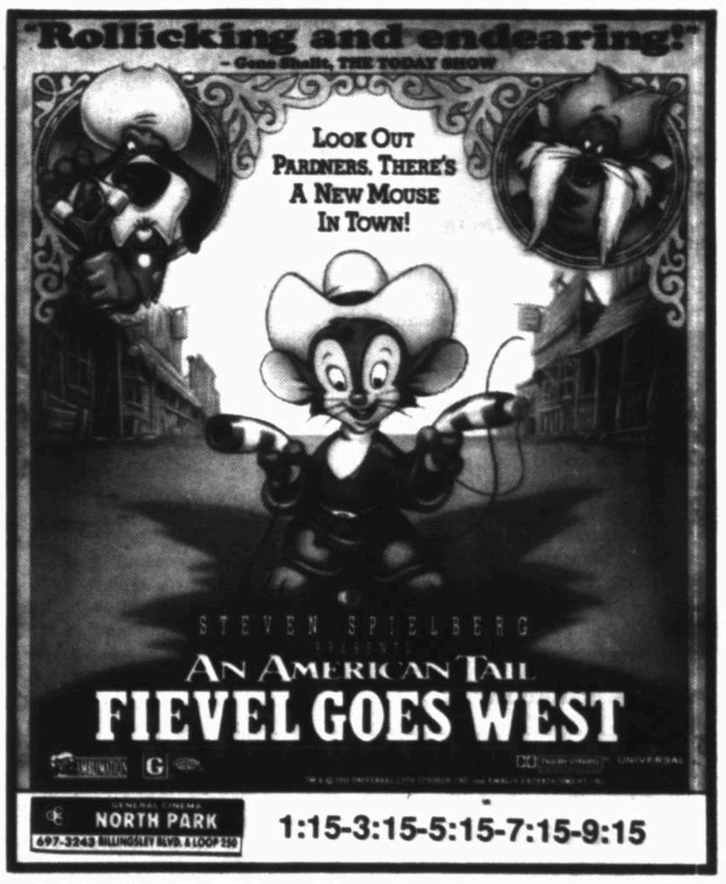

"It really is the finest assemblage of western memorabilia in private hands — at least we believe that," Byron Price, executive director of the museum, said Wednesday. "That's why it is so important."

Edward L. Gaylord, chairman of the board of the hall, announced Tuesday the acquisition of the Joe Grandee Museum of the Frontier West. Grandee is a western artist and illustrator from Arlington, Texas.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 24, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Move ahead with confidence and you can create a whole new lifestyle. Several job offers come your way in early 1992. Be careful; it may be better to stay put. By spring, you will have greater freedom to roam. A family addition means a more stable home life next September. You will be rewarded for your courage and decisiveness in late fall. Travel in November if you can.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: NFL Commissioner Paul Tagliabue, columnist William F. Buckley Jr., artist Henri De Toulouse-Lautrec, actress Geraldine Fitzgerald.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): People are not always what they seem. Stay on guard when dealing with strangers. Romance could have its ups and downs. You may need a day alone to think things out.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A good day to treat yourself to a special excursion or to dinner at a favorite restaurant. Hosting a small gathering at home may also sound appealing. Keep the menu simple.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Pack your bag and take off! Travel is good for both your soul and your pocketbook. New business contacts await. Let others do things for you for a change. Bask in their attention.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A change of scenery means lots of fun today. You will enjoy attending an event with an international flavor. A romantic partner or friend is impressed by the diplomatic way you handle people.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): If you ask questions, be prepared to receive some surprising answers. Peace of mind comes when you and mate put all of your cards on the table. Combine forces and you both win big!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Go ahead and express your opinions today. You may find someone who is very sympathetic to your imaginative approach. Pursue the truth wherever it may lead. Athletic activities are favored this evening.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Wise counsel is available. Seek the advice of someone who has had a great deal of practical experience. Avoid those who believe that they know it all for mysterious reasons unconnected with facts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Put first things first. Fun and games may have to wait. If you have the solution to a family member's problem, step forward and help. Travel could lead to a fulfilling new romance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You cannot afford to do nothing if you receive a call for help. Spring into action! Good luck comes to those who pursue what they want from life. Contact an influential friend.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Being independent is fine, so long as you not overdo it. Welcome constructive suggestions. Romance dominates your thoughts later today. Regular exercise is good for you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The best is still to come! Indulge a loved one's whim. Later today, surround yourself with people who share your ideals and interests. Recreational pursuits should include family.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You thrive on a challenge. Grab a tennis racket and spend the day on the court with friends. A new romantic interest is part of the picture. Make your intentions clear.

There's a saying from the Old Country: If you drink the water you die, and if you don't drink the water you die! South found out exactly what it meant on this hand from the Middle East Championship.

The report carries no auction, so we don't know how South managed to become declarer at three no trump after West opened one heart. We can only presume some auction such as the one above, where South magnified an initial overbid with another extremely aggressive action.

Had West found a diamond opening lead, matters would have settled very quickly. But no blame attaches to West's actual choice of the king of hearts. Declarer took the ace in dummy, led a club to the king and continued the suit to the jack and ace, setting up the suit.

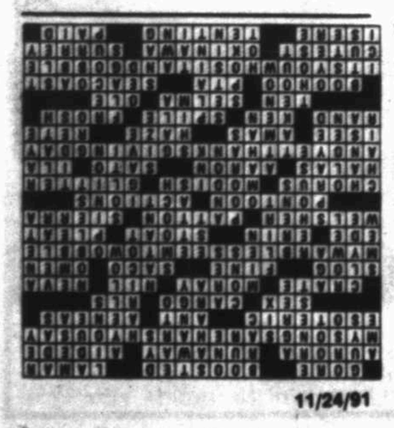

East got the defenders back into the game by shifting to the ten of spades. Declarer played low and West was in with the king. The hand was at the crossroads.

West made no mistake. After cashing the queen of hearts for the defenders' third trick, West then exited with a spade, and declarer was trapped. South could leave the lead in dummy and run the clubs, but then would have to surrender the last two tricks to the defense by leading away from the king of diamonds. Alternatively, South could overtake in hand and lead a diamond toward the king in a desperate hope that West held no more spades. Since that was the only chance, the defenders took the ace of diamonds and two more spade tricks for down two.

As they say in the Old Country ...

Exhibit starts tour at museum

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Richly ornate Chinese "dragon robes" and decorative furnishings in exquisite silks are among the precious textiles getting a rare showing at The Minneapolis Institute of Arts this fall.

The silks belong to the institute's permanent collection. In the exhibition "Imperial Silks of the Ch'ing Dynasty" many are being shown on display together for the first time. China's Ch'ing Dynasty lasted from 1644-1912.

Even in the sheltered atmosphere of a museum, collections of Chinese silks are seldom put out on public display because of potential damage from light and humidity. Because of the materials' fragility, the exhibition will be shown only in Minneapolis, Oct. 6-Dec. 29.

DOW: Performing is part of surviving

(From 1F)

When she is not performing, Miss Dow helps her husband, who formerly was executive director of the Van Cliburn Competition Foundation, in Fort Worth, with his work.

"We work together a lot as a team. He's the best fundraiser I've ever met in my life, especially arts fundraiser," said Miss Dow, recently appointed as the chairperson of the Concerned Citizens for the Arts in Fort Worth.

"It's a very tricky business," she said. "If people don't conceive how important the arts are, it's very hard to get them to understand. We have to put our money where our mouth is to have good arts."

The public nature of her life has been difficult for her family, whose members are more private in nature.

"I'm the first performer. At first, it was very hard ... mostly for my parents. My father's a doctor and my mother's a teacher and was one of the prime movers in primary education. Because of the things that my parents did, they were very private people, and I'm a very public person by virtue of the fact that I'm a performer. If you're going to go out and sing, people are going to know about your life."

She credits her uncle, Alden Dow, who also was influential in Don Jaeger's life, with helping her to smooth her path.

"I had an uncle who was a brilliant architect, and he, thank goodness, made it all right with my parents for me to be a performer; otherwise, I don't think they ever could have dealt with it."

It was obvious to Miss Dow rather early on in life that her abilities did not lie in the same arena as did those of other members of her family.

"I flunked chemistry. It was one of my great failures in life. My voice teacher, who taught the class, told me, 'It's not worth trying to save you on this count, Judy,'" said Miss Dow, whose grandfather, Herbert Henry Dow, founded the Dow Chemical Co. in 1897.

"I've always been very proud of my family. It's hard not to be proud of them. There's a lot of achievers. And in the nucleus of my small family, there's a lot of incredible achievers, too."

It was difficult for Miss Dow to become a "public person."

"But Alden was very clear. If you don't do the things that you have to do especially as a performer, you deny what is inside of you, and you just live an unhappy life.

"That's my survivorship. It's one time that family doesn't count. You have to deal with what personally is inside of you in order to be the kind of person that you were destined to be. And I've met too many people in my life who denied what they are, and that's such a loss in their lives.

"I told my kids once, I never wanted to reach old age and say, 'Gee. I could have ...' because that's the worst thing you can do. Fortunately, they've done the same thing for themselves. They have made changes in their lives when they felt they weren't fulfilling what it is they wanted to do. I think that's good."

anniversary of Pearl Harbor Day, the Dec. 7, 1941, attack by Japan which plunged the United States into World War II.

Sponsors for the concert include Shell Oil Co., Hy-Bon Engineering Co. and Team Bank. The Dec. 6 performance is sold out. For reservations to the Dec. 5 performance call 563-5269. The 8 p.m. concert will feature cabaret-style seating in front of a stage surrounded by actual World War II aircraft.

Miss Dow traces her love for the arts to her childhood. One of five daughters, whose physician father was overseas during World War II, Miss Dow said, "My mother talked a dance teacher (Sylvia Hamer) into coming to Ann Arbor to teach, she was so afraid all her daughters would be raised clumsy.

"She started a studio in our basement when I was 2. I started taking dance classes because I wasn't in school. I would sit downstairs and watch the classes taking place. I was pretty involved in it in my youth."

She remembers when her father, who later founded the Children's Clinic at the University of Michigan, came home after the war.

"I spent my early years in an all-girl house. We had an awful good time in our all-girl house so when he came home, we had to adjust to him," said Miss Dow. She laughed, then added, "The wonderful justice in it is he has 10 grandchildren and 8 of them are boys and two of them are girls."

Miss Dow, now a grandmother who finds that relationship "the best thing in the world," knew what her calling was early in life.

"I was destined for the performing arts as a child and one way or another I was going to tie them all together.

"The terrible thing I did was I got married when I was 19. It's not so terrible now because I had two wonderful children. It took me until I was in my mid 20s to know that I had ignored everything that was important to me.

"I, the mother of two children, said, 'Wait a minute. I've got to sing, or I'm not a complete person.'"

And sing she did. Miss Dow performed in local choruses, church choir and musical theater in Ann Arbor, while she waited for sons Charlie Riecker, now 31, and Steven Riecker, now 33, to grow up and go off to college.

She planned to embark on a professional career in New York City when they had left home. In the meantime, she was grateful to be in Ann Arbor, a community she described as "a wonderful city. If you want to do something, you can do it in Ann Arbor and do it better than you can any place else. That is, if you are creative."

Although Miss Dow performed lots of musical theater because she "loved the combination of dance, acting and singing," she knew what her favorite of the three was.

"Singing has always been my favorite mostly because you can do all three of them at once when you are singing...

"I've been in dance recitals all my life and skating carnivals. We were all very active kids. I'd done lots of performing but I knew when I was singing the Fairy Queen that that's what I wanted to do."

Capra will leave 'Today' show

NEW YORK (AP) — Tom Capra, executive producer of NBC's "Today" show, will leave the venerable morning program after its 40th anniversary in January.

Capra has signed an exclusive production and development deal with NBC Productions, John J. Agoglia, president of NBC Enterprises and executive vice president of NBC Production, said Thursday.

"We look forward to having Tom Capra with us as an executive producer of made-for-television movies and miniseries," Agoglia said.

"In addition to the long-form development, since Tom is a 20-year veteran of news producing, we plan to tap his expertise in reality-based programming for network series projects," Agoglia added.

There was no immediate word on who would succeed Capra.

EPCOT

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last article of a three-part series — visiting Magic Kingdom, MGM Studios and Pleasure Island, and Epcot Center — about Walt Disney World's 20th anniversary celebration.

By Elizabeth Edwin Lifestyle Editor

If ever there was a theme park for adults that would still interest and entertain children, Walt Disney World's Epcot Center fits the bill. It is an amazing array of the cultures of many nations and the visions of the future combined into one theme park.

Epcot Center was the brainchild of Walt Disney himself. Up until his death in December 1966, he laid the groundwork for his grand concept, directing the planning of environmental concepts and developing basic philosophies for EPCOT — which stands for Experimental Prototype Community of Tomorrow.

"Epcot will be an experimental prototype community of tomorrow that will take its cue from the new ideas and new technologies that are now emerging from the creative centers of American industry," Walt Disney said.

According to his philosophy, Epcot would never be complete, but rather would always be introducing, testing and demonstrating new materials and systems.

Although Walt Disney did not live to see his dream come to fruition, Roy O. Disney filled his famous brother's shoes, and

MHS class of 1931 meets for reunion

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

Members of the Midland High School Class of 1931 recently held their 60-year reunion.

McKnight-Harrison

The arrangements committee was headed by Nancy Rankin McKinley and also included Janelle Edwards Belau, Martha Louise Nobles Black, Mary Caroline Sims Keisling and Mary Katherine Hogsett Mills.

Festivities began with a cocktail party hosted by Mrs. Mills and her husband, John B., at their home. Mrs. McKinley presented each guest with a purple and gold enamel lapel pin, a gift from A.A. "Red" Johnson of Cameron, who was unable to attend.

The following morning, the class gathered at Mrs. McKinley's home for a champagne brunch. The members perused memorabilia, including carefully preserved newspaper clippings of previous reunions, early-day Catoico annuals, photos and a treasured "School Days" album kept by the late Marian Wadley. Among its pages was the original program for the black-tie opening of the Yucca Theatre on Dec. 5, 1929, which prompted Mrs. Keisling to recall that her date for the gala affair was Tom Potter. Mrs. Belau, Catoico Queen of 1931, wore a special gold sweatshirt, decorated with purple.

That evening, Mrs. Belau and her husband, Paul, hosted a buffet supper at their home. The gate to the courtyard was decorated with a large drawing of the school mascot, a Bulldog, and across the mantle was a gold swatch with purple lettering: Welcome Class of 1931.

Two of the class's teachers, Stella Maye Lanham and Lillie B. (Mrs. Holt) Jowell, were special guests. Lena Soloman Douglass sent her regrets.

Other class members attending were David and Irene (Lord) Allen, Sammu Lane Cobb O'Neal, Conrad Dunagan, Hazel Marie Graham Ethridge, John Kings Jr., Olen Fryar, Alma Lee Norwood Jones, "Ham" Pinnell, Avalyn Pogue Whitmire and Dorothy Bess Stanley Wallace.

As the reunion drew to a close, David Allen was heard to remark, "We ought to 'jack up' the meetings a little, like maybe every five years," with which everyone concurred.

THE LADIES ASSOCIATION of Ranchland Hills Country Club enjoyed a Mexican buffet and a nostalgia-filled program at a recent meeting.

Entertainment began and ended with a rendition of the jitterbug by members of the Midland Community Theatre Singers, under the direction of Linda Bond, director of marketing and development.

Under the auspices of Radio Station VICTORY, the Red Cross-dressed singers presented a delightful musical review, entitled "A Wing and a Prayer." It consisted of World War II songs, including such old favorites as "Love That Guy," "How Deep Is the Ocean" and "You Made Me Love You."

Incorporated into the radio program were a visit from "Mamie Eisenhower" and the singing of "Happy Birthday" to Ginny Ketter. The program concluded as the cast and audience joined in singing "God Bless America."

Paisley dressed pepper plants decorated the luncheon tables.

Among those seen in the crowd were Sally (Mrs. Bill) Stella, Jane (Mrs. Johnny) Mulloy, Nancy (Mrs. Cecil) Ellis and Leona Bryant (Mrs. Walter) Smith.

DALLASITES LINDA AND Larry Petty entertained for the Midland Country Club Ladies Association's November luncheon meeting. They play music to suit all tastes — Broadway, blues, Top 40, country western, old standards and gospel.

The audience was entralled with Linda's captivating style and her broad vocal range and Larry's virtuosity at the piano.

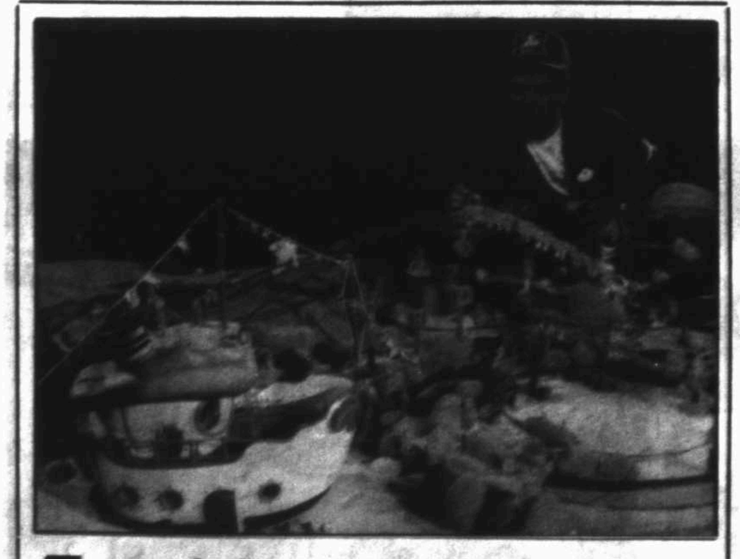

The couple have worked with such stars as The Carpenters, Nancy Wilson and Phyllis Diller and on stage at both The Sahara and Caesar's Palace in Las Vegas, as well as The Fairmont Hotels in New Orleans, Dallas and San Francisco. They perform with their band, The Main Event, much sought after in the Dallas-Fort Worth metroplex.

Hostesses for the social hour were Winnie (Mrs. T.B.) O'Brien, Marjorie (Mrs. Clarence) Cardwell and Mimi (Mrs. Robert K.) Beggs.

Fall arrangements decorated the tables, and the luncheon menu featured Sliced Roasted Turkey Breast, Cranberry Salad and Pumpkin Pie.

Those enjoying the program included Liz (Mrs. Hy) Davidson, Linda (Mrs. Rodney) Satterwhite, Tess (Mrs. E.C.) Latham and Robbie (Mrs. Roy) Davidson.

Toontown soon

EPCOT: Learning is fun in Future World along with a creative staff, saw not only Walt Disney World to realization, but opened Epcot Center as a permanent international showplace covering 260 acres Oct. 1, 1982.

Epcot Center is shaped something like a giant hourglass. The Entrance Plaza opens into Future World, which fills the northern half of the hourglass, while World Showcase occupies the southern half. There are numerous shows and entertainment throughout both sections of the park which will be listed on a schedule available at Earth Station or from various merchants throughout the park.

Most guests at Epcot Center enter the front gate, stop at Earth Station for the day's schedule, then begin to wander from one pavilion to another in Future World. A better move is to head straight to the back of the park, in World Showcase and begin working your way around the nations during the morning hours. By afternoon, many of the guests who spent their mornings waiting in lines will reach the World Showcase, at which time you can make tracks for Future World and work your way around each pavilion, usually with much shorter lines.

As you enter the park, you will find yourself in Future World, which will bring you face to face with not only the fascinating facts of the past, but a vision of the wonders in our future.

FUTURE WORLD examines complex and often controversial concepts such as agriculture, communication, the ocean, energy, health, imagination and transportation — which tends to make going to the park sound a little like a day at school. But when these topics are presented with a touch of Disney magic, they suddenly become exciting, irresistible, interesting and fun.

Crossing Entrance Plaza, straight ahead is the imposing silver geosphere — which has become Epcot Center's hallmark — Spaceship Earth (which is not to be confused with Earth Station, which is at its base).

Spaceship Earth is completely round, held aloft by 6 legs supported by pylons sunk 100 feet into the ground (a good thing since the geosphere weighs 1 million pounds). Many say it looks like a giant golf ball sitting on a tee.

Inside Spaceship Earth is a continuous chain of "time machines" that slowly take you on a 15-minute journey along a quarter-mile track. Your "time machine" transports you back through time to the dawn of man, and then you begin your trek forward in time. The detail put into every scene along your time journey is amazing, with everything from lifelike Audio-Animatronic figures to reproductions of hieroglyphics from an Egyptian temple and a steam-powered press. Along the way, you also will notice scents that are appropriate to the scene, from the musty smell in the time tunnel to the stench of smoldering timbers in a fallen Rome. This effect is created by a "smelitzer," a Disney effect that shoots aromatic whiffs, and is used in some of the other Future World pavilions as well.

The "high point" of your journey is at the top of the 180-foot tall sphere (18 stories high) as you gaze into a vast dome filled with what appear to be tiny stars. They are projected by Disney's "star ball," an invention of the special effects department when it was discovered that the geosphere was too large for conventional planetarium equipment.

EARTH STATION, directly below Spaceship Earth, is the place to go to make reservations for lunch or dinner at any of the park's restaurants or to find out anything you could possible want to know about Epcot Center.

Leaving Earth Station and traveling counter-clockwise around Future World, you will first come to Communicore West. Its mirror-image — Communicore East — sits directly across from it with a fountain courtyard in the center. In addition to fast-food eateries, Communicore West is home to FutureCom, exhibits of how people gather information, including some hands-on displays such as touch-sensitive TV screens and numerous computer games.

Moving on, you will come to "The Living Seas." Although you won't find Disney's "The Little Mermaid" here, you will find the largest facility ever dedicated to man's relationship with the ocean. There are numerous exhibits offering visitors insight "under the sea." Be sure to take the "Caribbean Coral Reef Ride" that lands you at "Sea Base Alpha." You start your journey in "hydrolators," (basically elevators) simulate taking you down deep into the sea.

You then take 2-passenger sea cabs through the coral reef. The man-made reef exists in a 5.7 million gallon tank where more than 200 varieties of sea life, ranging from crustaceans to large predators, live in an environment that accurately recreates the chemistry and life-support ecosystems of the Caribbean Sea. Even the food for these creatures has been simulated in taste, chemistry and nutritional value.

At Sea Base Alpha, an underwater research station, visitors can view the sea from two levels (through clear acrylic panels) and talk with marine scientist.

Guests also can see scuba divers testing and demonstrating the latest diving equipment as they carry on training experiments with dolphins. Other undersea attractions include a diver in a "JIM" suit, the latest in atmospheric diving-wear technology.

There is an additional 6,000 gallon tank coral reef display at Sea Base Alpha that is home to Bermuda morays, barracuda and bonnethead sharks.

WHEN YOU'VE HAD enough of the seas, head for "The Land," a 6-acre, skylighted pavilion that examines almost everyone's favorite subject — food — and techniques that may help feed our growing population.

"Listen to the Land," a 13- to 14-minute boat ride, ventures into three ecological communities — the rain forest, the desert and the prairie — that existed before man arrived on Earth. The voyage continues through American farms before reaching an experimental greenhouse where farming techniques of tomorrow are being tested. You will see squash and cucumbers that weigh as much as 50-pounds, and plants that are growing without soil, the roots hanging in the air being continuously sprayed with nutrients that must contain some Disney magic as well.

Also located in "The Land" are two theater shows. "Kitchen Kabaret" is a clever, zany show about good nutrition featuring Audio-Animatronics foodstuffs dancing and singing. "Harvest Theater" features a 20-minute film on a 23x60-foot screen titled "Symbiosis," a sobering story of man's impact on the environment. However, don't be turned away by that. The film also includes many beautiful scenes from about 30 nations. It is well worth the time.

ALTHOUGH THE scientific research at "The Land" seems to be using a lot of imagination, you'll find even more imagination just next door. The "Journey Into Imagination" pavilion may provide some of the most exciting entertainment in Future World.

Dreamfinder, a red-headed professor, and Figment, an impish purple baby dragon, (two Audio-Animatronics characters) serve as your guides on the 14-minute ride-along journey that gave the pavilion its name. They show you how all innovation starts with just "One Little Spark," which is the magical quality of imagination that dwells inside everyone.

When you are about three-quarters of the way through the ride, look for flashing lights. Once you see them, sit up straight and smile, your picture will be taken and then it is flashed on a screen for you to see at the end of the ride.

The top attraction at "Journey Into Imagination" is at the Magic Eye Theater where visitors have the opportunity to experience "Captain EO," the dazzling 3-D musical fantasy starring Michael Jackson as the captain of a spaceship. This "Star Wars"-like film also uses laser lights and projection devices to help pull you into the action. Jackson is not the only big name involved in this adventure, either. Angelica Huston plays the evil Supreme Leader, George Lucas of "Star Wars" fame was producer and Francis Ford Coppola ("The Godfather," and "Apocalypse Now") was director.

When approaching "Journey Into Imagination," it may appear to have very long lines. However, the line for the ride moves relatively quickly, and, if you are looking to see "Captain EO,' just keep to the left and bypass the "Journey" line. Enter the building through the three sets of double doors to the right of the fountains and go on in.

But on your way out, be sure to pause for a moment and watch these quirky fountains. The Jellyfish Fountains spurt streams of water that spread out at the top, look like their namesake sea creature for an instant, and then fall back to earth. The Serpentine Fountains almost seem as if the water is playing games with you. The fountains send out smooth streams of water that arc from one garden plot to another, which then sends a stream of water to another plot, and so on; perfect for a game of chase.

And don't miss "The Image Works," a creative playground of the future where you can challenge your own imagination. But be careful, there are stories of children crying when made to leave.

"WORLD OF MOTION" is the next pavilion where guests can journey through transportation's history and future via a whimsical show full of Audio-Animatronics figures and exhibits that look far into the future of transportation. This 14- to 15-minute ride-through attraction begins with a look back as far as foot power being the only form of transportation known man. After 22 scenes and over 150 Audio-Animatronics figures, you reach the final scene, which shows Americans enjoying the good life in vintage cars that looked new not that long ago.

The "Transcenter" is a showroom of sorts that offers a look at the latest model GM cars and entertaining exhibits about 20th century's most important means of transportation.

Drawing on the wisdom of countless scientists, the 3-acre "Horizons" pavilion was created and opened in 1983. Riding along an incredible journey, "Horizons" allows you to blast off to examine the marvels of past visionaries through the wonders of micro- and macro-photography, with never-before-seen images unfolding onto a large screen.

"HORIZONS" ALSO takes you off to explore four future habitats — the urban environment of tomorrow, a robotics-staffed desert farm, a working ocean colony and a "space city" where asteroid mining and zero-gravity crystal are manufactured as a part of everyday life.

At the ride's conclusion, passengers have the opportunity to select their journey's end by pressing a button to select a future environment to explore on their own "New Horizon." A device within your vehicle then delivers a 30-second filmed experience with sound and sensation effects.

"Wonders of Life," which was added to Future World in 1989, offers some of the most entertaining attractions at Epcot. The 100,000-square-foot geodesic dome and two attached buildings offer guests a serious yet amusing look at health, fitness and modern lifestyles.

"BODY WARS" CREATES science fiction at its best as Disney's state-of-the-art simulator theater miniaturizes you and your crew and propels you on a rollicking 4.5-minute ride through the human body, much like the movie "Inner Space."

Once you've taken the trip through the body, it's time to visit the mind in "Cranium Command," a silly but delightful look at the workings of a 12-year-old-boy's brain, which is piloted by "Buzzy," a Audio-Animatronics figure who is in command.

the enormously exaggerated head of the subject, which you are inside of. The eyes are actually rear-projection video screens that offer guests the vision of the young boy. Other parts of the body — the right and left brain, the stomach, the heart and the adrenal gland — are all represented by famous celebrities. The favorites include George Wendt ("Norm" from "Cheers") who operates the stomach, and "Hans and Franz" from "Saturday Night Live" who are the heart and adrenal gland.

OTHER POPULAR attractions at "Wonders of Life" are "The Making of Me," a film that explores the mysteries and wonders of pregnancy and birth; "Goofy About Health," a favorite of the kids as Goofy cavorts across seven screens in a cartoon city street explaining the do's and don'ts of good health; and the "AnaComical Players" who present improvisational skits themed to health topics.

AFTER EXPENDING so much energy at the "Wonders of Life," find out where energy really comes from at the "Universe of Energy."

Although the pavilion itself is interesting to look at, it does not give a clue to all the wonders awaiting inside. As you enter the Energy show, it appears to be a movie theater. However, after viewing the first film, shown on a 14x90-foot projection surface, the floor rotates and curtains draw back to expose a 32x155-foot screen for the second film.

After the second film, the "theater seats" rotate again and begin to break into sections that slowly move forward into a journey of three-dimensional recreations of the primeval world that created much of the energy we use today. The ride-along portion of the Energy show features sulfur-scented air, eerie lighting, crashes of thunder, flashes of lightning, an erupting volcano and numerous Audio-Animatronics dinosaurs-type animals. Even the air-temperature of the regions you pass through seem to change with the scenes.

At the conclusion is a motion picture shown on a 220-degree screen which dramatizes the sources of energy for the future and features a computer-animated light show.

Although the ride itself is fascinating, the technology behind it is even more amazing. The traveling vehicles, which are 29x18-feet, are guided along the floor by an ⅛-inch thick wire, and some of the pavilion's energy is generated by the 2 acres of photovoltaic cells mounted on the building's roof. The Energy show last about 45 minutes.

THIS BRINGS you full circle to Communicore East where "Backstage Magic" is the featured attraction. Here, Julie, a holographic computer operator, and her sidekick Input/Output take guests on a journey through the history of computers. They also show the extensive role computers play in the day-to-day operation of Walt Disney World, from processing reservations to operating the life-like Disney Audio-Animatronics.

At the Electronic Forum in Communicore East, Epcot guests have the opportunity to vote in the largest public opinion poll ever conducted. Guest place their vote for the "Person of the Century," the individual who made the greatest impact on the 20th century, at special computer terminal. The winner will be announced Jan. 1, 2000, after votes are cast by millions of people using touch-screen computer terminals.

While Future World may seem like a tough act to follow, there is a lot more awaiting visitors at Epcot Center.

THE WORLD SHOWCASE presents a celebration of the cultures and people of 11 countries, portrayed with all their dazzling variety.

You enter the World Showcase at the Plaza. From there, you can you can walk all the way around the Showcase Promenade, or skip a few nations by hopping one of the five 66-foot water taxis, called Friendship launches, which shuttle guests back and forth across the World Showcase Lagoon.

The Showcase Lagoon is the site for two major attractions at Epcot Center that are in honor of Walt Disney World's 20th anniversary celebration, which will continue through 1992.

The daytime extravaganza is called "Surprise in the Skies." Brilliant fireworks, colored smoke, boats with multi-colored flags that pull six colorful delta-wing kites into the air, 10 paraplanes flying the colors of Epcot Center's World Showcase nations and hang gliders with colorful streamers are all a part of the celebration. As the paraplanes get closer to the lagoon, the pilots materialize as Mickey, Minnie, Pluto, Goofy, Chip, Dale, Pooh and Tigger.

Patriotic tunes introduce Mickey's red, white and blue paraplane flying above the American Adventure pavilion. The squadron of paraplanes joins in the display with a release of red, white and blue smoke.

As the paraplanes circle, 35-foot-high cold-air balloons of Disney characters in international garb pop up along World Showcase promenade and become rallying points for the "real-live" characters to meet and greet Epcot Center guests.

In fact, guests can even schedule to start the day with Mickey Mouse and Minnie Mouse as the Mouses make a special guest appearance every morning for the character breakfasts in Epcot Center, and perform throughout the day at World Showcase Plaza along with friends Donald Duck, Goofy, Pluto and Chip 'n' Dale.

ONE OF THE most beautiful times in the World Showcase is after the sun goes down. At 9 p.m. each evening, the nations come to dazzling life with "IllumiNations." There are excellent viewing areas all around the World Showcase Lagoon, but the World Showcase Plaza probably offers the best all-around point of vantage, but be sure to plan to pick a place close to the lagoon's fence early or you'll be peaking over many heads in order to see.

This Disney spectacular features lasers that weave light pictures in time with lyrical fantasies of classical favorites. Fountains and fireworks make this an extravaganza of unimaginable proportion. In addition to all the fanfare happening on and over the lagoon, each of the nations facades are lined in brilliant white lights that change with the music until the finale when all the nations are illuminated.

As you start your journey around the nations, the World Showcase offers the world of travel without ever leaving Epcot Center.

Each of these pavilions demonstrates Disney's conception of that country's essence, much as a traveler might remember of what he or she saw while visiting. Shops, restaurants and an occasional special attraction are all housed in a group of structures that represent a nation's art and architecture in order to create the distinct flavor of that nation's countryside.

All wares on display in the shops represent the country in whose pavilion they are offered for sale and the food in the restaurants focus on the native cuisine. The entertainment is as authentic as the Disney casting director can make it, with native performers regularly featured. In fact, even the vegetation in each nation is planted as closely as possible to what would be found in the featured nation.

IF YOU TRAVEL clockwise around the lagoon from the Plaza, you will begin your tour of the nations South of the Border in Mexico. The main attractions here are featured in a five-tiered Mayan pyramid, including an exhibition hall displaying Mexican art and Plaza de los Amigos, where no matter what time of day it is outside, the plaza sits under an evening sky with twinkling stars.

At the far end of the plaza flows a river with a pyramid rising from the opposite bank. You can board a boat and take an 6-minute cruise past the pyramid and a glowing volcano, then down "El Rio Del Tiempo," or "The River of Time."

Back in the plaza, the rhythms of mariachi and marimba bands add to the atmosphere.

Norway, completed in 1988, is the newest nation to join the World Showcase. It introduces Maelstrom, a thrilling ride in dragon-headed Viking craft that send you plunging down into the fury of the North Sea to encounter the myths and legends of Norway as they come to life in the forms of the three-headed troll and the Vikings.

At the entrance of the Norwegian pavilion stands a replica of a stave church, a distinctive type of wooden building found only in Norway, patterned after the Gol Church built around 1250. There also is a Norwegian castle fashioned after Akershus, a 14th century fortress still standing in Oslo's harbor.

Be sure not to miss the 50-foot "Norseman" outside on the Showcase Lagoon. It is an exact replica of the Viking ship believed to have carried Bjarni Herjulfsson and his explorers on their 10th-century voyage to the New World.

CHINA IS YOUR next destination where you can enter Disney's equivalent of Beijing's Temple of Heaven and travel via Circle Vision 360 to the Forbidden City, the Great Wall and down the Yangtze River in the "Wonders of China." This 19-minute presentation involved the work not only of Disney cameramen, but of Chinese camera crews as well because of restrictions placed on the Disney crew by the Chinese government.

"Liu Yin Ge," or House of the Whispering Willows is easily overlooked sitting between the Street of Good Fortune and the Hall of Prayer for Good Harvest, but it houses a museum exhibiting Chinese art treasures.

Next door in the World Showcase is Germany, showing Bavarian-styled buildings with gables and towers circling round a cobblestone plaza. Shops in this pavilion feature such items as Hummel figurines and Goebel giftware, an art and book store and a wine cellar. You'll also find a lot of oom-pah-pah bands at the ongoing Octoberfest.

In Italy, you can travel to St. Mark's Square in Venice, where you can laugh with street players who may trick you into starring in an impromptu performance. In the recreated St. Mark's Square you will find replicas of Venice's Doges's Palace and the Campanile, scaled down from the original 324-foot structure to Epcot's 105-foot red-brick bell tower.

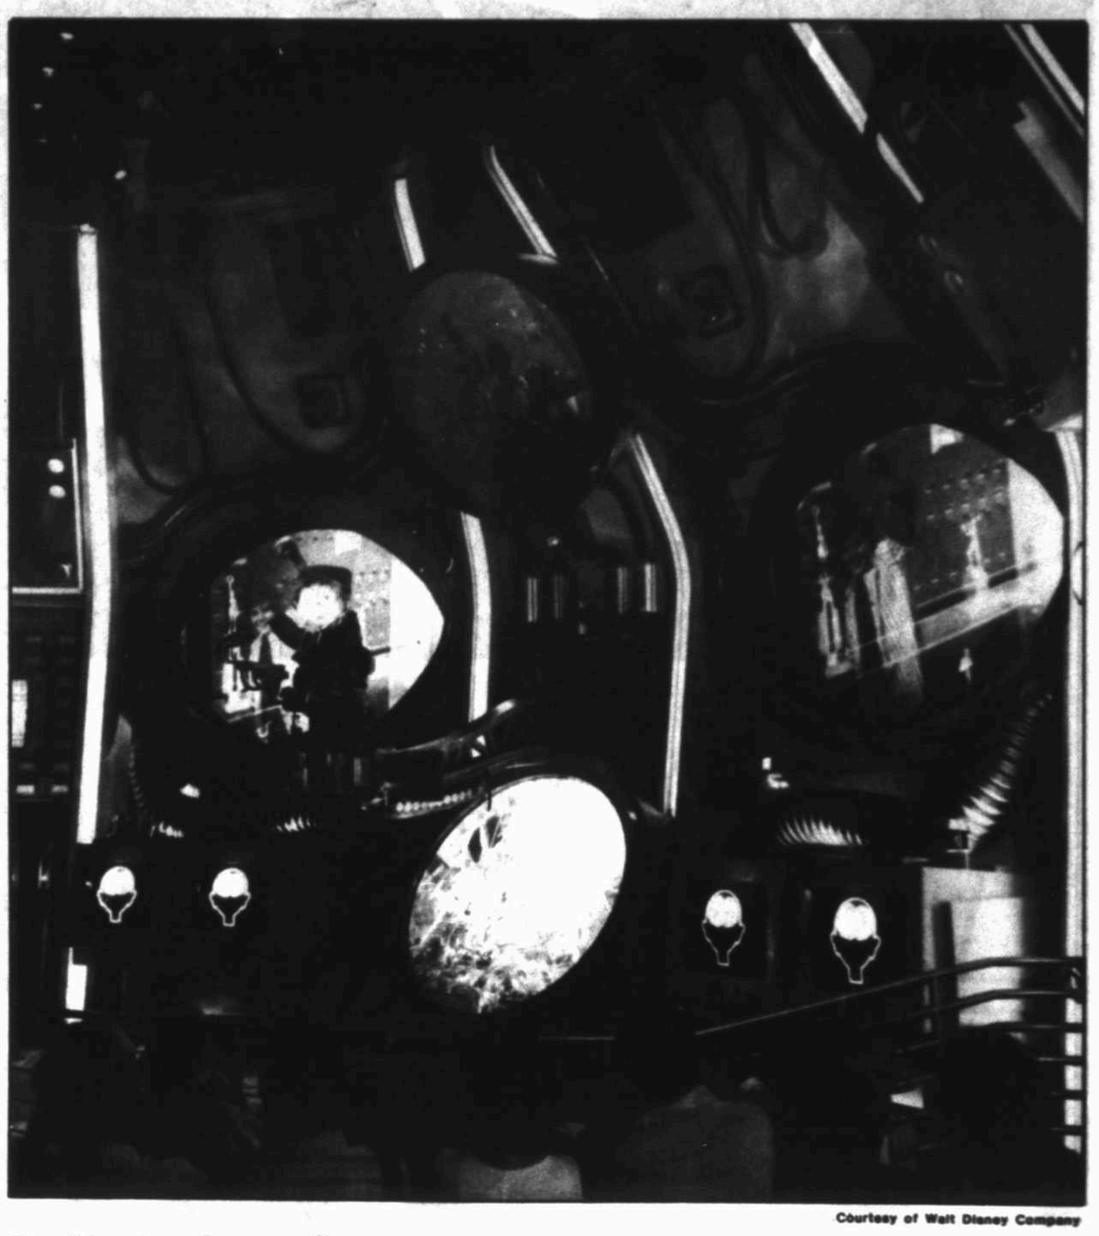

NOW IT'S TIME to take a break from your foreign travel and head home for "The American Adventure." This is the centerpiece of World Showcase offering an inspirational multi-media, multi-dimensional tribute to the American dream.

It is housed in an early-American red-brick mansion. Inside the rotunda is a 1,000-seat theater where Ben Franklin and Mark Twain, via Disney's Audio-Animatronics, present a 30-minute dramatic and inspirational story of America and its people through a magical mix of 35 Audio-Animatronics players with motion pictures and "imagineering." The story begins in our nation's earliest years and comes right up to the present. The historical detail in this pavilion may prove enlightening to even the best of history buffs.

Along the lagoon you will find the "America Gardens by the Shore," an outdoor theater that uses the World Showcase Lagoon and Spaceship Earth as a backdrop. A variety of entertainment can be seen here daily. A small billboard a the theater lists the day's performances.

Full of history and pride from America, it's time to head back overseas to learn more about foreign lands. The first stop is in Japan where you can stroll through formal gardens and visit the "Bijutsu-kan Gallery," an exhibit featuring traditional and contemporary Japanese art forms (also known as "Echos Through Time"). Shop in the Mitsukoshi Department Store for dolls, fine porcelain, kimonos and Japanese handicrafts.

YOUR EPCOT JOURNEY of the nations then takes you to Morocco, a showcase added in 1984. At first glance, this pavilion appears small, but behind a wall with three gateways recreating the "Bab Boujoulaoud" you will find the heart of Morocco. Wind you way through ancient streets, examining leather goods, carpets and gifts produced by Moroccan artisans. Moroccan musicians and dancers perform frequently throughout the pavilion.

The "Cranium Command" theater in the "Wonders of Life" at Epcot Center in Walt Disney World takes guests inside the head of a 12-year-old boy for a light-hearted look at how daily events trigger physical and emotional reactions. "Buzzy," an Audio-Animatronics character, negotiates his way — along with a "body crew" — through a dramatization of the relationship between the boy's mind and body.

In a 200-degree film that surrounds you with French music and scenery, Disney takes you to the French countryside in "Impressions de France" shown in the "Palais Du Cinema," a sit-down theater (a good place to rest your feet a while). This enchanting 18-minute travel film takes its viewers from one end of France to the other.

The French pavilion's Eiffel Tower rises 100-feet in the background as an accurate one-tenth replica of Gustaf Eiffel's original blueprints.

Moving on to a land of British accents and Scottish woolens, the United Kingdom pavilion offers visitors a stroll down an elegant London Square. There are several shops and a pub that serves a selection of British-brewed beers and ales. If that's not you cup of tea, but a cup of tea is, stop in at Rose & Crown Dining Room for British fare and tea service (reservations suggested).

THE LAST ADVENTURE on your journey of the nations finds visiting America's neighbor Canada. The featured attraction in this pavilion is "O Canada!" a Circle Vision 360 film that showcases Canada's great outdoors. Within the pavilion is a totem pole, a trading post and an elaborate, mansard-roofed hotel similar to ones built by the Canadian railroads as they pushed west around the turn of the century.

For the future in World Showcase, Disney has a Soviet Union pavilion under consideration and plans are underway to add a Switzerland pavilion, complete with a Matterhorn bobsled ride similar to the popular attraction at Disneyland in California.

In the future for Future World is a new pavilion devoted to space exploration, and exciting new demonstrations of 21st century technologies are being prepared for Future World's Communicore.

Other potential additions include an onion-domed Russia Showcase, a new high-tech 3-D motion picture for "Journey into Imagination" and the ultimate intergalactic thrill attraction, "Journeys in Space."

So put on your best walking shoes, start early and plan to stay late, and don't be disappointed if you don't cover the entire park in one day. It really isn't possible.

ANNIVERSARY

Couple observes 60 years together

Dovie and Alton Sorge of Midland were guests of honor at a 60th wedding anniversary reception at their home. Hosts were the couple's children.

Sorge and the former Dovie Marie Brown were married Nov. 18, 1931, in Midland County. They have five children — Don Sorge, Jerry Sorge and Peggy Byrom of Midland; Mae Fern Doyle of Weatherford; and Barb Britton of San Antonio — as well as 11 grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

The couple lived on McClintic Ranch in Midland County before moving to Midland in 1937. Sorge is retired from Schlumberger. He and his wife attend Calvary Baptist Church.

Divorce is difficult for children too

Associated Press

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — Though divorce is unpleasant, it need not traumatize children forever, says psychologist JoAnne Pedro-Carroll of the University of Rochester.

How parents handle it is the key to helping children cope, she says.

"Keep the conflict between you and your spouse," says Pedro-Carroll. "Don't fight in front of the children, or make them choose sides."

A common misconception children have, she says, is that if they had only behaved better, the parents wouldn't be divorcing.

To spare children these guilt feelings, parents should make sure the kids know the divorce isn't their fault.

Finally, she says, children need to know that the special kind of love a parent has for a child will never stop, even with a divorce.

Wildlife seen only on Madagascar

TANANRIVE, Madagascar (AP) — More than 100 species of birds and 140 species of frogs found nowhere else have developed in isolation over the more than 30 million years that this huge island has evolved off the eastern coast of Africa.

According to anthropologists, the island has more than 6,000 flowering plants not found anywhere else.

Madagascar's dwindling forests abound with a thousand species of orchids, more than are found on the African mainland, which is 50 times as large.

DEAR ABBY

First lady of columnists not of presidential stock

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a man who used to think your column was just another women's gossip column, so I never bothered to read it. Then my wife called my attention to something you wrote, and I'm glad she did because I have been an avid reader ever since.

Abby, I have a question you probably have been asked before. Are you a descendant of President Martin Van Buren? His wife's name was Abigail. — BRANDON WELSH, PHOENIX

Van Buren

DEAR MR. WELSH: No, Abigail Van Buren is my pen name. However, Martin Van Buren's wife's name was not Abigail — it was Hannah. Hannah bore him four sons, then died, leaving Van Buren a widower.

Martin Van Buren moved into the White House with four bachelor sons. One day, Dolley, the wife of James Madison, our fourth president, came to the White House accompanied by her beautiful young niece, Angelica Singleton, who was visiting from South Carolina.

President Van Buren's eldest son, Abraham, promptly fell in love with Angelica. They were married shortly after and moved into the White House where Abraham served as his father's private secretary, and Angelica assumed the duties of the first lady.

However, there were two presidents whose wives WERE named Abigail — John Adams (our second president) and Millard Fillmore (our 13th president).

I have probably told you much more about American presidents than you care to know, but I became fascinated with the American presidents B.C. (Before Column), and have been hooked on the subject ever since.

DEAR ABBY: What is this world coming to? My hairdresser, who is gay, told me that a powerful gay group is trying to legalize same-sex marriages.

Abby, I have nothing against homosexuals, but I can't understand why they need a "license" to live together. Please enlighten me. — FREDA IN FRESNO

DEAR FREDA: In most states, married couples have the legal right to be on each other's health, disability, life insurance and pension plans. They also get special tax exemptions, deductions and refunds. A married person may inherit property and have rights of survivorship that avoid inheritance tax.

If a couple is married, the spouse is legally "next of kin" in case of death or medical emergencies. Marriage is more than a piece of paper; it provides a couple with LEGAL protection.

I have had letters urging me to remind people with AIDS to see a lawyer and have a proper will drawn up in order to ensure that whatever they leave will go specifically to a person of their choice. In the absence of a will — the nearest next of kin (usually the parents) will inherit everything.

DEAR READERS: If you're looking for the perfect Bat (or Bar) Mitzvah gift, get "Deborah, Golda and Me: Being Female and Jewish in America" by Letty Cottin Pogrebin (published by Morrow). And buy one for yourself, but don't lend it to anyone — you'll never get it back. It's a book of interest to both sexes.

Hot off the press — Abby's new booklet, "The Anger in All of Us and How to Deal With It." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Anger Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

At The OPTIFAST® Program, You'd Be Surprised How We Measure Up.

It's a rare weight management program that measures up in both inches and dollars. Yet, that is what's surprising people about The OPTIFAST Program.

CALCULATE YOUR POTENTIAL WEIGHT LOSS
_____ (your current weight) X .20 = _____ (your potential weight loss after six months)*

A recent study shows that half of all people who completed 26 weeks of the Program maintained, on average, over 70% of their initial weight loss one year after completing the active weight loss phase of the Program. Our special maintenance program is recommended for helping you maintain your goal.

When it comes to dollars, our weight management Program can cost less than many commercial diets, if you have 50 lbs. or more to lose. Ask us about insurance coverage and flexible financing, too.

LIFESTYLE POLICIES

Policies for publication of announcements in the Lifestyle sections of the Reporter-Telegram are:

Information for Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Monday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the information is to be published. For example, an item for Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least two weeks before the wedding date. Wedding announcements must appear within one month of the event. Anniversary announcements — 25th or higher — must be published within one month of the anniversary date.

Announcements of pageant winners will only be published for teenage pageants and older. Photographes will be published only for winners, not runnerups. These announcements are published Thursdays. Deadline is 5 p.m. Monday.

All articles must be submitted in writing. Forms for weddings, engagements and anniversaries, only published Sundays, are available in the Lifestyle office. All materials must include the signature and telephone number of the person submitting them.

We cannot mail forms to persons in Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication. To have a photo returned by mail, include a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Unclaimed photos are discarded after a month.

Photographs may be submitted with wedding and engagement announcements, and anniversary announcements of 50 years or more, but are not required. A portrait of the bride-elect or of the future bride and bridegroom together may be submitted with engagement announcements. Portraits of the bride only or of the wedding couple may be submitted with wedding announcements. A different photo must be submitted for the engagement and wedding announcements.

Photos should be vertical, black and white, glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but quality reproduction cannot be assured. Snapshots generally are not acceptable and Polaroid shots are not accepted. The MRT reserves the right to deny publication of any photo.

There is no charge for publication of photographs and stories.

Holiday lights brighten Dallas Arboretum

Staff Report

DALLAS — The Dallas Arboretum and Botanical Garden will celebrate the winter season with a display of holiday splendor Nov. 30-Dec. 29.

The season will begin with the debut of the Holiday Outdoor Market featuring hundreds of gifts for the garden and the gardener as well as special holiday nature items. Chimes, tree ornaments, botanical Christmas cards and unique children's items are just a few of the highlights of this gallery of gifts. The Market will be open daily Nov. 30-Dec. 22.

To make shopping a real treat, the gift of music can be heard Saturday and Sunday afternoons and Thursday evenings during Market as the sounds of holiday bell choirs, classical guitar and chorale singers echo the season of celebration. The Children's Nature Workshop will keep the kids busy while they make their own tree decorations and bird feeders every weekend and Thursday evenings.

A special weekend will be added to celebrate the giving season as The Arboretum joins forces with WFAA-Channel 8 Santa's Helpers annual toy drive Dec. 14 and 15. Every visitor who brings a new, upwrapped toy for any age child will receive free admission for themselves and their immediate family to The Arboretum's special holiday celebration.

The star of the holiday celebratin since 1978 has been the decoration of the historic 21,000 square foot DeGolyer House. Dec. 7-29, this 1940s Spanish Colonial Revival style house will be adorned with elaborate holiday trimmings from 25 of Dallas' foremost designers in the Peace on Earth theme. Christmas at DeGolyer is available for guided tours.

The Women's Council, a support group of the Arboretum, is responsible for all of the decorations for the DeGolyer House and they will treat their members and many others to a special preview 7-10 p.m. Dec. 6. The Christmas at DeGolyer party will feature a silent auction of 35 Christmas trees donated by local florists, designers and retailers. The Boehm Gallery also has donated a porcelain dove figuine to complement the Peace on Earth theme.

The gardens also will sparkle with holiday color as pansies, hollies and hundreds of evergreens add to the beauty of the 66-acre Arboretum nestled against scenic White Rock Lake.

The Dallas Arboretum is located on 8525 Garland Road on White Rock Lake, and is open daily 10 a.m.-5 p.m., Thursdays until 8 p.m. during Holiday Market. Admission is $6 for adults, $5 for senior citizens, $3 for children 6-12 years of age and free for children under 6 and members. Group rates are available and admission is free 3-5 p.m. every Friday.

Kriss Kringle Market to open in Fredericksburg

Staff Report

FREDERICKSBURG — Kriss Kringle Market of Fredericksburg will be open for three weekends this year — Friday, Saturday and Dec. 1; Dec. 6-8; and Dec. 13-15. Starting the weekend after Thanksgiving and continuing through Fredericksburg Historical Society's annual Candlelight Tour of Homes, the market will be open 9 a.m.-5 p.m. at the long white building just over the creek at 415 E. Austin St. Admission will be free.

Items for sale at the event will include antique duck decoys, linens, textiles, German folk art angels, carved stone planters, country furniture, wood creations, knitted sweaters, holiday foods and gift baskets, and jewelry.

From 6-9 p.m. Dec. 13, history, food, wine and shopping will be available at the Kloth Ludwig home at 414 E. Main St. Guests will tour an early German immigrant cobbler's shop and home built in 1870, sip a little Yuletide cheer, eat an hors d'oeuvre or two, and stroll through the shops. Tickets are $5 per person.

The 1991 Kriss Kringle Market is dedicated in loving memory to Bob Stamm — 1923-1991. May his quiet smile, his willing hands, his modesty in excellence become a part of all of us.

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

Pecan show is scheduled

By Deborah A. Benge

Permian Basin weather conditions can be very hard on your pecan crop at harvest time. Sun, humidity, temperature and ground moisture can quickly change your good quality pecans into poor quality pecans if you don't harvest, cure and store as soon as possible. This year's pecan crop is very short and commanding good prices — another incentive to you to take good care of your crop.

Benge

West Texas can produce excellent quality pecans because we have superior growing conditions. Skilled managers, whether in home or commercial pecans, can manage water, fertility and pests to produce an excellent pecan crop and now's the time to see just how well your pecan crop measures up by participating in the Permian Basin Tri-County Pecan Show.

Ector, Midland and Glasscock counties will host a Tri-County Pecan Show Dec. 1-3. If you live in one of these counties, be sure to gather your best pecans to enter in the Tri-County Pecan Show. A sample of 42 pecans from each different variety, seedling or known hybrids can be entered by a grower, whether backyard or commercial. Each carefully selected entry needs to have the grower's name, address and pecan variety (if it is known) with each pecan sample entered.

Samples can be dropped off at the Texas Agricultural Extension Office in Odessa, Midland or Garden City. Here in Midland samples can be dropped off at the Extension Office, 2445 E. Highway 80, by Wednesday. Or you can drop them by any of the following locations:

- 408 E. County Road 127, La Vera Dr. 682-0315
- 210 Rankin Highway
- 2601 Cessna Dr., 694-0763
- Call 684-9744 for someone to come pick up your pecans.
- 3915 Cottonflat Road, 684-8446
- 4918 N. County Road 1130, 682-9342
- Davis Garden Center and Landscaping, 5000 N. Midkiff
- Epley Agricultural Supply, Greenwood

Samples must be in to one of these locations before Dec. 1 or delivered to the Midland County Extension Office by 10 a.m. Dec. 1.

Pecans will be processed Dec. 1, judged Dec. 2 and displayed the afternoon of Dec. 2 and 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Dec. 3 at Midland County Extension Office.

Pecan samples within a variety, seedling or known hybrid are judged on certain criteria. Color, size, weight, uniformity and freedom from defects of any kind are some of the characteristics that judges look at. Winning samples will go on to the West Texas Regional Show Dec. 17-18 in El Paso. Winners at the Regional Show will go to the State Pecan Show in July 1992.

To select a winning sample here are a few pointers:

- Harvest as soon as pecans begin to fall — sun, moisture and heat can quickly degrade the quality of your pecans.
- Spread pecans out in a single layer to cure in a dry, airy, protected location.
- Pecans are ready for storage when kernels snap in two rather than bend.
- Avoid mixed samples, as these will automatically be disqualified. (For example, a Western sample with a stray Wichita pecan in it)
- After curing, store pecans in a cool, dry, dark location with a constant temperature, avoiding fluctuating temperatures.
- Select a sample of your heaviest and most uniform pecans.
- Do not alter the appearance of the pecans by polishing, rubbing, etc.
- Select a sample that is free from insect damage, disease, spots, mildew, abanormalities and cracks.
- Select from a young tree or thinned tree if possible. They generally have larger, better quality pecans.

In addition to entering your pecans for competition, don't miss the chance to enter your foods prepared with pecans for competition. You do not have to be a pecan grower or grow the pecans that go into these food dishes. There are three age divisions: adult, junior (grades 7-12) and youth (grades 1-6). Foods prepared with pecans can be entered in six categories: appetizers, breads, cakes, pies, cookies and candies.

Along with the food entry, two 3x5-inch cards with the participant's name, address, division, food category and complete titled recipe must be included. Cards should be printed or typed out. All food entries should be entered on disposable containers. Entries may be entered 3-5 p.m. Dec. 1 or 7-9 p.m. Dec. 2.

The pecan and pecan food show winners will be awarded with plaques, rosettes or ribbons.

Make plans to enter the Permian Basin Tri-County Pecan Show and Foods Show Dec. 1-3. For a copy of the rules and regulations, come by the Midland County Extension Office or call 687-1351.

Deborah Benge is the extension horticulture agent for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in Midland and Ector counties.

Farmers Branch celebrates Christmases past, present

FARMERS BRANCH — Holiday travelers can relive Christmases past as the City of Farmers Branch presents many seasonal events.

Authentic English teas will be served 1:30-3:30 p.m. Dec. 6, 7, 14 and 21 in a restored historical home. Scones, finger sandwiches, tarts and other tasty temptations will be served on Royal Doulton china. Charge is $12.50 per person. Seating is limited and reservations are recommended. Call 1-800-BRANCH 9 for reservations.

Christmas lighting display will begin 6:30 p.m. Dec. 6, starting at City Hall and winding around to Farmers Branch Historical Park.

Dickens in the Park, from noon-6 p.m. Dec. 7 in the Farmers Branch Historical Park, will feature horse-drawn carriages, tours of historical homes and buildings, costumed carolers, performances by bell choirs and string orchestras, and scenes from "A Christmas Carol." Admission is free.

Six Flags Over Texas' towering parachute ride becomes a 200-foot-tall Christmas tree each holiday season. On calm evenings the thousands of glittering lights which form the "tree" are reflected by the waters of the theme park's entry lake.

Texas theme park glows with annual holiday cheer

Staff Report

ARLINGTON — Six Flags Over Texas' Christmas celebration, Holiday in the Park, will be an all-day event this year. The park's regular operating season has been extended through the holiday season, with most rides in operation. Water rides will not be open, and ticket prices will be lowered accordingly.

Holiday in the Park will feature elaborate Christmas decorations with more than a half-million twinkling lights. Two ice shows will be presented — one will feature Bugs Bunny, Daffy Duck, Sylvester, and Porky and Petunia Pig and will be presented at the Looney Tunes Theater, and the other will emphasize precision skating and will be in the Music Mill Amphitheater.

Special holiday musical productions will be staged in the Southern Palace Music Hall and the Crazy Horse Saloon. Carolers and street entertainers will be performing throughout the park.

In the Texas section, Parade of Trees will present lavishly decorated Christmas trees decorated by friends of Six Flags.

A real snow hill for sledding will be featured in the Boom Town section.

Holiday foods will be served in the park's restaurants, and shops will be filled with gift ideas.

Holiday in the Park will begin the day after Thanksgiving. Adult tickets will be $15.95, with the price of an adult ticket dropping to $12.95 after 4 p.m. Tickets for children shorter than 48 inches and for senior citizens age 55 and older will be $9.95.

Hours will be 10 am.-10 p.m. Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays from the Friday after Thanksgiving until New Year's Eve. Exceptions will be Dec. 6, 13 and 20, when the park will not open until 5 p.m.

With the exceptions of Christmas Eve, Christmas Day and New Year's Day, Six Flags will be oepn daily 10 a.m.-10 p.m. Dec. 21-Dec. 31 and 10 a.m.-6 p.m. Jan. 2-5.

Annual Christmas events planned in San Marcos

Staff Report

SAN MARCOS — San Marcos will sponsor its Fifth Annual "Sights & Sounds of Christmas — A San Marcos Celebration" with nightly events 6-9:30 p.m. Dec. 5-7 at the historic Courthouse Square.

The event will begin 6 p.m. Dec. 5 with the arrival of Santa Claus via helicopter at the Central Texas Medical Center or via firetruck at the Courthouse Square.

The official lighting of the Square will be 6:30 p.m. when Judge Eddie Etheredge will "flip the switch" to officially begin the 1991 "Sights and Sounds of Christmas."

At 5 p.m. and 7 p.m. each evening, the First Baptist Church, 330 W. Hutchison, presents the 40th anniversary of the holiday musical "Amahl and the Night Visitors," performed by the Southwest Texas University Choral and Orchestra. Tickets are $2 for adults and $1 for children.

The Candlelight "Posadas" Processional, a costumed presentation by St. John's Catholic Church, will be 6:30 p.m. Dec. 6.

From 6:30-9 p.m. Dec. 6, guests are invited Christmas Magic on San Antonio Street of Lights, where you ride the Christmas taxi to historic San Antonio Street where five homes will feature trees and tabletops dressed in holilday finery; then take a trek down Scott Street for a visit to the mystical, magical "Toyland." The special event is presented by the San Marcus Performing Arts Association. Tickets for adults are $5; tickets for children under 10 and senior citizens are $3.

That same evening, visitors can enjoy a special showing of holiday art by the San Marcos Art League inside the Courthouse rotunda.

Christmas Runs start out the day at 8:30 a.m. and 9 a.m. for a 5K run and a 1K Children's Run, respectively, beginning at the Courthouse Square.

The Kiwanis Showcase for Youth Talent will be presented on the Main Stage 10:30 a.m.-4 p.m. Dec. 7, in support of the performing arts and San Marcos Youth.

Around the Square starting at 5 p.m., the Christmas Parade 1991 "Celebrating Our Heritage" will present a holiday experience reminiscent of the past, presented by the Heritage Association of San Marcos.

The finale will be 9:30 p.m. Dec. 7 when everyone is invited to gather around the Main Stage for community caroling.

There will be additional features throughout the celebration, including "Children's Wonderland Area," a Junior Service League project of creative Christmas crafts and activities, a cake walk, a marshmallow roast, an "ice" skate and much more; "Santa's Village," where pictures with Santa can be taken for $2 and a canned good or $3 without, with all proceeds benefiting the Community Action's Christmas baskets; a gingerbread house; Rudolf's Shirt Shop; and "Along the El Camino Real," where skilled artisans take you back in time to campfire biscuits, grinding corn and hooking rugs, trail riding, blacksmiths and a log schoolhouse.

For more information, write to The Main Street Project, 630 E. Hopkins, San Marcos, Texas, 78666, or call (512) 392-5409.

Jody Nix will be the featured entertainer at the Jan. 20 dance at Midland Center.

The country and western dance, which will also include a catered breakfast, will be hosted by the Midland and Lee Youth Centers from 8 p.m.-midnight.

The event is the major fundraiser for the youth centers.

Midland-Lee Youth Centers Inc., is a United Way agency which provides dances, special events, summer programs and services for Midland youth. The centers are open for youth of all ages after school and on Saturdays and are available as meeting places for youth groups.

Admission to the dance — which includes breakfast — is $10 for students and $12.50 for adults. Sponsor tables for eight people are $250. Proceeds will benefit the youth centers.

For reservations or more information call 689-1175...

A crane lowers one of the infamous Tango Frogs onto a trailer, which will take them to their new owners in Austin. Chuy's restaurants bought three of the six frogs for $12,500 from Carl's Corner truck stop in Carl's Corner, about 50 miles south of Dallas. The frogs were constructed eight years ago for a bar in Dallas and were removed after violating a sign ordinance.

Tango Frogs 'on the road again'

CARL'S CORNER (AP) — The giant amphibians dubbed the "Tango Frogs" will now dance for their supper in Houston.

Three of the six polyurethane frogs, which adorned the roof of Carl's Corner truck stop, have been sold to Chuy's restaurant of Austin.

The frogs, weighing 500 pounds each, once sat atop a trendy Dallas night spot before moving to Carl's Corner.

They survived a blaze at the famous truck stop, but a cash shortage after the fire prompted sale of the three Tango Frogs.

"I needed the money," said Carl Cornelius, the truck stop owner who sold the trio for $12,500. "...It hurts. It's like part of my body."

The frogs will be displayed outside some of the Chuy's eateries, ending up at a new establishment in Houston.

The 8-foot-tall frogs have weathered other obstacles. They withstood a sign ordinance to remain atop Tango, a Dallas nightclub, but had to go after the club went bankrupt.

Then came the blaze that destroyed Cornelius' "truckers' paradise" in August 1990.

Cornelius, who helped create the town in 1986 and named it after his truck stop, struggles to pay off debts accumulating since the electrical fire. The frogs were almost all that remained of the truck stop, which had a restaurant, showers, jacuzzis, game room, bar and swimming pool — but no fire insurance, he said.

The frogs, once capable of moving as if they were dancing and playing musical instruments, cost $25,000 to make. Cornelius said he was thrilled when he had a chance in 1985 to buy them for $6,500.

Former Waco artist Bob (Daddy-O) Wade, created the frogs and their mechanical joints. But after years of rain and rust, the frogs no longer move. Wade also has constructed such "outdoor art" as the 23-foot longhorns at the University of Texas Alumni Center and the 40-foot iguana that perched on the Lone Star Cafe in New York City.

The three frogs were removed Monday from the truck stop roof and loaded onto a flatbed trailer, towed by a stretch limousine.

"We're going to miss them, but at least we'll be keeping three," said Mozelle Brown, who started working for Carl's the day it opened in July 1984.

Mike Young, president and co-owner of Chuy's restaurant, said he is excited about getting the frogs. "I wanted to buy all six, but I couldn't afford them," he said.

He said he liked the creations long before he started seeing them atop the truck stop on Interstate 35E, about 55 miles south of Dallas.

AT WIT'S END

Lord, grant me patience and I want it right now!

By Erma Bombeck

In church last Sunday, my eyes came to rest on a woman in the communion line with her hands clasped together in prayer and her head bowed fervently. Following on her heels was a small child who, as she walked, was drawing pictures on a piece of paper slapped against her mother's fanny like a blackboard.

Bombeck

I remember thinking that the woman was either the patron saint of patience or she was heavily sedated.

No mother is ever prepared for the amount of patience it takes to raise a child. When a small bundle of helplessness is placed in her arms, she's too euphoric to ask, "How long is this going to take?"

My problem is I've never had patience. And motherhood is a waiting game. You wait for the baby's food to heat up. Then you wait for it to cool down so you can feed it to him. You wait for children to go to sleep. You wait for them to wake up. And I can't count the times I spent in the bathroom staring at them on the potty seat while I ran water in the tub and showed slides of Lake Erie on the wall. I had a dream. I wanted them to sleep dry before they got married.

My kids said I always wanted things to happen now. They were right. When they were on for dishes, I wanted them washed before the morning newspaper was delivered.

When I yelled for some help in bringing groceries in from the car, my time reference was sometime before the frozen ice cream became a beverage and before the date on my yeast expired.

I waited for them to come out of the bathroom. I waited for them to get off the phone. I waited an eternity for them to say "thank you" without being prodded.

They were always on my case. They never knew why I was in such a hurry. Then one day they turned into teen-agers.

From that day on, they couldn't wait to learn how to drive. They became impatient when their favorite shirt wasn't pressed. They didn't have time to eat dinner or to let their hair dry before going out in the snow. They fell apart if their allowances were late.

When they wanted a decision, they wanted it now. They didn't want to waste time sitting around visiting relatives.

They had finally arrived at that point in their lives where life takes on an urgency — so many things to do, so little time.

Patience is always touted as a virtue. I wonder.
