Tax Exempt List Growing Rapidly

COLLEGE STATION.—Applications for tax exemption under the provisions of the Bankhead act are rolling rapidly into the offices of the state allotment board now that all counties are finally supplied with all necessary printed forms from Washington. The board has set up three shifts of workers and will run a 24-hour day until all the allotments are made, according to the chairman, E. R. Eudaly.

First counties to come in with their applications complete were DeWitt, Jim Wells, Lavaca, San Patricio, Fort Bend, and Refugio. The board detained the messengers who brought the applications, met at once to act upon them, and sent the allotments of tax exemption certificates back into the counties by these same messengers.

Every possible effort will be made to hasten the work, Eudaly says, and in this connection he emphasizes the fact that the greatest speed of all can be made in the counties by assuring accuracy in the applications before they are sent to the board.

"If the batch of applications hurried from the county to the board turns out to be in such shape that it has to be returned to the county for correction much time is lost, and the county finds itself further down the waiting list than it would have been if a little more time had been spent on checking for mistakes in the first place," Eudaly said.

"County committees or adjustment assistants asking the board to set a 'deadline' date after which no application may be taken within the county must be careful to ask for a date sufficiently far ahead to allow its being published in the local paper. And farmers must remember when that date is set that it is like a train passing. If they do not go aboard before the train pulls out they are left behind and no one can make the train return to take them on," Eudaly stated.

Hot Oil 'Death Blow' Delivered

AUSTIN (AP)—The Texas railroad commission has issued an order that Commissioner E. O. Thompson believes should deal the final blow to dealers in illegal oil in the East Texas field.

The order requires a strict accounting of all crude oil products before they can be accepted for transportation by rail or pipe lines.

"It will do as much to curb hot oil as any order we have ever issued," Thompson said. "It means the end of the hot oil merchants."

Thompson said certain operators in East Texas were transporting crude oil under the guise of crude oil products without making reports, keeping records or obtaining tenders and without paying taxes.

Under the order persons transporting, purchasing, receiving, storing, delivering or handling crude oil or its products must file a daily report showing the number of barrels in their possession at the start and close of each day, the amount received, the origin (including name and address of the owner before delivery), the identity of the person for whom purchased, the method of delivery and the name and location of each lease from which the petroleum was produced.

Tenders for the movement of crude petroleum products will be required to show by affidavit the owner of the products, the consignee and the producer, location of each lease and well, the date on which the crude was produced and where the products were processed.

Accident Removes Second Heir to Non-Existent Throne

Austrian Decline Set in When War Started in Europe

This is the last of four articles telling in brief the history of Austria, providing a background which makes events in the present crisis more easily understood.

By WILLIS THORNTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

When the distant thunder of a general European war began to rumble in the early years of this century, Austria was no longer a first-rate power in the military sense.

But she was first-rate in importance, for the same reason she had been important in the days of the Roman legions. Again she was "in the middle."

Prussia had expanded into a united Germany after beating France in 1870. And now she was expanding in industry and trade as she had in war.

Her announced outlet for such expansion was in the "drive to the eastward," as exemplified in her plans for a Berlin-to-Bagdad railway. And this eastern drive led directly through Austria.

But southeast of Austria lay the Balkans, still eastern rather than western, still Slav rather than German. And Russia, recovering from her Japanese beating, was championing the cause of Slav expansion. The pressure was westward, against the olden barrier of Austria.

A long series of little wars followed in the Balkans, little states trying to follow the example set them by the "Great Powers," in trying to expand their territories, build up military machines, and go out for glory and prestige.

Opposing Camps Formed

Each little Balkan state came to have a "sponsor" among the Great Powers, who began to line up more and more in two opposing camps.

In 1908 Austria made her last gesture—seizure of the territories of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Turkish lands, occupied mostly by Yugoslavs, between Austria and Serbia. The Serbs protested bitterly, and, with the Turks, almost went to war over the annexation. But for the time being Austria made it stick.

Now Europe went galloping down the last incline leading to disaster. Austria and Germany drew closer and closer together as it became clear that France, Russia, and England were doing the same.

Each of these groups made the most shameless diplomatic efforts to recruit to its side any and all Balkan support that it could get, at any price.

Austria was having a harder and harder time to keep together the discordant elements within the empire, which was never in any sense a nation, but simply a state, artificially put together from parts of many nations.

Even Franz Joseph, when addressing his subjects always said "my peoples . . ." never "my people." It was his frank recognition of the patchwork nature of the empire.

Meanwhile, Magyars, Ruthenes, Bohemian Czechs, Italians, and Southern Slavs within the patchwork empire were getting more restless every year, and were close to open revolt when in 1914 a Serbian citizen of the empire fired the pistol shots that toppled the whole crazy structure.

Assassination of the Archduke Francis Ferdinand took place in Sarajevo, a town in Bosnia, the same territory which had been annexed by force in 1908.

The Old Kaiser Dies

It was undoubtedly inspired by Serbian agitation which had never ceased since that time. Austria-Hungary determined on a forcible showdown on this situation, and this was the immediate cause of the World war. One of the soldiers who answered the call to the colors in Austria was an obscure corporal named Adolf Hitler.

It is not surprising that Austria-Hungary had no better success in

COLTS TAKE 15-4 GAME SUNDAY

The Colts came to life Sunday afternoon and pounded out a 15-4 decision over Wink. The game was played in Municipal park.

Wink rushed Carey to the mound when it became apparent Jones could do nothing with the slugging locals, but he was hardly more effective and the hitting and running continued.

Richter started on the mound for Midland and kept Wink batsmen eating out of his hand. Leonard Rose completed the hurling duties for the Colts.

Game Warden Saw German Service

Frank Hampe, for three months has been game warden for the eight counties of this district, has lived a checkered sort of existence.

Before coming here, he was a U S. game warden on the coast, before that with the U. S. revenue department, special agent for the Pullman company at Chicago, special representative for the William J. Burns detective agency at Berlin, Germany—and, between times, with the intelligence service of the U. S. army.

He and Mrs. Hampe are living at Broadway camp. Hampe will go to Austin Aug. 18 to hear discussed the new game laws and will explain them through The Reporter-Telegram upon his return.

New hunting licenses were being placed by Hampe today in the hardware stores.

VIENNA, Aug. 13. (U.P.)—Prince Gonzalo, second heir to the now non-existent Spanish throne, died today from injuries received in a motor accident.

His sister, the Infanta Beatrice, 25, swerved the car to avoid a cyclist and crashed into a wall.

Gonzalo, 20, was not believed seriously hurt but "The curse of the Hapsburgs," hemphilia, caused a blood vessel in his stomach to burst, death resulting.

Nearby Counties Get Cattle Funds

ODESSA.—A total of $54,541.00 had been received in checks from the federal government for drouth relief purchases of cattle in Ector, Crane and Andrews counties through last Wednesday, according to information given out here by H. L. Atkins Jr., county agent for this area. This represents approximately half of the amount due cattlemen of this area for cattle already sold to the government.

Of the total amount received, $16,931 went to 53 ranchers and farmers in Ector county, $8,468 to 15 ranchers in Crane county, and 60 Andrews county ranchemen had received $29,729. The checks ranged in size from $4 to $10,025.

It is estimated that approximately 65 per cent of this money went directly to the ranchmen, only around 25 per cent to the lienholders.

The government has bought so far in Crane county 2,698 head of cattle from 26 ranchmen, of which 378 head were condemned. Of the 3,257 head bought from 70 Ector county producers, 579 were condemned. In Andrews, 477 head were condemned of the 3,262 head bought from 80 producers.

PRESIDENT TO STALEMATE ALL SELFISH MOVES

More Resources to Be Unleashed on the Drought Area

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13. (U.P.)—President Roosevelt and relief agencies have started a determined drive to protect food consumers from profiteering because of the drought.

Scattered reports of food hoarding and profiteering have reached officials, bringing new problems to beset the overworked agriculture relief administration.

A unified program to pour the new public works fund into the drought states is expected to result from conferences between Roosevelt and agriculture and interior department officials.

DROUGHT IN TEXAS IS SLIGHTLY BROKEN

AUSTIN, Aug. 13. (U.P.)—Except for a narrow strip along the coast and a few counties in the southern part, Texas' drought remained unbroken during July, F. E. Finley, federal agricultural statistician, reported. The outlook for most crops was below indications of a month ago.

Heavy rains accompanying a tropical storm July 25 relieved the situation in a limited area, benefitting the rice crop but doing some injury to cotton.

The range feed situation is 50 per cent normal, the lowest in 11 years. The corn crop on August 1 was 33 per cent below normal, the lowest on record, with the crop estimated at only 66,030,000 bushels.

DRILLING RUSH IN PANHANDLE

AMARILLO (AP)—The biggest drilling program the Panhandle field has seen since the "discovery" rush ended has increased the daily potential oil production 70,104 barrels from 128 new wells since the first of the year.

The 70,000-barrel increase resulted from unprecedented activity in the first half of the ninth year of production and pushed the total potential up to 229,844 barrels. A recent report of the railroad commission listed the number of producing wells at 1,993.

Production allowable for the field increased from 42,000 to 56,800 barrels during the period.

Eighteen new wells during the last week in July added 4,390 barrels to the daily potential and 116,400,000 cubic feet of gas. Fifteen new wells were spudded in.

A LESSON FOR AMERICA

Parisian motorists drive fast, when they head out for the open country. On the way they pass through the suburb of Cachan—and, like motorists everywhere, they are a little forgetful about slowing down. In the last six months the little town has had 28 motor traffic fatalities.

So the other day the people of Cachan decided things had gone far enough. They turned out en masse and blocked the whole highway shouting: "We do not want any more of our children killed. We do not pay taxes to provide a pasture for automobiles."

Eventually the authorities got the road open, of course. But they did assign a police squad to see that traffic through Cachan proceeds at a safe pace.

And it seems to us that the people of Cachan had a good idea. They refused to accept the traffic toll placidly, as an inescapable misfortune; instead they got up on their hind legs and did something about it—and, as a result, they got some of the protection they needed. It could be done elsewhere.

The Town Quack

(Reserves the right to "quack" about everything with taking a stand on anything).

A defeated candidate said 99 per cent of the people cheered him after his campaign speeches, and then one per cent voted for him. That's about the usual per cent, so he shouldn't worry. Usually a candidate gets to wanting an office, he asks two or three people about it and they probably don't discourgae him much, so he announces. He magnifies such assurance as he got at the start and soon believes that the public is demanding his election. No wonder he has such an empty feeling after the election.

Myrna Loy Wins New Triumphs in Stirring Spy Role

When a beautiful spy neglects her duty to her county to fall in love, she invariably signs her own death warrant.

Out of this unwritten law of espionage, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has produced a vitally gripping screen drama that is different from all of its spy predecessors.

The picture is "Stamboul Quest,' showing today and tomorrow at the Ritz theatre, with Myrna Loy and George Brent presenting to the screen public an entirely new team of screen lovers.

Miss Loy, heretofore seen in supporting roles, carries off the major portion of the honors that must be distibuted for the class of entertainment hat this picure contains.

As "Fraulein Doktor," Germany's mysterious spy, Miss Loy is despatched to Turkey to trap Ali Bey, a high military official suspected of "selling out" to the enemy.

The mission is a most dangerous oue, but made doubly hazardous for "Fraulein Doktor" by the persistent pursuit of Douglas Beall, a dashing young American. He is mady in love with Miss Loy whom he does not suspect as a secret service agent.

To serve her country, "Fraulein Dokto" condemns her sweetheart to death. The subsequent developments make this one of the most gripping and intense love dramas seen upon the screen in many moons.

George Brent plays the role of Beall and no better choice could have been made. C. Henry Gordon, always dependale, is seen as Ali Bey, the Turkish General, and Lionel Ttwill deserves honorable mention for his characterization of Sturm, chief of the German counter espionage system.

Will Slays' em In His Newest Comedy Picture

Will Rogers keeps the laugns rolling right along in his latest picture, "Handy Andy," now playing at the Yucca theatre. Without a doubt, it's his funiest picture. Dialogue and situations combine to maintain a steadily counting crescendo of mirth—just a whirlwind of belly laughs. He keeps the audience in stitches most of the time.

Rogers portrays a druggist who wants to work in peace. But his wife, expertly played by Peggy Wood, nags him to sell out and learn to play. And he does!

First he becomes a pigeon fancier, and lets his pets fly all over the house. Then he taks up golf with excruciatingly funny results.

The climax comes, however, when his wife persuades him to take a trip to the Mardi Gras in New Orleans. There Rogers rebels violently when his wife tries to make him dress in a fancy costume to attend the Comus ball. She attends with a gigolo and leaves Rogers at home. Lonesome, he meets a druggist and the latter's girl friend, Conchita Montenegro. After a few cocktails with his new friends, Rogers is persuaded to attend the ball after all.

Rogers appears in a Tarzan costume and causes a sensation with his rough and tumble dance with Conchita. The dance ends in a free-for-all fight that lands Rogers in jail. Of course his wife is completely cured and pleads with him to return home to his old quiet life.

ARLINGTON DOWNS PUBLICITY WRITER DEFENDS TEXAS' LEGALIZED BETTING

BY HORACE WADE

FORT WORTH.—When Arlington Downs launches its fall meeting, October 25 to November 12, inclusive, the Lone Star state will again commandeer the spotlight of the turf world. Once more the nation's choicest thoroughbreds and leading jockeys will be on hand to continue the traditions of Arlington Downs for clean sport, and by their performances add luster and prestige to an already shining record.

Since the certificate system of wagering was legalized in Texas last autumn opponents of racing have contended, in justifiration of their antagonistis attitude, that over $16,500 000 has poured through the certificate windows at the various tracks in operation in the state. What these critics left unsaid, and what is really the crux of the whole matter, is that of this $16,500,000 wagered $14,850,000 was returned to the fans, leaving the difference—$1,650,000—to be shared by the track and the state treasury.

Racing opponents have tried by subtle sophistries and specious innuendoes to distort the vision and warp the judgment of citizens of Texas. These sophistries and innuendoes are directed for the most part against the certificate method of handling wagers. It is a well known and unchallenged fact that the tracks in mutuel wagering act only as stakeholders, deducting ten per cent of the total pool as their compensation for services rendered. Of this ten per cent the track retains six and a half per cent to cover operating expenses and provide a reasonable profit on the capital investment, if such profit has been earned, while the balance of the ten per cent is paid into the state treasury. This, according to racing objectors, was but $330,000, an apparently negligible sum when it is considered that $16,500,000 had been wagered. But don't overlook the fact, as stated, that $14,850,000 had been returned to the fans.

Recently there has appeared a new and rather curious point raised against racing. It is urged that the tracks take away a large sum of money from the communities within whose radius of accessibility they operate. This argument is unsupported by facts. At Arlington Downs which, in spite of its brief existence, has achieved a national fame there is an investment by the Waggoner interests of several million dollars. This is Texas money, spent in Texas on a strictly Texas project. In the construction of the mammoth racing plant Texas materials and Texas workers were used and these great expenditures prosperously infiltrated the entire state.

With the lagalizing of the certificates, W. T. Waggoner and his progressive and enterprising sons E. P. and Guy L. Waggoner, inaugurated the first meeting, eminently appropriate gestures in view of their successful advocacy of the legislative act that restored the Texas the world's oldest, greatest and cleanest sport. Judge Joseph A. Murphy, dean of the American turf and its most distinguished personality, was invited to Texas to supervise the racing at Arlington Downs. Noted turfmen by the score flowed into Texas, accompanied by some of the finest horses in America. This influx of outsiders brought in the aggregate a vast amount of outside money into Texas. The expense of maintaing a stable of horses is heavy, and this money found its way into Texas channels of trade.

Another point that is important to the scores of families in Texas it affects is the employment that is incidental to and inseparable from the operation of racing plant. Concession men, track employes, parking attendants, special police, program hawkers, ushers and other employes were chosen by the Arlington Downs organization from Texas citizens, and the opportunity for gainful work came to many as a god send. Supplementing this is the revenue that goes to owners of apartment houses, boarding houses and furnished rooms, as the vast army connected with or attracted by the race plant must be sheltered. The hotels and restaurants also felt the quickening affect of the fresh money liberated. Dallas and Fort Worth merchants openly testified to the stimulating influence of Arlington Downs on their sales, maintaining that instead of being a drain on the community the track proved an unqualified business promoter. The same is also true of other Texas tracks.

Texas has taken notable and commendable strides forward in turf achievements in the past year and the promise and prestige embodied in this history will be continued in the future. The Texas fans want racing, enthusiastically, positively and permanently. And their name is legion. Thirty thousand fans in attendance at the running of the Texas Derby at Arlington Downs last spring is concrete evidence that the Sport of Kings is looked upon with a friendly eye by the people of the Lone Star state.

Arlington Downs will open its second annual fall meeting on October 25, and once again the national beacon will play on this outstanding turf oval. Famous thoroughbreds and internationally known stables will be on hand, and the meet will be officered by distinguished turfmen whose names alone are an earnest for clean sport. Under these fine officials the people of Texas will have abundant reason to feel pride in their great racing courses and the prestige that the Lone Star state will continue to enjoy in the sporting world.

Professor Believes Society Pendulum Swinging Back

CINCINNATI, O. (U.P.)—Dr. Ernest L. Talbert, associate professor of Psychology at the University of Cincinnati, believes that society's pendulum is swinging back from the day typified by the "flapper and the jazz hound" toward a more conservative era, he told students here recently in a campus address.

"The social sciences, once a subject for jokes and ridicule, are rising in popular esteem. The generous support given to the courageous and humane social philosophy of President Roosevelt is indicative of collective attitude. Whatever may be the outcome of his efforts, for the time being there is an upturn in the status of the social scientists," he said.

Austria--

a military way in the World war—almost all such successes as she had came with German help. Many of her troops felt they were fighting against their own national interests.

As the war dragged on, greater and greater listlessness could be seen in the Austro-Hungarian war effort. Then on Nov. 21, 1916, the old kaiser died. And with him died, for all practical purposes, the empire.

Only regard for this venerable man had held the empire together at all. For "his peoples" knew that as they had suffered, so he had suffered. Had they lost sons and loved ones? So had he.

Had they lived in privation? His life had been simple with a monastic rigidity. Had they known disappointment, and trouble and sorrow? So had he. But now he was dead.

When the end of the war came, with its usual carving-up process, the old Austro-Hungarian empire had been swept from the map. Somewhere between the demands of the victorious allies for loot and the demands of natural lines of peoples for their own territories, the lines were drawn.

Only Fragment of Empire

The old empire had had a population of 51,000,000, and included 261,000 square miles. Today, Austria has only 6,500,000 people, and is less than one-eighth its former size. All its remaining territory is mountainous, and a third of its people live in Vienna. It has no seacoast.

To the new Poland and Czechoslovakia went all its northern territory. To Rumania and an independent Hungary went the east. To Yugoslavia and Italy went the south. And only the center-point, Austria as it is today, remains.

Yet it is still vital. The old conflict between north and south goes on. Mussolini does not want to see a strong Austria on his north, especially one united with a resurgent Germany.

He is particularly opposed because in the territory Italy took after the war live a quarter million Austrians, now raising the same cry against Italian rule as the Italians raised when Austria had encroached on Italian lands.

Resurrects Old Dream

Mussolini has also resurrected for Italy the old German dream of a "march toward the east," and he doesn't want German interference in Austria to prevent it.

Czechoslovakia stands with France against any reunion of Germany and Austria, and Yugoslavia opposes too much Italian interference in Austria, apparently fearful of possible Italian designs toward the eastward.

The attempt to internationalize the Danube has not been a complete success, for jealousies remain along its banks all the way from Vienna to the Black Sea.

And until thes eare all cleared away, and all those north-south, east-west ambitions are reconciled in Europe, little Austria will continue to hold the keys to Europe, as she has held them for 2000 years.
