Amendment to guard flag fails

■ The measure, which would have amended the Bill of Rights for the first time in the nation's history, lacked 34 votes of the two-thirds majority required.

By Steven Komarow

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Thursday rejected a constitutional amendment to protect the American flag from desecration, heeding opponents who said it would risk damage to the Bill of Rights.

The 254-177 tally left the amendment, which was supported by President Bush, 34 votes short of the two-thirds majority required to amend the Constitution. Republicans voted 159-17 for it, Democrats 160-95 against.

■ High court orders end to political patronage system/3A

The vote followed a sometimes impassioned day of debate featuring more than 100 speeches, including a rare address by the speaker of the House, Rep. Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash.

"We should not amend the Constitution of the United States to reach the sparse and scattered and despicable conduct of a few who would dishonor the flag and defile it," said Foley, who also cast a rare speaker's vote to register his opposition to the amendment. By tradition, the speaker does not normally engage in debate or vote.

Countered Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill.: "Let us take the flag out of the gutter where the counterculture has dragged it and is smearing it. We have 10 amendments that guarantee us all sorts of rights. How about one amendment that gives us a duty?"

Foley told reporters that Thursday's vote would be the last one on the amendment this year in the House, but Republicans promised to keep the issue alive.

"I am confident this debate is going to go on for a long time," Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., told the chamber. Asked about the Bush's efforts on behalf of the amendment, Gingrich said "it was very hard for the president in two days to override the speaker."

Supporters of the amendment, backed by veterans' groups seeking more time to lobby, had tried to delay Thursday's vote until next week but were defeated 231-192.

Rep. Rep. G.V. Montgomery, D-Miss., the chairman of the House Veterans Committee and the amendment's prime Democratic sponsor, said of the proposal, "I think we owe it to the brave Americans who have died for this country."

But Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., decried the attempt to modify the First Amendment.

"When I look around the politicians today, I see more people who remind me

Mandela mania

NEW YORK (AP) — Nelson Mandela's passionate plea for black equality inspired legions of joyful supporters who packed the streets of Harlem Thursday in one of the most emotional and exuberant stops on his world tour.

For generations of American blacks, Harlem has served as cultural capital, and Mandela's visit before a crowd that police estimated at 100,000 was a tribute to his fight for racial justice.

Gooley, 41, stood to lose the $4,000 deposit given to the caterer, so she decided to throw a party for the homeless. However, the deposit wasn't enough to invite 150 people from shelters and drug rehabilitation centers as she had hoped.

Earthquake in Iran kills about 10,000

■ Many people reportedly still are buried in the rubble and landslides have blocked rescue efforts, as aftershocks rattle area near the Caspian Sea.

By Mona Ziade

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — An earthquake jolted northern Iran Thursday, killing more than 10,000 people and injuring thousands, Iran's government announced. The quake demolished scores of villages and towns and buried thousands of people in their homes.

The "sad, painful and horrible tragedy has so far claimed 10,000 lives and left thousands of others wounded," said a statement by the Iranian Cabinet, released after an emergency evening session.

The announcement carried by the Islamic Republic News Agency placed all government organizations "on full alert," and ordered an air bridge set up between Tehran and the stricken areas to evacuate survivors.

■ Related stories/5E

Landslides blocked rescuers on the ground, and bad weather hindered helicopters trying to airlift supplies and victims, IRNA said.

Many people remained buried in the debris, it said, and several hundred Revolutionary Guards were flown from Tehran after nightfall to join rescue teams.

Iran's spiritual leader, Ali Khamenei, called the disaster a "divine test" and urged the bereaved residents of the stricken provinces "to pass this test with pride through patience and cooperation."

The temblor measured 7.3 on the Richter scale of ground motion, the Geophysics Center at Tehran University said. The U.S. Geological Survey measured it at 7.7.

At least a dozen aftershocks shook the region within two hours after the quake. The earthquake struck at 12:30 a.m. and was centered 125 miles northwest of Tehran, near the Caspian Sea, IRNA reported.

NATO working group visits local Texas Instruments plant

By Mella McEwen

One would hardly think NATO — North Atlantic Treaty Organization — would be concerned with the Permian Basin.

But a major supplier of military integrated circuits, Texas Instruments, is located between Midland and Odessa. And that is what drew a NATO Working Group, comprised of citizens of the U.S., United Kingdom, West Germany, Italy, France and The Netherlands to the area Thursday.

"This group, known as a NATO working group, places emphasis on electrical/electronic parts. They review manufacturers and help determine whose integrated circuit devices are allowed to be put on NATO parts list," explained Joe Chapman, government interface manager in TI's Midland office.

"This is quite a feather in our cap to have them visit our plant," he added. "We're known as a world-class, high volume facility."

PBPA votes to ask TRC for oil-pit covering rule

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

The Permian Basin Petroleum Association (PBPA) Thursday took a major step toward ending its battle with the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service (FWS) over the covering of oilfield pits.

The PBPA board of directors voted to approve a resolution which stated in effect that because of the environmental sensitivity of the association, it was asking the Texas Railroad Commission (TRC) to enact whatever pit covering rule was economically viable for the state.

While the resolution gives the TRC a "blank check" on rules for the netting of pits, the TRC is not expected to pass a rule that would require the netting of every pit in the state, said Harry Spannaus.

Spannaus said TRC Chairman Kent Hance does not believe a statewide blanket rule to cover every pit would be needed. Moreover, he said it is believed that Hance favors a rule that would require bird-proof netting only on tanks or pits which have oil contamination.

That, however, may not be enough to satisfy the FWS. Although the service has been generally accepting of a New Mexico law which requires the netting of any oilfield pit of more than 16 feet, Senior Agent Tom McKay of Albuquerque said it is the FWS recommendation that any oil production tank or pit, down to the size of a barrel, be covered with netting. McKay also said that any sheen on

CAF wing, squadron leaders fly into town

By Ed Todd

Wing and squadron leaders in the 8,000-member Confederate Air Force (CAF) will be in Midland today and Saturday to meet with the CAF governing General Staff in touring the CAF headquarters-museum site at Midland International Airport.

The CAF colonels will hold their official and informal meetings in the downtown Midland Hilton.

"It's more of an information-type deal," Joe Mabee, CAF chief of staff, said of the CAF Advisory Board Staff Meeting. "They advise us, and we advise them," he said of the relationship between the CAF 11-member General Staff and the wing-squadron leaders.

The Advisory Board Staff Meeting originally had been scheduled for last weekend in Omaha, Neb., but was shifted to Midland to give the CAF leaders an opportunity to tour the CAF's West Texas home-base site.

Barry's lawyer attacks key witnesses

WASHINGTON (AP) — Marion Barry's attorney Thursday revealed inconsistencies in statements by a key government witness in the mayor's drug and perjury trial and accused him of lying to save himself from a long prison term.

But Charles Lewis, completing his testimony after three days on the stand, stuck to his story that he and Barry smoked crack cocaine together in the nation's capital and the Virgin Islands.

"You care for yourself," Lewis said when defense attorney R. Kenneth Mundy compared his statements to investigators.

"That's exactly it," Mundy said. "If you would lie (to the grand jury) in January 1989 to save Marion Barry, a man who is not a particular friend, you would surely lie in August 1989 to protect Charles Lewis ... and a lot of other people who are closer to you, wouldn't you?"

"No, I wouldn't," Lewis responded.

Barry, 54, has pleaded innocent to three felony counts of perjury, one misdemeanor count of conspiracy and nine counts of cocaine possession.

Lewis testified in his three days on the witness stand that he shared drugs with the three-term mayor repeatedly between 1986 and 1988. A convicted drug dealer, Lewis is facing sentencing on drug-related charges in his native Virgin Islands.

Mundy attacked Lewis' credibility, saying the witness had several times told investigators one thing and jurors in the trial another.

The defense attorney read from Lewis' testimony to a grand jury last year that Barry visited Lewis at a Washington hotel one night after a Monday Night Football game had ended. Lewis alleged this week that the mayor was there earlier, during the game, using crack cocaine.

If the earlier testimony is true, Barry "wouldn't have been there at all on the 19th ... Would he?" Mundy said.

"Marion Barry was there that Monday night," Lewis told Mundy.

Lewis said another contradiction between his grand jury statements and trial testimony — on where he and Barry allegedly discussed drugs at one point — resulted from a "misunderstanding" by the court reporter at the grand jury.

Mundy also said Lewis' testimony suggested a third person may have been present when he and Barry allegedly smoked crack in Lewis' hotel room on Dec. 22, 1988.

Lewis said that implication was a "mistake. ... There was no security, no one else."

Lewis also agreed with Mundy's suggestion that he was not close friends with Barry, but said the two felt "comfortable" together.

Barry "felt comfortable with me and I felt comfortable with him on those short occasions" when they used drugs, Lewis told said Mundy.

The federal probe of Barry began when city police aborted an attempted undercover drug buy from Lewis when they discovered Barry was in Lewis' Washington hotel room in December 1988.

Lewis said Wednesday that he and Barry "agreed to get our stories straight" after the mayor's visits to Lewis became public and that Barry asked him to lie to police about their alleged drug use.

String of hot days continues

Staff Report

Midland ushered in the first day of summer Thursday with a high temperature of 101 degrees, setting a new record for the number of June days with temperatures of 100 or above.

National Weather Service officials reported that Thursday was the 14th day this month with a high of 100 or better. The old record of 13 was set in 1980.

Thursday was also Midland's eighth day in a row with temperatures of 100 or above. The record number of 100-degree days in row for June is 12, set in 1964 and matched in 1981. The overall record number of 100-degree days in a row is 19, set in August 1964.

This year has had 17 days with temperatures of 100 or above. The record number of 100-degree days in a year is 52, set in 1964.

Meanwhile, weather service forecasters at Midland International Airport are calling for a possible break today in the string of 100-degree days. The high should be in the mid-90s under partly cloudy skies. Winds will be from the northeast at 10 to 15 mph.

Tonight will be fair, with a low in the upper 60s.

Saturday will be fair, with a high between 95 and 100.

Monday's record high is 107, set in 1934. The low Thursday was 74. The record low for today is 60, set in 1973.

(From 1A)

It shook buildings and shattered windows in Tehran, but apparently caused no deaths in the capital. In the neighboring Soviet republic of Azerbaijan, the temblor slightly damaged some older buildings in Baku but caused no casualties, the Soviet news agency Tass said.

The earthquake was the worst to hit Iran since Sept. 16, 1978, when 25,000 people were killed in a quake that registered 7.7 on the Richter scale.

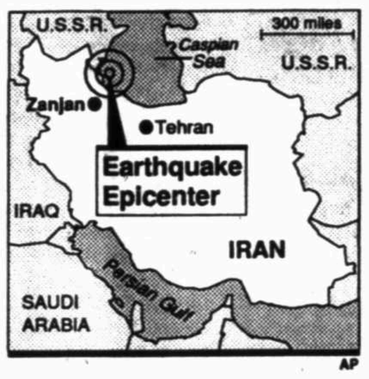
More than half of those killed and injured Thursday were in Zanjan province. The second-hardest hit was Gilan province, IRNA said in dispatches monitored in Cyprus.

The victims included at least 1,000 people killed in one village in Zanjan province, Ab-Dar, the news agency said. Also killed were 768 people in Qazvin just 80 miles northwest of Tehran.

In Zanjan alone, 73 villages and towns were affected, IRNA said. Many were leveled.

IRNA said the quake triggered landslides that blocked main roads.

Dozens of rescue vehicles, including trucks carrying food supplies and ambulances, were stuck on the roads, it said.



AP

Telephone lines and electricity and water supplies were cut in Zanjan and Gilan, which have a combined population of 2.7 million. Communications with Tehran from the outside world also were difficult.

Scenes shown on state television and monitored in Cyprus showed young men frantically clawing at debris from flattened concrete buildings in Rasht, 175 miles northwest of Tehran with a population of 189,000 people.

Occasionally, they carried away someone on a stretcher. Bulldozers and cranes lifted away larger pieces of debris.

In Ab-Dar, the television showed mountains of rubble, which a speaker said were all that was left of apartment buildings. They appeared to have been shaken off their foundations, collapsing like a deck of cards.

A dam south of Rasht burst, flooding the surrounding area, IRNA said.

Hospitals appealed for blood donations and helicopters and transport planes delivered thousands of tents and blankets. They also carried rice, tea, sugar, cheeses and canned food to the area, IRNA said.

Three U.S.-made C-130 transport planes shuttled between Tehran and Rasht to carry the injured to hospitals in the capital, it said. State-run Iran Air ordered special flights to carry the injured.

Khamenei and President Hashemi Rafsanjani flew to the area to supervise relief operations. Rafsanjani declared three days of mourning and ordered all state agencies to be ready to provide help.

The United States offered humanitarian assistance to Iran and President Bush sent a message of condolence to Rafsanjani. The message was delivered to Iran by another, unidentified country since the United States does not have diplomatic relations with Tehran.

In Brussels, Belgium, the European Community decided to give $1.2 million in aid to earthquake victims.

The region is prone to earthquakes. A quake registering 6.9 on the Richter scale struck nearby Soviet Armenia on Dec. 7, 1988, killing 25,000 people.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. A reading of 7 on the scale indicates a major earthquake capable of widespread heavy damage. Eight is a "great" quake, capable of tremendous damage.

PBPA: Netting may be required on all tanks

the surface, even if caused by one drop of oil, would be cause for prosecution.

The oil industry has charged that such a posture is "unjustified, bureaucratic overkill," but McKay disagrees.

"We have been told that one drop of oil in a tank can kill birds, and if you have been in the oilpatch much you know that it is almost impossible to eliminate a sheen from tanks, especially those that have been re-used," McKay said.

The FWS has claimed that up to 100,000 migratory waterfowl a year are killed in open oilfield tanks and pits, and has vowed to hand out fines of up to $5,000 per bird and six months in jail to individual oil operators found guilty of causing the death of migratory birds in an oilfield pit or tank.

Joe McShane, a Monahans oil operator and former PBPA president, told the PBPA board that Robert Lee, a FWS wildlife biologist and special agent, told him that he would be prosecuted as a felon because the service had found two sparrows and a cuckoo bird in a Howard County oilfield pit owned by McShane.

"I have had to hire a criminal lawyer in Lubbock to defend me," said McShane.

However, McKay said McShane would not be prosecuted as a felon, because the offense is a misdemeanor, but that a $5,000 per bird fine and six months in jail per offense was the law.

He noted that the same law applied even to the hunter who is caught exceeding his limit on game birds.

McKay admitted, however, that the maximum fine probably would not be levied if the case was settled out of court.

He noted that five oil companies in Oklahoma — Anakarko Oil Corp., Oxy USA, Butkin Oil Co., Tash Corp. and Oakland Oil Co. — were recently charged under the Migratory Bird Treaty Act with causing the deaths of 63 migratory fowl and settled out of court for a total of $8,300 in fines, along with $2,965 in civil restitution.

Agent Lee said 30 such cases are scheduled for prosecution in Texas in the Amarillo, Lubbock, Midland and Abilene districts.

The PBPA has opposed the prosecutions and harsh penalties sought by FWS. It has also questioned whether the federal agency's estimate of bird mortalities were correct and merited the high cost to the industry of placing nets over every tank and pit in the oil field.

In other business, PBPA approved a resolution calling for a rehearing on the approval of Canadian pipelines into the Northeast and approved a Statement of Mission presented by the Permian Basin Center for Energy & Economic Diversification.

FLAG: Issue brought up in '89 after high court's ruling of Daffy Duck than Thomas Jefferson," he said.

The strength of the opposition was larger than expected and was aided by the unexpected support of some conservatives.

"Up until 24 hours ago, I was a sponsor of this amendment," said Rep. Tim Valentine, D-N.C. "But over the rhetoric of the past few days, I finally heard the voice of my own conscience."

The amendment read, "The Congress and the states shall have power to prohibit physical desecration of the flag of the United States."

It was first proposed in 1989 after the Supreme Court ruled that flag burning was a form of protected free speech. The issue was revived last week when the court rejected last year's attempt to pass an anti-flag-burning law that the court could accept.

After the vote on the amendment, the House also rejected a new statute — not a constitutional amendment — to ban flag burning.

The bill, narrowly drawn in hopes of avoiding court rejection, would impose fines and jail terms for people who burn flags to promote violence or who burn flags on federal property or belonging to the federal government.

Republicans voted overwhelmingly against it after their leadership called it a "fig leaf" to protect Democrats who opposed the constitutional amendment, and it lost 236-179.

The Senate is expected to vote next week on the amendment, which would require a two-thirds vote in both chambers, and approval by 38 of the 50 states, for ratification. Foley said the House would not vote again this year.

Regardless of the outcome on Capitol Hill, Republicans promise to raise the issue in this fall's campaign. The House majority leader, Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., acknowledged the political tightrope members were walking.

NATO: Group examining wide range of products to ensure the quality of our equipment. This group is concerned with stabilization, and we came over from the European side to put our finger on what's happening in the individual countries. The U.S., of course, is most important, and we like to have the opportunity to come and see the top of the line."

He stressed that his group is not looking at any particular product, but at a wide spectrum of products that could be included in anything from avionics to communications to radar to weapons systems.

The group was very impressed with the TI plant, Eigen said, noting its strong management and the dedication of all employees to improving quality control.

Midland/Odessa is the third stop on the group's U.S. tour this week. Already the group has toured an AT&T facility in Allentown, Pa., and a National Semiconductor plant in Maine. After leaving the Permian Basin, they will visit Teledyne in Los Angeles .

According to TI's Chapman, the U.S. is compiling a Qualified Manufacturers List of military suppliers such as TI, and the European members of NATO are compiling a similar list of European suppliers. Plans are, he said, to integrate the two lists so that U.S.-made parts can be used on European NATO systems and vice versa.

With the easing of tensions between the East and the West and the dramatic changes seen in Eastern Europe during the last eight months, there has been a rising debate between experts over the continued need for major military expenditures, as well as the continued existence of NATO.

For his part, Eigen has no doubt that, despite the dramatic changes, NATO will continue.

"NATO is an important factor in keeping the peace. We in Germany have had peace for 45 years, and we attribute this peace to NATO."

He continued: "I think it's wrong to say we won't need NATO anymore. We will need NATO, if in a different orientation."

He also believes that there will be a compromise reached between the U.S. and the Soviet Union allowing a reunified Germany — which he feels will occur in a short time — to remain in NATO.

"In my opinion, this would be safest, even for Eastern Europe. Germany remaining in NATO will be a stabilizing factor. Being in NATO, we won't be able to move even a tank without it being ordered by NATO."

CAF: Advisory board staff meeting moved to Midland

(From 1A)

"We are just going to show them what we've got and what we are," said Mabee, a Midland rancher, oilman, and aviator. "We are not blowing any smoke."

"I'm glad to have them here," Mabee said of the visiting colonels. "I'm looking forward to it."

Earlier this year, the CAF General Staff unanimously selected Midland as the new home base for the CAF after its general membership approved a move from the old CAF headquarters at Harlingen in South Texas, near the Texas Gulf Coast. The CAF was seeking a site to expand its operation and a drier climate more conducive to the preservation of the CAF's Ghost Squadron of more than 140 aircraft — fighters to bombers — from the 1939-45 World War II era.

The CAF is dedicated to preserving, maintaining and flying vintage World War II aircraft called "warbirds."

The CAF facilities, including the headquarters building, hangars and museum, are to be dedicated on Dec. 7, 1991, to coincide with the 50th anniversary of the Japanese attack of Pearl Harbor and with the United States' official entry into World War II.

Court strikes blow to 'spoils system'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court ordered an end to political patronage Thursday, ruling that federal, state and local government jobs generally may not be awarded based on party affiliation.

The justices, by a 5-4 vote, said constitutionally protected rights are violated when people are denied government jobs, promotions or transfers because of politically partisan reasons.

The decision reinstates a lawsuit by three Illinois residents against Gov. James Thompson and the state's other Republican leaders. The suit says Thompson has made party allegiance a requirement for 68,000 state jobs.

While the ruling applies to all levels of government, city and county governments may feel the biggest impact because most federal and state government jobs are covered by civil service merit systems that have made patronage obsolete.

Only Puerto Rico filed a "friend-of-the-court" brief to defend use of a patronage system.

"We're delighted," said Robert H. Chanin, a lawyer who represented the National Education Association in urging the justices to stamp out patronage.

Chanin predicted little impact for federal jobs but added, "It will have an impact at the state level. There are probably 40 states that have some type of comprehensive merit system, but perhaps as many as 10 states and Puerto Rico don't have such systems or have slippage in their merit systems. They rely primarily on what amounts to a patronage system."

"Our general, gut reaction is that the most impact will be in local governments — among county and municipal employers," he said. "It could affect a great number of jobs."

The high court said partisanship may play a role in deciding who gets a government job only when political affiliation is an appropriate requirement, such as for high-level policy advisers.

In a landmark 1976 ruling and a 1980 sequel, the high court significantly weakened political patronage, sometimes called the "spoils system."

Those rulings prohibited government employers from firing anyone — even some policy-making and confidential government workers — solely because of their political affiliation unless party loyalty is a requirement for effective performance.

But those decisions dealt only with firings. Before Thursday, the court never had said that partisanship could not play a role in hiring, transfers and promotions as well.

"To the victor belongs the spoils that may be constitutionally obtained," Justice William J. Brennan wrote for the court.

AIDS care, prevention related

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Quick treatment with the drug AZT in the earliest stages of AIDS infection can significantly slow the lethal disease, according to research presented Thursday at the Sixth International Conference on AIDS.

The study appears to provide the strongest evidence yet that early intervention can stall the emergence of AIDS in people infected with HIV, the AIDS virus.

"We have to come to the conclusion that the greatest advantage has to accrue with early intervention," said Dr. Margaret Fischl. "It has to occur as early as possible in HIV infection."

Fischl, a researcher at the University of Miami, pioneered the use of AZT in people who already have AIDS. However, most infected people are still outwardly healthy. So Fischl and other teams around the country have been exploring the risks and advantages of giving the medicine before AIDS infection reaches its final stages.

The conference opened Wednesday amid angry protests by thousands of demonstrators frustrated over the slow pace of progress in controlling the disease.

Another group rushed into the lobby of a building housing the state insurance commissioner, but left a short time later without incident.

Fischl's recommendation is likely to be controversial. During the past year, some researchers have begun to question whether AZT, the only approved AIDS drug, should be reserved for use during the later stages of the disease.

The medicine interferes with the reproduction of HIV. When given to people with AIDS, the drug loses its punch within two or three years as the virus becomes resistant to it.

Some doctors believe that if given early in the disease, AZT will be powerless to slow the disease once AIDS develops.

Fischl's conclusions were based on patients who were infected with HIV but had not developed any major symptoms of AIDS. Two hundred received placebos for a year and then switched to AZT for eight more months. Two hundred fifty-one others took AZT for the entire period.

She found that significantly fewer progressed to AIDS if they got the drug without delay.

Budget talks end with little progress made

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bush administration officials and congressional leaders ended budget negotiations for the week Thursday with both sides saying they had accomplished little.

"What I'm fearful of is we're in some kind of stalemate," said Sen. Pete Domenici of New Mexico, one of the Republican negotiators, as the sixth week of the closed-door sessions ended.

The administration plan claims $444 billion in savings over five years. It relies heavily on cuts in benefit programs like Medicare. Democrats say more savings are needed, and argue that deeper reductions in defense are needed.

FCC action lowers phone rate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission, in a move that will lower long-distance rates again, ordered local phone companies Thursday to reduce what they charge long-distance companies to connect with local networks.

The FCC ordered a $1.1 billion cut nationwide in these access charges, effective July 1. Long-distance carriers typically pass along to their customers savings from such cuts.

The nation's largest long-distance company, American Telephone & Telegraph, announced last month that it would cut its rates by $160 million annually, effective July 1, in anticipation of the FCC decision. This would mean a cut of 2.5 percent in typical evening rates.

Other phone companies such as MCI and US Sprint usually follow suit to remain competitive.

AT&T has decided on deeper rate reductions, however, since it had based its cuts on local phone company proposals to the FCC. The local companies in April had asked to reduce their access charges by just $405 million on July 1.

But the FCC ordered an additional $696 million cut Thursday, saying the local phone companies had underestimated likely calling demand by about 2.4 percent, or 7 billion minutes.

The FCC also based its rate reductions, in part, on corrections of the local phone companies' cost estimates.

"There will be some further reduction beyond the $160 million AT&T proposed May 17," AT&T spokesman Herb Linnen said. "I don't know how much."

Manhattan mantled in 'Mandelamania'

NEW YORK (AP) — Nelson Mandela's passionate plea for black equality inspired legions of joyful supporters who packed the streets of Harlem on Thursday in one of the most emotional and exuberant stops on his world tour.

For generations of American blacks, Harlem has served as cultural capital, and Mandela's visit before a crowd that police estimated at 100,000 was a tribute to his fight for racial justice.

"Brothers and sisters, comrades and friends, victory is in sight," Mandela said. "The light at the end of the tunnel is so bright but we are not yet there.

"To reach the end of the tunnel it requires that we make the necessary sacrifices. It requires that we remain unrelenting in pursuit of our goal."

Recalling part of a speech he gave the day he was sentenced to prison, Mandela told the crowd that abolishing apartheid "is an idea which I am prepared to live for but if need be it is an idea for which I am prepared to die."

AP Laserphoto

Nelson Mandela rests in the library of Gracie Mansion in New York City on Thursday.

The crowd, which filled streets, balconies and fire escapes, responded enthusiastically to Mandela and his wife, Winnie, with shouts and raised fists.

Mandela's visit to the United States has tapped into a deep vein of emotion in black communities. In New York, a surge of pride has welled up in neighborhoods where self-esteem is often lacking.

He spoke in Harlem at 125th Street and Adam Clayton Powell Boulevard, a corner long associated with political oratory from black leaders including W.E.B. duBois, Martin Luther King Jr., Paul Robeson, Malcolm X, and the former congressman for whom the boulevard was named.

From Harlem, Mandela went to Yankee Stadium, in the impoverished South Bronx, where he told a sellout crowd of 55,000 that he always knew Americans were thinking of him when he was imprisoned.

His solemn appearance at the stadium ended on a lighter note when Mayor David Dinkins presented Mandela a Yankees' warmup jacket and baseball cap.

"Now you know who I am," a beaming Mandela said after donning the cap. "I am a Yankee."

Since his arrival on Wednesday, nearly 1 million people have turned out to cheer and greet the African National Congress leader.

The celebration began earlier Thursday at a joyous ecumenical service at Riverside Church that brought religious leaders of all faiths together in a call for equality.

Bush seeking more bailout funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush, prodded by Congress, will seek to increase spending for savings and loan fraud investigation and prosecution by $25 million this year, White House officials said Thursday.

Bush was to announce Friday that he is asking Congress to appropriate the money.

Congress had initially authorized $75 million for the enforcement part of the S&L package it passed Aug. 9. But the administration later asked for and received only $50 million to rescue the savings and loan industry.

In the wake of mounting congressional criticism about the pace of the S&L enforcement, the president decided to use the extra $25 million that Congress initially offered.

Bush's request comes a week after members of Congress accused the White House of bungling bailout efforts and moving too slowly to prosecute people involved in fraudulent S&L practices.

Among those being investigated is Bush's son, Neil Bush of Denver, who was a director of Silverado Banking, Savings and Loan, one of the failed associations under investigation by government regulators.

Grave error puts veteran on wrong side of Civil War

By Robert Imrie
Associated Press Writer

HALLIE, Wis. — A new tombstone was supposed to honor William Lindley Wilcox for his Civil War service with the Union army, but a government error branding him a Confederate upset some descendants.

"It sure is goofed up. ... He was a Union man and he was fighting the Confederates. He would have really had a fit," said Wilcox's great-granddaughter, Doris Wilcox-Balmer of Chicago.

The error on Wilcox's new tombstone was discovered this past Memorial Day by an ex-soldier who became suspicious about the Confederate marker while placing flags on veterans' graves at Prairie View Cemetery.

Some people bothered by the mistake questioned whether Wilcox's history would have been altered permanently had the error not been caught. The government has already agreed to replace the marker.

"This is a rather glaring error," said state Rep. Leo Hamilton, whose district includes Hallie. "A wrong date or wrong month could occur. The wrong army is not too common."

Wilcox, a corporal in Company E of the First Wisconsin Cavalry, died in 1899. The government issued a flat marble gravestone to honor his Civil War service.

Over the years, the tombstone in the tiny northwestern Wisconsin village of 1,220 people weathered, making it difficult to read. In 1986 the cemetery's caretaker ordered a new one from the government's monument service, according to Myron Olson, Chippewa County veterans service officer.

'It sure is goofed up .... He was a Union man and he was fighting the Confederates. He would have really had a fit.'

— Doris Wilcox-Balmer, William Wilcox's great-grandaughter

Erected in 1988, the new marker, made of granite and valued at $83, contained most of the right facts about Wilcox's life — born Feb. 8, 1827, died Oct. 7, 1899, entered the military Nov. 2, 1864, released July 29, 1865.

But instead of listing the soldier in the U.S. Army, the gravestone put him in the Confederate States Army, Olson said.

While putting flags at veterans graves before Memorial Day, Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 1038 Commander Jim Gustafson spotted it, figuring something was wrong about a Wisconsin man fighting for the Confederate Army.

His curiosity put officials to work, including a call to Hamilton who has since contacted U.S. Rep. Dave Obey.

Ms. Wilcox-Balmer said some of her relatives were quite upset by the mistake. She said the error wasn't caught by the family because an aunt who regularly visited the soldier's grave died in early 1988 just before the new marker was installed.

Olson said he could understand if Wilcox's descendants were offended.

"When you make the kind of sacrifice you do in going to war, you believe in the side you are fighting on. So, it is pretty grave to be depicted on the other side," he said.

George Gulas, an administrator for the Monument Service of the National Cemetery System within the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs, called the mistake an "honest error" that would not tarnish Wilcox's contribution to his country.

The clerk processing the order for the engraver "probably didn't put information in the computer right," Gulas said in a telephone interview from Washington, D.C.

"There have been a couple of them before. All the clerks aren't that familiar with the Civil War," Gulas said. "There are a lot of Confederates buried in northern states. It is not unusual."

Federal deficit spending up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal deficit spending totaled $151.68 billion in the first eight months of fiscal 1990, 34 percent ahead of the overspending pace for the same period a year ago, the Treasury Department reported Thursday.

Deficit spending in May was $42.55 billion, following a record surplus a month earlier during income tax time, the department said.

Many analysts now believe the deficit could top $200 billion by the end of the fiscal year on Sept. 30.

The imbalance also was well above the $100 billion target set by the Gramm-Rudman balanced budget law.

Texas developer mum

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Texas developer who benefited from federal housing subsidies during the Reagan administration invoked his Fifth Amendment rights against self-incrimination and refused to testify Thursday before a congressional panel.

Leonard Briscoe, of Fort Worth, Texas, became the sixth person to cite his constitutional rights in refusing to answer questions before the House Government Operations subcommittee investigating scandals at the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Briscoe is the first person who was not a former HUD official to decline to answer questions before the panel.

The chairman posed five questions to Briscoe, most about his relationship with Lance Wilson, a former top HUD official who later became a housing consultant and was involved in several projects receiving lucrative HUD grants.

Medfly war on horizon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department announced plans Thursday to prepare an environmental impact statement on the control of Mediterranean fruit flies.

It was a signal that USDA is digging in for the long haul in a war against the medfly, a pest that poses a threat to the nation's commercial fruit and vegetables.

"If established on the U.S. mainland, agricultural losses of over $800 million annually could result," the announcement said.

James W. Glosser, administrator of the department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, said his agency is cooperating in two medfly eradication programs in California and Florida.

But he said aerial application of bait laced with the pesticide malathion has met with considerable public demand for environmental analysis, especially in California.

Glosser said that medfly control is emergency in nature and must be implemented quickly when an infestation is found.

Owl decision expected

WASHINGTON (AP) — Environmentalists expressed concern Thursday that the Bush administration would fail to give enough protection to the rare spotted owl when it announces its plans Friday under the Endangered Species Act.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has set an announcement for Friday on its plans for protecting the spotted owl.

A decision to make the rare, two-foot-tall brownish bird a "threatened species" could close millions of acres of forest in northern California, Oregon and Washington to logging, at a potential cost of tens of thousands of jobs.

Freedom's quest filled with pitfalls

Romania and Lithuania are nations struggling to break free of communism's death grip. They are finding that hope easier said than done.

Romania and Lithuania are not that far apart geographically, both being situated along the far western edge of the Soviet Union. But politically the distance is far greater, evidenced by news events in each during recent days.

Last Saturday, the Lithuanian Parliament proposed a compromise with the Kremlin and imposition of a moratorium on the declaration of independence it approved in March.

That does not mean the goal of independence has disappeared; merely the method has been changed.

That decision signified that leaders in Lithuania are willing to negotiate toward their independence, a step that should help make the transition less traumatic and painful for Lithuanians.

The big step had already been taken, of course, and over a three-month period Lithuanian leaders tread uncertain ground as the world waited to see what the Soviet Union's response would be.

Now the Soviet Union has begun pumping natural gas to the Baltic republic, easing the tensions that have existed between the two nations.

Lithuania is inching toward a true restoration of its independence and little would be accomplished by that nation's leaders taking steps that would increase the suffering of Lithuanians.

The Communist officials in the Soviet Union have acknowledged that their system of government must change to become more democratic; yet making the transition will be a difficult and dangerous process for a nation that hopes to remain intact.

In stark contrast to the tedious and delicate process underway in Lithuania is the harsh and cruel reality in Romania, where last week coal miners backing President-elect Ion Iliescu went on a two-day rampage in which several people were killed and hundreds injured.

Romania's government had only toppled Communist dictator Nicolae Ceausescu in December, killing the tyrant. Yet today Romanians have recognized that what they actually had thought was a move toward democracy is in reality only trading one dictator for another.

If Iliescu hopes to change that interpretation of events in his country, he must change his tactics. Brute force exerted against those who differ with his government is not an acceptable response.

Casting off the yoke of tyranny is a move rife with pitfalls. The freedom-loving nations of the world can only hope that nations such as Lithuania and Romania choose carefully their course.

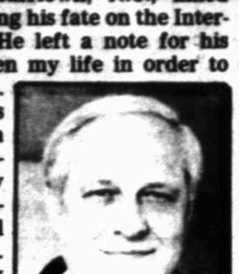
Why is IRS right even when wrong?

WASHINGTON — In June 1988, Alex Council of Pfafftown, N.C., killed himself, blaming his fate on the Internal Revenue Service. He left a note for his wife Kay: "I have taken my life in order to provide capital for you. The IRS and its liens which have been taken against our property illegally by a runaway agency of our government have dried up all sources of credit for us. So I have made the only decision I can. It's purely a business decision. I hope you can understand that. I love you completely, Alex."



Anderson

The Councils had been fighting a running battle with the IRS for nine years. Four months after Alex Council's death, Kay Council went to court using the money from his life insurance, and she beat the IRS. The judge barred the IRS from collecting the $300,000 in taxes, penalties and interest that it claimed the Councils owed.

Tangling with the IRS does not normally have a fatal outcome. But many taxpayers who square off with the tax man experience losses and repercussions that last a lifetime. Challenging the fearsome monolith, even when you know you are right, can be overwhelming and, in some cases, impossible.

A congressional investigation recently concluded that the IRS wrongly assessed penalties to 1.5 million taxpayers in 1988. The IRS admitted that was true and vowed to do its best to clean up the bookkeeping errors that led to those unwarranted penalties.

But that is little consolation to taxpayers who think they have paid their due and fail an IRS audit anyway. If it happened to you, would you accept defeat and pay the money or would you stand up to the IRS?

If you chose the latter, plan on spending plenty of money. Congress passed a Taxpayers' Bill of Rights two years ago making it easier for you to go to court and stop the IRS from bleeding you dry when you know you are in the right. Tax court is one place that you are guilty before proven innocent, and the law still makes taxpayers come up with the court costs.

Some senators recognize the advantage the IRS has and they have tried to shift the odds toward the taxpayer. Most recently Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo., introduced a series of "Fair Play for Taxpayers Bills." They provide for taxpayers to get their expenses back if they win their cases, allow taxpayers to sue the IRS for carelessness and make the IRS pay the same interest rate as the taxpayer would on disputed taxes.

Armstrong told our reporter Paul Zimmerman that the IRS can be "very coercive." He added, "Even if you win your case in court, you lose by paying court costs."

One provision in Armstrong's plan would put an end to a bit of IRS skullduggery — the use of tax accountants to rat on their clients.

The IRS uses between 750 and 900 "controlled informants" a year — people who spill information that the IRS subsequently uses to go after a delinquent taxpayer. Incredibly, an estimated 20 of those informants are tax accountants.

Unlike lawyers, accountants are not bound by confidentiality requirements with their clients. The American Institute of Certified Public Accountants deplores the practice, but it happens anyway.

A St. Louis man recently discovered, after he was indicted by a federal grand jury on six counts of tax evasion, that his accountant had gone to the IRS with the damning information. In return, the accountant got a break on his own tax problem.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Then 2 Live Crew will seem timid

They will laugh at us 20 years from now for all the stir and commotion 2 Live Crew, the rap rascals with the dirty mouths, have caused.

Sure they will.

We look back and laugh at our parents and our teachers and our lawmakers and our ministers for how they reacted to Elvis, don't we?

Grizzard

Remember that? All Elvis did was shake his pelvis.

He did a little grind with his hips, is what he did, and you would have thought he had uncovered his privates on stage, which is what one of today's rock stars did not long ago.

With every Elvis move, the teen-age girls screamed with delight, and the adults decried the Sideburned One as vile and evil.

"It's the devil's music," I heard the Baptist preacher back home say.

"Listen to that music," he continued, "and you are on a path headed straight to hell!"

I was 10 or 11 at the time, and I certainly didn't want to get on the freeway to hell — and I still don't — but I took a chance.

I went home after church, took out my 45 of "Don't Be Cruel," listened to it a couple of times and then prayed, "Don't hold it against me, Lord, I just like the beat."

There are people now who want The 2 Live Crew's concerts and records banned.

When I was growing up, the old men called Elvis's offerings "jungle music," and then said worse about him.

But we look back on Elvis now, and if he were still alive, we could invite him to sing in church. They play his music on country music stations, for crying out loud. Fifty-year-old women visit his grave and cry.

Eventually, the same thing will happen to 2 Live Crew. Today they get arrested and the cops monitor their concerts.

And that just makes the kids even more anxious to buy the group's music and see them perform.

They flock to the record stores and they think the dirty lyrics are a hoot, as we did when we heard the unintelligible words to "Louie, Louie" were really filthy if you could hear them. And the kids flock to see 2 Live Crew perform, and although I think 2 Live Crew and their music — if you can call it that — are enough to make you puke, if I were 16, I wouldn't miss a performance.

We've gone from Elvis to 2 Live Crew in my lifetime. Twenty years from now 2 Live Crew will, like Elvis, seem absolutely harmless.

God knows what they'll be doing 20 years from now. Singing on stage in the nude, probably. Madonna sings in her underwear now.

They'll be singing naked and probably having sex on stage, and the kids who liked 2 Live Crew will have their drawers in a serious bundle because their kids will be determined to hear and see "Stark Nakkid and the Car Thieves" singing their controversial hit, "I Want to Kiss You on Your Woo-Woo in the Nude."

The point is, you ain't seen nothin' yet. Elvis seems like an angel now and, a generation from now, 2 Live Crew probably won't be able to get a gig playing a Tupperware party. So, nobody have a cow over 2 Live Crew. This, too, will pass for something even more shocking.

It always does.

CHARLEY REESE

You've met George 'Appeasement' Bush?

President George Bush has retreated before the Russians farther and faster than Napoleon and it isn't even winter.

One tip-off, of course, was the peculiar stamp of approval George Bush put on the summit. He made a big point of saying our Allies were pleased with the summit. Well, aside from that being a stretch of the truth, is it not more important that we be pleased?

Reese

Not even the then British prime minister, Neville Chamberlain, came back from his summit with Hitler and said, "I'm happy to say the French, Belgians and Dutch are pleased with me." However much Chamberlain misunderstood Nazi Germany and however calloused he was about the fate of Eastern Europe, he did realize which country he represented.

That peculiarity aside — Bush seems compelled to verify the rightness of his actions by the reactions of selected others — the only nation which ought to be satisfied with the summit is the Soviet Union. Soviet boss Mikhail Gorbachev didn't give an inch on anything — not on Cuba, not Afghanistan, not Lithuania, not on Germany, and not on strategic arms.

Bush gave on everything. Hence the blue smoke pouring out of the White House, supplemented by the smoke grenades thrown by the disarmament lobby which has never yet recognized a Soviet violation of an existing treaty or a U.S. concession in a pending one.

What is the Soviet position still on Europe? No NATO. That was the position of Stalin, Khrushchev and Brezhnev.

In the meantime, Gorbachev (1) continues to strangle Lithuania; (2) has said no to Bush's open skies and open grounds offer; (3) has halted withdrawal of Soviet troops from Eastern Europe; (4) insisted on virtually no verification procedures for either the chemical weapons treaty or the proposed strategic arms reduction treaty; (5) has virtually halted the talks on conventional arms reductions in Europe; (6) continues to send more money per month to the Afghanistan communists than we sent to the Nicaraguan contras in 10 years; and (7) continues to prop up Fidel Castro in Cuba.

Bush's concessions are as inexcusable as they are inexplicable. Not many months ago, START was hailed by the Bush administration as the means to lessen the threat of the Soviet SS-18s, their 10-warhead first strike missiles. Now he has retreated from that.

Not many months ago, Bush was saying strategic arms cuts would be justified because the conventional arms threat was being reduced. The gig then was we'll get the Red Army out of Eastern Europe and then we can afford to make deep cuts in our own forces. Now, he has retreated on that. Now, he says the two aren't linked and we'll do strategic arms cuts before conventional arms cuts.

I'm reluctant to be so blunt, but that's stupid. To say that you can't get the Soviets to agree to move tanks and troops 360 kilometers so you will go ahead and agree to cuts in strategic forces — cuts which will be impossible to verify — is just stupid.

There seems to be a will to self-destruct in all this. Before, appeasement was justified because the Soviet Union was said to be too strong. Now appeasement is justified on the grounds that the Soviet Union is too weak. The only constant is appeasement.

Bush will certainly occupy a unique role in history. He will be one of the few men who overcame his enemy's weaknesses in order to snatch defeat from the jaws of victory.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Let there be justice — surer and speedier

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist criticized a few weeks ago the lack of finality in death penalty cases. In so doing, he loosed a tempest. The New York Times and other righteous organs howled furiously over his suggestion that endless habeas corpus reviews frustrate justice.

Safire

We need not worry about the chief justice. Like the hearty captain of the Pinafore, he's never known to quail at the fury of the gale. "Today," said Rehnquist, "we have a serious malfunction in our legal system — the manner in which death sentences imposed by state courts are reviewed in the federal courts. Today the average length of time between the date on which a trial court imposes a sentence of death, and the date that sentence is carried out is between seven and eight years."

"More than three years of this time are taken up by collateral review alone, with little certainty as to when that review has run its course."

Rehnquist frets that "The system at present verges on the chaotic. The eight years between conviction in the state court and final decision in the federal courts is consumed not by structured review of the arguments of the parties, but in fits of frantic action followed by periods of in-action. The last-minute nature of so many of the proceedings in both the state courts and the federal courts leaves one with little sense that the legal process has run an orderly course, whether a stay is granted or whether it is denied."

Rehnquist says the basic question isn't: Are you for or against capital punishment? The basic question has to do with federalism. Capital punishment is constitutional if imposed in accordance with Eighth Amendment requirements. The High Court itself has said so. Leave it to the states, then, says Rehnquist, whether or not to have the death penalty. (More than two-thirds of the states do have it.)

"Surely," said the chief justice, "the goal must be to allow the states to carry out a lawful capital sentence, while at the same time assuring the capital defendant meaningful review of the lawfulness of his sentence."

Rehnquist points out that the writ of habeas corpus was "not designed to challenge judgments of conviction rendered after trial, but to challenge unlawful detention of citizens by the executive."

Rehnquist raises the ancient question: Qui bono? Who's really helped by all the delay? Who comes out ahead? "Defendants who will ultimately prevail in their claims should not have to wait eight years for a decision to that effect, and states seeking to carry out the sentence upon defendants whose claims are rejected by federal courts should not have to wait eight years to do that. Fair-minded people, whether they personally oppose or favor the death penalty, should have no difficulty agreeing that the present system is badly in need of reform."

Rehnquist's preferred solution is the same one bruited last year by a special panel under the chairmanship of former Supreme Court Justice Lewis Powell; namely, let the capital defendant make all constitutional claims in the first habeas corpus go-round. The state would provide free legal counsel. Should the defendant's claims be dismissed, the state could carry out its will, free of federal interference.

The Powell plan has excited antagonism within the legal community, but that does not alone dispose of it. Ultimately the matter is up to Congress, which supposedly is the representative branch of the federal government. If Congress makes any pretense of representing the people's will on capital punishment, it is likelier to side with Rehnquist than with the New York Times.

"Justice delayed is justice denied," goes the old maxim. When a murderer is allowed to prowl through the court system for eight years, or even more, justice emphatically is blocked and thwarted. The lawyers may not care, but the laity do, and, let me tell you, there are more of us than there are of them.

German unification treaty passed

WORLD

Kohl

BONN, West Germany (AP) — East and West German lawmakers overwhelmingly approved a treaty to merge their economies Thursday, removing one of the last remaining obstacles to de facto unification.

Lawmakers in both countries also passed resolutions declaring that a united Germany would guarantee Poland's western border.

The powerful West German Bundestag, the lower house of parliament, late Thursday voted 445-60 with one abstention to pass the economic merger treaty after a sometimes heated debate lasting nearly 15 hours.

Final approval of the historic pact outlining the monetary, economic and social unification of the two Germanys was expected Friday, when the West German parliament's upper house, the Bundesrat, takes up the issue.

A loud round of applause greeted the announcement of the treaty vote in the Bundestag, which was seen as a major victory for West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, who has pushed for rapid unification.

Kohl appealed to Bundestag members to pass the treaty, saying he was "convinced that each one of us will one day be judged by whether he or she faintheartedly backed away or gave full support on this momentous occasion."

Japan assured Midway safe

YOKOSUKA, Japan (AP) — The U.S. Navy sought Thursday to assure the public that the aircraft carrier Midway was safe after two explosions on board killed two crew members and seriously injured nine.

"The safety of the ship was never in jeopardy," Rear Adm. Lyle Bull, commander of the Battle Force 7th Fleet, told reporters escorted aboard the ship a day after the fire.

Japan, the only country to experience nuclear attack, asked the U.S. military to improve its safety practices. Yokosuka officials had demanded assurances of the 45-year-old carrier's safety before its return.

Demonstrators charged the ship was carrying nuclear weapons into its home port at Yokosuka despite a Japanese ban. The United States refuses to comment on the location of its nuclear weapons.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Floods kill 42 people

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — A flood triggered by a violent rainstorm claimed at least 42 lives and left nine people missing in Turkey's northern provinces, the semi-official Anatolia news agency said Thursday.

The seven-hour storm on Wednesday swept through the Black Sea coastal provinces of Trabzon and Giresun and hit Gumushane province, causing an estimated $150 million damage to homes, businesses and cropland.

Anatolia reported 38 died in Trabzon and nine were missing. Floods also claimed three lives in Giresun and one in Gumushane.

Public Works Minister Cengiz Altinkaya earlier told Anatolia that officials feared the death toll would increase because rescue teams had not yet reached several villages.

Rescue teams on Thursday ferried 60 injured people from Akcaabat township to Trabzon, a city on the Black Sea, Anatolia said.

Fifteen bridges collapsed, five others were heavily damaged and highways were blocked. Floods damaged communication and power lines in the area.

At least 200 houses were still under water in Trabzon, newspapers reported. Government authorities seized privately owned trucks in the area for transportation of relief aid.

Tension increasing

ICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — President Bush's suspension of talks with the PLO will strengthen the hand of Palestinian militants and hard-line Arab states who oppose Yasser Arafat's peace effort. It also will intensify growing anti-American sentiment.

Bush's decision Wednesday to freeze the 18-month-old talks, rather than break them off completely, has left the door open for contacts to resume.

But the breakdown raises the prospects of a resumption of widescale terrorism at a time when passions in the Middle East are flaring and moderate leaders are warning that a new Arab-Israeli conflict may be looming.

Saeed Kamel, the top PLO official in Cairo, said Thursday: "The Palestinian leadership is currently considering options to press forward toward peace. This will be unveiled in the coming weeks."

He refused to elaborate.

Polygamy decried

PORT MORESBY, Papua New Guinea (AP) — Several members of Parliament could be put in an awkward position if action is taken on a recommendation that polygamy be outlawed.

Polygamy is traditional in many parts of the country, and several politicians have more than one wife. But according to a report by the Task Force on Family Law Reform, polygamy is not permitted under the constitution, which stipulates equal rights for women. The task force said this week the practice should be banned.

The alternative is polyandry — allowing women to have more than one husband — but this is not practical because the constitution also stipulates that Papua New Guinea is a Christian country, the report said.

"Therefore, it is best for everyone to have only one wife or one husband," it concluded.

The task force said it was considering recommending that the Law Reform Commission ask Parliament to abolish polygamy within two years, athough existing polygamous marriages should continue to be recognized.

Paper supply cut off

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — This country's paper exporters are cutting off all shipments to the Soviet Union because they haven't been paid — a move that could affect the publication of Pravda and Izvestia, Finnish television reported.

The Soviet Communist Party paper Pravda and official government newspaper Izvestia depend on paper from Finland.

Their stocks of newsprint have dwindled to a week's supply because other Western countries already have stopped paper exports to the Soviet Union, Wednesday's report said.

Jarl Kohler, head of the Confederation of Finnish Forest Industries, said the Soviet Union owes Finnish paper exporters several months in payments totaling about $22 million.

Inciter sentenced

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — The Supreme Court today sentenced the brother of former dictator Nicolae Ceausescu to 15 years in prison for inciting mass murder during the December revolution that toppled his brother's regime.

Witnesses testified during the trial that they had seen Nicolae Andruta Ceausescu shooting at demonstrators on December 21, the day Bucharest residents joined in the revolution. He pleaded innocent.

The revolution deposed his brother the next day, and the Communist dictator and his wife, Elena, were executed on Dec. 25. Today marked the six-month anniversary of the revolution.

Gunmen attack officals

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Four gunmen, including two in army uniforms, opened fire Thursday on a meeting of the governing Council of State, killing a union activist and wounding two politicians, witnesses said.

The attack occurred in a hotel courtyard where the 19-member council was meeting with union, political and business leaders to deal with a wave of violent crime.

The assailants burst into the courtyard and sprayed the group with M-16 rifle fire, according to witnesses and independent radio reports.

Two attackers wore army uniforms and two wore civilian clothes, the reports said.

A truckload of soldiers arrived at the hotel, in a mainly residential area of Port-au-Prince, about a half-hour later.

The civilian council governs alongside President Ertha Pascal-Trouillot. She was not present at the meeting and her office had issued no statement by late afternoon.

Witnesses and Radio Antilles identified the dead man as union activist Jean-Marie Montes.

Council member Serge Villard was wounded in the stomach and Emmanuel Mani, a member of the socialist National Progressive Party, was wounded in the thigh, the reports said. Both were hospitalized.

Missing man flyover

Confederate Air Force (CAF) "warbirds" fly the missing-man formation over Midland on Thursday in tribute to local resident Robb Satterfield, 65, a colonel in the CAF and a former United States Air Force test pilot who died this week. The No. 3 aircraft in the formation broke away from the formation and peeled off to the west in signaling a final tribute to the aviator.

Transplant over; Chad faces long wait for results

■ Special blood services lab manager explains that bone marrow transplants have a 40 to 50 percent chance of success.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

After enduring the rigors of a bone marrow transplant preceded by days of chemotherapy and radiation treatment, 3-year-old Chad Blasingame was apparently his usual cheerful self.

"You can't tell there's anything been done to him," said Midland's Patti Blasingame, Chad's mother. "He did real well — a lot better than I thought he would."

John Gossett, clinical manager of Baylor University Medical Center's special blood services lab in Dallas, said the transplant went well. However, he said it is too early to tell if the operation will be successful.

Medical center doctors performed the transplant June 15 with the hope that it would cure Chad's leukemia, an ultimately fatal disease. The transplant came after a year-long donor search.

Marrow cells were removed from a donor in New Jersey the morning of the transplant and flown to Dallas. The cells were introduced into Chad's body in an operation resembling a blood transfusion, Gossett said.

But for Chad, the transplant itself was the easy part. Gossett said Chad underwent two days of intense chemotherapy and three days of radiation treatment prior to the transplant.

Doctors are now monitoring Chad to determine whether the donated marrow cells have "engrafted" and begun to produce blood cells. It will be two or three weeks before doctors know if engraftment has occurred, Gossett said.

"The patient is doing extremely well," Gossett said. "However, it is too early to tell the success of the engraftment process."

Until the transplanted marrow takes hold and begins to produce blood on its own, Chad will continue to receive periodic transfusions, Gossett said.

Meanwhile, infection, his body's rejection of the donated marrow cells, and "Graft vs. Host Disease," are three of the possibilities Chad faces in the wake of the transplant.

"It's truly the first 100 days after the transplant that is the critical time," said Gossett, who added that Chad is receiving anti-rejection drugs. "It's too early to tell whether the treatment is successful."

Bone marrow transplants have a 40 to 50 percent success rate, Gossett said.

To limit the possibility of infection, Chad will remain in relative isolation for several weeks. Gossett said Chad is in a room with a filtered ventilation system and visitors must wash their hands and wear surgical masks.

Ms. Blasingame said she and her husband Tony have spent entire nights with Chad in the isolation room.

When Chad is released from the medical center the family will have to rent a Dallas apartment so Chad can return to the hospital for treatment several times a week, she said.

Ms. Blasingame has been taking turns with her husband spending time in Dallas with Chad. It was her turn this week to be in Midland, where she works for Energas. On Saturday, she leaves for Dallas and a "changing of the guard."

Family friend Linda Steward said the Blasingame's travel expenses have been high and that they continue to need money to pay for medical bills not covered by insurance.

Donations for Chad are still being accepted at United Bank, 500 W. Illinois Ave., or First City Texas bank, 500 W. Texas Ave.

'Turning Point' facility opening

Odessa public detoxification center will serve 3-county area

■ Permian Basin Community Center for Mental Health and Mental Retardation's 26-bed center is expected to cut down on the time between asking for help and receiving treatment.

By Erin Blair
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The time lag between asking for help and getting it soon may be shortened for local addicts, with the opening of a public detoxification center in Odessa.

The Permian Basin Community Centers for Mental Health and Mental Retardation's 26-bed Turning Point facility is slated to open its doors at 2000 Maurice Road on or about July 1. It will serve Midland, Ector and Pecos county people withdrawing from alcohol and drug addictions.

Ismael Sanchez, substance abuse supervisor for the facility, expects the center to stay at least 75 percent full at all times. He said people seeking help for their addictions have had to join the line waiting for an open bed at Big Spring State Hospital.

Pamela Bowerman, executive director of the Permian Basin Regional Council on Alcoholism and Drug Abuse, said there is a great need for affordable detoxification care in this area.

"The majority of those who contact us are medically indigent, they have no insurance, so we are limited in the places we can send them," Ms. Bowerman said.

The council currently refers addicts to various treatment centers in a piecemeal fashion, depending on the program's qualifications and available space. Besides Big Spring State Hospital, indigent patients also may be admitted to Clearview Hospital, the West 16th St. Club in Odessa, Victory Outreach in Lamesa, Rivercrest in San Angelo or even a facility in Minnesota.

Clyde McLean, executive director of the Permian Basin Community Centers for Mental Health and Mental Retardation, said both Midland and Odessa had 14-bed detoxification centers operated by the Texas Department of Mental Health/Mental Retardation until 1982, when the state legislature put them under the control of the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse.

The commission had no funding to keep the centers running, so they were closed. Midland and Odessa had no public detoxification center for eight years, McLean said.

Turning Point was funded 2½ months ago by a grant from the same commission, after it received federal money. The state will pay 90 percent of its operating costs, with the remaining 10 percent covered by the cities of Midland and Odessa and Midland, Ector and Pecos counties, McLean said.

Its services will be provided to patients on a sliding scale of fees, with the truly indigent paying nothing for treatment.

The facility has room for 34 adult patients, but is funded for only 26, about 17 men and nine women, Sanchez said. A staff of two drug and alcohol abuse-certified counselors and 10 counselor-assistants will be on duty 24 hours a day.

Sanchez said the average stay will be between four days and two weeks. The detoxification center is a non-medical facility with a physician's assistant but no doctor on the staff.

"The addicts will have already taken care of their medical problems when they get here," Sanchez explained. "If one overdoses, he goes to the hospital emergency room for treatment, then is discharged and comes here."

"We're clearing their heads and working with them in counseling and one-on-one sessions and getting them set up in long-term treatment programs," he said.

McLean said the center's plan is to have its own residential treatment program on the second floor of the 15,000 square-foot building, formerly a tank company's office.

"We've written the grant application and if it's funded, we'll proceed with it, if not we'll keep applying," McLean said.

"There's never enough money," Ms. Bowerman said. She said more drug and alcohol addiction programs would save local and state governments money in the long run, by reducing costs associated with addiction: indigent health care, welfare and law enforcement

"Think of the money saved if we can get them out of the cycle of addiction," she said.

Pecos, Upton counties eligible for federal aid

■ FEMA's disaster declaration translates into a payment of up to 75 percent for the cost of losses incurred by West Texans from the June 1 tornado.

By James Cullen
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Federal Emergency Management Agency has agreed to assist local governments in repairing flood and weather-related damage to public buildings, roads and bridges in five Texas counties, including Pecos and Upton counties, the governor's office announced Thursday.

The announcement brings to 25 the number of counties that have been declared public assistance disaster areas at the request of Gov. Bill Clements.

The declaration means the federal government will pay 75 percent of repair costs for public buildings, roads and bridges damaged because of recent flooding. Local governments will pay the remaining 25 percent.

The five counties include Liberty, Madison, Pecos, Trinity and Upton.

The federal agency also has approved Clements' request to add Upton County to the presidential disaster declaration covering individual assistance, which already included Pecos County.

The declaration means Upton County residents also are eligible to apply for a variety of loans, grants and other assistance to recover from damage due to tornadoes that hit the area June 1.

The announcement brings to 63 the number of Texas counties that have been declared disaster areas because of flooding, thunderstorms and tornadoes that hit the state in April, May and early June.

Midland police consider neighborhood beats

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Instead of calling the police when a problem arises with the folks next door, wouldn't it be nice to have a neighborhood friend around who was willing and able to help?

A proposed new program by the Midland Police Department would make that a reality — and the friend would be a police officer.

"Our idea is to go into community oriented policing," Midland Police Chief Richard Czech said.

The proposed project would base an officer in a neighborhood to interact with residents, to listen to their safety needs, and direct those in need to the appropriate social service organization as well as act in the capacity of a peace officer.

"We hope he would be on foot a lot where he can meet the people and talk to them," Czech said. "One of the key things is that a neighborhood knows it has an officer and the officer has his community."

Czech describes the program as "pro-active rather than reactive," by keeping a problem from happening and hence reducing calls for police service.

"We need the help of the community to help solve the problems of the community ... the police can't do it all," Czech said.

"This type of program is useful in the area where narcotics are present because the public gets involved," he said.

The nature of the program also creates a positive rapport between the citizens and officers, thus enhancing the overall image of police officers, Czech.

The police department has requested $30,877 to fund the project from Midland's $837,000 Community Development Block Grant for the 1990-91 fiscal year. The federal grant money is given to programs to help residents of low and moderate income areas.

Final approval by the Midland City Council for which programs will be selected in July is scheduled for Aug. 14.

Two council members, John Castro and Jose Cuevas, said they believe other projects, such as paving roads, will probably beat out the police-community program.

"We like the idea but think it should come out of the general funds. We're going to push for that," Castro said.

Cuevas agreed that the financing should come from the general funds and is enthusiastic about the program.

"I like the personal aspect. He (the police officer) becomes part of the neighborhood ... he becomes more in tune (with what's going on)," Cuevas said.

General fund proposals will be reviewed next week, Castro said, and "if it doesn't get funded it will

Midland College faculty members cited for results

Fourteen current and former Midland College faculty members were cited in a recent book for their exemplary teaching results.

The group was named in Teaching As Leading — Profiles in Excellence in the Open-Door College by George A. Baker III, John E. Roueche and Rosemary Gillett-Karam.

The book examines the teaching styles and results of 435 faculty members of community colleges in the United States and Canada. Those selected were nominated by their respective college presidents or chief executive officers. Nominees then responded to detailed questionnaires.

Three or more student responses also were required for each nominee.

Cited from Midland College were: Julia Flaherty, Ph.D., history and government instructor; Celia Harris, Ed.D., associate degree nursing instructor; Nancy Hart, J.D., legal assistance instructor; Glenda Hicks, Ph.D., instructor in English; Pamela Howell, Ph.D., instructor in English; Clara King, M.B.A., C.P.A., instructor in business; Shea Nabi, M.S., instructor in biology; Joe Nye, M.S. instructor in drafting; Bob Peetz, M.S., criminal justice instructor; Nancy Shaw, M.S.N., instructor in associate degree nursing; Chloice Shofner, M.B.A., instructor in economics; and Warren Taylor, M.A. and M.F.A., instructor in art.

Also named from Midland College were Charles Klein, M.A., instructor in mathematics now teaching in California; and Jerry Tubb, M.M., now in the commercial music industry in Austin. Ms. Nabi is moving to Massachusetts later this month.

"All these instructors had received campus, regional, and national recognition for their teaching expertise and results, and most have been teaching for at least 10 years," said MC President Dr. Jess Parrish. "Their excellence had been noted by both their peers and their students. No other community college had more outstanding instructors recognized in this study than Midland College, which we feel is a reflection of this community's commitment to the excellence of the institution."

The study found the outstanding teachers had in common a commitment to helping students learn; a willingness to devote an average of more than 48 hours per week to teaching, preparation, and student consultation; and a recognition that each student is different.

The successful teacher "...creates a caring climate in the classroom that is non-threatening to the student's relationship with the teacher and with other students....has every intention of making a difference in students' lives...carefully plans but remains flexible about the delivery of content and is always cognizant of students' needs," Parrish is quoted in comments about some of Midland College's nominees.

Parrish previously had been spotlighted in an earlier book by Baker, Roueche and Robert R. Rose about community college CEOs who were actively developing the next generation of community college leaders.

Rouche is professor and director of The Community College Leadership Program at the University of Texas at Austin, where he holds the Sid W. Richardson Regents Chair in Community College Leadership. He has directed the program since 1971.

Baker is professor of Educational Administration at UT-Austin, where he works with graduate students enrolled in the Community College Leadership Program.

WEST TEXAS IN BRIEF

Flames destroy travel trailer

Staff Report

Flames engulfed an 18-foot travel trailer behind a house at 4012 Annetta Drive Thursday afternoon, but no one was reported injured in the blaze.

Investigators at the scene said the fire, which was reported shortly before 5 p.m., completely gutted the interior of the trailer.

The house behind which the trailer was located was unoccupied, investigators said.

The cause of the fire was under investigation Thursday afternoon.

Man escapes prison

Staff Report

SNYDER — Texas law enforcement officials are looking for a Big Spring man who escaped from a correctional facility in Snyder on Wednesday, said Assistant Warden Charlie Streetman of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice Institutional Unit, Price Daniel facility.

Travis Dale Gray, 31, escaped from the facility by hiding in a truck that transported furniture made at a furniture company in the prison, where he worked. A hole was discovered in the top of the truck in Abilene, where Gray is believed to have escaped.

Gray was serving a 40-year sentence for a murder charge out of Mitchell County. He had been at the Snyder facility since April 2.

He is described as a white male, 5 feet 8 inches tall, weighing 170 pounds with a ruddy complexion and blue eyes and brown hair.

Streetman said that anyone with any information of Gray's whereabouts should contact their nearest sheriff's office.

Gun repair burglarized

Staff Report

Midland police reported that several firearms were taken in a business burglary that was reported Thursday morning.

Burglars entered Davidson Gun Repair, 505 W. Florida Avenue, by way of a vent in the roof and took several firearms, although the exact number was not available on Thursday, police reported.

The incident was reported at 11 a.m.

Raye Noah to minister

Staff Report

Raye Noah of Gracement, will minister at 7 p.m. Friday at Midland Center, Main street at Wall Avenue.

Mrs. Noah and her husband, Claude, pastor of Agape Fellowship in Binger, founded Agape Drug and Alcohol Abuse Center, Noah Christian Academy and Women of the Harvest.

They recently established Agape Childrens Ranch in Binger to minister to troubled youths.

Mrs. Noah has conducted meetings and ministered in the Midland/Odessa area for the past five years. The public is invited to attend this meeting.

Suspects arrested

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Three people were in custody and another was being sought as police investigate a triple slaying linked to a house fire.

Gregory Lynn Summers, 32, of Abilene was charged Thursday with capital murder in the June 12 incident that left three relatives dead.

Taylor County Justice of the Peace Sam Matta set $1 million bond for Summers, 32.

The stabbing victims were the suspect's adoptive parents, Mandell "Gene" Summers, 65, and Helen Summers, 64; and his uncle, Billy Mack Summers, 60.

Detective Sgt. Dan Spohn declined to say which death the charge involves. It was filed as capital murder because of the multiple deaths, according to Spohn.

A capital murder warrant has been issued for Andrew Cantu, 22, of Abilene, said Spohn.

Raymond Gonzalez, 19, was arrested Wednesday in Haskell, on charges of burglary of a habitation in the Summers case. He was held in the Taylor County Jail in lieu of $250,000 bond.

Paul Flores, 19, was arrested Wednesday in Aspermont on a burglary of habitation charge. He was expected to be transferred to Taylor County.

Williams wants more protection

DALLAS (AP) — Republican gubernatorial nominee Clayton Williams, who has been criticized for his perceived views of women, says he has expanded his anti-crime plan to include taree points specific to sexual assault cases.

Williams told the Dallas chapter of Commercial Real Estate Women he wants:

— sex offenders to serve the maximum sentence allowed by law;

— to change state law to give sexual assault victims access to funds in the state victims' assistance program, and — to double prison space so violent criminals will serve maximum sentences.

"Today, under current law, a sexual assault offender can expect to serve 3½ months for that violent crime," Williams said in a speech Wednesday to the group. "Why? Because our prisons are overcrowded and we have no place to put them."

Williams also responded to questions previously raised in a Dallas Morning News questionnaire about violence against women. It was the first time Williams has detailed his views on legislation concerning sexual assault since he came under sharp attack for making a joking comment about rape.

The News posed the same six questions to both gubernatorial candidates three months ago. Democratic candidate Ann Richards replied the day after the questions were submitted.

In his answers, Williams agreed with Ms. Richards' stance on all six issues. In doing so, he said he would sign three bills that Republican Gov. Bill Clements vetoed.

A spokesman for Williams said that the candidate took three months to answer The News' questions on anti-crime proposals because that is when the issue fit into the campaign's strategy.

It was three months ago that Williams compared bad weather to rape, telling reporters around a West Texas campfire that if it's inevitable, "relax and enjoy it."

"In the past several weeks, Williams has outlined his views on economic development and outlined his views on education, and we are now in the process of outlining anti-crime issues," said Gordon Hensley, a spokesman for Williams' campaign. "We have our game plan, and we plan to stick to it."

The six measures the candidates were asked about are likely to be debated again, according to the sponsors of the measures.

On the issues, the candidates said they favor:

— Prohibiting police and prosecutors from requiring sexual assault complainants to take a polygraph test.

— Allowing expert testimony in murder cases about battered women's syndrome, an emotional illness that hinders some women in leaving violent relationships.

— In cases of felony assault on a family member, prohibiting the use of deferred adjudication, which allows a judge to expunge the criminal records of offenders who successfully complete the terms of their probation.

— Allowing judges to deny bail to those accused of sexual assault.

— Repealing an exception in sexual assault cases that applies only to spousal rape. The exception provides that "grievous bodily injury" must be proved in rape cases involving married couples.

— Providing additional funding to centers that aid sexual assault victims.

Clements vetoed the first three proposals last year, saying that he believes the admission of evidence and the use of deferred adjudication should be left to the discretion of judges.

Glenn Smith, a spokesman for Ms. Richards, said Wednesday that he was pleased that Williams and Ms. Richards agree on the issues.

"I guess it's a turn for the better that Clayton Williams can read real solutions to real problems and adopt them as his own. We're glad to have him," he said.

Hensley said that although Williams would sign the bills vetoed by Clements that does not mean he is distancing himself from the governor.

"We have our position, and Governor Clements has his," Hensley said.

Roller coaster group travels for thrills

By Andrea Weisgerber

ARLINGTON (AP) — Fear is scarce among this group, even though a hair-curling 14-story fall and sure terror await them. In fact, they're ready to enjoy it.

After being hurled at 60 mph across 21 hills, around impossible curves and over bumps that slammed them into restraining bars, these riders of the Texas Giant roller coaster applaud.

"I can never get enough of this ride. Never," said Gary Slade of Arlington.

Some wax reflective.

"I think it'll be a better ride at night," said Jim Raba of Cleveland, Ohio, as his wife, Jane, nodded.

They were among 450 members of the American Coaster Enthusiasts who continued their search Thursday for the ultimate roller coaster thrill by testing the new, wooden ride at Six Flags Over Texas.

"I don't name a No. 1 because I have a lot of favorites," said Ray Ueberroth, a retired educator from Baltimore, who says he's ridden about 350 coasters in 53 years.

But, James Wilson of Ardmore, Okla., said he thinks the Giant is "a world class coaster ... This may be the best anywhere."

Six Flags touted the Giant as the world's tallest coaster when it opened this season. A legal dispute with Dorney Park near Allentown, Pa., made Six Flags back off that claim. Both parties agreed that the Giant has the highest lift, 143 feet. Dorney has the longest drop, 157 feet.

AP Laserphoto

That sort of thing is important to the 3,000 American Coaster Enthusiasts, who get together to compare drops, lifts and bumps.

Most members at a special Six Flags preview for the group, gathered here for its annual convention, have ridden more than 100 roller coasters — some many times — but haven't lost the thrill.

"I think I'm one of those persons who needs the perceived threat," said Ueberroth. "But I just ride coasters because they're fun. There's nothing else like a good wooden coaster."

"You start to notice different things about it," said Glenn Les of Willowbrook, Ill. "The first time ... it goes by too fast. After a few rides you start getting a real feel for the flow of the ride and you watch out for certain things."

Slade, who is the regional representative for ACE, said, "Every ride is diffe ent, because I ride in a different seat and I ride on a different side of the train. And I ride a different train and every train is unique."

Slade has ridden the Giant more than 180 times. He once remarked to a magazine reporter while atop the 143-foot first hill that he could see his apartment from there.

Despite their outward calm, the coaster zealots are far from blase. Most have the look of naughty children about to do something really fun, especially when the coaster is wood, like the Giant.

"You get the rickety feeling that you're out of control," Ueberroth grinned. "You feel that you're in danger when you're not really in danger. On a metal coaster it's the same ride all the time, but wood is very yielding," and the ride changes each time, he said.

The Les' will spend $2,000 on park excursions this year. They pay regular admission, they say, and they stand in line like everyone else. That's why a preview ride like the one for this convention was a bonus.

They don't mind the trek from park to park.

"That's the kind of vacation we enjoy," Mrs. Les said.

The Rabas plan to visit parks in Canada, Georgia, Ohio and Pennsylvania this summer.

Most of the coaster fanatics didn't want to name a personal favorite, but the Thunderbolt at Kennywood Park near Pittsburgh, the Beast at King's Island near Cincinnati, and the Timber Wolf at Kansas City were mentioned most.

Weekend fence-building will provide wildlife area

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

A fence-building event for the benefit of orphaned, injured, and recuperating wildlife — birds to antelope — will be held this weekend at the Woody and Midge Erskine Eos Bird Rehabilitation Center at 3306 W. Golf Course Road in Midland.

The 6-foot fencing, donated by Texaco Inc., will enclose a four-acre "wilderness" tract to allow more room for the wildlife at Eos.

"We need it, so we can move most of the (bird) cages away from the house," Mrs. Erskine, a Midland bird rehabilitator, said Thursday. "It's really to expand the facilities to make it safer for the animals. It's a safety factor for the animals, because dogs have broken in and killed several antelope and other things."

The fence building is being organized by Renee Lynch, a draftsman for Oxy USA, an oil-and-gas company in Midland. Other Oxy workers and additional volunteers are joining Mrs. Lynch in helping Mrs. Erskine and her husband, Midland inventor Woody Erskine, put up the fence.

"I had heard of the 'bird lady' all of my life," said Mrs. Lynch, who first met the Erskines about two years after she had found a dead sparrow hawk, which apparently had been a pet, and took the bird to the Erskine place. Mrs. Lynch said she was impressed with Mrs. Erskine's efforts in saving injured and abused wildlife, particularly birds of prey and endangered and threatened species.

"I'm quite an animal lover and an environmentalist," said Mrs. Lynch. "And I just really admire her (Mrs. Erskine), and she needs the fence."

Mrs. Lynch said she has been "one of those individuals who write checks and send them off to Greenpeace or to the World Wildlife Fund instead of getting active. It's real easy to write a check and send it off. It's a different thing to go out and get sweaty," she said. "We're going to get the fence up."

The Erskines and Mrs. Lynch are seeking additional volunteers to help in raising the fence.

American Fence Company will be drilling holes for the posts at no cost to the Erskines. "Texaco donated all of that wonderful fencing," Mrs. Erskine said.

And La Bodega Restaurant is donating the Saturday noon meal for the volunteers.

"By 8 o'clock (Saturday morning)," said Mrs. Erskine, "we should be going full blast" into building the fence.

Finance trial date set

AUSTIN (AP) — Poor school districts will mount their challenge to Texas' new public education reform package at a July 9 hearing under an order by State District Judge Scott McCown.

McCown is overseeing school finance reform after last year's unanimous Texas Supreme Court order for change.

He set the hearing date on Thursday. Attorneys had predicted the action and said McCown told them he would set aside two weeks for the proceeding.

Poor school districts who sued the state over its school finance system call the new law unconstitutional. They disagree on whether the plan should be used anyway for a year to avoid disrupting school budgets.

McCown has indicated he would allow the school finance plan to take effect at least for the 1990-91 school year, some attorneys involved in the case said.

The new plan was worked out by Republican Gov. Bill Clements and leaders in the Democrat-controlled Legislature after three months of special sessions this year.

It is meant to even out funding disparities between rich and poor school districts.

The package increases state public education spending by $528 million this school year, and makes other changes, such as allowing the governor to appoint the state education commissioner.

State leaders say they believe the law will be approved by the court. But poor school districts say the plan makes no meaningful improvements in the $13.5 billion-a-year school finance system, which relies on state aid, local property taxes and some federal money.

Army records of probe of WWII art theft destroyed

DENISON (AP) — The Army said it has discarded all records of a military police probe into the World War II theft of medieval artwork from a mine shaft in Germany.

Consequently, the Army said it may never be known whether a former U.S. soldier from Texas who died in 1980 was a suspect in the theft.

The artifacts, some of which are stored in a small-town bank vault, have been valued in the millions by German art experts.

A Lutheran cathedral in Quedlinburg, East Germany, is suing to recover the artwork from the First National Bank in Whitewright and the family of Joe T. Meador.

Meador, a former Army lieutenant, is believed to have stolen the objects and stashed them in his hometown of Whitewright, about 60 miles north of Dallas. He left the artifacts to a brother and sister.

The Army investigated the theft, but its file was apparently destroyed in 1964 when records for all cases older than 15 years were purged, The Denison Herald reported Thursday.

Barbara Parker, a spokeswoman at the U.S. Army Crime Records Center in Fort Holabird, Md., said only records of historical interest survived the house cleaning.

The Army abandoned the case in 1949 when Quedlinburg became part of East Germany. Army spokesmen have said it is unclear whether the military will reopen the case.

The articles allegedly taken by Meador include a silver, ivory and gold reliquary from the 9th or 10th century, a 10th century Byzantine rock-crystal flask with sides formed like birds and a liturgical ivory comb inlaid with precious stones from King Henry I.

Meador's heirs, Jack Meador, 70, and Jane Cook, 58, said early this week that their farmhouse has been ransacked by burglars looking for the treasure.

They said in a court document that the unoccupied farmhouse was burglarized Monday night.

Czech said if the department doesn't get the grant it will still try to set up the program anyway.

The amount of money requested will be used to pay the salary of an officer for 6 months to 1 year, Czech said. The officer will do research and analysis on how best to implement the program while actually being part of it in a selected community at the same time.

If the project is sucessful, beginning in the lower income areas of the city, Czech said he would like to eventually expand it to cover the entire city.

Williams considers random drug testing on state employees

AUSTIN (AP) — Republican gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams said Thursday he would consider randomly testing state employees for drug abuse and might consider proposals to fire college professors convicted of cocaine crimes.

"Who, more than public employees, should be first to adhere to the rules?" Williams said after a speech to the Texas Pharmaceutical Association.

"Drug testing has been the most effective tool and was responsible for cleaning up drugs in the United States Army," Williams said. "I have random drug testing in my company."

Asked if random drug testing should be considered for state employees, Williams responded: "Well, I think they are a very legitimate arena to look at, yes. What better place to start than the way we did in the U.S. Army with random drug testing. It cleaned drugs out of the Army. Remember, we're saving people."

A representative for state employees urged Williams to drop the idea of random drug testing.

"We are not for random drug testing of state employees," said Lane Zivley, executive director of Texas Public Employees Association. "Clayton Williams is being advised by some people in the wrong direction. He has yet to sit down and discuss this with us. He needs to do this so he can be advised in the correct fashion."

Williams emphasized that random state employee drug testing, like punitive measures against college professors who use drugs, have not been included in his campaign platform. "I've not proposed that yet, but I sure wouldn't fight it and it might turn up later (in his platform)."

He was more decisive about punitive measures against college students convicted of drug crimes, but added, "If I'm going to kick a kid out, a faculty member should go first, if convicted of cocaine use."

He also called on Texas businesses to impose random drug testing on their employees, to impose a "drug free work place."

Williams proposed a $1.5 billion war on drugs in Texas, which he proposes to finance by cutting the state budget. He proposed, among other things, a 7 percent cut in state operating funds and a hiring freeze for state employees, except in the areas of criminal justice, health and education.

His proposal for a hiring freeze also met with opposition from the state employee's group. "He's off base when it comes to that," Zivley said.

Many state employees, veterans of budget cutting legislative sessions, already work the jobs of two people, Zivley said.

Judge decides suspect insane

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — A man who claims to be a NATO agent and was once questioned in a Houston church bombing was found innocent by reason of insanity on a charge of possessing a homemade unregistered firearm.

Jeffrey Mack Boggs, 32, of West Virginia, was found innocent by U.S. District Judge Richard Schell at the end of a non-jury trial Wednesday. Boggs will remain in custody until a hearing is conducted to determine whether his release creates a serious risk, officials said.

Boggs had been investigated in the Jan. 30 Houston pipe bomb explosion that injured Lisa Kelly Osteen, daughter of the Rev. John Osteen of Lakewood Church. She suffered minor injuries in the blast.

House makes neighbors see red

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Architecht Eugenio Mesta says his shocking purple- and orange-painted home is a work of art. His neighbors call it a nuisance.

Mesta and his wife, Cecilia, were confronted by neighbors two weeks after they moved into their stucco home. The neighbors presented a petition saying the home's paint job violates the couple's deed that requires their home to be similar to their neighbors.

"I'm a little frustrated," Mesta said. "This is a creation; it's a piece of art. Because it's art, it's a matter of how one interprets it."

Mesta, an architect with Perspectiva Inc., designed the $110,000 house. It is the only stucco home on the street. All other houses in the cul-de-sac are brick and earth-tone colors.

"I knew the house was unique, but I didn't think people would make such a big deal out of it," Mesta said. "A person's house should be an expression of that person. A building — no matter what it is — should speak. Our house talks. It expresses what we feel, and it serves our needs."

The Mestas, who are from Mexico, never expected to jolt the neighborhood. Mrs. Mesta said the colors she and her husband selected are quite common in Mexico and other parts of the U.S.

"We believed that this is the land of freedom," Mrs. Mesta said. "We didn't think that we would not be able to paint the house the way we wanted."

Mrs. Mesta said neighbors have complained about curiosity-seekers who drive by for a peek at the home's hues. On weekends, Mesta said, about 10 motorists an hour come by to look at the house.

Neighbors also have said the home's hues may reduce property values.

Floriculture can bring profits for small farms

New marketing opportunities opening for certain specialty flowers, dried or fresh

By Don Kendall
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Raising specialty flowers could mean the sweet scent of success for small farmers who study markets and learn the tricks of the trade.

It can be downright tasty, too.

"Dried or fresh, certain specialty flowers can stimulate not only the eyes but also the sense of taste or smell, empowering new marketing enterprises for small-scale enterprisers," says a new report by the Agriculture Department.

The overall business of growing flowers and other floriculture crops is nothing to sneeze at. Last year's wholesale value was about $2.43 billion, up 6 percent from 1988.

By comparison, corn was the most valuable crop at more than $17 billion. But floriculture, as a group, exceeded the 1989 estimated value of many notable commodities, including sorghum, $1.28 billion; oats, $557.5 million; durum wheat, $319 million; rice, $1.1 billion; and sugar beets, $2.39 billion.

Specialty flowers represent a portion of the total floriculture industry, rather like lambs or pigs being part of livestock production.

The possibilities of growing and selling specialty flowers are examined in a new one-sheet report, part of a series by the department's Office for Small-Scale Agriculture.

Previous topics have included tree farming, sheep, goats, mushrooms, foliage plants, herbs, wildflowers, specialty vegetables and "exotic" livestock such as ostriches, llamas, alpacas, water buffalo and European fallow deer.

And now specialty flowers.

"Such flowers can be marketed fresh, dried, sugarcoated, in bulk, as singles, or by the pound, ounce, or sometimes gram," the report said. "This exciting market, although subject to whims of designers, chefs or fashion, continues to grow to meet demands."

Growers meet specific needs, including rare cut flowers, edible flowers for garnishes or salads, potpourri mixes, and medicinal plants.

But as in any specialty, flowers must meet consumer expectations reflected in production, packaging and presentation, the report said. Small-scale entrepreneurs also should become acquainted with members of local chefs' associations or state restaurant groups.

The report urged would-be specialty growers to read trade journals and other publications to learn more about techniques and demands.

Stan and Susan Devoto of Sebastopol, Calif., learned at a local farmers' market how edible flowers could be a marketing aid for produce, they told The Furrow magazine.

"You need something different to get noticed," Susan said.

Gourmet chefs and discerning grocery shoppers are seeing a wide range of old favorites these days, including calendula, chrysanthemum, dianthus, dandelion, geranium, hibiscus, lily, nasturtium, pansy, rose and blue violets.

"Others include certain herb flowers like mint, sage, basil and bergamot, and even vegetable flowers such as pumpkin, okra and squash," the USDA report said.

Farmer David Aydelotte of Salisbury, Md., said chefs using his field-grown mint flowers and herb flowers are always looking for new garnishes.

"Many chefs are looking for a social event, a story that goes with the food," he said.

Another example cited by USDA is the Victorian technique of candying flowers used by Jo and Rob Pendergraph of Midlothian, Va., and reported in the Delmarva Farmer newspaper.

In this technique, each flower petal is painted with egg white and sprinkled with granulated sugar. After the sugar has crystalized, the flowers are stored in airtight containers.

The Pendergraphs said the candied flowers sell for $45 per 100 at a major New York City department store.

Competition is even fiercer in the dried-flower market, the USDA report said. A number of references and guides were listed, along with their costs and addresses for ordering copies.

The report was prepared by Thomas S. Handwerker of the University of Maryland-Eastern Shore, and George B. Holcomb of the department's Office of Public Affairs.

For free single copies, write to: Howard W. Kerr Jr., Program Director, Office for Small-Scale Agriculture, Cooperative State Research Service, Room 342-D, Aerospace Building, USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250-2200; or telephone 202-447-3640.

Slaughter cattle market up slightly

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cattle being fed for the slaughter market as of June 1 in the seven major beef states totaled 7.87 million head, up 1 percent from a year ago but down 3 percent from two years ago, the Agriculture Department said Tuesday.

Feedlot inventories were up from a year earlier in Arizona, California, Iowa, Nebraska and Texas. But they declined in Colorado and Kansas.

Marketings of "fed" cattle in May totaled 1.8 million head, up 3 percent from a year ago and 4 percent more than two years ago. Officials said it was the largest May sell-off of feedlot cattle since the seven-state reports began in 1972.

How much cutting is too much?

Clearcutting is the dominant method of logging in the Tongass National Forest in southeastern Alaska because Sitka spruce require plenty of sunlight to regenerate naturally. Clearcutting in a section of the vast Tongass is shown. Legislation that would further limit logging in the largest national forest is pending before a congressional conference committee. At issue is protection of virgin stands of trees that are of value to the timber industry and as wildlife habitat.

Epidemic of fleas may need multiple approach

The flea population is rapidly increasing and is much larger than usual this year because so many survived the mild winter.

Kiker

Fleas tend to be more of an itching nuisance than a threat to human health, primarily because the worst diseases they carried have been eradicated.

The chief source of flea infestation in the home are family pets, but once indoors fleas thrive in floor cracks, carpets, upholstered furniture and pet bedding. Fleas, of course, are also abundant outside; larvae burrow into the top surface of the soil.

If flea problems are occurring in the house, the yard, and on the pets, all three must be treated at the same time.

Use only approved products for treating animals. Dusts are preferred because they are generally effective longer. The newer products containing an insect growth regulator can reduce subsequent egg and larval production and can be applied directly to the animal.

Outdoors, treat areas that pets frequent. Use only approved products to thoroughly cover and saturate soil and grass areas. Make sure that application equipment is carefully calibrated to measure dosages exactly.

In the house, thoroughly vacuum or sweep carpets, rugs, furniture, cracks and crevices. Be sure to reach under furniture and along baseboards. Discard the vacuum bag afterwards.

Use a coarse spray (large droplets) in treating likely infested areas. It is always more effective to treat all carpets, furniture and baseboards at one time. After spraying, use total-release aerosol applications to reduce adult fleas.

Additional applications may be needed about three weeks later when populations build from eggs that hatched since the first spraying. Insect growth regulators used with other sprays will inhibit flea growth in early stages and extend control measures.

Earnest C. Kiker is Midland County Extension Agent for Agriculture.

Farm exports up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Exports accounted for more than 18 percent of last year's U.S. farm production value, the highest rating in five years, an Agriculture Department report said recently.

Lack of water endangers wildlife at Comal Springs

AP Laserphoto

Bobby Whiteside, of the Aquatic Station at Southwest Texas State University in San Marcos, looks for fountain darters in a dip net he used during the search for the endangered species, in Landa Park at Comal Springs in new Braunfels.

NEW BRAUNFELS (AP) — Wildlife officials are collecting rare species of minnows and insects native to the Comal Springs because they fear the springs will go dry.

A biologist and New Braunfels city officials also have asked the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to place five rare invertebrates native to Comal Springs on the endangered species list.

"If the springs go dry, then there's a very good possibility (the invertebrates) will become extinct," said Tom Arsuffi, an assistant professor of biology at Southwest Texas State University in San Marcos.

The Comal Springs are the largest in Texas and are fed by the Edwards Aquifer, a natural underground reservoir. Hot, dry weather and increasing demand for water from the aquifer is causing it to drop. There has been no recent rainfall to replenish it.

Once the aquifer drops below a certain level, the Comal Springs will go dry, water experts say.

Fish and Wildlife Service officials were at Landa Lake in New Braunfels on Wednesday to collect specimens of fountain darter minnows for breeding stock. The native population of darters died out during a severe drought in the 1950s.

The current population was reintroduced in the 1970s from specimens captured at the San Marcos Springs.

The minnow already is the subject of a threatened federal endangered species lawsuit by the Guadalupe-Blanco River Authority and the Sierra Club.

New Braunfels City Manager Paul Grohman said the discovery and documentation of the five new species of invertebrates may help stop depletion of the Edwards Aquifer and the springs it feeds.

If the invertebrates are declared endangered, federal law would prohibit destruction of their habitat.

The creatures include three types of beetles, a crustacean sideswimmer and an insect belonging to a group called the burrowing Mayflies.

All are believed to be found only in Comal Springs, Arsuffi said. He and some of his graduate students are documenting the species. Arsuffi was collecting mayflies Wednesday by pouring silt through a net to separate the flies from the mud.

"This is kind of like mining for gold," he said, thrusting both hands into the backwater silt of Landa Lake. "The trick is to get the mud with the mayfly."

Arsuffi said the particular type of mayfly has built-in tusks it uses to dig into thick mud under the Comal Springs.

"Everyone has an appreciation for big things, like moose and bears," he said. "For me, this wildlife is just the same as the bigger animals."

FRIDAY, JUNE 22, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Preserving a tradition will bring you rich rewards in the months ahead. Business expansion is favored in August. Tough competition in October will keep you on your toes! Extra income will be very welcome in December. A winter romance could flower into a long-lasting alliance. Be wary of a selfish person who tries to manipulate you next March. You have more assets than you realize. A teen-ager will do you proud in May. Be generous with praise.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: author Anne Morrow Lindbergh, fashion designer Bill Blass, actress Meryl Streep, newsman Ed Bradley.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Answering a challenge lets you protect your financial resources. New, more colorful clothes will help you stand out in a crowd. Go after that special assignment you seek. Romance is thrilling.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Handle money with care. Avoid all types of gambling. Something you learn from an old friend or associate could be the key to future success. Share good news with close friends and relatives.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A great day for small-scale monetary ventures. Use time-saving and money-saving techniques. Study any financial tips passed along by friends. Greater tact is required to restore domestic tranquillity.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be aware of your potential. If you are a writer, reporter or involved in book publishing, you may be on the brink of real success. Refuse to let others destroy your enthusiasm.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Work progress looks excellent. But an overconfident attitude could get you into trouble! Watch your words. Check sales merchandise carefully before purchasing. Small flaws prove costly.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A direct, specific approach is essential at work. The romantic scene brightens when a burden is lifted. Refuse to be intimidated by someone who issues ultimatums. Stand up for your rights.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A better day for finishing projects than starting them. Seek a more effective way to handle your business responsibilities. Be prepared for change, some travel. Dig deep to see if a missing link exists.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Travel and communication are the keys to greater profits. Take steps to cement a business friendship. Your physical energy returns as your attitude improves. Romance enjoys favorable influences.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A good day for strengthening your relationships. An unexpected financial opportunity has a built-in risk. Socialize with individuals from different walks of life.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Think big and expect success! Special personal effort is required. Money woes will not disappear overnight. Concentrate on reaching an understanding with your creditors. Romance thrives.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Someone will keep a promise. Move forward with new confidence. Behind-the-scenes help from family members will let you clinch a property or financial transaction. Give credit where it is due.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): An excellent day for signing contracts. Being aggressive could pay off nicely. Friendly advice is helpful, so long as you not overestimate its value. Group activities hold special appeal.

TODAY'S CHILDREN will be interested and active in the arts. Quick-witted and energetic, they tend to become impatient with slower movers and thinkers. Although these youngsters will get fine grades in school, they want to drop a project if it runs into problems. Mathematics and music may be their favorite subjects. Artistic and imaginative, these Cancerians will also enjoy making their own posters and scrapbooks. Encourage them to enter contests that showcase their creativity.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♡

We have often heard players remark that they would rather be lucky than good. It is our experience that skilled players often create their own luck.

On this hand from a duplicate event, North decided that some good scores were needed if the pair was going to place overall. So North rejected the normal bid of three spades in favor of three no trump, in the hope that there would be the same number of tricks available in no trump as in the suit, which would earn a higher score by the scant margin of 10 points. In this assessment North proved correct, since there were only nine tricks to be had at spades. But nine tricks at no trump required careful technique.

Declarer's queen won the opening heart lead, and it did not take a genius to work out that declarer could not afford to give up the lead more than once if the contract was to succeed. Obviously, there would be no trouble if spades were 3-2—declarer couldn't possibly go wrong. But what if spades were 4-1?

South worked out that no countermeasure was available if West held four spades unless East held a singleton 10 or 9. However, nine tricks could still be made if East held the spade length headed by the ace.

At trick two declarer crossed to the ten of clubs and led a low spade to the jack, which won since East could not rise with the ace without presenting declarer with the contract. Declarer then re-entered dummy with the jack of clubs and led another spade to the queen. Again East could not afford to win the ace. Even though West showed out on this trick, the contract was safe. Declarer had scored two spade tricks to go with his two heart and four club tricks, so he needed only one more trick. That was quickly established by abandoning spades in favor of leading a diamond to the queen. The king of diamonds became the ninth trick for a clear top on the board.

Nixons allow rare glimpse of home life for 50th wedding anniversary

SADDLE RIVER, N.J. (AP) — Richard Nixon and the "vivacious young woman with titian hair" he met at a theater audition in Whittier, Calif., celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary Thursday surrounded by their children and grandchildren.

The former president and his wife, Pat, posed for a golden anniversary portrait in the woodsy panorama that extends from the back of their house.

The peaceful vista sweeps down from a natural deck, past the garden that Mrs. Nixon tends, past the swimming pool where the former president swims laps each evening, to the tennis court used most often for basketball practice by the Nixons' two grandsons.

The couple allowed a photographer and reporter a rare glimpse of their house. The former first lady, 78, seldom ventures out in public and Nixon has zealously guarded their privacy.

Despite illnesses over the years, including a major stroke in 1976 and a mild one in 1983, Mrs. Nixon looked well. She was slender, wearing her blonde hair in much the style that it was in the White House. She walked unaided, carried on a genial conversation and smiled readily for the camera.

The Nixons' two grandsons and two granddaughters cavorted around while an Associated Press photographer took the grandparents' anniversary picture. A few minutes later, relieved of having to pose any more, two of the children were in bathing suits and splashing in the pool.

The Nixons seldom go out in public, and they allowed this visit only on ground rules that their remarks were not to be published.

They usually celebrate special occasions with only their immediate family, which includes Edward and Tricia Cox and David and Julie Eisenhower. The Eisenhowers have three children, Jennie, 11; Alex, 9; and Melanie, 6. The Coxes' son Christopher is 11.

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — The Christa McAuliffe Planetarium was dedicated Thursday as a memorial to the teacher-astronaut killed in the Challenger disaster and a way to honor her passion for motivating children to learn.

"This planetarium is more than a memorial to Christa McAuliffe ... it is more than a planetarium. It is a promise to continue the work she believed in and a promise to fulfill her dream," said NASA Administrator Richard Truly.

About 1,500 people, including some of McAuliffe's former students and White House Chief of Staff John Sununu, attended the opening ceremony.

STATE IN BRIEF

Officials close 4 Texas banks

AUSTIN (AP) — Regulators closed four Texas banks on Thursday, bringing to 62 the number of failures in the state this year.

Federal officials shut down Centre National Bank-Farmers Branch, in Farmers Branch, and Peoples National Bank in Caldwell. State regulators closed Bank of East Texas in Tyler and Lakeland State Bank in Austin.

Road bill killed

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements has vetoed legislation that would have allowed county road districts to refinance their bond debts by selling refunding bonds or certificates of assessment.

In his veto message Thursday, Clements said the bill would "change the rules in the middle of the game."

He said developers responsible for the road projects should bear the risk when problems arise.

Supporters of the bill by state Rep. Parker McCullough, D-Georgetown, said it would help counties restructure debt incurred from failed developments that had been started during boom times.

Oil transferred

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Salvage crews used portable pumps Thursday to remove millions of gallons of oil from the wrecked Mega Borg — a process that was under way when an explosion crippled the vessel nearly two weeks ago.

The slick, once 30 miles long, that resulted from the explosion, continued to dissipate into a series of patches offshore. Coast Guard officials said they could not predict where tar balls may wash ashore, raising the possibility that much of the oil spill may never reach the beach.

"There's really no more leading edge (to the slick). It's all kind of milling about," Coast Guard Petty Officer Marsha Delaney said.

The remaining oil has moved little during the week, and there have been no reports of tar balls from the supertanker spill hitting Texas beaches, Ms. Delaney said.

Prices rebound

NEW YORK (AP) — Crude oil prices staged a modest rebound Thursday as bargain hunters snapped up contracts following this week's sharp decline in prices.

The contract for August delivery of West Texas Intermediate rose 19 cents to settle at $16.94 a 42-gallon barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. The September contract gained 5 cents but other contract months were unchanged to slightly lower. Posted price gained 75 cents to settle at $15.75. Marathon's posting also jumped to $15.75.

Oil prices had fallen sharply earlier this week. Analysts said several factors helped support prices.

Oil prices had been depressed following reports of exceptionally high crude oil stocks. In addition, market players have been disappointed the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries has not come down harder on members who violate production quotas by pumping too much crude.

Stronger dollar

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was mostly stronger against other currencies in Europe today. Gold advanced, but traded sluggishly because of a broad lack of interest.

The dollar continued rising against the West German mark and the Japanese yen after moderate losses at the start of the week. But dealers said dollar activity still was generally directionless and action was limited to range trading.

Political and economic uncertainties over the Soviet Union, Eastern Europe and the unification of East and West Germany helped to underpin the dollar, they said.

In London, the British pound rose to $1.7255. Dollar rates in Europe: 1.6795 West German marks; 1.4150 Swiss francs; 5.6385 French francs; 1.8885 Dutch guilders; 1,231.00 Italian lire; and 1.1748 Canadian dollars.

In Tokyo, the dollar rose 0.62 yen to 154.60 yen. Gold rose in London to a late price of $350.25 a troy ounce.

Report shows slow economy

■ The government reported Thursday that the economy grew at its slowest pace in 3-1/2 years, and analysts say the economy is in good shape, even if it's not booming.

By John D. McClain

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy advanced at its second slowest pace in 3½ years from January through March, the government reported Thursday. Analysts said they expect only modest improvement for the rest of the year.

But the economists said any future growth would be fueled in large part by exports after a fall off in consumer spending, which had been a driving force for the economy through much of the economic expansion.

The Commerce Department said the gross national product — the nation's total output of goods and services — grew at a revised 1.9 percent annual rate in the first quarter.

At the same time, the department revised a price index tied to the GNP to show an annualized inflation rate of 6.4 percent for the quarter. The department said half of that increase was due to rising food and energy prices caused by unusual winter weather and analysts predicted prices would decline during the remainder of the year.

If the GNP and inflation reports are combined with other, more recent economic indicators, "the economy is in pretty good shape, although nobody's talking about a boom," said Michael K. Evans of Evans Economics, Inc., a Washington forecasting firm.

"Considering some of the recession forecasts we heard earlier in the year, that's not at all bad," he added. A recession generally is defined as two consecutive declines in the GNP and has not occurred since 1981-82.

Nevertheless, the economy is growing slower than the 3.0 percent gain of 1989 and the 4.4 percent advance of 1988.

"The picture is one of sluggishness," said economist Cynthia Latta of DRI/McGraw-Hill, a Lexington, Mass., forecasting organization. "Sluggishness today, and tomorrow, and probably for several months to come."

The first-quarter GNP was up from the 1.1 percent annualized rate in the final quarter of 1989. that was the slowest advance since a 0.8 percent gain in the summer of 1986.

The department said a larger export total than had been reported was the largest factor in revising the first-quarter GNP from the meager 1.1 percent gain it had calculated last month. It originally had projected in April that growth during the period had been 2.1 percent.

Exports increased 12.8 percent during the period, while imports grew only 3.0 percent.

"Exports are keeping the recovery alive," Evans said.

Consumer spending, meanwhile, was revised from a 2.4 percent increase reported last month to just 1.6 percent in Thursday's report.

"The lower consumption is consistent with the other news about consumers," said Ms. Latta, noting earlier government reports that retail sales have declined for three straight months through May, the first time that has happened since the fall of 1981 during the last recession.

Midlander honored for daycare training

■ Jo Miller, owner of Creative Schoolhouse, was recognized by the Texas Department of Human Resources for her role in coordinating training workshops for daycare workers.

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Jo Miller has made a career out of caring for children. A former preschool teacher and director, she and her husband David opened Creative Schoolhouse six years ago, selling school and teaching supplies, books and art supplies.

Though she's now in the retail business, she hasn't ended her involvement with childcare, an involvement that earned her an award from the Protective Services division of the Texas Department of Human Resources earlier this month.

The award recognized her role in coordinating training workshops for daycare workers, a program she began three years ago.

"Quality daycare is hard to come by, and we come by it through training," said Mrs. Miller, adding that she was honored her program was selected and hopes it will be repeated across the state.

She was recognized for her training program, which is a series of workshops for daycare administrators and workers, who are required by the state to have 15 hours of training.

The workshops cover a variety of subjects, such as storytelling, discipline, art, science, music, creative movement and administration. The

Ad agency takes on new name

Staff Report

The Permian Basin's oldest advertising agency has changed its name to reflect its regional status.

Womack, Claypoole, Griffin Advertising Inc. has now become Womack, Kleypas Advertising Network Inc. with offices in Odessa, San Antonio and San Angelo. Jim Kleypas will manage the San Antonio office and Gus Clemens will be managing partner of the San Angelo office.

Womack

Kleypas

The three offices had operated under seperate names which had made it confusing, said Price Womack who has been associated with the firm for the past 15 years, and has been president for the past 12.

"The new name reflects our agency today," said Price Womack, president of the firm. "With affiliated offices in San Antonio, San Angelo and Odessa, we are a regional advertising network."

He also pointed out that, Bill Claypoole and Jerry Griffin are no longer connected with the firm, each owning agencies in other towns.

The firm which was formed in 1950 by Pete Snelson and Jack Womack (now retired), provides both regional and national marketing services to clients located throughout Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Missouri, Arkansas and Arizona.

Greenspan sees no signs of serious credit crunch

By Dave Skidmore

WASHINGTON (AP) — Serious economic problems from tightened lending standards may yet emerge but borrowers have not suffered so far from a broad-based credit crunch, Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan said Thursday.

"To date, we have found that lenders have tightened their standards in certain sectors and locales, but that there has not, so far at least, been a broad-based squeeze on credit," Greenspan told the Senate Banking Committee.

"Nonetheless, significant problems cannot be ruled out in the period ahead," he said. "...We are attentive to the possibility that this more cautious stance in the granting of credit could cumulate to threaten the economic expansion."

The central bank chief acknowledged fewer loans are being made to finance commercial real estate construction and corporate mergers, but he said caution was justified by deteriorating conditions in those areas and was not a result of a crackdown by regulators.

At the same time, a senior Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. official warned that commercial real estate difficulties were spreading beyond New England and the Southwest and were likely to get worse before they get better.

"We do expect some continuing slowing and softness in the real estate markets," said Paul G. Fritts, FDIC director of bank supervision. "We don't think it's bottomed out in New England yet. We see some softness beginning to develop in California. And we don't expect the problems to continue at this pace, but we do not see them going away."

Trump became mogul on borrowed money

By Jane Bryant Quinn

NEW YORK– Even in default, you can't say that Donald Trump was wrong. All that borrowed money raised him from a status of "simple rich boy" into mogulhood. Saving your pennies is fine idea. But it takes leverage to levitate into the ranks of the well-to-do.

Quinn

With leverage, you put up a small amount of cash in order to control a much larger investment. The classic leveraged investment is a home mortgage which, for most Americans, is the basic wealth-building loan.

Many home-improvement loans also add value. The rule: An improvement makes sense if it adds $2 of value for every $1 you spend.

Ask any mogul: You can get richer, faster, by investing other people's money as well as your own.

But loans have to be serviced, and that's where Trump went wrong. He broke most of the rules of prudent real-estate investing and didn't get away with it. Here are those rules, and how you can do it right:

■ An investment property ought to support itself. If you buy a two-family house, the rents should cover all of the costs plus a cushion for contingencies. Then it won't matter if the value of the property falls temporarily. It still will be paying for itself.

This rule applies to leveraged investments other than real estate. For example, if you borrow against your life insurance, the investment should earn more than it costs to carry the loan.

■ You can risk buying a property that doesn't support itself only if you have plenty of liquidity on the side. A "liquid" investment is one that can be turned into cash at a moment's notice with no loss in value. Money-market accounts are liquid. Stocks are liquid. Real estate isn't, because it usually takes a while to sell. (And to sell fast, you'll probably have to cut the price.)

If you buy a property that costs $2,000 a year to run, after rents, you should have that annual $2,000 already in the bank. In fact, you need more than $2,000, because you might have to carry the property for a month or two in between tenants. You also need enough money to make unexpected repairs. So real-estate investments should always be balanced with ready cash.

■ If you're buying raw land, you need a tremendous amount of liquidity. Raw land doesn't yield any income. Instead, it eats money, in the form of the real-estate taxes you have to pay. You also need liability insurance, in case someone is injured on the property.

The risks in raw-land investing are

ANALYSIS

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 13.12 to 2,882.18 by 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

Losers outnumbered gainers by about 7 to 5 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 562 up, 777 down and 601 unchanged.

Analysts said traders seemed uncertain about where the market might get any inspiration to extend its spring rally.

While interest rates and inflationary pressures have been ebbing in recent weeks, nothing has happened to fulfill hopes that the Federal Reserve might adopt a more stimulative credit policy.

Indeed, Fed officials have suggested they are still inclined to stay with a relatively restrictive approach.

This morning the Commerce Department reported that the gross national product grew at a 1.9 percent annual rate, after adjustment for inflation and seasonal factors, in the first quarter of the year.

The figure, revised upward from a previous estimate of 1.3 percent, was seen as confirming evidence that the economy keeps growing sluggishly.

Losers among the blue chips included DuPont, down ¾ at 38¾; General Electric, down ⅝ at 69¾; McDonald's, down ⅜ at 34⅛, and Dow Chemical, down ¼ at 60¾.

Upjohn dropped ⅝ to 41¾ in active trading. The stock rose 2 points Wednesday on takeover rumors and speculation.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks slipped .44 to 195.40. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 1.40 at 359.41.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Open-end mutual fund redeems shares daily

By Bill Doyle

Q. What is the difference between open-end mutual funds and closed-end funds?

A. Both types are investment companies, meaning they invest in many different securities, thereby providing diversification under professional management. If you want to be a purist, you should call them open-end investment companies and closed-end investment companies.

Doyle

An open-end investment company is a mutual fund. It's open end because its stands ready on every business day to redeem its shares. Most mutual funds redeem shares at asset value — the actual dollar and cents value behind each share on the day a shareholder presents the shares for redemption. At some funds, the redemption price is reduced by a contingent deferred sales charge or redemption fee.

Mutual funds normally make a continuous offering of new shares to the investing public. As a result, they have money coming in through the sale of new shares and money going out from the redemption of old shares.

A closed-end investment company does not redeem its shares. Also, most closed-enders sell share to investors only once, although some do make additional offerings from time to time. Closed-enders do not offer continuous shares to the general public, but most do allow existing shareholders to automatically reinvest their dividends and capital gains distributions to buy additional shares.

Because there is no redemption feature, an investor who wants to sell shares of a closed-end investment company must do so in the marketplace. The shares of some closed-enders trade on stock exchanges, others in the over-the-counter market.

Q. I am told that stocks of closed-end investment companies can be purchased at prices below their asset values. Doesn't that make them bargains?

A. Not necessarily. It's true that the shares of most closed-enders trade at "discounts" — below asset values. You can buy them at discounts. But, when you sell, you'll also get a discounted price.

Q. My broker calls closed-end investment companies "closed-end mutual funds." Is he wrong?

A. Technically, yes. "Mutual fund" is the generic name for open-end investment company. But language is a constantly changing thing. In recent years, more and more people have been calling closed-end investment companies "closed-end mutual funds." That's incorrect, but even language purists can't keep fighting forever.

Q. Isn't it true that a mutual fund must have a redemption feature and a continuous offering of new shares to be open end?

A. No. The Investment Company Act of 1940 leaves no doubt that the redemption feature is the thing making an investment company open end.

A number of mutual funds have suspended sales of new shares occasionally but have maintained their policy of cashing in shares presented for redemption. State Street Investment Company resumed sales of new shares only recently, after having suspended sales since August 1944. All that time, State Street Investment Company remained a mutual fund.

Q. We set up an individual retirement account in a mutual fund holding U.S. government securities in 1985. At that time, we did not know there is a 4 percent sales charge on reinvested dividends. We now realize we should have investigated the fund more carefully.

We dislike paying this 4 percent. Would you advise us to roll the IRA over into a no-load mutual fund?

A. Absolutely. Paying a sales charge on investment of new money is bad enough. Getting hit with a commission on reinvested dividends comes close to highway robbery.

HONOR: Efforts recognized

workshops are presented by professionals from the community. For example, Mrs. Miller noted, a psychology professor from the University of Texas of the Permian Basin presented the workshop on discipline.

Limiting the workshops to one subject and repeating them four times in one day allows more people to be trained, she said, reporting that last year 485 people went through the workshops, which are free.

"So many of these centers have limited funds," she pointed out.

In addition to the workshops, she offers assistance and advice to daycare workers and teachers, shows them ways to make toys, puzzles and games out of ordinary household objects, and even has a collection of toys, games, science, bulletin board and curriculum materials she will loan to centers.

She explains that she and her husband opened their store because they saw a need for such a store in Midland. The couple runs the store, assisted by one of their daughters.

"Before we opened the shop, people had to go to Houston or Dallas to find a shop like this," she noted. The store, located in a former Barnes Pelletier shoe store, is full of books, coloring books, puzzles, charts, pens, pencils and colors — everything a teacher might need. Of course, she's quick to point out, the store is also popular with parents and grandparents.

Creative Schoolhouse not only does business with Midland and area customers, it has an international clientele as well. Two former Midland teachers, now located in West Germany, have merchandise shipped to them, and the Millers also ship supplies to such places as Mexico, Santa Domingo, Nigeria, Kuala Lampur, and to Jakarta, Indonesia.

In addition to the workshops aimed at workers in daycare centers, preschools and private schools, the Millers also have workshops for children Tuesdays and Wednesdays during the summer. This month the workshops cover medieval times.

Next month, according to Mrs. Miller, the children will study whales, wolves and wombats, and in August the subject will be Egypt, Argentina, New Zealand and Thailand. Tuesday sessions are for children aged 5 to 7, and Wednesday sessions are for children aged 8 to 10.

Noting that parents are getting more involved in their childrens' education, the Millers stand ready to offer advice and assistance.

"We always tell parents the most important thing they can do is read to their children," Mrs. Miller said. "Children are going to learn in spite of you. We just want them to learn to expand their horizons."

QUINN: Raw land risky

huge. Maybe the town will rezone it from commercial down to residential, reducing its value. Maybe someone will discover buried oil drums there, that will cost a fortune to clean up. Donald Trump owns a valuable piece of land in New York City that he bought with borrowed money. But he hasn't been able to develop it because of neighborhood opposition. Meantime, it's eating up his cash.

The average investor can't get a loan against raw land. But you might borrow against another piece of property in order to make the purchase. That adds interest payments to an investment that produces no current income.

You shouldn't take on the risks of raw land unless you're wealthy enough to carry the property for many years more than you originally expected, without any risk to your personal finances.

John Reed, publisher of the Real Estate Investor's Monthly in Danville, Calif., says that raw land is not something you own, it's something you flip. Take an option to buy the property, subdivide it, exercise the option and resell immediately to a developer.

■ When you borrow against your salary, prepare an escape hatch. First, all your monthly payments (including the mortgage) shouldn't top 40 percent of your gross monthly income. Second, determine how you'll meet your loan payments if you lose your job. One fallback: Three months' income in the bank. Another one: An open home-equity line of credit that you can draw on in a pinch.

It was only when Trump ran out of fallbacks that he went down.

New owners, new half, same story

■ After finishing last in the first half and being sold Wednesday, Midland's Angels went down swinging —but nevertheless went down — 12-8.

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

Eddie Rodriguez celebrated the start of the Texas League's second half by sending four pitchers to the mound Thursday night, but it was like trying to stop a leak in the Hoover Dam with his pinky.

Futile.

The El Paso Diablos, first half winners in the Western Division, collected 19 hits en route to a 12-8 win in the second half opener at Angels Stadium.

"It's pretty hard to win them all when you lose the first one," said Rodriguez after his staff wasted leads of 2-1, 4-2 and 5-4. It was the same staff that led Midland to a 25-42 last place record in the first half.

"Once the bleeding starts we're having trouble stopping it," Rodriguez said.

And the Angels let the patient die for the 43rd time this year. It was a slow death that did not appear imminent early in the game.

Midland starter Mark Holzemer struck out the side in the first, and he retired the Diablos in order in the second. The Angel offense, meanwhile, enjoyed two-run innings in the third and fourth to give Holzemer a 4-2 lead.

But Dee Dixon, the El Paso left fielder who went 4-for-5 with four runs scored, joined teammates Jesus Alfaro and Mitch Hannahs as Diablos who belted solo home runs to lead off innings against Holzemer with his right-field clout in the fifth.

Holzemer gave way to David Martinez during El Paso's three-run sixth, and Frank DiMichele fell to 1-3 after working ⅔ of an inning and allowing two earned runs in the eighth.

"It's pretty tough when you can't stop the other team from scoring," Rodriguez said once the paid crowd of 3,045 witnessed a sight all too familiar.

"Anybody can point fingers. But we're going to preach a lot of positives and get out of this thing somehow."

El Paso took a 1-0 lead in the top of the third when Hannahs' solo shot cleared the left field wall on Holzemer's first pitch of the inning. But Scott Cerny's RBI single scored Wiley Lee and Jim Aylward's sacrifice fly made it 2-1 in the bottom of the third.

After a two-run fourth avenged Alfaro's 10th homer of the season, the Angels needed Mark Davis' run-scoring double to regain the lead, 5-4, in the fifth. But El Paso's three-run sixth was more than the Angel offense could answer.

The Diablos added a run in the seventh and two runs in each of the last two innings.

John Skurla tripled to lead off the seventh and scored on a sacrifice fly by Davis.

"Right now everybody is contributing," Rodriguez said. "And I think we're going to come around. Tomorrow could be a different story. We'll just have to wait and see."

Par 4 ace hit

HOUSTON (AP) — A hole-in-one on a golf course is rare but not uncommon. Jeff Hegan's hole-in-one last weekend — on a 359-yard hole — was not common.

The 35-year-old Houston computer software executive aced a par-4, 16th hole Sunday at the Hidden Hills Country Club near Austin.

Hegan, a 15-handicapper, didn't even know the ball had gone in the hole because he was cutting the corner on the dogleg left.

"I actually hit the ball over some trees that are out of bounds," Hegan told The Houston Post. "I've always been a long driver, but not a straight driver."

Hale reigns in Big Apple

■ Again sharing his emotion with the crowd, Hale Irwin came off his U.S. Open win to sink an ace and earn second place in the Buick Classic.

Associated Press

HARRISON, N.Y. — After a successful tryout in Medinah, Ill., Hale Irwin brought his high-five act to the Big Apple.

It was another smash hit.

Just as he did last week after a 72nd-hole birdie in the U.S. Open, Irwin romped over to the ropes restraining the gallery and slapped high-fives with spetators around the sixth tee at the Westchester Country Club on Thursday.

"This is the Big Apple. You have to play to the gallery," the usually restrained, conservative Irwin said of his sudden flair of showmanship.

This time his gallop was in celebration of a hole-in-one — a wedge that flew a few feet beyond the flag and spun back into the cup.

Irwin was tied for second with Blaine McCallister, Buddy Gardner and Bill Britton.

Andy North, a two-time U.S. Open winner, led a group at 67 that also included Paul Azinger, Craig Stadler, Jay Haas, Larry Rinker, Pat McGowan and Fred Funk.

"Obviously there's a very positive carry-over from last week," said Irwin, who acquired his third U.S. Open title Monday in a 19-hole playoff over

Tarkanian's legal battle with NCAA could finally end

■ Nevada-Las Vegas basketball coach Jerry Tarkanian waits for the decision of the NCAA Infractions Committee.

Jerry Tarkanian

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — The final chapter in the 13-year legal odyssey of Jerry Tarkanian vs. the NCAA may be written this weekend when the agency's Infractions Committee meets to put the matter to rest.

No one in this gaming capital is offering odds on the outcome of a case that has more wrinkles than the furrowed brow of the man who coached the UNLV Runnin' Rebels to college basketball's national championship two months ago.

The options for the committee range from demanding (again) that Tarkanian be suspended (knowing UNLV cannot do so under court order) to giving the school and the coach a slap on the wrist.

The outcome — expected in about three weeks — is likely to be somewhere in between.

The case began in 1977 when UNLV was cited for three dozen recruiting violations. The NCAA ordered UNLV to serve two years' probation and, in an unprecedented action, ordered Tarkanian suspended for two years.

The NCAA had never ordered a coach suspended before Tarkanian or since, according to NCAA spokesman Jim Marchiony.

The university served the probation, but Tarkanian went to state District Court and obtained an injunction that remains in effect and prevents the university from suspending him.

Tarkanian went on to amass the best record among active college coaches, 449-102 in 17 years at UNLV, topped off by a 103-73 rout of Duke in the NCAA

Mavericks get Fat

Associated Press

DALLAS — The Dallas Mavericks traded a package of draft picks to the Denver Nuggets in exchange for guard Fat Lever Thursday night.

The Mavericks acquired the two-time All-Star guard in exchange for the ninth selection in the first round of the June 27 NBA draft and a 1991 first-round selection.

"We're pleased to add another quality guard to support Rolando Blackman and Derek Harper," Mavericks general manager Norm Sonju said.

Nuggets President Carl Scheer said, "Obviously, we hate to give up a player of Fat Lever's caliber, but our team needs a facelift and we feel this can improve the Denver Nuggets in the long run."

Lever, 6-foot-3 and 175 pounds, turns 30 on Aug. 18. The eight-year veteran led Denver in scoring (18.3), rebounding (9.3), assists (6.5), and steals (2.12) this season and made his second All-Star appearance.

Lever came to the Nuggets in 1984 along with Calvin Natt, Wayne Cooper and a No. 1 pick when Denver sent Kiki Vandeweghe to the Portland Trail Blazers.

While in Denver, Lever led the NBA in triple-doubles for the 1986-1987 season.

He led the Nuggets in steals and assists each year since 1984-1985 and has been the club's top rebounder and the top rebounding guard in the league the last four seasons.

The Mavericks wanted to obtain a veteran player rather than break up the team and start again with youth. With three first-round picks in the upcoming draft on Wednesday night, they had a package deal in mind.

For Lever, the Mavericks gave up their No. 9 pick, which they acquired from Washington in exchange for Jay Vincent on Sept. 3, 1986. Dallas also traded the Detroit Pistons' 1991 first-round selection, which it acquired on Feb. 15, 1989 along with Adrian Dantley in exchange for Mark Aguirre.

With the trade, Denver holds four No. 1 draft choices in the next two NBA drafts. The Nuggets now have the ninth and 15th picks this year.

Man dies as buses crash on way to match

Associated Press

ROME — Tragedy struck the World Cup on Thursday when one English fan died and at least 24 people were injured in a bus accident.

Three buses collided near Cagliari on the island of Sardinia. One of the coaches was bound for England's game against Egypt at Cagliari.

"We think all of these (dead and injured) are British," said British Embassy spokeswoman Kay Coombs.

Italian police and the Carabinieri paramilitary police identified the dead man as Robert Hawkins, 18.

Authorities said one bus was trying to pass a stopped car and paused to let another car go around it. A second bus hit it, and a third bus then hit the back of the second one.

Coombs said half the injuries were believed to be serious.

England won the game 1-0 on a goal by Mark Wright. There were no incidents reported after the game.

In the other Group F game, the Netherlands tied Ireland 1-1 and, through drawing of lots, the Irish were awarded second place after all tiebreakers were deadlocked. The Dutch wound up third, but both advanced.

Earlier Thursday, charges against 23 English fans involved in a brawl with Italians on Tuesday night were dropped by a Sardinian judge, who ruled the incident stemmed from an attack by Italians on a smaller group of English soccer supporters.

Latin American teams rarely do well in European-based World Cups. Don't bother telling that to Uruguay, Brazil, Argentina, Costa Rica and Colombia.

World Cup

All five of those nations advanced to the second round of the tournament. Uruguay, which hadn't won a World Cup game since 1970, was the last to get in, and it did so in the most dramatic fashion.

Needing a victory against South Korea, the Uruguayans struggled, unable to penetrate on attack and frustrated by the South Koreans' fouling. In the final minute, though, Alfonso Dominguez took a long free kick that Daniel Fonseca outjumped two defenders to head into the net for a 1-0 win Thursday.

"I looked up and thanked God," said the 20-year-old Fonseca, making his World Cup debut. "My job when I was sent in was to score a goal and get Uruguay qualified."

He sure took his time doing it.

"You cannot win in more exciting fashion," Coach Oscar Tabarez said. "We played very badly, but we

Postlewait ties Lopez with 68

LPGA

Associated Press

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — Kathy Postlewait birdied her last hole Thursday to tie Nancy Lopez for the lead at four under par in the opening round of the LPGA Rochester International.

Postlewait, who started on the back nine, was two over after four holes but eagled the par-5 17th and made a 15-foot birdie putt on No. 9 to finish with a 68 over the Locust Hill Country Club course.

Lopez, a three-time champion at this tournament, also started on the back nine. She eagled No. 17 and led at five under after five holes but overshot the green on the par-3 ninth and bogeyed.

Postlewait and Lopez each finished with an eagle, five birdies, and three bogeys on the first day of the $400,000 tournament.

The round "was the closest thing to a roller coaster ride I've had in a long time," said Postlewait, a 16-year tour veteran who has not won a tournament this season. "It was either feast or famine."

After bogeying 10 and 13, and missing birdie putts on 11 and 12, Postlewait said things improved when she saved par on No. 14 after having a 4-wood go left off the tee.

"It kind of snowballed after that," she said.

Lopez is also looking for her first tournament victory this season after finishing third last week at Atlantic City.

"I really hit the ball well today," said the Hall of Famer, who won at Rochester in 1978, 1980 and 1981. "I really get a good feeling from the gallery here. I just really feel comfortable."

Lopez said should have used a shorter club on No. 9, where her 7-iron "stayed in the air forever" and sailed past the green. "I was glad to have gotten my bogey there," she said.

Alcott eagled the first hole with a 160-yard 5-iron.

"I said 'That is a good omen,'" she said. "That one was for my mom, because she's very ill."

Two back at 70 were Caroline Keggi, Lori West, Barb Bunkowsky and Caroline Pierce.

Myricks blames positive tests on cold medication

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Taking an over-the-counter cold medicine for flu last winter may cost him his long jumping career, four-time Olympian Larry Myricks says.

Myricks, currently serving a three-month suspension for using a banned substance during the 1990 Mobil Indoor Track and Field Championships, has tested positive at two other meets, The Athletics Congress said Thursday in Indianapolis.

TAC said it had been notified by the International Amateur Athletic Federation, the world governing body for the sport, that Myricks tested positive for the stimulant phenylpropanolamine at a meet in Hamilton, Ontario, on Jan. 12 and at a meet in Seville, Spain, on Feb. 17.

Phenylpropanolamine, a decongestant, is found in cold relief products and is available without a prescription.

"I'm not really surprised," Myricks, informed by a reporter of the two latest positives, said by telephone Thursday from his home in nearby Upland.

"I did compete the entire indoor season with the flu and I took Alka-Seltzer Plus over a period of weeks. If you go strictly by protocol, I guess I can forget about long jumping and go out and get a job."

IAAF rules dictate a three-month suspension for a first-time offense and a two-year ban for a second offense. A third offense could result in a lifetime suspension.

"At this point, all I can do is appeal," Myricks said. "I had no idea I was taking a banned substance. If they had told me in January that I was, I certainly would have stopped. I didn't find out about any of them (the positive test results) until after the season was over.

"The one in New York came up, so I was waiting for something else to pop up."

The levels found in Myricks' samples were 14.18 micrograms per milliliter at Hamilton and 51.1 at Seville.

TAC announced Myricks' first positive on April 23. On June 15, TAC said a three-member panel of its Drug Control Review Board had upheld the suspension.

Myricks has until Saturday to appeal the positive tests from Hamilton and Seville. His first positive is still under appeal and will be reviewed by another Drug Control Review Board panel, possibly as early as next week. His current suspension went into effect April 13 and continues through July 13.

"If, after we exhaust our appeals, TAC stays with its rules, I guess I'm a spectator," said Myricks, a bronze medalist in the 1988 Olympics and the world indoor champion in 1987 and 1989.

Tranghese vows to keep Big East intact

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — The Big East means Big Bucks to Mike Tranghese.

Calling the conference a $14.5 million business, the Big East's new commissioner issued a warning to anyone thinking of breaking up the successful nine-team league.

"We are absolutely committed to protecting our structure," Tranghese said at a news conference Thursday, where he was named Dave Gavitt's successor. "We are not going to let someone step forward and control our destiny.

"If you come after us from the outside, you've got one heck of a fight."

Tranghese, the associate commissioner under Gavitt, faces several problems as commissioner, including the fact that some conferences are courting Boston College, Pittsburgh and Syracuse, the Big East's only Division I-A football schools.

While not getting into specifics, Tranghese opened the proceedings by stating: "I'm going to say what's on my mind."

And he did.

On winning and making money: "There seems to be in this day and age a distaste for winning and a distaste for making money," he said. "We do not have a distaste for winning and a distaste for making money."

On league policies: "We're going to continue to do what we do in privacy. They want us to discipline our coaches in public and that's not going to happen. We're different than other conferences and we'll continue to be different.

On Georgetown coach John Thompson, considering a $6 million offer to become general manager and part owner of the Denver Nuggets: "John (Thompson) and I get along. I'm a capitalist, too."

The 46-year-old Tranghese takes over a conference that he said he plans to run like "a $14.5 million business." He's been with the Big East since its inception 11 years ago and has worked closely with Gavitt, who resigned last month to become director of operations for the Boston Celtics.

All along, Tranghese was the logical choice to replace Gavitt. And Seton Hall athletic director Larry Keating said Thursday that no one else was interviewed for the job.

"Mike didn't get the job by default," said Keating. He said all nine athletic directors were involved in the selection, but they could not appoint Tranghese until school presidents were convinced that they had considered other alternatives.

"Mike Tranghese has been his own man for as long as I have known him," Gavitt, the driving force behind the Big East's success, said.

Tranghese, anticipating criticism that he was selected because of his ties to Gavitt, was ready with a response.

"I haven't been hired because I've been here for 11 years. I haven't been hired because they think I'm a nice person," he said. "If anyone talks about our working relationship (with Gavitt) anymore, I might vomit."

1990 PGA host club won't accept blacks

Associated Press

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — The country club playing host to the 1990 PGA Championship will not be forced into accepting blacks as members, its founder said.

Hall Thompson said Shoal Creek Country Club's members include Jews, women, Lebanese and Italians — but no blacks. "The country club is our home and we pick and choose who we want," he said.

Thompson said blacks played at Shoal Creek during the 1984 PGA Championship, and black caddies are allowed to play on Mondays, when the course is closed to members.

Officials with the Professional Golfers Association of America said if a club is found to discriminate racially it could affect a decision to hold a future PGA events there. But the 1990 tournament will go ahead as planned.

"This was not a point in 1984," PGA president Pat Rielly said in a phone interview from Pasadena, Calif. "This has become a point, or issue, in the last two years."

Rielly said the PGA has found no discriminatory written policies at Shoal Creek, where the PGA Championship will be played Aug. 6-12, but the organization can do little if a club has unwritten rules.

Thompson, 67, said club members have not allowed any black members because "that's just not done in Birmingham."

Jim Autrey, executive director of the PGA, said "we don't condone discrimination," but exclusionary practices were not a factor in choosing a site.

Thompson's remarks followed City Councilman William Bell accusing the club of having a racially exclusionary policy. He also advocated cutting municipal funding for an advertisement planned for the tournament program.

Bell said a 10-year-old council resolution states city funds should not be used for any clubs that refuse membership to blacks.

The advertisement was authorized by Richard Arrington, Birmingham's first black mayor. Arrington said he made a distinction between the exclusive country club, in a wooded area on the southeast fringe of Birmingham, and the PGA.

Arrington authorized the purchase of an ad jointly with Jefferson County, the Metropolitan Development Board and the Birmingham Chamber of Commerce. Each will contribute about $1,500.

Mac match rained out

IRWIN: Rookie leads field

From 1D

Mike Donald, who had a 70 on Thursday.

"I'm kind of riding a hot streak," Irwin understated.

But there's also a fatigue factor involved in the wake of his emotionally draining Open triumph, he said.

"I haven't been sleeping much since the Open. I'm still keyed up from the thrill of a lifetime. When I went to the tee today, I wasn't ready to play golf," Irwin, 45, said.

"And right after the turn, I kind of lost my concentration for a while. I'm just not able to concentrate like I did last week."

Those mental lapses led to a pair of bogeys. Starting the day's play from the 10th tee, he found a bunker and was unable to get up and down. The same thing happened nine holes later.

In between, however, he hit irons inside of six feet on four holes and birdied them all.

He was two under for the round when he went to the tee on his 15th hole of the day and scored the seventh hole-in-one of his 22-year pro career.

A birdie from 8 feet on his final hole finished off a 5-under-par effort and left him in contention for a second consecutive victory.

"I'm not here just to play my obligatory two days and go home," Irwin said. "It was an excellent score, an excellent start."

Triplett, the first man off the tee in the cool, cloudy weather, made the most of what he called "perfect, untracked greens" in his bogey-free round.

Cleveland takes fifth win in six outings

Associated Press

American

Tom Brookens' infield hit with the bases loaded and two-out in the 10th inning gave the Cleveland Indians a 4-3 victory over the Baltimore Orioles on Thursday night for their fifth win in six games.

Cleveland relief ace Doug Jones (3-2) pitched out of jams in the ninth and 10th innings.

Mitch Webster led off the Cleveland 10th with a bunt single off Brian Holton (2-3) and took second on Jerry Browne's sacrifice. Carlos Baeraga, whose pinch-hit two-run double tied the game in the eighth, was intentionally walked.

One out later, Candy Maldonado walked, loading the bases. Brookens followed with a sharp ground ball off the glove of third baseman Tim Hulett, who was unable to recover in time to throw anybody out.

The Orioles had runners at first and third with no one out in the top of the 10th but Joe Orsulak lined to first and Bob Melvin grounded into a double play. Jones struck out Mickey Tettleton with the bases loaded to end the ninth.

Baltimore starter John Mitchell, trying for his first win since 1987, gave up a run in the first and held the Indians hitless from the third through the seventh.

Baerga, a rookie, is 8-for-19—.421 as a pinch-hitter, the most pinch hits by a Cleveland player since Gomer Hodge had 16 in 1971.

Randy Milligan, who has hit safely in 13 of his last 15 games, gave the Orioles a 1-0 lead in the first with his 12th home run. Cleveland tied it in the bottom of the first on a single by Felix Fermin, a double by Chris James and a Maldonado's sacrifice fly.

The Orioles took a 3-1 lead in the sixth. Tettleton led off with his 10th home run and singles by Cal Ripken and Hulett finished Indians starter Greg Swindell, who hasn't won since April 29. Sergio Valdez threw a wild pitch that let Ripken score.

Yankees 7, Blue Jays 6

The New York Yankees equaled their longest winning streak of the season at three games, scoring four times in the eighth inning on rookie Jim Leyritz's tie-breaking single and pinch-hitter Matt Nokes' three-run homer to beat the Toronto Blue Jays.

The uprising, which broke a 3-3 tie, gave rookie Alan Mills (1-2) his first major-league victory. Mills pitched two innings in relief of starter Andy Hawkins but yielded John Olerud's second homer of the game and sixth of the season to start the Toronto eighth.

Mills was then replaced by Dave Righetti, who earned his 14th save despite a two-run homer by George Bell with two out in the ninth, his second of the game and 14th of the season. Pinch-hitter Glenallen Hill singled but second baseman Steve Sax leaped to knock down Olerud's liner and threw him out to end the game.

Royals 14, Twins 4

Kevin Seitzer went 5-for-6 with a home run and two of Kansas City's eight doubles, Steve Jeltz drove in four runs and Bo Jackson hit a three-run homer as the Royals pounded the Minnesota Twins.

Minnesota lost its fourth straight game and seventh straight at home, equaling its longest home losing streak since May 1982. The Twins have lost 13 of their last 14 games overall and are 3-16 in June after going 21-7 in May.

Winning pitcher Tom Gordon (4-4) yielded four runs and six hits in 5 2-3 innings. Andy McGaffigan pitched two-hit ball over the final 3 1-3 innings for his first save. Mark Guthrie (2-2), the first of seven Minnesota pitchers, was the loser, giving up two runs and five hits in 1 2-3 innings.

The Royals, who also hit a season-high in runs, led 5-0 after 2½ innings.

Arraignment postponed

U.S. Magistrate Michael Dolinger rescheduled the proceeding Thursday because the prosecutor from Tampa, Fla., who brought the case here, was unable to be in New York.

Spira was indicted in Tampa on March 23, but the case was moved to New York after his attorney, David Greenfield, complained that Steinbrenner would have an unfair advantage in Florida.

Steinbrenner lives in Tampa and his shipbuilding business is headquartered there.

Associated Press

National

Pinch-hitter Tommy Gregg's two-run double off Rob Dibble with two out in the ninth inning gave the Atlanta Braves a 4-3 victory over the Cincinnati Reds in Thursday's only National League game scheduled.

Dibble (4-2) walked rookie Dave Justice with one out and Gregg Olson with two out before Gregg, batting just .100 with three hits in 60 at-bats and three RBIs, lined his double to the center-field fence, scoring Justice and pinch-runner Alexis Infante.

It was only the second victory in nine games for the Braves and the second loss in nine games for the Reds.

Gregg's hit made a winner of John Smoltz (4-6), who held the Reds to seven hits.

The Reds had taken a 3-2 lead with an unearned run in the top of the ninth on pinch-hitter Ken Griffey's sacrifice fly after a balk and passed ball.

Staff Report

DALLAS — The Fighting Irish youth soccer team continued their winning ways with their third straight invitational win in the Dr. Pepper Texas Open here recently.

Coach Mana Ratanasavetavadhana's Irish outscored foes 26-1 in the Dr. Pepper tourney and has rolled up a 95-3 margin in their three summer tourney wins.

The Irish began the tourney last Saturday with an 8-0 win over Ace's High of Oklahoma — the under-12 state champions there. Also Saturday, the Irish breezed past the Keller Missiles 8-0 and the Haltom-Richland Sidekicks 7-0.

The team will wrap up its summer tourney schedule with a trip to El Paso June 29-30 and July 1. The under-12 stalwarts will be competing against the best teams from both El Paso and Juarez.

Luyendyk ready for a return to Portland

Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — It was two years ago at Portland International Raceway that Arie Luyendyk finally convinced himself he had what it takes to win an Indy Car race.

So the 36-year-old Dutchman, who now lives in Scottsdale, Ariz., is looking forward to a return trip to Sunday's Budweiser-G.I. Joe's 200, especially after achieving a spot among auto racing's elite with his victory this year in the Indianapolis 500.

The roots of the Indianapolis victory can be traced to that Sunday afternoon in Portland three years earlier.

He had led races before, but never had he so completely been in command as he was in Portland.

"I think I really dominated the race and that gave me a lot of self confidence," Luyendyk said. "I knew that under given circumstances, if all the pieces could fall into place, then I could win a race. I knew that."

Still, he didn't win.

"I think I was leading by nine seconds and they threw a ridiculous yellow (flag), which backed it up," he said. "I lost the lead in the pit stop and I was catching (Danny) Sullivan again when I lost third gear in the car. Then I couldn't challenge him anymore and I finished second."

The second-place finish was his highest until this year's Indianapolis victory. He was third in Portland last year and has a fondness for the turn-filled, 1.922-mile course.

"It's a fast course and I like fast race courses," he said. "It's very smooth and you can take the turns very fast."

North Central Angels head for championship game

Staff Report

Today's championship game in the Joe Mowles Memorial Little League Tournament will be an all-Angel affair, after the North Central Angels swept through the losers' bracket with an 8-6 win over the North Central Rangers in the elimination game Thursday.

The North Central Angels will face the undefeated Mid-City Angels in the championship game at 6 p.m. tonight at Windlands Park. If North Central wins, the teams will settle it once and for all at 11 a.m. Saturday.

In Thursday's game, the Angels won despite four Ranger doubles — one each by Mark Holly, Ryan Elder, Matthew Withrow and Britt Harper. The Angels' only extra-base blow to the outfield was a double by Jim Valadez, although Kelly McClatchy made it all the way around the bases on a bunt, and was awarded an inside-the-park home run by the official scorekeeper.

Local youth qualify for track nationals

Staff Report

DALLAS — Three area residents qualified for the national ARCO-Jesse Owens Games on the basis of wins in the recent regional meet here.

The national meet will be held Aug. 10 in Los Angeles.

Gathers family suit far from settlement

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — There is a greater than 50 percent likelihood that the $32.5 million wrongful death suit filed by the family of Hank Gathers will go to trial, an attorney said Thursday.

Bruce Fagel, who represents the mother, two brothers and aunt of the Loyola Marymount basketball star who died March 4, said attorneys for the defendants have made no effort to settle the case out of court.

Attorneys for the defendants did not immediately return calls to The Associated Press on Thursday.

The suit — naming Loyola Marymount, Coach Paul Westhead and a number of doctors among the 14 defendants — was filed April 20 in Los Angeles.

Another suit, filed on June 8 on behalf of Gathers' 7-year-old son, is expected to be joined with that filed by Fagel.

Fagel, speaking at a news conference at his offices, said he expects that, after considerable legal posturing, the trial could begin next spring.

He said he has been unable to obtain what he considers a key piece of evidence, videotape of Gathers receiving medical treatment on the court immediately after he collapsed during a West Coast Conference tournament game at Loyola on March 4.

Fagel said he expects to legally challenge ESPN, which televised portions of Gathers' collapse, to provide all the tape of the incident. He said the sports network, citing First Amendment protection, has refused to turn over any of the tape that was not actually aired.

Gathers, who was 23, died of a diseased heart two hours after collapsing during the Lions' game in March. He had fainted during a game on Dec. 9, and tests then revealed he had an irregular heart beat. Medicine to control his heart beat was prescribed, but the dosage was lowered afterward.

The family's suit claims, among other allegations, that the dosage was reduced because it hampered his ability to play basketball, and that doctors who treated him immediately after his collapse were negligent.

The university, Westhead and other defendants all have denied negligence in Gathers' death.

Jets name new player personnel director

HEMPSTED, N.Y. (AP) — The New York Jets hired Ron Wolf as Director of Player Personnel on Thursday.

Wolf joins New York after 12 years in charge of player personnel operations with the Oakland-Los Angeles Raiders. He replaces Mike Hickey, who held the job for 13 years.

"Ron comes to us with extremely solid credentials having been in pro football since 1963, not only as a personnel director, but as a general manager and league administrator," New York general manager Dick Steinberg said.

Watson claims second in TIDA

Staff Report

ODESSA — Midland's Jay Watson held onto second place in the Texas International Drivers Association late model stock car standings with a second-place finish in a TIDA event at the Twin Cities Speedway here Saturday.

Watson qualified his Chevy Camaro 17th due to carbureator problems, but finished behind only champion Bobby Blake of Odessa in the 75-lap race.

Blale led from start to finish, as only 11 of the 22 drivers finished on the lead lap, due to various problems.

Stacy Bradley of Odessa dropped after 72 laps with a handling problem and finished 12th, while Junior Robertson of Midland was 14th, John David, Jr. of Odessa 17th, Dean Anthony of Midland 21st, and Joe Jackson of Midland 22nd.

With 3,270 points, Watson is still well behind points leader John Kelly of LaVernia, who has 4,650 points. Blake is fourth with 2,790 points, while Bradley is seventh with 1,385 points.

McClung pair takes mixed MCC title

Staff Report

Neil and Patti McClung claimed first place in the club mixed doubles tennis championship, played recently at Midland Country Club.

Taking second place in the eight-team, round robin tournament were Price Cowden and Lynn Prieto.

NBA finds life in spotlight enjoyable

By Jim Litke
AP Sports Writer

For a league that once craved attention more than Zsa Zsa, but received less than Eva, the NBA is certainly getting noticed these days.

And the rest of Washington has called timeout from Gorby-watching and the Marion Barry trial to find out if that really big capitalist, John Thompson, is going to relocate. Inquiring minds in Denver want to know as well.

All of Detroit, meanwhile, wants to know whether Chuck will continue to be a Daly fixture there, and whether — or with whom — Isiah Thomas is rolling the dice. Try changing the topic to weather; the neighbors want to talk only about the upcoming draft.

And now that it's come out that former Lakers coach Pat Riley is a bi-coastal guy, look for a raft of investigative pieces like these:

"Terror in Riley's Closet — Which Suits Will Live in New York?"

"Hair-Raising Time for Riley — Can New York Cosmetologists Guarantee Same Number of Comb Lines?"

"Riley, NBC's Secret Weapon — Will He Be the 'Today' Guy Tomorrow?"

Pro basketball used to be a seasonal, off-prime-time drama, but little more than a week after it was supposed to slip unnoticed back into hibernation until next fall, the NBA is still roaring with news.

His own musings this day were inclined toward baseball — Williams is helping Orlando try to ambush the Tampa-St. Pete area for what is almost certainly the National League's next expansion market — but it didn't take much to draw him back to roundball.

After more than two decades in the league, including stints as a general manager in Chicago, Atlanta and Philadelphia before landing in Orlando, he is only too happy to talk about the child he helped nurture.

"The league, in one sense, is just now coming out of its infancy," Williams said. "It didn't start until 1946, and by then baseball was 75 years old and pro football about 25. We're kind of like an incoming college freshman — getting more interesting all the time.

"A few years back, almost everything that happened in our game during the offseason — and even some of the things that happened in mid-season — was agate type. But because of the increasing popularity, and the personalities involved anymore, we're front page all the time."

1.) "Isiah picks up MVP trophy."

3.) "Unsettled Nuggets want Thompson for stability."

In 1990, the NBA posted record attendance for the seventh consecutive year and opened two new franchises — Orlando and Minnesota — to land-rush business.

obtained the result. We failed in all major aspects — in strategy, technique, tactics. Now we'll have to study the problems."

Spain outplayed Belgium for a 2-1 victory that gave it the Group E title. The Spanish, who got goals from Michel (his tournament-leading fourth) on a penalty kick and by Alberto Gorriz off an assist from Michel, will play Yugoslavia.

Belgium was second in the group with four points and Uruguay had three, guaranteeing itself a spot among the four best third-place teams. Belgium plays England and Uruguay takes on Italy.

"I said we had a team that could beat Belgium," Coach Luis Suarez said. "We came out very relaxed and confident."

Spain, which will play Yugoslavia, had complained when Belgium was seeded ahead of it.

"Maybe Spain deserved to be seeded," midfielder Rafael Martin Vasquez said. "But there are things you have to accept because they come from the top."

The other second-round pairings have Czechoslovakia against Costa Rica; Brazil-Argentina; West Germany-Netherlands; Ireland-Romania; and Cameroon-Colombia.

Teams that already had qualified for the second round received mixed news about the health of key players.

Diego Maradona, Argentina's star and captain, spent the second day of an enforced layoff with an ankle injury.

"The swelling is going down in the ankle. With ice, anesthetics and rest, Diego is responding," said Dr. Raul Madero, who added that Maradona would be ready for the next game.

"The reality says that Brazil is stronger than Argentina," Maradona said. "Day by day, they are superior to us, but since it is a traditional match, anything can happen.

"We are inferior to Brazil, and we cannot hide that. But since I believe in miracles in soccer, that miracle will arise so that we can beat Brazil."

SHARK: Restraining orders bars coach's suspension

From 1D

national championship April 2.

The NCAA pursued the celebrated case to the U.S. Supreme Court where a 5-4 decision in December 1988 went against Tarkanian and left colleges and universities in a quandry.

The high court ruled the NCAA was a private organization and did not have to provide Tarkanian due process when it suspended him. However, the panel said UNLV, which would have to impose the suspension, must first provide Tarkanian due process.

The NCAA cannot suspend a coach; it can only order a member school to do so.

So what are the Infractions Committee's options?

Ordering Tarkanian suspended again would fly in the face of the state court order, and it would mean ordering UNLV to impose a penalty it cannot legally carry out.

If the committee were to consider further probation for UNLV, it would mean penalizing the school twice for the same offense and imposing sanctions on current players who were pre-schoolers when the violations occurred.

The Infractions Committee, meeting in 1979 after the probation was served, said UNLV did all it was asked to do.

"This case is now 13 years old. The university has only been on probation one time in its history," UNLV president Robert Maxson said Wednesday. "It did everything it was asked to do in the probation period. It did it honorably. I just can't recommend any more penalties against the university.

"Suspending Jerry is not an option," Maxson said. "He has a permanent injunction against the university."

Maxson sees the long battle as a "cloud that has hung over the university far too long."

UNLV is also the subject of an NCAA investigation over the recruiting of New York City prep star Lloyd Daniels, who became involved in drugs and was dropped by Tarkanian three years ago. Results of that probe should be known later this year.

Tarkanian, Maxson and athletic director Brad Rothermel are scheduled to appear before the committee Saturday in Kansas City.

It has been suggested that any further NCAA penalties could include actions such as limiting Tarkanian from recruiting out of state for a period of time or cutting some television appearances.

"If they're fair with us, we'll be OK," Tarkanian said of the hearing.

Tarkanian is reluctant to talk about the NCAA — a big change from the mid-1970s when he criticized the agency in newspaper columns he wrote while coaching at Long Beach State.

The Long Beach program was penalized by the NCAA in 1974, the same year Tarkanian moved to Las Vegas.

The NCAA placed UNLV on probation in August 1977, four months after the school made its first appearance in the Final Four. The NCAA alleged violations such as free plane rides and grade altering. Tarkanian denied the charges and went to state court to prevent his suspension.

State District Court judges sided with Tarkanian throughout a series of trials, with one judge calling the battle with the NCAA "a trial by ambush."

NCAA investigator David Berst was accused by one judge of having "an obsession to the point of paranoia" to harm Tarkanian.

Berst, now NCAA assistant executive director for enforcement, denies any vendetta against Tarkanian.

"I have responded numerous times to allegations by Tarkanian's attorneys that I have a vendetta against him," Berst said in a telephone interview this week. "It simply isn't true. I was attempting to do my job. My relation with Jerry over the years has been relatively friendly."

The Tarkanian battle, however, has brought some changes in the way the NCAA conducts its investigations.

Anyone interviewed can now review the information collected by the agency; they weren't always allowed to do so prior to 1976, Berst said.

"It's now a requirement that they review their own testimony," Berst said.

Tarkanian's attorneys argued in state court that NCAA investigators relied on their memories and that carried more weight than sworn depositions from parties who refuted NCAA findings.

Earlier this year, the NCAA and Tarkanian's attorneys worked out a stipulation that the coach would pay his own attorney's fees, estimated at $320,000, plus $21,000 in court costs.

The NCAA had previously been ordered to pay.

FAMILY MATTERS

Self-help groups can help resolve problems

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: My mother and father were divorced when I was 3. He left and never came back, so I really don't remember him at all. My sister and I were raised by my mother. My mother never remarried. She always said that there wasn't a man in this world worth having. I think that my mother treated me and my sister as best she could, but she really didn't have much time for us because she worked. I remember spending lots of time by myself or playing with my sister.

May

Unfortunately, my mother had a really bad temper. She would be real calm and withdrawn most of the time, but when she would get mad she would scream and yell at us. Sometimes she would hit us. My sister and I don't really talk that much, but I don't think she is very happy either. I don't really think that we were abused, but the older I get the more bad feelings keep coming up.

I have talked to my pastor about all this, and he thinks that I should get into one of the self-help groups around. My mother wasn't an alcoholic so I don't need to go to one of those groups. I wasn't sexually abused so I don't need that group. I just don't seem to fit, but I sometimes get very very depressed about something but I don't know what. What do you think that I should do? Sometimes I am very miserable and don't know why. — BEWILDERED

DEAR BEWILDERED: Dr. Timmen Cermak suggests that emotional abuse occurs whenever there is a pattern of rejecting, isolating, terrorizing, ignoring or corrupting behavior on the part of a parent.

Rejecting behavior occurs when a parent refuses or is unable to acknowledge the child's worth and the legitimacy of her needs. A parent with low self-esteem almost always exhibits rejecting behavior.

In an isolating behavior pattern, the parent actively prevents a child from forming appropriate childhood friendships and relationships. Sometimes this happens because the parent depends on a child to take care of siblings, clean the house, prepare the meals, etc. The adult child from these homes often has powerful feelings of loneliness.

Terrorizing behavior occurs when the parent is verbally or physically abusive. The parent is out of control, so the child has no model for self-discipline and self-control.

Ignoring behavior means the parent does not stimulate or respond to the child. In these situations the adult child often believes that there is something so wrong with him that even his own parent feels he is unworthy of attention.

Corrupting behavior occurs when the parent serves as a negative role model for a child, possibly even encouraging the child to join in the dysfunction (for example, "the laws don't apply to us.").

These examples illustrate a few of the possible effects of emotional abuse. As Dr. Cermak notes in his book, "A Primer on Adult Children of Alcoholics," emotionally abused children often become adults who are "anxious, and feel unloved and unlovable, inferior, angry, and defective."

Now the good news. There is a recovery process that applies to you. The first step is to acknowledge you have a problem, which you have done. Often, the pains of childhood become more "real" with age. I believe that our spirit tries to purify itself as we get older. This process is painful but positive.

Your pastor was right in suggesting that you join a recovery group. The group that is most applicable is "Adult Children of Dysfunctional Families." I'm not aware of any such group currently meeting in the area, but the next most applicable group — Adult Children of Alcoholics — has several chapters here. Call Alcoholics Anonymous at 682-4721 for meeting times and places.

Recovery is a process that works. Go to a meeting. You are on the verge of embarking on a process that can free your spirit and make your life whole.

Adopting a stepchild has legal, emotional complications

By Lawrence M. Kutner
N.Y. Times News Service

After six years of living with her husband and stepchildren, Kris Warhol said she finally feels like she is a real mother.

A few hours earlier she had appeared before a Hennepin County judge in downtown Minneapolis as the final step toward adopting her two stepdaughters, age 11 and 14.

"I wanted to make a commitment to them and I wanted them to know that we have a permanent relationship," said Ms. Warhol, who operates a house-cleaning service in Plymouth, Minn.

Her husband's two adult sons, who no longer live at home, declined to be adopted.

She began thinking about adopting her stepdaughters four years ago, but felt unsure about making the commitment. At the time, her friends told her that complications could develop if her marriage did not work out.

"Last Christmas it became clear to me that this was my family for the rest of my life," she said. "When I asked my stepdaughters in January if they wanted me to adopt them, the older girl said, 'Yeah, sure,' but the younger one cried with excitement."

Adopting a stepchild can have both legal and emotional ramifications.

The legal work involved can be complex and the goal elusive if both biological parents are still alive, since the noncustodial parent must agree to surrender all parental rights before the stepparent's adoption can be approved.

The vast majority of such adoptions involve stepparents who are married to widows or widowers. If all the adults involved agree, it can take much less time to adopt a stepchild than to adopt any other child.

Some states require home evaluations by social workers if the parents have been married for less than a year or so. Minor children must also consent to the adoption if the court feels they are old enough to make that decision.

"I've seen much less adoption by stepparents over the past 10 years," said Dr. Jeanette Lofas, a sociologist who is president of the Stepfamily Foundation in Manhattan. "Lawyers today warn stepparents about their increased financial responsibilities if they adopt their stepchildren, and about the possibility of their getting a divorce from their current spouse."

Lofas said that roughly two out of three remarriages that involve children end in divorce. Although a divorce would end the legal and financial obligations of a stepparent to stepchildren, it would not end the obligations of an adoptive parent.

It is also much more common for men to adopt their stepchildren than for women.

A review of the 1989 adoption decrees in Minnesota, where Ms. Warhol adopted her stepchildren and one of the few states to keep such records, shows that only 52 of the 1,150 decrees granted to stepparents involved stepmothers.

Stepfathers received 1,098 decrees.

Stepparents accounted for 46 percent of the 2,474 adoption decrees in Minnesota in 1989. The figures for 1988 were similar.

Children adopted by stepfathers face some special problems. "The thing that's troublesome to many kids is the change in their last name," said Dr. Marshall D. Schechter, a professor emeritus of child and adolescent psychology at the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine, and the co-editor of "The Psychology of Adoption" (Oxford University Press, 1990, $39.95).

"They may need to go through a grieving process again," Schechter said. "For a school-age child, it can represent a loss of identity."

Although preschoolers usually are very enthusiastic about the change, many school-age children feel ambivalent about being adopted by a stepparent, especially within a few years after the death of their biological parent.

"There's still a lot of loyalty that a child feels toward the parent who died," said Dr. Neil Kalter, a psychologist and the director of the Center for the Child and Family at the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor. "It can feel like a disloyal act to allow yourself to be adopted."

For parents who decide to adopt their stepchildren, and for children who agree to be adopted, the legal change can make them feel more connected to each other.

"I want to celebrate this day every year from now on," Ms. Warhol said. "It's like a birthday for our new relationship."

Charity softball game to benefit homebound, elderly

Staff Report

Angel Stadium will be bustling 4:45 p.m. Sunday with the "Hit a Home Run for the Homebound" Celebrity Charity Softball Game. Proceeds from the event will benefit Meals on Wheels, Midland Senior Centers and the Visiting Nurses Service's for the indigent.

The game will feature community leaders and celebrities from Midland and Odessa in an exhibition softball game prior to the Angel's game against El Paso. The mayors of Midland and Odessa will serve as coaches for their respective teams. Corporate sponsors will have a team player and cheerleader who will present the company gift. There will be a special drawing during the game featuring items donated by area businesses.

The money collected for tickets purchased prior to the event will go to Community and Senior Services in the funding of these programs. The price of the ticket includes admission to the charity baseball game plus the Angels vs. El Paso game immediately following. Tickets can be purchased for $3 each. Tickets are available in Mildand at The Furhman Center, 3301 Sinclair; Dellwood Senior Center, 3303 W. Illinois; Southeast Senior Center, 400 S. Marshall, Boys Club of Midland, 110 E. New Jersey. In Odessa, tickets can be purchased at Visiting Nurses Service, 1015 N. Dixie; and Girls Club of Odessa, 900 S. Grant.

Science looks at 'controversial' vitamin E

By Leigh Fenly
Copley News Service

After 60 years of research, vitamin E remains among the more controversial of vitamins, its mechanism of action and requirement in humans still debated.

But in a recent flurry of experiments, researchers have made surprise discoveries about the vitamin that suggest it may be a major player in prevention of many chronic diseases.

Last December, the New York Academy of Sciences published a 553-page volume of studies on vitamin E. These experiments indicate that vitamin E:

- Decreases incidence of cancer.
- Provides some protection against aging.
- Decreases inflammation and arthritis pain.
- Reduces cataract risk.
- Helps protect against effects of smoke, smog and air pollution.
- Increases immune function.
- Shows promise in Parkinson's disease.

Since the 1920s when vitamin E was discovered, it has been linked in the public's mind with fertility and libido. Its technical name, tocopherol, actually means "bring forth offspring" — a reference to early studies showing that vitamin E-deficient rats could not bear live young. Even though a similar human effect was never found, vitamin E was quickly pegged the "love vitamin," and farfetched claims about it seemed to grow yearly.

In the scientific world, the hype deterred serious researchers, and scientific interest in vitamin E waned.

INTEREST HAS surged only recently, spurred, in part, by growing research into "free oxygen radicals." Hyperactive and powerful, free oxygen radicals are naturally occurring molecules that are stripped of one electron. Normally electrons travel in pairs; an electron stripped of its partner will desperately hunt for a new partner.

This indiscriminate search causes free oxygen radicals to react with many other cell components, causing major damage to molecules needed for healthy functioning. Free oxygen radicals also set in motion a self-perpetuating chain reaction: Each time a free oxygen radical robs an electron, another molecule becomes an electron-hungry radical.

Scientists generally agree that vitamin E functions as a free oxygen radical quencher or antioxidant. It stops the destructive chain by donating one of its electrons to the free oxygen radical. In the process, vitamin E also becomes a radical, but a relatively non-reactive and benign one.

Vitamin E may also become a radical only temporarily. Research published last year from the Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory indicated that certain enzymes in the body can transform vitamin E radicals back into original-form vitamin E. This recycling rearms the vitamin for its further work against free oxygen radicals. It also may explain why adults seem to need so little of the vitamin and why deficiency is rare.

AS RESEARCHERS have learned more about the extent of free oxygen radical damage, vitamin E's potential role has expanded. Now some researchers believe that free oxygen radical damage is the origin of certain cancers, degenerative diseases like arthritis, neurological conditions such as Parkinson's, and cataracts.

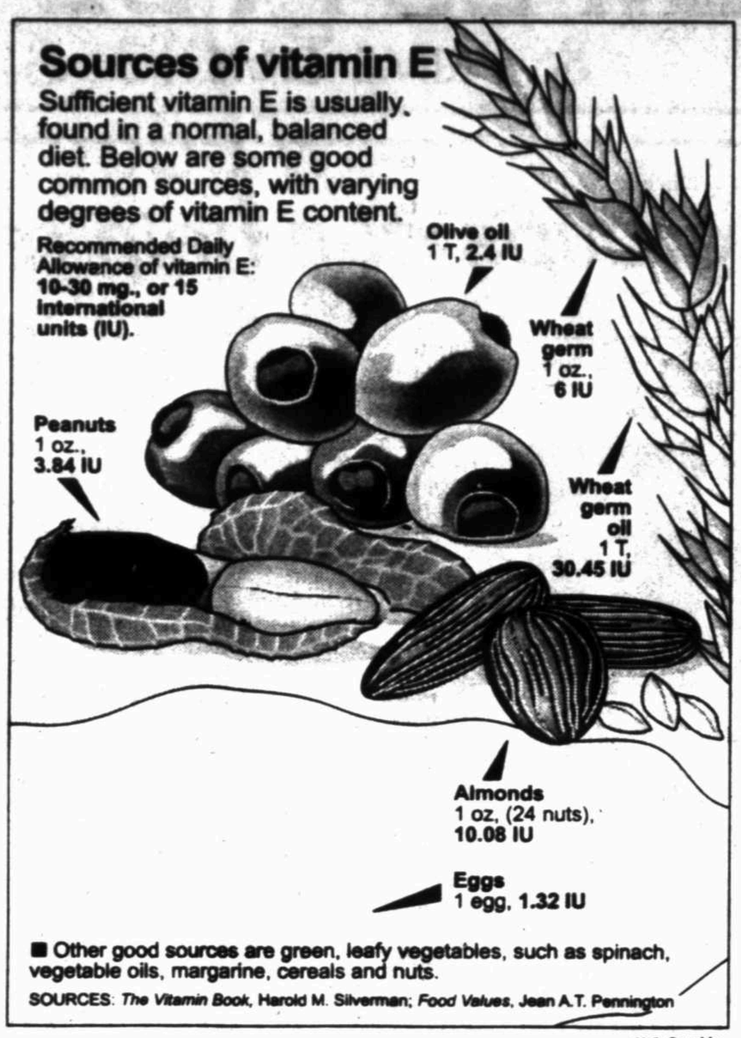
"It is becoming increasingly clear that the important chronic killer diseases, such as cancer, heart disease and blood vessel diseases, arthritis, emphysema ... involve radical reaction in some stage of their development," explained Dr. William Pryor. An editor of the New York Academy's volume on vitamin E, Pryor is a vitamin E researcher at the Biodynamics Institute at Louisiana State University.

"Vitamin E is the principal radical scavenger in human tissue," he continued. "Therefore, there is reason to hope that vitamin E may provide important protection against and/or delay the onset of these diseases."

In regard to cancer, animal research and epidemiological studies provide an ever-growing basis for this hope. About 20 scientific reports have shown that animals fed vitamin E have fewer or later-appearing tumors than animals not receiving the vitamin.

Animal research has also demonstrated that vitamin E is an important component of the lung's defense against free oxygen radical damage, helping to protect against the effects of smoke and smog.

At Harvard Dental School, researchers have also shown that vitamin E improves production of an immune chemical that can destroy oral cancer cells.



IN HUMANS, several epidemiological studies have demonstrated a relationship between levels of vitamin E in the blood and cancer. A study of 21,000 Finnish men, published in the American Journal of Epidemiology by Dr. Paul Knekt of Helsinki, found that those who had high blood levels of vitamin E were less likely to develop cancer over a 10-year period than those with low levels in their blood.

The Basel Study of 3,000 men and 688 women, originally a 1960 Swiss survey on cardiovascular disease, was recently re-evaluated for vitamin E and cancer. The researchers reported "more evidence to show that low vitamin E is associated with an overall increased risk for cancer."

These studies hint that vitamin E has a relation to cancer, but they should not be considered conclusive, Pryor insisted. Epidemiological studies are more like snapshots than complete pictures, pointing out an association without offering clues to cause. Long-term clinical trials are necessary to provide more complete data.

Currently the National Cancer Institute is sponsoring 28 human studies to examine the role of vitamin E and other micronutrients in cancer development. Pryor hopes that when these studies are completed, the role of vitamin E will become clearer.

At this point, researchers theorize that vitamin E may work in two ways to inhibit tumor growth. Vitamin E is known to prevent formation of nitrosamines. These cancer-causing chemicals are produced from nitrites and nitrates, substances normally present in the body and also consumed as food preservatives. Also, in its capacity as an antioxidant, vitamin E may prevent disruption of cells' membranes and thereby lessen the chance for tumor formation.

VITAMIN E'S antioxidant action has led to its use in a number of other applications. At several research institutions, heart patients are given vitamin E prior to bypass surgery in an effort to determine whether it provides protection against the free oxygen radical damage that occurs when blood flow is restored to the heart.

Vitamin E also is being studied in conjunction with Parkinson's disease, a progressive neurological condition characterized by tremors and loss of balance. A multi-center, double-blind trial is currently under way to evaluate vitamin E's ability to slow the disease's progression.

Some studies already have suggested that vitamin E may delay onset of Parkinson's. One of these showed that patients who took vitamin E daily had less severe symptoms than patients who didn't take the supplement.

Other research indicates that vitamin E therapy may be effective in early treatment of the disease. Subjects who took vitamin E went 2½ years longer than a control group before requiring drugs (L-dopa) to treat their symptoms.

Vitamin E also may work to aid immune function. As humans age, their immune function — and ability to resist disease — tends to decline. Research now indicates that vitamin E is associated with increases in interleukin-2, a substance that promotes the growth of white blood cells.

BEFORE THE use of vitamin E, successful efforts to increase immune function have been few, explained Dr. Simin Meydani of the U.S. Department of Agriculture Human Nutrition Research Center on Aging at Tufts University.

"With the exception of caloric restriction in animal models, efforts to retard the decline in immune function with age have not been successful or practical," she said.

In 1986, Meydani found that vitamin E supplementation improved the impaired immune responses of aged mice. Two years later, she gave vitamin E supplements to 60 healthy elderly subjects. These men and women were living in a metabolic research unit at Tufts where environmental factors and diet were carefully controlled. After about a month, Meydani recorded improvement in her subjects' immune responsiveness, including increases in cellular immunity.

The study indicates that many elderly people might benefit from supplementary vitamin E, she noted. "But such public recommendations can only be considered after longer-term studies are completed. Nevertheless, it is encouraging that a single nutrient supplement can enhance immune responsiveness."

University of Western Ontario researchers compared various characteristics of 175 cataract patients with 175 cataract-free adults. They assumed the patients and controls ate similar diets because they shared similar backgrounds.

But, in fact, the only significant difference they found between the two groups was that the cataract-free individuals had taken at least 400 international units (one regular capsule) of vitamin E and/or a minimum of 300 milligrams of vitamin C per day over the last five years.

SUBJECTS WHO took only vitamin E supplements had about 50 percent less cataract risk than those who took no vitamins. Those taking vitamin C alone showed a 70 percent risk reduction, according to Dr. James Robertson, one of the study's authors.

If confirmed, the work could lead to a "tremendous public health benefit," noted Allen Taylor of the USDA Human Nutrition Research Center on Aging. "If you could delay cataract formation by just 10 years, you would eliminate the need for half of the cataract extractions performed in this country."

It may be several years before researchers conclusively define vitamin E's role in prevention of such chronic conditions. Scientists are still learning how the vitamin is absorbed and transported and how it actually works. Studies of cardiovascular disease and cancer should help piece together the puzzle of Vitamin E's role.

DEAR ABBY

Secretary has spelling problem

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Now I've heard everything. I just dictated a letter to my newly hired young secretary, whose resume indicated that she had been an English major. A bit later, she asked, "How do you spell 'Europe'? ... I looked in the dictionary, but I couldn't find it under 'U.'" — APPALLED IN CHICAGO

Van Buren

DEAR APPALLED: Your experience is not new to those of us who were educated in the good old days when the "3 R's" were stressed in education, the classes were no larger than the teacher could handle, and the students didn't carry weapons.

Send your "English major" back to the minors. Competent secretaries are still available. You just have to look a little harder.

DEAR ABBY: "Ben" and I have been married for 10 years. Ben's sister, "Mary," and her husband have also been married about 10 years. Ben and I have two children, ages 5 and 7. So do Mary and her husband. All the children are normal, polite, well-behaved. Here's the problem:

Frequently, when Ben's mother or other sister invites us to a family gathering, we are instructed to hire a sitter, so we can attend without our children.

Inevitably, we learn that Mary will attend with her children, as she has not been instructed to hire a sitter.

Ben's family has always shown a great deal of favoritism toward Mary, and now that favoritism has been extended to her children. My children are painfully aware of this.

I cannot change this situation after 10 years of trying. I feel the best way to deal with this hurtful situation is for me to absent myself from such gatherings. I would rather spend the time with my children. I do not mind if my husband attends without me. I cannot ask him to turn his back on his family.

My husband feels that we should leave our children behind and both attend anyway. Am I being unreasonable? What do you think, Abby? Please let me know, as we have a few of these gatherings coming up soon. — AN AVID ABBY FAN

DEAR FAN: I think you are handling the situation in the best possible way. It's too bad your husband doesn't have the manliness to tell his family that if they chose to snub his wife and children, he chooses to absent himself, too.

DEAR ABBY: Can you stand one more letter about "drop-ins"? What does that idiot mean, "If we drop in, and see that they aren't happy to see us, we can always leave."

Now I've heard everything! What can these poor trapped people say when uninvited guests appear at their door?

"Gosh, I'm sorry, I was just cleaning my garage. My hair looks terrible and I don't have any makeup on, the house is a mess, I have no snacks, not even a soft drink in the fridge, I'm dead tired, and had planned on resting when I finished with the garage — give me a break!"

As usual, Abby, you are right on the money. There is absolutely no excuse for people dropping in without calling first. And just for the record, I did an office survey. We have approximately 200 employees in this office, and I circulated a "memo" throughout the place with the question: "How do you feel about drop-in guests?"

Not one person said they would be welcome. Several expressed the opinion that "drop-ins" should drop dead or drop out. — FORT LAUDERDALE, FLA.

DEAR FORT LAUDERDALE: It's official. The drop-ins lose by a landslide. Now you handful of folks who love to be dropped in on: Hang a "Welcome" sign on your front door. Be sure you have plenty of soft drinks in the fridge, chips and dips and cookies galore, and the world will beat a path to your door.

VOLUNTEER CENTER

The Volunteer Center, 1030 Andrews Hwy., has many opportunites for volunteers. Those interested in volunteering can call 697-8781 for information.

■ A local agency is seeking volunteers to serve as Court Appointed Special Advocates to children. This volunteer opportunity requires confidentiality. It will involve interviewing parties involved in the case, maintaining written records of the case, preparing reports for court and possibly appearing in court. Interviewing skills combined with a concern for children are needed for this position.

■ A volunteer is needed for a local agency's Telephone Reassurance Program. This program provides local elderly citizens with a daily phone call from the volunteer to check on how they are doing. Only a few minutes each day is needed.

■ A local nonprofit child care center is seeking several volunteers to work as caregivers during the summer months. This volunteer opportunity is for someone with patience and a love of children. Hours for this program are flexible.

Seniors share talents, wisdom with students

MIAMI (AP) — They were an unlikely duo: 71-year-old Wesley Wilson, a bearded former landscaper, and his assistant, a lanky 14-year-old named Fred Barney.

They stood before a dozen or so sixth-graders on a recent sunny afternoon behind Westview Elementary School to teach tropical horticulture.

But there was a lot more to the lesson than growing orchids, pineapple plants and aloe.

And a lot like the relationship Wilson and his assistant have — that of mentor and protege.

The two came together through a school program that focuses on nurturing and inspiring young people by matching them with talented older volunteers.

"You look forward to every week you come," said Wilson during a recent horticulture class at Westview in northwestern Dade County, where he has met with students the past three years and formed a gardening club.

"Sure it's work, but you don't spend time grumbling about what's wrong with the world or your illnesses. You're interested more about life in general," said Wilson, who founded several plant organizations, including the International Palm Society and the Rare Fruit Council.

Fred doesn't hesitate to attribute the improvement in his grades — and outlook — to Wilson's influence.

"When I first saw him (Wilson), something clicked inside me," said Fred.

The teen-ager now attends the middle school next door, getting mostly Bs, and joins Wilson for his weekly class.

Florida's Senior Mentor Program has put the state, home to a large population of retirees, in the forefront of a growing trend nationwide to involve more older people in education.

"The fastest growing segment of the population is 60-plus," said Bentley Lipscomb, deputy director of the Washington-based National Association of Partners in Education. "This is going to be a tremendous resource to our educational system in this country."

AP LaserPhoto

Wesley Wilson, 71, right, teaches Fred Barnes, 14, about horticulture at Westview Elementary School in Miami. The two came together through a school program which focuses on nurturing and inspiring youth by matching them with talented older volunteers.

Launched statewide in 1983, the mentor program has been established in about one-third of Florida's school districts and is one of a number of inter-generational programs that last year had more than 15,000 senior volunteers helping about half as many young people.

The program is geared for creative students who may not qualify for gifted or other school programs as well as at-risk students.

Volunteers, who must be at least 50 — currently the oldest is 88 — are screened and must provide references. They are required to spend at least 10 hours with a student, and projects can last six to 12 weeks, or more.

Funding comes from the state Department of Education and a $50,000 annual grant from Chevron Corp. that will end next year.

Dade County Schools hired two retired school teachers and a retired administrator to recruit mentors, who now number nearly 100 retirees working with 220 children in grades two through 12, said Ramona Frischman, coordinator of the schools' Department of Community Participation.

"We don't just want highly professional retirees," Ms. Frischman said. "We also need and have a place for people who'll work with arts and crafts, cooking, needlepoint, gardening and those kinds of things."

In one project being watched nationwide, a dozen Dade students were selected as aides to members of the Silver-Haired Legislature during a four-day session last October in Tallahassee. The students researched issues, helped write resolutions and presented their positions on the floor.

Despite initial resistance from some senior elected officials concerning the junior aides, that was all overcome by the close of the session, said Maryon Freifelder, a senior advocate from Miami Beach.

"Some felt the (students) had no business being there," she recalled. "At first they couldn't understand, they couldn't see the connection. ... By the end of the session three (students) gave a five-minute presentation and got a standing ovation."

"What they're finding is they have so many things in common," Ms. Frischman said. "They're finding they can make things happen together."

IT'S YOUR LIFE

Families are primary caregivers

By Steve Edwards

Although most of the county's 25 million older residents (age 65 and older) live independently, they may still need some extra care. More than 45 million people are in the 45 to 65 year old bracket, comprising the bulk of caregivers.

Edwards

Many of these adult caregivers are in their 50s, are grandparents themselves, and have already spent a lot of time taking care of their parents. In many four-generation families, caregivers for both the very young and very old members of the family are usually in the middle generation.

Science and technology have lengthened life, but have also contributed to the problems of aging. The economic, social, technological and medical progress that has led to longer lives for so many people have also produced the changes that make the elderly a more dependent group, but has robbed them of some of their most important traditional roles.

Broad social changes have stripped older people of some of the respect which was formerly given to them. Changes in communication methods have eliminated their traditional role of counselors, advisers and sympathizers. In earlier generations, the elderly were teachers; now we learn from television, newspaper and how-to books.

Medical science has prolonged the life of the body, but often has not been able to prolong the adequate function of the body or mind. Changes in labor laws have minimized the physical dangers in the workplace, but these same developments have made the older worker more obsolete at an earlier age, consigning him or her to retirement.

In this country, upward mobility is common, which often reqires geographic changes when people move to new locations to help their upward economic climb. Because so many of these mobile workers are in the younger generations, their older parents may be left without the support of family care.

Small towns, where multi-generational families may be more common, may still have a more traditional system of family caregiving. But more and more often, adult children are too busy, too far away and too involved in their own problems to provide this kind of care-giving.

Older Americans cherish their independence, but they also cherish the feeling of belonging. Even though more home-based social services are available, some still question the security of older people who live completely alone. Many who live alone are afraid of what might happen to them or that no no one will be avilable to help them if they need it.

Care given to older adults is getting better, but still lags far behind general improvements in the quality of life. Society is attempting to catch up through government research and action programs to help the elderly, but help still falls short of what it needs to be.

Families still play the key role in providing care and support to the elderly. Facing the situation is the first order of business. Family members, including parents, need to talk and pre-plan possibilities and select the most effective course of action. One single decision will rarely take care of the problem. Each decision will be the basis for the next one.

Government programs can help, but families are the best support for the aging.

Steve Edwards is executive director of Community and Senior Services and the Visiting Nurse Service of Midland.

Age not associated with sexual interest

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Older women can maintain continued interest in sex if they have a sexually active partner and are free of disease and mental illness, researchers report.

"Although sexual activity in general declines with age, the proportion of elderly women who retain sexual desire and are sexually active is remarkable," Drs. Arshang D. Mooradian and Vicki Greiff wrote in the May issue of Archives of Internal Medicine.

Anxiety and depression are more common in the elderly than in younger people, and such mental disturbances can spur a loss of sexual desire, the University of Arizona researchers said.

They said older women with estrogen deficiency also experience changes related to sexual function, such as reduced vaginal blood flow. But the deficiency can be easily treated, they added.

The country has endured several massive tragedies in recent years. An estimated 1 million Iranians were killed or wounded in the eight-year war with Iraq that ended in 1988. And the Islamic revolution that in 1979 toppled the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi cost hundreds of thousands of lives.

Moreover, devastating quakes are not new to the country. About 25,000 people died in eastern Iran in a 1978 earthquake. Roughly the same number died in a December 1988 quake in nearby Soviet Armenia.

The Iranian media, monitored from Nicosia, was quick to report Thursday's earthquake. Within a half-hour, the Islamic Republic News Agency reported the tremor had been felt in Tehran, the capital.

But subsequent reports, some a few minutes apart, said the damage must have been principally to crops, with brief mentions that many casualties were feared in Zanjan and Gilan provinces.

The only color reported for hours was that when the quake hit, Tehran residents were either asleep or watching a World Cup soccer match between Brazil and Scotland. The report said many people fled into the streets.

In addition, the news agency's earliest reports dramatically underestimated the magnitude of the disaster. While IRNA reported 10,000 dead late Thursday, the Iranian ambassador to the United Nations said 25,000 people had died and tens of thousands were injured.

Initial casualty counts increased by the dozens, then by the hundreds and, only about 20 hours after the quake, by the thousands. Later dispatches kept the lists of villages, towns and cities worst-hit by the temblor up to date.

Official radio was off the air when the earthquake struck and although it came back on the air to report important news during the Iran-Iraq war, there was no such move Thursday. Iranian radio first reported the earthquake on the main newscast 6½ hours later.

The radio, like the agency, also kept listeners informed about the areas hit and the number of casualties. But again, the reporting lacked color and description for hours.

The television's first shots from the stricken north were screened 12 hours after the quake with no comment from reporters. When the scenes were replayed during newscasts, the anchors appeared unshaken by chilling clips such as one showing a stuffed toy and a small shoe lying in a street.

Iranian President Hashemi Rafsanjani declared a three-day period of mourning for quake victims. But the television showed cartoons for children.

During the 40-day mourning period declared after the death of Ayatolah Ruhollah Khomeini last year, only recitations from the Koran, Islam's holy book, and documentaries on the revolution were allowed on televison.

Tectonic Plates

The earth's crust is divided into several plates. These plates, floating on soft, hot rock, move relative to one another. This movement can build pressure and tension which can slip and be released, causing severe earthquakes. Almost all the world's seismic activity occurs near or along plate boundaries.

International organizations offer Iran aid

NEW YORK (AP) — International organizations offered Iran sympathy, supplies and financial aid Thursday to help it cope with the devastation wrought by an earthquake that killed at least 25,000 people.

Tens of thousands also were injured in the early morning temblor that rocked northern Iran.

At the United Nations, Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar expressed condolences to the Iranian government and the families of the victims.

Perez de Cuellar, in a message to Iranian President Hashemi Rafsanjani, said the U.N. system was ready to provide all possible assistance.

Its disaster relief coordinator dispatched an emergency team, and an airlift of emergency supplies from U.N. warehouses was undertaken in coordination with Iranian authorities, officials said.

A statement from the U.N. Disaster Relief Organization in Geneva said the most immediate needs were for medicine, medical supplies and tents. Other needs include canned food, blankets, clothing, vehicles and heavy-duty equipment.

The organization was sending a senior officer and relief coordination officer to the stricken areas, and a special task force was established at the Iranian president's office to coordinate relief, the U.N. said.

In Brussels, the European Community agreed to donate $1.2 million to help send emergency relief equipment to the area, it was announced.

A spokesman for the League of Red Cross in Geneva said the organization would have no comment on relief efforts until Friday morning.

But an American Red Cross official in Washington said, "We're attempting to raise money to send to the Red Crescent Society to help buy tents, blankets, food, medical supplies and emergency lighting." Red Crescent is the Islamic equivalent of the Red Cross.

Spokesman Brian Ruberry said the organization was raising money rather than shipping the supplies, and had established a toll-free nationwide telephone number for people wanting to make contributions.

AmeriCares, based in New Canaan, Conn., said in a statement that it was preparing to send containers of medicine and other relief supplies to Iran via Hartford, Conn., "as soon as clearance has been received from the Iranian government to land our aircraft in that country."

President Bush's administration offered humanitarian assistance and sent a message of condolence to the government.

Romanians still detained

MAGHERU, Romania — When the long-awaited bus pulled up to a dusty rural crossroads here on Thursday afternoon, a dozen women who had maintained a weeklong vigil on the roadside cried as their sons and husbands stepped gingerly to freedom.

Taken into custody by policemen and by vigilante miners called to the capital last week, ostensibly to head off a coup, the men had not being charged with any crime. They told of beatings and interrogation and of sleeping on concrete floors and lice-ridden mattresses in a garage inside an Interior Ministry military base a quarter of a mile from here.

"We were beaten on the legs by the police with bats and rubber truncheons," one said. "One police officer told me that I was taken in only because I was a gypsy."

In addition to attacks on political foes, students, and bystanders, the miners assaulted gypsies, who until last week had crowded Bucharest street corners and subway stations, begging, selling cigarettes and knicknacks, and running shell games and other penny-ante games of chance.

"I was at a streetcar station on my way home from school," said a teen-age gypsy boy, whose scalp showed evidence of a wound that he said resulted from a truncheon blow.

In the grass beside the road, a woman clothed in black sat sobbing because her son was not on the bus. The detainees released on Thursday said that the 20 to 30 people remaining inside the compound had been arrested.

About five miles away, at Bucharest's law school, Claudia Munteanu was experiencing the same state of uncertainty and fear. Her husband, Marian, 28, president of the university's Student League, was beaten severely when the miners broke into the university building and attacked students there. Munteanu was taken to a local hospital with head and other injuries.

INS commissioner vows stepped-up prosecution at border

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mexicans who repeatedly cross the U.S. border illegally will be prosecuted instead of being shipped home, the top federal immigration official said Thursday.

Immigration and Naturalization Service Commissioner Gene McNary also vowed to seek prosecution and imprisonment for people who smuggle aliens.

McNary said he favors creating a lottery to allow some foreigners to enter the United States even if they don't meet existing requirements that they have relatives or jobs waiting for them in this country.

The commissioner, who took over the federal agency last October, spoke during a Thursday news conference and at a luncheon meeting of Town Hall of California, a civic group.

The number of Border Patrol agents in the San Diego area will increase from the current 750 to about 1,000 within a year, McNary said. More detention facilities and improved border lighting and detection devices will be added, he said.

About 40 percent to 45 percent of all illegal aliens entering the United States cross a 12- to 14-mile stretch of the border near San Diego, McNary said. The INS now lets most illegal aliens return to Mexico voluntarily without formal deportation proceedings — a process McNary called "a revolving door."

'A lot of people would like to have a big wall or ditch or something to try to enforce the existing laws.'

— Gene McNary, Immigration and Naturalization commissioner

The policy will continue for many illegal immigrants. But people who smuggle aliens and those aliens who cross the border repeatedly will be fingerprinted, detained and deported, he said.

Those who violate deportation orders by re-entering the United States can be charged with a misdemeanor the first time and a felony the second time, he added.

"We're talking about the serious offenders," he said. The INS estimates there are about 1,000 smugglers who "live off and prey on innocent victims," he said.

McNary acknowledged the get-tough approach might create a big backlog of court cases, but said it should have a deterrent effect.

"A lot of people would like to have a big wall or ditch or something," McNary said, adding he simply wants "to try to enforce the existing laws."

McNary discouraged American motorists who on recent nights have lined up on the U.S. side of the border to shine their headlights toward Mexico to dissuade illegal immigration.

As for any Americans who might take stronger measures to discourage illegal immigration, McNary declared: "I have absolutely no tolerance for vigilantes, absolutely none."

NRC to end controls

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission has agreed to end controls on the disposal of some low-level radioactive wastes and materials at nuclear plants, hospitals and laboratories, officials said Thursday.

The revised policy, scheduled to be announced next week, is likely to prompt a flood of requests from producers of such wastes that they be allowed to dispose of them the same way as conventional garbage.

HOW TO PLACE A GARAGE SALE AD

Follow these simple instructions to get the most from your garage sale advertisement.

(1) Decide the address and dates where the sale will be held.

(2) Compile a list of the major items you want to advertise (furniture, appliances, speciality items, specific sizes or types of clothes) along with a few smaller items (pictures, kitchen utensils, etc.) If more than one family will be participating in the sale, ask each family to write out a list of the items they want to sell.

(3) Combine the lists of items to be sold, the complete address, the day and times the sale will be held. Remember, the best days to advertise for your sale will be at least the day before and each day of the sale. The deadline for placing your ad will be before 5:00 the day before you need your ad to appear, Monday - Friday.

(4) NOW - Call Classified at 682-6222 with the days of the sale and the items you want to list.
We offer two types of ads: word ads and space ads.
EXAMPLE WORD AD:

1234 MAIN Street. Saturday 9:00 - 4:00. Kids' clothes: boys 2T-4T, girls 6x-14, dining room set and lots of miscellaneous.
