Mrs. E. M. Ewan Dies

Memphis, March 17—Mrs. E. M. Ewan, 66 years old, well known pioneer Memphis woman, died in a local hospital today following a brief illness.

Mrs. Ewan, a native of Pannin county, moved to Hall county in 1890 and was married to Mr. Ewan the following year. The family has been active in business, civic and religious work of the county for many years.

Funeral services will be held at the Memphis First Baptist Church Saturday with Rev. J. W. Mason, pastor, officiating.

Survivors are the husband, 2 sons, E. M. Ewan, Jr. of Wichita Falls and John M. Ewan of Estelino, and 2 daughters, Mrs. Sam J. Hamilton of Memphis and Mrs. Roy Lagow of Marshall—Amarillo News.

Mrs. Ewan was a sister of Paul Pyle of Hedley. The former extends sincere sympathies to the bereaved ones.

At the Churches

Next Sunday will be an important day with every church in our town. The occasion is a day that the Lord told his created beings that they should rest and keep it holy. We are indeed fortunate in having five churches in our town, find your place Sunday and worship the Lord in the church of your choice. Your church and pastor need you and you need the fellowship of the people, the study of God's word and the message of the pastor. The Scripture for Sunday's lesson is 1 Peter 1:17-25. Find your place Sunday.

I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord, Ps 122:1.

An article will appear each week under this heading written by the pastors or a representative of the churches.

Girl Scouts

The Girl Scouts met Friday Mar. 17, at the home of Eva Jean Cherry. The two patrols had prepared a program which was enjoyed by all.

Delicious refreshments of lemonade and cookies were served to the following: Dorothy Jean Richerson, Myrtle Tollett, Billie Jean Smith, Dorothy Dishman, Mary Frances Meeks, Maiba Jean Clifton and Eva Jean Cherry.

The next scout meeting will be Mar. 24, at Joy Blankenship's. Mary Frances Meeks, reporter.

Church of the Nazarene

A ten day revival meeting will open at the Church of the Nazarene on Friday, Mar. 24. You are cordially invited to attend.

W. M. SOCIETY

Circle No. 1 met with Misses Ole and Sala Card Mar. 20 at 7:30. An interesting program was rendered. There were 14 present.

We will meet Mar. 27 at the church. The program will be the first two chapters of Invaluable Advances.

T. C. Johnson

A message was received here Tuesday that T. C. Johnson had passed away at his home in Silver Lake. The body was brought overland Wednesday to Hedley and taken to the home of his sister, Mrs. G. C. Meredith.

Mr. Johnson was born Feb. 11, 1871 at Helena, Shelby county, Alabama. When a young man, in 1891, he came to Cooper Texas. He was married to Miss Lillie Stotts May 22, 1893. He died March 14, 1939 at the age of 68. Seven children were born to this union, four boys and three girls. Three children preceded him to the Great Beyond.

Those who are left to mourn his passing are his wife and four children, W. C. Barney Johnson of Hedley, Mrs. Mays Hoggard of Amarillo and Mrs. Herbert Blackmon of Silver Lake, and an adopted son, Nelson Johnson of Giles. Also one brother, A. B. Johnson of Saleville and one sister, Mrs. G. G. Meredith of Hedley.

The C. E. Cain Funeral Home of Quitman had charge of the body. The funeral service was held at the Methodist Church here at 2 o'clock March 16 with Rev. Joe Findley, pastor of the First Christian Church of Memphis in charge, assisted by Rev. Biggs and Rev. Wells.

Pall bearers were Claud Nash, Shorty Bland, Milt Mosley and J. D. Harrison of Hedley, and B. F. Kelley and C. A. Crow of Giles. Flower bearers were Cordie Hamilton of Giles, Merle Dean of Hedley, Zelma Latimer of Stinnett, Erma Anderson of Longview, Pearl Hayes of Clarendon, Ruth Johnson of Pampa, Lucille and Myrtle Hoggard of Amarillo, Leona Hayes of Clarendon and Ida Lou Johnson of Giles.

Mr. Johnson professed faith in Christ in 1901 and joined the Christian Church of his home community.

He moved to Giles in 1915 from the Smith community in Hall county, and had lived in these two communities for 15 years, engaged in farming and the filling station business. He moved to Hedley where he lived until moving to Silver Lake only a few months ago.

He had a sunny disposition and a generous heart, and helped many of his fellow men when they were in need. He not only thought of himself but others, as the Master has taught us to do.

A loving husband and father, brother and friend has crossed the Great Divide and will be missed not only by loved ones but by many whom he came in contact with through the years. Gone is your loved one, Never more to return; His work on earth is ended And for him your hearts will yearn.

A loving husband's gone, 'tis sad, Father's gone from children dear. Of course you'll miss your precious dad; And brother and sister will be onesome here.

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 35 to 42), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of sex, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells. Get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a good general system, take the Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life. WORTH TRYING!

In 1938 To Serve You"

Almost 120 Times Around

 Involved in Only
 24 Accidents

None Fatal - Few Serious

For its record of safe-and-sure driving in the course of duty, the West Texas Utilities Company and the drivers of its 184 cars and trucks were
 for this company, flashes a smile that is characteristic of the men and women representing Your Electric Servant... men and women who serve you every day in the year.

Safe
 Driving
 Pays

DRIVING all those miles nearly 120 times around the world, is part of our job... a duty we assume in the obligation to bring you good, dependable Electric Service at all hours of day or night. By driving them safely, avoiding accidents, we reduce highway hazards and lessen the danger of mishaps to both ourselves and the public.

Another fact highlighted by this achievement is that 184 cars and trucks are maintained by this company in serving you. The cost of their purchase and upkeep is proportionately divided among the towns and cities served. Business is created... a boost to this West Texas region.

This motorized army of men construct and maintain transmission and distribution lines, answer your calls for service, and supervise the efficient operation of a $45,000,000 investment. All their driving is motivated by the desire to render good service at low cost.

Television Sprouts Commercial Wings, Backed by 10 Years' Experimentation

Receivers Planned on Sale As Infant Industry Tests Apparatus

By JOSEPH LaBINE
History will remember April of 1939 as the month America became television-conscious. The research of more than 10 years, the expenditure of more than $10,000,000 will be climaxed when radio manufacturers place commercial television receivers on the market for the first time.

At least this announcement was made last October by David Sarnoff of the Radio Corporation of America, speaking for the American Radio Manufacturers' association. Simultaneously, when the New York World's fair opens April 30, commercial telecasting will begin in the Manhattan metropolitan area.

Before the year is out additional transmitters will be operating commercially at Schenectady and (possibly) Los Angeles.

But this most fascinating of modern sciences will also be wearing short trousers, ensnared in more technical, economic and artistic difficulties than the complicated motion picture industry ever imagined.

Strange to say, the least of these problems is that of technique. Ten years ago visionary television engineers dreamed of the great future in this business, once equipment could be perfected. The weird situation today is that television is mechanical, quite perfect but programming and financing have been neglected.

Horizon is Maximum Distance. The receivers going on sale next month will project a 16 by 10-inch image into your living room, provided you live within horizon-range of the Empire State building or a 1,500 foot mountain near Schenectady. Also provided you can pay from $150 to $1,000 for a receiver. The former has significance, the latter both sound and sight.

Behind that image in your living room is a devastating complexity of electrons, light beams, photography and ultra-short waves. Standing before a camera in the Empire State building, your favorite politician will harangue his no-longer-unseen audience with gestures as well as vocal inflections, all of which are picked up by a camera-sound combination. Where a regularly photographed image is transferred to the plate chemically, television does it electrically on a plate made up of several thousand tiny silver dots which react electrically to light.

The trick is that these silver dots are arranged regularly in lines

The National Broadcasting company's television announcer, Betty Goodwin, steps before a television camera in the Radio City studios, New York.

Betty Goodwin's image is televised, shot through the air by electric impulses, and comes out this way.

so ultra-short waves. Highly independent, they proceed in a straight line out over the horizon and zip off into space, never returning. Consequently all television audiences are confined to eye-shot of the transmitting station.

The one exception is that broadcasts may be "piped" from one city to another with coaxial cable, but a mile of this wire costs a small fortune and it is therefore impractical.

'Ghosts' Cause Interference.

Even on ultra-short wave and within the horizon radius, television does not always have clear sailing. 'Ghosts' pop up occasionally in the form of reflecting surfaces which send an extra delayed image into the receiver. Empire State building broadcasts often encounter a ghost in the Palisades, a vertical wall of rock on the Jersey side of the Hudson river. Large surfaces like gas tanks also provide ghosts.

Sometimes freak waves may be reflected from the ionosphere, producing ghosts of broadcasts being made miles away on the same wavelength. During the past winter Dr. DeWitt R. Goddard, working on television at Riverhead, L. I.,

First Broadcasts Planned This Year From New York City

casts will become an important factor in training both children and adults.

If $10,000,000 has already been spent to bring television into its present infancy, many more millions must be spent to give it the polish of our modern radio programs. The distance handicap and the expense of "piping" may be technical problems, but they're business problems, too. Add to this the fact that a half-hour television production will cost $60,000 (over one station) while a full-hour sound radio show costs only $30,000 over the complete national hookup.

These things frighten would-be sponsors. Many firms now using sound radio would gladly invest $60,000 in a half-hour television show—provided they got something in return. But in New York, where American television has reached its highest development, the number of receivers by next December will be far less than 10,000. It's simply not worthwhile to spend $8 on each of these possible 10,000 prospects!

Population Counts. Meanwhile, however, televisionists realize the New York metropolitan area will—by virtue of its population—be the first site of self-liquidating operations. That's why experimentation and sale of commercial receivers is being confined largely to this vicinity.

Much can be learned from England's experience. Youthful John L. Baird began experimenting with British television back in 1925 and today there are 10,000 receivers in the 30 to 50-mile radius surrounding Alexandria palace, London. This, incidentally, includes more than 25 per cent of the total population of England and Wales, making British television more feasible commercially. Two systems are used, the Emitron camera which—like the American method—uses electrical signals, and the Scopony system which uses a mechanical process and "scans" by strips instead of dots. The latter camera permits televised pictures to be reproduced on a large screen, encouraging the development of television theaters.

Don't expect television too quickly; in fact, be thankful its pioneers are holding back their achievement until they've something more permanent to offer, otherwise your investment might be a total loss. In the opinion of the federal communication commission, television is not ready for standardization or commercial use by the general public. But by the time 1939 is out this viewpoint may change.

Iran, Egypt Royalty Wed In Splendor

CAIRO. — A wedding ceremony whose complexities and magnificence outshine any in modern history is uniting 17-year-old Princess Fawzia of Egypt and the youthful crown prince of Iran (Persia). Celebrations started long before March 16, the wedding date, and will continue long after, to be culminated April 21 in a second marriage ritual in Teheran, Iran capital.

Important because it unites the two most influential Mohammedan nations, the wedding is nevertheless said to be a love match since the prince and princess met during a winter sports expedition to Switzerland. A million Egyptians are participating in the gayety of Cairo, a three-day holiday having been proclaimed following the wedding.

A royal welcome, aerial and military escorts and special trains featured the prince's arrival in Egypt. In his honor the tomb of Mohammed Ali—founder of the present Egyptian dynasty—was reconstructed at a cost of $250,000.

The royal couple are being accompanied by Egyptian Queen Mother Nazli on their honeymoon trip to Shahpour, Iran. There they will be met by the empress of Iran and two of her daughters. The party will travel by special train to Teheran for four days of wedding celebration beginning April 21. On April 24 the prince will take his bride to their permanent residence, the marble palace. Since this date is the anniversary of the accession to the throne of the shah of Persia, it will have a double significance this year.

Princess Fawzia, westernized like Egypt's beautiful young queen, Farida, is well versed in her native Arabic and speaks excellent English and French. Her next problem will be learning modern Persian, her new native tongue.

Congress Takes Bit in Teeth to Restore National Confidence

Vast Resources of Nation to Be Made Available Again for All People; Old-Line Democrats Responsible for Sudden Determination to Assume Congressional Leadership.

WASHINGTON. — The dictionary defines the word, "confidence," as meaning: "trust in, or reliance upon, another; a belief in a person or a thing." The dictionary might well have added that confidence is something quite intangible but yet it is a condition of national or state thought about its governmental policies as well as a condition of individual thought. It might have added, further, that confidence can be destroyed more easily than it can be maintained, or recreated when it once has been destroyed.

In any event, the thing about which we have heard most in Washington lately is the necessity for establishing a feeling of confidence throughout the country. The necessity exists, it is explained freely, because the depression continues and millions of persons, who would like to work, are not working. In some places, where political face-saving is important, the movement is called "business appeasement," but that is a difference between tweedle-dee and tweedle-dum. It remains as an effort to recreate national confidence so that all of the vast resources of the nation can be made available again for all of the people.

Shops Days of Rubber Stamp Congress Are Gone

The foreign policies of the administration were dragged out onto the floor of the senate for examination under a magnifying glass. Of course, the senate did not force any real change in the international relations which Mr. Roosevelt has established. From long observation in Washington, I doubt that the senate's criticism of these policies was any too sound, but it had to engage in debate on the subject to let the country know it was watching everything that was being done. It obviously had the effect of demonstrating to the country that the days of the rubber stamp congress are gone, and it constitutes another bit of evidence of the new Washington leadership.

Wrecked by Stock Market

The course of events that has led up to the latest development (a development that has both political and economic significance) has been rather a wandering trail. It had its headwaters back in 1930 and 1931, when Herbert Hoover, then President, sought to stem the tide of rushing waters of depression by inviting dozens of business leaders to Washington for consultation. He was seeking to restore confidence, to encourage the country to feel safe. Those were days, it will be recalled when "prosperity was just around the corner." Mr. Hoover wanted to bring it out where it could be of some use.

Well, Mr. Hoover failed because the stock market crash had so destroyed the confidence of the country in him and in his policies of government that there was no possibility of recreating it. The folks simply would not believe in him, nor in any of his works at that time.

Along came the elections of 1932 and Mr. Roosevelt took over the job in 1933. Those days need not be reviewed, except to point out that no man ever had the complete confidence of a people as the new President held it. Congress did as it was told, thereafter. Of course, there were ups and downs but the scene was dominated by the personality of Mr. Roosevelt, a condition that continued through about six years.

That brings us to the mistakes in politics which Mr. Roosevelt made in 1938—reorganization of the government, proposed expanding of the Supreme court by appointment of six justices of his own choosing, charges that business leaders were attempting to subvert the New Deal policies and destroy the Roosevelt administration. This was the beginning. In quick succession, there came important gains for the Republicans in the 1938 elections, fear among many old line Democrats that their seats in congress were being jeopardized by mistakes of various New Deal agencies and laws, and in general a doubt that their party should be allowed to remain under New Deal leadership.

Old-Line Democrats Decide To Assume Leadership

And I believe it is the latter condition of belief among the old line Democrats that is chiefly responsible for the sudden blossoming of congressional determination to take leadership. Some observers hold the conviction that many members of the house and senate feel they should protect their own hides and that, to accomplish this, they must assume national leadership instead of leaving the policies to be theorized and blue-printed by such as Jerome Frank, Thurmond Arnold, Tommy Corcoran, Secretary Ickes, and others of that type. That is only saying numerous house and senate members believe the country has lost confidence in that sort of leadership.

Only recently, it may be recalled, Mr. Roosevelt voiced an assurance that business would have no new taxes to burden it. He spoke confidently about the future. Others, reflecting the President's position, including Secretary Hopkins and Secretary Ickes spoke pieces of an assuring nature. This is the same Mr. Hopkins who used to be head of the relief spending.

What happened? The stock market that ruined Mr. Hoover's administration showed its confidence in the new statements of 1939 with only a little less feeling than it did in the years when prosperity was just around the corner. The market dipped down only a few days, but if the stock market can be regarded as an answer for any question, the stock market must have said, "pfoofy."

Anyway, there arose immediately the new and very potent movement in congress for a program of "business appeasement." One of the first things to happen was a declaration by Senator Harrison, Mississippi Democrat and one of the really powerful men in the senate, for a cessation of spending. Or, specifically, Senator Harrison demanded a curtailment of spending, a start toward a balancing of the national budget, in the belief that the whole country is fearful of the gigantic national debt.

Seasoned Retirement

A foundation of good sense, and a cultivation of learning, are required to give a seasoning to retirement, and make us taste the blessing.—Dryden.

The real demonstration of congressional vitality, however, came the other day when Senator Harrison, as chairman of the senate finance committee, and Representative Doughton of North Carolina, as chairman of the house committee on ways and means, joined in a letter to Secretary Morgenthau, requesting a treasury statement on a tax program. The two congressional leaders urged a new and sound tax program and an administration re-assurance against further heckling of business to the end that business would try to go ahead. What they were asking, therefore, were some signs which could give business, great or small, a feeling of confidence that the government at Washington would quit pulling hair.

It was a natural request of the treasury. The treasury always has provided the fundamentals of every tax program. Capitol Hill had read Mr. Roosevelt's pronouncement concerning "no new taxes" as meaning there would be no changes in the tax structure, however, and there were a good many legislators who felt revision of some, and abolition of other, taxes were advisable.

Congress Will Go Slow on Increasing National Debt

There are numerous signs that congress is not going to be in any hurry at all to pass a law that will allow an increase in the total national debt. Present law provides that the treasury may issue notes and bonds up to $45,000,000,000. The current total is not so far below that figure, and Secretary Morgenthau has asked congress to boost the limit to $50,000,000,000. Congress apparently is not so sure that there should be an increase in the debt limit. It is a type of confidence—rather, a lack of confidence—that is plainly visible. I believe the debt total will have to be increased because there is no provision made for enough taxes to offset the vast spending program for relief and national defense upon which Mr. Roosevelt has launched. There is no place to get that money, therefore, except by borrowing. So about the only good that can come from congressional barking on this score is to awaken the country as to the dangers of its great national debt.

From all of these things, one is pretty likely to get the hebecheebee. One can hardly help wondering where we are headed. But it seems to me that there probably is need for a confidence that this far has not been mentioned in this discussion. This is a confidence in fundamental Americanism. The voters of the country can compel sound government on the part of those who make the policies and, on the surface, it appears now that the voters are telling congress what to do.

Rabid Dogs Do Not Avoid Water

Dogs with rabies do not avoid water, although this erroneous opinion is common among the laity. Mad dogs are often very fond of water and will rush into it, thrusting their heads and swallowing with great difficulty. Rabid dogs have been known to swim streams in their ravings.

Pull the Trigger on Lazy Bowels, and Also Pepsin-ize Stomach!

When constipation brings on acid indigestion, bloating, dizzy spells, gas, coated tongue, sour taste, and bad breath, your stomach is probably loaded up with certain undigested food and your bowels don't move. So you need both Pepsin to break-up fast that undigested food in your stomach, and Laxative Senna to pull the trigger on those lazy bowels. So be sure your laxative contains Pepsin. That means Dr. Caldwell's famous medicine, because its Pepsin helps you gain that wonderful stomach relief, while the Laxative Senna moves your bowels. Tests prove how quickly each dose of Syrup Pepsin fortifies your stomach with power to dissolve those undigested proteins which may linger in your stomach, to cause gas, belching, gastric acidity, nausea and headache. At the same time it wakes-up lazy nerves and muscles in your bowels to relieve your constipation. See how much better you feel by taking the laxative that also puts Pepsin to work relieving that stomach discomfort, too. Guaranteed to contain no Cathartic Salts, does not cause distress. Even finicky children love to taste this family laxative. So buy Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin combined with Laxative Senna Compound on money back offer today.

Desist! He who has lost confidence can lose nothing more.—Boiste.

across the plate. These are 441 lines on the full plate and by the time each is filled with its light and dark dots you have a finished picture not entirely different from the halftone pictures used to illustrate this story. Examine the pictures closely and you'll see the dots.

From Dots to Images. Somehow, these television dots are transferred to electric impulses, amplified and shot through the air to receivers, whence the picture is recreated bit by bit. All this takes place in about one-thirtieth of a second. Since each complete image contains 200,000 dots, you get $,000,000 a second, which is a lot of dots.

There's good reason for television's narrow broadcast range. To transmit both picture and sound requires a "channel" six times the distance from top to bottom of your radio dial, which means that television must turn to the unexplored field of ultra-short waves. Here is encountered still another problem. Regular "long" radio waves shoot into the air, bounce off the ionosphere and come back to earth. Not

CHAPTER I

Objects at rest have inertia; they are hard to move. But objects in motion may by the least force be diverted, and their whole future course thus changed. It is so with lives; for life is motion, and this is particularly true in youth. A young man's most casual encounter may modify his whole life thereafter, in splendid or in dreadful ways.

It was Mabel Gaye who performed this function for Clint Jervies. Mabel was of no least importance in Clint's eyes. He had never met her till Enid Mason's dance at the Somerset, and he saw with some distaste upon their first encounter that Mabel had had a little too much to drink. But the youngster who was her escort for the evening was in worse case than she, and in no condition to drive a car; so a little before midnight Clint, who had on this occasion no feminine responsibilities of his own, volunteered to take Mabel safely home, and had Enid's thanks for that consideration.

When he and Mabel emerged from the hotel, it was raining, gusty squalls with an occasional roll of thunder; and Mabel lived a dozen or fifteen miles out of Boston along the Providence road, so that the drive was a long one. As soon as they were in the car, she went to sleep and stayed asleep till Clint roused her to direct him through the last stages of the journey. When they reached her door, she urged him to come in, and when he declined this invitation, she insisted on being kissed good night.

Clint thus far obliged her; but he said at once afterward: "I'll have to run along now. There's some construction on the road. I had to detour, coming out. It will take me an hour to get back to town."

"Oh, you don't have to hurry," she pleaded. "You can dodge all that by going over Kenesaw Hill."

And to his questions, she gave him directions how to find this by-way. At a certain traffic-light he must turn to the right. . . . He nodded his understanding, but good-humoredly insisted on departing. She stood in the open doorway still pleading, while he got into the car at the foot of the steps; but when she saw that he was bound to go, she called softly:

"Well, good night! And thank a lot! You were a peach to bring me home. Telephone me tomorrow."

"Sure will," Clint promised. "I'll be seeing you."

He was perfectly sincere in this promise; but as a matter of fact it was more than two years before he saw her again, and he had by that time completely forgotten their former encounter. Yet if he had not taken Mabel home, and returned to town by way of Kenesaw Hill, there is no reason to think he would ever have seen June Leaford, and Kitty Leaford's death must have gone unremarked, and those three shuttered houses on the Hill might well have hid their dark secret to the end.

Clint left Mabel Gaye standing in her own door and drove away. He chuckled and rubbed his lips with the back of his hand where she had kissed him; and he thought soberly that someone ought to tell her a few things, and was amused at his own puritanic mind. He had not always been so austere, and he forgot Mabel now to think about himself, as a young man is apt to do.

Before Clint's father died, the older man must have suspected that Clint and his sister Clara were not ready for self-management; for he created the Jervies Trust; and Miss Moss, an angular middle-aged woman with a surprising tenderness beneath her iron exterior, who had been Mr. Jervies' secretary, became the actual if not the titular head of that Trust. She had been almost like a foster-mother to these children since their own mother died, and continued in that role. Clint, reflecting tonight in a mild amusement on his own virtuous disapproval of Mabel Gaye, thought Miss Moss would likewise be amused at his attitude. She had used to be so deeply distressed by Clint's own recklessness, and Clara's too.

But that was better than a year ago, and times were changed. Clint himself now administered the Jervies Trust, and shrewdly too; he was become a sober-minded young man of affairs. He thought tonight that sobriety and virtue might sometimes mean a certain loneliness. When she could trust Clint to stand on his own feet, Miss Moss had married Inspector Tope; and Clara, long before that, was married to young Mat Hews, whose new play would open in Chicago in a day or two.

Considering these things tonight, Clint decided it must be fun to be married, if you found the right girl. Then he came to the traffic light Mabel Gaye had described to him, and turned off the main highway, up Kenesaw Hill.

It was near one o'clock in the morning; and the shower was on in full force—a drenching rain, flares of lightning. He passed for a while no residences at all; but as he crossed the flat top of Kenesaw Hill he saw, dimly through the rain, some houses set absurdly close together, to one side of the road. Clint thought it was as though they huddled near one another in this solitude for the sake of company. The front door of the middle one of these houses was open, with a light burning in the hall, and he decided that the door had blown open, that someone would presently come down and shut it. Then the houses fell behind him as he drove on.

In the illumination of an especially bright flash of lightning, he had an impression of something white, moving, beside the road ahead of him, and just beyond the range of his headlights. You often saw creatures along the road at night, saw them usually as two red spots that were eyes, saw them later as dark shadows where a cat or a dog squatted to watch you pass.

But this thing was not two red spots; it was a white bulk. His headlights caught it now. Moving—yes, running.

He leaned forward more intently. This was a person, running ahead of him along the road. It was a woman, running ahead of him through the rain. There was a curious shapelessness about her; and he recognized the reason for this: her dark hair was streaming over her shoulders, so that she seemed to have no head. Her feet, he thought, were bare. A woman in a nightgown.

He was within fifty yards of her now, overtaking her. The nightgown, he saw, was not of silk or satin or any soft material; it appeared to be a sober garment, entirely lacking in frivolity; yet it was indubitably a nightgown, and by the same token there could be no doubt that it was the only garment this woman wore.

Clint was driving slowly, and the woman ran swiftly, so that she kept for an instant this distance ahead of him. Then, like a wild animal which perceives the hopelessness of straightaway flight, she suddenly turned aside off the road, and she tripped and fell headlong, and swung around in one swift motion and came to her feet again. Like a creature at bay she faced him, her back set against the trunk of a great tree.

He would remember the picture she made. He saw her face, a white oval framed in the dark shadows of her hair. One strand of hair was plastered across her brow and cheek by the rain, like a black band across her countenance. She brushed this desperately aside.

That nightgown, for all its severe simplicity, was pressed close to her body by the wind; it was glued to her by the rain. Clint saw that this was, incredibly, a girl, not a woman at all. A rather tall girl, slender without being thin. She had run gracefully, he remembered that.

His heart was pounding, shaking him. He pulled up the car and opened the door on the side toward her.

"What's the matter?" he asked. He spoke carefully, in a gentle tone, so that he might not frighten her further. "What's the matter? Anything I can do?"

"No, no," she stammered. She was breathless, panting.

"I can give you a lift," he urged. "This is no night—"

She appeared to change her mind. She came toward him, and he swung the door wide. "Yes, take me on," she bade him. "Straight on." And she climbed into the car and sat down beside him in the wide seat here.

She was, of course, drenched. "Put on my coat," he urged, and started to strip it off.

"No, no," she repeated. "It's not far." And she urged: "Go on. Quickly, please!"

He set the car in motion; and he looked at her sideways in an incredulous and delighted wonder. Her hair, heavy with water, lay across her shoulders in dark ribbons; her single garment was so much a part of her that she seemed like wet marble. He thought of sculptured nymphs under a fountain's arching screen. In one swift glance he saw her entire, and unforgetably.

She did not return his glance; but neither did she seek to cover herself from his eyes. Her own were fixed straight ahead; yet by something in her very posture, in the rigidity which she maintained, he knew she was conscious of his scrutiny, fighting to ignore it, choked and stifled by her own sudden realization of how she must appear to him.

Clint, in a swift sympathy and tenderness, switched off the dash-light, so that she sat in a cloaking darkness. He kept his eyes there after upon the road and did not look at her again. So presently he felt her relax a little, beside him; and he was conscious that she studied him for a long moment, with a deep attention.

Suddenly she said: "Thank you!" "No trouble," Clint assured her. "I'll take you anywhere—"

"I didn't mean that," she said honestly. "But—it's not far."

He felt, rather than saw, that she was breathing with long careful inhalations, as though she had to be on guard lest she shudder or sob. He asked slowly:

"Something—frighten you? Can't I help?"

"No, no, no," she told him, her voice trembling. "I'm not afraid. I'm not." She whispered with a sudden passion: "I'm not! I won't be afraid!"

Yet he saw that she was desperate with terror.

"Listen," he urged. "I don't want to butt in. But—don't you need someone to stand by?"

"I'm all right," she insisted.

He nodded; but he said gently: "I'm Clint Jervies. I'm—respectable. If you ever want help, I'd like to—"

She said: "Let me out, please."

Clint protested: "I don't mean to bother you. You needn't run away from me."

"This is where I want to go," she insisted. "Quick. Stop."

Clint obeyed her. The car had scarce ceased moving before she slipped to the ground. She closed the door behind her. She called: "Thank you." Then she was gone, vanishing into the wood beside the road.

He hesitated, all reluctance. The rain still pelted; lightning flickered remotely, or crashed close at hand. He saw something like a path where she had disappeared.

But she was gone, and Clint ruefully drove on. He passed a cross-road; and presently the way he followed joined the main thoroughfare into Boston.

Before he came home he had decided what to do. Inspector Tope had proved long ago his capacity for finding an answer to the most obscure conundrums; the old man might be able to read the answer to this riddle of a lovely girl, scantily clad, running so desperately along a lonely country road in the night and in the rain.

It was too late to seek out the Inspector and Miss Moss tonight; but tomorrow, Clint decided, he would go to them with this fantastic tale.

Name Robert of Teutonic Origin; Means 'Of Shining Fame'; Is Favored by Many

Robert, for centuries a favorite name, is of Teutonic origin and means "of shining fame." Originating in Germany, it is used in eight languages and has about 20 forms. Its noted bearers are numerous, writes Florence A. Cowles in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Robert Bruce (1274-1329), Scotland's national hero, shall head the list. Third of his noble house to bear the name, he is called Liberator of Scotland, of which country he was king for the last 23 years of his life. Other kings of Scotland have also borne this name.

Robert Burns (d. 1796), Scotch poet, and Robert Browning (d. 1889), English poet, are two who deserve special mention.

Other great Roberts of the past are, briefly: Dudley, earl of Leicester (d. 1586), whom many believe to have been secretly the husband of Queen Elizabeth; Blake (d. 1657), English admiral; Herrick (d. 1633), English poet who wrote "I had not loved thee, dear, so much, loved I not honor more"; Boyle (d. 1691), English physician, discoverer of Boyle's law, relating to pressure of gases; Harley, earl of Oxford and Mortimer (d. 1724), British statesman.

Lord Clive (d. 1774), founder of the British Empire in India; Adam (d. 1792), architect, designer of furniture; Emmet (d. 1803), Irish patriot; Morris (d. 1806), signer of the Declaration of Independence, founder of the Bank of Philadelphia, oldest financial institution in the United States; Paine (d. 1814), lawyer, signer of the Declaration of Independence; Fulton (d. 1815), first to apply steam to navigation with practical success.

Blair (d. 1826), Scottish astronomer, remembered also for suggesting the use of lime juice in the British navy as a preventive of scurvy; Hoe (d. 1833), inventor of the Hoe press; Hoe, grandson of the foregoing (d. 1909), inventor of the rotary and multicolor presses; Southey (d. 1843), poet laureate of England whose works fill more than 100 volumes; Lee (d. 1870), commander-in-chief of the Confederate army.

Stevenson (d. 1894), author of "Treasure Island," etc.; Ingersoll (d. 1899), orator and agnostic; Koch (d. 1910), German bacteriologist who discovered the tuberculosis bacillus; Peary (d. 1920), discoverer of the North Pole; LaFollette (d. 1925), governor of Wisconsin and presidential candidate; Hilliard (d. 1927), actor and playwright.

FARM TOPICS

REDUCE TIME AND LABOR ON SILAGE

Will Enable Farmer to Put Up Higher Quality.

Modern equipment and improved methods greatly reduce the burden of ensiling grass and legumes, save time and enable the farmer to put up a higher quality silage.

Any green crop that is harvested for grass silage should go into the silo just as soon after cutting as possible. In good, dry weather, not over two hours should elapse between mowing and ensiling. During cloudy or rainy weather somewhat longer time may be permissible. If the crop becomes partly dry in the field, water should be added at the silo in order to replace the lost moisture and insure a high quality silage.

In mowing the crop it is a good plan not to keep more than one-half day ahead of the needed supply. A windrower which may be attached to either horse-drawn or a tractor mower will eliminate one field operation. The windrower works especially well on level fields, or fields that are not too rolling.

The use of modern cylinder rake bar loaders saves a great deal of labor. When selecting a loader it is well to purchase one specifically designed for green hay. They will handle dry hay as well as green hay.

Many experienced operators use square-shaped racks or dump truck bodies, and allow the hay to fall as it will from the loader, without having anyone on the load. When the green hay is hauled to the silo considerable time can be saved by dumping the load on the ground. Providing the silo filler is set in a trench or set with its wheels in the ground up to the axles, the labor of feeding the machine is greatly reduced. Standing on the ground and with the cutter lowered, two men can pitch a ton of green hay into a silo filler in 10 minutes or less.

Almost any cutter that is in good condition may be used in ensiling green crops. Modern machines with feed rolls designed for handling hay crops are easier to load than standard ensilage cutters. The silo filler should be set for a cut of one-fourth to one-half an inch. Longer cuttings do not pack satisfactorily and may result in some spoilage.

Suggestions on How to Keep Weevils from Beans

If you store beans in a warm place they are likely to be infested with weevils. It is better to store them at a temperature not over 50 degrees. They can be treated with air-alkalied lime, using one pound of lime to four pounds of seed. In storing beans for food consumption it is recommended that they be placed in cold water, brought to a temperature of 14 degrees and dried. This kills the weevils, does not interfere with either the food value or germination of the beans. A weevil is a tiny insect that lays its eggs on the green pods in early fall, the eggs hatching up very small white grubs which develop and reproduce in the beans. There may be six or seven generations in a year.—Prairie Farmer.

Egg Grading Important

Egg grading is not only practical and profitable, but it soon will be an absolute necessity if the egg industry is to go ahead. The purchasing public is beginning to demand a quality graded egg and the producer must, sooner or later, familiarize himself with standard egg grades and qualify as a producer of such a product, says the North Carolina state college. Not one do eggs of known grade command the high price on all markets, but the grading gives the producer an opportunity to cull his flock to better advantage and save only those hens that are producing the best eggs.

Agricultural Notes

Uncle Ab says success in farming requires three things: Good soil, good weather, and a good farmer.

Approximately one out of every twelve pounds of meat produced in the United States is made into sausage.

The beef cattle industry seems to be run in cycles. The last peak was in 1934, and the low was about the first of 1938. Since that time there has been a slow expansion which is expected to continue for several years.

Farm account books can be started most conveniently when the inventory of feeds and supplies is at a low point.

Forty-seven states are now in the modified accredited area after state-wide tests for the detection of cattle infected with bovine tuberculosis.

Sheep that are fed a lot of good quality legume hay they will clean up will need less grain than sheep that receive poorer-quality roughages.

After This, Old Adage Appears Questionable

The little boy had come home from school with considerable food for thought. As soon as he could he appealed to his father.

"Daddy," he began, "is it true that a man is known by the company he keeps?"

"Yes, my boy," was the prompt reply.

But the little chap was not content. He stated his difficulty.

"But, father, if a good man keeps company with a bad man, is the good man bad because he keeps company with a bad man, or the bad man good because he keeps company with a good man?"

Bowlin Bible Class

The Bowlin Bible Class met March 15 with Mrs. C. L. Johnson. A very pleasant evening was spent with games and refreshments. Those present were Misses Wilhelmina Cleek, Minnie Bergner, O. S. and Edna Curd and Wynona Kyte. Mesdames Reeves, Biggs, Watkins, Johnson and Bowlin and C. L. Johnson and Rev. Biggs.

We will meet again April 19 with Misses Ota and Edna Curd.

Card of Thanks

We want to thank our many friends and neighbors for the kindness and sympathy they showed us in the sad hour of parting our husband father and brother away, and for the many nice floral offerings. It has all helped to make the burden lighter. May God's richest blessings rest upon each and every one of you.
