Fireworks Must Not Be Sold In Business District

No fireworks will be sold this year within the "fire limits" of the City of Tahoka, the Council has announced. Such sale is in violation of the law and present a serious fire hazard.

Last year, and several times in the past, citizens have set up fireworks stands in the fire zone, but such will not be allowed this year.

Tom Bartley, City Secretary says the fire zone roughly covers a block or two in most directions the business district plus about from the business district. Exact bounds are described in an ordinance on file at the City Hall.

Work was being completed this week on the 26 by 37 foot addition to the Tahoka High School Vocational Agriculture building by Everton Nevill, contractor.

The addition, of brick, steel and concrete construction, joins the old building on the west, and is being equipped as a classroom. It has acoustical tile ceiling, velour tile walls, and tile over concrete floors. A restroom and a storage room are also provided. The old brick building is being thoroughly reconditioned, repainted, and the roof repaired. Forced-air heating has been installed also.

The new addition was made necessary by growth of the Vocational Agriculture department, which is headed by V. P. Carter, and the addition of a second teacher, Lester Adams, this year.

Outside work is nearing completion on the new homemaker cottage, but inside work will be slow and completion is not expected until some time in January. The building will be one of the most modern on the Plains. Mrs. Madeline Hegi is the teacher in this department.

Arnold Maeker of Lubbock is the architect on both buildings.

Christmas Card Mailing Hints

The following suggestions pertaining to the mailing of Christmas cards will greatly facilitate their prompt delivery, States Charles Towns, assistant postmaster. Clip these suggestions for further reference.

When over 10 cards are being mailed they should be separated in two bundles, one for out of town delivery and the other for local delivery (both city and rural routes). The stamps should be placed in the upper right hand corner and all cards faced and bundled in such a manner that the stamps of all will be in the upper right hand corner of the bundle. This enables the cards to be cancelled by the cancelling machine without further handling by the dispatching clerk. The cards should be handed to one of the window clerks instead of thrown through the letter drop one at a time. All cards and parcels for out of town delivery should be mailed immediately to assure their delivery before Christmas.

The rate of postage on unsealed Christmas cards is 2 cents each, whether for local or out of town delivery, but must contain no message other than the name of the sender. Cards bearing personal notes, letters, or other written messages are first class mail and 3 cent postage is required on each. If there is doubt in the sender's mind as to the correct present address of any person to whom a card is being sent, a 3 cent stamp should be placed on the card. Cards bearing 3 cent stamps will be forwarded when the addressee has moved, whereas, the unsealed 2 cent cards are not forwardable.

I. M. Draper spent last week at his old home town, Florence.

Meeting At Draw

The Board of Supervisors, with the SCS and County Agent, are making arrangements for a meeting to be held in the Draw community at the Methodist Church at 7:30 p. m. Dec. 15.

Purpose of the meeting will be to elect a new member of the Board of Supervisors of Lynn Soil Conservation District from Subdivision No. 3, which includes roughly the southeast quarter of Lynn county.

acres will give him a very fine pasture for livestock.

Hugo Wuensche, also of Wilson, has begun work on about five acres which he will level border and plant to pasture.

In the New Home community B. A. Morrow is putting down 2,000 feet of concrete pipe, and then will lay off about 10 acres in level borders to be watered from this pipe. This system of level borders with pipe delivering water to them will give Mr. Morrow complete control of his irrigation water and will conserve every drop of rainfall. Mr. Morrow already has quite a few acres under such a system and is gradually expanding the system each year.

C. L. Williams northeast of Wilson, has installed 1,300 feet of concrete pipe recently. Also, W. C. Wharton has made location for some additional pipe to be laid on his farm four miles north of Tahoka. Mr. Wharton already has a system of level borders and pipe and reports that his best cotton this year was grown in the level borders.

Soil Conservation Service technicians have used the new water measuring device recently to measure the flow of the new school well and Roy Appling's new well. Mr. Appling, of the Grassland community, found after actually measuring the flow while test pumping that he had enough water for an eight-inch pump. SCS technicians will help him lay out his system in the near future.

The end of the year is rapidly approaching and especially is there not much time left to install a conservation practice under the 1953 payment program. Those who want to bench level install concrete pipe, or terrace and have not contacted the local Soil Conservation Service technicians to make a date to lay out the practice should do so at once.

IS APOSTASY POSSIBLE?

By Doyle Kelcy

Charles Spurgeon once said, "Nor can I comprehend a gospel which lets saints fall away after they are called, and suffers the children of God to be burned in the fires of damnation, after having believed. Such a gospel I abhor. The gospel of the Bible is not such a gospel as that." Mr. Spurgeon also said, "Search all questions, try all by the word of God. I am not afraid to have what I preach tried by this book."

It is a common belief that the moment a person becomes a Christian his eternal salvation is guaranteed. It is our purpose to try this question by the word of God. Is the Christian eternally secured? Can he so sin as to be finally lost? What does the Bible teach?

I ask you to carefully study passage from the book of Hebrews. "For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, And have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come, I they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame" (Heb. 6: 4-6). Let us have a good look at these people. They were (1) Once enlightened. (2) Tasted of the heavenly gift. (3) Made partakers of the Holy Ghost. (4) Tasted the good word of God. (5) Tasted the powers of the world to come. Who will deny that they were children of God? Where could you find a better description of children of God? Now what happened to them? (1) They fell away. (2) They crucified to themselves the Son of God afresh. (3) They put Christ to an open shame. Are they still saved? Surely a person guilty of such crimes is not in a saved condition. Can they ever be again saved? Answer: "It is impossible to renew them again unto repentance." (1) Child ren of God may so far fall away that it is impossible for them to repent. (2) Those who do not repent will be finally lost. (3) Therefore, it is possible for children of God to be lost.

Eternal life is to know God. "And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent" (Jon. 17:3). Some of God's people have forgotten him. "Can a maid forget her ornaments, or a bride her attire? Yet my people have forgotten me days without number." (Jer. 2:32). What is the destiny of those who forget God? "The wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God." (Ps. 9:17). If eternal life is to know God, and if God's children can forget him, the child of God does not have eternal life in such a sense that he cannot be lost. Some of God's children have forgotten him. Those who forget God will be turned into hell. Friends, you cannot live in sin on the earth and then spend eternity with God and the blessed in heaven. The Lord demands that we be faithful to him to the end. Life's pathway is crooked, rugged, and dangerous. We can safely travel it only by following in the footsteps of him who gave his life for us. The turbulent stream of death must be crossed by all of us. Only by clinging to the hand of him who conquered death can we safely cross this stream and find rest under the shade of the tree of life. "Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall" (Cor. 10:12).

This ailing world would be in much better shape if there were as many people willing to fill prescriptions for its cure as to write them.

Two Young Men Licensed To Preach

Two young men, who had been reared principally in Lynn county and had already been duly licensed to preach, Charles Uzile and Darvey Lavender, were ordained into the full Baptist Ministry at impressive ceremonies conducted at 3 o'clock last Sunday afternoon in the First Baptist Church here.

A third youth, Larry Ramsour, who had been scheduled and publicized for ordination at the same time and place, voluntarily postponed the ceremony as it would have applied to him for the reason that he desired to be ordained at some later date when his own grandfather, who has spent most of a long life in the Ministry and is now the pastor of a church in Alabama, could be present to participate in his ordination.

The other two young men though not residents of Lynn county, regarded the First Baptist Church of Tahoka more than any other, as really their mother church, both having been members of it for several years. Charles Uzile had moved - his membership but was re-admitted as a member before his ordination. For several months, however he has been preaching to the little church at Berry Flat in Borden county and was recently called as its pastor.

Young Darvey Lavender has been called as pastor of the Y. L. Baptist Church a few miles east of Muleshoe. Uzile has been attending Wayland College and Lavender the Texas Technological College.

Rev. Lee Ramsour served as Moderator at the Ordination services and Rev. Bill Austin of Brownfield as clerk.

Following the singing of appropriate hymns, W. A. Reddell presented the candidates to the ordaining council.

Rev. Jones Weathers, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Brownfield, questioned the candidates as to their personal experiences and beliefs and reported their answers to be satisfactory. Rev. John Martin, Wilson Church pastor, offered the ordination prayer, the charge to the Church was given by Rev. R. L. Clements pastor at New Home, and the message to the two young Ministers was given by the brother of one of the candidates, Rev. Dale Lavender of Levelland.

The ordaining council was made up of twenty-two Ministers and deacons, and the services were impressive throughout.

Ford Ranch Wagon—America's lowest-priced V-8 station wagon

The 2-door Ranch Wagon is also available with Ford's Six. It's six passengers big, yet converts to a cargo hauler in seconds... with 6½ feet to the end of the tailgate. Ford also offers the 4-door all-metal Country Sedan and the wood-trimmed Country Squire. Both are V-8 powered.

Ford Sunliner—America's lowest-priced convertible V-8

Ford Master-Guide, Fordomatic and Overdrive optional at extra cost.

A & M Experts Offer Helpful Suggestions

College Station, Nov.—Texas farms and ranches produce commodities for consumption, but to declining prices farmers have been caught in a cost-price squeeze.

The purchasing power of farm prices for all products a year ago was 103 percent of parity. Today, the national average is 92 percent. With agricultural prices trending downward, C. H. Bates, farm management specialist, says it is more important today than before to avoid costly, haphazard methods of production.

It is expected that production outlays including cost of machinery, fuel, feed, fertilizer and labor will gradually decline with farm prices, Bates says. But, while this adjustment is coming about, he adds, the state's agriculturists are suffering a hardship and less efficient operators feel the pinch more than others.

What steps can farmers take to broaden the gap between outlay and production?

First, says Bates, study market reports and livestock information to benefit from wise selling and more profitable marketing.

Use moderate judgement and look for places to cut expenses. Don't overlook the use of machinery to save labor costs, but buy the design of machine suited to specific needs. Wages now are four times as high as in 1941. In comparison, he points out, farm machinery has only doubled in price.

Use credit to the best advantage, but use it wisely.

Don't operate your farm with too much labor and machinery. All too often lower unit cost can be gained by handling more land or keeping the maximum number of livestock that can be handled.

Take advantage of price supports where they are available. Keep a complete set of records. Farming is a business and deserves the best managerial practices, Bates says.

"And, don't be afraid to make changes," Bates concludes. "Don't be the last to accept new and improved agricultural practices."

"Swap the Bill of Rights for what?"

THE COMMUNISTS openly HATE our American Bill of Rights. They would like to replace it with ideas of their own.

What would we get in place of freedom of religion?
.... No religion.

In place of freedom of speech, and of the press?
.... Gags, and government-controlled newspapers.

In place of freedom from cruel and unusual punishment?
.... "Water cures" and "truth serums."

In place of the right to a fair trial?
.... The mockery of justice.

Before we ever give away even the smallest bit of our freedom, let's take a long, long look at what we're likely to get in exchange. That's the real test.

MEMBER OF F. D. I. C.

Christians worshipping there that I have ever known anywhere. And they were intelligent too. I soon became acquainted with practically every member of the group. Nearly every Sunday afternoon, Mr. Boyd would take a number of us out to historic or otherwise interesting places in the city and sometimes far outside of it—fact which will serve to explain some references further along in this column.

There were two young women, one of them the aunt of the other, and one young man, who were the leading lights in that little Mission church.

The aunt was superintendent of their Sunday school and the teacher of the Adult class; the Niece was the teacher of the children's class and had much natural musical talent; the young man was the leader of the song services. The Aunt was also a part-time teacher of Spanish in a public high school, and she also assisted Mr. Boyd with his Spanish. He returned with his Spanish. He returned with his Spanish. He returned with his Spanish.

The names of these two senioritas are Elvira and Aurora Gutierrez. They and the entire group of worshippers had become very much attached to Mr. Boyd during previous visits and their admiration and affection for him became more profound, it seemed to me, with each passing week. One of the reasons for this, looking at it from the human standpoint, was the fact that he lived among them on the same level, and never at anytime assumed a superior air.

Frequently he ate at their tables, took them out sometimes on Sunday to some excellent cafe, such as the one at the near-by Airport, for their noon-day meal, or took them out driving in the afternoon. His conduct at all times was above reproach and the people had confidence in him. I think that it was almost solely through his influence that they received me so royally and treated me so gently during my entire stay there.

About the middle of April we came home. I have not been back, but he soon made another trip down there and spent most of the summer. Then he came home, very unwell. For a time he preached in the early fall to Mexican camps on the Plains, the Mexicans having come out to gather cotton. Then he went to San Antonio to do mission work among the Mexicans in that city, but in a few days he had to go to a hospital for treatment. A few days later he died.

I wired the news to his closest friends in Mexico City. I do not think that they had ever realized that his health was in a serious condition. The news of his death struck them like a thunder-clap out of a clear sky. All of them were keenly shocked. Senorita Elvira, with whom he had studied and worked so constantly and so devotedly, was inconsolable. Earnestly I tried to console her, and the entire Cutierrez family seemed to appreciate it keenly and to rely upon me somewhat for consolation and sympathy. Recently, I sent to Aurora a number of great passages of Scripture, in English, for her to teach to her Sunday School class, and you will note that she mentioned that in the contribution she has made to this Column this week. And so now we come to her contribution.

Following the date line, November 21, 1953, and her usual cordial Christian greeting, Senorita Aurora starts out first to make mention of some little personal matters and then comes up to the main purpose of her letter in a rather round-about way. Now I quote:

"I see that you are learning Spanish very quickly." (Explanation: I used a few Spanish words in my last letter to her, and she imagines that I know a lot of Spanish. She is mistaken. My knowledge of Spanish is pitifully meager. I have a little Spanish English dictionary here and some other Spanish books, but I find very little time to study them, and I learn very slowly. But Thanks, Aurora.)

"The words in Spanish in your letter," she continues, "were very well chosen."

"I thank you for the passages of Scripture and for your information about the passage of John 3:16. It is very pretty and I will learn this passage in English."

"All the passages that you sent me are very well chosen, with much pleasure I will learn them, and to the children I will teach the long passages, in Spanish, but I will also teach the shorter passages to them, in English."

"I recently got a small book about customs in Veracruz, and I want to send portions of it to you to include in your column. In all the letters that I send you I will send portions of the book, entitled, 'Veracruz... the land of the gentle art of living.'"

And now, quoting, she dips a bit into Indian legendary history, which virtually ends with the founding of VERA CRUZ.

"The first human beings to occupy what is now the Republic of Mexico," she says as a starter, "are thought by students of such matters to have come from the Far East, probably mostly from northern Asia. Through the Mississippi Valley migrated the tribes that later were to emerge as Huastecas, Totonacs, and Mayas colonizers of the rich coastal plains from Texas to Guatemala."

"In the south, an amazing civilization flowered as early as the fifth century, suddenly disappeared, leaving many tons of masterfully carved stone evidence, and mysteriously sprang into life again in Yucatan."

"When Columbus' plan to seek India by sailing west had been rejected by Ferdinand and Isabella and he was laying plans to solicit the aid of the French king, the Aztecs, a tribe of upstart warriors, had founded Tenochtitlan and little by little had come to dominate the central plateau."

"In 1492, when the Spanish monarchs had finally consented to back the aging explorer's 'hair-brained scheme', Ahuetzotl, ruler of the Aztecs, little suspected the existence on the same planet of other continents inhabited by a strange race (or races) of people."

Here, fearing presumably that her article was becoming too long, Senorita Aurora abruptly sawed off with the assurance, "I will follow up in the next letter."

While most high school and college students in this country, at one stage or another of their school life, have read some of these facts of history, yet probably they have rarely ever seen so much history wrapped up in so few words, and never, perhaps, have they seen it presented from the Mexican or Latin-American standpoint.

This was well done, Aurora, and it certainly does bring pleasant memories back to me.

When you mentioned the founding of Tenochtitlan, many of our readers doubtless do not know that at the time of the discovery of America by Columbus in 1492 it was the capital city of the Aztecs with an estimated population of 100,000 people and was situated on the present site of the city of Mexico. But Aurora may wish to tell you about that in a later contribution.

Columbus, as you know, made four voyages to the waters that border our continent, but he thought that the lands which he had discovered were the shores of India, and therefore the inhabitants were called Indians.

Following his first voyage in which he discovered a little island which he named San Salvador (Holy Savior) the people of Spain became wild with enthusiasm, for Columbus had made his voyage under the authority and direction of Ferdinand and Isabella, the reigning monarchs.

Following this discovery, many Spanish voyagers and some French and Italian voyagers, swarmed the West India islands, so named because they were supposed to lie along the coast of India. And thus in a few years, Spain and the Catholic Church had full control of all the islands that bordered the Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean Sea and Central America. Spain sent out governors to rule such islands as Porto Rico, Haiti-Samdomingo, Cuba, and countless smaller ones in that area. Pretty soon a boy named Cortez came from Spain out to Cuba, blooming into manhood, he spent the first few years in Cuba as a day laborer or as a minor boss of Indian slaves. But he had secret ambitions and burning desires to explore and conquer the lands of the west. And so he proceeded to do some watchful waiting and work his way upward in the land of his adoption, Cuba, but he kept his face turned ever toward the setting sun. Finally, he induced the Spanish governor of Cuba to assist him in fitting out a fleet to consist of ten ships, Cortez to furnish seven of them and Governor-General Velasquez only three.

In the course of time Cortez has finished his task of collecting a little army, all-told, of a little more than 600 men, and twenty-odd horses, guns, ammunition, and foods, and was ready to go. By that time Governor Velasquez had become jealous and suspicious of Cortez and canceled the permit for him to go, but Cortez slipped out any way and set out across the Gulf for Yucatan. He sailed along the shoreline until he reached the island of San Juan de Ulua off the East coast of Mexico, and there cast anchor for the night, but rising up out of the Gulf a mile or so west of him was the eastern range of the great Sierra Madre Mountains, and the next day he moved over to the shore and unloaded his men, horses, and cargo, April 22, 1519. They made of it a great religious occasion. Cortez not only founded Vera Cruz there, but it was from Vera Cruz that a little later he set out on his expedition across the mountains to conquer Tenochtitlan and all Mexico. But that is a different story that I will not go into.

I did not have the opportunity to visit Vera Cruz while I was in Mexico early last year but I did go as far east as the Great Plateau and first crossed Cortez' line of march on the Plateau at the little city of Cholula, another place of great historic interest, but I will let Aurora tell you about that town too, if she wishes.

Thank you, Aurora, for your interesting contribution to the Column this week. To me, it recalls many pleasant memories.—Noche buenas.

"The coffee's terrible but it's the only restaurant in town"

Muddy coffee. Soggy toast. Indigestible food. Bad luck for the hungry salesman who stops in that town for a bite to eat. The missing ingredient is "competition."

Funny how that word has a way of stirring up activity.

People who manufacture things, for example, prickle all over when they think about competition. They sit up evenings fretting about it, and spend millions to improve their products. The result, of course, is high quality at lowest possible cost. And the winner of a contest like that has to be the public.

People are tempted sometimes to wonder what life would be like without competition. For a clue, they might note the shabby fall in living standards in countries where clumsy fingers of state monopoly have strangled competition.

Over 3,000 manufacturing firms in America share in the electrical business. We can name offhand 20 sizable firms that compete at giving the public better refrigerators. There are more than 200 rivals in the making of electric motors. At least 37 in electric irons; 53 in home freezers; 25 turn out vacuum cleaners. And so on down the list.

Some companies competing with General Electric today actually sprang up from the seeds of General Electric research. New products have invited new companies. In certain cases, whole new industries. And more will come.

The competitive race just never ends. That sounds tiring for the contestants, but in fact it is healthy exercise. Healthy for the country, too. At General Electric we wouldn't have it any other way.

Corn Bread Top Dish In Texas

College Station—Corn bread, a favorite dish with many in Texas, has taken on a new importance in family meals.

According to Jessie Whitacre, head, department of rural home research for the Texas Experiment Station, corn bread can now furnish a great deal more in the way of food value than just calories, if the corn meal is enriched. Corn is among the cereals low in certain nutrients such as niacin, and if enriched when milled can assist in overcoming vitamin deficiencies and promoting general good health.

As a result of a study on corn meal and grits as prepared for eating, the research shows that enrichment of corn meal and grits by the addition of thiamine, riboflavin, niacin and iron to both cereals, and of calcium to corn meal, makes them excellent foods. However, the greatest possible benefit from enrichment can be realized only if corn meal and grits are cooked to retain in palatable and attractive form as much as possible of both natural and added nutrients.

A Standardized Texas Corn Bread was developed, based on a collection of recipes from home-makers in the state, and two recipes were used in the study conducted by the Experiment Station, one calling for sweet milk and the other for sour milk.

One serving of the enriched corn bread was found to furnish approximately one-fifth of a man's and one-fourth of a woman's allowance of thiamine and riboflavin, and approximately a sixth of a man's and one-fifth of a woman's allowance of niacin. Enriched corn bread contributes about two times as much thiamine, about one and a half times as much riboflavin and three times as much niacin as the non-enriched.

Dr. Whitacre says, "Corn meal and grits are used extensively in the South. These cereals may have an important part in the betterment of Southern diets if their quality is improved by enrichment."
