Astronaut Voices Regrets On End Of Apollo Era

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Astronaut Thomas P. Stafford, commanding the last U.S. man in space mission for at least four years, said today he regrets the end of this era of space exploration but predicted a new age with the space shuttle.

The commander, on his fourth space trip, also expressed hope that the linkup last week between his Apollo and a Russian Soyuz ship will lead to more joint missions with the Soviets in the future.

Stafford spoke at a news conference that he, Vance D. Brand and Donald K. Slayton held in the orbiting Apollo on the day before they are to return to earth from history's first international space mission.

During the 32-minute televised news conference, they expressed delight at the success of their flight, said the mission was worth the money spent on it and forecast that American women will soon fly in space.

The astronauts even answered in Russian when a correspondent for the Soviet news agency TASS asked about the cooperation between cosmonauts and astronauts.

"We worked with the cosmonauts. We did experiments together. Now we are good friends," Brand replied. "I think our cooperation was very good."

The astronauts said the Apollo had performed so perfectly "it was as simple as riding a bicycle." Slayton jokingly said it was so error free his 91-year-old aunt in Wisconsin could have flown the mission.

For the first time, newsmen, assembled in an auditorium here, asked questions directly by radio to an orbiting spaceship. Astronauts have held news conferences on earlier space missions but each time a list of questions was submitted to Mission Control, which transmitted them.

Asked if he regretted the passing of an era, Stafford said, "I've been with the program a great number of years, so there certainly is a lot of nostalgia in seeing this phase come to an end.

"But we will be opening a new era with the shuttle," he said. "I just regret it will be a few years before there will be any more manned space shots. With the shuttle, space is going to be more of a medium to work in where it will be a benefit for all people on earth. Great things will be accomplished and it will be much less expensive."

The three spacemen were grouped before a television camera in their spaceship. The first picture as they started the

Confirmers have been completed in Ward and Pecos county fields.

BTA Oil Producers, Midland, finaled No. 1 7276 JV-S Wedge Gas Unit, as a second Devonian gas well and 1½-mile northwest extension to that pay in the Beall field of Ward County, four miles southeast of Pyote.

It gauged a calculated, absolute open flow of 39.10 million cubic feet of gas per day, through perforations at 12,313-12,555 feet, which had been acidized with 20,000 gallons.

It was slated to be drilled as a wildcat, and total depth is 12,714 feet, with a 5-inch liner hung from 10,894-12,713 feet. The plugged-back depth is 12,590 feet. Gas-distillate ratio is 660,000-1.

Location is 660 feet from southeast and 1,050 feet from southwest lines of section 22, block 16, ULS.

The discovery, Exxon Corp. No. 1 Herd Gas Unit, finaled in May, 1974, for 79.031 million cubic feet of gas daily, with gas-condensate ratio of 275,500-1, through perforations at 11,939-12,230 feet.

Pecos Confirmer

The Yucca Butte, West field of Pecos gained its second Ellenburger gas well and a ½-mile northwest extension to that pay with completion of Texas Oil & Gas Corp. No. 1-60 Canon.

Calculated, absolute open flow potential was for 1.7 million cubic feet of dry gas daily, through perforations at 10,366-10,702 feet.

The producing section had been acidized with 5,250 gallons.

It also was slated as a wildcat, and drilled to 10,954 feet, where 4½-inch casing was set, and then plugged back to 10,943 feet.

Location is 467 feet from south and 1,037 feet from west lines of section 60, block A-2, TCRR survey, eight miles west of Sheffield.

The Ellenburger gas opener, Texas Oil & Gas Corp. No. 1-C Blackstone-Slaughter, was completed May 23, for a calculated, open flow of 29 million cubic feet of gas per day, through perforations at 10,624-10,714 feet. It was dually completed as a Strawn oil confirmer. It has been reentered for triple completion try in another wildcat zone.

HMH To Potential Sterling Wildcat

HMH Operators, Midland, was preparing to take potential test at No. 1 Sara Bade Estate, Sterling County wildcat deepening operation, 11 miles west of Sterling City.

It flowed 24 hours through Cisco-Canyon perforations at 7,250-7,704 feet, which had been acidized with 6,000 gallons and fractured with 36,500 gallons and 32,750 pounds, making 173 barrels of 51.8-gravity oil and 8½ barrels of water, with a small amount of gas.

It was drilled to 8,000 feet, and 4½-inch pipe is set at 7,855 feet.

Beer cans, broken watermelon and other litter dot the Dellwood Plaza parking lot.

PLAZA MERCHANTS POISED FOR ACTION

Congregating Aggravating

By GEORGE MASSEY

Litter, noise and traffic problems abound at the Dellwood Plaza parking lot each night, and city officials are getting a "constant" string of complaints from area home owners and merchants in the shopping center.

So far nothing has kept some Midland young people from congregating at the parking lot each night, but action is about to be taken.

Shop owners in the plaza have gotten together a petition asking for "no trespassing" signs to be posted at each entrance of the parking facility, which would make it illegal for anyone to be on the lot between 11 p.m. and 5 a.m.

The no trespassing petition needs all of the shop operators' signatures before the ban can be put into effect, and one plaza retailer has indicated that only one more signature is required for 100 per cent approval.

The plaza merchant said three sweepers are now in use to clean the lot every morning, along with several store employes. He said the lot is "strewn with trash—anything from beer bottles, paper sacks and broken glass every time I come to work."

Shop owners have indicated the signs will be placed at each entrance before summer is over. At present, the no trespassing plan calls for an off-duty policeman to be present at the lot during the no trespassing hours each night for a week to offer notice to persons attempting to congregate at the lot that legal action is in the offing to keep the lot clear.

Joe Nuessle, city attorney, has suggested that a permanent security guard be stationed at the lot every night after the signs are posted. The guard should have the power of arrest to be effective, Nuessle said.

"An off-duty policeman would work out just perfect, but I think a civilian security guard could detain anyone in the form of a citizen's arrest if necessary," he said.

Nuessle said the city can not take actions to clear the lot at present or stop persons from parking there at night because the parking facility is privately owned. The city has no jurisdiction on private property, Nuessle said, except in a case where the persons are "openly disturbing the peace, and then we can take action to stop it."

A check with the Midland Police Department revealed "some traffic violations" are being handled in the Dellwood Plaza area now, but no police action other than a steady patrol is taken unless the "youth parking there get out of hand."

"For years the kids here have sort of used the parking lot as a sanctuary where they could congregate and thumb their noses at the police," Nuessle said. With the no trespassing signs and security guards that may come to an abrupt halt, city officials and plaza merchants have indicated.

Tuesday night a count of vehicles parked at the plaza just minutes before 11 p.m. showed more than 45 cars, pickup trucks and motorcycles. At least 100 persons could be seen standing around in small groups.

Energy Policy Battle Heads For Showdown

WASHINGTON (AP) — The energy policy fight between President Ford and the Democrat-controlled Congress is entering a showdown stage, with some signs that both sides will seek a compromise to end the long stalemate.

With both Congress and the White House able to reject each other's energy programs but unable to win aproval for their own, the seven-month-old energy debate now faces an Aug. 31 expiration of oil price controls.

House Republican Leader John J. Rhodes of Arizona said Tuesday that such a sudden expiration would send gasoline prices "through the roof."

The energy impasse was expected to come up during a White House meeting today with Ford and the congressional leaders.

Rhodes, saying it is his expectation that a compromise will be worked out, predicted that Ford will offer another version of his plan to phase out existing oil price controls. "This time, Congress must not stand in the way," he declared.

House Speaker Carl Albert, describing the inability of Congress and the administration to reach a compromise, said Tuesday the chief snags involve how high to raise prices and how long it will take to do so.

The latest round in the stand-

New Lost Continent?

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Scientists claim they have found the first real proof that a continent sank millions of years ago in the middle of the Atlantic Ocean.

"At the time the continent emerged, the Atlantic must have been only about as big as the Red Sea," said Jose Honnorez of the University of Miami.

Honnorez said that scientists unraveled the mystery by studying fossils of crab excrement and limestone dredged up from 1,700 to 3,000 feet below the sea surface.

Honnorez is among a group of international oceanographers who have been studying the material brought up in a dredging expedition several years ago. The results of the long study were published in a recent scientific paper.

The scientists conclude that a continent of unknown size was sandwiched between the separating African and American land masses some 70 million years ago.

Millions of years later, the land mass began sinking into an east west ocean fault between central Africa and northern South America, the scientists said.

"It is not Atlantis," said Dr. Cesare Emiliani, chairman of the UM geology department. He said that the newly discovered land mass sank long before anyone could have inhabited the mythical continent of Atlantis.

The evidence of a sunken continent was found in a fracture zone of the Mid-Atlantic Ridge, a giant, undersea mountain range that encircles the globe and runs continuously through all major basins.

"We knew what we had found was not usual, but we couldn't pinpoint it," Honnorez said. He said that at the time of the 1971 expedition, scientists speculated about a sunken continent, but lacked hard, supportive research results.

Two recent developments have convinced the group of the discovery's significance.

Emiliani said he found that the crystallized limestone samples contained not just seawater but substantial amounts of rainwater. It was the first solid evidence that the land at one time rested above the water's surface, he said.

Honnorez said that researchers identified tiny bits of fossilized material as the body wastes of a certain type of Parafavreina crab that only existed for a relatively short period of time. Thus, scientists were able to estimate when the land was at or near the surface,

Israelis Stage Raid Into Lebanon

By The Associated Press

Israeli soldiers crossed into Lebanon early today hunting for terrorists and battling with Arab gunners. Seven Israeli troops and a Lebanese woman and child were reported wounded and at least six Arabs were brought back to Israel for questioning.

On the political front, Israeli Foreign Minister Yigal Allon told Parliament in Jerusalem that Egyptian refusal to extend the mandate of U.N. peacekeeping forces in Sinai "increases tension in the area."

Allon cautioned Egypt against expecting Israeli concessions "under threat and pressure." He said "if Egypt thinks that by threatening the existence of the U.N force it will cow us or extract from us concessions...then it is making a serious mistake."

Allon also said if Israel is expelled from the United Nations it would damage the world body's crucial role in Middle East peacemaking and that Israel would cease to cooperate with U.N. operations. Allon was replying to a motion on Arab lobbying among Third World nations for the ouster of Israel from the next General Assembly.

The Israeli command said that seven of its soldiers were wounded and seven Arabs were captured in a raid on one village. However, the Lebanese Defense Ministry said the Israelis hit two villages, touching off a two-hour artillery duel in which one Lebanese woman and a child were wounded. It also said only six Arabs were taken prisoner.

The Israeli command said its soldiers crossed into the village of Kalah in the northern Israeli panhandle and Arab gunners

Fire Aboard Excursion Boat Kills 12

TOULON, France (AP) — Fire swept a French Mediterranean excursion boat after an explosion in the engine room today and officials said 12 persons were killed and 50 injured.

A woman passenger said "there was total panic" aboard the Venus des Iles boat which plies between Toulon in southeastern France and Porquerolles Island. "No one did anything to help me so I jumped into the water," the woman said.

The explosion and fire wracked the ship as it neared the tip of the Giens peninsula about 20 miles from Toulon. Estimates of the number of persons aboard varied between 140 and 200.

The most seriously wounded were taken by helicopter to military and civilian hospitals in Toulon.

Naval ships and small private craft picked survivors out of the sea or removed them from the burning vessel. Two naval minesweepers poured water over the burning ship from fire hoses.

Mayor Predicting No Tax Increases

Predictions for increased water rates but no tax increase were offered today by Midland Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr. as he handed over the city budget amounting to more than $14.1 million to be filed for public observation at the city secretary's office at city hall.

Revenues for the proposed budget are $14,192,315, compared to last year's figure of $12,850,059, an increase of $1,342,256.

Expenditures listed in the 1075-76 budget are $14,088,525

Exact Change Plan Called Success In Cutting Holdups

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Bus drivers, taxi drivers and gas station attendants across the country are demanding "exact change, please," these days and officials say the move has caused a sharp drop in the number of robberies.

"It's made all the difference in the world," said John Askers, director of operations for the Louisville, Ky., area transit system.

Askers said the exact change system went into effect in 1968. "We had holdups and robberies prior to that. We haven't had any since except for some operators who were held up and their own money taken. Now, we have issued orders that they not carry any money at all, even in their wallet."

An Associated Press survey showed the exact change system started on public transit facilities and spread to taxicabs, gas stations and all-night grocery stores. Taxi drivers generally carry no more than $5 in change; gas stations and groceries limit the amount of money on hand in cash late at night so that sales people do not have to open a safe.

What happens if you don't have the right change? Practices vary from city to city. Some public transit systems give scrip in change, allowing passengers to get their extra money back at a central office. Some sell books of tickets. In many places, however, you're simply out of luck unless you can find another passenger who will give you change.

A spokesman for Vickers Service Stations, an Albuquerque, N.M., chain, said the company's attendants accept only credit cards or exact change "when the station goes to a one-man operation.

"We went to the policy to thwart armed robberies and it has worked to a great extent."

The Springfield, Mass., Street Railway Co. instituted an exact change system on May 12 in response to complaints by bus drivers about holdups.

Price Of Sugar Ends Slide

By JAN WILLIAMS

The sky's the limit for a lot of things in Midland, including the price of sugar.

In a check today of the city's major food stores, all but two had increased its price of sugar, apparently ending a decline in prices since the first of the year. Increases ranged from 19 cents to 30 cents per five-pound bag. Last December, sugar prices reached a peak of over $3.50 per five-pound bag.

One of the exceptions was Piggly Wiggly. The manager, who chose to remain unidentified, said five pound bags of sugar are selling for $1.15 at his store. A week ago it was $1.45.

"Prices have been decreasing since the first of the year," the manager said. "But we expect to increase the prices this week."

He also said the store had 10-pound bags of sugar, at $2.29, and although the warehouse was cutting down on the orders for 10-pound bags, the store still gets plenty every week.

The other exception was Safeway, which has had a decrease in the price of sugar for the past two months and expects that trend to continue.

James Peck, assistant manager at Safeway, said his store was currently selling sugar at the price of $1.19 for five pounds. Ten pounds sells for $2.33.

"It has been at this price for the past two weeks," Peck said. "Before that it was $1.29 and before that $1.44 for five pounds."

Peck said Safeway had 10-pound bags of sugar, which some other stores are having difficulty getting, because the store stocked up on it so as not to run out.

"I don't know what to expect next in terms of prices," Peck said. "The price looks stable

'Bugs' Wiggle Through Loopholes In Omnibus Crime Bill

By EDWARD NEILAN
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON—In the window of The Spy Shop, an electronic gadget store two blocks from the White House, a large and stylish martini glass is displayed.

The olive in the martini glass looks good enough to eat but if you bit into it you might crack a bicuspid.

In reality, the metallic green "olive" is a tiny radio transmitter; the toothpick through the olive is a sensitive antenna.

The proprietor of the shop says he doesn't sell many of the bugged martini sets. "It's just a novelty to get people into the shop."

Inside, there is a variety of electronic recording and alarm devices—plus a bevy of two-way radio sets of all sizes—that makes the shop resemble the equipment room on a James Bond movie set.

Aren't these devices illegal? Wasn't the 1968 Omnibus Crime Control Act supposed to limit sale and use of such devices to police armed with a court warrant?

In the aftermath of Watergate—with its proliferation of electronic and in-person eavesdropping, breaking and entering and assassination of the truth—many people figured that the era of wiretapping and bugging had ended.

Not so.

Manufacturers of wiretap and bugging equipment say that loopholes in the 1968 law are so gaping that private citizens, private eyes, company agents and police bent on illegal investigations can buy them.

In testimony opening a new round of hearings by the National Wiretap Commission on abuse of electronic surveillance June 25, industry spokesmen said stronger laws are needed to keep their sophisticated devices out of the hands of private detectives, husbands spying on wives, company espionage agents, police officers using them illegally and foreign governments buying them "through mail-order catalogs" and using them in their own countries.

In Hong Kong recently, a newspaper columnist chided the local police for extensive use of electronic snooping devices in tracking down smugglers and tax evaders.

"If the Hong Kong police install one more electronic bug, the weight of all the surveillance gear in use could sink the entire island into the South China Sea," the writer said. He added that much of the gear seemed to originate in the United States.

Without new licensing regulations for both manufacturers and users of the equipment, present ambiguities in laws would put them in a legal pinch, industry spokesmen said.

"For example, infinity transmitters were sold as an intercept device and so advertised prior to the enactment of the (1968) law," said John Holcomb, president of Audio Intelligence Devices, Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

"Now they are on the open market as an alarm system which permits the user, ostensibly, to telephone his office or home to determine if a burglary is taking place," Holcomb said. "This is pure farce."

At the same hearings, A. T. Bower, Bell Communications, and Joseph Jaffe, assistant U.S. attorney for the Southern District of New York, recommended new licensing measures for both manufacturers and users of surveillance equipment.

Meanwhile, Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi said June 24 that Department of Justice security wiretaps had actually increased rather than decreased since Watergate.

He said the department had authorized national security wiretaps without warrants on 148 persons last year.

He said FBI agents, acting with the attorney general's required approval, had installed listening devices to pick up the conversations of an additional 32 persons.

Levi said the practice was legal:

"Based on an examination of the relevant precedents, it is the position of the Department of Justice that the executive may conduct electronic surveillance in the interests of national security and foreign intelligence, and in aid of his conduct of the nation's foreign affairs, without obtaining a judicial warrant."

Gurney Trial Nearing Conclusion

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Former Sen. Edward J. Gurney knew all along about an illegal fund-raising scheme, the prosecutor in Gurney's trial contends. He cited 31 examples to support the claim.

Asst. U.S. Atty. Harvey Schlesinger spent 4½ hours Tuesday summing up the government's case in the 22-week-old influence peddling trial of Gurney and three co-defendants.

Schlesinger was to resume his summation today. Then the defense will get its turn, beginning with Gurney's lawyer, C. Harris Dittmar.

Gurney, 61, ex-aide Joseph Bastien and former Federal Housing Administration officials K. Wayne Swiger and Ralph Koenig are charged with conspiracy to raise an illegal $233,000 political slush fund by promising Florida builders Gurney's help with FHA projects. All have pleaded innocent.

The Florida Republican also is charged with lying to a federal grand jury, bribery and accepting unlawful compensation.

A key issue in the lengthy trial has been how much Gurney knew about the activities of fund raiser Larry Williams during 1971-73.

Gurney maintains that until June 1972 he didn't know Williams was raising funds and that until July 1973 he didn't know the money was coming from shakedowns of FHA builders.

"Sen. Gurney knew all along what Williams was doing with respect to fund raising," Schlesinger told the 12-member jury and four alternates.

Schlesinger cited 31 instances of trial testimony which he claimed show that Gurney knew about the Williams operation before mid-1972.

The chief prosecutor retraced testimony of seven men who said they personally warned Gurney and went over Gurney's own testimony about his association with Williams — including a statement that Williams was one of his "most trusted advisers."

Schlesinger said Gurney hired Williams as fund raiser in January 1971 to raise travel money, expenses for Florida field offices and a war chest for a 1974 re-election bid Gurney subsequently abandoned.

Gurney has testified that he thought Williams was merely a volunteer who arranged travel for him. Williams, who spent time in jail after pleading guilty to charges in the investigation, testified that he collected $400,000 from builders in Gurney's name.

Schlesinger insisted the case was one of "pure and simple political power, influence peddling and corruption."

Andrews Resident Dies In Two-Car Accident

GOLDSMITH—A longtime Andrews resident was killed in a two-car accident Tuesday around 4:30 p.m. at the intersection of two Ector County Roads 2.4 miles north of here, department of Public Safety officials reported.

Alton Aubrey "Whitey" Landrum, 50, was killed when the eastbound car he was driving was in collision with a southbound car driven by Frederico Garcia Subia, 24, Odessa. Landrum was pronounced dead at the scene by Peace Justice Jimmy Harris of Ector County. After the collision, both cars went into a pasture, with Landrum's car rolling over one and three-quarters times. Neither man was thrown from his car.

Subia suffered facial cuts, bruises and a broken collar bone, DPS officials said. He was reportedly in good condition this morning at Odessa Medical Center Hospital.

Funeral services for Landrum will be at 2 p.m. Thursday at the Singleton Funeral Home Chapel of the Chimes, with the Rev. Clyde Fitzgerald, former pastor of the Church of God in Andrews, officiating. Interment will be in the Andrews Cemetery.

Landrum was born March 2, 1925 in Carroll. He lived in Van before moving to Andrews 25 years ago.

He was the foreman of Union Oil Co.'s Dollarhide plant. He had worked for Union for the past 28 years.

Survivors include his widow, Colleen of Andrews; a son, Johnny Alton Landrum of Odessa; a daughter, Mrs. Gilda Jean Holman of Andrews; his mother, Mrs. Annie Belle Landrum of Tyler; two sisters, Mrs. Zepha Waters and Mrs. Rachel Brown, both of Tyler; two brothers, Billy F. Landrum and James V. Landrum, both of Tyler, and seven grandchildren.

Honorary pallbearers will be all employes of Union Oil Co.

now for Safeway, and if it does change, I expect it will go down rather than up."

Skaggs Albertsons reported one of the largest increases in sugar prices, with five-pound bags currently selling at $1.43. The price one week ago was $1.13.

In spite of the 30-cent increase, assistant manager Leonard Truelove said the store was selling sugar at cost, less a four per cent shipping charge the store pays.

"We sold it at cost at $1.13 and we're selling it at cost at $1.43," Truelove said.

He also said the store had been unable to get 10-pound bags of sugar, but wasn't sure why.

"I have no idea how long our price will stay at this level," Truelove said. "We go up when the warehouse goes up."

Winston Jones, manager of Furr's, said five-pound sugar were currently selling for $1.44 at his store. A week ago it was selling for $1.15.

"I don't know why it went up, how long it will stay up, or why we can't get any 10-pound bags," Jones said. "All I know is what I read in the newspapers."

At M-System, manager Bob Hammontree said five pound bags of sugar are currently selling for $1.34. A week ago it was $1.15.

"We expect it to stay at this price until we get our next shipment," Hammontree said. "And I don't know when that will be, but the prices will be higher."

Texans Sweltering In Sultry Weather

Texas has seemingly settled into what they call the "dog days" of summer, that long and uncomfortable stretch of sultry weather that dictates lots of brow-mopping.

Throughout most of the state, including the Midland area, temperatures stayed on the warm side throughout the night as showers and thunderstorms rowed the Panhandle-Plains sector from Lubbock northward and through far West Texas around Kermit and Pecos. According to the The Associated Press, one storm dumped more than a half-inch of rain within 30 minutes at Amarillo.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Air Terminal, the chance for precipitation in this area this afternoon, tonight and again Thursday stands at 20 per cent. High temperatures both afternoons will be in the mid to upper 90s, while the mimimum tonight is expected to be no lower than the upper 60s.

Woman Dies After Fall Of 5 Stories

BOSTON (AP) — A young woman who was an arm's reach from the safety of a fire rescue ladder fell to her death Tuesday afternoon when the iron balcony she and her goddaughter were on collapsed and plunged five stories to the alley below.

A fire fighter who was helping them onto the ladder grabbed a ladder rung and pulled himself to safety.

Diana Bryant, 19, who was caring for her goddaughter while the child's mother was at work, died of multiple injuries at Massachusetts General Hospital about two hours after the fall.

Two-year-old Tiare Jones of the Roxbury section was reported in fair condition at New England Medical Center. Rescue workers said the child was suffering from cardiac arrest after the fall, but was revived by mouth-to-mouth breathing by the time she got to the hospital.

Woman Claims Self-Defense In Murder Trial

Audrey Sheppard, vowing she killed her husband in self-defense, told a 142nd District Court jury this morning that he had threatened to "stomp my head in" seconds before she fired pistol shots into his head in the bedroom of their trailer house southwest of Midland last Sept. 25.

Mrs. Sheppard, 29, is on trial for the murder of her husband, Delmir "Shep" Sheppard, 49.

"I'll just make sure that you never leave me again," she quoted her husband under examination by her defense attorney, Bob Trenchard of Odessa.

"He said that he would stomp my head in," Mrs. Sheppard testified. "He said, 'I'll kill you'."

"He came at me and I fired," she said.

Under cross-examination by the prosecutor, Dist. Atty. Jim Mashburn, Mrs. Sheppard said she loved "Shep," that he was peaceable and kind when sober but sometimes violent when drunk.

"Whenever I did leave him," she said, "he was always hunting me down."

But, she said, she did not file for a divorce "because I loved him, and when he was sober, he was a real decent man .... He was a good provider ...."

"I didn't have the money to do things like that. I did not have money to buy a peace bond."

She said her husband Delmir was an oil field driller and pipelayer who traveled to jobs in North and South Dakota, Utah, and Montana and around Bronte, north of San Angelo, before settling in Midland in 1971.

Ellis Island Busy

Ellis Island was opened as an immigration station in 1892 and processed 20 million immigrants. From 1943 to 1945 it was used as a detention center for aliens. It was proclaimed part of the Statue of Liberty National Monument in 1965.

Showdown Near On Energy Issue

off came Tuesday when the House voted 262 to 167 to kill Ford's gradual decontrol program that would have ended oil price controls over a 30-month period.

After the vote, Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said Congress and the President "have a duty to get together" to break the deadlock. A few hours later, Ford, Federal Energy Administrator Frank G. Zarb and a group of congressional leaders went on an evening cruise aboard the presidential yacht. Energy was among the issues discussed.

The administration program turned down by the House would have raised gasoline prices by 7 cents a gallon by the end of 1977, according to White House estimates. Democrat critics said it would have raised prices 15 cents a gallon.

The crux of that program was to end the $5.25-a-barrel ceiling on "old oil" which comes from wells at least three-years old. About 60 per cent of U.S. production is old oil, and the remainder sells at the unregulated world market price, which now is around $13 a barrel.

Ford on Monday had vetoed a bill that would have extended the old oil controls through Dec. 31 and imposed an $11.28-a-barrel ceiling on new oil. Congress apparently is unable to produce a two-thirds majority required to override that veto.

And Ford has said he will veto a pending bill that would simply continue the existing price structure until March 1.

Most Texans In House Back Ford

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is the Texas vote in the 262-167 roll call in which the House Tuesday rejected President Ford's oil decontrol plan. A yes vote is a vote to reject the plan.

Democrats — Brooks no; Burleson no; Casey no; de la Garza no; Eckhardt yes; Gonzalez yes; Hightower no; Jordan yes; Kazen no; Krueger yes; Mahon no; Milford no; Patman yes; Pickle yes; Poage no; Roberts no; Teague no; White no; Wilson no; Wright yes; Young no.

Republicans — Archer no; Collins no; Steelman no.

fired on them from two houses. It said the Israelis blew up the houses during the fight. The Lebanese Defense Ministry confirmed two houses were blown up but said the Israelis also hit the village of Houra, less than a mile from the Israeli frontier.

The Israelis accused the Arabs of firing mortar shells across the border at the tiny village of Metullah. There were no Israeli casualties or damage and the fire was returned, the command said.

'Exorcist' Author Weds Tennis Star

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — William Peter Blatty, author of the best-selling novel "The Exorcist," and amateur tennis star Linda Tuero have been married here.

Asked by friends why he decided to marry, Blatty replied: "An angel made me do it."

Blatty, 47, and Miss Tuero, 23, of New Orleans were married Sunday. It was the third marriage for Blatty.

Trip Discussed At Meeting Here

Highlights of the Leo Club's trip to Dallas for the Lions Club International convention were presented to the Evening Lions Club Tuesday night.

Bub McCain, Leo Club president, outlined the club's history, projects and goals.

Laura Ann Folmar, the club's entry in the Miss West Texas beauty pageant, was a special guest.

Evening Session Council Attendance Dismays Officials

City councilmen expressed dismay Tuesday after an evening session produced only a sparse turnout of citizens.

At 6:45 p.m. Tuesday, Midland Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr. called for a show of hands of those who could not have attended the session if it had been held earlier. Five persons raised their hands.

A count, made immediately after Angelo's request, revealed that, of the other 27 persons present, 15 were city employes, nine were private citizens and three were reporters.

The Tuesday meeting was the council's second attempt this summer to increase attendance with an evening meeting. Attendance at the first meeting was about the same as at Tuesday's session.

Councilmen said a public hearing on the proposed 1975-76 city budget should draw more people to the third evening meeting, scheduled Aug. 26.

The council session concluded at 10 p.m., and Angelo announced a special session for 10 a.m. today for the filing of the proposed budget with the city secretary.

The council approved plans and specifications and authorized the advertisenent for bids for a tennis complex at Midland College. It had been estimated eight unlighted courts would cost the college and city $90,000, to be split equally.

However, Dr. Al Langford, Midland College president, told the council that recent indications from regional contractors at Lubbock and El Paso are that 12 courts without lighting might be bid at approximately $96,000.

The council agreed to take bids on 8-, 10- and 12-court configurations with sidewalks and drinking fountains. Alternate bids will be taken for lighting of two-court and four-court "pods." The estimated price tag of a 12-court complex with all courts lighted is $120,000.

A grant agreement was approved to accept the first allotment from the Department of Housing and Urban Development for $259,000 under the Community Development Act. Midland's five-year share of the development funds will amount to more than $4 million for improvements to low-income areas of the city.

Listed rehabilitation projects include street and drainage projects, inspection code enforcement, home rehab projects and demolition of some structures in low-income areas.

CB Radios, Tools, Other Items Stolen

Four citizens band radios, some tools and other miscellaneous items have been reported stolen, Midland law enforcement officers said today.

The theft of a one-ton electric hoist from a loading dock at Mobil Oil Parks Production Office on County Road 1270 South was reported Tuesday to the Midland Sheriff's Office.

The estimated value of the hoist was $500.

The top of a convertible was cut by a burglar seeking a citizens band radio Tuesday in the parking lot of the Windsor Place Apartments at 1801 North Midland Drive, Tommy E. Thompson reported to police. Damage to the convertible top was estimated at $250, and the value of the citizens band radio was estimated at $169.

A number of assorted items belonging to PPG were taken from the bed of a pickup truck while it was parked at the Doll House Lounge on the Rankin Highway, Lee Montgomery of Lubbock told Sheriff's deputies.

The total value of the items stolen from the truck was approximately $432. Taken were two drills, a pair of glass pliers, a screw gun and a screw box. Also taken were a small pry bar and a suit case containing clothes, a clock-radio and some other miscellaneous items.

A citizens band radio worth $259 was taken from a pickup belonging to J. C. Creed, 1003 S. Midkiff Road, Creed reported to police. The pickup was parked at Lexington Apartments, 1003 S. Midkiff Road.

A roll of pennies and a sack of receipts were taken and a glass door and a glass window were broken in a burglary at the Hanlan's Texaco Service Station at the Garden City Highway exit at Interstate 20, Harold Jay Hanlan reported to police Tuesday. The cost of the stolen or destroyed items was estimated at $180.50.

A. L. Crain, 4303 Andrews Highway Apt. 503, told police that a citizens band radio had been taken from his vehicle while it was parked at Ye Olde English Village Apartments. The value of the radio was estimated at $160.

Another citizens band radio valued at $160 was taken from a pickup parked at Windsor Place Apartments, 1801 N. Midland Drive, Joey Heinemann reported Tuesday.

A television worth approximately $100 was taken from the Kangaroo Court Motel, 3302 W. Front St., George Votruba told police.

Two bags of assorted tools worth a total of $100 was taken from a vehicle parked in the parking lot of the Valencia Villa Apartments, 4000 W. Illinois St.

Mrs. Doyce Brown, Tower Road, told sheriff's deputies Tuesday that a Samoyed Husky had been stolen from her yard. The dog was reportedly worth $50.

A plate glass window valued at $10 was broken at Pease Elementary School at 2100 N. Benton, Curtis Flournoy told police. Police reported that the office and the library of the school had been ransacked but that apparently nothing had been stolen.

Midlander Freed On $5,000 Bond

A Midland man was released from Midland County Jail Monday on $5,000 bond after being charged with the burglary of a number of guns from the Lock Construction Co. earlier this month.

Charged is Jerry James Pool, 28, 609 S. Colorado St.

Midland County Sheriff's Office Chief Investigator Mickey Clark said today that five of the seven guns stolen in the burglary had been recovered. He said that the other two guns were en route to the sheriff's office.

Budget—

compared to last year's total of $12,829,055, up $1,250,470.

The public can review the entire budget at the city secretary's office on the second floor at city hall for the next 30 days. The budget will come before the council Aug. 26 during a public hearing at city hall.

Carrillo Impeachment Report Approved

By ROBERT HEARD

AUSTIN (AP) — In an informal, breezy session, the special committee that asked the House to vote impeachment articles against Duval County District Judge O. P. Carrillo has agreed on its final report.

But first the committee took out a paragraph bragging on its fairess.

The committee also ignored the joking recommendation from Rep. Bob Hendricks, D-McKinney, for the cover of the report. "I think for the front of it we ought to have a picture of the scales of justice with a big thumb holding it (one side) down," he said.

The report, adopted Tuesday, says the House's only function when it convenes Aug. 4 is to consider the articles of impeachment recommended by the committee.

House members will have before them all the evidence presented before the committee, the report says. "A possible alternative would be for the House to decide that it wished to hear additional testimony from live witnesses, in which event the House could resolve itself into a committee of the whole for the purpose of taking additional testimony," it says.

However, Speaker Bill Clayton doubts the House will do this. He has told reporters he expects the Carrillo matter to be handled by the House in "three of four days."

If the House approves one or more of the 11 articles of impeachment recommended by the committee, Carrillo's trial will be held in the Senate, where witnesses would be called.

The long paragraph on the committee's fairness, written by Rep. DeWitt Hale, D-Corpus Christi, committee chairman, was deleted after objection by Hendricks and Rep. Melchor Chavez, D-Harlingen. It read:

"The committee is aware that both Judge Carrillo and his attorney, Mr. Arthur Mitchell, have charged in the news media that the committee was biased and prejudiced in its deliberations. In view of the many courtesies extended to Judge Carrillo, the committee was surprised at reading these charges. In truth and in fact, nothing could be further from the truth. Each member of the committee entered into the work of the committee with a completely open mind on the facts before us, and if the committee members had any leanings at the inception of the public hearings, such leanings would have been sympathetic to the position of Judge Carrillo as an officer of the judicial branch of state government. Each member of the committee secretly hoped that the evidence would not support the charges which had been made against Judge Carrillo, and each member was somewhat surprised as the tale of wrongdoing unfolded during committee hearings, inevitably to the conclusions reached by the committee, that articles of impeachment must be recommended by the committee if its responsibility was to be properly fulfilled."

Rep. James Kaster, D-El Paso, said he did not "secretly hope" the judge was exonerated. "I didn't care either way," he said.

Hendricks admitted he did not have an open mind at the beginning. "I went in on the judge's side. I was looking for ways to help him," he said. "They just strung out too much wire—barbed wire."

Woman Claims Staplepuncture Works For Her

EAST PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — The American Medical Association says staplepuncture is a lot of hokum, but Jeneane Zimmermann says she's lost 100 pounds in less than a year after having staples inserted in both ears.

"I believe in it, and I didn't when I started," says Miss Zimmermann, 27, formerly of East Peoria. "To me the AMA is being very unfair to heavy set people...they are so against (staplepuncture) and they make fun of it.

"To make fun of something that might help, I don't think it's funny at all," she said.

Miss Zimmermann said she has been overweight as long as she can remember, and tried about every weight loss method known without success. Then she heard about staplepuncture, and last September had the staples put in her ears by an osteopath in Miami, where she works as a tropical fish saleswoman.

"I weighed 330 pounds when I started," she said. "I weighed myself on one of those meat packing scales. That's how I know what I weighed before I went to his office. His scale would only go up to 320 and it sprang."

Miss Zimmermann says that since then she has lost all desire for food, slimmed down to 230 pounds and wears a size 18 dress instead of size 28½. Her eventual goal is 130 pounds, and she's certain she can make it.

The theory is that the staples interrupt impulses sent through nerves in the ear which cause a desire for food, she said. The staples can be activated by moving the ear with the hand, she said.

"What this (staplepuncture) is, is it's psychological," said Frank Chappell, AMA science news editor. "There's no such thing as an obesity nerve in your ear.

"...I mean the idea sounds absurd on the surface, you wiggle your ear and you're not hungry," said Chappell.

Miss Zimmermann says she doesn't think psychology had anything to do with her loss of weight, and her regular physician didn't think staplepuncture would work either.

"He doesn't believe in it," she said. "And I'm proving to him I'm right. Every time I go see him he says he can't believe it."

Miss Zimmermann's experience has made a believer of her father, Karl Zimmrmann of East Peoria, who notes, "It's the first time in years and years that she can go to a regular store and buy clothes."

"It worked, I'm very thankful," says Miss Zimmermann. "I don't care whether you're fat or thin or what you are, it makes you feel good to have a better body."

Tiny Tots Visit Senior Citizens

MILL VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — For weeks the tiny tots attending the Tamalpais Nursery school watched their somewhat senior neighbors in the Redwoods Retirement Home across the street. Many of the seniors were confined to wheel chairs; others walked with canes.

Then one of the tiny tots made a suggestion: "Let's visit those old ladies across the street."

The nursery school teacher thought it would be a good idea and it was arranged.

Now, once a week the little ones bring smiles and happiness to the faces of the older ones.

'Pro-American' Urged

Congressman Jim Collins of Dallas merits a bright star in his legislative crown for the tremendous job he did in a recent debate on the floor of the House against HR 7014, the Commerce energy bill. He termed the measure "the pro-Arab bill."

The Dallas representative was one of three opposition leaders to the proposed bill.

He emphasized the international significance of the legislation and explained that what Congress was doing, in effect, would greatly increase the power of the OPEC nations.

His power-packed observations were to the point, ringing the bell of free enterprise and the principles of liberty with every swing. His remarks were bound to have hit home to many of his listeners.

"As we discuss this oil bill," he said, "we stop to think, have we lost the principles of liberty and have we lost the principles of belief that made America great? Because the advocates of this bill are doing more than anyone could through industry, more than anyone could through treaties, more than anyone could ever vote or use to strengthen the influence of the Arab oil countries in the world."

He went on to say that Arab oil power was linked directly to political power in the smoldering Middle East situation, and that the United States was contributing to that Arab power by its present oil policy.

Collins then gave his colleagues something to think about in directing his remarks to five major questions.

First, he asked who represents the oil interest in America? He noted that American stockholders in cities like New York, Boston and Chicago are the ones who own American oil companies. They are the ones who have a vested interest in the oil industry, he explained.

He then turned his probing debate to the question of gasoline prices around the world, showing that the U.S. pays half what Europeans pay for gasoline, yet use 50 per cent of the refinery production for that gasoline, as contrasted to 15 per cent in Europe.

His third point was that taxes on oil companies are $11 for every $1 of dividends paid to stockholders.

"They (taxes) include not only income tax but excise tax, property tax, franchise tax, a very heavy per gallon tax at the pumps, both state and federal, and also a severance tax," Collins said. "Politicians in this country are using these oil taxes to move in more heavily on the American consumer," he continued.

He was warming to his subject, and it was then that he drove home his message with his last two questions: "What do the oil companies do with their profits? . . . and what does the oil industry do for the good of this country?"

These queries could be answered easily by most persons in the oil patch, but there apparently are many Americans who don't have the slightest idea about these simple questions.

Statistics show," Collins explained, "that from 1963 to 1974, the oil companies of this country made $75 billion in profits . . . but the headlines do not say that during those 11 years the oil companies invested $111 billion in drilling, in exploring and developing new oil. That is to say, they invested 33 per cent more than they made in the way of profits.

"Everyone in this country has a personal interest in the oil business, whether they are stockholders or merely owners of automobiles. We build up, through this bill, a system whereby we limit the price domestic producers receive for a barrel of oil, while we pay the OPEC nations more than twice that price for their oil."

Congressman Collins then tossed in the clincher: "When the law provides for the U.S. to pay Arab nations twice as much for their oil as they pay a West Texas driller, it is absurd. And this absurd law means more Arab oil and less domestic drilling — and therefore less domestic oil for the future."

It is as simple as that!

ART BUCHWALD—

The High Cost Of Dr. Kissinger Cited

Art Buchwald

PARIS—Every time Henry Kissinger visits Europe he finds prices skyrocketing. While nobody talks about it at the State Department, the comptroller is becoming very nervous about Kissinger's expense accounts and has urged him to cut down on his traveling. In fact, just before he left on his recent trip to Paris, Geneva, Bonn and London, he had a terrible row with a State Department accountant.

The minutes of this fight were found in Kissinger's garbage.

"Mr. Kissinger, I see you're going to Europe again. Don't you think that's a bit much?"

"I haven't been to Europe in several weeks. I have to see Giscard, Gromyko, Rabin and Callaghan."

"I appreciate that Mr. Kissinger, but my job is to keep an eye on expenses. On your last three trips you've gone over the $54 per day allowance that all State Department employes are entitled to. You're setting a very bad example for all our other personnel."

"But I'll only be in Paris overnight. I'll eat on the plane and Giscard has invited me for lunch."

"But what about breakfast? That will cost you $54."

"It will be my only expense."

"And laundry? The last time you were in Paris you put in a laundry bill for $120."

"I needed a clean shirt because I was going to see the Pope the next day."

"And I suppose the $49 you paid to have your suit pressed was also necessary?"

"I couldn't talk to Giscard in a rumpled suit, could I? He puts a lot of emphasis on neatness."

"Did you have to send a scarf to Madame Giscard for $150?"

"I thought it would be a nice gesture. We need the French on our side for the oil talks."

"I don't know what we're going to do with you, Mr. Kissinger. Do you realize that if you make one more trip to Paris we're going to have to ask Congress for a supplemental appropriation?"

"I promise you I won't even tip this time. And I'll take the bus from the airport."

"It isn't just Paris I'm worried about, it's Geneva. Do you know what the Swiss franc is worth as opposed to the American dollar?"

"I have it all planned. I'm going to stick Gromyko with the check for lunch. If they want detente they should pay for it."

"And what about the hotel?"

"I'll share a room with Marvin Kalb and we'll let CBS pay for it. They'll never know the difference."

"You say that now, but you'll probably come back with a dinner bill of $435 for two like you did when you went to Brussels."

"I can't let people pay for all my meals. It looks bad for American prestige. I'm not even taking Nancy with me on this trip. The only major expense I can foresee is when I meet with Prime Minister Rabin of Israel in Bonn. But since I want him to give up the passes in the Sinai I can't really expect him to pick up lunch, too, can I?"

"Why don't you split the check with him? Keep track of what he eats and you each pay your own."

"Rabin's tough. He might not go for it. The last time he bought me a meal he asked for $2.5 billion in military aid. When you're dealing in worldwide diplomacy there is no such thing as a free lunch."

"Mr. Kissinger, you have your job to do and I have mine. But unless the dollar makes a miraculous recovery in Europe you're going to have to find some other way of going to all these countries."

"What do you suggest?"

"Have you ever considered a package tour run by one of the airlines? You get your transportation, your hotel rooms, two meals a day and a chance to visit one nightclub in any five cities in Europe. It's quite a saving."

"I am not interested in a package tour. This is getting ridiculous. Are you going to sign my travel voucher or aren't you?"

"All right. But I'm not going to okay any of your laundry bills when you come back. There is no reason you can't take enough clean shirts and socks to last you through the entire trip."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By JACK ANDERSON
With Les Whitten

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — The Coast Guard, whose motto "Semper Paratus" means "Always Ready," seems ready to throw a $500 million aircraft deal to Rockwell International and to mislead Congress about it.

The intricate scheme is revealed in voluminous Coast Guard, industry and congressional documents in our hands. Based on his own investigation, Rep. John Murphy, D-N.Y., as a former House Coast Guard subcommittee chairman, is determined to torpedo the bonanza.

At issue are 41 new medium-range planes which the Coast Guard is buying to replace its present fleet of coast-watchers. Total costs, including parts, easily will run to a half-billion dollars over the lifetimes of the planes.

When the decision was made in 1971 to outfit the Coast Guard with the patrol planes, there was every appearance that all potential manufacturers would get a crack at the handsome contract.

This would have assured the best break for the taxpayer. But by August 1973, the memos show, the Coast Guard's plan for competitive bidding unaccountably had been put aside.

In its place, the memos indicate a noncompetitive contract was to be awarded and the "specs" show that only one U.S. bidder would qualify. The firm was Rockwell International.

Competing aircraft makers roared. Grumman wrote Rep. Murphy that the Coast Guard was "leading on. . .Grumman, Falcon Jet, Gates, Lear Jet (and) Cessna under the pretense of an impending open competition." In fact, said Grumman, the Department of Transportation, which oversees the Coast Guard, already had picked Rockwell.

Further evidence that a "fix" was in came when the Coast Guard's chief procurement officer, with shocking candor, told a meeting of planemakers and others that "I have already made up my mind."

Shortly before the Coast Guard could hand the $500 million contract to Rockwell, Murphy got his Irish up and told the Coast Guard he would blow the whistle unless they guaranteed free competition. A few hours before he was to testify, however, the Coast Guard capitulated. Commandant Adm. Chester Bender agreed to open the field to all planemakers.

But despite the agreement the documents strongly indicate that the Coast Guard rigged the contract a second time. The new "specs" also lean to such special Rockwell features as electric foot-warmers, seats with custom corners and deflatable entrance seals.

The new Coast Guard commandant, Adm. Owen Siler, vigorously defended the fairness of the procurement and denied any outside pressure. "There was no other American airplane that would come close," he explained. Nevertheless, he still is exploring other possibilities.

Footnote: This is not Rockwell's first gusher from the government. In an earlier column, we told how it unloaded an out-of-the-way $20 million building on the government in exchange for far more desirable federal holdings.

AGAINST THE GRAIN: Two Midwestern grain companies have monopolized some $275 million worth of blended grain sales to the Agriculture Department which has supinely helped perpetuate the costly monopoly.

A General Accounting Office report roasts the Agriculture Department for caving in to the two companies. The report fails to identify them, but we have learned they are Krause Milling Co., Milwaukee, and Lauhoff Grain Co., Danville, Ill.

Between them they control 95 per cent of sales to Agriculture of a high-protein blend of corn, soybeans and milk donated to hungry nations. The reason for this lopsided market, our probe shows, is that Agriculture's specifications are tailored to the two firms' products.

James Schlick, deputy head of the blended food program at Agriculture, stoutly defended his policies toward Lauhoff and Krause. Schlick then reluctantly conceded he once worked for Krause. The two firms deny any connivance.

WASHINGTON WHIRL: Rep. Bella Abzug, D-N.Y., plans hearings this fall in her House Information subcommittee on overclassification of federal documents. In her safe, she already has secret documents she hopes to use if she can get them unclassified. They include old plans for use of nuclear tactical weapons against Red China in case of a threat to Nationalist China's offshore islands. . . The Department of Interior has awarded a marine archeology contract to a museum even though a bid backed by famed marine expert Jacques Cousteau was $70,000 lower. Interior claims the $194,000 contract went to the museum instead of Cousteau for "technical reasons". . . The National Indian Youth Council is fighting a coal gasification plant on the Navajo reservation, claiming it will spew out deadly lead and mercury. The $4 billion project will convert coal into much-needed natural gas, but the Indians say it will siphon up their water without bringing any longterm benefits to the Navajos. . .

The Senate committee, which is investigating the CIA and FBI quietly has purchased five antibugging devices for its most sensitive telephones. The committee selected a $250 model — which, ironically, was designed by a former top CIA electronics expert — from Ashby and Associates of Washington. . . We recently reported that William "Fish Bait" Miller, the colorful former House doorkeeper, kept two dollars from each page as a "deposit" for their small green identification badges. After our story appeared, Miller paid a quiet visit to Capitol Hill to turn over $478 in cash to the House Clerk. This was the deposit money he had collected, he explained.

Secretary Kissinger's Russian Problem

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

Evans

Novak

WASHINGTON — Less than two days before being denounced by Dr. Henry Kissinger as a threat to world peace, Alexander Solzhenitsyn spurned a request for a secret meeting with the Secretary of State delivered, along with flattery, by high-level emissary Nelson A. Rockefeller.

Whether that counter-snub led to Kissinger's sharp attack on Solzhenitsyn is unclear, but there is no doubt that Kissinger, master diplomat of the age, bungled his handling of the Russian Nobel laureate from the moment he advised President Ford not to see Solzhenitsyn June 30. The dreary postscript came when Kissinger, following his attack on the Soviet exile, made an extraordinary but unsuccessful attempt to hold back criticism from Sen. Henry Jackson.

Kissinger's peace offering came at a small, unpublicized dinner party in Solzhenitsyn's honor at the Washington home of Lane Kirkland, AFL-CIO secretary-treasurer. Principal guests were George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, and Vice President Rockefeller (who checked with Mr. Ford before accepting).

Rockefeller, longtime AFL-CIO ally, is a staunch anti-Communist who later told aides he enjoyed "a delightful evening." But he is also a Kissinger intimate. So, before the party ended at 11:30 p.m., the Vice President informed Solzhenitsyn of Kissinger's high regard for him and his novels. He was sure, said Rockefeller, that Kissinger would like to meet with Solzhenitsyn — in private, of course.

Nyet , replied the wary Russian. No private meetings.

Solzhenitsyn also was dodging feelers from President Ford that began July 12 when the White House backtracked on its original snub and reached a climax during Solzhenitsyn's triumphant reception on Capitol Hill.

Following the reception, Solzhenitsyn went to Sen. Jackson's office accompanied by Republican Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina. Helms was called from the room by this telephoned query from the White House: could Helms bring Solzhenitsyn down the avenue right away to see the President? The answer from the novelist's interpreter, Victor Fediay: Nyet. Solzhenitsyn was "hot and tired."

This was the background for Kissinger's press conference in Milwaukee. He was sizzling over White House aides leaking criticism of his bad advice to the President. After repeated questioning about Solzhenitsyn, Kissinger defended his advice to Mr. Ford and attacked the survivor of Stalin's slave labor camps.

Kissinger had instant second thoughts, opening the long-closed communication channel with arch-critic Jackson. State Department counselor Helmut Sonnenfeldt, telephoning Jackson's office for the first time in six months, said Kissinger asked him to call. Would Jackson delay immediate comment until thoroughly reviewing the Milwaukee press conference? Too late. Jackson's harsh reaction had already been released.

BAGHDAD'S NEW LOOK

Major development contracts with Japanese and Western European concerns to enlarge Iraq's small port at Um Qasr on the Persian Gulf are new signals of estrangement between the radical Baathist regime in Baghdad and the Soviet Union.

The contracts, moreover, coincide with Baghdad's increased cooperation with conservative Arab states and Iran — a change of utmost importance affecting U.S.-Soviet competition for preeminence in the Persian Gulf oil waterway.

The Iraqi government signed a border agreement with Saudi Arabia on July 2, ending years of bitter enmity. More important, Iraq signed a major economic aid program with the once-hated royalist regime of Jordan on June 26, the first agreement ever between two countries with antithetical regimes. Economic aid financed by Iraqi oil will help Jordan enlarge its port of Aqaba.

Iraq's decision to use only Western aid in developing Um Qasr is viewed by American experts as strategically critical. Moscow has long coveted Um Qasr for a naval base, smaller but similar to the large Soviet base being completed at the Somalian port of Berbera. With the West now holding all Um Qasr development contracts, such a dangerous prospect seems eliminated.

GRAHAM AND DEMOCRATS

The long-term campaign by Democratic national chairman Robert Strauss of appealing to Middle America will result in a most unusual participant in the party's fund-raising telethon next weekend: Dr. Billy Graham, the fundamentalist preacher most recently linked politically with Richard M. Nixon.

The smooth-talking Strauss told Graham the American political system badly needs reaffirmation, and who could better reaffirm it than the nation's greatest evangelist?

Although Graham's recorded pitch carefully advocates every American giving to the party of his choice, the fact that he is appearing on a Democratic telethon will not be lost on the public. It could be the most effective fund appeal of the 22-hour telethon. Even blase technicians at the Washington recording studio were brought to attention by the all-time leading fund-raiser on the evangelist circuit.

Ky Telling Americans How The War Was Lost —At $2,500 Per Speech

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — For $2,500 an appearance, former South Vietnamese Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky is hitting the lecture trail to tell Americans how the war was lost.

The dashing former jet fighter pilot spoke without pay Tuesday at the Chamber of Commerce. But he said he has hired professional booking agents and from now on, it's $2,500 a shot.

Asked if he planned to use the money to help his fellow refugees, Ky smiled and said, "No, the money is my personal affair."

His agent hopes to book him for two or more engagements a week.

Still as dapper as he was in Saigon, Ky sports a mod hairstyle and a double-breasted blazer with military-style epaulets. A silver model of a jet is pinned to his lapel.

In addition to the nationwide tour, Ky said he is planning a book, "Twenty Years and Twenty Days," about South Vietnam from 1955 to 1975.

On Monday, Ky spoke at California State University at Fullerton and said he was pleased with the lack of heckling and hostility from the students.

"I was surprised," he said. "I expected the liberals and the antiwar elements to be there with negative attitudes, opposition and anger."

Ky said his proposed tour is possible because the American public has put the war behind it.

Previously Ky had said he might try to earn a living as a taxi driver or perhaps as a farmer in Arkansas.

As for how the South was lost, Ky told his audience Tuesday, "Both the Americans and the South Vietnamese committed many errors. Most of the time the politicians lied to the people. . . . There was widespread corruption. . . bad South Vietnamese leadership. . .social injustice. . .bad economy."

He said he had warned American officials in 1965 not to begin massive bombing of North Vietnam. Ky said he told officials if they thought bombs would stop Hanoi, "then you know nothing of the North Vietnamese."

At Fullerton, Ky spoke of an underground resistance in South Vietnam and said he would like to return and take command of the guerrilla force, which he says numbers at least 12,000.

"I really would prefer to die gloriously on the battlefield than to live here in exile," he said. "I am 46 years old, old enough to accept the last sacrifice."

Pressed for details afterward, Ky said aside from reports of some fighting in the Mekong Delta he had no hard information.

Hunts Blaming CIA For Indictments

DALLAS (AP) — Federal indictments returned against two sons of the late oil billionaire H. L. Hunt were the result of their refusal to allow the Central Intelligence Agency to place its agents in the Hunt Oil Co., the brothers said Tuesday.

Nelson Bunker Hunt and W. Herbert Hunt and five others were indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of conspiracy and obstruction of justice in connection with an alleged wiretapping scheme that began in 1969.

"After turning down the CIA, a massive embezzlement scheme involving losses of more than $50 million from the Hunt Oil Co. was uncovered. An investigation disclosed that some of the Hunt employes were secret government agents," the Hunts' joint statement said.

The nine count indictment, returned by the grand jury here late Monday, names the Hunts, famed Houston lawyer Percy Foreman; three prominent Dallas attorneys, Ralph Shank, B.H. Timmons Jr. and Charles Tessmer; and retired Houston industrialist Edward J. Hudson.

The Hunt brothers were indicted last year on wiretapping charges and trial is set for Sept. 15 in Lubbock. The case was moved from Dallas on a change of venue.

The statement said the FBI and Internal Revenue Service, when given the information about the alleged embezzlement scheme, refused to investigate the matter, although the Justice Department started a probe four years later.

"Despite this, the FBI and Department of Justice have failed to prosecute one of the main embezzlers and tried to protect their own agents as part of this coverup.

"The Department of Justice has now caused a grand jury to indict us and others on false obstruction of justice charges. If these had merit they would not have waited five years to file them or used a political prosecutor from ... Washington...to prosecute them," the statement said. This was a reference to prosecutor Guy Goodwin.

The Hunts said they were informed of the grand jury investigation, offered to go before it but the Justice Department refused.

The latest indictment alleges the seven conspired to pay hush money to three men involved in the wiretapping of five employes of H. L. Hunt while he was still alive.

The Hunts at first denied they knew anything about the wiretapping, but after being indicted by a grand jury, they admitted hiring the private detectives.

They claimed they wanted to catch persons receiving kickbacks and stealing from the Hunt companies.

The indictment alleges Foreman secretly agreed to accept $100,000 to represent two of the convicted wiretappers and keep them quiet.

The others named were described as go betweens.

Tessmer also was charged with two counts of perjury before the grand jury when he denied he represented the Hunts in dealings with the wiretappers.

Hathaway Apparently Offered To Quit Before Being Treated For Depression

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary Stanley K. Hathaway, in office a little more than a month, apparently offered to resign before he entered a hospital for psychiatric care eight days ago but now intends to remain in the Cabinet.

Hathaway, former two-term governor of Wyoming who underwent prolonged Senate grilling in his hard-fought battle for confirmaiton at interior, is "suffering from moderate depression brought about by physical exhaustion and fatigue," doctors at Bethesda Naval Hospital reported Tuesday.

An interior spokesman denied that Hathaway offered a formal resignation to President Ford and that Ford turned it down. Asked if Hathaway informally offered to resign, the spokesman said, "I suspect that he did." White House spokesmen declined comment.

The 51-year-old Hathaway is "progressing well and is in satisfactory condition," a hospital report said.

There was no indication how long he will remain away from his job. "They don't know. He'll fully recover but the length of time varies," the department spokesman said. He said Hathaway is conferring regularly from the hospital with interior aides.

White House physician William Lukash said he examined Hathaway earlier this month and recommended that he enter the hospital for observation and treatment, including psychiatric care. Hathaway said he agreed and notified Ford of the decision July 15, the same day he was admitted.

At the time, Hathaway was described as "exhausted" and suffering from weight loss, about 15 pounds.

"We would like him to remain in the hospital until he has shown marked improvement," Capt. Charles Lambdin, deputy commander of the naval hospital, said Monday.

Hathaway was sworn in as Interior secretary June 13, ending a 43-day stretch in which the department lacked a Cabinet-level leader.

Throughout his long confirmation hearings, he was required to defend himself against charges by environmental groups that during his eight years as governor, Hathaway was more concerned with Wyoming's economic growth than with protecting the environment.

Christian Women Hear Speaker

Mrs. John Christian was the inspirational speaker for a luncheon meeting Monday of the Midland Christian Women's Club in the Sheraton Inn-Midland.

Mrs. Roy G. Neely Jr., chairman, welcomed members and guests. David Robard, accompanied by Mrs. Joel Adcock, presented musical selections. They were introduced by Mrs. Billy Gilbreath.

Special prizes were awarded by Mrs. J. W. Chastain, hostess chairman, to Mrs. Bob Vincent and Mrs. J. T. Pillows. Mrs. June Smith won the year's subscription to Progress Magazine.

Mission work was discussed by Mrs. Leverett Francis. There also was a special feature on "From the Old to the New" on creative jewelry.

Mrs. John E. Reid, vice-chairman, announced the Aug. 25 luncheon will feature music by Donna Padgett and Deena Harral. Part of the program will be presented by Mrs. Russell Sexton on "How Green Is Your Thumb?" Chuck Rodgers, Teen Challenge director, will be the speaker.

Persons wishing to attend the luncheon may contact Mrs. Frank Kernan, 683-7149, for reservations. Nursery facilities are available without charge at Trinity Presbyterian Church.

Toy Cleaning

Children's stuffed toys may be cleaned by rubbing cornmeal into the pile or fur and then brushing it out.

Walden, district outside guard, Mrs. Freeman Yardley, Mrs. Austin White, Mrs. Bill Wise, Mrs. Henry Walker, Mrs. E. Robertson and Mrs. Don Twitchell.

The by-laws committee met and new by-law changes were read.

Dear Abby

How To Handle Delicate Matter

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow, past 65, but I still enjoy dining out, and going to movies and the theater.

My hairdresser is wonderful company, and we frequently go places together. (He's gay.) Of course, I pick up the checks, which, I suppose, makes my friend feel uncomfortable. But I can't see myself letting him pay and then trying to settle up with him afterward. (He may not have that much cash on him.)

Is there some way to handle the money matters without embarrassing him?

ANONYMOUS, PLEASE

DEAR ANON: If you frequent the same restaurants often, arrange with the management to bill you by the month, including a percentage for the tips.

Or before the evening's outing, give your escort enough cash to cover everything, and at the end of the evening he can return the change.

DEAR ABBY: I read in the paper that the Catholic church claims 48,701,835 members. Although I am now an atheist, I was baptized and confirmed a Catholic, so I am still counted as a member of their census.

How can I make that number 48,701,834? I would like to excommunicate myself — or sign of the Catholic church.

If you know of any way I can do this, please let me know.

C.J.F.

DEAR C.J.F : I am informed that there is no way to "unbaptize" yourself. You can drop out of the Catholic church. but you can't have your name removed from the baptismal records because it is a legal document.

DEAR ABBY: I feel sorry for "MCP in Newport Beach" whose father badly needed a kidney transplant. The problem is not really a scarcity of willing donors, but, rather, specialization. The individual societies (kidney, bone, eye, etc.) make it so difficult to donate because they require you to donate THEIR part individually. Each society has its own empire, and to split it up for whoever needs you simply cannot donate your entire body to one organization it.

A few years ago, my wife and I made strenuous efforts all over this city (the second largest in the country) to find any organization (medical schools, hospitals, kidney and other societies) that would accept our bodies after death, take over the entire responsibility for distributing needed parts, then bury what was left. There is simply no such central group.

If these various organizations really wanted donors, all they would have to do is get together and form a cooperative group that would take full responsibility for distribution and disposal (without cost to the donor). If they did that, they would all have more donors than they could handle.

Sign me: "ALL OR NOTHING AT ALL" IN LOS ANGELES (or perhaps: "WHY NOT TAKE ALL OF ME?").

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY in care of this newspaper. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Certificates Given Students

Fourteen students who successfully completed a course for food service supervisors offered through Midland College and sponsored by the West Texas Dietetic Association were awarded Certificates of Completion Monday during graduation exercises held in St. Ann's School.

Speaker for the event was Mrs. Jennie House, registered dietitian, who is therapeutic dietitian at Medical Center Hosptal in Odessa. She discussed "The Role of the Food Service Supervisor on the Health Care Team." Dr. David Connery, medical director, Medical Assistance Unit No. 673, State Department of Public Welfare, presented the graduation certificates.

Members of the graduating class now are eligible for membership in the Hospital, Institution and Educational Food Service Society, a national organization for food service supervisors which has met requirements set by the American Dietetic Association, sponsoring organization.

HINTS FROM Heloise

Professional Painters Wear Gloves!

Dear Heloise:

Stupidity, not necessity, is the mother of invention . . .

Pretty stupid to run out of paint thinner while painting an old chest of drawers, right? Even more stupid not to wear rubber gloves, right again?

Result: The newest in hand fashions — abstract designs made with (sob!) oil-based paint (semi-gloss).

Problem: How can I pour tea for the duchess without wearing rubber gloves?

Question: If laundry pre-wash spray stain remover works on fabrics, why wouldn't it work on skin?

Happy Answer: It not only whisks the paint right off, it's a lot easier on hands than paint remover or turpentine.

Now all I have to worry about are my green fingernails.

Marian H. Mundy

P.S. Don't know if this would work with latex paint. I'm not about to smear my hands to find out.

You're a doll! And your hint's really super!

I didn't smear my hands to find our if it works on latex paint, either.

I figures water and a bit of soap is cheaper anyway, and I know that works like a charm.

Heloise

Dear Heloise:

In my sewing, many times I use two or more patterns when making a garment.

In order to place them all back in the correct pattern envelope from which they came, and to avoid mixing them up, I always fold the part of the outside that tells me which piece I have, and also the pattern number.

This also saves time if I wish to use this piece again. I never have to unfold the whole pattern to find what I need.

Eva Leatherwood

LETTER OF THOUGHT

Dear Heloise:

Try to remember a child needs love, hugs, kisses and room (in spirit and adventures), to be a child.

His eye level and viewpoint is limited. Put yourself in his shoes (or at his height) and it'll help to understand him.

Mrs. B.W.

Dear Heloise:

Here is a time saver when preparing tomatoes for canning.

When trying to take the green stem out of them, I found if I take a teaspoon and grab the stem with it, the stem comes right out.

No more sore thumbs.

Cathy Dekker

Dear Heloise:

Here is a suggestion which may help other shorties . . .

If you are not tall enough to see what is on a top shelf and don't relish the idea of climbing on a step stool, keep a mirror with a long handle close by.

It will reflect everything and possibly your carefully placed listing of "what is up there."

Shopper Purchases Some 6-Cent Steaks

GRAND PRAIRIE, Tex. (AP) — While shopping at a supermarket recently, Mrs. Ronald Brown spotted some strip steaks marked at 6 cents each.

She took three of the steaks to the checkout stand.

"The checker said they were mismarked, but the manager came and told her to sell them to me at 6 cents," Mrs. Brown said. She went home with the steaks after paying 18 cents.

HOROSCOPE

by Carroll Righter

(July 24)

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The early part of the day is filled with difficulties between persons in which greed can be the primary cause. The afternoon and evening gives you a chance to achieve success.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) A conversation with financial expert in the morning could prove helpful. Attend the social and make new contacts.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May) A credit matter does not work out right in the morning, but be patient and you can get the backing you need later.

GEMINI (May 71 to June 21) Handle private matters yourself and don't rely so much on others at this time. Remember, work comes before pleasure.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Keep out of any altercation between an ally and an adviser or you get into trouble. Think constructively.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Obeying all rules and regulations is wise or you could easily get into trouble today. Come to agreement with associates.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Don't neglect your work to dash off to some new tangent, but carry through in a steady and wise fashion.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Instead of worrying about some obligation, carry through with it in a conscientious manner and get right results.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have to be careful in the handling of association matters today. A new problem requires intelligent solving.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Show more cooperation with co-workers and get much accomplished. Don't be too blunt with others in the evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Make sure you have in mind before you indulge in it. Sidestep any arguments.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't become involved in arguments at home with kin at this time. Evening is best time to handle correspondence.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Use good sense in the handling of money matters. Change your budget so you can have more working capital in the future.

ON A TIGHT BUDGET?

If you are on a tight budget, buying the right foods at economical prices is very important in providing your family with the good nutrition that is so vital to their health and well-being. Buying our 10 pound freezer packs is the ideal way to purchase beef.

HERE'S WHY!

1. You get the same delicious grain-fed beef available at our counter and at substantial savings.
2. It doesn't take much money. A half beef costs from $200 to $250, but our freezer packs are available for as little as $8.50.
3. It doesn't take a large freezer to store your beef. Our packs fit easily into most refrigerator-top freezers.
4. You can choose which cuts you want. If you want all steak, we have it. Or if you want all ground beef, we have that, too. You don't end up with a freezer half full of cuts you don't like.

Firm To Locate At Industrial Park

Tri City Beverage Inc., Dr. Pepper and 7-Up distributor, has announced the purchase of 3.69 acres at Midland Industrial Park to be used for a distribution facility.

The site is on Market Drive adjacent to Byron Jackson's Centrilift facility.

The soft drink distribution facility will encompass 30,000 square feet of warehousing space and approximately 2,000 square feet of office space.

Cleber Massey, president of Tri City Beverage, said 17 route distributors and a seven-member office staff will be located at the new facility. Gene Menter of Midland will be manager of the outlet.

Martin Allday, president of the Industrial Foundation of Midland Inc., announced the sale of land at Industrial Park during the Midland Chamber of Commerce board of directors meeting today.

Allday said a railway spur is being extended southward in the park to make rail facilities available to several more vacant sites.

With the sale to Tri City Beverage, the Industrial Foundation has 103 acres undeveloped of its original 200 acres. Remaining sites encompass 1- to 20-acre tracts.

Congress Restores Lee's Citizenship

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robert E. Lee IV says he's glad Congress finally set the record straight about his great grandfather, even if it's only for history's sake.

"It was an excellent thing for Congress to do," Lee IV said Tuesday after the House approved and sent to the White House a resolution restoring the Confederate general's U.S. citizenship. "It closes the historical chapter in Lee's life."

The House passed the measure 407-10 after the Senate approved it unanimously April 10. President Ford's signature is expected. Most of the "no" votes came from Northern Democrats who wanted the resolution to include amnesty for Vietnam war draft evaders.

Lee IV, 50, a McLean, Va., businessman, watched the House action from the spectators' gallery with more than passing interest. Then he headed for the Capitol's Statuary Hall to be photographed beside the bronze statue of his great grandfather.

The Civil War hero's great grandson told a reporter he can't figure out why it took 110 years to get around to restoring Lee's citizenship.

"I just don't know. You should ask a congressman about that," he said.

What difference does this make for Lee's descendants?

"None whatsoever for me and my family, except it's the end of the history," Lee IV said.

Lee formally petitioned the government for amnesty and sent an oath of allegiance to President Andrew Johnson shortly after he surrendered to Union forces at Appomattox Courthouse in 1865.

The oath evidently never reached Johnson. It was discovered in 1970, buried in the National Archives among other Civil War documents.

Rep. Herbert E. Harris III, D-Va., who spearheaded the Lee citizenship drive along with Sen. Harry F. Byrd Jr., Ind-Va., called the long delay in acting on Lee's request "the unfortunate epitome of government inaction."

Pare Named Federal Employe Of Year

Louis A. Pare, assistant manager of Airways Facility Sector of the Federal Aviation Administration here, was named Federal Employe of the Year during presentations at Midland Regional Air Terminal Tuesday.

Pare was presented with the award by Henry Newman, director of the Southwest Region of the FAA.

Pare was cited for his distinguished service by the Midland FAA office. He is a 20-year veteran of the FAA, and is active in civic activities in Midland.

Pare and his wife Judith live at 3620 Imperial St. with their children Louis II, Arthur, Diane, Suzanne, Alan and Jeanne.

He is a member of Saint Anne's Catholic Church, and is a Scoutmaster and commissioner on the Buffalo Trail Council. Pare is the Catholic Religous Awards representative for the Diocese of San Angelo.

At a press conference following the presentation, Newman complimented the regional air facility here for its major efforts in improving airport runways. He said the next major endeavor at the airport should be the extension of the primary runway from 7,000 to 9,000 feet.

Concerning the fencing being constructed at the airport, Newman defended the security precaution taken at airports in spite of the reductions in aircraft hijackings. "Aircraft operations areas should be secure," he said.

The aircraft industry is in a "learning experience" type of situation, Newman said, "complacency is the biggest enemy of safety."

Newman directs FAA programs throughout Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Arizona and Louisiana.

Amusement Park Mishap Kills Boy

NEW YORK (AP) — A breezy ride on a Coney Island ferris wheel ended in death for a teen-age boy who was decapitated when his head became caught in the steel frame of an amusement park ride.

Binziendo Morales, 15, of Brooklyn, opened the door of the enclosed car in which he was riding Tuesday afternoon and his head jammed between a suspension bar and the door, police said.

Morales was a summer employe at Jack's Kiddy Park, where the fatal accident occurred, police said.

Mathews Confirmed As HEW Secretary

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Tuesday confirmed Dr. Forrest David Mathews, President of the University of Alabama, to be secretary of Health, Education and Welfare.

Mathews, 39, will succeed Caspar W. Weinberger in the cabinet post.

Danger Of Default Looms In New York City Future

NEW YORK (AP) — No union leader, fortune teller or fiscal expert seems to know exactly what will happen if this city runs out of cash in three weeks. There are a number of possibilities but no precise precedents.

The danger of default looms if the state-created Municipal Assistance Corp. (Big Mac) is forced to sell more of the $3 billion in bonds it was authorized to sell to free the city from its fiscal bind.

And the chances of such a sale were notably diminished Monday when Big Mac's first offering was released from syndication and quickly dropped 10 points, giving the banks a paper loss of some $70 million.

City Comptroller Harrison Goldin forecasts that the city's accounts will be empty by Aug. 14, and the next day it will have a $140 million pafroll to meet. A week later $791 million in debt service is due.

The city has three basic options in meeting this problem. It can cut back further on current operating expenses so the Big Mac bonds can be marketed, it can default by failing to pay the obligations as they come due or it can seek some form of municipal bankruptcy.

What Mayor Abraham D. Beame and Big Mac directors are working on now are a series of cutbacks that would not only pare the budget but demonstrate that the city is serious about fiscal reform.

The second option is default. Once unthinkable, it is now openly discussed and some municipal labor leaders have said they would rather have everyone go down in that boat rather than make further union sacrifices.

But when those leaders were asked what it would actually mean Tuesday, they were vague and refused specific comment on what affect it would have on their members.

If it did default, the city could try to negotiate some out-of-court arrangement with its principal creditors.

The banks would be a key here. At the end of 1974, the nation's banks held nearly half of the $208 billion in outstanding municipal bonds and more was held in bank trust departments.

The third alternative is bankruptcy. Analysts consider that it would be a practical impossibility for the city to claim bankruptcy under the provisions of Chapter IX of the Federal Bankruptcy Act.

That provides for municipal bankruptcy but requires that creditors owning at least 51 per cent of the dollar amount of securities must have accepted the plan of composition that is filed with the court.

Mexico Planning To Cut Imports

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Plans are in the works for the Mexican government to ban imports of unnecessary items such as toys and liquor for the rest of this year.

The cutback will be effected by lowering the number of importation permits issued, according to Industry and Commerce Secretary Antonio Calderon Martinez.

Imports of luxury goods increased 11 per cent to $2.9 billion during the first six months of 1975 compared with same period last year, he said.

Malpractice Suits Often Arise From Differences In Medical Opinion

By HARRY NELSON
The Los Angeles Times

Sometimes the issue of a doctor's competency becomes entangled in something the medical profession and its attorneys call "honest differences in scientific opinion."

Patients who have been prescribed a particular treatment by one doctor — but told by another doctor to avoid that treatment — may be pawns in such a controversy.

Medicine abounds with such differences of opinion. Here are some examples:

—For many years the standard treatment for breast cancer has been a radical mastectomy, a surgery that removes not only the breast but a good deal of surrounding tissue as well.

Recently this radical approach has been questioned by some surgeons who feel a simpler operation is sufficient.

Although no lawsuits are believed to have been filed yet, it is possible that one will be some day by a woman claiming she has been disfigured unnecessarily by the surgeon who did the radical.

It is equally conceivable that a patient who has undergone the simpler operation, and in whom the cancer has recurred, will sue her surgeon on grounds the operation was not sufficiently radical to cure the cancer.

—Oral drugs that can be taken by diabetics instead of insulin injections have become popular in recent years. However, within the last couple of years, several national studies have concluded that persons taking the oral drugs have a higher risk of heart attacks.

Should diabetics stop taking the drugs? No, says a sizable segment of diabetes specialists. They say that in spite of the fact that the national studies were done at major teaching hospitals, the conclusions are not valid because the results were not evaluated properly.

But the critics of the oral drugs stick to their guns, and the controversy rages on. Patients (and their lawyers) who have read about the national studies wonder, when their doctors prescribe oral drugs, whether the doctors are doing the right thing — especially if the patient has a heart attack.

—Should anticoagulant drugs be given patients who have had a heart attack or a stroke, in order to prevent a second one? Cardiologists have been arguing the merits of this preventive treatment for many years. Some eminent specialists say it works. Others deny the benefits and cite the risks.

But sometimes doctors do things that cannot be justified on grounds of a difference in scientific opinion. Such cases, if the patient or his lawyer learns about them, often end up in court. An example is an object such as a sponge left in the patient by a surgeon.

There are cases on record of surgical instruments, needles, forceps and safety pins left in patients. There is one case in which a towel was discovered in the patient's abdomen 17 years after the operation.

According to a survey taken in the mid-1960s, complications resulting from casts applied improperly to fractured bones were the second most common reason for filing malpractice suits. Leaving a foreign object in the patient was No. 1.

In extreme cases, a cast that is too tightly applied can stop circulation and cause gangrene, making an amputation necessary.

A patient also might begin to wonder about a doctor's competency if he performs a procedure without first making a thorough examination of the patient to be sure the procedure is not contra-indicated.

An example is the doctor who performs an operation without knowing (because he did not do the preliminary workup) that the patient is anemic. If the patient ends up hemorrhaging, he or she may be in trouble — and so should be the doctor if he demonstrates that kind of incompetence more than once.

Self-Management By Employes Called Key To Survival

ITHACA, N.Y. (AP) —"Self-management is synonymous with the liberation of working people," says Jaroslav Vanek. "The founders of this country gave us only half of our total rights 200 years ago when they provided us with political freedom. We must extend these rights to include economic freedom if we want to survive as a free democracy."

Vanek, who directs the Program on Participation and Labor-Managed Systems at Cornell University's Center for International Studies, explains that the economic system of self-management applies basic democratic principles to the workplace. In a self-managed firm all workers — from the janitor to the president — have an equal voice in determining the organization of the work to be accomplished.

Many third-world nations regard self-management as the most desirable road to economic development, Vanek said. He describes the United States as "the most underdeveloped country in the world" when it comes to self-management, but adds it is catching on even here. More than 500 persons from the United States, Europe and many developing nations attended the recent Second International Conference on Self-Management held at Cornell and organized largely by Vanek.

How does the plan work? Under the present system of capitalism, Vanek explains, a company's stockholders cast votes on major corporate decisions in proportion to the number of shares of stock they own.

Under self-management, voting shares become nonvoting shares. Their owners get an annual return — a percentage income based on total investment in the company or based on the company's performance.

Voting power is transferred to the company's workers, each of whom gets one vote. They establish working conditions, hours, company policies — even their own salaries.

"In a small company decisions can be made by consensus or by direct vote. In larger organizations it may be necessary to elect workers' councils, like we elect representatives to Congress. Self-managed workers have the power to establish whatever organizational structure best suits their needs," Vanek points out.

Vanek, who has been developing the theory of self-management for more than 12 years, feels that its advantages are numerous and that America's long-range economic future depends on it.

"Workers who have a direct voice in what their labor accomplishes enjoy tremendous freedom — a freedom even more significant than political freedom. Political oppression is not constantly experienced, but the oppression of working for a system in which you have no voice is felt eight hours a day, five or six days a week."

This economic freedom leads to greater productivity, Vanek said, and a higher quality product. "No worker can take pride in slapping together parts for a machine he knows is badly designed. The experience of self-managed companies shows that workers will choose to make higher quality products — products in which they can take personal pride."

When workers set company policy, they don't lay one another off during recessions, added the Cornell professor. Instead, they choose to reduce all salaries or working hours, and lower the price of their product to stimulate sales. Therefore, says Vanek, self-management produces greater job securit which produces happier peopl

Without a move toward se management, Vanek predic that more American factori will be shut down and moved cheap labor markets in Asia.

Without a move toward se management, he also predic that in 10 years most of o corporations will be controll by oil-producing countri which will hold much of t world's capital. If business become self-managed, oil-pr ducing countries might inv in American firms, but the d cisions about running th firms would remain in t hands of American workers, says.

Butch Cassidy's Sister Says Much Of Legend Wrong

VERNAL, Utah (AP) — Much of what is written about outlaw Butch Cassidy is myth, says his 91-year-old sister, who claims the famous badman died quietly in 1937 in the West, not in Bolivia.

"It's an unmarked grave, in a spot that's a family secret. But at least now, Butch Cassidy ... isn't going to be hunted any more," says Lola Parker Betenson.

In a recent interview, Mrs. Betenson characterized her brother — Robert LeRoy Parker — as a dependable boy with ambitions and many friends.

"It's not that I'm trying to make light of what he did. He was death on banks, no getting around it. But there was goodness, too. I have letters from people throughout the United States telling me of the kindnesses he did," Mrs. Betenson said.

While the outlaw committed his share of crimes, she said many of the stories about him were exaggerated. He couldn't have done everything he was accused of doing because a man couldn't travel that fast in those days, she said.

"But his actions really hurt the family. When he turned to crime, he stopped writing home. But every time my mother would read about him, she'd get just a little sadder.

"We still loved him. But none of us approved or understood what he was doing. And it hurt our mother so much," Mrs. Betenson said.

At one point, Cassidy wanted to quit his outlaw life, but "he was too ashamed to come home. So he got in deeper and deeper," she said.

Mrs. Betenson participated recently in the first meeting of the National Association of Outlaw and Lawman History at Brown's Park in northeastern Utah. The location is one of many used by Cassidy and other outlaws.

Mrs. Betenson said her brother picked up his outlaw name in two stages. He took the last name of a friend, Mike Cassidy. Butch he got from working in a butcher shop in Rock Springs, Wyo.

"The people used to call him the Robin Hood of the West. He helped so many, that's why he never got turned in. In his heart, he believed simply that the rich man had too much and the poor man too little. So he set about redistributing things a bit, that's all," she said, adding that her brother never killed a man.

Mrs. Betenson, along with Dora Flack, recently completed a book entitled, "Butch Cassidy, My Brother."

"The Pinkerton detective files show that in 1909 he shot his seriously wounded friend, the Sundance Kid, and then committed suicide rather than face capture in Bolivia. But there is no real proof to back it up.

"And I know it didn't happen, because he came home and stayed on the family ranch in 1925," Mrs. Betenson said. She said Cassidy told the family that a friend of his had identified the body in Bolivia as his so that he would not be pursued.

"You know, he would have quit long before he did if they had let him. But like he told us, they like to keep him there," she said.

Dagmar To Appear On Show

By JAY SHARBUTT

NEW YORK (AP) — Dagmar. For older male viewers, a happy TV memory, a busty blonde who starred in NBC's pioneering late-night "Broadway Open House" variety show from mid-1950 until it died in August 1951.

I never saw her, though. The show began well after my bedtime. I was only 10 years old when "Open House" started on television.

"I was, too," Dagmar laughed throatily. "No, I might have been 12."

'Dumb Blonde'

Be that as it may, she and other "Open House" regulars — including comic Jerry Lester and announcer Wayne Howell — are gathering Thursday to relive those good old live TV days on NBC's "Tomorrow" show.

"I played a dumb blonde on the show," Dagmar explained for the benefit of younger tads who never saw the program. "I talked in a very high voice and used to read little plays or poems or do lectures.

"I supposedly was the band singer, but I never sang. When Jerry walked out the first night, he said, 'Who's that?' And someone said, 'That's my new band singer, Dagmar.' And he said, "Does she sing?"

"And the other guy said, 'I dunno. I'm afraid to ask her'."

Fine Sense Of Humor

That's Dagmar, a lady with a fine, sardonic sense of humor who was born about 54 years ago in Huntington, W.Va. Her real name is Virginia Ruth Egnor and she now lives in New York City.

She says she's been in semi-retirement from performing since the death of her agent-husband, Dick Hinds, several years ago. Her "Tomorrow" shot will be her first TV appearance in about four years.

Dagmar said she broke into show biz here in the mid-'40s as the straight woman for various comedians.

Bob Hope discovered her, she said, and after that "everybody started calling me every time they wanted a sexy-looking girl to walk across the stage or play a nurse or a secretary."

Ford News Conference Coverage Now In Doubt

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS News chief Richard S. Salant says CBS live coverage of President Ford's future news conferences is in doubt for the time being. The reason: An "equal time" question.

It was raised by CBS after Ford's early announcement this month that he'll seek another term in 1976. It involves the Federal Communications Commission's "equal time" law on broadcast coverage of political candidates.

According to the FCC, CBS last week asked the agency to reverse a 1964 ruling and exempt live coverage of presidential news conferences from the equal time law.

CBS contends that any legally-qualified Republican candidate opposing Ford for the presidency might now be able to demand equal time on the air within seven days of live broadcasts of a Ford news conference.

There aren't any such candidates now, but CBS notes that several have been mentioned as getting ready to enter the GOP ring, among them former California Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Milt Gross, an FCC specialist on political broadcast laws, says legally-qualified Democratic presidential candidates currently can't demand equal time because they're considered competing only among themselves now.

"Between now and the primary elections and the (Democratic) party convention next year, only the Republicans would have the right to ask for equal time against President Ford," he said.

The issue has lain dormant since 1964. That year, after a CBS query, the FCC ruled 34 days before the November elections that live coverage of presidential news conferences (President Johnson was seeking re-election then) wasn't exempt from equal time demands.

Goss said the issue didn't come up in 1968 because Johnson wasn't seeking re-election. Nor, he said, did it come up in June 1972, when President Nixon, having become a declared candidate six months earlier, held his first televised news conference in more than a year.

He said now that CBS has petitioned the FCC on the matter, "the commission will review our 1964 decision and see if we should change it or not." He said he didn't know when a ruling would come.

Salant said the equal time question is acute because Ford has promised to hold an average of one news conference a month. He was asked if CBS will stop its live coverage until an FCC decision.

"I can't answer that," he said. "I don't want to decide that until it stares me in the face." He later was asked if CBS' live coverage of Ford's news conferences is in doubt until an FCC ruling.

"Yes, that certainly is true," he said. "We certainly have not made the decision—until this is cleared up—that we'll go ahead anyhow."

Wheeling, Dealing Part Of Record Biz

By MATT YANCEY

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — How can one side of a record sound great while the other often is less than mediocre? And, why is it that a singer will have a few big hits and then often fade into obscurity?

Both occurrences are common. Sometimes, they are blamed on the inner workings of the music industry.

According to singer-songwriter Ray Griff, what reaches the public often is the result of deals among various factions in the recording industry.

"It's not fair," Griff says. "The customer is being robbed of good music. He's not getting his money's worth."

Griff came to Nashville as a songwriter in 1964 at the urging of Johnny Horton and Jim Reeves. He soon formed his own publishing company and later began recording albums of his own as a singer.

Many singers, songwriters and record company executives form their own publishing companies after they've had a few successes, Griff says.

He said a singer or producer then will lean toward a song that he owns an interest in rather than what is the best available on the market.

"I have seen artists who have had hit singles and who are hot, hot, hot," Griff says. "They begin to record songs from their own publishing firms simply because they get more of the action and nobody ever hears of them again."

Griff thinks a performer's status comes more from the quality of songs he sings than his voice or other traits.

"Most of the stature arrives from how many hit singles a person has," he says. "If he's selling 100,000 to 150,000 singles, the promoters and fairs will want him and he'll be working the road a lot."

Griff admits making a couple of deals over the years, himself. "I was flat broke at the time," he says. They included selling some rights to Faron Young on an old top-chart single, "Step Aside," and signing over the recording commissions on "Who's Gonna Play This Old Piano" to Jerry Lee Lewis for a year.

He advises aspiring songwriters to get with a publishing firm "that has enough weight to get around the deals."

Griff now has turned most of his publishing business over to a New York firm in hopes of developing more of a reputation as a singer. He recently signed with Capitol Records after leaving the ABC-Dot label.

Scali Will Return To TV News Post

NEW YORK (AP) — An American Broadcasting Company spokesman said Monday night that former chief U.S. delegate to the United Nations John Scali will return to ABC News shortly as a Washington correspondent.

The spokesman said ABC and Scali, 57, have reached agreement on his return to the network, where he was a diplomatic correspondent before entering government.

Bardot Denies Wedding Rumors

SAINT TROPEZ, France (AP) — Brigitte Bardot has denied that she will marry or that she is pregnant.

In a statement, the French film star said she "formally denies all the rumors about her private life and matrimonial plans."

Earlier friends said Miss Bardot would marry her boyfriend, Miroslav Brozek, in August.

The same friends said she denied a report published in London that she was pregnant. They quoted her as saying, "I am not pregnant and I regret it."

Actor Hospitalized With Chest Pains

EVERGREEN PARK, Ill. (AP) — Pat O'Brien, star of the stage, movies and radio, has been admitted to a hospital after complaining of chest pains.

O'Brien, 75, was admitted Tuesday to the cardiac care unit where his condition was listed as stable. Officials said O'Brien did not suffer a heart attack, but was scheduled for further tests.

Permian Basin OIL & GAS LOG

tests, it flowed gas at the estimated, daily rate of 1 million cubic feet, through Canyon perforations at 7,694-7,704 feet.

Location is 660 feet from south and west lines of section 16, block 22, H&TC survey, three miles northeast of the Big Salute (Canyon) oil field and the same distance northwest of Canyon oil, and six miles northwest of Cisco oil pay in the Conger field.

Clinton Reports Devonian Gauges

Clinton Oil Co., operating from Midland, has reported four-point gauges for its No. 1-15 TXL, south offset to the Devonian gas pay opener in the Pegasus, South field of Upton County.

It flowed through Devonian perforations at 12,043-12,307 feet, which had been fractured with 130,000 gallons and 185,000 pounds, at the following per day rates: 2½ hours on an 8-64-inch choke, 625,000 cubic feet, plus 7.72 barrels of distillate; two hours on a 10-64-inch choke, 1.260 million cubic feet, plus 15 barrels of distillate; 3½ hours on a 12-64-inch choke, 1.8 million cubic feet, plus 28.02 barrels of distillate, and three hours on a 13-64-inch choke, 2.4 million cubic feet, plus 51.54 barrels of distillate.

Operator was calculating absolute open flow potential.

Wellsite is 660 feet from north and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 15, block 41, T-5-S, T&P survey, 16 miles northeast of Crane.

The discovery, Clinton No. 1-10 Virgil Powell, was completed in May for 4.5 million cubic feet of gas and 938 barrels of 54-gravity condensate per day, through perforations at 12,010-12,255 feet.

Amoco Reports Sutton Activity

Amoco Production Co. staked locations for two projects in Sutton County and reported potential test on a third.

No. 2-J Edwin S. Mayer Jr. will be drilled as an 8,625-foot Ellenburger wildcat ¾ mile west of the Mayer Ranch (Canyon) field and 20 miles northwest of Sonora.

Drillsite is 1,633 feet from south and 1,600 feet from east lines of section 37, block EF, GC&SF survey, abstract 135.

Amoco No. 2-C Mrs. May M. Ray will be drilled ⅝ mile northwest of the Aldwell Ranch (Canyon) field, 24 miles southwest of Sonora.

Site is 250 feet from north and 1,000 feet from west lines of section 35, CCSD&RGNG survey. Hole will be drilled to 10,300 feet.

Amoco No. 14-C Edwin S. Mayer Jr. has been completed as a three-mile north extension to the Sawyer (Strawn) field, eight miles northwest of Sonora.

The well finaled for a calculated, absolute open flow of 7.3 million cubic feet of dry gas per day, through perforations from 7,628 to 7,772 feet.

Wellsite is 1,170 feet from south and 3,960 feet from east lines of section 50, block D, GC&SF survey.

Tom Green Tester Swabs Canyon Oil

Cities Service Oil Co. No. 1-A V. E. Probandt Estate, reentry project, ½ mile east of the discovery of the Probandt (Canyon) field in Tom Green County, swabbed new oil from the Canyon.

It swabbed 20 hours through perforations at 7,119-7,131 feet, which had been washed with 500 gallons of mud acid, making 10 barrels of new oil, five barrels of basic sediment and 60 barrels of load water. On the last run of the swab, recovery was 50 per cent new oil.

It originally was drilled by the Dow Chemical Co., and plugged and abandoned in October 1973 at 8,800 feet.

Location is 1,800 feet from north and 467 feet from west lines of section 56, block 7, H&TC survey, abstract 8288, 18 miles southwest of Water Valley. The confirmer to the field is in Sterling County.

Andrews Sector Gains Extension

A ¾-mile southwest extension to Dean production in the Hutex field of Northeast Andrews County apparently has been assured with the flowing of 59.28 barrels of oil in 15 hours, at Estoril Producing Corp., Midland, No. 1-H University.

Flow was through Dean perforations at 9,662-9,818 feet, which had been treated with 5,000 gallons of acid and 50,000 gallons and 190,000 pounds of fracture. Testing continued.

It spots 660 feet from north and east lines of section 20, block 7, ULS, 19 miles east of Andrews.

Frizzell Finals Runnels Wells

Frizzell Exploration Co. of Abilene has reported potential tests on a pair of projects five miles southeast of Wingate in Runnels County.

One of the wells, No. 1 A. B. Gray, 1¼ miles northeast of Goen sand production in the Poe multipay field, finaled for a daily pumping potential of 85 barrels of 43-gravity oil, with gas-oil ratio of 657-1.

Frizzell asks it be designated the discovery well of the Pat Gray (Goen sand) field.

Site is 620 feet from north and 1,400 feet from east lines of section 80, block 63, HT&B survey.

Frizzell No. 1 Ray L. Parker, ¾ mile southwest of No. 1 Gray and ⅝ mile northeast of the Poe (Goen sand) field, finaled for a 24-hour flowing potential of 160 barrels of 45-gravity oil, with gas-oil ratio of 778-1, from open hole at 4,400-403 feet. Flow was through a ½-inch choke.

Location is 1,717 feet from south and 467 feet from west lines of section 80, block 63, HT&B survey.

Midlanders Plan Tests In Lea Area

Wood & Locker, Inc., Midland, will attempt to reopen the Williams, North (Pennsylvanian) field of Lea County, N.M., with the reentry of No. 1-BL State, depleted opener of the field.

It was completed in 1961 by Exxon Corp. (Humble Oil & Refining Co.), at a total depth of 12,497 feet. Perforated section in the Pennsylvanian was 11,050-11,060 feet.

Location is 330 feet from north and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 16-13s-32e, 13 miles south of Caprock.

Amoco To Reenter Andrews Project

Amoco Production Co. has filed application to reenter and plug back to wildcat depth of 10,500 feet, at No. 1-ET University, Andrews County recent Strawn pay opener in the Block 6, Northeast multizone field. Operator plans tests of the Wolfcamp and Spraberry zones.

It was completed June 19 for 65 barrels of oil per day, through a 10-64-inch choke and perforations at 11,097-11,110 feet.

Drilled as an offset to Silurian production, it has a total depth of 12,615 feet, and is plugged back to 11,146 feet, in 5½-inch casing seated at 11,210 feet.

The test spots 1,827 feet from north and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 25, block 6, ULS, 10 miles southwest of Patricia.

Western Oil Spots Wildcat In Eddy

Western Oil Producers, Roswell, N.M., has planned No. 1 Bedingfield as a 1,500-foot San Andres wildcat in Eddy County, N.M., five miles northeast of Artesia.

It spots 1,650 feet from south and 660 feet from west lines of section 15-16s-26e, seven miles northeast of the Eagle Creek (San Andres) oil pool.

Gas Well Extends Field In Sutton

Windsor Gas Corp. No. 2-188 Duke Wilson Gas Unit No. 17 has been completed as a ⅝-mile north extension to the Shurley Ranch (Canyon) field in Southwest Sutton County.

Operator reported a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 580,000 cubic feet of dry gas per day. Pay is behind perforations from 7,486 to 7,524 feet and was fractured with 30,000 gallons.

Site is 850 feet from west and 1,400 feet from south lines of section 188, block C, HE&WT survey.

GIFT FOR MUSEUM — Mrs. Joe Elliott of Midland and Homer Fort, director of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame, display oil painting of Santa Rita No. 2 done by Mrs. Elliott. The painting of the rig on the museum grounds was presented to the museum by Mrs. Elliott. It will become a permanent exhibit. The frame was donated by Chock Williams of Midland.

Third Oiler Finals In Terry Sector

Williamson & Underwood of Midland completed No. 1 Reed as a third well and ½-mile east extension to the Mound Lake, North (Fusselman) field of East Central Terry County.

It flowed 528 barrels of 40.3-gravity oil, no water, on 24-hour potential test. Production was through a ⅝-inch choke and open hole pay zone from 11,174-11,193 feet, which had been washed with 1,000 gallons. Gas-oil ratio was too small to measure.

Drilled to 11,193 feet, it has 4½-inch casing set at 11,174 feet.

Location is 660 feet from south and west lines of section 39, block E, EL&RR survey, 12 miles northeast of Brownfield.

House Report Predicts Gas Shortage May Be Emergency

By JAMES GERSTENZANG

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Ford administration says it is ready to deal with natural gas shortages next winter, while a House report predicts the situation will amount to an emergency.

The House Government Operations Committee, in a report Tuesday, warned that if predictions of the natural gas industry and gas users are accurate, "the natural gas shortage and resulting industrial, commercial and residential curtailments begin to assume the proportions of a national emergency."

It said that although federal agencies know which areas will be severely hit, they "are not prepared at this time with advance plans to cope with adverse effects on employment and industrial production."

But the Federal Energy Administration said it is making recommendations to President Ford to deal with the possible economic impact of the shortage and is ready to deal with the problem.

Bruce Pasternack, the FEA's deputy assistant administrator for policy, acknowledged that gas shortages could have economic repercussions but said: "I think we're fully prepared to deal with the problem."

"I'm not convinced of the crisis proportions," he said. "We've got an absolutely fully coordinated effort."

The report predicted that curtailments could be 45 per cent greater than in previous years and alternate sources of fuel will most likely be unavailable.

"The natural gas emergency of 1975-76 represents an accelerating pattern which may become more severe in future years," it said. "No department, agency, or office of the executive branch exercised lead responsibility to coordinate preparation for the impending natural gas emergency."

Pasternack said an interagency organiztion, the Energy Research Council task force, would submit a draft proposal to Ford within 10 days and that a final report due Sept. 1 would assess all economic impacts of a gas shortage and possible government responses.

The committee, in its report, said the government "should have been hard at work long ago" in this area.

As a result of the government's failures, the committee warned, "the bicentennial months of November 1975 through April 1976 may very well conjure up realistic visions of Washington's discomfort at Valley Force."

Six Texas Cities Have Crime Increase Above U.S. Average

By The Associated Press

Six large Texas cities, topped by Beaumont with a 47.4 per cent increase in serious crimes during the first quarter of this year, were above the national average increase of 18 per cent.

FBI figures released Tuesday for Texas cities with a population exceeding 100,000, showed Beaumont's crime jump contrasted with Houston's 4.8 per cent increase and San Antonio's 9.5 per cent climb.

Other cities exceeding the 18 per cent national average were Irving, with a 41.8 per cent increase; Amarillo, 39.2 per cent; Lubbock, 36.6 per cent; El Paso, 25.7 per cent; and Dallas, up 19.7 per cent.

The FBI Uniform Crime Report said other cities' serious crime increases included Fort Worth, 17.8 per cent; Corpus Christi, 15.9 per cent; Austin, 14.3 per cent, and Arlington, 10.5 per cent.

Serious crimes include murder (including non-negligent killing and manslaughter), forcible rape, robbery, aggravated assault, burglary (including breaking and entering), larceny—theft and motor vehicle theft.

According to figures supplied by the Beaumont Police Department to the FBI, there were 1,551 serious crimes there in the first three months of 1974. During the first quarter of this year, there were 2,287 reported crimes.

In Irving, there were 1,235 reported serious crimes last year from January to March, as compared to 1,752 in 1975.

Amarillo logged 1,612 crimes during the 1974 period. The city recorded 1,612 during the same period this year.

In Lubbock, there were 1,993 reported serious crimes as compared to the 1975 figure of 2,722.

El Paso recorded 5,339 during the 1974 period. That statistic rose this year to 6,714.

Dallas recorded 18,254 during 1974. There were 21,853 in 1975.

Fort Worth statistics revealed a 5,807 record for the 1974 period, compared to 6,845 in this year.

In Corpus Christi, there were 3,557, 1974 serious crimes, with 4,121 in 1975 reported during the first quarter of 1975.

Austin's crime rate, rising 14.3 per cent, was based on a record of 4,334 reported crimes during the first quarter of 1974, compared with 4,956 during 1975.

Arlington recorded 1,606 during the 1974 period. There were 1,775 crimes reported during the first quarter of this year.

San Antonio's statistics rose from 12,137 reported crimes last year to 13,295 during the first quarter of this year.

And Houston, which showed the lowest crime increase of all Texas' large cities, reported 20,609 crimes during the first quarter of 1974 as compared to 21,589 during the first three months of this year.

Cities To Resist Electric Rate Hike

HOUSTON (AP) — Mayor Fred Hofheinz has called a meeting Friday with the mayors of 71 area cities to discuss ways of combating Houston Lighting & Power Company's proposed $76.2 million rate increase.

HL&P, which serves 11 area counties including Harris, proposed the boost last week. The increase would raise Houston residential rates from an average of $23.18 to $26.76.

Gave Up Claim

Spain gave up its claim to eastern Florida on Washington's birthday, Feb. 22, 1819, for $5 million.

Six years ago the parents of Monique left their then two-week-old daughter with Mae Ducharm of Reno, Nev., saying they would be back in three weeks. They never returned. Today, Mrs. Ducharm, 68, is the only mother Monique, left, has ever known. (AP Wirephoto.)

Babysitter Becomes Mother To Child

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Six years ago, a young black couple asked Mae Ducharm to babysit their two-week-old daughter for a few weeks.

The 68-year-old white woman still has the child, and, to little Monique, she is the only mother the black youngster has ever known.

Mrs. Ducharm said the couple told her they were in show business and would be back for Monique in three weeks. She said they left two baby suits, an extra diaper and $100.

She said that when Monique was three months old, her mother called to say she was in a Las Vegas jail for stabbing her husband. One year later, she came back to see the child. That was almost five years ago and she hasn't returned, Mrs. Ducharm said.

"We sit and watch television and have ice cream cones at night," Mrs. Ducharm says of Monique. "And every night she says, 'Good night, Mother. I love you. I love you, Mother.'"

Mrs. Ducharm, a widow with three grown daughters, lives in a trailer home. Her only income is $125 a month from Social Security and $75 a month from the sale of a house.

Last summer, Mrs. Ducharm said she sought medical aid for Monique's asthma condition through the Washoe County Welfare Division, and as a result a case worker learned Mrs. Ducharm was not the girl's legal guardian.

"They told me they wanted to put Monique up for adoption or in a foster home," Mrs. Ducharm said. "I just sat down and cried. They said I was too old to have her and that my trailer was too small.

"I told them they're not going to take her away from me. She's just like my own. I've raised little Baby Doll since she was two weeks old. I call her my little Baby Doll."

A friend told her to ask the NAACP and the Reno Race Relations Center for help. She said representatives of those two groups talked with the caseworker and that the welfare division has not mentioned adoption or foster homes to her since.

Mrs. Ducharm said a representative of the Race Relations Center told her to take Monique to a physician for treatment of her asthma and that the bill would be paid somehow.

WINNING RUN — Philadelphia's Greg Luzinski comes in to score as Atlanta catcher Vic Correll waits for the throw Tuesday night. It was the only run the Phillies needed for a 1-0 victory. See story on page 3B. (AP Wirephoto.)

NFL, Players Back To 1974 War

WASHINGTON (AP) — A year ago, the National Football League was in a turmoil with the players in the middle of a 42-day strike against the owners over what they called the "freedom issues," centering on the "Rozelle compensation rule."

The 1974 season got under way when the players, unable to break the ice with the owners, reported and played without a contract.

The turmoil remains this year since there still is no collective bargaining agreement. The "Rozelle Rule," the subject of a just-completed, 55-day trial in Minneapolis, still is the major stumbling block to a new contract.

Representatives of the NFL Management Council, the owners' bargaining agent, and the NFL Players Association met again today under the auspieces of a federal mediator in an attempt to break the deadlock.

"As the 1975-76 season of the NFL approaches, the issues necessary for a collective bargaining agreement . . . remain in dispute," said James F. Scearce, deputy national director of the mediation service in a July 8 letter calling the meeting.

"Both organizations and the players and clubs they represent must exert every effort in order to reach a satisfactory conclusion to these long-standing and unresolved issues," he said.

The players union submitted a list of demands, slightly different from last year, to the owners on April 4. Missing was a call for the elimination of the "Rozelle Rule."

Ed Garvey, association executive director, said the rule would not be part of the bargaining because it was being challenged in the courts. Two weeks later, the Management Council responded that all issues must be bargained, including the "Rozelle Rule."

The owners said the option clause, the waiver system and trades, along with the draft and compensation rule, all involve issues of player retention and movement.

When an athlete plays out the option of his contract, he technically is a free agent, clear of obligations to the club he belonged to and eligible to offer his services to all 26 clubs, or even to other leagues.

The Kicker

However, if he is signed by a different club in the NFL, that organization is required to compensate his former employer for its investment in him. If two NFL clubs can not agree on his worth, Commissioner Pete Rozelle is empowered to stipulate compensation.

The players have charged that the compensation rule inhibits their freedom. The owners claim a club needs to be compensated for the investment in the player.

Thirty-five players have moved to other clubs since 1962, when the compensation clause was enacted.

Rozelle has had to intervene in four cases—the moves of Dave Parks from San Francisco to New Orleans; Pat Fischer from St. Louis to Washington; Phil Olsen from New England to Los Angeles and Dick Gordon from Chicago to Los Angeles.

Lafayette Halts 8-Game Streak With Big First

LAFAYETTE, La. — Lafayette's Drillers erupted for seven runs in the first inning against Mike Weiss and breezed to a series-evening 9-1 victory over the Midland Cubs here Tuesday night.

Weiss, 2-4, pitched to eight batters in the first inning and retired no one. The big blow was a three-run homer by Gary Alexander.

Dennis Lamp finally came in to retire the side, but not before giving up a two-run single to Scotty Wolfe.

After that Lamp pitched brilliantly until the seventh when the Drillers pushed over two runs.

Jackson beat Shreveport, so the Cubs still remain six back in the Texas League West Division race, but otherwise it was a frustrating night for Midland.

Midland left the bases loaded in the second, seventh and eighth and left two runners on in the third and ninth.

Midland's lone run came in the eighth when Frank Ricelli walked Al Montreuil and Bill Huisman and then Jose Quezada came in to walk Mike Sember and Joe Wallis.

Ricelli got the win, his 11th in 16 decisions.

The game was played in a drizzle and had to be moved from the original site, Abbeville, back to Lafayette.

Outfielder John Yeglinski continued to haunt the Midland Cubs and Manager Doc Edwards. Yeglinski cracked out a double and single, which makes him 5-for-7 against Midland this series. In the season's series, Yeglinski is 13-for-27 and apparently is taking special satisfaction in his performance.

Last year Yeglinski played for Edwards at West Haven in the Eastern League and was released by the New York Yankee organization late in the year.

Lefthander Steve Hamrick, 2-1, will probably pitch for Midland tonight in the third game of the series. The Cubs and Drillers meet again Thursday and Friday.

Minnesota Coach Plans To Stay Put

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — Bill Musselman says he plans to remain as head basketball coach at the University of Minnesota while a member of the school's administration says they are expecting a letter on possible recruiting violations from the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

"Right now I'm not taking any jobs," said Musselman from his basketball camp at St. Peter late Tuesday night. "I'm staying here at Minnesota."

However, a published report in Wednesday's editions of the Minneapolis Tribune predicts Musselman will accept the head coaching job with San Diego in the American Basketball Association if terms can be arranged.

"I've had opportunities to leave before," said Musselman. "And, many of those included outstanding financial offers."

Hole-In-One Shot At Hogan

Paul Weissling shot a hole-in-one recently at Hogan Park Golf Course on the No. 3 green.

Weissling used a No. 5-iron on three which was playing 180 yards at the time.

Scott Likes Move

BOSTON (AP) — Charlie Scott, the newest Boston Celtic, was introduced to the press Tuesday and told reporters, "Coming to the Celtics is probably the biggest thrill of my life."

Scott, originally drafted by the Celtics in 1970, went to the rival American Basketball Association for two years, then hooked up with the Phoenix Suns of the National Basketball Association, where he became a standout shooter.

Loudd To Appeal

BOSTON (AP) — Rommie Loudd, a former player for the New England Patriots of the National Football League, is appealing to the state Supreme Court a decision that could send him back to Florida to face drug charges.

Loudd filed for appeal after an Appeals Court judge denied a defense motion Tuesday that Loudd be allowed to stay in Massachusetts.

He was held at Charles Street Jail pending the appeal. He had been free on bail since May 6 when he was arrested on a warrant signed by Gov. Michael S. Dukakis at the request of Florida officials.

Thomas Is Optimistic; 'Skins Have No Plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Running back Duane Thomas says he believes he will reach agreement on a new contract with the Washington Redskins within a month. Team president Edward Bennett Williams says Thomas "is out of our plans" as of now.

"I don't see any real possibility that he'll be with the football team this year," said Williams.

Thomas said in a television interview (WTOP-TV) that he thinks the differences, which he said were money, would be resolved. If not, he said, he would go back to the farm.

He declined to discuss reports that he is asking for $168,000 a year by saying, "I didn't tell the newspapers." Asked if the Redskins offered him a contract calling for $64,000, he said, "Ask them."

Meanwhile, as he waits for the Redskins, he said he would do some volunteer youth work in the nation's capital.

Williams, describing the $168,000 figure as "totally inaccurate" said Thomas became a free agent on May 1 and "he is no longer part of our organization."

"I have entered into negotiations with his lawyer, and I thought we could make an agreement. Then he fired his lawyer (Sam Jackson) and hired another (Osborn Caldwell), who tripled the demands. I can't waste my time on this matter," Williams told the Washington Post.

"There is no possibility of an agreement unless he signs at the figure his first lawyer had agreed to," he said.

Williams declined to discuss the figure agreed upon and insisted that the reported $168,000 was inaccurate, although other Post sources in and out of the Redskins' organization stood by it.

The Post also said it had learned that the Redskins have offered Thomas a contract in the $50,000 range.

Williams did confirm that the club and Thomas are "thousands and thousands of dollars apart" in the negotiations.

Meanwhile, the team's only other missing veteran, tight end Marv Fleming, "is very close to resolving his differences with the Redskins," according to his agent, Al Ross of Los Angeles.

Cavs Ink Fernsten

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Cleveland Cavaliers have signed their No. 4 National Basketball Association draft choice, Eric Fernsten, the club announced Tuesday.

Fernsten, 6-foot-9, 205 pounds, is a forward-center from the University of San Francisco.

Fernsten averaged 7.4 points per game at San Francisco and pulled in 9.4 rebounds per game.

Hendricks Looking For Grid Stadium

By The Associated Press

Ted Hendricks is looking, Francis Peay is moving, Nick Buoniconti is returning, but Marv Fleming is still missing.

"On a scale of 1 to 10, I'd say I'm 9.99 disappointed at not being able to play here," Hendricks said of the Green Bay Packers. "I was very happy here."

But Hendricks and the Pack were unable to agree on terms for this season. So the linebacker, who set a National Football League record in 1974 with seven blocked kicks, is looking for another team.

Hendricks' agent, A. J. Roberts of Miami, said he and the Packers did not even get far enough in their negotiations to discuss salary in their final meeting Tuesday.

"We wanted some sort of insurance against injury and couldn't get it," Roberts said. Bart Starr, the new Packers' coach and general manager, said Hendricks and Roberts "were asking for certain fringes we couldn't live with. I think they were being a little unfair in that."

Peay, once a No. 1 draft pick of the New York Giants and then a star offensive lineman with the Packers, was traded again—this time from the Kansas City Chiefs to the New Orleans Saints for an undisclosed draft choice.

The 31-year-old Peay, a nine-year NFL veteran, played the last two seasons with the Chiefs.

Buoniconti, the Miami Dolphins' middle linebacker, prepared for the 1975 season after spending the off-season as a lawyer.

"I really don't know how long I'm going to play," said Buoniconti, who's entering his 14th NFL season. "I've been playing on a year-to-year basis for three years."

The Washington Redskins have just about given up the search for Fleming, a tight end obtained from the Dolphins in an off-season trade. Fleming still hasn't shown up at the Redskins' camp and Washington Coach George Allen said if the veteran fails to report the trade would be cancelled.

In return for Fleming, Washington sent the rights to fullback Charley Harraway to Miami. Harraway, who played in the World Football League still hasn't reported to the Dolphins.

The trade was contingent on both players reporting to their new clubs, Allen said.

The NFL's Buffalo Bills announced the signing of defensive end Pat Toomay, a free agent who has started the past three seasons with the Dallas Cowboys. The Bills also traded linebacker Dave Washington to the San Francisco 49ers for an undisclosed future draft pick.

The New York Giants acquied fifth-year cornerback Leonard Dunlap from the San Diego Chargers for a future draft choice, while the Charlotte Hornets of the WFL cut six-year veteran Bob Gladieux. A fullback, Gladieux was the Hornets' leading rusher last year.

Goodrich Gains Finals

Howard Varley, Don Haney and James Rhoades all hit home runs Tuesday night to lead Goodrich to a 15-6 victory over Well Fluids in the annual City Slow Pitch Tournament at Hogan Park.

The victory lifted the Tirebusters into tonight's finals against either Well Fluids or the Roadrunner Express.

It was the first loss of the tournament for Well Fluids and Goodrich has yet to lose in the double elimination affair.

The Roadrunners stayed alive with a 2-1 victory over Linco-Ord and will meet Well Fluids at 7:30 p.m. for the right to meet Goodrich in the finals at 8:30. Goodrich will have to lose two straight games tonight to lose the crown.

The Roadrunners also pulled out a 10-5 win over Snowhite Cleaners Tuesday. Linco-Ord finally lost to the Roadrunners after winning a narrow 3-2 decision over the Red Chiefs and a 2-0 verdict over Smith Brothers Pipe.

Soph Tourney Begins Thursday

The Pennzoil Rufneks and Dellwood Plaza will begin a three-day run for the City Sophomore League Baseball Championship at 8 p.m. Thursday at Melzer Field in Ulmer Park.

Dellwood, 12-2 on the year, won the Eastern title for the third time in the last four years under the direction of manager Marshall McCrea.

Pennzoil, managed by Rob Hill, won the Western division for the second year in a row by winning a playoff game with the Permian Rebels. Last year the Rufneks won the district title and was third in the State Tournament.

Eastern has dominated this tournament by winning all but three times since the Western League was formed in 1961.

The second game of the three-game set will be played Friday at 8:30 p.m. at Redfern Field in Hogan Park while the last game will shift back to Melzer Field Saturday with another 8 p.m. start.

All three games will be played even if one team wins the first two.

Pistons Rip A's In Soph B Tilt

Danny Gray tossed a two-hitter and struckout 15 to lead the Western Pistons to a 12-2 decision over the Eastern A's in a Sophomore B League City Championship game at Melzer Field Tuesday.

The Pistons scored five runs in the first inning and then went on to easily win the second game of the three game set.

The third game of the series will be staged today at Redfern Field in Hogan Park at 8:30 p.m.

Hi-Junior Stars Nip Patriots, 7-6

The Hi-Junior League All-Stars defeated the pennant-winning Alpine Patriots, 7-6, Tuesday at Cubs Stadium as David Reddell and Mike Howard paced the winners with triples while Kevin Minton and Mike Richard tripled for the losers.

Reddell pitched the Stars to victory while Minton was saddled with the defeat. The teams continue their series at 6 p.m. today in Cubs Stadium and play the final game Thursday.

Ashe Starts Fast In Star Net Meet

WASHINGTON (AP) — Arthur Ashe says he was concerned a little about his first match in the seventh annual Washington Star International Tennis Championships because it marked his return to competition after winning at Wimbledon 18 days ago.

He had nothing to fret about.

"I felt a little pressure to win the first match," Ashe said after he easily disposed of Haroon Rahim of Pakistan 6-0, 6-2 Tuesday night before a sellout crowd of 5,500. "How would it look when you're introduced as the No. 1 player in the world and you lose?"

Ashe added quickly that he would see to it that he isn't introduced as the world's top player during the remainder of this $100,000 tournament, which has its finals next Monday.

"The rankings of the ATP (Association of Tennis Players) are based on the computer rankings and I'm not in the top four," said Ashe, who is actually tied for seventh this week. "Until the ATP came along, whoever won Wimbledon was No. 1 . . . it had to do with tradition and customs. It's not that way anymore."

The second-seeded Ashe, who now calls Miami his home base, used 48 minutes—18 in the first set during which Rahim picked up only nine points and 30 in the second—to defeat Rahim, who said: "I didn't do anything right. I didn't put any pressure on him."

Top-seeded Guillermo Vilas of Argentina, Grand Prix leader, was scheduled to play Tuesday but his match against Dennis Ralston of Bakersfield, Calif., was delayed until today because he was playing in the Dutch Open, which he won over the weekend.

All seeds won Tuesday including seventh-place Dick Stockton of Dallas, who defeated Brian Teacher of San Diego 6-2, 7-6 in a match which concluded close to midnight.

After his match, the 32-year-old Ashe said he preferred playing at night, the first time it was done in the first round here, because the "ball is slower at night and it's not as hot."

Asked if he thought the 17-day layoff after Wimbledon was too much for him, he replied: "I wish it were 17 more days. It's not easy after winning Wimbledon. You get all keyed up for two weeks.

"There hasn't been any pressure," he said.

The Oakland A's, cruising toward their fifth straight division championship, are in high gear and slugger Reggie Jackson knows why.

"Last year I had a pretty good season," said Jackson, "and I didn't get much of a raise—only five grand. Charlie Finley (A's owner) wants results. The man I work for is hard to deal with.

"If we get five runs, I want 10. I don't want no rest until October... October 20. The time to play ball is now and make that money."

The A's brought their salary drive into Detroit Tuesday night and manhandled the Tigers 11-0, 16-4. The lop-sided twin-bill saw the A's collect 24 base hits off five Detroit pitchers. By the middle of the second game, the 29,089 fans at Tiger Stadium were booing when the A's made an out, cheering derisively when the Tigers did something right and chanting "We want Billy", a reference to recently deposed Texas manager Billy Martin who was a favorite when he managed the Tigers.

"I'm not out to humiliate anyone," said Jackson. "But you have to keep putting the pressure on because when you're down, nobody's going to let you up."

Oakland's twin-killing left the A's a cozy 10½ games ahead of the nearest competition—the Kansas City Royals. Except for Charlie Finley's checkbook, the A's don't have an awful lot to get excited about these days. The division title appears secure and that gives them a long time to get ready for the playoffs and, possibly, their fourth straight World Series victory.

Perry Punches Pals

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — Gaylord Perry looked a writer covering the Texas Rangers in the eye, slapped him on the back, and said in his Southern drawl, "Now that's the way I'm supposed to pitch, podnuh."

Perry had just blanked the team that gave up on him, the Cleveland Indians, on two hits Tuesday night in a 4-0 victory that included 13 strikeouts. The 36-year-old Perry cut down the last 21 Indians to face him, bringing his record to 9-14.

The strikeouts put Perry in 11th place on the all-time list ahead of "Sudden Sam" McDowell and avenged a 5-1 defeat at the hands of the Indians on June 15 after Cleveland traded him to the Rangers.

Perry lost his first four games for the Rangers but now has pitched shutouts in three of his last four starts and has a string of 18 consecutive scoreless innings working.

"It was starting to get embarrassing," said Perry. "I had been trying too hard. The people here have been just super while I was losing. They were great trying to cheer me up. I owe them something and I'm going to pay off."

Perry said, "It felt great passing Sudden Sam on the all-time list and I hope to stay around and pass a few more guys."

Perry only needs 61 strikeouts to overtake Don Drysdale in 10th place.

Cleveland Manager Frank Robinson conceded that "Perry pitched a helluva game. We knew something like this could happen when we traded him but we are building for the future. Perry may go on for two, three or five more years. They said I was through 10 years ago. You never know and that's the chance you take."

Kathy Heddy Stars In Aquatic Games

CALI, Colombia (AP) — No world records fell at the World Aquatics Games, but Kathy Heddy felled one large legend and the sound could be heard like a belly-flop off the high tower.

"I told you the East Germans were vulnerable," said Flip Darr, Coach of the American women's team, after Miss Heddy had cut record holder Ulrike Tauber down to size in the women's 200 individual medley Tuesday night. "The East Germans might be bigger and have faster times, but in our practices we only emphasized our strengths and their weaknesses.

"Our girls have a lot of guts and Kathy proved that tonight," said Darr. "Our fillies just don't fold."

Heddy, a 17-year-old high school student from Summit, N.J., collared Miss Tauber in the final five meters and gave the United States its third and final gold medal of the day.

Tim Shaw, the fabulous freestyler from Long Beach, Calif., bagged the first of what could be three individual gold medals by winning the 200 freestyle in the nip-and-tuck race with his amateur athletic union teammate, Steve Furniss of Santa Ana, Calif.

Phil Boggs took home America's other gold medal, successfully defending his men"s springboard diving championship earlier in the day.

"I always had the incentive to win," said Miss Heddy, a member of the American team so thoroughly beaten by the East Germans at the first aquatic games in Belgrade in 1973.

"After 150 meters I just put my head down and gave it all I had.

"I swam the way I planned," said Miss Heddy, who handed Miss Taubert what the East German girl called "the worst defeat of my career" at a dual meet between the United States and East Germany in the fall of 1974. "She was pretty far ahead of me midway through the race but I knew she would be. I knew I needed a dynamite finish and that's what I got."

The American women say their near-victory at the dual meet in Concord, Calif., and a positive thinking course given them during the first week of training camp has them thinking gold medals here in Cali.

"The East Germans are good but we'll have to show them we're just as good," Miss Heddy had said earlier in the week. "The first event will tell a lot. It will be great incentive if we do well. If we can win it we'll have momentum."

Miss Heddy can now put her gold medal where her mouth was after winning the 200 individual medley in 2:19.80. Miss Tauber, whose world record is 2:18.83, won the silver with a time of 2:20.40 and Franke Angela of East Germany finished third in 2:20.80. Shirley Babashoff, entered in five individual races here, was fourth in 2:21.32.

"My first 100 was too fast," said Miss Tauber. "The breast stroke is my weakest race and I tried too hard here. I was afraid I'd lose so I went too fast too soon."

Jackson Rips Caps With Big Inning

By The Associated Press

Lafayette and Jackson scored big in the first inning Tuesday and coasted to Texas League victories over Midland and Shreveport, who own the best records in the loop.

Lafayette beat Midland 9-1 with a seven-run first frame and Jackson whipped Shreveport 11-3 with a six-run first.

Meanwhile, the two bottom teams in the West Division upheld the pride of that circuit as El Paso outslugged Alexandria 17-9 and San Antonio nipped Arkansas 4-3.

Shreveport, the league's pacesetter with a .636 winning percentage, suffered a rare embarassment as Jackson tallied six in the first inning and five more in the sixth to snap an eight-game losing streak. Randy Trapp and Larry Calufetti both had two hits and three RBI for the winners.

Tom Donohue hit a grand slammer to highlight a nine-run sixth inning for El Paso in its slugfest with Alexandria. Marty Friedman chipped in with two doubles, a single and four RBI for the Diablos.

In the night's only close game, San Antonio's Mike Brooks singled home Wayne Cage from second in the bottom of the ninth to break a 3-3 tie with Arkansas. The Travelers had trailed 3-1 in the top of the ninth but scored twice on Mike Potter's homer and a run-producing single by Garry Raco. San Antonio had built an early lead on Richie Guerra's two-run homer.

PITTSBURGH, CINCINNATI LOSE—

Phils Blank Braves

By The Associated Press

There is a small bruise on the back of Philadelphia Phillies' catcher Johnny Oates. He's not complaining.

There is pain in Steve Carlton's left shoulder and elbow. He's not really complaining, either.

With the bases loaded and one out in the ninth inning, Oates was sent up as a pinch-hitter by Manager Danny Ozark. His grounder to second produced an easy force at home, but Oates was hit in the back by the relay of what should have been a painless double play.

The ball caromed into short right field, allowing Greg Luzinski to score from second base with Philadelphia's run in a 1-0 triumph over Atlanta Tuesday night.

Carlton, who has suffered from soreness in his pitching arm recently, finished with a three-hitter and his ninth victory—thanks to Oates and the errant throw by Braves catcher Vic Correll.

"Last night (Monday night) I hit a pop fly and it fell among three guys for a single. Tonight (Tuesday), they hit me in the back with the ball and the winning run scores," said Oates. "Maybe someone upstairs is watching out for me."

Carlton, meanwhile, conquered the arm soreness and controlled his pitches. "That's what makes it easier," said Carlton, who won 27 games for the Phillies three years ago. "It's something I haven't been doing all year. I knew I had good stuff warming up. It was the best I had thrown on the sideline all year."

Then he went out and threw his best on the playing field.

Mets 3, Reds 1

Left-hander Jerry Koosman pitched a six-hitter and surprised everybody by stealing second base in the third inning on the way to his victory.

"Nobody in the ball park expected me to steal," said Koosman after his first career theft led to the winning run. The Cincinnati infield certainly didn't expect the Koosman larceny; when catcher Johnny Bench pegged to second in an effort to catch the pitcher, no one was covering the bag.

"As it turned out, it was a good play," said Mets Manager Yogi Berra. "Of course if he had been thrown out, I would have given him hell."

Gary Carter's third hit of the game, an 11th inning single with Pepe Mangual on second, lifted Montreal past Houston. Mangual had opened the inning with a walk and moved to second on a sacrifice before Larry Biittner was walked intentionally to set up a double play.

"I was a little surprised by that," said the rookie whose hit ruined the professional debut of reliever Jose Sosa.

Lightweight Bout Set For August

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lightweight boxing contenders Tury Pineda of Mexicali, Mexico, and Randy Shields of Los Angeles signed Tuesday for a 10-round bout at the Olympic Auditorium on Aug. 16.

Pineda is 25-5-1 with 20 knockouts and twice fought for the 135-pound World Boxing Council title against champion Guts Ishimatsu of Japan. The first bout ended in a draw and Ishimatsu won the second on a disputed decision.

Shields is unbeaten with a 25-0 record with 15 knockouts.

Ex-CIA Lawyer Says Agency Kept Mafia Involvement Secret For Year

By ROBERT L. JACKSON
The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The Central Intelligence Agency kept secret its involvement with Mafia figures for more than a year before telling then Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy in 1962, the CIA's former general counsel said Tuesday.

Lawrence R. Houston, who was the CIA's top lawyer from 1947 to 1973, said Kennedy seemed "very perturbed" at learning the CIA had worked with the underworld on plans to assassinate Cuban Premier Fidel Castro.

"He was angry at us for interfering with his drive against the Mafia," Houston said. "He was not so much perturbed at a plot against Castro as he was with our involvement with the Mafia."

Houston's comments came during an impromptu meeting with reporters after he had testified before a House subcommittee on his relation with the Justice Department.

His remarks to newsmen marked the first time a past or present CIA official has publicly discussed alleged assassination plans. He did not touch on that subject during his House testimony.

Asked why he had finally decided to speak publicly after repeated contacts by newsmen, Houston said:

"I don't think I'm telling you much that hasn't already appeared in the press."

He gave closed-door testimony last month to the special Senate committee on intelligence activities. A report by that committee on the CIA's role in assassination planning is expected in a few weeks.

Houston said he first learned of CIA involvement with Mafia figures in April, 1962, from Col. Sheffield Edwards, then the agency's director of security. Edwards died earlier this month after a long illness.

According to Houston, Edwards had arranged through Robert A. Maheu, then a consultant to industrialist Howard R. Hughes, for underworld figures Sam Giancana and Johnny Rosselli to plot Castro's assassination.

Houston said he did not know from whom Edwards had received his orders.

"Edwards told me this activity was stopped about the time of the Bay of Pigs invasion (in April, 1961)," Houston said.

He said Edwards told him about the cooperation of Giancana and Rosselli after hearing reports that the Justice Department might prosecute these men on unrelated charges. Houston said he decided they should inform the Justice Department that prosecution might expose the secret CIA work.

The two CIA officials first went to Herbert J. Miller Jr., head of the department's criminal division, Houston said. He said Miller arranged for them to brief Kennedy personally.

After describing Kennedy's anger, Houston said the then attorney general told them:

"If you're going to deal with the Mafia, come to see me first."

Houston said he had since learned that assassination plots against Castro continued despite Edwards' statement they had been stopped in 1961. He said he did not know who had authorized their continuance.

Miller, now a Washington attorney whose clients include former President Richard M. Nixon, denied Houston had ever told him about Mafia involvement in assassination plans.

"I also can't believe he told Bob Kennedy about a plot to kill Castro," Miller said. "If Bob had known about such a plot, he certainly would have told me."

Miller said Giancana was later jailed for contempt of a federal grand jury in Chicago. A second proposal to cite him for contempt was rejected by the Justice Department as being "too close to double jeopardy."

Giancana was found murdered last month in his suburban Oak Park, Ill., home.

Rosselli was convicted in 1970 in the Friars Club card-cheating scandal in Los Angeles. He has testified at length before the Senate committee on alleged CIA assassination plans.

Informed later of Miller's denial, Houston said:

"If he says no, I'll accept his word on it. But Miller was my normal contact at the (Justice) department."

A source on the Senate committee said Houston "only has a piece of the story. His information about assassination plans is very limited."

Edwards told the committee earlier this month that he had higher approval for arranging cooperation with the Mafia, the source said.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Ida., the committee chairman, said last week that the panel's nearly concluded investigation of the assassination issue had found no direct involvement of former Presidents Dwight D. Eisenhower and John F. Kennedy or former Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy.

In his testimony Tuesday to a House government operations subcommittee, Houston defended a 20-year agreement with the Justice Department — abandoned late last year — under which the CIA was allowed to prosecute its agents for any wrongdoing.

Houston called it "a practical solution to a practical problem" that permitted the CIA to protect secrets that otherwise might be exposed by public prosecution. The Rockefeller Commission criticized the agreement in its June 10 report, saying the Justice Department should not have relinquished this authority.

Parr To Appeal Decision

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court will receive by Friday an appeal of a lower court decision upholding the removal from office of Duval County Judge Archer Parr, according to that ousted official.

The 4th Court of Civil Appeals Monday refused to lift temporary and permanent removal orders against Parr.

The temporary order had been entered by District Court Judge O. P. Carrillo March 26. Carrillo made the order permanent July 11 after a trial at Hebbronville.

Parr claims Carrillo should have dismissed the removal motion in the March hearing and that Carrillo's actions have been politically motivated.

The suit to remove Parr was prompted by a federal perjury conviction and alleged acts of official misconduct.

Hutterite Colony: Best Of Old, New

By GARRY J. MOES

NEW ROCKPORT COLONY, Mont. (AP) — Samuel, the blacksmith of New Rockport Colony, says he would have liked to have been a physician.

That never could have been in his world. He would have had to overthrow more than four centuries of heritage.

Instead, Samuel submitted his will to that of his brethren, became a blacksmith and remained a true Hutterite.

Dressed in a plaid, high-collar shirt, black smock and rumpled, baggy trousers held up with button suspenders, he labors daily in a past-century shed, fashioning the finest of present-century machines from shining surgical steel.

The shed, which also houses a carpenter shop, is the only one of the more than two dozen simple buildings constituting the New Rockport compound or "bruderhof" which appears to be deteriorating. "We'll probably build a new shop next year," says the blacksmith's daughter, dressed, like every other female in the 99-member colony, in the many-layered and multicolored peasant clothes of 16th century Austrian Tyrol.

Communal System

New Rockport is one of about 30 Hutterite colonies dotting the vast, sun-drenched plains of Montana, the Dakotas, Alberta and Saskatchewan. The brethren number more than 3,000.

They are followers of Jacob Hutter, a Christian martyr who founded the sect in Austria in 1528. The pious and good-humored Hutterian Brethren thrive economically, religiously and socially.

Theirs is a communal system which has wedded an austere agrarian social life of long ago with the most progressive of 20th century agricultural techniques and tools — the best of both worlds, admirers say.

An occasional urbanite visitor, yearning for the quiet of field and farmyard, might find the system initially attractive. But the gulf between ordinary America, rooted in individualism, and Hutterite life, completely dependent on submission of nearly every individual right to the good of the colony, would be too wide for most outsiders to cross.

Teacher Outsider

One outsider who must bridge the gap is the school teacher. The teacher, by state or provincial law, must be a certified and qualified instructor. Since Hutterite academic education ends at eighth grade, no member of the colony could hope to enter the profession.

At New Rockport, the Hutterites provide a small house on the edge of the colony for their teacher.

The school is a bare, gray, one-room edifice with wooden floors glossed by several decades of yearly varnishing.

Behind the half-dozen rows of old-fashioned school desks are several rows of straight-backed and highly varnished benches. The Hutterites gather there each evening for a half-hour church meeting.

The language of worship is German. So is the common household language. So is the language of every child until first grade. All older Hutterites, though comfortable in English, speak with a clipped accent which evidences their European cultural heritage. The Hutterian Brethern first settled in the United States in 1874.

The colony is dominated by men, and older men wield particular influence. The most powerful man is the farm boss, who oversees the entire operation which specializes in poultry (more than 18,000 chickens, ducks and turkeys), swine, dairying and grain.

Democracy Prevails

Prestige does not necessarily follow power, as the colony preacher remains the most respected man. He is allowed an extra piece of furniture, a finely crafted, ceiling-high cabinet desk. The few other items of colony-made furniture, beds, deacons benches, hat racks and hope chests (size depending on proximity to marrying age), are carefully prescribed and allotted by the community.

The community decides nearly everything by democratic vote, including occupation.

A Hutterite youth who aspires to be the colony shoemaker may find himself assigned by the group to the pig barns, if his brethren find him best suited to that task.

Hutterite women all wear blue polka-dotted head scarves. The scarves cover figured and ruffled bonnets which in turn cover hair parted in the middle, tightly drawn to the sides and twisted under at the forehead.

The young girls will show you, with bright, blushing faces and giggles, the colony's "courting room." The room, in the same building as the kindergarten classroom, is completely without furnishings. But on three sides is built an 18-inch high, six-foot-wide platform.

Multi-Purpose Room

"The kindergarten children use this room for their naps during the day, but other things go on here at night," said a red-faced and giggling Rebecca, in her early teens.

The colony's dining room, features two long tables, one for men and one for women. There is a stainless steel noodlemaking machine designed and built by Samuel and windows covered with flat pieces of bleached muslin.

The kitchen features equipment usually seen in good restaurants. Much of it was built by Samuel, including a room-size stainless steel oven where loaves of bread measuring more than a foot-square are baked in tandem.

The community dining facilities stand between two lines of gray row houses containing several apartments each. Apartments are assigned by the community with the number of rooms depending on family size.

Other buildings include a community shower and laundry, a spotless and ultramodern dairy barn, the pig barns and a sophisticated and automated laying barn for 10,000 hens.

The number of colonies continues to increase. New Rockport will split when its members reach 100 — at the next birth. The parent colony is wealthy enough, generally, to buy new land and completely equip the split-off colony.

Plush Paddlewheeler Anchored In Concrete

SANIBEL ISLAND, Fla. (AP) — A majestic Mississippi paddlewheeler juts out amid the pines — the ghost of a plush island home almost forgotten except by the beach combers.

Protected by a wall of barbed wire, guard dogs and a caretaker, the steamboat Algiers has rested eerily on its white sandy berth for more than 15 years.

The paddlewheeler was moved inland through a channel cut to link the Gulf of Mexico with a small lake about 50 feet from the beach. The lake was drained to leave the Algiers on firm ground and the beach was later restored.

The boat had been rescued from rotting and disuse as a New Orleans car ferry and renovated to suit the tastes of a New York couple, Mr. and Mrs. Lathrop Brown.

The Browns were so pleased with getting the steamboat to its sandy berth, they offered contractor Miles Scofield a Picasso painting as a bonus. He turned it down, however, and accepted a Jeep station wagon instead.

"I was really dumb," Scofield said. "I told her I wasn't much of an art student and didn't really care for it. I never lived that one down."

Brown, a former New York congressman, died before the boat was completely remodeled.

His wife left the island soon after her husband's death and never returned. Since 1959, the Algiers has been sealed off.

But sightseers still find it a shock to turn from the boats anchored offshore on this resort island and see the boat anchored in concrete.

"It's amazing how they did it," one tourist said.

Minister Starts Paying For Food Stolen Long Ago

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — The Rev. W. C. Hunter has begun restitution to ease an aching conscience.

Hunter, pastor of the World's Church of the Living God here, said that he stole $3,000 from a food store 14 years ago while "obsessed with gambling and wild ways."

"Unbelievable," said Don Blevins, store manager, when Hunter went to the store and made a $50 payment this week to repay the theft.

Feels 'Truly Free'

"Now I can feel truly free," the minister said. "I can look my people in the eyes and tell them that I have sinned, but I have sought and received forgiveness from God and man."

The pastor said he expected to be arrested when he owned up to the theft. But flabbergasted police told him after consulting the district attorney that he would remain free because the statute of limitations had long since run out on the crime.

Obsessed With Gambling

Hunter said that when he was 25 he was so obsessed with gambling that he often sold his family's food and furniture — his three children were then young — to get money for card games and whiskey.

He recalled that he worked at the store as a clerk and that one evening a lock on the safe broke and the late manager hid the day's receipts in a produce bin. He said he hid in a storage area until other employes had left and then took the money.

"Man, I felt good with that big sack of money," he recalled. "I bought a half a pint of gin, went to a pool hall to celebrate and afterwards went home ... and I rolled the money up bill by bill and "stuck them in Christmas balls.

"That was more money than I had ever seen in my life. Everytime I ran low on money for whisky or gambling, I would just run home and break some of them."

In about one month the money was gone, he said. "I threw it away on the gambling tables and in the alleys."

The metamorphosis of W. C. Hunter, scoundrel, into W. C. Hunter, reverend, began about 10 years ago when he returned from a 72-hour gambling binge to a home devoid of furniture.

"I had been out drinking and gambling and the first thing I saw when I walked in the door was my kids sitting on the cold floor, wrapped in coats to keep warm," he said.

Burning Old Shoes

"My wife was sitting there in front of the fireplace throwing old shoes into the fire to keep the kids warm. I can still smell that leather burning.

"She was sitting there on a tin can, throwing them shoes into the fire and reading the New Testament. I got so mad, feeling like God was the cause of my bad life, that I grabbed it out of her hands and threw it into the fire."

He then tried to kill himself by slashing his wrists, he said. "I don't know how, but I was still alive the next morning and I told God then that I was going to dedicate my life to Him," he said.

"I had always blamed the other folks for my troubles, the white man, the Uncle Tom, but the fault was within me and God set me free."

Don't Listen To Table Talk

We all know that people shouldn't talk during the bidding or play of a bridge hand, but we also know that they sometimes do. Fortunately, this table talk doesn't seem to help the chief offenders.

Declarer took three rounds of trumps and then led the nine of diamonds.

"Is that a singleton?" West asked, looking suspiciously at the unoffending card. "If it is, I'm going to grab my trick."

"I cannot tell a lie," South replied. "That is my only diamond."

TAKES ACE

West believed South, and took the ace of diamonds. Now there was no way to defeat the contract. South could eventually throw two clubs on dummy's king and queen of diamonds.

Strangely enough, West could defeat the contract only if South had a singleton diamond. But West would have to give up his diamond trick by playing the ten or jack of diamonds instead of the ace.

Dummy would win with the queen of diamonds, but then there would be no second diamond trick for declarer. He would eventually lose two clubs tricks to East.

It isn't always wise to grab your ace when declarer leads a singleton through you. Moreover, if you're informal enough to chatter while a hand is going on, don't use correct information to make the wrong play.

DAILY QUESTION

Dealer bids one club, partner doubles for a takeout, and the next player passes. You hold: S- 6 4 H- 6 5 2 D- 8 6 5 4 C- Q 10 9 8. What do you say?

Answer: Bid one diamond. Don't dream of passing, despite the weakness of your hand. The weaker the hand the more essential the takeout.

Hartke Seeking More Funds To Buy Veterans' Mortgages

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind., said Tuesday he is introducing legislation to provide up to $5 billion more for veterans seeking to buy homes. The money would be transferred from the GI insurance fund.

Hartke said his proposal would enable as many as 178,000 veterans' mortgages to be purchased at a time when veterans are finding it difficult to buy homes.

The National Service Life Insurance Fund built up through veterans' insurance premiums would be tapped for the mortgage money under Hartke's proposal

Such loans could be purchased by the Veterans Administration if private lenders were unable to dispose of home loans on the private market at rates authorized by the leg slation."

Hartke, chairman of the Senate Veterans Affairs Committee, noted that last year Congress raised the VA guarantee on home loans from $12,500 to $17,500, made it easier for veterans to get a second loan and opened up the program more for purchasing mobile homes and condominiums.

But Hartke said this "has not increased the available supply of mortgage money, which prevents so many veterans from becoming home owners in today's depressed housing market."

He said that during the first quarter of this year, VA loan commitments were down 21 per cent from the preceding quarter.

Insurance Hearing Scheduled Aug. 4

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Insurance Board today scheduled its annual hearing on fire and homeowners insurance rates for Aug. 4.

Rates for homeowners policies rose an average of 19.3 per cent on Jan. 20, and companies are expected to ask for another increase.

Stock Market Prices Mixed, Halting Week-Long Decline

NEW YORK (AP) — Prices were mixed in the stock market today, halting a week-long slide.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 3.37 at 850.13, while losers clung to a slight lead over gainers on the New York Stock Exchange.

Brokers noted some cautious bargain hunting after the 35-point drop in the Dow over the past five trading days.

Weyerhaueser topped the active list on the Big Board, up ⅛ at 37½. A 200,000-share block traded at 36¾.

On the American Stock Exchange, prices showed only slight changes.

Xerox lost ⅝ to 63¼ on top of a 1⅛-point drop Tuesday following the company's announcement that it would drop out of the computer mainframe business and take an $84.4 million writeoff.

Pan American World Airways rose ¼ to 4 in active trading. The airline reported a $4 million profit for the second quarter, against an $8.4 million loss in the comparable period last year.

Bausch & Lomb, which reported higher quarterly earnings, edged up ⅜ to 37¼.

New Process Co. picked up ⅝ to 9¼ on the Amex on higher second quarter earnings.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .11 to 49.23.

Paralyzed Ex-Marine Thumbs Across Nation In Wheelchair

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Garry Bivins, a 29-year-old ex-Marine from Memphis, Tenn., is a wheelchair hitchhiker with a conviction that Americans could do much more for the disabled.

"This country should be civilized and sophisticated enough by now to be a little humanitarian," said Bivins, confined to a wheelchair for seven years. "People should realize there are other people out there who can't get around — and help them."

Bivins, three months home from Vietnam, was shot at a tavern in Kentucky by a man "who just came in and just started shooting up the place."

He was struck in the spine and in the chest. The spinal wound caused permanent paralysis from the waist down.

Bivins lives on social security disability and a pension for veterans with a nonservice-connected disability.

He hitchhiked from Memphis to Scottsdale to attend a Paralyzed Veterans Association convention this week.

"When I'm sitting out there beside a road in this chair, with my thumb out, people can't help but see me and be aware that 'here's a dude who wants to get around despite being handicapped,'" Bivins said.

In Memphis, the television station van filming the start of his hitchhike campaign waited for a motorist to pick him up, Bvins said.

"No one did until just after the TV guys left," he said.

Bivins' first ride took him to Henrietta, Okla., and from there he picked up rides to Albuquerque, N.M. One of the rides, Bivins recalls, was in a 1965 Rambler with a group of "country people" from Arkansas.

Meeting people is one of the joys of hitchhiking, said Bivins, who also hitchhiked across the South last year.

Some of the best people he met came along after he had sat at the side of the road outside Albuquerque for four hours.

"My radio battery went dead while I was sitting there," he said. "My canteen was leaking and the wind was blowing my clothes off."

Then a couple in a van picked him up. The husband was a forester and they had been traveling for a month looking for work.

"They were on a budget," Bivins said. "But they shared their food with me — peanut butter and honey. We stopped the first night at a place called Fort Courage, one of those roadside attractions.

"Then we spent the next day taking it easy. Went to the Painted Desert. They hauled me down 100 stairs to see one of the rocks there.

"They were good folks. I really liked them," he said.

Mrs. Linnie Davidson

Rites Thursday For Mrs. Davidson

Services for Mrs. Linnie Davidson, who died Tuesday in a Midland hospital, will be at 2 p.m. Thursday in the Newnie W. Ellis Chapel. The Rev. Bob Currie will officiate.

Interment will be in Resthaven Cemetery.

Mrs. Davidson had lived in Midland since 1939. She was director of the Tuberculosis Association and a past president and secretary of the Conference of TB Workers. She was a past president of the Altrusa Club and director of nurses at the Western Clinic Hospital.

Mrs. Davidson, 72, lived at 900 W. Storey St. She was listed in the 1970 edition of "Who's Who of American Women."

She is survived by a son, James A. Davidson of Midland; a sister, Mrs. Jack Lawrence of Tiptonville, Tenn.; two grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Memorials may be sent to the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity for new construction.

Wallace's Silence Raises Questions

EDITOR'S NOTE — George Wallace's silence and long absences from view have prompted speculation about his health. He says it's good and the broken leg he suffered last month is only a temporary inconveneince.

By JULES LOH
AP Newsfeatures Writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — George Wallace, like Brer Fox, is layin' low these days. There's a briar patch out there he'd as soon not get into just now.

Democratic party officials denounce his candidacy, polls cite his slipping popularity, state legislators pushing his bills wait in vain for his support, reporters prowl his home turf digging up allegations of lack of leadership, and fellow governors question his physical stamina.

Wallace, all the while, stays in his family quarters at the governor's mansion nursing a broken leg and a bruised image.

While other declared and undeclared 1976 presidential candidates (Wallace is both, having declared he's in but will wait a while to "announce") covet every inch of newsprint they can get, the man with a message for the masses turns away reporters by the droves.

What about all those charges of neglect and poor administration? Wouldn't he like to answer them?

He would not. But after 10 days of badgering he consented to anyhow, sort of, and by phone rather than in person.

"Just asking the question is insulting to the people of Alabama and I resent that," he said. "The people of this state are just as intelligent and have just as much knowledge about government as the people of any state in the union.

"They elected me three times, which was unprecedented in this state, and elected my first wife once, which was four straight administrations. They elect me over and over again. Why do they do that if I'm such a bad governor? That in itself ought to answer all those questions."

Maybe, but apparently not to the satisfaction of all.

Wallace explains his reluctance to be interviewed by saying it wouldn't be fair to accommodate a national reporter after turning down Alabama reporters whom, he says, he hasn't been able to see because he's been too busy.

The Alabama press, however, has not questioned Wallace's availability for interviews so much as to wonder just what it is he's been busy doing, running for president or running Alabama.

He hasn't been seen or heard from much this year down at the capitol, even when Wallace-backed bills go down the drain in the legislature. At one recent special session, his entire package of eight bills, all dealing with utilities, died without a word from George.

Yet, say the local papers, the governor somehow finds the time for lengthy visits at home with out-of-state politicos.

His visits to the capitol have become so infrequent, in fact, that when he does go to the office he finds a good many strangers there. (His staff has grown in recent months, prompting wisecracks in Montgomery about his "sprawling bureaucracy.")

At a picture-taking ceremony not long ago Wallace confronted an unfamiliar face.

"How are you, honey?"

"Fine, governor. I work for you."

"Oh, yes. Good to see you again."

Wallace's silence and long absences from view also prompt obvious speculation about his health, especially since his late June accident.

"My health is good," he said. "Of course I cracked my shinbone, but most of the folks who know the type of hard exercise I take wonder why I haven't done it before now. It's inconvenient, that's all."

Has the experience given him a sense of vulnerability? Wouldn't a similar freak accident slow him down if it should happen in the course of a campaign?

"No I don't feel vulnerable, and yes, of course it would slow me down. But it wouldn't slow down my ideas, about what I'm talking about. It's not necessary in a campaign to show up at every whistle stop. That day is gone. Even if I hadn't been shot or had no problem at all I wouldn't run the kind of campaign I did in '68. There's no necessity in it anymore."

Wallace says he prefers to work at the mansion rather than his office, that he can get more done without all the ceremonial interruptions that besiege him at the capitol.

Perhaps, but it is also apparent that his political antennae tell him he has more to lose than to gain by answering opponents — or the press — at this stage of his run for the presidency.

That other populist, Huey Long, used his state as a testing ground for his program to make "every man a king." How does the state Wallace (or his late wife) has governed for 10 of the past 12 years stand up as a laboratory for his own stance as spokesman for the common man?

That's the briar patch.

With his new mantle of political legitimacy has come, inevitably, a growing army of critics ready to match Wallace words with Wallace deeds. Ignore them as he will, they won't go away.

Here are some of their questions:

—Is Wallace the same man today as when he stood in the schoolhouse door in 1963 to block integration?

Wallace answers that he has never been against anybody because of "the way God made them," that his challenge was not to race but to federal interference in state affairs. He is and always has been, he says, "an abider by the law."

Federal courts have had to order Alabama to desegregate its schools and its state police force; other state agencies are still under court order to desegregate.

—What is Wallace's record as a representative of the working person, "the beautician, taxi driver and industrial worker?"

Alabama is one of eight states without a minimum wage. Since Wallace took office in 1963 his state has dropped from 30th to 37th in unemployment benefits. Two weeks ago a bill to abolish Alabama's right-to-work law and allow workers, if they chose, to bargain for an agency shop failed 52-48. Wallace made no effort to help it pass.

—"We've got to get away in this country from thinking you can tax the heck out of people and solve problems," says Wallace, in his general criticism of costly federal programs.

Alabama receives 24.4 per cent of its general revenues from federal grants as opposed to the average among the states of 16.7 per cent. Only seven states receive a greater percentage.

—The Wallace position: the tax burden should be lifted from the common man; tax-exempt foundations should be taxed.

Alabama is under a federal court order to equalize property tax assessments so that large corporate landowners will pay a bigger share. Corporate income taxes provide 4 per cent of Alabama's state revenue; personal income taxes 15 per cent; regressive taxes, such as on food and medicine, which weigh heaviest on the poor, account for 70 per cent.

None of the approximately 200 foundations chartered in Alabama pays state taxes.

"I'm certainly not ashamed that we have very low taxes in Alabama," says Wallace. "The tax system in Alabama grew up over 100 years, it didn't grow up when I became governor. If we had such a tax structure as alleged, why would the people elect me over and over again?" He also points out that his state's property taxes are not a burden because they are among the nation's lowest. "In Massachusetts a person has to pay about $1,600 on a $25,000 or $30,000 house. In Alabama he pays about $90."

Wallace says that when he formally announces his candidacy, perhaps this fall, he will offer his program for America. Meanwhile, his past performance in Alabama is coming under increasing scrutiny.

Special CAB Report Urges Deregulation Of Air Fares

By STEVE MOTT
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A special staff report of the Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) released Tuesday recommends that the government promote competition among the airlines by ending regulation of fares, and control of the entry and exit of companies into and out of the industry.

"The present system of regulation causes higher than necessary costs and prices, which in turn suppress demand," the report said.

"The undesirable effects outweigh the benefits of such regulation."

The report supports the position of consumer advocates and some members of Congress that competitive pricing and scheduling would help the airline industry, not harm it.

The airline industry itself may not support the staff report. Most airlines have praised CAB regulations that set fares and sharply restrict competition among carriers.

The CAB commissioners have not taken a public stand on deregulation, but implementation of the staff recommendations would eliminate most of the board's functions.

"The industry is naturally competitive, not monopolistic," the report said. "In the absence of economic regulation, it is clear that monopoly abuses would not occur. Real improvement in economic efficiency can come only if protective regulation is eliminated or materially reduced."

The report by special CAB adviser Roy Pulsifer and key CAB employes urged the board to press for legislation to increase competition among airlines within the next three to five years.

Chartered airlines that can prove "financial fitness" should be permitted to enter into scheduled operations, and cargo carriers should be able to bid compeitively for business, the report said.

The special report also recommended that other regulations covering the safety of operations be maintained or strengthened and new requirements be adopted to reduce problems with airport access, fuel allocations and individual state regulations.

Unprofitable small-community service should be maintained and subsidized by means of low-bid contracts, the report said, and authority over antitrust matters should also be retained, or even expanded, to prevent further concentration of the industry.

Under heavy criticism from the public and the Congress for allowing rate increase to cut into passenger service demand, the CAB commissioned the study of its own effectiveness in January. The Pulsifer report comes two weeks after CAB's consideration of an external study that recommended limited experiments in deregulation.

The Pulsifer report placed most of the blame for the industry's economic inefficiencies on the Federal Aviation Act rather than on the CAB — hence the request for new legislation.

But the board was urged to make changes in its discretionary policies including:

—Implementation of the ceiling on fares and other rate and charter policies designed to push ticket prices down.

—Liberalization of charter rules to give consumers wider choices in price and quality;

—Expansion of route authority in accordance with demand to permit bypassing of large hub airports and other innovations to develop more efficient service;

—Discouragement of mergers between large- or financially viable carriers.

The most important objective, in the opinion of the special report staff, is open entry for new carriers.

"It (open entry) is necessary for the maximum achievement of economic efficiency and freedom of choice in the affected areas,"

Open entry subject to financial fitness or insurance requirements also would promote free pricing in markets that are artificially contained or not yet developed, the report said.

But the report cautioned against too-rapid transition to a state of free competition because it might force financially troubled carriers like Pan Am and TWA into merger.

Business Ethics Code Proposed

By WILLIAM H. JONES
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Warning that Americans' confidence in business institutions and leaders is in a "process of disintegration" that adds up to a "national crisis," Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) member A. A. Sommer Jr. has called for establishment of a new private agency to establish and enforce a code of business ethics.

Sommer also hinted in an Aspen, Colo., speech that the SEC is seeking to develop some mechanism by which companies that have engaged in illegal acts can start afresh without full public disclosure of their previous business practices.

In a related development, E. E. du Pont de Nemours & Co., the nations's largest chemical firm, announced a new policy of publicly disclosing all U.S. political contributions by its top executives. In addition, all solicitations for more than $1,000 and responses to those requests will be made public for inspection by reporters, stockholders and employes.

Sommer's unusually outspoken address was delivered to a meeting of Midwest securities commissioners Monday afternoon and distributed here Tuesday.

"These were not cases of fawning subordinates trying to win executive-suite favor," Sommer said. "Rather it was the executive suite itself which was engaged in deceit, cunning and deviousness worthy of the most fabled political boss or fixer."

With public disclosure already on the record by Northrop Corp., Ashland Oil, Exxon Corp., United Brands and Gulf Oil Co., Sommer warned that the list can be expected to grow.

"While none of us wants to paint with an unduly wide brush, the suspicion grows that this disease may indeed be more widespread than any of us dared to suspect," Sommer said, and it amounts to a "national crisis."

The "most distressing aspect of all," Sommer said, "more distressing if possible than the realization that many corporations had deliberately, knowingly, wittingly and, as the result of command from the highest levels, flaunted the American election laws," was a discovery that the illegal payments "had been sucked out of the corporate accountability process and squirrled away in the accounts of overseas agents, Swiss bank accounts, Bahamian subsidiaries, and in various other places where the use of the money would be free of the questions of nosey auditors, responsible directors and scrupulous underlings."

To fight these practices, Sommer called on business people to be much more outspoken in their criticism of unethical practices. The business community, he said, should set up a private agency to articulate standards of conduct.

While business cannot act exactly like professions—similar to the bar association, with disbarment procedures —, "as a minimum, a businessman whose conduct transgressed the code should be publicly condemned by a private organized group of national leaders." Such denunciations, he said, could cause the firm involved to lose business until condemned practices are abandoned.

As for public disclosure of illegal practices, Sommer said large investments overseas could be jeopardized, lives threatened and legitimate business opportunities lost unless some new procedure is developed at the SEC that protects investors' rights as well as those of the companies.

He suggested a plan by which companies would conduct internal audits with the aid of outside directors — similar to the Northrop and Ashland audits — and inform the SEC of the outcome and what actions they plan.

New Crime Fighting Program Announced

By DOUGLAS B. FEAVER
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley announced Tuesday a cooperative program between the FBI and four urban police departments to seek citizen involvement in anticrime efforts.

The program, jointly announced and sponsored by the nonprofit Police Foundation, will be a planning effort, at least at first. There is no federal dollar commitment other than the salaries of eight FBI agents who will take part in the program, and FBI participation is limited initially to four months, although it could be extended.

In Norfolk, the emphasis will be on crime against women like rape and purse snatching; in Wilmington, crimes against the elderly; in DeKalb County, Ga. (suburban Atlanta), youth-related crimes, and in Birmingham, the illegal purchase and sale of stolen property.

Two specially selected FBI agents will work with local officers in each of the four jurisdictions to develop recommendations for ways to reduce crime, including "ways to plan, organize and implement a continuing citizens Crime Resistance Program," Kelley said.

"Our aim is to mobilize citizen involvement in efforts to resist crime," Kelley said. ". . . Citizen apathy is both partly responsible for and encourages much of the crime our society suffers."

The announcement of the program came one day after the FBI released statistics showing that reported crime in the United States went up 18 per cent in the first quarter of this year.

Kelley denied that the time of the announcement was to take the edge off of those statistics or to redirect public attention from recently disclosed FBI involvement in burglaries and break-ins, primarily in "national security" cases.
