U.S. Displays Photos Of Nicaraguan Buildup

WASHINGTON (AP) — Intelligence experts working to build public support for U.S. policy in Central America are showing off aerial photographs they say document a massive Soviet-supplied military buildup in Nicaragua.

Adm. Bobby Inman, deputy director of the Central Intelligence Agency, told reporters Tuesday that the buildup endangers all of Central America and far exceeds what Nicaragua would need for its own defense.

He said Cuba, which the United States claims also is assisting the Nicaraguans, might use bases there as a jumping off point for intervention elsewhere in the region.

Nicaragua, Inman said, may go the same way as Cuba and become a "bastion" for aggression.

Jaime Wheelock, the Nicarguan agricultural minister, scheduled a news conference today in Washington to dicuss the Reagan administration's photographs.

Also today, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. was expected to face further questioning from Congress on the administration's El Salvador policy during an appearance before a Senate subcommittee.

Inman's presentation to reporters Tuesday featured reconnaissance photographs so detailed they pinpointed Nicaraguan soldiers in formation and turrets on Soviet-supplied tanks.

He suggested further evidence to support the administration's allegations that Cuba and Nicaragua are directing the Salvadoran insurgency will be released later in the week, probably Friday.

There have been few public expressions of doubt in the United States about the administration's claims of a massive Nicaraguan military buildup.

Most skepticism has focused on the administration's claims that the Salvadoran insurgency is controlled by Nicaragua and Cuba. The skeptics include some members of Congress.

The Reagan administration is supporting El Salvador's civilian-military junta which is fighting against leftist guerrillas in the war-torn nation.

At Tuesday's briefing, Inman speculated that one reason the Nicaraguans have forcibly moved the Miskito Indians from the Nicaraguan side of the Rio Coco River might be to clear the area for possible use by Cubans. The river separates Nicaragua from Honduras.

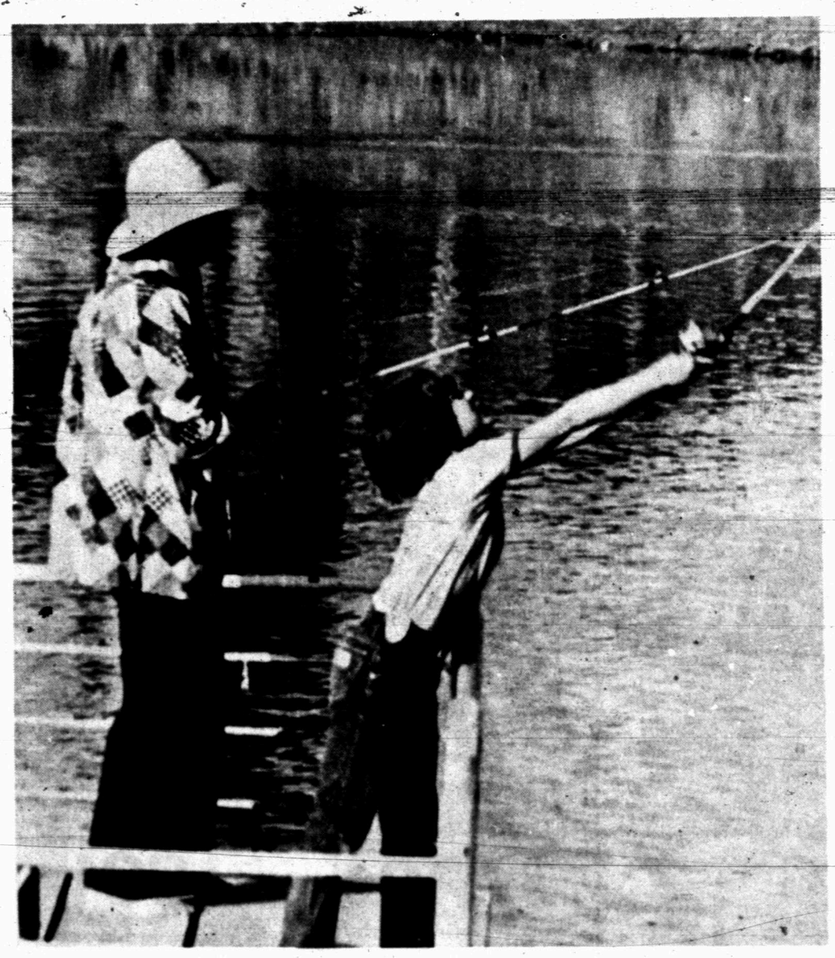
Although he acknowledged he has no information to support this theory, Inman said: "If they have got any plans for movement of Cuban troops, Cuban support, supply or even simply additional support forces for involvement outside Nicaragua over into that area, that clearly is the staging area that they would want to use."

John Hughes, deputy director of the Defense Intelligence Agency, gave a detailed explanation of the photographs, which were declassified by the CIA.

The photos, said to be taken as recently as last month by U.S. aircraft, depicted Nicaraguan military barracks and airfields with runways long enough to accommodate sophisticated Soviet MiG-17 and MiG-21 jets that Inman said will be supplied to Nicaragua.

"They are clearly building in the barracks, and particularly the airfields, the capability to have a larger military force than all of their neighbors in Central America combined. They don't need that for defensive purposes," Inman said.

Nicaraguan officials have denied their army is any larger than the 14,000-member army maintained by Anastasio Somoza.



SIGNS OF SPRING—Leona Smallwood of Ira and her grandson Sammy of Big Spring were among the sun worshippers that flocked to Towle Park in the 80 degree temperatures Tuesday afternoon. After a full day of fishing in the park pond, the catch of the day amounted to a single large mouth bass that weighed about a pound and a half. (SDN Staff Photo)

Trade Talks End

TOKYO (AP) — Japanese and U.S. trade officials today ended two days of talks on solving their serious trade disputes without any substantial agreements, officials said.

"If this were an easy problem to solve we would have solved it years ago," said David MacDonald, deputy U.S. trade representative and head of the U.S. delegation.

He told a news conference that there was "some likelihood of substantial moves" by Japan to liberalize its import restrictions, but declined to give specific examples of progress in the talks.

During the talks, the two sides agreed to set up a working group next month to discuss 22 agricultural commodities that the U.S. claims Japan has restricted. They also agreed to open talks in October on future U.S. exports of beef and citrus products — two areas which have come to symbolize Japan's tight policies on imports.

Judges Urged To Change

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Republicans have urged three judges to reverse their decision and restore to the Dallas area congressional district lines drawn by the Legislature.

The party also asked the federal panel to stay the filing deadline in Districts 3, 5, 24 and 26 in case it declines to overturn its Feb. 27 ruling.

State Republican Party chairman Chet Upham said in Mineral Wells that the GOP would end its efforts to appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court if the judges restore the Legislature's plan for the four Dallas-area districts.

The motion was filed in U.S. district court in Tyler Tuesday.

The Legislature's congressional map was rejected when the Justice Department found that it violated the Voting Rights Act by dividing Mexican-American voters in two South Texas districts.

Tents To Be Replaced

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — About 2,800 Texas Department of Corrections inmates will be transferred from canvas tents to three metal buildings sometime in July, prison officials say.

TDC spokesman Rick Hartley said the three dormitory-style buildings had been erected on schedule. "We hope this (construction) will get us out of our tent situation," he said.

The three buildings will house a total of 2,880 inmates and are expected to eliminate the practice of placing three prisoners in a one-man cell, a routine ruled improper by U.S. District Judge William W. Justice.

Safety System Is Lacking

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of Congress are joining federal safety experts in calling on the government and industry to do more to minimize the chance of airline disasters such as the Air Florida crash two months ago.

Teargas Used In Break Up Of Demonstrations

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Guatemala's government used tear gas to disperse several hundred demonstrators charging it stole the presidential election for its military candidate and arrested his three conservative opponents briefly when they tried to petition for a new election.

The three opposition candidates pledged to continue their protest against alleged vote frauds they claimed were responsible for Gen. Angel Anibal Guevara's 85,000-vote lead in returns from the voting Sunday.

However, the small turnout for the protest demonstration late Monday afternoon indicated general public indifference, and the outgoing government-controlled congress was expected to elect Guevara in the runoff election required because he did not get a majority.

Leftists boycotted the voting, saying it was a farce and their candidates would be assassinated by right-wing death squads operating under the protection of the military-dominated government.

Official election results released by the Electoral Council late Tuesday gave Guevara 336,290 votes, or 36 percent, Mario Sandoval Alarcon of the ultra-rightist National Liberation Movement 250,313, Alejandro Maldonado Aguirre of the center-rightist Christian Democrat-National Renovator coalition 207,387 and Anzueto Vielman of the Authentic Nationalist Center 87,709.

The figures came from 298 of the country's 327 municipalities including all of Guatemala City. Blank votes cast as a protest were not tabulated, and the turnout from the 2.3 million voters was not made public.

The voters also balloted for the 66 seats in congress and municipal offices, but no results of these races have been announced.

Guevara's opponents at a news conference Monday night charged that the government and the army had stolen the election. They appealed to the public to turn out for a rally in front of the presidential palace demanding a new election in 60 days.

The government warned that no demonstrations would be allowed and cordoned off the area around the palace. Police cleared it, seized cameras and tape recorders from some journalists and detained several reporters. They were all later released.

Appraisal Unit Ready To Move

The Scurry County Appraisal District staff is making plans to move into new quarters at 2612 College Ave. as quickly as possible.

Negotiations were completed and final papers were signed Tuesday transferring ownership of the building at that location to the appraisal district.

Members of the appraisal district board were on hand for the official transfer of the property to the district. The building, which was purchased from Mr. and Mrs. Fred bullard and their sons, Drew and Tommy Bullard, will house the permanent offices for the district. It was completely remodeled recently, and the appraisal district acquired the property for $200,000.

Ray Peveler, chief appraiser for the district, said this morning that the office staff hoped to make the move to the newly-acquired building on March 25-26. Telephones are due to be hooked up on March 24, and by that time, cables for the computer service are due to be installed.

The appraisal district has been looking for permanent offices for several months. The offices were originally located in the county courthouse, but were moved to the Wallace Building when the county tax collector required additional space at the courthouse.

In a called session after the appraisal district chairman, Kenneth Wilson, and secretary, Ross Blanchard, had signed for purchase of the new office building, the board discussed a request to collect taxes for the Ira Independent School District. No immediate action was taken on the request.

Up to now, the appraisal district has been handling valuations only. However, it has the authority to contract with taxing jurisdictions to collect their taxes, and some of the jurisdictions had expressed interest in collection service after the county advised recently that its fee for collections would increase from .6 of one percent to one percent. The county has been collecting taxes for all jurisdictions for 1981.

The Ira School District is the first to submit a formal request for the appraisal district to collect its taxes.

GOP Senators Proceed With Alternative Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republicans concerned that high interest rates are depressing the economy hope to finish drafting an alternative to President Reagan's red-ink budget by next week. They are convinced he will consider revisions even though he's still not saying so directly.

Work on alternatives to Reagan's big-deficit 1983 budget picked up steam after upbeat Capitol Hill meetings Tuesday during which the president privately assured his Senate allies that interest rates would drop significantly by summer.

"I think the president probably agrees, as I contend, that interest rates are the big issue right now and we've got to focus our energy and resources on how we get those rates down," said Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee.

In public remarks at a luncheon meeting with the 53 Republican senators, Reagan gave no direct evidence that he will give ground on his refusal to increase taxes or temper the increases he wants for the Pentagon.

Those are the two areas mentioned most frequently as ways to reduce a 1983 budget deficit that is swelling toward $100 million even by administration estimates.

While avoiding specifics, Reagan said Tuesday he would be willing to study any "comprehensive congressional plan" that holds down taxes, cuts spending and guarantees the defense of the nation.

However, after a closed session Reagan had with the senators, Baker summed up his impression of the president's position: "He didn't rule out any possibility. He did not embrace any change. It's clear to me that's he willing to consider any reasonable suggestions that we make. I don't doubt that he's still fully committed to his defense numbers and to his tax plan. But I think nothing is off limits."

After Reagan's visit Tuesday, Baker and other key GOP senators held their second meeting of the week in a continuing effort to pare a list of possible changes in Reagan's budget and agree on the revisions they will present Reagan.

They are considering alternatives that include much higher taxes, lowered defense spending and cutbacks in benefit programs such as Social Security.

A Republican leadership source said the senators hope to have a proposal to present to Reagan next week.

Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, has indicated he hopes his panel will begin drafting a spending blueprint the week of March 22.

Domenici said Tuesday after meeting with Reagan, "He asked that we submit alternatives and that's what we're going to do."

Q.—Has there been an increase in the number of unauthorized telephone calls being charged to a number, does the victim have to pay for these calls, and what can be done about the problem?

A.—Yes, there is a significant increase in these calls, says Jay Allen, public relations officer for Southwestern Bell. Most of these are from coin phones, and now the phone company tries to verify the authority before charging a call from a coin phone to a customer's number. Incidentally, he says the phone company lost over $4 million last year in Texas alone on these types of calls. In cases where a customer's phone is actually used by unauthorized persons, generally the customer is expected to control it, just as he would control use of an electrical appliance in his home or store. However, each case is considered on its own and they do try to determine who should be charged, says Allen. And in the future they probably will get tougher on verifying authority for charging calls made from coin phones.

The Snyder Chamber of Commerce banquet may set a precedent this year. We have asked several veteran observors and none could recall steaks being served at such an event. The standard fare for banquets is roast beef, barbecue, or perhaps chicken.

Roger Mize, chairman of the banquet committee, brought up the idea of steaks. There was a moment of silence, a few questions, and then his banquet committee said "why not?"

Some veteran observers also arched their eyebrows momentarily at $12 tickets. A little research revealed, however, that the tickets have been priced at $10 each the past two years----and we didn't have steak.

Meanwhile, in recent weeks we have looked over materials on numerous conventions we could attend if we were addicted to such things, and some of the meal prices were startling. It seems that the going rate for luncheons is anywhere from $15 to $25 these days, and for convention banquets, the tab is likely to range from $25 to $35 per plate. And in most cases they are offering something less than steaks.

This sounds like political fund-raising activities did a few years ago. But now, the politicos go mostly for the $1,000 per plate dinners, instead of the $10 and $25 type.

Dave Lane, the general manager of Channel 8, who will be master of ceremonies for the chamber banquet, has devoted himself to the business and management side of the operation for several years now, but some viewers may remember seeing him work on camera for a short time when he first joined WFAA-TV. He went there as sports director, and was succeeded in that position by a Swede named Verne Lundquist.

We are into that touch-and-go season that keeps West Texans watching their fruit trees every year. Will they bloom too early and get wiped out by a late frost?

We have noticed several threatening to bloom the past week, and we can't help but believe that it is too early. Another thing we have noticed is that our apricot tree does not appear to have as many buds as usual. Last year, it looked like it had been sprayed with popcorn when it was in full bloom. But the prospects appear different this time.

Minister Spreads Gospel By Air

LONGVIEW, Texas (AP) — Some preachers use television to spread their message. Some use radio.

Dr. Ken McKinley has found a new way — his airplane.

Dial A Devotional 573-8801

McKinley, a professor in the Bible and Missions Department at LeTourneau College here, has a 1946 two-seat airplane — an Ercare — that he flies to speaking engagements around the state and country.

As well as providing fast transportation, the plane has helped his ministry, he said.

"You don't know how many people I have had the opportunity to witness to after I got them up in the plane," McKinley said. "Before, I couldn't get to first base with some of them. The little plane has paid for itself in a hundred ways."

McKinley, 63, bought the plane in 1974 for $2,500. Since then, he has invested $10,000 in it, rebuilding the engine, modernizing the instrument panel and adding wheel covers.

"It's the safest and sweetest-flying airplane you've ever seen," he said. "It'll go 110 mph and use only six gallons of fuel an hour."

McKinley said he's always been interested in airplanes. As a kid, he used to build model airplanes. When he got to high school he would hang out at a nearby airport.

"I was an airport rat," he said. "I'd sweep out the hangars and wash the airplanes — anything to get a ride."

He said he wanted to take flying lessons, but just didn't have the opportunity. That changed when he joined LeTourneau College in 1959. Two years later, he enrolled in flying lessons offered by the school, and in about four months had earned his private license.

The lessons have come in handy.

Every week for the past five years, he's taught a Bible class in Dallas and the flying certainly has cut down his travel time. He said he can leave Gregg County Aiport — where he keeps his plane — at 4:30 p.m. and be in Dallas by 5:45 p.m.

The plane has helped even more on longer trips.

"My wife and I go practically anywhere," he said. "We've been to the East Coast, Canada, Colorado and Kansas. I haven't been to the West Coast yet, but we're starting a ministry there and we'll probably get out there some day."

McKinley also teaches weekly Bible studies in Tyler and Longview, has a Sunday morning radio show and is working on his second book.

McKinley said he has had only one close call in his plane, which happened a few years ago when he was on his way to Alabama.

Magnificent Yellowstone was never more so the February day Bill Nielson took friends on a snowmobile tour of the park. When Old Faithful erupts in frigid mountain air it appears twice its size.

And the splended herds of elk and buffalo; some moose, sheep, deer...the flocks of geese and swans...held the visitors enrapt, mesmerized by nature's incomparable masterwork.

Then, after a lazy loop of Yellowstone in the snowmobile, the party turned back toward Cody, Wyoming.

At Fishing Bridge they saw a young woman park ranger and two men who might have been rangers standing on the bridge.

Below them, a buffalo had broken through the river ice and was struggling for its life.

The men were taking pictures.

"Why," the Nielson party wanted to know "were they not trying to help the helpless beast or put if out of its misery."

The ranger replied, "That's not the way of the wild; better that nature take its course."

Bill Nielson demanded to know if park supervisors had been advised. They had been.

"What are they going to do about it?"

"Nothing."

The ranger and the men continued filming the animal's slow death.

The snowmobile party had along a 60 foot rope; they would do with it what they could.

With the park ranger protesting vigorously now that "men should not interfere with nature," the four visitors, spacing themselves along the rope, inched out onto the river ice.

The woman ranger shouted that they were going to "ruin everything"! She said it was "not natural" to assist an animal.

"What's the penalty?" the men asked.

"It's just not nature's way," she replied.

The rescuers got a rope loop around the animal's horns, tried to pull him out. The exhausted animal flipped the rope off, slid back.

The rescuers got the rope on the animal's horns again, but now the ice was starting to crack under the men.

The animal seemed to sense the men were trying to help, swam toward them, until it was directly at Nielson's feet...

By now the ranger had radioed her superiors and had told the men that they were to leave the animal alone.

That was an order!

Unarmed, they could not terminate the animal's agony.

Unwilling to disobey a park ranger, the Nielson party had to abandon the rescue effort, let the buffalo struggle until it drowned.

Sadly they headed back toward Cody.

As the ranger got on her snowmobile to leave she was grumbling that all this had probably caused her to be late for an evening movie in town.

If You Plan To Fail...

Success Can Be Yours

By KAY BARTLETT
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Now that you're in the late winter doldrums, whatever happened to all those New Year's resolutions? Are you still smoking, watching too much TV, binging on chocolate candy and so on down the list of mortal foibles?

One of the reasons you failed is that you failed to plan to fail.

That's the diagnosis of Dr. Herbert G. Steger, director of health psychology at Miami Valley Hospital in Dayton, Ohio.

"To believe you can have a 100 percent success rate is a myth," says Dr. Steger, a clinical psychologist. "Nobody does 100 percent. You've got to prepare yourself for a relapse."

So instead of will power of steel and lofty moral ideals, he suggests including a relapse in your strategy. Planned failure, as it were.

"If you were an overeater I'd have you go on a planned binge. It's a way of having a dry run. I'd ask you to maybe set aside a weekend and overeat. Then ask yourself how you're feeling about it, what action you could take during that binge and so on. Then when you do go on an actual binge, you'll have some strategy.

"I want you to learn from the relapse. A behavior change is a learning process, a process of slow change. A decision to change the behavior needs a planned strategy. A resolution isn't enough," says the 41-yearold psychologist.

Steger, who himself kicked the cigarette habit, also notes that New Year's might be one of the worst times to start such a project.

"The first thing you must do is choose the right time. Don't do it when you're under stress, going through a divorce, after a death in the family, during final exams ... and probably not at New Year's."

There's a post-holiday letdown, the weather is the worst for most people, the bills are coming in and most of us are not at our best this times of the year, he says.

Steger works with physicians who have advised patients of their need to change certain behaviors for their health and with private patients who just want to change their lives, such as someone who wants to spend more time with their children.

He also warns that he would not use the planned relapse program for a truly addictive personality. The risk would be too great that one cigarette or one drink might set them off and running again.

Steger also advises patients to make sure they set achievable goals.

"Don't try to lose 20 pounds the first week. Knock off 100 calories a day for starters. Or cut back two cigarettes a day, not 50. And remember, it took you a long time to learn to smoke or whatever. It will take you a long time to unlearn."

If you have a number of fish to scale or fillet, rub a little cooking oil or shortening, or even bacon drippings, on the backs of your hands. When the job is finished, claims Sports Afield, dried scales and slime will wash off easily.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Here is a hand Alec Traub took from a European Women's championship several years ago. South was Rixi Markus, one of the finest woman players of all time.

We aren't going to discuss her bidding. Rixi's bidding was always entirely in her own style, but six diamonds is certainly a good contract. If trumps break 2-2, she has 12 easy tricks. If the king of clubs can score, that is also her 12th trick.

West opened the four of diamonds against the slam. East played the jack and Rixi won. At trick two she led a low heart. East won and led a second diamond which was taken in dummy.

Now Rixi played a low club. If East held the ace she might have made a mistake and played it, but no such luck. Rixi ruffed.

Things looked dismal, but they were not hopeless. There was one slight chance left.

Rixi ran off four spade tricks. If East could ruff in, the slam would be kaput. But East had to follow to all four spades. Rixi was able to discard a heart from dummy, take her ace of hearts, ruff the last heart and claim her slam.

Note how easy it would have been for Rixi to lose her contract. Had she played a second trump before conceding a heart, East would have won and got to lead a third trump.

Vivace Jr. Music Club Has 'A Look At Ireland'

The Vivace Junior Music Club met March 7 in the home of Lisa Robbins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Robbins. Topic for the meeting was "A Look at Ireland." Rebecca Vestal narrated the program and introduced Hayley Vineyard and Michelle Holmes who in turn gave the history of Ireland, the country with pictures. Michelle Holmes played "The Dear Little Shamrock," an Irish folk song while members of the club sang. She also played "Hoe-Down in Dublin Town" by O'Shea, a piano solo.

Rebecca Vestal related that in Ireland, almost every Irish city has a Catholic Cathedral. Many of the people also enjoy visiting their neighborhood pub. Also, that Ireland has one television network called the Radio Telefis Eireann (RTE). The network is regulated by the Irish government, and television owners pay yearly license fees to help support it.

Rebecca told about "Londonderry Air," a famous Irish folk tune, which Mrs. Wayne Bethel played on the piano.

Alex Brice then presented the members with interesting facts about Irish foods such as the Irish potato, Irish stew, Irish salad, Irish soda bread, and Irish whiskey. He gave brief facts concerning the lives of Irish composers, sports and games. "Lips that touch the Blarney Stone will have the gift of gab" is an Irish myth. The famous stone is at Blarney Castle.

Anne Osborn played "Dublin Irish Jig" by Bastien and told about Saint Patrick and why we wear green on Saint Patrick's Day.

Linda Walker sang "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling" by Olcott, accompanied by Mrs. Bethel. She taught the members the words and how to roll the r's in the words, which was fun for everyone. Don Osborn played "Kerry Dance" by Molloy and "Harrigan" by Cohan.

Records entitled "Irish Night at the Pops" with the Boston Pops conducted by Arthur Fiedler, "Memories of Ireland featuring Paddy Noonan the "Piano Accordion Wizard," and "Lark in the Morning" featuring songs and dances from the Irish countryside were enjoyed by the members.

Tammy Farmer, president, conducted the business meeting with roll call and reading of the minutes by Sam Raborn. Tammy led the group in the collect and pledge and singing of the club hymn. New business concerned TFMC Festivals to be in Lubbock April 3.

Hostesses and host were Lisa Robbins, Rebecca Vestal and Brandon Neeley. Guests included Mrs. Jerry Vestal and Bill. Serving punch was Mrs. Bill Robbins. Refreshments with an Irish flavor were served to Anne, Don and Michelle Osborn, Judson Morrison, George Fuentez, Dayla Church, Linda Walker, Tammy Farmer, Rebecca Vestal, Hayley Vineyard, Michelle Holmes, Brandon Neeley, Sam Raborn, Alfred and Alex Brice, Lisa Robbins, and club sponsor, Mrs. Wayne Bethel.

The next meeting will be April 4 in the home of Charlie McCormick.

Appellate Judge Says He Could 'Pull The Switch'

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas Court of Criminal Appeals Judge Truman Roberts has frequently dissented when his colleagues affirmed death sentences. But he said there were times during his career as a trial judge when he could have executed the criminal himself.

"I never had to sentence anybody to death," Roberts said in an interview at his office in the Texas Supreme Court Building.

"But there were several cases, about three — where female children were abducted and brutally raped — I could have pulled the switch on one of those guys and never looked back."

Will Gray has spent about 25 years of his life battling capital punishment. Currently, the Houston defense lawyer has more than two dozen clients on death row, cases he took on appeal after the money ran out and earlier lawyers dropped their cases.

"I don't think it's right," Gray said. "Most of them up there on death row can't hire lawyers and had court-appointed lawyers. There's nothing fair about it. I just think it's wrong."

Gray and Roberts are only recent voices of an old dilemma — between society's need to protect itself from brutal criminals who show no hope of reform, and a belief that if society says murder is wrong it should not itself murder in the name of justice.

But arguments for and against the death penalty easily leave moral ground and head for more practical territory.

The margin of error in our present legal system haunts many attorneys, including Houston defense lawyer Percy Foreman.

"The law should not take away from any individual anything that the law cannot restore upon proof of error," the 79-year-old attorney said in an interview. "A man once executed is executed for good."

One defense lawyer tried — unsuccessfully — to overturn his client's death sentence on grounds execution would deny him a constitutional right to seek recovery for false conviction.

A question that Bishop Vincent Harris of Austin once posed to a legislative committee has been used by defense attorneys quizzing potential witnesses in capital murder trials — "Wouldn't you rather see a thousand criminals go free than to see one innocent person go to the electric chair?"

In a recent capital murder trial in Houston, jurors uniformly answered "yes," then sentenced the attorney's client to die.

But former Harris County District Attorney Carol Vance turns that argument on its head: "I would rather save an innocent life by putting somebody guilty to death," he said from his private law office on an upper floor of a Houston skyscaper.

"When a person determines to take another human being's life, where there is no reason — it's not in the heat of emotion, satisfies no reason, it's just pure meanness or lust — when it's under those extreme circumstances, he's really made the decision. He's forfeited his own life," Vance said.

Foreman said it's not that simple. "Life is too precious to be at the disposition of an individual, whether he be vested with some official title or otherwise. The Scripture does not say 'thou shalt not kill, except in groups of 12.' It simply says 'thou shalt not kill.'"

After the U.S. Supreme Court overturned the death penalty in 1972, Texas came up with a new law that applies only to murder and only in five specified types of cases. And after conviction, before recommending a death sentence, jurors must answer "yes" to three special issues, including whether the defendant is likely to commit a violent crime in the future.

Those new conditions satisfied the U.S. Supreme Court, and in 1976 they upheld the law.

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

It's definitely diarrhea

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 22-year-old female and I sincerely hope you can help me. I just got back from Mexico. Unfortunately, I got Montezuma's revenge. When I told my mother this she went crazy and told me it's V.D. I tried to explain that it's diarrhea. She will not believe this. I told her we would call a hospital and have them explain the terminology but the person we spoke to didn't know what the term meant. Please clear up this situation with my mother and me, and calm her down.

DEAR READER — The term is quite common in parts of the United States but since you live in Canada perhaps it is not used there. You may recall that former President Carter's use of the term while speaking in Mexico on a state visit caused some consternation. He was referring to the problem of tourists getting diarrhea in Mexico, often called Montezuma's revenge. But that is not a suitable diagnosis.

There are a number of causes for diarrhea during travels. The term traveler's diarrhea is also used. Don't overlook the role of different foods and drink. Probably a third to half of the diarrhea tourists get in Mexico is caused by a bacteria called E. Coli. Now we all have E. Coli in our colon and for years the organism that causes diarrhea was missed because it looks exactly like the harmless form we normally carry. But the Mexican variety behaves differently and is a different strain.

Diarrhea can also be caused by another bacteria called salmonella, often implicated in food poisoning outbreaks. And in more recent times giardiasis, which is a water-borne organism, has become a frequent cause of traveler's diarrhea. It is hard to diagnose and hard to treat. Our bowel contains a large number of bacteria. Sometimes an antibiotic changes the type of bacteria there and either eliminates diarrhea or may allow harmful bacteria to multiply and cause diarrhea. Also there are many causes for diarrhea that are not caused by organisms at all.

Your mother will feel better after reading The Health Letter number 13-8, What You Need to Know About Diarrhea, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My boy had a circumcision when he was a newborn. His pediatrician took away all of his foreskin. Now he is 5 years old and very active. What kind of harm will occur since he doesn't have the protection of a foreskin? What kind of problems might he have when he becomes an adult? And what kind of remedies can we take for him now?

DEAR READER — I wouldn't worry about it. The main complications from a circumcision, if any occur, are in the newborn period. The diaper problem can cause an inflammation for one thing. But by 5 years of age, if he has no problems from the circumcision he is not likely to develop any.

Some people claim that a circumcision decreases a man's enjoyment and others claim the opposite but I doubt it makes much difference. I am not an advocate of circumcision, but if there are no complications early in life you need not expect them later. It does improve hygiene but so will soap and water, properly used, just as soap and water cleans ears. As one anti-circumcision advocate put it, "You don't cut off the ears just to keep them clean."

Fish Poisoning Gets The Blame

MIAMI (AP) — Authorities are blaming ciguatera, a form of fish poisoning, for an illness that sent 15 Italian sailors to a Miami hospital.

The men on the supertanker Coraggio became ill Saturday after eating barracuda caught off the island of Bimini.

The toxin, often found in large barracuda, causes painful diarrhea, vomiting and nausea. A dozen of the sailors remained hospitalized Sunday, one in serious condition.

Contaminated Soil Disposal To Begin

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Disposal of contaminated soil at a former pesticide plant in Mission, probably will begin in April under an agreement between two chemical companies and the federal government.

Tex-Ag Chemical Co. of Mission and Helena Chemical Co. of Memphis, Tenn., manufactured DDT, lindane, chlordane and other toxic pesticides at the plant between 1950 and 1972.

The Environmental Protection Agency sued the companies and the land's present owner, Franklin Dusek, in May 1980 to clean up the 6.4 acres. EPA called it one of the most dangerous abandoned chemical site in the state.

The companies and the Justice Department signed an out-of-court settlement that was filed in U.S Distrct Court in Brownsville March 1. Under the agreement, the companies will pay the unspecified cost of excavation, blacktopping and other treatments.

Dusek did not sign the settlement and had no comment Tuesday on the latest development. He has asked a federal judge for permission to sue the chemical companies.

Many Legends Still Haunt Women's Death Row

KRISTIN GAZLAY
Associated Press Writer

Legend says Chipita Rodriguez puffed on corn shuck cigarettes as the ox-cart carrying her to her death rumbled toward the mesquite tree lawmen used to hang her in 1863.

She was accused of waylaying a horse trader and murdering him for his gold. Her accomplice, Juan Silvera, got five years in jail. Ms. Rodriguez got the noose.

She was buried beneath the mesquite tree on the banks of the Nueces River near San Patricio, the only one of eight women sentenced to die in Texas actually put to death.

Legend says she walks the banks of the Nueces River every time a woman is condemned in Texas.

If true, her ghost gets little exercise. Texas juries and judges have been stingy in condemning women. At present, two women are under sentence of death in Texas, compared with 165 men on death row. They are Linda Mae Burnett, 34, convicted in the execution-style shooting death of a 2-year-old near Winnie, Texas, and Pamela Lynn Perillo, convicted of a thrill killing.

Miss Perillo, 26, of Lynwood, Calif., sentenced in August 1980 to die by lethal injection, told police that she and a fellow hitchhiker looped ropes around the necks of two men and pulled on the ends until the victims strangled.

She recounted how she watched the men writhe in agony for about 10 minutes each.

Assistant District Attorney Bob Moen pressed jurors to sentence Miss Perillo to death for the murder of Bob Skeens, of Houma, La., and the panel complied after six hours of deliberations.

"How could one stand over a human being and watch him writhe in front of you as his life slips away? Yet she is so engrossed by it that she does it again," he told the panel.

The first woman condemned to die in Texas was Pamela Mann, who operated Houston's Mansion House Hotel in the days of the Republic.

Ms. Mann was convicted of forgery and sentenced to be hanged, but the second president of the Republic of Texas, Mirabeau B. Lamar, granted her clemency and she died a wealthy woman.

"Straight 8" Emma Oliver of San Antonio got her nickname by killing eight men during the 1950s. Her death sentence was commuted to life in prison by Gov. Allan Shivers. Her favorite rocking chair was brought to her prison cell, where she eventually died of cancer.

Fortuneteller Maggie Morgan was convicted and sentenced to death for her part in the 1960 murder of a Houston woman. Her sentence too was commuted to life in prison.

Carolyn Ann Lima was saved from electrocution about four hours before officials were going to shave her head and lead her to the electric chair.

Ms. Lima and her boyfriend, Leslie Ashley, were convicted in 1963 of the murder of Fred Tomes, whose nude body was doused with gas and burned in a drainage ditch near Houston in February 1961. Ashley testified against her and was later sent to a state mental asylum.

Ms. Lima later won a new trial and her charges were redueed from capital murder to murder. She was sentenced to five years and eventually released. Her mother now operates a beauty parlor in Houston, and tells reporters who telephone to leave her daughter alone.

Mary Lou Anderson was sentenced to death August 1978, convicted in the death of her father in Sugar Land, near Houston. Prosecutors pressed for the death penalty against Ms. Anderson, contending she hired a man to murder her father and stepmother for his insurance money.

She later testified against a co-defendant and her sentence was reduced to 50 years in prison.

Miss Perillo is temporarily in the Harris County Jail, leaving Mrs. Burnett, formerly a Nederland housewife, alone on what serves as "death row" in the women's prison in Gatesville. Her co-defendant, Joe Dugas, also was sentenced to death.

Mrs. Burnett said one of the things that troubles her is the notoriety attached to her name because so few women have ever been condemned in Texas.

"I would like to think that I won't be in the history books," she told The Associated Press recently, "but I know I will be. That's the facts."

August appears to be the most popular month for having babies. In 1980, there were some 330,000 births in August, 5,000 more than runner-up October.

Final Respect Paid To Belushi

CHILMARK, Mass. (AP) — A simple folk tune sung by James Taylor ended funeral services for John Belushi on Martha's Vineyard, while officials in Los Angeles refused comment on reports the 33-year-old comedian had died of a cocaine overdose.

Several of Belushi's family members and friends joined Taylor in singing "That Lonesome Road" Tuesday at the gravesite near his summer home on the island off Cape Cod. Snowflakes began falling immediately after the last refrain.

The 200 mourners who gathered at a Congregational church in the island town of Vineyard Haven included Belushi's wife, Judith, his parents, and Lorne Michaels, producer of "Saturday Night Live," the late-night comedy show that catapulted Belushi to stardom in 1975.

Two of Belushi's former television co-stars — Bill Murray and Dan Aykroyd — attended the services and paid their last respects in sharply contrasting manners.

An obviously distraught Murray avoided reporters at the church by sneaking in through a side street. He emerged bleary-eyed, with his head bowed, and later placed a single flower on Belushi's casket at the grave site.

Aykroyd, Belushi's island neighbor and co-star in the current movie "Neighbors," arrived at the church in a battered Dodge similar to the car the two stars drove in the movie "The Blues Brothers."

Wearing a bandana, black leather jacket and boots, the grinning Aykroyd later roared off on a motorcycle to Abel's Hill Cemetery, a burial ground dating to the early 1700s.

Students In WTC Earn 11 Awards In Contest

Members of the Office Education Association chapter at Western Texas College won 11 awards at statewide contests held at Brazosport Junior College.

In addition, the chapter took second place honors for its activities manual, a summary of the activities in which the chapter has worked this year, Linda Wright, OEA advisor, said.

WTC winners in the contests were:

Genea Martinez, Colorado City, first in Accounting Clerk, second in Accounting Concepts, and fourth in Business Arithmetic.

Jill Linam of Loraine, first in Legal Secretary and first in Job Application-Secretarial.

Diane Young of Kermit, third in Record Managementss Clerk.

Beth Geiger of Westbrook, fourth in Secretary II (Shorthand).

Sandra Rosas of Snyder, fifth in Secretary II (Shorthand).

Sharla Rollins of Westbrook, fifth in Typist.

The first three places in both cluster and non-cluster contests qualify for the national competition to be held April 24-27 in Nashville, Tenn., Mrs. Wright said.

OEA is an organization for students enrolled in vocational office education programs and encourages the development of leadership as well as the developtment of occupational skills.

Record Set By DECA Students In Contests

Snyder High School DECA students all but "walked away" with an impressive five first place awards and one second place award at the annaul Area Marketing and Distributive Education (MDE) Conference in San Angelo over the weekend.

The conference was held at San Angelo Central High School, with Angelo State University coordinating the two days of competitive events. San Angelo business people served as DECA competitive events judges.

MDE students representing schools from Mineral Wells to El Paso were involved in the competition.

Snyder High School competitors set a school record for SHS, and also the local DECA group received more first place competency-based competitive event awards than any other high school in the entire area.

The local DECA chapter's Free Enterprise Group Project received first place recognition and will advance to the state finals in Corpus Christi next month. Individual DECA students earning first place awards in DECA competency-based competitive events included Jill Donelson in Finance and Credit and Sherry Holt in Apparel and Accessories. Jill is employed at First National Bank and Sherry is employed at Dryden's Shoes.

In addition, Ann Melton earned a first place award in Food Service as well as a first place for her individual Free Enterprise Project. She is employed at Brown and Gray Motor Co.

Jim Simmons won a second place award in Petroleum Marketing. He is employed at Furr's Super Market.

Students are tested in 10 instructional areas: Advertising, business math, communications, display, human relations, management, merchandising, product service, selling and store operating.

DECA competency-based competitive events often are role-playing events designed to test a Student's attitude, skill and knowledge in a specific occupation and-or institutional area. Students normally must excell in both the classroom and at their respective training stations in order to successfully compete in these events.

DECA students who earned first place awards at the area conference will be representing Snyder High School at the state DECA competitive events conference in Corpus Christi in April.

Jim Rosson, MDE coordinator at Snyder High School, is the advisor for the local DECA group.

Taste Verdict: Merit.

Former higher tar smokers applaud MERIT as "Best-tasting low tar I've tried."

Can a low tar cigarette provide the taste incentive to switch smokers from higher tar brands?

Research proves MERIT can:

Taste Debate Ends.

Nationwide survey reveals over 90% of MERIT smokers who switched from higher tar are glad they did. In fact, 94% don't even miss their former brands.

Further Evidence: 9 out of 10 former higher tar smokers report MERIT an easy switch, that they didn't give up taste in switching, and that MERIT is the best-tasting low tar they've ever tried.

MERIT Landslide.

In addition, extensive unmarked-pack tests confirm that MERIT delivers a winning combination of taste and low tar when compared with higher tar leaders.

Confirmed: The overwhelming majority of smokers reported MERIT taste equal to—or better than—leading higher tar brands.

Confirmed: When tar levels were revealed, 2 out of 3 chose the MERIT combination of low tar and good taste.

Year after year, in study after study, MERIT remains unbeaten. The proven taste alternative to higher tar smoking—is MERIT.

THE BIRDS ARE COMING—The approaching spring brings increased activity of all kinds to the great outdoors. Hundreds of sparrows and small black birds swarmed to the trees on the north side of the Scurry County Courthouse Tuesday as sunny skies pushed afternoon temperatures into the eighties and drew people and animals into a frenzy of outdoor activity. Veteran's Burial Was Delayed

BOSTON (AP) — The body of a penniless veteran who had earned battle stars in World War II was stored in the city morgue for three months because Congress wiped out burial allowances for most veterans, officials say.

Edward Arthur Reedy, who became a drifter in the later years of his life, died of bronchial pneumonia Dec. 9 at Massachusetts General Hospital.

At 56 years of age, Reedy had long been separated from any family connections, according to published accounts. He earned Pacific battle stars in the Navy during World War II and later had a hitch with the Army.

After an ignominious period in storage, he was buried Friday at the Veterans Administration Cemetery in Bourne. Thomas B. Materazzo, the city's veterans commissioner, came up with $350 from the city.

Getting Reedy buried was complicated. Materazzo said the $300 burial allowance previously available for all veterans was canceled for most veterans under the federal budget for fiscal 1982, which became effective on Oct. 1, 1981. The money problem was compounded, he said, by a Massachusetts provision that a veteran should not be buried in a pauper's grave.

School Nurse Role Is Changed

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Adults over 30 probably remember the school nurse as the lady who measured their height and weight, bandaged skinned knees and provided a place to lie down when they had a headache.

No more.

At Martin Luther King High School in the Germantown section of Philadelphia, Constance Badger and Elaine Sellers are among a new breed of the nation's 30,000 school nurses who are not content with a Band-Aid approach to health and learning.

They still patch knees and keep basic health records. But they also counsel pregnant teens, help overweight students improve their self-image, and work with youngsters whose learning disabilities once meant frequent trips to the nurse's office.

"We look at more than just the physical health stuff," says Ms. Badger. "You look at peer relationships, family relationships, school adjustment, career plans — more of the total person."

An example occurred recently when a teacher referred a 16-year-old girl to Ms. Badger after the child missed three weeks of school. The teen-ager was given a physical and asked for a family health history.

It turned out the girl was missing school because her family was sick. In visits to the home, Ms. Badger found a mother too weak from hunger to leave. The nurse arranged for food stamps and helped the family shop for groceries.

"Given the same situation 15 years ago, I'd still have tried to help," Ms. Badger says. "But now I have the tools to make a much more complete assessment of the child's problems."

The days of just jotting down the results of eye and ear examinations began to end in the 1970s as school nurses pressed for added professional challenges and new laws and changes in the American family simultaneously placed new responsibilities on public schools.

As more mothers took jobs, schools — and their nurses — were left to care for children with chronic illnesses, says Judith Igoe, director of the University of Colorado's School Health Program.

At Martin Luther King High, for example, Ms. Badger and Mrs. Sellers treat 150 youngsters with chronic ailments including epilepsy, sickle cell anemia or mental retardation.

A weakening economy has also placed new burdens on school nurses, says Ms. Igoe. As more and more families feel they can only afford emergency care for their children, they leave routine dental and medical care to schools.

February was a particularly busy month for the nurses at Martin Luther King High. By law, students must be immunized against a long list of contagious diseases. So in a three-day burst, Ms. Badger and Mrs. Sellers gave 2,421 doses of vaccine to students in the gymnasium.

Two federal laws have also added to the workload.

In 1972, pregnant girls and teen-age mothers were given equal rights to an education. There are "hundreds" of teen mothers at 3,500-student Martin Luther King High, and each year about 100 more join the ranks.

In addition to regular sex education classes and pregnancy counseling, Mrs. Sellers, Ms. Badger and a pediatric nurse from the Medical College of Pennsylvania hold special classes for about 20 expectant girls.

Hotline Helps Hookers Hang Up Their Past

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: In reference to a letter asking if there is a "Hookers Anonymous": There is an organization made up of former madams, call girls and streetwalkers who counsel people trying to get out of prostitution. That group, formerly known as CAT (California Authority of Trollops), counsels at the Mary Magdalene Project in Los Angeles, where up to six prostitutes can live temporarily while they make the difficult transition into legitimate employment.

"Children of the Night" is a Los Angeles organization that helps 10- to 17-year-olds who have been forced out on the street to hustle as prostitutes. (About half of all prostitutes are 18 years old or younger.) Father Ritter renders a similar service to young male prostitutes at Covenant House in New York City.

It was my research and work with prostitutes that led me to develop programs for both adult and child prostitutes, who are often disregarded by more traditional agencies that provide social services.

Our hotline for referrals to specific programs for the prostitute is (213) 550-7188.

DR. LOIS LEE

DEAR DR. LEE: Thank you for bringing attention to a widely neglected and often overlooked population of people who are entitled to social services like everyone else. If organizations such as yours do not exist in other metropolitan areas, they should.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: This is a rather unusual problem, but we desperately need your help.

On Oct. 1, the "Former Prisoner-of-War Benefits Act of 1981" became law. This law was enacted to give some much deserved benefits to Americans who were prisoners of war.

We are having a difficult time locating all ex-prisoners of war in order to inform them of these benefits.

Please publish our address. We want to hear from anyone who thinks he (or she) qualifies for these benefits.

Thanks, Abby, for helping some of America's finest.

EDWARD FISHER,
NATIONAL SENIOR VICE COMMANDER

DEAR MR. FISHER: I am pleased to be a part of this generous, patriotic effort. Will it include Japanese-Americans who were placed in "relocation centers" (also known as "internment camps") for the duration of World War II?

DEAR ABBY: I am from England, but I am married to an American and we live in New York. My mother-in-law is also a New Yorker, and she insists that when my mother comes to visit us it is her place to ring up and say "hello," even though my mother-in-law has been informed of her arrival.

I feel that it is the responsibility of the resident of the host country to ring up and welcome the guest. Which is the correct way?

WTC Play Entry Ranked Excellent

The Western Texas College Theatre Department's entry in the Texas Junior College Speech and Theatre Association's annual play festival earned a rating of excellent, Jim Rambo, theatre director, said.

In additon, three WTC students earned individual honors. Jay Blakemore and Rob Clark were given superior acting awards, while Becky Pierce received an excellent rating.

WTC was selected as the site for next year's play festival, Rambo said. No dates have yet been set.

WTC's entry in this year's festival was "The Real Inspector Hound," seen by local audiences at the dinner theatre. Blakemore and Clark were seen in the roles of theatre critics who become involved in the play they have come to critique, while Miss Pierce appeared as Lady Cynthia Muldoon in the play the critics were watching.

This was the first time WTC has entered the festival. Three entries received ratings of excellent, Rambo said, with this being in effect a second place, while the superior rating is the equivalent to a first. Ken Waters of Stephen F. Austin State University was the critic-judge for the festival.

Charlemagne became king of the Franks in 768 A.D. He ruled France, Germany, Spain and parts of Italy and Austria. He enforced Christianity, and was crowned Emperor of the Romans by Pope Leo III in St. Peter's in 800.

Tigers Rout Big Spring In 5th

BIG SPRING – Snyder Coach Albert can feel a little bit easier about going into the Monahans Tournament this weekend. His Tigers avenged Monday's loss to Big Spring by thumping the Steers 10-6 here yesterday.

Lefthander Monte Gambol took the victory, giving up three hits in five innings before taking a rest with an 8-2 lead. Lewis used Charles Bollinger and John Wilson to finish out the contest.

The contest was a close one through four and a half innings. Snyder led all the way, but the game was tied on two occassions. The Tigers notched run No. 1 in the second inning when Casey Peterson doubled in Perry Echols, 1-0. Big Spring locked the score in the bottom of the inning as Marcus Armendiz's sacrifice chased Tom Olague home.

Back-to-back singles in the third stanza bought Snyder another slim lead before Big Spring used a single and an error to tie it up again in the fourth.

Snyder broke the game open in the fifth, as Brent Roemisch and John Wilson walked. Jesse Hernandez followed with a single, and, sandwiched between two outs, Echols added another. Peterson also cracked a single, and Trey Harlin followed with a three-run homer to make it an 8-2 ballgame.

Big Spring countered with one run in the fifth, but Snyder added two more in the top of the sixth. Roemisch led off with a home run and Hernandez later came in after getting aboard via a double.

Bollinger came on for Gambol in the bottom of the sixth. The Steers managed three runs in the inning, but three errors were the key to the minirally. Wilson finished out the final one and one-third inning.

"The lefthander (Gambol) did a good job," said Lewis, who will take his 4-2 Tigers against Andrews at 7 p.m. tomorrow as the Monahans Tournament begins. "It was a close game until the fifth inning and then we hit them pretty well. They got some runs on us in the sixth with Bollinger in there, but it wasn't the freshman's fault. They only got one real clean single off of him, and we made three errors."

Lewis said he would start either Gerald Don Hicks, 2-1, or Wilson against Andrews.

Sampson, Magee Pace AP All-America Squad

NEW YORK (AP) - Ralph Sampson of Virginia and Kevin Magee of California-Irvine today were named for the second straight year to The Associated Press first-team All-America squad.

Sampson, college basketball's Player of the Year last season, led the Cavaliers to a 29-3 season and the No. 3 ranking in the final AP poll of the season.

In his three seasons at Virginia, the 7-foot-4 junior has led Virginia to 82 victories, the most in history by an Atlantic Coast Conference team over a three-year period.

Last season, Magee, a 6-8 senior, became the first player to finish in the top four in scoring, rebounding and field-goal percentage. This year, his statistics are equally impressive. He's scoring 26.3 points per game on a shooting percentage of 64.1 percent, and his rebounding average is 12.5 per game.

The rest of the first team includes Terry Cummings of DePaul, 6-9 junior forward; Eric "Sleepy" Floyd of Georgetown, 6-3 senior guard, and Quintin Dailey of San Francisco, 6-3 junior guard.

The second team is comprised of 6-10 forward Keith Lee of Memphis State, the only freshman on the first three teams; Dale Ellis of Tennessee, 6-7 junior forward; James Worthy of North Carolina, 6-9 junior forward; Lester Conner of Oregon State, 6-4 senior guard, and Terry Teagle of Baylor, 6-5 senior swingman.

Making up the third team are Dominique Wilkins of Georgia, 6-7 junior forward; Paul Pressey of Tulsa, 6-5 senior swingman; Ricky Frazier of Missouri, 6-6 senior forward; Ricky Pierce of Rice, 6-5 senior forward, and Dan Callandrillo of Seton Hall, 6-2 senior guard.

DePaul's Cummings, an ordained minister, was needed to replace Mark Aguirre this season. He has surpassed all expectations. Aguirre, a first-team All-American last year, averaged 23.0 points before he bolted for the pros; Cummings has averaged 22.4. Aguirre averaged 8.6 rebounds; Cummings is averaging 11.7. And the second-ranked Blue Demons finished with a 26-1 season.

Floyd, the Most Valuable Player of the Big East tournament, is well known as a scorer, but the Boston Celtics' Red Auerbach says he will be drafted into the National Basketball Association for his defensive ability.

"It's his hand speed on defense," Auerbach says.

Floyd had 57 steals and averaged 16.8 points per game this season as sixth-ranked Georgetown compiled a 26-6 record. He also is a fine rebounding guard, averaging 3.5 a game.

Dailey's fine season was marred when he was charged with five felonies, including attempted rape, earlier this month. He pleaded innocent to all charges and remained with the Dons, who have thrived on his 25.1 points and 5.3 rebounds per game. San Francisco enters the NCAA tournament with a 25-5 record.

Reid Leads Houston Past Milwaukee, 103-91

HOUSTON (AP) - Rock-steady Robert Reid was there when it mattered and the result was another win for the Houston Rockets, another loss for the Milwaukee Bucks.

Houston normally depends heavily on its big men, center Moses Malone and forward Elvin Hayes, to provide the fireworks in its National Basketball Association games. Reid rarely has the flashy statistics his larger teammates can boast, but he knows when it's time for him to produce.

In Tuesday's game with Milwaukee, Malone played 44 of the 48 minutes while Hayes was on the floor the entire game. So Reid got eight rebounds in the last quarter and the Rockets staved off the Bucks' last attempt at a rally for the 103-91 victory.

"Yes, I went for rebounds in that last quarter because I knew that Elvin was tired and that Moses had played a lot of minutes," said Reid, a quiet, intensely religious man. "I thought that we held our composure when the game was on the line."

Another big contributor to the Houston cause was unsung Allen Leavell, who hit on 11 of his 16 field goal tries.

WTC Places 3rd In SHSU Meet

ELKINS LAKE – Coach Dave Foster said his Western Texas College Golf teams played well in the Sam Houston State Invitational Tournament here Monday and Tuesday, but weren't at their best.

"We played pretty well considering all things, but we just made too many little mistakes," said Foster, in reporting that WTC placed third and fourth in the nine-team Junior College Division of the 36-hole tournament.

Paris Junior College won the tournament going away with a 598, while McLennan Community College took second with a 618. Western Texas Blue was third with a 619 and WTC Green took fourth with a 633.

"We should have taken second," said Foster, who noted WTC Blue was seven-over par for the final hole. "But there was no way we were going to catch Paris. They were playing too well."

WTC Blue turned in a 314 the first day, 11 strokes behind Paris' 303 and four behind McLennan. A 305 Tuesday was the third-lowest round of the tournament, but wasn't enough to catch McLennan, which had a 308.

Medalist went to Darryl Henning of Paris with a pair of 72s for a 144. Second-medalist was a three-way tie between WTC freshman Petey Petri, Mark Flaa of Paris and Cary Linck of Parks, all with 151s.

WTC Green scores included sophomore Jimbo Cotton, 76-77--153; freshman Mike Hafley, 85-75--160; freshman Rick Woodson, 83-77--160; sophomore Gary Ray, 81-80--161; and sophomore Matt Vincent, 84-83--167.

Next action for the Westerners will be the 54-hole Southern Intercollegiate Tournament, March 25-28 in Dadeville, Ala.

A&M Hosts Lamar In NIT Tourney

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) - Texas A&M enjoys the home-court advantage in tonight's first-round National Invitational Tournament basketball game, but Aggie coach Shelby Metcalf says the Lamar Cardinals still scare him to death.

"They're as mistake-free as any team you're going to play," said Metcalf. "They'll play as hard as any team you're going to play. They'll pass the ball and take the good percentage shot and really get after you on defense. So, if we're fortunate enough to beat them it'll be quite an accomplishment for us."

Lamar, 22-6 and runner-up in the Southland Conference, matches California-Irvine for the best record in the 32-team NIT this year. The Aggies, third-place finishers in the Southwest Conference, posted a mark of 18-10 to earn their second NIT berth.

The Cardinals are making their first NIT appearance, although they were in the NCAA championship tournament the past three years.

"We're proud to be here and proud to be playing against Texas A&M," said Lamar coach Pat Foster, conceding the Aggies will enjoy a height advantage. A&M has 6-11 center Rudy Woods and 6-10 junior forward Claude Riley inside.

A&M scored 72.9 points per game while Lamar's norm was 70.4. The Cards had the better defensive record, allowing 60.3 points per game to 67.6 for the Aggies.

Lamar's top scorer is senior guard Terry Long with a 14.5 average. Junior Kenneth Perkins is the Cards' top rebounder with 8.7.

Rangers Win

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) - Rookie Mike Richardt belted a seventh-inning, two-out grand slam homer to lift the Texas Rangers to a 4-3 victory over the New York Yankees in the Rangers' opening game of the exhibition season.

Frank Tanana, Steve Comer and Danny Darwin shut out the Yankees over the final eight innings Tuesday.

Woman On Texas Death Row Remembers Good, Bad Times

GATESVILLE, Texas (AP) — Linda May Burnett has plenty of solitude now to recollect what she used to be. It's a bittersweet bonus, says the former housewife, that comes with being on death row.

"Now I live in the past," said Mrs. Burnett, who spends about 23 hours a day alone in her yellow-walled cell at the women's prison here. "The last six months I have really come to grips with myself as a person — as Linda. It's nice to think these past three years could count for something."

The memories she likes to share are sketched in vivid detail — peaceful days when she was free, tending to kids in the neighborhood and attending PTA meetings. A life she says revolved around her family, her husband, Leo, and three daughters.

But she offers only sketchy remembrances of the chain of events that led to her death sentence — the revengeful boyfriend, Ovide, she committed adultery with, the accusations that she merrily led five people to their pre-dug common grave, and her conviction for the murder of a 2-year-old boy.

She refuses, she says firmly, to dwell on past hate and unhappiness.

Mrs. Burnett is one of only two women under sentence of death in Texas. She was accused of murder in the execution-style slayings of the 2-year-old, his parents and grandparents, who were abducted and forced to march to a grave near Winnie, Texas. Each victim was killed with a single shot to the head.

A jury also condemned Ovide Joseph Dugas for the same crime. Mrs. Burnett, who was convicted only in the boy's death, insists she is innocent.

Her wait for exoneration — or death — could be a long one.

Mrs. Burnett's court-appointed attorney, whom she never has met, wrote her that he was confident the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals would rule on her case soon. That was September. Week after week passes without a word.

"No one had explained the appeals process to me," the 34-year-old Mrs. Burnett said in a recent interview, across a table in a prison conference room. "I thought they kept you for a month and then killed you. One night, they took me up upstairs for blood tests and I turned to the woman and said, 'Is this it?'"

Three years of her life have been spent in prison, and she has yet to hear the decision on her first appeal.

"You just don't have an end to it," she said. "You wait and wait and wait and wait. There's no end in sight."

The Mountain View unit in Gatesville, part of the Texas Department of Corrections, is nestled in rural Central Texas, 40 miles from Waco, framed by sprawling fields and towns that are just a blink on an endless highway.

Mrs. Burnett has made friends here, but she never forgets where she is — or why.

"You know I'm here for killing a kid," she whispered. "I can't stand that. Especially since I didn't do it."

Although prosecutors at her trial played tape recordings in which she was hypnotized and confessed involvement in the slayings, she claims the tapes were a sham.

Now Mrs. Burnett's days melt into weeks, months, eventually years. She says she survives on her fierce faith in God, by living in the past, virtually memorizing the photographs of her family, writing letters to the male inmates on Death Row in Huntsville, reading and watching television.

She loves soap operas and looks forward to prime-time serials such as "Dallas," and "Knots Landing."

Since coming to death row — at present, she's the only woman here under death sentence — she has finished her fragmented education by passing a high school equivalency test. She now takes Bible classes.

Every month, her husband drives 250 miles from their southeast Texas home in Nederland for a four-hour visit. They cannot touch — prison rules. She says she struggles against tears during those visits so her family will not fret about her.

While incarcerated at the Goree Unit in Huntsville, formerly the women's prison, Mrs. Burnett tried to commit suicide by downing a handful of pills. She said she sometimes regrets not killing herself before the state of Texas could take her life.

"Finally, I just wanted to die because I didn't think I could ever clear myself," she said. "I am not a strong person. I couldn't cope. But I wasn't putting my faith in Jesus and I wasn't being fair to my family."

Only eight women have ever been sentenced to death in Texas. Only one was actually put to death, subjected to swift frontier justice. Chipita Rodriguez, accused of robbery, was hanged from a mesquite tree in 1863. According to legend, her ghost walks the Nueces River bank in San Patricio every time a woman is sentenced to death in Texas.

Pamela Lynn Perillo, 26, of Lynwood, Calif., is the only other woman in Texas now under death sentence. She was convicted in August 1980 for strangling a Louisiana man with a rope in what prosecutors said was a thrill killing. She has been in the Harris County Jail for the past several months.

Even if Mrs. Burnett's conviction is overturned, she would face another trial. And, she said, the people in her hometown will never forget where she spent a chunk of her life.

"I would love to go home, but they won't let me," she said, eyes filling with tears. "I had a lot of bad things happen to me. Someone burned a cross in my front yard. The supermarket where I had shopped for years asked me to not to shop there anymore. Someone threw eggs at me. I was kicked out of the PTA. This was all before the trial.

"Leo refuses to have our phone number changed. He refuses to buckle to people's cruelty. It's been a nightmare for me. I had never been arrested. I thought the courts didn't make mistakes. I thought that if you were arrested you were guilty."

Mrs. Burnett was arrested at her home July 10, 1978, shortly after the partly decomposed bodies of the five victims were discovered in a shallow grave.

In preparing their case, defense attorneys hired a hypnotist to interview Mrs. Burnett about the slayings, but to the dismay of her lawyers, prosecutors successfully subpoenaed the tapes and used them against her.

The recordings detailed the slayings of 2-year-old Jason Phillips, his parents, Elmer and Martha Phillips, and grandparents, Bishop and Ester Phillips. The little boy and his parents, from Woodward, Okla., were visiting Elmer's parents in Winnie during the Fourth of July holiday.

On the tapes, a woman's voice says Dugas shot the young boy, despite her tearful pleas that the child be spared.

Police said it was a grudge killing the Oklahoma family members were swept up in simply because they were visiting. Dugas once was married to Mary Phillips, the daughter of the Winnie couple, and prosecutors said he blamed her parents for the marriage's breakup.

During the taped interview, the woman's voice — prosecutors said it was Mrs. Burnett's — recounted the thrill she got directing the victims to the grave, saying, "I talked to them constantly, telling them just to play along with him (Dugas), that I would kill him."

When asked if the victims resisted their executions, she said, "No. The damn fools just got into the grave. I talked them into the grave."

Mrs. Burnett said the voice on the damaging tape recording is not hers. She said the transcript of the tapes was peppered with words she cannot even pronounce, much less define.

She blamed Dugas, the "handsome" childhood friend she became reacquainted with a month before the killings, for robbing her of her home, her family and her freedom. She said she spurns his infrequent letters from the men's death row at the Ellis Unit without reading them.

She now claims she was not even present when the victims were shot and that the only reason she knew about the murders was because Dugas bragged about them to her. She contends Dugas framed her because she refused to have sex with him.

However, after being sentenced to death she said, "My only crime was poor judgment in choosing Joe Dugas as a friend. My only sin against God is adultery."

Stark prison life now protects Mrs. Burnett from the pointing fingers and accusatory stares of small-town life.

"Human beings? I couldn't count on them," she said. "You ask what I think about when I'm in my cell? I feel safe in there. No one can get to me.

"You become a child here," she added, gesturing to the dormitories that make up the maximum-security Mountain View unit. "Here, you're served your meals through the door, you're told when to take a shower, you're handed your clothes."

She rarely grants interviews because "a bad story comes just that much closer to sticking that needle in my arm."

And she tries not to think about what life holds in store for her.

"I just know I will be cleared," she said. "But if I were to get a life sentence, it would send me off the deep end. I'm so tired."

Minor Mishaps Occupy Police

Snyder police officers investigated two minor traffic mishaps in the 1500 block of College Avenue around the noon hour Tuesday.

The first mishap involved a 1980 Chevrolet driven by Donald Lee Atwood of 3609 Jacksboro and a 1978 Buick driven by Michael Michalski of Albuquerque, N. M. Only minor damages were reported in this accident which occurred at 11:58 a.m. Tuesday.

Local police were called back to the same location around 12:33 p.m. for a second minor mishap. Involved in the second accident were a parked 1971 Buick owned by Freddy Don Benningfield of Snyder and a 1973 Dodge driven by Joseph Daren Forbes of 3808 Galveston. Again, only minor damages were reported.

Snyder police officers arrested one male subject at Allsup's Convenience Store around 1:30 a.m. Wednesday. The subject was booked on charges of misdemeanor theft and public intoxication.

Obituaries

Cochran Rites

Funeral service was set for 2 p. m. today in the First Baptist Church Chapel for Sybil Juanita Cochran, 61, who died at 5:50 p.m. Monday in Lubbock General Hospital.

The Rev. Ken Branam, pastor, was to officiate. Burial was to be in Hillside Memorial Gardens, under direction of Bell-Seale Funeral Home.

Mrs. Cochran, who lived at 4123 Jacksboro, was a native of Haskell and had lived here 11 years.

She was married to Ray Cochran on June 21, 1942, in Magnolia, Ark. He survives.

Also surviving are two daughters, Helen Sharber of Burleson and Carol Freeman of Snyder; her mother, Vera Tremain of Pasadena; a sister, James Tremain of Houston; and two grandchildren.

Carpenter

Funeral service has been set for 2:30 p. m. Thursday at the First Baptist Church in Elk City, Okla., for James Franklin Carpenter, 98, who died Tuesday after a brief illness.

He was the father of Gayle May of Snyder.

The Rev. Charles Becton and the Rev. James Perky will officiate at the funeral service, and burial will be in the Page Cemetery at Burns Flat, Okla.

Other survivors include two sons, three other daughters, two sisters, 19 grandchildren, 42 great-grandchildren and nine great-great-grandchildren.

To Confab

Eight Phi Theta Kappa members from Western Texas College will attend the 64th annual national convention opening tomorrow in Minneapolis, Minn.

Accompanying the students is Dr. Mary Hood, faculty sponsor of the WTC chapter of PTK.

Students attending are Jimmy Boyd of Mineral Wells, Elena Garcia of Wink, Lori Fuqua of Hermleigh, John Weeks of Brownwood, Tracy Long of McCamey and Tammy O'Day, John Pavlik and Daren Benbenek of Snyder.
