Perot taps ex-POW

DALLAS — Texas billionaire Ross Perot said Monday retired Vice Admiral James Stockdale, a former Vietnam prisoner of war whose freedom he helped to gain, would be his "interim" running mate in a possible race for the White House. The decision allows volunteers to mount ballot petition drives on Perot's behalf in the 27 states and District of Columbia that require independent candidates to name running mates.

Lottery deadline

AUSTIN — With a deadline of midnight tonight for applications to sell lottery tickets, only 68 retailers in Midland County have applied to provide gamblers with a chance to win some cash. "When lottery tickets go on sale, Texas businesses can expect a crush of customers like the first day of Christmas shopping season," said Texas Lottery Director Nora Linares. As of noon Monday, 110 merchants in Ector County had applied for a lottery license. Linares said she expects at least $17 million in first-day ticket sales, but that is the industry standard and Texas sales could hit $25 million. Applications must be postmarked before midnight tonight. Merchants seeking last-minute information and assistance can call a toll-free lottery retailers hotline at 1-800-37-LOTTO.

21 hours in mud

UNIONTOWN, Pa. — A hunter stuck up to his waist in mud was freed Monday after more than 20 hours of wriggling, talking to himself and a full night's sleep. He promised a rescuer he would give up turkey hunting for golf, but later changed his mind. "You think, 'How stupid was I to get myself into this?'" said George Zubeck. "And then, 'How am I going to get myself out of this?'"

Opponents: Texas at risk if court tosses waste law

EL PASO (AP) — Opponents of a low-level radioactive waste site say it could become a national dump if the Supreme Court overturns a federal law requiring states to handle their own waste.

But state officials building the dump say that is unlikely.

The Supreme Court heard arguments Monday on a New York challenge to the law that gives states until 1996 to build a disposal site for low-level radioactive waste. Texas has joined in the challenge, but only wants a provision of the law overturned.

"This a clever way of shifting responsibility" to the states, said Justice Sandra Day O'Connor in the hearing. She added that the method is politically attractive for Congress.

Texas is purchasing a 16,000-acre ranch in Hudspeth County for $900,000 to build a waste site. Waste from nuclear power plants, hospitals and medical research in-

'Silence of the Lambs' sweeps 5 top Oscars

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Silence of the Lambs," the thriller about a fledgling FBI agent who needs the help of an evil genius, swept the five top Oscars on Monday night, including best picture and acting awards for Anthony Hopkins and Jodie Foster.

"My God. I can't believe it!" said Hopkins, who received a standing ovation from the crowd at the 64th Annual Academy Awards show. "I am greatly honored and tremendously moved."

Hopkins, who played Dr. Hannibal (The Cannibal) Lecter, becomes the third British performer in a row to win as best actor, following Jeremy Irons

Baby Theresa Pearson, born without a fully formed brain, is visited by her aunt Dori Gallagher Friday. Theresa Pearson died Monday afternoon.

Infant dies; case stirs ethics row

■ Parents of infant without fully formed brain fought for right to donate her organs.

By David Briggs
Associated Press writer

She lived only nine days, but a girl born without a full brain was at the center of a debate about the nation's definition of death. Her parents fought for the right to donate her organs. Ethicists worried about the morality of killing the living to save the dying.

Theresa Ann Campo Pearson died Monday afternoon, said Dr. Brian Udell.

In an imperfect world where their child was born with the fatal condition anencephaly, Laura Campo and Justin Pearson wanted the spirit of their daughter to live on in another child who could be helped by her kidney, liver, heart, eyes or lungs.

It was a compelling sentiment shared by some doctors and ethicists, but others warned that allowing the harvesting of Theresa's organs would fundamentally change the distinction between life and death in the United States.

"What the parents are really asking for is: Kill this dying baby so that its organs may be used for someone else. Well, that's really a horrendous proposition," said John J. Paris, a bioethics professor at Boston College.

Baby Theresa was born March 21 with most of her skull missing and only a brain stem, the part of the body that controls reflexes such as breathing and heartbeat.

Theresa already was considered dead by her 30-year-old parents, a construction worker and a waitress who want their baby to live on in others.

"If my kid can help another baby live, then that is what we want to do," Campo said.

But a county judge said Thursday that because the baby's brain stem was functioning, she could not be declared brain-dead and her vital organs could not be taken. Under a 1988 Florida law, death cannot be declared until all brain activity ceases.

Late Sunday, she was removed from life support.

As Theresa clung to life Monday, the state Supreme Court said it would not consider the case on an emergency basis. Doctors said the baby's organs were deteriorating and probably would not be suitable for transplant, but attorneys for the parents on Monday afternoon brought the case back to a state appeals court.

National public health policy on organ donations generally prohibits their removal from people who have not met legal definitions of death. One problem

Jurors hear testimony in plane crash lawsuit

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Excessive accumulation of ice that caused an airplane to crash and kill five people on Feb. 14, 1990, was the result of an inadequate de-icing system that had a history of being ineffective, contends plaintiffs suing the aircraft company.

A seven-member jury, one an alternate, began hearing testimony Monday to support that theory in Judge Lucius Bunton's U.S. District Court.

Attorneys for Williams Aviation claim Mitsubishi Aircraft International and Mitsubishi Heavy Industries were negligent in the design and manufacture of the aircraft de-icer, never tested the system, and failed to include proper warnings in the pilot's manual.

The defense maintains the equipment was not defective and the accident near Putnam was "strictly pilot error."

Authors debate murder case's plausibility as 'potboiler'

By Barry Shlachter
N.Y. Times News Service

FORT WORTH — There is no doubting the public's fascination with society murders, a disproportionate number of which seem to occur in Texas.

"I do think we have more of them than elsewhere," said Mike Cochran, who has recounted the case of Cullen Davis in hardcover. "I think it's traceable to some extent to our violent history.

"I've always said that Texans rape, pillage, plunder and kill with a flair," said the West Texas-reared Associated Press correspondent. "This was a violent, very violent, state. And to some extent it still is."

No writer has yet announced plans to produce a true-crime book on the killing of Caren Koslow, a prominent Fort Worth woman beaten to death by intruders at her Rivercrest home March 12. The attackers also beat her husband, Jack Koslow, into unconsciousness. Jack Koslow was left for dead but survived.

Moreover, there is debate about whether the case contains the necessary elements for a Texas-style potboiler, even though Caren Koslow's 17-year-old stepdaughter, Kristi Koslow, and two 19-year-old men have been charged with capital murder. Police say it was a hired killing masterminded by the teen-age woman.

Among those who believe the case is potboiler material is Jim Lee, chairman of the English department at the University of North Texas and head of its Texas Studies Center. Lee, 61, also is the author of a column on thrillers for the Houston Post book section.

"Here we have a wealthy family, the stepdaughter estranged from her stepmother, the boyfriend, the hiring of an incompetent teen-aged pal and the whole absurdity of the thing: the amateurish nature of the murder with people spilling their guts and someone giving someone else the bloody crowbar," Lee said.

"Whether you could sell that or not, I don't know. Whether it's typical of a true-crime case and typical of this part of the country — it's right out of the textbooks."

Carlton Stowers, 49, a practitioner of the Texas true-crime genre, agrees with Lee's appraisal. But Cochran and Hugh Aynesworth, writers who have recounted their share of non-fictional crime tales, believe that the Koslow case falls short of a usable plot.

Cochran tempered his view by saying that the Koslow story isn't over yet.

"I was taken totally by surprise by the daughter's involvement. And that's the most impelling ingredient," he said.

But something else is needed — a new

Chance of rain forecast

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for a 20 percent chance of afternoon thunderstorms and a high in the lower 70s with southeast wind at 10 to 20 mph. Tonight there is a 40 percent chance of rain with a low in the mid-40s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Wednesday should be cloudy with a 60 percent chance of rain and a high around 50 to 55.

After an overnight low of 40, Monday's high reached 68 compared with the record high for that date of 97 set in 1946. The record low for that date is 16 set in 1931.

STATE

An area of high pressure remained over much of the state Monday, keeping temperatures mild and skies mostly sunny.

Mercury readings in the 60s and 70s were most common throughout the south and west. The coolest spot at 3 p.m. was Guadalupe Pass with 59 degrees. McAllen topped the state at 80 degrees.

Skies were sunny in the Southern regions.

In West Texas, high clouds preceded an upper level storm moving into the region.

The forecast for West Texas calls for mostly cloudy skies today with a chance of showers and thunderstorms through Wednesday. Highs will be from the mid-60s to the lower 70s.

North Texans will see increasing clouds west with a slight chance of thunderstorms by evening. It will be mostly sunny central and west. Highs should hit 72. Wednesday will bring a chance of rain, and highs from 56 to 65.

Meteorologists say South Texas will have partly cloudy skies after a foggy night. Highs will be in the 70s to 80s.

NATION

A powerful thunderstorm spawned a tornado that ripped apart a house near Las Vegas on Monday while other storms dropped heavy rain and hail along both coasts and in the nation's middle.

The tornado touched down 10 miles outside the city. It tore the roof off a house and blew its windows out. No one was injured.

It was one of several funnel clouds sighted during a storm that dumped heavy rain and hail up to 3 inches in diameter in the area.

Showers and thunderstorms also were scattered from northern Florida to the lower Ohio Valley and the lower Great Lakes region; and over parts of Georgia and Alabama.

In Alabama, golf-ball size hail was reported at Brooks and Florala. Dime-size hail fell near Paxton, Fla.

In the West, showers were scattered across western Oregon and northern and central California. Showers and thunderstorms were over Southern California.

Flash flood warnings were posted in southern Nevada and the northwest corner of Arizona.

Heavier rainfall totals for the six-hour period ending at noon CST included nearly 0.64 of an inch at Warner Robbins Air Force Base in Macon, Ga.; 0.60 of an inch at Hunstville, Ala.; and a half inch at Fort Knox, Ky., and Paducah, Ky.

Crescent City, Calif., received half an inch of rain during the same period.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

ETHICS: Case tested legal boundaries of life

organ donation programs face is dealing with the fear that organs might be procured before the patient is dead.

"In our culture . . . it is unethical to kill in order to save. It's unethical to kill person A to save person B," said Stephen Post, a medical ethicist at Case Western Reserve University.

But if ever an exception to brain death could be made for beneficent purposes, Post said, it would be for the cases of anencephalic infants.

Such infants generally do not live long, and it is unknown whether they experience anything in life. Waiting for the natural death of anencephalic infants to donate organs may be too late because the viability of their organs decline rapidly.

"In the case of a baby with anencephaly, it's a condition that's going to be lethal, and the opportunity for parents to have their child's life make a contribution to other seems compelling to me," said Dr. Carl Cooley of the Dartmouth Center for Genetics and Child Development.

But many ethicists worry that allowing exceptions for anencephalic babies could lead down a path that would endanger other infants with less severe disabilities and even the severely retarded or comatose patients.

It is one thing to allow someone like Nancy Cruzan to die on her own, and another to use her as "an organ farm," Post said of the Missouri accident victim who was at the center of a U.S. Supreme Court right-to-die case.

They say their fears are grounded in the experience of the Loma Linda University Medical Center's anencephalic organ donor program in 1987. Doctors transplanted a heart taken from an anencephalic infant to a Canadian boy, but their next 13 attempts to harvest organs from anencephalic babies failed. The program was discontinued in July 1988.

Once word got around about the program, parents with less severely disabled infants began bringing in their children to have their organs harvested.

"Immediately one hits the slippery slope and starts looking for other kids who are almost as bad. And that's a real problem," said George Annas, professor of health law at the Boston University Schools of Medicine and Public Health. "It just seems too horrifying to use other people as means to other people's ends."

DUMP: Texas could be U.S. dump site, some say

stitutions, universities and some industry will be buried there.

Under the federal law, the state must have a site built by Jan. 1, 1993, when it will no longer have access to three existing low-level dump sites.

"I think it can work, I think it will work if we just get on with it and do it," said Rick Jacobi, Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority general manager. "We need to provide for the disposal of low-level waste. It's a problem that's not going to go away. We have to do this whether there is a congressional scheme or not."

But opponents say that philosophy puts Texas at risk of ending up with everybody else's waste as well. Texas law dictates that only 20 percent of waste dumped at the site can be from out of state.

"If the federal law is overturned, the problem still exists, except that instead of 20 or 30 dumps there will be two or three and we could be one of them," said Bill Addington, organizer of Save Sierra Blanca.

The site picked for the dump is five miles southeast of Sierra Blanca, about 90 miles southeast of El Paso.

State law compels Texas to build a waste storage site even if the federal law is overturned. One opponent said that gives Gov. Ann Richards a powerful political bargaining chip.

"She is going to be the governor most able to provide a dump by 1996. What a wonderful tool this would be in dealing with other issues with state governors. She could get what she wanted . . . if she were willing to offer this dump," said Diane D'Arrigo, radioactive waste project manager for the Nuclear Information and Resource Service in Washington, D.C.

Ms. D'Arrigo said the Supreme Court will have to consider whether there will be any incentive for states to build dumps if the law is overturned.

The part of the law that Texas is challenging is a provision requiring states to become owners of the low-level waste if the dump is not built by Jan. 1, 1993. On that date, sites where Texas currently is shipping its waste could shut down or refuse to accept waste.

POTBOILER: No writer has announced book plans twist, an unexpected development that shakes up public perceptions of the crime, Cochran said.

"I really do believe there will be more revelations. There could still be something of a shattering nature. There's still something strange about this whole deal," he said.

Aynesworth, 60, is southern correspondent of the Washington Times and co-author of books on serial killer Ted Bundy. Aynesworth said that the reading public has had a diet of cases ever-escalating in grisly or quirky details, and a new work must top the last best-selling true-crime page-turner.

"It used to be, when I started (in the 1940s) as a newspaperman, if you had a murder anywhere, it made Page One. Now it's lucky to get reported," Aynesworth said.

The Koslow case is fairly standard fare, he said, citing recent Houston cases. One ended with an elderly woman sobbing as her three grandchildren were each given 15-year sentences for plotting her death. In another, a businessman fell victim to a murder conspiracy involving his wife and daughter.

"If you don't have another woman, blackmail, homosexuality, Satan or devil worship, it's pretty cut and dried," Aynesworth said. "Only the names are changed. I know it sounds gruesome, but it's true."

But New York literary agent Peter Miller said the Fort Worth case has the potential for a book or a television miniseries. "I think it's got appeal," he said in a call from California. "It's a story of the rich and powerful falling apart."

Miller, 43, represents Cochran and a lineup of other Texas true-crime writers.

Stowers, 49, details the Lake Waco murders in "Careless Whispers"; in "Innocence Lost," he examines the Midlothian teens who killed a young undercover policeman. Stowers views the Koslow case as a tragedy of classic proportions.

"One of the things that interests me is the fact that you have these kids involved in the crime — if, in fact, they were. There is such an explosion of juvenile-committed homicides — this almost rampant violence and disregard for human life by teen-agers that is widespread and seems to get worse and worse," he said.

But Aynesworth said that the case lacks the drawn-out suspense of the better crime books, citing Thomas Thompson's 1976 "Blood and Money" about Houston's Joan Robinson Hill murder case.

Clifford Irving's "Daddy's Girl" — eerily similar in some respects to the Koslow case — recounts the 1982 murder of James and Virginia Campbell, prominent Houstonians. The crime was planned by their daughter and carried out by her boyfriend. This case took years to break.

Stowers countered, saying that it took only 24 hours to solve the "Innocence Lost" murder.

for "Reversal of Fortune" and Daniel Day-Lewis for "My Left Foot."

"I'd like to dedicate this to all the women before me who didn't have the chances I had," said Miss Foster, who joins the ranks of repeat Oscar winners. She was named best actress of 1988 for her performance as a rape victim in "The Accused."

"Silence" also brought Oscars to director Jonathan Demme and to Ted Tally for best adapted screenplay.

The film becomes only the third movie to sweep the five major awards. "It Happened One Night" did it in 1934 as did "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" in 1975.

Jack Palance, the crusty trail boss in "City Slickers," and Mercedes Ruehl, the warm-hearted video store owner in "The Fisher King," won for best supporting performances.

"Terminator 2: Judgment Day," the 1991 box-office champion, outperformed its more prestigious rivals in technical categories. It won four Oscars: makeup, sound effects editing, sound and visual effects.

"Bugsy," Warren Beatty's gangster epic that had the most nominations with 10, picked up early awards for art direction and costume design. Another best picture nominee, "JFK," Oliver Stone's assassination polemic, won for film editing and cinematography.

Callie Khouri won the original screenplay award for the female buddy film, "Thelma & Louise."

"I really want to thank my mother, who taught me everything about love and loyalty that a gal could ever need to know," Miss Khouri said.

Miss Ruehl, a first-time nominee, recounted her early days as a struggling actress, and added, "At this moment, all of those sort of doleful memories ... suddenly transformed themselves into nothing more than the sort of charming and amusing anecdotes from my memoirs."

Palance, a sentimental favorite nominated four decades ago for playing villains in "Sudden Fear" and "Shane," demonstrated his fitness by performing several push-ups on stage.

The 72-year-old character actor recalled a director telling him in 1949 that he would win an Oscar, "and 42 years later, he was right."

Composer Alan Menken won the award for best original score for his music for "Beauty and the Beast," and he and his late partner, lyricist Howard Ashman, won a second Oscar for the movie's title song.

Menken paid tribute to Ashman, who recently died of complications from AIDS at age 40.

Menken, like many celebrities who appeared during the show, wore a red ribbon on his lapel, symbolizing support for AIDS awareness and research.

Best foreign film was "Mediterraneo," an Italian comedy set during World War II.

"Silence," was an unusual big winner because of its grim subject matter and the fact that it was released early in 1991. But it came on strong in the awards season, winning the bellwether Directors Guild award for Demme, as well as the Writers Guild Award for Tally.

The two other losing best picture nominees were "Beauty and the Beast" — the first animated feature named in that category, and Barbra Streisand's "The Prince of Tides."

Billy Crystal, host for the evening, got things off to a lively start by entering in the same hockey mask that Hopkins' character wore in the film to restrain his cannibalistic tendencies.

"I'm having some of the academy over to dinner," Crystal told the actor. "Care to join me?"

Outside the Los Angeles Music Center, dozens of whistling and chanting demonstrators protested what they consider negative gay stereotyping by Hollywood.

The activists objected to portrayals in three Oscar-nominated films: a gay serial killer in "The Silence of the Lambs"; a homosexual accused of conspiracy in the assassination of President Kennedy. in "JFK"; and the removal from the movie version of "Fried Green Tomatoes" of a lesbian relationship that was in the original novel.

TESTIMONY: Ice caused crash, plaintiffs contend

(From 1A)

During opening statements, defense attorney James Boldrick told jurors the pilot may have been drinking, which may have contributed to his carelessness.

Jurors heard evidence and testimony indicating that analysis for the de-icer design by B.F. Goodrich for Mitsubishi in the 1960s and the product that followed were inadequate.

"In my opinion, it's an inadequate design, improper design," testified David Coleman, an aeronautical engineer and president of a flight-testing company in Colorado Springs, Colo.

The equipment developed and implemented in the 1960s is essentially the same as that installed beginning in 1980, Coleman said.

The de-icer system is made up of pneumatic de-icer boots fixed to parts of the plane, including the wings and tail, testimony indicated. Ice collecting on vital parts of the aircraft activates the de-icer, which causes the boots — made of a rubber-type material — to inflate and break the ice.

Coleman said he knew of no time that Mitsubishi asked B.F. Goodrich to make actual flight tests, and to his knowledge the only icing test performed by Mitsubishi was prompted by another crash in Minnesota.

Even after pilots of similar aircraft reported ice that couldn't be removed and subsequent problems such as loss of speed, Mitsubishi failed to run tests, Coleman said.

"I believe that's inexcusable," Coleman testified.

In addition to testimony on the history of the de-icer, jurors listened to an explanation of the forces that keep an airplane in flight.

Jurors also learned that ice accumulates on a aircraft when water droplets that make up clouds freeze upon impact. Those droplets, from 10 to 50 microns (a millionth of an inch per micron) in diameter, like any obstruction on the wings, can cause drag and, hence, affect flight.

The build-up of ice on that Valentine's Day in 1990 has been accepted as the cause of the crash, with pilot error or a defective system also being argued.

A probable-cause report released by the National Transportation Safety Board in September 1991 indicated the crash was the result of "improper planning/decision by the pilot."

Pilot error led to excessive accumulation of the structural icing on the aircraft's wings, stabilizers, fuselage, and/or engine inlet, according to the NTSB report.

A lack of proper action to prevent icing and the pilot's "failure to maintain adequate airspeed and aircraft control" were cited as probable cause in the report, which is not admissible as evidence.

Killed in the crash were Williams Aviation Co. pilot Kenneth Mardis, 51, and four Midland business associates of then-gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams. They were Jamie Winkel, 45, Randy M. Kidwell, 37, Robert Smith, 62, and Aaron Giebel, 63.

The men were en route to Dallas from Midland when the crash occurred.

The aircraft descended from more than 14,000 feet to 9,700 feet during a 24-second period before crashing in a field about 35 miles east of Abilene, according to a NTSB report.

Factors related to the accident included the pilot's lack of information on weather conditions that led to inadequate weather evaluation, according to the NTSB.

Before takeoff, the pilot was unable to obtain a forecast from the Automated Flight Service Station in Abilene because of downed computers, according to NTSB reports.

Further, the pilot failed to obtain information from other weather stations either before takeoff or during the flight, the report stated.

Although the plane was outfitted with the de-icing system, "the status of the anti-ice/de-ice equipment wasn't determined due to impact/fire damage," the report indicated.

Since the crash, at least six wrongful death lawsuits have been filed against Mitsubishi for negligence and product liability.

spective classes. Each of the 12 winners will receive a $3,500 scholarship and will be invited to attend a Dallas banquet in their honor in June.

Nominating Monisha "was an extremely difficult process," according to Buck.

"It was the most extensive application process I have ever seen. There were about 12 pages of detailed questions," he said

Buck said he was impressed by the high caliber of judges who served on the selection panel, including Tom Landry, former head coach of the Dallas Cowboys; Lamar Hunt, owner of the Kansas City Chiefs; Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro; and Brad Sham, KVIL-FM sportscaster and voice of the Dallas Cowboys.

"I feel very honored. I was surprised and excited at the same time," Monisha said, noting that although applicants were required to be varsity team members, competition weighed heavier on academics.

"And I have to work for my grades," the teen-ager said, grinning.

She said her success — on and off the court — requires "motivation and discipline and how hard you are willing to work."

Her favorite courses of study are math and science.

"I plan to major in chemical engineering," she said.

When not studying or participating in community activities, the senior gets in about 15 hours of tennis per week. She is ranked second on her team and has earned three varsity district letters.

In academic pursuits, as a member of the math/science team, she has participated in seven United Interscholastic League meets and placed in several competitions.

A native of Katmandu, Nepal, Monisha has lived in Midland for 12 years. "All but one year of my primary and secondary education has been in the Midland Independent School District," she said.

The daughter of Mani Raj and Manorama Poudyal, Monisha said her family life is very important.

Her father is an oil-and-gas accountant, and her mother is a homemaker. Monisha said her family recently "flew my 18-year-old cousin from Nepal to the United States so he could study as an International student at Midland College, and later transfer to a four-year college."

She said enrolling in the math and science honors courses and participating in extracurricular math and science activities has "geared my desires toward a career in chemical engineering."

After pursuing a bachelor's, master's degree and doctorate, Monisha plans to "work in the research and design of various chemical products as a practicing engineer." She also intends to "improve industry and help to alleviate the problem of insufficient resource use in underdeveloped countries."

She said her family moved from Nepal to the United States seeking a better life.

In quest of a better life, Monisha has seldom let an opportunity pass her by. The teen-ager has completed a 17-week Dale Carnegie course on effective speaking and human relations, volunteered at Vacation Bible School, participated in an Easter Seals fundraiser, worked part-time at a fast food restaurant, served as president of Latin Club, vice president of the National Honor Society, and is a writer for the LHS newspaper "The Dixie Dispatch."

And, she also was named a National Merit Scholarship Commended Student.

"She is very deserving of this scholarship," Buck said. "It was a very fair selection process and she deserved it."

So, is Monisha an overachiever?

"I try to balance everything out," she said. "But I do feel like there is a strong correlation between achievement on the court and success in school."

Despite her many honors, Monisha has remained unaffected and is described as "sweet" and "smart, but just one of us" by her peers.

And just like the average student enjoying her senior year, Monisha says her favorite weekend activity is "going out with my friends and having fun."

Experts dispute easing of abortion curb

By Philip J. Hilts
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Contrary to the Bush administration's recent assertion that doctors may discuss abortion in federally financed clinics, the rule that bans abortion counseling continues to apply to them, experts told lawmakers on Monday.

Two weeks ago, the administration announced that its rule forbidding abortion counseling in 4,000 government-financed family planning clinics applied only to nurses and counselors, not to doctors.

But at a hearing on Monday before the House Subcommittee on Health and the Environment, doctors and lawyers on both sides of the abortion issue gave a different interpretation, saying the rule actually made no distinction between doctors and other professionals and that the administration's position carried no legal weight. They said any effort to exempt doctors could result legal challenges from anti-abortion groups.

The testimony on Monday suggested that the administration's effort to steer a political course between opponents of abortion and groups advocating abortion rights may have failed to achieve that goal.

Medical organizations — including the American Medical Association, the American Medical Women's Association, the American Nurses Association, and the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists — continued to strenuously oppose the administration's position.

Spokesmen for the various medical organizations said in testimony on Monday that the administration's latest position gave no help to doctors, who they said would still be bound by the counseling rules.

At the same time, lawyers from groups that are either neutral on the abortion issue or that have supported the administration's previous stand, said that the effort to exempt doctors — who make up a minuscule proportion of the workers in family planning clinics — carried no legal weight.

DA says she'll take hard line with AIDS defendant

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A man charged with buying sexual favors from boys won't get a break from the legal system because he has AIDS and may be suicidal, the district attorney said Monday.

"It is in society's best interest, always, to prosecute wrongdoing," said District Attorney Lynne Abraham.

Police say businessman Ed Savitz, who has had full-blown AIDS for about a year, may have paid hundreds of youths for sex, for their underwear, or even for feces over the past decade. He was held in lieu of $20 million bail.

Police found 5,000 photographs of boys in his downtown apartment and on Monday found nearly 200 bags of underwear and hundreds of photographs at storage facilities Savitz had been renting since 1989.

As of Monday, Savitz faced 17 counts: five each of sexual abuse of children and corrupting the morals of a minor, three of indecent assault, and two each of involuntary deviate sexual intercourse and promoting prostitution.

Prosecutors said they feared Savitz might kill himself or cause additional harm to others if released. Assistant District Attorney Charles Ehrlich said Savitz had sex with one of the boys as recently as last Wednesday.

The city Health Department said Monday that many callers to AIDS hot lines indicated that "Savitz insisted that his partners wear a condom before performing anal sex."

More than 100 callers said they had encounters with Savitz, and none of them reported incidents of anal penetration by Savitz, the department said.

Dr. Marla Gold, assistant health commissioner, cautioned that the fears of HIV transmission, while reduced, haven't been eliminated.

Savitz's attorney, Barnaby Wittels, petitioned the court Monday to set bail at a "resonable amount." He said Savitz denies having anal or oral sex with anyone.

"It is obvious that the DA has tried and convicted him and they want him to start serving his sentence now," Wittels said.

Wittels said he was concerned that Savitz, who had been taking experimental medication for AIDS, would have difficulty getting proper treatment in prison.

A hearing on Wittels' request was scheduled Thursday.

Nation in brief

■ Clinton challenges Brown to debates

NEW YORK — Breaking from his posture of playing the stand-offish front-runner, Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton on Monday challenged former California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. to at least six debates before the New York primary next week, a move that Brown welcomed as "a major breakthrough."

The challenge was an abrupt about-face for Clinton, whose campaign is struggling in New York to counter relentless broadsides from Brown and aggressive New York news organizations.

Less than two weeks ago, the Clinton campaign refused to commit to future debates, fearing that an appearance on stage with Brown would give him equal stature, who is trailing badly in the delegate count.

"I'm willing to take on Jerry Brown any time, anywhere," Clinton said Monday, "because I believe that when the voters hear what he has to say, they'll know that he has nothing to offer but platitudes and gimmicks."

Brown, whose requests for Clinton to debate had gone unanswered, acted surprised when reporters told him of Clinton's offer.

"I would say that we're on our way," he said, adding, "This is a major breakthrough."

The two candidates were already scheduled to debate tonight in the Bronx, and Clinton campaign officials said both sides had agreed to at least five more face-to-face meetings. Clinton also challenged Brown to an undetermined number of meetings around the state on Saturday.

■ 'Little Rascals' day care trial goes to jury

FARMVILLE, N.C. — A jury on Monday began weighing evidence from 143 witnesses to determine if a former day care center operator molested 12 children in his small-town preschool.

Robert F. Kelly Jr., who owned the now-closed Little Rascals Day Care Center with his wife, Elizabeth, is charged with 100 counts of sexual abuse. He could get 40 life terms plus 600 years in prison if convicted on all charges.

The eight-month trial has cost North Carolina more than $1 million and is described as the state's longest and costliest criminal prosecution.

It is sometimes compared to California's McMartin Pre-School molestation case, which stretched over seven years and cost more than $13.5 million. In the end, no one was convicted in what was the nation's longest and most expensive criminal trial.

■ Ex-Soviet scientists to visit as interns

WASHINGTON — Two programs to attract former Soviet scientists, placing at least 150 in universities and another 150 with research firms, were announced Monday by the State Department.

The scientists will be placed in entry-level jobs for one to two years as visiting scholars. They will begin arriving in time for the fall semester, said Margaret D. Tutwiler, the department spokeswoman.

The schools will underwrite most of the $1 million program. The U.S. government will pay part of the salaries and some of the relocation expenses.

The other program is for 150 defense scientists to work as interns for American companies, beginning in September. The program will cost $1 million initially, with another $1 million to be made available by the Agency for International Development.

The U.S. government will pay the air fare and a small stipend for the scientists, with the companies bearing other costs.

Court asks government for views on AIDS insurers

WASHINGTON (NYT) — In a Texas case that could affect millions of Americans insured through their employers, the Supreme Court asked the Bush administration on Monday for its views on whether federal law protects AIDS sufferers whose coverage is slashed by cost-conscious companies.

The justices asked the U.S. solicitor general for the government's position on whether an employer has an unfettered right to change the terms of its group medical insurance, including the ability to stop coverage for a particular disease or injury.

The case, Greenberg, Executor v. H & H Music Company, involves a Houston worker who found that he had AIDS in 1987 — five years after he began his job in a music store.

John McGann told his employers, the H & H Music Company, about his illness and submitted his claims for reimbursement for medical expenses under the company's group insurance plan. The coverage then provided for medical expenses of up to $1 million over the lifetime of an employee.

The following year, the firm changed to a self-insurance plan that limited payment for AIDS-related medical expenses to $5,000 over the lifetime of the employee.

Under federal law, self-insured employers are not covered by state insurance regulations. Thus, the case centers on whether McGann should have been protected by the federal Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974.

McGann's lawsuit has been dismissed by both a federal district judge and an appeals court in Texas. They said the law gives employers the right to design their own benefit plans and the company never promised that employees would always have the $1 million in lifetime coverage.

McGann died last year at the age of 47. His case is being pressed by the executor of his estate.

Records: USDA repays some of Iraq's loans

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has paid more than $360 million to a bank controlled "in substantial part" by the government of Iraq, according to government records and congressional sources.

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., on Monday asked Agriculture Secretary Edward Madigan to explain the payments to the Gulf International Bank, made when President Bush has banned business with Baghdad. The bank is owned by Iraq and six other Persian Gulf governments.

"At a time when we are all concerned that the government of Iraq continues to act in an outlaw fashion under the leadership of Saddam Hussein, I am very concerned that this payment sends a dangerous signal to the government of Iraq," Leahy told Madigan in a letter.

But a spokesman for the Treasury Department said Iraq will not benefit from the payments because its financial interest in the bank is frozen under terms of the economic embargo against Baghdad.

The spokesman, Scott Dykema, also said the Treasury Department had determined that the bank could be repaid because it was not controlled by the government of Iraq.

The United States made the payments to Gulf International Bank to honor government-backed loans on which Baghdad defaulted after its invasion of Kuwait, the Los Angeles Times first reported Sunday.

According to Leahy's letter, representatives of the bank have confirmed that it is administered by the Ministry of Finance of Iraq and six other Middle Eastern governments — Bahrain, Kuwait, Oman, Qatar, Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates.

The U.S. government made loan guarantees in the 1980s and early 1990 to entice Persian Gulf banks to advance Iraq money to buy American farm products.

The U.S. government had guaranteed a total of $5 billion in credits. Iraq has defaulted on $2 billion since the invasion of Kuwait.

Bitter comedy engulfs Gadhafi

There's bitter comedy in the spectacle of Libya's Col. Moammar Gadhafi piously claiming the protection of world law to stave off U.N. sanctions. This is the renegade who has armed terrorist groups, whose gunmen have shot up embassies and slain opponents in exile.

Even so, valid doubts remain about indicting Libya alone as the culprit in the bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland, in 1988. The Bush administration has yet to explain its abrupt retreat from initial claims that the Lockerbie bombing was the vengeful work of Ahmed Jabril, a Palestinian under Syrian control.

Cynics suggest that the administration finds it convenient to downplay Syria's dreadful terrorist record now that Damascus has joined Middle East peace negotiations. And pinning all the blame on Gadhafi may be expedient for an administration eager to humble Libya in an election year.

Libya was quite likely involved. Meticulous British and American police work has established a chain of evidence linking the Lockerbie outrage to explosives purportedly planted by two Libyans. So the Security Council has demanded their surrender for trial in either Britain or the United States.

Gadhafi first offered to try the suspects in Libya. Then his diplomats said Libya would turn the suspects over to the Arab League. Now the slippery colonel pleads for delay until the World Court has ruled on Libya's claims that its promise to try the suspects complies with aviation treaties.

His squirming reflects fear of U.N. sanctions that would cut Libya's aviation links. Sanctions have grown real teeth in recent years, and if ever there was a deserving target, it is Libya. But advocates of sanctions need to make a plausible case for denying Libya's request for a World Court ruling before the Security Council acts. Doubts and suspicions are apt to linger until Washington finally divulges everything it knows about Lockerbie.

Ideological prudes take over politics

Politics, politics: In the '90s, it's as bad and ubiquitous as Johnson grass. You can't even read a decent discussion of Sports Illustrated's swimsuit issue without politics popping up waist high.

Murchison

All the lips that have parted in horror over this non-story about male degradation of women! Count on us moderns to miss the point every time.

We have a new kind of prude today — the ideological variety. We've managed cleverly to substitute political correctness for Mrs. Grundyism. This explains the swimsuit uproar.

Scanty bathing suits, in contemporary coinage, equal sexism: meaning male domination of women, actual or intended, and anything that supports such domination.

Lip-licking pictures incite male brutes to violence against women. A man ogling bare female bodies is not likely to exclaim, "Wouldn't she make a wonderful U.S. senator?" He is likelier just to breathe heavily.

Pornography on such a showing is incitement to deprivation of constitutional rights. Something like this argument actually turns up in legal briefs against pornography, and Canada's Supreme Court recently agreed. Though similar claims have failed in the United States, more are coming.

Many of us would be glad to see pornography ooze back into the underground status it formerly occupied. It won't. One reason it won't is the people we have become — and the ideas we have come to entertain seriously.

"The War Between Men and Women," as James Thurber famously dubbed it, derives most of its present passion and destructiveness from the unceasing yip-yap about rights.

Rights, my hind foot! Let us talk, as we used to, of duties and responsibilities; then we might start to get some place.

All this rights talk is me-mindful and you-forgetful. Its focus is acquisition — what I want, what I can get. Old-fashioned morality, by contrast, defined the male-female relationship in terms of obligation. Such-and-such — love, respect, support — was owed to another. The moral codes are self-depriving, self-abnegating. Their emphasis isn't "get," it's "give."

Well, isn't that what feminists say — let men present women the gift of rights historically denied them? They say it all right, with baneful effect. They convert their once-venerated sex into just another clamorous interest group, the sort that roams congressional hallways seeking favors, making threats. There's no moral appeal here. The appeal is purely political and ideological — as is, come to think of it, the modern relationship between the sexes. Feminism has helped overthrow the code of gallantry, chivalry and respect for women while raising to sovereignty the creed of egalitarianism.

Owner explains gas prices

In response to John W. Cunningham's concern about pricing by local service station owners (Letters, March 22), I have leased a service station in Midland for the past four years. If there is a "strong local retail service station operators organization" in town I have never been invited to join it or been contacted by anyone who claims to be a member.

The competition in this business is vicious. No other retailer is required to post the price of his only product on large signs for public display.

Those of us franchised by a major oil company have a single source of supply; the price is set and changed frequently by the supplier. It does not follow the trend of crude prices.

Would distributors charge different prices in different cities? I assure you they do. The difference in wholesale prices in different cities is accurately reflected in the retail price in those cities.

The unbelievable rise in operating costs (EPA laws, insurance costs, oil company pass-through costs, dealing with underground tanks, etc.) threaten the very existence of the traditional service station. Much of that has been borne by the dealers because of the vocal and angry response of their customers to the rising cost. That rising cost is reflective of wholesale gasoline prices and tax increases (now 34.1 cents per gallon), not dealer profits.

The same newspaper carried an article concerning Chevron dealers in California (March 22, page 8E). It is reflective of the burden borne by all dealers regardless of brand.

My station will soon close for eight weeks to be remodeled into a much-improved facility. To the public, that may represent prosperity. To me it represents a 100 percent increase in an already unreasonable lease fee.

The current street prices of gasoline will not support my operating cost. My store will show a loss for the first quarter of 1992.

I understand the frustration of customers, constantly reminded of the cost of driving. Anyone who believes a small business owner is getting rich, in whatever business, has come up short in the homework department.

Airport is not our business

As a result of World War II, the City of Midland without any delegated authority from the governed took it upon itself to become a direct competitor to the free enterprise system.

FACT: Owning and operating an airport or two is not a proper function of city government.

FACT: Because I, as an individual, do not have the right to approve the using of my neighbor's tax dollars in an operation opposing the free enterprise system; no one else has that right either.

I recommend the City of Midland take immediate action to remove us, the taxpayers, from this illegal operation, both west and north of our city.

By doing so, we would not be involved in the continued hassle of who is hiring whom at how much compensation, or citizens having to endure blowing dust as a result of their own tax dollars being misused or used unwisely.

Let us let the entrepreneurs have a free hand as the free enterprise system was designed to work without the taxpayers' money as competition.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702.

City needs 'Bluegrass Festival'

I am a senior citizen and have lived in Midland most of my life. My parents came here from Oklahoma when I was 10 years old. So I have really seen a lot of changes through the years.

There is one thing I would like to see in Midland and that is a "Bluegrass Festival." I think it would be great to have one here and I think everyone — the young and the old — could enjoy it, for most everyone loves good music. And what better music is there than "bluegrass" gospel?

It would give us all something to look forward to and what better place to have one than in Midland? So how about if folks? Are you a lover of "bluegrass" music?

I am — and proud of it.

Columnist scratches history for origin of seven year itch

At my in-laws' 40th wedding anniversary party recently, someone asked about the origin of the phrase the seven-year itch. Do you know its provenance?

Safire

Why seven years?"

This note comes from the office of the vice president, signed "William Kristol, chief of staff (happily married for 16 years)."

On Language is not an advice-to-the-lovelorn column. (Lovelorn, a beautiful word, seems to survive only in that hyphenated phrase. Unrequited love now results in feeling depressed, a quasi-clinical term; it's dispiriting, but lovers are no longer lovelorn, and not even babies are sweetly melancholy.)

However, it's possible that Dan Quayle could make it all the way, and Kristol will be a White House big shot, and I will be able to get an advance text of Quayle's first inaugural address on the basis of having provided the provenance of seven-year itch. So:

Henry David Thoreau, different-drumming along to Walden Pond in 1854, wrote: "These may be but the spring months in the life of the race. If we have had the seven-years' itch, we have not seen the seventeen-year locust yet in Concord." He did not explain what the seven-years' itch was — a physical ailment or a marital wanderlust — nor did he explain why year was plural for the itch and singular for the locust (called the cicada, and not due back to my Washington lawn until 2004).

The poet Carl Sandburg, in his 1936 "The People, Yes," caught the cadence of American dialect by using the phrase in what seems to be a physical-annoyance sense: "'May you have the sevenyear itch,' was answered, 'I hope your wife eats crackers in bed.'"

No doubt that the phrase had a sense of irritation: "What are you always tagging after me for?" Dialect Notes noted in a 1907 New Hampshire usage. "You're worse than the seven years' itch."

The etymological question is: Where did the current sense come from? The phrase is now almost exclusively used to mean "the desire of a married person to stray from his or her spouse after seven years of marriage."

There is no doubt as to the source of its popularization. "The Seven Year Itch" (no hyphen, although seven-year really forms a compound modifying itch, as in 17-year locust) was the title of a 1952 Broadway play by George Axelrod, which was made into a movie three years later starring Marilyn Monroe and Tom Ewell.

I reached Axelrod in Los Angeles to find out what the phrase meant when he titled his comedy.

"At the time of the play, it was a kind of non-medical term for a skin disease," he replies, "not, perhaps, unlike 'the Chinese zing,' and had never been used in, to use your phrase, a 'marital wanderlust' connotation."

How did he come across this Americanism? "I was writing jokes for a hillbilly comedian called Rod Brassfield," recalls Axelrod, "who starred with Minnie Pearl on the 'Grand Ole Opry' radio show." Brassfield liked cow jokes: "I probably know more cow jokes than any living human being. Why did the cow jump over the moon? The farmer had such cold hands. That kind of thing. I tried to write a few of my own: Did you hear about the cow that swallowed a bottle of blue ink and Mood Indigo? But Rod felt that was too 'uptown' for his people."

CHARLEY REESE

Label-worship can short-circuit your brain

One thing to watch out for during elections are attempts to divide us and distract us from the key issues.

The most common technique is play on race and ethnic background. Many people play in this sordid back-alley game, including some blacks and ethnics. Don't fall for it.

Reese

The real problems confront us all equally: erosion of our manufacturing base and the good jobs that go with it; a credit and monetary system controlled by banks rather than our government; foreign give-aways, including our defense against predatory trading; lack of any rational spending priorities; refusal by the government to control the financial pirates who wreck so many companies and jobs; corruption, public and private; and attempts to erode our freedoms under the guise of fighting crime or drugs.

I saw a statement the other day that blacks and Hispanics were getting all the good jobs and the whites were being impoverished.

For anyone living in the real world, that's a laughable statement. Sure, some eager-beaver corporate execs and some politicians go so overboard to prove their righteousness that they occasionally discriminate against white applicants or employees. The situation used to be the reverse but on a much more massive scale.

Still, today, blacks and Hispanics still get the drudge jobs and are on the low end of the totem pole. That's plain fact.

Just remember that on that wall of the dead from Vietnam are some 10,000 names of black Americans as well as the names of Hispanic, Asian and native Americans. They weren't the ones hiding from the draft in fancy colleges.

Another technique of manipulating people is to convince them to believe in labels, which of course the manipulators invent and apply.

Well, is rebuilding our industrial base a conservative or liberal or left or right idea? How about just a good idea.

Not long ago I saw a statement that claimed Republicans were better than Democrats because Harry Truman got bogged down in Korea while Ronald Reagan took Grenada promptly and George Bush handled Panama and Iraq easily. That's a good example of how label-worship can short-circuit your brain. To equate the North Korean and Chinese armies with Panama, Grenada and Iraq evinces such a level of ignorance you're almost struck speechless.

Too bad that faithful Republican wasn't at the Chosan Reservoir in sub-zero weather under attack by eight divisions of fresh Chinese troops. If he had been, he might have more sympathy for Truman and more respect for the Marines who fought their way out in one of the most astounding military campaigns in history.

I'm sure you see the point. The world that counts is the flesh and blood world. The world of labels exists only inside the murky minds of ideologues and people who are forced to substitute memorization and obedience for critical thinking. But it is a sickness that is infectious if we aren't alert. I've suffered a bout or two of it myself.

What we call a tree exists irregardless of what we call it, that whatever we call it is merely a symbol we arbitrarily adapt to approximate reality in order to facilitate a shorthand kind of communication. But the symbols are never the things themselves. You can never learn anything by studying the word "tree." You have to study the thing itself.

Forget the labels. Look at people, look at programs, look at ideas and judge them all on their own merits without regard for labels that some political hucksters slapped on them to fool you.

But don't forget that all Americans are brothers and sisters on the same voyage to the future.

■ Algeria plans to dissolve local councils

ALGIERS, Algeria — The government has voted to dissolve local councils, many of which are controlled by a banned Islamic fundamentalist party, Algeria's state radio reported.

The move is the latest attempt to crush the fundamentalists, who had been on the verge of taking control of Parliament in January. But elections were canceled after a new ruling committee seized power, the Islamic Salvation Front was banned and thousands of its leaders and followers jailed.

The Salvation Front controlled 850 of the country's 1,541 municipal councils and 32 of 48 departmental assemblies. The ruling Sunday dissolves 397 local councils and 14 departmental assemblies because they could not carry out daily operational duties due to "serious disturbances," the radio said.

■ Spanish leaders hail arrests of Basques

MADRID, Spain — Cheered by the capture of the Basque separatist movement's top leader by the French police on Sunday, the Spanish authorities expressed hope on Monday that the terrorist group would find it more difficult to attack this year's World's Fair in Seville and the Summer Olympics in Barcelona.

But while hailing the arrest of Francisco Mugica Garmendia, two senior aides, and nine other guerrillas as a major blow to Basque Homeland and Liberty — or ETA, as the group is known by its Basque initials — the Spanish interior minister warned that Spain should not lower its guard.

■ French Socialists suffer second defeat

PARIS — After a second stinging defeat for his Socialist Party in local elections on Sunday, President Francois Mitterrand appeared certain to make changes in his beleaguered government this week.

Asked if government changes were imminent after the Socialists' loss of five local strongholds to right-wing parties in district elections, a presidential spokesman, Muriel de Pierrebourg, said: "One may assume so." While emphasizing that no official word had come yet from the president, she added: "If the president feels he must take account of the message of voters, there is no reason to wait beyond this week."

It seemed increasingly likely that the changes would include the departure of Prime Minister Edith Cresson, who has proved deeply unpopular in her 10 months in office.

■ Cambodian refugess return home to war

SISOPHON, Cambodia — The first of 375,000 Cambodian refugees to be repatriated from Thailand left behind years of exile Monday and came home to a troubled future in a country still at war.

Sok Nang, 37, said he was happy to be home again, "but I'm afraid of land mines or civil war. I'm afraid because my brothers are still fighting."

He said that as their bus crossed the border, he told his four children: "This is my homeland."

Most of the returning refugees looked nervous and confused. Some said they feared an attack by the Khmer Rouge, the guerrilla group that murdered hundreds of thousands of Cambodians in a fanatical Marxist reign of terror in the 1970s.

Iraqis hit Kurds with heavy gunfire

ASKI KALAK, Iraq (NYT) — In apparent violation of the cease-fire agreement signed after the Persian Gulf war, Iraqi military forces are shelling and shooting at thousands of Kurdish civilians along their front lines.

The attacks, against about a dozen small villages and towns along the Great Zab River, have forced the entire population of 40,000 people to flee their homes since last Wednesday, according to the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees.

"The Iraqis have always lobbed a few mortar rounds now and then towards the Kurds," said one U.N. official, "but since last Wednesday they have been dropping up to 300 heavy artillery shells a day in the area. It is quite a dramatic increase."

On the road leading from the Aski Kalak bridge, on the front line, to the city of Erbil, dozens of families, piled onto farm carts hauled behind tractors and old pick-up trucks, streamed north toward the city. Women and children, staring vacantly out across the fields, covered with a thin layer of new spring grass, clutched burlap bags with a few possessions. Some cars had large, ungainly pieces of furniture lashed to the sides.

The occasional burst of a 155mm shell shook the ground and sent a thick plume of white and black smoke skyward. With each blast, the windows and doors in the houses along the road rattled and shook.

Allied forces set up a security zone after an abortive Kurdish uprising after the gulf war. It was created to convince 1.5 million refugees in Iran and Turkey that they could return home and roughly corresponds to Iraq's 36th parallel. The 15,000 allied troops that moved into the enclave last spring have been withdrawn, but the allies maintain a small military monitoring team in the town of Zakho and their warplanes make daily flights over the area from Incirlik, Turkey.

The zone does not extend as far west as Aski Kalak, but Iraqi authorities must respect the rights of Kurdish civilians under agreements based on U.N. Security Council Resolution 688 that were worked out by U.N. officials in Baghdad after the war. The shelling is seen by many U.N. officials in northern Iraq as a violation of the cease-fire agreement.

While Iraqi Kurds struggle to defend their autonomous zone in the north, Turkish Kurds have been battling government troops to create a similar independent enclave in Turkey.

On Monday, Turkish warplanes struck four Kurdish villages in northern Iraq, wounding at least two people.

Half of Brazilian Cabinet resigns amid charges

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — President Fernando Collor de Mello accepted the resignation of six of his 12 Cabinet ministers Monday amid a drumbeat of corruption and influence-peddling charges.

Dozens of lower-ranking officials also resigned Monday.

While none of the Cabinet members who stepped down was personally accused of wrongdoing, Collor's government has been badly tarnished by daily press reports of scandal within his administration.

Except for military officers, none of the conservative Collor's original Cabinet remains. Collor became Brazil's first popularly elected president in almost 30 years in 1990.

"These dismissals were the fruit of a popular uproar . . . against a government that has completely lost its way," said Sen. Mario Covas of the opposition Brazilian Social Democracy Party. "The collective renunciation is at least a doorway through which the government can improve."

Economy Minister Marcilio Marques Moreira, one of those who kept his job, told reporters the shakeup was a "new phase" in Collor's administration. Asked if the resignations were due to allegations of scandal, Moreira shrugged.

Collor, whose wife was forced to retire from a government charity several months ago amid scandal, commented obliquely on his political problems last week in an interview with Veja, the country's largest newsmagazine.

"I know who my enemies are, and I protect myself from them," he said.

Midland man starts petition for Perot

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff Writer

Hal Rachal believes only Dallas tycoon H. Ross Perot can carry America out of the economic slump that has characterized the young decade.

And to support his belief, the 80-year-old Midlander vows to collect at least 1,000 signatures in support of Perot's presidential candidacy.

On Monday, Rachal rode his bike to Albertson's grocery store on Andrews Highway, set up a table and chairs and waited to court would-be Perot supporters. He plans to man the table every day until the end of April between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m.

"If you want an energy policy that helps Midland, then you ought to come out and help put Ross Perot on the ballot," he said.

"He's against oil imports, and he wants to develop a good energy policy for the domestic industry. He will help Midland."

In Texas, Perot needs 54,000 signatures from registered voters before he can be placed on the statewide ballot. Signature requirements for other states vary.

However, only registered voters who did not vote in the March 10 primary are eligible to sign the petitions.

"People are just sick about not being eligible. About 75 percent of the people who have stopped by are not allowed to sign," Rachal said. "Still, I'm confident he can make the Texas ballot."

Rachal doesn't know Perot, but he said he knows where he stands. And despite Perot's reputation as a political novice, Rachal expects him to handle the attention well.

"I've studied him, and he knows what he's talking about. For example, he wants Europe and Japan to cough up $100 billion a year for us to protect them," he said.

"We're the world defenders, and it's costing us a lot of money."

Rachal admits that Perot has yet to address many controversial political issues, but he said the billionaire businessman will get to them in time.

"He hasn't addressed some issues because he needs further study, and he has said that all along," Rachal said.

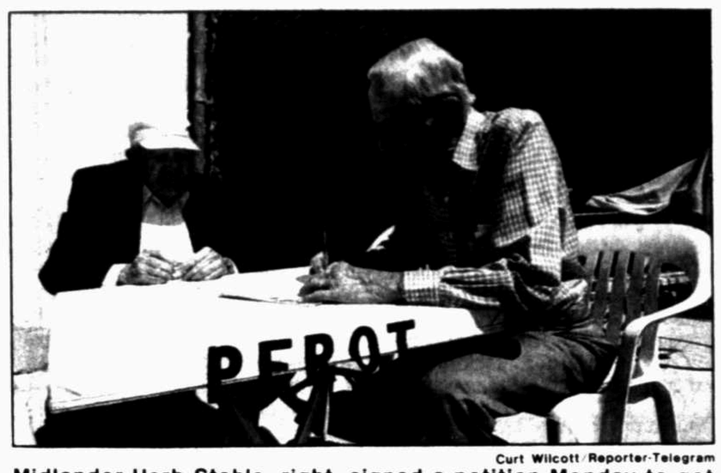
He also believes Perot's no-nonsense attitude toward governing will attract Americans who are "disgusted" with the current leadership.

"He's clean. He's not a professional politician. The press hasn't been able to find anything to go against him," he said. "They've been trying to dig something up, but they haven't been able to. Not like these other candidates."

"He doesn't like the fanfare. There will be no inaugural festival because he will want to go straight to work. Also the taxpayers foot the bill for the thing," he said.

Perot's campaign leaders expect the campaign to cost about $150 million. Perot has promised to foot the bill, according to Rachal.

"I doubt if there's any other American who is interested in being president who can afford to spend that kind of money on his own campaign," he said.



Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

Midlander Herb Stehle, right, signed a petition Monday to get H. Ross Perot's name on the statewide November ballot as an independent presidential candidate. Perot supporter Hal Rachal, left, spearheads the collection of Midlanders' names.

Steve Hershberger's law office doubles as a shrine to the National Football League. The helmet Hershberger is wearing belonged to former Green Bay Packers quarterback David Whitehurst.

Attorney uses his head to score helmets

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Once while driving back to Midland from San Antonio, Steve Hershberger spotted the glow of football stadium lights coming from Kerrville.

"I said 'what the heck,' pulled into town and saw the game," Hershberger said.

And that wasn't the only time Hershberger, a local attorney, has been lured by the thrill of a football game.

It all started while attending law school at Texas Tech in the early 1980s.

"I started contacting the (National Football League) teams to see if they'd send me some game-worn helmets," Hershberger said.

"The first year I wrote all the teams and they said they didn't give out helmets to the public," he said.

The next year, Hershberger sent letters to all 28 teams again but still didn't score any helmets.

"1984 was my first break. One of the teams agreed to do it — the Jets," he said.

"Then the Cardinals . . . and it slowly developed to where I got most of the teams," Hershberger said.

Today, Hershberger has a helmet from every NFL team except two — the Chicago Bears and the Pittsburgh Steelers.

"Both those teams are real hard to get. Instead of giving those helmets away, they use them for promotional purposes," he said.

Through his persistence, Hershberger said he expects to intercept a Bears helmet within the next couple of months.

Hershberger owns about 70 NFL helmets, some variations of the same team. A few came from the manufacturer, but the majority are game-worn and acquired from the teams.

Most teams will discard helmets if beyond repair, Hershberger said. Some players, such as linebackers, will go through four or five helmets a season.

"I guess I'm collecting someone else's garbage," he chuckled.

In addition to the NFL helmets, Hershberger has collected a few college football helmets and has begun to work on the 10 teams of the World Football League.

He also sports some older helmets, in-

Supreme Court waits on Bush administration opinion of remapping

■ Justices say they want input of government lawyers before making a ruling on state plan.

By Michelle Mittelstadt
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court said Monday it would not rule on a Texas challenge to a state redistricting plan until the Bush administration has had a chance to give its opinion.

The Texas Attorney General's Office, which is fighting a state Senate plan drawn by a three-judge federal panel in Austin, said the high court's action was anticipated.

"It was something that we expected the court to do, or at least hoped the court would do," said Ron Dusek, a spokesman for Texas Attorney General Dan Morales.

"If they were not to make such a request we could interpret that as a negative sign, but since they are making the request, all we know is they are proceeding in normal fashion," he said.

The state contends the three-judge panel exceeded its authority under the Voting Rights Act of 1965 when it substituted its plan for the map drawn by the Texas Legislature.

The justices said they want to know whether government lawyers think the Austin judges should have devised their own plan even though one drawn earli-

Midland, Odessa colleges keep stable minority enrollment figures

■ Statewide trend shows increased numbers of black, Hispanic students in community colleges last fall.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

While minority enrollments increased at community colleges statewide, they remained fairly stable locally, according to information from the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board (THECB).

Presidents of both Midland and Odessa colleges said they are focusing on recruiting and retaining minority students in order to diversify their enrollments.

Black and Hispanic students accounted for more than half of a 11,786-student increase in enrollment last fall, the report showed.

"Because many minority students begin their college work at community and technical colleges, increases in minority enrollment at these institutions is welcome news," said Kenneth H. Ashworth, commissioner of higher education.

"Another big challenge is to help more of these students continue their educations by transferring to universities after completing programs at community colleges," he said.

Black enrollment in Texas community colleges increased from 35,941 to 38,606 students between the fall of 1990 and fall 1991 — an increase of 2,665 students, or more than 7 percent.

Hispanic enrollment grew from 77,343 to 81,472 students, up 4,129 students, or a 5 percent increase, during the same period.

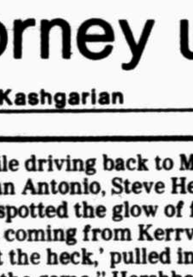
Burke declares trustee bid

Staff Report

Norma Viney Burke has announced her candidacy for Place 2 on the Midland College Board of Trustees.



Burke

The election is set for May 2.

A graduate of Midland High School and Texas Woman's University, Mrs. Burke has worked 11 years at Ralph H. Viney & Associates Inc., where she is Secretary-/Treasurer and Financial Officer.

At various times since 1982, Mrs. Burke has attended Midland College at night and has earned 45 credit hours, a majority of which are in accounting and business.

"As a business person, I understand the hard task of providing a quality product with limited available resources," she said. "My goals are to provide assistance to the college in the capacity of board member with a student orientation, to be a voice for the students. Attending Midland College has been a positive experience for me. I am aware of how the college's policy affects the students.

"I want to see that students are aware that, as citizens, they could have a voice through my service on the board," she said.

Mrs. Burke also noted that she would aggressively seek support, funding and input from local businesses. "The needs of local businesses should be considered in formulating curriculum. When an employee of one of our local businesses seeks out instruction at Midland College, I am convinced that business receives a better employee in return.

"Higher education and the business of higher education must become more aggressive," she said. "Community and industry are the customers, and quality education is the product that must satisfy the needs and demands of those customers. All levels of our community should be made aware of the educational opportunities offered by Midland College, and I would seek to solicit and receive community input."

Mrs. Burke noted that her husband, Bill, also has taken classes at Midland College. He is an insurance executive.

The Place 2 incumbent is Fred Wright, who has announced he will not seek re-election. Mrs. Burke is one of three candidates seeking the spot on the board.

Texaco's wellness director suggests moderation in life

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The state of wellness — a wholesome and healthy being — is a plateau most people would enjoy, and many do for a time. More could actively pursue it through preventative-health measures.

Thomas

To Midlander Sue Thomas, wellness is a pursuit that she exhorts others to work toward.

As wellness director for Texaco Inc.'s Permian Basin work force, she recommends moderation: a wholesome blend of eating and exercising.

"Diet and exercise (are) going to haunt you for the rest of your life (in the pursuit of wellness)," Ms. Thomas said. "The combination has to go hand-in-hand."

Ms. Thompson, 29, said the underlying theme behind wellness is personal choice. She doesn't force anything on anybody, but she gives suggestions.

"You can have anything you want. No one is going to preach to you that something is bad, or something is good," Ms. Thomas said. "There's no such thing as bad food. You can have anything you want as long as you pay for it. Your body is not stupid. It will catch up with you," said Ms. Thomas, wife of Texaco geologist Marty Thomas.

A wellness program takes in mental, physical, spiritual, emotional and occupational well-being, she said.

She recommends a nutritional diet: whole-grain breads and cereals; a colorful mix of fruits and vegetables; lean red meats, poultry and fish or protein alternates such as eggs, beans, peas, nuts and seeds; and milk and milk products. She advises avoiding salt and high-fat diets, especially foods containing saturated fats, such as coconut oil and lard.

Be aware of your weight and of the fat, salt and sugars in foods, she said.

"Nothing tastes as good as looking thin feels," Ms. Thomas tells people in her weight-loss program.

And when it comes to reading labels on food packages, "you've got to be really able to decipher the label" to figure out the nutritional values.

Ms. Thomas said in exercising, the health-conscious person would work out three to five times a week in 30 to 60 minute sessions to build up the cardiovascular system. Between those sessions, weight-bearing exercises to enhance muscle tone and strengthen the skeletal structure is recommended.

Blaze damages vacant building

Staff Report

A vacant building that formerly housed the defunct Sloan Brothers Buick company sustained heavy damage after catching fire Monday night, Midland Fire Chief James Roberts said. No one was injured in the blaze.

Flames as high as 30 feet soared from the building at 2625 W. Wall St. as several dozen by-standers gathered to watch the blaze, officials said.

Whether the building is still owned by the former car dealers was not determined. Cherokee Sloan said the building is now the property of the FDIC.

Sloan and co-owner, Joe Sloan, were arrested earlier in the month on misdemeanor theft charges, jail officials said.

The fire was reported to the Midland Fire Department at 7:35 p.m., and firefighters had it under control about an hour later, officials said.

Officials have not determined the cause of the fire.

According to police officials, Sloan reported a burglary at the building last week.

COLLEGES: Enrollments of minorities remain steady

percent.

"In real numbers our minority enrollment went down, but in percentages it went up," said Phil Speegle, president of Odessa College.

He said that while the college's 1991 enrollment had 142 fewer students than in 1990, most of the decrease involved white students.

The THECB report indicated that OC had less than 71 percent white students in 1990 and less than 70 percent in 1991. Hispanic enrollment amounted to 23 percent of the total enrollment in 1990 and 23.5 percent in 1991.

Speegle said the college is striving to increase its diversity of students. "Our minority enrollment has gone up a little bit, about one-half of 1 percent each year. Over a five to 10-year period it makes a lot of difference," he said.

Aside from attempting to recruit minorities, Speegle said, "It's not just enough to get them in here, we also need to get them through college."

He noted that the larger minority enrollment increases will be seen at colleges in cities that are experiencing larger minority population increases.

The THECB indicated, in fact, that the most significant growth in black enrollment was experienced in cities experiencing significant population growths, including Dallas County Community College, Houston Community College System, and Tarrant County Junior College in Fort Worth.

Colleges that experienced significant growth in the numbers of Hispanic students attending included Alamo Community College District in San Antonio, Dallas County CC, Houston CCS, Laredo Junior College and South Plains College.

"Basically our minority population reflects the community," Speegle said. "For example, our minority population is 32 percent this year, and the county population is 37 percent minority."

Speegle said another factor figured into reflecting the community population at the college takes into account that not all of the county's minority population will be of college age.

"The 37 percent of Ector County's minority population includes a lot of children," he said. "When you look at voting numbers, Ector County is about 33 to 34 percent minority."

MC President David E. Daniel said the community college's "net enrollment increased."

The THECB report indicated that the white population of about 78 percent remained the same from 1990 to 1991 while the black and Hispanic populations each varied about 1 percentage point. The percentage of Hispanic students attending the college increased from 14.4 to 15.4 percent, while the black population decreased from 5.5 to 4.3 percent.

"Our enrollment stayed pretty flat in terms of any segment of the population increasing or decreasing," Daniel said. "Our goal as an institution is to increase minority enrollment substantially in recruitment and in terms of accessibility to the programs."

Daniel has been working on a plan to develop an MC satellite facility in southeast Midland. "We need to get closer to the minority community," he said. "We have a genuine ongoing commitment to serve the minority community."

Houston agency launches program

HOUSTON (AP) — Child welfare authorities trying to assuage an acute shortage of bilingual, Hispanic foster parents have launched a recruitment program that targets the city's Latino community.

The Harris County Children Protective Services is using the Hispanic media, churches and other activities in their recruitment efforts.

Although there are other shortages, the major void is in placing Hispanic children with Hispanic foster parents, said Scott Dixon, the agency's adoption and foster care retention specialist.

About 10 percent, or 40, of Harris County's 403 foster families are Hispanic, but 21 percent, or 388, of the children in foster care are Hispanic, he said.

"Usually, when a Hispanic child comes into (the agency's) care, we search real hard to find a Hispanic foster home," Dixon said. "A lot of times, we end up not finding one."

"The priority is to find more bilingual Hispanics. It makes it so much easier as far as dealing with the children, dealing with the agency. We want the children to have the same kind of cultural similarities as the foster families," he said.

COURT: Justices delay ruling on state remapping

er by the Legislature had won Justice Department approval.

The Legislature's plan was approved by government attorneys last November, but was later invalidated by the Texas Supreme Court on a technicality. The Legislature, in a special session in January, approved a state Senate map identical to the one earlier approved by the Justice Department. But in the interim, Justice Department officials threw their support behind the court-ordered plan.

The Supreme Court is not expected to say whether it will fully review the case until it hears from the government lawyers, which could take months.

The high court in February refused to postpone the Texas Senate primary, held March 10, while the formal appeal by state officials was pending. The justices also refused last month to speed up their consideration of the appeal acted on Monday.

The primary was conducted with the court-ordered plan.

Morales had told the justices that postponing the primary was necessary because of an investigation into allegations of judicial impropriety in the drawing of at least one state Senate district boundary.

Morales has requested a trial before the Washington judges to compare the merits and flaws of the court- and legislatively-drawn maps. A trial date will be set at the end of the discovery period.

LAWYER: Midlander collects used NFL helmets

(From 1B)

cluding a leather one worn in the 1940s.

A host of miniature helmets, authentic half-helmets mounted on wall plaques and miniature half-helmet plaques add to Hershberger's collection.

Not only does Hershberger collect helmets, he knows helmet trivia, such as the different styles and changes over the years.

For example, Hershberger points out that teams don't usually change helmet colors and designs for looks. Helmet changes are for tactical reasons such as when the Jets went from white to green headgear in the mid-1970s. Because the other teams in the conference had white helmets, the Jets switched to help reduce the number of interceptions thrown, Hershberger explained.

But Hershberger's obsession with football goes beyond helmets.

"When I started collecting the helmets, I just started becoming a football junkie," he said.

"I collect football cards, football books, football magazines, old team pictures, any type of football art," he said.

His football memorabilia also includes player statues, team plaques, video recordings of games and anything else related to the game.

"I think everyone has an addiction in life . . . and this is my addiction," Hershberger said.

Football is one of three things where Hershberger directs most of his attention.

"Family, work and football. That's about it. I don't really do anything else," he said.

Hershberger said his wife, Peggy, doesn't share his enthusiasm for football but puts up with his.

The Hershbergers have two sons, James, 8, and Mark, 6, with whom Hershberger — naturally — occassionally tosses a football.

When away from home — which includes a room referred to as the "football room" — Hershberger may be found at his office, equally adorned with football paraphernalia.

Hershberger, 34, has been practicing law since 1983. Before starting his own practice, he worked for law firms. He also worked for the court of appeals in El Paso and was a law clerk for U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton in Midland.

Hershberger concentrates his practice on plaintiff personal injury cases and criminal defense work.

Hershberger said he enjoys practicing law because of two reasons, one being the ability to help others.

"Basically in our society we hate lawyers but when we get into trouble, the first thing we do is go get one," he said.

The other reason Hershberger enjoys legal work is because the strategies involved, especially in trials, are like those in a game of football.

WELLNESS: Director says moderation is success key

(From 1B)

ness program is moderation, Ms. Thomas said, and not going from one extreme to the other in food or exercise.

She said a lot of people hestitate eating certain foods, such as ice cream, because they think it's bad for them.

But Ms. Thomas' reply is: "You are meant to enjoy life. You can have it. It has to be in moderation. That's the key to success in wellness. That's really the key to success in anything.

"The more educated the (Texaco) employees are," Ms. Thomas said, "the better decisions they are going to make. The whole idea of wellness is to continuously give them the skills and the support that's needed to make a lifestyle change."

She said some people postpone a sensible eating-exercise regimen "until they have a heart attack or something major (another illness) in their life to make a change."

The idea behind Ms. Thomas' voluntary wellness program is to educate people on how to attain and maintain good health.

"It's not coercion. It's there if you want it. The more informed you are, the better decisions you make."

The wellness program includes blood and other screenings; safety workshops; special events, including sports tournaments and nutritious company breakfasts and luncheons; guest speakers on medicine, health and safety; and seminars on nutrition and exercise.

"My job is to motivate," Ms. Thomas said, "and to act as a role model," which she does by her twice-daily exercising and in her eating habits.

Texaco employee Steve Scott, 39, started an exercise-diet program after Ms. Thomas, who holds degrees in medical dietetics and in exercise physiology, implemented the wellness program last August.

The program is available to the 1,000 Texaco employees and their families in Texaco's Midland Producing Division in West Texas and Eastern New Mexico.

"Naturally, in the oil industry today, there's a lot of stress involved," said Scott, who works in Texaco's Environmental Health and Safety Department. "People are either overworked or they are concerned about the future of their jobs. The wellness program offered helps relieve that stress through exercise and dieting and in helping the employees learn how to help ourselves," he said.

"Wellness takes effort," said Scott, who went into a diet slump during Christmas and the post-holiday season. "It takes effort to exercise. It takes effort to eat the right kinds of foods. It takes effort not to abuse your body."

Texaco's commitment to the wellness program, Scott said, probably will depend on the employees' devotion to it.

"I don't know if you can put economics or dollars and cents to it right now," he said. "But in the long run, I think there's some monetary benefits."

An effective wellness program, Scott said, would suggest less employee medical expenses, decreased absenteeism due to a healthier work force, increased productivity, more energy and more mental alertness, and a more wholesome family life.

"It's a major commitment," Scott said.

Wayne Hogue, a 34-year-old Texaco reservoir engineer, said that one of the most important things coming out of the wellness program is the building of employee morale "especially in these (economically depressed) times when a lot of companies are going through layoffs."

Hogue said Ms. Thomas "pretty much practices what she preaches. I have never caught her eating a doughnut. She exercises, and she eats well."

Ron Sanderson, the 49-year-old manager of Texaco's Quality and Human Resources, said that he is "no paragon of health and fitness" and, from the outset, had told Ms. Thomas that he was "not going to become a marathoner."

But the wellness program has prompted him to be more conscious of dieting and exercising and helped him "make some good (lifestyle) decisions."

Tek Dupuis, an engineering assistant in enhanced oil recovery (EOR), is chairman of the wellness program's nutrition committee.

"The most important thing for me has been the (wellness) education — both the nutrition side and medical self-help," said Ms. Dupuis, 41. "In my instance, it's more of a prevention thing. A wholesome approach of eating and exercising benefits not just for today but for life."

Hospital releases stab wound victim

Staff Report

A 23-year-old man was treated and released from Memorial Hospital and Medical Center for a minor stab wound early Saturday morning following a fight at the El Caribe Club, according to police reports.

Jose Marquez, of the 200 block of East Pennsylvania Street, told police a Hispanic male stabbed him at about 2 a.m. as he attempted to leave the building at 2201 Garden City Highway, according to reports.

Troy House of Meats carries delicious, nutritious food product

Troy's House of Meats manager Harlan Rhoades displays some of shop's delicious wares.

Troy's House of Meats is introducing the community to a food product that is far superior in taste and more nutritious than beef, fish, pork and skinless chicken. Troy's owner, William B. Wilson, said, "Healthy eating has become a way of life for body-conscious Americans. The demand for a naturally nutritious meat product, which is both delicious and healthful, led to the rediscovery and introduction of buffalo (bison) meat."

Buffalo meat, for years the staple food of our native American brothers, fearless mountain men and weary settlers, is a truly all-American food product. Healthful, delicious, low in fat and cholesterol, high in protein and more nutritious than any other meat available.

Buffalo meat was a popular item on menus throughout the great southwest in the early 1900s. When the Savory Grill opened for business in 1903, buffalo steaks became the traditional "steak of choice" of midwesterners in Kansas City. After 22 years of popularity, this epicurean delight disappeared from menus as the number of buffalo dwindled.

Now the tradition is restored. The herds have increased to the point that diners are once again able to sink their teeth in a delicious buffalo steak, enjoy a juicy buffalo burger or a hearty buffalo stew.

Restauranteurs and homemakers in Midland have been serving this product to their customers and families with great success lately. Here's what they've had to say:

Smith Ray, local attorney, wrote, "Thank you for bringing buffalo meat to Midland and I encourage you to continue to do so. Over the years, my wife and I had cut back on our consumption of beef until it appeared seldom in our menus. This cutback was due in part to health considerations and in part to simply losing our taste for it. We are now eating buffalo several times a week."

"Wayne Runkles of The Insurance Man & Associates, wrote, "Since you have started offering bison through your meat market, I have had the opportunity to try it and it is delicious. The favorite at our house is ground buffalo steaks. Not only is it low in fat and cholesterol, it does not cook away like most ground meats."

The friendly and trained staff at Troy's House of Meats have compiled recipes using the most common cuts of buffalo for traditional meals from the Old West: Tender, juicy buffalo steak or burger, a chunk of buffalo simmered in coffee, a robust buffalo stew or a large slice of buffalo barbecue.

Or, you can create a delicious dish of your very own.

Besides offering buffalo, Troy's House of Meats is a full-service meat market. They carry beef, chicken, pork, ham, fresh lunch meat and some fish.

"Our prices are competitive with the chains," said Harlan Rhoades, Troy House of Meats' manager. "And our quality is by far superior."

For your convenience, Troy House of Meats offers free home delivery (with a $25 minimum purchase) within the Midland City limits. Customers can choose from a number of "combination packages" or create their own orders. Call 689-8342 for information.

Troy's House of Meats is located at 2703 W. Cuthbert (next to Merle Norman) in Midland. Hours are 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

G & G Pharmacy offers professional, personalized service

G & G Pharmacy is noted for competitive pricing, convenient location, drive-through window and professional service. But their biggest plus is the caring, personal service they offer their customers. They always have time to answer questions, and discuss any concern that relates to medication.

This is undoubtedly their biggest asset. And it's easy to transfer prescriptions. Just bring your old bottles to G & G, or call them with your doctor's name and the medications you're taking. They'll take it from there.

Here are some recent comments from their happy, satisfied customers:

"I'm going to be trading here, the service is so fast."

"You've taken the time to explain the prescriptions to me when my baby was sick."

"I'm glad you have a pharmacy drive-through. That way I don't have to get my children out of the car."

From an elderly customer, "I really appreciate your delivery service. When the weather is bad I don't like to get out."

"Thank you for suggesting that I contact my doctor. I had misunderstood his directions and would have taken the medication incorrectly."

"Thank you for ordering that product for me. My doctor recommended I take it and I haven't been able to find it anywhere else."

Gary and Gwen Presner, owner of G&G Pharmacy, offer convenient, professional and friendly service.

With all the good things G & G 's customers are saying about them, this might be a good time to switch pharmacies. Don't forget how easy it is to transfer prescriptions. Just bring your old bottles to G & G, or call them with your doctor's name and the medications you're taking. They'll take it from there. If you like, drop off a list of of the medication you are currently taking and see how prices compare.

Or, call owners Gary and Gwen Prensner at 689-9999 for more information. Gary, incidentally, was formerly pharmacy manager at Skaggs Alpha Beta.

G & G Pharmacy accepts, MasterCard, American Express, Blue Cross, PCS, and Medicaid. They also have recently begun accepting Worker's Compensation. If you have an insurance card, you pay the same no matter where you go, so why not choose the convenience and service of G&G.

The pharmacy is located at 2101 North Midland Drive in Market Manor Shopping Center — just one block north of Andrews Hwy near the Emergy Clinic, around the corner from Primary Medical and Dr. Floyd's Orthopedic Clinics.

Security Specialists recently announce new name, manager

Security Specialists' manager Paul Thomposon poses beside the company's truck. He's holding a lawn sign that he'll post in front of a house in which he's installed a security system.

Security Specialist may have a new name, but they have long-standing reputation for skillful professionalism. They have been serving Permian Basin home and business owners for almost a decade now.

About a year ago Jim Wynne, who had been regional manager of Network Security for nine years, bought the West Texas and Permian Basin operations of firm. He renamed it Security Specialists and named Paul Thompson manager.

Thompson has 13 years experience in law enforcement (eight of them in Odessa) and seven years experience in security systems. The dual fields of expertise complement each other. "From my law enforcement work, I understand how burglaries are committed and how to help prevent them," he said.

Burglary is on the increase nationwide. "It's a 'popular' crime because burglars leave little evidence behind. It's an easy crime to get away with," Wynne said. "Burglars are like electricity, they follow the path of least resistance. All things being equal, if you have a security system and your neighbor doesn't, they'll break into your neighbor's house because it's easier."

"According to statistics, less than 6 percent of the homes in the U.S. have security systems," Thompson said. "So the path of least resistance is relatively easy to find."

Security Specialists offer systems to both homeowners and businesses. And they can provide just about anything from the most basic to the most uniquely customized of systems.

The basic home security systems includes protection of all exterior doors, an indoor motion detector and a central activator/deactivator. The system activates a siren — and all systems are monitored 24-hours-a-day, seven days a week from Security Specialists central station. When the alarm is activated, Security Specialists contact the police and whatever other authorities or individuals are requested by the customer.

Homeowners' systems are designed to blend in with the existing decor. Motion detectors and other pieces of hardware are low profile.

"Security systems not only protect a homeowner's possessions, but they give them peace of mind," Wynne said. "It provides security for the family as well as that family's belongings."

"There are a lot of new homes being built in the area," Thompson said. "Something to seriously consider is having a home pre-wired for a security system while it is being constructed. That's the easiest time to do it and won't cause any disruption when the family moves in."

The basic business system is similar to the one available to homeowners, but it is adapted and adaptable to meet the security needs of businessmen. For example, a businesses' openings and closings can be monitored along with the comings and goings of employees. In fact, Security Specialists can provide businesses with "user numbers" so that each employee will have his own de-activation code.

"Our product is reasonably priced and professionally installed. But we can offer a custom systems to adapt to just about any preference or lifestyle. And we are always there to service our product," Wynne said.

A lot of area residents and business people obviously agree. Security Specialists services over 1,400 systems in the Permian Basin and West Texas.

Security Specialists offer a free, no-obligation security survey. Call 520-0009 for more information.

Sexy men are now discovering the many perils of pecs

By Erma Bombeck

When informed he had been named by People magazine as The Sexiest Man Alive, an uncomfortable Nick Nolte said, "I would have picked Walter Cronkite."

Bombeck

Men are new to this dubious distinction, and it has been interesting to see their reactions. Almost without exception, past sex-symbol winners John F. Kennedy Jr., Mark Harmon, Mel Gibson and Sean Connery have regarded the recognition with embarrassment. They feel awkward about it. They don't know what to say or how to react.

Well, get used to it, guys, because in time that's how you will be judged . . . not on what you are or what you do, but how you look.

If you're an anchorman, no one will realize you have just announced the results of a presidential campaign. They will be sitting in their living rooms saying, "Hey, Margaret, would you get a load of his hair standing up. Where does he have it done? At a Dairy Queen?"

If you want a career in show business, you're going to have to buy some parts. Inject those pecs with silicone. Lift those buns and implant something — no matter what the risk.

Growing old is going to be a luxury. Don't even think about it. Wear a rug. Grow two long strands of hair and arrange them. Wash that gray away. Wear shades. Trade your 60-year-old wife in for two 30s, spread over a five-year period. .

Several things in your favor are that the requirements for being a sex symbol have changed throughout the years. When women had a corner on the market, they couldn't be sexy and married. If they had children, forget it. That doesn't seem to matter anymore. (However, unhappily married is better for the image.)

You can put your brain on cruise control. You'll enter pageants where they'll ask why you want to alleviate world hunger, but the real test will be how you look in a bathing suit.

For years, men have had a free ride as sex symbols. They didn't have to show skin, speak in whispers, wear tight pants, flirt, or act like they didn't know which side of a peanut butter and jelly sandwich faced up.

Intelligence was sexy in a man. So was a sense of humor. And especially vulnerability. But times are changing. Sex objects have become equal opportunity careers.

Revenge will never be so sweet as the day a "hunk" will sing, "Happy Birthday, Madam President" in a low, husky whisper to the first woman to run this country.

Erma Bombeck's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

Study finds increase in women's drug crimes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Drug crimes accounted for nearly half the 137 percent increase in the number of women held in the nation's local jails during the last decade, the Justice Department said in a study.

A greater percentage of women inmates than men were held for drug crimes in the nation's jails, said the study by the department's Bureau of Justice Statistics.

In 1989, one in three female jail inmates were held on drug-related charges compared with one of every four male prisoners. Six years earlier, about one in eight women inmates were held on drug charges.

Women convicted of crimes were nearly twice as likely as men to have used serious drugs daily during the month before their offense took place, the study said.

One in four convicted women committed their crime to get money to support their drug habit, according to the study, based on a survey and interviews of selected inmates.

How fat are we? Diet Center answers with new technology

Diet Center announces a weight-management program that looks past the bathroom scale.

Diet Center, Inc. recently announced the results of one of the first national studies to examine body fat levels instead of body weight as a measure of obesity in the American population. The study determined that the average American adult body is about 25 percent fat. The study also shows that 50 percent of women, in particular, could be defined as "overfat."

The average level of body fat is 31 percent for women and 19 percent for men. Though women naturally have higher fat levels than men, the female average is running higher than optimal.

For a better understanding, the percentages can be compared to weight measurement. For instance, a 130-pound woman with 31 percent body fat is carrying around approximately 40 pounds in fat. According to researcher Dr. Andrew Jackson, Ph.D., who is a prominent expert on obesity measurement, an optimal body fat range for adult women would be from 15 to 29 percent. For men it is 11 to 15 percent.

In 1985, the National Institute of Health declared obesity a disease and estimated that 25 percent of Americans are obese. Most large studies of obesity rely on weight and height measurements. However, the Surgeon General's report and most other experts on obesity agree that the ideal way to measure obesity is in terms of body fat, not body weight.

Diet Center's weight management program analyzes and monitors body fat levels to create individualized reducing plans. Through an assessment technique called Body Composition Analysis, Diet Center tells clients their own ratio of lean-to-fat body mass. Then, as the client progresses, the test is used to determine the source of weight loss, lean or fat.

"We combine this 3-minute measurement with personal health and diet histories," says local Diet Center operator Tina Blake. "Our customers then receive their own computerized nutrition and exercise plan designed for long-term maintenance."

"Too many dieters are focused on the bathroom scale. But by the time a person is five pounds overweight, they may be 13 pounds overfat. We tell our clients what the scale can't," Blake said.

For more details on the research of the average American's body fat, contact Sarah Ryan of Creamer Dickson Basford at (212) 887-8012. For more information about Body Composition Analysis call Midland Diet Center at 684-5081.

So far, Diet Centers across North America have helped more than 4,000,000 people lose weight. When female dieters take full advantage of the Diet Center program, they can lose up to two pounds per week. Male dieters can lose an average up to three pounds per week. Diet Center surveys show that dieters also experience an inch loss (overall body measurement) of one inch per pound lost.

The Diet Center program teaches that sound nutrition, with an emphasis on real food, is more important than counting calories, that the focus should be on long-term weight maintenance, not just weight loss.

There are no contracts to sign or hidden costs at Diet Center. A one-time registration fee is $75. The weekly fee covers private daily counseling and weigh-in sessions as well as the daily supplement.

Call Tina Blake at 684-5081 to arrange for a free consultation. Or come by Diet Center at 2034 W. Cuthbert, across from Memorial Stadium. Hours are 7 a.m. to noon and 4:30 to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday. Visa and MasterCard are now accepted. Don't forget the Extra Card to get five weeks for the rpice of four.

And now is the time to call and take advantage of a special offer. Diet Center is offering a free Body Composition Analysis through April 15.

DEAR ABBY

Lesson of youthful tragedy is to think before you drink

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the letter from Linda Wooten of Orange Park, Fla., whose son collapsed and died after drinking 23 shots of liquor, one after the other. She said her son did it on a dare from his college friends. He was 21.

Van Buren

This was probably the young man's first time away from home, but not the first time he drank liquor. In Florida, the legal age for drinking is 21, but that doesn't mean all college kids obey the law.

Blaming the bartender who served her son that many drinks misses the mark. A bartender is just a guy, working for $5 an hour to pay his bills and make money for his employer. He works late hours doing what he's paid to do — serve drinks. He is not a baby sitter.

If the young man's mother is looking for someone to blame for her son's death, she can blame his "friends," herself and her son. His friends were old enough to know that they had no business challenging someone to the height of stupidity. And his mother should have taught her son to be responsible for his own decisions and actions. The son, however, must accept the brunt of the blame. He accepted the challenge to drink himself "under the table."

Everyone must accept responsibility for his or her choices and actions, but it's only human nature to want to blame others for our mistakes and misfortunes. — BARBARA E. FAULKNER

DEAR BARBARA: You are right, of course. Read on for a coincidence that is stranger than fiction.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to let you know that on Feb. 23, your article about the 21-year-old college student who died of alcohol poisoning was published in the Port Arthur News.

Abby, the same day that article appeared, a memorial service was held for Scott, my 15-year-old son, who died from the very same thing. I could not believe the timing!

More than 700 people attended Scott's memorial service, and approximately half of them were teen-agers. The minister who officiated at the service read the article you had in your column about Larry Kenneth Wooten, the 21-year-old college student who drank 23 shots of straight liquor on a dare from friends. It cost him his life.

I hope and pray that the kids who attended Scott's memorial service will have learned a lesson. If just one of them is saved because of my son's death and the article you wrote about it, perhaps some good was accomplished.

I can't help wondering if perhaps Scott might have been spared if that article had come out sooner. But questions like that are useless now.

What is done is now history, and we must look ahead to the future. Thank you, Dear Abby, for educating our young people about this subject. It could be a lifesaver for many. — SANDRA K. BURMEISTER, PORT ARTHUR, TEXAS

DEAR SANDRA: My heart goes out to you on the loss of your beloved 15-year-old son.

Thank you for giving me permission (on the telephone) to use your name in my column. It took a generous woman to say, "My privacy is not as important as sending a lifesaving message to our young people."

What teen-agers need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS, and getting along with their peers and parents is now in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Abigail Van Buren's column is distributed by Uniersal Press Syndicate.

Royal family has long tradition of marital woes

LONDON (AP) — The breakup of Prince Andrew's marriage may be causing an uproar in Britain, but it's hardly without royal precedent. Henry VIII, for one, set a standard for marital turmoil which is unlikely to be equaled.

The split between Prince Andrew and his wife Sarah, confirmed by Buckingham Palace, is seen as a matter of great public interest, but little actual importance — "a private tragedy of no great public consequence," as The Times of London said in an editorial.

In times past, as recently as the 1950s, it would have been both.

Princess Margaret, only sister of Queen Elizabeth II, was granted a divorce from Lord Snowdon in 1978 with surprisingly little controversy, and much public sympathy. That was an astonishing change in attitudes from 1954, when Margaret wished to marry a divorced man, Peter Townsend.

Even the archbishop of Canterbury joined in the debate that raged for months before Margaret finally gave up the idea.

Divorce among those close to the queen, was cause for scandal. For the monarch, the temporal head of the Church of England, it remains unthinkable.

British civil law does not bar remarriage of a divorced person in a church, but the church maintains marriage is a bond for life.

It was not always so.

Henry VIII divorced his first wife in 1534, breaking with the Roman Catholic Church in the process and setting himself up as head of a Protestant Church of England. In his pursuit of a male heir, Henry remarried five times.

It was 250 years before the royal family again found itself in such marital upheaval, with George Augustus Frederick, Prince of Wales and eldest son of King George III.

A dandy, a spendthrift and something of a charmer, the prince flung himself into a series of passionate amours from the age of 17. In 1784 he pursued the twice-widowed Roman Catholic Maria Fitzherbert, and in the face of her unyielding virtue, secretly married her.

During the 64-year reign of George's niece Victoria, the royal family achieved rock-solid respectability.

But Queen Victoria's son Albert Edward maintained "intimate friendships" with a series of women and had a brush with the divorce courts in 1870.

Evans hired

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — Oklahoma State assistant coach Rob Evans was hired Monday as head basketball coach at Mississippi, becoming the first black in that job at the Southeastern Conference school.

It is the first head coaching job for Evans, who has been a college assistant for 21 seasons.

Evans replaces Ed Murphy, who resigned March 12 after the Rebels lost to Georgia 85-66 in the opening round of the SEC tournament. Murphy had a 76-98 record in six years at Ole Miss, including four losing seasons.

Swilling swells

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Pat Swilling became the best-paid defensive player in the history of the NFL Monday. However, he said the system doesn't work.

In the 14 years that restricted free agency has been the rule, Swilling was only the fifth player to get an offer sheet from another team.

"I'm one of the fortunate guys who got an offer sheet," he said. "I don't think it's going to happen to any other guys on this team."

Detroit offered Swilling, the NFL Defensive Player of the Year last season, $5.475 million for three years, a no-trade agreement including a signing bonus of $1.775 million.

The Saints matched Detroit's offer Monday, the final day on which they could have done so.

No decision

AUSTIN (AP) — A state court jury went home Monday without delivering a verdict in the $30 million lawsuit by reporter Jack Taylor Jr. against former Oklahoma football coach Barry Switzer.

The 13-member jury will continue deliberating today.

In closing arguments, Taylor's attorney, Jack Ayres of Dallas, called Switzer "evil personified." Switzer's attorney, Jim George, described Taylor as a "pit bull" reporter who "stalked Switzer."

The dispute is over Switzer's autobiography "Bootlegger's Boy." In the book, Taylor says Switzer linked him to an alleged conspiracy to plant drugs on an Oklahoma football player around the time of the 1988 Orange Bowl.

Taylor denies he was involved in any such scheme, and has accused Switzer of libel, slander, and invasion of privacy.

■ Midland High moves into a tie for third place with an 8-5 District 4-5A baseball victory over San Angelo.

Staff Report

SAN ANGELO — Midland High faces a tough week in District 4-5A baseball play, but the Bulldogs got off to a good start Monday with an 8-5 road victory over the San Angelo Bobcats.

MHS was forced to play the make-up game Monday at San Angelo after that game was rained out Saturday, putting a strain on the Bulldog rotation that must face league leaders Odessa Permian today and Abilene Cooper on Saturday at Angels Stadium.

"This was a big win for us with Permian and Cooper coming up this week," said MHS baseball coach Rick Woods. "This is going to be a key week for our team. We really couldn't afford to lose this one."

Brian Rounding picked up his first district win of the season, going the distance against the Bobcats in a strange outing that saw him give up seven wild pitches and eight hits. But he also struck-out 10 Bobcats.

Rounding had plenty of help as the Purple Pack ripped off 12 hits, including a three-for-three performance by Jimmy Stanton. Todd Treadaway knocked in two runs with two hits and the Bulldogs never trailed in the game after a three-run first inning. Mike Melzer also had two hits in the game.

When the Bulldogs face Permian at 4 p.m. today, it will be Midland High's second road game in as many days.

Midland Lee returns to District 4-5A baseball action today as the Rebels host Odessa High in a 4 p.m. game at Johnson Field.

Lee is coming off its district open date, but played a non-district doubleheader against Class 4A Frenship and came away with a split. The Rebels won the first game over the Tigers, 9-8, and lost the nightcap 10-6.

Today's other 4-5A game features San Angelo visiting Abilene Cooper.

Cooper and Permian are tied for the league lead with 3-0 loop records, while Abilene High, which is idle today, is 2-2.

Lee is 7-7 overall and 1-2 in 4-5A, while MHS moved into a tie for third place with Abilene High at 2-2 and is 6-11 for the season. San Angelo is now 1-2 in district play and 8-7-1 overall.

Cincinnati's Herb Jones ...hanging out in the Final Four

Cincinnati loves those Bearcats

By Terry Kinney
Associated Press Writer

CINCINNATI — How crazy is this baseball-football city about the University of Cincinnati going to the Final Four for the first time since 1963?

Mayor Dwight Tillery has proclaimed this Bearcat Week.

The diet Coke Skaters' Championship, with the glitterati of the past two Olympics, has pushed back the starting time of Saturday night's competition to 8:30 p.m., figuring nobody would budge from the home television until the Cincinnati-Michigan game ends.

As coach Bob Huggins would say, "Cincinnati takes care of its own."

Huggins, the catalyst who brought together and molded the surprising Bearcats, sells the city and university to recruits.

He likes the fact that many of the players from Cincinnati's glory years, when the Bearcats went to the Final Four five straight times in the late 1950s and early '60s, live in Cincinnati.

"It says a lot about the city," Huggins said Monday. "It says there is a lot of opportunity. The city takes care of its own. And people don't want to leave; that says a lot for the city."

A team of mostly junior college players has been assembled by Huggins, who reversed Cincinnati's two-decades-long skid in just three years.

The result is that this season's Bearcat team (29-4) really is greater than the sum of its parts. Herb Jones, it's leading scorer, averaged 18.5 points and 7.1 rebounds but doesn't think of himself as more than a role player.

"I don't consider myself a star," said Jones, named the outstanding player of the Midwest Regional tournament. "I'm just a person who comes out and works hard to get done what needs to be done."

Jones didn't know if he has any hardware coming from the regional honor. He didn't seem to care.

"They just said I was MVP — I don't know what I get," the soft-spoken Jones said.

He's no more concerned about what Michigan fans think of Cincinnati, although they could be forgiven for thinking the basketball program died 30 years ago.

"I don't care if they think we're Division II," Jones said. "If they think we're Division III, it really doesn't matter. When the ball is tipped, that's when we'll see what's going to happen."

Reserve Erik Martin said the Bearcats' anonymity may have been an advantage in the early rounds of the tournament.

"We sort of enjoyed being the underdog," Martin said. "No one expected us to go this far.

"I don't blame them. After our first practice this fall, I wondered if we were going to win this year."

Then the Huggins factor took over. He convinced his players to push themselves, to play together; they ended up, apparently, genuinely liking each other, and Huggins.

Cubs trade George Bell to Chisox

Associated Press

The Chicago White Sox may have emerged as the favorites to win the AL West Monday by acquiring outfielder George Bell from the Chicago Cubs.

In exchange, the Cubs received outfielder Sammy Sosa and left-handed reliever Ken Patterson.

Bell, a nine-year veteran, spent seven years with the Toronto Blue Jays before being signed as a free agent by the Cubs in December 1990 for a guaranteed $9.8 million over three years.

Bell, 32, has averaged 154 games, 28 home runs and 100 RBIs during his eight full seasons in the major leagues. He won the AL MVP award in 1987 after hitting .308 with 47 home runs and 134 RBIs for the Blue Jays.

The left fielder hit .285 with 25 home runs and 86 doubles for the Cubs last year.

Bell has appeared in three All-Star games — 1987, 1990 and 1991.

Sosa batted .203 with 10 home runs and 33 RBIs in 116 games with the White Sox. He was sent to Triple-A Vancouver for a little more than a month last season, where he hit .267 with three home runs and 19 RBIs before being recalled.

Patterson was 3-0 with a 2.83 ERA and one save in 43 games for the White Sox last season. He appeared in 145 games in three years with the team.

The White Sox also received unspecified cash considerations.

Meanwhile, the Goose has landed in Oakland.

Non-roster right-handed relievers Rich "Goose" Gossage and Jeff Parrett have made the Athletic's 25-man roster, manager Tony La Russa announced Monday.

"I believe this cements their spots on the roster," La Russa said after trimming the roster to 31 players with a five-man cut.

Gossage, 40, is an 18-year veteran who pitched in 44 games for the Texas Rangers last year. He has a lifetime record of 117-100 and 308 career saves.

Parrett, a 12-game winner at Montreal in 1988 and again for Philadelphia in 1989, was released by Atlanta after last season and signed as a non-roster pitcher last Feb. 7.

Meanwhile, catcher Benito Santiago, saying "my bags are packed," has demanded that the San Diego Padres trade him as soon as possible.

Santiago, frustrated by his uncertain status, told the Los Angeles Times that he made his request several days ago in a private meeting with Padres general manager Joe McIlvaine.

"I asked him if they were going to trade me," Santiago told the Times on Sunday. "He said they'd probably have to trade me sometime because they can't sign me.

"I told him, 'Then, just trade me now.'"

Santiago said McIlvaine "said he'd do it. That's why I keep waiting for the phone to ring."

Maverick Rodney McCray, center, can't get a handle on the ball against the Denver Nuggets, a sign of the times for Dallas.

Mavs escape March madness with victory

By Mike Drago
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — Mike Iuzzolino can finally phone home.

The Dallas Mavericks' rookie guard, who scored 21 points in a 105-98 victory over the Denver Nuggets Sunday night, was beginning to think his team might never win again.

The Mavs (18-54) were fighting to avoid a winless March madness and a club-record 16-game losing streak that would have surpassed a 15-game skid during their expansion season, 1980-81.

"At that point it really started to consume me," Iuzzolino said. "I didn't even want to call home because every time I called they would ask 'When are you guys going to win some games?'

"You're conscious of the streak when it hits 15 and you know you can set a record. Believe me, it was in our minds."

The streak, which stretched back to a 115-107 victory over Phoenix on Feb. 28, also was getting to rookie forward Doug Smith, who had 17 points against Denver.

"Everybody wants to win. Nobody wants to lose," he said. "We've been up in games and lost leads because we're young, but we hung in there."

The streak completed the Maver-

Virginia, Notre Dame gain NIT championship round

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Bryant Stith had 27 points, tied his career high with 15 rebounds and led a late run that sent Virginia past Florida 62-56 Monday night and into the NIT championship game against Notre Dame.

Stith, the Cavaliers' career scoring leader, had 10 points as Virginia overcame a 49-45 deficit in the final nine minutes.

Virginia (19-13), which beat Villanova, Tennessee and New Mexico earlier in the tournament, will face the Notre Dame-Utah winner for the title on Wednesday night.

The Cavaliers won the NIT in 1980, Ralph Sampson's freshman season.

Stacey Poole had 16 points and 10 rebounds for Florida (19-13). The Gators beat Richmond, Pittsburgh and Purdue to reach the semifinal game at Madison Square Garden.

Stith, a 6-foot-5 senior presented trouble inside and out in the first-ever meeting between Virginia and Florida. He had 10 rebounds in the first half, including six on the offensive end.

NIT Roundup

Notre Dame 58, Utah 55

Daimon Sweet hit two free throws with 9.7 seconds left following a technical on Utah coach Rick Majerus, helping Notre Dame hold off the Utes in the other semifinal game of the NIT.

Utah (23-11), which trailed by 14 points in the first half, took its first lead of the game, 55-54, on a 3-pointer by Phil Dixon with 35 seconds remaining.

But on Notre Dame's next possession, Majerus went wild after a foul was called on Utah's Paul Afeaki for pushing La-Phonso Ellis. Majerus pounded his fist and threw a clipboard on the scorer's table, earning him a technical from referee John Cahill.

Ellis then made one of two free throws and Sweet converted both technical foul shots to put the Irish (18-14) ahead 57-55.

Following a timeout, Notre Dame's Elmer Bennett was fouled on the inbounds play and hit one of two free throws to make it 58-55.

Utah had a final chance to tie it, but Dixon missed a 3-pointer as time ran out, sending Notre Dame to its third National Invitation Tournament final.

Ellis, who went scoreless for nearly 20 minutes after making four baskets in the first nine minutes of the game, finished with 15 points. Bennett also had 15 points.

Top nine costs over $40 million

■ Baseball's most expensive lineup costs $11 million more than last year, a 37 percent increase.

Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — The cost of baseball's most expensive lineup soared 37 percent this year to $40,658,333, an increase of $11 million over last year's highest-paid nine.

Combined with a 39 percent increase last year, the cost of the top-dollar lineup has almost doubled from 1990, when it was $21,388,036.

The outfield of Bobby Bonilla, Danny Tartabull and Ruben Sierra costs $16.4 million, an increase of $5.2 million over last year's outfield of Darryl Strawberry, Kevin Mitchell and Joe Carter.

Bonilla, signed as a free agent by the New York Mets, has the highest 1992 salary at $6.1 million, including a prorated share of his signing bonus and guaranteed promotional money. Tartabull, signed by the New York Yankees, is second at $5.3 million. Sierra, who set an arbitration record when he beat the Texas Rangers, is third at $5 million.

Dwight Gooden of the Mets, beginning a $15.45 million, three-year extension, is the top-paid pitcher at $4,916,667 and Mickey Tettleton of the Detroit Tigers is the highest-paid catcher at $3,333,333.

Cecil Fielder of the Tigers leads at first base at $4.5 million and Steve Sax of the Chicago White Sox tops second basemen at $3,575,000. Barry Larkin of Cincinnati leads shortstops at $4.3 million and Kelly Gruber of Toronto leads third baseman at $3,633,333.

Gruber, the only repeater from last year's team, also is the only player not on a contract that begins with this season. He is in the second season of an $11 million, three-year deal agreed to in February 1991.

The inflation was even greater on The Associated Press All-Star team. While the 1990 All-Stars began 1991 with a salary total of $19 million, the 1991 AP All-Stars have a '92 salary total of $31.1 million, an increase of 64 percent.

Roger Clemens of Boston, third overall among pitchers this year behind Gooden and Red Sox teammate Frank Viola, is the All-Star pitcher at $4,555,250, while Tettleton is the catcher and Fielder is at first.

Julio Franco of Texas, 122nd on the salary list, is the second baseman at $2,387,500, while Cal Ripken of Baltimore, tied for 125th, is the shortstop at $2,366,667. NL batting champion Terry Pendleton of Atlanta is the third baseman at $3 million, tied for 59th overall.

The outfield has Barry Bonds of Pittsburgh at $4.7 million (sixth overall), Jose Canseco of Oakland at $4.3 million (tied for 12th) and Ken Griffey Jr. of Seattle, a relative bargain at $2 million (tied for 169th).

Walker trade bait for Vikes

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. (AP) — Minnesota running back Herschel Walker — unhappy, unsuccessful and now unnecessary after the Vikings signed Roger Craig — will not participate in the Vikings' spring mini-camps while the team tries to trade him.

The team's announcement Monday confirmed that Walker is trade bait, something that had been extensively assumed since the end of the 1991 season. Team spokesman Merrill Swanson said the Vikings just wanted to acknowledge that fact.

"We've talked to virtually all the other NFL teams," Swanson said. But he said he was not aware of anything new on trade talks.

During the Super Bowl, there were reports that the Atlanta Falcons were interested in Walker, but weren't willing to meet the Vikings' price of first- and second-round draft picks.

Spurs lose fifth straight

Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Terry Mills came off the bench late in the third quarter and keyed a game-breaking 10-0 run Monday night as the New Jersey Nets defeated San Antonio 117-109, the Spurs' fifth straight loss.

The five straight defeats tied the Spurs' season high, but four of those have been without All-Star center David Robinson, who underwent surgery Saturday to repair a torn ligament in his left hand. He is expected to miss six weeks.

The Spurs missed him in losing to New Jersey for the first time since Jan. 17, 1989, a string of six games.

Drazen Petrovic and Derrick Coleman had 20 points apiece, while Mookie Blaylock had 18, Chris Dudley 16 and Mills 14 for New Jersey, which pulled 1½ games behind Miami in the race for the last Eastern Conference playoff spot. Coleman and Dudley each had 14 rebounds while Blaylock had his second straight 13-assist game.

NBA Roundup

Hornets 123, Magic 112

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Dell Curry scored 22 points and rookie Larry Johnson had 21 points and a career-high 10 assists as Charlotte defeated Orlando.

The Hornets, who have won 12 of 14 home games and 12 of 18 overall, also got 21 points, nine assists, five rebounds, four steals and a blocked shot from 5-foot-3 point guard Muggsy Bogues.

Bogues was 9-for-11 from the field and helped hold Orlando point guard Scott Skiles scoreless on 0-for-7 shooting.

The Magic, who have lost four straight and 13 of their last 16, were led by Anthony Bowie with a career-high 27 points and Nick Anderson with 23.

Jazz 120, Bucks 100

SALT LAKE CITY — Jeff Malone scored 30 points on 15-for-22 shooting and Karl Malone had 27 points as Utah handed Milwaukee its 21st consecutive road loss.

The victory clinched a playoff berth for the Jazz and gave them a 5½-game lead in the Midwest Division over San Antonio, which lost at New Jersey. Utah has 11 games remaining and the Spurs 10.

The Jazz led 54-53 at halftime before outscoring the Bucks 17-5 in the first 6:16 of the third quarter to take a 71-58 lead. Jeff Malone scored six of his 12 third-period points during the spurt.

Utah extended the lead to 82-65 with 1:09 left in the third quarter.

Orioles call on Sutcliffe

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Rick Sutcliffe, who began the past two seasons on the disabled list, will start this year by throwing the first pitch in Baltimore's season-opener at Oriole Park at Camden Yards.

Manager Johnny Oates made the announcement Monday, saying that the 35-year-old Sutcliffe could best cope with the hoopla associated with the opening of the Orioles' new ballpark.

"We brought Rick Sutcliffe in here for a reason," manager Johnny Oates said Monday. "He's been these type of games before ... He's a veteran pitcher who won't get distracted by all the things going around him."

Sutcliffe will begin his first season with the Orioles by starting next Monday against the Cleveland Indians, the team he played for from 1982-84 before being traded to the Chicago Cubs.

Olajuwon asks to be traded

HOUSTON (AP) — Hakeem Olajuwon pronounced himself ready to play for the Houston Rockets Monday, but said he wants to be traded at the end of the season.

Olajuwon, who has played his entire career at the University of Houston and with the Rockets, said too much had been said in the controversy over his injured left hamstring.

"I'm not coming back for them (management)," Olajuwon said. "It's for my teammates and the fans, but I would not like to play for the Rockets next season. It's so obvious after all that's happened.

"Would you like to work for a management like that, that say all these things? It's better for everybody to pack at the end of the season."

Rockets general manager Steve Patterson declined comment.

Olajuwon was suspended by the Rockets on March 23 when he refused to play after being cleared by a team physician.

The Rockets believe Olajuwon is faking the injury in a contract negotiation ploy. Olajuwon has repeatedly denied the allegations and has filed a grievance with the NBA Players Association.

Olaujuwon went to Dr. Sherwin Siff for treatment at the Houston Bone and Joint Clinic after his suspension. Tests at the clinic revealed a hamstring injury but after one week of treatment Siff gave Olajuwon clearance to play.

The Rockets center has missed five games, all losses for the Rockets, who are battling for the final playoff spot in the Western Conference behind the Los Angeles Lakers, their opponents Tuesday night.

Olajuwon appealed to the fans to come out and support the team in its attempt to reach the playoffs.

"I'd like to tell the fans to come out and support us now," Olajuwon said. "They should not look at this foolishness of the management to punish the team.

"I think we still have an opportunity to make the playoffs and see where we can go."

The Rockets have just completed a winless (0-3) road trip without Olajuwon. They are 0-5 without Olajuwon during his current absence and 2-10 for the season. Olajuwon missed seven games early in the season because of an irregular heart beat.

"I'm 91 or 90 percent ready to play," Olajuwon said. "I have to use my common sense. I'm not 100 percent but I've played with pain before. The risk of injury is slight."

Olajuwon talked as if a trade to another team were assured but he said he'd rather talk about returning to play.

"We have all summer to talk about that (trade)," Olajuwon said. "Right now my obligation is to finish the season. I owe it to my teammates and the city so I'm coming back to do my best.

"I love the city. I plan to come and visit the city after the season."

Tyson refuses to eat in prison

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Mike Tyson has refused to eat in prison, and he faces disciplinary action for giving other inmates his autograph, Indiana correctional officials said Monday.

The former heavyweight champion also declined Monday to take part in an assessment of his educational background, officials said. The assessment is used to help determine where Tyson should be sent to complete his six-year prison sentence.

Tyson, 25, was sent to prison last Thursday after being sentenced on convictions for rape and criminal deviate conduct. He was found guilty of assaulting Desiree Washington, a Miss Black America beauty pageant contestant, in his Indianapolis hotel

TUESDAY, MARCH 31, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Keep an eagle eye on investments, especially those involving real estate. Early spring could find you busy with a home renovation project. Insist on quality materials and expert labor. Contacts made during a summer vacation can be used to boost business next October. Christmas should find you in a generous mood. Avoid going overboard. Pursue educational interests early in 1993. You have an important message to share.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: fashion designer Liz Claiborne, actress Shirley Jones, actors Richard Chamberlain and William Daniels.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Continue to assure a difficult young person of your affection and good intentions. Staying on your toes will help surge ahead of a competitor.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Any business mistakes made today could be not only costly but embarrassing. Certain people are very quick to pass judgment; be careful. Begin to gather income tax materials together.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Even if you have some doubts about the efficacy of your methods, you should not change them right now. They may have a delayed effect on boosting the bottom line. Wait and see.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Check to see that the books of a business are up to date. You need to know exactly how things stand. Loved ones are glad to go along with your entertainment plans.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): One thing leads to another. Those who took advantage of yesterday's fine opportunities can extract even greater benefits today. Loved ones may be waiting for you to express your wishes.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You have all the skills and information you need to turn out superlative work and boost your financial worth. Go over business contracts with a fine-toothed comb before signing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Spirits run high today. Constructive plans have an excellent chance of success. Make sure a collaborator shares your enthusiasm. A positive attitude helps attract you new allies.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Aim high when setting goals and persevere until you reach them. You should be obtaining better results for your efforts. Taking an objective view helps resolve a domestic dispute.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): What you want tomorrow or in the days to come may have to be arranged for now. It is never wise to wait until the last minute. Take a chance on romance tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A young relative may not realize that money does not grow on trees. The more assets you have, the better your chances of boosting your social prestige.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A brilliant idea comes from out of the blue. You know how to handle a service, health or romantic problem. Shun the limelight and go for the gold in business and investments.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Letting things slide at work would be a mistake. On the off chance that you have been misinformed, move cautiously in a delicate personnel matter. A telephone call or letter brings welcome news.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are sociable, multitalented and interested in almost everything. Parents can expect these busy offspring to flit from one activity to another. Encouraging these young Aries to learn self-discipline and perseverance will help them get the most out of life. Charismatic and generous, they will have many friends and admirers. Although they like to be of service to others, they never lose sight of their own needs.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	6 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♡

Combining more than one line of play requires careful planning. You must test the possibilities in the right order to make sure that all of them are available. This is a simple example of what we mean.

A straightforward auction lands you in six no trump. Despite the club weakness, the South hand is near maximum for that action and any other opening bid could lead to enormous problems later in the auction. With a balanced 17 points and no four-card major, North's leap to slam is eminently sensible.

After the lead of a heart there are 11 fast tricks. A 12th can be developed by two different finesses in the black suits: A normal finesse of the queen in spades, what the French call an impasse, or a lead up to the jack of clubs, the expasse.

Both have a 50 percent chance of success. However, that does not mean it makes no difference in which order you take them. Try the wrong one first and your chances of making the slam drop from 3-to-1 in your favor to even money.

Suppose you win the first trick in dummy and take the spade finesse. If it loses, you can no longer lead toward the jack of clubs—some defender will score the queen to set you—and have to hope for a singleton queen of clubs. However, if you lead a club toward the jack at trick two and East holds the queen, the slam is home. If West has the queen of clubs, you can still fall back on the spade finesse for your 12th trick.

Celebrities put their teddy bears on block for child safety project

NEW YORK — It will be a Who's Who in teddy bears. More than 130 people from the arts, journalism, sports, fashion and politics have donated signed bears to the Greenwich House Children's Safety Project for its Celebrity Teddy Auction next Saturday.

A giant white teddy from Bill Cosby has drawings by Mr. Cosby on its paws and mouth. Donna Karan's sleek white bear is dressed in a black and gold fantasy outfit.

A classic brown bear from Andrew Vachss brandishes the first issue of Vachss' new Hard Looks comic book. Barbara Bush's bear clasps an invitation to the inauguration of President Bush.

Other celebrity bears were donated by Woody Allen, Robert De Niro, Ellen Barkin, Spike Lee, Diane Sawyer, Oprah Winfrey, Edward I. Koch, Magic Johnson, Sid Fernandez and most of the Mets' lineup, Arlo Guthrie and the members of Guns 'N' Roses.

Saturday, the biggest bear of them all, standing 8 feet tall plus top hat, will be posted in front of Greenwich House in New York to welcome people to a 2 p.m. marionette show, "A Tribute to Broadway."

HAMPTON, Va. — Hammer, who turned 30 on Monday, opens his 135-city "Too Legit To Quit" concert tour at the Hampton Coliseum on Wednesday, and the rap music star says the show will be as legit as he is.

Hammer

"As you can see from rehearsal, this is not part live, or some live, it's all the way live," he said Sunday in his dressing room at the arena. "We've increased the quality of our sound and gotten away from a lot of the sampling, and gotten into the live thing."

Hammer said he ignores critics who say he has strayed from the hard-core street rapper sound.

"What's important to me are the people," he said. "I couldn't care less what my peers think. They're trying to get where I am. But the people and I have a very, very good and positive relationship. We have a love between us, and that's what's important to me."

Crews began setting up for Hammer's rehearsals and the opening of his six-month international tour a week ago.

Included in the tons of equipment was a set of weights and a weight bench set up in the corner of Hammer's dressing room. He pumps iron two hours and runs six miles a day to stay in shape for his high-energy shows.

MUNICH, Germany — Pittsburgh Symphony conductor Lorin Maazel will become chief conductor of the Bavarian state radio orchestra starting next year, a spokesman for the station said Monday.

Maazel agreed last week to take over the Munich-based orchestra for four years starting Sept. 1, 1993, when the new concert season begins, said the spokesman, Rainer Tief.

Maazel, 62, is to replace British conductor Sir Colin Davis, 64, who has been with the orchestra for 10 years and will continue to appear as a guest conductor.

The Bavarian radio orchestra said its 114 members had "unanimously and with no abstentions" approved hiring Maazel.

Maazel has been conductor of the Pittsburgh Symphony since 1984.

"I am honored and flattered to be asked to guide one of the world's elite orchestras," Maazel said in a statement.

In taking the Munich appointment, Maazel is returning to the country where he enjoyed some of his early international successes. In 1960, he became the first American to conduct "Lohengrin" at the Bayreuth Music Festival in Germany.

LOS ANGELES — Jane Fonda, Faye Dunaway, Cybill Shepherd and Morgan Fairchild will travel to Washington, D.C., next week for the second National Pro-Choice March in support of abortion rights.

Organized by the Hollywood Women's Political Committee, the celebrity contingent for the April 5 march also includes actress Christine Lahti, "Thelma & Louise" screenwriter Callie Khouri and comedian Buck Henry.

Three years ago, a similar Hollywood delegation led an abortion rights march sparked by the U.S. Supreme Court's decision in a Missouri case that gave greater abortion regulation powers to individual states.

NEW YORK — George Michael, who's already given proceeds from his hit remake of "Don't Let the Sun Go Down on Me" to AIDS charities, has donated three new songs for an AIDS fund-raising album titled "Red, Hot and Dance."

The three tracks, "Too Funky," "Happy" and "Do You Really Want to Know," had originally been recorded for Michael's upcoming new album, said his publicist, Garvey Rich.

Michael opted to release them instead on the follow-up to the "Red, Hot and Blue" album, which featured artists like U2 covering Cole Porter songs.

All proceeds from sales of the albums go to AIDS awareness and research groups throughout the world. Remixes of already released songs by Madonna, Seal and PM Dawn will also appear on the "Red, Hot and Dance" album.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, MARCH 31, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Keep an eagle eye on investments, especially those involving real estate. Early spring could find you busy with a home renovation project. Insist on quality materials and expert labor. Contacts made during a summer vacation can be used to boost business next October. Christmas should find you in a generous mood. Avoid going overboard. Pursue educational interests early in 1993. You have an important message to share.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: fashion designer Liz Claiborne, actress Shirley Jones, actors Richard Chamberlain and William Daniels.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Continue to assure a difficult young person of your affection and good intentions. Staying on your toes will help surge ahead of a competitor.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Any business mistakes made today could be not only costly but embarrassing. Certain people are very quick to pass judgment; be careful. Begin to gather income tax materials together.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Even if you have some doubts about the efficacy of your methods, you should not change them right now. They may have a delayed effect on boosting the bottom line. Wait and see.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Check to see that the books of a business are up to date. You need to know exactly how things stand. Loved ones are glad to go along with your entertainment plans.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): One thing leads to another. Those who took advantage of yesterday's fine opportunities can extract even greater benefits today. Loved ones may be waiting for you to express your wishes.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You have all the skills and information you need to turn out superlative work and boost your financial worth. Go over business contracts with a fine-toothed comb before signing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Spirits run high today. Constructive plans have an excellent chance of success. Make sure a collaborator shares your enthusiasm. A positive attitude helps attract you new allies.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Aim high when setting goals and persevere until you reach them. You should be obtaining better results for your efforts. Taking an objective view helps resolve a domestic dispute.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): What you want tomorrow or in the days to come may have to be arranged for now. It is never wise to wait until the last minute. Take a chance on romance tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A young relative may not realize that money does not grow on trees. The more assets you have, the better your chances of boosting your social prestige.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A brilliant idea comes from out of the blue. You know how to handle a service, health or romantic problem. Shun the limelight and go for the gold in business and investments.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Letting things slide at work would be a mistake. On the off chance that you have been misinformed, move cautiously in a delicate personnel matter. A telephone call or letter brings welcome news.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are sociable, multitalented and interested in almost everything. Parents can expect these busy offspring to flit from one activity to another. Encouraging these young Aries to learn self-discipline and perseverance will help them get the most out of life. Charismatic and generous, they will have many friends and admirers. Although they like to be of service to others, they never lose sight of their own needs.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	6 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♡

Combining more than one line of play requires careful planning. You must test the possibilities in the right order to make sure that all of them are available. This is a simple example of what we mean.

A straightforward auction lands you in six no trump. Despite the club weakness, the South hand is near maximum for that action and any other opening bid could lead to enormous problems later in the auction. With a balanced 17 points and no four-card major, North's leap to slam is eminently sensible.

After the lead of a heart there are 11 fast tricks. A 12th can be developed by two different finesses in the black suits: A normal finesse of the queen in spades, what the French call an impasse, or a lead up to the jack of clubs, the expasse.

Both have a 50 percent chance of success. However, that does not mean it makes no difference in which order you take them. Try the wrong one first and your chances of making the slam drop from 3-to-1 in your favor to even money.

Suppose you win the first trick in dummy and take the spade finesse. If it loses, you can no longer lead toward the jack of clubs—some defender will score the queen to set you—and have to hope for a singleton queen of clubs. However, if you lead a club toward the jack at trick two and East holds the queen, the slam is home. If West has the queen of clubs, you can still fall back on the spade finesse for your 12th trick.

Celebrities put their teddy bears on block for child safety project

NEW YORK — It will be a Who's Who in teddy bears. More than 130 people from the arts, journalism, sports, fashion and politics have donated signed bears to the Greenwich House Children's Safety Project for its Celebrity Teddy Auction next Saturday.

A giant white teddy from Bill Cosby has drawings by Mr. Cosby on its paws and mouth. Donna Karan's sleek white bear is dressed in a black and gold fantasy outfit.

A classic brown bear from Andrew Vachss brandishes the first issue of Vachss' new Hard Looks comic book. Barbara Bush's bear clasps an invitation to the inauguration of President Bush.

Other celebrity bears were donated by Woody Allen, Robert De Niro, Ellen Barkin, Spike Lee, Diane Sawyer, Oprah Winfrey, Edward I. Koch, Magic Johnson, Sid Fernandez and most of the Mets' lineup, Arlo Guthrie and the members of Guns 'N' Roses.

Saturday, the biggest bear of them all, standing 8 feet tall plus top hat, will be posted in front of Greenwich House in New York to welcome people to a 2 p.m. marionette show, "A Tribute to Broadway."

HAMPTON, Va. — Hammer, who turned 30 on Monday, opens his 135-city "Too Legit To Quit" concert tour at the Hampton Coliseum on Wednesday, and the rap music star says the show will be as legit as he is.

Hammer

"As you can see from rehearsal, this is not part live, or some live, it's all the way live," he said Sunday in his dressing room at the arena. "We've increased the quality of our sound and gotten away from a lot of the sampling, and gotten into the live thing."

Hammer said he ignores critics who say he has strayed from the hard-core street rapper sound.

"What's important to me are the people," he said. "I couldn't care less what my peers think. They're trying to get where I am. But the people and I have a very, very good and positive relationship. We have a love between us, and that's what's important to me."

Crews began setting up for Hammer's rehearsals and the opening of his six-month international tour a week ago.

Included in the tons of equipment was a set of weights and a weight bench set up in the corner of Hammer's dressing room. He pumps iron two hours and runs six miles a day to stay in shape for his high-energy shows.

MUNICH, Germany — Pittsburgh Symphony conductor Lorin Maazel will become chief conductor of the Bavarian state radio orchestra starting next year, a spokesman for the station said Monday.

Maazel agreed last week to take over the Munich-based orchestra for four years starting Sept. 1, 1993, when the new concert season begins, said the spokesman, Rainer Tief.

Maazel, 62, is to replace British conductor Sir Colin Davis, 64, who has been with the orchestra for 10 years and will continue to appear as a guest conductor.

The Bavarian radio orchestra said its 114 members had "unanimously and with no abstentions" approved hiring Maazel.

Maazel has been conductor of the Pittsburgh Symphony since 1984.

"I am honored and flattered to be asked to guide one of the world's elite orchestras," Maazel said in a statement.

In taking the Munich appointment, Maazel is returning to the country where he enjoyed some of his early international successes. In 1960, he became the first American to conduct "Lohengrin" at the Bayreuth Music Festival in Germany.

LOS ANGELES — Jane Fonda, Faye Dunaway, Cybill Shepherd and Morgan Fairchild will travel to Washington, D.C., next week for the second National Pro-Choice March in support of abortion rights.

Organized by the Hollywood Women's Political Committee, the celebrity contingent for the April 5 march also includes actress Christine Lahti, "Thelma & Louise" screenwriter Callie Khouri and comedian Buck Henry.

Three years ago, a similar Hollywood delegation led an abortion rights march sparked by the U.S. Supreme Court's decision in a Missouri case that gave greater abortion regulation powers to individual states.

NEW YORK — George Michael, who's already given proceeds from his hit remake of "Don't Let the Sun Go Down on Me" to AIDS charities, has donated three new songs for an AIDS fund-raising album titled "Red, Hot and Dance."

The three tracks, "Too Funky," "Happy" and "Do You Really Want to Know," had originally been recorded for Michael's upcoming new album, said his publicist, Garvey Rich.

Michael opted to release them instead on the follow-up to the "Red, Hot and Blue" album, which featured artists like U2 covering Cole Porter songs.

All proceeds from sales of the albums go to AIDS awareness and research groups throughout the world. Remixes of already released songs by Madonna, Seal and PM Dawn will also appear on the "Red, Hot and Dance" album.

Prices gain

NEW YORK — Crude oil prices rose slightly Monday in hesitant trading focused on whether Iraq would be permitted to resume oil sales and whether sanctions would be imposed on Libya.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in May settled at $19.25 per barrel, up 9 cents, on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

The change prompted local crude purchasers to change their posted price. Scurlock Permian and Navajo Refining raised their price 25 cents to $18 while Phillips raised its pricd 10 cents to $18.50.

Elsewhere, natural gas prices were mixed, with contracts for delivery in May settling at $1.322 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 0.6 cent.

At the New York Mercantile Exchange, lower-grade sour crude for delivery in May settled at $16.65 per barrel, up 21 cents.

T-bills mixed

WASHINGTON — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities were mixed in Monday's auction.

The Treasury Department sold $11.4 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 4.08 percent, unchanged from last week. Another $11.4 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 4.19 percent, down from 4.27 percent last week.

The three-month bill rate was the lowest since they sold for 4.02 percent on March 9. The six-month bill rate was the lowest since they averaged 4.13 percent, also on March 9.

Dollar gains

NEW YORK — The dollar rose against all major foreign currencies on Monday except the Japanese yen, which was supported by the upcoming release of new government spending plans. Gold prices fell.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell 0.92 yen to a closing 132.93 yen.

In London, the British pound fell to $1.7320 from $1.7385 late Friday.

Stocks higher

NEW YORK — Prices were mixed on Wall Street Monday, unable to stage much of a recovery from Friday's sharp drop.

The Dow Jones industrial average was up for much of the session, then gave up ground late in the afternoon before finishing 3.80 points higher at 3,235.24. On Friday, the Dow fell 36.23 points.

Declining issues outnumbered advancers by about 9 to 7 Monday as the broader market stayed weak.

Crunch may plow Texas farmers under

Tight credit policies, lagging action on loans becomes 'hangman's noose'

By Worth Wren
N.Y. Times News Service

It must be springtime in Texas, because thousands of farmers are once again facing what has become another occupational hazard and rite of passage: the perennial farm credit crunch.

But given a 15-month string of weather-generated hassles and losses almost statewide, tight commercial lending policies, and lagging action on federal farm loans, this year's crunch has evolved into something akin to a hangman's noose.

And it's threatening to snap on at least a few thousand Texans.

They've found their 1992 crop-production loan applications at banks and other lenders locked into some level of limbo — from delayed to uncertain or rejected. That's a consensus view of farmers, lenders, politicians and agricultural analysts who were contacted last week.

The processing delays "are just totally unacceptable" on Texans' loan applications at the Farmers Home Administration, the farmers' lender of last resort, said U.S. Rep. Kika de la Garza, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee.

Last week, well into the season when Texas farmers would normally be planting or preparing to plant, the Farmers Home Administration was still processing more than 68 percent of the 2,277 Texas-originated applications for direct federally insured farm loans, de la Garza said.

The agency, an arm of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, was also still processing more than 58 percent of the 793 Texans' applications for federally guaranteed farm loans made by Texas banks and production credit associations, he said.

Without the loans, most of those farmers can't put a crop in the fields.

"This puts the average farmer (applicant) in a delicate situation at a critical time," de la Garza said.

Even Texas' most-efficient farmers are seeing their profits and farm equities erode from the lingering rainfall since October, tougher-to-kill insects, high production costs, mostly low crop prices and lack of affordable comprehensive crop insurance, said Carl Anderson, an economist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

And because of the weather and-or tighter lending limits at traditional farm credit sources, most have been repeatedly delayed on preparing their land for spring planting, Anderson said.

For too many farmers, crucial operating loans will arrive after most of the spring-planted grain crops should have been in the ground to minimize the maturing crops' exposure to summer heat, drought, insects, hail or other risks and to maximize potential yields, said Johnny Glass, 39,a Mansfield grain and cotton farmer.

Brave new TV: crisper, clearer, expensive

■ 'It's such a strong and sharp picture, it can sometimes be startlingly real — almost beyond real,' official says.

By Diane Duston
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's television window on the world is about to become so clear it may be jarring.

Truer colors. Crisper images. Wider view. Sharper sound. Pictures, boosters say, as fine as the highest quality still photography art book, as engaging as the movies, as realistic as the view out the door.

It's high-definition television, HDTV for short.

Sales of the sets could begin by 1995, officials say. But first, the government has to decide which of five systems will get the license. And the cost of a set has to come way, way down.

"It's such a strong and sharp picture, it can sometimes be startlingly real, almost beyond real," said Peter Fannon, executive director at the Advance Television Test Center in Alexandria, Va.

"As people are able to, they are going to want to buy it," said Alfred Sikes, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission.

Right now, the television sets that receive the signal cost about $30,000 each. But marketing specialists say that Americans would begin to buy if the price dropped to $5,000. Eventually, it would come down much further.

The FCC hopes to grant a license by early 1994. It will go to one of five systems (or a combination) now being tested at the Alexandria center.

Picture this: Television coverage of a football game that puts you in 50-yard-line seats with a full view of the field and the ability to see the expression on the face of the referee and the stitching on the football, with sound that's as clear as a compact disc.

News coverage of war, street crime, accidents or animals fighting may seem almost too realistic to some. But for educational purposes — teaching medicine, for example — the system should upgrade television's value.

"The capability is there to give an accurate rendition of life," said Matthew Miller, vice president of technology for General Instrument Corp., which worked with the Massachusetts Institute of Technology to develop one of the systems competing for the license.

Fed to hold line on rates, analysts say

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve, which hasn't cut interest rates since December, will hold to that course in meetings this week despite pressure from the Bush administration to do more to bolster the economy, private analysts predicted Monday.

If that view is correct, it would mean that interest rates, including the benchmark prime rate and mortgage lending rates, have probably seen their lows for this year.

But even if the Fed's credit easing days are over for now, analysts were not looking for rates to head sharply higher, given the absence of any inflationary pressures and the belief that the upcoming economic recovery will be one of the weakest on record.

The Fed's top policy-making group, the Federal Open Market Committee, will meet behind closed doors on Tuesday. The FOMC, composed of the central bank's seven-member board in Washington and five of the Fed's 12 regional bank presidents, meets eight times a year to map monetary strategy.

The central bank last cut interest rates on Dec. 20 when it slashed its discount rate, the interest it charges for direct bank loans, to a 27-year-low of 3.5 percent and reduced its target for the federal funds rate, the interest that banks charge each other, to 4 percent.

2 Keating co-defendants agree to $87 million deal

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — An accounting and a law firm accused with convicted S&L chief Charles Keating in a federal civil fraud lawsuit agreed in mid-trial to pay a total of $87 million, spokesmen said Monday.

The settlements leave seven defendants, including Keating, who is not putting on an active defense.

The accounting firm Ernst & Young settled for $63 million and the international law firm Jones, Day, Reavis & Pogue will pay $24 million to plaintiffs in the class-action lawsuit, the companies said.

Also Monday, one of the "Keating Five," Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., testified that Keating befriended him in 1982.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Bank's procedures cost CD holder interest

By Bill Doyle

Q: After receiving a notice from my bank that my individual retirement account certificate of deposit was due to mature, I phoned several other banks and found one where I wanted to place the money in another IRA CD.

Doyle

I then called the first bank to learn how to complete the transfer. I was told I needed to go to that bank on the day the CD matured and complete a few forms, and a check for the CD's maturity amount would be mailed to me.

I asked if I could go to the bank a few days early so that I could receive the check on the CD's maturity date. The teller and the department manager said it is the bank's policy to send the check by mail.

As a result, I lost three days' interest. Did the bank handle things correctly?

A: Absolutely not. The money should have been available to you the very day the CD matured. If you had gone to the bank and asked for it, you should have been allowed to walk out with the check in hand.

Technically, the bank might have made you wait until the close of business on the CD's maturity date before handing over the check. But it had no right to insist on mailing it.

This is just one of all too many examples of a bank profiting on the "float" – the use of a customer's money without paying interest.

My advice is to go back to the bank and request payment of interest for those three days. Chances are you won't be successful. However, if you raise a fuss – and do some desk-pounding – you might be.

Q: On Feb. 1, 1991, my wife rolled over a CD with a maturity value of $3,011.50 into a new CD. So far, so good.

The bank statement (copy enclosed) we received Jan. 6 showed the $3,011.50 CD purchase. It also listed interest earned on that CD for 1991 as $225.10, making the "ending balance" $3,236.60.

However, the statement showed $240.90 as "reported to the Internal Revenue Service." I completely disagreed with this and told the bank people so. Nevertheless, they proceeded to put $240.90 on the Form 1099-INT sent to the IRS and to me.

What should I do?

A: Insist that the bank issue a corrected 1099. On your income tax return list $225.10 – the correct number – as the amount of interest on that CD. Enclose a note explaining what happened and copies of both the original 1099 and the corrected version.

Continue your disagreement about this with the bank by letting the people there know you caught their error. The copy of the statement you sent me proves you are right.

You might get some flack from the IRS, which feeds 1099s and other information returns into computers to check against amounts taxpayers report on their returns.

I had a similar problem a few years ago, when a corrected 1099 didn't reach the IRS before the revenooers' computers flagged my return. But things were soon squared away when I produced the corrected 1099 and a letter from the payer apologizing for its mistake.

Q: I am 70 years old, with no mortgage or other large debts. My monthly income includes $1,000 from a pension and $700 from Social Security. With my lifestyle, I can live on that.

I have two jumbo CDs currently paying about $1,000 monthly interest. I am thinking of investing approximately $75,000 in bonds or aggressive growth stocks. Would that be a wise move? I would have no way to recover any principal I might lose.

A: It would be a very unwise more, for just the reason you cite. Even though the CDs give you a comfortable cash cushion, you are in no financial position to take chances. Aggressive growth stocks are very risky. Even with highly rated bonds, you can lose money if you have to redeem the bonds before they mature and are paid off at face value.

Farmers switch to laughter as protest

BANGALORE, India (AP) — When angry protests don't work, try laughter.

That's what 20,000 farmers did for two hours last week in this southern capital to express their scorn for the state government.

"We want to laugh this government out," said M.D. Nanjundaswamy, leader of the Karnataka Farmers Association as supporters howled and guffawed outside the state legislature building.

The farmers' association often holds violent rallies to protest policies it considers anti-rural.

Protesters waved green towels and shouted slogans demanding the Karnataka government resign for its alleged corrupt practices, including land scandals.

As faces started to hurt from the non-stop effort, many farmers began to whistle. Others simply hooted.

About 2,000 armed policemen did not intervene.

"There's no law against laughing," said Police Commissioner R. Ramalingam.

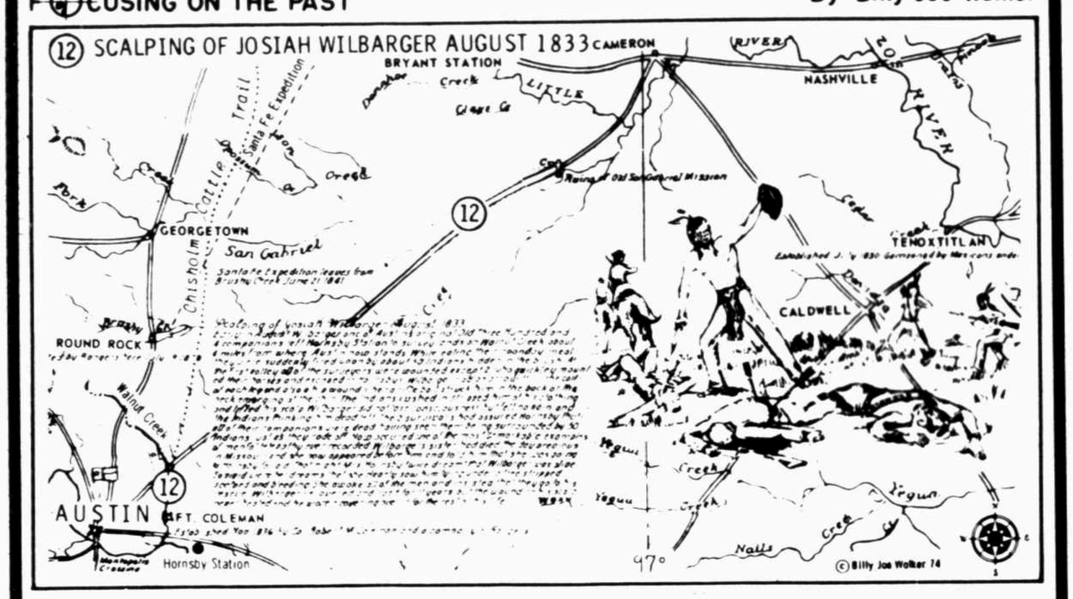
FOCUSING ON THE PAST

By: Billy Joe Walker



SCALPING OF JOSIAH WILBARGER, AUG. 1833. Wilbarger and four companions, while surveying lands near Walnut Creek, were attacked by Indians. Two surveyors escaped and reported back at Hornsby Station that their companions were killed. However, men were sent back that night and Wilbarger was found to be alive. Although the Indians had lifted his scalp, he recovered and lived eleven more years.
