It's Cherry Blossom Time Again In Capital

This picture shows the capitol with a tree nearby laden with blossoms. All the trees are expected to be in full bloom by the time of the yearly festival.

April 19-21, at which Miss Eleanor Roosevelt, daughter of the assistant secretary of the navy, will be queen.

LINDY SUBMITS TO QUESTIONING

WASHINGTON, April 14. (U.P.)—Col. Lindbergh submitted to secret questioning in the exhibition with the senate air mail inquiry at the time of his visit to Washington last month, the United Press learned today.

The questioning concerned expansion of certain features of the aviator's testimony before the senate committee.

Cotton Flat Booth Attracts Interest

The Cotton Flat booth attracted considerable attention at the annual county school fair, visitors finding the work done by students of the one-teacher school exceptional in many respects.

The booth offered not only well prepared scholastic exhibits, but manual training projects. Students even sent to the exhibit lantern ropes woven by themselves. No one could tell the rope from that bought at Midland stores.

Other booths at the fair were arranged by Prairie Lee and Stokes, the former a three- and the latter a two-teacher school.

Miss Marguerite Carpenter, teacher at Cotton Flat, is in charge of nine grades.

Mabee and Party Land in Safety

SAN ANTONIO, April 14.—Lost five hours in starless skies after taking off from Tyler en route to Houston late Thursday, J. E. Mabee, of Tulsa, and a party of four landed safely in their cabin plane at Kelly field shortly before midnight with their fuel tanks almost empty.

Word of the air party's harrowing experience was related at the field Friday morning.

J. W. Welborn was piloting the plane when it became lost in the unsettled weather, which obscured guiding stars and beacon lights on the ground, it was reported.

The plane had sped aimlessly for about five hours when the pilot sighted Kelly field and brought the ship down safely about 11:20 p. m. The party planned to continue the trip to Houston Friday.

Mabee is well known at Midland, flying here occasionally to visit W. M. Pyle, business associate, and friends. His plane is one of the latest Lockheed-Vega models, one of the swiftest commercial models manufactured.

McCAMEY MAKES GREAT PREPARATION FOR CELEBRATION ON ANNIVERSARY

BY BILL COLLINS
McCamey, April 14.—On Friday and Saturday, April 27 and 28, the city of McCamey will celebrate her seventh birthday anniversary with a grand celebration, to which the entire citizenship of West Texas is cordially invited. This will mark the second staging of the annual event.

Seven years ago this month, this city was organized, incorporated and received its charter, although the town had really been started more than a year before the charter was received. Great strides have been made in improving the town since that time, and during seven or eight years, the city has been transformed from an oil boom town into a thriving and well established West Texas city.

The celebration is being sponsored by the McCamey business men's league, of which Earl C. Bone is the president. Following is a list of the chairmen of the various committees: C. C. Gerding, refreshments; Harry Frieden, finance; C. B. Coulter, entertainment; Bill Collins, publicity; and Sam Tanner, rodeo and stock show.

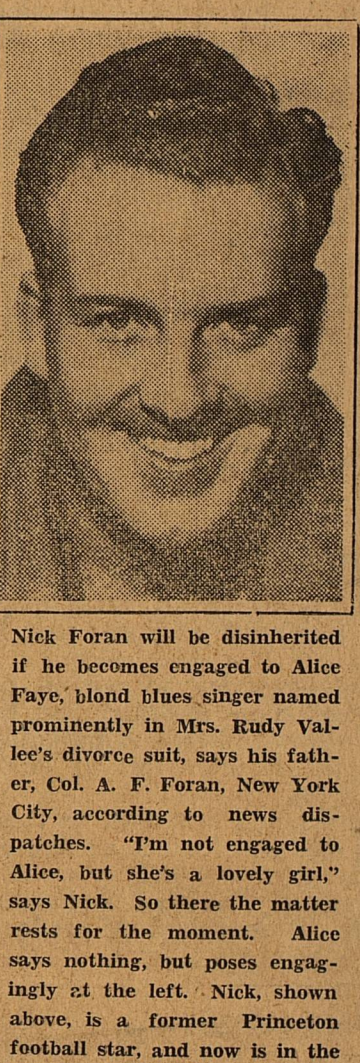

Efforts are being made to make this the largest and most successful affair of its kind ever staged in West Texas, and a varied assortment of entertainment, displays, amusements and other features to please the most exacting are being arranged.

A giant street carnival, comprising more than 50 shows, concessions and riding devices, a banner rodeo free barbecue, ball games, stock and poultry show, automobile show, parades, band concerts, dances and many other entertaining and educational features are being arranged.

It is planned to make the rodeo one of the largest and best ever staged in this section. Sam R. Tanner, local ranchman, and E. Pardee, nationally known rodeo performer, who has participated in practically every large rodeo staged in the United States and having won first money at each of them at some time or other, are in charge of the rodeo events. The rodeo will be staged at the Tanner ranch immediately west of the city. It is planned to continue the rodeo through Sunday, April 29. The events will include calf roping, team roping, wild cow milking, bronc riding, steer riding, and bull dogging. It is also planning to have several trick and fancy riders here for the affair.

With the exception of the roping, (See ANNIVERSARY, page 6)

'Forget It,' Is Father's Warning

Nick Foran will be disinherited if he becomes engaged to Alice Faye, blond blues singer named prominently in Mrs. Rudy Vallee's divorce suit, says his father, Col. A. F. Foran, New York City, according to news dispatches. "I'm not engaged to Alice, but she's a lovely girl," says Nick. So there the matter rests for the moment. Alice says nothing, but poses engagingly at the left. Nick, shown above, is a former Princeton football star, and now is in the films in Hollywood.

JOHN CITIZEN HOLDS KEY TO RECOVERY

If all the excess verbiage which has been spouted forth concerning the "forgotten man" could be laid end to end, it would reach from here to complete futility. Nevertheless, it is worth while to point out that a slow shift in emphasis now taking place in Washington is taking at least one forgotten man out of his former obscurity and making him the cock of the wald.

This gentleman is none other than the consumer himself—old John Citizen, who steps up to the counter, pays his money, and goes home with his groceries.

In the new concern which Washington is displaying over his welfare, it is possible to read a high amount of significance.

For it is only by keying its efforts on the welfare of the ultimate consumer that the New Deal, or any other kind of deal, really can reap the fruitfulness which this mass production era makes possible.

All of which is just another way of saying that it doesn't do much good to make things unless the chap you plan to sell them to is able to buy them.

You can increase the farmer's income, for instance, as fast as you please; if the prices of the things he has to buy go up at the same rate, he's right where he started—which, in this particular case, happens to be somewhere to the south-southeast of the eight ball.

The same thing is true of the laborer and his wage, of the professional man and his salary, of the investor and his dividends.

Now the consumer has many guises. He can, in his other incarnations, be a steel puddler or a lawyer, a school teacher or a bricklayer, a loom tender or an elevator operator. It is his guise as the purchaser of goods that is important.

Unless some way is found by which he can in the future buy more extensively and more steadily than he has in the past, our recovery effort will look remarkably like the old game of trying to life one's self by one's bootstraps.

His importance will increase, not diminish, as time passes. For this, as has been said so often, is an age of plenty, not an age of scarcity.

We can produce at a rate unparalleled in human history. Our one great job is to get the things we produce into the hands of the people who want them.

A FAMOUS FAIR PASSES

Sentimental ties between the United States and England, despite the ineffable bosh of magazine writers and after-dinner speakers, are extremely strong; and one thing in which Americans are sure to display a good deal of interest is the slow passage from the contemporary scene of some of old England's most ancient traditions and customs.

An example is the pending abolition of the famous Stourbridge Fair, at Cambridge.

This fair dates back to the year 1211. In the Middle Ages it was one of the most famous fairs in the world, bringing merchants and travelers from all over Europe.

Milton mentions it in "Paradise Lost." King Henry VIII levied on the fair's profits, in 1539, to relieve his own financial stringency.

Now, according to the London Sunday Times, the fair may be abolished. It has no practical value, and it is neglected by the general public.

Another time-honored custom, left behind by the tide of modern affairs, seems about to disappear forever.

It's harder to find women comedians than men, says a Hollywood director. Be yourself, is man's motto.

The artist who created Little Lord Fauntleroy was found working for the CWA at $38 a week. If you ever have to wear one of those trick suits, you might wonder how that artist held out so long.

Six Named as Informants

Here are the five "brain trust" informants named by Dr. William A. Wirt, Gary, Ind., school superintendent, as the informants who led him to believe that certain planned a revolution in the United States. What Has Happened

Tommy is not his usual reckless self at the house party. One night he comes on Mary and recognizes her despair. He is so gentle that she scarcely realizes it, she is in his arms. The hall catches fire and when the alarm is given, Tommy is discovered in her room. Lord Rexford sends Mary a penitential wire, asking her to join him in St. Moritz and she goes at once.

CHAPTER XI

Mary had meant it when she had told Tommy she was going to put a definite finish to everything between her and Philip. She was going to tell him the truth—that what he had believed when it was not so, was now a fact. She cared for him too much to deceive him. It would hurt him—but it was better to have the wound now, a quick, decisive one, than later.

She scarcely spoke to Celeste on the long trip. All her thought, all her being was intent on what she must say to Philip. There would be no hesitation. As soon as they were alone, before he could weaken her resolution, she would tell him everything. Then they would separate—this time, it would be forever.

Her heart faltered when she saw him standing on the station, eagerly looking when her train pulled in. He looked so expectant, so happy. But she decided herself against that look. She wished they could have met somewhere else. The first vacation they had ever had together had been in St. Moritz. They had laughed and called it their second honeymoon. He had engaged the same suite at the hotel. He kept recalling tender and amusing things which had happened as they drove away from the station.

"I came at once," Mary said, "because I have something to say to you that I couldn't write—that leigh—she is so excited she can scarcely speak. She said she had to speak to you.

It was horrible news that Aunt Hetty had for Mary. Tommy had been drinking since she left. He was in one of his half-insane moods. He insisted he was going to charter a plane and fly to St. Moritz. Neither she nor Erskine knew where he was. They would make every effort to keep him in London, but she felt Mary should be warned.

Mary leaned against the wall a moment for support. She must brace herself to face Philip, to make him listen to her. Then she must leave at once. If Tommy carried out his mad threat, there was nothing so terrible it might not happen. She must get Philip to leave, on some pretext. If those two men met now, there might be murder.

"Philip," she said sternly when she returned to him. "the last time we saw each other you said I'd failed you—and our marriage. I hadn't—I swear the love I have had for you—I hadn't, but—"

"Mary, I know it. I have told you that. Why must you torture us both by going back to that? While I've been here alone, I've stood out on that balcony, I've spoken to you into the night, telling me you'd hear it, wherever you were, and come to me. It is not easy for me to talk of my feelings—but last night, when I could not sleep, the hours seemed endless until you would be here. I wrote out all my heart. Here are the things I haven't been able to say. Will you read it, Mary my own?"

He handed her some papers he had taken from his pocket. Then humbly, but also with a rare dignity, he turned away from her and walked to the balcony, looking out on the beautiful white landscape. She held the papers for a moment in shaking hands. Then slowly, as if it were written in some only half-known language, she read what Philip had written from his heart. When she had finished, she rose and went toward him. He turned and they faced each other.

"I didn't know," she said.

"Didn't know what?"

"That you loved me like this. Oh what a pity that things got so dark."

"We are leaving the darkness behind, Mary. We will be out in the radiant light if you say one thing, just one thing to me. Tell me—do you love me?"

"Before God, I do," she said and her face was that of one taking a vow before the high altar.

She had, indeed, made a vow. She saw in a blinding light, that it would be cowardly, a treacherous lie to tell Philip the truth. They loved each other. They belonged to each other. She would do anything in the world for him—she would die if necessary. The one thing she would not do—would never do—was to kill the ecstasy in his heart.

The Town Quack

(Reserves the right to "quack" about everything without taking a stand on anything.)

In a round-about way, this clipping which is the property of Jim Tuttle found its way to my desk. It's all about the farmer working for his mule, but I believe before this year is over the mule will be working for the farmer. The clipping, from the Scottish Rite Bulletin, follows:

Over the hill rallied a man behind a mule drawing a plow. Said the man to the mule:

"Bill, you are a mule, the son of a jackass, and I am a man-made in the image of God. Yet here we work, hitched together year in and year out. I often wonder if you work for me or if I work for you. Verily, I think it a partnership between a mule and a fool, for surely I work as hard as you, if not harder. Plowing or cultivating we cover the same distance, but you go it on four legs and I on two. I, therefore, do twice as much work per leg as you do.

"Soon we'll be preparing for a corn crop. When the crop is harvested I give one-third to the land-lord for being so kind as to let me use this small speck of God's universe. One-third goes to you, and the balance is mine. You consume all of your portion with the exception of the cobs, while I divide mine among seven children, six hens, two ducks and a barker. If we both need shoes, you get 'em. Bill, you are getting the best of me, and I ask you, is it fair for a mule, the son of a jackass, to swindle a man, the son of Creation—out of his substance?"

"Why, you only help to plow and cultivate the ground, and I alone must, out, shock and husk the corn. I have no other work, but the pasture fence and hee-haw at me.

"All fall and most of the winter the whole family, from Granny to the baby, picks cotton to help raise

The Reporter-Telegram Cooking School Starts Tuesday

Mrs. Ethyl Warren to Conduct Four-Day School to Be Held in the Yucca Theatre; All-Electric Appliances Are to Be Used

All is in readiness for the opening Tuesday morning of The Reporter-Telegram All-Electric cooking school, being held as a complement to women in Midland and surrounding communities.

Mrs. Ethyl Warren, ranking as one of the foremost authorities of America on food and home-making, will conduct the four-day classes in the Yucca theatre. Doors of the theatre will be opened at 9 o'clock and the noted home economist will begin her lecture and practical demonstration promptly at 9:30.

Mrs. Warren will work in a complete modern kitchen, electrically equipped, and will not only give recipes and directions for preparing food, but will actually prepare, cook and arrange each item for serving. "Dream Kitchen" is the name chosen by Mrs. Warren for her school, as she says, it is the dream of every woman to have a perfectly equipped kitchen.

What to cook in the summer will be the theme of the school and summer dishes will be featured in each lecture. Salads, new ways of preparing vegetables and foods that may be prepared with the least effort will be stressed. Honey, nutritious, every-day dishes will take on a new and colorful dress and new, interesting recipes will be demonstrated.

No housewife, who has any interest in her kitchen, whether she actually performs her own household tasks or merely supervises them, can not afford to miss this school.

Housekeeping today is as organized as a modern business office and combines the efficiency and economy and resourcefulness necessary to any other successful business. Mrs. Warren can show women how this is done in a speedy and pleasant way.

Immediately after the ceremony, the couple left for a brief visit at Abilene.

These Days Call For Picnics and Other Outings

BY CELESTE AND EMILY

These are the days to paraphrase the old army song and "Pack up your vittles in the old lunch basket!"

Call them picnic lunches or old-fashioned basket dinners and they will still be the answer to spring's urge to get out in the open.

An NEA service article suggests the following:

Your basket can contain anything you want. But given a good salad, sandwiches or crackers and cheese, some relish, a hot drink, fruit and some sweets, you are set to enjoy yourself. However, good planning is the secret of the successful outdoor meal. And good packing.

This year there are handsome cellophane envelopes that keep sandwiches, cookies or biscuits fresh as they come from the oven. Bigger envelopes can slip right over your dish of prepared salad and keep it in pristine appealing freshness, too. Moreover, they keep things from spilling, which is an advantage not to be overlooked.

Probably one of the most useful salads you can concoct is deviled eggs, with tomatoes and lettuce. Fix your eggs on one plate, your tomatoes and lettuce on another, carry your dressing in a sealed bottle and you are all set.

An excellent way to devil your eggs is the way they do them at the Horn o' Plenty, in Greenville, S. C.

Horn o' Plenty Deviled Eggs

Boil 10 fresh eggs, for 15 minutes. Place in cold water to chill. Shell carefully, split lengthwise and remove the yolks. Then smash the yolks with a fork with the following ingredients:

1-4 pound grated sharp cheese.

2 sweet pickles, chopped with some of the juice.

1-2 teaspoon dry mustard.

1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce.

Salt and pepper to taste, add a dash of cayenne, three drops of lemon juice and the juice of one lemon.

Mix these ingredients carefully with the egg yolks, which results in a soft paste.

The modern kitchen is so arranged that labors of the housewife have grown increasingly simple. This up-to-date room would seem entirely different from the old kitchen of Colonial and Civil war days. How the housewife managed to get along before the days of electric devices could not easily be explained.

The kitchen in the Colonial period was more than a room in which to cook the family's meals. It became a sitting room, where the family spun, knitted, dined and bathed. A brick oven and a huge fireplace were the only means of cooking.

Several improvements were made in the kitchen by the Civil war days. For instance, the room had a sink with a hand pump and a dipper, a wood stove and an oil lamp hung from the ceiling.

Far removed from either of these is the kitchen of today, which has a refrigerator, range, dishwasher, mixer, ventilator, and other electrically-operated time and labor-saving devices that make for convenience and efficiency. The next step in improving this kitchen will be dust proof metal and smooth enamel surfaces.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Are Sin, Disease, and Death Real?" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, April 15.

The Golden Text is: "I will restore health unto thee, and I will heal thee of thy wounds, saith the Lord" (Jeremiah 30:17).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death" (1 Corinthians 15:26).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "If the belief in death were obliterated, and the understanding obtained that there is no death, this would be a 'tree of life,' known by its fruits... When it is learned that disease cannot destroy life, and that morals are not saved from sin or sickness by death, this understanding will quicken into newness of life. It will master either a desire to die or a dread of the grave, and thus destroy the great fear that besets mortal existence" (page 426).

TO THE PUBLIC

For four days I will be away from my office attending the Texas Optometric Association Convention. During this Convention there will be advanced Graduate Clinical instruction in Analytical and Corrective Optometry. This Convention and Educational Congress will be conducted in Fort Worth April 16th, 17th, 18th and 19th.

The professional man of today who does not constantly attend advanced instruction in his work, cannot avoid slipping behind the times. The scope of knowledge in Optometry is widening so rapidly that being away, studying, is imperative.

The very base of knowledge has changed. Things considered proven once, are utterly discredited today. But eyes we once thought beyond our care -- we now make comfortable.

Children once hopelessly hampered in school -- now make their grades -- men and women unable to maintain their right place in life -- now hold their place!

This attendance at Graduate Instruction in Optometry is definitely for the advantage of my patients. When I am returned, I will be very happy to see you and tell you about the things that research has unearthed for us and for your benefit.

I will be again in my office April 20th. I look forward to a chat with you.

Sincerely,
J. P. INMAN

Leadership and Government Spending Bringing Recovery Writes Max Agress

EDITOR'S NOTE: "A united effort by all is imperative to complete recovery," writes Max Agress, vice president of the Texas Potash corporation, in sending the following article, one of a series, to The Reporter-Telegram. Other articles will follow.

BY MAX AGRESS

Under the leadership of the president and the enormous government spending we have been moving rapidly out of the depression. We must realize that the government made work which employed several millions of idle men and women thereby. Putting purchasing power in the pockets of these millions of workers, is justified only if American industry and capital will continue the wheels moving and accelerate their speed by rapid reemployment to a point where all able and willing to work have been placed back on their jobs on a basis of pay that will reestablish the full purchasing power of the industrial and farming population of our country. Cutting laboring hours to spread the work among a greater number of workers, unless the cut in hours of work does not cut the day's earning, only pauperizes the entire working population and shifts the burden of unemployment to the shoulders of the working population who are least able to carry the entire burden.

The working man should not be made to carry the load of unemployment; nor can this burden rest on the shoulders of the federal government indefinitely. At present the credit structure of the United States is supported by government credit. Government credit can only be maintained by taxation; and when taxation reaches the breaking point, government credit is no stronger than private credit which has no assets to support it. When the credit of a government is weakened, the entire credit structure of the country collapses, with the consequent panic of worthless money, ruinous, sudden poverty, internal strife, riots and rebellion.

To prevent such catastrophe, and to consolidate the wonderful gains already made in the march to recovery, the full cooperation of all industry, capital and labor is imperative and must be speedily given in order to continue the march of recovery, until the goal is reached. Then we can stop and begin a process of sorting. Those measures which are of permanent value to be retained and those of temporary expediency to be discarded finally, so as to improve our economic system to be truly democratic in application as well as in name.

COLT ERRORS ARE DECIDING FACTOR IN LOCALS' LOSS

BY JESS RODGERS

The Midland Colts, for the last two seasons known as Indians, lost their first tilt of the season when they went down before Odessa 12-2 in a practice tilt.

Although they made eight hits to 12 for Odessa, the locals' five errors were far more damaging than the four made by the visitors.

Bill Howard started for the Colts and, after retiring Odessa scoreless in the first, was raked for four hits and runs in the second and three tallies in the third before he was derelicted for Richter. Errors were the contributing cause of the runs in the second while Howard's inability to locate the plate ruined him in the third.

Richter finished the third, giving up one run, and retired at the end of the fifth after giving up two runs on a walk, error and passed ball, Rose taking the hill. He finished the game, giving up two runs in the sixth and retired the visitors scoreless the rest of the game.

Hanson pitched for Odessa and kept the local hits well scattered and both runs made by the Colts were made as a result of errors. The Colts go to Crane today for another practice scrimmage.

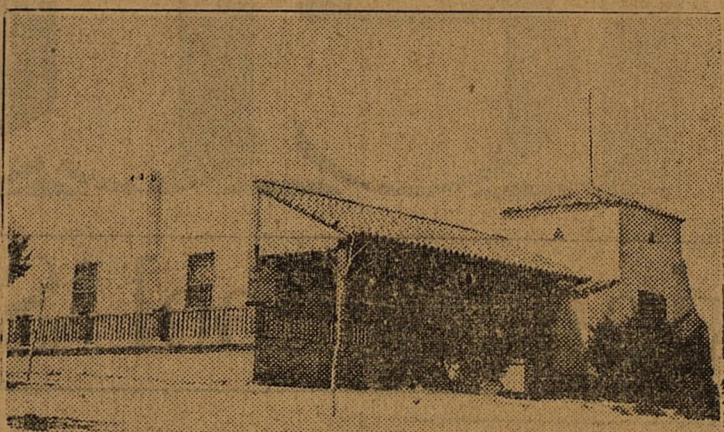

the secretary of agriculture in his recent pamphlet "America Must Choose Economic Nationalism or Internationalism." The pamphlet should be read by every American citizen. It tells in simple words the dilemma of our present economic conditions and outlines three ways out of the present crisis. The choices which it offers are, in a nutshell:

(1) National isolation-raising under strict regimentation only so much as we can consume at home and withdrawing from production anywhere from 40,000,000 to 100,000,000 acres;

(2) A revival of international trade, accepting in payment for our goods the goods of foreign buyers and lowering our tariff wall to make this possible;

(3) A middle ground, chosen as a matter of expediency, whereby only 25,000,000 acres of good land would be taken out of production and only one-half a billion dollars worth of foreign goods would be admitted. He leans, he says, to the international rather than the nationalist policy.

But he rightly urges that the whole problem, each course and its consequences, should be debated so fully and so generally that every

A new motion picture with Greta Garbo is automatically an event. She has been acclaimed by many as the leading actress of the screen, and her vehicles are so carefully spaced that it always seems an extremely long time since the last one. When a Garbo film is directed by Rouben Mamoulian, formerly of the Theatre Guild, the event seems of double importance. And when the picture is one whose dialogue has been composed by S. N. Beamman, author of last year's stage success, "Diaphany," then the event achieves a distinction almost without precedent. This picture is "Queen Christina," which will be shown today, Monday and Tuesday at the Yucca Theatre.

"Queen Christina" is remarkable in that it is a role chosen by Miss Garbo herself. The character of this brilliant, independent and eccentric regent of the middle seventeenth century is one that has always attracted the enigmatic actress, as much because she was of the same race as because her intelligence and passion for freedom were wholly modern in their quality. And Sweden at that period was an aggressive military power, whose martial mania Christina insisted on suppressing. Miss Garbo was interested, too, in conveying this pacifistic conviction of the queen.

citizen of the United States would be brought to understand just what is at stake. Surely this should be done, for a people that accepts without discussion whatever is proposed has no right to complain when the outcome is unfortunate. The American people have not yet lost the consciousness that the function of democratic government is the promotion and protection of individual liberty, that the state exists for the development and improvement of the people, and not the people for the maintenance of the state.

The primary duty of democratic government is to widen the sphere of individual freedom, to throw all safeguards around the citizen against the usurpation of his rights and freedom by any group or political party. In a great crisis which threatens the safety of the commonwealth (as it happened in the history of this republic), it becomes necessary to marshal the strength of the entire nation under the leadership of one man or group of men chosen and directed to exercise unbridled power, in order that the whole nation may march as a united whole toward the accomplishment of a certain goal, or to combat a common enemy. At such a time the individual rights and liberties of the citizen are merged into one central authority, in accordance with the provisions of law which the people have established for the protection of the state as a whole.

Ft. Worth to Have A Revolving Stage

FORT WORTH (UP)—A revolving stage, believed an innovation in amateur theatricals in Texas, will be introduced here by Blanchard McKee, well-known Fort Worth director and former director at Waco and Dallas.

The revolving stage, it is believed will be the only one in Texas. The nearest one to Texas, it is thought, is that of the Municipal opera in St. Louis, Mo.

Use of the revolving stage will eliminate delay between scenes. When a scene or act has ended, the stage is turned on an axis, immediately bringing the next scene already set on another sector of the stage, into play.

McKee is directing the Community theatre here, an independent organization which he created himself after leaving the Fort Worth Little theatre as director. As director of the Waco Little theatre in 1929 his play "Sun Up" was awarded the title of the best amateur production in Texas for that year. He came to Fort Worth in 1932 from Memphis, Tenn., where he directed amateur theatricals.

Folk-Lore Collector Long Lived in Austin

By GORDON K. SHEARER
AUSTIN, (U.P.)—John A. Lomax, official folk-lore collector for the library of congress, now touring the country gathering folk-songs, long lived in Austin. He was an active figure at the University of Texas both as student, faculty member and alumnus.
Probably his best collection, published as "Songs of the Cow Trails and Cattle Camps," is dedicated to his fellow residents of college days at the Phi Delta Theta chapter house at the University of Texas. His introduction names them and gives impressions of them. Lieut. Gov. Edgar F. Witt is memorialized as the spirit responsible for the building of the chapter house.
Songs in this Lomax collection and a previous one both antedate the now popular "Last Round-Up"—perhaps paved the way for its enthusiastic reception.
Lomax gives some of the verse writers occasion to wonder if they are so good after all. He prints their published versions and follows them with versions of the same theme as sung or recited about the camp fires on the range.
He frankly prefers the mouth-to-ear transmission.

Lowe and McLaglen Renew Comedy Scrap

In Film Riot, 'No More Women,' at Ritz

Even the bottom of the sea is not big enough to hold both Edmund Lowe and Victor McLaglen, those rivals of countless screen battles, who are showing today and tomorrow at the Ritz theatre in the Paramount picture "No More Women," a riotous saga of salvage divers, perhaps the most colorful offering of the team's career.

Divers by day and Romeo's by night, they clout and caress their way through a veritable cyclone of adventures and romance. It all begins when Eddie outsmarts Vic, given on a competing salvage tug, by recovering $20,000, in gold, from a submerged rum-runner.

Matters are not improved when the tug on which Vic works is inherited by a young and attractive girl, played by Sally Blane. Eddie likes her looks and promptly quits his boat to join her crew, causing Vic to be demoted in rank.

Even then one the fun is intense, with more than a sufficient number of sirens to give the rival divers cause for conflict; revealing, incidentally, that the title, "No More Women," is not to be taken literally.

Along with the comedy, the picture unfolds a thrill after thrill, climaxing in a desperate fight to life on the ocean bottom.

Sally Blane is eye-filling and capable in her role and Minna Gombell is always entertaining as a "friend" of the sailors who is interested principally in the insurance policies she holds on their lives.

Remaining character roles are filled by such established players as Christian Rub, Alphonzo Eulier, Tom Dugan, Harold Huber, William Franey, J. P. McGowan and Frank Moran.

Albert Rogell directed, and the picture's sustained continuity of entertainment is largely due to his efforts. Charles R. Rogers is the producer. The rugged vehicle was adapted to the screen by Delmer Daves and Lou Breslow, based upon John Miskal Strong's story, "Underseas."

Yucca Theatre to Install Air Cooler

Estimates have been made and construction will begin the early part of this week, just as soon as the balance of the equipment is received and materials.

HUGE COFFEE CROP LANDED

NEW ORLEANS, (U.P.)—The largest cargo of Brazilian coffee in a decade—more than 6,000 tons in 101,808 sacks and valued at approximately $1,500,000—was discharged recently at New Orleans docks. The largest cargo to reach this port was 112,844 bags in 1923.

Hix Wins Again;

Business Shows

Substantial Gain

Well known since he drove by his sales record to the presidency of the All Star club of the Lamar Life Insurance company in 1932, a position held by only two other insurance agents of that company, John Hix of Midland has been informed that, for the tenth consecutive year, he has won a trip offered by his company for applications written, points accumulated and gross premiums won.

Hix has been advised that, following the annual convention of his company at Biloxi, he may sail without cost with other specially deserving representatives of his company to Cuba. He will board the U. S. S. Santa Maria of the Great White fleet on Aug. 4 at New Orleans and arrive at Havana two days later. The return will be five days afterward.

Hix hopes to win places for two on the cruise, having been so recognized five times.

It was in 1925 that he took his first trip at the expense of the company, going to Trout Lake, Wis., via New Orleans, St. Louis, Chicago and Milwaukee. In 1926, he went to the Sesqui-Centennial at Philadelphia, Atlantic City and New York. In 1927, he went to Biloxi and fished for a week. The next year saw him at New Orleans, Havana and cruising as far south as Spanish Honduras; in 1929, he went to Chicago, across Lake Michigan to Mackinac island, across Lake Huron to Perry sound, to Ontario and back to Detroit, Cleveland, Buffalo, via bus for 23 miles on the Canadian side to Niagara; 1930 to New Orleans and by boat around the Gulf coast and up the Atlantic seaboard to New York, Washington, Louisville, and along the interior of the middle west; 1931 to New Orleans and Havana; 1932 to New Orleans and by boat to Vera Cruz, thence by electric train 264 miles to Mexico City; 1933 to Biloxi and to the Century of Progress exposition at Chicago.

Roy McKee, Midland agent of the same company, has made the last four trips, winning two in 1930. Hix is running eighth among Lamar agents for business done in 1934, and has figured for 274 weeks in consecutive weekly production, writing a minimum of two policies for the past 34 weeks. McKee has figured in the consecutive weekly production for 225 weeks.

the other rodeo events will be for mount money. A $20 entrance fee for the entire show will be charged for the team roping, and a $15 fee for the calf roping. $50 prize money will be put up by the management in each roping each day. Half the entrance money will be added to the day money and half to the final money. Rodeo performers from all over the state are expected to enter the events. A cowboy parade will be staged each morning at 10 o'clock.

A stock and poultry display and a saddle and harness display will be open throughout the celebration as will an automobile show. Many other special stunts and contests will be staged on the streets during the gathering.

Residents of McCamey are anxious to have all the citizens of West Texas join in their birthday celebration, and upwards of 10,000 visitors are expected here during the two-day event. A special invitation is being extended former residents of McCamey to return for the annual homecoming.

Foods Student

Cuts Down Bills

Bonnie English, a Foods II student at the Midland high school, is progressing nicely with her home project of cutting the family food bill. When the class studied budgeting and learned that about 25 per cent of the income should be spent for food she realized that her family was spending too much so she began working to find out how she might save.

Some of the suggestions that she found helpful in doing this were:

1. To personally select vegetables and other perishable foods because one gets much better values for his money.

2. Know the difference between cost and apparent cost.

3. Ask the price before buying and make a comparison of prices of different foods at cash and carry and credit stores.

4. Buy a definite amount or quantity in order to learn prices.

5. Plan buying wisely, so as to know the quality of goods and the amounts needed.

6. Know the quality of canned goods—study best brands and learn to judge quality of these. Avoid buying extra fancy and fancy packs for ordinary table use because they are so much more expensive than the choice and standard.

7. Buying in large quantities and taking advantage of sales helps in saving money.

8. Buy economical sizes of canned goods—larger sizes as No. 2 1-2, 3, 5, and 10 are cheaper than the smaller sizes.

What!...a pint?

Yes, sir....a pint of perspiration!

That's what the average body gives off on a hot day. Where does it go? Well, the air evaporates some—the rest is soaked up by your clothes. It's not a very pleasant thought, but true.

In the test below, note how the new Palm Beach Cloth lets the air thru to do its job of evaporation. It's the only suit that does a close to perfect job. Nobody can be comfortable when walled in by sweat. That's why more and more men wear Palm Beach... to keep clean and cool.

A wise idea in more ways than one—for the new Palm Beach Suits are also the smartest suits of summer.

Showing how Palm Beach lets in the air and evaporates body perspiration... Your body is apt to give off a pint of perspiration on a warm day. Hence, these five jars, each containing a pint of liquid, were exposed to air. In 4½ hours the jar

(with no covering) shows 100% evaporation.

JAR NO. 2

(covered with Palm Beach) shows 95% evaporation.

JAR NO. 3

(covered with other summer fabrics) retain from 25% to 41% of "perspiration."

JAR NO. 4

JAR NO. 5

without any covering evaporated all the perspiration. In the same length of time, 95% was evaporated in the jar covered by porous Palm Beach Cloth. Note the contrasting results in the jars covered by other summer fabrics.
