Annual Clean-up Will Be Held May 24 to 29

The annual city-wide clean-up campaign will be held during the last week of this month, May 24 to 29.

The Chamber of Commerce and City of Wellington are jointly sponsoring the campaign. During that period, city trucks and personnel will devote full time to collecting garbage and trash over the entire city, said Mayor Bill Hatch.

Every resident is urged to clean his own premises and put them in top condition by the time the drive ends, he continued.

Complete plans will be announced later.

Rev. Roy Collins Receives Doctorate

The Rev. Roy D. Collins, Jr., pastor of First Baptist Church, will be granted his doctorate of Ministry degree from Luther Rice Seminary in Jacksonville, Fla., Friday, May 7.

The commencement speaker will be Dr. Stephen Olford, former pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, New York City, and also with the Billy Graham Crusade. He is also widely known as a convention and after dinner speaker.

Rev. Collins recently completed his dissertation for his doctorate relating to concepts of the human personality, and titled, "Biblical view of Human Relations, built around the Human Personality." He also holds a Master of Divinity Degree from Luther Rice Seminary.

He is now in his second ministry at the Wellington church, returning in 1974. In this two-year-period, he has reached several landmarks in his pastoral career, as well as in the church's history.

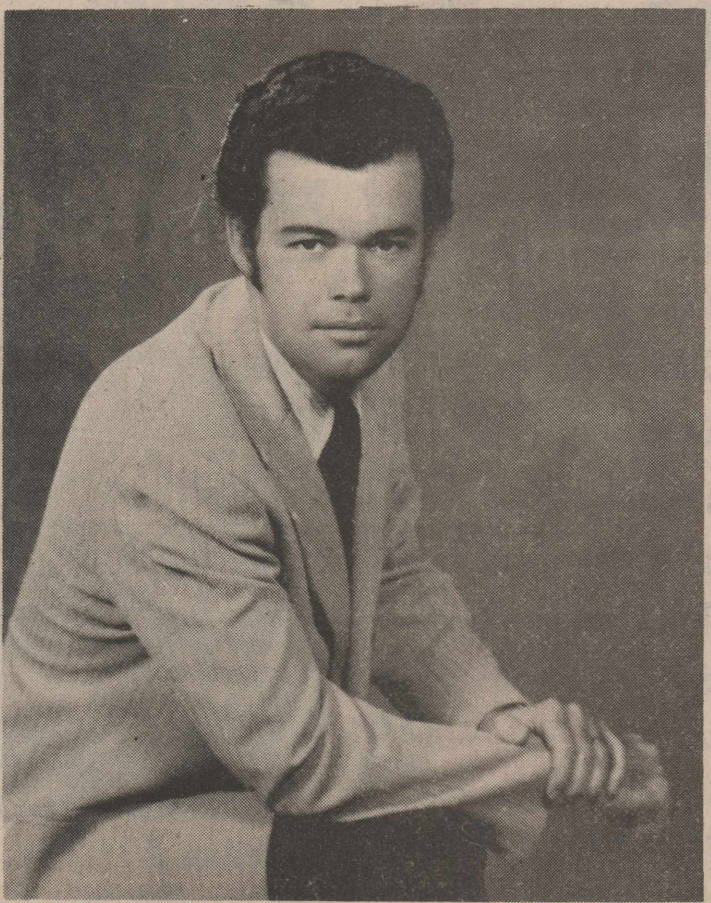

First, the debt on the church building was paid off and the note burning a year ago, and setting the cornerstone, was a celebration notable in the town's religious history.

Under Rev. Collins' leadership, the church then began installation of its $40,000 church television station, offering 6-day-a-week programming over Channel 5. The broadcasting station is located in the church.

Red Cross Fund Drive Exceeds County Quota

Funds collected in the annual county Red Cross fund drive have exceeded the quota and total $1,332.07, Earl Hunter, chairman, announced.

The quota was $1,276.

Mr. Hunter explained that half of the amount collected, $666.03 will go to the national chapter. This includes funds from which the Red Cross finances its disaster work throughout the country. It also helps to finance its other major programs.

"If the other half remaining here, the county's payment to the Red River Regional Red Cross Blood Program is paid. This amounts to approximately $375.

"We do not have very much left to operate on for the coming year. The principal expense is to our work with boys in the armed forces," said Mr. Hunter.

The drive itself was conducted by members of the Business and Professional Women's Club.

John Forbis In Hospital

John Forbis, Collingsworth pioneer, is a patient in Childress Hospital, following a recent fall at his home, the Childress Retirement Club. Members of the family say his condition is serious.

Mr. Forbis will be 88 years old on Tuesday, May 18. He has been in gradually failing health for about five years. The Forbis family came here in 1888, and Mr. Forbis is a life-long resident.

He is the father of John (Buddy) Forbis of Childress, Dr. Dorothy M. Behen of Youngstown, Ohio, and Wilma Ruth Forbis Kirby of Littlefield. Mrs. Kirby was with her father early this week.

Observance of National Hospital Week May 9-15

If you had the choice, would you prefer to reduce your chances of being admitted to a hospital this year?

Collingsworth General Hospital is making an extra effort during National Hospital Week, May 9-15, to show people of this area that they do have a choice. There are steps that can be taken to help ensure good health for everyone in 1976.

National Hospital Week is an annual observance sponsored by the American Hospital Association and its members to give people an opportunity to learn more about the hospitals in their community.

"Collingsworth General is not planning any Special Day, but significant improvements have been made in Laboratory, X-Ray, and Operating Room equipment and other areas and you are welcome to visit your hospital during National Hospital Week or at any other time convenient for you and discuss any area of interest to you. We would welcome the opportunity to show you what has been accomplished and what is being planned," said Garner Altom, administrator. "Caring for the sick is our reason for being. But more, teaching our patients how to stay well once they are released, and encouraging people in our community to stay healthy, are also important elements in our total care."

Health education programs at Collingsworth General Hospital are somewhat limited in scope because of size of hospital and type patients treated. Mrs. Glenna Inghram, director of nursing, says: "Whenever possible, patients are involved in their own care through patient education. A patient needs to be informed about his or her illness and given adequate information about how to care for himself following hospitalization in order to increase the chances of remaining well."

This is usually accomplished in Collingsworth General through patient counseling during their stay and giving them diet sheets and other instructional sheets upon dismissal.

"Health maintenance has little to do with the public's image of glamorous medical miracles," said Mr. Altom. "It is simply a responsible awareness-and practice-of basic health principles. You owe it to yourself," he believes, "to learn about nutrition, to get sufficient rest and relaxation, to learn how to cope with stress and to follow safety rules. For information and guidance on how one can stay healthy, he advises that each person ask a doctor, a nurse, a hospital dietitian, or the public health department."

Once the repository only for the acutely ill, the hospitals have extended their resources into the communities and today is the center of the health care system. Not only the source of health care, they are the centers of education and research. And you can help the hospital help you by sharing the responsibility for your health.

One of the driving forces behind the founding of this country was a desire for the freedom of choice. Hospitals have grown through 200 years of history to bring a simple but important message: You have the choice to contribute

#5-continued from page 1

Russell N. Anderson, M.D., and Arthur G. Burns, FACHA, a former hospital administrator, had many helpful and constructive recommendations in the 11 areas surveyed.

Accreditation is awarded to hospitals that are found to be in substantial compliance with the Joint Commission's high standards for the quality of patient care provided. The standards are considered to be optimal achievable and represent goals of excellence against which a facility can measure itself and be measured by the Joint Commission's accreditation survey team.

Voluntary accreditation has made a significant contribution to this country's unmatched excellence in health care. It continues the American tradition of self-reliance and it supports the belief that positive motivation is the most effective impetus to change.

The Joint Commission, which is celebrating its 25th anniversary during America's Bicentennial year, was founded in 1951 by its present member organizations: the American College of Surgeons, the American College of Physicians, the American Hospital Association, and the American Medical Association.

The surveys are voluntary and not legally necessary for a hospital to be accredited, but health care facilities have sought accreditation because it represents a standard of quality that is higher than governmental licensure alone. In June 1950 the Joint Commission approved the format of a Certificate of Accreditation for St. Joseph's Hospital and was accredited in 1951, and has continually met JCAH's high standards each year since, therefore, Collingsworth General, successor to St. Joseph's is also celebrating its 25th anniversary along with JCAH during America's Bicentennial year.

VFW Auxiliary Cites Teachers

The Auxiliary of Glynn Moore Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, presented corsages and boutonnieres to teachers and auxiliary personnel of the Wellington Schools

Monday, May 3.

This was in appreciation for the work they are doing, according to Mrs. Don Jones, auxiliary president, who made the presentations.

It is also part of the stepped-up program of community activity undertaken by the organization this year. The next major event will be Poppy

Day sales on Saturday, May 29.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Lindley have returned from a week's visit in Wood County. They visited with his niece in Randlett, Oklahoma and other cousins, nieces and nephews in Winnsboro, Quitman and Wichita Falls.

Friends,

I want to take this opportunity to thank supporters in Precinct 3 and throughout Collingsworth County who worked for me and offered encouragement during the campaign.

I will do my best to respond to the needs of the county's citizens, and to remain open to all suggestions and comments on county government.

I appreciate the opportunity to serve you and I hope in the next four years to justify the trust placed in me on election day.

Bellringers to Hold Fund Drive in May

Mrs. Ross Swift, Mrs. B.B. Martin and Mrs. Linda Black of Dodson will lead Bellringer workers in a house-to-house drive during May, Mental Health Month.

"Proceeds will go to the Texas Association for Mental Health," said Carroll B. Bryant, President of the voluntary organization.

During his term as head of the statewide organization, Bryant cited expansion and revitalization of the legislative network as his top priority. As citizen "watchdogs" for mentally ill persons, members work to see that government funds are spent effectively for treatment services and prevention programs.

Bryant's second priority is support of community mental health services, especially for the care of children.

"Many emotional problems can be avoided," said Bryant. "By learning the skills needed to be good parents, we can circumvent some potential emotional problems in children," he said.

Seeking to help prevent mental health problems through education, the association, in cooperation with the Texas Department of Community Affairs, Early Childhood Development Division, delivers the newsletter series "Pierre the Pelican" to first-time parents in the state. The 28-part series, mailed periodically, deals with the emotional and mental development of children while giving helpful hints to parents.

Additionally, the association offers free literature to the public on a variety of topics including depression, schizophrenia, creativity in children, alcoholism, positive mental health and sexuality. For free information write to the Texas Association for Mental Health, 103 Lantern Lane, Austin, Texas 78731.

Former County Woman Dies

Mrs. Viola A. Lee, 90, died Monday, April 19 at Corona Community Hospital in Corona, California.

Funeral services were conducted Thursday, April 22 at Thomas Miller Mortuary in Corona with Rev. Clifford Bauman and Rev. Charles Carfrey officiating. Interment was in Crestlawn Memorial Park in Riverside, California.

Mrs. Lee had lived in Corona since 1947, moving there from Texas.

She lived in Collingsworth County until 1947, residing at Plymouth, Quail and Lillie.

Mrs. Lee's husband, C.W. Lee, died a few years ago in his mid-nineties.

She was a member of Grace Baptist Church in Home Gardens, a suburb of Corona.

Survivors include a daughter, Mrs. Mary Hair, of Chino, California; three sons, Arthur of Corona, Elmer of Santa Fe Springs, California, and Cecil of Glendale, California; two sisters, Mrs. Lettie Dedman of Corona, and Mrs. J.W. (Essie) Neely of Shamrock; and a niece, Mrs. Lois Baggett of Ft. Worth, attended the funeral services with Mrs. Neely.

Blanton, who came to the Wellington chapter earlier in the year from the Zuni, N.M. chapter, titled his talk "It's All in a Three Letter Word." The word is T-R-Y.

"Fellow FFA members, no matter what you choose to do in life, you need this word. You may be a high point individual in competition or a district officer, but what kind of an officer would you be if you tried just a little harder and what kind of score would you have in life if you had only tried a little bit more," said the speaker.

He asked the group to reflect on people with the same opportunities, some of whom failed, while others succeeded. He asked that they look at their own lives.

"A successful man always knows where he is going and has a definite goal in mind. He decides what he wants to do, makes that his goal, and then does it," Blanton said. He added, a few minutes later, that success often does not come on the first try.

Blanton, one of the top 10 students scholastically in the graduating class, was active in FFA in New Mexico. He was named the Outstanding Ag Student in the Zuni, N.M. chapter, served as president of that chapter two years, district vice-president, and a delegate to the Leadership Convention in Washington, D.C. and to the FFA National Convention in Kansas City. Last year he ranked fourth in the state in public speaking.

He was the first youth from the Zuni chapter to earn a State Farmer Degree, and helped that chapter to hold its first FFA Banquet. He is an Eagle Scout and was named to the All-District football team two years. He plans to continue FFA on the collegiate level. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Blanton.

Kiker is the current Greenbelt District Secretary.

The award which he received is based on the applicant's supervised occupational experience program. This covers marketing experience, efficiencies attained, skills and competencies, improved practices, achievements in FFA and school and community activities.

The award recipient is selected by a committee of district Ag teachers. There are 12 schools in the Greenbelt District.

Kiker, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Kiker, helps his father on the farm. He has held offices on the chapter level and also was chosen the Star Chapter Farmer.

(Editor's Note: A related story concerning the talk by Mrs. R.C. Bearden on textbook selection and textbook content is on another page.)

AUSTIN--Copies of every book or teaching system submitted to the Texas Education Agency for the 1976 state textbook adoption will be available to all interested citizens for review at each of the 20 regional education service centers throughout the state beginning April 30. Wellington is in Region XVI. The PESO Center, 1601 South Cleveland, Amarillo.

Some 400 to 500 sample books and other materials will be on file in each center library during regular business hours, according to J. Henry Perry, Texas Education Agency textbook division director.

All major national publishers are expected to submit text materials for the Texas adoption in selected elementary and secondary school subject areas, Perry points out. The new materials may be adopted for a maximum of six years.

Books and comprehensive teaching systems which may include tapes, filmstrips, and other materials will be studied in detail by members of the State Textbook Committee and their local advisors throughout the summer, Perry adds.

The 15-members committee, which includes public school administrators and teachers, will be appointed by the State Board of Education at its May 8 meeting in Austin. Committee members will also seek the views of other teachers in their own districts concerning each book or comprehensive system submitted for adoption.

A series of public hearings will be held in Austin in order to gather citizen viewpoints and opinion before the State Board of Education adopts textbooks at its November 13 meeting in Austin. The new materials will be available for students on September 1, 1977.

Elementary subject areas scheduled to receive new books and other materials include: English as a second language (system), grade 3; basal readers in Spanish, supplementary readers in Spanish, mathematics in Spanish, science in Spanish, Spanish language development, all for grade 3 bilingual classes.

Elementary English dictionaries, grades 7 and 8, textbooks for grades 7 and 8, secondary dictionaries for grades 7-11, and English dictionaries for grade 12 are also included on the list.

High school subject areas to receive new textbooks include: journalism, algebra, geometry, trigonometry, mathematics, for consumer economics, fundamentals of mathematics, chemistry I, physics I, marine science, biology I, geology, world history studies, French I and II, bookkeeping I and II, shorthand I and II, cosmetology, aerospace/aviation, and fundamentals of the free enterprise system.

Planting Date Factor In Disaster Payments

Proper use of "normal planting dates" is a factor in determining producer eligibility for prevented planting payments in 1976, Bob Weatherly, ASCS county executive, has reminded farmers.

The "normal planting dates" for Collingsworth County also were announced by Mr. Weatherly. For cotton, this is May 10 to June 10; grain sorghum, May 5 to July 1; corn, April 1 to May 31; peanuts, May 15 to June 10; and soybeans, April 20 to July 1.

In 1974 and 1975 there was only a "final" planting date beyond which planting was not a prerequisite to payment eligibility under disaster provisions of current law. But a new rule this year will deny prevented planting payments to farmers who fail to plant at any time conditions are favorable between beginning and ending dates of a "normal" planting period.

For example, assume a dryland farmer who at the beginning of the normal planting period has enough moisture to bring cotton up, but for his own reasons chooses not to plant until later. If it is too dry to plant later, this producer would not qualify for prevented planting payments because he didn't take advantage of the planting opportunity which existed during the normal planting period.

Also, if he plants and gets a stand on an acreage of another crop during the normal period for cotton, that acreage will be deducted from the acreage otherwise eligible for a cotton payment.

Weatherly points out that these new regulations are nothing more than an extension of the standing requirement that disaster payments be contingent upon farm operations conducted in a "workmanlike manner".

The intent of the disaster program, the ASCS executive says, is to provide a measure of protection against disastrous crop years that occur despite the farmer's having put forth maximum effort to produce a crop.

Bart Groves Promoted By Diamond Shamrock

Diamond Shamrock's Oil & Gas Unit has announced the organization of three exploration divisions in Houston, Denver and Amarillo. Bart Groves, a former Wellington man, will head the Southern Division at Houston.

The three divisions are operational in Amarillo and the moves to Houston and Denver will take place as soon as office facilities are completed.

"In recent years, Diamond Shamrock's oil and gas exploration efforts have increased severalfold," said Robey Clark, group vice-president for exploration and production. The company's involvement, Clark said, now reaches from the Atlantic Ocean to the Pacific Ocean and from Michigan to the Gulf of Mexico.

Groves was also promoted to regional geophysicist.

Reared in Wellington, Bart (Barton) Groves is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Groves.

He joined Diamond Shamrock in September 1973 as district geophysicist. He is a 1956 graduate of Wellington High School and received a bachelor's degree in mathematics from Texas Tech in 1961 and continued computer and geological studies at Southern Methodist University. He and his wife, Marilyn, have two children.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Clubb and Mr. and Mrs. Oran Starkey returned Monday night from a fishing trip to Fort Gibson in Oklahoma.

Mr. and Mrs. Gary Key of Spur were guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Kennedy during the weekend.

First Baptist Has Johnny Cash Film

The story is old, but the perspective is up-dated and brought into sharp focus by the film "The Gospel Road" to be shown on May 9 at First Baptist Church. The showing will begin at 7:00 p.m. It will not be televised over Channel V.

"The Gospel Road", distributed by World Wide Pictured, was conceived and produced by Johnny Cash and his wife, June Carter Cash,

Girl's Rodeo Set May 14-16 in Hereford

Coast to coast competition at the All Girl Hustlin' Hereford Hall of Fame Rodeo will be held May 14, 15 and 16 in Hereford.

Events will get under way in the 2nd annual professional women's rodeo in this area at 7:30 p.m. on Friday, May 14, and end with induction of honorees in the Hall of Fame on Sunday afternoon.

The world's top professional cowgirls will be on hand to compete in seven major events including bareback bronc riding, barrel racing, goat tying, team roping, tie down calf roping, steer undecorating and bull riding.

This is scheduled to be the largest women's professional rodeo in the nation with more than 450 entries who will be competing for a $7,700 added purse.

whose desire was to tell the story of Jesus Christ in a realistic and meaningful way, said the Rev. Roy Collins, Jr. "The film is a unique blend of scripture-based narrative, an abundant supply of specially written songs, and a series of in-depth character portrayals, with Israel itself as the mixing bowl."

"You are there, walking beside the Jordan and the Sea of Galilee; you are there, seeing Him in many human situations that establish a practical and personal rapport with every viewer," said the pastor.

"You are there, being introduced to the disciples, and gaining insights into their varied personalities. You are there, experiencing the highly charged emotional impact of the trial before Pilate, and becoming so personally involved that you feel sympathetic pain when Robert Elstrom, in an outstanding portrayal of Christ, suffers the physical attack that precedes the Crucifixion," Rev. Collins concluded.

Mr. and Mrs. Haskell Manuel visited his brother, Mr. and Mrs. Norvel Manuel and son Jim Manuel and a sister, Mrs. J.T. Ingram all of Fort Worth last week. They picked up another of Mr. Manuel's sisters, Mrs. Marjorie Byrd, in Wichita Falls. She too visited her brother and sister.

Extension Agent At Agricultural Policy Meeting

Extension Agent Don Reeves was in Amarillo recently for a meeting aimed at helping the public understand why and how agricultural policies are formed.

The meeting was sponsored by Panhandle Economic Program (PEP) and the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

One portion explored how agricultural policies are determined and the influence different organizations have in determining public policies.

"The question was asked, 'Who will control Agricultural Policy--the farmer, or labor and the consumer?'" said Mr. Reeves.

"Nothing was hashed out, but it was brought out that the consumer has a lot more influence on agricultural policy now and the farmer has a lot less. It's who has the vote," the Collingsworth Extension Agent added.

Heading the presentations and discussions were Dr. Ronald D. Knutson and Dr. William E. Black, Extension Service marketing economists of College Station.

"Once people understand the purposes and effects of agricultural policies," said Paul Gross, District 1 agent, "they should be able to more effectively select those programs worthy of their support." Attending the Amarillo session were extension agents, county program building committee members, community leaders, and others interested in agricultural policy.

The Panhandle Economic Program is a voluntary organization of the area citizens interested in the social and economic growth of the Panhandle.

Texas Health Resource Offices Move to Canyon

The program organization for the Texas Department of Health Resources - Public Health Region 1 will be complete this month with the move of two more divisions from their Amarillo Locations to the Regional headquarters on the West Texas State University campus in Canyon.

The function of the Regional public health program is to provide public health services to all 23 counties in the Panhandle not served by a local, organized health department, including Collingsworth.

Only Potter and Randall Counties in the Panhandle are served by an organized health department.

While some of the functions of the Regional program are of a regulatory and enforcement nature, based on State Public Health Laws, many of the public health services carried out in the Panhandle counties will be subject to request and/or approval at a local level. These services include Environmental and Consumer Health Protection Services, Public Health Nursing, Emergency Medical Services, Immunizations, Veterinary Public Health, Tuberculosis Control, Venereal Disease Control, Nursing Home Licensing and Certification and Health Education Services and Planning.

Questions concerning public health programs in your area may be directed to Public Health Region 1, W.T.S.U. Box 968, Canyon, Texas, 79016, 655-7179.

McConnell of Altus, Okla. It took between two and three hours to read the charge to the jury and thirty minutes for the jury to come to a decision.

Sheriff L.T. Sullivan and Deputy Gordon Neece arrested four men in a private residence... "in broad daylight" for gambling. It was the second raid for gamblers in a private residence in two weeks.

Plans were made to organize a Parent-Teachers Club. "We must have a new modern brick school house in Wellington right away... It should be in order to keep pace with the growth of Wellington."

THE WELLINGTON (TEXAS) LEADER
Thursday, May 6, 1976

AUSTIN — Another auto rate increase will be requested this summer.

An industry spokesman last week said companies which write insurance on cars are in a "back to the wall" bind due to inflation and the soaring cost of repairs.

Rates were boosted on an average of 17 per cent effective January 1.

The State Board of Insurance annual auto insurance hearing has been slated for July 15.

Jerry Johns, president of Southwestern Insurance Information Service, claimed the worst inflation in a quarter century is gripping insurers.

"Unless the industry seeks additional rate increases, the state's insurance industry stands to lose hundreds of millions of dollars next year," said Johns.

The SIIS spokesman estimated company losses nationwide last year at $4.5 billion.

Johns said car repair costs and medical expenses covered by auto policies have tripled during eight years.

Many companies, said Johns, are facing escalating costs which "seem to rise almost daily" and must have rate relief to survive.

Bell Rapped

A State Senate subcommittee by a three-to-two vote adopted a staff report criticizing Southwestern Bell Telephone Company expenditures for entertainment.

The report claims Bell inflated figures going into its rate base by inclusion of "questionable expenses."

Company spokesmen challenged the report and said it "reaches conclusions not supported by fact" and ignores testimony contradicting the conclusions.

Courts Speak

Texas Supreme Court held the press and public have no blanket rights to see all police records.

Third Court of Civil Appeals upheld a 1975 act regulating mobile home manufacturers and distributors.

In other actions, the Supreme Court upheld a $155,000 damage award to E. J. Richard, a Union Oil Co. ship officer, and a $55,000 settlement to a San Antonio city employee burned by gasoline.

The Court of Criminal Appeals affirmed a life sentence conviction of a Dallas repeat offender for carrying a pistol into a place selling alcoholic beverages.

Suit Filed

Atty. Gen. John Hill filed civil suits for more than $2 million which he alleged was stolen from the Duval County Conservation and Reclamation District.

The largest of three suits alleges establishment of a secret account at the First State Bank of San Diego used to make payments and purchases with water district tax money.

Funds Reallocated

More than $4.5 million in federal Hill-Burton construction funds have been reallocated to 14 facilities across the state by the Texas Department of Health Resources board.

About $3.8 million worth in loan funds went to hospitals in Dallas, Beaumont, Lubbock, Clarksville and Mount Pleasant.

Rehabilitation grant funds went to Houston, Fort Worth and Lubbock institutions.

Modernization funds were reallocated to El Paso, Dallas, Denton, Liberty, Woodville and Coleman hospitals.

Rehabilitation grants totalled $151,754 and modernization funds $525,198.

AG Opinions

A contract to purchase land for a school building is public information which must be produced for inspection or duplication under the open records act, Atty. Gen. Hill said.

A contracting governmental authority may require a prime contractor to execute a bond for contracts not in excess of $15,000, Hill concluded in another new opinion.

Hill also stated, in a third opinion, that persons may not represent themselves as landscape architects unless they are licensed as such.

Challenge Suggested

Texas Water Quality Board Director Hugh Yantis suggested a state suit may be needed against the federal government if federal Voting Rights Act decisions hamper efforts to control water pollution.

Yantis said Justice Department orders wiping out city annexations could make some areas ineligible to issue waste water bonds. He cited a ruling challenging 13 San Antonio annexations on grounds they diluted minority votes.

Gas Prices Posted

A new General Land Office publication will offer gas price information to consumers and producers.

Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong said three highest prices paid for natural gas in each Railroad Commission district will be compiled monthly from his office's records.

Our Hospital's Excellence Should Be Considered Now

During the week of May 9 to 15, Collingsworth General Hospital will be among the nation's 7,000 hospitals and the American Hospital Association to observe National Hospital Week.

No special events are planned here, but everyone in the trade area is invited to visit the hospital and see its operation and ask questions about any part of that operation.

We are getting a quality of health care that many small towns do not have. Re-accreditation, another mark of excellence, has been granted by the joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals. We have held this rating every year for 25 years, and for many of these this hospital was the only one between Amarillo and Wichita Falls to be accredited.

An additional doctor on the hospital staff is the realization of the hopes of so many of the hospital's supporters over a long period.

A good hospital is important to any town, but it is also one of the first things an industry or large firm looks at in considering a new location. Wellington is still looking for growth in this direction and our hospital is an important factor.

National Hospital Week is a good time to visit Collingsworth General. It is also a time to congratulate the hospital board and the administration on the stable operation of the hospital through some difficult years.

Texas Strength — Small Towns Growing

Small Texas towns had things going against them for a quarter of a century. Young people moved away. Stores closed. Weeds took over yards of vacant homes. Government and business leaders ignored rural crossroads as they concentrated on urban problems.

But like a sprig of native Bermuda grass, Texas towns have shown amazing resilience. With the barest of life's essentials, such as a little water and favorable climate, they come alive with remarkable vigor. Some, like a grass sprig, seem now to be running all over the countryside.

The status of the small town was examined by leaders of government and private sectors at a meeting in Austin the other day. They agreed that a bright future faces the towns.

"It's mind-boggling what you can do if you offer small towns a little assistance," said Edward Protz of the Moody Foundation. Gov. Dolph Briscoe said that much of the strength of Texas in the future lies in its small towns.

There's a good reason for the bright outlook of small towns. The fact is that, while their tops were being cut away over the last 25 years, their roots remained deep and healthy.

For a time, everybody seemed to feel a need to crowd within an urban boundary looking for the good life. Now an increasing number are finding the opposite—that boundaries don't really mean much any more, and that knowing neighbors and living where there's elbow room means a lot.

They agree with the famous Emporia, Kan., Gazette editor, William Allen White, who said that, man for man, Emporia is better than New York.

Small towns are not without their problems, but they are often different from those of cities. One problem, pointed out by speakers at the session in Austin, is a handicap in competing against larger cities with professional staffs for funds to operate needed programs.

For a time there also may be shortages of persons with certain skills. But this will be corrected as more people with those skills choose to live beyond the urban boundaries.

A town today may appear as small as it was years ago. But its appearance often belies its true strength. The truth is found on the roads beyond its city limits: New and modernized homes; manufacturing and processing plants; substantial, mechanized agricultural operations. Out there we find much of a town's real size.

Small towns offer a living environment that many people want today. With a little care, they will grow like grass again.

OLD HOSPITAL

When Collingsworth County Hospital District took over operation of St. Joseph's Hospital in 1972 they also took over the old building, above, which had served as a convent for the Sisters of St. Dominic when they operated St. Joseph's between 1938 and 1972. The building was built as a "Sanitarium" in 1917 by L.H. Stahl who leased it to Dr. E.W. Jones and Dr. Garvin Cross. A nurse, Miss Virgie Vinson, bought the building in 1920 and later sold it to Mrs. E. D. Champlin. Dr. Jones bought the hospital in 1924 and gave it to the Collingsworth-Wheeler Counties Baptist Association. The association returned the hospital to Dr. Jones in 1928. In 1935 a new 15-bed fieldstone hospital was built, and in 1938 the Dominican Sisters took over operation. They were a teaching order and this was their first hospital service. Later they established two other hospitals. In 1950 St. Joseph's became one of the first small hospitals in this area to be accredited by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals. In 1951 a new wing was added to the hospital doubling its capacity to current size. In photo at left, left, Nurse McHugh, Nurse DeRue and Mary Coleman Royal stand in front of the original sanitarium. Matagorda Island land to the state for parks, recreation and conservation purposes.

Gov. Briscoe has recommended driver education for 270,000 registered motorcycle riders in Texas. He designated May 1-7 as Motorcycle Safety Awareness Week.

Ancient Egypt Seen in Valley of Kings, Queens

(This is one of a series of articles by Dr. Dorothy Jane Holman, associate professor at San Diego State College, San Diego, Calif., based on her travels with a group through the Middle East, with emphasis on major archeological and historical sites visited. Dr. Holman, the former Dorothy Jane Riggs, grew up in Wellington.)

Valley of the Kings and Queens of Ancient Egypt

Because of the intense heat, we had left very early in the morning; nevertheless, by the time we turned the last curve of rocks to reach our first stop, we felt like we were in an oven. Our guide for the day was distinguished gentleman with a small trimmed moustache, weighing about 185 lbs., of medium height, and wore an ironed, immaculately tailored galabiya of tiny blue and white pin-striped cotton material. His black curly hair was neatly trimmed to less than a half-inch of growth. His careful and articulate historical stories of King "Tut's" tomb, the Necropolises of Thebes, the Avenue of the Aphinxes, the Hypostile Hall, and the Temple of Queen Hatsheput were as impressive as his looks, and was only interrupted from time to time when he would stop to reach for a package of cigarettes in the deep pockets of the gown, and slowly proceed to smoke. Because he was probably in his thirties or forties, this gentleman had no wrinkles in the beautiful color of all Egyptian skins—a deep, golden tan.

King "Tut's" tomb was only a few feet from the entrance, and for thousands of years had been the only one which had escaped "robbers of the graves". Our guide explained that most of the robbers were found to be men who had helped to dig the burial grounds, and then return in several days and steal what they had buried. The miracle is that this complete tomb of invaluable artifacts and sculptured body designs, one exactly like the other, but one size larger. As I mentioned previously, all but the last one, plus all the large boxes are now kept in the museum in Cairo. The walls of the small square room are painted in gold and colors to depict the royal procession of the burial of the King. The outside of the rectangular box holding the seventh gold body sculpture was designed with a woman's body at each corner, with arms outstretched as wings around the entire basket. We learned they represented members of his family. The arkwork of the thousands of years B.C. was incredibly beautiful. Most of the lifetime of a Pharaoh was dedicated to building and providing for a tomb. It is thought that the scenes of his present world must be carved and painted on the the walls to allow them to be perpetuated into the next world, and all the tombs we visited this day, we were to see hundreds of beautiful scenes of the lives of the Egyptian Pharaohs, despite the damage done by so many illegal entries of the grave robbers. Other than King Tut's tomb, we found the walkways in and out of these tombs, especially that of Ramesses II, exactly like those of the pyramids—very tiny boards attached across a parallel board to allow you to enter in a crouched position, and retreat backwards when leaving. The internal rooms were large, and we were able to take some pictures of the walls with flashbulbs. When, several hours later, we had arrived at the last one, we found it to be quite different than all the previous ones. The Temple of Queen Hatshepsut, Egypt's only female Pharaoh, was at Deir El-Bahri and rose like the grandeur of the high walls of the canyon behind it. This was magnificence—I find too difficult to describe in this setting, where archeologists are still busy trying to uncover and rebuild the structure of dozens of pillars and high inclines in the middle of each tier. The vastness of the barren rock and the heat of the burning sand which envelope the visitor into an amazement and wonder of the insignificance of self...like a grain of that sand which was everywhere, on the ground and in the air as the high winds beat upon our faces.

By noon we had returned across to the East Bank of the Nile because of the heat. The British Archeologists only work during the winter months, and I can readily understand why. I had worn a scarf, two hats, carried an umbrella, and was still seeking the shade of the columns to stand near. Fortunately, the dramatization of the Karnak Temples in their "Sound and Light" show was scheduled for English speaking people that night, and this was indeed one of the most impressive technical productions of light and dramatic readings I have ever witnessed. As you walk between the immense columns of antiquity and the lights go on and off as the voices tell you the story of each part of the Thebes of the Hundred gates, you can almost believe you are witnessing this era of history thousands of years before Christ. The two completed obelisks which Queen Hatshepsut had had cut out of the stones near Aswan, transported up the Nile, and erected here were fantastically displayed at night. After slowly walking and stopping, from time to time through the Karnak Temples, listening to the sound, and experiencing the light, we reached the small lake which had been built by one pharaoh, and were seated in an amphitheater behind it, built out of the rock for the remainder of the "Sound and Light" show. The evening had clear skies and beautiful stars, and your passageway into the historical past was halted only as the lights on the entire Karnak Temple were flooded, and the music and voices stopped. Reluctantly, I started to leave. As I slowly walked back through the columns of marble, I was delighted to find that the entire production was available on stereo record, and I hastened to see if I had sufficient pounds and pesetos to purchase "an evening I didn't want to ever forget!" My driver and horse-driven carriage with the group of three I had come with was impatiently waiting to transport us back to the hotel, but I managed to ignore their displeasure at being momentarily delayed while I had savoured every second of an experience of a lifetime.

Leaving Luxor for Aswan Sunday a.m., Aug. 3

Leaving the Savoy Hotel where the air-conditioning worked one hour out of twenty-four left me with no nostalgic feeling at departure time. I hoped I could leave the middle-east "bug" as well. The only way I had found to survive the hot nights was to soak my bath towel in water and cover myself with it in the bed. About every two hours I had to rewet the dry towel. The windows couldn't be opened because of the bugs and insects, but even when I drew the inside curtains one night, the lizards ran up the cloth. This was also our first introduction to the square trough in the bathrooms with a short metal hose with a nozzle you could hold over your head to get a shower. The food was so highly seasoned and greasy that you could barely eat it, and again all I really wanted was a glass of ice water or iced tea. What we got was a cup of hot tea at every meal. The swimming pool, however, was a delight, and was the only one we were privileged to enjoy during our entire trip.

Cabs again took us to the Luxor airport, where we were scheduled for an 8:25 a.m. flight, but we had already learned that schedules mean nothing in this country. They depart when they get ready. Eventually we were aloft for the short thirty minute ride to Aswan, where our group was met by a new guide who showed us the High Dam, the Granite Quarries and the Temple of Philae during the remainder of the morning. We were allowed to take pictures of the High Dam, but could not turn around and take pictures of the military officials nor the facilities of electricity around the dam. This uncertainty of movement was an uneasy feeling—never had we seen so many of the armed military as on the bridge we crossed where there were small turrets spaced across the bridge. Several tanks sped past us, and all soldiers were in camouflaged suits and carrying machine guns. After crossing the dam, we were driven down a hill to a small cove where another very small canopy-covered boat awaited to take us to the Temple of Philae—which, we found, was surrounded by the Nile River like an island. Because of the floods of the Nile, the archeological find was about to be destroyed, and the current project is to MOVE the entire remains of the structure to higher ground above where the Nile floods! Incredible!

And we were told that the USA was assisting in this restoration and moving of the entire wall and columns of the Temple. Here we were allowed to take all the pictures we wanted, but it was difficult to get any good ones because we were only allowed to walk around the outer wall, and could not descend into the ruins where massive equipment was attempting to move rocks weighing thousands of pounds. We returned to our small delapidated boat and again "put-putted" across the Nile—wondering if the craft would make this one more trip.

We were then taken to the Granite Quarries, where we were able to walk on, and take pictures of the unfinished obelisk of Queen Hatshepsut—the third one which never made it to the Karnak Tmephe. As you looked at this huge unfinished sculptured piece of marble stretched out on its side, just as it was when Egyptians were carving it out of the side of the rock hills thousands of years ago, you wondered again at their ingenuity in ever succeeding in completing the first two, and transporting the massive pieces in floating barges up the Nile to Luxor, and erecting them in the "House of Thebes."

When we finally reached the small town of Aswan, we were delighted to see that two sailboats would take us across the Nile to see the Elephantine and Kitchener Islands. As we passed the magnificent edifice built as a mausoleum for the Agha Khan, we decided against climbing one more high and dry hill, and proceeded onward—enjoying trailing our hands in the cool, blue water of the Nile. Even though it was extremely hot, we felt wonderful in the sailboat, which reminded us so much of our San Diego days. When we climbed out of the boats to walk through the Botanical Gardens, we were greeted by several Egyptian men playing crude wind musical instruments, which, we later found they wanted to sell to us.

On our return to Aswan we passed the cliffs which looked like carved elephants, and the source of the name of the islands. One woman with two children was washing clothes in the water and then stretching them across rocks to dry. In one spot, several of the male natives were "skinny-dipping" in the Nile and thoroughly enjoying the cool water. By the time we had returned to the dock below the ancient old Hotel Cataract, the group of athletes in our group decided that a swim in the Nile was just what they needed, asked our guide if this was possible and were given permission. We were served a delicious lunch in the dining room of the hotel, and afterwards while the rest of the group went swimming, I found a beauty shop and immediately sought to correct the wear and tear of the desert on my head, took a nap under the dryer. I emerged feeling like I was again "me".

Our plane left on time from the Aswan airport, but during a stopover at Luxor, we were ordered by the captain to leave the plane. I was asleep and most reluctant to move. For what seemed like an interminable length of time, we remained in the hot and dirty airport terminal of Luxor, now crowded with other passengers-to-be. The inefficiency and disorganization of Egyptian airports and care of planes is almost indescribable! The plane did not refuel, and yet it took over an hour. They loaded luggage—some of which we noticed they took one at a time on a cart pulled by an airport vehicle. Over an hour later people started rushing toward the plane. We soon followed, but the flight attendants would not allow any of the new passengers to board until the "in transit" passengers were aboard—which was our group of 17! Chaos and mass confusion at every airport! We had no identifying boarding passes, but the stewardesses knew us and allowed us to reboard first. I soon discovered the group entering the plane was part of a larger group of 240 remaining in Cairo, and were all Methodists—mostly ministers and wives from Texas. The couple who sat beside me were Rev. and Mrs. F.M. Wheat of Raymondville, Texas, where he is pastor of the United Methodist Church for the 25th year! And if that did not make the world small enough, when I continued to converse with them, I found they had just been in Wellington, Texas on July 22nd! The trip had been organized by a Dr. Charles Allen of Houston, and they were going to Israel and Greece. Mrs. Wheat indicated there were some with the group from the Panhandle but the plane was not large enough for seat visitations, and on our arrival in Cairo, we were back to the usual airport madness, and I did not have the opportunity to meet them.

Dear Friends,

I thank everyone of you who supported and voted for me in the primary.

My service on county affairs has been an interesting part of my life and I appreciate the privilege.

Now let each of us congratulate Bill on his election victory, support him and wish him every success as our next County Commissioner of Precinct Three.

My defeat is something minor; for Collingsworth County to go forward is our big concern.

As ever, sincerely,

You can Bank on it!

By BILLY MOSELEY President CITY STATE BANK

Like most large systems in twentieth century America, the banking system is clogged with paper -- and it isn't all currency.

The statistics on just the checks written are mind-boggling!

In 1939 there were some 27 million checking accounts in America, and 3.5 billion checks were written. Less than 25 years later there were 58 million accounts and 14.5 billion checks written for a total of $4.6 trillion dollars.

In the next 10 years these figures nearly doubled to 97 million accounts, 23 billion checks totaling $10.6 trillion!

It is this staggering paper flow that has led many to examine the concept of a "checkless, cashless society." Methods for transferring funds electronically, virtually eliminating all paper including cash, are being explored at all levels of the banking system.

The technology to establish an electronic funds transfer system is currently available. Most experts agree, however, that we probably will be well into the next century before a complete checkless, cashless society could become a reality.

WHEN AGGIES MEET

These four discuss the long tradition of Texas A&M University, as they met for the annual Aggie Muster on San Jacinto Day, April 21. From left are John Hal Christner of Shamrock, Andy Henard and Mike Smith of Wellington and Fred Nicholson of Shamrock.

Wellington Men Head Aggie Muster in 1977

Two Wellington men were elected to offices for the 1977 Wheeler-Collingsworth County Aggie Muster when the 1976 observance was held in Shamrock recently.

Andy Henard will act as 1977 Muster Chairman and Mike Smith will be president of the chapter. They succeed John Hal Christner, muster chairman, and Fred Nicholson, president.

The Aggie Muster is held each San Jacinto Day, April 21, by former students of Texas A&M University and friends of the university. They pay tribute to Aggies who have passed on and reaffirm their loyalty to the university.

The 1977 Muster will be held in Wellington. Shamrock hosted the 1966 gathering.

The central focus of the Muster, the roll call of Aggies who have died was led by Dick DeArment. None was from Wellington.

Mr. Christner, master of ceremonies discussed "After a Hundred Years, Texas A&M University is just getting started."

He briefly summarized the history of the institution and discussed the preponderance of growth of the university during the last decade. Texas A&M has an enrollment of 25,247, nearly double the figure 10 years ago.

He noted the Aggie football program, and added that Texas A&M University has become recognized nationally for its leadership in science and engineering programs.

Smith was in charge of the closing ceremony.

Attending the 1976 Aggie Muster from Wellington were Mr. and Mrs. Andy Henard, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Henard, Larry Henard, Nancy King, Mr. and Mrs. Smith and Kelly.

Watson at Probation Counseling Workshop

Probation officers no longer confine their counseling to the child who may have come into their hands through trouble with the law. Counseling now includes the whole family.

This is the growing trend in probation work, said Bob Watson, who recently attended a three-day workshop in San Antonio.

It was sponsored by Sam Houston State University, Huntsville.

Mr. Watson, director of the 100th Judicial District Probation Program, is one of 30 resource people who provide material to the university and helped put on this workshop.

A case based on one he handled here was used at the mock counseling sessions. Discussion meetings followed.

Keynote speakers were Dr. Alberto C. Seranno, chief psychiatrist and director of the Community Guidance Center for Bexar County, and Dr. James M. Stedman, chief psychologist for the center.

Approximately 150 probation workers, resource officers and others concerned with juvenile probation work participated.

The theme for the first day was "Think Family". The second day's topic was "Transactional Analysis in Family Work".

Guests of Mr. and Mrs. C.T. Hubbard this weekend were their daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Don Fike and daughters, Tracey and Sherry of Colorado City.

McLean School Plans Derby Jubilee May 8

The Student Council of McLean High School is sponsoring a Derby Town Jubilee May 8, at 7:30 p.m. in the high school auditorium.

We like to think of our Jubilee as a night of good clean family fun. Anyone who is a country and western music fan will certainly enjoy visiting with us," said the directors.

Children of Mr. and Mrs. Loyd Langley, Capt. and Mrs. Benny Carson, Anthony and Stephen of Fort Campbell, Kentucky; Mr. and Mrs. Terry Bratt and Dana of Muskogee, Oklahoma, are visiting this week. Mr. and Mrs. Cary Don Neeley, Curtis and David of Quail are also visiting the group. The Benny Carsons are also visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Carson.

Clayton Evans Dies at Austin

Clayton Evans, 61, a deputy fire marshal and special investigator for the State of Texas, died unexpectedly at his home in Austin Friday, April 30. His death was attributed to a heart attack and occurred as he was preparing to leave for his office.

Mr. Evans grew up in the Ring Community and was a cousin of Pat O'Hair and Ross O'Hair. He was in Wellington only a few weeks ago in work for his office.

The son of the late Henry and Annie O'Hair Evans, he left here about 1935 and had worked for the state since 1940. Many here will remember his ability as a basketball player.

Funeral services and burial were at Austin.

Survivors are his widow; three children, Clayton Ernest Evans of Burleson; Mrs. Jean Ann Moya of California and Bruce Evans of Austin.

Mr. and Mrs. Pat O'Hair attended the funeral and were joined by his sister and brother, Mrs. Dora Mae Brown of Pampa and Mr. and Mrs. Fred O'Hair of Bovina, and a cousin, Mrs. Ruby Banister of Plainview.

Mrs. Michael at Brother's Funeral

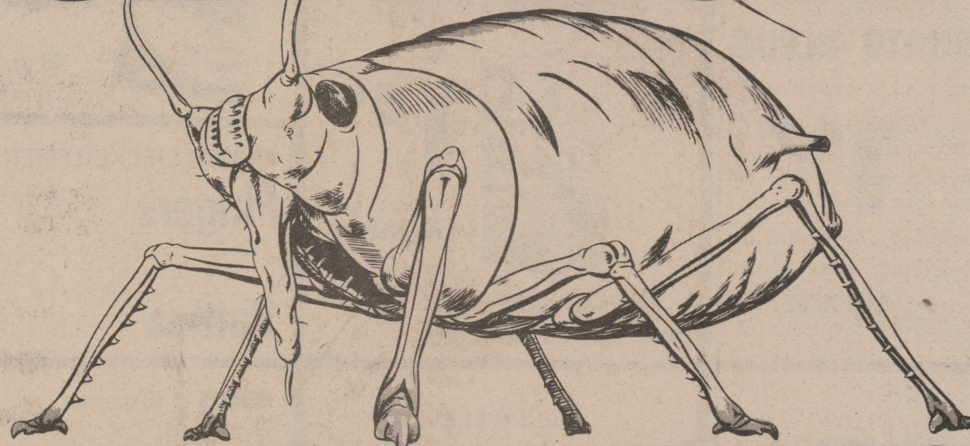

Mrs. J.F. Michael was in Lockney Sunday, May 2, to attend the funeral of her brother, Bryan Wells, 73, of Fort Stockton.

Mr. Wells, with other members of his family, was an early settler in the Lockney area.

Survivors are his widow of Ft. Stockton, and one daughter, who lives in New Jersey.

OUR MOTHER & GRANNY

On a Very Special Day to Us Mother's Day

OUR MOTHER

*Dear Mother, we are so thankful
That we still have you in life,
To bless us with your presence
Amid Life's weary strife.*

*For You, too, did have your part
In making our childhood bright;
We cannot forget your toil-filled days,
Nor how through many a weary night---*

*You tenderly watched over us
As the fever burned our brow;
Ah! We could not then understand the depth
Of your love for us---but now---*

*We, too, have stood by the bedside
Of our own, when they were racked with pain,
And how those half-forgotten memories
Come trooping back again.*

*Of the days when we were children,
And you a mother young,
How we used to sit close beside you
As some old sweet song you sung.*

*Those wonderful happy hours
Cannot be described by pen;
We could not then realize it
But now since we are women and men---*

*We know that we of all children
Have indeed been wonderfully blessed,
By having both Father and Mother
Of all the world the best.*

Tornado Detection Research Begins at West Texas State

WTSU-Tornado detection research underway at West Texas State University needs the help of the Panhandle's citizens in reporting funnel formations in the region.

George Hale, WTSU physics instructor, is monitoring storm noise emissions in hopes of identifying characteristics that would lead to early detection of tornadoes.

"During the coming season we will process the storm emission data to find correlations between the formation of tornado funnels and the changes in the kinds of storm noise we receive and record on our equipment," Hale says.

"If a tornado funnel forms but is not reported, this would lead to errors in our conclusions."

A National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration weather teletype will be placed in the Science Center for WTSU students to watch so they may alert Hale to storms within a 125-mile radius of Canyon.

"Keeping informed of storms within the region of study, but not obviously in sight from Canyon, will be one of our bigger problems," Hale says.

The researcher will also receive National Weather Service data for this storm season, but with a delay of up to three months.

The WT instructor and his assistants, Jamie Martin of Canyon and Darryl Maddox of Borger, need information on the exact time the funnel forms, its duration, location, direction, appearance, amount of damage and whether any lightning or hail is associated with it. A written report should be mailed within a day of the funnel sighting.

"This is particularly important with regard to storms that occur in rural areas where there are likely to be few observers," Hale says.

"The public might have the mistaken impression that all tornadoes are identified by weather radar," he continues. "However, Bill Frank, meteorologist in charge at the National Weather Service Office in Amarillo, has informed me that only about 15 percent of tornadoes are represented on radar by a characteristic 'hook echo.'"

Hale will be looking in very low, high and very high frequency ranges for some kind of "fingerprint" or characteristic radiation of a tornado. His station is directly beneath the roof of the WTSU Science Center, and only a short distance from the equipment's antennae.

"One piece of equipment, called a 'tornado detector,' identifies about 75 percent of the tornadoes in its range but also has a false alarm rate of 75 percent, Hale notes.

It monitors high frequencies, and counts electrical pulses of certain strength and duration. If the detector counts more than impulses a minute, a yellow light flashes, indicating a tornado is near.

Hale is still working on a design for a very low frequency monitor. With it, he hopes to gather data on the observation that in very low frequencies the storm noise will go quiet when a tornado forms.

"The practical goal of this study is to acquire data and knowledge that will lead to a more reliable detection and warning system for tornadoes," Hale says. "I want to emphasize that an understanding of what causes a storm or of what is happening during the storm is not synonymous with an intention to try to modify weather systems to prevent tornadoes.

"Tornadoes may have beneficial aspects that are not apparent when we think only in terms of loss of property or loss of life. We do not understand the interplay among the intricate mechanisms at work in our atmosphere sufficiently well at the present time to know with any certainty what the outcome of such a 'modification dream' would be."

Information about tornado sightings should be sent to George Hale, WTSU Department of Physics, Box 248, WT Station, Canyon, Texas 79016.
