White backs JC budget cuts

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov. Mark White Thursday said he has proposed 17.6-percent cuts in junior college appropriations because they "have some other opportunities for making up shortfalls."

Junior colleges would take a particularly hard hit under the $1.4 billion budget cutting plan the governor unveiled Wednesday.

House Speaker Gib Lewis' proposal calls for about a 13-percent cut while Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby has endorsed the 11.2-percent reduction for junior colleges that the Texas College and University Coordinating Board has offered up.

For Midland College, those cuts amount to $901,000 under White's plan, $665,000 in Lewis' proposal and $541,000 under Hobby's version.

At Odessa College, White's plan would cut $1.2 million, Lewis' takes $854,000 and Hobby's $736,000.

"I do not like to cut education at any point, no one does," White told reporters Thursday at his weekly press conference.

"But the important thing is we had to make cuts some place."

"It's basically an effort trying to touch areas that have some other opportunities for making up shortfalls, and this is one of them," he said.

White said he would work with the individual junior colleges to try to avoid forcing them to increase their local property taxes.

The governor said his staff first came up with a 20-percent cut for junior colleges.

"I said that was too extensive and we dropped it dramatically."

For upper-level and four-year institutions, White's plan proposes 7.2-percent cuts.

For the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, that would amount to a $462,000 cut from its $6.6 million 1987 appropriation.

Parrish: Funding cuts may mean eliminating programs, personnel

Deep cuts in higher education funding from the state next year could mean the elimination of programs and personnel at Midland College, a school official said Thursday.

Gov. Mark White Wednesday said he has proposed 17.6 percent cuts in junior college appropriations because they "have some other opportunities for making up shortfalls."

For Midland College, those cuts amount to $901,000 while Odessa College could lose about $1.2 million in state aid.

"If those figures get bounced around it could kill us," Midland College President Dr. Jess Parrish said.

Local medical clinic treats children of financially needy

By JANE DEES
Staff Writer

"The clinic averages about 13 children a day in the summer...but that rate will go up to about 25..."
— Teresa Deso, clinic coordinator

It has been suggested that the only businesses "booming" in Midland are those who provide aid to the financially needy. Such is the case at the Community Children's Clinic.

Lodged between a parking lot and several buildings at 307½ N. Weatherford, the clinic gives medical care and needed medicine to any eligible child under the age of 15, for a flat fee of $5.

Eligibility requirements are not written in stone, Teresa Deso, clinic coordinator said, but it must be determined that the family could not afford a physician's visit for the child.

Ms. Deso said the clinic was formed by the Midland Presbyterian Corporate Ministry in June 1983 and is supported by local foundations, churches, organizations, businesses and individuals.

"We receive no funding from the government whatsoever. That usually involves a lot of red tape that we would rather deal without," Ms. Deso said.

The clinic's budget for 1986 was $75,000, Ms. Deso said, and that goes to paying the staff physician and pharmacist as well as buying medicine for the clinic and maintenance expenses.

Expansion is planned which would add a contagious disease waiting and treatment room and expand the regular waiting room, thus doubling the size of the 750-square-foot clinic, Ms. Deso said.

"As it stands now, if a child has an an infectious disease, as was the case with the child who came in last week with hepatitis, they have to sit in their car until they are examined because we can't take the chance of his infecting other children," Billie Bessellieu, a clinic volunteer said.

Ms. Deso said the yearly patient average has just about doubled every year since the clinic opened.

"The clinic averages about 13 children a day in the summer, the majority of which are Mexican-American, but that rate will go up to about 25 when the fall starts and kids go back to school," Ms. Deso said.

"The number of Mexican-Americans can add to the problem of educating the parents, but we have translators volunteering to help us.

"We're even learning some Spanish ourselves," Ms. Bessellieu said.

She added that as well as providing necessary care for needy children, the clinic provides a place for people to serve and share God's love.

"This is just another example of the spirit of Midland — people working together to help the community."

Panel OKs amendment banning state income tax

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Without a word of public testimony, the House Ways and Means Committee has passed a constitutional amendment prohibiting a personal income tax.

With approval from the full House and the Senate, meeting here in the third day of a special session, the proposition would appear on the November general election ballot.

The committee met on the House floor Thursday just five minutes after Chairman Stan Schlueter, D-Salado, asked the 13-member panel to assemble around his desk.

Asked why he did not hold a public hearing on the matter, Schlueter said, "We've had one for the last 10 years,...You have the same people come on both sides."

Rep. Dan Morales, D-San Antonio, cast the lone vote against the proposed amendment, although he said he does not favor an income tax for Texas.

"I simply don't think the Constitution is the appropriate vehicle with which to draw state policy relative to taxation," Morales said. "It's very similar to passing a constitutional amendment prohibiting the state from giving the Alamo back to Mexico.

"We simply don't need it."

Rep. Ron Lewis, D-Mauriceville, joined the rest of the committee in supporting the amendment.

"As far as I'm concerned it (an income tax) is not an option we have," Lewis said. "It's not a political option. It's not an economic option."

By a 7-5 vote, the committee rejected a plan to add a corporate income tax to the proposed ban.

Schlueter said corporate executives don't want such a prohibition because they fear that would force future Legislatures to impose specific industry taxes — such as a refinery tax or a timber tax — if they need to raise revenues.

"We'll have the corporate battle on the (House) floor," he said.

Gov. Mark White told reporters later that he prefers a ban on all income taxes.

"The way in which we have suggested this, I think, will be a magnet for new industry coming to Texas and will avoid the need for taxes that are being feared by those individuals," the governor said.

An aide to Schlueter said House leaders will determine when the amendment will come up for floor debate.

Schlueter said two senators have indicated they would sponsor the measure if and when it passes the House.

Asked what chance it has in the Senate, which defeated a similar measure last year, Schlueter said "less than even."

Lawmaker: Agencies should re-check security clearances

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first defection to Moscow by a former CIA officer shows that U.S. spy agencies should step up re-investigations of employees' security clearances, Senate Intelligence Committee vice chairman Patrick Leahy says.

The Vermont Democrat said ex-CIA agent Edward Howard, 34, had done "serious damage" to U.S. spying in the Soviet Union, but he and other U.S. officials refused to spell out the harm for fear of telling the Soviets even more.

Asked about a published report that Howard "wiped out (the CIA's) Moscow station," a senior U.S. intelligence official, requesting anonymity, replied, "Maybe it would be good for the Soviets to believe that."

Meeting reporters in the Capitol Thursday, Leahy said, "Both the CIA and the FBI realize there were problems in handling this case and steps have been taken by (CIA Director William) Casey and (FBI Director William) Webster to correct them and not sweep them under the rug."

Leahy said there was no way to halt defections, but he said they might be limited if U.S. intelligence agencies would "do a better job of on-going screening and on-going checks of people with access to classified information."

Casey conceded that every U.S. intelligence agency is behind schedule in reinvestigating its employees for security risks.

A congressional source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said that since the spate of spy cases last year, U.S. agencies were "giving greater emphasis to re-checking the employees they've already hired."

This source declined to describe other changes, "because you don't want to broadcast to the other side what you've done." But Leahy said there have been changes in internal procedures at the CIA and FBI and improved liaison between the two agencies.

The government has acknowledged that a year after he was fired by the CIA in June 1983, Howard, still smarting over his dismissal, had told former agency co-workers that he had contemplated entering the Soviet Embassy in Washington and telling what he knew. This information was not given to the FBI for more than a year.

Leahy said he expects the Soviets "will do a great deal to show him living well and to trumpet him. I expect to see him brought out a lot to make all kinds of statements. I caution you to take them with a grain of salt. They will try to make it a very big event to try to get others to defect."

Howard had been trained to become a clandestine CIA agent in Moscow posing as a U.S. Embassy budget officer. He was fired before beginning that job because a polygraph test suggested he had used illegal drugs and engaged in petty theft.

The FBI was put on Howard's trail last fall by Soviet KGB defector Vitaly Yurchenko, who himself returned to the Soviet Union last year.

Last September, Howard, then a budget analyst for the New Mexico legislature, eluded FBI agents watching his house, days before he was charged with selling secrets to the Soviets in Austria in 1984 for $6,000.

Last October, U.S. sources said he had been spotted in Finland and was presumed to have gone to the Soviet Union. Sources close to the Howard family have since said his credit cards were being used in Costa Rica, but one federal official said he might have given them to someone else to confuse his pursuers.

U.S. intelligence officials were quick to point out that Howard "was the first ex-CIA official that's ever wound up in Moscow. Scores have come the other way."

Leahy said, "Whenever the (Soviet) KGB (spy agency) has had someone defect to the United States, it has caused damage to the Soviet Union, so it's only logical to assume that when we have a defector it damages the United States.

"You just have to assume it's serious damage, but I don't think the extent of the damage will ever be made public. Nor should it be," Leahy said.

FDIC: Economy taking toll on larger banks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The failure of First Citizens Bank in Dallas, among others, is being viewed by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation as a sign that the battered energy and agriculture economies are taking their toll on larger lending institutions.

The Thursday closing is the 86th failure nationwide and the 14th in Texas this year, the FDIC said, establishing a record for the number of bank closures in one state in a year.

The previous record was shared last year by Oklahoma and Nebraska with 13 bank closures apiece.

"The average size of the failure that we're dealing with this year is greater than the average size of all the failures we dealt with last year," FDIC spokesman Alan Whitney said.

First Citizens Bank was closed Thursday by Texas banking commissioner James Sexton, who cited a high concentration of energy-related loans, liberal lending practices and inadequate loan administration for the failure.

The FDIC was appointed as receiver of the bank's $93.8 million in assets.

Dallas County District Attorney Henry Wade, a nationally known prosecutor, was chairman of the board of First Citizens Bank. Wade will retire as district attorney Jan. 1, 1987 after holding the post for 36 years.

Wade, who rose to national prominence when he prosecuted Jack Ruby in the 1963 slaying of accused presidential assassin Lee Harvey Oswald, could not be reached for comment on the bank closing Thursday, the Dallas Times Herald reported today. The newspaper said it was unable to learn the extent of Wade's investment in the failed bank.

Dallas bankers told the newspaper Wade had been with the bank for about 10 years.

More than 15,000 deposit accounts totaling $88.9 million were being acquired by a newly-chartered subsidiary of Grand Bancshares Inc., which planned to reopen the bank this morning as Grand Bank Northeast, the agency announced.

"It certainly does reflect that the continuing stress in certain parts of the economy, specificially energy and agriculture, is reaching a wider universe of banks," Whitney said.

He added that federal regulators expect a total of 150 banks nationwide will have been shut down by the end of the year, compared with 120 failures in 1985.

Grand Bank Northeast agreed to pay the FDIC a purchase premium of $1,005,500. It also will purchase certain loans and assets of the failed bank for $73.5 million, the FDIC said.

The FDIC also planned to advance $14.9 million to the assuming bank and retain assets of the failed bank with a book value of about $20.3 million.

The transaction is subject to approval by the appropriate court.

'Adopting' cows can help farmers' plight

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — The lure of adopting a bovine has brought dozens of calls from school children, a West Coast radio announcer and others who empathize with the plight of drought-plagued farmers.

"Who can turn down those beautiful brown eyes of a cow? They're really beautiful animals," said Sheila Thompson, a Charleston artist who came up with the idea.

The $140 adoption fee is the estimated cost of feeding a cow between now and spring, when South Carolina farmers hope to draw on their home-grown feed supplies again.

The plight of the cows also brought a quick response from Arlene Baker, who operates a gift shop called Everything Cows in Stowe, Vt.

"This is a dairy state and everyone is very sympathetic to what's happening in the Southeast," she said, adding she plans to offer the adopt-a-cow certificates at her shop, which sells "everything from cow T-shirts to cow planters to cow pottery."

At San Francisco's KYUU-FM, employees chipped in to adopt a cow.

"For people in the metropolitan area, it's a way to get involved," said newscaster Vickie Jenkins, who grew up on an Illinois cattle farm.

But she said some of the staff members wanted more information before investing.

"One wanted a prospectus on what the investment allowed," she said. "One wanted a steak and another wanted a quart of milk."

The adoptions are being offered by a recently formed group known as Farmers Assistance Relief Mission (FARM), which has an initial goal of raising $1 million to continue shipments of hay and feed into the state.

The $140 entitles the adoptive parent to name the animal and to a certificate suitable for framing.

"If they have more money, we'll do whatever they want," said Michael Rose, a Summerville attorney and businessman who founded FARM. "They can call it and have the cow talk to them over the phone. Or they can stop by and visit the cow on their way to Florida.

"The sky is the limit. You tell us what you want for your cow and if you pay for it, we'll get it."

Most of the offers for help come over the phone and the agency hasn't been able to make a complete accounting yet of how much has been raised or how many offers they've received.

Some people are so anxious to help a cow, they've found Rose's home phone number and the family is getting 20 to 30 calls a day, said his wife, Vivian.

"The phone just rings and rings. The calls come from all over the United States. I'm overwhelmed," she said.

Mrs. Thompson said the idea came to her after she saw news accounts of struggling farmers.

One person who will adopt a cow is Gail Loveless, a former New Yorker who works at the Amdahl Corp. in California's high-tech Silicon Valley and whose brother-in-law is a South Carolina extension agent.

"We thought we would adopt a guernsey," she said, noting she and her husband keep a single guernsey at a nearby farm and tend it on weekends.

Pupils at the Westside First Church of God in West Columbia will donate the offering from their week-long vacation Bible school to adopt a cow, said school director Nancy Harrell.

She added that the offering, usually about $170, has been sent in the past to an orphanage. But many of the pupils, who range in age from 2 to 11, know about the problems the farmers are facing.

Rose said there are plenty of cows that need adopting, noting that there are 316,000 cows on farms across South Carolina.

Georgia school openings delayed

Associated Press

Two parched counties in Georgia have delayed school openings for 5,000 students because of the drought, while supermarkets in Atlanta offered bottled water at cost and a zoo with dwindling hay supplies pleaded for help.

With losses from the drought estimated at more than $2.3 billion, agriculture commissioners in seven parched Southeastern states are heading to Washington today to lobby for more aid.

The commissioners from North Carolina, Florida, Virginia, Alabama, Georgia, Maryland and South Carolina planned to meet today with their congressional delegations and with Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng, said Reggie Hall, spokesman for South Carolina's commissioner, Les Tindal.

The lobbying comes a day after Lyng approved disaster assistance for Georgia's 159 counties, making farmers eligible for low-interest loans, subsidized feed and re-seeding programs.

"It's certainly needed and it's something that should've already been done, because it's certainly a disaster," said Doug Chastain, general manager of the Georgia Farm Bureau Marketing Association.

Florida Gov. Bob Graham on Thursday asked the USDA for disaster aid for 12 counties, bringing to 21 the number for which he has asked federal assistance. Gov. Arch Moore of West Virginia was expected to ask Lyng today for drought relief for two counties.

The drought, meanwhile, forced at least a week's delay of the school year in Georgia's Pierce and Bacon counties. Officials postponed the reopening of schools until Sept. 2 so students can help with the tobacco harvest, which was delayed by the combination of a wet spring and the summer drought.

Because of the water shortage in Atlanta, Kroger Co. and Food Giant supermarket chains are selling some bottled water at 49 cents a gallon, slightly less than half the usual retail price.

Report alleges Deaver committed perjury during testimony

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House panel investigating lobbying by Michael K. Deaver is studying a report detailing allegations of possible perjury by the former presidential aide during his congressional testimony May 16.

The report recommends that an independent counsel already investigating conflict-of-interest charges against Deaver consider "several items of serious conflict in Mr. Deaver's testimony before the committee under oath," said Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., who heads the Energy and Commerce oversight and investigations subcommittee.

The report, which will be considered Tuesday by the subcommittee at a closed session, recommends that independent counsel Whitney North Seymour Jr. study evidence "of possible perjury before the committee," Dingell said Thursday.

It asks Seymour to "inquire into whether or not indictments for criminal misbehavior should be acted upon," the chairman said.

The report also will include evidence of possible criminal violation of ethics laws by Deaver as detailed by the General Accounting Office, he said.

The GAO investigation concluded that Deaver may have violated the Ethics in Government Act by lobbying for Canada about the issue of acid rain, which he dealt with while deputy White House staff director.

A longtime associate of President Reagan and his wife, Nancy, Deaver left the White House in May 1985 — two months before he signed a $150,000 contract to represent the government of Canada.

The evidence of possible perjury is "based on his testimony, which appears to be in conflict against other allegations received by the committee and regards the facts," Dingell said.

Noting that Howard's defection has been reported by Izvestia, assistant FBI director William Baker said, "We certainly give a lot of credence to the Soviets' public remarks. We have no reason to believe they are untrue."

He would not discuss the damage Howard had done.

Last year, U.S. sources said the CIA had lost contact with a Soviet citizen in Moscow who had long provided valuable information about high-technology electronics and aviation research.

Other published reports suggested that Howard had known the method by which the CIA contacted this spy and others working for the United States inside the Soviet Union.

One published report said that since Howard's work for the Soviets became public, five U.S. intelligence officers in the Soviet Union had been apprehended by Soviet authorities while on spying errands and expelled from the country. Three expulsions of U.S. diplomats have been publicly reported by the U.S. government during that period.

Parrish said White's proposal to cut 17.6 percent from community college budgets is "totally inconsistent" with his recommendation to cut 7.2 percent from university budgets.

For the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, that would amount to a $462,000 cut from its $6.6 million 1987 appropriation.

"I think it's totally out of line with the lip service he's given to the support of education in this state," Parrish said.

Parrish said White's theory that community colleges can make up the shortfall out of the local tax base is "unfair" because "our local tax base is already pushed to the limit."

"We've already lost 10 percent of our appraisal value," he added.

Parrish said he would not consider increasing local taxes, but rather make up the $900,000 shortfall by cutting programs, personnel and other expenses.

Parrish said the possible cuts — to be implemented in phases — would include $199,000 in equipment, five instructional positions, two custodial positions and a media technician.

Further cuts would include the elimination of one administrative position, three instructional positions, closing the campus on weekends, $180,000 in telephone, postal and supply costs and $55,000 in library acquistions.

Parrish said he also may recommend cutting another $90,000 in equipment costs, eliminate one of the college's two summer sessions and $45,000 in program costs.

"All of those (cuts) are necessary because of the reduction of state funding," Parrish said.

Midland College earlier this year joined Texas' 48 junior colleges in implementing salary, promotion and hiring freezes, travel restrictions and fewer new program offerings.

Although Parrish said he would not recommend cuts in salaries, he vowed nothing is sacred.

"If the state cuts our funding by more than 20 percent, that would have to be the next step," he said.

The Legislature appropriated about $10 million to Midland College for the 1986-87 fiscal years based on its enrollment; however, those funds can be used only for instructional programs and instruction-related services.

"We understand the need for cuts," said Parrish. "We expect them to be equitable that's all."

Woman's craft hobby just accidentally earns her money

MEXIA, Texas (AP) — Shirley Edwards says she is accident-prone. But the kind of accidents she means are not misfortunes.

The Tehuacana woman says she has dabbled in craft hobbies all her life, and stumbled onto ideas that recently have been making her money.

"When I designed a wooden necklace for my grandson's kindergarten teacher as a gift for Valentine's Day, I had no idea that it would be such a hit," Mrs. Edwards said.

But now the simple accessories have become so popular that Mrs. Edwards and her good friend and partner, Margadelle Yelverton, dubbed "Two Sawing Grandmas" by local building suppliers, spend nearly every waking minute designing, cutting and painting the jewelry. They keep her husband's store in Mexia stocked, along with other shops in Will's Point, Rockwall, Corsicana, Stonewall, Plano and Dallas.

Last month Mrs. Edwards' how-to book, "Primitive and Pretty Jewelry" hit the shelves in craft stores everywhere.

"We cut the decorative shapes during the day and paint them at night," Mrs. Edwards says. "I really enjoy it, but it has turned into a lot of work. And it has taken over my house."

The women do all the woodworking in a workshop adjacent to Mrs. Edwards' log home located just outside Tehuacana.

But her worktable for painting has been moved to living room so she can enjoy television at night. Mrs. Yelverton takes work home at night, too.

The first necklace made for Mrs. Edwards' grandson's teacher featured black and red wooden beads accompanied with a little red schoolhouse, slates and pencils. From that idea, the pair have carved out a variety of theme necklaces.

Perhaps the most popular has been the Sesquicentennial necklace with its red, white and blue beads and a big Texas-shaped adornment. Another version of the Sesquicentennial necklace is pale blue and natural with hand-painted bluebonnets on the Texas-shaped cutout.

"We really haven't gone out peddling them. Their popularity has just sort of grown by word of mouth. And, of course, we wear them all the time wherever we go. We've even sold them off our necks," Mrs. Edwards laughed.

A friend who attended the Republican State Convention in Dallas in June did quite a business in between meetings with the red, white and blue elephant necklaces, she said.

And while Mrs. Yelverton was touring Washington D.C. this summer, she left Sesquicentennial necklaces with Wendy Gramm, wife of Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, and Barbara Bush, wife of Vice President George Bush, who also accepted a necklace to be delivered to first lady Nancy Reagan.

The Sesquicentennial necklaces have even been exported to West Germany via the wives of the former World War II German prisoners of war who visited Mexia in June.

"The German ladies had a fit over the Texas necklaces and just about bought us out," said Mrs. Edwards.

But their efforts haven't stopped with the Sesquicentennial theme.

"I lay awake at night thinking up new ideas," Mrs. Edwards said.

She is working with clothing stores across the state to coordinate the necklaces with particlar outfits.

"One store wanted some fish necklaces and it turned out that the ones we came up with were the perfect color. And it was all just by accident," Mrs. Edwards said.

Other custom orders have swamped the "Sawing Grandmas." Specialty shops in the Fredericksburg and Stonewall area have requested peach necklaces with "LBJ Country" painted on them.

After making more than 700 necklaces in just five months, Mrs. Edwards and Mrs. Yelverton say they are a little concerned about getting over their heads. But they still want to keep the business a two-woman operation.

"We want to do what we can handle well. We don't want it to outgrow the two of us. Besides, we know this will come and go like all fashion crazes," Mrs. Edwards said.

The necklaces aren't the only accident that has turned into business for Mrs. Edwards. She also has made a kit for sale that combines cross stitch with fabric painting.

"I just had a dumb idea that lucked out," she said.

Public Utilities: AT&T should be allowed to set state's long distance rates by '89

AUSTIN (AP) — AT&T Communications should be allowed to set its own long distance rates in Texas beginning in 1989, the Public Utility Commission staff says in a deregulation proposal.

The recommendation was sent to the commission Thursday. No hearing has been set.

AT&T competitors, who are not regulated by the PUC, say AT&T must remain regulated because of its size.

"Obviously we are competing with someone who has by far the vast portion of the market share," said Paul Herrmann, an Austin lawyer who represents Sprint, one of AT&T's major competitors in Texas.

But AT&T officials say consumers might benefit from deregulation, which was among the goals of the court-ordered 1984 breakup of the Bell System.

"It appears from the proposed rules that the PUC staff recognizes Texas, like most other states, needs to move from a regulated to a non-regulated telecommunications marketplace," said Pres Sheppard, an AT&T vice president.

Don Butler, an Austin lawyer who represents cities in utility cases, said the PUC staff proposal is a bad one.

"It would turn AT&T loose to do its thing, which is to undercut its competition ultimately at the expense of all the ratepayers in Texas once its driven its competition out of business," he said.

Death row escapee captured, to return to corrections unit

GRAFORD (AP) — Richard Donald "Stony" Foster, a Death Row inmate who had been at large since his escape from a county jail on Sunday, was captured Thursday night after a chase near this Palo Pinto County community, authorities said.

Graford is about 15 miles northwest of Mineral Wells, near Possum Kingdom Lake.

David Wells, a spokesman for the Texas Department of Public Safety in Austin, said Foster commandeered a pickup truck Thursday night on Park Road 36 on the east shore of Possum Kingdom Lake and took a male hostage.

Law enforcement officers searching in the area found Foster and the hostage when the truck tried to run a roadblock set up as part of the search, Wells said.

"The pickup did not stop at the roadblock — it ran the roadblock...the officers there on the scene (fired) at the tires of the pickup."

The rear tires blew, and Foster and the unidentified hostage were found inside the truck unharmed about 10:30 p.m., Wells said.

Bill Pilgrim, a reserve deputy with the Palo Pinto County sheriff's department, said Foster had earlier ordered his hostage, a teen-ager, to drive him out of the area when they came upon the roadblock by officers of the DPS and Palo Pinto County sheriff's office on State Highway 254, which leads from Possum Kingdom Lake to Graford.

The sheriff's department had been tipped that Foster might be in the area.

Woman's death in fire ruled intentional killing

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The Bexar County Medical Examiner's office ruled that the death of a 21-year-old woman, who apparently tried to rescue her cat instead of fleeing her fire-engulfed apartment, was an intentional killing.

County Chief Medical Examiner Dr. Vincent DiMaio said he made the homicide ruling in the case of Leslie Saunders because arson investigators believe the fire in the northwest-side apartment was intentionally set.

DiMaio said toxicology tests are pending. But he said nothing was revealed during the autopsy to suggest the woman had been assaulted prior to the fire.

He ruled smoke inhalation was the cause of death. Arson investigators said late Thursday they have a suspect in the case.

Body found near El Paso

EL PASO (AP) — A cause of death had not yet been determined after officials identified a decomposed body found near El Paso as that of John F. Thompson, 59, an auto executive missing since late last week.

Family members had been looking for Thompson since Friday, when he left his office in the Ford Motor Co. plant in Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, just across the Rio Grande from El Paso.

The body of a man who had been dead for about a week was found late Wednesday night in an abandoned airstrip behind the Sunland Park, N.M., racetrack on the outskirts of El Paso, said Capt. Paul Venema, head of investigations with the Sunland Park police department.

The body was identified as Thompson's Thursday by the Office of Medical Investigation at Albuquerque, N.M. An autopsy is pending.

Hope for missing girl slim

DALLAS (AP) — Police here say they have little hope that a girl found on a street corner in California is a girl who has been missing from Dallas since Dec. 26, 1983.

A spokesman says they doubt the girl found on the street corner in San Bernardino, Calif., is Amber Nicole Crum, missing since she vanished while accompanying her mother's live-in boyfriend on a trip to a neighborhood store.

"We were told (by San Bernardino police) that there is a resemblence," said Lt. David James of Dallas Police Youth Division.

"The girl gave a date of birth within a few days of Amber's," James said. "That's unusual that a girl would remmber her date of birth but not her name. But the eyes are a different color. We consider this a very, very slim lead."

Winnie Mandela, journalists detained

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Anti-apartheid activist Winnie Mandela, opposition legislator Helen Suzman and nine journalists were detained for 30 minutes today at a school in the black township of Soweto.

Mrs. Suzman, a white representative of the Progressive Federal Party, had gone to visit Mrs. Mandela at her Soweto home, and was accompanied by a CBS television network crew, local photographers and British and American reporters.

Afterward, Mrs. Mandela, Mrs. Suzman and the journalists went to the Phefeni secondary school, about 200 yards from Mrs. Mandela's home in the township outside Johannesburg, and walked into the principal's office.

The principal had not expected the visit, which lasted only a few minutes. As the group was leaving the school grounds, they were detained for about a half-hour at the entrance to the school, and eventually released.

Under the state of emergency imposed June 12, journalists are barred from describing the activities of security forces without official permission, naming detainees or publishing what the government considers to be subversive statements.

Detentions have routinely been reported once the detainees have been released.

Mrs. Mandela is the wife of Nelson Mandela, jailed leader of the African National Congress, the main black guerrilla organization fighting to overthrow apartheid.

In East London in the Cape province, offices housing several anti-apartheid organizations and trade unions were ransacked and set on fire overnight, causing an estimated $19,500 in damage.

"It seems the doors of our offices were forced open and files were removed. Some were taken to our library where an attempt was made to burn them," said Vangiwe Matyunjwa, secretary to human rights attorney Hasmoeg Lalla.

The lawyer has been involved in several Supreme Court petitions for the release of people detained under the emergency.

Ms. Matyunjwa said office equipment and books were strewn about inside the offices of the South African Council for Higher Education, the National Allied Automobile Workers Union, the Commercial Catering and Allied Workers Union and the Congress of South African Trade Unions, which had offices in the same building.

The building is across the street from a police station. A policeman heard a noise, saw flames coming out of the windows and called the fire brigade at 12:45 a.m., said Police Lt. Dot Ven der Vyver.

A Swedish woman who had been detained for 47 days and then given the choice of leaving the country or spending another 180 days in jail and being charged with an unspecified crime said she was leaving for Sweden tonight.

Annica Van Gylswyk, who has lived in South Africa for 30 years and is married to a South African businessman in Pretoria, said she would like to return, "but only if I am absolutely sure I will not be arrested and charged the moment I set my foot back in the country.

She is head of the Pretoria branch of Black Sash, a women's volunteer agency that gives advice and aid to blacks and people of mixed race in dealing with the apartheid laws.

The government-controlled South African Broadcasting Corp. aired a commentary today on the lengthy inspections conducted by customs agents at the Zimbabwe border for goods going into and coming from that country and Zambia.

The checks began a day after Zambia and Zimbabwe joined four other Commonwealth nations in voting for economic sanctions against South Africa. Zambia and Zimbabwe are landlocked and depend heavily on trade and transportation routes through South Africa.

The South African goverment said the extra checks at the border were part of a statistical survey. It said that since sanctions are coming, it needs detailed information about how much traffic and trade comes from Zimbabwe and Zambia, in order to be prepared for economic changes.

Car bomb kills at least 17, injures 83 people in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — An explosive-packed brown Fiat left behind by a young blond woman blew up today at a crowded shopping area in Moslem west Beirut, killing 17 people and wounding 83, police said.

The attack, for which there was no immediate claim of resposibility, was the third deadly car bombing in the Lebanese capital in less than two weeks.

Police had earlier reported 25 people killed, but issued the correction after double-checking with various hospital morgues.

They said the Fiat contained 110 pounds of explosives and had been parked in front of Al-Bashaer apartment building by a woman about 25 years old, who apparently left the scene before the bomb went off.

Hospitals broadcast urgent appeals for blood donations to treat the casualties.

The blast, which came just before noon in Tarik Jedideh district, scarred the facades of Al-Bashaer and another seven-story apartment building. A dozen shops on the buildings' ground floors were demolished, their contents strewn over a 100-yard radius.

Firefighters controlled the blaze in the two apartment buildings after two hours.

U.S. bishop to seek Syrian aid in helping free hostages

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — The head of a North American Orthodox church says he will ask Syrian leaders to help seek the release of Americans held in Lebanon because their continued captivity is damaging the image of Arabs.

The church leader, Archbishop Philip Saliba, who is of Arab descent, said Thursday he brought letters to Damascus from the families of the hostages and a petition signed by thousands of Americans and Canadians of Arab origin appealing for their release.

"We'd like to see an end to this," Saliba said. "I don't think the captivity of these three people is contributing to the image of Arab people around the world."

Saliba is head of the New Jersey-based Antiochan Orthodox Archdiocese in North America.

He arrived in Damascus on Wednesday and said he was scheduled to meet with Syrian Vice-President Abdul-Halim Khaddam, Foreign Minister Farouk al-Sharaa and Parliament speaker Mahmoud al-Zoubi over the next two weeks.

Government leaders in Syria, the main power broker in war-divided Lebanon, have said they are doing all they can to secure the release of the hostages.

A Shiite Moslem extremist group, Islamic Jihad, has claimed it killed one of the Americans and one Frenchman, but no bodies have been found.

Two weeks ago, the kidnappers freed an American priest, the Rev. Lawrence Martin Jenco, of Joliet, Ill., after 1½ years in captivity.

Islamic Jihad claims to be holding missing Americans Terry Anderson, 38, chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press; Thomas Sutherland, 55, acting dean of agriculture at the American University of Beirut, and David Jacobsen, 55, director of the university's hospital.

Equality's the key

The United States may support the concept of racial equality, but the nation has a long way to go before it can describe equality in terms of dollars and cents.

In 1984, whites had a median income twice as high as blacks. Now, the U.S. Census Bureau has done a study showing white families had accumulated more than 10 times as much wealth as did blacks. The median net worth of the white household was $39,135, compared with only $3,397 for a black household. Nearly a third of all black families had no assets. The statistics paint a portrait of black poverty that persists despite attempts to give blacks a better shot at advancement. It conjures up the image of white families living in big ranch houses in the suburbs, and of blacks who either rent in the ghetto or buy a home in a neighborhood with perpetually low land values. The whites have their money market accounts, their savings passbooks, their IRAs. The blacks have their IOUs for their overpriced stereos, furniture and used cars.

Still, the findings weren't entirely grim. The racial wealth gap was smallest — although still significant — between white and black two-parent families. Some of that disparity undoubtedly results from historic wage and educational inequalities. And with better school and job opportunities, young black families may well be able to keep up with their white peers.

On the other hand, the prognosis for the masses of female-headed black families is desperate. These mothers, with everything going against them, are in danger of becoming a permanent underclass. Because they are black, they suffer the lingering stigma of past racial prejudice. Many are high-school dropouts with no job skills. They suffer doubly because women of all races still are paid far less on the average than men. They have the option of welfare or survival in a dead-end job. Their children suffer because there aren't enough after-school programs for them. They often find their day care in the streets.

We can't ignore the ghettos where blacks accumulate little more than misery. To do so is to court unrest and violence. We must do a better job of tailoring our social policies so that poor blacks feel that with hard work, they can one day have a decent home they can call their own.

In a word, we must have equality.

Another View:
Election year harvest

Election years have never brought out the best in Bob Dole. As orchestrator of the current effort to keep the Senate in Republican hands, he is once again letting a close contest cloud his judgment.

We have in mind his successful high-pressuring of the administration on wheat sales to the Soviet Union.

This administration — American conservatives generally — has a mixed history on the hard subject of commerce with the Soviet Union.

One of the president's earliest acts in office was to cast aside the Carter grain embargo. But his is also the administration that fought the Soviet gas pipeline to Europe, in part on grounds that it would greatly benefit the Soviets and leave the Europeans too dependent on them.

A minimal position for both the administration and those with Dole's general approach to foreign affairs would seem to be that the United States should not subsidize the Soviet Union, and particularly not at the expense of such allies as Australia and Argentina.

They, too, export wheat, for the most part apparently well within the rules, meaning without blatant subsidy, and they will now lose, or fear they will, insofar as U.S. farmers gain.

The case of Argentina, a vulnerable democracy that needs foreign sales to service large foreign debts, including debts to U.S. banks, is particularly poignant.

So internally the State Department fought subsidies. It was right — and it lost.

Dole, unencumbered on this issue by either memory or breadth of vision, powered straight ahead, and the White House buckled. The solution was a compromise, an effort to support and buy off the farm-state Republicans as cheaply as possible.

It went too far, even so. You actually don't need to reach the issue of what our posture should be toward the Soviet Union. Farm-export subsidies of the kind in question here are poor policy, no matter whom they go to.

The farm problem is familiar. Grain and other staple prices, on the strength of which decisions are made to grow and buy, are set partly by the government.

In recent years they have been set too high. Too much has been grown, and world buyers have turned to other countries, whose prices have been lower.

The way to correct this is to lower government supports. Last year's farm bill started to do this, but slowly; the farm-state senators and congressmen who wrote it were reluctant to squeeze constituents too hard.

Export subsidies are an effort to skip the pain by shifting more burden from farmers to taxpayers. The government lifts the price to farmers, then cuts it to foreign buyers; it pays double, but the fundamentals are untouched. Competitors are led to retaliate; you can drain the Treasury just to stand still.

But in Congress just now, in Bob Dole's Senate particularly, this doesn't matter. They're not selling wheat up there; they're buying votes — and trampling the better instincts of their own administration in the process.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 8, 1974, President Richard M. Nixon announced in a nationally broadcast address that he would resign his office at noon the following day. Nixon's decision to resign followed further erosion of his support in the wake of new revelations connected to the Watergate scandal.

On this date:

In 1588, English sea forces under Sir Francis Drake destroyed the Spanish Armada in a battle off France.

In 1815, Napoleon Bonaparte set sail for St. Helena to spend the remainder of his days in exile.

In 1844, Brigham Young was chosen to head the Mormon Church following the death of Joseph Smith.

In 1945, President Harry S. Truman signed the United Nations Charter.

In 1963, a gang of 20 to 30 thieves made off with some $7 million in Britain's Great Train Robbery.

In 1973, Vice President Spiro T. Agnew branded as "damned lies" reports he had taken kickbacks from government contracts in Maryland. He vowed not to resign.

Ten years ago: U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger arrived in Pakistan for talks with Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto.

Five years ago: Robert E. Poli, president of the striking air traffic controllers union, called for negotiations to end a nearly week-old walkout, telling Cable News Network that neither the union nor the government could win "a clean-cut victory."

One year ago: A car filled with explosives blew up at a U.S. air base outside Frankfurt, West Germany, killing two Americans.

Today's Birthdays: Actress Sylvia Sidney is 76. Sen. Robert Stafford, R.-Vt., is 73. Producer Dino DeLaurentiis is 67. Actress Esther Williams is 63. Joan Mondale, wife of former Vice President Walter Mondale, is 56. Singer Mel Tillis is 54. Actor Dustin Hoffman is 49. Actress Connie Stevens is 48. Actor Keith Carradine is 36. Gray's mission: save S&Ls from themselves

WASHINGTON — One of the toughest jobs most American families face is meeting the monthly mortgage payment. And one of the toughest jobs in the federal government is regulating the 3,200 savings and loan institutions that hold the lion's share of those home mortgages.

Jack Anderson

Edwin Gray is chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, and his Mission Impossible is to rescue the literally hundreds of thrift institutions across the country that are technically broke. Even though their problems are mainly the result of the S&L executives' own greed, Gray must try to keep the thrifts from shutting down, because that would wipe out the dwindling reserves of the fund that insures S&L depositors up to $100,000 apiece.

A bank board official told our associate Michael Binstein that thrift industry big shots have tried to pressure Gray into going to the taxpayers for a handout. He refused. What's worse from the bankers' point of view is that Gray has imposed a special assessment on the S&Ls to shore up the insurance fund.

What it boils down to is that the S&L industry wants a cheerleader, not a federal regulator who will crack down on risky and abusive banking practices. But that's not Gray's style — and with good reason.

Using federal deposit insurance as a safety net for their high-wire acts, S&L financial speculators have been sinking their depositors' money into such questionable ventures as windmills, mushroom farms, Arabian horse sperm banks, fast-food restaurants, oil fields and tire-retreading companies. They have used the government-insured funds to finance casinos, cruise ships, broadcasting stations and corporate takeovers of dubious value.

To his credit, Gray has not only resisted the S&L freebooters' piteous whines to be left to their own acquisitive devices, but he has taken some positive steps to trim their sails. Thrifts have been ordered to set aside profits to increase their capital; restrictions have been placed on their ability to make reckless investments, and the bank board has increased significantly its disciplinary actions against shady practitioners in S&L board rooms.

Thrift-industry executives who expected Gray to be a lap dog have been cruelly disillusioned by his junkyard-dog tendencies. They don't like his sober, no-nonsense economic forecasts, which undercut the misleading, pie-in-the-sky optimism that supports their high-flying financial acrobatics.

If the hostility of the S&L industry weren't daunting enough, Gray has also managed to enrage the big Wall Street brokerage houses. They want to compete with the S&Ls for consumer dollars and mortgage financing, but Gray has sturdily defended the status of the thrift industry for the lucrative home mortgage field.

A measure of Gray's success is that fellow bank regulators, who once considered the entire thrift industry a hopeless basket case, now think there may be some hope for it after all.

Gray still has miles to go before he can sleep through the night without dreams of phone calls that summon him to a crisis that could cause a chain-reaction disaster. According to a recent General Accounting Office report, the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. would be at least $7 billion in the hole if the country's 239 feeblest banks closed or had to be merged to keep them from closing.

The only good news Gray can cling to is the GAO's conclusion that 1,900 of the nation's 3,200 S&Ls are in good shape and actually growing healthier.

UNDER THE DOME: On Capitol Hill, success has many proud parents; embarrassment is an orphan. We reported recently that Rep. Bud Shuster, R-Pa., had, at the behest of Public Works Committee leaders, introduced legislation that would pay a North Dakota businessman to remove billboards the courts have said he should take down without compensation. Obviously discomfited, Shuster protested to a reporter: "It wasn't even my amendment ... I didn't even know anything about it." He said the amendment was sent over by North Dakota's two senators. But both senators told us they knew nothing about it. Another miracle of political parthenogenesis.

Death knell for Strategic Defence Initiative

WASHINGTON — Presidential aides foiled a last-ditch effort by eight leading Reaganites Wednesday to duck the protective White House cover and express concerns about the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) directly to President Reagan, chilling the president's backers and affirming his insulation.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

"You have succeeded in diluting our message," one of the eight Reaganites blurted out to White House lobbyist Will Ball. Acting on orders from White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan, Ball had phoned to report that the intimate session had been expanded to more than double its original size.

The pro-SDI eight intended a face-to-face warning: by putting deployment on the bargaining table in his letter to Soviet ruler Mikhail Gorbachev, Reagan without realizing it was "virtually issuing its death sentence" (in words used to us by Sen. Malcolm Wallop of Wyoming).

The president insists SDI is not a bargaining chip. But the story of how the Reaganite delegation put together by Rep. Jack Kemp and Wallop was denied the chance to spell out its warning may explain Reagan's apparent ignorance of the political realities in his promise to negotiate limits on SDI. Kemp and his colleagues are convinced Reagan has not been told that the mere hint of an SDI moratorium becomes an irresistible invitation to Congress to cut its funding.

Denied their cozy session, it is now clear the Reaganites never will be admitted to the Oval Office. Wallop had been trying for a solid year to talk to either the president or Don Regan.

The Reaganites had planned to appeal for early deployment of "near-term" strategic defense systems. As outlined in Reagan's letter to Gorbachev, the president is offering — in return for dubious Soviet concessions — a deployment moratorium, probably around seven years, on any anti-missile defenses.

Reagan's theory, pressed hard by chief arms negotiator Paul Nitze and Secretary of State George Shultz, is that a full-blown SDI cannot conceivably be ready for deployment for at least seven years. Since he has made clear to Gorbachev he will not retreat on research, Reagan has been assured by advisers that SDI is now protected. That, the president believes, makes the new defense system invulnerable in the post-election summit and future arms control negotiations.

This theory was sold to Reagan by Shultz, Nitze, Regan and others long suspicious of nuclear defense as a deterrent to nuclear war. But SDI supporters aware of the anti-defense sentiment rising so rapidly in Congress know that theory is a joke on Capitol Hill. A seven-year moratorium on deployment of SDI offers Gorbachev what he wants: assurance that it never will see the light of day no matter how often Reagan pledges that the Soviets cannot stop SDI "research."

In a private letter to Shultz Aug. 5, Kemp said that Reagan's seven-year offer to Gorbachev "greatly exacerbated this confusion" over whether the White House now defines SDI as only a research project. If so, "actual deployment may be up (on the table) for negotiation," while only research is protected.

"I fear we may lose SDI altogether," Kemp wrote the secretary. That is precisely the argument that the eight Reaganites were blocked from giving the president in the Oval Office.

Both the Senate and House have made drastic cuts in the SDI program for fiscal year 1987. But administration officials say privately the cuts this year are child's play compared to what will happen next year when Reagan will ask almost $6 billion.

A combination of not just research but actual deployment of limited "near-term" missile defense, started within the next year and grounded on the need to catch up to formidable Soviet systems of defense, might be more appealing on Capitol Hill. Instead of voting down endless years of no-deployment research, Congress might be voting up real protection.

This vintage sentiment that would seem to be dear to Ronald Reagan has strong support in Republican ranks from Reaganites who clearly are not right wing. Included in the Kemp-Wallop group were Sen. Pete Wilson of California, Sen. Dan Quayle of Indiana and Rep. James Courter of New Jersey. "If we do not redefine and reform the program," Quayle told us, "the White House will lose political support in Congress."

But Reagan never was allowed that uninterrupted hour with pro-SDI forces, and he never got the message. Proof of that was quick to come. Later on the same day, in an SDI briefing to contractors, the president promised: "SDI is no bargaining chip. The research is not and never has been negotiable."

He seemed once again to be saying exactly what Gorbachev wants to hear. With deployment ruled out, the Kremlin couldn't care less about research.

Manion's appointment rightfully 'political'

I'm glad that President Reagan hung tough and persuaded the Senate to confirm Dan Manion to the federal appellate court. It will be a sad day when a qualified man is denied a job on the basis of his political beliefs.

Charley Reese

That was the real beef the Manion opponents had. That, and the political beliefs of his late father who was a member of the John Birch Society — as well as dean of the law school at Notre Dame.

Joe Biden, a Delaware senator I hope never becomes president, let the cat out of the bag. Biden said to Manion, "I think you're a decent and honorable man but I do not think I can vote for you because of your political views."

A lot of politicians are hypocrites and Biden is no exception. He was lobbying a few years back for confirmation of a nominee who had strong liberal convictions and he made a big speech about how a man's political convictions should not bar him from the bench.

Of course everybody but people with an ideological bias against Manion have been laughing at the notion that the Senate — with the suddenness of the conversion of the Apostle Paul — has taken a keen interest in the qualifications of political appointees.

The hoopla about Manion not being qualified was just a subterfuge. The American Bar Association had rated him qualified. He was a practicing lawyer. He has good moral character. He graduated from a good law school. So what's the nonsense about being not qualified?

Many men who had no experience as a judge became noted judges. Everybody on the bench at some point in their career was a judge for the first time with no previous experience. Appellate judges don't run trials. They just decide points of law and anybody who can read and think logically can do that. What liberals are afraid of is that Manion won't think the way they want judges to think which is to agree with them.

Federal judgeships are political appointments and they are made by politicians for political reasons. That's always been the case. Jimmy Carter didn't appoint any conservatives, qualified or not. He managed to be 100 percent successful in finding qualified liberals to appoint. Well, Reagan is finding qualified conservatives.

I know some liberals are still reluctant to admit it, but old Dutch did win the election, not Mondale. That gives him the right to appoint people who agree with him, not with Mondale, unless they have some glaring moral defect. Manion doesn't.

Theodore Hesburgh, the out-going president of Notre Dame and last time I heard a liberal in good standing, endorsed Manion's nomination, saying that he would bring to the bench "... dedication, integrity and a keen knowledge of the law."

As for what deans of some other law schools think, who cares? Deans of law schools are head bureaucrats, that's all. Successful bureaucrats are not especially qualified to comment on anything except administration of bureaucracies. Like most humans, they also have political and ideological biases, too.

We, as Americans, especially ought to be careful of tendencies to establish thought control. Old-fashioned liberals had a great record on that score but some people today who call themselves liberals appear to have an inclination to want to punish people for what they think. They use their code words the same way conservatives in an earlier generation used the word un-American — to banish people from the realm for the sin of thinking differently.

In a free society, government has the right to regulate behavior but not thought. It's places like the Soviet Union where you have to think only approved political beliefs in order to get a job. Some of Manion's opponents seem to be as confused about which country they're in as they are about the results of the 1984 election.

It isn't Manion who doesn't understand the Constitution. It's his opponents.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Fire at U.S. air base injures two firefighters, destroys office supplies

CLARK AIR BASE, Philippines (AP) — Fire raced through a warehouse at this U.S. base early today, slightly injuring two American firefighters and destroying tons of paper and office supplies, base officials said.

American and Filipino military investigators, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said they were trying to determine whether the fire had been set.

They said three men were seen running away from the building minutes before the blaze was reported at 1:50 a.m. The sources said security patrols chased the men, but lost them in the dark.

Staff Sgt. Cordelia Rackley of Clark's information office said, however, that her office has not been able to confirm that report.

Ms. Rackley said about 110 firefighters brought the flames under control by 3 a.m. She said fire destroyed 40,000 square feet of storage space, or about half the warehouse. Flight suits, other Air Force uniforms and hand tools stored in another section of the building were saved.

No one was inside the building at the time, Ms. Rackley said.

U.N. group to combat locusts

ROME (AP) — The U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization said it has launched an emergency program including pesticide airlifts to combat locust swarms that could cause another food crisis in Africa.

"A locust plague of frightening proportions will face Africa unless control teams with the necessary resources are put in place quickly to protect food crops," FAO Director-General Edouard Saouma said in a statement released Thursday by the organization's main office in Rome.

Saouma said pesticides and equipment must be airlifted urgently to remote areas, and additional resources provided.

He said the program will supplement existing locust-control efforts by the FAO, African governments, donors, and regional and international organizations.

Reports of swarms have also been received from Chad and there have also been unconfirmed reports of desert locust swarms in northern Ethiopia, the statement said.

Pipeline fire destroys 20-25 houses

POCA RIZA, Mexico (AP) — Firefighters were investigating the cause Thursday of a fire that spread from a Pemex oil pipeline and destroyed 20 to 25 houses in a neighborhood of this city in Veracruz state near the Gulf Coast.

Police said about 600 families were evacuated as a precaution shortly after the fire broke out at about 9 p.m. Wednesday, and that they had no reports of injuries. The fire was extinguished about five hours later and the families began returning home.

Security experts from Pemex, the government oil monpoloy, helped firefighters battle the blaze.

Initial inspections showed the oil ignited after someone set fire to trash in a ditch containing the 12-inch pipeline, police said.

Indian territory to become state

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The upper house of India's Parliament has voted to make the tribal territory of Mizoram the nation's 23rd state.

The statehood bill had been approved by the lower house on Tuesday, and the upper chamber concurred Thursday. The legislation will be signed into law by President Zail Singh.

Mizoram was one of India's nine federally administered union territories, and statehood means it will have a popularly elected assembly and government.

The hilly region, sandwiched between Burma and Bangladesh, is home to Mizo tribesmen, who waged a 20-year guerrilla war for autonomy.

Columbia president pledges to end guerrilla war, fight drug trafficking

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — U.S.-educated economist Virgilio Barco has become his country's 101st president with pledges to end guerrilla warfare, fight drug trafficking and launch an emergency jobs program for Colombia's poor.

Barco said Thursday in his inaugural address that he will offer amnesty to rebels, as did his predecessor, Belisario Betancur.

But he warned that the army will take a hard line against insurgents who try to topple the government.

"The first requirement is to strengthen civil order," the 65-year-old Barco said. "The president and the armed forces are charged to ensure the public peace."

Barco, who is married to an American, the former Carolina Isakson of York, Pa., said he will try to reduce poverty by initiating an emergency jobs program to cut Colombia's official 18 percent unemployment rate.

The jobless rate, however, does not include the tens of thousands of people who scratch out a living in the larger cities by selling such tems as plastic combs and packages of gum.

Officials say the average per capita yearly income in this country of 30 million is about $1,100, but much less in the countryside and the slums of cities like Bogota, Barranquilla and Medellin.

Poverty, Barco said, "has become critical because huge segments of the population are bereft of the most basic elements of well-being such as nutrition, clean water, health, housing, work and recreation."

Barco, who holds a doctorate from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, said his government will ask Congress to pass a new tax program to support the employment measures.

Greg Norman leads again
...'Shark' prowls PGA waters

Norman on PGA 'Shark' attack

Inverness course caught with pars down

By WAYNE LOCKWOOD
Copley News Service

TOLEDO, Ohio — They caught Inverness with its pars down Thursday and the result was red faces and red numbers all around.

An overnight thunderstorm before the opening round of the PGA Championship left the storied Inverness Club unusually vulnerable to the wiles of golf's best professionals. The result was an unprecedented wave of under-par scoring.

While it cannot be considered surprising that Greg Norman, the hottest golfer on the planet, should lead after shooting a course-record 65 in pursuit of his second straight major championship, it is surprising indeed that 24 other golfers should join him under par and 21 more should match that figure of 71 during the first round of PGA play Thursday. Still, it's another 'Shark' attack in progress.

TIED FOR second at 67, two shots behind Norman, are golfers who have been struggling with ailing games — Craig Stadler and tall (6-foot-7) Phil Blackmar.

Neither sounded particularly enchanted with what he had accomplished.

"I probably scored better than I played, especially on the front nine" said Stadler.

"I putted well, or it could have been a mediocre round," said Blackmar.

Under normal circumstances, Inverness would chew up players no more enchanted with their games than this. The golf course has played host to five previous national championships (three U.S. Opens, two U.S. Amateurs), none of which was won in figures under par.

But these are not normal circumstances.

"They've never held a championship of this kind here in August," says club professional Don Perne.

"It's totally different. On a hit off line, you may wind up with a decent lie (in the rough) now. In June, you might not be able to find the ball."

Inverness is a relatively short course (6,982 yards) designed by famed architect Donald Ross. Its strength is its subtlety — the rough, the hard fairways and the hard, small, undulating greens.

Late summer weather diminished the first and heavy rain took care of the other two.

"You have two chances to get it closer to the hole than you normally would," feels Norman.

"You can hit it further off the tee because you know as long as you hit the fairway you're going to stay in the fairway. And you can spin the ball better since you're hitting shorter irons and the greens are softer."

NORMAN, THE recent British Open champion and already a record tour money winner for the year, hardly needs such assistance.

The Aussie strung together six birdies — five in a stretch of six holes on the back nine — en route to a score which lowered by two shots the course record of 67 established by Hale Irwin in the 1979 U.S. Open.

Four holes at Inverness were redesigned and lengthened for that tournament. The previous course record was 62, posted by one-time club pro Byron Nelson in the early 1940s.

It is a measure of what Norman is up to these days that his most remarkable shot did not even produce a birdie.

It came on the par-5 eighth hole, where he made "the only stupid mental mistake I've made in a month" by driving into the right rough while trying to clear a fairway bunker 285 yards from the tee.

Norman had to chip back to the fairway, hit a 5-iron short of the green, chip on and, oh yes, hole a 45-foot, double-breaking putt to save par.

The thing is, he expected to make it. "I just told myself, 'Well, let's make this putt and then we won't make any silly mental mistakes the rest of the round,'" Norman reported. "It went in."

"If you look at the way he's playing, the confidence he has, it's very similar to the way I was playing in '82," feels Stadler, who won four tournaments (including the Masters) and $446,462 that year.

"Every tournament I entered, I knew I had a chance to win."

Alas, for Craig, he has not had that feeling lately.

"I have not had a good year," he says. "I have not had a good last three years. Everything that's happened to me has been in my head, not my game. I just have to find a way to get competitive again."

He hopes that it may happen here at Inverness, where he won the 1973 U.S. Amateur.

"I had a tremendous time here 13 years ago," Stadler says. "Those are very good memories. They stick with you.

"When you come back to a golf course where you have good memories, it's easy to get excited. And that's what I need. Today, I was getting pretty excited out there."

BLACKMAR IS excited just to be back on the tour, after taking four weeks off to work on a game which had been disintegrating steadily.

"My swing had been degenerating to the point where I couldn't hit a barn at 100 yards," Blackmar said.

"I had to take time off and work on it. I'm not there yet, but I'm making progress."

None of the seven golfers closest to Norman after the first round ranks lower than 46th on the current money-winning list (Stadler's position).

Sherrard ends 32-day holdout

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — After a 32-day holdout, Mike Sherrard, the Dallas Cowboys' first-round draft choice, signed a four-year, $1.45 million contract and was given No. 88 — the number once worn by Drew Pearson.

"He's got some big shoes to fill," Cowboys coach Tom Landry said.

The former UCLA wide receiver signed on the same day the Cowboys learned that Herschel Walker was ready to open negotiations with them.

"This is a big day for us," Landry said Thursday. "This will give us the depth we haven't had in several years. We've got good impact players, like (Tony) Dorsett and (Tony) Hill, but when you add a couple more, that really makes you strong."

THE COWBOYS wasted no time in putting Sherrard to work. He worked out during the afternoon practice session Thursday, only hours after signing his contract.

He will be in uniform for Saturday night's game against San Diego, but wil not play, Landry said.

"It was a long time to miss camp and it was tough," Sherrard said. "But I still feel that I can contribute to the team. I'm anxious to see what I can do. I think I can still contribute with my deep speed."

Leigh Steinberg, Sherrard's agent, said he, Sherrard and Cowboys vice president Joe Bailey worked out the contract in a "caffeine-assisted negotiation that burned the midnight oil" late Wednesday night and early Thursday morning.

Sherrard said he had been working out with some players at UCLA and came to training camp in "excellent shape."

"I don't know how well I'm going to adjust to the NFL, but I always thought deep down that things would work out with the Cowboys," Sherrard said.

Earlier he had worked out with Cowboys pass coordinator Paul Hackett before the negotiation process got serious.

Sherrard had been talking with the Arizona Outlaws of the USFL, but the decision earlier this week to suspend play this season put the USFL team out of the bidding for his services.

The end of the USFL, for at least this season, combined with the injury to Cowboys veteran wide receiver Mike Renfro, who suffered a separated shoulder in the Cowboys' exhibition game against the Chicago Bears in London last Sunday combined to apparently speed up the end of the negotiations. Renfro will be out up to six weeks.

LANDRY SAID that because of the injury to Renfro, Sherrard has an opportunity to move quickly into the lineup.

"Obviously, there's a better chance, now even though he is coming late. He had been a very dedicated guy in our offseason program," Landry said.

Steinberg said, however, neither the USFL's suspension of play nor Renfro's injury had an effect on the negotiations.

"Joe (Bailey) never referred to the death of the USFL, and I never referred to the status of the Dallas receiving corps," Steinberg said.

Sherrard will donate a percentage of his contract to three different causes, including a scholarship fund for athletes at his alma mater, Chico High School in Chico, Calif.

The former UCLA star also plans to give a portion of the contract to the UCLA athletic department to aid a tutorial program for athletes.

"Mike and I feel very strongly about the concept of athletes being role models," Steinberg said.

Sherrard also plans to donate $250 for every Dallas victory throughout the course of his career to a Dallas charity, Steinberg said.

The Cowboys drafted Sherrard during the 1986 draft after making a trade with the San Francisco 49ers. He was the first wide-receiver selected in the draft.

New Jersey Generals running back Herschel Walker announced Thursday at this New York press conference that he wants to play for the Dallas Cowboys. Agent Peter Johnson is at right.

Walker, Dallas count $$$

By JERRY MAGEE
Copley News Service

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. — When Tex Schramm was asked Thursday if the Dallas Cowboys would sign Herschel Walker for $1.5 million a year, he shrugged.

"When you've been dealing with $1.6 billion (the amount of damages requested by the USFL in its recent, unsuccessful antitrust suit against the NFL), what's $1.5 million?" the president and general manager of the Cowboys said. "Maybe he'll settle for $6, instead of $3."

Not likely.

Walker Thursday in New York City said that, based on "my desire to compete with the very best," he would explore opportunities with Dallas rather than wait a year for the United States Football League to play again — if it does.

Walker and the firm representing him, International Management Group of Cleveland, are positioned to press the Cowboys for the largest yearly contract ever written in the National Football League. Schramm can joke, but agents and others in football feel Walker will ask for about $1.5 million.

To put that in perspective, it's exactly twice as much as San Diego Chargers quarterback Dan Fouts earns. It's $1.27 million more than Roger Staubach, a Hall of Fame quarterback, earned in 1979, his final season with the Cowboys. It's considerably more than the five-year, $4 million contract quarterback John Elway won from the Denver Broncos in 1983 — and Elway's is the richest agreement written during the NFL's 67 seasons.

"Imagine, me being the second-best-paid running back on the team," said the Cowboys' Tony Dorsett, who can't exactly cry poor-mouth. Last year, he earned $450,000, which is his salary this year and next. In 1988 and '89, he is to receive $500,000.

Four hours after Walker's announcement, the Cowboys said they had signed their first-round draft choice, wide receiver Mike Sherrard of UCLA, to a series of one-year contracts.

"Sure been a good day today," Coach Tom Landry said.

Angels blow 4-1 lead

From Staff Reports

BEAUMONT — Home runs provided some excitement, but it was a series of singles that proved to be the difference as the Beaumont Golden Gators edged the Midland Angels, 5-4, here Thursday night in Texas League baseball.

Beaumont held a 1-0 lead in the fifth inning when Pat Keedy had a towering three-run homer for Midland and Kevin King followed two outs later with his 22nd homer of the season to give Midland a 4-1 edge.

Beaumont tied the game at 4-4 in the bottom of the fifth when Mark Gillaspie scored on a groundout by Randell Byers and Bob Grandstaff followed with a two-run homer. Two Midland errors kept the inning alive for Beaumont.

Scott Parsons, Eric Hardgrave and Byers all singled in the sixth to drive home the winning run for the Gators.

The winning pitcher was Candy Sierra. Sherman Corbett, 6-9, was the losing Midland pitcher, but only two of the five runs he gave up were earned.

Jesus Alfaro had a grand slam homer to lead El Paso to a 17-6 rout of the San Antonio Dodgers, increasing the Diablos' Western Division lead to 1½ games over the Dodgers.

Hogan Park ready for Class C state invasion

From Staff Reports

More than 1,500 players from across the state will converge on Midland this weekend for the largest tournament in the city's history, a 102-team field from 48 cities for the 1986 Amateur Softball Association's Men's State Class C Slow Pitch tournament at Hogan Park.

Among the 102 teams in the tournament are 25 from the Tall City including the top two qualifiers from local District 26, the Midland Gamblers and W.R. Rental Tools. Also from the area, is Lightfoot of Andrews.

The pre-tournament favorites include 1985 runner-up L.G. Nix of Big Spring and 1984 champion Taylor's Air Conditioning of Groves. The top four finishers this weekend advance to the ASA Class A regional tournament Labor Day weekend in Dallas.

This marks the second year in a row Midland will have hosted the Men's State Class C Slow Pitch tournament and it will be the second of three major tournaments this summer. The others include the State Girl's 15 and under tournament last month and the ASA Bi-Region Women's Class A tournament Labor Day weekend.

The tournament, being played on the four-field Bill Williams Complex and four other Hogan Park diamonds, will begin at 7:30 p.m. Play will continue at 8 a.m. Saturday and will run will past midnight. Action Sunday gets underway at 8 a.m. with the championship game slated for 3 p.m.

The tournament will be a double elimination format.

Admission to the tournament is $2 per session or a pass good for the entire weekend may be purchased for $5.

Little interest shown for another Steve Carlton return

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — If Steve Carlton harbors any hopes of extending his pitching career, he may find the big-league market less enthusiastic than might be expected for a sure-fire Hall of Famer.

None of the numerous teams contacted this week expressed any interest in signing the 41-year-old Carlton, who could be had for as little as a waiver price. And a spokeswoman for the Giants said the club had not received any feelers about Carlton.

That's not to say the four-time National League Cy Young Award winner is necessarily willing to end the abrupt retirement he announced Wednesday through the San Francisco Giants, his employer for the previous month. The reticent Carlton hasn't stated his thoughts on a possible comeback try somewhere else.

But even in the wake of the retirement disclosure, other players were suggesting that the illustrious left-hander could pitch elsewhere.

Despite going 1-3 with a 5.10 earned run average with San Francisco, Carlton had pitched three-hit, shutout ball for seven innings against Pittsburgh only 11 days before he retired. A San Francisco newspaper headline proclaimed the next day: "Lefty shows he's still got it."

Cincinnati player-manager Pete Rose said after Wednesday's announcement: "Some of my guys say he threw the ball pretty well last night," despite giving up seven earned runs in 3 2-3 innings.

Giants catcher Bob Brenly, who said he was surprised by the retirement, added, "It looked like he was getting stronger and stronger with each start. He didn't have quite the velocity, of course ... Sure, he wasn't the Carlton of years past. But he showed flashes of his greatness."

Club President Al Rosen said that if Carlton asks for an invitation to spring training with the Giants he will be given "every opportunity" to make the club again. Manager Roger Craig also didn't rule out that Carlton might attempt another comeback.

"It wasn't that he had pitched that bad, but we have youngsters coming up, and they're our future," Craig said.

Carlton, No. 11 in career victories and the dominant left-hander of his time, decided to retire after Rosen explained to him that the team wanted to focus on its young pitchers, according to the Giants' executive.

Rosen said Carlton's achievement of a 4,000th career strikeout Tuesday night had no bearing on the decision.

STREAKS

Pittsburgh right-hander Rick Rhoden had his consecutive scoreless inning streak snapped at 19⅓ Wednesday night when the Montreal Expos scored three runs in the third inning.

SWINGS

Detroit sweeps Indians, vaulting into AL East race

Associated Press

They have a four-game winning streak, they have the lead down to 4½ games and they have the Boston Red Sox coming to town tonight.

They are the Detroit Tigers — suddenly playing some of the best baseball in the majors. They swept a twi-night doubleheader from Cleveland Thursday, 15-1 and 6-2, their second doubleheader sweep over the Indians in three days.

The Tigers are now 16-6 since the All-Star break, while the Red Sox have gone 6-13.

At the break, Detroit was 13 games behind the Red Sox, in sixth place in the American League East. They moved into third after Thursday's sweep, with the Red Sox coming to town for four games.

AL Roundup

Jack Morris and Mark Thurmond continued Detroit's strong pitching in Thursday's doubleheader. Morris threw seven shutout innings in the opener, while Thurmond fired six shutout innings in the nightcap.

Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson, who suddenly has a contender on his hands, pulled both starters quickly.

"I was going to get him out after six innings, but I allowed him to go seven," Anderson said of Morris. "If I had another pitcher, he might have been gone after five. I was watching him real close. You don't fool with your pitchers."

Rangers 9, Orioles 8

Gary Ward drove in five runs, including the first of four Texas runs in the seventh inning, as the Rangers rallied for their second straight comeback win in Baltimore.

With Orioles' ace reliever Don Aase out with a back injury, the Rangers came back from an 8-5 deficit against Brad Havens, 3-2, and Mike Flanagan.

The Orioles scored five runs in the fifth for their 8-5 lead, but Ward, Larry Parrish and Don Slaught singled in runs in the seventh, then Steve Buechele's sacrifice fly brought in the game-winner.

Ward had a homer, three singles and a stolen base.

Jeff Russell, 4-1, pitched three innings for the victory. Dale Mohorcic pitched 1⅔ innings for his fifth save.

Blue Jays 5, Royals 4

Reliever Steve Farr balked home the tying run in the eighth inning, then gave up a game-winning single to Willie Upshaw to give Toronto the win over visiting Kansas City.

"It definitely unsettled me, so it had to unsettle him," Upshaw said of the balk. "Then he gave me a fastball right over the middle of the plate, which is exactly what I was looking for."

"He looked like someone with his hand in the cookie jar," Jim Sundberg, the Royals catcher, said. "He realized he had done it."

Reliever Mark Eichhorn, 8-3, allowed only one hit over 3⅓ innings in relief of Jim Clancy. Tom Henke got two outs for his 17th save. Farr, 7-3, was the loser.

Brewers 10, Yankees 2

Cecil Cooper and Rick Manning hit three-run homers, as the Brewers won three of their four games in New York and eight of 13 with the Yankees this season.

The Yankees have lost eight of their last 11 games.

John Henry Johnson pitched 3⅗ innings of three-hit relief for his first save since 1984. He struck out five batters and walked one.

Milwaukee starter Tim Leary, 8-11, allowed five hits and two runs in 5⅓ innings.

Johnson credited his success to his new fork ball. "I decided that when I lost the zip on my fastball, that I'd try a third pitch," said the left-hander, who spent all last season in the minors.

"It's been doing wonders. I aim for the middle of the plate and watch it go from there. It drops, slides, dips. It does what it wants to do."

Angels 4, Mariners 3

California's Jack Howell, who entered the game as a pinch-hitter in the ninth and doubled, ended the game with a homer leading off the bottom of the 11th inning to sink Seattle.

Howell hit his third homer of the season off Pete Ladd, 6-3, who had relieved in the ninth and pitched 1⅓ hitless innings. It was beyond right fielder Dave Henderson's leap at the wall.

Henderson hit a one-out homer in the ninth inning off Kirk McCaskill, but the Angels tied the score in the bottom of the ninth on Howell's double and George Hendrick's single.

Hillin shoots for 2nd title

From Staff Reports

MILWAUKEE — Bobby Hillin Jr. and Bobby Allison, the youngest and oldest winners respectively on the NASCAR Winston Cup circuit, are ready for the return to NASCAR racing to the 2.428-mile Watkins Glen International road course Sunday.

Midland's 22-year-old Hillin became the youngest driver to win on the highly competitive circuit by driving his Miller American Buick to his first NASCAR victory in the July 27 Talladega 500.

Allison, racing for the same Stovola Brothers team as Hillin, captured the 500-mile event at Talladega on May 4. At 48, the veteran racer is the oldest driver to win a Winston Cup race.

NASCAR has not run at Watkins Glen in the last 21 years.

Hillin and Allison participated in pre-race week testing sessions and tried numerous setups in hopes of locking in a winning combination for the 218-mile (90-lap) event.

"We were very pleased with out test session at the Glen," said team manager Ron Puryear. "From all indications, this should be a very competitive race and the Miller American Racing teams should be in position to offer much of the competition.

"Bobby Allison is one of the most experienced road course drivers in Winston Cup racing and he should be a strong contender to win the race.

"Hillin, on the other hand, has competed in only three road course events in his young career, but he has shown the competitive fortitude to be a factor no matter where we're racing."

Qualifying sessions are set for 1 p.m. today and 11 a.m. Saturday to fill the 40-car starting field. The race, set for 11:30 a.m. (CDT), will be televised live by ESPN.

Three share LPGA lead

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — Robin Walton and Amy Benz, both winless on the LPGA Tour, and Kathy Postlewait, trying for her first triumph since 1983, all shot 4-under-par 68s and shared the lead Thursday in the first round of the $230,000 Henredon Classic tournament.

Defending champion Nancy Lopez fired a 1-under-par 71 in her first action since last December, when she took seven months off for the birth of Errin Shea Knight, the second daughter born to her and New York Mets' third baseman Ray Knight.

The 30-year-old Walton, a seven-year Tour performer, went out in 2-under-par 34 on the front nine and had moved up to 5-under-par after she sank a 35-foot putt at 15. But she hit her drive on the 16th hole into the woods and had to scramble on the par-5 hole to get to the green. Walton missed a four-foot putt to save par and fell back to her final score.

WALTON credited her round to a lesson from teacher Mike Adams in Illinois, which helped her get better results from her driver.

"I really drove the ball pretty well today. If it was a little off line, it was strong enough to get over any trouble and it was always pretty much in play," Walton said. "When you've got shorter irons into the green and you're swinging well, you're gonna have a chance to stick a few close. I was fortunate enough to knock some short irons close and make the putts."

Walton, whose best effort prior to the Henredon was a tie for fourth in 1982, said while Adams' tips helped her, she was still anxious to get on the course and see if the advice would pay off.

"I felt real calm and real relaxed. When I make good swings, I make good shots," Walton said. "I felt pretty much like I was in control of the situation a little more today than I've been in the past."

Benz, 24, started her career at the Henredon Classic in 1983. She had three birdies on the front nine, and holed a 20-foot putt for her final birdie at 18 and her share of the lead.

In all, Benz had five birdies and one bogey on the course where she tied for 13th in 1983 as a Tour rookie. This year, Benz has a third-place finish in the Mazda Hall of Fame Championship.

"I missed some makeable putts but made some long ones, so it averages out," Benz said. "The golf course agrees with me, and probably is my favorite on the Tour."

Postlewait rolled in a 45-foot putt on the last hole to get into the tie.

USFL players free to seek football employment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The USFL has told its players they are free to continue their careers — as soon as they can and in any league they desire.

Following 12 hours of give-and-take negotiations Thursday, the league's owners and its players association decided that all USFL players, including those with guaranteed contracts, would be given the "immediate opportunity to pursue professional football and other careers elsewhere."

There are approximately 30 players with guaranteed contracts, including quarterback Jim Kelly (whose National Football League rights are owned by Buffalo), running back Herschel Walker (Dallas) and running back Kelvin Bryant (Washington), among about 530 players in the USFL. Under the terms of the agreement, each is now freed from his contractual tie to the league.

The agreement between the USFL owners and its players' union calls for all clubs to carry a nucleus roster of no fewer than 10 players for the 1987 USFL season. That roster, to be completed by Sept. 15, 1986, would include players re-signed by the club and those with guaranteed contracts.

A player with a guaranteed contract has three options, according USFLPA President Buddy Aydelette. He may leave the league to negotiate a contract with another professional football team, stay in the USFL and collect the money from his contract, or renegotiate the contract at the team's option.

The agreement came three days after the league announced it would suspend play until the fall of 1987. That decision came less than a week after a jury ruled that the NFL had violated federal anti-trust laws, but awarded the USFL only $1 in damages, tripled to $3 under anti-trust rules.

Aydelette said the group representing the league's owners and the USFLPA were "miles apart" at the outset of the talks, but both sides made numerous consessions before reaching a final agreement well into the night.

"We're alive and viable," said Larry Csonka, General Manager of the Jacksonville Bulls. "The likelihood of all the quality players finding a job in the NFL or CFL (Canadian Football League) is extremely remote."

USFL Commissioner Harry Usher expressed optimism in the wake of the league's recent misfourtune. "The union and the league have shown that both parties are committed to the future. We will not give up in the face of the NFL's illegal monopoly," Usher said in a prepared statement.

Doug Allen, Executive Director of the USFLPA, said the league was in a "transitional phase" and would continue its quest to exist.

"What could have become utter chaos was dealt with rationally by the leauge and its players," Allen said. "There aren't any villains, it's a win-win situation."

Allen said the agreement was an "amicable" one that rewarded those players who sought to be part of the USFL, which has not played since July of 1985.

'We wanted to make sure players loyal to the league could continue their career," Allen said. "This addresses the player's needs."

Fishers on line in Oil Bowl scrap

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — Sean Fisher of Mineral Wells, Texas, and Terry Fisher of Clinton, Okla., will be the starting quarterbacks in the 49th Oil Bowl football game here Saturday night in Memorial Stadium.

The game, which annually matches high school all-stars from Texas and Oklahoma, is sponsored by the Maskat Shrine Temple of Wichita Falls. All proceeds from the game go to crippled children charities in the two states.

Sean Fisher will be joined in the starting Texas backfield by running back Charlie Lott of Electra, wingback Mark Parry of Graham and fullback James Polk of Wichita Falls Hirschi. Texas will run a combination of the Wing-T and Pro-T offenses. Coaches for the Texas squad are Joe Allen of North Garland, Jim Edwards of Mineral Wells and Joe Cluley of Mount Pleasant.

The starting I-formation backfield for Oklahoma will be tailback Reggie Barnes of Jenks, fullback Doug Watson of Del City and Terry Fisher. Coaches for Oklahoma are Gary Higgins of Blackwell, Rick Clark of Purcell and Allen Wadsworth of McAlester.

Texas and Oklahoma have met in 40 of the previous 48 Oil Bowls with the Texans owning a 30-9-1 series advantage. Oklahoma, however, won last year's game 13-12.

Among those playing for the Texas squad is Mitchell Martin of Reagan County, a 6-5, 240 tackle is headed for Texas Tech.

'Jaws' Mundus reels record great white

MONTAUK, N.Y. (AP) — The man whose exploits inspired the shark fisherman Quint in the movie "Jaws" has capped his career with one last whopper, helping reel in a 3,450-pound great white shark.

Frank Mundus, 60, of Montauk said the catch — believed to be the largest great white ever snagged on a rod and reel — was the final chapter in his illustrious career.

"I'm finished ... done," he said. "There's no other place to go from here."

He and other fishermen involved in the catch stood proudly as the fish with a mouth as large as a small child rested on a dock where hundreds of flash bulbs popped.

"We crushed the record," said Donnie Braddick, 30, of Huntington, who completed the capture of the 16-foot, 8-inch long shark at about 8 p.m. Wednesday after a two-hour fight.

Mundus, Montauk's most famous shark killer, stood by the shark for hours answering questions Thursday, explaining why he never read the Peter Benchley book which contained his character.

"My customers gave it to me page by page," he said of the character later played by Robert Shaw.

The shark, caught on a 150-pound test tackle.

Mets ask waivers on George Foster

NEW YORK (AP) — Former star George Foster, whose relationship with the New York Mets never turned into the expected love affair, has continued to criticize his former club while saying he hopes to catch on with a contending team.

The 37-year-old slugger, whose 347 home runs rank 37th on baseball's all-time list, was quoted by the New York Post as saying he would have been more productive batting in the "fourth or fifth spot instead of sixth or seventh."

The Detroit Tigers and Chicago White Sox reportedly are interested in talking to Foster. His agent, Tom Reich, said some teams have expressed interest in Foster, but that he has not been contacted yet.

Any team wanting to sign Foster would have to wait until Tuesday for him to clear waivers.

In the wake of stories in which Foster hinted that racism may have been behind his recent benching, the Mets on Thursday formally asked waivers for the purpose of giving an unconditional release to the highest-paid player in the history of the franchise.

Foster signed a five-year, $10 million contract with the Mets in 1982 after they acquired him from the Cincinnati Reds. But he was batting only .227 with 13 homers and 38 RBI and had lost his starting left field job to rookie Kevin Mitchell, who has been hitting over .300. Since July 11, Foster was 2-for-28 with 10 strikeouts.

"I don't think my career is over," Foster told the Post. "Although I really haven't thought about what I'm going to do, I feel that I can contribute. I don't feel that I'm a liability.

"I still want to play ... A pennant contender might want to utilize my talents. I could go to the American League and DH (be a designated hitter)."

Foster was an integral part of Cincinnati's "Big Red Machine" in the 1970s. He was the National League's Most Valuable Player in 1977 with 52 homers — tied for third best in NL history — and 149 RBI while batting a career-high .320. Sparky Anderson, who managed the Reds, now manages the Detroit Tigers.

Foster said, "I feel if I was in the right position in the lineup I could have contributed more, but that's the manager's decision. With guys like (Wally) Backman, (Lenny) Dykstra and Keith (Hernandez) in front of me, I could have gotten more RBI without necessarily getting hits. That's true in Gary's (Carter) case now."

Tuesday, in the Westchester-Rockland newspapers, Foster was quoted as saying, "When a ballclub can, they replace a George Foster or a Mookie Wilson with a more popular white player. I think the Mets would rather promote a Gary Carter or a Keith Hernandez to the fans so parents who want to can point to them as role models for their children rather than a Darryl Strawberry, a Dwight Gooden or a George Foster."

Like Foster, Strawberry and Gooden are black, as is Mitchell. Lee Mazzilli, who was purchased from Tidewater of the International League to replace Foster, is white and was a popular player in his first stint with the Mets (1977-81).

After his controversial remarks, Foster said, "I don't remember saying 'a more popular white player.' I said something that was taken out of context, and I guess it was the last straw. I knew that something had been brewing because I was taken out of the lineup. That was the manager's decision. I guess there were other guys he wanted to promote."

However, Mets vice president Joe McIlvaine said the "crux of the decision" to release Foster was because he had been reduced to pinch-hitting status, a role in which he was unproductive. "This last event was just the straw that broke the camel's back," McIlvaine said.

The reaction by Mets players was mixed.

"I don't feel sad. George brought this on himself," Backman said.

Kelly will sit out season if Bills give out wrong answers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Quarterback Jim Kelly, now free to negotiate with the Buffalo Bills, is anxious to meet with team owner Ralph Wilson and begin discussing a contract, but is not optimistic about reaching an agreement.

However, if he doesn't like what he hears from Wilson, Kelly has no reservations about sitting out the entire 1986 season in order to pursue a deal he feels befits his expectations.

"I think I deserve what we're going to ask for," Kelly said in a telephone interview Thursday. "I really can't say what we're asking right now because we have a lot of things to look up and a lot of people to we have talk to before I can make that decision."

Kelly, although he said he did not want to sound anti-Buffalo, had his reservations about playing in the city's cold climate.

"If I went to Buffalo, it would cut my career a couple of years short," he said. "My agents talked with (former Buffalo quarterback) Joe Ferguson. He said playing up there definitely cut his career a couple of years short. And I feel that if my career is cut a couple of years short, I think I should be paid for that."

The quarterback is also worried about the team's lack of success. The Bills have posted 2-14 records the past two seasons.

"There's no doubt about it," Kelly said. "The thing that scares me is when a team drafts a running back in the first round, their first pick, when you have (running backs) Joe Cribbs and Greg Bell. That makes me wonder."

Kelly, who was to have played for the New Jersey Generals had the USFL played this season, said his representatives have have been assured that Generals owner Donald Trump will be sending his formal release to the Bills as soon as possible.

The Bills made Kelly their first round draft choice in 1983, but the quarterback out of the University of Miami opted to sign with the Houston Gamblers of the USFL. He played three seasons with the Gamblers.

Heat wave causes training concern

By JOHN LEGEAR
National Athletic Trainers' Association, Inc.

If searing temperatures in the United States continue, overweight and over-aggressive athletes will be targets for heat related illnesses when training camp opens for more than one million school-age football players in August, the National Athletic Trainers' Association announced.

"Poorly conditioned players, especially those who are overweight and have spent most of the summer in an air conditioned enviroment, face the highest risk of acute heat illness," said Jerry Rhea, head athletic trainer for the NFL Atlanta Falcons.

"Until they acclimate, which usually takes about 10 days, overweight athletes require a watchful eye during and after practice," said Rhea, who is also president of the Greenville, N.C.-based NATA.

Record high temperatures in Suwanee, Ga., where the Falcons have been training since July 15, have not severely affected the players because "fluids and a little horse sense go a long way to beat the heat," said Rhea. "Falcon coaches have learned how to combat heat.

"Seasoned coaches see when players wilt and they realize that athletes can't learn and don't perform when fluids run low and fatigue sets in," said Rhea. "Less experienced coaches, however, may not be aware that heat can be a silent killer."

Fatalities and catastrophic injuries in football are rare in August, said Dr. Fred Mueller, director of the Annual Survey of Football Injury Research at the University of North Carolina. About 75 percent of serious football injuries occur during games, he said, which begin in September.

But Mueller said players felled by heat, and injuries that can result from the effects of dehydration, are among the most tragic because most probably can be prevented.

Rhea added that since it is easier to prevent illness and injury than treat it, athletic trainers are constantly educating players about the effects of heat and fluid loss.

Symptons of dehydration include fatigue, dizziness, listlessness, lack of concentration, disorientation and heat cramps.

Prison calls Bells

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Kansas City Chiefs defensive end Mike Bell and his twin brother Mark have been ordered to report to a Minnesota prison next week to begin serving four-month sentences on cocaine charges.

The Bells, who were convicted by a jury of attempted possession of cocaine and using a telephone to facilitate the distribution of cocaine, were told to report to the Federal Prison Camp in Duluth, Minn., by 2 p.m. Monday, prison officials said.

Dollar rises

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar rose on foreign exchange markets early today in light trading. Gold bullion prices edged lower.

Traders attributed the dollar's rise to pre-weekend adjustments in investment positions, and said it did not appear to signal a sustained upward trend.

Although the dollar finished mostly lower in New York late Thursday, it had gotten a lift from concerns over possible intervention by central banks.

Midmorning dollar rates compared with levels in Europe late Thursday:

—2.0760 West German marks, up from 2.0660

—1.6740 Swiss francs, up from 1.6695

—6.7380 French francs, up from 6.7175

—2.3395 Dutch guilders, up from 2.3340

—1,426.00 Italian lire, up from 1,424.00

—1.3810 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3809

The British pound eased to $1.4757 from $1.4765.

The dollar edged up against Japan's currency, closing in Tokyo at 154.10 yen, up from Thursday's 153.75 yen, which was the dollar's lowest level against the yen since the late 1940s.

Later, in London, the dollar was holding steady at 154.10 yen.

London's five biggest bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price at midmorning of $361.85 a troy ounce, down from $362.75 late Thursday.

In Zurich, the metal was quoted at $361.80, down from $362.25.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell to a closing bid of $359.73, from $360.28.

Silver bullion fell in London to a bid $5.19 an ounce, from $5.22.

Halliburton reports $524.6 million loss

DALLAS (AP) — Halliburton Co., the giant oil field services and engineering company, reported a loss of $524.6 million Thursday, the largest quarterly loss in the company's 62-year history.

The company, one of the world's largest in the oil field service business, said more than 90 percent of the loss came from after-tax writedowns of $488.7 million on inventory, property and equipment.

"The writedowns were made to recognize the substantial erosion which has occurred this year in the economic value of our operating assets and related investments," Thomas H. Cruikshank, president and chief executive officer, said in a statement.

Guy Marcus, director of investor relations, did not rule out the sale of more assets in the future as a way to reduce expenses. In the past year, the company has sold off some small units.

"In this kind of market you look at all options and weigh them," Marcus said. "We have no announced plan for any divestitures.

"We are structurally changing and reducing the size of the organization to better match up with the smaller markets that exist today," he said.

Marcus said the company has laid off enough employees since the first of the year to account for a personnel savings of $250 million over a 12-month period. He declined to estimate the total number of layoffs. At the end of 1985, the company employed 64,955 worldwide.

The second-quarter loss, which amounted to $4.94 per share, compares with a loss for the similar period last year of $474.7 million, or $4.37 per share.

Marcus said this quarter's loss is the largest in company history.

Revenues for the second quarter were $854.9 million, compared with quarterly revenues a year ago of $1.22 billion, the company said.

Cruikshank blamed the downturn in oil prices for the company's decline in exploration, which resulted in lower marine engineering and construction revenues.

But he said that if oil prices recover to the $20 per barrel range, "there can be, both domestically and internationally, a profitable exploration effort, and therefore, the basis for profitable business for the oil field service industry."

For the six months ending June 30, the company reported a loss of $513.4 million, or $4.83 per share, compared with $418.4 million, or $4.37 per share, the first six months a year ago.

Back in business

Elizabeth Stinson, left, here with daughter Lou Ann Wyat, appears to have ended her dispute with Midland City Council which recently forbid her to sell produce from a trailer at Walgreen's parking lot, where she had operated for the past nine years. This temporary building built to city code and spaced a required distance from the intersection allows her to operate as a temporary merchant the same as snow cone stands.

Retail sales better

By The Associated Press

Major U.S. retailers reported improved July sales over last year, but their gains were downplayed by analysts who said they resulted chiefly from larger-than-usual price markdowns.

In some cases, the sales reports looked better than they actually were because of comparison with a lackluster July 1985, analysts said Thursday. Additionally, July normally is a promotional month, and many of the companies were taking bigger-than-normal markdowns to stimulate buying.

Sears, Roebuck and Co., the largest retailer, said its sales for the four weeks ended Aug. 2 rose 5.5 percent over the same period last year. No. 2 K mart Corp. said its sales rose 15.9 percent; No. 3 J.C. Penney Co. 3.4 percent; No. 4 Dayton Hudson Corp. 11.8 percent; and No. 5 Wal-Mart Stores Inc. 41 percent.

Meanwhile Thursday, oil prices edged higher again and some analysts speculated that gasoline, home heating oil and diesel fuel prices would rise — although how far remained unclear.

But while fuel prices could go higher, the Department of Agriculture said the summer drought in the southern and eastern United States should have little effect on food prices.

Jan C. Lundberg, publisher of the North Hollywood, Calif.-based Lundberg Letter, which tracks petroleum prices around the nation, said that if the trend holds that gasoline prices could reach 80 cents a gallon at the pump by Labor Day.

In the last week, major refiners have raised the prices they charge wholesale distributors

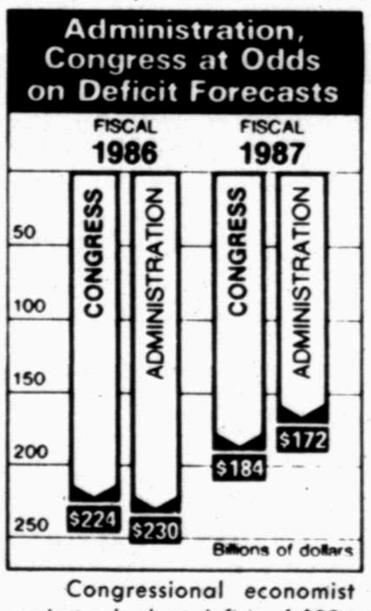
Record 1986 budget deficit projected



Congressional economist project a budget deficit of $224 billion.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal deficits are on their way down, but more spending cuts or taxes are needed to meet the goals of the Gramm-Rudman budget-balancing law, White House and congressional economists say.

The Congressional Budget Office on Thursday joined the Reagan administration in projecting a record deficit this year. The CBO said it would be $224 billion, lower than the $230 billion administration estimate released Wednesday but still eclipsing the record of $212 billion set last year.

Both predicted lower deficits in fiscal 1987, although the CBO's outlook was more pessimistic. CBO said $184 billion in red ink would accumulate, while the president's Office of Management and Budget foresees a $171.5 billion shortfall under current policies.

Gramm-Rudman says the deficit should be no higher than $144 billion. The CBO said Thursday that number wouldn't be reached even if Congress makes good on all the promises of the fiscal 1987 budget.

In the past, the CBO and OMB projections have served as somewhat abstract guidelines. But on Aug. 20, using methods spelled out by Gramm-Rudman, the two agencies will produce estimates that would be the basis for across-the-board spending cuts.

The CBO said Thursday that cuts of 8.2 percent in military spending and 11.5 percent in domestic programs would be called for under its scenario. However, CBO director Rudolph G. Penner said the actual number would be lower because OMB was more optimistic, and the cuts are based on an average of the two.

Congress is still deciding whether the Gramm-Rudman cuts will again be made automatic, as originally intended but blocked by the Supreme Court. The Senate has endorsed a new deficit-cutting scheme, but the House hasn't agreed.

The court left in place a provision requiring Congress to approve, and the president to sign, a spending-cut order before it could take effect.

Meanwhile, Congressional leaders have decided to delay pending deficit reduction bills, which appear inadequate, and to try to improve them after Congress' Labor Day recess. By then, Congress will know exactly how much trimming will be needed.

Congress and the president only need to get within $10 billion of the target to avoid a call for cuts, because that leeway was built into Gramm-Rudman.

CBO and OMB blamed the growing deficit estimates on a delay in economic growth they both now predict will resume later this year.

"We thought we saw the light at the end of the tunnel," Penner said Thursday. "Unfortunately, the tunnel moved on us."

The CBO projects that economic growth in calendar 1986 will be 2.9 percent, as measured from the fourth quarter of 1985, compared to a 3.2 percent administration forecast. From the fourth quarter of this year to the end of 1987, the economy will grow 3.5 percent, the CBO said, compared to 4.2 percent predicted by Reagan's advisers.

The two budget agencies agreed that under current policies and without a recession — and none was predicted — deficits would continue to decline in the next few years.

But both said more than $60 billion in red ink would remain in fiscal 1991 — when Gramm-Rudman mandates a balanced budget.

Deficits have piled up in the past few years so that the national debt has reached its statutory ceiling of $2.079 trillion — more than twice the level of when Reagan took office in 1981. Legislation in the Senate to raise that debt ceiling another $244 billion includes the Senate's amendment to make Gramm-Rudman automatic again.

Low gasoline prices come to end

NEW YORK (AP) — The stunning collapse of retail gasoline and heating oil prices is over, and consumers can expect to pay more over the next several months, analysts say.

By the Sept. 1 Labor Day holiday, gasoline will cost from a nickel to 10 cents more a gallon, depending on the region, Ben Brockwell, editor of the Oil Price Information Service, a Washington-based industry newsletter, said Thursday.

"You stand a chance to see a uniform 75 cents to 80 cents, with prices below that becoming obsolete," he said.

Jan C. Lundberg, publisher of the North Hollywood, Calif.-based Lundberg Letter, which tracks petroleum prices around the nation, predicted changes by the weekend.

"If the trend holds, the lowball price — the 69, 70-cent gas, is going to disappear, and by Labor Day it's going to be up in the 80s," he said.

Behind the price hikes is this week's production reduction agreement by the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Brockwell said that if OPEC can enforce its new quota system, prices would continue rising.

The cartel's success in reaching an accord stunned the industry and sent oil prices soaring on world markets.

At the New York Mercantile Exchange, contracts for September delivery of West Texas Intemediate, the benchmark U.S. crude, closed Thursday at $15.32 a 42-gallon barrel, up 35 cents from Wednesday and $3.77 — or 33 percent — from last Friday's $11.55 close.

At the U.S. refining and wholesale levels, the response has been quick and dramatic, said Brockwell, who said his organization tracks prices in 50 states and 250 metropolitan areas.

In the last week, he said, major refiners have raised the prices they charge wholesalers for gasoline by one to four cents a gallon.

Since they had not expected an OPEC agreement, they had been keeping low inventories, not wanting to be caught with more expensive product in the event of continued erosion of prices, he said.

But the surprise OPEC agreement "changed the distributors' attitudes to a buying mood, causing outages around the country," Brockwell said.

He emphasized, however, that the outages have been temporary and that consumers are not facing gasoline shortages, because of a continuing world surfeit of crude supplies.

Continental debuts 'Proud Express'

HOUSTON--(SWN)--Continental Airlines today unveiled "Continental's Houston Proud Express," a jet shuttle service connecting Hobby Airport to 64 domestic and international Continental destinations, and strengthening Houston's economy by locally retaining more air travel dollars.

The new flights, beginning Aug. 18, will be in addition to Continental's 10 daily nonstop flights from Hobby to New York, Denver and Los Angeles.

"Continental's Houston Proud Express" will depart Hobby Airport seven times daily for Intercontinental Airport, where passengers will connect to Continental flights to cities around the world. Continental passengers returning to Intercontinental from other cities will have the option of connecting to Hobby Airport via "Continental's Houston Proud Express."

"These flights characterize the true spirit and meaning of the ongoing 'Houston Proud' campaign," said Continental President Phil Bakes. "With our 'Houston Proud Express', Continental enables people flying to or from Hobby Airport to make connections at Houston's other hometown airport on Houston's hometown airline to help Houston's hometown economy."

Bakes was joined in making the announcement by Major Kathy Whitmire, Houston Economic Development Council (HEDC) Chairman Robert Onsted and HEDC President Donald Moyer, and Houston Proud Executive Committee Chairman Alan Rudy. They christened the "Houston Proud Express" by breaking a champagne bottle over the nose of the DC-9 aircraft at Hobby Airport. Several hundred Continental employees attended the announcement ceremony.

"Continental Airlines is not only supporting our 'Houston Proud' efforts, but by creating this shuttle program it is providing a valuable service to our citizens and visitors," Mayor Whitmire said. "This is the kind of contribution and commitment that exemplifies the spirit of 'Houston Proud.'"

"Houston Proud Express" flights are free for Continental passengers connecting at Intercontinental Airport. For instance, Continental's $69 fare from Intercontinental Airport to Newark also applies to travel from Hobby to Newark via Intercontinental Airport.

The fare for travel between Hobby and Intercontinental, without a connection to another Continental flight, is less than taxi fare: $15 in coach and $25 in first class.

Mattox: Final $3.8 million coming from DOE

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas has received $53.6 million in the federal court settlement of a major oil case involving stripper wells, Attorney General Jim Mattox said Thursday.

Mattox said a federal district judge in Wichita, Kansas, signed the settlement agreement in early July and gave all parties 30 days to enter any objections. There were none filed.

Mattox said the Department of Energy sent $49.8 million to Texas and the remaining $3.8 million is on the way.

The attorney general said the case involved more than $1.45 billion that has been held in escrow since the case began in 1979. The oil industry filed suit challenging DOE's regulatory treatment of crude oil produced from stripper wells.

T-bond rate bounces back to six-month high

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yields on 30-year Treasury bonds rose to 7.63 percent in Thursday's auction, the highest level since February.

The yield was up from 7.37 percent at the last auction on May 8 and was the highest since 9.28 percent at a February auction.

The sale attracted bids totaling $17.2 billion with $9 billion sold. The notes will carry a coupon rate of 7¼ percent with a $10,000 note selling for $9,552.20.

The auction was the third and final one this week at which $28 billion was raised to replenish the government's coffers.

Dallas-based UCCEL continues divestitures

DALLAS (UPI) — UCCEL Corp. said Thursday it will sell its Turnkey Systems division and Microsoftware subsidiary to Convergent Technologies Inc. of San Jose, Calif., for $28.5 million in cash.

The agreement calls for the sale of Digital Systems, based in Pensacola, Fla., and Open Systems, Inc., Minneapolis, Minn.

UCCEL said it expects to recognize a loss of approximately $5.2 million to $6.2 million on the sale of Digital and a gain from the sale of Open Systems of about $1.2 million to $2.2 million.

The sale of the two systems would mark UCCEL's sixth such transaction since October 1985.

American plans expansion of Caribbean hub

GRAPEVINE, Texas (UPI) — American Airlines said Thursday it will expand its San Juan flight attendant base by as much as 80 percent, to coincide with the opening of its new hub there.

San Juan currently is the base for 75 American Airlines flight attendants. Crandall said the expansion could add between 45 and 60 new flight attendants to the base.

American will open its San Juan hub with 15 daily flights to eight cities on the United States mainland and expanded service to other Caribbean cities.

Royal Dutch-Shell reports second-quarter earnings up

NEW YORK (UPI) — Royal Dutch-Shell Group, the world's second largest oil company, Thursday reported its second-quarter earnings rose to $823 million from $814 million in the same period last year.

Royal Dutch, based in London and the Hague, said "significantly better" results from refining and marketing operations offset lower profits in the exploration and production sector.

The group's sales dropped to $19.81 billion from $22.90 billion in the second quarter last year.

Royal Dutch-Shell, second in size to Exxon Corp. in the world oil industry, has two major subsidies: Royal Dutch Petroleum Co. and Shell Transport & Trading Co.

Royal Dutch Petroleum's share of group earnings in the second quarter was $1.94 a share compared with $1.92 a share in the year-earlier quarter. Based on New York share equivalents, Shell Transport's share amounted to $1.10 a share, up from $1.08 a share in the second quarter last year.

The group said marketing, refining and marine earnings on a reported and estimated current cost of supplies basis improved substantially in the second quarter from the year-ago period. But on a reported basis, inventory losses of $547 million reduced higher profit margins on petroleum products. Chemical earnings were up sharply.

Exploration and production earnings were hurt by lower crude oil prices and the strengthening of the British pound against the dollar in the latest quarter. Oil is priced in U.S. dollars.

The group's currency exchange losses increased to $190 million in the second quarter from $39 million in the corresponding quarter last year.

Unocal charged in Alaskan spill

KENAI, Alaska (UPI) — The state of Alaska charged the Union Oil Co. of California with failing to report a crude oil spill at an oil production facility southwest of Anchorage.

Bill Ross, a commissioner of the Alaska Department of Environmental Conservation Commission, said, "The oil spilled was one of the largest amounts we have seen for some years in this area of the state.

"We take it quite seriously that a major oil company such as Union failed even to report it to DEC as required by law. It is also of concern that, so far, the job of cleanup is incomplete," he said.

State officials estimated the amount was "over several thousand gallons."

DEC officials filed the misdemeanor charge, which carries a maximum fine of $100,000, in state District Court in Kenai on Wednesday.

An anonymous caller reported the spill July 1 and DEC investigators flew over the site and "confirmed that a large spill had occurred," DEC spokesman Joe Ferguson said.

State officials contacted the company, waited one month, then filed the criminal case when the company did not file a cleanup plan, according to DEC officials.

Alaska law requires all oil spills to be reported immediately.

The spill apparently occurred April 26 when tubing ruptured at the company's Granite Point facility, across Cook Inlet from the city of Kenai, according to the DEC.

Ferguson said it is not the first run-in between Union Oil and Alaska. "They have had other problems — that's for sure — various kinds of pollution problems," he said.

Company officials did not return telephone calls.

TYLER (SWN) DeltaUS Corp. announced financial results for the second quarter and the six month period ended June 30.

The second quarter net loss of $1.5 million ($.07 per share) was an 89 percent improvement over the $14.4 million ($.69 per share) net loss reported during the second quarter of 1985. Although revenues were down from the second quarter, 1985, as compared to the second quarter, 1986, operating loss improved 53 percent from $3.9 million for the second quarter, 1985, to $1.8 million for the same period in 1986.

Net loss for the first half of 1986 was $6.1 million ($.29 per share) as compared to $23.5 million ($1.13 per share) for the first half of 1985.

Lear, Arkla reach purchase agreement

DALLAS (SWN) — Lear Petroleum Corp., in a joint announcement with Arkla, Inc. and Esco Exploration Inc., said a definitive purchase agreement has been reached by the three companies whereby an Arkla Unit will acquire the assets of the TransArk Natural Gas Pipeline from a partnership comprised of Lear and Esco subsidiaries.

The $17.3 million cash acquisition is subject to receipt of Federal Trade Commission approvals. Lear's portion of the trans-action, $13 million, will be used to reduce bank debt at the corporate level.

The TransArk Pipeline was formerly a products pipeline which has been converted for natural gas transmission. Lear has retained certain rights to lay an additional pipeline in the products pipeline right-of-way which extends from Duncan, Oklahoma to the Oklahoma-Arkansas border.

Hiram Walker agrees to sell Home Oil

TORONTO (UPI) — Hiram Walker Resources Ltd. said it has agreed to sell Home Oil Co. to Interprovincial Pipe Line Ltd. for the Canadian equivalent of $792 million.

Hiram Walker and Interprovincial announced the deal last week subject to a purchase agreement. The deal is part of a string of maneuvers that began when Canada's Reichmann family moved early this year to acquire Hiram Walker, a liquor and resources conglomerate.

Hiram Walker holds about 34.4 percent of and is the largest shareholder in Interprovincial, an oil pipeline operator that owns 13.6 million shares in a preferred series of Hiram Walker.

Some $372.2 million of the purchase price will be satisfied through redemption of the 13.6 million Hiram Walker shares held by Interprovincial. A further $144 million will raised by issuing oil-indexed debentures and $243.4 million will be in cash.

The remaining $32.4 million will be in the form of debt currently on Home Oil's books.

Texas Eastern declares quarterly dividend

HOUSTON (SWN) — Dividends on six issues of preferred stock of Texas Eastern Transmission Corp., wholly owned subsidiary of Texas Eastern Corp., were declared by the company's board of directors at a recent meeting.

The dividends are payable Sept.1, to stockholders of record at the close of business on August 18.

Coastal earnings down slightly from '85

HOUSTON (SWN) —Net earnings of the Coastal Corp. for the second quarter of 1986 were $30 million, or $.68 per common share, compared with $30.5 million, or $.63 per share a year ago.

Results for the first half of 1986 showed a net loss of $22 million, reflecting the severe impact of sharply lower oil prices on first quarter refining and marketing operations. The first-half loss was equal to $1.34 per share. A year ago, Coastal reported first-half earnings of $66.9 million or $1.83 per share, not including the first quarter for American Natural Resources Co., which was merged with the company effective March 31, 1985.

Total operating profit for the second quarter was $187.4 million compared with $185.8 million last year.

Mobil buys 43 Amoco stations in Northeast

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mobil Oil Corp. said Thursday it has agreed to buy 43 service stations in Massachusetts and Rhode Island from Amoco Oil Co. for an undisclosed price.

Under the agreement, Mobil will offer three-year franchises to all of Chicago-based Amoco's lessee dealers in the two New England states.

The Amoco stations that will become part of Mobil's New England network are concentrated in the Springfield and greater Boston areas.

KN seeks higher gas rates

OMAHA (UPI) — K N Energy Inc. of Hastings has raised natural gas rates for 42 northeastern Nebraska communities and has proposed increases for 93 central Nebraska communities to take effect Sept. 1.

In the first phase of a $4.4 million rate increase sought by K N, rates for 41 northeastern Nebraska towns went up 9 percent to 10 percent last week.

Rates for another city, Hartington, went up 19.9 percent after the company obbtained a temporary court order Friday from District Judge Robert E. Otte of Dakota City. The order forces the city to accept a higher increase.

The Hartington City Council had rejected the 19.9 percent increase proposed by K N and instead adopted a 9.2 percent increase similar to other area towns.

Under state law, Nebraska municipalities regulate gas rates and can pass on a wholesaler's proposed increse, reject it or reduce the amount. The wholesaler can file suit to seek a higher rate increase.

Hartington Mayor Gerald Miller said K N was trying to bully the city with the higher rate increase. He said the city expects the League of Nebraska Municipalities to lend legal support in the case.

K N Energy has proposed 9 percent to 10 percent increases for most cities it serves in northeast and central Nebraska. For cities that adopted a League of Nebraska Municipalities' cost-of-service ordinance, the rate increases range from 9.6 percent to 36.7 percent.

Company officials said a separate rate study is required in each city that has the ordinance, which it says can mean higher rates than if the city had been included in an overall rate study with 10 other communities.

Municipalities said separate cost-of-service studies are not required and K N is punishing municipalities with the ordinance by proposing higher rate hikes.

The League of Nebraska Municipalities said it plans a full study of K N Energy's rate increase proposals.

Lar Voss, whose Lincoln consulting firm will perform the study for the league, said Monday it will not be completed until Oct. 1. He said he expected communities facing a Sept. 1 rate increase to adopt interim increases until the report is completed.

The Nebraska Energy Office said it also will study K N Energy's increases as well as those proposed by Minnegasco of Lincoln, which last month proposed 4.8 percent increases in 57 Nebraska communities.

Wainoco: Short-term projects more difficult due to oil slump

HOUSTON (SWN) — Wainoco Oil Corp. reported net operating income for the quarter ended June 30, of $507,000, before a write-down of U.S. oil and gas properties, which was considerably above the loss reported in the 1985 second quarter. A net loss for the period of $6.5 million or $.53 per share resulted from the noncash additional provision for depreciation, depletion and amortization of $7 million. Second quarter revenues were $8.9 million compared to the $9.5 million reported in the same period of 1985.

Funds provided by operations of $3.7 million were 66 percent above the $2.2 million reported during the same period in 1985. Similarly, funds provided by operations per share of $.30 were 58 percent higher than the $.19 per share in the second quarter of 1985.

"Wainoco would have had very good operational results in the second quarter and first half of 1986 were it not impaired by steeply lower oil and gas prices. Record levels of oil and gas production were achieved, operating income prior to a property write-down and cash flow were increased, and long-term debt and current liabilities were both reduced," John B. Ashmun, Wainoco's President and Chief Executive Officer said.

"The unknown limits of the current slump make short-term projections difficult, but we are confident that our production of oil and gas will remain at higher levels in ensuing years. Wainoco's long life reserves of low cost oil and gas provide the assuredness of a successful future," he said.

For the six months ended June 30, 1986 net operating income, before property write-downs, improved to $1.8 million, well above the $1.1 million loss in 1985. However, the net loss after property write-downs was $16.2 million for the first half of 1986. Revenues dropped slightly to $21.7 million.

Funds provides by operations for the first half of 1986 of $9 million were higher than the $8.5 million reported last year. Funds provided by operations per share were $.74 for both periods.

The second quarter's production compared to last year's period was 48 percent higher for oil and 26 percent higher for gas. Production for the first half of 1986 compared to last year's period was 41 percent higher for oil and 21 percent higher for gas.

ARCO proposes Alaskan oil export

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UPI) — ARCO Alaska Inc. is seeking U.S. Department of Commerce approval to export 5,000 barrels a day of Alaskan crude oil from some small offshore production sites southwest of Anchorage.

The amount represents most of the company's production from the Cook Inlet area, ARCO president Harold Heinze said Monday.

"We do not have any specific buyers in mind. We would just look for some," spokeswoman Susan Andrews said. "We would like to start as soon as possible."

President Reagan lifted the ban on Cook Inlet oil exports after a visit last fall from Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, whose nation has been interested in buying Alaskan oil. Exports of oil from Alaska's giant North Slope oil fields remains against the law.

The state of Alaska already is seeking Asian buyers for about 3,600 barrels per day of Cook Inlet the state owns in royalty oil.

ARCO's decision to seek export permission could put some 8,600 barrels of Alaskan oil on the auction block for interested customers across the Pacific.

There also is a movement in Alaska that is seeking to overturn the Export Administration Act, which bans export of oil from Prudhoe Bay and other oil fields on Alaska's north coast.

The United States imports about one-third of the oil it uses.

Oil export proponents argue that exporting Alaskan oil would improve the U.S. balance of trade with Japan and reduce Japanese dependence on Middle East oil. Oil exported to Japan could be replaced by Mexican oil, which is closer to U.S. refineries, proponents say.

ARCO must receive an export license, valid for one year, from the Department of Commerce, before it could begin exporting its Alaskan Cook Inlet oil.

State offshore production up

AUSTIN — State offshore leases produced 168,103 barrels of oil during May, up from 149,102 barrels in April, according to the Texas Railroad Commission.

Gas well gas production from state leases amounted to 7,934,564 Mcf in May, against 8,236,323 Mcf in April.

Casinghead gas production totaled 206,824 Mcf in May, compared to 227,871 Mcf in April. Casinghead gas is natural gas produced from oil wells.

Condensate production from state leases amounted to 25,422 barrels in May, against 28,313 barrels in April. Condensates are liquid hydrocarbons produced from gas wells.

for gasoline by a penny to 4 cents a gallon, according to Ben Brockwell, whose Oil Price Information Service newsletter tracks prices nationwide.

But Brockwell also said he expected the OPEC agreement to fall apart — as have past quota pacts — in several months, keeping gasoline at the pump under $1 a gallon for the rest of the year.

The Agriculture Department's report on food prices indicated that despite huge crop and livestock losses from the drought, low farm prices and high supplies of major commodities should dampen any impact on prices nationally.

The department also noted that while natural disasters can affect total food supplies, most of what consumers pay for food goes for transportation, processing, packaging and distribution by wholesalers and retailers, which are not affected.

—The Federal Reserve Board said Americans took out $5.07 billion more in consumer credit than they paid off in June. That was down 21 percent from the May increase, and represented an annual growth rate of 10.8 percent.

—Congressional economists projected a 1986 budget deficit that is $6 billion below the Reagan administration forecast, but said the 1987 shortfall would be more severe than the White House predicts.

The specially-painted DC-9 aircraft, prominently displaying the Houston Proud logo on its tail, seats eight passengers in first class and 61 passengers in coach. A Continental customer service representative will assist passengers with information on board each "Houston Proud Express" flight.

Expedited bag transfer procedures being implemented at Intercontinental Airport for "Houston Proud Express" passengers enable them to make especially fast, reliable connections.

Passengers boarding "Continental's Houston Proud Express" at Hobby Airport are guaranteed to make their scheduled connections at Intercontinental.

"As the only major airline headquartered in Houston, Continental helps weave the fabric of daily life here," Bakes added. "We decided to operate these new flights under the Houston Proud banner to demonstrate how strongly we feel about Houston, and to remind all of Houston how much we contribute to make Houston a city without equal."

Continental employs more than 5,500 people in Houston.

Loews Corp. president is postmaster general

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Postal Service's governing board, saying the mail system needs vigorous, creative leadership and "stability at the top," named Loews Corp. President Preston Robert Tisch as the nation's 68th postmaster general Wednesday.

The New York executive will take over the $88,200-a-year job Aug. 15, replacing Albert Casey, who has served as interim postmaster general since January and will teach business courses this fall at Southern Methodist University.

John McKean, chairman of the postal board of governors, told a news conference that Tisch — the third postmaster general in 19 months — was the panel's unanimous choice, praising him as "a careful, highly skilled manager and corporate leader who can strengthen the postal service."

Tisch, 60, said he was honored by the appointment. "All the experience I have gained and all of my energy and ability will be devoted to the new challenge that is before me."

Tisch disclosed that he contacted Casey in July to apply for the job although the Postal Service had hired an outside search firm to find prospects. Tisch was told of the board's decision at noon Tuesday.

McKean said Tisch was chosen from hundreds of candidates, including at least 20 current postal employees. "We made the choice on merit without any regard to any political or partisan considerations," he said.

The announcement, which came a day later than expected, was delayed because board members disagreed on whether to select a current postal employee or someone from the private sector, McKean said.

"We believe at this time in history the U.S. Postal Service deserves some strong, vigorous leadership and creativity from the outside," he said, adding that stability is also needed, referring to the board's unprecedented firing of Paul Carlin, Casey's predecessor, after just one year. "Mr. Tisch offers to us that stability."

Neither McKean nor Tisch would speculate on how long Tisch would remain in the job, but McKean indicated the 69th postmaster general would be an insider.

"We need some stability here at the top and would expect that part of that stability would be provided by grooming (Tisch's) successor."

Tisch said he will resign as president and chief executive officer of Loew's on Aug. 15 to oversee the operations of the Postal Service, which employs more than 780,000 people and has revenues of $30 billion a year.

He said he had not yet devised a management strategy, but noted he would not support bills pending in both houses of Congress to return the postmaster general post to a Cabinet-level position.

Loews Corp., a family business with revenues of $6.7 billion a year and 25,000 employees, has interests in theaters, hotels, tobacco, insurance and timing devices.

Casey, a former chairman of American Airlines, had urged that a person with broad experience in business management be selected to run the Postal Service. In his seven-month tenure, Casey oversaw a sweeping reorganization of the mail service that Tisch will likely continue.

Casey refused to comment on a published report that White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan plans to recommend him for a vacant spot on the postal board.

Hyundai says car is safe

GARDEN GROVE, Calif. (UPI) — Hyundai Motor America Inc., importer of the South Korean-built Excel subcompact, said Wednesday its car is safe despite poor results in a 35 mph barrier government crash test.

Hyundai said the 35 mph test recently conducted by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration is expermimental and that the Excel passed the standard 30-mph test that all cars must meet.

"Hyundai wants all consumers to know that the Excel meets all applicable federal motor vehicle safety standards," the company said. It added, "The company is confident that the Excel is a safe car.

"Hyundai believes that the results of the 35 mph barrier test announced by NHTSA do not fully reflect what might happen in actual accident situations," said the distributors of the Excel, which has a base price of $4,995.

Hyundai recently announced an improvement in its front seat belt system, which causes the belts to lock faster during rapid deceleration. It noted, however, that the previous system met all safety standards.

Hyundai began installing the new system in April and said its vehicless tested by NHTSA in the 35 mph barrier test was not outfitted with the improvement.

Failed Oklahoma bank reopens doors Monday

EL RENO, Okla. (AP) — The failed First National Bank and Trust Co. of El Reno will reopen Monday as a branch of the American National Bank of Lawton, federal regulators said.

Farm and energy loans were blamed in Thursday's failure of the El Reno bank, the eighth to fail in Oklahoma this year.

Liquidators with the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. moved into First National at 3 p.m. Thursday, after Dean S. Marriott, senior deputy comptroller for bank supervision in the office of the comptroller, declared the bank insolvent.

"Apparently problems in both agriculture and energy were involved," FDIC spokesman Alan Whitney said in Washington, D.C. "It's simply indicative of the economic problems the region is having."

Regulators began soliciting bids for the El Reno from more than 100 banks nationwide earlier in the week when the bank's insolvency began to seem inevitable, Whitney said. No bids were offered, he said.

Federal receivers instead began working after the bank's closing Thursday afternoon to find a bank that would agree to buy only First National's good holdings.

"We didn't know if it was going to work out," said Frank Norris, the FDIC's closing supervisor at the bank. "You never know, and we can't do anything about selling until after we've been named receiver."

An agreement was reached about 9:30 p.m. with American National, Norris said. The Lawton bank agreed to buy First National's good loans, its insured deposits and the bank building.

Whitney said earlier Thursday that about $165,000 in 21 accounts exceeds the federal agency's $100,000 insurance limit.

First National was the 30th bank closed since July 5, 1982, when the failure of Penn Square Bank in Oklahoma City sent shockwaves through the nation's financial community.

The comptroller's office said inadequate supervision of the loan portfolio by the bank's board and senior management contributed to the El Reno bank's problems.

The bank was granted a national charter on Dec. 27, 1892.

TWA, Ozark merger closer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Trans World Airlines is a step closer to winning government approval for its proposed takeover of Ozark Air Lines after a federal hearing officer rejected arguments the merger would harm competition.

Administrative Law Judge John Vittone recommended to Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole on Thursday that she approve the merger, although the Justice Department's antitrust division had raised substantial concerns about the deal's effect on competition.

Mrs. Dole, whose department has final say on the $250 million takeover, is expected to make a decision in early September.

TWA is the country's fourth largest airline behind United, American, and Eastern. Ozark, predominantly a regional carrier in the Midwest, ranks No. 18. Both airlines have major hubs at St. Louis where they control more than three-fourths of the air traffic.

Last month, the Justice Department's antitrust division recommended against the merger because of the dominance of the two airlines through St. Louis' Lambert Field.

The Justice analysis suggested that competition is likely to substantially decline in 68 cities emanating from St. Louis. The two airlines are now the only carriers on 27 of those routes and face competition from only one other airline on another 11 routes, the antitrust division said.

Furthermore, Justice suggested that other airlines would have difficulty breaking into the markets because of the limited number of gates available at St. Louis.

But Vittone, in recommending approval of the merger, argued that Lambert Field has room for more carriers and is not so severely constrained to bar competitors.

Odessa Chamber sponsors members-only fair

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A membership only trade fair will be sponsored by the Greater Odessa Chamber of Commerce Aug. 16 and 17 at the Ector County Coliseum Exhibit Hall G.

According to Jill Berg, assistant director of the chamber's economic development division, 31 members already had signed up for booth exhibit space.

The theme of the fair is "Odessa: Open For Business." Dave Cox, trade fair chairman, said, "We have been overwhelmed by the positive response thus far."

Cox said he believes the trade fair will afford Chamber members "an excellent opportunity to reach Permian Basin residents who are interested in the products and services offered."

"There will be free balloons for the kids and music for everyone," he said. "We anticipate the event will be profitable and fun for exhibitors and visitors alike."

Cox observed that a Farmer's Market and the Permian Basin Quarterhorse Show will be held at the same time in the coliseum complex, which "will further enhance our participant's exposure."

Exhibitors will be featuring a variety of products and services, he said, ranging from "computers to construction, printing to pizzas, machinery to magazines, travel to tax returns, baseball clubs to health clubs, hearing aids to hotels, financing to firearms, and asbestos removal to weight removal."

Hours for the trade fair will be from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Aug. 16, and from noon until 6 p.m. Aug. 17. Security will be provided for exhibitors.

The deadline for obtaining exhibit booth space was Aug. 1, but Ms. Berg said space is still available. Cost to commercial members for a 10-foot by 10-foot booth is $150 and for nonprofit members $125. Sales from exhibit booths will be permitted, she said.

Ms. Berg said she felt the number of exhibitors already signed up for exhibit space is very good and noted a similar trade fair in San Antonio wound up with only about 80 exhibitors.

"Considering the difference in number of Chamber members and populations of the two areas," she said, "our response has been very good."

Cox noted that, in an effort to ensure a large turnout, the Odessa Chamber had been sent out special membership invitations and has begun running newspaper, radio and television ads, as well as including mention of the "Odessa: Open For Business" theme in articles in various Chamber publications.

He further noted participants also can help publicize the trade fair by mentioning the event in company publications.

Painter clears memo misconceptions, feels recent trip success

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter said he will discuss policies about travel expenses Monday with the Commissioners Court, but added memos about travel expenses are not aimed at his recent trip to Washington, D.C.

Painter said the memos, from County Judge Bill Ahders' office, do not concern trips like the one he made June 10 to talk to federal officials about intelligence information his office had gathered.

"Basically what the memos are state the policies that have been there for some time, specifically about seminars and schools that county employees may attend," Painter said."

Commissioner Durward Wright said commissioners have already met once in executive session and discussed Painter's Washington trip.

"The only result of that is we did not contest payment of the bill, since it was under his purview as sheriff to take the trip, we feel," Wright said.

Wright said the memos concerning routine trips have been sent to all county departments.

"The sheriff hasn't been singled out for anything," he said.

Commissioner Win Brown described Painter's trip as "no big deal," and said he had not talked to the sheriff recently.

Painter went to Washington June 10 and met with members of the CIA, State Department and Customs Department about intelligence he said proves the existence of at least five terrorist training camps in Mexico, including one in the state of Chihuahua.

The bill for the trip was slightly over $880.

Painter said he has not heard anything from the federal agencies, but feels his information is being investigated.

"I do feel like it is being worked now," Painter said. "I'm very confident the agencies in Washington are doing what they can to find out about it."

The information Painter gave to authorities was gathered by informants in Mexico, and he said "I have been assured that there is a desire to talk to them."

Painter said "more than one agency" is looking into the information.

Big Spring expects large crowd for spiritual renewal

By JANE DEES
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — Big Spring residents are expecting a crowd of about 3,000 this weekend at their "Community Under God" program being held to bring all faiths together in a spiritual and patriotic renewal, a program organizer said.

The program, based on a biblical verse in 2 Chronicles — "If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land" — is being held because, as one resident said, "The whole world has slipped away."

Johnnie Avery, publicity director for the program, said two things alerted residents to the need to have this kind of community event.

"In going through research on the drug situation, we found that 75 percent of the crime in Big Spring is drug-related. Of course, we have the state hospital here, so we see many kinds with their minds blown out because of drugs," Ms. Avery said.

"Secondly, we have realized problems here are faced by the rest of the world as well. We must join together on a community level and develop a brotherhood to help address these problems.

"It's easy to turn your back on problems when they're not directly affecting you," Ms. Avery said.

The idea for the program, Ms. Avery said, was born after a Big Spring resident had returned from a 700 Club convention held in late July.

"There, he met Harold Bredeson, an independent evangelist and they began talking about a program of this nature. We've gotten it together in about two weeks," Ms. Avery said.

Bredeson, on the board of directors for the Christian Broadcasting Network (which is owned by evangelist Pat Robertson), is an ordained Lutheran minister who has been an advisor and minster to Heads of State around the world including U.S. Presidents Truman, Nixon, Carter and Reagan, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and the Shah of Iran, an official said.

His recent activities have brought him to minister to the needs of the oil industry by co-founding the Christian Oilmen's Association, an official said.

The weekend program will begin with a rally tonight that Ms. Avery said will be more of a patriotic service geared to renewing the Christian principles under which the United States was founded.

A "call to prayer" breakfast will follow on Saturday morning.

"We will call on our individual gods for guidance in these times of crisis. It will be a renewal of the human spirit," Ms. Avery said.

Sunday afternoon's church service-type program will feature all races, creeds and religions in a choir and orchestra concert and a final message from Bredeson, Ms. Avery said.

The event is free and open to all. Ms. Avery said they're also expecting groups from Andrews and Midland as well.

"We are not trying to say that the church and state should intersect at all. But we feel if America is to remain strong we must adhere to the Christian principles of right and wrong. That is the only way we'll stem the flow of drugs and crime," Ms. Avery said.

Deadline nears to request hearing on application for waste site amendment

By JANE DEES
Staff Writer

Sunday is the last day to request a public hearing with the Texas Department of Health on the city's application for an amendment to its solid waste site permit, a TDH official said.

"We haven't had any requests and I don't expect any.

"No one showed up for the public hearing when they first built it," Hector Mendieta, director of the Solid Waste Management division of the TDH said.

The city applied to have a permit stipulation removed which states the dump must be lined to prevent garbage-drenched rainwater, called leachate, from running off into the ground, Mendieta said.

Jim Robertson, assistant public works director for the City of Midland, said when the site was first slated to be the city's only "legal, public" dump in 1985, it had to be lined to satisfy the TDH regulation.

However, Mendieta said that in semi-arid areas west of Interstate 35, such as Midland, the regulation isn't as strictly enforced because there is not as much rainwater to deal with.

"When the site was first evaluated, water-balance calculations showed a liner was not really required due to the lack of rainwater in the area.

"But the city said there was a large amount of high quality clay at the site which could be used to line it, so we said go ahead with it," Mendieta said.

However, later findings revealed there was not as much clay as the city previously thought, so they ended up having to line the site with a PVC (polyvinylchloride) material which cost about $140,000, Robertson said.

The 412 acre site, which holds mostly domestic and construction garbage, doesn't present a toxic waste problem, Robertson said.

"You have to worry about toxic pollutants more when you're dealing with industrial waste and we don't allow that at this dump," he said.

Three injured in Odessa after auto hit disabled pickup truck on I-20

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Three people were injured Thursday night after a car hit a disabled pickup parked along Interstate-20, the Department of Public Safety reports.

Donald Burris of Odessa and Billy Burns, no address, were listed in stable condition today at the Odessa Medical Center, a hospital spokeswoman said. Gloria Denman of Monahans is in guarded condition, the spokeswoman said.

The accident occurred about 10 p.m. Thursday, 12 miles west of Odessa on I-20, DPS said.

The two men were injured after Burris's parked pickup rolled into them when it was struck by another car.

Ms. Denman, driving a '85 Ford pickup, ran off the road hitting Burris's '81 Chevrolet pickup.

To help Barris, Burns had parked his van in front of the unlighted pickup and was shining a spotlight on it, DPS reports.

Both Burns and Burris broke their left legs, the DPS said. Ms. Denman had facial cuts, according to DPS reports.

City collects what may be largest number of fines

AUSTIN (AP) — Several hundred delinquent traffic ticket holders clogged the Municipal Court building Thursday to pay what may be the largest number of fines ever collected in Austin in one day.

They had incentives: staying out of jail and out of the newspaper.

"There's something about the word 'warrant' that doesn't sound very nice," said one woman waiting to pay a single speeding ticket she had let go a few months.

She and a snaking line of fellow ticket holders decided to pay up on the last day of the Police Department's three-week amnesty on outstanding traffic tickets. The $25 warrant fee was waived during that period when tickets were paid.

Beginning Monday, police will arrest offenders, and sometime next week the department plans to run advertisements in the Austin American-Statesman and The Daily Texan listing offenders' names.

The Police Department offered amnesty to ticket holders beginning July 17, but had little response until Wednesday and Thursday, said Capt. Freddie Maxwell, commander of the jail and warrants division.

About 250 people paid an estimated $14,000 in fines Wednesday, Maxwell said. The total for Thursday was still being counted but police said it was certain to exceed Wednesday's amount. Before Wednesday, only $40,000 had been paid in the preceding 19 days.

"All the people with big tickets are coming in," said Bea Cervantes, warrants office coordinator. "They've been paying between $150 and $400. That's the highest I've seen. They come in with six or seven tickets."

Odessa police veteran on administrative suspension

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Police Chief Alan Stewart late this morning announced that Deputy Chief Kenneth R. Jones, a 21-year veteran of the Odessa Police Department has been placed on administrative suspension with pay.

In a news release, Stewart said the duration of Jones' suspension would be contingent on the outcome of "an internal investigation for an alleged act of criminal mischief in May of this year."

"Earlier administrative action concerning Jones," the news release said, "was delayed by Chief Stewart in cooperation with federal authorities in an ongoing criminal investigation in Odessa, Texas."

Chief Stewart further advised, said Public Information Officer Lt. Mike Davis, "that Jones was subpoenaed to testify before a Midland federal grand jury yesterday (Aug. 7) concerning this current investigation."

Davis said Stewart refused to comment on the specific nature of the alleged criminal mischief incident and would have no further comment pending completion of the investigation.

Midlanders comment on governor's proposed state sales tax increase

Gov. Mark White has called for a tax increase to help alleviate the state's $3.53 billion budget deficit.

Included in the governor's tax plan is an increase in the state sales tax from the current 4.125 percent to 5¼ percent. The increase would be only for a year, beginning September 1, 1986, and ending August 31, 1987.

According to White the sales tax increase will raise $810 million dollars.

A special legislative session began Wednesday to discuss this and other ways of decreasing the deficit.

The Reporter-Telegram surveyed 11 people asking whether or not they support an increased sales tax.

Nine out of the 11 people said they did not want the tax raised while two felt that raising the tax would help balance the budget.

Chris Holzgraf of 3303 Louisana Ave. said since OPEC has cut production things might change for the better for the Texas economy.

"It might be jumping the gun if we raise taxes," he said.

"I think we can cut other expenses instead," stated J.R. Wright of 2103 Oaklawn Drive.

He suggested that instead of raising taxes they should cut the budgets of some state agencies.

Jim Catter of Midland agreed. "There are other ways to cut spending."

John Pace of 704 S. Lincoln St., Dorena Jordan of Airline Mobile Home Park and Jimmie Burns of 3601 Fairmount said they should not raise taxes.

"We've got all the taxes we need right now," Burns commented.

"It is really hard right now. I think taxes are high enough," said Juana Garcia of 1305 E. Walnut Lane.

J.W. Williams of 1211 E. California Ave. also said taxes are high enough as did Margaret Diaz of rural Midland.

"I'm paying out enough as it is. My budget is squinched enough," Ms. Diaz added.

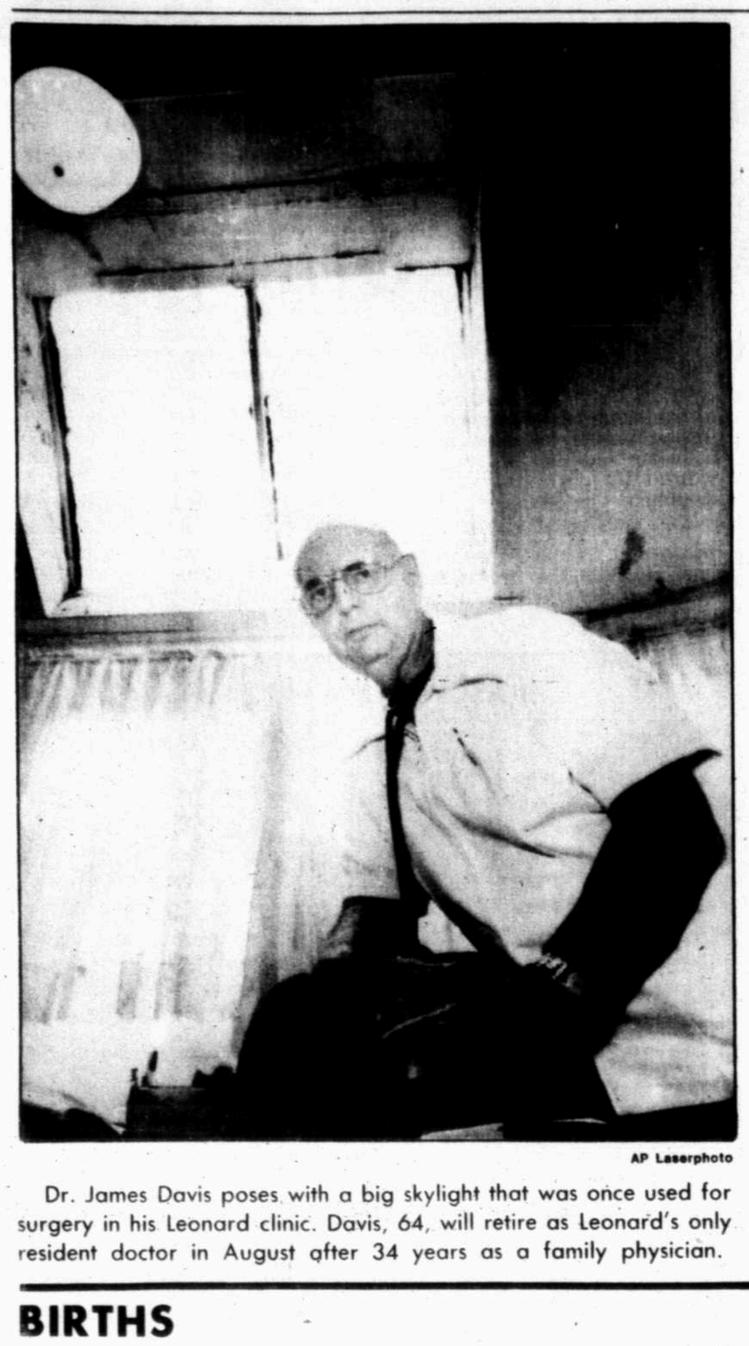
However, two people said they would support a sales tax increase.

Jim May, 5002 Heather, said that to increase the sales tax would help with the budget deficit.

"Yes, I am in favor of increasing the sales tax," E.M. Bradberry of 609 W. Kansas Ave.

He added it would help the oil industry and solve some of the problems in the economy.

Retiring country doctor leaves good friends



AP Laserphoto

Dr. James Davis poses with a big skylight that was once used for surgery in his Leonard clinic. Davis, 64, will retire as Leonard's only resident doctor in August after 34 years as a family physician.

By RICK SMITH

LEONARD, Texas (AP) — Modern minor emergency clinics may be as slick and faceless as fast food franchises, but this 65-year-old medical clinic is cozy and comfortable, like a country kitchen.

Never mind the ghastly green walls. Dr. James Davis' clinic feels like home.

Maybe it's because he and wife, Ruth, live in the other half of the building, and on a late afternoon the smell of fried chicken drifts down the hallway to the well-worn waiting room.

Maybe it's because people in his waiting room aren't here just to see a doctor.

They wait to visit a friend.

Davis, 64, retires this month as Leonard's only resident doctor after 34 years as a family physician.

"I won't miss the phone ringing in the middle of the night or being on call seven days a week, 24 hours a day. I won't miss the clinic," he said.

"But I'll miss the people who come in. Visiting the people. Yeah, you bet. Most of them are my friends, you know. They'll be what I miss the most."

By his reckoning, Davis delivered 750 babies during his first 15 years here. That's over half the population of this town of 1,421.

Of course, Davis' practice isn't limited to Leonard proper. His patients come from nearby towns like Celeste, Trenton and Blue Ridge to see this town's only resident doc.

"I'm not sure exactly what a country doctor is, but I think that's what I am," Davis said. "I think a country doctor practices in a town of under 3,000. He participates in the community in which he lives: goes to high school ballgames and people's weddings and funerals.

"That's all a part of being a country doctor."

There's more, of course.

Davis still makes housecalls when they're needed, usually about once a week.

"Now that was much more common when I started. I carried a much bigger bag then. The bag I carried weighed about 50 pounds. It looked like I was moving to another town to live or something.

"The (bag) I have now doesn't hold much. Back then you carried a little bit of everything to try to handle most any emergency that came up. But as you get more and more equipment in the doctor's offices and in the hospital, there's less reason to make housecalls because you can do a better job (at the clinic or hospital) where you have everything available," he said.

"Now a housecall does very little other than relax the nerves of the patient while you get them ready to go on to someplace where you can really do some good."

He drew the line at delivering babies at home.

His first — and last — home delivery was performed while he was a medical student in Illinois. The ordeal involved a heavy woman and a feather bed.

"Don't tell the story in the newspaper. Just say I don't believe in home deliveries," Davis said, smiling at the memory.

Davis' practice grew so large that he stopped delivering babies about 20 years ago. Now he sees about 50 patients a day and even opens for an hour every Sunday to see three of four people.

"That's so they won't call on Sunday afternoon," he said, laughing.

Davis does a little bit of everything — from setting fractured bones to stitching up wounds — in his clinic, which was built as a hospital in 1921 by Dr. John Pendergrass.

"We get a lot of garden variety illnesses here. The most common things you see are strained backs or hayfever and colds, something like that.

"Over the years, the illnesses have been pretty much the same. You read about herpes and AIDs and that sort of thing, but they're not very big here in Leonard."

Davis sees his share of life and death cases, and that's when being a country doctor is especially difficult, he said.

"You become emotionally involved with them. That may put an extra strain on you when you're trying to save their life. You know wh they are. You know their family."

He has known many of his patient since the moment they were born.

"And it's kind of sad. Some of my patients have cried," he said of his retirement. "It's taken them 34 years to get me just like they want me and now they're going to have to start over with someone new."

Dr. Rodney Franklin, 26, will take over Davis' practice and operate the clinic.

"I know he has a few new things in mind. Computers and that sort of thing, I suppose," Davis said.

After he retires, Davis will move back to his family's farm in Paris, Ill.

"My mother still lives up there. And I'm going to do some light farming, though nothing that will alarm the department of agriculture."

"A fellow has to do his own thing, you know. In other words, just because I do this doesn't mean that I think every doctor should. Somebody's got to do the open heart surgery and that sort of thing.

"But most of the doctors in the big city, I imagine they don't practice in the same neighborhood in which they live."

Odessa shooting incident called accidental pending investigation

From Staff Reports

ODESSA - A 17-year-old youth remained in critical condition in the intensive care unit at Medical Center Hospital today as a result of a gunshot wound.

According to Ector County Sheriff's Lt. Jeff Schwende, Larry Lee Anderson, 109 E. 63rd Street, was shot once behind the right ear with a .22 caliber revolver around 7 p.m. Thursday.

Schwende said deputies David Gleaton and Larry Kiker, responding to a call concerning a person shot about 7:05 p.m. Thursday, found Anderson on the living room floor of a house at 6007-A Ector Ave.

Deputies also found a .22 caliber rifle and gun-cleaning equipment on the floor near the victim indicating the youth had been cleaning a gun when the incident occurred.

But, Schwende said, an investigation by Gleaton and Kiker revealed the gun-cleaning scene may have been "set up," apparently by two of four other persons present in the house at the time of the shooting.

Two men were arraigned before Peace Justice Virgil Lumpee this morning on charges of tampering with physical evidence. Lumpee set bonds of $1,000 each and they remained in the Ector County jail as of mid-morning.

Schwende said witnesses at the scene, including the victim's 21-year-old brother and a juvenile, told investigating officers Anderson had been placing a small, .22 caliber revolver to his head and pulling the trigger.

Schwende said the incident was being classified as an accident pending further investigation.

Two considered suspects in apparent kidnapping, beating of Midland woman

From Staff Reports

A 26-year-old Midland woman was treated and released Thursday from the Midland Memorial Hospital emergency room after an apparent kidnapping and beating, said Det. Sgt. B.G. Johnson.

A trucker saw the woman being pushed by two men out of a car around 7 a.m. Thursday about 12 miles north of Midland on State Highway 349, Johnson said.

The trucker flagged down a pumper and an ambulance was called for the women who was cut and bruised, he said.

The woman did not appear to be sexually assaulted, Johnson said.

The women told police she was taken to a Midland apartment and beaten after meeting two men at a Midland "nightspot," Johnson said.

Police said the two Midland men may face false imprisonment charges.

On Thursday morning police were also called to the Saddle Club Apartments, 5101 North Avenue "A" St., after management found blood around one apartment, Johnson said.

While police were searching the apartment, the tenant and a 19-year-old male passenger drove by and sped off.

Police chased the men and arrested the driver for resisting arrest, Johnson said.

Blood was found on the driver and his occupant's clothing and in the car, Johnson said.

The 24-year-old driver was later released, but both men are being considered suspects, Johnson said.

DEATHS

Gilbert W. Magill

Gilbert Magill

Gilbert W. Magill, 73, died July 20 in a Fort Worth hospital following a stroke.

Burial was at Bluebonnet Hills Memorial Park, Colleyville.

Magill was born in Chicago and received his early education there. He moved to Odessa in 1965 and formed Aeorspace General Company that same year. His company has the distinction of being listed in the Guiness Book of World Records as having built the world's smallest helicopter. He spent 25 years perfecting the aircraft.

He attended the University of Southern California where he earned a degree in engineering. He was a design engineer for both Douglas Aircraft and Hughes Aircraft during World War II. He was a writer and lecturer for the U.S. Army aviation and flight safety section for helicopters. He later was a guest lecturer for colleges, universities and other groups.

Many of Magill's 15 patents on helicopter design and rocket propulsion are still in use today in larger helicopters.

He had lived in the Midland area for several years. He moved to Louisiana in 1983 and, in 1984, on to Fort Worth, where he lived until his death.

Survivors include his son, Gilbert W. Magill Jr., of Houston; a brother, John Magill of Chicago; and two sisters, Marjorie Wendle of Naples, Fla., and Dorothy Thornton of Los Angeles, Calif.

Kenneth B. Murphy

Honey bees often blamed for misdeeds of social wasps

Bees are beneficial to man because they produce honey and wax and serve as important pollinators. In spite of their value, several kinds of bees are unwelcome in and around homes because of their ability to sting. Because bees are similar to wasps in appearance, honey bees often are blamed for the misdeeds of some of the social wasps such as the hornets and yellow jackets. Wasps can sting repeatedly, while the honey bee stings only once and leaves its stinger at the site of the sting.

In spring and summer, honey bee colonies divide by swarming. They cluster temporarily on some object such as a tree branch for a period of a few hours to several days, and then enter a hollow tree or the wall of a building to establish a new home.

Swarms are not ususlly a problem unless they land in an inconvenient spot or are molested. They are best left alone until they leave. It is wise to have on hand the names of beekeepers willing to collect swarms. The low value of the bees themselves and other problems of collecting swarms have forced many beekeepers to charge for their service. Also, diseases found in wild colonies have caused many beekeepers to be reluctant to handle swarms. One of the best alternatives is to have the bees killed by a pest control operator, even though he will charge for doing the job.

When a swarm enters a building, it begins to build combs of wax in which to rear young bees and store honey. Only at this time, when the bees first enter, can they be killed without having to open the wall and remove large quantities of dead bees, wax and honey. If the colony has been in place as long as a month, it must be removed after it is killed to prevent problems from the odor of decaying bees, other insect pests entering the wall and honey released within the wall as combs melt or are destroyed by other insects or mice.

Insecticides may be the safest and most satisfactory materials for killing bees in buildings. Do not use fumigants or other poisonous or flammable compounds. Carbaryl (Sevin®), pyrethrins, propoxur (Baygon®), malathion, or resmethrin are insecticides suggested for this use.

Either dust or spray formulations can be used within a wall or other cavities, but dusts generally disperse better. Apply the insecticide at night through the entrance hole if the colony is fairly close to the entrance or the nest cannot be located. Otherwise, drill a hole in the wall above the colony and apply the dust or spray through it. Afterwards, seal the hole and all other holes through which bees might enter or leave the wall. An extremely large colony may require an additional treatment after about 10 days to kill emerging bees.

After all sound and flight activity has ceased, or at least within two weeks, open the wall and remove all dead bees, combs and honey. These must be burned or buried because they are attractive to other bees and are toxic to both bees and people. Do not leave the honey and wax where other bees can reach it, or you may damage valuable honey bee colonies nearby. The location within the wall will be attractive to other swarms unless it is sealed tightly to keep them out. An additional application of insecticide will also help to prevent the entry of another swarm.

Bumble bees are another benefical bee in that they serve as pollinators of many kinds of plants, particularly legumes. They are occasionally a problem when they nest in and around buildings or near walkways. bumble bees are medium to laregesized, robust and densely covered with black hair, with areas of orange or bright yelow. Queens and workers have pollen baskets in the hind legs. Bumble bees can be killed by spraying or dusting an insecticide into their nests. The safest time to make insecticidal applications is at night when all bees have retired into the nest. Usae the same materials recommended for use on honey bees.

Foresters invent poison ivy preventative

By DON KENDALL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Smokey the Bear's buddies in the Forest Service have invented a spray-on chemical that prevents poison ivy from turning campers' skin into a mass of itchy, painful welts.

The product, called Ivy Block, was developed in five years by the Agriculture Department's equipment development center in Missoula, Mont. A private company may be ready to distribute it commercially by the end of the year, Jay Humphreys, a Forest Service spokesman, said this week.

Humphreys said the distributor, United Catalyst Co., of Louisville, Ky., already manufactures organoclay, a common ingredient in antiperspirants, which is the poison ivy stopper.

Jim Stevens of the Forest Service's safety and health office said thousands of the agency's employees come into contact with poison ivy, poison oak and poison sumac every day. Last summer, he said, more than 400 employees received medical treatment for severe cases of poison ivy.

"What we did was come up with a way to prevent poison ivy; not cure it," said Jerry Oltman, who headed the research effort. "We concentrated on finding some way to prevent urushiol, the substance in poison ivy sap that causes the rash, from contacting the skin."

The breakthrough came when it was found that organoclay would absorb urushiol. The Forest Service researchers put organoclay in a pressurized can so it could be sprayed directly on the skin.

"What Ivy Block does is prevent urushiol from bonding with the skin by setting up a harmless barrier that lasts for about 24 hours," Oltman said in a report issued by the agency. "For most people, this is sufficient protection against poison ivy."

"Four-ounce aerosol cans of Ivy Block have been distributed to hundreds of Forest Service employees for their use this summer, and as a result we hope we'll see a major decrease in health problems resulting from poison ivy," he said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Changes in the exchange rate seem to be an important reason for a climb in imports of pork from Canada and Denmark, an Agriculture Department report says.

Domestic hog prices weakened in recent years, but because of the changes in money values a different picture has emerged for foreign producers. When converted to the Danish kroner, the U.S. price surged in 1984, about the same time that U.S. imports of Danish pork increased.

"In early 1985, in addition to the weakening dollar, the EC (European Community) cut export subsidies on pork exported to the United States," the report said. "These factors probably are the main reason Danish pork imports slipped from their early pace as 1985 progressed."

Excellent harvesting weather enabling farmers to get crops in at rapid pace

AGRICULTURE

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Excellent harvesting weather is enabling farmers in southern and central parts of Texas to get their crops in at a rapid pace, says Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

However, the hot, dry conditions also are putting a strain on pastures, ranges and late crops, and farmers in West Texas are irrigating their crops heavily, he said.

Most crops in southern and central Texas are either mature or getting there fast, due to the past few weeks of hot, dry weather, Carpenter said. Most of the sorghum crop has been harvested in South and Southwest Texas and in coastal areas. Sorghum harvesting also is in full swing in central and eastern parts of the state and is about to start in parts of the Rolling Plains. Yields range from fair to excellent.

Corn harvesting continues across South and Southwest Texas and is about complete in some coastal counties. Harvesting should start soon in central areas. This year's yields range from good to excellent.

A good rice harvest continues in full swing in the Upper Coast and Coastal Bend regions, Carpenter said.

The hot, dry weather is causing cotton bolls to pop open rapidly, with harvesting active across South Texas. Meanwhile, irrigation remains heavy in West Texas.

Some early dryland peanuts are being harvested in the area south of Uvalde, and farmers in Northeast Texas are harvesting early soybeans. However, peanuts and soybeans in coastal regions as well as peanuts in central areas are in dire need of rain, Carpenter said.

Farmers are continuing to harvest a lot of hay over the state due to the June rains, and efforts are under way to ship some of the surplus hay to the drought-stricken counties in the Southeast. Second hay cuttings have been completed in eastern counties.

Reports from district Extension directors show these conditions.

PANHANDLE: Dryland crops are suffering from moisture stress while irrigated crops are in excellent shape. Onion and potato harvesting continues in Deaf Smith County. Wheat farmers continue to get land in shape for fall planting. Ranges are drying rapidly.

SOUTH PLAINS: Hot, dry conditions are putting a strain on dryland crops, pastures and ranges. Crop irrigation remains heavy. Corn is in the dent stage while cotton is blooming and sorghum is heading. Onion and potato harvests continue.

ROLLING PLAINS: Cotton is starting to set bolls while some sorghum harvesting is about to start in southern counties. Bollworms remain heavy in some cotton and grasshoppers are numerous on pastures and ranges in some counties. Hay making continues, and farmers are getting wheat land ready for planting.

NORTH CENTRAL: Sorghum harvesting has started and corn is maturing rapidly, with yield prospects good in most counties. Some late crops as well as pastures need rain. Grasshoppers are increasing in some pastures. Gardens are producing cantaloupe, peas and okra.

NORTHEAST: Corn, cotton and sorghum prospects look good. Bollworms are heavy in some cotton while midge, headworms and webworms have been a problem in sorghum. Some early soybeans are being harvested, and harvesting of peas, watermelons and cantaloupes remains active. Second hay cuttings have been completed, with excellent yields. Pastures, sweet potatoes and pecans need rain.

FAR WEST: Cotton and sorghum are late but are making progress; irrigations are heavy in many locations. Bollworms are heavy in most cotton. The cantaloupe harvest remains in full swing. Livestock generally look good although horn flies are heavy in cattle and bluetongue has been reported in some sheep in Reeves and Loving counties.

WEST CENTRAL: The threat of range fires is great due to the abundance of dry forage. Sorghum, cotton and peanut crops need rain along with pastures and ranges. Peanut irrigation is heavy. Livestock conditions remain good although grazing is declining. Ranchers are shearing Angora goats.

CENTRAL: Sorghum harvesting continues and corn is drying down rapidly. Some corn is being harvested for silage. Cotton bolls are popping open under the hot, dry weather; boll weevils, bollworms remain a problem in some cotton fields. Peanuts are making good progress, with irrigation heavy. Pastures and ranges are declining rapidly.

EAST: Corn and sorghum harvesting is moving toward completion, with generally good yields. Hay making continues, with good yields, and harvesting of watermelons and peas remains active. Livestock continue to look good but pastures need rain.

UPPER COAST: Open weather is allowing farmers to harvest corn and rice at a rapid pace; yields generally are good. The sorghum harvest is generally complete and cotton is opening. Peanuts, soybeans and pastures need rain. Gardeners are making preparations for fall plantings.

SOUTH CENTRAL: Sorghum harvesting is going full speed, with generally good yields. Corn is drying down rapidly and some harvesting has started. Cotton bolls are popping open under hot, dry conditions. Pastures are stressing for moisture.

SOUTHWEST: About 90 percent of the sorghum crop has been harvested, with good to excellent yields. Corn harvesting has started, and some dryland peanuts are being harvested in the La Salle-Frio County area. Cotton and pickling cucumbers continue to make excellent progress under heavy irrigation. Livestock look good but pastures and ranges are burning up rapidly.

Not too early to start plans for fall vegetable garden

Although it's almost the middle of summer, now is the time to start getting things in shape for a fall vegetable garden in most areas of Texas. Most home gardeners have enjoyed a relatively high level of success during the spring of 1986. This has been due primarily to better-than-average growing conditions, adequate care and increased interest on the part of the home gardener.

In many areas of Texas, gardening can continue the year round. It is always a tough decision to decide whether or not to terminate a spring garden or try to carry it through until the first frost. Many spring-planted crops such as tomatoes, eggplant and peppers can be grown right up until the first killing frost, provided the plants are kept healthy. In the southern areas of the state, home gardeners should be encouraged to begin a fall garden rather than try to carry their spring-planted crops through the summer. This means getting the soil prepared and getting transplants started as soon as possible for a fall garden. Most homeowners overlook the fact that the months of August and September are the times to plant many popular vegetable crops such as tomatoes, peppers, eggplant, beans, potatoes, okra and squash.

Also, the cold-hardy vegetables such as broccoli, cabbage, cauliflower, greens, parsley and carrots can be planted at this time for early harvest. Later plantings of these cold-hardy crops should supply fresh vegetables well into the winter in most areas of Texas.

The serious home gardner should consider several items prior to establishing a fall garden. If the fall garden follows a spring garden wherever good fertilization practices have been used, usually little, if any, additional fertilizer should be applied prior to planting. This is extremely important and timely now due to the current shortage and high price of garden fertilizer. If the fall garden is to be a new garden or in a new area, then the application of 2 to 3 pounds of complete fertilizer per 100 square feet, worked well into the garden prior to planting, should be adequate. Later on, if plant growth seems slow and sluggish, a light application of fertilizer watered in between the rows is highly advisable.

A very important consideration for sucessful fall gardening is an adequate supply of water. Since most fall gardens are planted during the heat of late August and September, sufficient water during germination and early growth is of vital importance. Avoid letting the soil dry out and crust, even if this means a light application of water several times a week. The water is best applied utilizing a yard sprinkler until the seeds have sprouted, emerged and are making adequate growth. After the plants have had a chance to establish a strong root system, the gardener should consider switching to a flood or furrow method of applying water to the garden. Avoid any type of water stress during the early growth of the plant; this can seriously affect yields later on.

As with spring gardening, the best practice is to transplant most vegetable crops in the garden. Transplanting is a highly recommended practice for fall gardens as the seeds can be started in areas sheltered from high temperatures and drying winds which are common during late summer or early fall. It's a good idea to protect transplants from excessive heat and wind when they are first put out in the garden.

As with all Texas gardens, fall gardens are subject to many of the same problems as spring gardens, namely weeds, diseases and insects. However, the quality and flavor of many vegetable crops grown in fall are highly superior to those grown during spring.

There are several occasions when a loser-on-loser play is appropriate. You might adopt it when you want to prevent a particular hand from gaining the lead; as a means to bring about an elimination play; to avoid an overruff; or to protect your trump holding. Here's an example of the last.

At this vulnerability, West would be taking his life in his hands if he were to overcall with two hearts. Since his side was using five-card majors, North had an easy raise to two spades, and South's leap to game ended the auction.

West led the king-ace of hearts and continued with the jack (a low heart would have made life simpler for East). East still found the best defense of ruffing. As the cards lay, had declarer overruffed he would have had to lose a trump trick and would then have had to fall back on the diamond finesse for his contract. That would have failed—down one.

At the price of a possible overtrick, declarer insured his contract against normal breaks. Instead of overruffing, he discarded his possible diamond loser, and he was in full control. No matter which suit East chose to return, declarer would win, draw trumps and claim the rest of the tricks.

That brings us to about the halfway point in bridge from A to Z. In the next four weeks we will run the last 14 hands, staring with M for Merrimac Coup.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Tom Rush, Walter Cronkite, George Plimpton and Maureen McGovern are among the celebrities who will help celebrate Harvard University's 350th anniversary.

The five-day celebration, which begins Sept. 3, will include a concert by Rush on Sept. 5, and a giant show at Harvard Stadium on Sept. 6, officials said.

Tommy Walker, who created the special effects for the 1984 Olympic Games and last month's Liberty Weekend celebration, is staging the stadium show. It will include appearances by the Boston Pops, Cronkite, Plimpton, McGovern, the Empire Brass group and actor John Lithgow.

"It's been a challenge," Walker said Thursday. "Doing this has given me the opportunity to realize how litle I knew about this great university."

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The King may be dead, but his melodies and his memory linger on in the hearts of the faithful.

Up to 10,000 faithful Elvis Presley fans are expected next week to swell the crowds of ordinary tourists who still line up to visit his Graceland mansion nine years after his death.

"The really devoted and the really faithful will be coming again from all over the country and all over the world," said Jack Soden, executive director of Graceland Enterprises Inc., which manages the house.

Presley died in the house on Aug. 16, 1977.

Each year, fans flood in to mark the death with an event called the "Elvis International Tribute Week." This year's nine-day tribute begins Saturday.

Events scheduled include tours of Graceland, daily Elvis trivia contests, a footrace, an art show, a karate tournament, a laser light display, a musical concert, a youth ballet and a memorial service.

Fans will shop for Elvis trinkets at more than a half-dozen souvenir shops and attend a seminar where former Presley cronies tell home-spun tails of the singer's career and private life.

The white-columned, two-story house Graceland attracts more than 500,000 visitors a year.

Over the anniversary celebration, some 35,000 tourists will pay $7 each to walk through the ground floor of Graceland, take a look at some of Elvis's cars and visit a trophy room filled with Presley momentos, such as his wedding suit, his old Army fatigues and dozens of pictures, plaques and gold records.

One of the most popular events for Elvis week will be a concert Aug. 14 staged by musicians who performed with Presley, Morgan said, and a candlelight vigil at the singer's grave on Aug. 15 will attract several thousand participants.

Last year's graveside vigil drew 7,000 Presley fans, he said.

Generosity involves give, take

Associated Press

Generosity involves both give and take — particularly in the currency of emotions — and there are people who can't do either one.

The nongiver, according to an article in a recent issue of Cosmopolitan, tends to view all her assets — including her feelings — as exhaustible commodities.

"We keep a mental ledger," sociologist Arlie Russell Hochschild wrote in "The Managed Heart," "with 'owed' and 'received' columns for gratitude, love, anger, guilt and other feelings. 'Poor communications' and 'misunderstanding' sometimes boil down to conflicting notions about what feelings are owed to another."

Americans often are trained from babyhood to uphold an ideal of independence, but too strong emphasis on individualism can create nontakers who bridle at the generosity of friends and co-workers.

James H. Bryan, psychology professor at Northwestern University, said some people have difficul[illegible] ing for favors because "a favor creates a debt," and obligations that may restrict freedom.

There also are women who are generous to a fault. Freud called it moral masochism, but Harvard psychologist Carol Gilligan suggests it is just that women have different priorities than men.

WHETHER YOU give too little or don't take enough, here are some tips on changing your give-and-take quotient:

FOR THOSE WHO GIVE TOO LITTLE:

■ Practice: Devote an evening a week to other people, taking a neighbor out or making a family photo album for your mother.

■ Do your share: Target some areas where you've been sponging off others and start pulling your weight. Pitch in to correct this and you'll discover freedom from unconscious guilt and a new self respect.

■ Splurge on someone: If you're in the habit of buying silk blouses for yourself and cotton socks for everyone else, try reversing things. Break the taboo against generosity in a dramatic way; then you can settle down to the middle ground between stinginess and extravagance.

■ Sharpen your listening skills: Become aware of such conversational habits as doing all the talking, interrupting or changing the subject. Leave a tape recorder on the next time you spend an evening with a friend and analyze what you hear.

■ Volunteer: Pitch in for a cause you believe in and you will discover there is joy in knowing your actions have helped lessen the amount of pain in the world.

FOR THOSE WHO MUST LEARN TO TAKE:

■ Give to yourself: Spend an evening each week pampering yourself. Take the phone off the hook, open a bottle of good wine, dive into a steamy novel.

■ Learn to say no: Make a list of demands you will no longer give in to. Stick to it.

■ Make a gift of yourself: Share your thoughts, interests, memories. Next time you want to do something special for someone, "give" her your opinions.

■ Let someone do something for you: Enjoy receiving. Allow a gift to go unreciprocated. Convince yourself that you are worthy of other people's attention.

■ Enjoy being a guest: Stop being mother hen, quit hiding in the kitchen, and concentrate instead on flirting, dancing and being a captivating conversationalist.

Calm child's fears

NEW YORK (AP) — All children go through states of real or imagined fear, says pediatrician T. Berry Brazelton.

Brazelton, a contributing editor to Family Circle, says fears of falling and of strangers is common to infants and toddlers. By the second year, the two common fears are of new experiences and of other children.

Brazelton points out ways parents can ease a child's fears.

Respect what your child tells you about his fears, and explain it is natural at his age to be worried about certain things.

Support him as he struggles with his fears, and reassure him that all children have fears. Tell him about your fears at his age.

When he conquers a fear, point it out to him so he can learn from his success.

If the same fear lasts beyond six months, seek professional help. A crippling fear can be a child's way of crying for help.

Mothers' advice: Marry plumber

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

If I had it to do all over again I would have married a man who could fix my toilet.

All this garbage about mothers wanting their daughters to marry doctors is just a myth. As I told my daughter, "Being married to a man who drops two aspirin into a bubbling commode and tells you to call his office in the morning can take the passion out of any marriage."

I guess for a while it was a fact that doctors enjoyed a position of status in the country. They drove big cars, had a membership at the club, took winter cruises and had full-grown trees in front of their houses.

But that was before malpractice insurance and "St. Elsewhere."

Today, it's plumbers who are the darlings of anxious mothers everywhere. They're probably the last of the independent entrepreneurs who have unlisted home phone numbers, no beepers, no office, and no idea of when they'll show up to unclog your drain. They're the only men I know who can arrive three days late and still enter the suburbs under a canopy of palms and hosannas.

They make $30 for telling you not to put silverware down your disposer. We all learn the lesson too late. In one of the early houses we bought, we had one plumbing disaster after another. The bathtub backed up. The water pressure was low in the shower. One of the pipes broke and flooded a room. The utility room sink wouldn't drain. He was like a surgeon. I came to care for him in a special way. I saw him more than my husband.

One day I called and said, "Do you suppose Malcolm could make a house call? We have boiling water all over the house. Our lawn is being sauteed, and every time we flush, the steam rises and it is a religious experience."

"Then it is not an emergency," she said. I couldn't believe it. After all we had meant to one another.

Recently, I attended a function in a large ballroom in Washington, D.C. Just before we were to gather to eat and have our program, a leak occurred in the ceiling, sending water everywhere (common in Washington). Everyone in the room was helpless, including seven physicists (four of them Nobel Prize winners), a leading actor, a renowned actress, seven best-selling authors (three of them Pulitzer Prize winners), three legendary sports figures, a leading doctor, a senator, 10 scientists (six of them winners of the Nobel Prize), two generals, a boxing champion of the world, an Olympic gold medalist, four astronauts, a country-western singer, an opera star, a former ambassador, one of the all-time filmmakers in Hollywood and a man who had walked on the moon.

We would have traded them all ... for a plumber.

DEAR ABBY

Did Tenna see?

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: You asked if anybody knew the words to the old song, "What Did Dela-ware, Boys?" Well, my brother's Cub Scout den has been singing it for the last three years. It's got a catchy tune and is one of their favorites. — PAIGE DEBOBEN, HOUSTON

Oh, what did Tenna-see, boys, what did Tenna-see? (Tennessee)
(Sing three times)
I ask you men, as a personal friend
What did Tenna-see?
She saw what Arkin-saw, boys, she saw what Arkin-saw. (Arkansas)
(Sing three times)
I'll tell you then, as a personal friend,
She saw what Arkin-saw.
(Similarly):
Where has Ora-gone, boys? (Oregon)
She's taking Okla-home, boys. (Oklahoma)
How did Wiscon-sin, boys? (Wisconsin)
She stole a New-brass-key, boys. (Nebraska)
What did Dela-ware, boys? (Delaware)
She wore a New Jersey, boys. (New Jersey)
What did Io-weigh, boys? (Iowa)
She weighed a Washing-ton, boys. (Washington)
Where did Ida-hoe, boys? (Idaho)
She hoed in Merry-land, boys. (Maryland)
What did Missy-sip, boys? (Mississippi)
She sipped her Mini-soda, boys. (Minnesota)
What did Connie-cut, boys? (Connecticut)
She cut her shaggy Mane, boys. (Maine)
What did Ohi-owe, boys? (Ohio)
She owed her Taxes, boys. (Texas)
How did Flora-die, boys? (Florida)
She died of Misery, boys. (Missouri)

DEAR PAIGE: Thanks for sending one of the most popular versions of that song. I received many. It must have been around for at least half a century, maybe longer. And thanks to all who responded to my request. If I need any more lyrics — Alaska.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 15-year-old girl. Ever since I can remember, I've had three things hammered into me: Don't drink, don't smoke, and don't get pregnant.

You see, my parents want to protect me from every harm they can because they love me. The only way I can get drunk is if I drink. The only way I can get pregnant is if I have sex. That's only logical. But can someone tell me where the logic is in telling me not to smoke because it's bad for my health, when I live with a mother who has a cigarette in her hand every time she turns around?

I don't smoke and I don't plan to start, but I might just as well because I suffer the same eye irritation, allergic reactions and lung damage as I would if I smoked two packs a day.

I don't care if this letter lands right smack in your wastepaper basket, Abby, but I just had to write it. Thanks for listening. — OREGON SMOKE HATER

DEAR SMOKE HATER: Your letter landed right smack in my column — where it belongs.

(Getting married? Send for Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Experimental education program implemented

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Teen-agers were less likely to get pregnant, more apt to use birth control, and more likely to delay their first sexual experience after participating in an experimental sex education program, a new study has found.

The study, conducted by researchers at Johns Hopkins School of Medicine in Baltimore, offers for the first time strong evidence that sex education, counseling and on-site medical services — beyond the standard sex education curriculum — may help reduce sexual activity among teenagers of both sexes.

Laurie Schwab Zabin, director of the fertility research unit at Johns Hopkins, said sexually active teenagers who participated in the program showed an increase in clinic attendance, a decrease in unprotected intercourse and a "dramatic decline" in pregnancy rates.

Zabin and her colleagues studied 1,700 inner-city junior and high school students from four different schools in the Baltimore area. Teenagers in two of the schools went through the program, in addition to the normal sex education courses. The other teens received only the standard school sex education courses.

The aim of the program, said Zabin, was to reduce pregnancy and increase contraceptive awareness and knowledge. A nurse and social worker spent mornings lecturing on sex education to junior high school students in one of the schools and to senior high school students in the other.

Lunch hours were open for individual and couple counseling. In the afternoon, the staff would move to a clinic on the same school block.

The study was published in Family Planning Perspectives, the professional journal of the Alan Guttmacher Institute in New York, an organization concerned with voluntary fertility control and population issues.

The findings were criticized by the founder of the American Life League, a group that opposes sex clinics in schools.

"If the study had found that girls waited until they were married to have sex, then I would say the program was a success," said Judie Brown of Stafford, Va.

Sea lions Alaskan

The Stellar sea lion, which calls Alaska home, can grow up to 13 feet long and weigh over 2,000 pounds. Upon birth, a sea lion pup is dropped 3 or 4 feet onto rocks — apparently the equivalent of a slap on a human baby's bottom. — CNS

COPING WITH JOB LOSS

Unemployment 'most common environmental' cause of child abuse

By JIM MAY and MARTI VERMILLION

May

Vermillion

DEAR COPING: I have a neighbor whose husband has been unemployed for several months. They have three young children.

While I am not really aware of anything that you might call child abuse, I have noticed that both she and her husband seem to be increasingly more physical in the discipline of their children, especially the youngest.

I have tried to say something to her about it and she let me know in no uncertain terms that it was none of my business. I want to stay out, but I want to help. — Ann

DEAR ANN: We appreciate the position that you find yourself in and even more admire your willingness to want to help after your initial attempt was rebuffed.

Research indicates that unemployment is the single most common environmental condition placing a family at risk of child abuse.

The stresses created by unemployment, the idleness, loss of self-esteem and the lack of financial means often predisposes a family to abuse. This is especially true in a situation where the daily care duties are turned over to a father who is accustomed to being the breadwinner of the family.

Research has also found that in abusing families with unemployed fathers, a very young child is most likely to be abused.

Your experience in attempting to speak with the mother is also consistent with research findings that persons who abuse are usually extremely sensitive to any criticism.

While you do note that you do not think that there is any child abuse presently, we have taken this opportunity to address the potential for child abuse during times of widespread unemployment.

In fact, during the deep recession of 1974-75, the 94th Congress, partly in response to situations in the homes of the unemployed, began considering the possibility of viewing employment as a right.

Certainly, while such legislation would not ensure that there would be no idle adults at home, it might reduce the unemployment rate which might reduce the potential for child abuse created by joblessness.

There are many laws to protect the rights of numerous special interest groups and perhaps nationally-known psychologist Dr. James Dobson has a point when he suggests that there should be more legislation to protect the family.

In terms of what you might do, consider going back and being a friend by not responding directly to your neighbor's actions, but instead talking about the difficulty she must be experiencing.

Be a good sympathetic ear. Choose your words so as not to sound judgmental.

It's not easy, but try to keep the lines of communication open and and not let her be isolated. Let us know what is happening, we really do care.

DEAR COPING: Three months ago I was just another old, loyal employee with a major oil company, now I'm just old. What kind of advice can you give me? I'm 58 and would consider a new career. — R.J.

DEAR R.J.: It would depend on a number of factors. What does your family think and want? How do their wants, needs and wishes mesh with yours? What do you and they see in your collective futures?

These are just a few of questions we feel must, or at least should, be addressed.

The best advice that we could give you now would be to join one of the "changing careers" groups that have been formed at several local churches.

One group we are familiar with meets on Monday nights at Holy Trinity Episcopal Church in Midland; we feel certain they would be glad to have you join their group.

As for what you might consider doing on your own, we have found Richard Bolles' book — "What Color Is Your Parachute?" — to be a good place to start organizing your thoughts.

While the author's emphasis is directly focused on the individual rather than the family, he has some great suggestions that have worked for many others since the first edition was published in 1970. It is written in a light tone which helps make the awesome task associated with the process a little less arduous — and it truly is hard work, probably the hardest job you have ever had.

To share a thought from that book with you: "I hope that your job-hunt, your career-change, turns out to be, for you ... A journey of not merely moving from one job to another, but a journey of personal and spiritual growth as well." We could not have said it better ourselves. Good luck.

Small-town weekly holds readers from Maine to California

By RICK WARNER

POLK, Neb. (AP) — The Polk Progress is a small-town weekly that's printed on a century-old press and symbolized by a snail — an appropriate logo for a newspaper whose motto is "Slower Is Better."

So why does it have readers from Maine to California?

The Progress carries its share of anniversary announcements, garden club notices and school menus. For most readers, though, the star attraction is 72-year-old Norris Alfred.

Alfred is the Progress' editor, publisher, advertising manager, circulation director, floorsweeper and part-time paper folder. He's also a homespun philosopher and stylish writer whose musings on everything from bird-watching to nuclear war have earned him a small but dedicated national following.

"I think it's the greatest paper in the country," says Jerrold Werthimer, a journalism professor at San Francisco State University and longtime subscriber. "It's really the only paper I read from cover to cover."

The Progress, which has twice as many subscribers (880) as Polk has people, has brought a measure of fame to this rural community 30 miles northeast of Grand Island in central Nebraska.

Alfred has been featured on national television, quoted in the Wall Street Journal, profiled in magazines and even nominated for a Pulitzer Prize.

"I guess a lot of journalists have some romantic idea of a small weekly newspaper and a guy speaking his piece," Alfred says. "But I've never thought of myself as anyone special."

A "warily liberal Democrat" in a conservative Republican town, Alfred's views often clash with those of his readers. In Polk, where Alfred was born and raised, the lifelong bachelor is considered the town's eccentric uncle.

Alfred's path to journalistic stardom was an unlikely one. He flunked his only journalism course in college because he was too busy playing horseshoes, and spent years roaming the country as a struggling painter.

"I didn't have the talent, but it took me a long time to realize it," he says.

Alfred returned to his hometown in the early 1950s to help run the family clothing store. But he quickly tired of merchandising and bought the Progress in 1955 with a $3,000 down payment. Except for a brief return to painting, he has run the paper ever since.

Few readers outside Polk knew about Alfred until his brother Orrin, a San Francisco printer, passed out copies of the paper to some Bay area journalists. They became hooked on Alfred's writing and spread the word.

Several San Francisco reporters and journalism professors were so impressed that they nominated the Polk publisher for a Pulitzer for editorial writing in 1980. He didn't win, but the honor led to a brief moment in the media spotlight.

"The thing really ballooned," Alfred says. "All of a sudden, I had television cameras pointed at me in the Progress office."

The Progress received more publicity in 1983 when NBC came to town to film a story for the "Today" show. The network returned to Polk last November to get reaction to the Geneva summit.

"The idea that two men sitting down together is even going to begin to solve the ills of the world...is presumptuous," Alfred told an interviewer. A Wall Street Journal columnist called the remark "the wisest words spoken on television about the summit."

While international diplomacy may pop up in a Progress editorial, Alfred's front-page "Polking Around" column often deals with more mundane matters.

Underlying Alfred's philosophy is his conviction that "progress is a myth. Things are different," he says, "but not always better ... We can't claim progress when we have the capability of destroying the earth."

The Progress' cramped, one-room office reflects Alfred's dislike of modern technology. The copy is composed on old-fashioned Linotype machines and printed on an 1890 Babcock press that looks like it belongs in a museum.

Alfred's work schedule is a throwback, too. He usually gets up at 4 a.m. to write his editorials and columns.

Lung cancer in women continues on increase

ATLANTA (AP) — The lung cancer rate for white male Americans may have gone as high as it ever will, federal researchers say.

However, the rate for women, who haven't cut down on smoking as much as have men, continues to increase.

In a report published Thursday by the national Centers for Disease Control, scientists from the National Cancer Institute said lung cancer rates for white American males, which had increased each year by some 10 percent until the 1970s, peaked in 1981 and then fell 4 percent from 1982 to 1983, the latest year for which statistics are available.

The rate of 79.3 lung cancer cases per 100,000 white males in the United States translates to about 94,000 cases in 1983, said Dr. Marcia Will, a cancer institute researcher. In 1981, the rate was 82.8 cases per 100,000 white males.

It is possible, with declines in smoking in the United States, that the 1981 lung cancer rate will never be surpassed, she said.

"Most lung cancer in white males is presumed to be from smoking, and we've noticed a decrease in smoking since the 1960s," Ms. Will said. "Hopefully we won't see anything else in the future that would cause the rate to go back up."

Smoking among American adult males has dropped from a level of 52 percent before the surgeon general's landmark report on smoking in 1964 to about 35 percent in 1983, the CDC noted.

The lung cancer rates for black men are about 50 percent higher than those for whites, and are decreasing in a similar fashion, the CDC report said. But the data for black males have not been as consistent, so firm conclusions are not so easy to draw, Ms. Will said.

Women's lung cancer rate continues to increase "markedly," the CDC said. In 1983, 33.5 out of each 100,000 American women got lung cancer, up from 30.9 in 1981. Women reported more than 41,000 new lung cancer cases in 1983, and 35,000 deaths.

Two imports, Fords perform bad in tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two low-cost imports from Korea and Yugoslavia and Ford's new pride and joy, the Taurus and Sable, performed poorly in 1986 crash tests, the government says.

The annual tests by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration showed 10 models, more than one-third of the 26 cars tested, doing poorly in the 35 mph head-on crashes into a fixed barrier.

The impact was severe enough in the 10 cars that one or both of the front seat occupants, wearing seat belts, would have been killed on impact from head injuries, according to safety agency calculations.

The tests, conducted with instrument-equipped dummies over the past eight months, have been highly controversial with automakers, who contend they can vary widely because of test circumstances and do not reflect injury risks under real highway conditions.

But auto safety advocates argue the tests represent a clear indicator to car buyers as to the relative protection one may expect as a result of automobile design during a major highway crash.

"The crash test results separate the safer cars from the less safe cars," insisted Clarence Ditlow, director of the Center for Auto Safety, who expressed disappointment that more cars did not perform better among the 26 models tested this year.

The highway safety agency generally regards any head injury rating of more than 1,000 as probably being fatal to the occupant.

The cars that exceeded the 1,000 threshold for one or both front seat occupants were: the Isuzu I-Mark, Yugo GV from Yugoslavia, Plymouth Colt Vista, Saab 9000, American Motors Jeep Comanche, Volkswagen Scirocco, Ford Taurus, Mercury Sable, Hyundai Excel from South Korea, and Subaru GL.

The Yugo recorded a head injury rating of 1,415 for the driver and 1,318 for the passenger, while the Hyundai Excel just dipped under the 1,000 threshold at 999 for the driver but soared to 2,662 for the passenger.

Both companies in statements played down the signficance of the government test results. Hyundai said its own 35 mph crash tests, conducted after a new seat belt system was installed last April, showed the Excel performing much better.

Ted Kade, a Hyundai spokesman, said the new seat belt system, which is on all the Hyundai cars now on the market, "provides an increased safety margin...by locking up faster" than the system used in the NHTSA test car.

WASHINGTON VIEW

Southwest border eyed for strong drug fight

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Reagan administration officials are setting the stage for a dramatic announcement next week of strong new drug fighting efforts on the Southwestern border, possibly in cooperation with the Mexican government.

Treasury officials are figuring how to get the most political mileage out of the announcement without tipping their hand to drug traffickers.

Mexico President Miguel de la Madrid will speak here to the National Press Club next Thursday, and Treasury has timed "an important announcement" to coincide with his visit.

Washington-based reporters for Mexican newspapers say new hands-across-the-border cooperation may involve the environment and other policy issues.

Assistant Treasury Secretary Francis Keating II, in charge of developing plans for the planned drug-fighting Southwest Border Task Force, said hundreds of new federal officers will work out of El Paso, Tx., headquarters. He suggests the assignment of 100 additional Internal Revenue Service agents, 200 new Customs Service agents and possibly 100 newly assigned FBI agents.

Because the president's budget request earlier this year envisioned shrinking personnel in these departments, some are asking where the money is coming from to pay these new officers.

"That will all come out in the press conference next week," said Charlie Powers, an aide to Keating. "One thing we're not going to do is tip our hand to the drug dealers. We're not going to be too specific."

Six senators — both senators from Texas, California and New Mexico — earlier this year signed a letter to the president asking for a Southwest Border Task Force, similar to the one headed by Vice President Bush that wiped out hundreds of South Florida drug dealers a couple of years ago.

Bush answered for the president, pointing out that the administration already had expanded a crackdown on organized crime — strongly connected to the drug trade — with task forces in Houston, San Diego and Los Angeles. Also, Bush said, the administration had increased drug enforcement efforts with new offices in El Paso, Long Beach and New Orleans.

While many members of Congress urge new immigration laws to "control our borders," a former Reagan administration official, Dr. Annelise Anderson, suggests removing barriers to any workers who can find jobs in the North American continent, in Canada, Mexico or the United States.

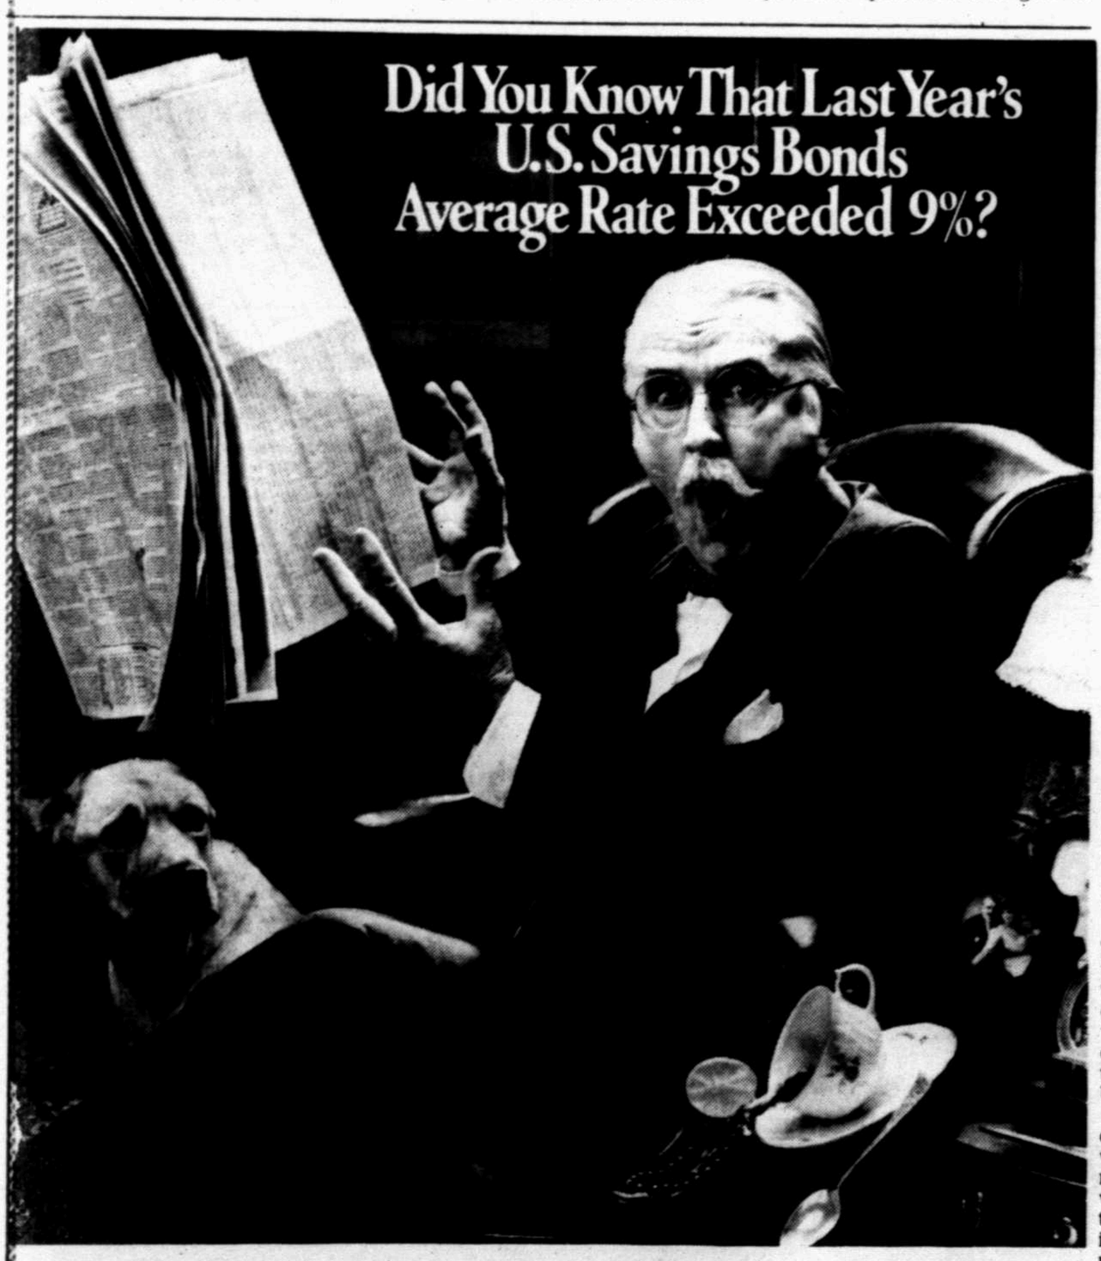
Dr. Anderson, with the Hoover Institution, a think tank connected to Stanford University in California, made the proposal during a debate last week with Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., chief sponsor of immigration reform legislation.

Anderson argued that it is difficult to prove the claim that immigrants take American jobs and declared that penalties against employers of alien workers — the key provision of pending immigration legislation — would not work.

Simpson said he is convinced that undocumented workers "depress workers' wages and working conditions" and that existing immigration law is not being enforced.

Four House committees with immigration jurisdiction have not disturbed a carefully crafted provision in the Senate-passed bill authorizing 300,000 workers to come to the U.S. each year to harvest perishable crops. But, Simpson said, "greedy" California growers still are not satisfied. He knows not to count on any California votes.

Peggy Roberson is Washington correspondent for the Midland Reporter-Telegram.



Many people all over America are surprised when they hear what U.S. Savings Bonds have to offer.

For starters, Savings Bonds give you market-based interest rates—like the money markets—plus the security of a guaranteed return. This means you can earn a lot more than the guaranteed minimum rate of 7½%, but never less! To earn the higher rates, just hold your Bonds for five years or longer.

Here's more surprising news—the interest you earn from Savings Bonds is free from state and local income taxes. And you don't have to pay federal taxes on the interest earned until you cash in your Bonds.

Savings Bonds are easy to buy, too. They cost as little as $25 and can be purchased at most banks and savings and loans. Or through the Payroll Savings Plan where you work.

All of these advantages are making Savings Bonds an increasingly popular investment. Last year, sales of U.S. Savings Bonds were up nearly 30%!

With all that Savings Bonds have to offer, it's no surprise they're one of the best investments in America. For the current rate, just call toll-free 1-800-US-BONDS.

U.S. SAVINGS BONDS Paying Better Than Ever

Market-based rates apply to Bonds purchased on and after 11/1/82 and held at least five years. Bonds purchased before 11/1/82 earn market-based rates when held beyond 10/31/87. Bonds held less than five years earn lower rates.

ICC orders reduced rates in keeping with oil prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interstate Commerce Commission, heeding criticism of rate hikes imposed by railroads last January, has ordered the carriers to reduce rates to reflect the recent decline in oil prices.

Railroads raised rates to recover expected increased costs in operation. But critics have said that, while the ICC in the past has allowed railroads to increase the rates when the costs go up, they have not been forced to lower the rates when those costs decline.

In a vote Thursday, the commission acknowledged the criticism and ruled that the railroads are obligated to reduce their rates whenever the ICC index shows a decline in costs.

Missile proposal rejected

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has rejected a proposal that opponents said would keep portable Stinger missiles out of the hands of all U.S.-backed guerrillas in Angola, Afghanistan, Nicaragua and elsewhere.

By a 63-37 vote, the Senate on Thursday turned down a plan that would have permitted the president to supply Stingers to so-called freedom fighters only if he certified the weapons would be safeguarded according to a long list of specifications identical to those required of U.S. allies.

Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., contended the Stinger — a lightweight, shoulder-fired, ground-to-air missile — is "the ideal terrorist weapon which could easily fall into the hands of terrorists if introduced into the volatile conditions of guerrilla warfare."

Killer was disinherited

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vietnam War-era ambassador Tran Van Chuong and his wife had disinherited the son who is charged with murdering them last month, says a police detective.

Detective David Forbes testified at a District of Columbia Superior Court probable cause hearing Thursday that wills dated 1969 and 1977 were found in the couple's northwest Washington home.

In the 1977 handwritten wills cited by Forbes, Chuong and his wife wrote: "Khiem has behaved most of his life like an exceptionally ungrateful and bad son, and has been too often to his parents a great source of worries and deep sorrow. Such behavior cannot be forgotten and forgiven in a traditional Vietnamese family."

The will did not leave Khiem, 60, an inheritance. The 1969 documents had given him a house in Vietnam.
