FBI charges Soviet citizen with espionage

NEW YORK (AP) — Federal agents arrested a Soviet employee of the United Nations Saturday on espionage charges as he bought classified documents from an informant on a subway platform, the FBI said.

A statement released by FBI Director William Webster identified the Soviet as Gennadiy Fedorovich Zakharov, 39, a scientific affairs officer assigned to the Center for Science and Technology for Development at the United Nations Secretariat here.

Three federal agents arrested Zakharov around 6 p.m. at a Queens subway stop right after he paid $1,000 for documents on a U.S. Air Force jet engine, FBI Assistant Director John L. Hogan said at a news conference here. The documents were confiscated by the FBI, according to Webster's statement released in Washington.

Zakharov gave the money to a man identified as a graduate of Queens College, who has supplied information to the FBI on the case for three years, Hogan said.

The man, a permanent U.S. resident who comes from a "third world country," is employed by a subcontractor to the Bendix Corp. and General Electric Co., two important military contractors, Hogan said.

When arrested, Zakharov struggled with the FBI agents, Hogan said. They tackled him and wrestled him to the ground before handcuffing him, he said.

FBI officials did not identify the informant, who they said Zakharov tried to recruit while the man was still a student more than three years ago.

Hogan said agents believed that Zakharov was a KGB agent.

No one answered telephone calls to the Soviet embassy in Washington.

A person who answered the telephone at the Soviet Union's U.N. mission here identified himself as a diplomat on duty and said, "We have no comment on this case."

Hogan did not elaborate on the nature of the documents.

He added, however, that Zahkarov had orally offered the informant a contract outlining what information the Soviets needed. Zahkarov also asked for manufacturers' manuals of military projects that would give the Soviets a better idea of what Americans were building, he said.

"Zakharov met with the student on many occasions during that time and reportedly paid him thousands of dollars to obtain a wide spectrum of valuable but non-classified information, concentrated in the areas of robotics, computers and artificial intelligence," Webster said.

From their first meeting onward, the informant was in continual contact with the FBI, appraising agents of Zakharov's activities, Hogan said.

Zakharov told the informant he should feel rewarded when he and Zakharov "hurt the United States," the FBI said.

According to the FBI, Zakharov arrived in the United States in December 1982 as a scientific affairs officer. As an officer or employee of an international organization his visa gives him "only limited diplomatic immunity that does not extend to espionage," the FBI said.

"Zakharov appears to have used his position with the United Nations, an agency established to further international peace and security to carry out espionage thus violating the UN's spirit of trust and cooperation," Webster said.

Arraignment was scheduled for Monday before a U.S. magistrate in New York, FBI spokesman Ray McElhaney said that if convicted, Zakharov could be sentenced to a maximum of life in prison.

Lewis, Hobby deadlocked over budget crisis

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

Dec. 24, 1986: Snow piled high against the Capitol steps today as the Texas Legislature entered the 21st day of its fifth straight special session. House Speaker Gib Lewis stepped around the unexploded Senate landmines to tell representatives he hoped to let them "spend a few hours" with their families Christmas morning. Outside the barred doors, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and a dozen senators planned their latest guerrilla warfare tactics.

Hobby

Lewis

AUSTIN — The tension between the two chambers of the state Legislature hasn't quite reached such a personal and violent level, yet.

But the frustration is mounting, with very few lawmakers holding out hope that a solution to the $3.5 billion state deficit will emerge before the current special session ends at midnight September 4.

"I wouldn't plan a vacation for the first week of September," Lewis says. "I'm canceling one out I've got. I was going to Alaska fishing. I always go the first week of September."

Lewis and Hobby each have laid out their own plans, gaining strong support in their respective chambers. The Capitol rotunda, however, seems miles wide, as consensus among the House and Senate remains absent. It took four days for the House appropriations bill to cross that gulf.

Nineteen days into the 30-day session that began uneasily Aug. 6, the long-expected stalemate has arrived. The problem in a nutshell is this:

— The House only wants to take care of enough of the deficit to keep the state from bouncing its checks this winter and spring. The Senate wants to eliminate the entire shortfall.

— The House has approved more than $1 billion in budget cuts. The Senate says those cuts cut too deep, particularly in higher education.

— The Senate wants to raise state taxes. The House, armed with constitutional protection, is refusing.

On first analysis, the reason behind the deadlock seems cloudy. It is neither partisan nor ideological. Republicans and Democrats, liberals and conservatives agree more with the opposites in their own chamber than with their compadres across the rotunda.

The pattern, however, becomes clear with one look at the leaders of the House and Senate.

Lewis, locked in a rare November re-election battle back home in Fort Worth, has adamantly opposed new taxes for months. When Gov. Mark White called the special session last month, Lewis came up with the only legislative position consistent with his no-new-taxes stance.

Without higher taxes, the Legislature could not possibly balance the budget with spending cuts alone. Therefore Lewis adopted the Band Aid plan: cutting enough to keep the state solvent until the regular session convenes in January.

Hobby, however, believes lawmakers should meet their constitutional pay-as-you-go responsibility and address the full deficit. He toured the state one week before the session began, claiming the House wanted to "save state government by dismanteling it." He met with civic and business leaders, encouraging them to support increases in the sales, gasoline and franchise taxes.

Bob Jones of the Human Relations Council stands in front of a rehabilitated house at 1102 E. Magnolia St. The council will be asking Midland County and the city for funding this week.

HRC to make plea for more funds

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Despite a City Council's proposal to cut funding to the Human Relations Council this year, the group's representatives say they will go ahead with plans for a new $20,000 volunteer center next year.

"I think we can fund the volunteer center without city help. One way or another the Human Relations Council is going to continue," said the council's Director Bob Jones.

In preliminary budget hearings, the city has cut the group's $25,000 funding. Group representatives go before the City Council Tuesday to make a final plea for funding.

On Monday the group will also present a resolution to the County Commissioners Court requesting funding and support for its volunteer program, Jones said.

"We're going to the county to ask for participation with the volunteer program and the Human Relations Council, and we'll ask for whatever funding is available," Jones said.

During their annual budget talks, city officials, agreed to take the Human Relations Council money and give it to the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce.

The council has received city support since its inception in 1970, Jones said.

The city's allocation made up about half of the council's $58,000 operating budget this year, he said.

The rest of the group's budget is raised through private foundations and fundraising.

The council, the programs of which include housing rehabilitation, a social service information and referral phone line, a teen summer job bank and interpreting services, hopes to start a volunteer action center project next year.

The center would train volunteers and match then up with agencies needing help, said HRC President Martha Garza.

"It's a good tool because people like to volunteer, but volunteers get frustrated.

"People go to agencies and sometimes find out that's not what they want to do," she said.

As a result, agencies lose volunteers and potential volunteers lose interest in supporting their community, Ms. Garza said.

Although Ms. Garza admits these are bad economic times to be starting a program, she says a volunteer center is needed now more than ever.

"A lot of volunteers are available now and with cutbacks we need this volunteer center now. In order for agencies to function at present levels they are going to need a lot of volunteer hours," she said.

Task force discussing making airport Foreign Trade Zone

By DOUG DRUMMOND
Assistant City Editor

Funding is nowhere in sight and details are sketchy but a task force continues to discuss the idea of making Midland Regional Airport an international port of entry and a Foreign Trade Zone.

The idea — which supporters hope will boost the Permian Basin's economy — came earlier this year, but officials say they know little about what might happen.

"It would be good for economic development," said Stan Garrison, chairman of the Midland-Odessa Foreign Trade Zone Task Force. "We want to look into it very closely."

The task force is made up of members from the Midland and Odessa chambers of commerce.

If Midland Regional Airport became an international port of entry and a Foreign Trade Zone, it would allow cargo to be shipped in and out of the area from other countries.

This, supporters say, may boost the Permian Basin's economy and serve as bait to lure in new businesses.

Although there are several options, the one most talked about is paying a user fee to the U.S. government for an international port of entry and then applying for Foriegn Trade Zone status.

That would cost $73,000 the first year and $50,000 annually thereafter for the port of entry — yet such funding may be hard to obtain.

"That will be the hard part," Garrison said. "With the budgets (local governments) the way they are, it will be difficult."

There has been several plans preliminarily discussed, many of them revolving around the idea of Midland and Odessa jointly funding the venture.

But an Odessa representative, Chuck Bernhard, said there has been no talk of such a move.

"There has been no discussion about that (any funding coming from Odessa)," said Bernhard, economic development director of the Odessa chamber. "We don't even know if it (Foreign Trade Zone) would be feasible."

Bernhard said discussions about the idea are still in the "preliminary" stages.

Foreign Trade Zone saves money for El Paso companies

By DOUG DRUMMOND
Assistant City Editor

EL PASO — The production of a wiring harness used underneath the dash in automobiles winds in and out of Mexico before it is completed.

Materials for the harness are usually bought in the United States, shipped to Mexico for initial assembly, returned to El Paso for the finishing work and then taken to a U.S. auto plant for installment.

The zigzag trail runs through El Paso's Foreign Trade Zone.

Manufacturers can jet parts across the world to where there is cheaper labor and still save money, thanks to having such zones.

For El Paso, the wiring harness traffic is just a portion of the some $120 million annually which flows through its foreign trade zone.

Officials here say it is a tremendous boost for the area's economy, predicting even bigger and better things in the future.

"It's worked well here," said George Perry, director of the El Paso International Airport. "But it doesn't work everywhere. It depends on geography and and several other items."

Officials in Midland and Odessa have preliminary discussed having such a zone at Midland Regional Airport.

The production of the wiring harness begins in the United States or a foreign country, says Robert Jacobs, manager of the El Paso Foreign Trade Zone.

Burials continue for slain workers

EDMOND, Okla. (AP) — Eight more burials were held Saturday for victims of a silent killer who took two pistols to work at the Edmond Post Office and killed 14 co-workers before turning a gun on himself.

"We've experienced pain, haven't we? You bet we have," the Rev. Finley Tinnin said at the funeral of Patty J. Husband, a five-year postal employee.

"But think of pain being the threshhold of peace...It is because of pain that God moves to us and brings us his peace."

Six burials took place Saturday in Oklahoma. One was held in St. John, Kan., and another in Marietta, Ga. Four victims were buried Friday. One is scheduled today and one Monday.

The body of gunman Patrick Henry Sherrill, who also wounded six other people during Wednesday morning's shooting spree, was cremated and will be buried today at Watonga, at his parents' gravesite.

The private service for Sherrill will be open only to his family and close friends, according to the funeral home handling the service.

More than 200 people crammed into the chapel of an Oklahoma City funeral home for the funeral of Ms. Husband, 48.

Tinnin told the mourners it was likely most of those in attendance felt Ms. Husband died too young.

"But everything that is mortal is conspicuously short," Tinnin said. "We find our comfort in the knowledge that time is something God manufactured...and eternity is God's natural habitat."

At a Roman Catholic funeral Mass in Edmond for Paul Michael Rockne, 33-year-old grandson of legendary Notre Dame football Coach Knute Rockne, about 150 postal workers were among the 700 mourners. Three dozen postal employees wore their uniforms with black arm bands.

"Everything that has been done in this last week has been unusual and has been cruel, but we know that his soul has been called to God, our father," said the Rev. Marvin Leven.

Mike Bigler, a survivor of the shooting, began sobbing loudly at one point and was escorted outside.

Rockne, whose casket was draped with an American flag, was one of the first people killed in the slaughter, police said.

Cathy Miller, wife of slain employee Bill Miller, said her husband may have saved several lives.

"Everything I can gather indicates that Billy was trying to take the gun away from him," she said after his funeral Friday. "I know of four people who told me their lives were saved because he gave his."

The Rev. Robert B. Hawkins, pastor of the church the Millers attended, said he was with Mrs. Miller when U.S. Postmaster General Preston Tisch called to thank her for her husband's heroic efforts.

A family member rests her head on the casket of Paul Michael Rockne, one of the victims of Wednesday's post office shooting, following Saturday's graveside services.

In Enid, nearly 300 people gathered at the First Baptist Church to pay tribute to Jonna Gragert Hamilton, 30. Other services for Ms. Hamilton were held Friday at the First Baptist Church in Edmond. She was buried in Enid on Saturday.

"We've got thousands of people praying for us and we're at peace," said Joyce Gragert, the woman's mother. "I've prayed for Mr. Sherrill's family a lot. It must be a terrible thing for them. And we're still sort of stunned."

At the First Christian Church in Edmond, about 450 mourners attended services for Jerry Pyle, 51, who had worked at the Edmond Post Office for 25 years.

About 175 people were crowded into the Minnie Funeral Home Chapel in St. John, Kan., for services for Leroy Phillips. Phillips, 42, of Choctaw, had worked as rural carrier at the Edmond Post Office for three months.

More than 200 people attended services for Kenneth Morey at Baggerley Funeral Home in Edmond. Morey, 49, had been a rural mail carrier for five years.

At the Bill Merritt Funeral Home in Bethany, about 60 friends and family members attended a private service for Thomas Shader. Shader, 31, was a part-time clerk at the post office.

Services also were completed Saturday for Judy Denney, 39, who had moved to Oklahoma City with her family about two months ago from Atlanta and had reported to work at the post office only four days before the killings. The services were held in Marietta, Ga.

Meanwhile, survivors of the shooting turned to counselors as they tried to deal with emotions ranging from "anger to rage to confusion to pity," said one of the counseling experts helping the grief-stricken community.

"None of them could understand any reason or motivation for the thing happening," Dr. Thomas Little, division medical director for the postal service from Memphis, Tenn., said Friday.

Components for the harness are bought and then shipped via El Paso to Mexico.

Then, because of the cheaper labor in that country, the harnesses are assembled by hand.

Next they are shipped back to El Paso where they are tested and re-worked if neccessary.

Once that is done, the harnesses are loaded on trucks and shipped to the respective automobile plants, usually based in the northern part of the United States.

"The key advantage to doing it this way," says Jacobs, "is because duties (taxes) are a lot cheaper with the use of a Foreign Trade Zone."

Jacobs says the companies would have to pay a 5 percent duty on the harness components being shipped back and forth if there was no zone.

With the zone, the duty is 2.6 percent — a substantial savings.

"It works with other sub assembly parts, too," Jacobs said. "Manufacturers want to go to the best source (for labor or parts) in the world. That might be Belgium, the United States — even Singapore or Japan."

El Paso, which began its zone in 1981, is one of 14 Foreign Trade Zones in Texas, based on information from a Texas Economic Development Commission report. There are some 120 zones nationwide.

The project began on a 60-acre site adjacent to the El Paso International Airport. In 1983, officials received approval to expand the zone to 588 acres.

This area, called the Butterfield Trail Industrial Park, has a myriad of manufacturers residing in it.

"It's grown at a very rapid pace," said Jacobs. "We have a lot of twin plants (sister plants in Mexico and El Paso) and the location of our city makes us a natural stopping place."

The zone is about a five minute drive away from the Mexico-United States border.

"The city and the airport look at the zone as a Economic Development tool," Jacobs said, noting it has directly led to some 200 more jobs in the area.

"It also has a ripple effect on the rest of the area," he added.

Perry said the zone is also bait to lure other companies to the city.

"Not every likely candidate recruited (by the city) neccessarily needs what we have to offer," said Perry.

"For example, the service industries usually do not need the benefits of the trade zone.

"But those involved in light manufacturing and warehousing have the nature of a client who may have interest."

Both Perry and Jacobs said it is possible having such a zone in Midland may be a good idea.

"I have no reason to believe the city of Midland could not pursue and be successful in their own right," Perry said.

Jacobs said the more Foreign Trade Zones the better.

"We need more of them," he said. "It is like a network. If some company has a reason to stop in Midland (for production), then that is a good reason for having a zone."

But he added:

"A Foreign Trade Zone by itself will not be an answer...But if Midland and another city were competing, everything else being equal, it definitely would be an advantage."

City Councilman Kelly Fish, a member of the task force, said he hopes such a venture could be funded 50-50 by the two cities if it is feasible.

"I think that would be a fair split," Fish said.

Fish discussed the idea Tuesday with the Airport Planning and Development Board, but the matter was met with some skepticism.

Tom Sloan, a former City Councilman and a member of the board, warned Fish to watch out for any project with Odessa.

"You be careful," he said. "They (Odessa officials) are not sleeping over there...They are probably worrying about how they can take it (the airport) away from us."

Fish also told the board the task force planned to mail surveys to three groups beginning next week.

Area pilots, regional chamber members and travel agencies will be surveyed to determine what need, if any, there is for a Foreign Trade Zone.

Once the data is gathered, Garrison said his task force will make some kind of recommendation.

"I personally think we may go into a spot zone," Garrison said, noting it likely would cost less money.

To obtain Foreign Trade spot Zone status, a near-by airport would have to sponsor Midland Regional Airport.

"We're not sure about all the details," Garrison said. "But we're looking into it."

Garrision said he is unsure when some type of recommendation will come from his group.

"I don't think anything will be done (officially) by the end of this year."

From a quick glance, Hobby and Lewis appear to have little in common other than their leadership positions.

William Pettus Hobby Jr., the 54-year-old son of the former governor and lieutenant governor, is an intensely private man who wields his considerable influence quietly. A 1953 graduate of Rice University and a Navy veteran, Hobby served as parliamentarian to Lt. Gov. Ben Ramsey before winning election to the state's second highest office in 1972. He grew up in one of the state's most powerful families, publisher until two years ago of The Houston Post.

Gibson Donald Lewis, who turned 50 on Friday, is loud and gregarious with a movie-star smile and a knack for mangling metaphors. An Air Force veteran who attended but never was graduated from two Texas universities, Lewis has built one of the country's largest label companies in Fort Worth.

He has represented his northern Tarrant County district in the House since the 1971 session and now ranks seventh in seniority among the 150 members. Lewis served under speakers Gus F. Mutscher, Rayford Price, Price Daniel Jr. and Billy Clayton before winning near-unanimous support from his colleagues to become the House's 60th speaker in 1983.

"It's kind of hard to compare a speaker to a lieutenant governor, because the lieutenant governor has the mandate of all the people of Texas and is beholden to the people of Texas for his job," says Port Arthur Sen. Carl Parker, who served with Lewis in the House for six years before moving to the Senate in 1977.

"The speaker is elected by the members and is sort of their agent. He's elected by them. That's his constituency for that purpose."

But close friends and long-time observers of the two men describe them in surprisingly similar terms.

"The tougher the situation is, the more Gib utilizes a talent — or a curse, I'm not sure which one, sometimes it's a little of both — of being able to separate himself from that issue and sit back and watch it," says lobbyist Buddy Jones, Lewis' former executive assistant.

"Gib's not pressured into a corner," says Lewis' old friend Rep. Charles Evans of Hurst. "He's very strong in what he believes. I've never seen him to be vindictive. He does what he feels like is right."

Lobbyist Don Adams was a freshman senator from Jasper in 1973 when Hobby took the reigns of the Senate. "When Bill Hobby convinces himself or is convinced that he is right, he just is unshakeable," Adams says.

"He doesn't get upset. He doesn't get mad. Sometimes he gets a little out of patience, but he just says, 'By gum, this is the way it ought to be.'"

So far this session, both Lewis and Hobby have decided they're right. Hobby says the state can't wait until January to solve the fiscal crisis. Lewis says the state must wait until the economy and the deficit stabilize.

Back to the stalemate. Assuming the Legislature won't wait for the December snows, one must ask, "Which side will give in first? Which man will give in first?"

Most — but certainly not all — of the lawmakers and observers interviewed this week say the answer to that question won't come until after Sept. 4.

A deadlocked special session, some say, will give Lewis an excuse to slip off of the no-new-taxes hook in a second session. Others, however, say Lewis will hang tough at least until after his legislative race against a Republican who is already campaigning on the massive 1984 tax increases, the speaker backed.

Hobby, who faces a much weaker Republican opponent in November, has no such easy out. But the 13-year legislative veteran has developed a reputation for coming up with innovative solutions to complicated state problems.

"I have seen Bill Hobby compromise, not his principles, but compromise a position because really Bill Hobby is a very good consensus builder, which is a compromise," Adams says. "But when he's convinced he's right, he just digs in."

Along with the volunteer center, the group is planning to start a clearinghouse project with local social service agencies to avoid duplication of referrals and services, Ms. Garza said.

Some people get help from more than one agency, because the other agencies don't know what kind of aid they are receiving, she said.

"Sometimes clients tend to come in and say (they) have not received help anywhere else. It kind of spoils it for others," Ms. Garza said.

The clearinghouse will make sure the people that do need help will be getting help, she said.

The group is also hoping to start neighborhood meetings between city officials, council members and the public.

"We would like to see more neighborhood meetings to help stem problems being built up.

"There are problems in the community and we want to be the agency to coordinate meetings between the city and community," she said.

Murdered man's family to get $4.7 million

HOUSTON (AP) — The family of a man killed at a 1981 Rolling Stones concert in Houston will receive a $4.7 million settlement, attorneys said.

The wife, son and mother of Wesley Allen Shelton filed suit after the 22-year-old machinist was stabbed to death near a concession stand at the Astrodome as the British rock group played on stage.

Probate Judge Jim Scanlan Friday approved a $1.1 million portion of the settlement, designated for the son, 6-year-old Ernest Scott Shelton. The money will be paid in several payments over the next 24 years and will not be subject to taxes or attorney fees.

The remainder of the settlement, which does not require a judge's approval, will go to Shelton's widow, Jennie Shelton, and his mother, Barbara Shelton, said John O'Quinn, one of the attorneys representing the family.

The widow will receive $3.1 million and the mother will get $500,000, O'Quinn said.

Most of the settlement will be paid by Pace Concerts which promoted the show, said Ed McAninch, another attorney representing the Sheltons.

But the Rolling Stones, the Houston Sports Association, which runs the Astrodome, and Harry M. Stevens, the Astrodome concessions contractor, also will contribute, the lawyer said.

"I'm just happy the defendants came forward with this offer. It was the right thing to do," McAninch said.

The Sheltons refused comment as they hurried from the courtroom Friday. O'Quinn said the family was concerned that publicity could endanger the 6-year-old boy.

The family claimed in their suit that security at the concert was inadequate, O'Quinn said.

"The type of atmosphere they (the Rolling Stones) create on purpose encourages people to come to concerts already stoned and get into fights," the attorney said. "The facts show the security they had out there was not even as much as they have for an Oilers (football) game."

Only 30 security officers were on duty to control the 60,000 fans at the show, he said. An additional 400 "T-shirt security" personnel were hired, he said.

Man with AIDS to serve sentence at home

DALLAS (AP) — A judge ordered a man who has AIDS and was convicted of drunken driving to be placed under a form of "house arrest," with his movements monitored electronically, instead of serving a five-year prison term.

A Dallas gay leader hailed the judge's action as a compassionate punishment, since five years in jail could be the equivalent of life in prison for someone with fatal AIDS.

The unusual sentence, known as "community incapacitation," is the first court-ordered use in Texas of a program administered by a national organization that advocates alternatives to prison.

The man pleaded guilty Friday to drunken driving and has two previous DWI convictions.

He and his attorney asked State District Judge Jack Hampton to consider the alternative sentence instead of a prison term.

"This is just not an appropriate case for penitentiary time," Hampton said. "I could have sent him to the pen, and I suppose they'd find some place for him. But they (he defendant and his lawyer) presented this alternative, and I thought it was a good one."

"Just because a man has AIDS doesn't mean he shouldn't be responsible for his actions. He should have to pay for his crime. But I think the judge has picked a very creative and effective way of dealing with it."
— Bill Nelson, president of Dallas Gay Alliance

The man, who was not identified in a story Saturday in the Dallas Times Herald, is a 30-year-old unemployed chef who lives in suburban Grand Prairie.

The admitted homosexual discovered 16 months ago he had Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, which breaks down the body's ability to fight some diseases.

Contacted at home Saturday, the judge said he wasn't sure of the man's name since he didn't have records of the case at hand.

The defendant said he was "elated" with the judge's decision.

"I feel very fortunate," he told the Times Herald.

Wendy Johnston-Grinter, assistant director for the Dallas office of the National Center on Institutions and Alternatives, said the program has worked successfully in other states, including Florida, Illinois and New Mexico.

Bill Nelson, president of the Dallas Gay Alliance, praised the judge's sentence.

"Just because a man has AIDS doesn't mean he shouldn't be responsible for his actions. He should have to pay for his crime. But I think the judge has picked a very creative and effective way of dealing with it," Nelson said.

Under the program, the DWI offender will be monitored by a tracking device attached to his ankle. He must report regularly to a probation officer and attend alcohol rehabilitation classes.

If he gets a job, he will be allowed to travel to and from work.

The device on the prisoner's ankle emits a signal to a computer at the NCIA office whenever he is more than 150 feet from his telephone, which is equipped with a special receiver.

Assistant District Attorney Lana McDaniel said it will be interesting to see how the case works out.

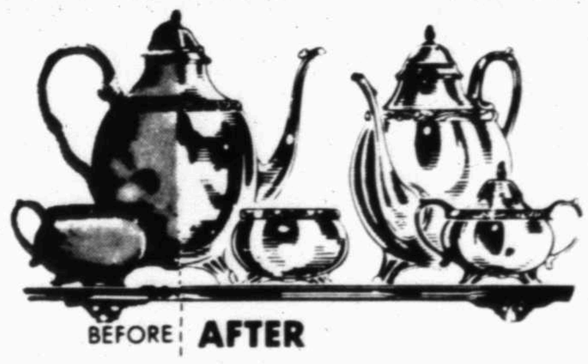

"I have some questions about it," the prosecutor said, "but I hope he makes it because if he has AIDS, he probably doesn't have that much longer to live."

Hampton said in assessing the sentence he considered the man's affliction and his willingness to seek treatment for alcoholism. He added that the prisoner also will be able to help care for his 71-year-old mother

"It really was unusual," the judge said. "The system just seems to break down when you read the statutes on something like this."

Clements' move robs him of ammunition

Levine

AUSTIN — It's hard to know whether to praise Bill Clements philosophically or damn him politically for his recent softening of what had been a set-in-concrete opposition to any new taxes.

I know one thing, though, I'd hate to be his tailor.

For seven months, since he officially announced his candidacy for governor on Feb. 3, Clements has promised to veto "any and all tax or fee increases" should he win re-election to the Governor's Mansion. "Cut the pattern to fit the cloth," he's said over and over and over again.

So it certainly came as a surprise to find that although he's still opposed to increasing taxes, the constantly changing state revenue shortfall has forced Clements to rescind his absolute promise.

Now a decent majority of those who understand Texas' fiscal dilemma, even those who oppose a tax increase during this special session, say higher taxes are an important part of the long-term solution. But the prospect of Clements possibly holding the veto pen next year put a big question mark on the current House plan to put off any tax talk until the 1987 regular session.

To begin, Clements' backing off of the veto pledge is a good move in the face of reality — something we all have to face. The state's economy is suffering so, that to balance the budget without taxes — to cut the pattern to fit the current availability of cloth — would require immense reductions in essential state services.

From a political angle, however, Clements' decision robs him of the strongest double-barreled ammunition he had against Democratic Gov. Mark White. He can no longer rail against White's own credibility gap on the tax issue, and he can no longer paint himself as the taxpayers' lone defender.

Thus the quandary for those of us who are paid to comment on such matters. Or as Kent Hance, who lost to Clements in the GOP primary and spent the spring blasting him about the veto promise, said Tuesday, the move "was a courageous one" on Clements' part but it's also "much ado about nothing."

But Hance is out on the campaign trail stumping for Clements, and he's supposed to praise the good point — the decision to consider taxation — and play down the bad political consequences.

However, there's one twist that Hance can't explain, and that's a twist that could really hurt Clements. The former governor has spent a good part of the last two years criticizing White for breaking the no-new-taxes promise he laid out during the 1982 campaign. White's explanation that the ever-declining economy forced him to change his stance was never good enough for Clements.

That explanation, however, is the same logic Clements is using to set up a possible position switch of his own. Clements maintains that his "crystal ball" isn't accurate so far into the future as to absolutely preclude the need for new tax revenues.

The funny thing is, however, that the crystal ball seemed far less cloudy back in February. He said it several times during an Austin news conference near the Capitol, a news conference beamed later that day to TV stations around the state. He even reinforced his reinforcement before he was done.

"Bill Clements stands absolutely firm on this issue," he said.

Clements does remain "absolutely firm," at least for now, on his opposition to White's plan to temporarily increase the sales tax by 1.25 percent to help solve the state deficit. He said he was not impressed with the governor's success in convincing a cadre of the state's top business leaders — including former Gov. John Connally, a Republican these days — that the Legislature must tax its way out of the current dilemma.

But you've got to wonder just how much influence the sight of Connally and other big-name Republicans patting White on the back and calling him a courageous statesman had on Clements' thoughts.

Maybe, just maybe, that vision — transported across the state through the magic of Associated Press wire photos — was strong enough to convince Clements that a tax increase might not only be necessary but also politically palatable.

Abilene station beams 'good news' to China, Soviet Union

ABILENE (AP) — Although radio station KNLS is headquartered in this West Texas city, its signal is picked up better in China and the Soviet Union.

The station's 100,000-watt transmitter is located at Anchor Point, Alaska. Its programming is aimed not at Americans but at the citizens of countries that prohibit missionaries.

The World Christian Broadcasting Corp. operates KNLS, an international shortwave radio station that travels across one-third of the earth's surface and reaches about one-half of the world's population.

Officials said WCBC, a nonprofit organization, was incorporated in Abilene in 1976 by a group of Christians who wanted "to take a step toward evangelizing the world, as an act of faith."

Dr. Lowell Perry, an Abilene Christian University professor, lost his life while searching for an ideal spot for the WCBC transmitter.

Perry, the co-founder of Abilene's first FM station, KFMN, in 1961, was among three persons killed in the crash of a private plane on the French Caribbean island of Martinique in 1977. Also killed were Ken Ferguson and Hal Frazier.

Radio station KNLS, which stands for "New Life Station", began operations July 23, 1983, officials said.

Dr. Robert E. "Bob" Scott, a graduate of ACU, has been president of the WCBC since 1980 and oversees the corporation's efforts.

Scott said worldwide mail, some smuggled out of Russia, proves that KNLS is reaching its targeted audience.

Lawyers seek delay of trial challenging state tax code

MERIDIAN (AP) — A Lake Whitney developer and his attorneys have asked the 10th Court of Appeals in Waco to suspend a trial where they planned to challenge the constitutionality of the Peveto Bill.

Attorneys for Bill Holloman, owner of Cedar Shores Estates, were preparing to begin their fight Monday against the controversial 7-year-old tax code that established county-wide districts for appraising property for tax purposes.

But attorneys Eric Samuelson and Jim Gailey contended Friday that the trial would be illegal. They claim Judge James F. Clawson, presiding judge of the 3rd Administrative Judicial District, violated the law when he considered their request for removal of the scheduled trial judge.

They also said Holloman, who is terminally ill and underwent cancer surgery last week, might not be well enough to testify by Monday.

Court Clerk Bob Watts said the appeals judges considered the petition Friday but recessed without taking action.

"I doubt there will be any action before Monday," he said.

Although the trial likely will start as scheduled at 9 a.m. in State District Judge James Morgan's court in Meridian, it could be halted during proceedings, officials said.

Holloman will contend in the trial that he is not required to pay back taxes of almost $50,000 accumulated through 1984 because they were assessed illegally under the 1979 Peveto Bill. Samuelson said the figure could approach $100,000 when the delayed 1985 and 1986 taxes are added.

The tax law created one central appraisal district in each county to assess property values, and an appointed appraisal review board in each county to hear appeals from taxpayers contesting their valuations.

Samuelson argues that Texas law requires all tax appraisers to be elected, thereby making a major part of the Peveto Bill unconstitutional.

Similarly, Samuelson says the constitution requires that all judges be elected. That is his opposition to Clawson, who is appointed by the governor and empowered to act in motions against other judges.

FBI probes killing of policeman by fellow officer

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The FBI is investigating the death of San Antonio policeman Stephen Smith, who was gunned down by a fellow officer who said he acted in self-defense, two newspapers reported Saturday.

Smith died Monday night after being shot five times by patrolman Farrell Tucker, a friend of the slain officer.

San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros said Friday that Smith apparently was unstable. City Manager Lou Fox described Smith as "crazed" and said the slaying was justified.

"Maybe we were spared a multiple murder," Cisneros said.

City Attorney Lowell Denton said information gathered by the city links Smith to "vigilante justice — to taking the law into his own hands."

Denton said the shooting wasn't planned. Rather, he said, Tucker kept an appointment requested by Smith after having been advised by Smith's wife that Smith was involved in other incidents.

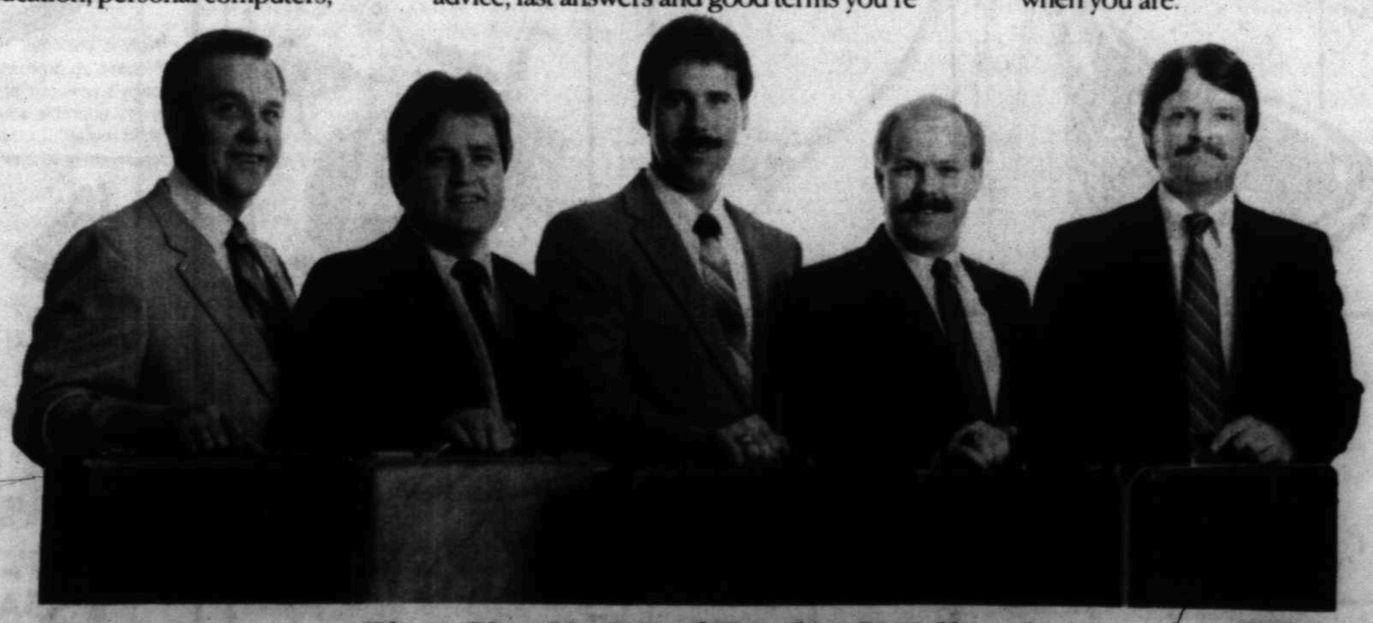

Tucker went to that meeting wearing a concealed tape recorder that had been bought for him by District Attorney Sam Millsap. The tape, however, ran out before the shooting occurred, the San Antonio Express-News reported.

Tucker has claimed he fired in self-defense, but the San Antonio Light Saturday quoted an unnamed source as saying, "We've got a really big problem with the autopsy as it relates to how Tucker said things went down."

The Express-News and the Light reported Saturday that the FBI had entered the case.

Public identifies drugs as biggest problem facing schools, poll says

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time in the 18-year history of the annual Gallup Poll on education, the public has identified drugs as the biggest problem confronting the schools.

By wide margins, adults said they favored expulsion of students caught using drugs and allowing teachers to search lockers for drugs. And by a narrow 49-44 margin, they even approved testing students for drug use by urinalysis.

The public has singled out lack of discipline as the schools' major problem in 16 of the 17 previous Gallup surveys.

But in the latest poll, released Saturday by Phi Delta Kappan magazine, 28 percent of those interviewed cited drugs as their top concern. Twenty-four percent mentioned lack of discipline, while lack of financial support for the schools ranked third with 11 percent.

The new poll, based on interviews with 1,552 adults at home last April 11-20, also found that 41 percent of those surveyed felt their local public schools merited a grade of A or B, down slightly from the past two years. But the number of A grades — 11 percent — was the highest since 1977.

By a 67-24 margin, people said they would allow their child to attend classes with a child who was suffering from acquired immune deficiency syndrome. Parents have boycotted schools in Kokoma, Ind., Queens, N.Y. and elsewhere in disputes over AIDS, despite doctors' avowal that the deadly disease cannot be transmitted through casual contact.

The survey said only "6 percent of the public mistakenly believe that a person can contract AIDS merely by being in a public place with someone who has it."

Responding to the survey results, Secretary of Education William J. Bennett said in a statement: "This confirms that the parents of America want to get drugs out of our schools. I have no higher priority than helping make American schools drug-free."

Public concern over the drug issue has been heightened by the spread of new, cheaper forms of cocaine, and the recent drug-related deaths of basketball star Len Bias and football player Don Rogers.

George Gallup Jr., co-chairman of the Gallup Organization in Princeton, N.J., said the standard margin of error on the poll questions was 3 points in either direction, except on the AIDS question, posed separately to 1,004 adults by phone. The margin of error there was 4 points.

U.S.: Sandinistas still have option of talks

By R. GREGORY NOKES

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reagan administration officials and congressional sources insist Nicaragua's leftist leaders still could cut a deal at the negotiating table as an alternative to renewed full-scale combat with the U.S.-backed Contras.

One official said "our bottom line" is to curb Nicaragua's strong ties to Cuba and the Soviet Union.

Officially, negotiations have always been a key element of administration policy. But President Reagan has insisted that the negotiations must transform Nicaragua into a "real democracy," a condition that few expect the Sandinista government to agree to.

And last week, he said for the first time that if the Sandinistas refused to agree to a democratic government, "the only way is for the freedom fighters to have their way and take over." No senior official had previously said publicly that the administration favored a Contra takeover.

Reagan also has insisted that the Sandinistas negotiate directly with the Contras, which the Sandinistas have insisted they won't do.

However, other officials, who are informed on the policy, say privately that the administration probably would have to settle for less. They say it is possible, even probable, that the Sandinistas could negotiate a solution that would keep them in power while satisfying the United States on other key points.

One official, who spoke only on condition he not be identified, said the key points are:

— Sending all Cuban advisers home.

— Halting Soviet military support.

— Reducing the military threat to Nicaragua's neighbors.

— Holding a meaningful dialogue with the internal unarmed opposition to permit their participation in politics, such in new elections. The internal opposition includes the Roman Catholic church and six opposition political parties.

— Ceasing harassment of the Catholic church and permitting the reopening of La Prensa, the opposition newspaper the government closed last month.

The official said this was not a negotiating outline.

"If the talks were genuine, and the opposition actually said to us there were good substantive negotiations and that, 'we're getting some place,' it would make it very difficult for us to continue to support the Contras," said one official.

'Hands' come up emptier than expected

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Three months after Hands Across America formed a broken line of people across the nation, only $16 million has been gathered for the hungry and homeless and nothing has been distributed, organizers say.

The project once aimed at raising $50 million to $100 million. The $16 million set aside for the poor is not even equal to the amount the group has budgeted for expenses, when corporate contributions for expenses are added in.

"The income should have been much higher," Marty Rogol, the executive director for USA for Africa, which sponsored the event, said last week. "A lot of people didn't fulfill their pledges, and a lot of people who joined the line the day of the event didn't contribute anything."

About $7 million in unfulfilled pledges remain outstanding, said Hands Across America spokesman David Fulton.

The group hasn't distributed any funds to the poor. A recently appointed 37-member committee to oversee the distribution had its first meeting in July and expects to begin allocations sometime this fall.

Among the items that took a considerable chunk of USA for Africa's budget was liability insurance, needed to secure the permits for the event as the line crossed through the cities and towns of 16 states and the District of Columbia. The group reported it spent $3.5 million on insurance.

Months before the May 25 Memorial Day weekend event, Hands Across America received $8 million in corporate contributions from Coca-Cola Co. and Citicorp, among others. That money was aimed solely at underwriting costs, and not for the needy.

But even with that, another $8.5 million, or roughly one-third of public contributions, also went toward costs.

Organizers said before the event that they had enough in contributions from public donations and corporate sponsorship to pay for it, but this is the first time the amounts were broken down.

Rogol now says it was a mistake to include the corporate contributions in the total amount that Hands Across America claimed it took in, because it was perceived by the public as money meant for the homeless.

As recently as early August, the group reported it had raised $38 million to $41 million. That figure, Rogol said, included unfulfilled pledges and corporate contributions earmarked for underwriting costs as well as donations from the public.

Hands Across America actually received $24.5 million from public donations, of which $16 million is in the bank to help the poor, he said.

NATION IN BRIEF

Plea being negotiated

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Federal officials and defense lawyers are attempting to negotiate a guilty plea which would result in a 50-year prison sentence for a California man accused of contaminating cold capsules with rat poison, a newspaper reported Saturday.

Edward Marks, 24, faces 27 counts in connection with the poisoning of Contac, Dietac and Teldrin capsules last March in what prosecutors say was a scheme to make money off the stock market. Marks faces up to 153 years in prison if convicted of all charges.

Meanwhile, ignoring pleas from Mark's father, federal Judge Patricia Fawsett ruled Friday that Marks should not be allowed to go free on bond before his trial.

Federal public defender Jay Stevens had argued that Marks should be released on bail because, among other reasons, the quantity of rat poison found in capsules was minimal — 25 to 50 micrograms. A toxicologist said 60 pounds would be needed to kill a human.

Citing unidentified sources, The Orlando Sentinel said Marks' attorneys want the deal to specify that U.S. attorneys in other districts will not charge Marks in the tampering scheme. The case is scheduled to go to trial the first week in September.

MX test launch successful

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — An unarmed MX missile flew 4,200 miles to a target area in the Pacific on Saturday, completing the 13th test of launch of the missile, military officials said.

The missile carried nine unarmed MK-21 re-entry warheads, said Maj. Barry Glickman, director of public affairs for the Air Force Ballistic Missile Office.

It was the first time the independently targetable re-entry vehicles had targeted two different areas, about 70 miles apart, in the Kwajalein Missile Range, he said. Flight time was about 30 minutes.

"The unarmed re-entry vehicles are instrumented and we track them and we test the accuracy," he said. "They appeared to have been successful."

Glickman said specific details of the accuracy were classified.

The Reagan Administration calls the MX, designed to carry up to 10 nuclear warheads, an essential improvement in the nation's nuclear arsenal because of its improved accuracy and ability to strike well protected military targets.

The Air Force has scheduled seven more test flights of the MX.

Bankruptcy reports denied

DENVER (AP) — Frontier Airlines kept a full flight schedule Saturday and denied reports the troubled carrier was on the brink of parking its planes and going to bankruptcy court.

Some travel agents have stopped writing tickets on Frontier, other airlines made plans in case they have to handle more passengers, and some Frontier employees drew money out of their credit union Friday.

Frontier, with 4,700 employees nationwide, lost $10 million a month during the first six months of this year. It serves 60 cities in 22 states across the country and in Canada and Mexico.

PAN: Democratic fight not just one-day job

DURANGO, Mexico (AP) — The opposition National Action Party, in reassessing its position in Mexican politics after major setbacks in Durango and Chihuahua state elections, is realizing that "the struggle for democracy is not a one-day job," a party leader says.

"I'm making this my business, the fight for democracy," said 40-year-old Rodolfo Elizondo, who took leave as mayor of this state capital of 330,000 people to run for governor for National Action, known as PAN.

That sentiment is echoed by the PAN in Chihuahua state, Durango's northern neighbor that borders Texas and New Mexico.

"We're not going to give up the fight," Guillermo Prieto, state PAN president, said by telephone. "If it goes slow, if it has to last a long time, we're not going to give it up."

Prieto said party supporters from across the vast state of 2.3 million people will arrive for a public rally scheduled for this evening to protest government-orchestrated vote fraud in the July 6 elections.

The PAN, northern Mexico's perennial runner-up party, makes its strongest appearance around election time. Post-election protests of vote rigging are customary, but in the past usually have been short-lived.

Federico Ling, Durango state PAN president and a federal congressman, said the party will use the 40,000 voter cards deposited by citizens to protest election fraud to begin a grassroots organization.

"Now we know who is supporting us," he said in an interview at his Durango home.

The PAN acknowledges that much of its support at the polls has come from citizens who blame government ineptitude and corruption for Mexico's economic crisis.

In the July elections, the PAN lost the mayoralties of Durango and of seven major cities in Chihuahua that it won three years ago.

The government's Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, won 131 of 133 races at stake in the two states.

Protests of vote rigging culminated in the Aug. 9 shooting death of 17-year-old Leonel Carillo Rutiaga in a 2-hour riot between PAN and PRI members in a Durango plaza that left many others injured.

PAN protests in Durango and Chihuahua have included highway and international bridge blockades, public marches and rallies, hunger strikes, plaza sit-ins and a 15-day sit-in at the Durango City hall.

But the PRI-controlled electoral commissions upheld their party's victories.

The PAN and other smaller opposition parties have claimed for years that the PRI, which never has lost a gubernatorial or presidential election since the party was founded 57 years ago, fixes voting results to maintain its hold on the country.

The PRI says that is the cry of a loser.

For the first time, however, the Roman Catholic Church, private business groups and opposition coalitions are speaking out strongly against vote rigging.

U.S.: DEA agents' presence legal

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The U.S. Embassy says the presence of Drug Enforcement Administration agents in Mexico to help fight the smuggling of narcotics to the United States is legal and protected by dozens of agreements between the two countries.

The embassy's statement, issued late Friday, appeared to be in response to growing controversy here over the presence of DEA agents.

In the latest such statement, Senate leader Antonio Riva Palacios was quoted as saying Saturday that Mexico "should energetically reject any attempt to infringe on its sovereignty" in the fight against the drug trade.

Senators and deputies from the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party and opposition parties joined on Tuesday to demand an explanation from the Foreign Ministry about the DEA's presence here and whether it was involved in police work instead of carrying out only an advisory and liaison role.

The embassy statement said the United States and Mexico have been working together on the drug issue since 1930 when the "two governments exchanged diplomatic notes establishing this cooperation."

It then cites the fact the two countries are signatories of the United Nations' Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961 and the 1971 Convention on Psychotropic Substances, plus more than 50 bilateral agreements currently in force.

DEA agents in Mexico are formally accredited to the Mexican government and serve as direct liaison between U.S. and Mexican agencies responsible for combatting the trade.

Zia returns to Pakistan, conducts security talks

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — President Mohammad Zia ul-Haq plunged straight into top-level talks on domestic security Saturday upon his arrival home from a two-week overseas pilgrimmage.

Anti-government arson and skirmishes persisted. Protesters burned government buildings Saturday and tangled with riot police in various parts of Pakistan, but clashes and demonstrations were relatively minor.

The Movement for the Restoration of Democrary, or MRD, an alliance of 11 opposition parties, tried to keep alive the flagging drive it began last Monday to oust Zia and force elections. The alliance appealed for foreign support.

Crowds burned a post office and a railway station in Sukkur and two government buildings were burned in Kotri, officials said. Riot police dispersed a small protest march in Larkarna, they said. All three town are in southern Pakistan.

At least 29 people were killed and dozens injured since the MRD began its drive following a government crackdown on the political opposition. MRD spokesman Shah Mohammad Amroti said in a statement Saturday that 60 people died in the clashes.

Disturbances began when the government arrested more than 500 opposition leaders Aug. 13 to prevent political meetings on the country's independence day. Benazir Bhutto, head of the Pakistan People's Party, and other top opposition leaders remain under detention around the country.

Zia, who had been out of the country for two weeks, on a Moslem pilgrimage to Mecca in Saudi Arabia, conferred in Karachi with the governor and the chief minister of Sind province and other top security and military officials. The worst anti-government violence took place in Sind.

Heavily armed police and military bodyguards blocked off traffic in surrounding streets and ringed the governor's residence.

Indian army takes over exchange, ends strike

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The army seized New Delhi's main telephone exchange Saturday to end a wildcat strike set off by an operator's complaint that she was manhandled by a gun-toting ex-Cabinet minister enraged over slow service.

Soldiers ordered out more than 100 sari-clad women operators perched atop switchboards and refusing to book long-distance calls. The army signal corps had orders to restore service if necessary.

Outside the nine-story building, about 300 riot police pushed hundreds of angry women away from the tall, iron gates. The demonstrators shouted "Death to P.C. (Prakash Chand) Sethi, Down with Delhi police!"

About 4,000 operators and staff took part in the two-day-old walkout.

Since Friday morning, residents of the capital have been unable to place calls to other cities and overseas. Local service was not affected.

Sethi, 65, a former home minister in charge of law and order, acknowledged that he entered the exchange early Friday with four bodyguards to find out why after three hours he still had not gotten through with his call to Bombay.

Sethi said he was pushed around and manhandled. The operators' version was that Sethi appeared to be drunk, waved a pistol and a cigar, and shouted insults and obscenities at them.

Police registered charges against him of trespassing, using abusive language and assaulting a public servant. Further investigation will determine whether formal charges will be filed.

Pope: 'Church not an association of free thinkers'

EDITOR'S NOTE — The Vatican's censure of U.S. theologian Charles E. Curran is the latest in a long campaign by Pope John Paul II to end deviations from Roman Catholic doctrine around the world.

By SAMUEL KOO

VATICAN CITY (AP) — "The church is not an association of free thinkers."

These words, uttered by Pope John Paul II in 1981, reflect his resolve to break clerical dissent and deviations from Roman Catholic Church doctrine and papal teachings.

His tough line has ended more than a decade of relative freedom for theological speculation, spawned in part by modernizing trends of the Second Vatican Council, held from 1962 to 1965.

The Vatican has stepped up the practice of summoning dissident theologians to Rome for questioning. The pope himself has dealt with a major religious order like the Jesuits and an entire national bishops' conference.

After John Paul ascended to power in 1978, signs of enforced doctrinal rigidity began to appear. Theological writings were put under closer scrutiny, while religious orders received instructions to guard against dissent.

Dissident priests and nuns have been barred from teaching, threatened with expulsion from religious orders or ordered to a term of penitential silence.

The latest incident concerned the Rev. Charles E. Curran, a professor of moral theology at the Catholic University in Washington who was stripped of his right to teach because of his liberal views on sexual issues.

Curran has taken issue with the church's opposition to artificial birth control, abortion, divorce and homosexual acts. He also has argued that, under some circumstances, masturbation, premarital sex, euthanasia and sterilization are justified.

In 1979, maverick Swiss theologian and priest Hans Kueng received the same punishment for challenging the doctrine of papal infallibility which says the pope is divinely kept from error in his teachings.

The Vatican lifted Kueng's permission to teach theology at the University of Tuebingen in West Germany, where he had been professor of dogmatic and ecumenical theology.

Commenting on Kueng's case, the pope asked rhetorically: "A theologian who does not accept the church doctrine in its entirety, should he be given the right to teach in the name of the church and on the basis of the special mission the church is entitled to?"

In 1980, the pope summoned to Rome the bishops of the Netherlands who were feuding over doctrine, homosexuality, abortion, priestly celibacy and the role of lay people in pastoral activities.

After 15 sessions with the pope, the bishops promised to uphold papal authority. John Paul later sealed the direction of the Dutch church by naming a hardline conservative, Adrianus J. Simonis, as cardinal archbishop of Utrecht.

In 1981, in an unprecedented move, John Paul intervened in the running of the Jesuits by naming a personal representative to direct the largest and most prestigious Roman Catholic order.

The pope had repeatedly scolded the Jesuits who, especially in the United States and the Netherlands, questioned papal pronouncements. Some Jesuits also were known to be supporting leftist guerrilla movements in Latin America.

After two years of direct papal control, the Jesuits were allowed to elect a new leader.

Similarly, leaders of the Franciscans, another major order, have been chastised by the Vatican for tolerating dissent within their ranks and told to uphold doctrinal orthodoxy.

The warning was contained in a letter sent to the order in May, after the expiration of yearlong penitential silence the Vatican imposed on one of its members, Leonardo Boff. The Brazilian friar is an exponent of liberation theology which sometimes uses Marxist analysis to support social activism in Third World countries.

In punishing Boff, the Vatican said his writings on the church's power and practices were found unsustainable and his views on liberation theology "dangerous."

WORLD in brief

Jackson visits Zambia

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson, speaking at a ceremony honoring the black nationalist guerrillas battling for independence for South-West Africa, said U.S. leaders do not understand the problems in southern Africa.

He again called for President Reagan to visit the region. Instead of visiting the area, Reagan, Vice President George Bush, and Secretary of State George P. Shultz rely on news reports to make their decisions, Jackson said, and the lack of information has led the U.S. administration to support South Africa's white-led government.

The American civil rights activist spoke at a celebration of the 10th anniversary of the United Nations Institute for Namibia. The institute was created to seek independence for South-West Africa, also known as Namibia, that is administered by South Africa.

Also speaking at the ceremony was Sam Nujoma, leader of the South-West African Peoples Organization. SWAPO has been fighting a guerrilla war for years to end South Africa's control of South-West Africa.

Six white, private citizens from South-West Africa also attended the ceremony, flying here in a chartered plane.

Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda greeted them at Mulungushi Hall and then invited them to the stage to meet Nujoma and other SWAPO leaders.

Paraguay's record better

WASHINGTON (AP) — Paraguay's military dictatorship continues to engage in severe human rights abuses but has ended the torture of political prisoners and made improvements in other areas, according to a study released Saturday.

Americas Watch, a private human rights group based in New York, said U.S. pressure on the Paraguayan government "undoubtedly has played a significant role in curbing abuses."

An investigation by an Americas Watch delegation which visited Paraguay earlier this year found that the country's chief human rights problem is arbitrary arrests.

The report said 115 politicians, activists, labor leaders and peasant leaders were arrested and held for periods of a few days to several weeks during a year-long period ending in March.

American 'spy' convicted

PEKING (AP) — A 67-year-old Chinese-American has been convicted of spying for the Nationalist Chinese government on Taiwan and was sentenced to 12 years in prison, the official Xinhua news agency reported Saturday.

It said Roland Shensu Loo, a U.S. citizen, was found guilty of gathering information for a Nationalist Chinese organization based in the United States. Xinhua did not identify the organization or give Loo's hometown, but Chinese newspapers said he was from Los Angeles.

Conditions forecast for 8 PM Sunday

NA: Not available

Today will be cloudy

From Staff and Wire Reports

The chance of rainshowers will decrease as the weekend comes to an end, say forecasters with the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

Forecasters say today will be mostly cloudy with a 40 percent chance of rain showers and thunderstorms. The high will be in the upper 80s. Winds will be from the south at 5 to 15 mph.

Tonight will be mostly cloudy, with a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms and a low in the mid 60s.

Monday will be mostly cloudy, with a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms and a high near 90.

The low Saturday of 65 degrees broke the previous record of 66 degrees set in 1966. The high of 83 was 23 degrees cooler than the record of 106 set in 1977.

STATE

Heavy rain fell in South Texas Saturday, dumping more than an inch of water on Houston, while scattered thunderstorms and showers dampened much of the rest of the state.

The storms stemmed from a trough of low pressure in South Texas and in West Texas near the New Mexico border, the National Weather Service said. Skies were partly cloudy to mostly cloudy elsewhere.

The 3 p.m. temperature extremes ranged from 68 degrees at Guadalupe Pass in the Trans-Pecos to 93 degrees at Addison in North Texas and McAllen in the lower Rio Grande Valley.

The forecast calls for partly to mostly cloudy skies through Monday with scattered showers and thunderstorms. Highs should be in the 80s and 90s, while lows should be mostly in the 70s.

NATION

Heavy showers and thunderstorms drenched south Texas on Saturday, threatening flash floods, and dampened the eastern Great Lakes region and the Ohio Valley.

A few showers and thunderstorms also fell across portions of the central and northern Rockies, New Mexico, Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and Florida.

Fair weather was enjoyed by much of the Southeast, most of the Mississippi Valley, the northern Plains, the Pacific Northwest, Utah, Nevada and California.

The National Weather Service posted a flash flood watch in south Texas. One to 2 inches of rain was reported in some areas and 3 to 5 inches more were considered possible.

U.S. marshals help with upkeep of Midland jail

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

The U.S. government is essentially paying for the operation of Midland's city jail because of an agreement to house federal prisoners there.

The agreement, which has been in effect in some form for at least 15 years, is between the city and the U.S. Marshal's Service.

For $30 per prisoner, per day, the city holds already sentenced prisoners on behalf of the Federal Bureau of Prisons, and other prisoners for the U.S. Marshal either waiting trial or in transit.

Lt. Earl Luckey, head of Support Services for the Midland Police Department, said the city was paid about $235,000 in 1985 to house the prisoners, down from the $261,000 paid the city in 1984.

The operating cost for the jail in 1984 was about $102,000, not including employee salaries.

Luckey said the average annual cost of operating the jail, which has a capacity of 72 prisoners, is between $80,000 and $105,000.

"Actually, when it all comes down to it, we just about break even, because most of that (annual budget) is just for food, for groceries to feed the prisoners, and doesn't include other costs such as medical expenses and other upkeep for the jail," Luckey said.

"But on the other hand, the agreement also offsets the cost of running the jail for our prisoners, which we would have to pay for, of course, since we would still have to have a jail if there was no agreement.

"They are pretty much paying us to operate our jail," Luckey said.

Bill Jonas of San Antonio, U.S. Marshal of the Western District of Texas, said the agreement years ago was a standard contract, but has since evolved into an "intergovernmental" pact, that, Jonas said, has fewer specific performance requirements than a contract.

Luckey said the sentenced prisoners at the city jail are almost always aliens serving time for illegal entry into this country.

He said their sentences range anywhere from 30 days to several months.

The federal prisoners are segregated from other prisoners (there is a "city side" and "federal side" at the jail) because they of the variance of offenses and sentences, Luckey said.

Police Lt. Hank Norton said the jail houses an average of 20 to 25 federal prisoners daily.

Luckey said a typical prisoner may be in only overnight for such offenses as public intoxication or disorderly conduct. They do not require meals, showers or a change of clothes.

Persons charged with serious crimes are held in city jail briefly until they can be processed for transfer to Midland County Jail.

The federal prisoners already sentenced are "just doing time," Luckey said, just as if they were sentenced to a state prison term.

"Some of those federal prisoners are in here for six to eight months, so they naturally receive better balanced meals, are taken out for exercise, and have telephone and writing privileges the others wouldn't have," Luckey said.

Jonas describes the agreement as "mutually beneficial."

"I've found Midland does provide high quality jail space," he said.

Jonas said the federal government's Western District consists of seven divisions. The Midland-Odessa division is made up of five to seven counties, and the Pecos division 12 counties.

Any federal prisoner in the district could spend time in Midland, he said.

Luckey said Midland is also a regular stopping point for buses from the Federal Bureau of Prisons traveling between El Paso and a correctional insitution in Oklahoma.

"About twice a week, every other week, that bus travels between El Paso and El Reno, Okla." he said. "We feed them supper, put them up for the night, fix up a sack lunch the next day, and send them on their way."

The terms of the agreement remain fairly constant year to year, Luckey said, since the jail is federally approved.

Usually, any renegotiation is to keep the agreement up with the current cost of living.

Local youth centers receive face lifts

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

■ Related photos — 2B

Midland and Lee youth centers are experiencing a rebirth in popularity of sorts and those involved insist it will be permanent.

This summer, the centers received face lifts in hopes of enticing more youth to participate in activities scheduled there.

The centers — created to provide an alternative gathering place for high school students after school and on weekends — feature new carpeting, furniture, paint, kitchen equipment, stereo systems and big screen televisions.

"We've spent a great deal of money on these centers," said Larry Stapp, president of Midland and Lee Youth Centers Inc. Board of Directors.

Stapp declined to disclose the cost of the renovations. However, he said the money was contributed by the Abell-Hanger Foundation of Midland.

Youth Center director Janet Swallow said over 2,000 volunteers participated in the renovation project.

Beginning this fall, the centers will be open during the school lunch hours and on weekends. Student organizations also may reserve the centers for meetings and events.

"Youth centers are just that — a place for the kids to go and hang out," said board member Donna Marczynski.

Midland's youth centers actually got their start just after World War II when an old USO building on Main Street was made available to the city's young people as a recreational facility.

However, because of the rapid growth of the city and the increase in the youth population, the USO quarters were soon inadequate.

The young people found a vacant church building which they fixed up and utilized for their recreational and social functions, with parents acting as chaperones.

Health department gives Midland water clean bill of health

Official: Dissatisfaction with water of an 'aesthetic nature'

By JANE DEES
Staff Writer

Perhaps the ad for a local bottled water company says it best — "See how good water can really taste."

Though many Midlanders find tap water drinkable, some may empathize with Sue Davis, 34, a recent Dallas transplant.

"It's gross and I will not drink it. It tastes like swamp water," Ms. Davis said.

Steve Walden of the Texas Department of Health Austin office said dissatisfaction with Midland's tap water problems is probably of an aesthetic nature.

A Feb. 19 analysis of Midland's drinking water, analyzed by the Texas Department of Health, gave the water a clean bill of health.

City of Midland Utilities Director John Lowe said, however, chemical statistics fluctuate down to the hour and those referred to in this story represent Feb. 19, 1986 only.

Water hardness, measured by the amount of calcium carbonate found in the water, is of popular concern here.

A Water Quality Association scale designating zero to 17 mg/l (milligrams per liter) calcium carbonate the softest and greater than 180 mg/l, the hardest water, shows tap water here is definitely hard.

The distribution sample recorded 517 mg/l (milligrams per liter) of calcium carbonate on Feb. 19.

Hard water isn't a health hazard, but the combination of the fatty acids in soap with the calcium carbonates in the water, creates the flaky, hard-to-remove residues on bathtubs and sinks that plague most Midlanders, Walden said.

Or what about filling a glass with water straight from the faucet? One may notice an immediate cloudy or milky appearance.

Lowe said that is caused by nothing more than trapped air bubbles which, he promised, soon dissipate.

This is not to say Midland's tap water doesn't have a fair share of total dissolved solids, in it.

Total dissolved solids measures the amount of mineral constituents in the water, Walden said.

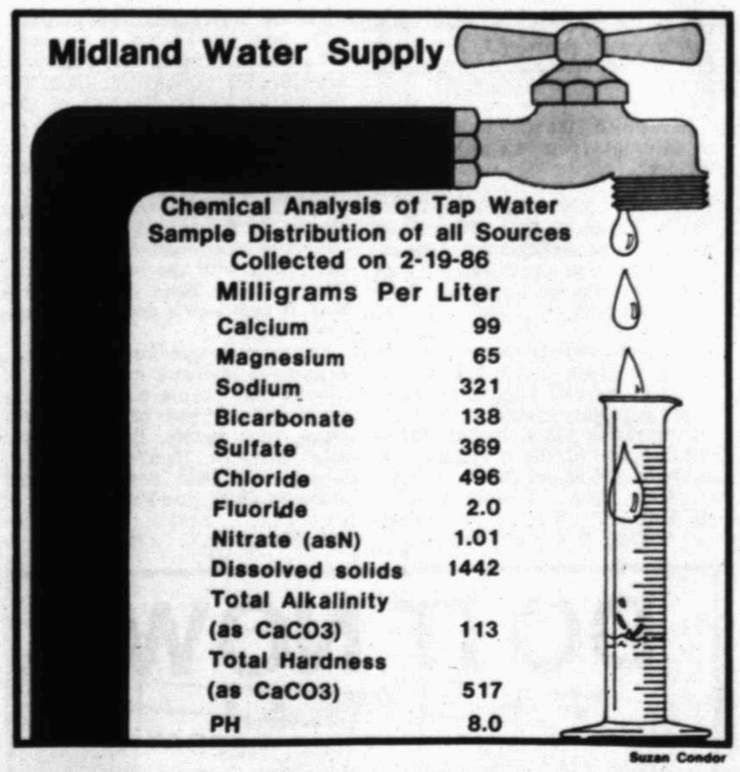

There were 1442 mg/l of dissolved solids in Midland's tap water analysis Feb. 19.

He said a majority of the dissolved solids were carbonates, bicarbonates, chlorides, sulfates, phosphates and nitrates of calcium, magnesium, sodium with a minute amount of other elements.

Walden said a state-recommended maximum level of dissolved solids was 1000 mg/l, but not necessarily for health reasons.

He said the recommendation was for taste standards — water with great concentrations of dissolved solids often tastes salty.

However, a U.S. Geological survey classifies Midland's tap water as only "slightly saline."

Suzan Condor

Walden said consumers shouldn't be overly alarmed about sodium levels in the water.

"It may look like a large amount, (Midland's Feb. 19 rate of 321 mg/l) but those who monitor sodium intake for dietary reasons should be more concerned about the food they eat.

"There is no recommended state level on sodium because there don't seem to be any adverse physiological reactions," Walden said.

A Midland newcomer's digestive system can be thrown temporarily out of whack by the sulfate levels in the water, Walden said.

Midland's Feb. 19 figure, 369 mg/l, stuck close to the state recommended level of 300 mg/l.

Walden said sulfates can have a laxative effect for the first seven to 14 days a person lives in a new community, in addition to its emitting a saltier smell and a more bitter taste.

The threshold of taste for chloride levels hovers around 500 mg/l and on Feb. 19, Midland rated a 496, the report showed.

Walden said the state recommended standard for chloride was at 300 mg/l, but this, too, was for taste reasons.

"Chloride imparts a saltier, bitter taste and in some instances, it accelerates the corrosion of pipes, boilers or other household fixtures," Walden said.

Trace elements found in water sometimes produce adverse effects, but the amount needed to do that is greater than Midland's statistics.

Federal drinking-water regulations for instance, limit the amount of barium to 1 mg/l because concentrations may have toxic effects on the heart, blood vessels and nerves.

Midland's water supply, however, was safely within that limit on Feb. 19 when less than .5 mg/l of barium was found in the sample.

All other toxic trace elements, such as arsenic, cadmium, mercury or lead were barely recordable in the Feb. 19 study.

Lowe said the technology is available to filter out greater concentrations of these elements that aid in making Midland's drinking water unsavory to many, but the cost passed down to the consumer would be $3 to $5 more per every thousand gallons used.

"You must remember that 60 percent of the water consumers use goes on lawns, trees and other outside-the-home uses. Would it really be worth the increased costs to them?" Lowe said.

Though one can breeze through the yellow pages in Midland and find about 20 bottled water businesses, long-time residents like Carl Berneathy say they still go for the tapped stuff.

"I like it (tap water) because I guess I'm accustomed to it. When I moved here 29 years ago though, I couldn't drink it. But now, I even keep it cold in the refrigerator.

"I'd rather not deal with that bottled water. To me, it tastes flat," Berneathy said.

GARY OTT

Using credit cards, checks, not as much fun as cash

Few things in life give me a better feeling than knowing I have a significant amount of cash in my back pocket.

The key word here, mind you, is cash. Twenties, tens and five dollar bills. Twenties are my personal favorites, but a wad of tens and fives can be almost as satisfying.

One hundred dollar bills are nice, of course, but if you flash them around too much you can begin to feel like a show-off.

Like most people, I do the bulk of my shopping with checks and credit cards, but there is something about cold, hard cash that I like better.

Maybe it is because it seems more personal. You can see it. You can hold it in your grubby little hands and count it. You can fondle it. You can even whisper sweet nothings to it.

In short, cash is fun.

Checks and credit cards are not. They are boring. You don't feel like you are spending money when you use them. You sign your name and that's that.

It is so impersonal.

Obviously, you have shelled out the same amount of money for the particular item you just bought, but somehow it doesn't have the same flair. In a vague sort of way you don't completely realize how much you have spent because the money didn't actually pass from your hands.

Your signature did. It's not same.

Each month the bank sends us a statement saying how much money we have in our account. It is all computerized, explaining in great detail our deposits versus our withdrawals. At the bottom of the page, there is a number. That's how much you have.

Again, who cares? It's just a number. I want to see the money. I want to play with it, fantasizing about how it will be spent.

I tried playing with a bank statement once. I felt terribly silly.

What we have done is take the fun out of money.

My first job as a child was mowing lawns for elderly neighbors. They would, of course, pay me in cash. I can still remember the great satisfaction I received from counting my dollar bills and quarters and then, when I had enough, going to the store and buying something I didn't need.

It was a wonderfully grown-up feeling.

My parents would urge me to set aside part of my earnings in a savings account, but I would have no part of it. I had cold, hard cash in my pocket and I wanted to spend it.

Even as a kid I tried to help the economy by circulating my resources. I was a very conscientious child.

Some of you might suggest this line of thinking would lead to a person spending more than he could afford, that the natural high he receives from purchasing a piece of merchandise would be too hard to resist.

Not true. Most of us get into trouble with money when we write a check and assume — rather foolishly, I might add — that we will make a deposit before the check clears the bank. It rarely does. And, we end up paying more.

Had we dealt in cash, that wouldn't have happened.

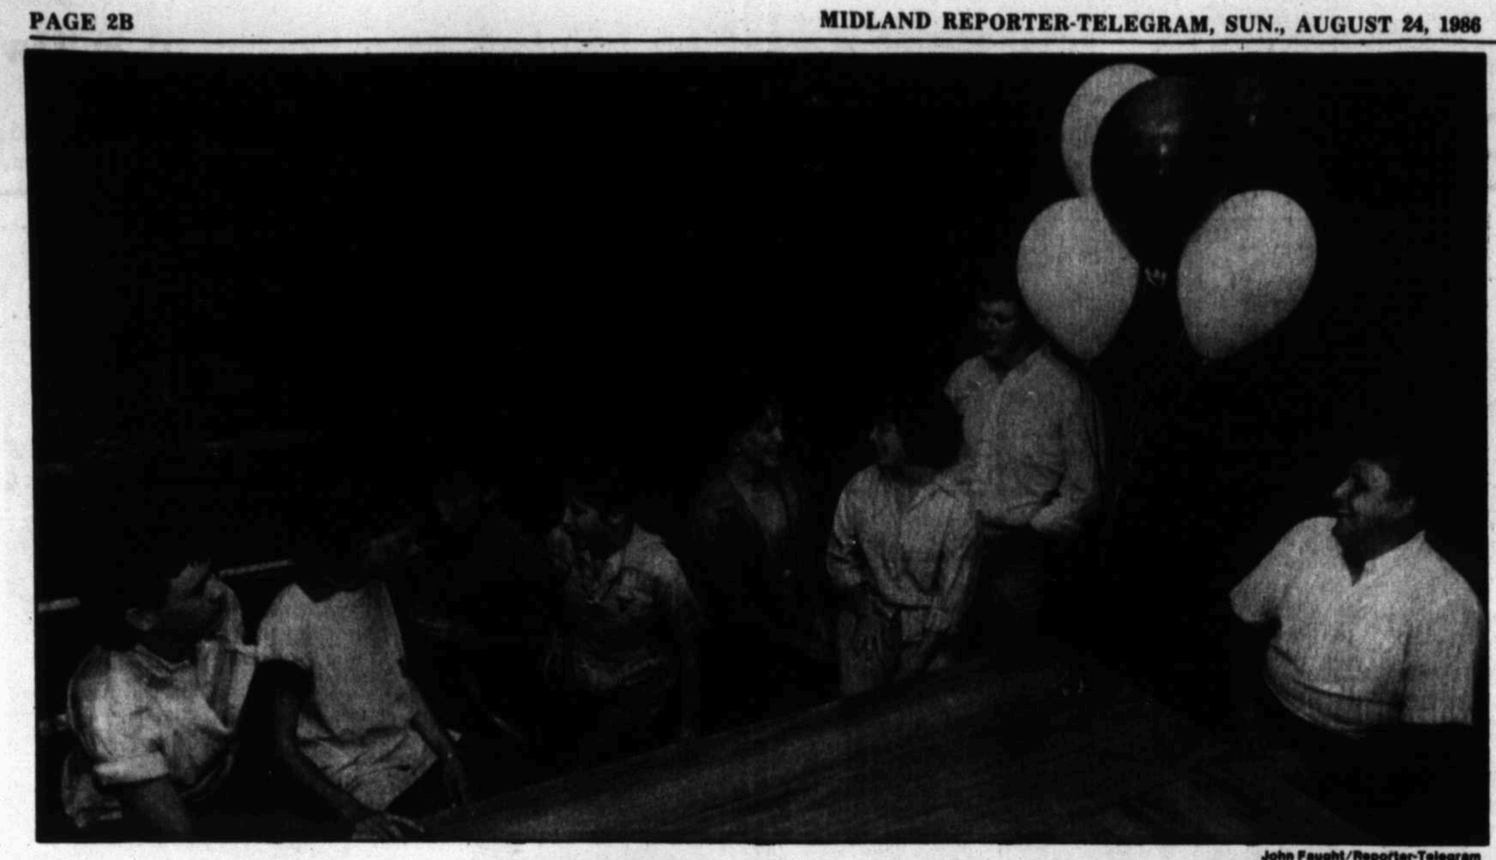

In fact, I say we should carry this theory even further. Let's make the government operate on a cash-only basis, too.

The next time some bureaucrat gets ready to nonchalantly sign a piece of paper transferring millions of dollars from one department to another, we'll stop him right there.

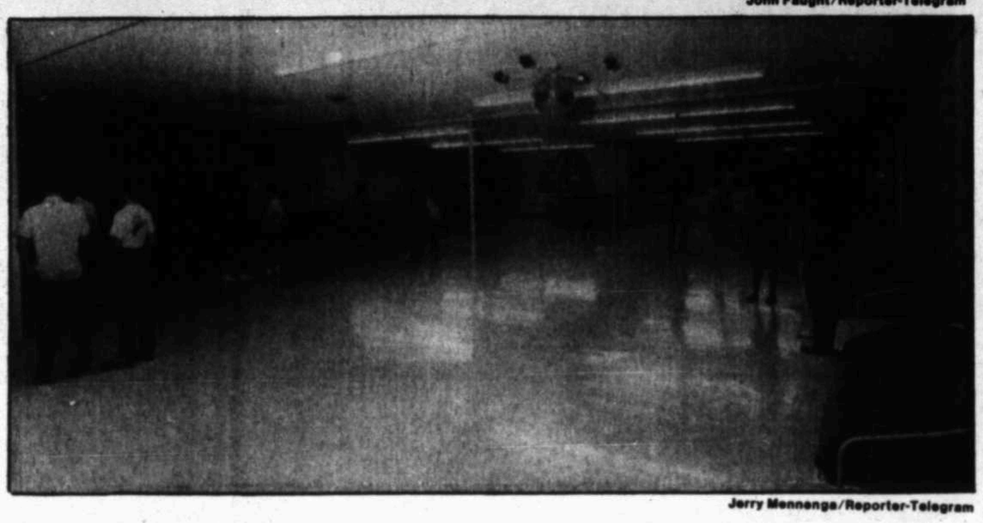

We'll insist he get a wheelbarrow and cart the cash, in small bills, to the designated agency.

It should get his attention. And, just think about how much fun he would have playing with it.

Midland high school students celebrate the opening of the Midland, right, and Lee, above, youth centers this weekend with a ddnce Friday and an open house today. Both centers underwent extensive renovations this summer.

CENTERS

When the city took over a nearby deserted army air field, it donated the officer's club to Midland's youth.

This structure was moved to a site leased from the First Presbyterian Church at B Street and Illinois Avenue, across from Midland High School.

Once again, the building proved to be inadequate to care for the influx of students at MHS.

The current Midland Youth Center was completed in 1954. The land it sits on was donated by Mr. and Mrs. James H. Chapple.

When the center was built, the available finances fell far short of the estimated costs. So Midlanders responded to the teens' need for assistance, donating furnishings and equipment from a mailbox to pool tables.

Lee Youth Center was built in the the 1960s after Lee High School was erected.

Both centers were closed in May 1983 due to lack of financial support and use by the students.

Open campus, which allows high school students to leave the campus at lunch, was cited as one reason for low participation and declining revenues at the centers.

The centers reopened in 1984 under a new set of guidelines and long-term goals after a group of mothers showed interest in scheduling special events after school and on weekends.

Last year, the centers attracted hundreds of students with activities that ranged from ping-pong tournaments, peer tutoring programs, trivia clubs, break-dancing contests and weekend dances.

Also, a snack bar, ping-pong and pool tables, video games, televisions, magazines and stereo systems are available to entertain students during the lunch hour.

Even though the centers are built next to the high schools and the activities center around school functions, neither is part of the Midland Independent School District.

Funds for their maintenance and continued operation — other than custodial services which are provided for by MISD — are obtained through contributions by local clubs, organizations and foundations.

The centers' board of directors is composed of nine parents from MHS and nine parents from LHS.

Midland family treated for smoke inhalation

From Staff Reports

A Midland family was treated for smoke inhalation at Midland Memorial Hospital after a fire destroyed their eastside residence early Saturday, an MMH spokeswoman said.

Georgeanne O'Connor, 28, was listed in stable condition, while her husband, Tim O'Connor, 28, and two sons, 8-year-old Timmy O'Connor and Jeremy O'Connor, 6, were treated and released following the blaze which broke out about 2:35 a.m. at 400 E. Broadway Ave.

Fire department reports said the blaze damaged the living room, dining room and kitchen and caused heavy smoke damage throughout the remainder of the house. The fire apparently originated in the living room.

Also, a fire Friday afternoon caused extensive damage to a kitchen at the Jenny Gooch residence, 2222 Western, according to reports.

Reports said the fire broke out about 5:21 p.m. when a pan containing grease overheated on the kitchen range. Heavy smoke damage was reported throughout the first floor of the residence.

In other weekend complaints, James M. Allen, 5215 W. Storey Ave., reported a .243-caliber rifle and scope were stolen from his residence.

Police reports said the burglary occurred Aug. 15, but was not reported until Saturday. The property is valued at $300.

An AM/FM double cassette player and lawn mower, together valued at $600, was stolen during a burglary either Friday or Saturday at the Donna J. Lara residence, 1700 Garden Lane, police reported.

A video cassette recorder, valued at $449, was stolen Saturday from Folger's Home Entertainment Center, 25 Village Circle, police reported.

Reports said the theft occurred between 1:30 and 1:35 p.m.

Someone broke into the Harold Vick residence, 5100 Bel Aire, Friday and stole an undetermined amount of property, police reported.

The exact time of the burglary is unknown, reports said.

Charles G. Koonce, Route 11, told police his 1982 Chevrolet Silverado pickup was stolen about 1:30 p.m. while it was parked at 2100 W. Wadley Ave.

Michael Cutrer, 2201 Rocky Lane, Odessa, told police his 1985 Toyota pickup was stolen Saturday while it was parked at 4900 Greentree Blvd.

Reports said the theft occurred between 8 and 9:15 a.m.

Victor Ybarra, 1303 South St., told police his 1972 Cadillac was stolen between 9:30 and 11:30 p.m. Friday.

Police reports said the car was stolen while it was parked in the 300 block of W. Lamesa.

Court refuses to block Texas killer's execution

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals on Saturday refused to block the scheduled execution of Texas killer Chester Lee Wicker, who was convicted of murdering a woman who may have been buried alive.

Wicker, whose 38th birthday is Thursday, faces death by lethal injection before dawn Tuesday for the August 1980 slaying of Suzanne Knuth. He could be the third Texas inmate within a week to be executed if all appeals fail.

Wicker, whose record includes convictions for rape, aggravated assault on a female and auto theft, had won two previous stays of execution.

Ms. Knuth, 22, of Beaumont, Texas, was abducted from a shopping center while walking home after her car had broken down. Wicker was convicted of kidnapping the woman and trying to rape her.

Eighteen days after her disappearance, she was found face down in a shallow grave on Bolivar Peninsula beach near Galveston.

"There was evidence that, although critically wounded, Knuth may have been alive when buried," the 5th Circuit opinion mentioned.

The court affirmed the decision of the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Texas, which had found Wicker's claims to be meritless and denied a certificate of probable cause.

"We agree with the district court that Wicker now presents no issue that jurists of reason would consider debatable," the court said.

An appeal by Wicker, who is white, claimed he had been denied equal protection of the law, arguing that the Texas death penalty is arbitrarily imposed according to the race of the victim, the 5th Circuit opinion noted.

That appeal also charged that a defendant of any race who is tried for capital murder of a white person has a much greater likelihood of being convicted and sentenced to death than a defendant charged with murder of a victim of another race.

The 5th circuit "has never addressed the question of whether discrimination against a defendant based solely upon the race of his victim denies the defendant equal protection of the laws," the court said.

But the court said it has repeatedly held that discrimination against defendants because of their own race, economic status, or sex constitutes an equal protection violation.

DEATHS

Herald L. Winkler

Winkler

Herald Laverne "Wink" Winkler of Midland died Friday at his residence following a long illness.

Funeral services will be at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity. The Rev. Marshall L. Mason will officiate. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Winkler was born Feb. 24, 1899 in Rush County, Ind., and was graduated from Shelbyville High School where he lettered in basketball. He became interested in sports and was a representative of Dunlop Tire and Rubber Co. in their golf and other sporting goods division. He married Agnes Russell on Nov. 1, 1935 in Dallas. In 1948 the couple moved to Midland where he and Walter Thompson built Ranchland Hills Country Club. Winkler also was instrumental in the construction of the club's 18-hole golf course. He and his wife were owners and operators of the club from 1964-72, when they retired and sold it to the RHCC membership. Winkler was a life member of the Professional Golfers Association, a 50-year Mason, member of the Midland Masonic Lodge 623, Suez Shrine Temple of San Angelo, the Episcopal Church of the Trinity.

Survivors include his wife, Anges Winkler of Midland; a son, Herald Winkler of Lubbock; a brother, Herman Leon Winkler of Indianapolis, Ind.; and two grandchildren.

The family requests memorials be directed to Hospice of Midland Inc.

Wayne Sawyer

Funeral services for Wayne Sawyer of Midland will be at 1:30 p.m. Monday in the Ellis Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. Jerry Thorpe, pastor of Temple Baptist Church of Odessa, officiating. Burial will be in the Odessa Cemetery.

Sawyer died Saturday at Midland Memorial Hospital following a long illness.

He was born Oct. 17, 1941 in Paris and was reared in Odessa. He attended Odessa schools. He was an automobile mechanic with Bill Williams Tire Co. for 18 years and was a member of the Temple Baptist Church.

Survivors include his wife, Doris Sawyer of Midland; six sons, Wayne Lee Sawyer, Michael D. Sawyer, Billy A. Sawyer, Timothy D. Sawyer and Harold Ninemires, all of Midland, and Travis D. Sawyer of Paris; a daughter, Joanna Ray of Paris; a brother, Billy J. Sawyer of Midland; a sister, Juanita Ragsdale of San Antonio; and six grandchildren.

Charles Bebee

LYONS — Funeral services for Charles "Freddy" Bebee, 31, of Lyons will be at 11 a.m. Monday in Nalley-Pickle and Welch Rosewood Chapel in Big Spring. The Rev. Jack Collier, pastor Birdwell Lane Baptist Church, will officiate. Burial will be in Trinity Memorial Park.

Bebee died Thursday in Bryan due to injuries from an automobile accident.

He was born Nov. 18, 1954 in Waco. He married Jackie Reynolds and had worked for the Ser-Con Co. of Bryan. He had lived in Lyons for the past three years. He was a member of the Baptist Church.

Survivors include his wife, Jackie Bebee of Lyons; a son, Michael Bebee of Lyons; two daughters, Brandi Bebee and Mary Bebee, both of Lyons; his father, A.C. "Charles" Bebee of Elmo; two brothers, Virgil Bebee of Lyons and Elmer Bebee of Elmo; and three sisters, Thelma Gibbs of Midland, Velva Williams of Baytown and Sharon Tindol of Coahoma.

Ray w. Franks

Funeral services for Ray W. Franks of Midland will be at 9:30 a.m. Monday in the Ellis Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. J.B. Stewart officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park.

Franks died Saturday at Midland Memorial Hospital following a long illness.

He was born June 6, 1914 in Salem, Ark., and was reared in Seminole, Okla. He married Lorene Parker on May 22, 1935 in Shawnee, Okla. The couple moved to Midland in 1954 from Stratford, Okla. He worked for Basin Supply Co. until 1960 when he established Midland Marine Co. He operated the business until 1964 and moved to Austin to work for Viking Marine Co. He resided in Tyler from 1969-71 before returning to Midland. He served with the military in the Pnama Canal Zone during World War II and was a member of the Lions Club.

Survivors include his wife, Lorene Franks of Midland; a son, Lt. Col. Tommy Ray Franks of Fort Hood; a brother, Ray Franks of Wynnewood, Okla.; four sisters, Beulah Wilson and Lorene Daniel, both of Wynnewood, Okla., Bernice Smith of Wewoka, Okla., and Pauline Bojes of Phoenix, Ariz.; and one granddaughter.

Two Midlanders remained jailed

From Staff Reports

Two 18-year-old Midland men — accused of using a jack handle to smash windows on several vehicles parked at an apartment complex — remained in city jail Saturday in lieu of $10,000 bond following charges of criminal mischief over $750 and under $20,000, authorities said.

Midland Police Officer Leonard Hendon said Robert Scott Stucks and Russell Dwayne Holly, who listed their address as Route 9, were arrested Thursday after he and Lt. Lannie Lee chased their vehicle when it ran a red light at the intersection of Midkiff Road and Illinois Avenue.

Hendon said he was called to the Greenhouse Apartments, 3212 W. Wadley Ave., early Thursday.

He said he was completing reports at the scene where five vehicles sustained damage, when he saw a suspicious vehicle drive in the area.

Hendon said the men were apprehended when "we found articles in the car believe used in the criminal mishchief.

"In the trunk we found a jack handle that had been chipped like it had been used to break a lot of glass and we also found a .44-Magnum pistol on the floor of the car," he said.

Hendon said nothing appeared to be stolen from the damaged vehicles.

He said at least nine vehicles were believed damaged at the complex.

Woman reportedly has encephalitis

HOUSTON (AP) — A 44-year-old Baytown woman has the first case of St. Louis encephalitis in four years in Harris County, health officials said.

The victim, who was not identified, was released from a hospital this week and is recuperating at home, Linda Forys, a spokeswoman for the county health department, said Friday.

A second suspected case, involving a 24-year-old Baytown man, is still being investigated. His most recent blood test was inconclusive, Ms. Forys said. He was hospitalized for eight days, she said.

The potentially fatal ailment, often called sleeping sickness, is spread to humans by infected culex mosquitoes.

In Fort Worth, a 10-year-old girl, Angela Dawn Schraudenbach, died Tuesday of encephalitis and a toddler is being treated for the same disease, health officials said.

Authorities said they would continue their intensive spraying and fogging in the Baytown area and in another Harris County neighborhood where the virus was detected.

Midlanders help in crime prevention

By JIM BROWN

Midland has one of the lowest crime rates in the nation for a city of our size. There are many reasons why this is true, certainly one of which is the involvement of our citizens in the prevention of crime.

Another major reason is the efforts of Police Sgt. Lalo Camarillo and officers Ron Benton and Charlie Chapman of our Crime Prevention Unit. Through a variety of services and education programs, these men make a significant contribution to the security of our homes and property.

One of the most important services offered by Crime Prevention is the Home Survey. On request, a crime prevention officer will inspect your home and recommend ways to make it more secure against burglary. Doors, locks, windows, gates and other potential points of entry to your property are checked.

Additionally, key control measures are suggested. The survey is also available to businesses.

A special lock and security program for low income families will be funded this year through Community Development Block grants. Information about this service can be obtained by contacting the Human Relations Council who will be working in cooperation with the Crime Prevention Unit.

Seeing, hearing and reporting suspicious characters in the neighborhood is another good way to keep criminal activity down. Neighborhood Watch programs have been under way for many years in Midland. Assistance in organizing one for your neighborhood is available through the Crime Prevention Unit.

Also now in effect is Crime Watch, a program in cooperation with Bell Telephone, Energas, TESCO, and Dimension Television Cable Services. Under this plan, installation and service personnel are to be alert for suspicious activities in the neighborhoods where they are operating.

If you are going out of town for vacation or just for the weekend, you may wish to notify the Police Department. On request, they will make a special effort to "patrol by" and view your property for anything irregular.

The cause of Crime Prevention is also helped through education, and there are a number of presentations and films available for this purpose. Among the subjects covered are pedestrian and bicycle safety, instruction for baby sitters, vandalism, shoplifting, rape prevention, fraud avoidance and drug abuse prevention.

If your group or organization would like one of these programs presented, call the Crime Prevention Unit at 683-4281.

Father, child programs to begin

From Staff Reports

The Community Services YMCA of the Midland Metropolitan YMCA announces the beginning of registration for their Indian Guides, Indian Princess and Trailblazers.

The programs are designed to provide quality time for fathers and sons or daughters. Activities include monthly "tribal" meetings, arts and crafts projects, camping trips, in-town events and many other activities.

The programs are open to both boys and girls in kindergarten through sixth grade.

Organizational meetings are scheduled as follows:

— September 8, Central YMCA, 800 N. Big Spring, 7 p.m.
— September 9, Alamo YMCA, 901 N. Midland Dr., 7 p.m.

Membership requires an annual program fee of $25 and a one-time purchase of an Indian Guide/Princess Kits.

For more information, call 684-8392.

Flag football registration to start

From Staff Reports

The Community Services Branch of the Metropolitan YMCA will begin registration for its fall Flag Football Program on Monday.

Interested persons can register at any Midland YMCA.

The program is open to both boys and girls in kindergarten through sixth grade and is designed to let kids have fun playing, while developing game skills.

There are no tryouts or cuts and every child plays in each game.

Games will be played at Anson-Jones Elementary School at 5 to 6 p.m. on either Tuesday or Thursday.

The fee is: YMCA members, $15; and non-YMCA members, $20.

A YMCA youth sports T-shirt is included in the fee.

For more information, call 684-8392.

Midland Jaycees to host Labor Day Rest Stop

From Staff Reports

The Midland Jaycees will host a Labor Day Rest Stop from 7 p.m. August 29 through 6 p.m. September 1 at the Wemple Rest Area, eight miles east of town on Interstate 20.

The Jaycees will provide coffee to motorists during the long weekend.

Jailing 'the folks'

Taking a tip from "Tough Love" and other organizations that advocate get-tough approaches to substance abuse by young people, many parents have begun reacting to their youngsters' drug and alcohol usage with up-front action. But what happens when the shoe is on the other foot?

Not long ago newspaper articles recounted the story of a 13-year-old girl in Orange County, Calif. who made her parents' drug usage known to police. It was heralded as a "genuine act of love."

While the thought of youngsters on a rampage of turning in their parents to police authorities may cause some to chuckle, one has to wonder what's wrong with that kind of "get tough" response by youngsters who love their parents and are seeking a normal homelife, one that obviously will not be forthcoming when drugs are involved.

According to counselors who work with drug abusers and alcoholics, the typical pattern is for the abuser to fail to recognize his own problem or that his dependence on the drug actually is controlling his life. Some can be made to recognize that fact by the action of others; some can't but must make that admission totally on their own.

No doubt it was a difficult decision for the 13-year-old California girl to report her parents' drug usage. But as a last resort measure it's certainly no more dramatic than the decision of a parent to let their child spend a night in jail or to admit the child to a drug counseling center. At that point, though, the issue really becomes a matter of survival — survival of self and survival of the family.

Americans who lived through the tumultous 1960s and 1970s — the years marked by the anti-Vietnam War protest rallies and the growth of the "drug culture" — are now parents with teenagers. It's likely that many who experimented with drugs in those years still continue to rely on drugs to an extent due to the fact drug usage has become ingrained in the society. Not all, by any means but certainly a number still use drugs. Only now, they're bumping into the drug awareness to which their own youngsters' have been exposed. Those youngsters, thank goodness, are being taught the dangers of drug use and that drugs can be responsible for ruined lives, broken homes, health problems and much, much more.

In the wake of the California girl's decision, there's obviously a mood in a segment of the young population to improve their lives any way they can and to live lives free of drug influences. They have that right, even if it means locking up Mom and Dad.

Quotes to remember

Quotable quotations of recent vintage related to such topics as the fight to return democracy to Nicaragua, the latest anniversary of the end of World War II, and the proposed revision of the nation's tax system.

On the eve of the Senate vote on Nicaragua, President Reagan explained the nature of the decision that had to be made: "The question is that of assistance to the freedom fighters who are trying to bring democracy to Nicaragua where a communist regime, a client state of the Soviet Union, has taken over."

"The question before the Senate is: Will it vote for democracy in Central America and the security of our own borders, or will it vote to passively sit by while the Soviets make permanent their military beachhead on the mainland of North America?" The Senate, to its credit, voted for democracy.

Emperor Hirohito said this on the 41st anniversary (Aug. 15) of Japan's surrender that terminated hostilities: "Even now my heart hurts when I think of the many people who fell."

Walter W. Heller, the noted economist at the University of Minnesota, spoke with whimsy and good cheer about the tax overhaul bill with which the Senate and House are struggling. Said Heller, who as President Kennedy's economic adviser engineered some big tax cuts in 1964:

"It's utterly remarkable that in light of the power of the tax lobbies, we are getting as good a bill as we are. Washington deals in second-bests, and this is one of the best second-bests I've seen." Coming from the hard-nosed Walter Heller, that's high praise indeed.

Another View:

Time for a tax hike

Those budget numbers that tumbled out this week suggest that:

1. Congress won't hit its deficit target for next fiscal year, but will come close enough to avoid the dreaded Gramm-Rudman budget-cutting process. It will be helped in this by generous Gramm-Rudman accounting rules, some fooling around with the numbers that occurred at the Office of Management and Budget, and the tax reform bill expected to be sent to the president next month. While "revenue-neutral" over the long run, the reform bill would raise about $11 billion in its first year.

2. Beneath the gamesmanship that is part of this, there has been a genuine shift in fiscal policy. The deficit this year is now thought likely to be about $230 billion. The figure for next year is expected by even pessimistic estimators to be considerably less. The latest projections by the cautious Congressional Budget Office point toward about $185 billion. No matter that it would be over the arbitrary Gramm-Rudman target: that would be important progress. But no one wants $185 billion deficits to become the norm. Among many other disadvantages, they leave too little room to increase stimulus when the economy is weak. You see an example of that already. The deficit has to come down, but the economy barely grew last quarter even with the deficit.

3. The policy shift has not been at the expense of just defense. In past years Congress has spoken of a freeze on domestic programs and not enacted one. This year it seems on its way to enacting one without the speeches. The administration would have you think that the Defense Department has been put on bread and water while the domestic side of the budget is still plump. In fact the trend lines on both sides of the budget are now flat. Where spending in some domestic areas — agriculture, for example — is rising, in others it has been cut back.

4. You can always make more spending cuts in a trillion-dollar budget. Congress will have a chance to do this when it returns. It should send the president a credible reconciliation bill. But the spending side of the budget has been pretty well fought over. It does not have that much more to give. The way to bring the deficit out of the danger zone is with a tax increase. It ought to take effect not next year, when there will already be an increase from the reform bill, but the year after, when, thanks to the pattern of reform, there would otherwise be a cut. But it ought to be enacted now.

Contra 'hosts' carrying out dirty war

WASHINGTON — Congressional approval of President Reagan's $100 million aid program for the anti-Sandinista contras will focus attention on Nicaragua's northern neighbor, Honduras, the poorest nation in Central America. For it is in Honduras that much of the money will be spent, and where the effects of the contras' rejuvenation could be most immediately felt.

Jack Anderson

Honduras has played the supposedly reluctant host to the U.S.-backed Nicaraguan rebels for the last five years, fearful that too flagrant support for the contras will invite a savage military response from the Sandinistas. So Honduras has made an elaborate charade out of covering up the contras' operations out of Honduran territory, and their presence along the southern border.

The military-dominated Honduran government has even acquiesced to the presence of U.S. troops on an apparently permanent basis. The Yanqui forces serve as an obvious deterrent to any Sandinista ideas of a military strike against the country that harbors its enemies.

Recent reports from Honduras indicate that the internal fighting has already begun over who will get what share of the boodle generated by Uncle Sam's $100 million largesse. The only thing certain about this squabbling is that, no matter who wins, the vast majority of the impoverished Honduran people will benefit little if at all.

Thoughtful Hondurans both inside and outside the government are nervous about the large-scale U.S. military presence and the contras' activities. They're afraid that these twin factors will lead to destabilization of their country — and their nervousness in this regard was only exacerbated by passage of the $100 million U.S. aid program.

In response, the Reagan administration and the Honduran military's ruling elite argue that the contras (Nicaraguans though they are) constitute the best available bulwark against Sandinista-supported subversion of Honduras itself. And this is true, even though the people who argue this line are telling only half the story.

Our associate Jon Lee Anderson, who has spent the last four years covering Central America with special attention to the contras, has provided the untold half. His reports show that the relationship between the contras and the Honduran military runs far deeper than is generally understood.

Put bluntly, the Nicaraguan contras amount to a sort of "border patrol" for Honduras, protecting it from infiltration by leftist Honduran guerrillas who operate out of Nicaragua in the same manner as the contras based in Honduras operate against Nicaragua.

Twice in the past three years, leftist guerrillas have tried to slip across the border into the high, rugged outback of Honduras. These units had been trained and equipped by the Sandinistas, and were "blooded" in joint combat operations against the contras.

Both times the infiltration attempts failed. Both times, knowledgeable contra sources told our reporter, the contras played a crucial role in intercepting and turning back the would-be Honduran guerrillas.

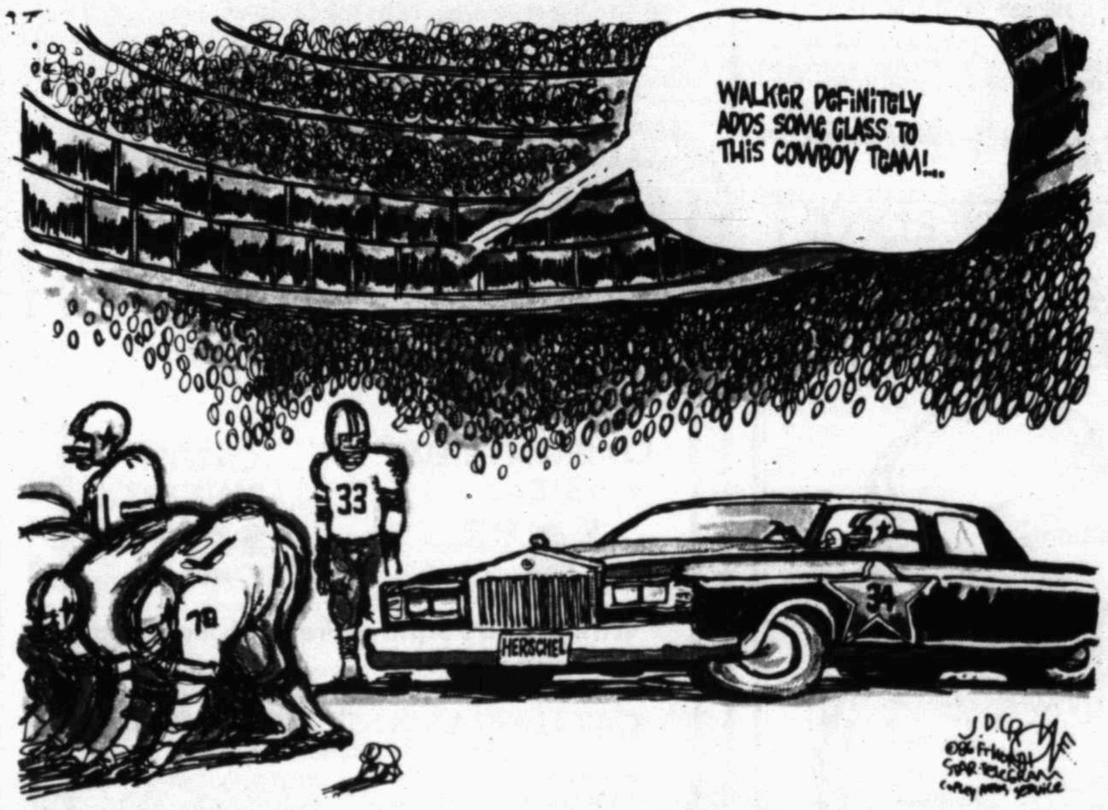

At a contra border camp in Honduras' El Paraiso province — where the only law comes at the muzzle of a gun — a contra field officer told Anderson that his men had caught two Hondurans wandering in the area. Interrogation established that the two were "Cinchoneros," — members of the fledgling Honduran rebel forces — and they were turned over to the tender mercies of the Honduran army.

Surprisingly, the two captives apparently survived. At about the same time the contra leader was boasting of the capture, the Honduran military presented two reputed guerrillas to the press, with the unlikely story that they had turned themselves in. The supposed defectors were said to have come from the same area where the Nicaraguan contra commander said he had captured the two Honduran infiltrators.

It's understandable, of course, that the contras do little favors in return for being allowed to set up bases on Honduran soil, fielding an army that is bigger than their hosts' own. It's also understandable that the Honduran military would prefer not to acknowledge these little favors, and would instead give them a twist that better suits their own needs.

In addition to their border-patrol services, the contras provide domestic intelligence for the Honduran police. In the remote Atlantic Coast town of Puerto Lempira, for example, where a Honduran military brigade is stationed, the contras keep a close eye on the local residents, alert for Sandinista spies.

Questions rolling in for nation's Young Fogies

The recent report in this space on the rise of the Young Fogies has elicited barrels of inquiries from readers. Here are a few, and their answers.

Russell Baker

Can a gay be a Young Fogy?

Yes, but only if he quits calling himself "gay" and starts saying "homosexual." Being a Young Fogy is serious. Homosexuality is no excuse for using frivolous language.

Your report suggested that only a male lawyer could qualify to become a Young Fogy. Is there no hope for persons of the feminine gender, like me?

Absolutely none. If, however, you are willing to quit being a person of the feminine gender and to start referring to yourself as a lady, you may qualify for membership in The Lovely Spouse Society. To anticipate your next question: no, you will not be allowed to eat lunch there, but will be admitted for cocktails and dinner.

I am 51 years old. Would I have to lie about my age if I wanted to become a Young Fogy?

The worst thing you can do is lie, because Young Fogies are very sincere about their desire to put more people in prison. However, if you have held your waistline down so you still look trim in a three-piece suit, and if you have never abandoned your faith in capital punishment, the Young Fogies may be willing to overlook your age.

A distinguished Young Fogy invited me to lunch in an expensive restaurant. I knew why. He was on the Admissions Committee and wanted to check out my three-piece suit and wire-rimmed glasses and hear me denounce the American Civil Liberties Union. After picking up the lunch tab, he said I was "not Young Fogy timber." What did I do wrong?

By letting him pay the lunch bill, you outraged the Young Fogies' most sacred principle: there is no free lunch.

I have heard it said that Young Fogies never ride in limousines. Why?

This is not true, although no Young Fogy would be caught dead wearing his identifying three-piece suit and wire-rimmed specs in a limousine, for fear that the Eastern, ACLU-dominated press would make jokes about his becoming a limousine liberal. To preserve his reputation as a four-door-sedan conservative, the Young Fogy disguises himself in horn rims, faded jeans and a magenta-tinted punk wig before stepping out limousine-style.

What is it like being married to a Young Fogy?

Women who have had the experience say it is very gratifying if you enjoy lectures on constitutional law and the illegality of the Emancipation Proclamation, but disappointing if you're hoping to get out of washing the dishes.

I have heard that Young Fogies are marvelous lovers. Is this true?

Marvelous lovers? You're talking about people who, given a lovemaking situation, won't make a move that hasn't been approved by the Supreme Court. Really now!

What's it like being a Young Fogy's child?

The bedtime stories are pretty dull unless you're the kind of child whose blood runs cold at mention of Earl Warren and the American Civil Liberties Union. Also, no permissiveness. First time you're caught with a copy of Playboy under the mattress, you have to read and write an 800-word book report on "The Ed Meese Story; or, The Rediscovery of the Lost American Constitution." Second offense: You have to help your mother do the dishes for six months, even though you're a boy.

As a lady who wants to save America from the American Civil Liberties Union before it's too late, I resent being sidetracked into the ineffectual Lovely Spouse Society. My idea is, we could have thousands of women fighting for the Young Fogified philosophy if I could only think of the perfect name to attract them. What do you think of a name like Young Fogyesses?

It could set the Young Fogy movement back 20 years. Fogyesses is one of those words that gives you a headache just to look at. And think of all the people who are going to say you're too dumb to know how to spell "four guesses." You don't want people associating lady Young Fogies with dumbness. The sensible name for your movement is The Young Fogypersons. I give you the name free. Yes, though there is no free lunch, there is free naming. Trust me. I am not a member of the American Civil Liberties Union.

Reagan resting in advance of fall's battles

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — As the House and Senate flung last-minute legislation about Capitol Hill in a frenzied rush to adjourn for the summer, President Reagan hopped aboard his Marine One helicopter to begin a three-week California vacation at his beloved mountain ranch.

Eager to get under way, Reagan cast a concerned glance at his watch.

"We're five minutes late," he told senior aides gathered for the five-hour trip West, Reagan's fourth visit to the ranch this year.

Reagan relishes such breaks — he had even ordered a double-barreled serving of his favorite foods for the flight, meat loaf and macaroni and cheese.

There was little reason to begrudge the president his respite from Washington; in the hours before Reagan's departure, things had not gone his way on Capitol Hill.

The Senate, ignoring his staunch opposition to punitive sanctions against South Africa, voted overwhelmingly to adopt far stricter steps against the white-ruled nation than anything Reagan has proposed.

The House, meanwhile, voted unprecedented cuts in his defense buildup and approved curbs on his arms control policies. As he flew westward, the president accused the lawmakers in a taped radio address of a "reckless assault" on the nation's security. And he vowed to veto it.

But not all things had gone badly for the president, a leader rather unaccustomed to losing tussles with Congress.

Earlier in the week, the Senate gave its approval to his plan for $100 million in aid to the Contra rebels battling the leftist government of Nicaragua. The battle for the funds, won earlier in the House, was a stunning victory for Reagan, who had overcome considerable opposition to convince Congress of the threat of a Soviet beachhead in the Western Hemisphere.

And in a striking resurrection of a policy initiative that many had thought dead last year, congressional negotiators forged a tax reform plan that met with a qualified — but nonetheless enthusiastic — blessing from the president just after he arrived at his ranch.

Reagan had stumped for tax reform last summer when few thought there was any life to the initiative. He made it the premier legislative goal of his second term.

The president may rest now from the rigors of his most recent legislative battles, but he also faces a hefty agenda after he returns from the solitude of his woodchopping, brush clearing and horseback riding.

So presidential aides who accompanied the president West have made it clear they want the trip to be a quiet one, for themselves and the president.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes told reporters aboard Air Force One that the president's men did not intend to make news.

Speakes is holding to an abbreviated briefing schedule of three meetings with the press corps a week, compared with the twice-daily sessions in Washington. And reports on the president's activities at the ranch handed out to reporters have not expanded beyond the terse three-sentence, single paragraph description of ranch chores and meals shared with his wife, Nancy.

And unlike last summer, there will be no staged "photo opportunities" of staff meetings such as the one called last August by the new chief of staff Donald T. Regan.

Senior advisers are rotating duty a week at a time, with a skeleton staff running the government from afar.

For example, Speakes said, Reagan's advisers were not disturbed that the president's wish to have a tax bill signed by Labor Day would not be fulfilled. Reagan's respite lasts a full week beyond the holiday and the bill has every sign of moving along as the administration hopes.

But faced with the Sept. 9 expiration of the sanctions he imposed against South Africa last year, the president must address Congress' drive for sterner measures or come up with new measures of his own as his vacation winds down.

And anxious to keep the Senate from being turned over to hostile Democrats after the November elections, the president's political advisers plan for him to travel extensively in September and October to stump for GOP candidates.

Another major item looming on the president's horizon is U.S.-Soviet jockeying over arms control and a possible summit before the end of the year.

Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev has not responded to Reagan's proposals for a summit, saying the meeting depends on the prospects for arms control. Yet in his most recent speech, the Soviet leader made no mention of Reagan's response to Moscow's latest arms control proposal.

U.S. and Soviet arms control experts are expected to continue discussions next month in Washington, part of the preparations for the Sept. 19 and 20 session between Secretary of State George Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

That session is expected to settle the timing of the second summit, which has little chance of occurring until after the November elections.

So rest well, Mr. President, because come the fall, you'll have not only a fiesty Congress and the elections to deal with, but the Russians as well.

Susanne M. Schafer covers the White House for The Associated Press and has traveled West with the president to Santa Barbara over the past two years.

BILL MODISETT

Senate vote to aid Contras not resounding victory

Bill Modisett

Don't be misled by those who are saying the vote in the U.S. Senate for aid to the Contra rebels fighting communists in Nicaragua was a victory. The Senate did what it had to do, but it was far from any kind of legislative victory.

On the contrary, the Senate vote was begrudging at best and therein lies the problem that promises to threaten the very foundation of this nation.

President Reagan deserves all the credit for saying loudly and clearly that the communist thrust into Central America should be opposed because of the threat it poses to the security of this nation. But where did you see the lines of congressmen and senators echoing the president's concerns in an effort to convince the American people of the need to combat this threat? I'll tell you where — nowhere. That's the problem with politics today. It's all fluff and smiling for the cameras. There are precious few statesmen remaining who are willing to stand up when they feel the folks back home are on the wrong track and take an action that is politically unpopular.

Of course, even that scenario didn't apply in the Contra aid battle. If you listened carefully to their comments, the folks back home — all across the nation — were not saying don't give support to the Contras. Rather, they were saying "keep the American boys out of the war but give the Contras limited assistance in fighting this menace."

But still lacking was the visible widespread legislative support for backing the Contras. The reason, of course, is simple. The squeamish members of Congress didn't want to take a risk on getting caught between a rock and a hard place with the voters. After all, job preservation is one of the strongest motivators a politician possesses.

Realistically, any one who thinks the communist problem in Central America is going to go away is just living in another world. Did it go away in Cuba? Has it gone away in Angola? Not hardly.

So, no member of Congress avoided what is coming and is, in fact, unavoidable. At some point, the Congress is going to have to deal with the sticky question of really throwing support behind the forces battling the communists in Central America or turning tail and crawling away. And I'm not talking in the context of $100 million either.

But that's a battle for another day. Besides, at that point there may not be many current members still in the Congress. Right?

I wouldn't take that bet.

I don't like the thought of higher taxes any more than anyone else, but I can almost assure you that state taxes are going up in the special legislative session now under way in Austin.

Texas is in a bad way as a result of the oil crisis and the general malady afflicting the economy. It looks as though it will take a tax increase to pull the state out of this mess and meet its constitutional requirement of not ending a biennium with a deficit. Here's the problem I see with a tax increase though:

There is no such thing as a "temporary" tax increase. "Temporary" is just one of those words the politicians use to make the pill taste a little bit — ugh — better.

The real danger is that once the Legislature gets in the habit of increasing taxes to overcome a rough situation, it becomes easier to do it for just about any excuse that can be peddled as valid.

Texas does not need to adopt that kind of philosophy. Look to the federal government to see where such a policy leads budget deficits and taxes.

If taxes must be increased this time, so be it. But remember, as voters, who increased these taxes and watch them closely to see whether they are really concerned about dishing out tax relief when the opportunity presents itself.

Tell senator we don't want state income tax

Citizens of Texas, please join me in support of a ban on any proposed state income tax during this special session of the State Legislature.

I very strongly oppose trying to raise revenue by taxing income. Indeed, how can we consider this kind of tax when our federal government is working so hard to change existing tax laws?

And why tax income? Many individuals and businesses are suffering now from greatly reduced incomes. If an individual is faced with paying income tax on an increase in salary, will he be quite so interested in working harder for more income? Will an unemployed person be quite so motivated to find a job? I think not.

Please write Senator Bill Sims, Room 421, State Capitol Building, Austin, Texas 78711. He needs to know what we think about a state income tax.

Clements just another 'Rockefeller Republican'

Library needs elevator to provide fair access

Why have the Midland County Commissioners failed to recognize the need of an elevator in the Midland County Library? I recently visited the main library with my two year old son and my daughter who rode in a stroller. Managing the two sets of heavy front doors is a feat I've finally learned to master, but imagine my surprise when I realized the only way up to the children's books was to use the stairs and either drag the stroller upstairs or carry it! Surely something should be done about this inconvenience.

Why are the children's books upstairs anyway? Shouldn't they be located on the main floor where a child can safely check out a stack of books and not have to risk stumbling or falling down the stairs with them?

An elevator would also be of help to the handicapped who currently have reserved parking in back of the library but have no access to the children's books located upstairs or to the reference area also located there. The absence of an elevator in our library is a hardship for some of us who are young mothers, but it is a denial of access to those who are handicapped.

Churches should keep out of state's affairs

The political philosophy of separation of church and state is principally an American one. It exists in the federal and in Texas governmental philosophy and perhaps in every state in the union.

The churches of this state are the first to raise the issue of separation of church and state if the state attempts to meddle in their affairs. Yet those same churches have been meddling in the affairs of this state for over a century.

Now it is that religious leaders and the Texas Conference of Churches are meddling in matters concerning the tax system and are opposing amendments to the state constitution relating thereto. They have also stated their opposition to a lottery or a pari-mutuel betting system as a means of a deficit bailout. Both of these latter items may or may not be a solution to the state budget problem, but they are matters for the Legislature and not for institutional religion. Let these organizations confine their activities to the pulpit. They should not, as a religious body, be heard in legislative matters.

Matthew was a tax collector but when he became a follower of the Saviour he forsake those activities.

Credit not 'available' to conscientious couple

A disturbing facet of our computer/credit society has come to my attention recently.

A young couple with two small children went out to buy a piece of furniture at a local store...the large ad proclaimed "credit available." They filled out all the forms to purchase a chair on a six-month plan — an anniversary present to one another.

The local credit reporting agencies denied them credit. Why? Because they had been financially prudent. All of their payments, rent, utilities, gas, clothes, etc., had been paid for by cash or check. They had not extended themselves buying on credit. They had an account at a local bank. They had paid their doctor bills promptly. The husband had a job. They had paid off a loan for the purchase of their car at a bank in south Texas (a fact noted on the application form). They did not owe anyone money. The wife is a native Texan who had gone to college and worked in the state. The husband lived in Midland except for his college years.

However, the computer said that because they had handled their money well and had no outstanding bills, they were a 'credit risk' It has no record on them! Our judicial system operates on the principle of "you are innocent until proven guilty by verdict of a judge or jury of your peers." Obviously in our computer age this no longer holds true.

I respect, and understand, the need of businesses to require credit checks, but I would suggest that everyone obtain a record of their credit rating — your financial reputation may be at stake.

Elderly woman source of inspiration, blessing

Some time ago, a front-page story told of an elderly husband and wife in a loving relationship who terminated their lives together with an overdose of pills. To them, this was a suitable alternative to living out their lives, knowing that one would be left eventually without the other and that advanced age would bring disabilities and perhaps life in a care facility other than their own home.

This story reminded me of another story — one which I observed. While attending church in another city and waiting for the service to begin, a door near the front of the sanctuary opened slowly. Through it came an elderly lady of at least 90 years. Her gait was painful as she inched her way to the nearest available seat. Her considerable pain was exceeded only by her determination. As she slowly seated herself, the congregation heaved a sigh of relief. But she quickly relinquished her hard-earned seat to kneel in prayer on the kneeler provided for that purpose. Her face glowed with joy and thankfulness.

At the conclusion of the service, I introduced myself to her and told her what a beautiful sermon she herself had been for me that day. Though surprised, she was grateful and I watched as she turned and began her long walk home. I still ponder how very much she gave me that day.

I can only surmise that others in the church were similarly inspired and blessed by her mere presence.

Tax reform glittering political triumph for Reagan

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

NEW YORK — The broad reconstruction of the income tax system that the House-Senate conference committee approved before it recessed for its annual summer vacation gave President Reagan a glittering legislative triumph unparalleled among presidencies for half a century.

The conference committee successfully resolved the differences between the House and Senate versions of the complicated tax reform bills.

While the final bill still faces votes in both houses when the Congress reconvenes after Labor Day, support seems assured; but the president is apparently taking no chances with some critics still clamoring for special treatment and has instructed his aides to blunt efforts to dilute the bill.

This piece of historic legislation, which enables the nation as a whole to be winners, is a creation of President Reagan who had bipartisan assistance in guiding the often-imperiled bill clear of obstructions.

I have read many reports about the outcome of the bill and the consensus appears to be that it is, in the words of The Wall Street Journal, "a real reform." Even severe administration critics like the New York Times applauded the achievement.

President Reagan set the tone and defined the themes of the resolute campaign to clean up and make understandable a body of law a predecessor called "a disgrace to the human race." The chairmen of the two congressional committees responsible for the formulation of the nation's tax policies, Senator Bob Packwood, R-Ore., and Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., hammered out the needful compromises.

Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., and Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., both fiscal specialists long active in pursuing tax reform measures, were among those counseling the two major negotiators.

The legislation, however, is less Republican than it is populist and it is less traditionally conservative than it is the expression of the Reagan supply side view that low individual taxes and small government smooth the way to our prospering national structure.

What emerges quite clearly bears the special stamp of Ronald Reagan.

In a speech 22 years ago, long before he entered the political arena, then actor Ronald Reagan, said "we need true tax reform that will at least make a start toward restoring for our children the American dream that wealth is denied to no one, that each individual has the right to fly as high as his ability and strength will take him."

As Jerome Kurtz, former Commissioner of the Internal Revenue Service, told The Wall Street Journal, "I've been involved in trying to get tax reform for 25 years and I never thought I'd live to see this. It's really spectacular."

Warren Brookes, economics writer for The Hearst Newspapers, pointed out that indeed it was a spectacular achievement, concluding that it results in the elimination of many millions of individuals from the tax rolls.

The tax bill is certain to have a global impact and will assuredly compel Western allied legislative bodies to rejigger their own tax packages which have simply become unwieldly and frequently impossible to enforce.

At the same time, many of the 50 states have to work on their own state tax systems, which are tied to the old federal tax structure.

Once approved by both houses of Congress, the new tax package begins to take effect in 1987 with the full implementation in 1988. For the vast majority of Americans, the bill represents a decrease in the tax they pay to Uncle Sam, and shifts some of the cost of government to the business sector.

Six million working poor people will stop paying income taxes. Millions of others on welfare will have a greater incentive to go to work, thereby reducing the total welfare cost.

Scarce capital, presently and artificially attracted to the construction of offices or shopping centers in a glutted market will be freed, for example, for the modernization of America's lagging machine tool industry or the mechanization of coal export facilities. Competitive markets, not committees of Congress, will make these decisions. This can only improve our balance of payments situation and benefit the entire country.

The new tax bill should be seen as a substantial improvement over the existing code and while it is not a cure-all, the bill goes a long way toward achieving equity.

As I noted earlier, President Reagan deserves high marks for pushing this issue from the start of his administration. America is on the right track and that is where the tax bill is going — steadily forward in a triumph of fairness.

Books sold by yard to customers who judge volumes by their covers

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Customers in a book store here are judging books by their covers, says the manager of the store that is selling books by the yard.

For $12.50, Ellen O'Neal measures out 36 inches of books for customers she suspects might never open them.

"They want good-looking books. I hate to say this, but we could hollow them out and it wouldn't matter," said Ms. O'Neal, manager of Half-Price Books.

Not all of the store's books are available by the yard. Ms. O'Neal said the supply is limited to volumes the store has had trouble selling.

The idea came from a decorator's request to buy books by size. Most of the customers seeking books by the yard are decorators or furniture store owners, according to Ms. O'Neal.

And the customers know what they want.

"I've had some come in and tell me they want law books, so they'll look intelligent," she said.

"I'll tell you what's really funny is when they start matching colors. Sometimes they have to have certain colors to match the decor. I had one person say to me, 'Can I get all black and white? I'm trying to achieve an art deco effect.' "

It's time to take a stand.

On Saturday, August 16, the Midland Reporter-Telegram published a front page report entitled "Decency group wants 'pornographic magazines' removed." This news item was an account of a day-long visit to several of our Kent Kwik stores by Mr. Joe Seay and several members of his Odessans for Decency group. Apparently Mr. Seay invited a reporter along to join in the surprise visit to our corporate offices.

Although the news article fairly represented our position, I feel it necessary to inform our customers of several important and disturbing incidents.

First, it is important to state that the management of Kent Oil, Inc. respects the convictions of the Odessans for Decency. We strongly support their freedom of expression and right to boycott our businesses if they so choose. However, I also feel it is important that you know the background concerning this issue, as well as several recent disturbing incidents.

The issue, in our view, is whether to give up your right to choose the products you want to buy.

Decency group wants 'pornographic magazines' removed

By JANE DEES
Staff Writer

A surprise visit Friday afternoon by four Odessans for Decency members to the corporate headquarters of Kent Oil Inc., did not garner the results they had hoped for.

Joe Seay, president of the group, said Friday marked the third official visit to the store's Midland headquarters asking Bill Kent, president of Kent Oil Inc., to remove or replace "pornographic magazines" in his convenience stores in Midland, Odessa and Andrews.

"It's unfortunate Mr. Kent is not making an effort to defend his position and I'm disappointed we couldn't talk about this," Seay said.

Kent, whose 2 p.m. appointment with a client prevented a meeting with Seay Friday, said he's trying not to make a media issue out of this. However, he believes his side of the story should be told, too.

"The only thing we are defending is our customers' right to make a choice.

"We don't believe they want to have someone dictate to them what they can and can't buy.

"By their nature, West Texans are too independent to stand for that," Kent said.

Kent said he takes the issue of pornography seriously. Company policy forbids the sale of adult magazines to minors and instructs clerks to remove the minors from the store if they are found looking at the magazines, Kent said.

Further, he said his stores in Andrews have begun putting the controversial magazines behind the sales counter, as Stop and Go stores do now, but he's not yet opted to do that at all stores.

"Frankly, we've taken some magazines out — not as a sign of buckling under to pressure from any group, but instead because we deemed them inappropriate," Kent said.

"I don't understand this man's behavior, nor appreciate Mr. Seay's actions today (Friday) at some of the Kent stores in Midland.

"I had reports that he would walk in, open up an adult magazine and shove it in the clerk's face, snap their picture as they saw it and then attempt to tape record their verbal responses to his actions.

Midland Reporter Telegram, Saturday, Aug. 16, 1986

For the past two years we have had numerous telephone conversations, correspondence, and even a face-to-face meeting with Mr. Seay and his organization. We have throughout these past two years been very willing to listen to their position and to read through a great deal of information they have supplied. We have, nevertheless, been repeatedly threatened with pickets at our stores by this group.

In recent weeks Mr. Seay and his group have apparently decided to involve the news media to gain support for their position. That is also their right. It appears they have targeted Kent Kwik because two of our largest national chain competitors made concessions concerning the sale of general circulation adult magazines, such as Playboy.

We have refused to be pressured into making similar concessions. Because of this stand, we are now the target of an increased effort by this group. An "effort" we believe warrants a full disclosure to our customers and the public.

On August 8 Mr. Seay and another group member entered one of our stores in Andrews. Mr. Seay introduced himself, bought an adult magazine, unwrapped the protective plastic covering, opened the magazine and displayed the centerfold to our female employee. She was justifiably offended by his action, and asked Mr. Seay if he would want someone to do that to his wife. He then began taking photographs inside our store.

On Friday, August 15, Mr. Seay and several others visited four of our stores in Midland. In one instance he attempted to tape record his conversation with our female employee. Again, he took pictures. In another instance that day, he entered our store, displayed an opened adult magazine in the face of a female employee and had his photographer take a picture of the opened magazine next to our employee's face. She, too, was offended and upset by this behavior.

I also am offended, and I believe other West Texans would be offended by that kind of behavior.

Mr. Seay's day was capped off by apparently asking a newspaper reporter to accompany him to my office. He arrived unannounced, without an appointment, demanding to see me. I was unable to meet with his group because of a prior appointment.

We think our customers should know our position concerning this issue. The issue is not whether we would give up the small profits made from selling magazines. The issue, in our view, is whether to give up your right to choose the products you want to buy. Special interest groups also object to many other products — cigarettes, beer and wine, snack food, even candy.

Our position is simple. We believe that the people of West Texas do not want a special interest group, however well meaning, to tell them what they can or cannot buy. We support our customer's right to choose. We do not believe Mr. Seay and his organization should dictate to the people of West Texas what they can or cannot buy.

We handle these general circulation magazines responsibly. Our policy is to conceal the magazine behind blinder boards allowing only the title to be seen, placed on the top rack, away from a child's easy reach. We only sell these magazines to adults, and we police the magazine racks to prevent children from looking at them. We have also removed some magazines and books we felt were inappropriate. We are very serious about handling the sale of this material responsibly.

We have never displayed an open magazine to any customer. We have never forced anyone to look at these magazines, much less buy one. Yet Mr. Seay's organization has pushed magazines in the faces of several of our employees on more than one occasion.

For 30 years our company has been a part of West Texas. We started here and we plan to stay here. West Texas and its people have been good to us. We have worked hard to repay that by operating clean, well stocked stores, by getting involved in many community projects, and by being a generous financial supporter of many worthwhile area causes and organizations.

But we believe it is time for us to take a stand and defend our customers. No doubt this is a controversial issue. The Odessans for Decency claim not to be a censor group, yet the magazines we sell are all legally circulated and are available throughout the entire United States.

The issue here is not some special interest group's definition of "pornography;" the issue is the freedom of our customers to make their own decisions, and not let someone else make those decisions for them.

We may lose customers because of our stand. That's a risk we take, because we believe in our convictions as much as Mr. Seay does in his. I know it would be easier to give in to threats and demands as our major competitors have. I cannot! I cannot give away your freedom to choose what you buy.

So it's time to take a stand — a stand which Mr. Seay's organization is determined to change through pickets, boycotts, publicity, harassment of our employees, and well organized letter and phone campaigns. If you disagree with us, I respect your opinion. For those who agree with our stance, I sincerely thank you and appreciate your support.

Bill Kent
President

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Orientation, placement scheduled

By H. A. TUCK

Things really get cranked up this week in preparation for the fall semester.

We'll try to run down the highlights, so pay attention as there may be a quiz at the end!

• • •

Orientation, which is required for all new students, is scheduled from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Monday. It starts in the Allison Fine Arts Building auditorium. During most the session, students will be divided into smaller groups. Each group is assigned one student leader and one faculty leader who will serve rather like "big brothers/big sisters" for the new students during the first semester.

Orientation helps students learn the procedures around college. They also are tested for placement in English and math as well as their interest areas. A campus tour helps them learn their way around.

A make-up session for those not attending Monday is scheduled for Friday.

• • •

All faculty members also begin work on Monday. It begins at 8:30 a.m. with the traditional President's Breakfast for all employees, following by a general faculty meeting and division meetings that occupy the remainder of the day. Faculty will have other meetings Thursday after registration to receive specific teaching assignments. Friday is devoted to preparations since classes start Sept. 2.

• • •

Official registration days are Tuesday and Wednesday In the Physical Education Building. Hours from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 4:30 to 8 p.m. Tuesday and from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 4:30 to 8 p.m. Wednesday. Those who pre-registered were given time permits to come at a certain time.

Persons who didn't pre-register should come between 6 and 7 p.m. on Wednesday and they'll be processed and registered as quickly as possible.

• • •

Coaches are haunting the airport this weekend as their athletes arrive. Basketball coach Jerry Stone has about 18 to 20 players scheduled to report, including several returning lettermen. Of course, if this year's crop follows form, several will leave prior to the first game while others won't make their grades and drop out.

Golf coach Del Poss and tennis coach Joe Williams join Stone in being cautiously optimistic about their recruits. It should be another good year for Chaparral athletics.

• • •

As of now, the August meeting of the Board of Trustees is tentatively set for 4 p.m. Thursday to approve the 1986-87 budget. The meeting's regular date was last week, but was delayed to see if the special session of the state Legislature could come up with a revised funding plan. MC president Dr. Jess Parrish was in Austin again last week in his role as Chairman of the Texas public community colleges' Legislative Committee.

• • •

All MC faculty members are required to earn nine hours credit each three years as a condition of employment. Computer instructors Bill Brooks and Bruce Elsom earned three hours the hard way. They commuted to Texas Tech four days a week for three weeks to attend a graduate Education course. The tough part was their 4:30 a.m. departure to be on time for a 7 a.m. class that lasted four hours daily.

Bill noted it was a fast way to put 3,000 miles on an automobile...and to create yawning boredom. "We didn't even get to see the sun rise," Elsom complained.

Earlier we used the word "computer," but the proper terminology now is "Computer Information Systems," which is the way it's listed in the course bulletins and catalog.

• • •

John Davidson, director of the Fire Protection Technology and Emergency Medical Service programs, has written an article for the Texas Firemen magazine. It was entitled "Training Firefighters in Midland."

• • •

Midland College will be closed Sept. 1, for the Labor Day holiday. Classes and late registration begin the following day...and everyone will be keeping a close eye on the head count. As pre-registration closed Thursday, the count continued to be ahead of last year's record pace that concluded with 3,513 students.

•••

Still debating about taking classes this fall? Just bow your neck and do it. Once you start, you really won't have any doubts about the value of an education and you'll be with many of your contemporaries, whether you're 18 or 68!

And since you paid attention so well, there won't be a quiz this week.

H.A. Tuck is public relations director at Midland College.

MAKING THE GRADE

Witt

Kevin Witt and Jaime Salazar have been chosen as the first recipients of the Gil Kenney Memorial Scholarship.

Witt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Merrill Witt, is a 1986 graduate of Lee High School, where he was a three-year letterman in football and track. He will attend Texas Tech University and study business.

EDUCATION IN BRIEF

Elementary, junior high orientations scheduled

The Midland Independent School District will host orientation sessions for elementary and junior high students during the next two weeks.

Orientation for junior high students new to Midland and those who did not attend the spring orientation will be at 9:30 a.m. Monday at Alamo, Goddard and San Jacinto Junior High Schools.

Elementary school orientation for all students in grades 4-6 and their parents will be at 7:30 p.m. August 28 at each elementary.

MISD will provide bus transportation for students and their parents from their neighborhood schools to their cluster schools.

All buses will remain at the last school, unloaded, until the program is over. At that time, the route will be reversed for the trip back to the home schools.

Orientations for GEM (Gifted Education in Midland) students and their parents are Sept. 8 for fourth grade, Sept. 9 for fifth grade, and Sept. 10 for sixth grade. Each session is scheduled from 4 to 5 p.m.

Students new to Midland freshman schools or high schools will be provided individual orientation when registering. All new students should register before school starts.

LHS band officers elected

The Lee High School Rebel Band and Orchestra Club has elected officers for the 1986-87 school year. They are Bill Strickland, president; Larry Wagner, first vice president; Kathy and John Kelly, second vice president; Kathy Wilson, third vice president; Harold and Bettie Partin, fourth vice president; Evely Milby, secretary; Carol Wade, treasurer; and Paz Carrizales, publicity.

Club meeting will be at 8 p.m. the second Tuesday of each month.

Girl's body found in Dumpster

WATAUGA, Texas (AP) — An intensive 22-hour search for a missing 5-year-old girl ended in tragedy Saturday when Renee Elizabeth Greer's body was found near a parking lot Dumpster.

The girl was last seen about 6 p.m. Friday playing with a friend outside a neighbor's house in her Watauga neighborhood. Police said the girl was abducted and her body found about 1:30 p.m. by a Dumpster in the alley behind a furniture store in nearby Hurst.

She was found fully clothed with no visible marks on her body, but apparently had been strangled. Watauga detective Gary Johnson said police have no witnesses or leads.

Police made a positive identification through photographs and a description of the girl's clothing, Watauga police Sgt. Bill James said. An autopsy is scheduled Sunday.

Rape victim says state court system added insult to injury

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Her attacker was convicted and sentenced to 75 years, but the victim says the Texas court system tried her dignity in a way that the eight-hour ordeal of being held prisoner and repeatedly raped did not.

The 39-year-old Terlingua woman says she "felt filthier, dirtier, nastier after I walked off that stand than I did when I got raped."

She recalled the ordeal of repeating her story during the three-day aggravated sexual assault trial of the man convicted of attacking her, 22-year-old Refugio Gardea Gonzalez of Jimenez, Mexico.

Gonzalez stared at his victim as she recalled the evening of Oct. 26, 1985, when she was kidnapped from her home, repeatedly raped and robbed. His reply to the charges was that she lured him to her home with promises of sex, drugs, alcohol and money.

He was tried last week in San Angelo on a change of venue from Brewster County. Gonzalez fled to Ojinaga, Mexico, where he was jailed. Three unidentified, armed men kidnapped the defendant from the jail, and tied him naked to a tree in a roadside park on the U.S. side of the border after extradition efforts failed.

The victim's home, where the attack began, is next to the highway in desert mountain country, 15 minutes from the Mexican border.

"It was just a really beautiful night. It was just starting to get dark and the moon was going to be full. It was shining on the cactus garden and the desert behind my house," she said.

"It was so quiet that night; I never heard a sound."

She told how she had just returned home from performing with her small country and western band in Alpine.

"I was tired. I went out on the back patio and played my guitar for a short time. I was thinking about mistakes I made, and I thought they didn't mean that much," she said.

She said she stood up to stretch. "Then someone grabbed me from behind. I screamed, and he jerked me back farther and stuck something sharp at my neck."

Describing the terror and her emotions, she recounted how her hands were tied behind her back, how she was blindfolded and gagged, and was dragged from her home through the brush and into the desert.

"I thought a monster had me," she said.

After a while, she said, Gonzalez removed her gag and blindfold.

"I kept my head turned away and my eyes closed. I tried to hold onto the fact that if I didn't see him he wouldn't kill me. He made me open my eyes, and I thought that he didn't really look like a monster...I tried to talk to him to let him know I was a real person," she said.

Then he laid a blanket he had taken from her home on the ground, and sexually assaulted her, she said.

Afterward he forced her to continue the trek through the desert until he again stopped, made her hold the blanket while he cut it into strips to tie her, and forced her to have sex again.

"After that, I thought he was going to leave me tied up in the desert. I was afraid of the animals out there, but I thought there's no way God will let a mountain lion eat me after I've survived all this," she said.

She said he forced her over the same rough ground leading back to her house, where he again sexually assaulted her.

He took her money and personal belongings, including a locket containing a photograph of her young son, her Veteran's of Foreign Wars women's auxiliary pin, a home-made cassette tape recording of some of her early music and a volunteer fire department cap, which he was wearing when he was finally arrested five miles inside Mexico.

He also had a photograph taken from her family album that showed her wearing the same cap.

"The people like him just come across the river and take what they want and swim back. They like to take trophies back to brag to their friends. Sometimes it's a finger, an ear, personal belongings or pictures," she said.

She said she believes no punishment exists under the state's sexual assault laws that can justify the psychological frustration caused by the exhaustive legal system she has battled in the year since the assault took place.

S.A. Holmes, Mojo tagged Nos. 1, 2

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

San Antonio Holmes has an old offense and a new title to start the 1986 Texas schoolboy season.

Coach Gary Malesky thinks opponents will be ready for the Huskies' pro style "run and shoot" offense that propelled them into the 1985 playoffs.

However, Holmes will go into 1986 with something new.

The Huskies will carry the banner as the team to beat in Class 5A as the No. 1 ranked team in The Associated Press Preseason Schoolboy Football Poll.

Holmes joins West Orange-Stark in 4A, defending state champion Daingerfield in 3A, Refugio in 2A and Wheeler in A as the No. 1 ranked teams in the classifications.

The Huskies surprised many teams last season when Malesky installed a diversified offense similar to the one popularized by Mouse Davis with the former USFL Houston Gamblers.

"We tried to have a different wrinkle in each game and hit them with it early," Malesky said. "They didn't know if they should rush in the passer or lay back. I think they'll be ready for us this year."

Quarterback Wilbur Odom, who triggered the offense last year with 2,800 passing yards, returns along with an outstanding complement of receivers, including Johnny Walker and twins Keither and Kerry Cash.

"We've got a great quarterback so we try to get him outside and let him read the defense," Malesky said.

Holmes received 13 of the 24 first place votes cast by the AP's panel of Texas sports writers and sportscasters, finishing with 218 points.

Odessa Permian, a state finalist last season, starts the season in the No. 2 position followed by Houston Cypress-Fairbanks and defending state champion Houston Yates.

Beaumont Central, a consolidation of Beaumont Charlton Pollard and Beraumont French, is ranked No. 5.

West Orange-Stark, led by running back Brian Cleveland, advanced to the Class 5A playoffs in a ruggest region last year but has dropped down in classification this season.

"We're having to fight a little apathy right now," said West Orange-Stark Coach Dan Hooks. "All our players have only been involved with the 5A program. They don't realize yet that the competitive level in 4A is pretty tough."

Hooks expects Cleveland, 5-11, 200, to be a big part of the Mustangs' offense this season.

"He's an all-purpose back," Hooks said. "He's an outstanding runner, a good blocker and a great pass receiver. There's no one quality that stands out over the rest, but put them all together and you've got a great prospect."

West Orange-Stark outpolled No. 2 Lubbock Estacado by a 213-202 point margin, the closest race of any class.

San Antonio Southwest, led by pass-happy quarterback Ty Ditmer, starts the season in the No. 3 spot followed by McKinney, Carthage, Dickinson, Corsicana, Cleburne, Bay City and Sulphur Springs.

Daingerfield, following a perfect 16-0 state title run last season, was the near-unanimous pick to repeat in Class 3A, netting 23 of the 24 first place votes.

Midland Lee Rebel Wade Claybrook gets a welcomed splash in the face during football workouts when temperatures soared above the 100-degree mark.

Rebs, 'Dogs don pads as Week 1 concludes

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Cloud cover and temperatures dropping below the 100-degree mark greeted Midland High and Midland Lee football teams Friday and Saturday as the two squads put on pads for the first time.

And both Lee coach Earl Miller and MHS boss Doug McCutchen liked what they saw when the pads starting popping.

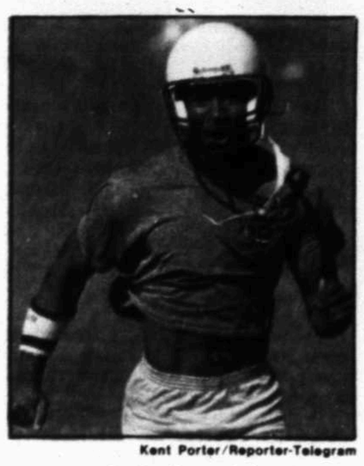

"We had good participation, good attitude and no slackers," reported Miller, who added, "I feel like we are further along knowledge-wise at this point than we usually are, but just how physical and tough we are is something we don't know yet. We hope to answer that question Thursday when we scrimmage Del Rio in Ozona."

McCutchen said, "Our kids have worked very hard under some extreme heat, but we feel like we've got a lot of learning, conditioning and repetition in. Now its just a matter of getting ready for our scrimmage with Pecos (Friday at Memorial Stadium.)"

Coming into the pre-season workouts, Miller was concerned with his situation at linebacker and offensive line positions where graduation ripped a huge hole. Miller is breathing a little easier after Week 1.

"It looks like we've got some kids who are going to take up the slack. Two kids we moved from the offense to play both ways, John Kendrick and Geoff Rich, have been looking good at linebacker. Kendrick is going to be better than adequate as a backup and Rich still needs to learn to take on a blocker better, but he's very good in pass coverage. Omar Mendoza, Greg Bick and Mike Acosta, our starters, are looking strong.

"The offensive line has surprised me a bit. The offense is ahead of the defense right now and the offensive line did a great job Saturday in our scrimmage in short yardage situations. They ate up the defense. Our defense still looks like cheese that has a lot of holes in it and smells bad."

Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

Lee's Rodney Johnson
...getting ready for fall

MILLER FELT last spring that his offensive backs, which include quarterback Rodney Johnson and halfbacks Joe Woodard and Durian Jenkins, would be the strength of the Lee team. He hasn't changed his mind. "They look awfully strong to me."

McCutchen, too, has progress to report and some surprises to boot.

"Our offense has shown a tremendous retention of plays from last spring, making it easier to get the repetition we needed in the early going. We've definitely got to get better defensively, but I think all we need is a lot of repetition. We've got a lot of young people on defense and they are going to have to do a good job of learning. Our kicking game is still our weakest area and our biggest concern," notes McCutchen.

"Cliff Coleman, a linebacker and running back, reported in great shape and has looked very good. Sterling Warren, an offensive tackle, is also looking strong and we were really pleased with David Malone (a center and defensive end), who missed spring training due to the baseball playoffs. David has come in strong and in shape."

McCutchen has been pleased with his quarterbacks Jaime Madrid and Jeff Somers. "It's still just like the spring. They're both right there. You can't ask much more from either of them."

BOTH SQUADS face an important week. Both have scrimmages, the only action either will see before the Sept. 5 openers when MHS will host Lubbock Monterey at Memorial Stadium and Lee travels to Lubbock Coronado.

On Tuesday at 6:30 p.m., Lee's players will be honored with a Kickoff Rally at the Lee Field, complete with barbeque, bands and pep squads. Then on Thursday, Lee travels to Ozona to face Del Rio at 6 p.m. in a controlled scrimmage. Lee will take only a split squad to Ozona while the rest will stay behind for a 6 p.m. scrimmage with Kermit on Friday.

MHS will hold its annual Super Dog Night in conjunction with its scrimmage with Pecos Friday at Memorial Stadium. A Fat Burger feed is planned for 6 p.m. with a rally to follow at 7 p.m. The scrimmage will start around 7:30 p.m.

This week will also be the last chance for Midland fans to purchase season tickets. Season tickets will be sold through 5 p.m. Friday at the Memorial Stadium ticket office.

Defending champion Sooners tagged No. 1

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Football Writer

Defending national champion Oklahoma and runnerup Michigan will begin the 1986 season the way they ended 1985 — as the 1-2 teams in the Associated Press college football poll.

And if history is any barometer, Oklahoma stands a good chance of being No. 1 when the final poll is taken on Jan. 2. The Sooners have been No. 1 six times in the preseason poll; on four of those occasions — 1956, 1974, 1975 and 1985 — they won national championships.

Oklahoma received 44 of 60 first-place votes and 1,171 of a possible 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters in results announced Saturday. That put the Sooners well ahead of Michigan, which had six first-place ballots and 1,016 points.

"I'm not surprised. I thought we would be (No. 1), us being the defending national champions," Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer said.

Switzer said the preseason No. 1 ranking would not create any added pressure. Oklahoma has been the preseason No. 1 choice four times in Switzer's previous 13 seasons as head coach and won three national championships.

"Everybody gets ready to play us even if we're not No. 1 just because of who we are," he said.

According to Switzer, the Sooners have looked good in the preseason workouts but the defensive line is a problem area.

"We've got a chance to be a really good offensive team," he said. "Our young people have improved and it looks like the offensive line might be better.

"But on the defensive line we're going to find out how much we miss (All-American nose guard) Tony Casillas. Did he make our other linemen look so good? Our ends, linebackers and the secondary are pretty good but we're just an average college football team on the defensive line."

The 1985 Sooners led the nation in total defense and pass defense and finished second in rushing and scoring defense.

Since the AP preseason poll began in 1950, the only teams besides Oklahoma to win national championships after being ranked No. 1 at the start of the season were Tennessee in 1951, Michigan State in 1952 and Alabama in 1978. However, no team has remained No. 1 through an entire season which included a preseason and-or postseason poll.

Miami of Florida, which was in the title picture until a 35-7 Sugar Bowl loss to Tennessee dropped the Hurricanes to ninth, is third in the preseason poll with one first-place vote and 976 points.

UCLA, which finished seventh a year ago, is fourth with three first-place votes and 972 points. The Bruins open the season by visiting Oklahoma on Sept. 6.

Alabama, which opens the season Wednesday night against Ohio State in the Kickoff Clssic, is fifth with 911 points. The Crimson Tide finished 13th in 1985.

Penn State, which ended the 1985 regular season No. 1 then slipped to third after losing to Oklahoma 25-10 in the Orange Bowl, starts 1986 in sixth place. The Nittany Lions received three first-place votes and 892 points.

Texas A&M, No. 6 last year, is seventh this time with one first-place vote and 871 points. Then comes Nebraska, 11th last year, in eighth place with one first-place vote and 826 points.

The other first-place vote went to Pitt but the Panthers were not mentioned on any other ballot and the lone vote was not nearly enough to get them into the Top Twenty.

Rounding out the preseason Top Ten are Ohio State and Tennessee. The Buckeyes, who finished 14th a year ago, are ninth with 673 points and Tennessee, the No. 4 team in 1985, is 10th with 578.

A pair of Top Ten teams from 1985 — No. 5 Florida and No. 10 Iowa — had to settle for the preseason Second Ten while Air Force, No. 8 in 1985, did not make the preseason Top Twenty.

Midland snuffs Robidoux in ninth for 5-3 verdict

From Staff Reports

EL PASO — Midland Angel reliever Larry Smith struckout El Paso's Billy Joe Robidoux with runners at first and third with two outs in the ninth inning to save a 5-3 Angel victory here Saturday night.

Robidoux had earlier hit a homer against the Angels. The Angels now own a 13-16 record this season against El Paso and have three games left with the West Division champions, including today's doubleheader.

The two teams will play a twinbill tonight to make up for a rained out

New Orleans defensive back Van Jakes gets past Houston's Willie Drewry (82) to tackle Steve Tasker (80) during NFL exhibition action Saturday in Houston.

Oilers defeat Saints to go 3-0

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's Mike Rozier bolted 68 yards for a touchdown and Warren Moon hit Willie Drewery with a 5-yard touchdown pass to lead the Oilers to a 24-13 NFL exhibition victory over New Orleans Saturday night.

The victory gave the Oilers a 3-0 start in exhibition play for the first time since 1969. The Saints dropped to 1-2.

Moon's third-quarter shot to Drewery raised Houston's lead to 24-10 and marked the first time this preseason that the Oilers had scored in the second half.

The Saints reached Houston's 3-yard line in the fourth quarter, but Saints quarterback Dave Wilson fumbled back to the 14 and recovered the ball to set up a 31-yard field goal by Morten Andersen with 10:09 to go in the game.

Rozier's 68-yard touchdown run in the second quarter helped propel Houston to a 17-10 halftime lead that also included a 1-yard touchdown run by Larry Moriarty and a 42-yard field goal by Tony Zendejas.

Andersen kicked a 37-yard, first-quarter field goal and quarterback Bobby Hebert scrambled 15 yards in the second quarter for a touchdown.

Zendejas ended a string of five consecutive successful field goals when he missed a 42-yarder in the second quarter.

Rozier's second-quarter touchdown run was a textbook display of open-field running. He sidestepped two runners and broke behind two more blocks en route to the end zone.

Hebert's touchdown came after he tried to pass into the right flat. He then scrambled back to his left, eluded linebacker Robert Lyles and ran into the end zone.

Rookie Reuben Mayes, who moved into a starting position when Earl Campbell retired earlier this week, gained 70 yards on 11 carries and rookie Dalton Hilliard added 114 yards on 13 carries.

Moon hit his first six passes of the game and finished with 16 completions on 21 attempts for 177 yards. Moon has completed 72 percent of his passes this preseason.

Hebert played the first half at quarterback for the Saints, completing two of eight passes for 32 yards.

Mustangs beat Grady in scrimmage

The Midland Christian Mustangs got their first taste of football action against an outside opponent Saturday, winning a six-man scrimmage over Grady's Wildcats by a 6-1 scoring margin.

The Mustangs' Tony Corona led the offensive charge, scoring on three touchdowns runs of 64, 26 and 13 yards. Corona also threw a 40-yard TD pass to David Johnson.

Kevin Wallum added an MC score with a 12-yard run and Rick Davis had a 15-yard scoring jaunt.

Mustang coach Homer Jackson was pleased with his team's effort, but downplayed the lopsided margin of victory.

"Grady has a young ball club. They've got one senior, two juniors and two sophomores and the rest of them were freshmen, so they're going to have a good one in future but not right now," said Jackson.

"I feel real good about it. Our kids executed real well and defense did real good. I have some kids who really stood out well on defense: Jamie Cloyd, Russ Pridemore, Coy Taylor and Wade Emmert."

Rape victim says state court system added insult to injury

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Her attacker was convicted and sentenced to 75 years, but the victim says the Texas court system tried her dignity in a way that the eight-hour ordeal of being held prisoner and repeatedly raped did not.

The 39-year-old Terlingua woman says she "felt filthier, dirtier, nastier after I walked off that stand than I did when I got raped."

She recalled the ordeal of repeating her story during the three-day aggravated sexual assault trial of the man convicted of attacking her, 22-year-old Refugio Gardea Gonzalez of Jimenez, Mexico.

Gonzalez stared at his victim as she recalled the evening of Oct. 26, 1985, when she was kidnapped from her home, repeatedly raped and robbed. His reply to the charges was that she lured him to her home with promises of sex, drugs, alcohol and money.

He was tried last week in San Angelo on a change of venue from Brewster County. Gonzalez fled to Ojinaga, Mexico, where he was jailed. Three unidentified, armed men kidnapped the defendant from the jail, and tied him naked to a tree in a roadside park on the U.S. side of the border after extradition efforts failed.

The victim's home, where the attack began, is next to the highway in desert mountain country, 15 minutes from the Mexican border.

"It was just a really beautiful night. It was just starting to get dark and the moon was going to be full. It was shining on the cactus garden and the desert behind my house," she said.

"It was so quiet that night; I never heard a sound."

She told how she had just returned home from performing with her small country and western band in Alpine.

"I was tired. I went out on the back patio and played my guitar for a short time. I was thinking about mistakes I made, and I thought they didn't mean that much," she said.

She said she stood up to stretch.

"Then someone grabbed me from behind. I screamed, and he jerked me back farther and stuck something sharp at my neck."

Describing the terror and her emotions, she recounted how her hands were tied behind her back, how she was blindfolded and gagged, and was dragged from her home through the brush and into the desert.

"I thought a monster had me," she said.

After a while, she said, Gonzalez removed her gag and blindfold.

"I kept my head turned away and my eyes closed. I tried to hold onto the fact that if I didn't see him he wouldn't kill me. He made me open my eyes, and I thought that he didn't really look like a monster...I tried to talk to him to let him know I was a real person," she said.

Then he laid a blanket he had taken from her home on the ground, and sexually assaulted her, she said.

Afterward he forced her to continue the trek through the desert until he again stopped, made her hold the blanket while he cut it into strips to tie her, and forced her to have sex again.

"After that, I thought he was going to leave me tied up in the desert. I was afraid of the animals out there, but I thought there's no way God will let a mountain lion eat me after I've survived all this," she said.

She said he forced her over the same rough ground leading back to her house, where he again sexually assaulted her.

He took her money and personal belongings, including a locket containing a photograph of her young son, her Veteran's of Foreign Wars women's auxiliary pin, a home-made cassette tape recording of some of her early music and a volunteer fire department cap, which he was wearing when he was finally arrested five miles inside Mexico.

He also had a photograph taken from her family album that showed her wearing the same cap.

"The people like him just come across the river and take what they want and swim back. They like to take trophies back to brag to their friends. Sometimes it's a finger, an ear, personal belongings or pictures," she said.

She said she believes no punishment exists under the state's sexual assault laws that can justify the psychological frustration caused by the exhaustive legal system she has battled in the year since the assault took place.

S.A. Holmes, Mojo tagged Nos. 1, 2

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

San Antonio Holmes has an old offense and a new title to start the 1986 Texas schoolboy season.

Coach Gary Malesky thinks opponents will be ready for the Huskies' pro style "run and shoot" offense that propelled them into the 1985 playoffs.

However, Holmes will go into 1986 with something new.

The Huskies will carry the banner as the team to beat in Class 5A as the No. 1 ranked team in The Associated Press Preseason Schoolboy Football Poll.

Holmes joins West Orange-Stark in 4A, defending state champion Daingerfield in 3A, Refugio in 2A and Wheeler in A as the No. 1 ranked teams in the classifications.

The Huskies surprised many teams last season when Malesky installed a diversified offense similar to the one popularized by Mouse Davis with the former USFL Houston Gamblers.

"We tried to have a different wrinkle in each game and hit them with it early," Malesky said. "They didn't know if they should rush in the passer or lay back. I think they'll be ready for us this year."

Quarterback Wilbur Odom, who triggered the offense last year with 2,800 passing yards, returns along with an outstanding complement of receivers, including Johnny Walker and twins Keither and Kerry Cash.

"We've got a great quarterback so we try to get him outside and let him read the defense," Malesky said.

Holmes received 13 of the 24 first place votes cast by the AP's panel of Texas sports writers and sportscasters, finishing with 218 points.

Odessa Permian, a state finalist last season, starts the season in the No. 2 position followed by Houston Cypress-Fairbanks and defending state champion Houston Yates.

Beaumont Central, a consolidation of Beaumont Charlton Pollard and Beraumont French, is ranked No. 5.

West Orange-Stark, led by running back Brian Cleveland, advanced to the Class 5A playoffs in a ruggest region last year but has dropped down in classification this season.

"We're having to fight a little apathy right now," said West Orange-Stark Coach Dan Hooks. "All our players have only been involved with the 5A program. They don't realize yet that the competitive level in 4A is pretty tough."

Hooks expects Cleveland, 5-11, 200, to be a big part of the Mustangs' offense this season.

"He's an all-purpose back," Hooks said. "He's an outstanding runner, a good blocker and a great pass receiver. There's no one quality that stands out over the rest, but put them all together and you've got a great prospect."

West Orange-Stark outpolled No. 2 Lubbock Estacado by a 213-202 point margin, the closest race of any class.

San Antonio Southwest, led by pass-happy quarterback Ty Ditmer, starts the season in the No. 3 spot followed by McKinney, Carthage, Dickinson, Corsicana, Cleburne, Bay City and Sulphur Springs.

Daingerfield, following a perfect 16-0 state title run last season, was the near-unanimous pick to repeat in Class 3A, netting 23 of the 24 first place votes.

Midland Lee Rebel Wade Claybrook gets a welcomed splash in the face during football workouts when temperatures soared above the 100-degree mark.

Rebs, 'Dogs don pads as Week 1 concludes

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Cloud cover and temperatures dropping below the 100-degree mark greeted Midland High and Midland Lee football teams Friday and Saturday as the two squads put on pads for the first time.

And both Lee coach Earl Miller and MHS boss Doug McCutchen liked what they saw when the pads starting popping.

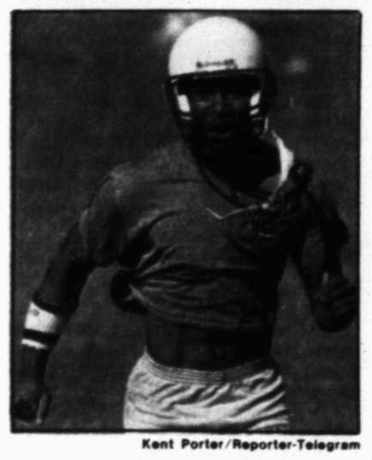

"We had good participation, good attitude and no slackers," reported Miller, who added, "I feel like we are further along knowledge-wise at this point than we usually are, but just how physical and tough we are is something we don't know yet. We hope to answer that question Thursday when we scrimmage Del Rio in Ozona."

McCutchen said, "Our kids have worked very hard under some extreme heat, but we feel like we've got a lot of learning, conditioning and repetition in. Now its just a matter of getting ready for our scrimmage with Pecos (Friday at Memorial Stadium.)"

Coming into the pre-season workouts, Miller was concerned with his situation at linebacker and offensive line positions where graduation ripped a huge hole. Miller is breathing a little easier after Week 1.

"It looks like we've got some kids who are going to take up the slack. Two kids we moved from the offense to play both ways, John Kendrick and Geoff Rich, have been looking good at linebacker. Kendrick is going to be better than adequate as a backup and Rich still needs to learn to take on a blocker better, but he's very good in pass coverage. Omar Mendoza, Greg Bick and Mike Acosta, our starters, are looking strong.

"The offensive line has surprised me a bit. The offense is ahead of the defense right now and the offensive line did a great job Saturday in our scrimmage in short yardage situations. They ate up the defense. Our defense still looks like cheese that has a lot of holes in it and smells bad."

Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

Lee's Rodney Johnson
...getting ready for fall

MILLER FELT last spring that his offensive backs, which include quarterback Rodney Johnson and halfbacks Joe Woodard and Durian Jenkins, would be the strength of the Lee team. He hasn't changed his mind. "They look awfully strong to me."

McCutchen, too, has progress to report and some surprises to boot.

"Our offense has shown a tremendous retention of plays from last spring, making it easier to get the repetition we needed in the early going. We've definitely got to get better defensively, but I think all we need is a lot of repetition. We've got a lot of young people on defense and they are going to have to do a good job of learning. Our kicking game is still our weakest area and our biggest concern," notes McCutchen.

"Cliff Coleman, a linebacker and running back, reported in great shape and has looked very good. Sterling Warren, an offensive tackle, is also looking strong and we were really pleased with David Malone (a center and defensive end), who missed spring training due to the baseball playoffs. David has come in strong and in shape."

McCutchen has been pleased with his quarterbacks Jaime Madrid and Jeff Somers. "It's still just like the spring. They're both right there. You can't ask much more from either of them."

BOTH SQUADS face an important week. Both have scrimmages, the only action either will see before the Sept. 5 openers when MHS will host Lubbock Monterey at Memorial Stadium and Lee travels to Lubbock Coronado.

On Tuesday at 6:30 p.m., Lee's players will be honored with a Kickoff Rally at the Lee Field, complete with barbeque, bands and pep squads. Then on Thursday, Lee travels to Ozona to face Del Rio at 6 p.m. in a controlled scrimmage. Lee will take only a split squad to Ozona while the rest will stay behind for a 6 p.m. scrimmage with Kermit on Friday.

MHS will hold its annual Super Dog Night in conjunction with its scrimmage with Pecos Friday at Memorial Stadium. A Fat Burger feed is planned for 6 p.m. with a rally to follow at 7 p.m. The scrimmage will start around 7:30 p.m.

This week will also be the last chance for Midland fans to purchase season tickets. Season tickets will be sold through 5 p.m. Friday at the Memorial Stadium ticket office.

Defending champion Sooners tagged No. 1

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Football Writer

Defending national champion Oklahoma and runnerup Michigan will begin the 1986 season the way they ended 1985 — as the 1-2 teams in the Associated Press college football poll.

And if history is any barometer, Oklahoma stands a good chance of being No. 1 when the final poll is taken on Jan. 2. The Sooners have been No. 1 six times in the preseason poll; on four of those occasions — 1956, 1974, 1975 and 1985 — they won national championships.

Oklahoma received 44 of 60 first-place votes and 1,171 of a possible 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters in results announced Saturday. That put the Sooners well ahead of Michigan, which had six first-place ballots and 1,016 points.

"I'm not surprised. I thought we would be (No. 1), us being the defending national champions," Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer said.

Switzer said the preseason No. 1 ranking would not create any added pressure. Oklahoma has been the preseason No. 1 choice four times in Switzer's previous 13 seasons as head coach and won three national championships.

"Everybody gets ready to play us even if we're not No. 1 just because of who we are," he said.

According to Switzer, the Sooners have looked good in the preseason workouts but the defensive line is a problem area.

"We've got a chance to be a really good offensive team," he said. "Our young people have improved and it looks like the offensive line might be better.

"But on the defensive line we're going to find out how much we miss (All-American nose guard) Tony Casillas. Did he make our other linemen look so good? Our ends, linebackers and the secondary are pretty good but we're just an average college football team on the defensive line."

The 1985 Sooners led the nation in total defense and pass defense and finished second in rushing and scoring defense.

Since the AP preseason poll began in 1950, the only teams besides Oklahoma to win national championships after being ranked No. 1 at the start of the season were Tennessee in 1951, Michigan State in 1952 and Alabama in 1978. However, no team has remained No. 1 through an entire season which included a preseason and-or postseason poll.

Miami of Florida, which was in the title picture until a 35-7 Sugar Bowl loss to Tennessee dropped the Hurricanes to ninth, is third in the preseason poll with one first-place vote and 976 points.

UCLA, which finished seventh a year ago, is fourth with three first-place votes and 972 points. The Bruins open the season by visiting Oklahoma on Sept. 6.

Alabama, which opens the season Wednesday night against Ohio State in the Kickoff Clssic, is fifth with 911 points. The Crimson Tide finished 13th in 1985.

Penn State, which ended the 1985 regular season No. 1 then slipped to third after losing to Oklahoma 25-10 in the Orange Bowl, starts 1986 in sixth place. The Nittany Lions received three first-place votes and 892 points.

Texas A&M, No. 6 last year, is seventh this time with one first-place vote and 871 points. Then comes Nebraska, 11th last year, in eighth place with one first-place vote and 826 points.

The other first-place vote went to Pitt but the Panthers were not mentioned on any other ballot and the lone vote was not nearly enough to get them into the Top Twenty.

Rounding out the preseason Top Ten are Ohio State and Tennessee. The Buckeyes, who finished 14th a year ago, are ninth with 673 points and Tennessee, the No. 4 team in 1985, is 10th with 578.

A pair of Top Ten teams from 1985 — No. 5 Florida and No. 10 Iowa — had to settle for the preseason Second Ten while Air Force, No. 8 in 1985, did not make the preseason Top Twenty.

Midland snuffs Robidoux in ninth for 5-3 verdict

From Staff Reports

EL PASO — Midland Angel reliever Larry Smith struckout El Paso's Billy Joe Robidoux with runners at first and third with two outs in the ninth inning to save a 5-3 Angel victory here Saturday night.

Robidoux had earlier hit a homer against the Angels. The Angels now own a 13-16 record this season against El Paso and have three games left with the West Division champions, including today's doubleheader.

The two teams will play a twinbill tonight to make up for a rained out

New Orleans defensive back Van Jakes gets past Houston's Willie Drewry (82) to tackle Steve Tasker (80) during NFL exhibition action Saturday in Houston.

Oilers defeat Saints to go 3-0

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's Mike Rozier bolted 68 yards for a touchdown and Warren Moon hit Willie Drewery with a 5-yard touchdown pass to lead the Oilers to a 24-13 NFL exhibition victory over New Orleans Saturday night.

The victory gave the Oilers a 3-0 start in exhibition play for the first time since 1969. The Saints dropped to 1-2.

Moon's third-quarter shot to Drewery raised Houston's lead to 24-10 and marked the first time this preseason that the Oilers had scored in the second half.

The Saints reached Houston's 3-yard line in the fourth quarter, but Saints quarterback Dave Wilson fumbled back to the 14 and recovered the ball to set up a 31-yard field goal by Morten Andersen with 10:09 to go in the game.

Rozier's 68-yard touchdown run in the second quarter helped propel Houston to a 17-10 halftime lead that also included a 1-yard touchdown run by Larry Moriarty and a 42-yard field goal by Tony Zendejas.

Andersen kicked a 37-yard, first-quarter field goal and quarterback Bobby Hebert scrambled 15 yards in the second quarter for a touchdown.

Zendejas ended a string of five consecutive successful field goals when he missed a 42-yarder in the second quarter.

Rozier's second-quarter touchdown run was a textbook display of open-field running. He sidestepped two runners and broke behind two more blocks en route to the end zone.

Hebert's touchdown came after he tried to pass into the right flat. He then scrambled back to his left, eluded linebacker Robert Lyles and ran into the end zone.

Rookie Reuben Mayes, who moved into a starting position when Earl Campbell retired earlier this week, gained 70 yards on 11 carries and rookie Dalton Hilliard added 114 yards on 13 carries.

Moon hit his first six passes of the game and finished with 16 completions on 21 attempts for 177 yards. Moon has completed 72 percent of his passes this preseason.

Hebert played the first half at quarterback for the Saints, completing two of eight passes for 32 yards.

Mustangs beat Grady in scrimmage

The Midland Christian Mustangs got their first taste of football action against an outside opponent Saturday, winning a six-man scrimmage over Grady's Wildcats by a 6-1 scoring margin.

The Mustangs' Tony Corona led the offensive charge, scoring on three touchdowns runs of 64, 26 and 13 yards. Corona also threw a 40-yard TD pass to David Johnson.

Kevin Wallum added an MC score with a 12-yard run and Rick Davis had a 15-yard scoring jaunt.

Mustang coach Homer Jackson was pleased with his team's effort, but downplayed the lopsided margin of victory.

"Grady has a young ball club. They've got one senior, two juniors and two sophomores and the rest of them were freshmen, so they're going to have a good one in future but not right now," said Jackson.

"I feel real good about it. Our kids executed real well and defense did real good. I have some kids who really stood out well on defense: Jamie Cloyd, Russ Pridemore, Coy Taylor and Wade Emmert."

Wild Watkins ties three for first place

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Lanny Wadkins holed out from off the green three times to produce a wildly erratic 70 that provided him with a share of the third-round lead Saturday in the $700,000 NEC World Series of Golf.

"It was a struggle all day...It was a lot more work than I wanted it to be," Wadkins said after he'd completed three trips over the Firestone Country Club course in 206, four under par.

He was tied with Dan Pohl, who fought the gusty, shifting, winds for a 1-over-par 71.

Donnie Hammond, who had a share of the lead the first two rounds, slipped to a 73 that included a string of three consecutive bogeys on the back. He was one off the pace at 207.

All three leaders, who played in the last threesome on the course, bogeyed the last hole after sitting out a 20-minute rain delay.

"The way I played, I don't even mind that bogey on the last hole," said Wadkins, a former winner of this elite event.

"Getting a 70 was like stealing. I got the most out of my round I possibly could," said Wadkins, who used only 21 putts for the day, only 7 on the back nine.

"I've got to go out and find a golf game tomorrow and hope I have a little more fun than I did today," Wadkins said.

But he was not alone in finding little fun in the difficult winds that turned the field of the world's finest players into an assortment of frustrated scramblers.

"I don't think I hit a green on the back side, but I made every putt I looked at," said Masters champion Jack Nicklaus, who kept alive his hopes for a sixth World Series of Golf title with a 69 that left him at 209, only three back going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $126,000 first prize.

Similar problems afflicted almost everyone else, none more severely than Curtis Strange, the 1985 leading money-winner.

He took a 10 on the par-5 16th. Strange drove into the trees, took a couple of shots to find his way out of the woods, hit his third in the water, played his next into the hazard, pitched over the green, eventually got on in eight and 2-putted. He had an 80.

But at least he got finished before the storm hit.

Only Wadkins, Hammonds and Pohl remained on the course when play was delayed. All rushed their tee shots, hit to the right and, the 20-minute wait, all bogeyed.

That dropped them one shot back, closer to Nicklaus.

"I've got a good shot if I play well tomorrow," Nicklaus said.

He was tied for fourth with Bernhard Langer of West Germany, South African Bobby Cole, John Mahaffey, and Corey Pavin.

Sewell-Campbell team up for Mission golf crown

From Staff Reports

Ken Sewell and Craig Campbell combined for a three-day score of 206 to win Mission Dorado's fourth annual Member-Guest golf tournament that concluded Saturday.

Sewell and Campbell put the finishing touches on the championship with a final round 70 Saturday after taking the tournament lead with a 66 on Friday. They had a 70 on Thursday, the tournament's first day.

Placing second was the team of Mickey Wilson and Bubba McKee, who finished three strokes off the winning pace at 209. Jim Sumner and Vince Vines carded a 210 for third place.

One of the tournament highlights was the three-day putting contest. Kelly Sewell won the putting crown, which carried along with it a prize for an all expenses paid trip to the Bahamas.

Top tournament winners are as follows:

Championship Flight: Ken Sewell-Craig Campbell 70-66-70-206; Mickey Wilson-Bubba McKee 72-69-68-209; Jim Sumner-Vince Vines 68-71-71-210.

Presidents Flight: Benny Wilson-Jim Anderson 67-71-69-207; Ray Chavez-Knobby Sanchez 72-76-64-212, John Bettis-Jeff Eubanks 66-76-73-215.

Second Flight: Ken Scott-Ken Garrison 73-73-72-218, Raymond Casey-Darren Casey 74-73-76-223, Jack Vineyard-Harold Prince 72-73-81-226.

Bleachers covered in time for Women's tournament

From Staff Reports

Those who attend the Labor Day weekend Slow Pitch tournament at the Bill Williams Softball Complex at Hogan Park will find it more pleasant to watch day games.

Bleachers at the two-year-old complex have received permanent coverings to protect spectators from the elements.

Midland's third and final major tournament of the summer, the ASA Bi-Region Women's Class B tournament, is scheduled for the complex Labor Day weekend.

To date, 19 teams from 11 Texas and Oklahoma cities are entered. MSA officials expect additional teams when late entries arrive in the mail early this week.

Fashion Floors, the seventh place finisher in this year's State Tournament, and Valero, which came in fifth, are the host teams. Ridgewood of Odessa, which won the state title, is another entrant.

Other strong entries include the Tulsa Express, runnerup in last year's Bi-Region, and Houston entries White Lightening and the Dreams.

Tournament play opens Saturday at 9 a.m. The championship game is set for Sunday at 2 p.m. Admission is $2 per session. A tournament pass, which includes all games, may be purchased for $5.

The tournament is being co-sponsored by the Midland Softball Association and the city of Midland Parks & Recreation Department.

Huskers' DeBose damages knee

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Two-time All-Big Eight Conference I-back Doug DuBose injured his left knee during Nebraska's first game-type scrimmage Saturday and may need surgery, Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne said.

DuBose, who had arthroscopic surgery on the same knee in February, injured his left knee on a 12-yard gain early in the second quarter.

"We'll have to wait and see, but he has a knee that is of a good deal of concern," Osborne said. "Doug is going to be very questionable for some time. It may be a situation where he'll need surgery."

Husker trainer George Sullivan said it will probably be at least Monday before the extent of the injury is known.

DuBose led all rushers in the scrimmage with 65 yards on four carries.

Freshman Terry Rodgers, the son of former Nebraska standout Johnny Rodgers, picked up 58 yards on nine carries, including a 26-yard touchdown.

Junior Keith Jones ran for 57 yards on nine carries.

Sophomore quarterback Steve Taylor completed six of 12 attempts for 124 yards passing, including a 55-yard touchdown pass to senior wingback Ray Nelson. Taylor also threw an interception.

The Huskers' top defensive unit was unscored upon in the scrimmage, while the lower units allowed three touchdowns. Dale Klein also connected on field goals of 50 and 52 yards.

Hatfield happy with Hogs' workout

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — The University of Arkansas football team on Saturday had its best practice so far this preseason, Coach Ken Hatfield said.

"Our players zipped through everything," Hatfield said. "We did more team stuff. Now they are ready for pads Monday."

Arkansas is ranked No. 19 in The Associated Press preseason college football poll, released Saturday.

The workout Saturday was the team's final drill in shorts and jerseys.

Hatfield said he was particularly pleased with the way the defensive backs broke on the ball, and complimented scout team quarterbacks Jay Cleveland, Kenny Kearns and Kenvin Lewis for throwing the ball well in pass drills.

"Kenny and Kenvin are freshmen and they have thrown well and can run the option, too," Hatfield said. "They should be able to give our defense a good look at what it will see this year and they have a lot of promise for the future."

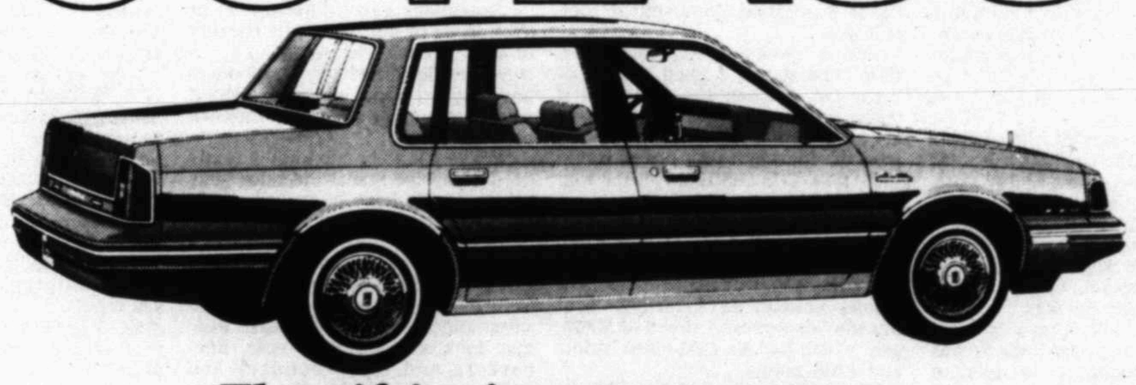

Hatfield said the most pleasant surprise of workouts in shorts was freshman wide receiver Tim Horton. "We need a third receiver and he is a natural for the position. That has helped us," he said.

Offensive tackle David Smart, who earned a starting job during the spring, also impressed Hatfield. "David is running well and has reported back in excellent condition. He looks like he's ready to have a good year for us," the coach said.

Wu Chun-Liang, the Taiwan pitcher, rushes past Tucson, Ariz., catcher Edward DeBaca to score after DeBaca drops the ball during Saturday's championship game of the Little League World Series.

Taiwan reclaims World Series title

By DAVID FALKNER
N.Y. Times News Service

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. — The 40th Little League World Series concluded here Saturday with All-American pageantry and an internationally flavored championship game between Tainan City of Taiwan and Tucson of Arizona.

Taiwan won, 12-0, the first time since 1981 that a team from that country had won here and the first time in 13 years that a team from Tainan City had taken the championship. Overall, though, the Taiwanese have won 11 Little League championships in 18 years and have never lost a championship game.

From the start, Saturday's game was no contest. A crowd of 32,000, frequently chanting "USA, USA," during the pregame warm-ups was stilled by a three-run Taiwanese burst in the first inning. Chen Ching-Chan hit the first of his two, two-run home runs and Wu Chun-Liang followed with another homer. Wu, who pitched a no-hitter against Canada last Wednesday, pitched a two-hitter, striking out 14, walking no one.

Afterwards, Wu was elated, but curiously preoccupied, saying, "I was very confident today — in my teammates and in myself."

An interpreter explained that if Wu seemed a bit edgy it was because two days after he was to return to Taiwan he was scheduled to begin study in a new school. He had just graduated from elementary school before the team's trip to Williamsport.

Long before the players took the field Saturday, the hill overlooking Lemade Stadium began to fill with spectators. As on previous days, children, using flat pieces of cardboard, slid down the steep grassy slopes. People stood in clusters exchanging Little League pins, some of which were colorfully and gaudily displayed on a range of outlandish hats. Through the early afternoon, under hazy skies, chairs and picnic blankets filled the open spaces on the hillside.

Bands and drill teams performed on the field, and then there was a "Parade of Champions" — the eight finalists in the series — led by the clowning antics of the Disney-like Phillie Phanatic.

Still later, there were events featuring sky-divers parachuting into the stadium with the day's game ball and brief appearances by Commissioner Peter Ueberroth of the major leagues and the Little League Foundation president, William Shea (the Shea Stadium Shea), who threw out the first ball. A recorded message from President Reagan was played shortly before game time.

For all the hoopla surrounding the event, the main focus of the day seemed to be on the team from Taiwan, whose winning tradition here has created a kind of tradition. There are no hulking million-dollar athletes behind this mystique, only 11- and 12-year-olds, many of whom were eager this week to visit a local department store where they could play video games. If there were mythic center-field plaques somewhere in Taiwan, they would probably include the names of Confucius, perhaps a representative of the Japanese Imperial Army, and a local fellow named Yang Chin-Lung.

"Baseball came to us from the Japanese occupation," explained the Tainan City manager, Lee Ming-Chen. "The Japanese emphasize 'fighting spirit' in their baseball training — and so do we."

At practice earlier in the week, during a warm-up period of throwing, one boy would suddenly shout a word (the Chinese equivalent of "Go!", "Yeah!", "Right on!," etc.) — and everyone else, like the chorus in a Greek drama, would echo him.

"We believe the most important thing in training is the emotion you bring. No emotion, no motion," manager Lee said. But technique is important in this equation — and that is where Confucius, so to speak, takes his turn at bat.

Accompanying the team to Williamsport was its "Leader" (so named in the official program), a school principal named Tsai Chung-Chen. The players all attend Tsai's school. Tsai, through an interpreter, emphasized the importance of education traditional, Confucian education.

"In school the children are taught to learn through repetitive exercises," Lee emphasized. "We apply the same philosophy to baseball through drills in fundamentals. The traditional education system is responsible for them being eager to learn how to play the game right. Because we are not big and strong, we must take this technical approach in order to succeed."

Yang Chin-Lung is a former Taiwanese student who went to the United States in 1981 and played college baseball. As a "student of the game," he was credited with bringing back new techniques to Taiwan that enabled the nation to field a team that won the bronze medal in the unofficial baseball phase of the 1984 Olympics.

This sense of purpose is perhaps the most important part of the "mystique." The players, in traditional Eastern fashion, play one for all and all for one — like the old village family. The family in this equation is the team, and the team is the nation. Wherever the Taiwanese team went last week, whether to the practice field or to the stadium, they marched behind a flag-bearer. Appropriately, it was the flag-bearer, Yen Hsin-Ho, who hit the game-saving home run against Venezuela in the semifinals Friday with Taiwan only one out from defeat.

Howard sets 'Hot' 100-mile bike pace

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — World cycling champion John Howard sped to a new course record Saturday as he out-pedaled the largest pack of entrants in the 5th annual Hotter 'N Hell Hundred bicycle race.

Howard, 39, of San Diego, Calif., surged past 19-year-old Kevin Cameron of Carrollton, Texas, toward the end of the event that garnered more than 6,700 entrants under cloudy skies and temperatures as high as 95 degrees.

The winning time on the 100-mile course through Wichita Falls and Burkburnett was four hours, one minute — well below the old record of 4:13 set by Scott Dickson of Fort Worth last year. Cameron's time was 4:02.

Howard holds the world's speed record for bicycle at 152 mph, is a seven-time U.S. Cycling Federation national champion and was on the U.S. Olympic cycling team three times.

"It was unreal. I was ahead for a long time, and all of a sudden he caught me and went by," said Cameron. "I couldn't believe the size of the crowd either. This is really a surprise, almost beating a national champ."

Hotter 'N Hell director Roby Christie said Cameron almost wasn't allowed in the speed race.

"We made an exception for him. He failed to fill out his form as to which race he was in. I scolded him, but I'm happy we let him in, now," Christie said.

Mark Switzer finished third, Chip Hipps of Dallas was fourth, and Bob Byrd of Dallas was fifth.

Contest officials reported few injuries — mostly heat prostration — and said the worst was a broken collarbone.

China leads Seniors team golf tourney

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — The Republic of China posted a 36-hole score of 424 for a four-stroke victory over the Philippines in the 24th annual World's Senior Golf Team tournament at the Broadmoor Country Club on Saturday.

Following the Phillippines at 428 was Ecuador at 429, Panama at 431 and Switzerland at 432.

The United States, which shared the title with the Philippines last year, wound up tied for 13th with Canada, both at 442.

The lowest individual score was posted by Bill Waggener, 57, of Denver, with a 3-over-par 147. Jim Vickers, 57, of Indian Wells, Calif., was at 148. Bill Trombley, 62, of Dallas, and John Andersson, 64, of Stockholm Sweden, tied at 149.

Individual scoring in the team play tournament served as qualifying for the 26th annual World's Senior Match Play tournament that begins Monday.

No. 1 pick of '55 believes 'a deal's a deal'

By ALAN BURTON

SHERMAN (AP) — Coming out of the University of Oklahoma as an All-American receiver, Max Boydston was held in high esteem by the National Football League in 1955.

So much so that the Chicago Cardinals made him the league's No. 1 draft choice that season.

But it was a little different from today's Herschel Walker, multi-year, million dollar contracts full of incentive clauses.

"I got a signing bonus of $1,000 and a salary of $10,000. It seemed like a lot at the time," Boydston said.

"Right after that, I remember Edmonton (Canadian Football League) called and offered to double my salary, Sure, I had second thoughts, but I was brought up to believe that when you shake hands, a deal's a deal. I don't believe in all of this renegotiation of contracts."

Boydston, who's about to start his fifth year as a coach/teacher at Piner Middle School in Sherman, was plagued by injuries during his eight-year professional career. The most money he ever earned in a season was between about $15,000, he said.

Boydston played four seasons with Chicago, one year with Hamilton of the Canadian League, and two seasons with the AFL Dallas Texans. He completed his career in 1962 with Oakland's Raiders.

While with Chicago, Boydston became the NFL's first tight end. Shoulder and knee injuries made him more of a blocker than receiver, and he learned to play end on both sides of the offensive formation. His blocking role eventually evolved into that of the tight end.

Boydston's career in Canada was halted after he received a phone call from Dallas.

"I was up in Muskogee running a business when Lamar Hunt called," Boydston said. "Then I called up to Hamilton and told them I thought that Dallas would be a nicer place to play than Canada."

Boydston was a player-coach with the Texans before leaving to make room for a young tight end named Fred Arbansas. He took on similar duties in Oakland for the one year.

"I retired about once a year," Boydston joked. "And I'd had about every injury. I'd probably played the next year but that was when Al Davis took over the Oakland club. He sent me a contract for about $4,000 less than what I made the year before."

Not playing in 1963 is the one regret Boydston has when fondly reminiscing about his days on the gridiron.

"If I'd played that year, I'd have had nine years on my retirement benefits," he explained. "But I don't have anything — except some free passes I get from Jerry Tubbs (former teammate and now Dallas Cowboy assistant) every year."

Boydston is unlucky in the fact that after the AFL-NFL merger, a player's association retirement fund was established and made retroactive for players back to 1963.

Despite that, Boydston doesn't begrudge the high salaries paid to today's players.

"I'm glad they're getting it," he said. "I think the owners are dumb (for paying such high salaries), but I think it's the agents who are the most overpaid. When I played, we'd never heard of an agent. But the thing that is troubling to me is when you look at all the players that played before I did and really got beat up physically. Many of them are destitute — penniless — that's a shame."

"The players are more self-centered," Boydston observed. "We were more modest and really just glad to be there. But what bothers me more than anything else is these guys that get in trouble with drugs and alcohol. I think they have a responsibility to the fans and kids. They owe it to the kids to set a good example."

LSU goes on without Dalton-James gang

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Surviving without the Dalton-James gang and pushing on despite NCAA allegations of wrongdoing, Louisiana State University is expected to do well — but not spectacularly — in the 1986 Southeastern Conference football battles.

Dalton Hilliard and Garry James, both four-year starters and key men in LSU's running attack, are now National Football League rookies.

LSU may have a partial remedy for the loss of the two in Harvey Williams, hotly recruitted high school prospect from Hempstead, Texas, who unabashedly says he wants a starting running back spot.

But new recruits won't help the situation with the NCAA, whose Committee on Infractions recently heard LSU's side of the story after investigators accused the school of 26 recruiting violations in the football program from 1980 to 1986.

LSU has denied 10 allegations and claimed six others should be discounted because they date beyond the statute of limitations for NCAA violations. LSU claims the remaining 10 violations are minor.

The committee's decision on the severity of the violatons and the appropriate penalty could come by the end of August. LSU will have the right to appeal.

Meanwhile, the focus is on preparation for the ecoming season.

A pre-season poll picked LSU to be among the six schools that have a shot at winning the SEC championship this year, but picked them to finish at the bottom of the elite — No. 6.

Williams is hoping to help better the team's chances. "I expect to start, definitely," he said in a recent interview.

Freshman Derrick Saulsberry, would like to be starting at linebacker, but will have to settle for wide receiver. The recruit from Thibodaux learned recently that LSU Coach Bill Arnsparger planned to move him to that position.

Saulsberry said he probably wouldl have signed with another school had he known he wouldn't have a shot at running back. Now he plans to make the best of the situation.

"I've just got to get used to it," he said. "It might work out for the best. I might enjoy playing wide receiver."

LSU also must replace quarterback Jeff Wickersham, who sprinkled his name all over the school's passing records as a three-year starter.

Fifth-year senior Doug Powell, sophomore Mickey Guidry and redshirt freshman Tom Hodson have the benefit of some experience as LSU signal callers, but freshman Leonard Valentine and Sol Graves have the high school credentials to indicate they could also challenge.

LSU finished last season 9-1-1 before a 21-7 loss to Baylor in the Liberty Bowl.

Senior linebacker Roland Barbay said LSU can gain vengeance on the Southwest Conference on Sept. 13 against Texas A&M. It will also be a chance to start proving the pollster's wrong about the No. 6 ranking.

Byner, Kosar carry Browns past Falcons, 27-21

ATLANTA — Earnest Byner scored three touchdowns and Bernie Kosar threw for two scores as the Cleveland Browns downed the Atlanta Falcons 27-21 Saturday night.

Byner scored on runs of 13 and 8 yards and on a 9-yard pass from Kosar as the unbeaten Browns claimed their third consecutive preseason victory.

Kosar, who engineered scoring drives on three of Cleveland's first four possessions, also had a 15-yard touchdown pass to Clarence Weathers.

Kosar completed 15 of 21 passes for 222 yards in the first half, then threw incomplete twice in the first series of the third quarter and sat out the rest of the game.

Kevin Mack had 100 yards on 10 carries for the Browns, setting up one score with a 23-yard scamper to the Atlanta 9.

David Archer, playing only one half, accounted for two touchdowns for the Falcons, 2-1.

Archer scored on a 5-yard bootleg keeper and fired a 31-yard pass to Keith Williams, both in the second quarter. He completed 10 of 14 passes for 178 yards and had 28 yards on four carries.

The Falcons added another touchdown with only 1:18 remaining on Turk Schonert's 11-yard pass to Floyd Dixon.

Atlanta's William Andrews, making a comeback after missing two seasons because of knee surgery, had 44 yards on 11 carries.

Bengals 34, Packers 12

CINCINNATI — Running back James Brooks scored on an 11-yard swing pass from Boomer Esiason and a 20-yard touchdown sprint to lead Cincinnati to a victory over Green Bay.

Brooks' catch and weaving run put the Bengals ahead to stay late in the first quarter. He eluded several tacklers on his third-quarter touchdown run for a 17-3 lead that eased Cincinnati toward its first victory in three NFL preseason games. The Packers also are 1-3.

Esiason provided the comfortable final margin with a 24-yard touchdown pass to tight end Rodney Holman and a 5-yarder to Eric Kattus in the fourth quarter. Jim Breech kicked field goals of 25 and 35 yards for Cincinnati.

Esiason played most of the game — his longest preseason performance — completing 15 of 28 throws for 241 yards without an interception. Packer defenders dropped three prospective interceptions in the first half.

The Bengals took a 10-3 lead in the ragged first half. The Bengals had several first-down gains called back by penalty — they were flagged eight times for 65 yards in the half. The Packers sputtered under missed opportunities.

Neither team sustained an offensive drive until Esiason led the Bengals 80 yards in eight plays shortly before the end of the first quarter. Brooks took a short toss from Esiason and went into the end zone standing up for the 11-yard score.

Redskins 21, Bucs 13

TAMPA, Fla. — Todd Bowles returned an interception 26 yards for a touchdown and Kelvin Bryant and Rick Badanjek scored on runs of 22 and 2 yards, respectively, as the Washington Redskins came back to defeat the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

Bowles, a reserve free safety, picked off a Steve DeBerg pass intended for Bucs tight end Calvin Magee and raced into the end zone untouched to get the Redskins untracked with 2:57 left in the second quarter.

The Bucs had dominated the game up to that point, building a 13-0 lead with the help of Ivory Sully and Craig Curry interceptions of Washington quarterback Jay Schroeder and a pair of costly penalties against Redskins cornerback Vernon Dean.

Badanjek's touchdown run, giving Washington a 14-13 lead with 10:09 remaining in the third quarter, capped an eight-play, 44-yard march after Redskins cornerback Barry Wilburn recovered a Magee fumble.

Bryant, making his NFL debut after three seasons in the USFL, put the game away with his TD run with 4:58 left to play.

The triumph before a crowd of 45,136 which saw ex-Bucs quarterback Doug Williams make his debut in a Washington uniform boosted the Redskins' preseason record to 2-1.

Tampa Bay, which scored on DeBerg's 17-yard touchdown pass to Gerald Carter and two Donald Igwebuike field goals, dropped to 0-3.

Dolphins 20, Eagles 15

PHILADELPHIA — Second-year running back Lorenzo Hampton scampered 19 yards with the go-ahead touchdown in the third quarter, as Miami held Philadelphia scoreless in the second half to post the victory.

Hampton's touchdown with 8:22 left in the third period gave the Dolphins a 17-15 lead and climaxed an 80-yard drive engineered by backup quarterback Don Strock, who played the second half in relief of Dan Marino.

Marino, who threw two interceptions in only six attempts in last week's loss to the Cleveland Browns, was sharper against the Eagles. He completed 10 of 17 passes for 123 yards and one touchdown.

A field goal by Fuad Reveiz, a 21-yarder with 13:19 left in the fourth quarter, gave the Dolphins, 1-2, their final margin.

Giants 20, Jets 16

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Rookie cornerback Mark Collins returned the opening kickoff 97 yards for a touchdown and Harry Carson intercepted two passes as the New York Giants downed the New York Jets.

Collins, a second-round draftee from Fullerton State, took Pat Leahy's kickoff at the 3, charged up the middle and broke free at the 30. He sped to his left and raced to the end zone.

The Giants put together their only decent drive of the game on their next possession, going 63 yards in 13 plays to a 1-yard score by Lee Rouson. The Jets' defense held the Giants out of the end zone the rest of the way before 73,882 fans who sat through a heavy rainstorm in the second half.

But Carson's interceptions set up field goals of 46 and 41 yards by newly signed Bob Thomas in the second half, making it 20-9.

The Jets closed within four points as backup quarterback Pat Ryan engineered a 94-yard drive, beginning with the final play of the third quarter. Ryan hit rookie wide receiver Michael Harper for 48 yards over Collins on a third-and-17 from the 10. Johnny Hector picked up the final 16 yards with three runs, scoring from the 1.

Hector had 80 yards on 13 carries in just over one half of action.

Colts 20, Lions 13

INDIANAPOLIS — A fumble recovery and an interception set up two second-quarter touchdown passes from Gary Hogeboom to Wayne Capers as the Indianapolis Colts took a victory over the Detroit Lions.

The Colt defense also set up a fourth-quarter, 43-yard field goal by Raul Allegre following a fumble by Detroit backup quarterback John Witkowski at the Lion 29. The game ended with Indianapolis at the Detroit 3 following another interception in the closing minutes.

Hogeboom's touchdown passes of 39 and two yards to Capers and a 35-yard field goal by Allegre, all within the last six minutes of the second quarter, helped the Colts to a 17-6 lead. Detroit's only scores through most of the first three periods came on a pair of field goals by Eddie Murray.

Joe Ferguson, who replaced Detroit starter Eric Hipple late in the second quarter, brought the Lions within 17-13 with a 20-yard scoring pass to Pete Mandley late in the third period.

After Allegre's second field goal with 5:24 to go, the last Detroit threat ended at midfield when John Holt intercepted a Witkowski pass with two minutes remaining. It was his second interception of the game.

Both teams are 1-2 in the preseason.

Bills 13, Chiefs 6

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Ron Pitts returned an interception 76 yards for a touchdown as the Buffalo Bills defeated the Kansas City Chiefs.

Scott Norwood kicked a 21-yard field goal with 11:40 left in the fourth quarter and added a 38-yard kick with 2:05 left to go for the Bills, 1-2.

Nick Lowery kicked field goals of 36 yards and 21 yards for the Chiefs, 2-1.

Pitts picked off a Todd Blackledge pass and ran it back for a touchdown with 43 seconds left in the first half for a 7-3 Buffalo lead.

Kansas City had a first down on the Buffalo 2 late in the third quarter, but had to settle for Lowery's 21-yard field goal with 1:01 left in the period.

Broncos 14, 49ers 9

DENVER — Backup quarterback Scott Stankavage directed two second-half scoring drives, the final one capped by Steve Sewell's 1-yard run with 42 seconds remaining, as the Denver Broncos rallied to defeat the San Francisco 49ers.

Ray Wersching had kicked three field goals to keep the 49ers, who mounted only one sustained drive, ahead most of the game.

Wersching's third kick, a 32-yarder late in the third quarter, came at the end of a seven-play, 69-yard drive highlighted by Jeff Kemp's 46-yard pass to Carl Monroe, and gave the 49ers a 9-7 advantage.

The 49ers needed to march only 26 and 23 yards for a pair of second quarter field goals by Wersching.

Midway through the final quarter, following an exchange of turnovers deep in Denver territory, the Broncos began a drive from their own 13-yard line.

Stankavage — the third Denver quarterback to see action following John Elway, who suffered a minor groin injury, and Ken Karcher, who was ineffective — capitalized on four San Francisco penalties on that drive. Rookie Ken Bell's 22-yard run was a key play of the drive, which ended when Sewell ripped off the right side for the clinching TD.

St. Louis 14, Chicago 7

CHICAGO — Neil Lomax threw a nine-yard touchdown pass to Ottis Anderson with 24 seconds left in the first half and the St. Louis Cardinals held on through a scoreless second half to defeat the Super Bowl champion Chicago Bears.

The loss was the first in four preseason games for the Bears. St. Louis is 2-2.

There were several fights early in the first half and, with 4:40 left in the third quarter, a major fight broke out that resulted in the ejection of four players.

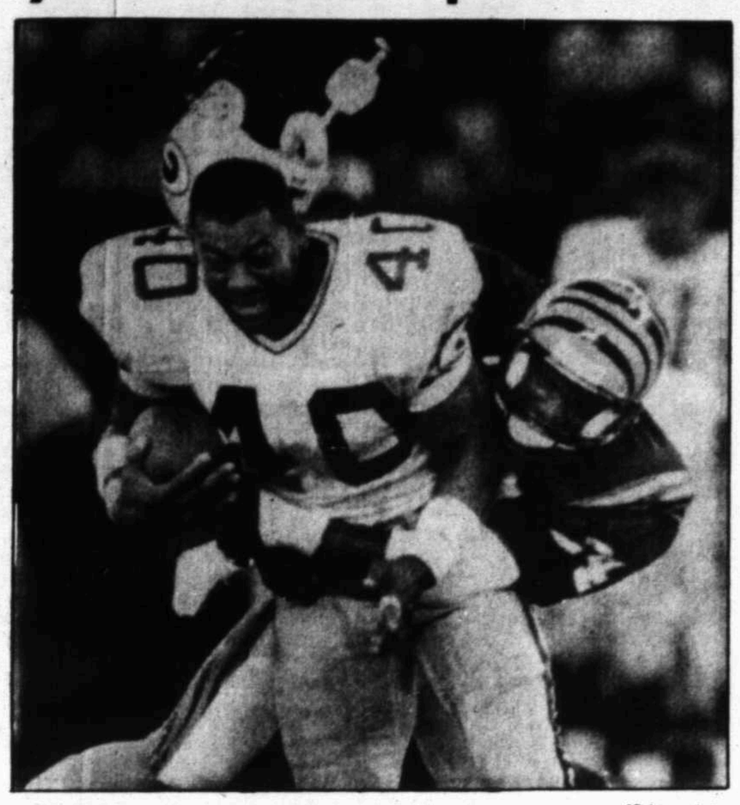

Offensive lineman Keith Van Horne of the Bears was ejected along with Cardinals Anderson, Lionel Washington and Charlie Baker.

Bear tight end Pat Dunsmore was nailed on the Cardinal side of the field and was pummeled by Cardinal players while the fans pelted the players with beer and garbage.

It took nearly 10 minutes to restore order. At one point, Cardinal Coach Gene Stallings appeared to call his players off the field. Several Cardinals left but then returned.

All the scoring occurred in the first half. The Cardinals struck first when wide receiver Roy Green took a lateral from Lomax and hit J.T. Smith with a 31-yard touchdown pass with 5:35 left in the first quarter.

Thirty seconds later, Mike Tomczak, making his first start, threw a 23-yard touchdown pass to Willie Gault.

Midland earned the victory in the top of the ninth when Pete Coachman connected for his fifth homer of the year, a two-run shot to left. That gave Midland a 5-2 lead and sealed the win.

Pat Keedy and Montanari each had three hits to pace the 10-hit Midland attack. Price picked up the win to go 3-1 while Smith got his first save.

Soft hitting Buechele play hero for Rangers, 3-1

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Texas third baseman Steve Buechele, batting only .176 in his last 41 games, broke a scoreless tie with a two-run single in the fifth inning as the Rangers and rookie right-hander Jose Guzman beat the Chicago White Sox 3-1 Saturday night.

Buechele's game-winner came off veteran left-hander Steve Carlton, 1-2, who went 6⅓ innings and allowed six hits and three runs.

Guzman, 9-11, broke a personal three-game losing streak, allowing one run and seven hits in 7⅓ innings. Mitch Williams got the last five outs for his fourth save.

Guzman and Williams were helped by four double plays, and Guzman also picked off Tim Hulett in the fourth inning.

Carlton gave up only one hit through the first four innings, a single to center by Buechele with two outs in the third.

But with one out in the fifth, Larry Parrish and Don Slaught hit consecutive singles and they both moved into scoring position on a groundout before Buechele lined a single up the middle.

The White Sox cut the deficit to 2-1 in the sixth on leadoff singles by Ozzie Guillen, Russ Morman and Brian Giles. But with one out and runners at first and third, a double play again got Guzman off the hook.

The Rangers got their final run in the seventh on Parrish's leadoff double and a triple by Ruben Sierra, his ninth of the season, high in the American League. Sierra, a rookie, has played in only 74 games.

After the triple, Bobby Thigpen relieved Carlton, who walked two and struck out three, raising his career total to 4,011.

Indians 5, Red Sox 4

CLEVELAND — Pinch hitter Andre Thornton singled with the bases loaded in the ninth inning as the Cleveland Indians snapped a four-game losing streak and defeated Boston for the first time this season.

Boston, which lost for only the third time in 11 games, had won the first eight meetings between the teams and 11 straight over two years.

Bob Stanley, 5-5, the third Boston pitcher, surrendered the game-winning hit on an 0-1 pitch. Tom Candiotti, struck out two and walked two in 7⅔ innings before Ernie Camacho, 2-2, relieved in the eighth with a 4-1 lead he failed to hold.

American League

Orioles 4, Angels 2

BALTIMORE — Cal Ripken and Jim Traber hit first-inning home runs and Fred Lynn hit a homer in fifth to account for all of Baltimore's runs in a win victory over the California Angels.

After California took a 2-0 lead against Mike Flanagan in the first, Ripken and Traber hit two-out homers in the bottom of the inning to stake the Orioles to a 3-2 lead. Ripken, who had three hits, hit a solo shot for his 19th homer, then Eddie Murray walked before Traber hit rookie Ray Chadwick's first pitch over the fence in right.

In 32 games since being called up to the majors on July 18, Traber has 10 home runs and driven in 32 runs.

Lynn added Baltimore's fourth run leading off the fifth. He battled off 11 Chadwick pitches before hitting a towering drive into the bleachers in right.

Flanagan, 7-8, survived a rough first inning. He surrendered four hits in the inning and two runs on a George Hendrick single. But after the first, Flanagan allowed just three hits and one walk before leaving with two out in the seventh. Don Aase finished up to get his major-league-leading 31st save.

Chadwick, 0-3, allowed six hits in five innings, walked two and hit another batter.

A's 2, Yankees 1

NEW YORK — Jose Canseco broke an 0-for-40 slump, the longest in the major leagues this season, with a ninth-inning RBI double to lead the Oakland A's to a victory over the New York Yankees.

Aldredo Griffin led off the ninth with an infield hit to third off Dave Righetti, 7-7, and went to second on Carney Lansford's sacrifice bunt. Canseco, who hadn't had a hit since Aug. 8 and struck out three times against starter Ron Guidry, doubled to right for his American League-leading 95th RBI.

Curt Young, 10-8, allowed eight hits in eight innings, including Willie Randolph's third homer, a solo shot in the sixth. Young, 3-0 against New York, struck out six and walked none in eight innings. Jay Howell pitched the ninth for his 12th save.

Tigers 14, Mariners 0

DETROIT — Darnell Coles drove in five runs and Frank Tanana pitched a seven-hitter for his 28th career shutout as the Detroit Tigers routed the Seattle Mariners.

Tanana, 10-6, who walked two and struck out a season-high 10 batters, retired the first 10 hitters before yielding a single to Phil Bradley. By that time, the Tigers had given Tanana a 9-0 lead against Mariners starter Mike Brown, 4-5, and reliever Karl Best.

In the first, Gibson singled between walks to Lou Whitaker and John Grubb before Coles cleared the bases with a two-out double.

The Tigers increased the lead to 6-0 in the second when Chet Lemon drew a leadoff walk, took second on a grounder and scored on Alan Trammell's single. Gibson followed with a line drive into the lower deck in right field for his 20th homer of the season.

Blue Jays 7, Twins 4

MINNEAPOLIS — Lloyd Moseby's home run was the first of a team-record eight straight hits in Toronto's six-run first inning and the Blue Jays held on for a victory over Minnesota.

The beneficiary of the barrage was Toronto starter John Cerutti, 7-3, who allowed three runs on six hits in 5⅔ innings.

After Blue Jays reliever Luis Aquino came in and surrendered Mark Salas' pinch-hit triple and Randy Bush's pinch RBI double to get Minnesota within 6-4 in the sixth, Mark Eichhorn pitched 3 1-3 hitless innings for his seventh save.

Rick Leach, who went 3-for-4, closed out the scoring with an eighth-inning homer, his fourth of the year.

Loser Mike Smithson, 9-12, opened the game by retiring Tony Fernandez and Willie Upshaw on pop-ups. Then, in a 20-pitch span, he yielded seven line-drive hits to all fields.

Moseby crushed the first of those pitches over the center field fence for his 18th homer, marking the fourth straight season that he has hit that many.

Brewers 8, Royals 4

MILWAUKEE — Rob Deer hit his 29th home run and Robin Yount and Ben Oglivie had three hits each, pacing Milwaukee's 16-hit attack as the Brewers defeated Kansas City.

Dan Plesac, 9-6, who replaced Milwaukee starter Chris Bosio in the fifth, pitched 3⅓ innings of two-hit relief for the victory.

Kansas City went ahead 1-0 in the first on George Brett's run-scoring groundout. The Brewers tied the score in the bottom of the first on a double by Yount and Oglivie's RBI single, but the Royals went ahead 3-1 in the second on Jamie Quirk's RBI groundout and Greg Pryor's run-scoring single.

Milwaukee chased Mark Gubicza, 7-6, with four runs in the bottom of the second. Rick Cerone hit a two-run single, Yount singled home Cerone and Cecil Cooper's RBI double gave Milaukee a 5-3 lead.

Kingery's second homer of the season pulled the Royals to 5-4 in the fourth but the Brewers broke open the game with three runs in the fifth. Deer followed Oglivie's leadoff single with a two-run homer and Cerone later added a sacrifice fly, giving him three RBI for the game.

McCallum keeps WBA crown

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Mike McCallum of Jamaica retained his World Boxing Association junior middleweight title Saturday by stopping Julian Jackson of the U.S. Virgin Islands in the second round.

Following them, Colombia's Miguel "Happy" Lora was scheduled to defend his World Boxing Council bantamweight title against Enrique Sanchez of the Dominican Republic. Lora was 24-0 with 12 knockouts, while Sanchez was at 43-3 with 31 knockouts.

In what was billed as "the Caribbean War" between McCallum and Jackson, McCallum knocked him down with a left jab early in the second round and after the eight-count, moved in to finish Jackson off.

McCallum peppered him with punches against the rope, allowed him to escape, then pinned him against the ropes again.

Jackson couldn't put up any resistance, and referee Eddie Eckert stepped in to stop the fight at 2:03 of the second rund.

McCallum, now 27-0, hadn't made a defense since retaining the WBA title July 28, 1985, with an eighth-round knockout of Dwight Braxton in Miami. Jackson lost for the first time after 29 wins.

Waltrip wins Busch

BRISTOL, Tenn. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip continued his domination of Bristol International Raceway on Saturday night, taking the lead with 143 laps left and cruising to an 8.7-second triumph over Terry Labonte in the Busch 500 NASCAR Winston Cup race.

The victory was the 10th of Waltrip's career on the .533-mile, high-banked oval, a feat unmatched by anyone else on the Winston Cup Circuit. Cale Yarborough has nine victories at Bristol.

Waltrip, of Franklin, Tenn., earned $41,725 for the win, his second of the season and the 69th of his career.

"They're far and few between, but they're sweeter this way," said Waltrip, the defending Winston Cup champion who is second in this year's points race behind Dale Earnhardt.

Smiling outside. Crying within.

Often we live behind a mask. We hide our feelings, our problems, our emotions deep within ourselves, afraid to let them out. By not honestly dealing with our true emotions, we ultimately suffer. Depression sets in. Relationships flounder. We're robbed of the joys life should bring.

On August 15th, Permian General Hospital established a comprehensive mental health management unit within the hospital offering quality care for emotional disorders on an in and outpatient basis.

Because mental health care is sometimes misunderstood, all patient contacts and treatments are handled in the strictest of confidence. And because our mental health unit is found within the confines of a full-service hospital, the cost for treatment is covered by most hospitalization insurance plans.

Living behind a mask can rob you of the joy and happiness you deserve. Learn to feel the warmth life has to offer.

Baseball Today

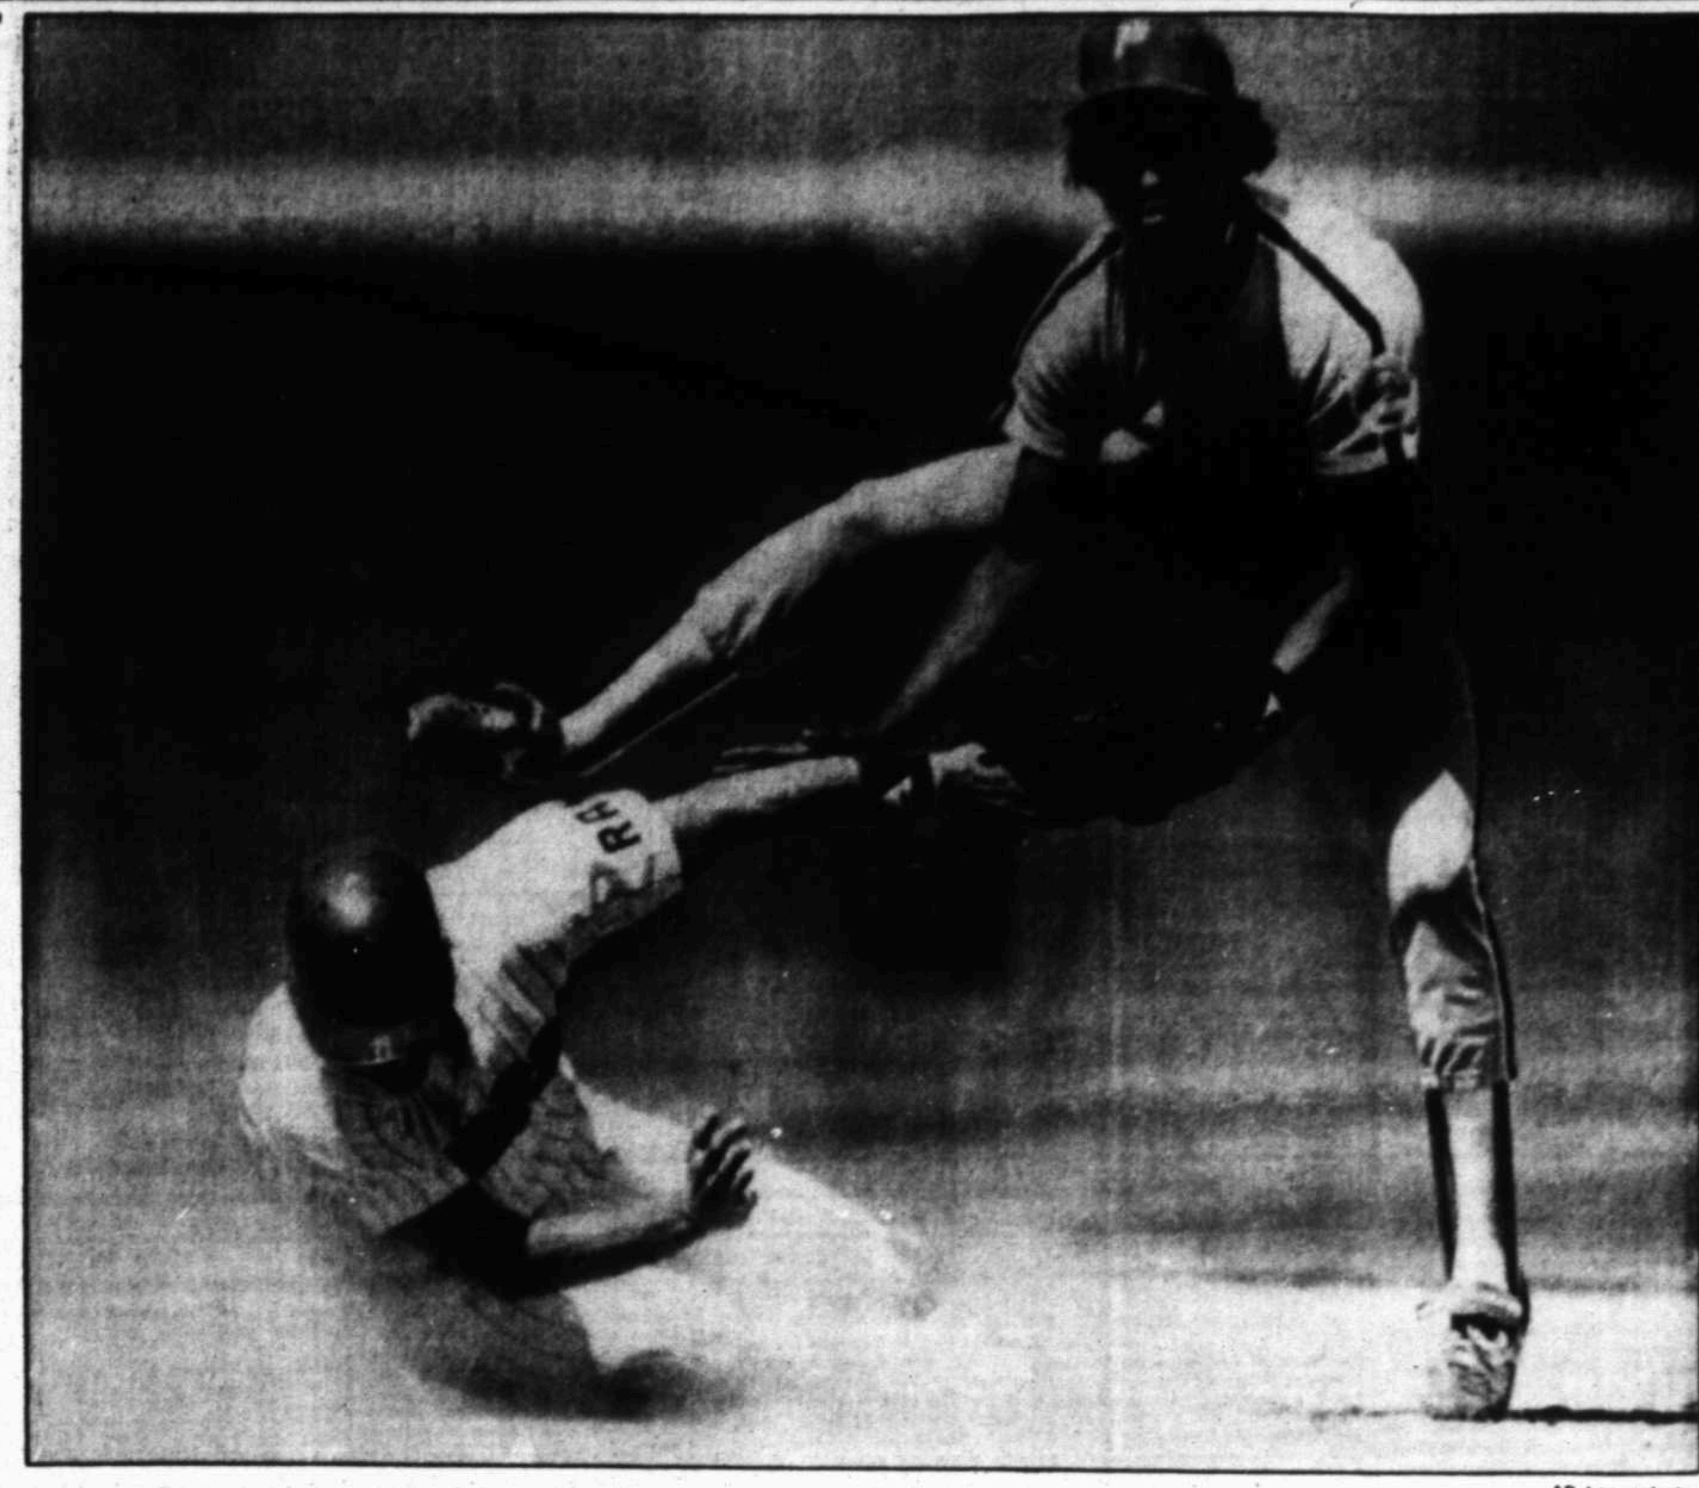

August 24

1940 — Outfielder Ted Williams pitched the last two innings for the Boston Red Sox against Detroit at Fenway Park. He allowed one run on three hits, but struck out Rudy York on three pitches. The Tigers, behind Tommy Bridges, won 12-1.

1943 — The Philadelphia Athletics lost their 20th straight game by dropping the opener of a doubleheader against the Chicago White Sox, but snapped the losing streak by winning the nightcap 8-1.

1971 — Ernie Banks hit the 512th and final home run of his career as the Chicago Cubs beat the Cincinnati Reds 5-4. Banks' shot came off Jim McGlothin in the first inning.

1975 — Ed Halicki of San Francisco hurled a 6-0 no-hitter against the New York Mets to lead the Giants to a sweep of a doubleheader.

Astros lose third straight, 7-1

Cards' Cox checks Houston on six hits

Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Danny Cox pitched a six-hitter for his fourth complete game as the St. Louis Cardinals beat Houston 7-1 Saturday night, handing the Astros their third straight loss.

With the score tied 1-1 in the sixth, Ozzie Smith drew a walk from Mike Scott, 13-9, and stole his 25th base. Tom Herr followed with a high hopper that fell among Scott, first baseman Glenn Davis and second baseman Jim Pankovits and rolled to the edge of the infield as Smith raced home.

Curt Ford followed with a triple to make it 3-1.

Cox, 8-10, struck out four and walked four as St. Louis won for the 14th time in its last 15 home games.

Houston, which despite the loss mainained its seven-game lead in the National League West, scored in the third when Scott and Billy Hatcher singled and Craig Reynolds grounded into a double play.

St. Louis had taken a 1-0 lead in the second when Ford walked with one out and scored on Terry Pendleton's two-out triple.

The Cardinals added four runs in the eighth on RBI hits by Ford, Pendleton and Mike LaValliere, who had a two-run double.

Mets 3, Giants 2

SAN FRANCISCO — Left-hander Bob Ojeda scattered five hits over eight innings and Keith Hernandez hit a two-run single to lead the New York Mets to their sixth straight win, beating the slumping San Francisco Giants.

Ojeda, 14-4, who had nine strikeouts and three walks, fell behind on an unearned run in the fourth inning against the Giants, who have lost six of their last seven games. Roger McDowell pitched the ninth inning for his 16th save.

Will Clark walked with two out in the fourth, and Chris Brown singled him to second. Candy Maldonado hit a high pop to short left field, but the ball was knocked out of shortstop Rafael Santana's glove by left fielder Mookie Wilson, who drew an error that enabled Clark to score.

The Mets bounced back against rookie Kelly Downs, 0-4, in the fifth. John Gibbons led off with a single and was forced on Santana's grounder to shortstop. Ojeda sacrificed.

Len Dykstra walked and Wally Backman beat out a single to the right side, loading the bases. Santana scored on Downs' wild pitch and Hernandez lined a 3-2 pitch to center for his ninth game-winning RBI.

Reds 7, Cubs 3

CHICAGO — Tom Browning scattered eight hits over 7⅔ innings and Eric Davis and Nick Esasky keyed rallies with two-run doubles to lead Cincinnati to a victory over Chicago.

Browning, 11-10, struck out five and walked none as Cincinnati won for the ninth time in 12 games.

The Reds went ahead 3-0 as the game's first five batters reached base against Scott Sanderson, 6-10. Kal Daniels walked, Buddy Bell singled and both advanced on Sanderson's throwing error on a pickoff attempt. Dave Parker walked to load the bases. Davis doubled to right field but was tagged out in a rundown after Parker held up at third. Parker scored on Bo Diaz' single, the first of his three hits.

Ron Cey, who had three hits, spoiled Browning's shutout bid in the seventh with his 12th home run. Gary Matthews hit a sacrifice fly and Keith Moreland a run-scoring single in the Chicago eighth.

Padres 4, Phillies 3

SAN DIEGO — Bruce Bochy hit a bases-loaded single through a five-man infield in the 12th inning to lead San Diego to a victory over Philadelphia.

Tim Flannery reached second on a two-base error to open the inning on a ball that sliced off Gary Redus' glove in left field. Tony Gwynn was intentionally walked by Kent Tekulve, 6-3, and Marvell Wynne singled to load the bases. Kevin McReynolds grounded to shortstop Luis Aguayo, who threw out Flannery at the plate, before Bochy, who is now 6-for-12 as a pinch hitter, singled to center.

Lance McCullers, 6-6, pitched one inning of hitless relief.

LaMarr Hoyt gave up seven hits, struck out six and walked two. He took a 3-0 lead into the ninth, but Mike Schmidt singled with one out and Juan Samuel followed with his 12th homer.

After Rich Gossage relieved, John Russell singled and pinch runner Redus stole second. Gregg Gross bounced out, but third baseman Jerry Royster misplayed Aguayo's grounder for an error, allowing the tying run to score.

Pirates 4, Braves 3

PITTSBURGH — Tony Pena hit a solo home run and Barry Bonds drove in two runs with a triple, and pitcher Rick Rueschel continued his mastery over Atlanta as Pittsburgh defeated the Braves.

Pena gave the Pirates a 1-0 lead with his ninth homer of the season, against slump-ridden Zane Smith, 7-12, with two outs in the third inning.

Pittsburgh added three runs in the fifth. Sid Bream and Rafael Belliard singled, and both scored when Bonds tripled to center. Bobby Bonilla's squeeze bunt scored Bonds.

Reuschel, 8-14, won his eighth consecutive decision against Atlanta, a streak that dates back to April of 1979. He worked the first seven innings, gave up seven hits, struck out six and walked none.

Connors, Wilander in ATP finals

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Mats Wilander and Jimmy Connors — the top two seeds in the $375,000 ATP Championship — advanced to the finals by posting straight-set victories in their semifinal matches Saturday.

Connors, the only non-Swede in the semifinals, defeated two-time NCAA champion Mikael Pernfors, 6-1, 7-5.

Top-seeded Mats Wilander beat No. 3 Stefan Edberg 6-4, 6-3 in a match that was not as close as the score indicated.

The finals matchup between Wilander, 22, and Connors, 33, will be the fourth time the two have met. Connors and Wilander met in a semifinal match at the ATP Championship in 1984. Wilander won that match.

Fitness in the home

One of the longest running fads in the United States today is that of the fitness craze. America is sleeker and healthier than it has ever been before and home fitness is one of the reasons.

The three homes featured in this week's Homes and Living Section also demonstrate the fact that exercise equipment need not blemish the interior design of a home. The equipment can and should blend with the overall decor.

At 1418 Lanham, equipment includes a swimming pool, sauna, and fully equipped exercise room.

Please see FITNESS, Page 2D

Photos, top right: Exercise equipment in the home can inspire health conscious homeowners to maintain a daily exercise routine.

2nd quarter home sales down in Texas

Texas ranks fifth in home sales among the 50 states even though home resale activity here has declined from last year's levels. During the second quarter 1986, sales of existing homes fell 8.4 percent from the same quarter in 1985 according to Conrad Bering Jr., president of the Texas Association of Realtors (TAR).

On a seasonally-adjusted annual basis, home resales in Texas fell to 181,200 units during the second quarter of this year, compared to 203,800 units during the same 3-month period in 1985.

Declines were experienced in Texas and 14 other states. The decreased activity is blamed on slumping energy prices in many of these states including Texas, Oklahoma, Alaska, Louisiana and Colorado.

"What we are experiencing right now is called a buyers' market. All the factors are favoring those who buy. With the interest rates down and decline in sales, housing affordability conditions for many buyers are better than they have been at any time this decade," Bering said.

Bering noted that the average effective closing rate, including points, for conventional fixed-rate mortgages was 10.41 percent during the second quarter of 1986, and 9.72 percent for conventional adjustable-rate mortgages.

Home resales in Texas have declined overall during 1986, after peaking in 1985 at 203,800 during the forth quarter. First quarter resales in 1986 reached 169,800 units.

Nationwide, resale activity for single-family homes, apartment condominiums and cooperatives rose 14.5 percent from the second quarter of 1985 to the second quarter of 1986 to a seasonally-adjusted annual rate of 3.78 million units.

Window treatments still romantic

NEW YORK (AP) — Have we returned to the Victorian Age? No, if it means a revival of the bustle or hansom cab; yes if it's home furnishings and decoration.

Soft, intricately-layered drapery fabrics are replacing the more tailored and trim window treatments that had been dominant in a number of American homes. This nostalgic return to a more romantic period is related to the revival of ornament in general, say decorating authorities. They also note the growth of interest in Victorian furniture and accessories.

From a decorative standpoint, the return of more traditional window trimmings has sent window treatment designers scurrying for old ideas.

"Today's drapery workrooms are being challenged to create window styles from the 19th century's decorative arts books," notes Ben Siglag, vice president of John Wolf Decorative Fabrics, in New York.

What is decidedly "in," according to Siglag are more ruffles, more swags, more jabots, Austrian shades, tented ceilings, scalloped edges and other treatments that have not been seen in many years.

These treatments use fabric generously to create the softness and luxury associated with the Victorian period. Though they are costly both in terms of fabric required and the cost of making them up, the home sewer can duplicate them for considerably less than it costs to buy them, according to Joanne Schreiber, author of the book,"Sewing to Decorate Your Home."

To create the most elaborate windows, she suggests starting with a sheer undercurtain, adding side draperies, a swag and a jabot and then topping the fabric with a cornice or a valance.

Cornices are wooden frames set over the window, padded and then covered with fabric, as a rule. They may be straight at the top and bottom but often have a have a shaped lower edge which may be scalloped, cut out in an intricate curved or zigzagged pattern. A cornice provides solid support for the fabric on the window.

Valances are similar to cornices, but as a rule are are hung on a rod, whereas a cornice is a more permanent installation. Wood is generally used for both cornices and valances, but you can sew a valance of stiff buckram and suspend it on an ordinary flat curtain rod, according to Ms. Schreiber.

A swag is a draped or pleated length of fabric which goes across the top of the window. Swags are limited in size by the width of the material selected since they are hung crossways from selvage to selvage. Therefore a single piece of fabric 36 inches in width will cover the top of a standard window. If the window is wider, or if there are several windows, you'll need to have several swags or to use a wide piece of fabric.

The jabot is a piece of fabric that hangs down the sides of the window and covers the edge of the swag. A jabot can vary in length from quite short to half or even three-quarters of the way down the window. Jabots can be used in addition to side draperies or they may be used in place of them. As a rule, a jabot is installed over a swag.

For those who want a temporary rather than a permanent window treatment, it is possible to imitate the effect of swags and jabots simply by draping a fabric panel artfully over a curtain rod and arranging the folds in a pleasing manner. Designers often resort to this expedient in decorator show houses, which are temporary installations. However, be aware that the designers often speak of spending hours getting the folds to hang just right.

Less expensive (because less elaborate) yet just as frilly as the treatments already described are Austrian shades, which Ms. Schreiber calls "confections of lightweight frothy fabric, shirred, swagged and finished with fabulous fringe."

Austrian shades can be installed by hanging them from a rod. Most Austrian shades have three scallops. Do-it-yourselfers will find that ready-made shade tape makes their construction simpler than it might seem.

Besides its decorative value, the layered look has another advantage, according to Siglag. Layered window treatments offer greater insulation than do most single window coverings.

However, according to Betty Ann Kiester, a window decorating specialist in Westport, Conn., energy savings are important but not paramount with many of those decorating nowadays. Her clients, for example, seek an attractive window treatment first, and only afterwards consider the potential energy cost.

When buying real estate: TANSTAAFL!

Recently the real estate buying public has been bombarded with advertising that promises "Nothing Down" and sometimes implies that the prospective buyer will reap phenomenal economic benefits from purchasing such a property. On rare occasions and under certain circumstances this may be the case. Most of the time, however, the principle of TANSTAAFL applies: "There ain't no such thing as a free lunch."

If a home owner offers to sell his or her property with no down payment, just take over the existing loan, check out the loan. There is a good chance that the interest rate and threfore the payments are substantially higher than current market rates.

There is also the possibility that the property would not appraise today for the amount of the loan. If you have had a recent credit problem, assuming a non-qualifying loan may be one way to re-establish good credit and may be worth the higher payments. If, however, your credit is good and you have in cash eight to 10 percent of the price of the property to cover a five percent down payment plus your closing costs, shop around. You may be able to get more house for the same payment on a new loan.

In the current Midland market, increasing numbers of would-be sellers are offering to finance, either entirely or in part, the purchase of their property. This can work to the advantage of both the buyer and the seller. Usually the seller will want some down payment, but occasionally all the seller wants is OUT.

Once again, the buyer may pay a premium for this no-muss, no-fuss financing.

Sometimes a buyer can get the best of both worlds: assumption of a non-qualifying loan with a low interest rate plus owner financing of most or all of the equity (the difference between the loan balance and the sale price of the property). If the seller can afford to finance the equity and does not immediately need the cash, this arrangement can benefit both parties in the transaction.

Whatever method is used in the purchase of real estate, you very rarely get something for nothing. When the price is a steal, the condition of the property or the terms are likely to be less than ideal. Conversely, if the terms are fantastic, the price may be inflated or the property may be a "handy-man's delight."

In any purchase of property all three items should be weighed: condition, terms and price. TANSTAAFL.

Fitness

This three bedroom home features the master bedroom and guest room in light earth tones. The third bedroom has been reserved for exercise equipment which has been well-used by the owner.

After a long day at the office a relaxing dip in the pool or a session of pumping iron can prove a needed refresher. Topped off by either a luxurious bubble bath in the oversized tub or a long, leisurely session in the sauna, this house has it all.

Direct access from the pool to a change room and three-quarter size bath add convenience to this home, located about five minutes from downtown Midland. More information concerning this house, listed at $195,000, can be gathered by calling Langston Monarch Realtors.

The list of advantages to be gained by having exercise equipment in the home is long indeed. Probably at the top of that list is privacy.

Being able to exercise in the privacy of one's own home is the only way some health addicts can manage. This same privacy proves in some cases to be an incentive in continuing the routine.

Located in the Greentree Country Club area, the home at 4706 Teakwood features a hot tub set in solid redwood both in floor and ceiling. If ever there was a reason to exercise, this has got to be it. This home, under contract to Don Harvey Realtors, is listed at $169,000.

Convenience is another aspect to in-house fitness. If there are children in the home, there is no need to get a babysitter while one exercises. And the old excuse of bad weather is gone forever!

Pumping iron can help to relieve anxiety built up in the competitive atmosphere of the workplace. While using a gym can continue and even elevate that competitive urge, working out at home tends to be more therapeutic.

As a relaxant, nothing can beat a swim in the pool for both exercise and winding down after a long day at the office.

The pool at 6404 Sequoia, also in the Greentree Country Club area, is definitely relaxing. This five bedroom home has an indoor atrium overlooking the pool. Backing onto the golf course, other features include a patio area in the back yard with access for a golf cart.

The master bedroom, overlooking the golf course, features a fireplace and wet bar. Listed at $325,000, for more information on this home call Don Harvey Realtors.

Fascinating Facts

By Bob & Bill Drummond, Licensed Master Plumbers
The geocentric theory fo the universe, that the sun and moon revolve around the earth, was maintained by philosophers, theologians and naturalists until the 16th century. This theory made the earth the center of the universe. However, the heliocentric theory, that the sun is the center of the universe, was proposed as early as the 3rd century B.C. It was not until Nicolaus Copernicus formulated his system of planets revolving around the sun that the heliocentric theory seriously considered. It was only universly accepted after it's verification by such scientists as Galilei, Johann Kepler and Sir Isaac Newton.

Save Energy at Home

Energy matters still matter a lot

Many experts say that it's inevitable that the cost of energy will turn up in the future. Test your house against the one in the illustration above. If you're like most people, you'll discover at least two or three energy sore spots in your home which can be buttoned up to save on heating costs this winter.

Unique plant containers can be made from everyday items

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The list of containers that can be used for gardening is long. Here are some suggestions beyond the ordinary:

— An old tire.
— Wheelbarrow.
— Child's old wagon.
— An unused fountain.
— An antique brass umbrella holder.
— A china urn.
— A hollowed-out log or piece of driftwood.
— A wrought iron pot.
— A wooden carpenter's box.
— A picnic basket.
— An antique butter churn.
— An old work boot.

In the city and in the country gardening is the number 1 outdoor leisure activity

By SHARON ACHATZ
Copley News Service

With the greening of nature comes the greening of thumbs as gardening options sprout up for both city and country folk. Whether they seek colorful blossoms or fresh vegetables or lush lawns or handsome shrubbery, gardeners are plotting for growth in a variety of ways.

For the citified person with minimum space and limited time, container gardening provides the opportunity to cultivate hearty herbs, tasty tomatoes and pretty perennials, since lots of plants thrive in containers. And this time-saving method works not only for people with limited space, but also for people who are intimidated by a huge empty lot.

Window boxes and bay windows also are good short-on-space, long-on-looks gardening options. Window greenhouses replace existing windows and project beyond the wall of the house, similar to a bay window. Unlike the bay window with plant shelves, the windoW greenhouse is a true greenhouse on a smaller scale. It closes on the inside to protect plants from the drying effects of the house and has a vent system to prevent temperature extremes.

If you've got the space and an inclination to create your own little environment in your own little corner of the world, consider a full-size greenhouse. In the controlled environment of a greenhouse — whether it's a temporary backyard structure or a patio lean-to or a permanent structure that covers several acres — you can fool Mother Nature. You can have a desert in Oregon or a jungle in Arizona — whatever your choice. All you need is the appropriate greenhouse watering, heating and lighting systems.

Of course, people with lots of space and sturdy knees and elbows still dig rows and rows of vegetables, looking foward to a bountiful harvest. And for houses with lots of land, there are plenty of opportunities for planting shrubbery, pruning flower beds and trimming trees.

Outdoor decks top do-it-yourself project

By BILL LOHMANN
UPI Feature Writer

ATLANTA (UPI) — Sun decks are returning Americans to the days when the hypnotic creaking of a rocking chair and a soft breeze made a big porch the perfect place to while away the hours.

The rocking chair might have been replaced by weather-resistant chaise lounges but the basic idea remains the same. Decks, like porches, provide a comfortable setting for outdoor relaxation.

Compared to other major home improvements, which can cost many thousands of dollars, the addition of a sun deck is relatively inexpensive. The average investment for a deck is less than $1,000, according to contractors and building materials dealers.

Constructing your own deck is not quite as simple as merely hammering a nail into a board but, as a growing number of homeowners are learning, it is not necessarily as difficult as reinventing the wheel.

As a result, outdoor decks might be the most popular project among do-it-yourself homeowners. This year, new decks will be added to more than 1 million U.S. homes, according to estimates by the Southern Forest Products Association.

The key to building a deck, like any other do-it-yourself project, is taking the time to plan efficiently and obtaining the right materials.

The association provides the following tips:

First decide how you plan to use the deck. Are you looking forward to sunbathing, picnicking or a bastion of privacy? Do you want an uncovered deck, one with a roof or one surrounded by a screen? If you'd like to include a hot tub or a barbecue pit, where would you put it?

What about the surroundings? Air currents, terrain, exposure to the sun and the shape of the house should all be considered in determining the location and design of your deck. If any of these factors presents a problem, how about a backyard gazebo, a not-so-distant relative of the simple deck?

If simplicity suits you, a range of fundamental deck plans are available at many do-it-yourself supply stores. If you want something extraordinary, landscape architects can design a deck specifically for your house.

The first step is to check local building codes and see if you need to apply for a permit. Before plunging a shovel into the ground for deck posts and footings, be sure to know the location and depth of buried utility lines.

The necessary tools for most decks include circular or crosscut saw, hammer, drill, wrench, carpenter's rule, posthole digger, ladder, stakes, line, level and square.

Pine is a popular and economical lumber for deck construction. Pressure-treated pine — wood treated under pressure with chemical preservatives that penetrate the wood's cellular structure — is the best for the job. Some manufacturers now guarantee pressure-treated pine in outdoor use for 30 years against damage from termites and decay.

Pressure-treated wood should be stamped to indicate the retention level, a gauge that measures the amount of chemical treatment per cubic foot of wood and indicates how well the wood should stand up in outdoor use. The higher the number, the harsher the conditions the wood can withstand.

Experts suggest do-it-yourselfers also look for lumber with a grademark that certifies the wood is strong enough for use in a deck. While lumber grade No. 2 is recommended for decks, higher grades might provide a more pleasing appearance.

Most decks require footings and posts to support beam and joist framing, which support the actual decking. Most deck posts are 4x4s, joist framing 2x6s or 2x8s and decking 2x4s or 2x6s.

Hot-dipped galvanized or stainless steel nails and fasteners should be used instead of aluminum or carbon steel nails because these can rust or corrode and stain the wood.

Be careful when nailing near board ends; pre-drill holes or dull the sharp points of nails to reduce the possibility of splitting the lumber.

Pressure-treated lumber will finish just like untreated wood. For paint, two coats of a quality acrylic latex paint is recommended. For stain, a good semi-transparent or opaque stain will penetrate the wood but will not form a significant surface film that might peel or crack.

Although treated wood is protected against mold and mildew, the application of a water repellent is recommended.

Gardening will improve with careful planning

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

Developing your first vegetable garden, one novice related, can be like driving along a strange highway with no map...at night...in a rainstorm.

It doesn't have to be that way if, before you ever put a spade or hoe in the ground, you make a few decisions.

The key is: Choose the garden site, choose your crops, select the varieties you'll plant, arrange the crops in the plot, and set up a planting schedule.

Other planning should include how large a garden you can handle, how you'll control weeds and what you want the produce for — whether for fresh eating, freezing, canning, drying or some combination of these.

The characteristics of your property may partially decide the site for you. Consider these requirements for a vegetable garden:

— Most vegetables require six to eight hours of direct sunlight daily.
— The garden should be within reach of a water supply.
— Exposure to the wind should be minimal, since strong winds cause evaporation from the soil and excessive respiration from the plants.
— The soil should be of good quality with a limited number of rocks and debris, and well prepared for gardening.

Most vegetable crops do best if they get full sun for most of the day. Leafy and root crops can get by with some shade for part of the day, but crops that bear fruits — tomatoes, peppers, eggplant, beans, squash, cucumbers — need a full day's sun.

In deciding the size of your plot, consider how much time you'll spend each week on your garden. Good advice is "start small." A plot 10-by-10-feet is suitable for beginners. You can make it larger as you gain experience.

A plot in a community garden some distance from home may be better than no garden, but having to load everything into the car and go there turns every gardening foray into an expedition. If the garden is close to home you can work in it whenever you have a few spare minutes, keep close tabs on weed and insect problems, and harvest crops at the peak of perfection.

If sod covers your proposed garden site, remove it. If you just plow or till the grass under, it will keep coming back and you'll be fighting it all summer.

Don't place your garden near shrubs and trees — which will compete for water and soil nutrients and shade the crops.

Avoid putting your garden in a low spot. Cold air tends to sink into such areas, so they're the last places to be frosted in the spring and the first to be frosted in the fall. This can shorten the growing season. Also, water may stand in such spots, causing root rot and foliage diseases.

Plant crops the family enjoys. If you have enough space, try some less familiar vegetables such as salsify, purple cauliflower or Jerusalem artichoke.

Other factors to consider in your garden size are the available labor force (golf, swimming and baseball may be causes of strikes), and the amount of money you want to spend on tools, equipment, seeds, plants and fertilizer.

A suggestion: Decide how much garden you can handle at first, then cut it in half. This may prevent early discouragement.

In a small garden, avoid crops that need lots of space, especially sweet corn, unless it is your passion. The return from sweet corn is small. Other space-hogging crops include potatoes, vining winter squash and pumpkins, dry beans and peas. Bush varieties of squash, pumpkins and cucumbers are now available, but they aren't as productive as their sprawling relatives.

When choosing varieties, check seed packets for:

Growing habit, whether bush or vining; use, storage, freezing or other; days to maturity; disease resistance; desired color (do you want purple beans, cabbage or cauliflower?); flavor (hot pepper or sweet?); shape of fruits (globe or pear-shaped tomatoes?); size of edible portion (4-pound cabbage or 3-pound squash vs. 20-pound cabbage and 70-pound squash).

Special performance characteristics (self-blanching cauliflower, or slow-bolting lettuce); and appearance (some gardeners grow peppers or flowering kale because they like to look at them, or they interplant flowers or herbs with their vegetables to brighten the garden.)

Placement of crops in the garden can be important.

A garden sketch is helpful so you won't buy twice as many plants or seed packets as you have space to plant. Also, you'll better remember where the various crops were this year so you can avoid planting the same crops in the same spots next year. Crop rotation can be an important practice in reducing the carryover of insect and disease problems.

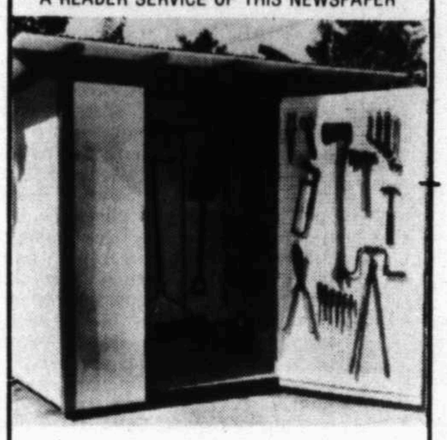

Place tall crops, such as sweet corn, sunflowers and Jerusalem artichokes on the north side of the garden so they won't shade sun-loving crops.

Plant perennial crops such as rhubarb, asparagus, strawberries and raspberries together on one side of the garden, out of the way when you till for annual crops.

Utilize all available space through interplanting and successive cropping. Interplanting means growing a short-season crop and a long-season crop or early- or late-crop side-by-side for part of the growing season. Harvesting the first crop makes room for the other crop to mature. Successive cropping means following an early or short-season crop with something else.

Consider vertical gardening when space is limited. Plant pole beans instead of bush beans; grow cucumbers on trellises, and stake or cage tomatoes so they take up less garden space.

Let's Talk Real Estate...

Joanne Langston

One encouraging factor in Midland's current economic picture is continuing strenght in the local real estate market.

A flurry of July and early August transaction, at lease in our office, seem to be fueled by incoming transferees getting settle prior to the opening of school plus an encouraging number of move-ups and first time home buyers taking advantage 9 1/2-10 1/2% interest rates, and moderating prices on a wide selection of homes.

In fact, as a personal observation, in my 20 years in the business, I have seldom seen so many fine properties for sale in all price ranges! I would certainly encourage would-be buyers to call any of our agents for apreview of today's exceptional market.

WILD BLUE YONDER

The airplanes stretched, wingtip to wingtip, across the runway just south of Midland. They came from all countries and eras — an F-20 Tigershark, an Air Force F-16, a French Mundy Cap 21, a rare XPT12 from the World War II years, a P-51 Mustang and even a Russian MiG were among the more than 20 planes on the field.

The pilots talked and joked together as they waited their turns to fly. They could have been members of a small, elite air force, but some of these pilots were just 11 or 12 years old and their planes' wingspans averaged just 6 feet.

The Hi-Sky R/C Airplane Club of Midland was hosting a Scale Fly-In Show.

Their remote control ("R/C" stands for "radio-controlled") aircraft are modeled after real airplanes, said Mark Wornell, club president.

It takes anywhere from "three weeks to two years to build one, depending on how much detail you want to put into it."

Eldon Wilson of San Angelo said he had been "building model airplanes for 57 years." He currently owns nine flyable model airplanes, he said.

"Most of us started with free-flight — you build it, wind it up and let it go," said Wornell.

"Radio-controlled started around 1950 or '51," Wilson added.

"Nowadays, most start out in radio-controlled, because it's gotten so cheap," Wornell said. "The radio unit costs about $119; the engine unit is about $95 and up. The airframe is the part that gets tore up — it costs about $65. The ground support system is $50 to $150."

The investment in getting started flying model airplanes is about $450-$550, he said, but "it's like in golf — you get to reuse most of that investment."

The planes "will go higher than you can see them. The range of the radio is approximately five miles; the range of vision is ⅛ mile." To fly the aircraft, "basically you need about a section (640 acres) of open land."

"During the summer we try to have one meet each month," said Wornell. "During the rest of the year we try to have one when we can," depending on the weather.

The club presents an aerobatic contest during June, he said, a fun event in July and a scale fly-in in August. "The meets are something we do to give people a chance to show off their stuff and let other people see" what radio-controlled flying is all about.

Most members of the flying clubs are male, Wornell said. "We have a few female flyers in the Odessa club and just one in our club. We'd like to have more lady fliers, but they don't seem to have the aviation interest from an early age — most of us started as kids. We have a lot of fathers-sons. My dad was doing it in the '30s.

"We founded the club 18 years ago, just through the common interest of everybody being together and getting to fly," he said.

Club members belong to the Academy of Model Aeronautics, which is part of the National Aeronautic Association, Wornell said. The NAA is, itself, part of an international organization.

West Texas, even with its wide-open spaces, is not the ideal location for radio-controlled flying, he said. "All the airplanes will fly 60 percent better at sea level than they will here." Dry air doesn't help, either — "moist air helps."

Many of the club's members are pilots of real aircraft, Wornell said, and many of the others wish they were. "There is a certain amount of Walter Mitty going on here."

Have you heard...?

By MARILYN McKNIGHT HARRISON

In honor of longtime Midlander Patsy Yeager's 85th birthday, her children and grandchildren hosted a festive supper party last Sunday evening. The event was held at the home of Marianne and Wilbur Yeager.

Mrs. Yeager was born Aug. 17, 1901, in Sedan, Kan. She and her husband, the late Arthur Yeager, were among the first to come to Midland as part of the fledgling oil industry. They arrived in 1926 and soon became involved in civic, church and social affairs.

Mrs. Yeager has three children, Wilbur Yeager, Goss Yeager and Patsy Hinchey, and 10 grandchildren.

UNIVERSITY OF TEXAS STUDENT Laura Schneider represented Midland as a duchess in the recent Austin Aqua Festival, sponsored by the Admirals Club. She is the daughter of Pat and Tom Schneider.

Participating in the festivities were Laura's escort, Michael Mashburn, son of Lynn Mashburn and the late James Mashburn; her sister, Maggie Schneider of San Antonio, who was presented as as duchess in 1981, and the Schneiders' guests, Lynn Mashburn, Graham Mackey, Jody and Jack Blake and Shirley McDonnold, all of Midland, and Laura's cousin, John Schneider, and Tom's sisters, Mary Ann Scheider and Jeanne Park from Austin.

The Schneider family enjoyed seeing former Midlander Mary Hardie Teeple, whose husband Charlie is a member of the Admirals Club; Kelly Bell's brother, Jerry Bell, and his wife, Beverly, and other long-time friends and relatives from the Austin area.

Highlighting the event was the Coronation Ball and presentation of the royalty in the Frank Erwin Special Events Center on Saturday night. Other weekend festivities honoring the royalty were a river parade, followed by a fajita party for the girls and their escorts; luncheons, cocktail parties and a Sunday brunch.

Currently celebrating its 25th anniversary, the Admirals Club of Austin is a social and charitable organization composed of private members.

AFTER A HONEYMOON to Santa Fe, the former Marcia Johnson and Steve Clements are at home in Lubbock. There were married here on Aug. 16.

Wedding week festivities included a bridesmaids luncheon and rehearsal dinner. The luncheon was held in Midland Country Club's Garden Room and was given by Marge (Mrs. Del) Woods, Virginia (Mrs. Bob) Jones, Ernestine (Mrs. E.K.) Browning and Bobbie (Mrs. Ed) Lookabaugh. The dinner was hosted by the groom's parents, Ann and Jim Clements of Abilene, at Harrigan's Restaurant.

Marcia, the daughter of Nelda and Bill Johnson, was honored earlier this summer at bridal parties.

RUBALEE AND H.K. THOMAS are among the latest Midlanders to attend Expo '86 in Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada. They joined a tour group in Arlington for the 15-day trip.

Traveling by bus, the group enjoyed the beautiful scenery as they traveled to Denver, Colorado Springs, Jackson Hole, Wyo., through the Grand Tetons and Yellowstone National Park, Boise and Twin Falls, Idaho, along the Columbia River to Seattle, and Victoria en route to the exposition.

One of the trip's highlights was a wagon train ride in the mountains near Jackson Hole, with a barbecue dinner and western-style entertainment when they reached their destination.

At Seattle, the group enjoyed a visit to nearby Blake Island, which is inhabited by an Indian tribe, and partook in a baked salmon dinner. They also enjoyed dinner in Seattle's Space Needle.

The Texans were entralled with the abundance of beautiful flowers and the parks and gardens in both Victoria and Vancouver. After taking in all the sights at Expo '86 (which drew rave reviews), the group returned home by plane from Seattle.

IN THIS CHANGING WORLD, some things never change! Although it's been 23 years, I can still remember the first time I flew into the Midland airport. A stranger to West Texas, I wasn't prepared to see jack rabbits hopping beside the runway as we taxied in nor the tumbling tumbleweeds.

Recently my family took up exercising at the Petro Parcourse in North Midland, and while walking the fitness trail, we spotted jack rabbits, cottontails, owls and prairie dogs. Isn't it wonderful that human beings and wildlife can still coexist in Metropolitan Midland?

Woman serves as test pilot

LEXINGTON PARK, Md. (AP) — After flying some of the world's most sophisticated fighter planes, one Navy test pilot isn't allowed to do the whole job that the training intended. That's because Lt. Beth Hubert is a woman.

Still, if the armed services ever lift their ban on women in combat-related jobs, she says she's ready.

"If you accept the training and the fun of flying those fantastic machines, you also have to accept the jobs they do," Hubert said.

Last December, she became the first female jet pilot to graduate from the U.S. Naval Test Pilot School here. Now she is the only female jet test pilot among the 82 women and 12,061 men who fly for the Navy. Another woman tests Navy helicopters.

The Army and Marines have no women test pilots among their respective 14,202 and 4,040 pilots, those services said. The Air Force has 21,115 pilots but doesn't say how many are test pilots.

Hubert tests rockets, bombs and other attachments to aircraft, to make sure they don't interfere with operating the plane.

Cmdr. Bob Walker, chief test pilot for the Strike Aircraft Test Directorate at the Naval Air Test Center here, said Hubert is doing well and is "accepted like another one of the guys."

Hubert said there is risk involved in her work but added that computer simulation complements her training. "This isn't the 1950s. It's not Chuck Yeager going up to a plane and saying, 'How do you start this?' and then flying," she said, referring to the legendary early test pilot.

"You have to believe you can do it," she said. "When presented with a brick wall, I know I'll get out. There's always a door — and sometimes it's a window."

Landing on an aircraft carrier means setting a 12,000-pound plane that's going about 150 mph down on a runway 300 feet long, she said.

"You only have a 10- to 15-foot block that you have to be in to land safely," Hubert said. "Too low and you slam into the ramp, too high and you miss the wires that slow the plane down."

The first time Hubert was catapulted off an aircraft carrier for takeoff was among her most frightening experiences, she said. "You'll never buy that ride at Disneyland," she said of the experience seven years ago.

"I made the mistake of holding my breath; it felt like someone hit a hammer in my chest," she recalled.

She's has her head in the clouds since 1961, when she was in first grade and Alan Shepard became the first American in space. Until recently, most astronauts were test pilots first, and Hubert still dreams of going into space.

Hubert started flying while a student at Washington State University in Pullman, Wash., after spending summers working for a helicopter company that flew tourists over the Grand Canyon.

When flying, she said, "I look down and think, 'I have one up on everybody.' "

Hubert decided to join the Navy after hearing a radio advertisement that the Navy was looking for women for an experimental flight program.

In 1977, she was accepted into the Naval Aviation Officer Training School and received her commission in February 1978. She went to Corpus Christi to get additional training and got her wings in June 1979.

Hubert, whose father was a bombardier and whose husband, Joe Rooney, is a Marine fighter pilot, sees herself as a role model for young women.

She remembers that her high school guidance counselor wasn't very encouraging when she told him of her dream of becoming an astronaut.

Pen pals meet after 12 years

READING, Pa. (AP) — Sometimes it just isn't enough to "reach out and touch someone" via long distance telephone service.

That's why Patricia Ingram, 26, of Llansamlet, South Wales, crossed the Atlantic Ocean recently to meet her childhood pen pal, Linda Bicksler, 27, of Bethel.

"We started writing each other when we were kids," Ingram said. "Linda initiated the letter writing because of an article she read in American Girl magazine. We've kept in touch for 12 years ever since, and now I finally met her."

Ingram made the trip to the United States with her husband, Keith.

The pen pals spent most of their time together in Pennsylvania, reminiscing about their childhood as international literary counterparts, and visiting local historical sites.

Octogenarian still flying

Hearst News Service

Percival H. Spencer, an 89-year-old Los Angeles aviator who still flies amphibious planes of his own design, is believed to be the country's oldest active licensed pilot.

"The guy's incredible," said Peter Breinig, a certified flight instructor who gave Spencer his last flight test. "We flew for three-quarters of an hour. He flew beautifully. He flew with complete control. Age doesn't mean a damn."

Spencer, who owns a Pacoima, Calif.-based aircraft company, has just been designated as having "the longest active flight record in aviation history" by the Early Birds of Aviation, a society whose membership is restricted to those who flew solo prior to 1916.

"There are only about 17 members still left, and Spence is the only one still flying," said Col. Dale Anderson, Spencer's 75-year-old business partner.

Born April 30, 1897, Spencer was 7 when the Wright Brothers made their first flight, and was making rubber band-driven model airplanes out of pigeon feathers before then. At age 13, he was flying home-built gliders. He soloed in 1914 in a plane called a Curtiss Type Flying Boat, taking off and landing on the Connecticut River near Hartford.

"Unfortunately, I never learned how to make a turn," he recalled. "I flew down the river to Glastonbury, landed and taxied around on the water," before returning.

Spencer continues to be an avid aviator 72 years later, conducting his own test flights for the Spencer Amphibian, a plane which he and partner Anderson have been building and selling since 1970. The pair works seven days a week out of a small hangar in Whiteman Airport in Pacoima.

The amphibian is sold in kit form and assembled by the buyers. The "flying boats," as they are known to aviators, land on their hulls, as opposed to seaplanes which use pontoon floats. Currently, there are about 12 of Spencer's planes flying in Australia, New Zealand, Brazil and the United States.

In 1980, the pair began building a lighter, more sporty amphibian, but the project was scrapped after three years and $80,000 because the plane did not meet Spencer's performance standards. The prototype was sent to the Experimental Aircraft Association's Air Museum in Oshkosh, Wis.

Spencer's lifetime career in aviation includes work as an early airline pilot, military test pilot and airplane designer. In the 1940s he designed and built the Amphibian Air Car No. 1. In 1943, Republic Aviation Corp. purchased the patent on the craft and built the Republic Sea Bee based on Spencer's design.

Spencer's pilot's license was renewed last March and is valid through next March. He hopes to stay in good health to pass the next physical exam and plans to keep flying until he is unable to do so.

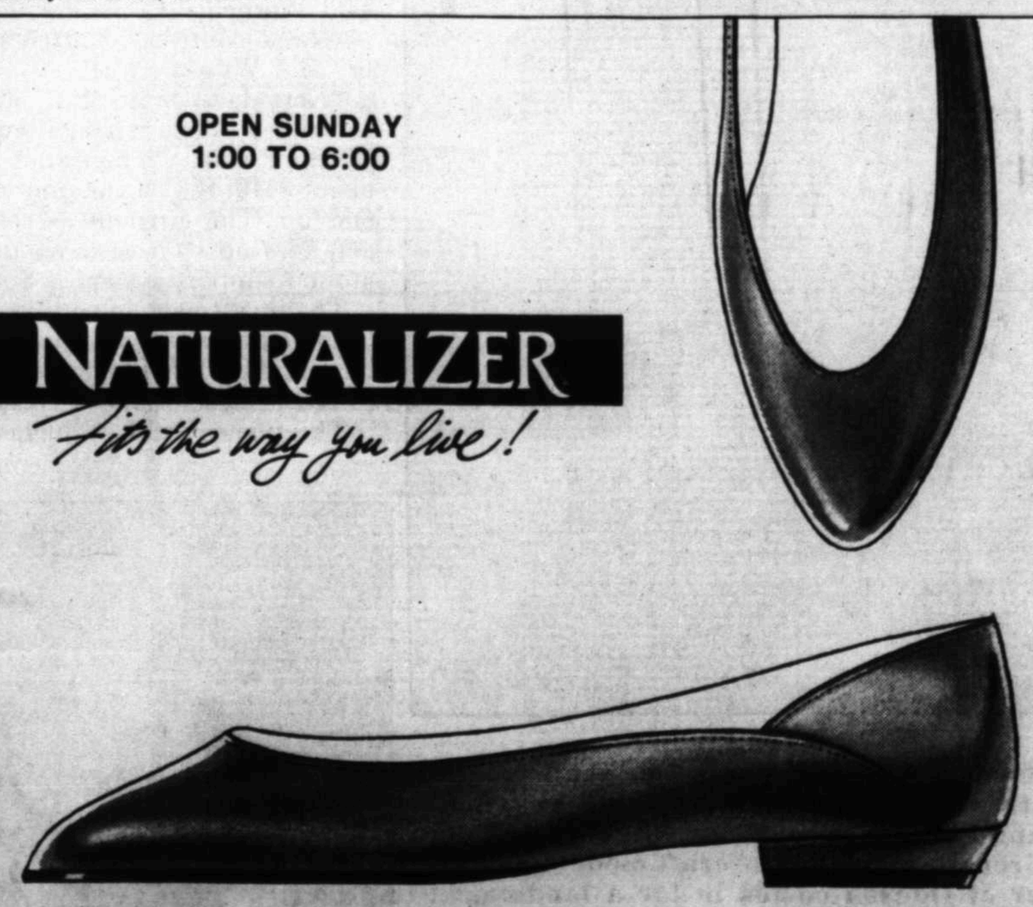

He says his secret to a long and active life includes no smoking for 52 years, no alcohol for the past five years, and a diet for many years of largely shredded wheat and wheat germ.

"My general philosophy is to pursue a life of doing what you want to do," Spencer said. "And be as reasonable as possible with your health. It has paid off in my case."

Doctors needed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The aging of the United States population will create a greater demand for physician care in the coming years, notes Internal Medicine News.

The number of physician visits by the elderly is expected to increase almost 50 percent by the year 2000, according to the medical journal.

Persons 65 years or older already account for 17 percent of all visits to doctors, although they represent only 12 percent of the population.

In the early 21st century, an estimated one in five Americans will be 65 or older, compared with one in nine in 1984.

Heart disease is the leading health problem for the elderly and accounts for 10 percent of all physician visits and almost 20 percent of all short-term hospital stays.

More than four of every five persons 65 and older have at least one chronic ailment, the most common being arthritis, high blood pressure, hearing impairment and heart disease.

Had A Wedding Lately?

After the Pre-View Album was delivered:

"We are so thrilled with the pictures! The wedding was just beautiful and you captured everybody at their best. There are so many to choose from that we'll have a hard time making up our minds. I'm so glad we chose you to be our photographer. Everything went so quickly and smoothly and you made everyone feel at ease. I don't know how you get so much done..so well. It's good to use a real pro for something as important as your wedding!"

Wedding goes way 'overboard'

From Staff Reports

Cozy Ballesteros and Courtney Platt went way overboard with their recent wedding in the Cayman Islands.

Platt, a scuba diving instructor and underwater photographer, and his fiance, a flight attendant with Republic Airways, were married in a small submarine 800 feet below the surface of the Caribbean.

The underwater wedding took place off the coast of Grand Cayman, the largest of the chain forming the British Cayman Islands, approximately 480 miles south of Miami.

The young couple, friends and relatives were taken by boat on May 10 to the deep-water dive site, where they rendezvoused with two small submarines.

The bride, bridegroom, bride's father and submarine pilot Alan Whitfield — who also served as best man — then descended in one deep-diving submarine.

The rest of the wedding party, Stacy and Barry Platt, descended in a second submarine.

After reaching a depth of 800 feet, the two subs faced each other while the bride's father — a minister — conducted the ceremony.

The "I dos" were transmitted by underwater telephone to friends and relatives waiting aboard a boat on the surface.

Following the traditional kiss, the two submarines began to ascend and surfaced 15 minutes later.

The newlyweds' submarine ceremony established a new world record for deepest underwater wedding, according to the Cayman Islands News Bureau.

Premarital contracts spell it all out

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

The man's fiancee was slim. He liked her that way. He wanted her to stay that way. And he was determined to do everything within his power to ensure her continued slenderness.

He couldn't force her body to remain in his preferred configuration. But he could provide an incentive, or threat as it turned out.

Before the wedding, the groom got his bride to agree to pay a fine if she gained weight, refundable upon weight loss.

This was no idle promise. The couple backed it up in writing in a prenuptial agreement negotiated by New York City attorney Jacalyn Barnett.

Welcome to marriage, contractual style, circa 1986, a time when legal documents are increasingly spelling out everything from closet space allocations after the wedding to who gets to keep the rent-controlled apartment after the divorce.

It's not uncommon to find recent premarital contracts decreeing that spouses will alternate in choosing vacation spots, that both parties will share equally in disciplining children or that the partners have fully disclosed to each other the nature of their sex experiences before marriage.

One Los Angeles woman about to wed a confirmed workaholic even specified in her agreement how many weeks of vacation her husband is required to take each year and how many nights per week he must take her out to dinner.

THOUGH NO one knows precisely how many premarital contracts are being negotiated today (they are private agreements and may only come to more public attention in the event of a contested divorce action), attorneys say they are unquestionably seeing rising demand for all sorts of prenuptial agreements, both the strictly financial variety and those with unusual life-style clauses as well.

And there's apparently enough premarital and non-divorce work that many divorce lawyers now call themselves matrimonial practitioners or family law specialists.

Why are today's couples getting so picky about the conditions of their marriages? And picky enough to pay lawyers to set those conditions down in legal terms at rates ranging anywhere from $500 (the fee at a Jacoby & Meyers branch for the simplest prenuptial contract) to upwards of $10,000 for a complex agreement covering a large estate?

Some attorneys, like Michael Kelly of Kelly & Cogan in Santa Monica, Calif., attribute the trend to the fact that people are marrying or remarrying at later ages — and often bringing more assets, more experience and more expectations to their marriages.

In addition, prenuptial agreements are occasionally drafted at the urging of business partners of the bride or groom.

According to attorneys, co-owners of companies sometimes insist on prenuptial agreements because they fear that a hostile divorce action could subject a company to litigation.

The partners would rather not have the details of their business affairs divulged to divorce attorneys or appraisers seeking to place a monetary value on the company.

Then there is the influence of the women's movement.

As Stanford University's Lenore J. Weitzman characterized the chief reason behind the boom in prenuptial agreements, "Young idealistic couples want to form egalitarian relationships and want to be sure that marriage truly is an equal partnership."

AN ASSOCIATE professor of sociology and author of "The Marriage Contract, A Guide to Living with Lovers and Spouses," Weitzman also credited "people who know how disadvantaged women can be in the divorce courts" for a portion of the increase.

And, of course, there are still requests for prenuptial agreements from their most traditional customers: men who make considerably more money than their wives and who want to avoid singing Jerry Reed's country hit, "She Got the Gold Mine, I Got the Shaft," in case of divorce.

With all these varied and often vested interests to consider in drawing up marriage contracts, it's no wonder that many attorneys are now bringing in psychologists to help their clients negotiate their wishes.

"We get the gamut," said Don Smith, a Santa Ana, Calif., marriage, family, child counselor, who is also an expert in family law, custody and molestation matters.

"It goes from the silly to the stupid. We help people negotiate everything from who's going to pick up the doggie poo to the usual stuff on feeding the kids and doing the dishes," he said.

SMITH, WHO has worked with clients referred by two attorneys for prenuptial work, considers the agreements a good thing, "depending on the sincerity of the couple." And he observed that the resulting documents are useful for defining "areas where people have strengths and weaknesses."

But he also noted that some soon-to-be spouses request agreements that are "so definitive that they (the partners) can't be human."

On the other hand, Smith pointed out that it's unwise to dismiss all seemingly trivial requests as merely the petty demands of immature people; such demands can sometimes steer a couple to deeper issues that the partners have thus far not addressed.

A case in point concerned a woman with a 6-year-old son who adamantly refused to have his hair washed.

When she and her husband-to-be discussed with Smith which spouse would assume or share certain roles in the marriage, the man volunteered to be responsible for washing the boy's hair.

Only in the course of that discussion, Smith said, did the man learn that the boy about to become his stepson had once been disciplined by having his head shoved into a toilet — hence his hair washing phobia.

At thay time, the man decided that perhaps there would be a better way to inaugurate a fatherly relationship with the boy than by washing his hair.

Sometimes the demands in prenuptial agreements are so outrageous that attorneys refuse to incorporate them in contracts.

CONSIDER A case briefly handled by Barnett, who had no trouble drafting the contract for the man who wanted his wife to stay slim.

This matrimonial practitioner and partner in the New York office of Shea & Gould refused to draw up a prenuptial agreement for a childless man about to marry a woman with children from a previous marriage. The man wanted his fiancee to promise that if the two were divorced and had one child, he would automatically be granted custody.

He also insisted that the agreement state that he would get what Barnett described as "his pick of the litter" if the couple produced more than one child.

Despite the fact that courts ultimately determine custody arrangements, Barnett refused to draft an agreement in which "children were treated as commodities."

The couple never married. Said Barnett, "I didn't stop a marriage. I prevented a divorce."

Much like the couples involved, though, divorce lawyers themselves, both the prudent and the emotional, are deeply divided over the implications of the marriage pact.

Some, like Daniel Jaffe of Beverly Hills, Calif.-based Jaffe & Clemons, an attorney who lectures on prenuptial agreements for the California State Bar, will recommend the contracts to clients — but without what he called "cute" lifestyle clauses.

OTHER FAMILY law specialists openly despise the agreements in any form.

Attorney Joseph DuCanto, of Schiller, DuCanto & Fleck in Chicago, argues that prenuptial contracts often "foment litigation." He calls them "the most dishonored agreements ever written by the hand of man."

"Life is not a series of predictable events," emphasized DuCanto, whose 15-member company specializes in divorce and separation matters. "That's why it (a prenuptial agreement) tremendously commercializes the whole concept of what marriage is about. I think they (agreements) ought to be regulated by an act of Congress or abolished entirely."

What do judges have to say about all this?

Nobody has taken a poll. But in the estimation of retired Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Harry T. Shafer (a highly respected judge still active in court work despite his retirement), prenuptial contracts are an "excellent idea — if the parties are fully advised of their rights, if they know what they're doing and go into it with their eyes open."

Shafer's wife, however, doesn't think much of prenuptial agreements, even if they do ease the pressures on the court.

But as Shafer reasoned, "We've been married 46 years, so why should she worry?"

Lifestyle policies

The policies for publication of announcements in the Lifestyle Department of The Midland Reporter-Telegram are:

Information for Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Tuesday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the information is to run. For example, an item for Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least two weeks before the wedding date. Wedding announcements must appear within one month of the event.

Engagements, weddings, anniversaries and club notices must be submitted in writing on forms available in the Lifestyle office. All materials must include the signature and telephone number of the person submitting them. These items appear in the Sunday paper only.

We cannot mail pictures or forms to persons within Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication. Unclaimed photos are discarded after a month.

Photographs may be submitted with bridal announcements, but are not required. Portraits of the either the bride-elect or of the future bride and bridegroom together may be submitted with engagement announcements. Wedding photographs should be of the bride only.

Photos should be vertical, black and white, glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but they may reproduce poorly. Quality reproduction cannot be assured when color prints are used. In general, snapshots are not acceptable.

There is no charge for publication of photographs and stories.

Clothes color career

Copley News Service

To color his successful career, a man should follow a few basic tenets, says Carole Jackson in her new book, "Color For Men."

These include the following when choosing a wardrobe: black for winter, camel for spring and navy blue and charcoal gray for summer.

Jackson, whose '81 best-seller, "Color Me Beautiful" was a dressing guide for women seeking to enhance their career prospects, now hopes to help men also reach their full potential.

"Today's men want to get into their clothing personality," says Bunny Parnell, who operates a "Color Me Beautiful" and "Color for Men" studio in Louisville, Ky.

She said that's particularly true for middle-aged professionals who find themselves competing against younger men.

"If you're a 50-year-old man and up against a young man in his 20s, you don't want to look any older," said Parnell.

MISTER ROGERS

Divorced parents still love children

By FRED ROGERS
with BARRY HEAD

"I live with my mommy. We are divorced from my father." Two children, living far apart but both just old enough to write, painstakingly shape unfamiliar letters to tell us of the important events in their lives ... and both conclude with exactly the same words: "I live with my mommy. We are divorced from my father."

So much yet to be done in those young lives. And already so much to be undone.

In our work with children and families, divorce is a constantly painful presence. Just the other night at dinner, a young mother confided that she and her husband were heading toward divorce. Her eyes filled with tears as she said, "I'm afraid our divorce will wreck our 3-year-old daughter's life."

There was much I'd have liked to have said to that wife and mother, and most of it would have expressed concern and compassion for anyone entering divorce's fierce trials. But I felt frustration and anger, too: Part of me wanted to shout, "Listen! Divorces don't wreck children's lives. People do."

I didn't say that, though, but I certainly thought it, and the thought persisted as the mother went on to tell me about the custody battle that was sure to come. It all seemed such a sad, familiar and seemingly hopeless story.

But I know the story is not hopeless, even though the road to a positive outcome will be a hard one for that mother and father to take. It lies, of course, precisely in that couple's reminding themselves over and over again that they are a mother and father as well as husband and wife, and in their finding the self-discipline to conduct certain aspects of their divorce from that perspective.

Motherly love and fatherly love do not cease when the love between husband and wife ends and turns to anger. It's up to mothers and fathers to let their children know that, but in order to do so, they have to know it themselves — know it so fully and deeply that their parental love is expressed in acts and not just words.

Although there can be no such thing as a divorce between parent and child, that is not at all clear to many children — as it obviously wasn't to the two who wrote. I know one girl who is trying hard to "divorce" her father right now. Her parents separated two years ago and are now divorcing.

When the separation occurred, this girl wrote her father, whom I know she loved a great deal, telling him she would never talk to him again and never wanted to see him again ... and for two years she hasn't done either. But no matter how much she now wants to believe that her parents' divorce is hers as well as her mother's, it is still not so.

More than anything else, it will be the loving acts of her parents that will eventually help her find "the truth that will set her free" — set her free from her anger and set her free to grow. And the truth is that children need both a mother and a father, and that mothers and fathers don't need their children, and that when there is love there is always hope of surviving even the hardest of times.

That this issue was confirmed for me again the other day by the words of a 9-year-old who reflected back on his parents' divorce. Among other things he wrote about his family nowadays were these words:

"I love my folks more than anything in the world. They have been separated for two and a half years, but it doesn't bother me very much, and I go see my father every other weekend and sometimes longer ... I have two parents that I think are just great, and I'm lucky to have that much ... I like everything we do together when I'm with my mom or my dad. But most of all we are together and that's what counts.

"I have learned almost everything from my family. One thing is that when your parents are divorced, they love you just as much as if they were married ... My family is like my whole life ... My family means comfort, warmth and love. They give me respect and things that a kid really needs ... My family really does mean everything to me, like what could mean more than a family?"

Fred Rogers is a columnist for King Features Syndicate Inc.

Exercise habits start in childhood

NEW YORK (AP) — Good exercise habits start early, reminds Better Homes and Gardens magazine.

To get the ball rolling, form a contract with your child, suggests Deb Clark of the Institute for Aerobic Research. List specific exercise goals, then reward the child for reaching them. "But not with a banana split," says Clark.

Incorporate exercise into your routine. Walk to the store instead of driving. Go to exercise class with your kids.

Have fun and "emphasize that their best is fine," says Clark.

DEAR ABBY

Alcoholic boss needs employee's help

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I'm in a very strange predicament. I'm on the program of Alcoholics Anonymous and have been sober for almost four years. Because of my own experiences as an alcoholic, I'm able to recognize a practicing alcoholic when I see one.

Here's the problem: My boss is an alcoholic. She frequently comes to the office hung over and goes home early. Sometimes she doesn't bother to come in at all. She goes out to lunch and never comes back, or comes back loaded. She lies, manipulates, dodges problems, is disorganized, inefficient, and generally makes life very difficult for those around her.

I understand she's ill, but I can't take much more of this. I hate to see her bloated face in the morning and listen to her excuses; as a former sufferer, I know them all.

Last night she drove home from a company function absolutely smashed, by her own admission. She's lucky she made it home alive; even luckier that she didn't kill someone.

If anyone is qualified to talk to her, I am, but our "positions" at work make it really tough — as her subordinate, I'm afraid to say anything.

I've tried praying for her; I've tried turning it over to a higher power. I'm waiting for an answer, and the only one I'm getting is to get out. I don't like that answer. Courage is the next thing I pray for; I've been praying for that now for a couple of years. The time to tell her has never been right.

If you publish this, it may solve my problem — and hers. — RECOVERING ALCOHOLIC

DEAR RECOVERING: You've done your part — and I've done mine. Now, if someone will see to it that your boss reads this, we may have saved a life.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been happily married for 37 years. We have one child — a son. He has been married for seven years — no children.

Our problem is our daughter-in-law. She has decided that she and our son should spend every holiday with her family who live nearby. Last Christmas our son came alone to see us (she wouldn't come), and she refused to speak to him for a month. We live 30 minutes from them. Her idea of a visit to us is to stop by for five minutes on their way to somewhere else.

We suggested alternating holidays or visits, but she wouldn't hear of it. The last time we had Thanksgiving with our son was seven years ago, then she criticized me for not making dinner at home — we took them out because my rheumatoid arthritis was too painful for me to cook.

We are so hurt, my husband wants to move to Sun City. We have friends and a lovely home here, and I don't want to move, but my husband says it would make it easier for our son. He wouldn't feel so guilty about ignoring us if we didn't live in the same city.

Please help us decide. — DAUGHTER-IN-LAW PROBLEM

DEAR PROBLEM: Your problem is not your daughter-in-law, it's your son. He is treating you shabbily by going along with his wife's wishes.

Should you move to minimize your son's guilt? Absolutely not. Stay where you are, and busy yourself with people who appreciate your company.

CONFIDENTIAL TO HERNANDO IN ORLANDO: Tell your teen-aged daughters: "The peach that's easiest to reach is more apt to wind up in the jam."

Man content with preliminaries

By DR. RUTH WESTHEIMER

Westheimer

Q. I have never been active sexually but my girlfriend has. My guiding idea is that sometime I will know that a woman is for me and that I want sex with her; before that I am content with hugging, kissing and other preliminaries. But she is urging me to have sex with her and finally she asked me point-blank if I am a virgin. When I said yes she pulled way as if I had said I had some contagious disease. Since then she has suggested that I am gay. Is a male virgin such an oddity?

A. No, go on being a virgin and don't let any woman pressure you into giving up your virginity until it suits you to do it, which might not be until your honeymoon. You should know that people like me, who hear sexual confidences of large numbers of people, know the simple truth that lots of mature people are virgins, and that many mature virgins decide to share their sexuality with other persons and do so happily at the right time for them. I am talking about what goes on in 1986. OK?

Don't worry that this particular woman doesn't seem to understand your attitude — either she will grow in understanding, or you will move on to some other woman. If she accuses you of being homosexual, she is not the right one for you. When you do meet the woman that you decide is right for you, she may or may not be a virgin. It will be more important that you suit each other and have mutual understanding and good communication.

Q. My husband of 40 years has no interest in me. I have tried and tried to initiate either sex or just affectionate holding but he is a stone. He won't even talk to me. Now another man wants me to go to bed with him and I won't. Is there something wrong with me? I cry myself to sleep at night, but still I turn down this guy.

A. You don't have to take up an offer like that to prove you are OK. It is still up to you to decide if you want to sleep with someone, if you consider it ethical. All that is your privilege, even if your husband presents such a discouraging problem. Even if you were inclined to accept the other gentleman's offer, it might not cure your feeling of being frozen out of your marriage, out of what you think of as your own place in life. For that there is no quick answer I can give here. You have to find a social worker or a psychological counselor to help you over a period of time. Phone the nearest hospital for information.

Q. In your answer to that 29-year-old woman with the 16-year-old male lover, you failed to tell her that she is breaking a law and contributing to the delinquency of a minor. Obviously she has an emotional problem, but this does not entitle her to abuse a child.

A. Any grownup who is having sex of any kind with a minor is at risk of arrest, and you are right to point it out. This does not go without saying — it should be said.

That woman did need counseling for her own good, and part of that counseling should have been that she is probably breaking a state law and should stop doing so.

My advice was to break off this relationship for her own personal good, and I told her that if the youth involved were to ask my advice I would give the same advice to him.

Q. Every night I have sex three or four times with my girl, then I go home and have to gratify myself. Does this mean I should have more than one woman?

A. No. This means you should not, whatever you do, pinch yourself or this lovely dream will end! Seriously, all this means is that at present you have a lot of sexual energy. You can't blame your girlfriend for not using up all of that. It is just a sign of your age and good health.

In 20 years you may find yourself slowing down, which will not mean that you won't have very good sex for many years after that. It will just be less frequent and more leisurely. Meanwhile, don't spoil your relationship with that terrific girl by starting something with another one.

Friends important to elderly

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — New research underscoring the importance of friendship in the lives of the elderly has shown that, unlike the young, older people derive more satisfaction from giving to friends than getting. The research has also revealed significant differences between the friendship relationships of elderly men and women, which may reflect lifelong patterns.

"Being able to give and to do for others seems to be very rewarding for older people, and seems to reinforce their own sense of independence and well-being," said Dr. Karen A. Roberto, co-author of the comprehensive study of 116 men and women ranging in age from 65 to 91. She is coordinator of the gerontology program at the University of Northern Colorado in Greeley.

Previous studies of younger people have found that those who derive greater benefits from a friendship express more satisfaction with the relationship. But the opposite was true of the elderly subjects studied, who derived more satisfaction from their relationships if they were able to give more to their friends.

"The complexities of friendships among older adults have been little studied," said the co-author of the research, Dr. Jean Pearson Scott, associate professor of human development and family studies at Texas Tech University in Lubbock. "Friendships are more important in the lives of elderly people than generally realized."

Among the researchers' other findings were:

- The men studied were involved in more structured activities with their friends. "They'd go to the coffee shop together, or they'd go golfing," said Roberto.
- Women reported more intense involvement with their friends than men did. And friendships among the women studied involved fewer structured activities.

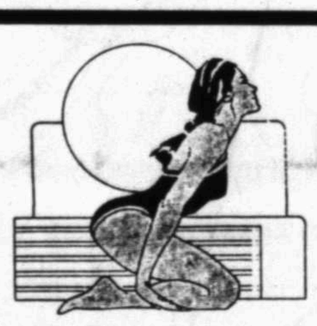

Warning signs

ATLANTA (AP) — Arthritis has a seven-alarm warning system that can alert people to seek medical attention early, says the Arthritis Foundation.

The warning signs include:

- Swelling in one or more joints.
- Early morning stiffness.
- Recurring pain or tenderness in any joint.
- Inability to move a joint normally.
- Obvious redness and warmth in a joint.
- Unexplained weight loss, fever or weakness combined with joint pain.
- Symptoms like these persisting for more than two weeks.

The foundation urges people to be aware of the warning signals, noting that, "Early diagnosis and treatment is the key to successfully controlling arthritis."

LBJ's Country

Text and Photos by David Lee Forrest

"I guess every person feels like a part of the place he's born... This is my country... The moon's a little fuller here, the stars a little brighter ..."
—Lyndon B. Johnson

Lyndon Baines Johnson, the man destined to be the 36th president of the United States, was born Aug. 27, 1908 in the Texas Hill Country. As Wednesday's 78th anniversary of his birth draws near, conflicting images of LBJ remain imprinted on popular history.

To many people, Johnson was the president driven out of power by mass protest over the bloody, unpopular war he was waging in Vietnam .

Robert Caro's impressive — but not terribly flattering — portrait of the young LBJ, "The Path to Power," describes him as an unprincipled politician with "a hunger for power in its most naked form ... a hunger so fierce and consuming that no consideration of morality or ethics, no cost to himself or anyone else — could stand before it."

To others, though, he was a man willing to give up any reelection hopes to avoid, as he put it, devoting "an hour or day of my time to any personal partisan causes or to any duties other than the awesome duties of this office — the presidency of your country."

THE LATTER view — LBJ as a great man — is the one visitors encounter at the Lyndon B. Johnson National Historical Park.

The park is divided into two portions, the Boyhood Home section and the LBJ Ranch unit. The first is located in Johnson City, approximately 50 miles west of Austin on U.S. Hwy. 290, where Johnson spent most of his boyhood years.

The LBJ Ranch house, top photo, served as the "Texas White House" during Lyndon Johnson's presidency. The front porch of LBJ's boyhood home, bottom photo, was used as a stage where skits and speeches were practiced during his childhood, according to Ranger Steve Snyder (seated).

The white frame house that the young Johnson called home from 1913 to 1927 is the main feature of this part of the park. His father Sam, a state legislator and not-very-successful real estate entrepreneur, and his mother Rebekah, a speech teacher, raised LBJ and his one brother and three sisters in the modest, one-story home.

IN MANY ways, that house on 9th Street in little Johnson City represents the roots of LBJ's career. He quite likely learned a great many of the basic skills he was to use in his climb to the presidency there.

His childhood breakfast table was the setting for many lively political discussions led by Sam and the shady front porch was often used as a stage by Rebekah for her students to practice speeches and perform skits.

Just about a block west of the Boyhood Home is the Johnson Settlement, the old dog-run cabin LBJ's grandfather, Samuel Ealy Johnson, and great-uncle, Tom Johnson, built as the headquarters of their ranching business.

The brothers prospered during the great cattle drives of the late 1860's and they, Caro wrote, "weren't merely the largest traildrivers in the Hill Country; they were probably the largest landowners, too." Then drought hit. The Johnsons had lost all their land in Blanco County and most of their money by 1873.

Growing up so close to the remains of his forefather's short-lived empire, LBJ might well have felt a sense of lost glory.

IN CONTRAST, Steve Snyder, a park ranger who often gives tours of the Boyhood Home, said, "What you see out at the Ranch is the image Johnson created for himself."

The LBJ Ranch portion of the historical park — actually it's two adjoining parks, one national park and one state, that work together — is located 14 miles west of Johnson City on Hwy. 290.

Access to the large, lush ranch is restricted, partially because it is still a working ranch and, perhaps more importantly, because Lady Bird Johnson's residence there is still under Secret Service protection.

Buses pick up tourists at the State Park Visitor Center, just off Hwy. 290, for free guided tours of the ranch. To ride on the tour bus, visitors just have to pick up a token in the visitor center. The tours depart at somewhat irregular intervals as they fill up. When entering the bus, it's best to take a seat on the right side to get a good view of the LBJ Ranch House.

The buses are not air-conditioned and tours may be shortened on summery days when, as the National Park Service puts it, "heat and humidity exceed predetermined comfort levels."

The ranger driving the bus points out interesting sights along the way, accompanied by a taped tour narrative played over the bus loudspeakers.

The buses swing past a reconstruction of the cabin Johnson was born in, the actual first school he ever attended, the sprawling ranch house known as the "Texas White House" during his presidency and the family cemetery he was buried in Jan. 25, 1973.

Visitors can discover some truly odd bits of trivia about LBJ during the 1½-hour trip. For example, parked beside the ranch house is an amphibious automobile that, according to park rangers, Johnson used to pull off a rather startling practical joke.

He liked to casually invite visitors to the Texas White House to go along with him in it for a ride, not telling them that what they were riding in was half-car and half-boat. He would then race toward the Pedernales River, excitedly pretending that the brakes had gone out, and drive right into the water. His guests would, naturally, be very alarmed until they realized that the vehicle floated.

The white Cadillac convertibles Johnson drove while inspecting the ranch are also parked by the ranch house. According to the tour tape on the bus, he especially liked to play the song "Raindrops" while cruising across his ranchland in a Caddy.

'Lady Bird' Johnson: 'A front row seat to history'

By WILLIAM H. INMAN
UPI National Feature Writer

STONEWALL, Texas — The morning shadows push long and fleeting profiles across the manicured lawn stretching from the stone house to the steamy banks of the Pedernales River.

It was here that important men once plotted America's course through its longest, latest and most bitterly disputed war. It was here, when "here" was known as the White House on the Pedernales, that a president of the United States convened with his advisers and dispensed favors to a cadre of jostling reporters. The decisions made on this spot would influence a generation.

Today the place is occupied by a small woman, the widow of that power-broker, Lady Bird Johnson, who likes to sit under the sugar maples and oaks and listen to birdsong, her gray-flecked hair tucked under a straw sunbonnet.

She's no longer witness and participant in history. There are no jostling and clattering reporters. Only the laughter of mockingbirds, the whine of cicadas, the sway of wind carried through the bluebonnets and white-brushed wild plum she had planted on the roadside nearby.

"I was never fond of the name Lady Bird," she confides, keeping an eye on the treetops. "Please call me by my real name, Claudia." Unfortunately, few people know Claudia. Most of America remembers Lady Bird.

She is considered by many the most effective First Lady since Eleanor Roosevelt, her legacy a battle against highway billboard forests, auto heaps and junk piles and in favor of beauty and sanity in the nation's public landscapes.

WITH A war raging in Vietnam, she planted flowers. She was ridiculed at the time, but the flowers are still there. The Head Start program she sponsored was among the most effective of President Johnson's "Great Society" programs.

She was baptized Claudia Alta Taylor. Her father, Thomas Jefferson Taylor, the son of an Alabama sharecropper, made a fortune selling furniture and processing cotton in the lush bayou country of East Texas. A black nurse gave her the name she never wanted, musing that the 2-year-old infant was "purty as a ladybird."

Her mother might have helped her preserve her Christian name. But Lady Bird scarcely knew her natural mother, who died when the child was 5.

"Nature has always been my refuge and my joy. It thrills me. Even today, there's nothing so magnificent as the feel of a gathering storm. I'm filled with the enormity of that sensation, the strength, the drama, the earth filled with lightning, the roll of thunder, nature all around. I adore storms."

She still takes happy, exploratory walks — at age 73, she tries to stroll at least a mile a day — much to the chagrin of flustered Secret Service agents whose job it is to tail her in dun-colored jeeps and who have lost her more than once in tangled thickets of wildflowers. "She can drive those Secret Service guys crazy," says a friend.

Lady Bird feels she has a debt to pay. On her 70th birthday, she donated 60 acres near Austin, Texas, and $125,000 to create the nation's first wildflower center, a research and growing facility. "There are 25,000 species of wildflowers and we have only done research on about 250," she says. "It was my way of paying the rent for the space I've taken up."

ALTHOUGH SHE enjoys breakfast in bed — coffee, fruits (particularly bananas), cold cereal — she fixes it herself. Lunch and supper are usually light, often eaten over her desk at the LBJ Library or in the small upper-floor apartment she uses when in Austin. Her secret dietary vice: Bit-O-Honey candy bars.

"But I'd like to put an end to thoughts of my boundless energy. For the first time in my life," she admits, "I'm feeling the years."

At times she has trouble concentrating her thoughts, and recently, she fainted at a public gathering. Doctors later diagnosed a touch of diverticulosis. She also suffers from arthritis, although never enough to keep her from pulling weeds from a front-lawn flower patch.

Happy with her looks — she has aged gracefully, keeping trim and vigorous — she admits, "If I had the courage I'd get a nose job."

Lady Bird attended high school in Marshall — hometown of a good friend of later years, author and broadcast commentator Bill Moyers. She graduated with honors, and after a brief stint in junior college transferred to the University of Texas in Austin to fulfill her early career ambition — to become a journalist.

"Journalists live exciting lives. That's what I thought I wanted to do." She got a job working for the school newspaper and managing public relations for the university's intramural sports program. "As it turns out," she says, "I had a pretty fascinating life anyway. I was marvelously lucky."

A TURNING point in her life came on a sunny afternoon in September 1934, still crystalline in memory. Lady Bird, an attractive brown-eyed brunette, dropped in to see a friend in the state capitol building, and chanced upon a tall, reed-thin congressional aide whose charm, ambitions — and talk of his ambitions — seemed boundless.

"Lyndon was very, very good-looking. He was tall and fast-moving, and not just in terms of ambition, but in physical terms. When he went down the hall he seemed to cut the wind on both sides."

A day after the chance meeting, the couple had breakfast together. They had their first date that evening. "I wouldn't call him pushy, but he was mighty straight-forward, determined. He had the most determined manner of anybody I had ever encountered."

They took a long drive. It was to be fateful. "We got in a car and drove and drove and drove and talked and talked and talked and talked. He asked me all about my life. I've never heard so many questions. I took him to some of my favorite haunts. In those days it was out the Bull Creek Road towards Anderson's Mill, and a high hill overlooking a park in the city of Austin.

Claudia "Lady Bird" Johnson

"I knew this was somebody special from the very beginning. He made me catch my breath. He was exciting, vital. He knew what he was going to do, and was probably going to do it successfully. He was probably the best congressional secretary any man ever had. But at the beginning it didn't occur to me that I would marry him."

BUT LYNDON had other plans. On this first date, he asked her to tie the knot. She turned him down cold. "I had what I thought was common sense and I thought marriage at that time was absolutely crazy. We hardly knew each other. On the other hand, I wasn't at all willing to let him depart from my life.

"We sort of see-sawed along on that proposition. He took me to see his mother and father." His father was Sam Ealy Johnson, a former state representative, whose fortunes were then at a low ebb — he'd lost his farm and was scraping by as a state bus inspector. "It was very sad, that meeting. It was clear (Sam) was an old man before his time."

Shortly thereafter, Lady Bird invited the relentless young man to visit her home in Karnack, Texas. "It was on the way back to Washington. He spent the night in the house where I was born and raised. My father liked him from the start. He took me aside and said 'Well, little lady, you've brought home a lot of boys. This time you've brought home a man.' "

There was a second marriage proposal and another rejection. Lyndon was not a man to be put off. He launched a blitz campaign, dashing off a torrent of love letters. Lady Bird still treasures them. "My dear Bird," reads one. ("Bird," then and now, is a term only her best friends are permitted to use.) "This morning I'm ambitious, proud, energetic and very madly in love with you."

The courtship heated up. A running dialogue was conducted day after day, Washington to Karnack, via "that most precarious and uncertain of devices — a country telephone," as she calls it.

Lyndon drove back in the fall and made a final plea. This time Lady Bird gave in, two months after they'd first met. They married in an Episcopal church in San Antonio. The pact was sealed with a $2.50 Sears & Roebuck wedding band; there was little time for fancy gift-giving. He swept her off to his small apartment in Washington.

IT WAS Lyndon's good fortune that Lady Bird knew how to prepare turnip greens, cornbread and chili — haute cuisine of the Texas prairie. "I had a garden for years and years and I tried to grow those things I knew were not that readily available in Washington restaurants." The down-home fare and hospitality helped attract and hold one of Lyndon's father's old statehouse legislative buddies. She called him Mr. Sam. Others called him the Honorable Speaker of the House, Sam Rayburn.

"From the beginning I just loved him. I loved him personally and I loved him for being the type of public servant he was.

"(Lyndon) absorbed like a sponge and became his protege," eventually to exceed Rayburn's skill in operating the levers of power. "I was a bit afraid of him at first. But I grew to love him. I loved the stories he told, his one-phrase descriptions of people. He could be blunt. To him Congress was made up of workhorses and showhorses. He preferred the workhorses."

THE RANCH was built near the turn of the century by a family of German settlers. At first Lady Bird hated it. But Lyndon, who by 1951 was a congressman and knew the place from his youth, was not be denied.

When the ranch owner, his aunt, asked Lyndon to take the place off her hands, "he practically promised on the spot." When he broke the news to his wife, "I was mad as hops. We had a perfectly nice home in Austin and the ranch needed a thousand repairs. (But) he wanted it badly. It would have been cruel not to let him have it. I agreed.

"We went to work on it in February 1952. What you work on you come to love, if it's a worthwhile project. We moved in in July 1952 and it became our home ever since."

Lady Bird hired an architect and accommodated the place to her growing family. Lynda Bird Johnson was born in 1944 and Luci Baines Johnson arrived three years later. The initials "LBJ" fit the whole family.

To the original stone structure and wooden lean-to in the rear, Lady Bird added an east wing with connecting bedrooms, a large kitchen and a dining area with a broad bay window which permitted her to study the hummingbirds. In back she built a covered garage. Today it houses her 1977 Mercury Marquis.

On the west side she had built a large study. It was in this room, filled with White House mementos, that Lyndon watched television news coverage of the Vietnam war and wrestled with himself as his ranking in the public polls — and so he believed, in history — eroded month by bitter month.

During those exciting and terrible years in which the president moved from "immense popularity to extreme unpopularity, by turn," Lady Bird, who had become her husband's closest political confidante, kept a private dairy. "I knew I was in a strategic spot in a strategic time," she says. Besides "memory is a fragile servant" and "I had a front row seat to history, with the freedom to watch and record."

HER RECOLLECTION of Lyndon's toughest single night, the one in which he told the nation he was quitting office:

"Lyndon seemed to be congealing into a calm, quiet state of mind, out of reach. And I, what did I feel? ... There was much in me that cried out to go on, to call on every friend we have, to give and work, to spend and fight, right up to the last. And if we lost, well and good — we were free! But if we didn't run, we could be free without all this draining of our friends.

"Lyndon's speech had been, I believe, nobly done," she says later, "and in its way almost as dramatic as our entrance into the job."

She also recalls the entrance, the day Camelot fell; it was Nov. 22, 1963, Dallas:

"It all began so beautifully. After a drizzle in the morning, the sun came out bright and clear. We were driving into (downtown) Dallas. ... The streets were lined with people — lots and lots of people — the children all smiling, placards, confetti, people waving from windows."

Then a staccato of sharp explosions. "I thought the noise must come from firecrackers — part of the celebration." A Secret Service agent vaulted on top of Lyndon in a blur of motion, confusion.

"I cast one last look over my shoulder and saw ... a bundle of pink, just like a drift of blossoms, lying on the back seat. It was Mrs. Kennedy lying over the president's body."

Later, aboard Air Force One, "I looked at (Jackie)... stained with blood. One leg was almost entirely covered with it and her right glove was caked, it was caked with blood — her husband's blood. Somehow that was one of the poignant sights — that immaculate woman exquisitely dressed, and caked in blood." Jackie refused to change her clothes.

"With almost an element of fierceness — if a person that gentle, that dignified, can be said to have that quality — she said, 'I want them to see what they have done to Jack.' "

Lady Bird's own time of testing, perhaps her most painful White House experience, took place on Jan. 18, 1968, the day she entertained various representatives of social action programs. Singer Eartha Kitt was among the guests.

Quoting from her dairy: "Advancing a step toward me and looking with intense directness at me — she is a good actress — she said, 'We send the best of this country off to be shot and maimed. I am a mother and I know the feeling of having a baby come out of my guts. I have a baby and then you send him off to war.' "

AFTER HER White House years, Lady Bird could have lived a life of patrician retirement, easing out of public commitments and counting profits from the LBJ Company, an Austin-based business controlling a slew of broadcast and other properties. But as First Lady — and long after — she has lent her name, influence and profits to a skein of beautification ventures.

"It's not a matter of winning a conflict, man versus nature. It's more a matter of integration, learning to live in harmony with nature. We can, I believe, arrange our cities in a more orderly and intelligent fashion, and do what it takes to keep the rivers clean and the air clean and preserve the native plants.

She remains a trustee of the National Geographic Society and is active in charitable causes. Each summer she sets aside a couple of weeks to take one of her seven grandchildren — six of them granddaughters — to federal parklands.

She's close to her grandchildren. One recent weekend she dropped in to see a college ROTC review by 19-year-old Lyn Nugent, son of Pat Nugent and Luci. (They later divorced; Luci is now married to a Canadian businessman.) "It meant a lot to (Lyn), and to me."

IN THE yellow sitting room at the ranch she pores over snapshots of children and grandchildren. At times laughter gushes forth. For a child who grew up without a mother, the attachments and memories are strong.

"Am I a good mother? Everybody wants to be a good mother. It turns out my children were very interesting people. I love my children and I've got pretty good common sense. Not great, but pretty good."

The White House years tightened family bonds. "Living in the White House brings you closer. You become a very close circle, much closer than before. Whatever combat you face, you at least have each other. We had some touching moments together."

Lady Bird remembers her first impressions of home, when home was 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue.

"Mrs. Kennedy, who couldn't have been nicer, considering the distress she was under, had me over for tea.

"As soon as I stepped out of the elevator onto the second floor (the family quarters) I got the feeling I had entered my own world, a place where I could pad around in bedroom slippers and my old robe.

"If somebody doesn't want to live in the White House, there's something wrong with them. I loved it — the beauty of the place, the sense of history."

In many respects, Lady Bird is more alone than she's ever been in her life, save for those childhood years. Admired by the American public who visit the rambling ranch in busloads each day, she cannot replace many of her closest and dearest friends who have moved away or died.

Her daughters live thousands of miles away. Lyndon, of course, died in 1973. He's buried only a stone's throw from the ranchhouse, near his birthplace. She describes her "bittersweet, wonderful and sad" feelings of visiting childhood haunts recently, and complains about how the early pioneers referred to widows as relics ("relicts"), broken remnants of another age. She never was, and will never be, one of those.

LBJ

It's certainly a disarming image, LBJ — the tough Texan, former leader of the free world and the man who had his finger on the nuclear war button — checking out his Hereford herd while humming along to "Raindrops keep fallin' on my head."

That's the sort of folksy, yet larger than life, image of LBJ one is likely to come away from the Lyndon B. Johnson National Historical Park with. Visitors will probably hear about Johnson's poverty-fighting Great Society programs during their tours, but aren't at all likely to hear about the common 1968 anti-war chant "Hey, hey, LBJ, how many kids did you kill today?"

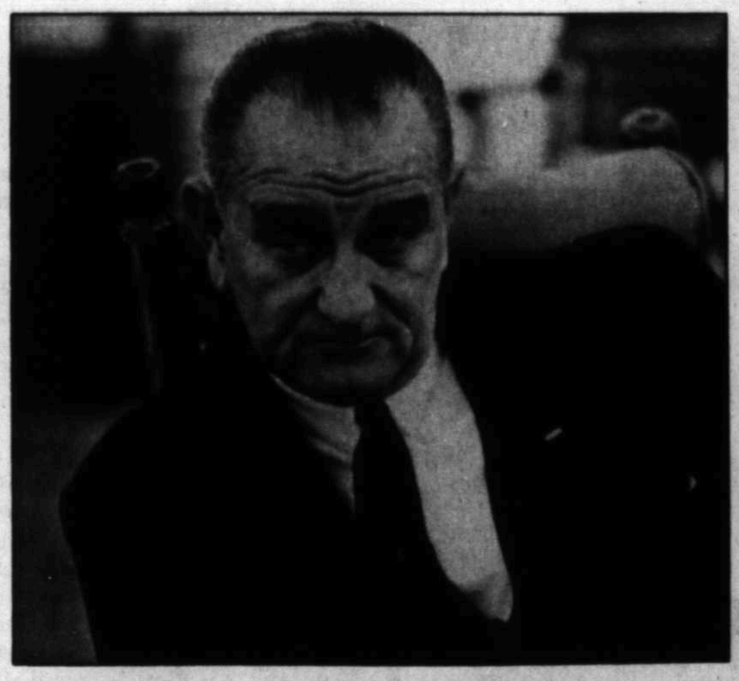

At one point during a recent tour, Snyder asked his tour group, "What issues were important during his presidency ...," then he hastily added, "besides Vietnam."

IF NOTHING else, this benign view is probably a reflection of the way Johnson saw himself.

Tour guides say that one of the former president's habits after he retired was to sit on the ranch's highest ground watching the sun set and the electric lights twinkle on in the neighboring farmhouses. LBJ had fought hard as a Congressman to bring electricity into the Hill Country in late 1939, to finally bring that land into the 20th century.

Sitting atop his hill, he must have felt proud of that.

IN HIS published memoirs, "The Vantage Point: Perspectives of the

Lyndon Baines Johnson

Presidency 1963-1969," Johnson described his return to the ranch after leaving the presidency in 1969 this way:

"The weather was mild and warm at the Ranch. After we changed into comfortable clothes, Lady Bird and I walked around the yard together. In the carport behind the house the luggage was piled in a giant mound. For the first time in five years there were no aides to carry the bags inside. Lady Bird looked at the scene and began to laugh. 'The coach has turned back into a pumpkin,' she said, "and the mice have all run away.' "

LBJ tour tips offered

From Staff Reports

For more information on the Lyndon B. Johnson National Historical Park, contact the park headquarters at (512) 868-7128.

Most of the sites open to the public — including visitor centers, the Boyhood Home, the LBJ Birthplace and the LBJ Ranch bus tour — are accessible to persons in wheelchairs.

Also, written scripts of the tours for both the Boyhood Home and the LBJ Ranch are available for hearing-impaired individuals.

Normally, visitors to the park do not need to make reservations, but sizable groups wishing to take bus tours of the LBJ Ranch should call (512) 644-2241 and make advance reservations.

LBJ library focuses on presidency

From Staff Reports

The Lyndon B. Johnson National Historical Park is not the only monument to the late president that can be found in Central Texas.

In Austin, only about 50 miles east of the national park, is the Lyndon B. Johnson Presidential Library. This white, monolithic building houses a tremendous amount of material and memorabilia from the Johnson administration.

While the actual four-story library stacks are closed to the public, the rest of the building is a museum containing exhibit cases full of presents given to LBJ while he was in office, displays on his career and even a replica of the Oval Office as it looked when he occupied it.

In addition to its permanent LBJ collection, the library also hosts traveling exhibits on various political and historical topics.

The Lyndon B. Johnson Presidential Library is located at 2313 Red River on the University of Texas campus. Hours are 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday-Sunday and there is no admission charge.

Campers on the road again

By ERMA BOMBECK

As I was driving down the highway the other day, it occurred to me that the gas glut has brought back an American tradition that for the last year or so has been parked in driveways awaiting better times: the recreational vehicle.

For a while there, it looked as though campers were destined to become the biggest planters ever built or the most expensive bedroom for "sleep-overs" ever constructed.

Not anymore. They are all, in the words of Willie Nelson, on the road again. As a driver who considers passing other vehicles one of life's great adventures, I found myself following a 32-footer with tandem wheels and a sign that read, "The Vagabonds, Ruby and Rusty, Kendalville, Indiana."

I knew in my heart that if they did not turn off for gas or food, I would follow them right into Kendalville, rather than attempt to go around them.

For the next hour and a half, I had a lot of time to think about Ruby and Rusty and to reflect on my own camping days. I knew that Ruby was a sport. At that moment she was reading a road map to her husband, who did not care where the sun was setting; he was going east, and if the sun was going down there, God had made a big mistake!

She would worry about the gears burning out when they went uphill and the brakes burning out when they went downhill. She would worry about sudden stops and wonder if she had remembered to lock into place all the cupboard doors, and wonder if she would have mayonnaise and breakfast cereal to clean up.

She would worry about getting a spot in a campground that they could pull through instead of backing in and running the risk of driving over Rusty's foot again.

Her life was built around Laundromats and concern about how far it was to the next one. The big saucepan she usually washed sheets in was being used to store bait.

The scenic wonders were secondary. Grand Canyon. Big deal! What she really wanted to see loom over the horizon was a dumping station for their holding tank.

Actually, this is all speculation. I never saw Ruby or Rusty. They pulled off the road at about 5:30 that afternoon. I figured things would seem better to both of them after they had dinner.

Personal services often to personal

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — They know the intimate details of our lives — about our counting the gray hairs on our heads and the fallen hairs on our combs; about beef at our dinner table because we ate hamburger at lunch; about our habit of wearing our hearts, along with our ball-point pen marks, on every white shirt pocket and sleeve. They know, and yet because "they" are our hairdressers, butchers, baby sitters, cleaners and cobblers — business people in service industries — they shouldn't know. And that is precisely where the problems start.

"What you've got here are business relationships that are based on parties getting equal value in an exchange of goods or services, being overlaid with very personal 'communal' relationships, which are based on the psychological benefits of parties responding to each other's perceived needs," said Robert J. Gould, a consumer psychologist and associate research director of Needham Porter Novelli, a public relations and marketing communications company based in Washington.

Joseph Smith, president of Oxtoby-Smith Inc., a leading consumer research concern in New York, said: "What makes these relationships so improbable, so peculiar and so common is that there is no anonymity — we know the butcher, for example, and that the service he provides is himself, in this case his ability to select meat. If we don't like the product, it is the person we are indicting."

MOREOVER, THESE relationships have the trappings of intimacy. "They involve repeated touching, talking," Smith said. "Often there's a special event, like a wedding, in which we are inviting service providers into our lives."

But then, they are already privy to our lives. "The laundry has its hands on my dirty shirts, sheets, towels and tablecloths, and who knows what tales they tell," Smith said.

As Gould put it: "We've allowed what are essentially business people to get an emotional hold on us."

That can mean trouble, as in crossing the road to avoid passing the shop we no longer use. Or hiding our cardboard coffee cups under a coat as we hurry by our usual takeout shop. Or telling the tailor we moved away (well, actually down the street), which is why he doesn't see us anymore.

"I call that the art of 'fake confrontations,' in which I give a plausible, but not truthful, explanation of why I don't use a particular person's services anymore," said Suzy Kalter, who wrote "The Complete Book of Dallas," published this month by Harry N. Abrams. "I don't tell the whole truth because I don't have the patience to say the laundry down the street does a better job, and then hope my laundry will improve. But I say something because I'm tired of skulking around feeling guilty that I left without any explanation."

"Guilty and disloyal," said Bambe Levine Rachman, who heads her own public relations firm in New York. "That's what I felt when I used a hairdresser other than Charles."

CHARLES, SHE said, is like a family member, invited to seders and Thanksgiving dinners. "But he wasn't willing to give me the dramatically different look I wanted," Rachman said. "So I went to an expensive guy who gave me a good cut that looked awful on me. It was September — two months before Thanksgiving — and I panicked. What would Chuck say?" Nothing, apparently. Rachman said she frizzed her hair in a desperate attempt to hide the deed; the ruse worked.

Margaret S. Clark, an associate professor of psychology at Carnegie-Mellon University who has studied business and personal relationships, said: "People prone to these types of reactions probably score high on the 'communal scale' — they tend to treat most people like friends. They are probably people who are very helpful or who turn to others for help. They also tend to disclose a lot about themselves."

Why, then, don't they disclose that they are dissatisfied with the service or that they found someone better?

"Usually, it's because we don't want a confrontation," said Gould, "even though everyone might benefit from it. The smart business person would be getting important marketing information, while the customer could walk away guilt-free."

'Voice mail' installed for hotel guests

OSAKA, Japan (AP) — An Osaka hotel has installed a computerized "voice mail" service that enables callers to leave messages for guests in a selection of languages, according to MIS Week.

The management information systems journal says callers trying to reach registered guests by telephone are prompted to leave a message at the sound of a beep. When guests return to the hotel their messages are played back in the caller's choice of tongue.

Messages can be played back in English, French, German, Spanish or Peking-Chinese, eliminating some of previous loss in translation of more than 100 messages during an average day.

In a further step to eliminate handwritten messages, notes left by visitors are run through an optical character reader and, after being processed by an attached computer, are rewritten on a printer. The printed messages are then taken to the guest's room.

IT'S YOUR LIFE

Proper health care important

By STEVE A. EDWARDS

"For Your PILL DRILL you'll go to Room Six Sixty-three where a voice will instruct you,

'Repeat after me ...

This small white pill is what I munch at breakfast and right after lunch.

I take the pill that's kelly green before each meal and in between.

These loganberry-colored pills I take for early morning chills.

I take the pill with zebra stripes to cure my early evening gripes.

These orange-tinted ones, of course, I take to cure my charley horse.

I take three blues at half-past eight to slow my exhalation rate.

On alternate nights at nine p.m. I swallow pinkies. Four of them.

The reds, which make my eyebrows strong, I eat like popcorn all day long.

The speckled browns are what I keep beside my bed to help me sleep.

This long flat one is what I take if I should die before I wake.' "

These words are from the book, "You're Only Old Once," by Dr. Seuss underline in humorous fashion the measures to which we go in our day and age to maintain our health. Seemingly, there are pills everywhere for every ache and condition imaginable. Many obviously are of the prescription variety, but there are also a multitude of different colors, sizes and shapes being purchased on an over-the-counter basis.

Americans want good health. The overwhelming desire is to live longer and more active lives. This attitude in part is a natural instinct. Some of this feeling, though, is shaped by the fact that we live in a society which strongly resists the aging process. This is not only a time in which a denial of death is evident, but also one in which we simply do want to grow older.

Based upon the many advertisements and marketing trends, many individuals have become so programmed — even obsessed — with the idea that it's a sin to age. The belief is that you've got to stay young to have fun, to enjoy life or not to miss anything. A friend of mine was concerned because she wondered if anyone would accept her.

Yet, as concerned, as we may be about health and longevity, a multitude of individuals not wanting to face the reality of aging, or even death, do very little about taking care of their health. Instead, some do just the opposite. Then, after much damage has been inflicted because of lifestyle, diet and exercise, they turn to a myriad of pills for the instant or short-term cure.

Early care and preparation of health planning is imperative as we begin to look toward our future years. This contact with physicians should begin early in our adult years, but especially as we move into our late 30s. This means not waiting for health problems to occur, but having a regular time set aside for physical check-ups and consultations.

There are many specific things you may want to discuss with your doctor on that visit, so it is suggested that you make a list of them before your session. Your list may include:

- Your entire medical history.
- Your past and present work, as well as job history.
- The activities in which you would like to participate.
- Questions involving diet and eating habits.
- All medications now being taken and any drugs that may have side effects.
- Inform him of pre-retirement or retirement planning so he can add to those areas that could lead to a more healthy life.

There are three types of doctor-/patient relationships you can have: passive, cooperative or mutually participating. Passive results in little, if any, worthwhile relationship. Cooperative provides a greater concern, but mutually participating makes a partnership of your health concerns and ways to solve them.

Remember you assume the ultimate responsibility for yourself. If you sense or feel a change in your health, don't hesitate to see your doctor. Do not let fear or attitude prevent an examination. Early diagnosis and treatment is vital to good health.

Be aware also that as you age your senses do deteriorate. Some individuals, whose sense of pain may have decreased, will put off seeing a physician until sickness becomes so well embedded it's difficult to correct. This is a good reason to have your regular check-up.

None of us have a guarantee on the longevity of life. However, we can have the comfort of knowing that we have taken precautions and attempted to do everything for the betterment of our bodies.

This, in itself, may be the contributing factor to a longer, healthier life.

Steve Edwards is executive director of Community and Senior Services and the Visiting Nurse Service of Midland.

Circumstances limit confidentiality

Copley News Service

CNS Graphic

When psychologist Reid Meloy learned his client had been placing bullets on top of family photographs, he did something once thought taboo in his profession.

He broke the confidentiality of his client, a 21-year-old law student, to warn the client's wife of potential violence.

"I told her it was my duty to warn her that I felt she was right now in physical danger," said Meloy, chief of San Diego County's forensic mental health services. "He had not made any specific threats, but given his behavior and denial of behavior, for me that was enough of an actual threat."

Historically, mental health professionals have closely guarded their clients' secrets.

But the walls of confidentiality are wearing away, creating legal and ethical dilemmas nationwide throughout the mental health field.

"I don't think there is a more vital issue than confidentiality," said psychologist Ilona Vail of Poway, Calif. "Basically, normal people with life problems are coming in to talk because it is confidential."

THE PROBLEM has been around for more than two centuries, since doctors established the Hippocratic Oath as their code of ethics.

In 1974, however, it took on a dramatic new look when the California Supreme Court ruled against a psychiatrist whose patient killed his girlfriend.

The patient, Prosenjit Poddar, a student at the University of California at Berkeley, had expressed to the psychiatrist fantasies of killing his girlfriend, Tatiana Tarasoff. The therapist also learned from a friend of Poddar that he planned to buy a gun.

The psychiatrist told campus police of Poddar's intentions, but attempts to commit Poddar to a mental hospital failed. The psychiatrist did not warn Tarasoff about the threat by Poddar, who soon dropped out of treatment.

Poddar later shot Tarasoff with a pellet gun, chased her from her home with a butcher knife and stabbed her to death.

After Tarasoff's death, her parents sued the university, where Poddar had been seeking student health psychotherapy. They lost the case, but on appeal the Supreme Court ruled in their favor.

The court said psychotherapists have a duty to warn in cases where they know their patients are a threat to someone and a warning "is essential to avert danger."

Psychotherapists include psychologists, who deal with the science of the mind, and psychiatrists, who are medically trained to deal with disorders of the mind.

THE TARASOFF case and various laws that were enacted in other states raise a wide range of still-unanswered questions.

What, for example, is the duty of a psychotherapist whose patient threatens in therapy to burn down a building or scratch someone's car? And if a child makes a violent threat toward someone, should the parents be notified, even though they are not the intended victims?

Therapists say decisions like that of the Tarasoff case have had sweeping effects in the profession — most notably a rush to buy malpractice insurance.

Last January, California lawmakers tried to ease some of the concern about liability, requiring psychotherapists to report a threat only if the potential victim is "reasonably identifiable."

The new law has been hailed by some professionals as a step in their favor.

But others fear lawmakers still have gone too far in trying to turn mental health specialists into community watchdogs. They say the demise of doctor-patient confidentiality could ultimately do as much harm as good.

CONFIDENTIALITY dilemmas have been important to psychiatrist Tom Rodgers of Hillcrest, Calif. His life has been threatened at least three times by patients upset about diagnoses he made of them in court-related cases.

The death threats were made to other psychotherapists, who relayed the information to Rodgers, he said.

Rodgers also has been on the other side of the Tarasoff issue, twice reporting the threats of clients made in his confidence.

"I made sure the intended victims knew I was concerned," Rodgers said. "I contacted police in one case. In the other, the individual himself contacted police."

Scientists research aging process

Hearst News Service

Nearly five centuries after Ponce de Leon's unsuccessful expedition to find the Fountain of Youth, scientists still promise no youth-inducing fountains, no magic potions, no antidotes against aging. Evidence shows that no matter how significant future medical breakthroughs may be and no matter how healthy the individual, the life span for humans probably will never surpass 115.

But don't despair. Modern-day humans never will outshine the biblical patriarch Methuselah, who was four years short of 1,000 when he took his last breath, but the possibility of improving the quality of life well into the 80s, 90s and beyond never has looked more promising.

"The 20th century has seen great increases in life expectancy," says Dr. Edward Masoro, chairman of the University of Texas-Health Science Center's physiology department, and one of the nation's leaders in aging research. "Not because we've found the 'Fountain of Youth,' but because we've solved a lot of problems that didn't allow people to age."

Over the past two decades, the average American's life expectancy has increased by about three years — to 77 for women and 72 for men — largely because of healthier diets, improved medical care and breakthroughs in the treatment of heart attacks, the nation's No. 1 killer.

Those numbers are remarkable when compared to 1900, when life expectancy was 45 and people died of simple infections such as strep throat. The Romans made it to about 20, although an occasional tough cookie lived to 100 even then.

HEALTH SCIENCE Center researchers are involved in a variety of projects that they hope will lead to understanding and eventual elimination of other diseases that plague the elderly. Among them:

- Masoro has discovered that forced dieting slows the aging process in rats. Understanding how this works may one day lead to extended and healthier life expectancy in humans.
- Dr. Gregory Mundy, head of the Center's division of endocrinology and metabolism, has been awarded a $1.5 million three-year grant to research osteoporosis, a crippling disease caused by gradual loss of bone mass, affecting an estimated 10 million elderly Americans.

"Our understanding of how bone functions is changing dramatically," says Mundy, who predicts that within the next 10 years new therapeutic drugs will inhibit the deterioration process. "Maybe there is a 'Fountain of Youth' for bone out there. If not, at least a whip for bone cells to keep them healthy longer."

- Dr. Frederick Grover, a chest surgeon at the Center, is leading a research team that has made major advances in combating lung cancer, the leading cause of death by cancer. Grover is using chemotherapy and/or radiation immediately before or immediately after surgery and has found that, with some patients, the survival rate is significantly prolonged.
- Dr. Timothy Caris, clinical professor of medicine, marvels at the advances made in combating hypertension, or high blood pressure, which, when undetected, leads to heart attacks.

"Now there's irrefutable evidence that the length of life is inversely related to your blood pressure," Caris says.

IN OTHER promising moves, the government recently gave two drug companies permission to market interferon for the treatment of a rare kind of leukemia — a dramatic breakthrough in the battle against cancer.

Scientists in Boston have isolated a hormone they say may provide a tool for curing female reproductive cancers that kill about 22,000 American women yearly.

Masaro is leading one of the most interesting research projects on aging. Rats kept on stringently restricted diets at the Health Science Center have lived for four years — nearly twice as long as rats allowed to eat at will.

Not only did the first group of rats live longer, Masoro notes, but they were more physically active, their fur was velvety smooth and their physiological systems were maintained at higher levels.

Cap Anamour II seeks to rescue 'boat people'

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Vu Thanh Thuy is a news assistant for The San Diego Union. In 1979, she, her husband, Duong Phue, and their two children left Vietnam on a refugee boat. They were captured by pirates, but rescued by representatives of the U.N. High Commissioner on Refugees and ultimately reached the United States. Thuy's husband has been working as a volunteer on the Cap Anamour II since May 22.)

By VU THANH THUY
Copley News Service

"The rickety boat has drifted on the South China Sea for three days. Time seems frozen to us, 52 boat people packed against each other inside the tiny boat, letting our fate be decided by the winds and waves to nowhere.

"There are some dry rice and noodles left, but no drinking water.

"Some are becoming so thirsty, they think of drinking ocean water, even though they know it might kill them.

"One teenager, alone on the boat, bursts into tears, calling for her mother's help.

"A child, pressed by the force of people even closer to its mother's breasts, cries a tiny cry.

"The boat engine died the first night at sea. Without the engine, the pumping system quit working. Ocean water leaked into the boat, making the 27-foot-long craft heavier and heavier.

"On the first day, right after the engine died, the men began bailing the ocean water from the boat: The water leaked in continuously, steadily.

"Manpower is limited. Pans and bowls are used for tools.

"On the second day, women and girls were added to the work force. We worked constantly for two days and two nights, fighting seasickness, starvation, thirst, and our growing despair.

"On this third day, many people have given up working. Catholics start last rites, while others lie still in the dank and stifling cabin, waiting for death.

"During all this time, we have spotted seven huge ships. Each time we hung a big white blanket lettered SOS on top of our boat.

"At first we made a crude fire to get the ships' attention, and later even tried to burn our own boat to attempt to force the ships to rescue us.

"THE WOMEN screamed for help, lifting their babies up to be seen by the big ships.

"But none of the ships stopped to help.

"Each kept a distance from the tiny boat and went on its way, even after seeing the grief and suffering of the people aboard the floundering craft.

"Waves grew bigger, clouds darker, pre-telling a big storm on the horizon.

"The small boat is now heavy with water, lifted up and down by the tides on the immense ocean, carrying 52 Vietnamese lives to nowhere.

"The ocean water mixes in the cabin with the foul smell of sweat and seasickness.

"At this moment, one can smell the presence of death."

IT WAS 10 p.m. June 25, 1986, in the South China Sea, 10 minutes before the mercy ship Cap Anamour II spotted and rescued the tiny boat.

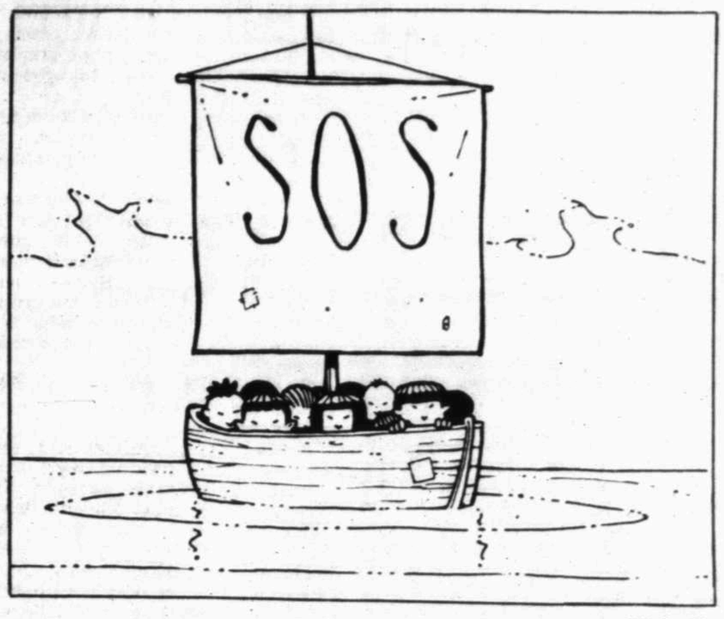

At 11 p.m. came the big storm, with its violent winds and huge waves guaranteed to sink the rickety refugee boat and drown its 52 passengers. But the Cap Anamour II got there in time.

This story is not fiction. It is the account of one of the newly rescued refugees, radioed from the Cap Anamour II to the writer in San Diego.

Stories like it are still happening every day to the Vietnamese refugees who are called "Boat People" in the South China Sea.

They are still fleeing their communist-controlled homeland in small, wooden fishing boats.

Hundreds of thousands of them have died on the high seas due to drowning, hunger, thirst and attacks by the pirates who operate primarily from Southern Thailand. Attacks by pirates include robberies, rapes, abductions, killings and rammings. They only prey upon the boat people, since they know the refugees have no nation to defend them.

CNS Graphic

The Cap Anamour II has been operating in the South China Sea since March as a combined effort of three groups from diverse nationalities: the San Diego-based refugee group Boat People S.O.S. Committee, the French group Medecins Du Monde (Physicians of the World), and the West German group Cap Anamour.

The ship has rescued 529 refugees, most of them found near death.

After rescue, the refugees are taken to a camp in the Philippines to wait for the resettlement procedure.

TO BE accepted from the ship into any refugee camp in Southeast Asia, the boat people need to have visas from Western governments. For the current mission, 765 visas have been granted: 300 from France, 300 from West Germany, 100 from Canada and 65 from Belgium — and none from the United States.

The San Diego refugee group has requested 1,000 visas from the United States for the refugees rescued by mercy ships in the South China Sea. Again, without the visas, these boat people will have nowhere to go.

However, the United States has not agreed to take any refugees from the Cap Anamour II.

In a letter responding to the committee's request last January, the State Department said that refugee admission requests, by law, must each be screened individually.

For the moment, the Cap Anamour II is still at sea, carrying 358 newly rescued boat people without enough visas for all of them. Of these, 236 will be landed in the Filipino camp to wait for resettlement in Europe or Canada.

The remaining 122 will have nowhere to go, and will have to stay on the rescue ship indefinitely.

The San Diego committee tried a new appeal to the State Department at the recent three-day national Indochinese Community Leadership Convention in Washington, D.C.

This was the first time in 11 years that Indochinese refugees have met in a convention to have their voice heard by the American legislators and administrators.

"The United States should take its share along with European countries in granting visas to the boat people rescued by mercy ships," said Linh Nguyen, a convention participant.

THE COMMITTEE'S recommendations were presented at convention hearings of international and national panels made up of congressional and federal administration officials.

Also involved in the panels were officers of the U.N. High Commissioner on Refugees.

"The United States always takes the ones rescued by American ships," said Frank A. Sieverts, a State Department special assistant for public affairs.

"The nation with which the ship is registered has to take them all; it's the rule of ship rescues at sea," Sieverts added.

Because of this rule, "international ships generally pass by refugee boats in distress to avoid political and financial troubles caused by rescuing the boat people," said Phuong Tran, the former ambassador of South Vietnam to the United States and a speaker at the convention.

A U.N. Refugee Commission source estimated that since the fall of South Vietnam in April 1975, 200,000 to 250,000 boat people have died on the high seas while looking for freedom.

Last September the United States joined with other nations in a U.N. High Commissioner's program to publicize the need for refugee rescues at sea, to collectively guarantee the resettlement of the boat people picked up by merchant vessels and to help pay the expenses incurred by merchant ships in rescue operations.

But the United States was not supportive of the Cap Anamour II's effort.

"We are not discouraging the humanitarian effort, but we think such work would encourage people to flee in danger," Sieverts said.

"Without a boat waiting out there," he continued, "these people could have stayed and waited to leave through the Orderly Departure Program or a safer way."

THE ORDERLY Departure Program was set up under the auspices of the U.N. High Commissioner of Refugees in 1979.

The State Department last April reported that more than 100,000 persons have left Vietnam under the program, 40,000 of them for the United States.

The majority of people officially allowed to leave Vietnam through the Orderly Departure Program were Amerasians, elderly, women and children.

To leave the country under the program, one has to get official permission from the communist government.

Thus, this so called "safer way" to which Sieverts refers is also a nearly impossible way to leave Vietnam for people who were loyal to the United States and South Vietnam during the war.

For 11 years since the fall of Vietnam, Vietnamese people have never stopped fleeing their homeland, with or without a ship waiting at sea to rescue them.

Their motto is, "Freedom or death on the high seas."

The goal of Cap Anamour II is to reduce the numerous tragedies of the boat people at sea.

Although a State Department official has said, "Such a mission could rescue only a small number of boat people, while the refugee issue is in the hundreds of thousands," Cap Anamour II is still on its way to the rescue, believing that even one life saved is worth the effort.

Splendor of Finger Lakes draws millions of visitors

By DIRK JOHNSON
New York Times News Service

PENN YAN, N.Y. — On the front porch of an old farmhouse here, Earl and Barbara Askins settled into rocking chairs and gazed at the gentle waves lapping against the wooded shore of Keuka Lake.

"You can feel the stillness," said Barbara, a business executive from a Baltimore suburb. "It's so peaceful, so serene — so unlike what we're used to."

In the distance, the majestic bluffs and gorges, lush vineyards and deep, blue waters cast a soothing spell upon the Finger Lakes region, which was sculpted centuries ago by glaciers. And the small villages along the winding roads, which Mennonite farmers still travel in horse-drawn buggies, evoke a sense of a slower and simpler era.

Large hotels are scarce here, and the motels are relatively modest. But the natural splendor of the Finger Lakes area draws seven million visitors annually from throughout the nation and beyond, making it the most popular tourist destination in upstate, according to the State Commerce Department. And local officials say they are having the best tourism season here in years.

"We're on a roll, no doubt about it," said Dick Eisenhart, a spokesman for the Finger Lakes Tourism Association. "It's better than last year, the year before, 10 years ago or 30 years ago."

The motels have attracted many Canadians with a "foreign policy" promotion that gives them a 20 percent discount to compensate for the exchange rate, which devalues their currency. State parks and private campgrounds, meanwhile, are doing such a thriving business that some travelers have been turned away.

BUT PERHAPS the fastest-growing tourist enterprise has been the bed-and-breakfast inns, which were virtually nonexistent in the Finger Lakes region until about five years ago. Today, dozens of the inns are being operated by local families in homes with extra bedrooms.

"It gives you a real flavor of living here," said Barbara Askins, who stayed at Finton's Landing, a restored Victorian home in the shade of oak trees on the lakefront.

She said her two young children, who have grown up in a suburban condominium, were gaining a rich experience in country life. When they arrived at the inn the other night, 9-year-old Earl peered at the imposing old house in the darkness and asked, with apparent delight, "Do you suppose it has ghosts?"

The next morning, after a breakfast of blueberries and hot cinnamon rolls, the children played a game of tag at the lake with a black Labrador retriever named Byron, who lives at the inn. Then they set off with their parents on a hike along a nature trail, followed by a visit to a vineyard.

The Finger Lakes region does not draw visitors to a single, major attraction. Instead, vacationers tend to amble about parts of the 9,000-square-mile area, which includes 11 lakes and 20 state parks, and take some of the countless tours — from the Corning Glass Museum to the Women's Hall of Fame in Seneca Falls. Not infrequently, cars pull off a country road so visitors can stare into the distance.

AT THE Wickham winery in Hector, visitors ride a hay wagon over the lush green hillsides along Lake Seneca, and learn that the deep glacial lakes here — some are more than 700 feet deep — provide the proper climate for growing grapes. Since the waters here almost never freeze over, the lake breeze warms the vineyards in winter.

The visitors also learn that not all wines are better with age. Indeed, some turn to vinegar. They are reminded to always lay wine bottles on their sides so the corks will not dry out. And they are told that corks are more mystical than practical; plastic screw caps, it turns out, do a better job of sealing the wine.

Perhaps more than any region in New York State, the economy of the Finger Lakes relies on tourism. Industry has never really existed here, state commerce officials say, and dairy and grape farming has fallen on difficult times. Many farmers have lost their land. Some farms have been divided up, with plots sold for vacation homes.

PIPE DREAMS

The cost of adding a new bathroom depends to some extent on its relationship to the existing drainage system. It is not a big problem to bring hot and cold water pipes to almost any place in the house. They are small-diameter pipes that can be run almost anywhere. The drains and sewer lines, however, require a slight downward pitch on horizontal runs from the fixture to the sewer lines. Also, the drain lines for new plumbing fixtures must be vented. This means that they must be connected to a line that runs up through the house venting above the roof. It may be possible to connect the new fixtures to the existing venting system. If not, a new vent pipe is necessary.

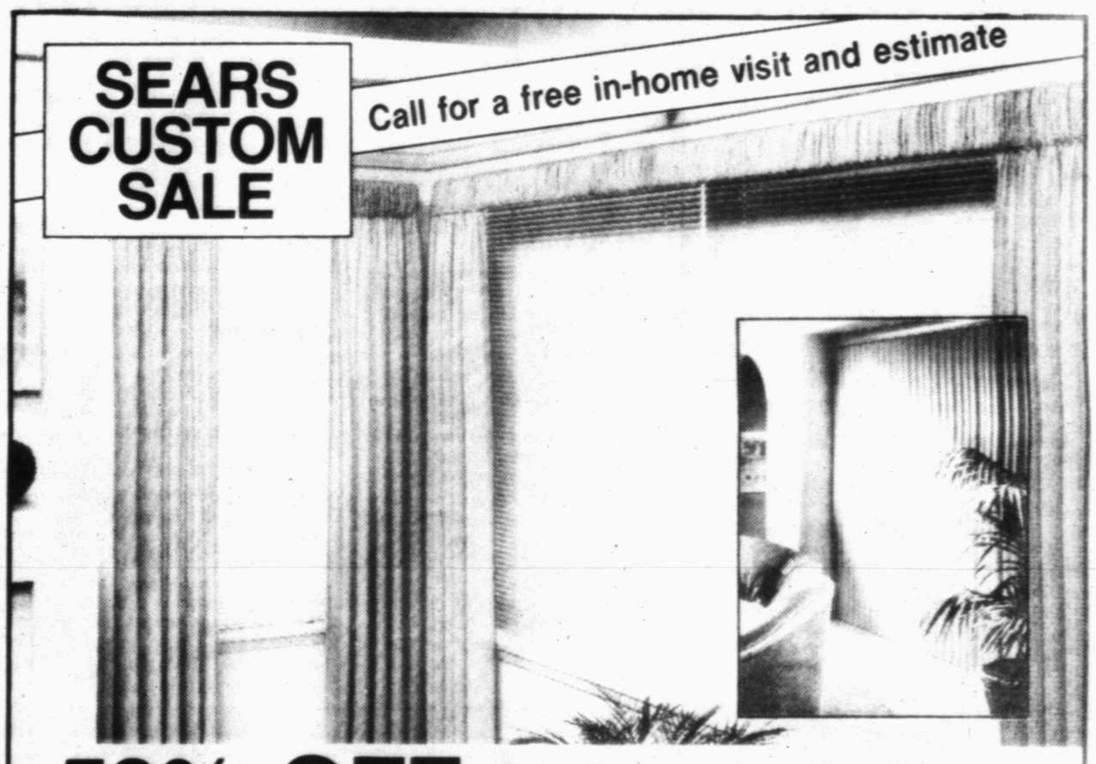

Have you ever spent your vacation up on a ladder, painting the house? You may never need to do it again. MADE IN THE SHADE

Auto-Shades prove hot seller

By DEANNA J. NEAL
Business/Oil Writer

A cool item is making hot sales in Midland these days.

A piece of accordian-pleated cardboard designed to keep down the temperature of car interiors is a hot selling item according to Karen McCague, manager of La Dulceria specialty shop in Midland. "People are drawn to this crazy product. As a matter of fact, we sold out our first shipment of the shades."

With average August temperatures climbing near the century mark in West Texas, McCague says the novelty item is selling so well because it also serves a practical need.

The shade stretches across the inside of a car's windshield, held in place by the visors. Its California makers claim it cools the inside of a vehicle by 15 degrees.

The side facing the street is printed with a giant pair of sunglasses. The other side reads, "Need Help Please Call Police" for use in the rear window in case of a breakdown.

"If you walk around Midland, you'll see lots of people utilizing towels, sheets, whatever they can to keep their cars cool so they don't burn their legs and hands. There's definitely a need for Auto-Shade," she noted.

Karen Holcombe, manager at Coach House Gifts in Midland Park Mall, also reports record sales of the unique window shades. "We haven't been able to keep enough of the shades in stock to meet customer demand," she says. "We picked up 108 of the shades in Odessa on Friday and by Monday we had only 40 left. And that's the third or fourth supply we've received."

At $4.99 retail — $5.99 for the model with decorative Groucho Marx-style glasses with bushy eyebrows or heart-shaped glasses framing cartoon eyes — the Auto-Shade qualifies as a novelty item while packing the extra punch of having a purpose.

Auto-Shade was introduced in California four years ago, trickling into K-mart and Target stores in Texas last year.

Restaurateur masters longevity

Luigi's survives ups and downs

By DEANNA J. NEAL
Business/Oil Writer

ENTREPRENEUR

Longevity in the fickle restaurant business is hard to come by even in the most stable of towns, but it's especially hard in a town of extreme ups and downs like Midland. Louis Hochman appears to have mastered longevity in more than one way.

Surviving 28 years of ups and downs, he has succeeded in building his downtown restaurant, Luigi's, into a rare culinary landmark — the restaurant "that everybody knows about."

As Hochman watched Midland grow up around him, from a small, provincial West Texas oil town to a cosmopolitan world class oil city, he accomplished another feat in longevity: he managed to hold on to key employees.

In an industry where long term employment is rare, Hochman has a cook that has been in his employ for 27 years. "One of my waitresses has been working for me for 20 years and I have a dishwasher who has been with me for 19 years," Hochman noted. Another of his cooks has been in the Luigi's kitchen for 18 years.

Located in the center of the bustling downtown area in one of the few remaining one-story buildings in the Tall City, Luigi's convenient location has helped in the longevity game. Hochman has maintained a brisk lunchtime business and made the eatery a popular midday gathering spot for downtown workers.

A more crucial factor to longevity is good management, says Hochman, who began cooking Italian food as a hobby. Together, he and his wife Zelda have developed good management practices enabling them to work through the rough spots and keep good employee relations.

It is a skill that has earned him the highest recognition of his peers. In July he completed a one-year term as president of the Texas Restaurant Association (TRA). In that role, the Midland entrepreneur was involved in overseeing legislative issues pertaining to the food industry, and was largely responsible for keeping industry members informed of changing trends.

"It was a fulfilling and challenging year for me as president. In economic downturn it is important for industry leaders to help each other maintain quality and service in the restaurant business," he says.

As president, Hochman, along with his wife traveled across the state visiting with approximately 6,000 members of the 22 chapters, discussing problems specific to each area.

"Not only did I meet some very fine people, but also enjoyed alot of great food!."

The Hochmans are also involved with the community. "Midland has been good to us. The most important gift I have received from our city is the ability to raise and educate my four children in a good clean environment."

He adds: "I owe Midland a debt that can only be repaid by community service."

Repayment of the debt has proven a gold mine to many Midland organizations. He has served as director of the Midland Chamber of Commerce and chairman of the Convention and Visitor's Bureau, as well as chairman of the Midland Center Advisory Committee. One of Hochman's favorite projects has been to chair the Midland County Library Board. He played an active role in getting the Mid-Tran system going and also served on the Industrial Development Board.

"I tried to serve wherever I was asked, and I have enjoyed it all."

The city of Midland has not been the only beneficiary of Hochman's

WHERE HAVE ALL THE RIGS GONE?

Who's buying what and for how much?

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

The "iron orchard" is dying. Almost as if hit by a plague of beetles scores of drilling rigs and well service rigs are disappearing from service and finding their way to the auction block. The question is: where are they going, and for how much?

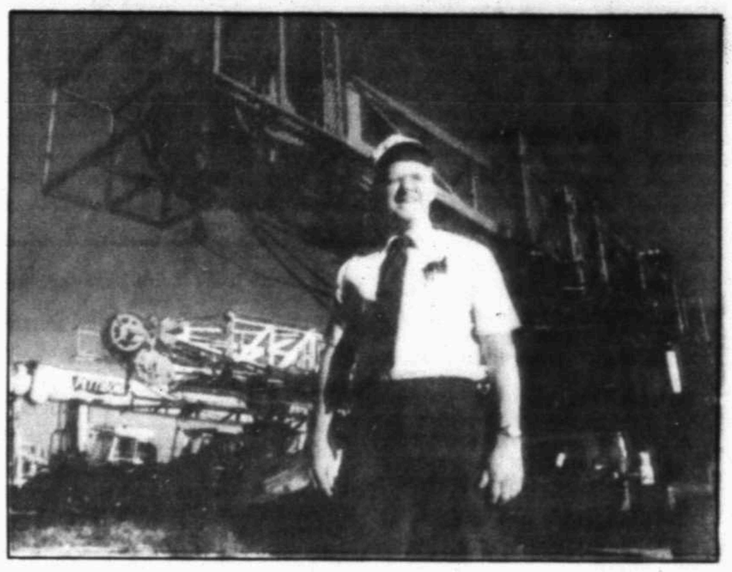

According to two major auction firms and the auction manager for the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation in Midland, most of it is staying in the U.S. and nearly all of it is going for a song.

"Only about 10 percent of the rigs we sell are being picked up by overseas buyers, 90 percent are staying in this country," said Craig Cannon, president Superior Auctioneer and Marketing Inc., a leading auctioneer of oil field equipment.

He added that late model, deep rigs are most desired by foreign buyers who will usually be the high bidder on such rigs at auctions.

"We had some Germans come to our Moran Brothers sale in Wichita Falls. They bought a million dollars worth of rigs, but we haven't seen them since," Cannon said. He said that China and Russia were likely candidates for oil field equipment to replace older, less efficient equipment, but he had not had contact with representatives from either government. "I heard of a broker in Houston who was buying some equipment for China and I know they have had some people over here looking, but I personally don't know of a rig being sold to them. Of course, with brokers bidding, its sometimes difficult to know who they are buying for."

Cannon, whose firm has captured 75 percent of the oil field auction market in only two years, explained it was only natural that most of the rigs would stay in the U.S. because over 80 percent of the drilling in the world is done in the U.S. and Canada.

AP Laserphoto

Gene Shrode, in charge of auctioning FDIC oil field equipment in Midland, says drilling rigs are bringing less than 10 cents on the 1981 dollar.

Going...gone

Here's the average auction value of oil field equipment in relation to percent of 1981 dollars.

- INTERMEDIATE DRILLING RIGS....2-15 percent
- DEEP DRILLING RIGS....7-10 percent
- WELL SERVICE RIGS....20-40 percent
- MAJOR DRILLING COMPONENTS....15 percent
- OILFIELD TRUCKS....60 percent
- DRILL PIPE....8 percent

Most of the rigs are going to contractors, speculators and brokers in the U.S., according to Cannon.

"Contractors are buying the rigs to upgrade their own equipment, brokers are buying for others and speculators are buying and betting on the come," he said. "Then you have people like John Cassidy, the world's largest used oil field equipment dealer in Tulsa. He is at every sale."

See Wednesday's business section of the Reporter-Telegram for a comprehensive feature on John Cassidy.

Cannon said that extremely low prices had prompted some investors to form speculator groups for the purpose of buying equipment large lots of equipment for resale during the upturn. "They smell blood," said Cannon.

Patient money looks for gas boom

Ralph Whitmore calls himself a long term player with patient money. The Beverly Hills investor is one of the speculators buying drilling rigs for pennies on the dollar. What's his scheme?

"Natural gas!" says Whitmore. "It's going to double in price within the next two to three years. With a 15 percent bubble, seven percent shortfall in deliverability and five percent increase in demand, it is bound to happen, and we will be ready."

Whitmore buys only deep rigs, rated to drill to 12,500 and deeper, and says he is looking to buy a total of 50 deep rigs at rock bottom prices. "I bought one at less than five cents on the dollar," he boasted.

Reagan concern for oil stronger?

Some in the industry feel that President Reagan has sacrificed the domestic oil industry on the altar of a misguided trade policy. "Throwed us to the dogs," is a more colorful phrase. But that may not be the case, says Raymond Hefner, president Independent Petroleum Association of America, following an Oval Office meeting with the president. Moreover, he says there is extreme concern about the plight of the domestic oil industry in the administration.

For months the independent sector of the oil industry — and perhaps even majors — has been stonewalled when it came to access to the president. Some claim White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan deliberately walled off the president from the industry, but that claim has yet to be established as fact. Regardless, for some reason or another, direct contact and dialogue between the president and independent oil industry has been almost nonexistent in recent months, leaving the independents wondering exactly where they stood in the scheme of things.

Now the wall has been breeched, and the industry can take heart at some encouraging (perhaps new) signs of extreme concern for the domestic oil industry on the part of the administration. The revealing event was a meeting last week between Hefner, U.S. Rep. Beau Boulter, R-Texas, and oilman Robert Gunn of Wichita Falls, President Reagan, Vice President George Bush; Secretary of Energy John Herrington; Secretary of Treasury James Baker and National Security Advisor John M. Poindexter. In a 25-minute roundtable discussion of the petroleum industry plight, the industry people came away with little but glowing comments.

"I came away feeling very positive," said Hefner at his office in Oklahoma City. "On a scale of one to ten, all three of us rated it 11." Hefner said the meeting, which had been arranged by Poindexter at the urging of Boulter of Amarillo, was indicative that the administration was genuinely concerned about seeking a solution to the oil industry plight.

"I think the power present at the meeting was proof of that. I had no idea the Vice President, National Security Adviser, Secretary of Energy and Secretary of Treasury would be present," said Hefner.

Hefner said that the sole intention of the meeting was to inform the president of the state of near collapse of the domestic petroleum industry and the severe consequences that would have upon national security: "I told him that we did not come to get on our knees and beg for the petroleum industry, but to make him aware of the industry condition. I told the president that we had two choices: maintain a healthy domestic oil industry, or depend on foreign crude. But, if we depend on foreign crude we could be in trouble."

Hefner said he did not come, either, with prepared solutions to offer for the oil industry plight. Rather, he told the president of IPAA's Emergency Action Task Force, which was formed two weeks ago in Colorado Springs and will be headed by C. John Miller, to review any and all possible solutions including an import tax on crude oil.

Hefner said the only time the subject of an oil import tax was mentioned was by Secretary Baker, who reminded the gathering that there was still division within the industry on the matter.

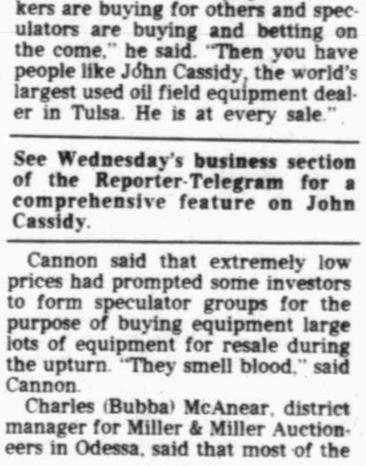

"There was no clear discussion from the president that he had changed his mind on an oil import tax, but he seemed extremely interested in our task force and said he would be anxious to learn of its conclusions and recommendations," said the Oklahoma oilman.

Hefner told me that Reagan and all those present appeared strongly concerned about the issue of national security. "I am not certain if he knew before how badly things were in the oil industry, but if he didn't he does now," Hefner added.

Hefner presented to the president the following facts:

rigs sold at his firm's auctions were going to the end-user, although equipment dealers and speculators also account for many of the purchases: "Believe it or not, there are still some drilling contractors out there who are financially sound, because they didn't get loaded down with a lot of debt."

McAnear said another category of buyer is former drilling contractors who sold out in the late '70s and early '80s, got a good price for their companies and had a few years left on agreements not to compete. "They are buying and waiting for the day when those agreements expire," he said.

According to the long-time oil field auctioneer most of the rigs are now sold piecemeal, compared to two months ago when two out of three rigs were sold in their entirety. McAnear explains that it could be because sales are getting harder to make and it is necessary to put more and more lots together to make a sale: "Somehow, someway everything is sold, even if we have to put three or four lots together."

Prices for the oil field equipment, according to one buyer, are "too indecent to even talk about in public." If indecent means between 2 and 15 cents on the 1981 dollar then they are "indecent." Intermediate rigs, as a rule, are selling for 2 to 15 cents on the 1981 dollar, while rigs more in demand — shallow and deep — are bringing 10 to 15 cents on the dollar. Major drilling components are selling for about 15 cents on the dollar.

The more versatile well service rigs which can be used for workovers, drilling and water well rigs are holding their value considerably better, bringing approximately 40 to 60 percent of their 1981 value, but not always. At its last auction in July, FDIC sold two cable tool rigs for water well rigs for $15,000.

Most values in the auction business are still computed on the highly inflated 1981 dollar. In terms of real value one can add another 5 to 10 percent to correct to 1979-80 prices which were closer to real value. But even 1979-80 prices were still inflated and Cannon says we may have to go back to 1975-1976 to get a true picture of what rigs and oil field equipment are now selling for.

"In most cases drilling rigs are selling for less than 10 cents on the 1981 dollar, but we are finding that some categories such as machine tools and well service rigs are going for about normal used equipment prices," said Gene Shrode, who oversees equipment auctions for the FDIC in Midland. "Used equipment has always gone for about 60 percent of new in the oil patch, and that's about what we are getting. And, much to our surprise, oil field trucks are going for about wholesale."

Shrode says the FDIC rig auctions are continuing to draw bigger and bigger crowds. At an auction earlier this summer, over 3,000 showed up to pay $1.25 million for oil field equipment. A sale scheduled for October, in which dozens of rigs will go on the block, is expected to attract a good contingent of bidders.

However clouded values may be, there's no doubt that it is the comparison to 1981 prices that brings out the bidders. A 10,000 ft. drilling rig in 1981 sold for $25 million. "Today if you're lucky it'll bring $1.5 million," said Bubba McAnear.

Prices continue to drop, says McAnear: "In the past four months, auction prices have dropped more than they did in the previous 15 months." He said a triplex pump that cost $250,000 in 1981 was selling for $20,000 in February and $7,500 today. Drill pipe that sold for $30 a foot in 1981; $4.50 a foot in February now goes for $2.50 a foot. "And, in February, we didn't think prices could get any lower," he lamented.

Auctioneers also lament that they are not making money. "People think we are making money hand over fist," said McAnear, "but that's not true. We are working harder, have more problems and make less money than we once did. It costs just as much to hold a $2 million dollar sale as it does a $200 million sale."

Craig Cannon echos the lamentation. "At any given time, we have 35 people in a motel on the road somewhere. We have 30 company cars which average 50,000 miles per year in travel, plus air travel, telephone calls and advertising. In 1980 and '81 we were making more net money than we are now."

strong sense of duty and honor. "After emigrating from Eastern Europe between the World Wars, I was so grateful for my good fortune in a new land, I was compelled to serve the U.S. during World War II," Hochman recalls.

Although the Army offered him a physical disability discharge, Hochman asked to remain in the service and to help in whatever way he could. The Army accepted his generosity of spirit not once, but twice — in World War II and again during the Korean conflict.

The Hochman's have enjoyed watching the city's transformation from cowtown to cultural sophistication. "We have seen remarkable advances in medical and educational facilities. We have a community center that is second to none for a city of this size."

The long-time restaurateur has also seen changes in the food industry. "Competition is much stiffer now, with the recent arrival of many franchised and chain eating establishments."

"Progress means using modern ideas and Midland has a wealth of talented and smart people who know how to bring advancement to the city." But through all the changes, the Hochmans think Midland has remained "a delightful, clean community in which to live."

SHADES

estimates that he has sold more than 50,000 Auto-Shades to grocery, discount and gift stores throughout the state.

Newton, originally of Chicago, spent time at several toy manufacturers and worked for Russ Berry Co. novelty items for nine years in Texas before he quit to sell Auto-Shades.

He learned of the product when his son Jack brought several home from a California vacation.

After visiting the two Israeli emigrants at the helm of Auto-Shade Inc., Avi Ruimi and Avi Fatal, in Los Angeles in December, Newton was inspired enough to sink $140,000 into the venture.

He established an office at his Dallas home and began shipping the shades in March out of a Carrollton warehouse.

Ruimi and Fatal took two years to go beyond sluggish sales, hitting upon the sunglasses-help design in 1984, which brought international success.

"If it was just a pretty design, it wouldn't work," Newton said, explaining the tie-in between sunglasses and shading a car is what makes the idea work.

Newton's success has invited imitations and he says he spends much of his time aggressively pursuing those who market copycat products. The shade itself is not patented, but the shade with glasses is, he said.

And he continues to dabble in other novelty items.

"It's exciting and fun," Newton said of the novelty business. "Every day is a new day, a new product."

McCague agrees that the product is a fun item but notes that it is fast out-growing the 'novelty' stage and becoming a mass market product. "We won't be able to compete with discount stores who can buy in large quantities and therefore can sell for a reduced price."

MONEY

said that oil prices will be down for at least five years and will eventually shut-in 150,000 stripper oilwells whose casinghead gas accounts for a healthy portion of natural gas production.

"We may squeeze by this year, but we will not get by next year without severe natural gas problems," he warned.

He says that his newly formed investment group, International Drilling Co., will not move for at least two years: "We will have people busy painting and fixing the rigs until we are ready to move." When the market is right, he intends to sell some of the rigs and use some of them to drill for his own account.

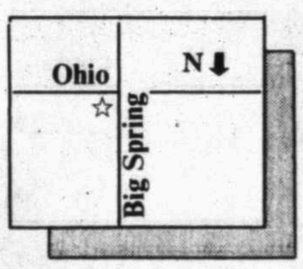

Anybody who drills today, he warns, is just ruining their equipment and health while losing money.

U.S. rig count continues slow rebound

The number of working oil and gas rigs in the country rose for the fifth week in a row to 738, Hughes Tool Co. officials reported.

The count increased by four from last week's total of 734, compared to 1,945 last year at this time.

During July, the rig count hit an all-time low of 663, company officials said.

Before 1971, the lowest number was 805 rigs working in April 1943, according to officials of the oil tool maker that has kept industry statistics since 1940.

More than 1,000 rigs have been idle since December when oil prices began their slump, falling as low as $9 a barrel. Since Dec. 23, the rig count has dropped steadily from 1,995, officials said.

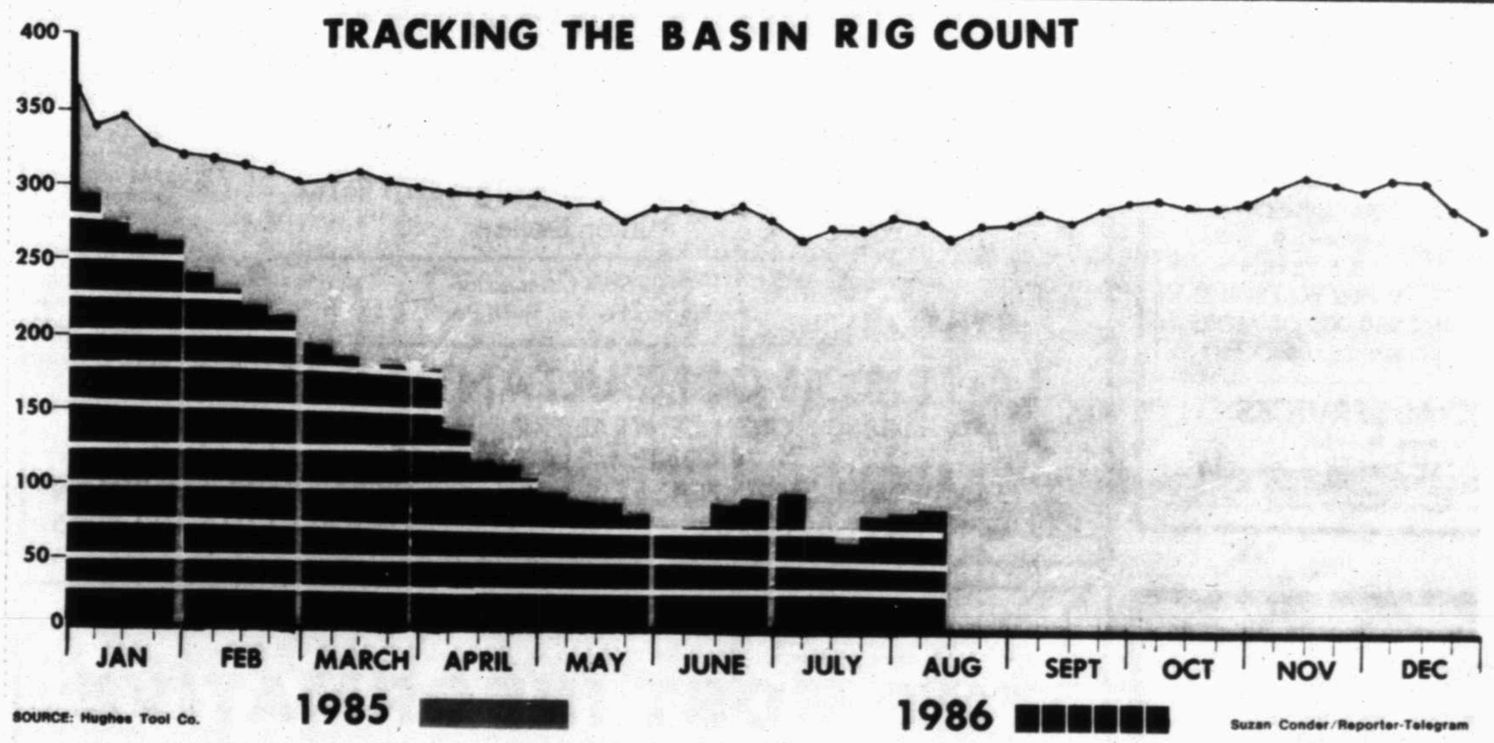

In contrast, 4,500 rigs were active in December 1981.

The Permian Basin count did not fare as well, falling to 82. Last week the count stood at 89.

Midland County had six rigs working, while Ector County showed four rigs making hole there.

One year ago, the Basin tallied 283 active rigs.

The number of seismic land crews and marine vessels searching for oil and gas in the U.S. and its waters during July declined. The land crew total declined by 24, while the marine crew total increased by two crews for a net decrease of two from the June count of 180. July was the twelfth consecutive month the total number of crews has decreased. Not since the mid-1930s has the total number of seismic crews been inthe 150- to 160-crew range. The July total of 158 represents a decrease of 12 percent from last month, and a 60 percent decrease from July 1985.

U.S. PETROLEUM DEMAND

Imports exceed 40 percent

According to the American Petroleum Institute in Washington, D.C., the U.S. is now more dependent upon imported oil than at any time since 1980.

Recent API statistics for June show total domestic products supplied — a key measure of demand — averaged 16,150,000 barrels per day. Total petroleum imports for the month averaged 6,507,000 barrels per day or about 40 percent of demand.

The API pointed out that the last full year in which imports accounted for 40 percent of demand was 1980 when imports of 6,908,000 barrels per day accoundted for 40.3 percent of a domestic demand that averaged 17,056,000 barrels per day.

THE MOST INFORMATIVE OIL SHOW EDITION EVER

Now in its most severe downturn in history, the domestic oil and gas industry awaits the turnaround. It has been down before, and will be up again, maybe sooner than we think. How did the industry get to this point and where do we go from here? The 1986 Oil Show Special Edition of the Midland Reporter-Telegram will attempt to answer these questions and more, with relevent stories, interviews and statistics about the long and near-term history of the domestic oil and gas industry. This edition promises to be one of the most informative oil editions ever produced by the Reporter-Telegram.

Panhandle Eastern spins off Anadarko

HOUSTON (AP) — Panhandle Eastern Corp.'s board of directors has voted to give its shareholders a share in Anadarko Petroleum Corp., company officials said.

The action, termed a spin-off, will involve giving one share of Anadarko stock for each share of Panhandle Eastern stock to the stockholders on record at the close of trading Friday, the company announced.

"Our directors selected the spin-off of Anadarko as the most attractive among the alternatives that have been studied to enhance values for our stockholders because it can be done on a tax-free basis and does not encumber either business with any new debt," said Robert D. Hunsucker, Panhandle Eastern president and chief executive officer.

Anadarko is involved in exploration, development and production of oil and natural gas. As of June 30, its assets involved in the spin-off amounted to $1.3 billion.

Panhandle Eastern's core business is the transmission and sale of natural gas in interstate commerce through subsidiaries.

"We also believe the establishment of an independent Anadarko removes the potential for serious conflicts of interest as producers and interstate pipelines pursue their individual business objectives in a keenly competitive market for natural gas," he said.

Yield on two-year treasury notes hits its lowest level in nine years

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yields on two-year Treasury notes fell to 6.21 percent in Wednesday's auction, the lowest level in nine years.

The yield was down from 6.67 percent at the last auction on July 31 and was the lowest since 6.14 percent on June 30, 1977.

PITTS

- Diversification of U.S. energy sources has not happened — oil and gas will be the primary fuels for the remainder of this century.
- Production in friendly areas such as North Sea, Mexico and Canada has peaked, meaning we must develop domestic supplies or rely on unstable foreign oil.
- Exploration and development expenditures for 1986 are less than half of last year, while the rig count is the lowest since 1940 and more than half the service and supply business has disappeared.

Much of this presentation was echoed by John Poindexter in an August 5 letter to Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill.,Chairman of House Ways and Means Committee. In the letter Poindexter discreetly asked Rostenkowski to take it easy on the oil industry as a tax reform compromise was sought, because of the grave national security consequences of depending on unstable Persian Gulf oil. Poindexter called it "an emerging national security concern," and warned that the Persian Gulf would likely remain unstable for years to come and that by 1990 they would be our biggest supplier of oil.

He further warned that to remove incentives from an industry already crippled by collapsed oil prices could cost the U.S. 700,000 barrels per day of domestic production, adding that the president stressed the importance of a viable domestic oil and gas industry.

From these events several conclusions might be drawn: One, the industry argument for national security is working. Two, the industry appears to have an ally in John Poindexter, and three, there appears to be a new surge of genuine and desperate concern in the administration for the health of the domestic oil industry.

Consequently, now seems to be an opportune time to bring forth solutions to help the domestic oil industry. We in the Permian Basin can only hope that the IPAA Emergency Action Task Force will come up with an industry-saving plan that the administration can endorse.

State bureaucrat turned stock picker James D. Barnett sits in his Augusta office behind toy trains and trucks representing companies whose stocks have brought him profit.

Former bureaucrat now top stock picker

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — James D. Barnett's first-place finish in a nationwide stock-picking contest couldn't have come at a more opportune time.

After more than 15 years on state government payrolls in Albany, N.Y., Sacramento, Calif., and Augusta, Barnett became his own boss in January when he set up shop as a money manager specializing in stocks.

He had no marketing plan and no prospective clients, only the two dozen or so he had managed to line up after easing into the business as a sideline five years ago.

But his confidence in his abilities as a securities analyst remained strong, so much so that at his brother's prodding he gambled a $185 entry fee to take part in the U.S. Trading Championship, a "real money" contest that tests the skills of amateur and professional stock pickers over a four-month period.

When the competition ended in December, Barnett's $16,000 portfolio — actually owned by one of his clients and made up entirely of savings and loan stocks — had chalked up a net increase of 96.4 percent, a contest record.

The contest, conducted by a former Stanford University economics professor based in Marina del Rey, Calif., offers no trophy or cash award. Beyond the winner's "bragging rights," the prize is the top finishers' names being listed in advertisements placed by the contest sponsor in Barron's, Investor's Daily and other financial publications.

"That gave me a hook," Barnett said. "It forced people, some of them reluctantly, to take a look at me. And once they did, I was able to pull out actual accounts and show the kind of performance I've achieved on a consistent basis."

Five months after leaving his state job, Barnett's roster of clients had jumped from 25 to more than 160 and the overall value of the portfolios under his management has ballooned from $1.5 million to more than $7 million.

Barnett describes himself as a Harvard University dropout with "a mania for facts and figures." He said he had been dabbling in the stock market for 15 years, "and believe me, I've paid some dues along the way."

He came to view investing as less of an arcane skill than a self-taught discipline and concluded that mastering that discipline on a consistent basis could be the path to independence from his job as the one-man staff of the state's bureau of public disclosure.

Barnett said his first client was his boss, Maine Secretary of State Rodney Quinn.

"I literally tackled the secretary of state and said, 'I work for you. If I were to put you in something that got you into trouble, guess how long I would last here. So guess how confident I am about my stuff.'"

Quinn followed Barnett's recommendation to buy regional bank stocks. The decision proved profitable. In return, Quinn subscribed to his employee's investment newsletter.

Over the years, Barnett signed on other clients, "one by one by painful one," referred mostly by word of mouth. On his lunch hour, he placed buy and sell orders with brokers from a pay phone booth in the State Office Building.

Now, he wheels and deals from a second-floor office above that of an optometrist — one of his earliest clients — a couple of blocks from the Statehouse.

His suite is lined with toys, models and other paraphernalia representing companies whose stocks have enabled him to turn a profit.

Amoco moving training center

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Amoco Production Co. training center in Tulsa and moving the operation to Houston.

Amoco public affairs spokesman Richard Judy said the company will reopen the training center in Houston Oct. 1 on a reduced scale. Only 12 employees remained at the Tulsa training center, he said.

One employee was transferred to Houston, four were terminated and seven were given new jobs in Tulsa, Judy said.

Amoco offered to sublease its space in a Tulsa office building to Tulsa Junior College for $1 per year for the remaining two years of its lease. TJC's regents are expected to approve the lease offer Wednesday.

Trial begins in lawsuit over bank failure

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Litigants in the trial of consolidated civil lawsuits over the failure of Penn Square Bank used their opening arguments to place blame on a group not even part of the proceedings — officers and directors of the failed bank.

Lawsuits against Penn Square management have either been dismissed or settled. The bank was closed by federal regulators July 5, 1982.

The bank's estate and its receiver, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., are being sued in the first phase of the trial, with part of the cases to be decided by a jury. Opening arguments in the case began this past Wednesday.

Five credit unions are seeking to recover several million of dollars in damages for uninsured deposits lost in the closing of the bank. The FDIC has paid off 55 percent of uninsured claims so far in its liquidation of Penn Square assets.

The credit unions say bank management knowingly put out false financial data showing the bank in good health to gain more investment in certificates of deposit.

The FDIC, since it is bank receiver, is being held liable for management action while running Penn Square.

It is being sued for fraud and constructive fraud on part of bank officials.

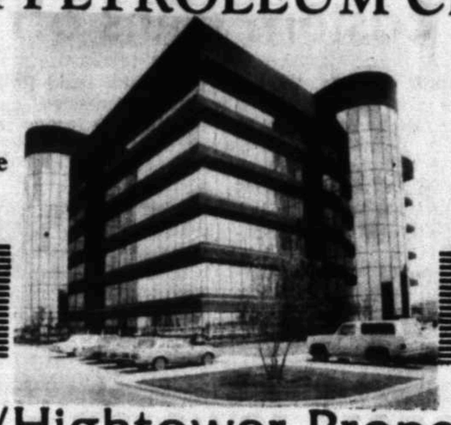

In the other first phase case, Professional Asset Management Inc. is suing the FDIC and Penn Square over the false financial data and the resulting damage to PAM business. PAM is a California money brokerage firm that put out information concerning favorable banks for which credit unions could invest.

The FDIC agrees that the information was inaccurate, but disputes that management put out the figures knowing they were false.

The FDIC said PAM and the credit unions did not only rely on the bank financial statements to make their investment decisions.

Four of the five credit unions made at least their first investment in Penn Square without looking at financial documents, said FDIC attorney Ron Ricketts. They made their decision based on recommendations from PAM and another brokerage firm, he said.

Low oil prices give industrial countries opportunity for expansion

LONDON (UPI) — Major industrial countries have the chance to launch an economic expansion because of the oil price drop, but failure to seize the opportunity could damage the world economy, an influential economic review reports.

The private National Institute of Economic and Social Research said, judging by unemployment figures, the margin for economic growth — particularly in European industrial countries — is much larger than in recent years.

Inflation also is lower than it has been for a long time.

"There is little risk that re-expansion in industrial countries would cause commodity prices generally or oil prices to surge," the institute said in a release.

But it warned, "If the opportunity for re-expanion is missed, the outlook for future world economic cooperation is not good."

One result could be that the United States "may take a more narrow view of its self-interest, retreating into protectionism. Such a move would ultimately be very damaging to the rest of the world," it said.

The institute said its analysts expected "further improvements in the terms of trade of Japan and most European countries, which will result in yet larger balances of payments on current account" next year.

America's foreign trade deficit "will remain very high and the developing countries, oil exporters in particular, will be in continuing difficulties," it said.

We are pleased to announce the opening of our newest office.

'Sharing Jesus coast to coast'

Ron Jaap/Reporter-Telegram

Midlander Betsy Brown, who has been biking across the country in witnessing the Christian faith, will share her music and testimony next Sunday at 7 p.m. at Midland's First Baptist Church.

With memories of life along America's backroads singing in her ears, singer Betsy Brown is back in Midland, preparing for a homecoming concert.

Miss Brown is eager to share stories fresh from her "Backroads America Glory Ride," when she bicycled from the Atlantic to the Pacific through June and July.

"Sharing Jesus coast to coast" was the underriding theme of the journey, which found Miss Brown and her support van crew witnessing the Christian faith, singing a few songs and giving away Bibles and tapes at parks and town squares, at rural churches and along the roadside.

Miss Brown, supported by Midland-based Heartsong Ministries Inc., said her bicycle tour began "as a dream around the board table."

"I wanted to reach people one-on-one. I wanted to visit some of America's small towns — the kinds of places that don't often get 'concert names' coming through.

"I had been doing concerts — on the West Coast for a while, a few on the East Coast, back to Texas...," she said. "There was no organization to it, no connectedness."

So, "connect" she did. From Providence, R.I., to Newport, Ore., sticking to America's northern tier, "like the first missionaries in the new land."

But why by bike?

"I guess it all started when I began training for the Houston Triathlon" in the fall of 1983, she said.

Sports and physical fitness "opened another world of people to relate with." With friend Cindy Andrews of Tucson, Ariz., in the support van and others joining for one- and two-week stints aboard two-wheelers, she made a way to share her message.

"I found I was not only able to share the word literally, but physically. I really enjoyed being available" to respond to the different situations that arose during the trip. "It was really fun to feel so free to give."

The two-month trail included several formal concert stops and two "months of Sundays" in churches.

Among Miss Brown's most memorable moments, however, were "individual encounters" with a group of old men in a park, a town of 540 celebrating its sesquicentennial, and two enthusiastic boys — one of whom couldn't convince his father to leave a bar to attend a roadside concert.

"I was able to minister to people who wouldn't be in churches, the ones who wouldn't be among the masses" at a formal concert.

Miss Brown arrived back in Midland last Sunday, in time to perform in evening services at Cornerstone Fellowship.

She'll be singing at First Baptist Church of Hamlin today and will be home again to share song and testimony next Sunday at 7 p.m. at First Baptist Church of Midland.

Miss Brown attended Lee High School in Midland and was graduated from Hardin-Simmons University in Abilene, where she majored in elementary education and minored in music. After teaching school in Eagle's Nest, N.M., she answered a "calling" to sing full-time.

She "stepped out in faith" and began her music ministry under the auspices of Heartsong Ministries, Inc.

Miss Brown has recorded two albums, "My Special Place" and "The Gift" and a third album is due out in the fall.

HMI board members include Mrs. Bob Henry, president; Mrs. Robert Merrick, vice president; Susan Roeber, treasurer; Mrs. Steve Tankersley, secretary; Jim Sale, Jim Ward, Mrs. W.E. Brown, Mrs. and Mrs. Bill Burchard, and James Nance (minister of music at FBC.)

At a roadside stop in Newport, Ore., Midlander Betsy Brown, above, gives Bibles and tapes to youngsters skateboarding near the beach. With garden gloves to warm her hands, Ms. Brown performs at a beach-side concert in Newport the end of her two-month trail.

BETWEEN THE LINES

Q. Could you please tell me about the singer Falco? I think he's sensational.
Cynthia Mata
Wailuku, Hawaii

Falco

A. Johann Holzel was born in Vienna on February 19, 1957 to an engineer father and a traveling salesperson mother. Both parents wanted their son to become a doctor; he, on the other hand, started to play the piano at the age of 4 and wanted to become a musician. After high school, he moved to West Berlin, where he sang with a jazz-rock band and did all the things his parents wouldn't like.

At the same time, he decided that his name wasn't appropriate for someone destined to become a rock 'n' roll star, so he appropriated the first name of an East German skier named Falko Weissflog, changed the "k" to a "c" and began hanging out in the bars around town as Falco Sturmer and Falco Gutteher before deciding simply on Falco.

He spent some time performing with a band called Drahdiwaberl and in 1980, released a song on his own called "Ganz Wien." It became a cult favorite partly because it was banned from the radio. (It contained a line, "All Vienna is on heroin today," that was not too popular with authorities.)

The following year he released "Der Kommissar," a rap song that went on to become an international hit followed by his first album, "Einzelhaft" (Incarcerated) which also became a hit.

His second album, "Junge Roemer" (Young Romans), was released in 1984 and bombed, a situation that prompted him to journey to Thailand in a state of depression looking to find inner peace. Somehow he did and, rejuvenated, returned to Vienna and put together "Rock Me Amadeus," the song that has in the last few months made him an even bigger international star.

It was followed by another hit, "Vienna Calling," and a third single, "Jeanny." Since his record company thinks there are more hits on his album "Falco 3," you can expect to hear more singles from it. His next album will probably not be released for a while.

He and girlfriend Isabella Vitkovic have a baby daughter Katharina-Bianca.

Q. I really like Whitney Houston. Could you tell me a little about her? Is she planning another album soon?
Kim Ferguson
Dunmore, Pa.

Houston

A. She's 22, from Newark, N.J., the daughter of a city planning administrator and one of the best gospel/backup singers in the business, Cissy Houston. Her mother is also the minister of music at the New Hope Baptist Church in Newark, and that's where Whitney first began to sing (her cousin Dionne Warwick also spent some time singing there).

At 15, she debuted professionally in her mother's nightclub act and was such a standout that she received offers to go out on her own; she turned them down and finished high school instead. At 16, though, she became a model when she was spotted in a New York building by a representative of a new modeling agency. Covers and spreads in magazines such as Cosmo and Glamour resulted.

She really wanted to sing, however, and by 18 was singing backup on other artists' albums. Later that year, she signed her own recording contract, and her first album, "Whitney Houston," has been a phenomenon. It has sold in the multimillions and earlier this year earned her a Grammy as best female pop vocalist.

Currently, she's recording her followup album which could be released as this fall but probably will come out, according to a rep at her record company, early next year. She's also on the road touring, a tour that should continue through the fall. She had plans for a special for HBO but had to push back its taping in Paris in May. A new date has not yet been set.

Q. I've always been a fan of Arlo Guthrie. Is he still doing live shows?
Yvette Cisneros
Clovis, Calif.

Gutherie

A. Indeed he is. He's on a concert tour right now, in fact, which should cover the Midwest. He also performs frequently in the Northeast; he and his wife and four children live in Massachusetts.

Q. Please tell me what Joyce DeWitt of "Three's Company" has been doing lately. I haven't seen her in anything.
W.R.
Scranton, Pa.

A. She hasn't been too visible because, as her agent explains it, "She's been busy developing properties for herself. TV mostly, primarily movies of the week." Nothing, though, has come to fruition.

Q. Please help us settle a bet. How old is Mitzi Gaynor? Everyone I know says she's in her 60s.
Bob
Beach Haven, N.J.

A. Francesca Marlene Gerber was born on September 4, 1931, which puts her close to 55. She lied about her age when she started working professionally with the Los Angeles Light Opera Company — she was 13 at the time — which may account for the perception of being older. She looks pretty good for any age, however.

Q. Please tell me what Rita Mae Brown has written.
Anne Ennis
Villas, N.J.

A. The novel that first brought her attention was "Rubyfruit Jungle" in 1975. Novels after that include "In Her Day," "Southern Discomfort," "Sudden Death" and her current "High Hearts." She's also written two collections of poems, "The Hand That Cradles the Rock" and "Songs to a Handsome Woman," as well as a collection of essays, "A Plain Brown Rapper."

Two screenplays are also worth noting: the recent TV treatment of "The Long Hot Summer" starring Don Johnson and the slasher movie "Slumber Party Massacre"

Q. Are Tawny Little and John Schneider still together? Also, what is she doing? I used to see her twice a day on TV. Now I don't see her at all.
L.D.
Taylor, Ontario, Canada

A. No, they split up but apparently are still friendly; they were at a party together at Los Angeles' station KABC recently. The reason for her appearance is her forthcoming return to the station. She left in January 1985 proclaiming that she was bored with her hosting jobs on "The Love Report," "A.M. Los Angeles" and "Eye on Hollywood" and that she wanted to become an actress.

She auditioned for an ABC pilot but didn't get the role. ABC was interested enough in her, though, to give her a one-year "holding contract" while other roles were sought. None were found, so she's going back to hosting. Look for her on a show called "Eye on L.A." that is now in development.

Christian known for discovering Grant

IRVING, Texas (AP) — There are a couple of things that really bug Chris Christian, the mild-mannered multi-talented guru of the Christian music business.

One is any effort to define a song as "Christian music."

"There's no such thing as Christian music. Music is generic," he says, explaining there are only Christian lyrics.

The other annoyance is questions about why he changed his name from Lon Christian Smith.

"You're not going to ask me about my name?" he asks. "That's a sore spot."

Christian said some people mistakenly believe he changed his name from Smith with the ulterior motive of tying himself to Christian music.

In fact, he says, he adopted his professional name at the start of a career that began in pop, but which today puts him at the forefront of the Christian music scene.

At 34, the Abilene native runs one of the largest independent Christian publishing companies, LCS Music Group, and has been responsible for 20 gold and platinum records.

He also is president of Home Sweet Home Productions, his record-producing company based here with satellite offices in Beverly Hills and Nashville.

He's written songs for Sheena Easton, B.J. Thomas and Olivia Newton-John, with one of his earliest songs recorded by Elvis Presley.

With an easy, relaxed manner that matches most of his music, Christian has been described as a Steve McQueen look-alike, a not-quite-accurate description. But he has the kind of blond good looks that wear well for performing on stage, having started out with summer appearances at Opryland during his college days at Abilene Christian College.

He is famous in the recording industry as the discoverer of Amy Grant, the Christian rock sensation renowned as the top-selling gospel artist who helped bring Christian music to the wider audience it reaches today.

Christian has played no small part himself in broadening the Christian music audience with songs he writes and produces, many with lyrics of double meaning that don't always give the song away as religious in nature.

"Safe," recorded by Marilyn McCoo and Steve Archer, which wasn't written by Christian but was produced by Home Sweet Home Productions, is an example:

Chris Christian poses next to a gold album by Christian music singer Amy Grant. Christian is famous in the recording industry for discovering Ms. Grant, who as a top-selling gospel artist, has helped bring Christian music to the wider audience it reaches today.

AP Laserphoto

"I'm safe, safe inside your love. And there ain't nothing I can't face, safe inside your hiding place."

Christian thinks the whole two-way lyric issue is as overblown as the discussion on how Christian music ought to sound.

"People get caught up on whether Christian music can be rock," he said in an interview at his offices here. "We're just a bunch of normal people that happen to have a message... worth hearing.

"We as companies and artists, we want to give as quality a musical package as pop can give. We don't want it to be corny," said Christian, who likes listening to the latest secular pop recordings in his spare time.

With religious roots in the Church of Christ, Christian's musical roots are pop and the sound pervades his music.

Still, he says, "I think some records are anointed and some aren't."

He also believes Amy Grant was chosen by God.

"I really think she was anointed. God just planned her to happen," he said.

Her "happening" is thanks in part to Christian who in 1976 heard a tape she had cut when she was 16.

"She was just a little girl and sounded sweet and wrote real sweet little songs," he said.

But there was more.

"She sounded real believable."

In Christian's office in suburban Irving is a sweetly sexy poster of Miss Grant, clad in blue jeans, leaning over and holding a red high-heeled shoe in her hand. It is a harmless image, but one that helps add to the new look and sound that have become Christian music.

Christian's own climb up the music ladder began 15 years ago when, as a college student pursuing a business degree while songwriting and guitar-playing, Christian went to Nashville for the summer with $100 in his pocket and high hopes for his career.

One of his dad's old war buddies had an extra ticket to a Chet Atkins concert. It was there that he met Archie Campbell, one of the stars of television's "Hee-Haw."

"I guess I must have seemed like a nice guy," Christian says, because Campbell invited him to house-sit while he was out of town.

It gave the young musician a place to stay for the summer and entree to several music industry contacts.

"Had something not happened the end of that summer, I guess there was a chance I might have stayed in Abilene," he said.

Instead, he returned for three more summers, performing at Opryland, and making friends with members of the backup band for Elvis Presley, a development that resulted in an amazing fluke: the recording of his first song by Presley himself.

"It was not unusual for (Presley) to call everyone in Nashville about 1 a.m. and send a jet from Memphis and fly them down," he said. In the wee hours of the morning, the group would often sit around and sing.

One morning about 4 a.m., one of Christian's friends sang Presley a song Christian had written his junior year in high school, "Love Song of the Year."

Presley said he wanted to record it and did, said Christian, adding: "That was one of the first good songs, decent songs, I'd written."

Christian quickly became a backup guitarist for such performers as Wayne Newton and Jerry Reed before musician — and later politician — Mike Curb recruited him in 1975 for a new group, Cotton, Lloyd & Christian.

At about the same time Christian formed Home Sweet Home Productions, which is now part of a growing music empire.

Married and the father of two young daughters, the Abilene banker's son moved back to Texas this year after several years on the West Coast. He's built a house in Dallas.

"I want my kids to grow up with their grandparents," he said.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

Exhibit 'Book of Days' to be at MC gallery

An exhibition of Texas photography, "Book of Days" opens the fall season at Midland College's McCormick Gallery on Tuesday, Sept. 2. The show contains photographs by 54 different Texas photographers, selected from more than 100 portfolios submitted for judging. The images portray a wide variety of personal styles and subject matters.

McCormick Gallery is located in the Allison Fine Arts Building. The show may be seen through Oct. 2.

Gallery hours are 8 a.m.-10 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Fridays, 10 a.m.-5 p.m. Saturdays, and 1-5 p.m. Sundays. Admission is free.

The "Book of Days" annual exhibit, organized by Danny Schweers in Austin, has received national attention for its diversity and quality of work. The contents of these photos range from portraits to still lifes, street photos to infrared images. They depict current artistic trends from across the state.

Symphony auditions slated

Auditions for the Midland-Odessa Symphony Chorale are being conducted Aug. 28 and 30 at the Symphony Rehearsal Hall, 3100 LaForce Blvd., Terminal.

Rehearsals are held September through May on Tuesday nights. This season's performances and repertoire include Alexander Borodin's Polovetsian Dances, Sept. 30 and Oct. 2; Fall Chorale Concert with the Lone Star Brass Quintet, Ralph Vaughn Williams, Nov. 11 and 13; Christmas Cabaret Pops, tentative dates are Dec. 2 and 4; Spring Chorale Concert with the Lone Star Brass Quintet, American choral music, March 24 and 26; and Willaim Walton, Balshazzar's Feast, April 28 and 30.

For more information or to schedule an audition appointment, call the symphony office, 563-0921, Monday through Friday between the hours of 9 and 5.

'Midsummer' tryouts slated

Auditions for a "Midsummer Night's Dream" will be held at Theatre Midland today and Monday in the Redfern Room.

The mystical Shakespearean comedy sparkles with wit and warmth as the battle of the sexes is fought through palace and forest.

There are roles for 25 men and women, ages 15-60.

"A Midsummer Night's Dream" runs Oct. 3-18. For additional information, call 682-2544.

Society to present jam

The Crown Royal Hispanic Society will present the first annual West Texas Hispanic Jam, an all-day Music Jamboree, Aug. 31 at the Water Wonderland driving range.

Gates will open at noon and the entertainment will run from 2 p.m. until 1 a.m. Pre-sale tickets are $8. At the gate, they will be $10.

La Sombra de Chicago will be the main attraction.

Other bands scheduled to perform include Destino Band of Midland, Ruby y Kalidad of Lubbock and Cierra Band of Lubbock.

Also, a variety of "Conjuntos" from the West Texas are also scheduled to be there.

'Fly' remake stomach-churning

By DAVID LEE FORREST

Forrest

What would you say if you spotted a little, tiny fly crawling across a meal you've been enjoying?

It's quite likely you'd say something along the lines of "Oh, gross!"

What would you say if you watched a deformed, 180-pound fly crawling across a movie you've been enjoying?

If it's the new remake of "The Fly," it's again very likely you'd say "Oh, gross!"

Jeff Goldblum is the unlikely protagonist of this new version of the 1958 horror classic. In the original, a scientist experimenting with teleportation managed to accidentally exchange his head with that of a common housefly.

In the new version, Goldblum also plays a brilliant physicist who's interested in teleportation. His interest stems from the simple fact that he gets motion sick very easily; "As a kid I puked up on my tricycle," he explains.

After drinking a bit too much one night, Goldblum experiments a little too boldly with his equipment and accidentally absorbs genetic material from an errant fly. This bit of unplanned genetic engineering causes him to slowly change into a large semi-human insect.

Moral: Never conduct scientific research while intoxicated.

Amazingly, Goldblum makes a pretty sympathetic bug. Even while undergoing his metamorphosis, he uses the same sort of quirkly, deadpan humor that has served him so well in films such as 1983's "The Big Chill" and 1984's "The Adventures of Buckaroo Banzai."

Prior to the accident, he's a not-really-mad-at-all scientist. Goldblum plays the type of guy who naively tries to pick up an attractive female reporter by asking her to come back to his lab for a cup of cappuccino. He's likable enough that the woman, played by Geena Davis (who, as a sexy vampiress, appeared with Goldblum in last year's horror-comedy "Transylvania 6-5000") actually goes with him.

Of course, they conveniently fall in love with each other.

After the fly genes start affecting him — among other things, he's constantly hyper, eats enough Twinkies to kill a normal human being and has an insatiable sexual appetite — Goldblum becomes less lovable, though.

Eventually, he and Ms. Davis have a falling out. "Don't come back!" Goldblum yells as she runs out the door. She really shouldn't come back around, but eventually does and regrets it.

At this point, as the loathesomely graphic special effects take over what started out as a promising little thriller, many audience members may also regret hanging around.

Director David Cronenberg is a master of special effect gross-outs — such as exploding human heads in his 1981 "Scanners" — and he brings all his twisted technical expertise to "The Fly."

In the original movie, the unfortunate scientist kept his fly head covered most of the time. In Cronenberg's version, we are forced to watch in excruciating detail as Goldblum's body painfully rots away, often in stomach-churning close-ups.

The film also features Goldblum vomiting a disgusting white liquid all other the place, a man's limbs being eaten away by gastric acid and even an appalling birth sequence that would add a whole new level to the abortion controversy.

At one point during a recent local showing of the film, a woman loudly told the person next to her, "I think I'm going to throw up!" She didn't, but it wouldn't have been surprising if she had. "The Fly's" nasty special effects almost make the violent "Aliens" look like a tasteful children's film.

Goldblum is a fine actor who turns in an extraordinarily witty performance under the circumstances, but even Sir Laurence Olivier would be completely upstaged by putrid body parts constantly falling off him.

Cronenberg's "The Fly" is certainly more intense than its predecessor, but its suspense consists entirely of wondering how nauseating the next scene is going to be — and the final distasteful scenes are extremely gross indeed.

"The Fly," rated R for sexual material as well as a great deal of explicit violence, is now showing at the Midland Park Mall Cinemas.

'Manhunter' by 'Miami Vice' Mann

It's easy to tell right at the beginning of "Manhunter" that its director, Michael "Miami Vice" Mann, is also the producer of the MTV-style television cop series "Miami Vice."

The "Miami" connection is obvious in "Manhunter's" garish opening titles that are lime green on a purple background; just the sort of trendy neon glow one would expect to see on an episode of "Miami Vice."

Before "Miami Vice" came along, however, Mann was a motion picture director who did make one great movie, 1981's "Thief" starring James Caan.

That exciting cops-and-robbers tale was beautifully photographed and edited. It also featured a terrific soundtrack by the German electronic music group Tangerine Dream.

In fact, "Thief's" slick style and clever use of music became one of the major inspirations for later television music videos.

At times, "Manhunter" echoes some of the brilliant atmospherics of "Thief," although its acting and plot aren't as good.

"Manhunter" is about an FBI forensic and criminal psychology expert, played by William Petersen, who is desperately trying to track down a psychotic mass murderer before the madman can kill again.

Despite the urgency of this search, Mann actually keeps his movie at a languid pace, which is surprisingly effective in building suspense. This leisurely speed also gives Mann time to show off his shiny style.

Virtually everything in "Manhunter" sparkles and is hypnotically pretty to look at. Mann even turns a maximum security prison cell into an exercise in white-on-white interior design. If the film's prison looks awfully arty that's because all the exterior shots of it are actually of the High Museum, an art museum in Atlanta.

Given Mann's aesthetic sense, it's undoubtedly significant that "Manhunter's" psycho, played by Tom Noonan, is depicted as having some pretty awful taste in clothing and home decor.

Part of the story is seen from this villain's point of view and it's easily the most interesting part of the film.

While Petersen delivers an intense performance, he has to mouth so much psychobabble — lines like "His act fuels his fantasies," for example — that Noonan's role is something of a relief. After all, his character is crazy, he's supposed to babble.

The plot flows so smoothly and the film is so marvelous to look at that its not hard to overlook its periodic lapses of logic.

Those lapses, though, may be enough to ruin the movie for some viewers, especially whose who have read the novel it's based on, "Red Dragon" by Thomas Harris.

Others will probably just shrug off the flaws and concentrate instead on details, like Mann's characteristically great use of the old Iron Butterfly rock song "In-A-Gadda-Da-Vida" at the movie's climax.

"Manhunter" may not be as good as Mann's "Thief," but it's certainly a much more cerebral and better-crafted than such recent cop-hunts-psycho-killer films as Sylvester Stallone's "Cobra" — and most episodes of "Miami Vice."

"Manhunter," rated R for violence and sexual content, is now showing at the Midland Park Mall Cinemas.

'Armed' packs only low-caliber gags

"Armed and Dangerous" may not have much else to recommend it, but this new comedy gives tubby John Candy the opportunity to play "Dirty Harry."

Candy co-stars with Eugene Levy, his old cohort from the very funny SCTV television comedy series. The pair also worked together quite successfully in the 1984 comedy "Splash."

In "Armed and Dangerous" Candy plays a gung-ho — but ineffectual policeman who is unfairly forced to resign from the force. Levy plays an incompetent defense lawyer, who decides he needs to find a new line of work before one of his clients kills him.

They both find up working as klutzy private security guards. The plot is essentially a mindless rehash of the various "Police Academy" movies, with Candy and Levy pursuing or being pursued by crooked cops, gangsters and doberman pinschers.

At its worst, the movie resorts to such stupidity as making Candy parade around dressed as a drag queen accompanied by Levy, who is decked out in some hideous sadomasochistic leatherwear.

At its best, the film is a parody of various other cop movies. For example, there's a chase down the wrong side of the freeway that's looks like a deliberate take-off on the similar one in last year's "To Live and Die in LA."

One of the best gags in the whole film is about Candy's "Dirty Harry"-style armament. Hefting a huge pistol, Candy proudly proclaims, "It's only legal in two states — and this isn't one of them."

The weak screenplay doesn't give Levy as many good bits as Candy, but he does reasonably well with what he has to work with.

However, both of these two talented comics — especially Candy — deserve heavier weaponry to work with than "Armed and Dangerous" gives them.

"Armed and Dangerous," rated PG-13 for considerable sexual innuendo and some mild violence, is now showing at the North Park Cinemas.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon
Monday, August 25, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Take a fresh look at a parent-child relationship. A mother could be blind to her offspring's faults. People who can help your career will be more cooperative in the months just ahead. You are able to improve your financial position and pay your bills more quickly. Strike a better balance between work and play.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Premier relief pitcher Rollie Fingers, "Pogo" creator Walt Kelly, Sean Connery, Alabama Gov. George Wallace, dancer Ruby Keeler, actor Mel Ferrer, actress Anne Archer, and conductor-composer Leonard Bernstein.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A great day for beginning new projects. Be careful not to neglect important paperwork. The afternoon could bring a certain amount of confusion. Research begins to pay off.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Do not try to force an issue. Budget your time and energy better and you will accomplish more. Consistency is a tremendous asset. Financial worries lessen when an unexpected check arrives.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Ask questions even if you may not like all the answers. An excellent day for completing pending projects. Teen-agers need strong and loving support. Be a good listener.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An excellent day for launching a new project. An older person shares his or her expertise. Seeing old friends will help you deal with the break-up of a long-time relationship.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Romance may be complicated now. Travel promises to be both exciting and lucrative. Children make greater demands on your time. Try to compromise. Hard work makes a dream come true!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An idea needs more work. Go back to the drawing board! Parenthood is both rewarding and frustrating. A sense of humor will save you from acting unfairly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You may feel restless at work. A job offer sounds tempting but may not be the right move. New romantic developments give you high hopes! Family members applaud your choice.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Negotiations are brought to a successful conclusion. A relative offers backing for a pet project. There could be strings attached. Seek financial support elsewhere.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Long-range goals come into sight. A sister or brother offers a worthwhile suggestion. Sharing a hobby with mate could lead to a second income.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Short-term investments sound inviting. Do not jump too quickly. A lucky break will soon come your way. A legacy could be part of the picture. Your compassionate nature comes to fore.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Inspiration comes from an unexpected source. You win a battle to simplify procedures and boost productivity at place of employment. Children may require more of your time.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Secret assistance may not be as valuable as it seems. Trust your intuition when handling property matters. Giving in to a loved one now would be a disservice to both of you.

MCT to hold volunteers' workshop

Midland Community Theatre, Inc. will hold a workshop for all theater volunteers and potential volunteers on Saturday, Sept. 13, from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m.

The purpose of the workshop is to acquaint those interested in being a part of the volunteer organization at the theatre with all aspects of producing community plays. An experienced volunteer from each of the production departments will hold sessions of approximately one hour to explain their department. Areas including, but not limited to, props, lighting, casting, set designing, and stage crews will be covered at the workshop.

Coffee and donuts will be served during registration. A light lunch will be offered during a break at midday. A question and answer session for all areas of production will held at 4 p.m., with coffee and soft drinks served.

The workshop is offered at no charge. Persons interested in getting involved with theatre work and those already involved who would like to "brush up" are invited.

Midland Community Theatre is located at 2001 W. Wadley.

Fake 'sandwiches' selling like hotcakes

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP) — It looks like a hamburger sprinkled with sesame seeds, but probably tastes like a notepad stuck between two pieces of foam rubber.

Even the owner of the company that sells them says they probably serve no useful purpose. But that hasn't stopped consumers from snatching up the bogus burgers, fake franks and phony baloney sandwiches and helping a workshop for the handicapped in the process.

"Right now we're looking at an order from Japan for 40,000 'sandwiches,'" said David Gardiner, executive director of the McKercher Rehabilitation Center for the developmentally disabled.

The "sandwiches" actually are paper notepads designed to look like hot dogs, hamburgers and bologna-and-cheese sandwiches.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Phrases like dropping a dime and riding a beef may not have found their way into the dictionary yet, but court reporters say they often come up at trials.

Court reporters may be among the first to put the language of the street — jargon used by criminals and police — into writing.

In the street language, dropping a dime means telephoning authorities to act as an informant. To ride a beef is to accept the blame for a criminal act. A roller is a policeman; a chopper an automatic weapon.

A kite isn't something you fly, it's a note delivered to a prison inmate, usually illegally. To bang the gong means to smoke opium. A zip is a crazy person.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

©1986 Tribune Media Services, Inc.

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—I am not quite sure about my priorities as responder after partner opens one of a suit. What should I look for?—D.A., Madison, Wis.

A.—That depends to a certain extent on whether partner opened one of a major and whether you are playing four- or five-card majors. First, let's consider what to do after partner opens with one of a major. Your responses are basically the same no matter whether he promises five cards in the suit for his opening bid or only four.

1. Raise partner's suit. If you have located an eight-card or better fit, you want to raise partner's suit to the appropriate level to announce to him that a fit exists. This enables him to revalue his hand and judge the potential of the combined holding.

2. If no fit exists, jump to two no trump or three no trump to announce the strength of your hand within close limits.

3. With no fit and a hand unsuitable for no trump, bid a new suit. The range for a new suit response is very wide—from a minimum of 6 points at the one-level to almost anything if your hand is unsuitable for a jump shift. However, you must have a good enough hand if you are going to introduce the new suit at the two-level.

4. With a very strong hand and a fit for partner's suit, or with a very strong hand and a self-sufficient suit of your own, make a jump shift.

5. If your hand falls into none of the above categories, you probably have to respond one no trump.

By and large, responses to minor-suit opening bids follow a similar pattern. However, here priority should be given to introducing a major suit if you have one. But don't distort your bidding by showing a four-card major at the expense of a five-card or longer minor, unless you would have to go to the two-level and do not have the strength for that. Make your natural response.

Q.—Recently, there has been talk about establishing a Bridge Hall of Fame. What do you think of the idea?—C.F., Tampa, Fla.

A.—This is not a new idea. It was first suggested by my good friend Lee Hazen almost a quarter of a century ago, and was inaugurated by The Bridge World in 1964. The first three members were Harold Vanderbilt, Ely Culbertson and a writer whose name modesty prevents me from mentioning. The next three were Oswald Jacoby, Sidney Lenz and Milton Work.

I like the idea, and am sorry it was not kept up. While I do not expect it to become a shrine where millions will come to worship their heroes, I do think a permanent place is needed to record the history of the game.

Musuem hosting children's film series

ODESSA — The Presidential Museum is hosting a special children's series this month. In conjunction with the Ector County Library, the museum has been showing a well-known, full length feature, adapted from a literary classic at 1:30 p.m. Tuesdays.

The final film in the series is Tuesday's showing of "Swiss Family Robinson," by Disney.

The film series is being held in the Community Room at the Presidential Museum, 622 N. Lee St. Doors open at 1 p.m. Admission is by a $1 donation and will be limited to the first 85 children and their parents.

No reservations will be accepted. People are encouraged to come early for a good seat.

Renaissance Fair being held at Globe Theatre

ODESSA — The Renaissance Fair at the Globe Theatre, 2308 Shakespeare Road, closes at 5 p.m. today.

The fair includes Renaissance arts and crafts, Elizabethan foods and games and entertainments of the royal court. Games include climbing Jacob's Ladder, jousting, Water Balloon Cross-Bows and Slaying the Water Dragon.

This marks the first time the Globe has held its Renaissance Fair in the summer. In the past, the Fair has been held in late April.

Admission is $1 per-person and free to Globe season ticket holders. Hours today are 1 to 5 p.m.

The event is funded in part by a grant from the Odessa Cultural Council.
