Weinberger Tells Panel MX Plan Is "Less Risky"

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger told Congress today President Reagan's plan to deploy MX missiles in strengthened silos and build a new bomber is "a far less risky course" than the strategies advocated by the Carter administration.

"The previous administration was willing to live with the risks of an aging B52 force for the 1980s, and the uncertain schedule and unproven capabilities of an advanced technology bomber for the 1990s," Weinberger said in an opening statement to the Senate Armed Services Committee.

He said the Reagan administration chose to go ahead with the B-1 bomber as an interim measure because it is "a far less risky course in a field where margin for error is exceedingly small."

Weinberger said the decision to build 100 MX missiles and start deploying them in reinforced silos "is a program to give us the strongest possible deterrent forces as quickly as we can get them and to continue our constant search for something even better."

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, chairman of the Armed Services panel, who has said he endorses parts of the program but opposes putting the MX missiles in fixed silos, told Weinberger, said he was "concerned that we can accommodate" financing all of the administration's program.

Reagan wants to strengthen vacant Titan missiles for at least 36 of the 100 MX missiles and to build 100 B-1 bombers while work continues on a plane with "Stealth" equipment to foil Soviet radar.

Sen. John Warner, R-Va., chairman of the subcommittee on nuclear forces and a former Navy secretary, said earlier that he would press Weinberger to justify the use of fixed silos and explain "whether we can afford two new bomber programs at the same time."

In interviews Sunday, Weinberger called the plan a "vast strengthening" of U.S. military might, while his predecessor at the Pentagon, Harold Brown, dismissed it as "better than nothing."

"Because of the failure to keep strategic forces modernized and because of the length of time it takes to bring new systems on, there will be a period in the middle of this decade when we will be vulnerable and will have a period of considerable danger," Weinberger said on CBS' "Face the Nation."

"That is why it is absolutely essential to start now with the modernization and strengthening of these strategic forces," he said.

Brown, interviewed on the ABC program "Issues and Answers," said, "It's better than nothing....It will produce a greater symmetry between the United States and the Soviets. That doesn't make me very comfortable. I don't worry about a U.S. first strike, because it isn't going to happen. I do worry about a Soviet first strike."

Former President Carter had scrapped plans for the B-1 and advocated shuttling 200 MX missiles among 2,400 shelters in the West to conceal their whereabouts, a "shell-game" system intended to force the Soviets to saturate the area with 4,000 nuclear warheads to wipe out all the MXs.

Sen. John Tower, chairman of the Armed Services Committee, appearing on the NBC program "Meet the Press," derided Reagan's MX plan Sunday as "silo stuffing." The Texas Republican said it faces an "uncertain" fate in Congress.

Weinberger said the Reagan plan "isn't a weakening, it's a vast strengthening."

He said the Titan silos would be reinforced to withstand up to 5,000 pounds per square inch of blast pressure, almost 10 times what Carter proposed for new shelters in Nevada and Utah.

Brown argued that the Soviets will have nuclear warheads by 1984 or 1985 accurate enough to blast a cavity all around the site and added: "You can't harden a shelter enough so that it will survive being in the crater from a nuclear explosion."

Weinberger conceded there is no way to permanently guarantee that missiles in a known silo could be protected from Soviet nuclear attack but said, "We are proposing to make them invulnerable for a number of years."

"Some say that is just a stop-gap," the defense secretary said. "All right, but it's an awfully big gap and it's very vital to stop it."

The debate over strategic weapons begins as the battle builds over Reagan's proposed sale of AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia. Both the Senate Foreign Relations and House Foreign Affairs committees are likely to vote against the deal this week.

Ten of the Senate committee's 17 members and 24 of the House committee's 37 members co-sponsor veto resolutions against the sale. The House is likely to veto the sale Oct. 13, but the Senate's vote is still too close to call.

Reagan needs approval of only one chamber for the $8.5 billion sale of sophisticated radar planes and other arms.

In other congressional business this week:

—A confrontation is set Tuesday on the administration's drive for deeper budget cuts as the House takes up the appropriations bill for the Health and Human Services and Labor departments.

Bentsen, Wright Have Similar Experiences

WASHINGTON (AP) — Both men enlisted as privates in the Army early in World War II, won the Distinguished Flying Cross for the combat missions they flew, and returned to Texas to go into public life.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen and House Majority Leader Jim Wright are two of Texas' most powerful Democrats, and with a little change in circumstances could have ended up in each other's shoes.

After the war ended, Bentsen returned to the Rio Grande Valley, began a law practice and became, at 25, the youngest county judge in Texas before coming to Congress two years later, where he was the youngest member of the House for two terms.

Wright returned after the war to Weatherford and would have run for Congress immediately, but at 23 he was two years too young. Instead, he became one of the youngest members of the Texas Legislature, then served two terms as mayor of Weatherford before launching his own bid for Congress.

Thus, Bentsen, now 60, and Wright, 58, never served in the House together. Almost, but not quite. Wright took office, after being elected on Nov. 2, 1954, the day after Bentsen was leaving after his third term.

House Speaker Sam Rayburn had tried to talk Bentsen out of leaving the House of Representatives in 1954.

"That is very foolish, Lloyd. You're only 33, you're from a safe district, in another 25 years you can be Speaker of the House," Bentsen recalls Rayburn telling him. "And I thought, 25 years? That seemed like forever."

So Bentsen gave up hopes of a leadership spot in the House, gave up his $12,500-a-year job, and went with his wife and three kids to Houston, where he began a business career that made him a millionaire.

Wright had finished three terms of his own in Congress by the General Election of 1960, when Senate Majority Leader Lyndon Johnson was running jointly for another term in the Senate and for vice president on the ticket with John F. Kennedy.

In the Senate race, Johnson beat a Midwestern University political science professor by the name of John Tower, but his simultaneous election as vice president left his job vacant, and William A. Blakley of Dallas was appointed to serve until a special election could be held.

No party primaries were held for the 1961 special election, and when the smoke cleared, 71 candidates had filed, including Blakley, Tower and Wright. Texas had always, always, always been Democratic, but with the numerous Democrats in the race splitting up that vote, Tower emerged as the No. 1 vote-getter.

Blakley, a conservative, edged Wright for the second spot, and Tower won the runoff to break the Demo stranglehold on Texas' top offices.

Had there been separate Democratic and Republican primaries,

Seven More For Hall Of Fame

ALAMOGORDO, N.M. (AP) — The pilot who broke the sound barrier in 1947 told a crowd at the International Space Hall of Fame that the U.S. Air Force deserves the credit for his success.

"They taught me to be a fighter, test and research pilot," said Charles Yeager, of Cedar Ridge, Calif. He said, however, that to be famous, one doesn't have to be good — only survive.

Yeager, one of seven inducted Saturday into the space hall, said he would "love to fly a (space) shuttle, but I had my fun in other aircraft."

Yeager broke the sound barrier aboard the Bell X-1 in 1947 at a level of flight speed of more than 670 mph at Edwards Air Base, Calif. He eventually achieved a speed of more than 1,000 miles mph and an altitude of more than 70,000 feet in the X-1.

He retired from the Air Force in 1975 as a brigadier general.

Others inducted into the Hall of Fame in ceremonies Saturday who were not present to receive their awards were astronauts Alan Shepard, who retired as a rear admiral in the U.S. Navy and lives in Deer Park, Texas; Scott Carpenter, who retired from the U.S. Navy as a commander and lives in Canoga Park, Calif.; Gordon Cooper, who retired as a U.S. Air Force colonel and lives in Glendale, Calif.; and Walter Schirra, who retired as a U.S. Navy captain and now lives in Inglewood, Calif.

The late Virgil Grissom, America's second man into space, was inducted posthumously. He flew the Mercury capsule "Liberty Bell 7" for a flight of 15 minutes and 37 seconds. He later served aboard the Gemini III mission and was killed during a Jan. 27, 1967, ground fire in the Apollo I program.

Andreas Anton Frederick Schumacher, an 18th century Danish rocket pioneer, also was inducted into the Hall of Fame, and his award was accepted by Maj. Eric Lyngbye of the Royal Danish Air Force.

Schumacher developed a complete rocket system after the bombardment of Copenhagen in 1897. He also founded the Danish Rockets Corps., which was the first rocket unit on the European continent.

Dr. Maxine Faget, instrumental in the Mercury space program, told the 6th annual induction ceremony that the space shuttle has taken the world into the age of spaceships.

The induction ceremony is an annual event to honor contributors to space research and exploration. This year's inductees bring the total of space hall members to 58.

Jailed IRA Prisoners Refuse Prison Uniforms

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Jailed Irish nationalist guerrillas still refused to wear prison uniforms today, continuing a protest demanding special status despite the collapse of the IRA hunger strike.

Sinn Fein, the outlawed Irish Republican Army's political wing, said the "blanket protest" by 400 Maze Prison inmates would continue until the British government granted the demands that spawned the death fast.

The blanket protest, which began in March 1976, got its name because the prisoners wrap themselves in blankets instead of prison clothes.

The hunger strikers called off their fast Saturday "for the moment" after the families of five of the six men refusing food said they would authorize medical intervention to save their lives. But the jailed guerrillas said they would continue pressing their demands "by whatever means we believe necessary and expedient. We rule nothing out."

They are demanding to be allowed to wear their own clothes, do no prison work, associate freely with each other, get more mail and visitors and get back all parole time lost due to their protest activites.

As 10 prisoners starved themselves to death during the seven-month fast, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher firmly rejected the demands. The government claimed to grant them would legitimize the IRA's guerrilla war to end British rule in the Protestant-majority province and reunite it with the mainly Roman Catholic Irish Republic after 60 years of partition.

But with the end of the hunger strike, James Prior, the Cabinet minister for Northern Ireland, hurried to Belfast to discuss plans limited prison reforms for all prisoners. The government had said it would make changes after the hunger strike ended.

Prior refused to say what changes would be made or when they would be implemented.

"It's important to get it right rather than hurry any decisions," he said. "We will try to see what we can do about those and whether we can specify more clearly what those reforms are."

Prior's deputy, Lord Gowrie, was expected to meet with leaders of the prisoners at the Maze today or Tuesday.

The Rev. Denis Faul, a Catholic chaplain at the Maze who was accused by the IRA of persuading the hunger strikers' families to undermine the fast, warned that if the British "do not do something," the prison protest "will drag on miserably and you'll have another hunger strike."

The government reported all six men who abandoned the fast were in "satisfactory" condition.

One of them, 23-year-old Patrick Sheehan, was taken to the Royal Victoria Hospital Saturday but was reported in stable condition. He was the longest surviving hunger striker after 54 days without food. Prison sources said all the men were fed nourishing liquids Sunday.

Ask Us

Q.—Is there anything that can be done about the speeding every morning at the senior high school?

A.—Police Chief Bill Stone says the police department keeps its available cars busy in school areas every morning. Of course there are not enough cars to have one at each school, and the high school is not the only problem area during early morning hours. But they will try to watch the area around the high school as closely as possible.

Monday update

Dollar Surges Against Franc

PARIS (AP) — French officials and importers welcomed the European Common Market's decision to lower the French franc 8.5 percent against the Dutch guilder and the German mark. But the optimism was not reflected in financial markets, where the dollar appreciated almost 3 percent today against the franc.

The U.S. currency was trading at around 5.6400 francs in Paris this morning, compared to 5.4945 at Friday's market close.

The re-alignment of currencies within the European Monetary System was decided in Brussels Sunday during a meeting of the 10-nation Common Market's council of finance ministers. It devalued the franc and the Italian lira by 3 percent and hiked the mark and the Dutch guilder 5.5 percent.

Italian Prime Minister Giovanni Spadolini said Italy had acceded to the devaluation to please France.

Slaying Suspect Captured

EDINBURGH, Texas (AP) — Two dozen officers from various law enforcement agencies surrounded a house near this lower Rio Grande Valley town Sunday and arrested a 34-year-old man wanted in the slaying of a Texas highway patrolman, authorities said.

Department of Public Safety spokesman David Wells said Leonel Torres Herrera tried to flee the home after it was surrounded by officers, who were acting on a tip.

A DPS officer fired a warning shot and Herrera dropped to the ground and surrendered, Wells said.

Wells said about 25 officers from the DPS, Edinburgh Police Department, Hidalgo County Sheriff's Department and Texas Rangers took part in the arrest.

Seeks Lost Ark Of Covenant

FRANKSTON, Texas (AP) — Religious leader Tom Crotser may not look like Indiana Jones of the smash hit movie "Raiders of the Lost Ark," but his mission to find sacred religious documents is the same.

Crotser, founder of the Holy Ground Mission in backwoods East Texas, said last week that he knows the exact location of the sacred Ark of the Covenant and will leave Oct. 20 on a quest to the Middle East to recover it. The former Disciples of Christ minister said he will undertake the archaelological work to prepare for Jesus' return to Earth in 1988.

"I just happen to be in God's plan and God's purpose and God's time, the man who knows where the Ark of the Covenant is located," Crotser said.

Zone Cases Top Council Agenda

Requests for zone changes top the agenda for tonight's meeting of the Snyder City Council.

Also up for consideration will be a contract for the purchase of approximately 148½ acres of land to be used as a sanitary landfill.

The meeting is set for 6:30 p. m. in the council room at city hall.

A public hearing is scheduled on two zone cases. A request by Bob Rogers to change the zone from a single-family district to a multi-family residential district on 8.742 acres of land south of Eastridge Addition and east of the Brick Plant Road will come to the council with approval of the Planning and Zoning Commission.

Another request, which got no decision from the Planning and Zoning Commission, is for a change from single-family residential to two-family residential zone for the south 150 feet of Lot 4, Block 24 of Grayum and Nelson Second addition. The request was submitted by Abel Beauchamp.

Zoning changes in the C. M. Payne Addition in Northwest Snyder will be up for second and final reading. The changes there would be from single-family to multi-family residential zones for some lots near North Elementary School, and from residential to a manufacturing district for others. These changes were approved on first reading in September and had the approval of he Planning and Zoning Commission.

Specifications for some vehicles and sanitation containers will be discussed, along with some requests for traffic signs.

The council will discuss nominations of two board members for the Scurry county Appraisal District and get a report from the city park board.

For Cigarette Price Hike...

Solidarity Rejects Explanations

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — The Solidarity congress rejected government explanations of increases in the price of cigarettes and some foods and demanded their cancellation.

There was no indication, however, that the government would roll back the increases in the prices of tobacco products, trout, carp and canned fruit, which were to take effect today.

Solidarity made no protest against the recent tripling of the price of bread. But the congress delegates were enraged by the announcement that tobacco prices would double and by reports in the official media that "trade unions" — apparently meaning the official unions controlled by the Communist Party — had been consulted instead of Solidarity.

One delegate charged that the government timed the increases during the union congress to provoke it.

Union leaders from Silesia threatened protest strikes in the coal mines, Poland's chief earner of the foreign exchange so desperately needed for imports and payments on the $27 billion debt to Western banks and governments.

The government rushed two cabinet ministers to Gdansk to explain after Solidarity chief Lech Walesa wired Premier Wojciech Jaruzelski: "I protest against the increase in prices of cigarettes, fish and manufactured fruit products. I demand that realization of these price increases be stopped."

Finance Minister Marian Krzak told the congress the price paid farmers for tobacco had doubled since July, the government wants people to give up smoking, and the price increase would provide $1.3 billion a year in much-needed revenue for the government.

"The economy is worsening every day now," Price Commission Chairman Zygmunt Krasinski said. "The increase was an absolute necessity and it could not be avoided."

The congress applauded wildly when Walesa told the ministers the union could not accept their explanations, and the government must call off the increases.

"We have known each other for some time and you understand we have no choice and you have no choice either," he declared.

Walesa told them he wanted a response as soon as they discussed the union's position with Jaruzelski.

The increases raise the price of the most popular brand of cigarettes, Popularne, to 40 cents a pack. Other brands go as high as $1.80.

The increases are part of the government's effort to bring prices in line with production costs, curb demand and siphon off an estimated $17 billion in surplus currency resulting from higher wages and the shortage of goods to buy.

The congress on Saturday accepted in principle the new worker-management law which most delegates consider inadequate, but the resolution called for a workers' referendum on some points.

Fix-It-Yourself Trend Is Growing

LOUISE COOK Associated Press Writer

A growing number of Americans are trying to save time and money by doing their own repairs around the house, and a major appliance manufacturer hopes to cash in on the trend.

The company, General Electric, has decided to sell repair manuals and 94 common replacement parts along with its products, providing detailed advice on how to fix problems with five major appliances.

The appliance industry in general offers help for people who want repair service and can't get it. Several years ago, the industry established the Major Appliance Consumer Action Panel to resolve disputes. For information, write: MACAP, 20 N. Wacker Drive, Chicago, Ill., 60606.

Bruce R. Albertson, the man in charge of the program for GE, said the introduction of the repair plan is not a sign of deteriorating product quality. Nor, he said, does it mean that you can't get service if you want it.

Albertson said the company simply recognizes that appliances, like any other mechanical item, are subject to trouble, sooner or later. "A refrigerator operates 24 hours a day for 15 years or better," he said. "No matter how good it is, it's going to break down."

At the same time, he said, the company has found that an estimated 40 percent of all appliance repairs are being done by owners and those people need help. Albertson said GE is not trying to encourage consumers to make their own repairs; it is, however, trying to persuade dedicated do-it-yourselfers to buy GE products rather than another brand.

Studies have shown that the public is dissatisfied not only with product quality, but also with the type of service provided.

The GE program — dubbed the "Quick Fix System" — covers washers, dryers, refrigerators, dishwashers and ranges. It does not apply to televisions, air conditioners or microwave ovens, where, said Albertson, "there's a safety factor."

Manuals and the replacement parts will be sold by dealers. Each manual costs $6.95 and runs about 100 pages. It includes photographs, diagrams and explanations of how to find the model number of your appliance. It also has a listing of common problems, potential causes and possible repairs, along with the difficulty factor.

The refrigerator manual, for example, lists 36 possible problems. No. 5, "Refrigerator too cold," has two possible causes — the control is set too high or the control is defective. If you decide the control is defective, you are directed to page 53 and repair procedure 16. The repair is rated as "difficult."

API To Sponsor Cajun Humorist

The Scurry County Chapter of the American Petroleum Institute is sponsoring the second annual "Cajun Night," with Cajun humorist Justin Wilson on Thursday, Oct. 15, in the School County Coliseum.

This year's dinner and show will be staged in cooperation with the Joint Venture for Crippled Children as a benefit for the West Texas Rehabilitation Center.

According to chapter president Bill Lemen, last year's show with Justin Wilson was so well received that it was the consensus that the event should be moved to the coliseum to accommodate an even larger crowd.

The show is expected to draw from as far away as Abilene and the Midland-Odessa area.

In addition to Wilson's appearance, Snyder's own Cindy Hataway will also perform.

The dinner is set for 6:30 p. m. with the entertainment and program to follow. Tickets are priced at $12 and will be available at the door.

All proceeds above expenses will go to the West Texas Rehabilitation Center, which has a facility in Snyder as well as Abilene and San Angelo.

Asbestosis Tests Positive Among Shipworkers, Families

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Asbestosis has turned up in 59 percent of shipworkers tested and "significant" rates of the disease are found among their family members, the American Lung Association says.

At least 5 million Americans have worked in shipyards since World War II, Rose Schlichter of the lung association said Friday. The disease develops when asbestos implants itself in lung tissue.

Fifty-nine percent of 447 men tested at the Long Beach Naval Shipyard had the disease, the organization said. There was a 10.1 percent incidence among 305 wives; 3.9 percent for 77 sons; and less than 1 percent for 118 daughters.

The family members had no exposure to asbestos other than contact with their husband or father. Asbestos was used in shipbuilding for insulating and fireproofing and now is strictly regulated.

New Pennies To Be Minted Soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Treasury officials are ignoring cries from the copper industry and moving ahead with their idea to save the government millions of dollars a year — in pennies.

The familiar, mostly copper pennies are to be replaced by lighter coins made mostly of zinc, beginning late this year.

"We'll start striking the new pieces before the end of the year," says Alan J. Goldman, deputy director of the U.S. Mint. "We were not slowed down one bit" by the copper industry's attempt to win a legal restraining order.

A federal judge in Washington rejected the request earlier this month, but an appeal is being prepared, says Robert J. Wardell, president of the Copper and Brass Fabricators Council.

Government officials say the new coins will look and feel just like the current ones but will weigh about 19 percent less and will cost less to make.

Zinc costs less than copper — about 49 cents a pound compared with about 85 cents in recent trading — and copper's price tends to jump around more, interfering with production schedules, officials say. Savings to the government could be $25 million a year or more, they say.

Critics, including the copper industry, argue that switch-over costs will eat up any savings, that hoarding will make the billions of pennies now in circulation disappear into jars and dealers' vaults and that the new pennies could be subject to severe corrosion.

"Absolute nonsense," replies Goldman, though he concedes hoarding has been and will continue to be a problem.

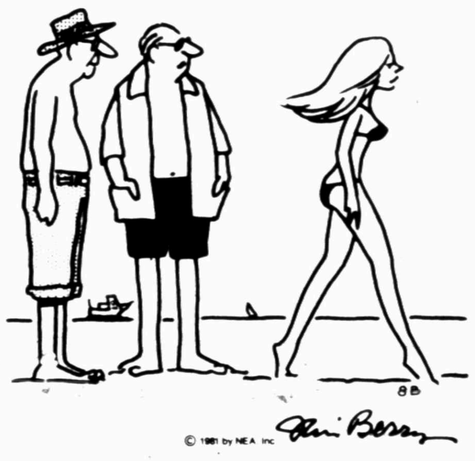
Government production — more than 12 billion pennies a year — has not kept pace with demand, and the Federal Reserve Board has been limiting allocations of one-cent pieces since last year.

"We don't think it is going to be much worse" while the switch is being made, Goldman said.

The Treasury Department plans to begin minting the new coins late this year at San Francisco and West Point, N.Y. The Denver and Philadelphia mints will continue to make mostly copper pennies until possibly late next summer.

Pennies now are made of copper alloy — about 95 percent copper and 5 percent zinc. The new coins would be almost entirely zinc, with additional copper electroplated onto the outside skin to make the total 97.6 percent zinc and 2.4 percent copper.

Berry's World



"Mind you, I don't like the way our society tends to quantify and rank everything. But I agree — there IS a 10."

paul harvey

When the call came into the police department in Estes Park, Colorado, Frank Rinella had just happened by.

Conveniently.

Because somebody named Jerry Wood was calling about an injured hummingbird and Frank Rinella is Conservation Officer for Colorado State Wildlife.

Well, Frank has seen a lot of injured birds; for most the most merciful thing was to help them die as quickly and painlessly as possible.

And when he started driving toward the car wash where Jerry Wood works he was dreading having to put to sleep yet another one.

Mr. Wood had the hummingbird in a shoebox. The fragile little thing was all rumpled and caked with pitch--gooey pinetree pitch.

And Mr. Wood was doubly concerned about the neglected eggs in a nearby nest.

Frank understood.

Forgetting the half-day off he'd planned for himself, the conservation officer gently lifted the box and headed for the office of a doctor friend, Wes Metzler.

With the sensitive hands of a skilled surgeon, Dr. Metzler separated each wing feather--each as fragile as a snowflake--and cleaned it with alcohol.

I don't know if you know, but a hummingbird has a metabolic rate so high that even 30 minutes without food may kill it.

Frank remembered that a local lady, Betty Meuller, had hummingbird feeders on her porch.

While Dr. Metzler tediously cleaned the wispish feathers of the helpless bird, Frank sped toward the Meuller house and returned within minutes with Mrs. Meuller and one of her feeders.

Knowledgeable about hummingbirds, she helped the doctor clear the bird's teensy bill to make sure the needle-small tongue could protrude--then helped guide the bird to the feeder until it could nourish itself.

Then the bird was placed back in the box, they drove back to Woody's car wash, and to the nest in the shrubbery by the driveway.

There the lid was lifted from the box. Nothing. The feathers were clean and mostly in place; but no movement, nothing.

And then--after a half minute that lasted an hour--the diminutive lady lifted herself--trembled--and with a whirr of lacelike wings took off and circled and was gone.

I checked back.

Beside the driveway outside Woody's Car Wash the eggs have hatched; mother and babies are fine--and Woody's employees have feeders hanging all over the place.

Jerry, Frank, Wes, Betty--thank you.

But Be Selective...

Television Viewing Beneficial

WASHINGTON (AP) — Television is not only a source of news and entertainment, but it also offers education, companionship and social activity, say faculty members at the Catholic University of America, who cite its benefits to the elderly, the handicapped and to children.

However, all agreed in a recent discussion that because not every program is equally beneficial, selectivity in the choice of TV fare is important.

Though he believes children can benefit from TV, Joe Lewis, a drama professor who uses television as a teaching tool, cautions: "Parents should monitor the time spent by their children watching, so that television does not become a babysitter."

Lewis, who teaches playwriting, says many of the made-for-TV movies are good.

"They have high entertainment value. Also," he adds, "some of the regular weekly series, like 'M-A-S-H,' 'Hill Street Blues' and the original version of 'Archie Bunker' are well written, well acted and well produced.

"I use television programs as examples of what to do and what not to do in playwriting, because the students can readily identify with them."

Another Catholic University professor, Debra Curran Aquino, of the university's English Department, says she often assigns her students to watch the British Broadcasting Company productions of Shakespeare plays. "The BBC does a valuable service in bringing Shakespeare to a large audience," she says.

Agreeing with Ms. Aquino, Lewis says that there are some "marvelous programs on public television, particularly the British imports. I don't agree with every production, but the attempts are laudable."

David Guttmann, director of the university's Center for the Study of Pre-retirement and Aging, calls television "an extremely important medium with infinite potential for the elderly population, especially the bedridden."

For the estimated 3 million homebound elderly people in the United States today, and for many people who are in hospitals, Guttmann says that television helps to keep their minds off their problems.

"Television is a blessing for hospitalized and homebound elderly," says Guttmann. "It can help to combat loneliness by filling an elderly person's day.

"Television can be a centerpiece for social activity where elderly people congregate," he points out. "They can watch something together and then perhaps discuss what they've seen. It's very good for socialization, and it makes them feel involved and engaged.

"For many elderly Americans," adds Guttmann, "television is their only form of entertainment. Also, it can help them to keep in touch with the outside world."

The television networks are becoming aware that the elderly population has much more time to watch television than either working people or children, says Guttmann, predicting that, increasingly, the networks will consider the interests of the elderly in their programming.

Nine bandits stole more than $2.7 million from the Boston waterfront garage of Brink's Inc. in 1950. It was the biggest cash robbery ever committed in the United States. The gang was caught six years later.

CORN SPOONBREAD

For best results, use young sweet corn.

3 six-inch long fresh ears of corn
1-3rd cup yellow cornmeal
2 cups hot milk
¼ cup butter, soft
1 teaspoon salt
2 large eggs, separated

Cut kernels from corn; with back of knife scrape down cobs to release pulp — there should be about 1½ cups kernels and pulp. Turn into a medium saucepan. Stir in the cornmeal, then the milk. Cook over moderate heat, stirring constantly, until thickened — about 5 minutes. Off heat, stir in butter and salt until butter melts; vigorously stir in the yolks. Beat whites until stiff; fold in. Turn into a buttered 1½-quart oblong baking dish (1 by 6 by 1¾ inches). Place in a pan of hot water that comes up about as high as corn mixture. Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven until top is golden (a knife inserted in center will not come out clean) — about 1 hour. Let stand 5 or 10 minutes before serving. May be cut in rectangles, but the spoonbread will be soft. Makes 6 servings.

Alan: "I have noticed that bridge writers don't spend any time discussing part-score bidding. I guess the subject is too tough, but why can't we use an occasional hand where there is a part score?"

Oswald: "Here's one from a recent rubber bridge game at New York's Cavendish Club. I was North and Paul Trent South. Both sides were vulnerable and we had a part score of 40."

Alan: "I see you have written down the bidding. It looks as if that 40 part score actually helped you bid the slam."

Oswald: "It certainly did. After Paul's diamond opening and the spade overcall I was worried about two losing spades, but Paul is a really fine player and I had just the bid to leave the slam decision up to him. I jumped to five diamonds."

Alan: "The bid had to have a clear meaning in that it told your partner that your only worries were about spades and really demanded that he bid six if he could handle the second round of spades."

Oswald: "There was a little more to it. If he didn't hold the king of clubs, the club finesse was more than likely to be a winner. West had overcalled."

Alan: "You were a trifle lucky. Give Paul one more spade and one less heart and the slam might have been set. Still, fortune seems to favor the brave in war and almost everything else!"

Helpful Hints For Fire Prevention Week

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR READERS: It's Fire Prevention Week again, and I have had so many requests to repeat my column on fire prevention that it has become a tradition. So here it is, with updated figures:

Last year, 7,800 Americans died, and nearly 130,000 civilians, plus 100,000 firemen, were seriously injured in 3,000,000 fires.

The total fire loss last year in property alone was $5½ billion in the U.S.

The chief causes of fires, in order of the toll taken, were:

1. Smoking
2. Electrical wiring
3. Heating and cooking equipment
4. Children playing with matches
5. Open flames and sparks
6. Flammable liquids
7. Suspected arson
8. Chimneys and flues
9. Lightning
10. Spontaneous ignition

Now for some tips that could save your life:

Be sure your cigarette is out. Matches, too. Never leave matches and lighters within the reach of children.

Don't run cords under rugs or over radiators where they may get damaged. Replace a cord if it is frayed.

Never leave small children or invalids alone in the house — not even for a few minutes.

Have your wiring and electrical installations done by a professional.

Store oily rags and paints in a cool place in tightly sealed metal containers.

Never use flammable liquids for dry-cleaning indoors.

Never smoke in bed.

Have a fire drill in your home to be sure everyone knows what to do in case of fire. Designate a specific meeting place outside so you will all know who's outside of the house.

Remember: Fire extinguishers put out 97 percent of all fires on which they were used, and most large fires start as small fires. So, invest in a compact, easy-to-use fire extinguisher. Keep it handy in your kitchen, or be prudent and buy one for your cottage, car, boat and the back bedroom.

Buy and install a smoke detector and then properly maintain it. It must be cleaned often with the vacuum cleaner hose so that it is dust-free. It is estimated that 6,000 lives could have been saved last year had a smoke detector been in service when the fire happened.

Now, in case of fire:

If you suspect fire, alert the rest of the household. But first feel the top of the door. If it's hot, don't open it. Escape through the window.

If you can't open the window, break it with a chair. Cover the rough edges with a blanket, sit on the window ledge with one leg hanging outside and one inside, and wait for help.

The phone number of your fire department should be taped on every telephone. If it isn't, don't fumble around trying to find it. Get out and call from a neighbor's house.

If you live in an apartment building, use the stairway. Don't take a chance on the elevator. If it fails, you're trapped!

Once out, stay out. No treasure is worth risking your life.

It took less than three minutes to read this column. Was it worth it? I hope so.

ABBY

P.S. If you are in a hotel and suspect there is a fire, call the fire department yourself. Then alert the hotel telephone operator. Believe it or not, most hotels will not call the fire department until their staff verifies whether or not there really is a fire and have tried to put it out themselves. Should a guest call to report a fire, the hotel will almost always send a bellhop, security guard or anyone else who's not busy to investigate. Hotels are reluctant to "disturb" their guests. Fire engines in the street are quite embarrassing and tend to draw crowds. The hotel may be a little upset with you, but really ... who gives a damn? The fire department will be glad you called; you may have saved many lives.

Charges Won't Be Revived

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today refused to revive charges that the FBI and the Kerr-McGee Corp. undercut Karen Silkwood's nuclear plant union-organizing drive.

The justices, without comment, let stand a ruling dismissing the conspiracy and cover-up allegations filed after Ms. Silkwood's death in 1974.

The case acted on today was a part of an earlier suit filed by heirs and survivors of Ms. Silkwood, who died in a car crash on the way to a meeting with a labor leader and a New York Times reporter.

She reportedly was trying to deliver evidence of missing plutonium and falsification of safety tests at the Kerr-McGee nuclear facility in Cimarron, Okla.

At the time of her death on Nov. 13, 1974, Ms. Silkwood was 28 years old and a local leader in the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union.

One part of the suit, alleging that Kerr-McGee was responsible for injuries due to Ms. Silkwood's exposure to radiation, resulted in a $10.5 million judgment for her estate. That award, issued against the company in 1979, is now pending before the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

The suit also claimed that, beginning in 1972, Ms. Silkwood and other Kerr-McGee employees were blocked by the company in their efforts to organize a labor union.

The activities allegedly included wiretapping, surveillance and harassment.

Body Exhumed, Autopsy Performed...

Body In Grave Is Lee H. Oswald

DALLAS (AP) — Two decades of theories about at least one aspect of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy apparently have been disproved with a finding "beyond any doubt" that Lee Harvey Oswald was buried in the grave marked with his name.

"There is no reason to ever disturb that body again. Ever," said Dr. Linda Norton, the head of a pathology team that announced Sunday that the exhumed body was indeed Oswald, identified by the Warren Commission as the man who killed Kennedy on Nov. 22, 1963.

"We both individually and as a team have concluded beyond any doubt, and I mean beyond any doubt, that the individual buried under the name Lee Harvey Oswald in Rose Hill cemetery is Lee Harvey Oswald," she said.

British author and assassination theorist Michael Eddowes, who agreed to pay for the exhumation, had contended the body in Oswald's grave was that of a Russian imposter who replaced Oswald when he defected to the Soviet Union in 1959.

Eddowes, who wrote "The Oswald Files," said Sunday he was "surprised, but in no way disappointed" at the findings.

Oswald's widow, Marina Oswald Porter, said she was relieved and "pleased with the results of the autopsy."

Mrs. Porter, who stayed at a discreet distance as the body was exhumed at Fort Worth's Rose Hill Burial Park Sunday morning, said she was "glad the issues have been resolved."

She said she hoped to resume a "normal life" as Marina Porter.

Oswald was shot to death two days after the Kennedy shooting by nightclub owner Jack Ruby. Since then there have been several books propounding the idea that more than one person was involved in the assassination and several theories about Oswald, including Eddowes'.

"We hope this puts the matter to rest," said Ms. Norton, a former Dallas County medical examiner who now practices in Birmingham, Ala. "We hope the Porters can go about living a normal life without any more speculation."

Years of court battles and bitter family quarreling ended Sunday morning at 7 a.m., as gravediggers worked quickly to exhume Oswald's body at Mrs. Porter's insistence.

The final hurdle was removed when Oswald's brother, Robert, removed his legal opposition to the exhumation. A temporary restraining order issued by a federal judge at Robert Oswald's request expired at midnight Saturday, prompting negotiations between attorneys for Mrs. Porter and her brother-in-law.

As a ring of security guards and several attorneys looked on, the concrete vault containing Oswald's casket was lifted from the grave.

Officials said moisture had deteriorated the coffin, which partially collapsed onto the body as the vault was opened.

The casket was reinforced with cardboard and wood, covered with a sheet and taken by hearse to Baylor University Medical Center in Dallas. The body was examined by Ms. Norton, Dr. Vincent DiMaio, Bexar County medical examiner, Dr. James A. Cottone, who specializes in dentistry, and Dr. Irvin Sopher, a West Virginia state medical examiner who has written several books on forensic dentistry.

The team took X-rays and made dental impressions to compare the teeth with Oswald's Marine Corps records.

Ms. Norton said a mastoidectomy scar from an operation Oswald had when he was 8 years old also was discovered and photographed.

"There was no doubt (that the body was Oswald)," said Cottone, assistant professor of dentistry at the University of Texas Health Science Center in San Antonio.

Ms. Norton said the entire procedure was videotaped at Mrs. Porter's request.

The body was decomposed, but some tissue and remnants of clothing remained, Ms. Norton said, adding that the body showed no signs of having been disturbed before Sunday's exhumation.

DiMaio confirmed Mrs. Porter identified two rings found on the body. Authorities said the body was placed in a new casket and returned to Rose Hill for re-burial after the team announced its findings.

Jurors Summoned In Daniels Trial

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — A visiting judge from Beaumont summoned 250 residents of this small town to court today in hopes of finding among them 12 impartial jurors to hear the murder trial of Vickie Daniel, widow of slain Texas House Speaker Price Daniel Jr.

The 9,900 people of this southeastern Texas community appear divided into two camps, and no one involved is predicting whether a jury can be seated that could objectively decide whether Mrs. Daniel, 34, is guilty or innocent of murder in the shooting death of her husband.

Daniel, 39, was killed Jan. 19 during a bitter quarrel with his wife at the Daniel ranch just outside of town.

State District Judge Leonard Giblin, who was brought in from Beaumont after the judges here refused to take a case involving the town's most prominent family, has told lawyers he does not want to spend more than a week on jury selection.

"The judge pretty much gave us the impression that he thought we ought to do it in a week or we weren't going to be able to get a jury here," said District Attorney Carroll Wilborn.

Defense attorney Jack Zimmermann said that according to past experience, only about half of the 250 prospective jurors summoned were expected to show up for today's scheduled 1:30 p.m. session.

The judge set aside today to question the prospective jurors himself and said attorneys in the case can begin asking questions Tuesday.

Wilborn said Giblin set aside Oct. 12 and 13 to decide pre-trial motions and actual testimony was not expected to begin until Oct. 14.

Mrs. Daniel had filed for divorce about three weeks before Daniel was killed. She later said her slain husband was a wife-beater and a child molester.

Daniel was the great-great-grandson of Sam Houston, the son of former Texas Gov., former U.S. Sen., and Texas Supreme Court Justice Price Daniel Sr., and himself a prominent politician who served as state legislator, speaker of the Texas House, and president ot the Texas Constitutional Convention.

All of the residents here may not know the Daniel family personally, but a lot of them do, and the rest at least know who they are, said Chamber of Commerce Manager Homer Smith.

"The town is split into two camps," he said. But he declined to say whether one side had more support than the other.

Details of the shooting came out last spring during a trial to determine who would get custody of the Daniels' two small sons, Marion Price Daniel IV, 1, and Franklin Baldwin Daniel, 4.

Daniel's sister, Jean Daniel Murph of Richardson, Texas, had filed suit to gain custody of her nephews, prompting the six-week trial.

Mrs. Daniel testified that she did not intentionally shoot her husband. After she accused him of beating her, molesting her sons, and said he was advancing on her the night he was shot to death, the jury gave her custody of the children.

She said the night Daniel was killed he had beaten her during a bitter quarrel and kicked her off a stairway leading to the attic, where she said he was going to look for a stash of marijuana.

She grabbed a rifle and fired a warning shot, she testified, but she said Daniel shouted an obscenity and kept advancing toward her.

Finally, "I remember hearing a funny sound," Mrs. Daniel testified. "It must have been the last shot. I didn't know then that I had hurt him."

Daniel bled to death before an ambulance arrived.

These nutritional tips brought to you by DIET CENTER

What new type of exercise is just as beneficial as running or biking, can be done by anyone, anywhere and is both fun and easy? It's rebound exercise—accomplished by bouncing on a mini-trampoline.

An interesting study, conducted by Dr. James White (University of California at San Diego) on a group of seventy women, compared the effects of daily treadmill running, stationery bicycling, jumping on a mini-trampoline and no exercise program at all. While all the exercises showed equivalent results, rebounding came out ahead because none of the jumpers suffered the calf or leg injuries experienced by the runners and bikers. Most importantly, a 12-month follow up showed that over half of the jumpers had continued bouncing regularly compared to only 31 percent of the joggers and 5 percent of the bicycle riders. Diet Center recognizes the value of rebound exercise and recommends bouncing at least ten minutes daily to attain and maintain your good health!

Apt to have trouble?

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have been told that I have gallstones. These showed up incidentally in another X-ray. To date I have had no particular symptoms, except an occasional nagging pain for a short time in my right side. I'm 61, not fussy about going through an operation, and considered in fairly good health. I did have a hysterectomy and a couple of minor operations. Is it possible for me to get along the rest of my life with the gallstones or am I apt to have trouble?

DEAR READER — The answer depends a lot on what type of stones you have, how big they are and whether your gallbladder functions properly or not. The occasional pain in your right side may not even be related to your gallstones but may be from colon spasms or gas, which are so common.

In general, if a person is in good health the risk of gallbladder surgery is slight. For that reason having such an operation before age 50 is usually not a great risk. After age 60, it is usually all right unless there are other illnesses, such as heart disease and then the risk goes up sharply.

Yes, many people who have silent gallstones go through life with a minimal amount of difficulty without surgery. But others develop complications of gallbladder disease that require surgery, sometimes almost on an emergency basis. To give you a better understanding of the problem I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-9, Gallstones and Gallbladder Disease.

Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Gallstones are mainly of two types, those composed of bile pigments and those of cholesterol. The latter have been dissolved by new medicines, still in the testing stage. As promising as this development is, it is used only in small stones in people who have no associated gallbladder disease. Not everyone can use these pills because some stones are too large, others are of bile pigments, not cholesterol. Still other patients have gallbladder disease that prevents concentrating the medicine in the gallbladder to dissolve the stones.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I'm a 17-year-old girl, under 5 feet tall. Do I still have a chance to get taller? What do I need to eat to grow?

DEAR READER — Chronological age and physiological age are not necessarily the same. Some people mature fast and others slow. Doctors separate the difference by bone-age studies using X-rays. Your growth in height is largely dependent upon the continued growth of your long bones, such as the thigh bone. Near the ends of the shaft is a zone of cartilage, which continues to grow, unlike solid bone. New bone continues to form at the edges of the cartilage.

Eventually the cartilage is calcified and becomes mature bone. By seeing how much cartilage you still have, if any, your chances of continued growth can be estimated.

If you are healthy there is little you can do to increase your growth, other than eat an adequate well-balanced diet. That includes enough protein, but excess protein will not help. Your own biological clock and hormones determine growth rate.

Land Leasing Values Are Up

GIDDINGS, Texas (AP) — Land that leased for $18 an acre four years ago now leases for as much as $600 an acre in this area.

The 1,000 square miles of land between Austin and Houston have become one of the busiest drilling areas in the U.S. There were nine wells in 1977, with more than 900 now.

The land is crisscrossed with pipelines that connect wells to seven gas processing plants set up since 1977. The newest one near here is being built by Phillips Petroleum.

Dogs Are Used In Cancer Research

EDITOR'S NOTE — They've been called "man's best friends" and in Seattle it's being proved. A research center there is treating dogs suffering from cancer and at the same time learning about techniques that might also save human victims of the disease.

By KATHY McCARTHY
Associated Press Writer

SEATTLE (AP) — Labradors with leukemia and Great Danes with bone cancer enable doctors at the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center to test experimental treatments they hope can help human cancer victims.

Now the doctors are canvassing dog breeders to find a group of dogs whose blood they can sample on a regular basis in hopes of unlocking genetic secrets governing the body's response to cancer.

Canine patients referred to the center by veterinarians around the Northwest have helped the doctors refine such techniques as bone marrow transplants, which have proved beneficial in fighting human leukemia and aplastic anemia.

Dogs also helped prove it is possible to remove a patient's own bone marow, freeze it, provide total body radiation to kill all cancer cells, then return the marrow to the patient's body.

That technique, called an autologous bone marrow transplant, has been used on humans in the past three years.

The marrow must be removed to protect it from the deadly radiation. With his bone marrow destroyed, the patient can die from infection or bleeding.

When the treatments work, the cancer-free dogs are returned to their owners. The autologous marrow transplant, for instance, works about a quarter of the time on canine cancer cases, said Dr. Fred Appelbaum, principal investigator in the tumor dog program.

"We've got a long, long way to go but we're curing 20-25 percent of animals who otherwise would die," he says.

It can produce some cures, Applebaum says, but it's still experimental.

Vicky, a 30-pound English bulldog with lymphocarcoma, was one of those to benefit from an autologous marrow transplant.

Referred last January by her veterinarian in Seaside, Ore., Vicky had two-inch tumors in each lymph node, with the largest tumor measuring 4-by-5 inches. Without treatment, Appelbaum said she would have had a life expectancy of one to two months.

Appelbaum remembers Vicky fondly, both because her story had a happy ending and because of the incongruity of greeting a tough-loooking bulldog with a cheery "Hi, Vicky!"

First Vicky was given two weeks of chemotherapy to send her cancer into remission. Then, under general anesthesia, her bone marrow cells were drawn out of the long bones in her fore and hind legs and frozen. Radiation killed the last lingering cancer cells and the marrow was returned.

weeks later and continues to do well, Appelbaum says.

In the six years of the current tumor dog program, the center has treated some 1,200 animals, and now averages more than 100 a year. The program is paid for by a National Cancer Institute grant. Appelbaum refuses to estimate a cure ratio, saying it varies with the type and stage of cancer as well as with the treatment used.

"We try experiments on the dogs that we're unwilling to try yet on humans," Appelbaum says. "Our therapies are evolving and we try to use the best therapy (on the dogs). But we may try something new that will be worse than the old therapy."

Fair Poll Shows Reagan Support

Scurry County Republican Women reported excellent participation in two events conducted in their booth at the Scurry County Fair, and they have tabulated results of an informal poll indicating widespread support here for President Ronald Reagan's administration.

A total of 226 persons took time to fill out a questionnaire. Overall, 129 of them rated Reagan's performance as "excellent," 90 rated it as "good," five rated it as "poor," one rated it as "fair" and three were undediced.

The following four questions were listed, with the answers at the end:

1. Do you believe the Reagan Administration's economic plan to balance the federal budget and reduce taxes is the best way to increase productivity, create new jobs and raise the standard of living for every American. Yes, 186; no 15; undecided 25.

Do you agree that local and state governments should have more flexibility and control over federal grants, thereby eliminating wasteful administrative overhead? Yes 196; no 7; undecided 23.

Do You favor the deregulation of the price of natural gas in order to increase domstic energy production. Yes 153; no 32; undecided 41.

Do you support the Reagan Administration's request for an increase in the U. S. defense budget in order to counter the massive Soviet arms buildup? Yes 178; no 29; undecided 19.

Also attracting people to the Republican Women's booth was a jellybean jar. A total of 880 persons tried to guess the number of jellybeans in the jar. John Jarrell was the winner, with the exact number, 786.

Preventing Foot Problems

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Prevention is the key to avoiding foot problems, says Dr. Rene Cailliet, professor and chairman of rehabilitation medicine at the University of Southern California.

Cailliet, who says he sees nothing intrinsically wrong in walking barefoot, believes that "children do not need shoes until they walk, and they need them then only for protection against stepping on something harmful.

"It never pays to assume a foot problem is minor," he cautions. "Foot discomfort can be the first symptom of rheumatoid arthritis, hardening of the arteries, a blood clot in the leg, problems with a spinal disk, or diabetes."

Preventing Tooth Decay

CHICAGO (AP) — The modern dentist can use two painless procedures to fight tooth decay, according to the American Dental Association.

Studies have shown, the ADA says, that certain fluoride liquids and gels applied directly to the teeth by a dentist can bring about a substantial reduction of decay — as much as 30 to 45 percent. This fluoride application is to help the tooth's enamel become more resistant to decay and is recommended at age 3 for protection of children's primary teeth and again when permanent teeth are erupting.

Sealants, on the other hand, are usually applied as a coating to the grind-surfaces of the teeth in the back of the mouth. They are designed to seal the tiny cracks and pits in the biting surfaces of the back teeth so that food and bacteria cannot collect there.

The smallest species of bird is the hummingbird, of which there are 320 different varieties.

Allen Passes Pruitt's Mark

by The Associated Press

Marcus Allen has brought some new numbers to college football, and they continue to add up to what is becoming a record-setting season.

Southern California's rambling man became the first runner ever to record four consecutive 200-yard games when he rushed for 233 yards and three touchdowns Saturday in leading the No.1-ranked Trojans to a 56-22 rout of Oregon State.

Allen, a 202-pound senior, carried 35 times for 233 yards and scored on runs of 30, 8 and 13 yards before sitting out the fourth quarter. With 925 yards in four games, he broke the mark of 905 set by Oklahoma's Greg Pruitt in 1971.

Meanwhile, four members of The Associated Press Top Twenty were knocked off - seventh-ranked Ohio State, No.9 Mississippi State, 12th-ranked Washington and No.19 Arkansas - while fifth-ranked Oklahoma and No.20 Iowa State battled to a 7-7 standoff.

Florida State outslugged Ohio State 36-27 in a wild passing duel, Missouri beat Mississippi State 14-3, Arizona State trimmed Washington 26-7 and Texas Christian stunned Arkansas 28-24.

Meanwhile, runner-up Penn State blanked Temple 30-0, fourth-ranked Pitt whipped South Carolina 42-28 behind Dan Marino's six touchdown passes, No.6 North Carolina downed Georgia Tech 28-7, eighth-ranked Michigan beat Indiana 38-17 and No.10 Brigham Young held off Utah State 32-26 Friday night.

In the Second Ten, No.11 Alabama drubbed Mississippi 38-7, No.14 Clemson turned back Kentucky 21-3, No.16 UCLA beat Colorado 27-7, No.17 Miami crushed Vanderbilt 48-16 and No.18 Iowa swamped Northwestern 64-0. Third-ranked Texas, No.13 Georgia and No.15 Southern Methodist were off.

Baseball Playoff Set; Ryan Vs Valenzuela

by The Associated Press

Forget about the records, the split season, the strike and the fact that two of baseball's best teams won't even be there. It's time for the game to get interesting again - the playoffs are here.

The best-of-five divisional playoffs open Tuesday in the home city of the second-half winners. The Kansas City Royals host the Oakland A's in the American League West, while the Houston Astros entertain the Los Angeles Dodgers in the National League West.

The series in the East start Wednesday with the Philadelphia Phillies traveling to Montreal to play the Expos and the New York Yankees meeting the Brewers at Milwaukee.

The final three games of each series will be played in the cities of the first-half division winners with the possible exception of the Oakland-Kansas City series.

The Royals finished the second season just a half game ahead of Oakland and the A's could repeat as division winners today if Kansas City drops a doubleheader to the Indians in Cleveland. Oakland would then host games two through five.

The Royals, who finished the season with an overall record of 49-53, will start right-hander Dennis Leonard, 13-11, against the A's Mike Norris, 12-9.

The best opening game pitching matchup will probably be in Houston, where the Dodgers will send out rookie sensation Fernando Valenzuela, 13-7, against Nolan Ryan, 11-5, who no-hit the Dodgers nine days ago.

"I'm glad to see us open at home," Ryan said. "I look at it as a plus. I feel we're capable of winning at home."

The Yankees, who finished the second half of the season under .500 at 25-26, will send Ron Guidry, 11-5, against the Brewers' Moose Haas, 11-7, in the opener of the AL East series.

Philadelphia will send three-time Cy Young award winner Steve Carlton, 13-4, against Steve Rogers, 12-8, in the NL East opener as the Phillies go after a second straight world championship.

Tigers Thrash Pecos Eaglettes

PECOS -- Snyder varsity volleyball team opened the second half of the District 2-AAAA season the same way it finished the first half -- with a victory.

The Tigers went cold, then hot to rap the Pecos Eaglettes 16-14 and 15-0 to up their district record to 8-0; 7-0 for the first round and 1-0 for the second.

Snyder takes Tuesday off, but travels to Sweetwater on Thursday and entertains Fort Stockton Saturday. The doubleheader on Saturday will count on both the first and second round standings.

"The first game is what I expected Pecos to play like the last time we played them," said Snyder's Joyce Elrod. "It's hard to get up, after you've beaten a team 15-0 ad 15-2 like we beat Pecos the first time. The girls didn't believe Pecos was capable of beating them.

"We were down 9-14 before they finally realized they were getting beat. Pecos had good all-around hitting and defense the first game. We just stood there on the court with our mouths open," Elrod said. "Finally, our offense started clicking. (Kathy) Northcott came up and served out the game."

The 7-point turnaroud gave all the momentum to Snyder, and the Tigers breezed through the second game, 15-0.

"I think the girls were mad because they played so poorly in the first game," noted the coach. "They came back and stuffed Pecos two or three times and that demoralized their offense. All of our girls started putting the ball down well."

With the score 6-0, Shana Koonsman came on and served out the game. Northcott had 13 points, Koonsman 10, Becky Harrell 4, Sherri Rich 3 and Sabrina Robinson 1. Toni Elrod also played.

Snyder junior varsity and freshmen teams also won here last night. The JV won 15-10 and 15-13 as Tracy Fortune served for 9, Susan Brim, Lisa Loyola, Wendy Hodge and Cari Walker for 5 each, and Mona Green for 1.

In the freshman game, Snyder won 15-0, 14-16 and 18-16. Jackie Parham served 9, Shana Hart 8, Sabrina Sullivan and Audra Blackard 7 each, Connye Davis 6, and Susan Tully and Gina Vaughn 4 apiece.

The freshmen host Big Spring tonight at 6.

Cats Third

DENVER CITY -- Snyder eighth grade volleyball team placed third in the Denver City Tournament over the weekend here.

The Cats defeated Brownfield 15-8 and 15-8, lost to Big Spring 10-15 and 4-15, and beat Seminole 15-9, 9-15 and 15-4.

On the Snyder team were Pam Casias, Monica Hinojos, Shondra Robinson, Stephanie McKnight, Leslie Light, Angie Housden, Robbi Merritt, Becky Powell, Sharnette Thompson, Carrie Fortune and Robin Sharp.

2nd Conference Tournament...

WTC Wins By 7 Strokes

Western Texas College increased its lead in the WJCAC golf standings here Saturday as Coach Dave Foster's Westerers fought some tough competition and 20 mph winds to win the second conference tournament of the season.

The Westerners, who have won all three tournaments they have entered this fall, fired a 14-over 294 to defeat runnerup Odessa Junfor College by seven strokes.

The win gave Western Texas six more points in the conference standings; a total of 12. New Mexico Junior College, which had five points going into the tourney, finished fourth here Saturday and is tied with Odessa and Midland with eight conference points.

Freshman Petey Petri, from Austin Round Rock, nabbed medalist honors with a two-over par 72. Two other WTC freshmen, Ronnie Fletcher and Rick Woodson, shot 73s and tied with South Plains' Darryl Scott for runner-up honors.

Other WTC individual scores had sophomores Jeff Seger and Philip Jones at 76, and Matt Vincent at 77.

"Under the weather conditions, a team score of 294 is a fantastic score. There again, it goes back to team golf. Everyone was in the hunt for WTC. When you take four of six scores you need everyone, especially when the wind was blowing hard like it was today (Saturday)," said Foster.

Odessa shot a 21-over, 301 for the 18 holes, followed by Midland with a 310. NMJC was well back at 311, while South Plains carded a 312 and New Mexico Military Institute had a 328.

Next action for the Westerners will be the third conference tournament Oct. 8-9 at Ranchland Hills Country Club in Midland.

Veterans Win Team Title

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) - Veteran LPGA pair Donna Caponi-Kathy Whitworth sank a birdie putt in a sudden-death playoff to win their second consecutive $120,000 PING Team Championship with a 16-under-par 203.

Caponi stroked in the winning 32-foot putt on the second playoff hole at the 6,313-yard, par-73 Riverside Golf and Country Club.

Frogs Surprise Arkansas Hogs

DALLAS (AP) - How 'bout them Frogs!

For the first time in a long time, the Texas Christian Horned Frogs were the talk of the Southwest Conference today.

They did something Saturday they hadn't accomplished in the 1960s or the 1970s - beat Arkansas in a football game.

Two Steve Stamp to Stanley Washington 22-yard touchdown passes boosted TCU to a 28-24 victory over Arkansas for the first time in 22 years.

In other games, Texas A&M nipped Texas Tech 24-23, Houston bombed defending SWC champion Baylor 24-3, and previously winless Rice jumped the league's ledger against outside foes to 17-7 with a 20-16 victory over Tulane.

TCU travels to Rice Saturday while the Aggies host Houston, Texas Tech entertains Arkansas, and Texas goes against Oklahoma in a nationally televised game beginning at 11:30 a.m. at the Cotton Bowl in Dallas. Baylor travels to Dallas to play SMU.

Horned Frog Coach F.A. Dry, who beat Arkansas for the first time in five tries as the head mentor at TCU said after the come-from-behind victory: "It feels really good ... I imagine those who suffered through those 22 defeats feel pretty good about it too ... it hasn't been 22 years for me."

TCU's last-minute come-from-behind victory was only sightly more bizarre than A&M's triumph over the scrappy Tech Red Raiders, still looking for new Coach Jerry Moore's initial league victory.

The Aggies trailed 23-10 going into the final quarter, but touchdown runs by Thomas Sanders and Johnny Hector proved Tech's undoing.

Sophomore Lionel Wilson, passing the balll unlike anyone who had ever played just two varsity games, took the vigor out of the defending champion Baylor Bears.

"The only thing that surprised me was the outstanding play of their quarterback," said Baylor lineman Tommy Tabor. "He executed every play very well ... like he had been doing it five or six years."

Cards Give Dallas First Season Loss

ST. LOUIS (AP) - To Roy Green, the double-duty wide receiver and defensive back of the St. Louis Cardinals, the plight of the Dallas Cowboys was clear.

"I was thinking in the final four minutes they're going to know how we felt," said Green after watching Neil O'Donoghue's 37-yard field goal saddle Dallas with a 20-17 upset loss Sunday. "We knew that if we went out and executed, we could do it."

St. Louis, in addition to knocking the Cowboys from the ranks of the National Football League's unbeaten, managed to extract revenge.

"Every time we played them, we'd be in the game," said defensive end Curtis Greer in reference to the seven straight setbacks St. Louis had suffered against Dallas. "There were times we just came up short. It was really a moment of relief."

A punt by the Cowboys' Danny White sailed out of bounds at the St. Louis 7 with 4½ minutes left only to have a 15-yard penalty rescue the Cards from a hole. Two pass completions by Jim Hart, three runs by Ottis Anderson and two more dashes by Wayne Morris then ate up most of the remaining time before O'Donoghue appeared.

"I felt pretty cool," said O'Donoghue, a 6-foot-6 kicker whose field goal with 23 seconds remaining came one play after Anderson rambled 9 yards to the Dallas 20 on third down.

Ahead of O'Donoghue's winning kick, it had been an afternoon of give and take for St. Louis in quest of its first victory over the Cowboys since 1977.

James Jones fumbled the opening kickoff, enabling Morris of the Cards to sprint 9 yards to the end zone on the game's first play. But Dallas, after ignited by Tony Dorsett's 36-yard run, tied 7-7 on a 7-yard Dorsett gallop.

O'Donoghue then booted a 19-yard field goal late in the first quarter that held up for a lead until Rafael Septien's 26-yarder manufactured a 10-10 halftime stalemate.

Randy Love's recovery of Stump Mitchell's fumbled punt return later preceded Hart's 30-yard touchdown pass to Green. Dallas retaliated by rolling 78 yards but needed an exchange of interceptions to set up White's 11-yard scoring peg to Dorsett.

Hart moved to No. 9 on the NFL's all-time list with his 197th career touchdown pass on the heave to Green early in the third quarter.

Houston Edges Cincinnati, 17-10

HOUSTON (AP) - Carl Roaches left the Astrodome Sunday night to celebrate his wedding anniversary, while the rest of the Oilers cheered another event worth remembering - the return of Earl Campbell.

Roaches presented his wife with a 96-yard kickoff return for a touchdown in the third quarter that rallied the Oilers to a 17-10 victory over Cincinnati.

Campbell, who had not gained 100 yards since the season opener against Los Angeles, presented 44,350 fans with 182 yards rushing on 37 carries as the Oilers settled back into the I-formation that launched Campbell to three NFL rushing titles.

While Campbell was Houston's bread and butter, Roaches was its dessert with his exciting kickoff and punt returns.

In addition to his kickoff return, Roaches put the Oilers into good field position throughout the game with four punt returns for 93 yards.

After Cincinnati took a 3-0 lead on Jim Breech's 45-yard field goal, the Oilers came back in the second quarter with a 51-yard touchdown drive.

Campbell gained 49 yards in the drive and scored on a two-yard run, trotting into the end zone for a 7-3 halftime lead.

Cincinnati's Ken Anderson filled the air with 52 passes and put the Bengals ahead 10-7 in the third quarter on a 13-yard touchdown pass to tight end Dan Ross, who split two Oiler defenders at the goal line.

But on the ensuing kickoff, Roaches broke to his right, skittered down the sidelines and escaped the grasp of Mike Fuller, his final obstacle, at the goal line. The Oilers added a 48-yard field goal by Tony Fritsch with 4:48 to play.

Anderson, who finished with 30 completions for 290 yards, had the Bengals thinking about overtime in the final minute when he drove the offense to Houston's 12 yard line before missing four straight passes, the last with 52 seconds to play.

Rogers Wins Texas Open

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) - Bill Rogers curled in a 12-foot birdie putt on the first playoff hole to defeat Ben Crenshaw in sudden-death for the championship of the $250,000 Texas Open Golf Tournament.

Rogers had sunk a four-foot birdie putt on the 17th green to force the playoff, with the two Texans tying at 14-under-par 266 at the end of regulation play.

"Iron Man" Joe McGinnity pitched the incredible total of 434 innings for the New York Giants in the 1903 season.

Drug Traffic Breeds New Mafia In Miami

MIAMI (AP) — Florida's palm trees are trembling to a new kind of tropical disturbance — the sounds of machine-gun blasts that are, some investigators say, the violent birth throes of a "new Mafia."

For the past three years, police reports have read like those from the 1920s mob wars of New York and Chicago. Items from the 1981 police blotter:

—A gunman in an orderly's smock slips into the private hospital room of a Colombian named Jorge Marrero, puts a bullet through Marrero's head, finishing a job he had botched 24 hours earlier.

—A 7-year-old boy is kidnapped as collateral for a $700,000 cocaine debt.

—A young man in jeans places a plastic trash bag on a bank teller's counter. It contains $1.2 million in small bills.

—Joseph Testa opens the door of his Cadillac and steps in. When he sits, a radio signal ignites a bomb. He dies without naming his killer.

This is today's metropolitan Miami, where the murder rate has quintupled in five years — rising from 104 homicides in 1976 to 580 last year. The murder rate per capita in Miami was the highest in the nation last year. This year, barely three-quarters spent, has already seen 445 slayings.

The violence rose steeply this year with the influx of Cuban and Haitian refugees, but experts are most alarmed about the growing violence surrounding the drug underworld.

"We are seeing the birth of a new Mafia," said Arthur Nehrbass, a former FBI organized crime specialist out of New York and Chicago who is now commander of the metropolitan Miami police Organized Crime Bureau.

"What we are seeing now is New York City in 1910-1920 when we had Sicilians preying on Italian storekeepers, when Lucky Luciano and Salvatore Maranzano were unknown young men forming what would become the American Cosa Nostra.

"The Colombians are progressing along the same lines. They are very close in structure right now to the original Sicilian Mafia," Nehrbass said. "I hadn't thought of them as a Mafia-type organization until about 10 months ago. We sort of felt something growing."

Nehrbass, 50, has more than 20 years' experience working against the mob. He made his first organized crime arrest in Chicago in 1960 and spent 15 years in New York City, where he supervised an FBI unit that monitored the families of Carlo Gambino and Joseph Gallo.

It was in New York that he first encountered the Colombians.

"The Colombians then and now had a worldwide reputation as specialists in counterfeiting. They'd come into New York with the best of counterfeit paper — currency, cashier checks, stocks. These are the same organizations which have gone into narcotics.

"They are built along Sicilian Mafia lines. It is an organization of blood relatives....They are every bit as secretive as the Mafia, but not as disciplined. When a Cosa Nostra soldier wants to kill, he must get permission. The Colombian just picks up a machine gun and shoots."

Nehrbass' police unit recently cracked one of the Colombians' more bizarre ventures — the kidnapping of 7-year-old Andrew Martinez from the home of his wealthy uncle. A Colombian crime family demanded a $700,000 ransom as compensation for a cocaine debt the boy's mother owed.

The boy was rescued nine days later. Two kidnappers were killed, two wounded and 17 arrested. Nehrbass says the kidnapping was masterminded in Colombia by the crime family's leader, Umberto Londono. Extradition papers have been filed.

"To eliminate witnesses," said Nehrbass, "they were going to kill the boy and whomever delivered the ransom, in this case, the boy's grandmother. But they weren't going to kill the uncle because he had the ability to pay."

The Mafia's success came from delivery of services wanted by the American public, such as alcohol and gambling. The Colombians provide cocaine and marijuana.

A federal strike force here says at least four separate Colombian organized crime groups are sending home up to $300 million a year in drug profits. A major reason for the Colombia success, according to agents, were the Miami banks.

"They were accepting deposits without question from these people," said Michael McDonald, an Internal Revenue Service special agent. "And the banks knew who they were. What other industry generates millions of dollars in currency deposits — 10s, 20s and 50s — brought in in shopping bags and brown suitcases and plastic garbage bags by individuals who don't speak much English?"

Last spring, 50 armed agents from the IRS, Customs and the Drug Enforcment Administration stormed into two Miami banks. As terrfied customers watched, the agents seized the banks' records and found enough to arrest Isaac Kattan Kassin, a Colombian who had deposited $7 million in the week of his arrest.

The banks said the raid was a publicity stunt by the feds — but they changed their ways, said McDonald.

"When these young guys come in off the streets carrying maybe a million dollars in small bills," he said, "the banks are starting to ask, who are you? We have to report you."

Nehrbass foresees no major gang war between the Colombians and the long-established Cosa Nostra in Miami. However, there are skirmishes.

Item: Aug. 5, 1981 — A team of Latin gunmen walks into a pizzeria at noon, forces the customers to line against the wall and calmly guns down two people.

"They do it in broad daylight in the busiest sections of town, in shopping centers," Nehrbass said. "It's another Chicago."

Bentsen-Wright

with the two winners then meeting each other, Wright's chances would have been excellent for beating Blakley in the Democratic runoff and then Tower.

"I would undoubtedly have gone to the Senate if that had been the case," Wright said recently.

"Bill Blakley was a fine fellow and a great businessman, but he knew about as much about how to run for office as I would have known about how to run Braniff Air. He just did all the wrong things in his runoff against Tower from a political standpoint, things that even I at that relatively young age would have known to avoid."

If Rayburn knew what he was talking about 27 years ago, Bentsen would have already become Speaker of the House by now. A little change, and Wright would have been — instead of Tower — Texas' senior senator, serving in his fourth 6-year term.

"Be that as it may, I have a faith. I believe as a matter of conviction that things work together for good," Wright said.

"Sometimes you can't see it at the time, you can't understand why they have happened that way. But in my life, I have usually lived long enough to discover that things did turn out for the best and those things that seemed at the time like great disappointments have become great stepping stones for me."

He added, "I'm infinitely more able to influence legislation as the majoprity leader in the House, than if I had gone to the Senate and been one of 100 men over there. So it turned out better for me that it went that way."

Bentsen says "I'm delighted" he didn't stay around to give Rayburn's prediction a chance. His years in the House frustrated him, because only with seniority could a member accomplish anything meaningful, he felt.

In the 16 years he was away from Washington, before he won election to the Senate in 1970, he had a satisfying business career and has enjoyed his work in the Senate.

Bentsen sought the presidency in 1976, but Jimmy Carter fever was spreading throughout the South, and Ronald Reagan had hefty support in Texas as well, and Bentsen pulled out early.

He's not interested in running for president again.

"No, I've got my job right here," he said.

Wright is the heir-apparent to House Speaker Tip O'Neill.

"If that happens, good. But if I should not, that's fine, too. I don't just lie awake at night thirsting for the speakership. I don't have any sense that I would be unfulfilled in life if I shouldn't be the speaker," Wright said.

"I'm reasonably happy the way things are, and actually it's about as big a job as a man ought to aspire to, to be a successful majority leader."

Labor Leaders Have Lost Touch

NEW YORK (AP) — American labor leaders have lost touch with the needs and desires of the workers they represent, according to an overwhelming majority of the respondents in the latest Associated Press-NBC News poll.

A strong majority of those polled from households with at least one union member agree that labor leaders are out of touch with their constituents.

Overall, only 1 in 5 people believes the labor movement is gaining strength and 1 in 3 said no workers, either public or private, should be allowed to strike.

The poll was taken of 1,601 adults who were contacted at random by telephone Sept. 28-29 in a scientifically selected nationwide sample.

Seventy-three percent agreed with the statement, "American labor leaders are out of touch with the needs and desires of the workers they represent," while 18 percent disagreed and 9 percent said they were not sure.

Among people who said that either they or some other members of their households were union members, 67 percent agreed with the statement.

Twenty percent of all respondents said they believe the labor movement in the United States is getting stronger, while 39 percent said it is getting weaker, 34 percent said it is staying about the same and 7 percent were unsure.

The response from people in households including at least one union member almost matched the answers of people not from union households: 20 percent said the labor movement is getting stronger, 40 percent said weaker, 37 percent said the same and 3 percent were unsure.

Forty-six percent said they think any worker, public or private, should be allowed to go on strike. Thirty-six percent said no worker should be allowed to strike, while 12 percent said only private workers should be allowed to strike and 6 percent were not sure.

However, among respondents from union households, 56 percent said any worker should be allowed to strike, while 27 percent said no worker, 12 percent said only private workers and 5 percent were not sure.
