GETS UNDERWAY TUESDAY

Cowboys And Cowgirls To Gather For Rodeo

By CLAY LIVELY

The Top O' Texas Rodeo is scheduled to get underway Tuesday at the rodeo arena in Recreation Park east of town. The annual event, sanctioned by the Rodeo Cowboys Association, will run through Saturday, with action getting underway at 8 p.m. each day.

Among those expected to enter the rodeo are Jerome Robinson, Brandon, Neb., and Hank Abbie, Rumsey, Alta., Canada. Both cowboys ranked in the top 20 in bull riding in 1972.

Gail Petska, Norman, Okla., will compete in women's barrel racing. She was the World Champion Cowgirl in 1972.

In the National Finals Rodeo she set a women's record by placing no lower than second in nine of 10 events. Her husband Paul will also compete in the rodeo.

The rodeo will feature saddle bronc, bareback, bull riding, calf roping and steer wrestling.

Cowboys entering the rodeo will add their entry fees of $20 in the riding events and $40 in timed events to a $3,000 purse for the total prize money.

Last year's rodeo, with 170 contestants, had a total prize money of $8,036. This was part of the $4.5 million won in 1972 at 567 RCA sanctioned rodeos in 42 states and four Canadian provinces.

Buck LeGrand, Cowboy Hall of Fame honoree, will be the rodeo clown for the Top O' Texas. He started his rodeo career in 1949 at the age of 15.

He has worked rodeos in Madison Square Garden, Canada, Hawaii and other locations throughout the country.

In 1959 he was chosen by the top 20 bull riders in the country to work the first National Finals Rodeo. In all, he has worked the finals five times.

"The Pony Express Race," which features four teams of skilled adult riders, is a special attraction added to the rodeo this year. First round winners will compete Saturday night for first and second places.

Two performances of the annual Kid Pony Show will be conducted Tuesday. The rodeo parade will be held at 4 p.m. Wednesday, prior to the opening performance of the rodeo.

Another feature of the rodeo this year is the "Gold Rush," to take place each night before the evening's performance gets underway. Kids aged 8-12 are invited to compete for ribbons, attached to calves' tails, worth $5 apiece.

No advance registration is necessary for the "Gold Rush" and the Top O' Texas Rodeo Association assumes no liability for any accidents that might occur during the event.

Livestock for the rodeo will be supplied by Sonny Linger of Miles City, Mont. Entries close at 3 p.m Tuesday.

Vonnie Dean and "The Southern Belles," fresh from performances in Las Vegas and at the "Grand Ole Opry," will provide dance music each night at the National Guard Armory following the evening's performance, in addition to performing selections during the rodeo.

NEW COMIC STRIP

'Judge Parker' To Start Monday In Pampa News

Judge Parker, a new comic strip, will begin running on The Pampa News comic page Monday.

The following plot summary and continuity is published to bring readers up to date on what has gone before in the highly interesting Judge Parker strip:

Sam Driver, a vigorous young lawyer and Judge Parker's close friend, has become romantically entangled with a beautiful young actress — Betsy Fremont.

Betsy, who is staying with the Judge and his wife Katherine, has returned to her hometown to settle her father's estate. In reality, the trip is just an excuse to see Sam, whom she hasn't seen since their love affair six years ago.

Betsy uses all her womanly wiles to rekindle the old romance, and it seems to be working. Just when all is going perfectly for Betsy, her ex-husband Rick Lassiter shows up in town.

Hearing of Betsy's involvement with Sam Driver, Lassiter — still in love with Betsy and urging a remarriage — is determined to tell the unsuspecting lawyer about Betsy's past, including her other two former husbands and her well - concealed neurosis.

Betsy panics, telling Sam that Lassiter is a pathological liar whom neither of them should see. Since Lassiter knows Betsy is staying with the Parkers, Sam suggests that she stay at Spencer Farms until he leaves town.

In the meantime, the scheming young woman phones Lassiter and agrees to fly back to New York with him that night. But when Lassiter arrives at Spencer Farms to pick up his darling ex - wife, the security (following specific orders) refuses him entry. Angered, but more determined than ever to have Betsy back, Lassiter rams his car right through the gate.

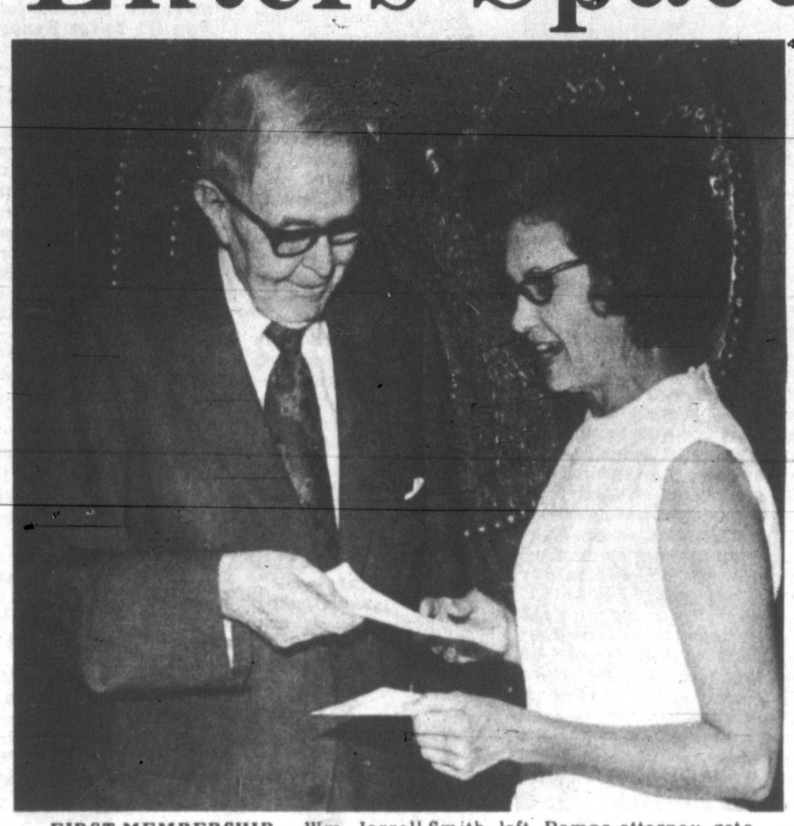

What happens to Rick Lassiter now? And what kind of game is Betsy playing? Will Sam Driver ever find out the truth about Betsy's past.

To find out, read JUDGE PARKER, starting Monday in The Pampa News.

Second Skylab Crew Enters Space Station

FIRST MEMBERSHIP — Wm. Jarrell Smith, left, Pampa attorney, gets the first membership in the newly-formed Pampa Enviornmental Beautification Foundation from Mrs. Thelma Bray, president pro tem of the Foundation. The foundation was formed to promote the beautification of Pampa.

HOUSTON (UPI) — The second Skylab crew entered America's orbiting space station Saturday and began man's longest space adventure—a 59-day study of the sun, earth and man himself.

With a smooth flight from Cape Kennedy, Alan L. Bean, Owen K. Garriott and Jack R. Lousma linked the ferry ship with their new home, opened the hatch and turned on the lights like vacationers opening a summer home.

The unprecedented research program designed to benefit both the scientist and common man on earth began soon after launch with an experiment mounted on the pilots' Saturn rocket. The instrument mapped half the sky for faint star sources and rdioed back the data.

"We're very happy at this time and looking forward to a good 59-day mission," said flight director Donald Puddy after the linkup.

"We're docked," Bean said. "That went real well."

The pilots, riding their Apollo ferry ship, rendezvoused with the 118-foot space station after an eight-hour chase five times around the earth. The crew ate a snack before entering Skylab.

"There's our home in the sky," Lousma said as they pulled alongide the research ship.

Skylab, seen in a television picture beamed back to earth, looked like a giant windmill suspended 270 miles above the cloud-speckled United States. The station was in its 1085th orbit on the 76th day since launch.

The makeshift sun umbrella raised nine weeks ago by the Skylab 1 astronauts flapped like an umbrella on a windy beach when exposed to the exhaust of the astronauts' Apollo spaceship.

"That old parasol is really blowing in the breeze," said Garriott, a scientist-astronaut. "It looks like a 10 or 15 knot gale every time the thrusters fire."

Bean, fourth man to walk on the moon, lined up Apollo for the docking at Skylab's forward end near the solar observatory mounted piggyback on the station.

"I'm looking right in the wardroom window," Lousma said. "Nobody's home."

Ground communicator Richard Truly replied: "Roger, but there will be."

The pilots fired Apollo's main engines six times to get in the same orbit with Skylab after a flawless blastoff from Cape Kennedy at 7:11 a.m. EDT atop a 22-story tall Saturn 1B rocket.

"It looks like you're driving through a snowstorm real fast," Lousma said, referring to a stream of particles from the control rocket system.

Chicanos Protest Shooting

DALLAS (UPI) — About 2,000 Mexican-Americans, disrupting what had been planeed as a peaceful protest of the killing of a 12 - year - old boy by a policeman, Saturday tossed bottles through windows in the downtown area, attacked police and forced storekeepers to barricade their front doors.

Witnesses on Main and Commerce streets, where the disturbance appeared centered, said small crowds of demonstrators ran along the sidewalks, throwing rocks and bottles through store windows and shouting insults at police.

There were no reports of shooting.

All of the windows in stores stretching three blocks from City Hall west had been broken, according to witnesses. Storekeepers scooped merchandise into baskets and pulled it away from the broken windows.

One storekeeper told UPI photographer Phil Huber that a demonstrator grabbed a handful of merchandise as the storekeeper was raking it away. Security guards were posted at the doors of all stores, letting customers out but not letting anyone inside.

New Foundation Seeking Beautification Of Pampa

More than $750 has been contributed to a newly - created, tax - exempt foundation to promote the beautification of Pampa, it was announced Saturday.

It has been named the Pampa Environmental Beautification Foundation and the membership roll has been opened to any citizen who will contribute $6 or more for a one - year membership.

The foundation was originated by Pampa attorney William Jarrel Smith and chartered by Mrs. Thelma Bray, Mrs. James Malone and Mrs. Wallace Birkes with a funding start by the M.K. Brown and Gray Pampa Foundations.

Founders of the organization now are launched on a membership drive for contributions to carry on the work.

Persons wishing to aid the foundation in its aim of beautification for Pampa's parks, streets and public places will find membership on Page 2 of today's Pampa News a membership form to be filled out and mailed to Mrs. Wallace Birkes, 2356 Aspen, Pampa, along with at least $6 for the one - year contribution.

"We are quite enthused with the response and interest of our local citizens," said Mrs. Bray, president - pro tem of the Foundation.

During the membership drive, she said reservations can be made for a team to speak to any civic organization about the Foundation by calling Mrs. Malone, vice - president, at 665-5416. Memberships may be mailed to the treasurer, Mrs. Birkes.

An organizational meeting of the foundation membership has been set for 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, Aug. 21, in the Palm Room at City Hall. At that time the governing board of 22, comprising seven officers and 15 board of trustees, will be elected from the membership, as set forth in the by-laws.

Board members will serve either one, two or three years, as determined by lot.

Purpose of the Foundation as stated in the charter is "to create a vehicle for the beautification of parks, streets, and public places in Pampa and its environs.

"Beautification projects will include, but not be limited to, the setting out of trees, shrubs, flowers, and various decorative and aesthetic structures, and the construction and maintenance of walks, trails, and decorative information signs at places in the city of Pampa and its nearby environs that will add to the beauty of the area and serve to remove unsightly conditions which may exist."

Mrs. Bray said Smith, originator of the tax - exempt organization, also donated his time to compiling the charter and by - laws to meet with state and federal regulations.

Serving as officers pro - tem for the three - month organizational period are president, Mrs. Bray, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce Civic Beautification Committee; vice - president, Mrs. Malone, president of Pampa Garden Club; and secretary - treasurer, Mrs. Birkes, immediate past president of Pampa Garden Club.

Donations have been received, so far from the M.K. Brown and Gray - Pampa Foundations, private foundations in Pampa.

"It is expected there will be additional memorials and contributions to the tax - exempt community organization by other groups," Mrs. Bray said.

Convicts End Riot In Prison

McALESTER, Okla. (UPI) — About 150 rebellious convicts, some drunk on moonshine whiskey, laid down their knives, meat cleavers and axes Saturday and released 11 hostages they held during 22 hours of rioting and burning at the Oklahoma State Prison.

The inmates—last of about 500 to surrender—returned to their cells, and guards began a sweep of the prison. They said they would search every inmate and every cell for weapons.

The red brick penitentiary, built two blocks long in 1909, was left a smoking shell that Oklahoma officials said would cost $10 million to replace.

At least two convicts were killed—both slashed again and again by knives, apparently by fellow inmates. And 26 persons were injured, including five prison employes who were among the 21 original hostages taken when the riot began Friday.

Prison officials said convicts had fought among themselves and the death toll might rise as guards and National Guard troops searched the shattered compound for more bodies.

Gov. David Hall flew by helicopter from Oklahoma City to McAlester and met with inmate leaders on their demands for amnesty and prison reform. Hall refused to meet with the rebels until they all surrendered and released their hostages.

School Board Sets Meeting

The Pampa Independent School District Board of Trustees meets in open session tomorrow at 7 a.m. at the Coronado Inn.

Among things to be discussed by the board are two items carried over from the July 10 agenda — a budget work session and personnel recommendations.

Also on the agenda for the meeting are discussions of the school commodity program; a proposed nickel increase in the cost of school lunches; discussion of plans for conducting an open house for the Area Vocational Building on Aug. 19 and recommendations for the kindergarten program.

Greek Troops Guard Voters

ATHENS (UPI) — Greek troops took up positions at polling stations throughout the country Saturday on the eve of a constitutional referendum to confirm President George Papadopoulos' rule as chief of state for an indefinite period.

As balloting committees sealed ballot boxes in the 11,978 polling booths, a committee of 30 opponents to the military regime issued a statement saying the government has blocked all attempts to make the referendum honest and democratic.

JOINING THE PARADE — Melinda Diggs, standing, and Mrs. Ron Ledbetter, both of White Deer, stuff $20 worth of tissue into the First Baptist Church youth group's float prior to the parade Saturday afternoon for the White Deer rodeo parade. Rodeo action concluded last night. (See - story, Page 9.)

ONE-WOMAN SHOW — Joan McCrary, artist and educator from Oklahoma City, will be conducting a workshop for local artists this week. An exhibition of paintings will open for a month's viewing beginning Saturday, Aug. 4, at Las Pampas Galleries.

Artist To Hold Workshop

"It's great to be coming back to Pampa for another show," Joan McCrary, Oklahoma City artist and educator, said.

She will be holding her second workshop here from Monday through Friday, providing instruction for local artists, from painting in the studio to sketching on location.

At 2 p.m. Tuesday she will present a demonstration at Las Pampas Galleries in Coronado Shopping Center for anyone interested in attending.

The painting exhibition of landscapes, still - lifes and subjects of local color will open for a month's viewing on Saturday, Aug. 4.

"So many crazy things always happen to me when I go on location to paint for shows," Ms. McCrary said.

She related an incident in which she and Mrs. Jim Leverich of Pampa traveled out to the only wooden derrick left in this part of the country.

The women decided to jump the car across a ditch up to the lease road, which was little more than a cow trail. One tire didn't make the jump, causing the car to get stuck there for the rest of the day.

The women made a hot, dusty hike and got a ride from a local truck driver. After a call home, Mrs. Leverich's husband arrived on the scene and lifted the car from the ditch with his wench truck.

Ms. McCrary is represented in the Galeria de Taos in Taos, N.M., Morman Welks in Oklahoma City, Gallery 23 East in Tulsa and Las Pampas Galleries in Pampa.

Her paintings are, in addition, represented in private collections and various other galleries throughout the Southwest.

GET YOUR PROGRAMS — Members of the Pampa High School Key Club get in some advance practice for selling programs for the Top O' Texas Rodeo this week. From left are Bert Casey, club president; Richard Lane, Bret Bell and Johnnie Cook. The 36-page programs will have information on the contestants and the various events.

Government Ends Set-Aside Lands

The Gray County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Serice has announced agricultural policies for 1974, as designated by the Secretary of Agriculture and the federal government.

In a newsletter mailed locally Friday, Evelyn Mason, county executive director, said in order to assure adequate supplies for domestic and export markets, the Secretary of Agriculture has announced there will be no government set - aside land in 1974.

The effect of this announcement will be to free farmers to go all - out to produce feed grains, soybeans, wheat and cotton. It will also enable farmers to plan now for 1974 crops.

Also affecting the program will be the ruling that maintenance of an established conserving base will not be required as a condition of elgibility to receive price support or program payments.

The exception will be conserving base use requirements in effect for CAP agreements which are not terminated. Producers with existing CAP agreements which continue through 1974, and subsequent years will, at their option, have the opportunity to terminate such agreements.

Specific instructions for handling CAP agreements which may be teminated will be contained in latter releases, according to government spokesmen.

Set - aside and conserving base requirements remain in effect for 1973. All requirements are still in effect withset - aside not grazed between May 15 and Oct. 15, and no crop harvested from the acreage. Conserving base must still be maintained, according to the ASCS.

New Action For Beef Discussed

WASHINGTON — In a meeting with the President Friday Congressman Bob Price discussed with Melvin Laird, presidential domestic affairs advisor; Alexander Haag, presidential assistant; Bryce Harlow, presidential assistant, and other Republican Policy Committee members the matter of the freeze on beef.

Congressman Price said:

"I reviewed with the President and the others present the seriousness of the beef freeze and the chaotic conditiions it is causing. Speculation in beef and grain commodities by certain brokerage firms and certain domestic and export grain firms was discussed.

"I have called for a full investigation by the appropriate agency into these matters. Beef shortages, holding actions and increased prices as well as packing house closings and layoffs were also discussed.

"The President was very appreciative and aware of the conditions and said the beef freeze was a matter discussed at great length in a meeting at the White House Thursday morning.

"A ray of hope was detected," Congressman Price said, "as the President quoted Secretary Shultz' Phase IV announcement as saying beef could continue to be frozen until Sept. 12, but he did not say it would necessarily continue to be frozen until the Sept. 12 date."

Explodes Bomb

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (UPI) — France exploded a hydrogen bomb Sunday in the South Pacific in a continuation of its atmospheric nuclear testing despite protests from a half-dozen nations, New Zealand officials reported.

The blast occurred at 11:03 a.m. New Zealand (6:03 p.m. CDT) time shortly after a yellow balloon carrying the bomb was hoisted over Mururoa Atoll, 720 miles southeast of Tahiti, a spokesman for the New Zealand defense ministry said.

Price Opposes Proposal

In separate letters to Secretary of the Treasury George Shultz, Cost of Living Council Chairman John Dunlop, and House Ways and Means Chairman Wilbur Mills, Congressman Bob Price of Pampa has expressed strong opposition to a proposal currently under consideration by the Cost of Living Council to roll back crude petroleum product prices of May 15 levels.

"In light of current shortages of petroleum products with added problems resulting from an increasing dependence upon foreign sources of petroleum," Price said, "it is essential that governmental policy encourage rather than discourage domestic exploration and production.

"Small independent producers who develop the vast majority of new discovery wells will be hurt most by the price rollback, which would only contribute to the further concentration of oil producing capacity in the hands of a few large corporations," Price said.

Charging that a price rollback would be a discriminatory action against the oil industry, the only industry being singled out for such action by the Cost of Living Council, Price pointed to the growing shortages and spiraling costs of dairy, pork and poultry products which have resulted from the recent price freeze.

"The fact is that in a free enterprise economy," the congressman said, "business cannot operate at a loss. Government decrees cannot do away with the inviolable laws of economics. In spite of good intentions, enough mistakes have already been made by tampering with the economy.

"It is within the power of the Cost of Living Council to avoid further problems, including higher prices and shortages that would inevitably follow a petroleum product price rollback."

HONORED AT RECEPTION — Dr. James Malone, left, school superintendent, presented Joe Brown, bus driver and mechanic for Pampa school system for 39 years, a gift during a reception held for Brown Tuesday night at Dr. Malone's house. The reception was attended by 35-40 people.

Pampa Bus Driver Retires After 39 Years Service

By CARLA COMBS

Joe Brown, well-known and remembered bus driver and mechanic for Pampa school system, was honored last Tuesday night for his 39 years of service to the schools at a party hosted by Dr. James Malone, superintendent of Pampa schools.

For his "beneficial and essential service," Dr. Malone presented Brown with a gift and plaque which read, "Loyal Service Rendered, 1934-1973."

Thirty-nine years is a long time for service to one job, but as Brown says, "It doesn't seem like I worked as long as 39 years. I enjoyed driving and meeting school - age kids. I was very pleased with my job."

Brown was born in 1908 in Gilmen, Tex. and moved to Pampa in 1910 where he has lived since. He began working for schools in 1934.

Many people don't realize the great responsibility that bus drivers must assume. The lives of their passengers depend entirely on the skill of the bus driver.

Brown says, "I remember getting children home from school in rough weather. It takes patience to keep calm with crying children, sick children and fighting children in a crowded bus."

Brown also remembers driving senior classes to Carlsbad, N.M. which was an annual senior trip before the classes grew larger.

He has taken athletes, choir students, band students, and many students participating in contests to their destinies and safely home.

He replies, "I'm not saying that I never had troubles, because I did, but nothing very serious ever occured."

He has traveled throughout Texas and to various parts of the country while assuming the position of bus driver for the schools of Pampa.

In the past 39 years, Brown has had many experiences while driving school buses, some were good, others were bad, but regardless, Joe Brown stuck with it, maintained a perfect driving record, and most important, he is satisfied with the outcome of his 39 years service.

Vocational Nursing Classes Available

The Vocational nursing program will be taught by Clarendon College in cooperation with the area health service units, Hall County Hospital, Memphis; Childress County Hospital, Childress; and Groom Memorial Hospital, Groom.

The training will be designed for personnel in this area of the state of Texas. The hospitals will provide adequate experience for students in the vocational nursing program.

The course work, upon satisfactory completion by the student, entitles the student to a certificate of completion and an opportunity to apply for and take the State Board of Vocational Nursing examiners examination.

Those passing the examination will then be licensed by the state of Texas as licensed vocational nurses (LVN).

The first 20 weeks of training are classified as pre - clinical. During this time the student attends classes for five days per week and will be taking courses in anatomy and physiology, disease control and prevention, pharmacology, normal growth and development, vocational nursing skill, mental health and mental illness, nutrition, personal and vocational adjustment, and geriatrics.

There will be other courses offered that the student will select with the help of the instructor or college counselor.

Upon completion of the 1806 contact hours for this program, the student will also receive the equivalent of 42 college semester hours. Additional training to become a registered nurse can follow this training.

The recent survey made in the Panhandle area found this vocation to be an excellent choice of young women and young men who are interested in the health occupations work.

There will continue to be a need in the health occupation fields, and this need will be greater as the Medical School of Texas Tech expands and the Medical Complex of Amarillo grows, officials said.

All prospective students interested in the vocational nurses program must complete the Minnesota Achievement Test given by the nearest Texas Employment Commission Office.

Local Students Receive Scholarship

The American Petroleum Institute, Panhandle Chapter, has awarded three $250 scholarships to students to attend the universities of their choice, according to announcement made by John B. Rogers, chairman of the API Scholarship Committee.

The awards were made to Miss Marcialene L. Holcomb, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Holcomb, 3001 Rosewood; David Lanehart, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lanehart, 2222 Chestnut, and Miss Susan Stumpf, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence H. Stumpf, Jr., 2404 Charles.

Miss Holcomb has stated plans to attend Texas Tech University where she will major in social work studies.

Lanehart plans to enter Angelo State University in San Angelo, and Miss Stumpf is registered to enter the University of Texas in Austin, where she will enter the field of speech therapy and later study child development in order to work with handicapped children.

Bud Nunn, API president, congratulated scholarship recipients on behalf of the institute.

Records

Classical

By WILBUR G. LANDREY

NEW YORK (UPI) — Until now Richard Wagner's last opera, "Parsifal," has been recorded only at Bayreuth, where Wagner intended it should be performed, but a new production by Sir Georg Solti breaks that tradition — and happily.

Solti directs the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra and a stellar cast in a "Parsifal" recorded in a studio and not at the Bayreuth Festival Theater. It is different but musically rich and rewarding (London OSA 1510).

Wagner decreed that "Parsifal," based on his version of the search for the Holy Grail, should be performed for the faithful only at the Bayreuth Festspielhaus, where it had its premiere on July 26, 1882. The Metropolitan was the first to break that ban in 1903 but the extant recordings still come from performances there. So the Solti version breaks with tradition.

"Parsifal" is supposed to have been Wagner's "Christian" opera, but it remains more Wagnerian that Christian even in its themes of sin, redemption and death.

In the London-Solti verson, the German basso, Gottlob Frick, comes out of retirement at the age of 65 to sing the outstanding performance as the elderly knight, Gurmemanz, who recounts much of the story of the Knights of the Grail.

Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau gives a good performance as Amfortas, the wounded King and keeper of the Grail, and Rene Kollo that of Parsifal, who recovers the sacred spear of the Grail which dealt the wound of Amfortas and heals it at last.

* * *

Christa Ludwig sings in moving fasion the role of Kundry, a typically Wagnerian heroine who seduces and dies with her redemption. The other male roles of Titurel and Klingsfor are well sung by Hans Hotter and Zoltan Kelemen.

* * *

Franz Liszt's piano paraphrases of the romantic operas were popular and famous in his time. If not exactly high brow music, they have and are going to survive in the repertory.

Claudio Arrau has a fine new record of Liszt's transcriptions from operas by Verdi (Philips 6500 368).

NEW SWIM LESSONS — The summer swim lesson program has been our most successful ever, but now we must turn our minds to new heights for the coming school year.

During the school year our swim lesson programs reverts back to the afternoon sessions from 4-5 and 5-6 p.m. This enables all of the school children to be able to enroll in the program without interfering with their school work.

Polywogs classes will last 30 minutes each day because of the attention span of the younger children.

Enrollment is open to the general public and you do not have to be a member to enroll. It is more inexpensive to be a member, because you receive the lessons free to charge.

Enrollment in all the classes is free to members and $4 to non - members, Members may call in to enroll, but non - members must come by and pay the enrollment fee.

They meet on Saturday nights from 8-11 p.m. and dance to an out - of - town caller. The club gives lessons twice a year and participates in several jamborees each year.

Membership is open to the Calico Capers at all times. If you know how to square dance or not, the club will make provisions to teach lessons. You may visit the club on Saturday nights to see if you like them and they will explain how you may join.

WOMEN'S EXERCISE CLASS — Women set your sights on Sept. 5 this year, for this will be the beginning of our fall exercise and swim class for all you women. Each school calendar year at this time we kick off our program for the women.

In the world of mechanical things, accidents do happen said the late Baron Liftschuten

But A.O. Smith does a little better. Their water heaters have an exclusive glass-lined tank that works so well 99.6% of them never leak during their warranty periods. And even if nine years and eleven months of the warranty are up, that other .4% gets replaced. And, in these times, that's something to consider. For a reliable A.O. REV. CUBIE WARD
...headed for Uruguay

Guest Speaker Announced

Rev. Cubie Ward, a newly approved Assemblies of God missionary to Uruguay, will be guest speaker Sunday, July 29, at 6:30 p.m. at the First Assembly of God church at Brown and Cuyler streets, the Rev. Jimmy Phillips, pastor, has announced.

During their first term of missionary service Rev. Ward and his wife, Linda, will be active in Bible school work, literature distribution, evangelism, establishing churches, as well as doing organizational work among the established Assemblies of God churches.

Uruguay, the smallest country in South America, is situated on the east coast in the southern half of the continent. Almost all of Uruguay's population of 2.9 million is of European descent. Two - thirds of the people are Roman Catholic. Church and state are officially separated, and religious freedom is recognized.

Protestant missionary activities in Uruguay were started in 1838, but it was not until 1946 that Assemblies of God missionaries entered the country.

The Wards will join eight other Assemblies of God missionaries.

Ward attended Texas A&M University in College Station and the University of Texas at Arlington, where he had a major in psychology.

He pastored in Hearne prior to his approval for foreign service. He also served as minister of education and youth in churches in Dallas and Austin.

The public is invited to attend the forthcoming service.

Veteran's Agency Pays Education Allowances

Information on how to get G.I. education allowance checks sooner is being mailed to prospective students by VA.

Last November, the agency started paying education allowances before, rather than after each month's training.

VA Regional Director Jack Coker pointed out that this was one of two provisions of Public Law 92-540. Starting Aug. 1, 1973, advance payment checks will be mailed to the claimant in care of the school, covering the first month or portion thereof, plus the succeeding month.

In order for advance payments to be received before final enrollment, the enrollment information must be received by the Veterans Administration no later than Aug. 15, 1973.

Coker said more than two million veterans are expected to train under the G.I. Bill in Fiscal Year 1974. The two new payment systems will make funds available to trainees during early weeks of training.

He explained advance payments are available upon request to the school for persons who enroll in institutions on at least a one - half time basis. Servicemen will receive lump sum advance payments for the entire term, quarter or semester.

The law excludes persons who plan to take correspondence courses, flight training, homebound training or independent instructor courses. These are not eligible for advance payments.

Current trainees who apply for advance payments must first notify schools that they plan to reenroll in the fall. After schools complete and forward reenrollment certificates to VA, the agency will mail checks to schools.

Checks will be delivered to trainees at time of final registration, but not earlier than 30 days before beginning of enrollment periods.

Coker also explained that when an eligible person planning to enter training for the first time applies for advance payment, he should notify the VA that he has been accepted by a school, the number of semester or quarter hours he will take, and the beginning and ending dates of his enrollment.

The same procedure should be followed by trainees who plan to change schools.

Red Cross News

By LIBBY SHOTWELL
Executive Secretary ARC

The Red Cross is grateful to the Downtown Kiwanis Club for sponsoring the swim meet held Friday evening at the city pool. Parents and grandparents attended the show put on by the boys and girls who have been working all summer learning to swim and to swim better.

Thanks to everyone who helped make this annual event a success.

A great big thanks to the Water Safety Instructors who worked so hard this past week teaching at the City Pool. Miss Paula Homer, WSI, taught two classes of advanced beginners, Mrs. Betty Bailey, WSI, and Lillian Esson, WSI, taught a large class of junior and senior life saving pupils, and Virginia Etheredge, Mrs. Orian Carter, Mrs. Jerry Carter, and Mrs. Betty Casebeir taught a beginner swimming class.

Thanks to all of you who gave so much of your time to helping our boys and girls to swim and to swim better.

Next week we will have the names of the ones who passed.

We will have a fifth Monday and a fifth Tuesday this month. Miss Lelia Clifford works at the Hospital on the fifth Monday and Mrs. Lee Harrah works on Tuesday.

Thanks to all of you girls who give your time to helping those who are patients in the Highland General Hospital.

Our hospital volunteers serve juice, deliver flowers and cards to the patients each morning during the week. On Saturday and Sundays, our teenage girls work at the hospital.

Teresa Carol Horst, 1152 Prairie Drive, has completed her ditty bags and has 20 hours of voluntary service. She may wear her LVN Red Cross Pin after she has taken her state examination.

We are proud of all these girls who have worked so hard to help Red Cross with their services projects.

The pins will be taken to Miss Vermel Meador to be given to the girls who graduate and when they have taken their examination.

Our six weeks of Learn - to - Swim program is over but we hope that parents will let their children continue to swim during the days left of the summer. Begin planning now for next year's swim program.

Thanks to all of our Water Safety Instrucotrs and aides who have given so much time helping your boys and girls to swim. The only pay they receive is your thanks.

McLean Red Cross is sending Miss Melba Stooksberry to Aquatic School in Athens, Aug. 15-25. We are glad that we have a candidate from the Panhandle of Texas to this school.

Melba, we know that you will learn a lot and have a wonderful time.

Melba will teach swimming in McLean next year.

WTSU Allows Women To Enroll In ROTC

The Department of Military Science at West Texas State University has received final official authorization to allow women students to enroll in all ROTC courses and to receive regular and reserve commissions in the Women's Army Corps, according to Maj. John S. Osborne, Field Artillery, assistant professor of MS at WTSU.

Lt. Col. John O. Childs, PMS, stated all restrictions formerly placed by Department of Army upon female participation in ROTC have now been lifted.

In practical terms, this means women students can compete on equal basis with the male cadets for ROTC scholarships, leadership positions in the corps of cadets and the various awards for academic and military excellence.

Female cadets will be subject to the same screening tests and prerequisites for enrollment as their male counterparts. The removal of restrictions on the enrollment is considered progressive.

In the past women have been allowed to take only basic courses for university activities credit. Commissioning is now possible upon graduation.

Benicia, 32 miles northeast of San Francisco, was California's capital from 1853-1854.

It was announced a delegation from the club will attend a charter night banquet in Clarendon Thursday night for the newly - formed Clarendon High School Key Club.

No Lava

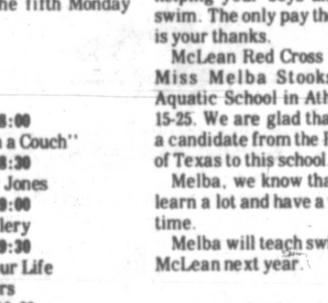

Though an erupting volcano brings to mind pictures of flowing rivers of boiling lava, not all active volcanos emit lava. Mount Taal in the Philippines, with a history of death and destruction, has spewed forth noxious gases, steaming mud and ash, and white-hot rocks — but never lava.

Vacationing? Don't forget insurance

By CARLTON SMITH

The greatest of vacations can be turned into a rotten time for everybody with almost no trouble at all. Just forget to take a few financial precautions, and it's easy to return broke and in debt till next Christmas.

For example: Your luggage is lost, stolen, burned up, falls off the boat, or is subject to something the insurance people call "mysterious disappearance."

This can deal family finances a severe blow. Having to replace the clothing is bad enough, but it will also generally entail the loss of cameras, jewelry and other valuables. So how much insurance coverage do you have, if any?

There are two possibilities that you have at least some coverage, without being aware of it, unless you are a compulsive reader of the fine print in your policies.

If you have a homeowners policy — or the equivalent for nonowners, a tenants policy — it covers the loss or destruction of personal effects in your home. That's "on premises," in the jargon of people who write policies.

Read on, and you will doubtless find that this coverage is extended, partially, to "off premises" losses. You probably have $1,000 coverage, minimum, and possibly more if 10 per cent of your on-premises coverage is greater.

But there are, unfortunately, some "howevers" in this. The first $50 or $100 of any loss is on you; that's the amount of the deductible. And it won't cover any and all losses, but only the "named perils" specified in the policy.

Thus, depending on what valuables you're taking on your travels, and how generous your off-premises coverage is, you may decide you need a separate policy — a "floater" — to cover cameras, jewelry, furs or similar items which are sometimes excluded from ordinary personal effects coverage.

There's another possibility of your having loss of baggage and personal belongings covered, without being aware of it. It's part of the special travel policies which combine life insurance with an allowance for hospital bills in case of accident or illness. Again, it may be limited coverage that makes a separate "floater" advisable.

Another thing that can turn a vacation into a major financial disaster is the trailer hitch that breaks or comes loose. Liability coverage in the typical automobile policy protects you only in case of bodily injury or property damage caused by the car itself.

It leaves you in court, all alone, if a rampaging trailer or camper causes injury or damage. By all means arrange for separate liability coverage if you're going to hitch up and trailer something.

Don't be misled by language in your auto policy which may cover, for example, damage TO a boat you're trailering. That's not the same thing as damage caused BY a boat that gets loose.

Another financial unpleasantness is in store for a good number of vacationers who leave the country this summer.

You're coming back home, going through Customs. The inspector determines that you have in your possession a Swiss watch, a Japanese-made camera with extra lenses, binoculars made in Germany. He begins to figure out how much duty you owe.

And, though you protest that you bought everything here in the States long ago, you will indeed pay duty on all the foreign-made items you're wearing or carrying, unless you can prove prior possession.

You can prove it in a number of ways. A bill of sale, an insurance policy, receipts for repairs or cleaning and such evidence of prior possession may be accepted. But often they're not good enough. The easiest and surest way to avoid payment of duty on items you've taken out of the country is to register each dutiable item with Customs before leaving.

This can be done beforehand, at any local U.S. Customs office, or at any international airport, at the Customs facility there. But if you plan on registering items at an airport, leave yourself plenty of time — at least an hour.

DO-IT-YOURSELF

How to arrange your workshop

By MR. FIX

When it was just a bench and a few hand tools, there really wasn't a problem. But with the purchase of a power tool you are faced with the problem of converting a work corner into a real workshop.

Power tools must be placed with both accessibility and safety in mind. If you had all the space you needed there would be no problem. What you must do is get maximum usage out of the space you have.

Basement, garage, attic—they are all good spots for a workshop. Consider the space under the basement stairs, or a breezeway for that matter.

If space is tight the first thing to do is just put retractable casters on your power tools. Then roll them back against the wall when they are not in use.

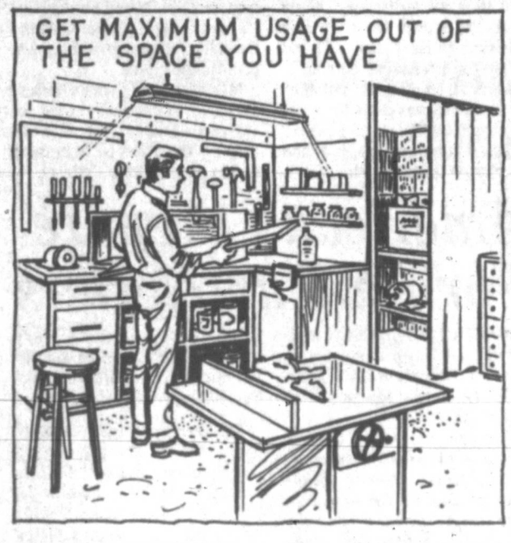

Use casters even if space is not a critical problem. They allow you to rearrange the shop layout for each job. Get casters that have brakes on them to prevent rolling while you are using the tool.

Hang hand tools on the wall over the bench to keep them handy yet out of the way. Small items and odds and ends of hardware should go into drawers in the bench. Use jars and coffee cans for screws, nuts, bolts and nails.

There should be a light over the bench.

The table saw is generally the most used power tool. Place it near the center of your shop with about six feet of clear space all around it. The tool should be placed so that you approach it from the left hand rear as you bring work from the bench.

A table saw should be lighted with a light directly over the blade to prevent it casting a shadow on the work.

If you have a jointer, place it next to the saw. This eliminates steps in taking work from the saw to the jointer. The sander should be arranged so that work can be taken to it easily from the jointer. Allow about three feet in front of the sander and two more on the side toward which the disc turns.

If you are lucky enough to own these additional tools, consider these space recommendations:

Bandsaw — Can be placed against the wall with four feet in front and on the right side.

Scroll saw — In a corner with two feet of working space in front and on the left.

Lathe—Against the wall or in a corner with back and right end against walls. Leave two feet on the left and two more in front.

Work areas can overlap. This is true of saw and jointer. The space around your workbench can be shared with space used for some of the power tools.

If you use casters you can allow plenty of space for any tool in use, then shove the tools out of the way while you use another.

WORRY CLINIC

By George W. Crane, Ph.D., M.D.

Zoe's compulsive urge to continue the chain letter is based on her efficient pattern of life. For she has been trained to finish her jobs, instead of leaving them dangling. Sometimes compulsive behavior is wise but it may also be foolish!

CASE X-572: Zoe D., aged 27, is a clergyman's wife.

"Dr. Crane," she began, "in the past few years we have received several chain letters.

"They tell us to be sure to copy the letter we receive and send it on to maybe 10 others.

"And they warn us if we break the chain, some bad luck will surely descend upon us.

"They may even name some famous person who suddenly fell heir to great wealth, apparently by keeping the chain letter going.

"Now I know this chain letter idea is a superstitious carryover, but I often feel a compulsion to do as it says.

"For I seem disturbed at the idea of being the person who breaks the chain.

"Isn't such a compulsion bad?"

COMPULSIVE ACTION

"Compulsive behavior" may often be very good.

For example, if you go to bed without brushing your teeth, your conscience may twinge you until you feel a strong compulsion to get up and wield that toothbrush.

Same is true of those who have developed the good habit of going to Sunday School or church every Sabbath.

Such compulsion merely indicates the psychic momentum of already established habits.

In childhood, most children are urged to "clean your plate."

In later adulthood, even when they are overweight, this childhood habit wields a strong compulsive influence.

Millions of such indoctrinated mothers also feel obligated to salvage half a piece of cake or of pie, which their own children have left.

In such cases, the compulsive eating habit actually is bad, for it leads to obesity, which in turn predisposes to high blood pressure, diabetes, even cancer and a more platonic love life!

Zoe had been taught in childhood to be a "finisher," so she felt a compulsion to complete every book that she started to read.

When she married, she likewise was a meticulous housekeeper, with a yen to have everything in its right place.

It thus disturbed her when her husband didn't hang up his towel or wash cloth evenly.

Many of you readers can sympathize with her, for such compulsive folks are the backbone of our "free enterprise" system.

They are faithful workers (like the Prodigal Son's older brother) instead of wastrels like the Prodigal Son.

So analyze all so-called superstitions and ignore those that are illogical.

To say that it is bad luck to walk under a ladder, has some merit, for many people have had paint dripped on them by so doing.

But to "knock on wood" or maintain a chain letter or take another route because a black cat crosses your path - these are not logical.

Even so, be sure you obtain a wide perspective before you catalogue anything as wise vs. unwise, for each of the 5 Blind Men of Hindustan felt sure he was 100 percent correct about the nature of elephants, yet was but 20 percent right!

Send for my booklet on "Abnormal Psychology," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents, for it gives some fascinating cases.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of The Worry Clinic, Hopkins Bldg., Mellett, Indiana 47988. Enclose a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

Senate Voted For Stiff Criminal Laws

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate voted recently in favor of stiff criminal penalties to prevent illegal diversion of campaign contributions.

The penalties would range up to 10 years in jail and a $25,000 fine for any candidate or anyone acting in his behalf who embezzles, converts to his own use, or hides political donations.

An amendment providing for such penalties, offered by Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., was added to a comprehensive campaign reform bill which already places ceilings on contributions and candidate spending.

The amendment was adopted 88-1, with Sen. Lee Metcalf, D-Mont., the lone dissenter.

The month of August was named after a Roman Emperor named Augustus.

Ideal Basic Industries was the most active issue, off ¼ at 14 on 100,700 shares, including a block of 100,000 at 14. Texas Gulf Sulphur was second, unchanged at 26⅜ on 63,400 shares.

Uniroyal was third, up ⅛ at 12⅜ on 60,200 shares.

Prices declined in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange.

Gold mining issues on the Big Board lost ground with gold prices declining abroad. ASA Ltd. eased 1½, Homestake Mining 1¼ and Dome Mines 1. Oil stocks were mixed. Superior climbed 5 and Kerr-McGee 1⅛. Ohio Standard lost 2⅜.

Oklahoma Mail Carrier Fires 70 To Take Tri-State Seniors

By PAUL SIMS

Somewhere many years ago a mail carrier wittingly stated, "Neither rain, nor sleet, nor snow nor darkness of the night can keep this carrier from my route." And postmen have been working by that saying to this day.

Harold DeLong, a 57 - year - old mail carrier from Shawnee, Okla., applied the maxim to his golf game Friday, however, it was a different kind of obstacle DeLong was forced to overcome — being behind.

DeLong, three strokes behind the pace set by Bud McKinney of Dallas after 12 holes, birdied 13, 16 and 17 and finished with a one - under Friday, good enough to win the 39th annual Tri - State Seniors Golf Tournament Friday.

DeLong's momentum began on the 13th hold, a par - five 540 - yarder, when he putted in a 30 - yarder.

Mark Smith of Brownwood and McKinney finished the 18 holes of stroke play competition tied at 73. Smith, however, earned runner - up honors as McKinney conceded the playoff, having to return home on a family matter.

Other third - day scores in the championship flight were C.L. Duniven of Amarillo, 74; Eddie Smith of Tishomingo, Okla., 74; Raymond Marshall of Lubbock, 75; Lew Lacy of Oklahoma City, 77 and Ed Rogers of Fort Worth, 79.

DeLong, Tuesday's medalist with a 70, gained a spot in Friday's finals by defeating Borger's H.B. Bishop, 8-7 and C.L. Garrett of Phillips, 2-1, Wednesday and Thursday, respectively, in match playcompetition. Delong's highest score in the tourney was a 73 Thursday.

"I played spottily today (Friday). I started off by bogeying one, then I birdied two, parred three, four, five and six, birdied seven and pared eight and nine," said DeLong, who plans to retire from the postal service the first of next year. DeLong bogied 11 and 12, falling two down to McKinney. The Dallas senior birdied the first two holes and stood two - under after 12. He lost the lead on 16 to DeLong.

Spec Goldman of Dallas was the last man to win both medalist honors and the championship flight title. That was back in 1967.

Pampa's Fred Neslage won championship flight consolation honors, carding a 74, six strokes better than runner - up Frank McAleavey of Fort Worth.

Tourney highlights included:

Monday — a hole - in - one by Arthur Duggan of Littlefield during the pre - tournament practice round.

Tuesday — Texas took the team championship over Oklahoma, 367-372. The five lowest scores from each state during the medalist round figured in the championship.

Duniven (71), McKinney (73), Neslage (74), Adrian Johnston of Amarillo (74) and Cleo Vaughn of Amarillo (75) comprised the Texas' best. Making up the Okie team were DeLong (70), Lacy (73), Smith (75), Pete Hoepfner of Oklahoma City (77) and Haskell Graves of Oklahoma City (77).

Pampa Country Club will host the 36th annual Top O' Texas Golf Tourney Aug. 31 - Sept. 3.

Crenshaw Wins Twice In Western

BENTON HARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — Ben Crenshaw, a three-time NCAA champion playing his next to the last tournament as an amateur, beat two opponents Saturday to advance to the semifinals of the Western Amateur golf championship.

Crenshaw's next rival will be Sunday will be Bill Rogers of Texarkana, Tex., while Bruce Hollowell of Springfield, Mo., plays Jimmy Ellis of Virginia Beach, Va.

Crenshaw, 21, from Austin, Tex., who announced this week he was turning professional after next week's Porter Cup tournament, defeated Gary Koch of Temple Terrace, Fla., 2 and 1 in the first round of match play and then edged Graham Cooke of Pierre Fonds, Que., 1-up.

Last year, Crenshaw was bounced, 5 and 3, in the first round of match play after running away with medalist honors, which he also won this year.

Rogers trounced Mike Craven of Texarkana, Tex., 5 and 3 in the first round and beat Danny Edwards of Edmond, Okla., 1 up in the second round.

Ellis, a Georgia Southern star won a spot in the semifinals by defeating Joey Dills of Tulsa, Fla. 3 and 1 and Jay Haas of Belleville, Ill., 1 up.

The semifinals and finals will be played Sunday.

Amazing Tom Winning Open

MONTREAL (UPI) — British Open champion Tom Weiskopf sank a three-foot putt on the 18th hole Saturday for a sizzling four-under-par 68, a three-round total of 208 and a one stroke lead over Forrest Fezler in the $175,000 Canadian Open golf championship.

Weiskopf is the hottest golfer on the PGA tour, with four wins in his last seven tournaments. In the three tourneys he did not win, Weiskopf finished second, third, and fifth.

Entering the third round two shots off the pace, Weiskopf went on a spree with six birdies. He opened with a birdie, then birdied the par five, 540 yard third hole before bogeying the par three fourth. His third birdie of the day came on the seventh, a par four 430 yarder.

Weiskopf birdied the 10th, but lost a chance to go further in front when he bogied the 12th hole.

Fezler, looking for his first ever win on the PGA tour, had an opportunity to tie Weiskopf, but missed a birdie putt on the 18th hole as he fired a one under par 71 and a 209 for the first 54 holes.

Another stroke back, at 210 was Bobby Mitchell. Tied for fourth place were Jim Ferriell and Chuck Courtney at 211, followed by John Schlee at 212, Bruce Cramptn at 213 and Hale Irwin at 214. Crampton is the leading money winner on the PGA tour.

Fezler, who was eight under going into the 17th, took a bogie on that hole and then missed the critical putt on the 18th.

Before he birdied the first hole at No. 9, a par five, Fezler parred the first eight holes and then parred the first four on the back side prior to his second birdie at the par five 13th. He also parred the 15th and 16th.

"I was actually fortunate to even get the ball on the green at the 18th," Fezler explained. "I had a 35-footer for my birdie and I thought it was dead center, but it lipped out. I didn't think there was any way I could miss that one but I did."

Bergeron Joins Others For Prep All-Star Duel

By MIKE RABUN
UPI Sports Writer

DALLAS (UPI) — Jeff Bergeron, the eagerly recruited running back from Port NechesGroves who decided to play his college football at the University of Houston, said Saturday he had received what he considered illegal offers from other schools.

Bergeron, along with 85 of the other top graduated high school football and basketball players in Texas gathered Saturday for the opening of training which will lead to the Texas High School Coaches Association all-star games this week.

The all-star basketball game will be held Wednesday night and the North-South all-star football contest will come Thursday night to end the association's annual coaching school.

"I had certain schools willing to offer some things I considered not right," said Bergeron, the 6-1, 195 speedster who made up his mind early in the recruiting season to attend Houston.

"I wouldn't want to say what I was offered," he said. "But as soon as I heard some of the things I quit bothering with them."

Bergeron received offers from 150 colleges, and received a lot of publicity during the spring for his frank remark that "the University of Texas is not the place for me."

"I had heard about Texas all my life," said Bergeron. "But when I visited Texas, and then Oklahoma and Texas A&M, I found I just liked the people at Houston more.

"I guess it was because they were closer to home and more like me. It was kind of like they were the people next door, and I liked that a lot."

Recruiting of high school athletes has always been a fierce struggle, but what with the scandal created at the University of Oklahoma this year and the unlimited visitation rule in the Southwest Conference recruiting has come in for even more criticism than usual this season.

"I think this unlimited visitation is bad," said Bergerson. "It can ruin your schedule.

"Every day when you come home from practice there is somebody waiting on your doorstep. You might want to go to a basketball game with your girl and there is a coach there wanting to talk to you."

ALL YOU GOT TO DO IS ASK

The tipoff:

The San Francisco 49ers have a serious PR problem re their quarterbacks, John Brodie and Steve Spurrier. Coach Dick Nolan still follows the line that it's wide open competition for the starting job, but privately he's already told young Steve that he has to go with 38-year-old Brodie until the old vet shows he can't do it any more.

Q — I have a young daughter who has become quite excited about Secretariat. Is there any place that you know of that I may write to for a color picture of this horse? — Donald C. Prim, Rancho Sante Fe, Calif.

A — You have a couple of choices. A color montage of six photos in color showing Secretariat at the Belmont Stakes may be obtained by sending a $3.75 check or money order (includes 25 cents for handling and postage) to H. M. Stevens, Inc., c-o Souvenir Dept., Box 54, Ozone Park, Jamaica, N.Y. 11417. Sports Illustrated is offering a two-foot-by-three-foot color poster for $1.50 plus 50 cents to cover postage and handling, if you fill out a coupon at the back of its July 16 issue, page 81. Meanwhile, Secretariat is alive and well at Saratoga, planning to run in the Travers Stakes Aug. 18, and one tuneup before that. Then on Nov. 15, he retires to a romantic life, producing little Secretariats.

Q — Roger Maris and Hank Aaron have always played in the days of the lively ball. Babe Ruth had not. Isn't a comparison of homer ability unfair for this reason?— Hugo Scatena, Auburn, Calif.

A — Not at all. First, Babe Ruth did play with a lively ball. In fact, it was created just for him in 1920, when he came to the Yankees from Boston and hit 54 home runs. The comparison could be considered unfair only in that Maris played in 10 more games when he hit his record-breaking 61 in '61, and Aaron has already been to bat almost 3,000 times more than the Babe.

Q — Some time ago I read an article that claimed the only Minnesota Fats was a character in a book and later a film called "The Hustler" and that he really does not exist? Is it possible that someone recently adopted the name, or has there been a real Minnesota Fats all the time? — Max Pischel, Borger, Texas.

A — Rudolf Walter Wanderone Jr., and his 52-inch waist have been with us all the time. He was first known as New York Fats on the pool hustling circuit, since he came from New York. But when "The Hustler" was made in 1961, with Jackie Gleason as Minnesota Fats, old Rudolph just adopted the new name because he claimed the character was based on him anyhow. And then he collaborated on a book called "Minnesota Fats."

NEW YORK (UPI) — Carl Hubbell, peerless southpaw of the old New York Giants, shut out the St. Louis Cardinals 1-0 in 18 innings in 1933. Hubbell fanned 12 and didn't walk a batter.

Sports cartoonist Thomas (Tad) Dorgan named the frankfurter "hot dog" in 1905, because of its daschund shape.

Shula Praises Beaten All-Stars

UPI Sports Writer

CHICAGO (UPI) — In victory, Don Shula of the Miami Dolphins was magnanimous in praise of the beaten College All Stars. "I thought the All-Stars played exceptionally well," he said.

"They were big and strong on offense and defense up front, and at times we had trouble moving them and stopping them."

But the Dolphins got a pair of touchdowns from workhorse Larry Csonka and those, together with a customarily stingy defense, delivered a 14-3 victory for Shula's Super Bowl champs.

It was the 29th win for the pros in the 40-game series and their 10th straight victory. The collegians have won only nine times and after Griese directed the Dolphins 60 yards in 10 plays to open the game with Csonkas first touchdown, it seemed to end their chances again.

"We had a good drive at first and then we sputtered," Shula said, "so I switched from Bob (Griese) to Earl (Morrall) and he got the offense going again."

Morrall piloted the Dolphins 55 yards in seven plays for a last period touchdown, passing twice to Jim Mandich for 24 and 11 yards to spark the effort.

"Their defense was tough," Morrall said. "They were playing a double zone, and Jim got open and made two good catches."

The All-Stars cashed only one of three good scoring chances. Once, on first down from the 10, Greg Pruitt fumbled and Manny Fernandez recovered for the Dolphins. Then James Thomas recovered a fumbled snap from center Jim Langer on the Dolphins eight, but three plays left the ball on the nine, and Ray Guy missed a 16-yard field goal try.

Guy's field goal from the 10 for the collegians' only points came after the stars had a first down on the Dolphin one and couldn't carry the ball into the endzone. Twice Otis Armstrong failed to gain and a penalty cost five yards before Guy's field goal.

Guy was a major factor in the All-Star performance as he punted four times for a 44.1 yard average to keep the Dolphins at bay, and Shula said he would be "a real asset" to the Oakland Raiders, who signed him just prior to the game.

Miami, led by Csonka with 76 yards in 17 carries, rushed for 173 yards and 251 overall while holding the stars to 79 rushing and 54 passing for a 133 total.

Ladies Team Wins Tourney

NEW SEABURY, Mass. (UPI) — Sandra Palmer sank a seven-foot putt on the first sudden death playoff hole Saturday to give Jane Blalock and herself their second straight Lady Angelo's LPGA fourball championship.

The Palmer-Blalock team, which earned $4,800 with the win, was tied after 54 holes with Sally Little and Jan Ferraris at nine under par 207. But on the 485-yard par five first hole, which Miss Blalock had birdied earlier in the day, Miss Palmer took two shots to the fringe while everyone else needed three.

From there, Miss Palmer chipped to within seven feet and sank her birdie putt. Miss Ferraris' birdie attempt from 12 feet broke off to the left while Miss Little had to struggle for a par.

The teams of Gail Denenberg-Sandra Post and Sandra Spuzich-Andy Fischer finished two strokes back at 209. Tied for fifth at 210 were the twosomes of Mary Mills-Pam Barnett, Diane Patterson-Jackie Evans and Margie Masters-Sherry Wilder.

Blalock and Palmer, who had started the round two strokes back, passed Little and Ferraris, who were playing in the same foursome after nine holes.

Miss Ferraris birdied the 16th hole to put her team one up, but Miss Blalock birdied 17 to tie it and both Miss Little and Miss Palmer birdied 18 to send the tournament into sudden death.

"The putt on 18 was shorter, about six feet," said Miss Palmer. "But that one looked longer" because Miss Little had already made her bird.

"This is the first day we played together well as a team," Miss Palmer said. "The first day, Jane played well and the second day I played well. But today she really played better and I just filled in around the edges."

Palmer and Blalock won the rain-shortened two day tournament here last year with a 14 under par performance that topped the rest of the field by eight strokes.

Americans Prepare For Chilean Netters

NORTH LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (UPI) — Deep down somewhere in Dennis Ralston there lurks the eternal pessimism of any coach.

This year's captain of the U.S. Davis Cup team arrived in Arkansas last week to get his team ready for the American zone finals starting Friday in a matchup with Chile that many tennis followers feel will be a breather for the Americans.

The U.S. team took the Chileans 5-0 at Santiago, Chile, in last year's American zone finals and went on to win the Cup. But that was last year, Ralston said, and now it's a new U.S. team and a new Chilean team.

"We have great respect for Chile," he said.

No matter what the competition, the state of Arkansas is not taking the matches lightly in this, the state's first contact with big time tennis.

It appears all three days of the series will be sellouts. Portable bleachers have increased the park's seating capacity to 4,000.

"Most people are buying for all three days," said John Y. Bond, president of the Arkansas Tennis Patrons Foundation. "I think they will be sold out (before the matches begin) and I'm looking forward to full houses."

It will be the first Davis Cup match contested in the United States since the U.S. defeated Romania in the final round at Charlotte, N.C., in October, 1971. They'll play this one on a Tartan artificial surface with the winner of the series meeting the Russia-Romania winner in the next round.

"It's going to be a pleasure to play here," Ralston said, also indicating he was looking forward to what will be an obviously partisan crowd.

At week's end, U.S. team members were trickling into Little Rock as they were eliminated from the $75,000 Washington Star International Tournament in Washington.

The American team includes Stan Smith, the top-ranked singles player in the U.S.; Tom Gorman, the No. 2 man in the United States Lawn Tennis Association rankings; Dick Stockton, the No. 4 man; Harold Solomon, No. 6, and Erik Van Dillen, No. 7.

Cowboys Complete Skirmish

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (UPI) — The Dallas Cowboys defense intercepted three passes to breeze past the offense 30-17 Saturday in the team's annual intrasquad scrimmage.

Free safety Cliff Harris, linebacker Dave Edwards and rookie strong safety Bill Drake, a free agent from Oregon, scooped up the points for the defense.

Cowboys coach Tom Landry singled out running back Robert Newhouse and rookie wide receiver Drew Pearson from Tulsa in the offense. Newhouse carried the ball six times for 36 yards, and Pearson caught two passes for 21 yards.

"I would say it was just about what you would expect from a first scrimmage," Landry commented.

Wide receiver and No. 2 draft choice Golden Richards of Hawaii scored on a seven - yard pass from quarterback Jack Concannon. Running back Calvin Hill scored the other touchdown for the offense on a one - yard run over the middle.

Toni Fritsch booted a 34 - yard field goal for the offense's other score.

Hill lead the rushers with a 54 yards in 14 carries. Bill Thomas followed Hill with 50 yards in eight carries.

Tight end Jean Fugett led the receivers by catching two passes for a 30 - yard total. Concannon completed 10 out of 20 passes for 121 yards. He threw one touchdown pass and one interception

Veteran Craig Morton completed four out of 12 attempts for 46 yards and two interceptions.

Marv Bateman averaged 54.3 yards in three punts. His longest kick was 59 yards. Rookie Ken Gamble, a free agent from Fayetteville, N.C., averaged 48.7 yards in three kicks. His longest punt was 54 yards.

Quarterback Roger Stauback missed Saturday's scrimmage due to his mother's illness. He flew to Dallas Friday and was expected to return to training camp Sunday.

Dallas Quarterback A ?

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (UPI) — Dallas Cowboys Coach Tom Landry said Friday he has not picked the team's No. 1 quarterback. But he did say he will make the selection before the season begins and, barring injuries, will stick with that decision through the 14-game schedule.

Landry said Roger Staubach, Craig Morton and Jack Concannon will get an equal shot to win the starting job. But by the end of the preseason schedule, Landry said he will name the No. 1 man.

In 1971, he carried the competition between Staubach and Morton into the regular season and also pulled one quarterback who was doing badly in favor of the other. He said this will not be the case in 1973.

"We'll have a No. 1 at the first of the regular season," Landry said. "I don't see we'll be pulling the guy out if he's going badly and I would think we'll be operating pretty much under the same theory all the time now.

"I'll pick the guy I feel can get the job done on the long haul," he said. "This basically can't be measured by statistics or winning in preseason. You've got to have a feeling about the quarterback and the way he directs his team and the confidence they have in him. He'll also be judged in clutch situations which win or lose for you."

The decision to name one quarterback and stick with him is something the players have wanted for a long time.

"This team has a lot of respect for all the quarterbacks but the thing you need to know is who is No. 1 and keep it that way so we can, as a 40-man squad, get completely behind that No. 1 quarterback," middle linebacker Lee Roy Jordan said.

"As far as the offensive linemen are concerned, we need a clearcut quarterback," tackle Ralph Neely said. "We need to know who's back there. We need to know the same guy's back there so we'll know his tendencies, where he'll be, how he'll react to different situations. When you have a 260-pounder trying to run over you, you need to know the guy you're protecting, not wonder who's back there."

Landry also said he hasn't decided whether he or his No. 1 quarterback will call the plays this year. Landry has been the playcaller the last two season.

"They'll call them in preseason because they compete better that way," he said. "By letting them call the plays, I'll also know a lot more about them. Then I'll decide. But when we call plays for our quarterbacks we're not saying they're not as good as Kilmer or Jurgensen or anybody else who calls their own plays. Sometimes we just feel we can operate better in our system by doing it this way."

GREG COOK RETIRES

WILMINGTON, Ohio (UPI) — Cincinnati Bengals quarterback Greg Cook, trying to make a comeback after three shoulder operations, announced his retirement from pro football Friday.

Cook, former American Football League rookie of the year, told Bengals coach Paul Brown he was not satisifed with the slow recovery of his arm, and also dissatisfied with the lack of progress he was making. Cook did not announce any future plans.

TEE-OFF TID-BITS

By Hart Warren

Another Tri - State Seniors Golf Tournament has come and gone as a new champion was crowned — Harold DeLong of Shawnee, Okla.

Harold captured medalist honors Tuesday during the qualifying round with an ego - building 70, nudging Amarillo's C.L. Duniven, who carded an even - par 71.

After two days of match play, the scene was set for an exciting conclusion to the 39th annual tourney, involving Bud McKinney of Dallas, Mark Smith of Oklahoma City, Duniven, DeLong and several others.

At the turn, McKinney led with a one - under - par 34. Disaster then struck as McKinney "fed the fish" on 16, and DeLong commanded the remaining holes. Smith and McKinney tied for second, however, McKinney forfeited because of a personal matter.

After losing in his first round, our own Fred Neslage won his second match and fired a 74 to run away with championship flight consolation honors.

Roy Allen of Oklahoma City is blessed with good enough at 82 to fire a 79 in the tourney.

The success of this week's tournament was due to all the people who gave up their own time to assist, and a special thanks is due to the Ladies Golf Association and Jimmy McCune who worked so diligently as this year's starter.

Both players carded four birdies and one bogey.

American Tracksters Manage Slim Lead Going Into Finale

ODESSA, USSR (UPI) — The U.S. men's junior track and field team took a slim lead into the final day of their meet with the Soviets Saturday. Their coach predicted they would widen the gap.

"I've given us a pretty good edge," U.S. Coach Joe Healey said midway through the two-day meet with the Americans leading 64-61. "I figure we can take them 59-49 today."

The men split down the middle Friday, each side winning six events before a crowd of about 15,000 in this Black Seaport city.

The American women won three of their seven events and came into today's events down 38-45.

Overall, the way the Soviets prefer to figure meet results given their traditional strength on the distaff side, the Russians led 106-102.

A double fumble in the mens 400 meter relay gave the go-ahead to the American men, whose seniors were beaten earlier this week by the Soviets in Minsk.

The Soviet quartet dropped the baton on the second pass, but continued to run and were disqualified. Jesse Forbes of Tallahassee, Fla., the U.S. anchorman, dropped his baton only two yards from the finish line when it hit his thigh and went flying.

He stopped to pick it up and sauntered across the line.

"I've never dropped a baton before," the speedster said. "I hope it doesn't hurt my chances of getting in the 1976 Olympics."

The Americans swept the 100 meters, the 110 meter hurdles, 1,500 and 10,000 meters and added victories in the 400 and the relay.

Coaches Name 2 To Roster For HS Games

DALLAS (UPI) — The Texas High School Coaches Association Saturday named Dallas Kimball basketball center Gary McQuire and football defensive back Gary Williams of Tipson to the roster of next week's Texas prep all - star games.

McQuire, 6-9, 190 pounds, was picked to replace 6-10 Midland center Ronald Taylor, who notified the THSCA that he didn't wish to play in the contest. McQuire has signed to play varsity basketball with Baylor University.

Williams, a 5-8, 175 - pound all - district back for the past two years, will replace Doug Robertson of New Diana, who has joined the Air Force. Williams, who anchored his high school mile relay team to the Class IA finals, is headed for Kilgore Junior College.

Major League Roundup

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Luis Aparicio drove in two runs with a bases-loaded single in the fourth inning to snap a 3-3 tie Saturday night and the Boston Red Sox went on to a 7-4 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Doug Griffin began the fourth inning rally with a single off Mike Kekich and moved to third on the first of three doubles by Dwight Evans. Ray Lamb replaced Kekich and Tommy Harper beat out an infield hit to fill the bases. Aparicio then followed with a two-run single.

Cleveland took a 2-0 lead in the first inning on a two-run homer by John Ellis, but the Red Sox took advantage of an error by rightfielder Rusty Torres to score two runs in the second. A routine fly ball hit by Griffin with two on and two out in the second inning was misjudged by Torres for a two-base error and two runs scored.

The Indians moved ahead 3-2 in the second on a squeeze bunt by Walt Williams, but the Red Sox tied it again in the third as Harper scored when Reggie Smith bounced into a double play.

Back-to-back doubles by Griffin and Evans made it 6-3 in the fifth, but Cleveland came back with a run in its half of the fifth on a run-scoring single by George Hendrick.

Boston's final run came in the ninth on a double by Rick Miller and two infield outs.

John Curtis, with relief help from Roger Moret, received credit for his ninth win against eight losses while Kekich lost his fourth game in five decisions.

TEXAS RANGERS V

Texas Rangers Became Modernized Despite Serious Handicaps

In spite of such leaders as Frank Hamer and Tom Hickman, the Rangers were seriously handicapped in the early 1930's.

Because of the Great Depression the state legislature necessarily slashed budgets; therefore the force, which at full complement could number 75 men, varied between 35 and 45. Besides being undermanned, they had also become antiquated by modern science and urbanization.

While criminals in high - powered cars "shuttled between distant cities like commuters," the Rangers had to rely on free railroad passes or provide their own cars — with a monthly allotment of $50 per company for "repairs and upkeep."

And as for weapons, although receiving from the state "one improved carbine (usually a lever - action Winchester .30-30 or .30-06) and a pistol (a single - action Colt .45) at cost," they were hard - pressed to compete with gangsters who used Thompson submachine guns and Browning automatic rifles acquired at no cost.

A Grave Error

Then late in July, 1932, the Rangers made a grave error in judgment; they openly supported Gov. Ross Sterling against Miriam A. "Ma" Ferguson in the Democratic Primary — and lost.

So in January, 1933, upon assuming office, the new governor fired every Ranger for his partisanship — 44 in all.

The results were disastrous. For besides the state legislature reducing Ranger salaries, eliminating longevity pay, slashing travel budgets, and limiting force personnel to 32 men, Mrs. Ferguson appointed new officers, many of whom "by any standard," one historian candidly asserted, "were a contemptible lot."

In less than a year one private was convicted of murder; several others in Company D, after having raided a gambling hall in Duval County, were found to have set up their own establishment with the confiscated equipment; and still another, a captain, was arrested for theft and embezzlement.

But even worse, the governor began using Special Ranger commissions, as her husband had done during World War I, as a source of political patronage. Within two years she enlarged this group to 2,344 men, thus prompting the Austin American to comment that "about all the requirements a person needed...to be a Special Ranger was to be a human being."

Widespread Violence

Consequently, with the Rangers becoming a source of patronage, corruption, and ridicule, the effects upon state law enforcement were catastrophic.

During the Ferguson years crime and violence became widespread, bank holdups and murder commonplace. Soon few states could boast of a more vicious assortment of gangsters or provide a safer sanctuary for the criminal element.

For instance, residents in the Dallas - Fort Worth area alone included George "Machine - Gun" Kelly, Raymond Hamilton and the "mad - dog killers" Clyde Barrow and Bonnie Parker.

And who besides "Ma" Ferguson was responsible for this breakdown in the public defense? To most Texans the answer was obvious. As one newspaper sarcastically remarked, "A Ranger commission and a nickel can get...a cup of coffee anywhere in Texas."

In January, 1935, however, Gov. James V. Allred soon obviated the causes of such derision. Having campaigned the previous year to "overhaul" the state law enforcement machinery, he pushed through the legislature a bill creating the Texas Department of Public Safety (DPS).

To supervise administrative polices and procedures he appointed a three - man Public Safety Commission, which in turn selected a director and an assistant director.

Concerning organizational structure the new state agency had three basic units - the Texas Rangers, the Highway Patrol, and a newly created Headquarters Division at Austin which was to be a modern scientific crime laboratory and detection center.

Thus on Aug. 10, 1935, with the official initiation of the DPS, the Rangers became an important part of a much larger law enforcement team. And although Walter Prescott Webb sadly predicted their demise as a separate entity, fearing they would lose their identity and be absorbed by the more sizeable Highway Patrol, such was not the case.

Reform Gained

Through reorganization came much - needed reform and state support; hence the modernization of the force began.

For that matter, when the three - man Public Safety Commission appointed Homer Garrison, Jr., as director in 1938, the Rangers were in safe hands, for this six - foot two - inch, square - jawed, and bespectacled new leader was an ideal choice.

A former deputy sheriff at Lufkin who had joined the Highway Patrol at its inception, he understood these rugged, individualistic men; therefore, he was able to integrate them into a well - organized structure without blunting their initiative and pride.

In fact, they considered "the Colonel" as one of their own; he was a man of unquestionable integrity who demanded loyalty and discipline and pride, traits of character which they identified as those of a Ranger.

More and more over the years they came to appreciate his tact and diplomacy, his strong support, his ability to "handle legislators." Thus the Garrison legend began to build, growing to gigantic proportions during the next 30 years.

From the beginning Garrison worked adroitly and patiently to build the force. Whenever a major criminal case occurred in the state, he immediately sent Rangers to investigate, thereby enhancing their prestige as well a giving them the freedom of movement so ingrained in their character and tradition.

Against new governor W. Lee "Pappy" O'Daniel and the legislature who were on an "economy jag," he struggled to maintain appropriations - in 1939 the Rangers lost two captains and five investigators because of a cut in funds - until his "educational approach" began having the desired effects upon state leaders.

Ignored Entreaties

And in 1939-1940 he repeatedly ignored gubernatorial entreaties to place the Rangers in the Adjutant General's Department again, hence under political domination. But most important during the next few years he surrounded himself with men who had ability and courage and dedication to uphold the world - renowned reputation of the force.

Thus he encouraged A.Y. Allee, Hardy Purvis, Leo Bishop, Manny Gault and Zeno Smith to continue their service while luring into the organization such outstanding lawmen as future captains Manuel T. "Lone Wolf" Gonzaullas, Bob Crowder, Johnny Klevenhagen, Raymond Waters, Eddie Oliver, J.C. Paulk and Clint Peoples.

But in spite of greater responsibilities during the 1940's and 1950's, of a personnel increase to 62 men in 1961, and of better training, able leadership, and more comprehensive service, the Rangers came under heavy political fire in the 1960's.

Charged with being "pistoleros" (hired gunmen) of the governor, "strikebreakers" against labor unions, and "the Mexican - Americans' Ku Klux Klan," they found themselves in an impossible situation, not too unlike the Ferguson era of the early 1930's - and to a man they did not like it.

Because of the Supreme Court rulings after 1954 they felt "handcuffed" by the judges, their previous methods of police procedure under question, their attempts at law enforcement stymied by legal technicalities.

Nor did the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and subsequent amendments improve their disposition or position, especially with Mexican - Americans charging them with violations at every turn.

A Source of Irritation

But more than anything else, their involvement in 1966 with "la huelga" - a strike involving stoop farm laborers at the 1,600 acre, well - irrigated La Casita Farms near Rio Grande City - proved to be a source of irritation, a bewildering, unpleasant assignment which brought into question their methods of law enforcement, indeed an excuse for the dissolution fo their organization.

For in trying to keep peace between management and labor, protect property, and uphold the law, they were, in the eyes of a generation facing the riots and violence of a Newark or a Detroit, ineffective.

CLINT PEOPLES
...senior captain

Or as one DPS commissioner observed, they tried "to cope with current problems by using yesterday's tools."

In May, 1968, after the death of Col. Garrison, the DPS commissioners therefore took a "hard look" at the Rangers - and as in the past from such investigations and "soul - searching" came new guidelines to meet present and future needs.

Under the leadership of Col. Wilson E. "Pat" Speir, the new director of the DPS who had worked his way up through the ranks since entering the department in 1939, and his assistant, Lt. Col., Leo Gossett, the Rangers regrouped and reorganized.

By November, 1969, after the legislature had enlarged the force to 73 men - and eventually to 82 by Sept. 1, 1971 - Speir and the commissioners established a Criminal Law Enforcement Division (Narcotics, Intelligence, and the Rangers) under Chief James M. "Jim" Ray. In turn, they elevated veteran Ranger Capt. Clint Peoples to Senior Captain and soon thereafter (in 1971) named Capt. Bill Wilson as his assistant.

Better Trained

And from such reorganization the individual Ranger became a more efficient, better trained law enforcement officer. Regarding enlistment requirements the recruit now had to be between the ages of 30 and 50 have eight years of on - the - job police experience, and have an intermediate certificate which entailed at least 400 to 600 hours of classroom instruction.

In an intensive training program he received special courses running the gamut of law enforcement experience - detection and apprehension, gathering of evidence, criminal law, and courtroom presentation of facts. At the same time he became proficient in using his equipment as well as learning how to cultivate good public relations.

Then, while on the job, he attended monthly company meetings where his captain kept him abreast of the latest procedures in criminal investigation.

Unlike those Rangers of the Republic and frontier days, or even of the 1920's and 1930's, he now rode in high - powered, state - furnished automobiles which had new radio equipment with many frequencies as well as riot guns and a rifle, tear gas, all kinds of transport gear, and a scientific investigative kit.

He also had standardized weapons provided by the state, a .357 combat magnum sidearm and Remington .30-06 and .30-30 rifles with telescopic sights.

And for the first time in Ranger history he wore identical "adopted clothing" as his fellow officers - not a uniform, however, - consisting of western - style tan gabardine pants and coat, black boots, tie, and belt, a white shirt and a silver - colored stetson hat.

Consequently the modern Texas Rangers, a number of whom are stationed in strategic rural counties oftentimes lacking in both law enforcement manpower and criminal investigative facilities, are walking police laboratories, highly mobile, well - armed and well - trained.

Retained Traits

Yet they have retained the traits and qualities of character that in 1935 Webb lamented were being lost; indeed, in many ways they appear to be cut from the same rough mold as their predecessors.

Basically they are uncomplicated men - direct, straightforward and not especially concerned about social amenities. They use the English hanguage simply as a tool for direct communication, not as a devise to trick or deceive (hence their difficulty at times with newsmen or reporters who tend toward sensationalism).

Grammatically they are an English teacher's nightmare; yet they clearly express themselves, sometimes punctuating their sentences with colorful if not downright earthy expressions.

Although outwardly friendly and easygoing, they are suspicious of strangers and hesitant to talk ("You might have been one of those damn New York magazine writers"); but once a person wins their trust, they will go out of their way to be helpful.

Always Respected

But make no mistake about these men. They have been, and are, the scourge of those outside the law, obviously feared, sometimes hated, always respected.

They are proud men - proud of their traditions and their fellow officers' accomplishments, proud of holding a job that all other Texas lawmen desire. They have an intangible, almost unexplainable quality of toughness about them.

Possibly it is the way they handle themselves. Some are no longer lean and trim; a few are wrinkled and graying; yet all exude a certain poise and tough self - confidence.

Or perhaps it is the realization that those men have confronted the toughest criminals in the state, that their tradition of "One riot, one Ranger" has steeled them toward danger and death.

But whatever the reason, these men do have the reputation of toughness and bravery, of dedication to law enforcement, of being the elite of Texas lawmen.

Steady Decline Expected For Veterans Population

Growth in the veteran population, from 24 million to 29 million since 1965, will continue for two more years, then start a steady decline, a Veterans Administration projection shows, according to Jack Coker, VA regional director.

In 1975, living veterans of all wars will number 29.2 million, and after that date, deaths will begin to outnumber military discharges. By the year 2,000, the veteran population will be back to the 1965 figure of 24.1 million.

Coker said VA projects veteran population periodically for planning purposes, with special emphasis on assessing future needs for health care facilities.

At the present time, for example, World War II veterans number over 14 million with an average age of 53, but by the turn of the century, more than 60 per cent of the remaining veterans will have served during or after the Korean Conflict.

The projection shows the WWII group will be down to 13.5 million by June, 1975 with an average age of 55.4 years, and 25 years later there will have been a 68 per cent drop to 4.4 million with an average age of 77.4 years.

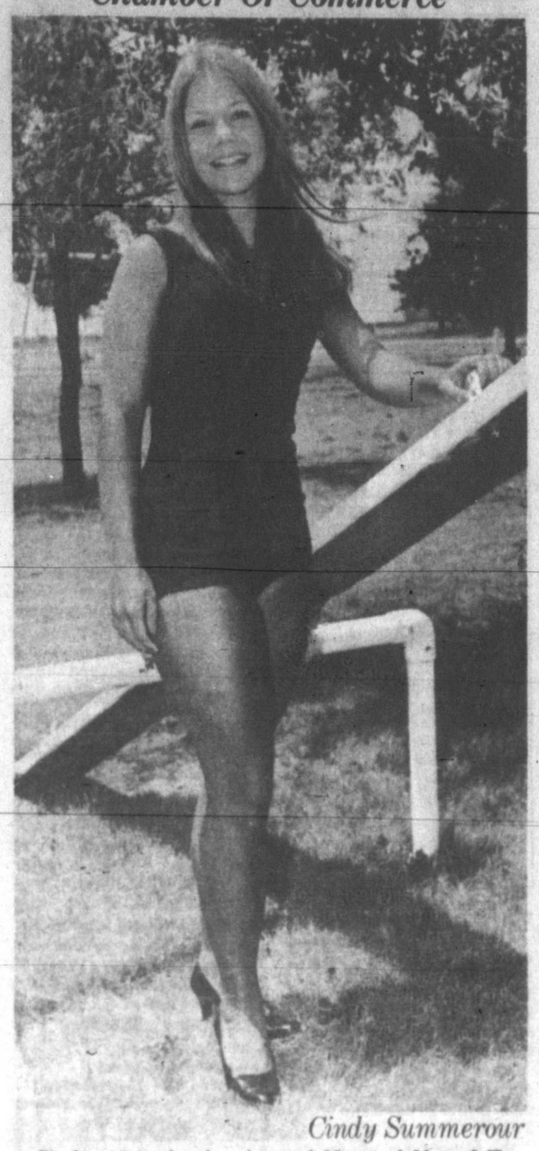

The last veteran of the Indian Wars (1817-1898), Fred Fraske, died recently in Chicago at the age of 101.

Miss Brenda Boyd Becomes Bride Of David Paulson

Miss Brenda Dianne Boyd and David Scott Paulson were united in marriage at 7:30 p.m. Friday, July 27, in the First Baptist Church of Pampa.

Mr. and Mrs. G.J. Boyd, 128 N. Faulkner, are parents of the bride and Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Paulson, 1001 E. Francis, are parents of the bridegroom.

THE CEREMONY

The Rev. Claude Cone, pastor, officiated for the double - ring ceremony, before a background of sala covered candelabrum holding white tapers, flanked by baskets of lavender and white gladioli. Miss Eloise Lane, organist, provided traditional wedding music and played the theme from "Love Story."

THE BRIDE

The bride, given in marriage by her father with the "her mother and I" avowal, wore a formal gown of satin organza over soft bridal taffeta designed with a fitted empire bodice, a Victorian neckline overlaid in lace featuring a sheer yoke, and long sheer full sleeves underlaid in lace. Her sleeves were caught at the wrists with deep lace cuffs. The A - line skirt fell to a scalloped re - embroideried lace hemline. The skirt swept to back fullness and cascaded into a full chapel train. A bias sash ending in a bow with steamers at the center back, accented the waistline.

Her elbow length mantilla of re - embroideried lace fell from a lace Camelot coif. She carried an arrangement of white carnations and purple statis cascading from a white Bible. The Bible has great sentimental value since it was carried 26 years ago on this date by the bride's mother and father at their wedding ceremony. The bride's bouquet held her going away corsage of stephanotis and white carnations.

The bride wore diamond earrings belonging to her late great - grandmother, Mrs. K.G. Ragain, for "something old." "Something new" was her wedding gown; "something borrowed" her white Bible, "something blue," a garter. She placed birthdate pennies of the couple in her shoes.

ATTENDANTS

Susan Albus was maid of honor, and Senya Evans was flower girl. Both reside in Pampa. They wore floor - length purple dresses trimmed with lace and purple flowers. The flower girl's ensemble was topped with a white organza pinafore. Miss Albus carried a lavendar gladioli and purple aster nosegay with matching streamers, and Miss Evans carried purple and white flower in a white basket.

Ringbearer was Peter Nelson and Jeffry Leigh and Mike Snider lighted the candles.

Ricky Laubhan served as best man and Howard Paulson, brother of the bridegroom, and Vodie Brooks were ushers.

MOTHERS

The bride's mother wore a lavendar full length gown designed with sheer full sleeves with a white carnation corsage, and silver accessories. The bridegroom's mother wore a blue double knit dress with white accessories and a white carnation corsage.

RECEPTION

For the reception held in the church parlor, the serving table was covered with a purple cloth overlaid with lace and adorned by the attendants flowers. The three - tiered wedding cake was ornated with the traditional miniature bride and bridegroom.

Each tier of the cake was divided by columns and decorated with garlands, shells and orchid sweetpeas. The top tier was saved for the couple's first year anniversary celebration.

Mrs. Eugene Leigh and Mrs. Tommy Hill assisted at the punch bowl and serving cake were Mrs. Jewell Snider and Kim and Kelli Snider. Registering guests was Miss Dawna Miller.

For the wedding trip to Dallas and Fort Worth area, the bride wore a purple street length dress with white accessories and lifted the corsage from her bridal bouquet.

AFFILIATIONS

The bride is a senior student at Pampa High School and the bridegroom is a 1973 PHS graduate.

PRE-NUPTIAL EVENTS

The bride was honored recently with a miscellaneous shower in the Hospitality Room of Citizens Bank, hosted by Susan Albus and Dawna Miller. Another shower was held in the parlor of Central Baptist Church hostested by Mmes. Myrt Leigh, Nadine Hill, Janice Snider, Patty Boyd, Geneva Cobb, and J.B. Fife.

Wescott, Marci and Jay of Hart, Tex.; Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Boyd, Renee and Jamie, Mr. and Mrs. Keith Boyd, Stinnett; Mrs. Alta Boyd, grandmother of the bride; Mrs. Tommy Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Nunn, Linda Kay and Sherilee, all of White Deer; Lydia and Dennis Lekington, Amarillo; Mike Karlin, Borger; and Mr. and Mrs. Austin Davis of Cheyenne, Okla.

Six spades is a mighty good contract. You win the club lead in dummy and try the spade finesses. It loses, which merely keeps you from scoring an overtrick since the heart finesse is going to work.

Now, see if you can figure out how an expert declarer managed to go down two tricks at the Fort Worth Regionals.

He started out by winning the club and losing the spade finesse. A second club was led and South ruffed. Then he drew trumps, cashed his ace of hearts and king of diamonds and led a diamond to dummy's ace.

Internationalist Paul Soloway, who sat East, had listened to the bidding. He knew South had started with 5-4-3-1 distribution and eventually would take a heart dinesse and make the slam.

Paul decided to give him a chance to find another line of play. Paul dropped the queen of diamonds on dummy's ace!

Now it seemed to declarer that he would not need the heart finesse at all. He discarded one heart on the last good club; came to his hand with the king of hearts; led his last diamond and took what appeared to be a certain winning finesse against the 10.

It ought to have been, but it wasn't. Paul produced the 10 for down one and then the queen of clubs.

WMU Lists Programs

GLORIETA, N.M. — "Rather than trying to teach associational WMU directors things they already know, we want to help them plan ahead for 1973-74." This is how Bobbie Sorrill, general administration department supervisor of Woman's Missionary Union, summed up the associational conference opportunities at Glorieta Baptist Conference Center.

The conferences, slated July 26-Aug. 1, features 70 missionaries, WMU staff members from Birmingham, Ala., and invited experts. Spanish-speaking WMU leaders will hear teaching methods discussed in Spanish during morning-long sessions.

Specific activities listed in the April - May - June "Associational WMU Bulletin" will be topics for the conferences. Activities include such major events as a Cooperative Program-Missions Offering Fair and Giant Step, WMU growth project.

The morning sessions will begin with intensive training for officers and leaders of WMU. Carolyn Weatherford, executive secretary of Florida WMU will be teaching these directors. "One hour will be spent in basic training," adds Miss Sorrill. "This session will explain what these women got themselves into when they took on the responsibility of being age-level directors."

There will also be morning Bible Meditations by Mrs. Robert Fling, Pleasantville, N.Y., former national WMU president. Kenneth Chafin, former Home Mission Board staff member now a pastor in Houston, Tex., will speak Sunday morning and evening.

The morning Bible study will be followed by pew-based world tours conducted by missionaries, mission board leaders and ethnic Baptists. Afternoons will be devoted to films and workshops on such topics as teaching mission study books. Missionaries will be featured in the evening assemblies.

Wednesday morning, last day of the conferences, consultants from the Birmingham office will bid farewell to the conferees with a two-hour practical summary of the year ahead. Theme for the presentation will be "Patterning Tomorrow's WMU."

Leukemia threatens her 'Love Story'

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1973 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I had a date with a very handsome and charming fellow nearly three years ago. We seemed to hit it off, but he never called me again and that was that.

A month ago he called me out of the blue and the first thing he asked was, "Are you married yet?" I kiddingly said, "No, I'm still waiting for you!" He asked me for a date that very night. I accepted.

Well, we had a marvelous time. We danced and laughed and talked and just hated to say goodnight. Before we parted he asked if he could see me the next night. In fact, he dated me up for every night that week. Abby, I was in heaven! I never knew two people could fall in love so fast.

We saw each other every night for nearly three weeks, and then came the bombshell! He told me he loved me and would ask me to marry him, but he had leukemia and his time was running out. At first I thought he was giving me a line, but then he showed me all the books and medical journals he had collected on the subject, and he invited me to talk to his doctor. I did, and the doctor said he had maybe another year of health. He wasn't sure. He didn't know.

I have fallen deeply in love with this young man, Abby and want to make the rest of his life as happy as possible, but am I being fair to myself? Should I break it off now? Please help me. I am 25 and he is 29. I can't even tell my mother. BROKENHEARTED

DEAR BROKENHEARTED: Knowing that your days are numbered [aren't everybody's?] makes every day more precious. You would be less than fair to yourself were you to break it off now, if indeed you could, which I doubt. In enriching his life, you will enrich your own. Pray for a miracle, and God bless.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are both 21. We've been married for nearly two years and we have one child. He joined the service out of fear of being drafted and now he's in Germany.

My question: Why do men [even married men] tell me I shouldn't think my husband is sitting in the barracks every night just thinking of me? They say he is only human and he is out for everything he can get over there. They say all the guys in the service cheat on their wives.

Abby, this upsets me terribly. Some of these men don't even know my husband so how can they pass judgment on him that way? TRUE BLUE WIFE

DEAR WIFE: They can't. They are trying to suggest that if you want to cheat on your husband, you would be justified. Don't believe them. There are plenty of "true blue" men in the service, and your husband could be one of them.

DEAR ABBY: I did something terrible and I can't sleep nights. I wish I were a Catholic so I could go to confession.

I work in a department store which gives a discount to employes for items they purchase for themselves.

I have a relative who wanted a dress for her daughter's wedding, so I told her to come to the store, pick out a dress, and I would say I was buying it for her as a birthday gift, and I would get the discount. Then she could pay me what it cost.

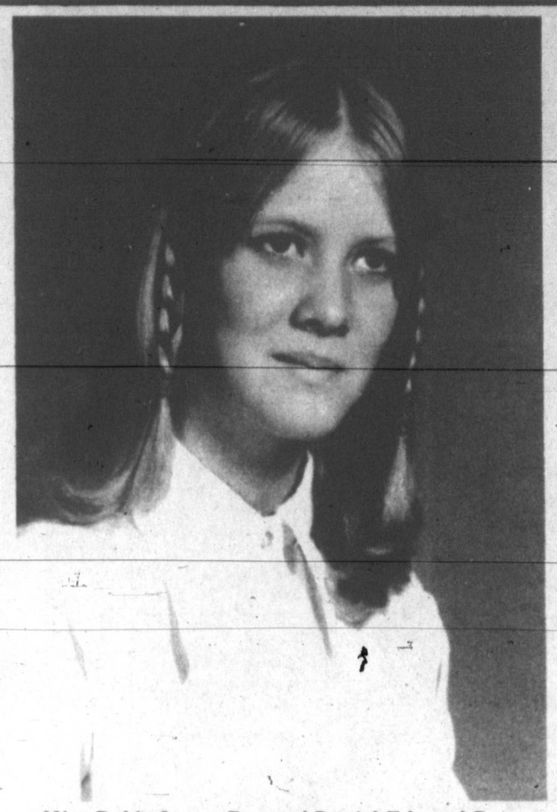

She came in and picked out a dress, but when my boss rang up the sale he looked at me kind of funny, like he knew I was lying. I am not a very good liar because I don't lie often, and I am so embarrassed now because I am sure he wasn't fooled.

I'm afraid he will tell the other clerks about it, and I just hate to go to work and face them. Please tell me how to get this off my conscience. GUILTY

DEAR GUILTY: Tell your boss you'd like to return the amount of the discount. It won't be necessary to explain further. Then you'll both feel better.

CONFIDENTIAL TO: Interested in your thoughts on the matter: I'm glad you asked. To borrow a quote from Frank Vanderlip in The Forbes Scrapbook of Thoughts on the Business of Life: "Since nothing is settled until it is settled right, no matter how unlimited power a man may have, unless he exercises it fairly and justly, his actions will return to plague him."

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L. A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Miss Robin Lynne Ray and Daniel Edward Rose of Vallejo, Calif., will wed Sept. 14, at 6 p.m. in the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Ray, 815 N. Gray, who are making the announcement. Mrs. Herman Lincycomb, 2127 N. Nelson, and Daniel Rose of Lefors, are parents of the prospective bridegroom. The bride-elect attended Pampa High School and her fianace is a 1972 graduate of PHS and is currently serving in the US Navy.

Vacation—The Big Climb

COLLEGE STATION — Vacationers climb seven mountains no matter where they go "to get away from it all," according to one authority, who says time off the job each year is a must.

Dr. Jennie C. Kitching, family life education specialist, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System, cited "seven good reasons why people whould take a vacation."

Time away from work lets the person who knows how to pace himself retreat from work and give tense muscles and irritated nerves a chance to settle down, the specialist said.

"His situation is much better than that of the person cut off before his time, whose final tribute is simply, 'He was working too hard.'

"Vacationers take time to enjoy the smell of pine and cedar or the feel of sand on the beach and the pleasure of a leisurely chat with friends without the pressure to be clever," Dr. Kitching noted.

"This is a time for contemplation and self - renewal, because these are the good years — not next year when the house is paid for, or later, when the kids are through college.

"The tragedy is that some people reach the end of life never having lived at all," she added.

Vacations provide a change of pace, the specialist explained.

"For the person whose job requires mental activity, perhaps something physical is needed. If he ordinarily works with people, some solitude is called for.

"If he works in isolation, he might welcome the stimulation of other people."

For the country dweller, Dr. Kitching recommended some big city living. For the city dweller, the delights of the country or the mountains. And for those who usually live by the clock and calendar, she advised living without them for awhile.

"Plan rest, of course, but plan some activity, too."

A vacation's direct effect on the job is usually better work, the specialist said.

"The vacation - skipper is more likely to make errors, fell put upon and self - righteous.

"He may become irritable with co - workers and resentful of those who do take a vacation. He isn't likely to let others forget that while they were off enjoying themselves, he was hard at work. Sometimes he forgets that productivity isn't measured by hours on the job.

"Vacations also give others a chance. The good organizer gives priority to vacation plans, then enlists others to help carry them out."

Turning to the family as a whole, Dr. Kitching pronounced the vacation a unifier that helps maintain closeness among family members, particularly husband and wife.

"Some vacation time with the whole family strengthens family unity, but equally important is the opportunity for husband and wife to have some time alone together.

"The typical husband and wife can expect to spend 20 years together after the last child leaves home. A 'just the two of us' vacation is an ideal time for them to get to know each other again as individuals — in anticipation of that 20 - year - long 'second honeymoon.'

"Vacations also help prepare people for the leisure time that comes with retirement.

"For those whose vacations have been rich in experiences, who know how to live a full life outside the world of work, retirement years will be good years — perhaps the best."

Food Perils

Long-nosed bats in Arizona like to eat the blooms of the giant saguaro cactus, but this delicacy involves risk. Bats sometimes are found impaled on the spines of the cactus.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Impulse leads you into an expensive social venture, resulting in lasting enjoyment with something to discuss for long time.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Begin early and keep going; far too many interesting things are happening to linger on any one subject.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Interesting contacts feature the day if you take advantage of your ability to move out of usual routines.

Leo [July 23 - Aug. 22]: Pleasures of diverse sorts, something for everybody, are rather easy to find. Leave others free to pursue what appeals to them.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Many of those who would most appreciate your company are not free to come out to you; respond to invitations, visit them.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Be in time to see the interesting local developments, the fine nuances of social change and progress. Don't neglect important friends.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: The challenge is simple; are you carrying your share in your specialized field of interests?

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Younger people take the main attention, provoke diversions from routine schedules. Travel is subject to missed connections.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Give others space to enjoy their Sunday—this gives you more room for self-expression. Casual comments can lead to overstatement.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: A touch of formality adds dignity. Be explicit, ask directly for what you want. Be willing to go it alone for the early hours.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Make this an easygoing Sunday, no pressure to get any single project finished. You attract support from important people.

MONDAY, JULY 30

Your birthday today: A few months of elminating the old, preparing for the new makes way for inner rebirth, optimism, a new point of view. Much to do, more to learn. Unfamiliar work pushes you to develop additional skills. Today's natives have a faculty for presenting themselves well.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Your week is off to a creative start with an experimental idea. Personal projects can be advanced readily.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Emotional factors enter all work effort, lead to complications if you overdo or throw good money after bad.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Teamwork counts heavily. Your associates are likely divided among themselves, with strong feelings on current issues.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Adapt your plans to fit the changing needs of friends. It's a strenuous day at best —pace your efforts.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Lagging enterprises suddenly require close attention, earnest decisions, determination. Secret or obscure activities falter.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Work alone and know that all is well. Confidential facts come your way—be reserved in your manner as you share them.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Your run of fair to good luck continues. This time a friend is in a position to do something for you.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: The quality of today varies from crisp and clear to harsh, according to what you're doing and why.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: A conservative approach quietly followed brings the required results with a minimum of side effects.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Making new moves or decisions is not the problem; sticking to established principles and tested procedures is.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Personal ventures or interesting extras in your work schedule are sidetracked by today's pressures.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Additional rewards come in a strange and subtle form. Direct requests for raises meet resistance. The moderate course is suggested.

POLLY'S POINTERS

Canisters Too Small? Use These Solutions

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY — My solution for Mrs. J. R. E.'s problem with canisters not being large enough to hold five pounds of sugar or flour is to get the large size cardboard containers from an ice cream parlor and then insert a small new plastic liner-type bag inside each one. The flour or sugar can be poured right into the bag and then it is tied with the wire tie that comes with the bags. This makes a bug proof canister and the outside can be decorated imaginatively. — LISA JANE

DEAR POLLY — Department stores selling a well-known brand of rubber kitchen products have an attractive canister set that holds five pounds of flour, five pounds of sugar and two pounds of coffee and then has space for tea, too. This is one compact round unit, is reasonably priced and comes in gold or avocado green. — L. P. M.

DEAR POLLY — Mrs. J. R. E. who finds most canister sets too small should do as my wife does. She bought two canister sets and arranges them in descending order with the two largest ones in the center and then on down as to size at each side. This gives her twice the storage plus a conversation item when visitors notice. — ROY

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — How can I get fingernail polish out of a pair of pants that are 50 per cent cotton and 50 per cent polyester? The cleaners were not successful in removing this polish. — MRS. L. W. A.

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve is with the screen strainer in my washing machine. The tiny holes are all clogged up with soap film and nothing I have tried will unplug them except pushing a needle through each one and that is time consuming. If anyone knows of a good and easy way to clean such a wire strainer please tell me. — MRS. L. W. B.

DEAR POLLY — With all the halter-type blouses and dresses on the market we need to keep them and our bras together in the back. I sewed a snap onto each side of the back of my halter bra and the other side of each snap on the back of the halter top so blouse and bra snap together. The bra does not show in the back. Of course, you will have to try them on and have someone mark the correct places for the snaps. My husband came up with a good idea for keeping my sash belts snug and not having to double knot them. Where the belt crosses, sew on a small piece of Velco nylon gripper and then go ahead and loop one side over the other like always. You cannot see that there is anything holding them together and it never comes loose. — ONETA

Prevent Kitchen Falls

Ten per cent of all falls resulting in death or injury occur in the kitchen, warns Miss Jimmie Lou Wainscott, county Extension agent.

Many falls stem from highly polished linoleum, or floors made slippery by spilled grease or other liquids.

Prevention of these is simple — just wipe up anything spilled on the floor immediately.

Other accidents result from using chairs, tables and various equipment to reach high places.

Prevent these by storing frequently used items within easy reach — to eliminate climbing and consequently the falls.

When using a chair to reach high places, utilize a sturdy one with a wide base, solid bottom and high back.

Place chair close to object. Wear low - heeled shoes and stand in the middle of the seat.

Stepleadders and step - stools actually are safer than chairs.

Store a ladder or stool near the kitchen for convenience — but out of the way when not needed.

Keep everything in its place — and have a place for everything. Many serious kitchen falls are due to objects on the floor.

Likewise, children and pets underfoot when least expected cause accidents, the agent added.

Watch his big smile that says "Thank You"

When the boy comes to collect...

Your newspaperboy makes it his business to collect at a regular time—convenient to you.

That way he comes expected and you can be ready for him.

You can help, too, by having the money there so he won't have to come back. He'll appreciate that.

Because this boy is in business. He depends on the full collection of his route for his full profit. And repeat calls for him mean extra work with no extra profit.

Hence, next time the boy comes by to collect, be ready—and watch his big smile, which says "Thank you."

JANE JUSTIN, Designer

Knits By Don For Fall, 1973

It's a fashion pot pourri for fall in both the Don Sophisticates and Knits by Don collections designed by Jane Justin.

"The era of the one big fashion look is definitely dead," states Jane Justin emphatically! "No one can tell today's woman what she must wear anymore, she's much too independent and wants choice. Instead of giving up one way of dressing in exchange for another, women prefer the option of both. In other words, nothing is 'in' or 'out' anymore, it's what you like, what looks good on you and suits your lifestyle whether it be dresses or pants, understated or decollete, above or below the knee for day, full length or knee length for evening."

Looking fresh and new dresses continue their strong comeback for fall in both collections. However, there are lots of pant ensembles with a matching jacket or coat as well as two and three piece costumes consisting of a dress or skirt with the blouson blouse and coordinating longer jacket or coat. The silhouette is stretched out and tubular.

Sweater dresses - short and long - predominate in the Knits by Don group where wool blends, some angora - like, add their own particular note of richness. Lurex, with its look of luxury that is edging back into evening wear, has been used most effectively in creating eyecatching geometric designs on the knits for nightlife.

The desired degree of elegance and newness in both Don Sophisticates and Knits by Don for fall is created through the use of fur trim, fake and real leather and suede, natty tweeds and dashing plaid fabrics - all expressed in the warm earth tones of brown, burgundy and carmel as well as heather green and blue.

Both collections retail from $46 to $130, excluding fur trim, and are available in leading fashion stores throughout the country.

Arthritis Articles Are Available By Altrusans

The Altrusa Club of Pampa adopted The Arthritis Foundation as another of their community service projects about a year ago and, quoting Ralph Bauder, president of the Panhandle Division, "Without People Like You, and those who contribute their time, as well as money, The Arthritis Foundation could not accomplish all it does in West Texas - and support its national research and educational programs too.

Part of the money collected in the victory march will be placed in the West Texas Fund For Research and training in arthritis at Texas Tech University when its department of rheumatology is established. Who knows? Perhaps the cause, cure or prevention for the nations No. 1 "Crippler" will be found in West Texas."

Altrusa Club of Pampa has also set up a loan closet for Athritics and now have available crutches, adjustable and non - adjustable, as well as hospital beds for loan. If they do not have what the doctor says you need, they will try to locate the article for you. They will also be happy to receive wheel chairs, additional crutches, walkers, parafin baths, or any other invalid aid you might wish to contribute to their loal closet.

Altrusa is now conducting their 1973 letter campaign with the Foundation's new slogan "Arthritis: Help Us Stop It Before It Stops You."

ALTRUSA AWARD — The Altrusa Club of Pampa was presented an award of appreciation by Genevieve Henderson, shown at left in above photo, Gray County chairman and member of the board of directors of the Panhandle Division, West Texas Chapter, of the Arthritis Foundation for their generous assistance in conducting the 1972 Arthritis survey and victory march. Receiving the certificate are Evelyn Mason, center, immediate past president of Altrusa, and Irene Cox, immediate past community service chairman.

Altrusa Club Hosts Dinner

The Altrusa Club initiated a new program Monday evening when they hosted a buffet dinner for executive and professional women of Pampa at the Fellowship Hall of the United Methodist Church. One of the objectives of Altrusa is to cultivate friendly relationships and promote mutual understanding of women engaged in business and the professions.

This occasion provided an opportunity for women involved in a wide variety of professions and varied businesses to make new friends and share a relaxing social evening together.

Altrusa Club plans include more of this type program to foster friendship among community business women.

Following dinner and a get acquainted session, a program was presented under the direction of Mrs. Calvin Lacy, Pampa High School drama teacher.

Miss Kathleen Fitzgerald, Miss Terri Malone, Miss Glenna Wilkins and Mark Box presented vocal numbers, accompanied by Miss Paula Homer at the piano. Miss Malone interpreted several scenes from the play "Pygmilion" and the group did a musical skit based on "Peanuts," the comic character.

Renovation pays off

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Renovation of furniture has three big benefits, say home economists at the University of Tennessee. It stimulates creativity, teaches new skills and saves money.

Shopping Clothing Sales

Clothing sale items aren't necessarily bargains, warns one authority.

"Unless there's a definite need or use for the item, it's not a good buy," Marilyn Brown, consumer education - clothing and textiles specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System, explained.

"At one time or another, most typical shoppers have purchased sale items only to wonder later why they did."

Several factors make sales attractive and tempting, the specialist said.

For one, consumers generally want to test buying skill — and try to "get something for nothing.

"Others feel they're contributing to family income by saving a few pennies on sale items.

"Still others enjoy the excitement sales bring — crowds and a great variety of merchandise.

"But whatever the reason for shopping sales, make sure you're getting your money's worth," Miss Brown emphasized.

"Clothing dollars should give a good return on investment."

Before making an impulse decision about bargain clothing merchandise, ask yourself the following questions.

1. Is the item really needed — and does it meet the need?
2. Will it fit into my wardrobe plan? Must new accessories be purchased to complete the outfit?
3. Does the garment fit well, or can it be altered?
4. What does proper care and maintenance involve?
5. How will the item be purchased? Will it upset the clothing budget?

"When shopping sales, at least be a comparative shopper. Become familiar with current prices and fashions — to insure purchasing a true bargain.

"In addition, shop sales early — before merchandise is completely picked over," Miss Brown added.

Everybody Knew But Us

There seems no end to revelations damaging to what remains of President Nixon's prestige and adding to alarm at the aggrandizment of power by the executive branch.

One of the latest is the Defense Department disclosure that B-52 bombers carried out at least 3,500 presidentially authorized secret raids over Cambodia beginning in March, 1969, at a time when we recognized the ostensibly neutral government of Prince Sihanouk.

According to one Pentagon spokesman, falsified reports were officially ordered after the raids to hide their number, frequency and objectives.

Hide from whom? Certainly the Cambodians knew they were being bombed. Surely they somehow leaked the word to the Russians and the Chinese and any other potential U.S. enemy. The only people who didn't know were 200 million Americans and most of their 535 representatives in Congress.

The President's penchant for secrecy, for the "loneliness of command," continued even in a situation where candor would have been most beneficial to the administration, not to mention America's image abroad. This was the Christmas, 1972, bombing of North Vietnam which outraged even staunch and long-time supporters of the President's (public) Vietnam policies.

Not until weeks after the war ended, when it was too late to do any good, did the Defense Department release photographic proof that there had been no such thing as "carpet bombing" of Hanoi and only minimal damage to nonmilitary targets.

Secrecy, with its implied distruct of the patriotism and contempt for the intelligence of the citizenry, is always self-defeating in a democracy, as Richard Nixon is so sadly finding out.

La Cucaracha Vamooses

Man's oldest insect enemy, the wily cockraoch, is meeting his match in, of all things, ordinary boric acid.

It was in 1966 that University of California entomologist Walter Ebeling found boric acid to be the cheapest roach killer and one of the most effective, while being virtually harmless to humans.

Smart as they are (and you have to be smart to endure 300 million years), cockroaches never learn to avoid boric acid.

It was not until last year, however, that the substance was used on a mass scale against the pest which, along with rats, is the bane of low-income people who cannot afford professional roach control.

Armed with squirters and boric acid, teams of volunteers with the Pasadena Community Information Center treated more than 700 homes in that city. The report is that every home where the boric acid was left "planted" remains free of roaches.

Don't Fill'er Up At Home

In case anyone has been so foolish as to consider the idea, the American Insurance Assn. has issued a warning to homeowners not to store gasoline as a hedge against inflation and - or shortages.

"Hoarding this highly flammable material in garages or other dwelling areas presents a fire loss risk that greatly exceeds any possible benefits," says association president T. Lawrence Jones, with notable understatement.

Actually, you'd be better off storing dynamite, if you must tempt fate. Pound for pound, gasoline contains more energy than dynamite and is a lot touchier.

Efficiency Lack Found In Defense

By BRUCE BIOSSAT

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The able research organization, the Brookings Institution, makes a strong case for the argument that the Nixon administration is not demanding the same efficiency in defense manpower use and effectiveness that it calls for in social programs it wants to cut or wipe out.

In its long-awaited study of the President's budget for fiscal 1974, Brookings says "initiatives to streamline defense forces and make them more efficient are few."

The new report acknowledges some cuts in strategic programs as result of SALT talk agreements last year with the Soviet Union, but adds: "Apart from these programs, not a single area of the defense budget shows significant dollar savings, either this year or in the future."

The Brookings comment takes on special bite because unlike most studies of defense spending, its previous budget reports have consistently made note of the place occupied in such spending by higher and higher manpower costs officially mandated by Congress. Both changes were of course ordered to bring military and civilian defense pay in line with competitive work in the private sector, to provide annual increases to keep it in balance, and to provide incentives for development of an all-volunteer Army. Other factors have contributed to the rising costs. Included are a higher grade structure, and use of more sophisticated weaponry, which requires more highly skilled and hence better paid operating and maintenance personnel.

Since 1968, all these elements have combined to increase average military pay by 113 per cent and defense civilian pay by 66 per cent.

In fiscal 1974, the Defense Department proposes to cut its baseline manpower by 50,000 persons, yet its payroll for such purposes is projected at $1.5 billion more.

Without these mandated pay increases, Brookings says, the 1974 defense budget would be about $6 billion less than it is.

Manpower costs today consume somewhat more than 51 per cent of baseline defense outlays (leaving out special wartime increments). It is estimated this percentage will rise to 54 per cent by 1980 if manpower levels and pay legislation stay the same.

But here Brookings notes the disturbing onset of inefficiency. Present "force levels" — meaning units which can be effectively employed in combat — are considerably less than in 1964, the last pre-Vietnam year. There are fewer Army divisions, fewer men on active military duty, fewer aircraft carriers and other naval vessels, fewer bombers and such defensive forces as manned interceptor planes.

Nevertheless, says the Brookings report, "At the very time the price of military manpower is rising sharply, it is being used more, rather than less, intensively."

The analysis suggests that "the total number of military and civiliar personnel presumably needed to man, train, direct and sustain each combat unit has risen sharply since fiscal 1964." Thus, while defense authorities have been advancing enormously the fire power of their weaponry, to increase effectiveness and cut casualties, the backup forces have grown. The pattern developed in the Vietnam war and the new sophistication in weapons seems to enhance it.

The Brookings specialists evidently can see little excuse for not using manpower more efficiently and for not assisting this process by designing much simpler new weapons than now proposed.

GLOBAL VIEW

Dollar plummet is our own fault

By Ray Cromley

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The unfavorable balance of trade and the plummeting dollar which threaten our economic stability and add to inflation are, in considerable measure, a result of our own lethargy.

The problem lies in ineptness within the White House leadership, inefficiency and lack of imagination in a half dozen departments and agencies and a shortage of get-up-and-go among thousands of American businessmen.

Officials who spend their time in trade discussions with foreign lands say there is an untapped market abroad for several billions a year in added U.S. exports — goods we now produce. American prices are right. Foreign consumers quite frequently are eager to buy.

A case in point is the textile business, an area in which the U.S. unfavorable trade balance has run well over $2 billion at times. One official with expertise in this field believes a goodly chunk of this unfavorable textile balance could be wiped out, not by clamping down on imports, but on exporting sales to markets eager for American styles and fabrics. But, he says, the government, despite some fancy words, some impressive studies of what's wrong, and the organization of super committees, does precious little to encourage this trade.

For one thing, American businessmen don't get the information they need. Market reporting and economic analysis by U.S. embassies and consulates abroad is, with some noted exceptions, abominable.

The prestige of American government commercial and treasury representatives abroad is so low that even at those posts where superior economic specialists are stationed, reporting is hampered and recommendations of the economic men ignored or santized. (Political types dominate most embassies.)

The same downgrading goes on in the State Department in Washington, where economics men, regardless of rank are held considerably lower esteem than their counterparts specializing in political affairs.

At the White House, Dr. Henry Kissinger tends to ignore economic matters or put them in second place in his foreign affairs strategy. And Peter Flanigan, who has direct responsibility, has neither clout, expertise or credibility among his peers in foreign trade and economics.

By contrast consider the major foreign countries and their embassies in Washington. Most understand the serious importance of economic viability to national interest and prestige. One Asian ambassador told me he has personally a quota of new business which he is to develop in the United States for his country each year. "And believe me," he says, "I meet that quota."

But, my friend continues, officials do not bear all the blame. Most American businessmen take very little interest in foreign trade, except when imports threaten their domestic U.S. market.

Except for a relatively small percentage of firms which are active in overseas business, American businessmen don't seem to realize that if a foreign producer threatens strong competition with some of their wares here, they can offset this challenge by pushing exports of other items they make or produce which the foreign concerns cannot equal, or which Americans can turn out at cheaper prices.

ACLU AND CRIME IN THE SCHOOLS

The American Civil Liberties Union (UCLU), long known for its defense of criminals and subversives, is now extending its activities to the field of crime in our schools.

So vastly has the situation changed from the school days of most of our citizens over 30, that many still do not fully appreciate the kind of crime which as penetrated them. As J.F. Baldacchino Jr. puts it in Human Events: "Today, when we talk about 'problem students,' we are not talking about the freckle-faced boy who dips little Susie's pigtail in the inkwell or little Johnny who ... on class time takes surreptitious bites from a bologna sandwich. Today we are talking about muggings and purse-snatchings. We are talking about shootings and stabbings and sexual assaults. We are talking about big-time dope peddling ... in our schools."

School crime is worst in New York City, and it is there that ACLU's New York affiliate has circulated a "Student Rights Handbook" telling students that they do not have to reply to school officials nor to police when questioned about offenses. The children are also urged to refuse their concent to searches of their persons or lockers. The booklet tells them that it is legally very difficult for school officials to suspend them from classes and impossible to expel them from school.

This amounts to open encouragement of crime in schools, at a time when it is massively threatening and often destroying the moral and physical health and even the lives of many children. Straight-thinking citizens should demand that the ACLU stay out of our schools.

Mental Changes In The Elderly

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb — What help is there for folks in their 60s who occasionally have mental blocks or confusion? Is it related to arteriosclerosis? What could a person do to avoid senile situations? Some of our parents have this condition and we would like to avoid it.

Dear Reader — Wouldn't we all like to avoid it and the other manifestations of aging. A certain number of these problems are caused by the fatty deposits in the arteries to the brain, the exact same disease that's responsible for heart attacks. Sometimes this results in blocking small arteries in the brain that produce what some have called little strokes. This in turn results in personality changes and loss of memory and mental confusion.

There are probably a number of other things which occur too in older people related to fundamental changes in the chemistry of their body. I believe it is important to think about these problems before you develop them, and you can do some things to help prevent the likelihood of having these problems. High on the list, of course, is preventing atherosclerosis, as you have suggested from your letter. This means, even if you're not afraid of having a heart attack, that you'd be well advised to follow a diet that helps to prevent atherosclerosis, specifically a diet sufficiently limited in calories to prevent obesity, limited in fats, particularly the saturated fats, and limited in cholesterol content. Also, a regular physical exercise program helps, as does the avoidance of unhealthy habits such as cigarette smoking.

To these factors I would add the often neglected field of psycho-social and mental functions. By this I mean structuring one's life for continued involvement with other people, thereby avoiding the frequent retirement type response associated with the mental and personality decline of the individual involved. There is some truth to the old idea that if you don't use it, you lose it. I suspect that memory exercises are just as important to the brain as are muscle exercises to the body. There has been precious little work done on this — such things as training one's memory, and then regularly exercising the memory.

There are lots of memory training books available. They aren't necessarily outstanding, but they do provide something which offers some value to people who are interested in trying to train their memory and keep their brain functioning at its optimal level.

Anyone actively using the brain and solving problems or dealing with mental exercises as a part of a way of life are at least doing this to some extent. This may explain why people remain mentally alert as long as they are active and literally don't stop mental activity when they retire. There are some medicines that have been found to be useful in improving one's mental functions in older age. Some of these are related to helping correct the chemical changes that occur in some people that affect brain function and, in this conjunction, are related to medicines that are sometimes used to combat depressions.

THERE'S something beautiful about a beauty contest. We've just discovered what it is — the girls.

All of which brings us to the Top O' Texas Beauty Pageant slated for the M.K. Brown Auditorium Saturday night, Aug. 11.

Serving as a judge in the pageant isn't going to be an easy job. There are some 35 pretty gals entered in the competition and from their photos you'd have to say they shape up like beauty contestants are supposed to shape up.

They will be judged on beauty, personality, poise and figure. That's why picking the pageant queen isn't going to be easy.

While all girls entered from Pampa and surrounding towns are eligible for the pageant honor, it has been pointed out that the Pampa girl ranking highest will represent the city in the Miss Wheatheart of the Nation contest at Perryton next month.

The 1973 queen will be crowned by Perryton's Miss Ronda Alexander, last year's Top O' Texas pageant queen.

TV personality Dean Kelly of Amarillo will act as master of ceremonies.

WE ALWAYS get a kick out of the belly-laugh humor belted out by the Rev. Leon Hill, Amarillo preacher-humorist.

Hill, who is a nationally-known speaker, was the emcee at the annual banquet of the Tri-State Senior Golf Association out at the country club the other night.

He was right on the button and funny as ever. The golfers and their guests enjoyed laugh after laugh as he moved through up-to-date jokes dealing with Watergate, Women's Lib, Kennedy and Nixon and so on.

There were a couple of his witticisms that particularly tickled the funnybone.

He said he was visiting a town not far from Amarillo where they were judging a contest and awarding prizes.

Third prize, he said, was a two-week all expense paid visit to an Amarillo motel. Second prize was a one-week all expense paid trip to the motel - and the first prize winner didn't have to go to Amarillo at all.

Another of Mr. Hill's funnies had to do with two men walking down the street. One asked the other:

"Who was that cute curly-headed blonde I saw you with last night?

"That was no curly-headed blonde, that was my son-in-law."

* * *

THIS WAS the fourth year Pampa has been host to the Tri-State senior golfers. They must be 50 or over to play in the tourney.

The annual banquet is their fun night of the week-long event. On that night they go all out and enjoy themselves.

There was a floor show and dance. No rock and roll, but music by a Dixieland band that played the old-time numbers popular when the seniors were in their late teens and early 20s.

And they made the most of it with the waltz, two-step, one-step and schottische. (Schottische? You've got to be kidding, man!)

Incidentally, some of the younger generation waitresses and ushers at the banquet wondered what was going on out there on the dance floor. The men actually had their arms around their partners and they were dancing in an embrace. Tsk, tsk, tsk!

Times have changed. It's just that the modern youngsters don't have as much fun dancing as today's "old folks" did 30 or 40 years ago. Couples danced together then. At a teenage dance today you get to wondering who is dancing with whom. (Teenage comment welcome).

But, the point we were trying to make here was that the senior golf association members had a ball while they were here and Pampa will be looking forward to their return in 1974.

THE GOLFERS are gone and now come the RCA cowboys and cowgirls for the summer's biggest rodeo attraction in the Texas Panhandle - the Top O' Texas Rodeo scheduled for four days in Pampa's rodeo arena at Recreation Park starting Wednesday.

Some of the nation's top cowboys will be here for the bronc riding and steer roping events.

Plenty of entertainment will be on hand for rodeo fans. A feature of this year's show will be the Pony Express Race.

There will be dancing nightly in the National Guard Armory to the tunes of Vonnie Dean and the Southern Belles, an all-girl orchestra direct from Las Vegas, Nev. The band also will play at the rodeo performances.

The rodeo will be preceded by the annual Kid Pony Show on Tuesday and, of course, one of the highlights will be the giant street parade at 4 p.m. Wednesday.

Rodeo week is here and if you like western entertainment in all its facets - there's nothing like the rodeo atmosphere that will be on tap this week in Pampa.

THE CITY Hall Cat gives us the underground information that Pampa taxpayers should brace themselves and get ready for at least a 10-cent increase in the city tax rate for fiscal 1973-74.

If the Cat knows what he's talking about that would hike the current rate of $1.72 to $1.82. And that means John Q. Property Owner would be paying $1.82 tax on every $100 worth of assessed property valuation. It would amount to an increased tax of $1 on every $1,000 valuation.

It must be made clear the increased tax rate is not yet in the mill. It is possible, the Cat says, but not probable, that the tax rate won't be increased.

That's what will be determined within the next few days when city commissioners meet with the city manager and learn what plans are available to solve the city's financial problems.

And, reports the Cat, the city really does have problems.

Agriculturally Speaking

Since we are on vacation at the deadline date for this column, I'm asking a close friend to fill in for me. The topic — "A Chronology of Chaos" by Chief Choctaw.

Late summer - Fall - 1972 - lots politics. Lots promises by both would - be Great White Fathers. A pony for every Indian, more wigwams. Big Government check for not planting corn, build dams for farmers, 100 percent parity for every Indian. Big wheat deal to communist countries. Some say good thing, some say bad. Some say Agriculture Chief Butz make good deal. Others say Butz lost pants.

Bad, bad Fall — farmers lose heap big corn, sorghum, and soybean crop in snow. Farmer keep quiet. No like talk about bad loss. Make banker nervous. Cattle people heap big loss new shipped in calves. Cattle man also quiet. Say his neighbors lost big. His not so bad. Used cow dealer by his place every day picking up dead cattle. Cattle man crazy. He tinks weather be better next week. Keep buying but lose up to fifteen percent. News media don't know cause cattleman quiet. Government men counting cattle, get no manure on boots, don't know. Cattle in feedlot stand still or gain less than two pounds day. Weather still bad; gain cost heap big. No feeder admit gain cost over forty cents. Mud belly deep. No place cattle to lay down. Same way all winter. Farmer lost much soybeans. Governemnt counters with white shoes don't know about big loss. After November, Inidan found out he gets no pony. Not so much pay check for not growing corn. Great White Father cut out REAP. Government no spend money fur dam. Farmer no give damn.

Late 1972 — bad mouthed packer buyers find out no fat cattle — start bidding up cattle — went to all time high. Not too smart County Agent talk to Rex McAnelly, manager of Moody Farms, they tink be good idee to invite Cost of Living Chief John Dunlop and rest of Council to see bad conditions of feedlot. Let Pale Face housewife squaw know of impending meat shortage. McAnelly talk to other cattle feeders. They don't think be good idee. Housewife might get mad and boycott. Let sleeping dog lie. Cattle people not smart like oil people. Oil people began telling Pal Face Squaw about fuel crises. Oil people holler wolf. Not let sleeping dog lie.

Early 1973 — cattle go up all time high. News man — have no Watergate. Push pampered, pretty Pale Face Squaw in front of camera. She likes publicity. Others follow. No poor, hungry, Pale Face Squaw raising cain. Mainly pampered Pale Face Squaws with $20 hairdo's that smell like Garden of Eden. Pale Face Squaws had never milk a cow, or shoveled you know what, or ran a gooseneck hoe all day. None of the Pale Face Squaws ever laid awake at night worrying whether blizzard would take the twenty thousand dollar load of new calves they signed a note for the day before.

Big Labor Chief Meany needle Great White Father to place ceiling on meat. Dumb Pale Face Squaw boycott. Farmer boycott too. Bring no cattle to town. Has no fat cattle. Big Chief Dunlop say might force farmer to bring cattle to town when no market. Bovina cattleman send telegram to Chief Dunlop and offer to sell cattle at cost. Chief Dunlop quiet. Great White Father placed ceiling on meat. Make statement if he had placed ceiling on live cattle, Pale Face Squaw would be standing in a line at meat counter to get meat instead of boycott line. Sounded good to housewife from left side of face, not so good to cattleman from right side of face.

Not too smart County Agent say not much difference whether the ceiling is either place. The effect is same. Nobody pay attention to not too smart County Agent. He said in April, packer get squeezed. Since April hundreds of packers, big and little, squeezed out business.

Not too smart County Agent say in April Pale Face Squaw be more worried about where she could buy meat than what it cost by Fall 1973.

Watergate take spotlight; Pale Face Squaw back to the beauty parlor. Farmer sent his cattle to grass and shut the feedlot gate. Placed 20 percent fewer cattle on feed in April, 10 per cent fewer in May and still fewer in June.

Broiler producers drown baby chicks after sending a box to every Congressman. Pork producer kill sow in family way. Dairy farms kill dairy cows. Dumb Pale Face Squaw storm Congress with banner that reads, milk for babies not profit.

Pale Face Squaw buys five pounds of potting soil for 70 cents. Buys five pounds of cornmeal for 59 cents. Raises cain cause cornmeal high. Farmer sayd dumb Pale Face Squaw wants every thing dirt cheap.

U.S. News and World Report in late June has headline "Food Shortages in Land of Plenty."

Not too smart County Agent reminds wife he told people in Agriculturally Speaking two years ago this would happen. Pretty smart County Agent wife say, "Not nice to say I told you so."

Now, today Pale Face Squaw, Chief Meany, Chief Dunlop, Great White Father and all Americans have learn what not too smart County Agent learned in a course in Ag Economics at Sing Sing on the Brazos, College Station back in the late 1940's. "Don't artificially thinker by Government action with the supply and demand of farm products." Let the price of beef tell the housewife how much to buy and the farmer how many more to put back in the feed lot. There is no better way.

Lots of people in high places tinks of farmer in overalls with straw in mouth. Don't know many farmers have college degrees. Many from great university they tell jokes about. Farmers not so dumb. Not so smart County Agent say watch for biggest unorganized withholding action ever staged by farmers until last control is lifted. Farmer smart — knows price will go up when controls lifted. He put another 100 pounds on feedlot cattle and wait. More packers shut doors. Pale Face housewife squeal like pig hung in fence. Politicians send up heap big smoke, little fire. Things get most chaotic. Controls lifted.

Not too smart County Agent tinks be too good for pampered Pale Face Squaw to have to pick cotton like his wife did. Hard work build character. He tinks good for Pale Face Squaw have only two dresses. He tinks be good for young bucks to live for 30 days like he live in 1930's in Montague County. No refrigerator — no beef. Let bucket down in well with milk to keep cool. Lots beans and sow belly. No money to buy leather for shoe sole. Wear meat rind, Walk three miles to school, bale hay with horse operated hay baler, push hay down with foot. Work all day, haul hay in night, build muscles and character.

Chief Choctaw hope don't get County Agent's wrist slapped too hard for telling truth.

END.

Crops Maturing Early

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (UPI) — A week of hot, dry weather moved many crops along to maturity and increased harvest operations in southern areas, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service said today.

Grain sorghum harvesting is increasing in South Texas and is also stretching into parts of Central Texas. Early yields in southern counties have been lower than expected.

Corn is being harvested in the Coastal Plains, and rice harvesting is also getting underway in that area. Some early peanuts are being harvested in South Texas.

Harvesting of hay and alfalfa remains active over the state with a third cutting underway in some counties. Yields have been excellent and abundant supplies of hay will be on hand this winter, the Extension Service said.

The Pecos cantaloupe harvest is in full swing, and onion harvesting is active in the Van Horn area. Onions, cucumbers and potatoes are being harvested in the High Plains. Watermelon supplies are increasing in Central and East Texas.

Fall vegetable planting is active in the Rio Grande Valley.

Flight of investors

DALLAS (UPI) — The small, individual investor is fleeing the stock market and has "lost confidence in the market, depressing prices," according to C.V. Wood, president of McCulloch Oil Co. of California. Wood said publicly-held companies have a vested interest in keeping individual investors because of the liquidity they provide.

Panhandle Water

By Felix W. Ryals

July and August of each year are usually uncomfortable months for irrigation farmers who are losing unused tail - water onto the land of a neighbor who does not want the surplus tail - water during this period. Sometimes the unwanted tail - water causes problems for the recipient. Both farmers have a problem and should the problem continue periodically over a period of years, it then causes a latent irritation that eventually causes ill will between the neighbors. This ill will is sharpened to the point until the recipient of the unwanted tail - water files on oral or written complaint with the Water Conservation District.

Usually following an oral complaint, the Water Conservation District sends a representative to the site of the complaint and observes the problem. Sometimes the offending party is contacted and the problem is taken care of within a reasonable length of time. Occasionally, the offender will agree to take some remedial steps that will eliminate the problem.

There are times when the offended party feels that a reasonable solution has not been offered; and will then file a written complaint that requires action by the Water Conservation District. The Water Conservation District, being a political subdivision of the State of Texas, has injunctive power to stop the waste of water and the resultant damage to the neighbor. This injunctive power is seldom used as the problem is almost always solved to the satisfaction of both parties.

There have been a number of instances where both parties were invited to appear before the Board of Directors at a public hearing.

Several oral complaints have been received by the District office during the month of July. An attempt is being made at the present time to solve the problems concerning the tail - water complaints. All irrigation farmers have been urged to install tail - water recovery systems or work out an agreement with some neighbor to make beneficial use of the surplus tail - water. Many farmers have installed excellent tail - water recovery systems and are re - using the water to great advantage. The "lay of the land" makes it almost impossible for some farmers to keep all of their produced irrigation water on their own lands.

The Water Conservation District has rules that prohibit the waste of water. The word "waste" was defined by the 51st and 53rd Legislature: "The flowing or producing of wells from an underground water reservoir when the water produced therefrom is not used for a beneficial purpose; willfully causing, suffering, or permitting underground water produced for irrigation or agricultural purposes to escape into any river, creek, or other natural watercourse, depression, or lake, reservoir, drain, on into any sewer, street, highway, road, road ditch, or upon the land of any other person than the owner of such well, or upon public land."

Rule 2 - Waste of the "Rules of Panhandle Ground Water Conservation District No. 3, South of the Canadian River" states:

(a) Underground Water shall not be produced within, or used within or without the District, in such a manner as to constitute waste as defined in Rule 1 hereof.

(b) Any person producing or using underground water shall use every possible precaution, in accordance with the most approved methods, to stop and prevent waste of such water.

(c) No person shall pollute or harmfully alter the character of the underground water reservoir of the District by means of salt water or other deleterious matter admitted from some other stratum or strata or from the surface of the ground.

(d) No person shall commit waste as that term is defined by Section (g), Rule I of the Rules of the Ground Water Conservation District No. 3.

Out of Sight... Counting Potatoes Still Only Six... New Crop for Texas?... Farm Safety Week.

A report from the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service confirms what every livestock and poultry producer knows: feed costs are out of sight.

Feed prices--the prices that livestock and poultry producers pay for feed which is fed to dairy cows, beef cows, and poultry--have doubled in recent months. Cottonseed meal, for example, averaged $11 per hundred pounds as of June 15; a year ago it was $5.20 per hundred pounds. Mixed dairy feed as of June 15 cost dairy farmers $110; a year ago it was only $75. Laying feed was $160 as of June 15; a year ago it was $86 per ton.

And while those prices to producers doubled, the prices farmers were getting during the past year are up 34 per cent on the average. Counting potatoes, only six commodities are above parity, in spite of recent price rises to producers.

No crop prices are above parity (except for potatoes). Wheat at $2.42 per bushel is almost a dollar below parity. Corn at $2.08 per bushel is 20 cents under parity. Cotton at 27 cents per pound is less than half of parity.

Hogs avearaged $36.50 per hundred pounds; this is only 40 cents above parity. Beef cattle at $45.30 average as of June 15 are $2 above parity; calves at $55.30 are almost $2 above parity; sheep at $15.90 are $3.70 above parity. Mohair as $2.30 per pound is almost a dollar above parity.

Eggs at 50.8 cents per dozen are 11 cents under parity. Milk is almost $2 under parity.

APPLES in Texas? To a small extent, apples are produced in a few counties in Texas. An ambitious program in Kimble, Kerr, and Mason counties is underway to produce apples on a profitable basis.

Growers in those counties this spring set out several thousand young trees which are expected to bear fruit within three years. In Gillespie County and around Fredericksburg and Stonewall, apples have been grown for 15 years and sold in the open markets.

Apples are also produced in Comanche and Montague counties and in small amounts in other counties throughout the state.

The Hill Country climate is nearly ideal for growing apples with cool winters, a long growing season and abundant sunshine. One drawback: deer-proof fencing must be installed around the orchards to keep out deer which would damage trees and could destroy a crop.

Experts say zero population growth in the United States can be achieved with a birth rate of 2.11 children per woman of child-bearing age; the U.S. average as the '70s began was 2.40.

DRESS REVIEW WINNERS - Pampa winners in the Gray County Dress Review July 23 were from left, Regina Atwood, 16, senior division, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Atwood, 2500 Mary Ellen; Sherry Courtney, 13, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mack Courtney, 2613 Rosewood, intermediate division; and Bobbie Gay Skaggs, 10, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Skaggs, 805 N. Christy, junior division.

On the way: low-fat cheese

By Thomas Brooks, Jr.

LARAMIE, Wyo. (UPI) — University of Wyoming dairy specialists are developing a low-fat cheese making process that could put tasty cheese on the dinner tables of dieters.

Dr. Darrell D. Deane, professor of dairy manufacturing, and Edward T. Dolan, superintendent of the UW dairy plant, are in their second year of developing the process. They expect the project to take four years.

"We can make the cheese," Deane said. "Our big hangup at the present time is it takes eight months or so to cure it."

Deane said the secret to making low-fat cheese was increasing the water content from about 40 per cent to nearly 50 per cent as a replacement for the fat removed.

"We're really basing the process on the usual commercial process except that we're trying to introduce more moisture," Deane said. "When you reduce the fat content, the cheese becomes quite corky and has a very harsh taste. We call it crumbly."

Golfing gals inspire . . .

Something New In Women's Clubs

By Helen Hennessy
NEA Women's Editor

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Golf's the game for gals galore. "More than two million women are involved in the active golf scene," said Don A. Rossi, executive director of the National Golf Foundation. But men and women play the game somewhat differently.

A man hits a golf ball about 225 yards on his drive and then has about 150 yards to get to the green on a par-4 hole. The average woman golfer has to play golf by wit rather than strength. She hits her drive 150 yards, the second about 130 yards. Still 75 yards short of the green, she's got to swing a lot of short, tricky finesse shots to reach the green. With more in-between shots, a woman plays a shorter game of golf.

"It's a game of feel rather than of actual power," said LPGA pro, Louise Suggs. And here are some fine points she feels a woman can use to improve her golf game.

To master the short game, try not to be overanxious and think you can hit the ball completely to the hole. Instead, consider the possibilities of rolling. If you are hitting uphill, hit a little further. Downhill, don't hit quite so hard. Never try to put backspin on the ball. Let the grooves on the clubhead do that for you. Striking the ball properly will automatically put a backspin on the ball.

The most important single factor in the short game is selecting the right club. And, if a woman's going out to buy golf clubs, this year more than ever before, she's got a lot to consider.

Overwhelmed by the phenomenal growth and demands of women golfers, golf companies have been busy consulting LPGA pros and suddenly there's a whole new spectrum of feminine, colorful ladies golf equipment in the pro shops and sports catalogues. The days of "token" women's golf clubs are over. The National Golf Foundation reports that last year 423,000 women played at private clubs, 877,000 at daily fee courses and 928,000 at municipal courses. The Ladies Pro Golf Association tour soared from five in the '30s to 60 members in the '70s.

"While our statistics show that women outnumber men in joining the ranks of the nation's golfers over the past decade," said Rossi, "their impact goes beyond mere members. Women now in their second and third stages of golf have drastically changed their recreational philosophy as well as how they play the game."

In the past women felt that extra money in the budget should go to getting their husbands the best golf clubs. But mobility, changes in family orientation and increased leisure time have freed women from feeling guilty about spending money on her own recreation equipment.

Beginner or pro, a woman today has to be aware and informed to select the clubs that best suit her. To make a valuable purchase she should take into consideration her own strength, size, weight, length of arms and hand size as they relate to her ability to swing a golf club. According to Toney Penna, long-time golf professional and designer of his own line of clubs, "A woman changes with age and so should her clubs."

In other words, the club you played with at 25 may not fit your individual strength and style at 40.

A complete line of woods and irons are now available for women. The Super Blade, designed to help the ladies, provides the largest power area of any iron made. It is ideally suited to women because by shortening the hosel this weight is now distributing through the clubhead's hitting area giving greater playability, power and clubhead thrust.

"If the shaft doesn't fit a woman's swing velocity, the golf club could be useless," Toney Penna said. He's a firm believer that no woman golfer can play to full potential unless her clubs are made to personal specifications.

Cognizance of the ladies' market came to most golf manufacturers about nine years ago when Betty Jameson and Cybil Griffen were great names in golf. Pampering led to design modification. Here's what women's force in the marketplace generated.

Former Pampan Preforming With Colorado Opera Group

A 1966 Pampa High School graduate, Mrs. Dennis Michael Cate, the former Suzanne Benton, is appearing this summer with the Colorado Opera Festival in Colorado Springs.

Mrs. Cate was selected for the Festival's apprentice singer program by Donald P. Jenkins, Colorado College, who is musical conductor for the season's productions.

SUZANNE BENTON CATE
...performs in operas

On July 12 and 13 she performed in the presentation of Kurt Weill's "The Rise and Fall of the City of Mahagonny." The text of this production is by the German playwright Bertolt Brecht and is both an intense, bitter, sardonic account of decaying morality and a vastly entertaining musical - theatrical work employing jazz idioms.

This is the third season of the Colorado Opera Festival, a program sponsored by Colorado College in cooperation with the Colorado Springs Choral Society.

Three major productions are being given which employ large casts and full orchestras. The first was Rossini's "The Italian Girl in Algiers," which was presented on June 28 and 29; the second, "The Rise and Fall of the City of Mahagonny," and on July 26 and 27, Mozart's "The Magic Flute."

The opera workshop and apprentice singer program enable students to earn both undergraduate and graduate credit. The purpose of the Colorado Opera Festival is to provide professional and inventive productions of important and sometimes rarely performed works chosen on the basis of their musical and dramatic worth.

The greater proportion of singers and orchestra personnel are drawn from Colorado Springs, Denver, Boulder and Pueblo. However, key personnel are brought from all over the country.

Mrs. Cate had the soprano role in the apprentice singer production of "Sunday Excursion" on July 25. The year Mrs. Cate received her Bachelor of Music degree from Texas Tech University at Lubbock she was awarded the outstanding performance certificate.

Following her graduation, she was selected a graduate assistant on the music faculty at Texas Tech. She was the winner of the NATS competition for the graduate division in 1971 in Lubbock.

In 1972 she was awarded a teaching assistantship in the graduate school at the University of Colorado in Boulder and is continuing her graduate work there.
