CENTRAL APPRAISAL BOARD. The newly elected members of the Gray County Tax Appraisal Board ponder items in their organizational meeting Friday at Carver Educational Center. New appraisal board organizes

The Gray County Appraisal District board of directors met for the first time Friday, spending their lunch hour, electing officers, organizing and planning items to be considered on their next agenda.

Board member Dr. Robert Lyle spent much of the session lobbying for the hiring of the city-school tax assessor-collector Charles Rand to serve as Chief Appraiser of the central appraisal district.

The five recently-elected appraisal board members were apparently shaky on how to conduct the meeting and the actual authorities the board will have.

Jimmy Wilkerson commented that he thought the selection of a chief appraiser was a priority item.

Lyle said, "Charlie (Rand) mentioned to me that with the addition of one appraiser on his staff the city-school tax office could do it (the district's appraisals) with his staff. It would save us a tremendous amount over hiring someone else from the outside to do it."

Lloyd Hunt, the board member from McLean, said that Rand had called him, before Hunt knew he had been elected to the board, and mentioned he was interested in becoming the chief appraiser. Hunt said Rand had contacted McLean school officials, also, saying he was interested in the job.

Bill Gething of the appraisal board suggested asking former city-school tax collector Dwain Walker if he would be interested in becoming the chief appraiser.

Lyle said he had talked with Walker and Walker had told him he prefers business management, rather than working with tax appraising.

Other members discussed the possibility of advertising for a chief appraiser.

Lyle commented, "There aren't that many qualified appraisers left. All the really good ones have all got jobs. It was my personal thought when helping to select Charles Rand that this man would be in the position to take this job (chief appraiser). To find someone who would be qualified so that we wouldn't have to go through the turmoil of selecting a new appraiser. I think we should hire Rand or contract the city-school tax office."

Board member Carl Kennedy asked Lyle the procedure they followed to hire Rand.

"We (a steering committee formed of Lyle, O. M. Prigmore, and Ed Myatt) interviewed three or four men. Dwain (Walker) asked around to see if any one qualified was interested in taking his job. We then made the recommendation of Charles Rand to the school board and to the city commission. They voted and made the final decision on it," Lyle explained.

The steering committee of Lyle, Prigmore, and Myatt was formed by the City of Pampa and Pampa Independent School District more than two years ago to study the feasibility of combining the two entities' tax offices.

The combination was completed in late 1979, with the tax offices being removed from city hall, and relocated to the school district's administration building in Carver Educational Center.

Since that time, the tax office has been apparently groomed to take over the duties of the central tax appraisal district when the nine county taxing units finally agreed to form into a single appraisal district.

Despite the fact that the entities agreed in September to form a central appraisal district by 1983, the 1981-1982 school district budget includes the building of a $625,000 tax and administration building.

The five board members were sworn into office by Gray County Clerk Wanda Carter. Board members are Jimmy Wilkerson, Dr. Robert Lyle, and Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy, all of Pampa, Lloyd Hunt of McLean, and Bill Gething of rural Pampa.

The board members elected Wilkerson as chairman, with Hunt chosen as secretary.

One of the first actions of the board was approval of the application for an employer's identification number to be filed with the U.S. government.

State Property Tax Board officials had advised tax officials earlier that the number was necessary before the appraisal board could receive state funds.

Rand told Wilkerson that a permanent number would not be obtained in time for the state funding, but a temporary number would be assigned to the board "in a matter of days," Wilkerson told the board.

The board members agreed unanimously to authorize advertising for the bank depository for the tax appraisal board, and to consider applications and employment of a chief appraiser in the next meeting.

An afternoon meeting time was approved by the board, but the members decided to postpone setting a date for the next meeting until adequate time had passed for advertising for the bank depository.

Kidnappers photograph victim's body to fool his relatives

By SAMUEL KOO
Associated Press Writer

ROME (AP) — Italians expressed outrage Saturday at a gruesome new trick by the nation's kidnap industry: the 81-year-old victim was shot to death and frozen, then "made up" put in a chair and photographed as if alive to fool relatives into paying a $500,000 ransom.

Police also seized papers showing the abductors' planned to kidnap Italian actress Virna Lisi and other actors and businessmen, whom they did not identify.

A spokesman for the Rome prosecutor's office told the Italian news agency ANSA that the office has been flooded with angry calls from people demanding prompt and harsh punishment for the kidnappers, who have been arrested.

Franco Ferrarotti, a sociologist, told the news agency the macabre episode "should sound an alarm bell throughout the government... It's one crime that should not be dismissed as another episode in daily violence in Italy."

Police said the case came to light after they freed another kidnap victim and arrested her six abductors last week. They said the victim was able to help them find where the same kidnappers had buried the body of Giovanni Palombini, a millionaire coffee magnate missing since April 17.

His body was discovered Wednesday buried under a tree outside the village of Valmontone, 25 miles south of Rome, police said.

Palombini's family paid a $500,000 ransom two months ago after receiving photographs of Palombini "showing

West explains reason against licensing school

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Staff Writer

Efforts of the Texas Department of Human Resources to license the Pampa Baptist Academy of the Pampa Baptist Temple here, and allegations of child neglect and abuse at the facility has thrust the Temple's pastor Jerry West and his convictions into the glaring lights of publicity.

Finding his beliefs on trial, in effect, West has explained to The Pampa News his reasoning behind refusing to allow the school to be licensed by the state. In doing this, West has also defined the fundamentalist approach to the Bible to which he says he is dedicated.

West, a small man, said he was attending Temple Junior College in Temple, Texas, training to become an auto mechanic, when he "surrendered to preach."

He wanted to become "a Bible preacher," he says.

"There's a big difference between a man who stands in the pulpit and talks and a man who preaches the word of God," West explains. "A preacher of the word of God does not express his opinion. He takes the Bible literally. He preaches the Bible without compromise. That is what a fundamentalist is."

At God's direction after the completion of his theological training, West says he took his wife and small daughter to Mexico, Mo. to establish a church. He began preaching simply to his wife and child in their home, but later, the congregation grew to 30 and moved into a church building.

After a time when the church, now called "The Old Country Baptist Church," became firmly established, the Wests returned to his hometown of Belton, Texas, where he says he helped rebuild the Calvary Baptist Church which had recently burned.

In March 1979, the West family arrived in Pampa where West took over the pastor duties from John Hulse.

Hulse began the day care center, licensed by the Department of Human Resources, at the Pampa Baptist Temple. West says the academy started, under West's direction, in September 1979, with Larry Taylor as principal.

"Things began happening after awhile, that I didn't agree with as a pastor," West remembers.

When a school is run as a part of a church, then it is to be run by the church, through the church and by the authority of the church. Not anything outside of that," he commented.

The preacher says he did not understand at that time what a license meant. "But I was soon to find out," he adds.

West defines a license from the Texas Department of Human Resources as meaning "total control of every thing that has to do with the school."

He says he began questioning the licensing when DHR officials instructed him to repair two holes in the church carpet, to remove the lawn mower from the church's front lawn, and to install a separate phone for the academy.

But the final straw, he says, is when he was told to have the goldfish inspected by a veterinarian.

"I was complying all along until they got ridiculous," West says. He says he stopped, "when they came in and started telling me that we had to get the fish inspected."

West says he believes that the end result of church-sponsored programs being licensed would be licensing of the church itself.

"It is headed toward Communist control. It is the same type of control that goes on in Communist lands. There the church has freedom of religion as long as religion complies with their way of thinking," the preacher says.

"The United States, if it had any common sense, could see that we are going socialist," West says, adding he has felt this way since he was a teenager.

"I would go to jail rather than close that school," West says. "This is no martyr's position. It is something I believe in and will die for. That is not a martyr. A martyr enjoys it. I don't."

The pastor adds, "The men of this church have all ready promised God that this place will stay open to the last man."

West continues, "We are not looking for trouble. But they brought it to us. This started out of my naivete by not understanding what a license was. If I had known, I never would have had a license or anything to do with one."

West says his license means the right to exist. He explains the word "license" came from the Latin word "licet" which was the word used for all religions recognized by Rome. He adds if religion one practiced (such as Christianity) was not recognized by Rome in that time, the person would be literally thrown to the lions.

The U.S.A. was founded on the right of churches to have schools and freedom of religion," West comments.

The preacher tells about a young lawyer, Patrick Henry, who was riding through Culpepper, Va. in March 1775. He saw a man, tied to a whipping post, who had apparently been whipped to death. Henry, furious about the sight, was told that the man was a Baptist preacher who had committed the wrong of preaching on Sunday, and teaching school during the week.

The next Sunday, West says, Henry mounted that man's pulpit in St. John's Church in Richmond, Va. and said, "Is life so dear and peace so sweet to be purchased with the chains of slavery? I think not. As for me, give me liberty or give me death."

The pastors comments, "You know those words. But few know the story behind them."

West adds that preachers taught the schools in the United States up until 1837. "Government schools were brought from Prussia by Horace Mann. We were sold a bill of goods by a foreigner."

Local residents support licensing of day care centers by the state

A group of at least 97 Pampa parents recently mailed letters to the Department of Human Resources (DHR) in Austin, in support of the state agency's licensing of day care centers.

The letters were apparently in response to recent legal proceedings directed by the DHR against the Pampa Baptist Academy, sponsored by the Pampa Baptist Temple here. The state agency filed for an injunction against the academy, which cares for infants through 12-year-olds, in 223rd District Court here alleging the facility is operating without a license.

Jerry West, pastor of the Pampa Baptist Temple, maintains that since the academy is church-sponsored it is exempt from state licensing laws.

In the letters to the DHR, the parents thank the organization for its concern about the "well-being of our children."

"It would be a sad day for parents if child-care facilities were not required to be licensed. There would be no standards and no one checking to see if good child care was provided. When a facility is licensed it tells us as parents that the facility meets your standards of child care," the letters state.

Currently, Jim Means, assistant pastor of the Pampa Baptist Temple and employee at the academy, is charged with allegedly spanking a 13-month-old baby causing bruises on its buttocks, thigh and lower back.

Means was arrested on child assault charges on Sept. 25 in connection with the incident reported by the baby's mother on Sept. 18.

Trial for Means has been set in Gray County Court for 9:30 a.m. Nov. 20.

Means, who first retained Pampa lawyer David Holt as his attorney, later dismissed Holt and is in the process of employing the services of attorney John Warner.

Warner said in county court docket call Tuesday that his client "was very interested in a jury trial." He said much of the testimony to be heard would be that which was presented in a district court hearing on the DHR injunction on Oct. 23.

District Judge Don Cain, presiding over 223rd District Court, ruled after the six-hour hearing Oct. 23 that a restraining order placed on the academy be lifted. Having just entered the case 10 days before the hearing, Cain said he was not prepared to make a ruling on the injunction and gave both parties involved until late December to file briefs stating their positions in the matter.

The letters of support to the Department of Human Resources are the first public indications of support of the licensing enforcers.

At the injunction hearing last week, about 150 parishioners and supporters of Jerry West and the Pampa Baptist Temple paraded to the Gray County Court House and filled the district court benches, overflowing into the aisles and hall outside. West first predicted 1,000 supporters would be on hand for the hearing.

Pampa native researches effects of drugs

By ELAINE W. LEDBETTER
Guest Writer

Dr. Michael E. Maguire of Cleveland, Ohio has returned from Los Angeles where he was invited to speak at the annual meeting of the Society for Neuroscience.

Maguire is a 1963 graduate of Pampa High School and the son of Judge J.B. Maguire and the late Mrs. Maguire.

Dr. Maguire is Assistant Professor of Pharmacology, School of Medicine, Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland.

His address was on his recent research concerning the effect of various drugs on the nervous system. This work, done in collaboration with Dr. Anne Adorn of the Department of Psychiatry, has shown that drugs used primarily in the treatment of schizophrenia affect the nervous system in ways more complex than was previously thought.

Regarding this he said, "We are not in the business of designing new drugs, but now that we are more aware of what the drugs are doing, drugs can be designed that will be far more specific in their treatment of nervous disorders. This, hopefully, will eliminate many of the undesirable side effects of drugs now in use."

Dr. Maguire's major research interest lies in the area of how a cell regulates and or controls its response to the stimulus basic biological problem that has a multitude of applications. For example, patients develop a tolerance to certain drugs. This requires increasing dosage for effect. Such dependence appears only after repeated administration of the drug. What I am trying to determine is how the cell alters its future response to the drug to bring about this dependence.

Continuing, Maguire said, "Aside from therapeutics with drugs such changes in cell response are occurring all the time in normal human beings. Certain forms of diabetes are caused by a failure of cells to respond to insulin rather than from a lack of insulin. If we can learn what factors determine the response of cells we will have made a great stride in medicine."

At present, Maguire is attempting to perfect the technique to photograph with the electron microscope the protein in the cell's outer membrane which actually binds the hormone or drug when it is introduced. He considers this to be of crucial importance because he can then study the protein before and after stimulation and perhaps determine how it regulates its response to the drug or hormone.

Maguire and his students have shown that a single hormone may act on two different aspects of a cell's function in two different ways. He said, "Our work here has shown that the magnesium content of the cell is regulated. The question now is the importance of magnesium as a regulating agent itself."

In 1967 Maguire received his B.A. degree in biochemistry from Rice University and in 1973 he earned his Ph.D. degree from Indiana University. He did post doctoral work in the Department of Pharmacology, School of Medicine, at the University of Virginia.

During the year of 1975-76 he served as an instructor in pharmacology at the University of Virginia and in the fall of 1976 joined the faculty at Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland.

He has received numerous fellowships and awards including the Faculty Development Award in Basic Pharmacology from the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association, 1977-79. Currently he is an established investigator for the American Heart Association. He has been the recipient of nine research grants totalling over half a million dollars and has published some thirty papers on his research.

In addition to teaching, Maguire directs a laboratory employing seven full-time and five part-time personnel plus two technicians.

When asked about the rewards of his profession, he replied, "I do what I do because I am happy. I would not consider doing anything else. Research is my life, not a job at all. It is challenging, boring, exciting, frustrating, exhilarating and a bit terrifying."

He summed up his work very well when he concluded, "Research is like figuring out a puzzle trying to fill in the blanks. But it seems that each time we fill in a blank space, the puzzle changes shape and has even more blank space than when we started."

Among the frustrations he encounters are fighting administrative red tape and the large number of hours. See PAMPANATIVE, Page 2

Solidarity defying parliament

WARSAW, Poland (AP) - The Polish parliament on Saturday called for an immediate halt to wildcat strikes it said were "destroying the country," and warned of tougher measures if the appeal is ignored. But Solidarity officials in several strike-bound cities reacted with disdain and defiance.

"A resolution is just a resolution," said a Solidarity union spokesman in western Zielona Gora province where about 150,000 workers occupied factories and plants for the ninth day. Another 150,000 workers were striking elsewhere in Poland, and more strikes were planned.

"We are an independent, self-governing union and will continue to strike," the official said, refusing to give his name.
 In addition to the union spokesman in Zielona Gora, strike leaders in Zyrardow, a textile center west of here and in southern Sandomierz said they would remain on strike until their leaders had time to assess the resolution.

All 440 members of the parliament, or Sejm, voted in favor of the measure, which said that "faced with a threat to our national existence... the Sejm calls for an immediate halt to all strike actions which are destroying the country."

Warning that Poland was in a time of "greatest need" for labor peace, the resolution also firmly stated that the government would not pay the strikers for time lost to walkouts, and warned:

"If the call of the Sejm proves ineffective, if a state of higher necessity for the existence of the nation arises, the Sejm will consider a proposal to equip the government with such legal means as are required by the situation."

Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, who is Poland's premier, defense minister and Communist Party chief, said in introducing the resolution Friday that if Solidarity ignored it he would submit a draft for a law to use "extraordinary means of action to protect citizens and state."

He did not elaborate, but such a law would effectively strip Solidarity of the right to strike it won during labor upheavals 14 months ago that created the first union free of party control in the Soviet bloc. This right has never been codified in Polish law.

In an apparent effort to inform the public of the urgent need for an end to strikes, which have sorely aggravated Poland's $27 billion debt to the West, the government's press office published a lengthy "strike digest" in the party daily Trybuna Ludu.

Trudeau, premiers to discuss constitution

Canada's long-running constitutional crisis comes down to what may be a final round of bargaining Monday among the divided country's top political leaders.

Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau and the premiers of the 10 Canadian provinces, sitting down together for the first time in more than a year, will try to find some ground for compromise on the future shape of a Canadian constitution.

Eight of the 10 provincial leaders have opposed Trudeau's sweeping constitutional reform proposals, describing them as a bid to centralize power in the now relatively decentralized Canadian confederation. But both the prime minister and some provincial premiers are showing signs of new flexibility.

Trudeau, who wants a new constitution to cap his 13-year career as prime minister, took an optimistic stance at a news conference Friday.

refusing to comment on what he would do if this week's open-ended negotiations fail.

"I just think we're close enough to an agreement that I'm not looking beyond that," he said.

But his chief aide on constitutional matters, Justice Minister Jean Chretien, has been more blunt, declaring, "We intend to finish the job" whether or not the provinces reach agreement with the federal government.

"Finishing the job" means pushing the Trudeau package through the Canadian Parliament in the coming days and sending it to the British Parliament for action.

Most Canadians want to end their anachronistic constitutional ties to Britain, but they disagree on how to do it.

The constitution now is the British North America Act of 1867, an act of the British Parliament that brought the provinces together as the Canadian confederation.

When the British sought to hand over full constitutional responsibility to Canada in 1931, the Canadians could not agree among themselves on a method for making future amendments, and final responsibility remained with the London Parliament. A practice developed whereby constitutional amendments would be adopted by the British once all Canadian provinces agreed to them.

The wrangling over bringing home the constitution continued in federal-provincial meetings over the decades. After a final fruitless conference in September 1980, Trudeau produced a reform plan he said he would present to the British even without the provinces' agreement.

Hussein faces questions about Soviet overtures

WASHINGTON (AP) - King Hussein of Jordan, in his first White House visit with President Reagan, faces questioning about Jordan's apparent interest in buying weapons from the Soviet Union.

Hussein also is likely to use his meetings this week to advocate adoption of an eight-point Mideast peace plan offered by Prince Fahd of Saudi Arabia, possibly with a personal twist of his own.

The Saudi plan has encouraged some American officials by accepting the principle that the people of the region should be permitted to "live in peace." But Israeli leaders say the plan's call for creation of a Palestinian state - with its capital at Jerusalem - would endanger Israel's longtime security.

Hussein's overtures to Moscow were raised by a senior U.S. official who briefed reporters about the visit. It is the seventh face-to-face encounter between the Jordanian monarch, now 45, and an American president in a series of meetings dating to Eisenhower administration.

The official and other U.S. figures who discussed Hussein's visit asked that they not be identified by name.

Beginning Monday, Hussein's full schedule includes meetings with Reagan, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, and members of Congress.

"We believe that the security relationship between the United States and Jordan would best be served by strengthening the traditional arms relationship with the United States."

the official said in discussing Hussein's visit.

He contended that for more than two decades the United States has reliably supplied Jordan with the weapons of self defense - tanks, aircraft, and improved Hawk ground-to-air missiles - and that the relationship has benefited both nations.

County officials to discuss lawsuit

Gray County Commissioners will discuss what action will be taken on the $2 million lawsuit filed by the family of slain 6666 ranch foreman James Grandstaff.

Gray County is among several local entities including the city of Pampa, the city of Borger, the counties of Gray, Hutchinson and Carson and five law enforcement officers who were served with the lawsuit.

Each entity has 20 days from the date the suit was filed to answer the suit. The Gray County Commissioners will try to decide which attorney to use to answer the suit.

In other business commissioners will also consider a plat for Kentucky Acres Unit 2 and consider a change in improvements for Farm to Market Road 2300.

The commissioners will discuss a discount for county taxes and will also convene as the Board of Equalization.
 A request to improve the water drainage on Gwendolyn Street will be heard and a letter from the TAC regarding improvements to Perry-Lefors Airport will be discussed.

Commissioners will authorize advertising bids for oil and gas leases on League 290 on land in Gaines county and for cleaning services for the Gray County courthouse.

Sweden says sub crew may defect

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) - After five days of being stranded, the crew of the grounded Soviet submarine is getting edgy and there is a possibility that some of them, including the skipper, may try to defect, Swedish officials said Saturday.

"The atmosphere aboard is very tense and irritated," said army Col. Jean-Carlos Danckwardt. "We cannot exclude that some of the crew may seek asylum." Other officers said the captain was not being allowed ashore since Soviet officials feared his defection.

The crew of about 56 has been under heavy guard since Tuesday by Swedish marines in battle dress and commandos armed with submachine guns keeping watch from nearby Swedish warship.

They have also been subjected to what one Swedish military officer described as "sort of psychological warfare" by combat units holding small-sized drill on surrounding islands, only 100 yards away.

At the same time, a Soviet flotilla of two destroyers, two tugs, one submarine salvage vessel and a supply vessel cruised nearby just outside Sweden's 12-mile territorial limit.

Another submarine was detected Saturday close to the territorial limit and southwest of the grounded Soviet sub, but withdrew, a Defense Headquarters spokesman reported.

He said the second submarine remained under water and at least two Swedish helicopters lowered hydrophones to make contact with the craft. After the contact was made, the submarine turned away from Swedish waters and there was no reason to pursue it, the spokesman added.

He called the contacts "routine procedures" and said there were a number of foreign submarines constantly operating in the Baltic. The helicopter crews could not determine the model or size of the second submarine, the spokesman said.

Sweden has refused to refloat the submarine until the ship's skipper comes ashore with his log and the Soviet Union provides a full explanation for the incident - not just an apology.

The sub is a 220-foot-long diesel-powered vessel that Swedish experts said is specially modified for intelligence missions. It is aground on rocks in the Baltic just off Sweden's southeastern coast, in an off-limits area 9 1/2 miles from the Karlskrona naval base.

By 48 percent to 39 percent, respondents said they think it is more important to keep wilderness lands in this country as they are rather than develop the oil, coal and other mineral resource in such lands.

And by a 52 percent to a 37 percent response, the poll said Americans approve of laws designed to protect the environment even if it means paying higher prices for industrial products.

County tax discount continues to Nov. 13 has compiled a book citing 43 actions or proposed actions listed as "Watt's wrongs."

These include Watt's plans for fewer purchases of park land, his push to speed up ocean oil and gas leasing, efforts to expand mining on public lands and Interior Department budget cuts in the areas of enforcement, planning and resource inventories.

In the wake of criticism, some of those proposals have been withdrawn, including one which coastal states warned would give the interior secretary too much control over offshore oil drilling.

In the latest poll, 77 percent said they had not heard or read enough about Watt to approve or disapprove of the job he is doing as interior secretary. Six percent said they approve of the job he is doing, 14 percent disapproved and 3 percent were not sure.

However, by 49 percent to 39 percent, respondents said they think protecting the environment is more important than building a needed oil refinery, a new pipeline or some other

Reagan's lowest job rating on environment

By TIMOTHY HARPER
 Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) - President Reagan's job rating for handling environmental issues lags behind his overall performance rating, according to the latest Associated Press-NBC News poll.

Thirty percent of the 1,598 adults telephoned Oct. 25-26 in the scientific random sampling said they think Reagan is doing a good or excellent job in dealing with environmental issues.

Thirty-seven percent said he is doing only a fair job in dealing with environmental issues, while 24 percent said poor and 9 percent were not sure.
 Reagan's environmental approval rating was well below his overall rating, where 51 percent said he is doing a good or excellent job as president.

Reagan and James Watt, his interior secretary, have been bitterly criticized by environmental groups. The Sierra Club collected a million signatures on petitions seeking Watt's dismissal, and the 45,000-member Wilderness Society consumed in writing grant proposals to fund his research laboratory.

When not teaching or directing his research staff or conferring with his graduate students and post-doctor fellows, Maguire enjoys backpacking and canoeing and Cleveland's numerous cultural activities. He is especially interested in the Cleveland Orchestra and is a voting member of the Ballet Corporation.

Maguire bought a house which he has remodeled and redecorated and he even finds time to tend a small garden.

He has some advice for young people interested in research regardless of what particular field. "It is not a job, but a way of life. One must expect to work very hard, spend much time in the laboratory and to have or not have certain things. If one is willing to expend the effort the rewards are great, though often intangible and not monetary."

As to what courses to take, he said, "Bluntly put, take all the chemistry, physics and math possible. Note that I deliberately omitted biology. It is important in general but not in specifics. No one today can understand even basic biology without a sound foundation in chemistry and math. If you have that you can learn the biology, but if you do not have the chemistry and math you will not be able to learn enough biology to do much good."

He cited an example from his own laboratory. "In my work the questions we are asking are basic biological ones. However, without a strong background in chemistry and math we cannot begin to study these questions nor answer them."

Then Maguire made a most significant comment for aspiring research scientists. It was this, "A common fallacy with non-researchers is that experiments are relatively easy and that it is thinking up the right experiment to do that is hard work. It's really exactly the opposite. The experiment that is crucial is usually painfully obvious. The hard part is trying to figure out how to do it with the proper controls so that it will tell you what you need to know and to something else. Unfortunately we spend 95 percent of our time doing experiments to tell us how to do another experiment that is a lot closer to the truth."

While a student at Pampa High School, Maguire was a member of the National Honor Society, Quill and Scroll, Tri-Sci club and Theatians. During his senior year he served as president of the Future Teachers of America and as co-editor of the school literary publication "Prairie Gold."

FOUND INNOCENT. Vickie Daniel smiles outside the Pampa County Courthouse after being found not guilty in the death of her husband, former Texas House Speaker Price Daniel Jr., Friday as she is surrounded by her attorneys and news media representatives. (AP Laserphoto)

Judge describes verdict as 'a roll of the dice'

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — Vickie Daniel gambled and won.

Abandoning a largely sympathetic jury, she surrendered her fate to a judge they call "Easy Leonard" because as he's as tough as a boarding-house steak.

"A roll of the dice," admitted Leonard Giblin, whose lifelong goal was to be a state cop and not a state judge.

But Friday Judge Giblin acquitted the blonde Dairy Queen waitress of murdering her husband, Price Daniel Jr., former speaker of the Texas House of Representatives.

It was a verdict, said Giblin, that raised the hairs on the back of his 40-year-old neck.

"As you know," he said, his hands still trembling, "I'm so law and order oriented that I could hardly say the words, 'not guilty.'"

"I noticed that," quipped lead defense lawyer Jack Zimmermann in a semi-private conversation with Giblin immediately after the ruling.

"You've got a lot of guts, Judge," he added with a "farewell handshake."

The judge was hardly unaware that Daniel was the namesake son of a former Texas governor and a descendant of the founding fathers of this historic little hamlet.

Nor could he overlook the presence of the family patriarch seated on the front row of his courtroom.

Throughout the four-week trial, Zimmermann argued vigorously that the family pitted its money and power against his poor-but-proud carhop client.

He pointed out that the victim's sister, Jean Daniel Murph, sought, got, but lost a child custody lawsuit even before the murder trial could be conducted.

"Only in Liberty County could that happen," Zimmermann said in his closing argument, causing a stir among the 300 courtroom spectators.

"If it had been somebody else, would all this even have come about?" he asked rhetorically.

Someone did wonder aloud, if Price had "accidentally" shot Vickie, "Would we be here at all?"

At any rate, Giblin said his decision was not so much guts as the prosecution's inability to prove its murder case.

"I just couldn't get past reasonable doubt," said the chain-smoking Beaumont judge. "There were many factors."

In a trial replete with decidedly more firecrackers than bombshells, the 11th hour jury waiver stands out as a remarkably bold and pivotal move.

As the judge said, had the "roll of the dice" been snake-eyes, the results could have been devastating.

An informal poll of jurors after their dismissal Wednesday confirmed that most favored acquittal. But a hung jury appeared a virtual certainty.

When the surprise waiver was announced, Vickie, 34, said: "One way or the other, it must end."

There now would be no hung jury. Just guilt or innocence, and conviction carried a maximum penalty of life in prison. From Vickie's standpoint, that was a lousy alternative to a mistrial.

"The law in this case is very complicated and I don't know if a lay jury could have grasped it," Zimmermann said after the verdict.

"Of course, if I had been wrong, it would have been the end of my legal career," he added.

Chief prosecutor Carroll Wilborn, who approved the jury waiver, also was concerned that jurors might not understand the legal principles involved in the state's case.

"We do not have to prove motive or premeditation...or even that she intended to kill him," Wilborn argued.

Former priest parlays broken shoelace into a million dollar Texas business

By MACK SISK
Associated Press Writer
SAN ANTONIO, Texas
(AP) — A former priest who broke his shoe lace on a tennis court in Milwaukee 19 years ago has parlayed that accident into an athletic shoe company that projects $10 million in sales next year.

Tom Adams, 49, said that his unusual Kaepa sports shoes, which have two laces instead of one, have met with such success in the San Antonio area that he soon will begin marketing the unusual footwear nationwide.

"If we could do half as well in other cities as we have done in San Antonio, we'd be the hottest thing on the market," said Adams, a tennis buff who stumbled onto a new way of lacing shoes while serving as a Maryknoll missionary in Milwaukee in 1962.

When his shoe string broke, Adams decided to repair it by threading one of the pieces from the bottom and the other from the top, leaving the middle of his tennis shoe with no lace.

Adams said that night the foot with the broken shoe lace felt so much better than the one with the string laced the normal way that he decided to break the string on the other shoe and re-tie it the same way. Later he cut the vamp, the portion of the shoe covering the top of the foot, to allow for an even better fit of the parts covering the instep and ball of the foot.

That was how Adams conceived the idea behind Kaepa shoes, but it has taken him 19 years — the last seven years in earnest — to build his idea for a more comfortable sports shoe into a marketable commodity.

Adams, who grew up in Brockway, Pa., and served as a missionary one year in Peru and four years in Milwaukee before he left the priesthood for reasons he said were unrelated to his discovery of a new way to build a shoe.

Later he worked on his master's degree in Latin American Studies at the University of Texas in Austin, but his inability over the years to purchase double-laced tennis shoes to replace his yellowing homemade pair — which Adams still proudly displays — kept the idea in the back of his mind. While a graduate student he applied for a patent of his concept.

It took three years before the patent was granted. In the meanwhile, Adams worked as a flight instructor and sold real estate in the Texas Hill Country.

Because several major shoe companies showed no interest in his double-lace design, Adams said he became more and more convinced he should save his money and manufacture his own line of athletic shoes.

"I couldn't get past the secretaries. They (shoe companies) had their own research labs. I guess I was just born stubborn. I had to satisfy myself — win or lose."

So on March 17, 1975, Adams started his own shoe business with $35,000. "It should have been 20 times that much," he said.

He chose the name Kaepa as a combination of the names of his two young daughters — Kikaeila and (Paigla).

It took him five years and several disappointments with quality to produce the current line of sports shoes that in one year has become a fashion rage among local teen-agers who deem a pair of Kaepas as part of their standard dress along with Levis and Izod or Ocean Pacific shirts.

Last year, Adams reached an agreement with Brown Shoe Co., makers of Buster Brown shoes, to manufacture the shoes.

The firm recently added a high-top tennis shoe to its line of tennis and jogging shoes. He now contemplates adding bowling and other other sports shoes and expanding throughout the United States and Europe, Adams said.

Jenny Ayers, assistant manager of Athlete's Foot, said the leather Kaepas were the current fad for school shoes, too. "We sold out of certain sizes of them. The kids were just having fits and mothers were calling. They're just the fad."

But Michael Selvidge, manager in charge of Children's Shoes of Texas here, said his store stocks nothing but Kaepas now because of local demand and because the split vamp makes it easy to fit so many sizes of shapes of feet.

"It's an easy shoe to fit. The way our operation runs here, that's one of the biggest items. It will fit three widths — slim, medium or wide foot. I think it's more than just a fad. There are several different ways of lacing them to fit your foot the best. Once they get a pair on, they'll be back again and again."

Insult leads to good will trip

HOUSTON (AP) — A derogatory remark about the U.S. space program from a student in Central America so "ticked off" a visiting American businessman that he arranged to have students from 22 Latin American nations witness Wednesday's space shuttle launch.

Three students each from most of the member nations of the Organization of American States will view the launch, visit Disneyworld, tour the Johnson Space Center near Houston, then fly to California to watch the shuttle land in the desert.

The 66 students, most of whom are teen-agers, will be guests of Doyle Brewington, 39, of Houston, a millionaire whose parents were Presbyterian missionaries stationed in Guatemala when he was born. He says he expects to spend more than $150,000 on the project.

Brewington said the incident that prompted the invitations occurred in the home of a business associate in Central America last April after the first launch of America's space shuttle Columbia. He declined to reveal the name of the country he was in at the time.

"We were looking at the cover of a local newspaper showing the flight of Columbia and I was rather proud, naturally, and his son mentioned to me that in school they were taught that our space program was done in Hollywood," Brewington said.

"That kind of ticked me off. I was pretty angry about it. The next morning I asked the same thing and he said the same thing again. He didn't say it with any malice or intent, just as a matter of fact," Brewington said.

He said he went to the school and asked the teacher about the comment.

"She said she had been on a social studies program to Havana and that's where she got the information," Brewington said.

"She also said a lot of things were being said at this conference about U.S. business, U.S. government and the 'imperialist giant.' That really got me going," he said.

"When I got back, I decided to do something about it," said Brewington, who is an engineer for Honeywell before quitting to start his own company seven years ago.

He said he ruled out seeking help through the U.S. State Department "because anything that's done by the government is suspected of being politically motivated."

So Brewington, whose Multi Systems International Inc. provides logistical support to American construction companies working in Latin America, worked through the OAS to start a science essay contest in 22 of the 27 member nations. Five did not participate.

The participating nations each selected six finalists and sent their theses to judges from Brewington's company, NASA and the OAS. Three winners were chosen from each nation.

The winners were invited to gather in Miami Sunday and attend a Chamber of Commerce supper Monday night. From there, they will travel to the launch site where Brewington said NASA has reserved space in a "preferential viewing area."

The students will then make stops at Disneyworld, Houston, Albuquerque, N.M.; Mojave, Calif.; Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.; Flagstaff, Ariz.; and El Paso, Texas. They will then return to Houston for a banquet with several astronauts.

"My reward will come from watching the smiles on their faces," said Brewington, who is married but has no children.

Energy secretary wants to abolish his position

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Secretary of Energy James Edwards says the Reagan administration will push development of all forms of energy but he is ready and eager to do away with his job.

"I look forward to the day when I can present the president with the key to the Forrestal Building," Edwards told a news conference.

Edwards appeared earlier Saturday before the College of Engineering Foundation Advisory Council at the University of Texas.

He also commented indirectly on the nuclear power issue that will be before Austin voters on Tuesday. Voters will ballot on a proposal that the city sell its 16 percent share in the South Texas Nuclear Project.

"As far as I'm an concerned nuclear power is the cleanest and safest form of power known to man," he said. "The Reagan administration and I are strong supporters of nuclear energy."

Edwards said that although President Reagan has plans to disband the Department of Energy as one of his economy measures, "there will always be a focus, a spokesman either in the White House or other department to represent energy."

He said his first plans were to present Reagan with plans for disbanding the department on Jan. 15, but Reagan had asked for quicker action.

"I plan to give him my report either this next week or the following week," he said. If the president accepts his recommendations, he will make a proposal to Congress. If Congress approves the legislation, it would take about six more months to disband the department, he said.

From behind closed doors to government out in the open

For once, the local school board went through an entire regular meeting this past week without closing their doors on the public.

We applaud this progressive change in the board's normal routine and hope it is a lasting one.

We also hope the members of the school board have learned something.

During Tuesday's meeting, they accepted resignations from current teachers and hired new teachers in open session without a hitch — and we believe, without hurting anyone's feelings.

Usually, on the pretense of "personnel" discussion, they close their doors on the public for private talk.

We're sure they do discuss the hiring of new teachers, the resignations which have come before the board and so forth.

But what we're never certain of is what else they say outside the public ear.

Maybe they tell a few good jokes. Maybe they plan for their next meeting. Maybe their discussion is totally innocent and of no real harm to the taxpayers.

But we're never sure — we never know for sure what has been said in secret.

And here lies our concern. What have they got to hide? Whether members of the school board or the city commission or the county commission or the newly formed tax appraisal board, this community's elected officials must first acknowledge the public trust.

Their first responsibility should be to the voting, taxpaying public who elected them. These officials have been entrusted with running the public's business with the public's money. They should do it responsibly and in full view of the public.

The trend in the past has been to close any and every meeting under any pretext that's legal without consideration that the taxpayer is the stockholder in this business they're overseeing. That they, the elected officials, answer to us. That they work for us.

In the past, most elected officials have chosen to overlook the taxpayer's involvement and run the show the way they want to — not realizing the harm they are doing to themselves.

In public meetings, our reporters can follow the governing officials' thinking on an issue, or a controversial subject. We can follow them as they think through an issue and ultimately reach a decision. We as taxpayers have a better chance of understanding the complexities of the governments we're paying for. We also may find a bit of sympathy for our fellow humans in elected positions.

This is not possible when groups close their doors to the public.

Now, recently, with a little prodding in these columns, we've seen something of a turn-around in the way some of these groups are conducting their affairs.

We've seen them begin to be a bit more careful about their meeting notices. We've seen them begin to become more careful about calling emergency and executive sessions.

We applaud these beginnings of progressive, above-board government.

Some people think we're too picky, too concerned about the open meetings law, the fine print of the law. Our defense is that when the newspaper fails to care about the open meetings law and the way our elected officials conduct their business, who will?

So, while applauding these groups who are coming from behind closed doors to conduct the public's business out in the open, we will continue our efforts to carefully monitor the actions of these groups.

There's still no reason to negotiate with PLO

Former Presidents Carter and Ford, on their flight back from Cairo, did not, it is clear, plan a joint communique calling for the United States eventually to deal with the Palestine Liberation Organization.

In their informal, unprecedented joint interview with reporters aboard the plane, the 38th and 39th presidents seem to be speculating on future peace paths in the Middle East rather than deliberately calling for a change in U.S. policy. However unintended, the thoughtless statement was a blunder of the first magnitude and an embarrassment for the United States, and particularly for President Reagan. The harm, of course, was magnified because the boost to PLO prestige came within hours of the burial of President Anwar Sadat, whose assassination had produced an obsequious PLO celebration.

President Reagan set things right by reminding the world that American Policy with respect to negotiating with the PLO remains unchanged, namely the PLO must first recognize Israel's right to exist.

That is unlikely for a long time to come. The cement that binds the nine separtate guerrilla organizations under the PLO umbrella headed by Yasser Arafat is a fanatical dedication to the destruction of Israel. To be sure, Arafat and some elements of the PLO have been projecting a more moderate image of late and Arafat's current visit to Japan is assuming the legitimate aspects of that of a visiting head of state. But underneath, hardline Marxists such as George Habash's Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine and the Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine, led by Nayef Hawatmeh, are out for nothing less than the Israeli jugular. And even if, by remote chance, Arafat should seek an accommodation with Israel and the United States, he would undoubtedly forfeit his leadership of the PLO and his life as well.

Meanwhile, the PLO is liberally financed by the Saudis and other oil-rich Arabs, and it is generously armed by the Soviet Union. Its merciless, unrelenting war against Israeli civilians, whether striking a school bus full of children or murdering Israeli Olympic athletes, ensures an uneasy siege mentality in Israel.

Thus, as things stand, President Reagan has no more reason to negotiate with the PLO than did Presidents Ford and Carter when they were in the White House.

By OSCAR COOLEY

When I go to the supermarket to buy our week's supply of groceries, I find a myriad of edibles for sale at various prices. This being America, I am free to pick and choose, deciding for myself the best eats for the money — best for the taste of myself and wife, with due regard to price.

If I hire somebody to mend our roof, or mow the lawn, I can shop around to my heart's content looking for the best worker — again, for the money, all of us act instinctively with this freedom. We should not be happy at all to have somebody order us to buy only Whatsis brand of hamburger and hire only Whosis to do our work. But as citizens we submit daily to such dictation.

Fifty years ago, Congress passed the Davis - Bacon act, which specifies that contractors who build structures for the U.S. government must pay the "prevailing wage rate" in the area where the work is done. The contractors are not allowed to shop around for their carpenters and masons, hiring those whom they consider the best workers for the money. By law, they have to pay a fixed wage.

What is a "prevailing" wage rate? Is there such an animal?

Is there a prevailing price for hamburger? My observation is that there are as many prices as there are food stores — and as many or more qualities.

The government's easy answer has long been that the prevailing wage is the union wage, that being the only one that is paid by two or more employers. At least the union hopes it is. Also, it has been the one wage that anybody would help the contractor hire his carpenters and masons for. This simplified life for him. When bidding on the job, here was one cost, labor, which was not subject to bargaining. All the bidders started from the same post.

But it is not the most economical wage for the ultimate employer, you and me as taxpayers. Being the wage that is forced upon employers by the building trades union — which like all unions is monopolistic — it is, naturally, high, higher in many cases than the wage necessary to attract competent workers.

In several states, laws similar to Davis - Bacon but applying to state government contracts, were enacted.

In Utah such a law has just been repealed, and eight other states are considering repeal.

How much more you and I have paid, because of Davis - Bacon laws, to get our public buildings built is impossible to say. It must be billions. Secretary of Labor Raymond Donovan, who used to be a builder, say $670 million could be saved this year if "prevailing" wage rate was interpreted to mean not union but average wage rate, or rate paid to a majority of construction workers in the area.

Columnist James Kilpatrick, who urges repeal of the Davis - Bacon act, says repeal would save us upwards of $1.5 billion a year.

That would materially help Reagan balance his budget. It is a costly law.

Kilpatrick notes that it is especially costly to those who can build but who do not belong to a building trade union. Some 83 percent of blacks are outside unions. Many of them are good builders — but not good monopolists. They cannot get work on government jobs, offering their services for less money, though this is surely their right in this free country.

The unionists claim that only they know how to drive a nail straight, that if you hire cheap labor you will get a sordid job done. Implying that the contractors are not smart enough to pick able workers, they set themselves up as protectors of the contractors. It is amazing how benevolent the unionists are. The contractors would prefer freedom to union benevolence.

We criticize government officials for wasting taxpayers' money, but laws like Davis - Bacon tie the hands of officials who may strive to get government buildings erected at least cost.

It should be hardly necessary to say that workers in the building as well as all other trades should be free to sell their labor for all the traffic will bear but sell it and continue to be employed. Repeal of the Davis - Bacon act would lower that 7.8 percent unemployment rate.

A Liberal Revival

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN

While fiscal conservatism has made gains in Congress, it would be foolish in the extreme for the public to believe that the liberal community has surrendered. Liberal and left-of-center elements are regrouping with an eye to regaining power.

Evidence of this regrouping is to be found in the establishment of new organizations such as The Democracy Project. It will hold its first conference in New York City this fall.

Mark Green, a former senior aide to

Ralph Nader, is one of the founders of The Democracy Project. In a recent memorandum to prospective members of the board of participants, Mr. Green declares that "progressives must develop intellectual counter-weights to conservative voices." Progressives, in

Mr. Green's lexicon, means people who believe in big government and extensive federal spending programs.

Mr. Green's operative term is "economic democracy." His memo provides clues. The Democracy Project will study, among other things, "a national development office to suggest when public credit should be extended to public enterprises." That means it will promote government enterprise similar to the nationalized industries that have been such a disaster in Great Britain. This office also would establish criteria "whether and when the government should subsidize failing businesses."

In addition, The Democracy Project would consider "the expansion of consumer cooperatives; a progressive tax on corporate size to discourage the diseconomies of conglomeration;" and "corporate governance reforms to democratize the decision-making process."

Such proposals are the fruit of what Mr. Green refers to as "a progressive point of view." Many citizens may conclude, however, that The Democracy Project would be more aptly called The Authoritarian Project; it is bent on expanding the role of the bureaucracy and restricting the freedom of those who want to engage in private enterprise.

At the moment, the public mood isn't favorable for this mislabeled Democracy Project. However, such groups bear watching by concerned citizens. If the economy worsens, the appeal of such groups will pick up. The so-called Democracy Project won't be the only major effort to persuade the public that a return to thrift and free enterprise is an undemocratic goal.

Everyone is in retail

By ART BUCHWALD

I went to see my broker, Durgin, Burgin & Black the other day. I had to wade through TV sets, refrigerators, automobile parts, tool chests and children's clothes.

"What's going on?" I asked Durgin. "Sears - Roebuck is buying Dean Witter and going into the brokerage business. So we've decided to go into the consumer retailing. No one wants to stay in his own racket any more," he said angrily.

"Do you have the floor space?" I asked him.

"We're taking over two more floors for our toy department and women's accessories. They are trying to get all the brokers in town to do the same thing. If Sears wants to play dirty pool, they've taken on the wrong people."

"I wish you luck. Listen, I was thinking about buying 100 shares of Xerox. What do you think?"

"How about four radial automobile tires? They're guaranteed for 10 years."

"Durgin, I know you're mad at Sears, but I really didn't come in here to buy tires."

"Forgive me, I've just lost my cool. You say Xerox."

"I was thinking of Xerox or maybe RCA. That stock, according to Forbes, is underpriced."

"I like RCA. Let me show you one of their 25-inch television sets. We're having a Founder's Day special on them this week. Sears can't match them for price."

"I don't want a television set. I want to buy stocks."

"Right you are. Let me get RCA up on the screen. Hey, look at this. You can get an electric chain saw and a pair of gloves or $89.95. It's going to be a cold winter, and you're really going to need a saw if you've got a fireplace."

"Durgin, I'm worried about Wall Street. Joseph Granville is a menace.

He writes one letter and my entire stock portfolio goes out the window. How do I hedge against another Gravitational panic?"

"You can hide in a freezer. Let me show you this latest GE model."

"We'll let you have the freezer on our lay-away plan. Once your stocks go up, we'll transfer the dividends to your freezer account. We're the only ones offering this. Sears - Roebuck isn't set up to do the paperwork."

"You're really out to get them, aren't you?"

"Why shouldn't we? They want to muscle into everything. First, it was insurance, then real estate, and now they want to sell stocks in their stores. I used to push Sears - Roebuck stocks, but now when I get an order I recommend tax-free bonds instead. If Sears - Roebuck gets lucky, everyone will go in the brokerage business. You'll be able to go into Woolworth's and get all the IBM stock you want."

"But there are still going to be some of us who will just want to deal with a stockbroker who will devote all his time to financial business."

"You say that now. But I can just see you going into Sears for a mattress, and picking up a futures' contract in pork bellies, which they'll probably have a sale on to get you in the store."

"Can we get back to my portfolio? What are you people recommending in money funds?"

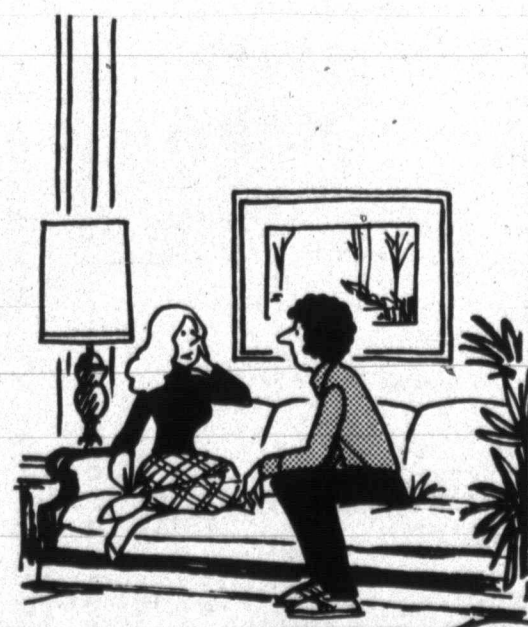

"We have a wide selection. But if I were you, I'd take advantage of our Thanksgiving Day sale on video games. They're a lot more fun and unlike money funds your whole family can enjoy them."

"I'll be back, Durgin."

"You don't have to come in. Here's our new Christmas Retailer's Catalogue. You can order anything you want on the phone. And our deliveries are faster than Sears."

Postal rates increase today, its the second time this year

WASHINGTON (AP) — Postal rates go up again Sunday, making this the only year in history with two jumps in mail rates.

The charge for sending first-class letters went to 20 cents, an increase from the 18 cents that had been in effect only since March 22.

"We need the income and have since March," said Postmaster General William F. Bolger. "We had lost $126 million by Oct. 1 because we didn't have 20 cents."

Bolger referred to a running dispute with the Postal Rate Commission, which has refused since April 1980 to approve the 20-cent rate. The Postal Service finally took the unprecedented move of by-passing the rate commission and raised rate anyway.

The rate commission, which was established in 1971 to consider Postal Service requests for changes in rates, contended that 18 cents was a "fair and equitable" charge. The legality of the unilateral price increase is being challenged in court.

The new rates are expected to bring in more than $1 billion extra per year, with most of that coming from first-class mail.

Among other rates, post cards increase a penny to 13 cents and each ounce of a first-class letter after the first ounce costs 17 cents. Fourth-class parcel rates remain the same.

Bolger said the new rates should last for at least two years. He said that if the rate commission had approved the 20-cent letter earlier, he could have given assurance that it would have lasted for longer than two years.

In an interview, Bolger questioned whether the rate commission should continue in its present structure. When the Postal Service was made largely independent of the rest of the government in 1971, the commission was established to act as a check on it.

"I question whether the rate commission, as it is now designed, should be continued that way. It's time it was re-examined," he said. "We need some type of administrative method for looking at Postal Service proposals for rate changes, but whether we need long, drawn-out extensive litigation... I doubt it very seriously."

Any change would have to be made by Congress.

Other new postal rates include: —The per-pound rates for regular second-class mail sent outside a county were increased, from the range of 10.6 cents to 34.8 cents to a new range of 12.8 cents to 38.3 cents. But the per-piece rates for that category were reduced, from a range of 5.4 cents to 8 cents to a range of 4.4 cents to 7 cents.

—The third-class bulk rate for regular mail was raised to 45 cents per pound from 33 cents per pound.

Another Austin vote on nuke controversy

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Bumper stickers tell the story as Austin citizens prepare to ballot for the sixth time Tuesday on owning a piece of the South Texas Nuclear Project.

"Sell it!" say bumper stickers and buttons distributed by the Coalition for Economical Energy, a group that says the Matagorda County power plant is a poorly built lemon. "Keep It!" advised the Taxpayers for Lower Utility Rates, an alliance of mainly business and corporate interests that warn of skyrocketing power bills if Austin pulls out of the project.

Austin now owns 16 percent with the remainder owned by power groups in Houston, San Antonio and Corpus Christi.

Both sides expect a close vote Tuesday. About a 30 percent turnout of voters is expected.

The ballot question asks if the Austin City Council should be authorized to sell the city's 16-percent share of the half-finished project near Bay City. No alternative is offered.

The anti-nuclear coalition claims Austin's current and planned power generators are adequate for normal growth of the city.

The pro-nuclear group says nuclear power would be the cheapest power for the future despite the fact that numerous cost overruns may make the STNP finally cost about $4.5 billion.

In 1972 Austin voters turned down a proposal to buy 20 percent of STNP. In 1973, a plan to buy 16 percent passed by 51 percent.

Convicts free 28 fellow prisoners

GRATERFORD, Pa. (AP) — Convicts freed 28 fellow inmates kept six prison employees and possibly other inmates hostage Saturday as a state prison standoff unraveled in its fourth day.

Three guards, three civilian kitchen workers and eight inmates remained in the unheated kitchen at the State Correctional Institution. Of the eight inmates, officials believed at least four were to blame for the standoff and were apparently led by a man jailed for killing a policeman and two prison wardens, authorities said.

The remaining hostages were believed to be unharmed, said Correction Bureau spokesman Kenneth Robinson, and negotiations continued to gain their release from the inmates who cornered them after a foiled escape Wednesday night.

"It is very possible that all of the inmates left (in the kitchen) are hostage takers," Robinson told reporters after announcing that 24 inmates had departed the kitchen en masse about noon.

Another inmate left about 3:40 p.m. Saturday. One hostage been released Friday night and two were freed separately Saturday morning.

"We are of the opinion now that they have been let go," said Correction Bureau spokesman Kirk Wilson of inmates. Earlier, officials said they were not sure whether they had been freed or had escaped.

The kitchen was unheated, but prison officials provided blankets, along with cigarettes, to the captors, Robinson said.

The freed hostages were taken to the prison infirmary, and they appeared to be in good health, according to Robinson.

The stalemate began Wednesday night at the maximum-security prison when four to 10 convicts whose escape bid failed took over the prison kitchen and refused to release any of the people inside.

The captors were armed with one gun and possibly kitchen knives. They were apparently led by a three-time killer named Joseph "Jo Jo" Bowen, convicted of killing a policeman, as well as a warden and deputy warden at another prison, officials have said.

Oil marketers want pay for credit cards

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Oil Marketers Association said Saturday it is asking major gasoline refiners to offset credit card expenses directly from the consumer, not from the retailer.

A letter signed by Perry N. Bolin, president of TOMA, called attention to the fact that Texaco plans to begin levying a 3 percent credit surcharge on retailers for credit card customers, beginning Nov. 1.

"The Texas Oil Marketers Association has opposed the concept of assessing a surcharge to the petroleum marketer accepting the credit card, but at the same time we realize certain refiners may need to take steps to offset increased credit card expenses," the letter said.

Bolin said the TOMA believed the only fair way was to charge the 3 percent on the consumer's monthly billing statement. However, he said, federal law prohibits assessing a charge directly on a consumer's statement.

"Our association believes that if your company find it necessary to require additional fees for credit cards, that you cover these expenses by charging an annual fee directly to the customer for the use of the credit card," Bolin said. "This would assure that those individuals who need and want the use of a branded credit card, would be paying for the services that they receive."

Electricity. Knowing what it's worth is worth knowing.

One thing we've probably all learned is to have an appreciation of things that have worth and to know their value. How would you rate yourself on knowing the value of the electricity you use? Take this simple exercise.

1. How much was your electric bill last month? $ _____
2. Divide 30 into your answer to Number 1. This was the approximate cost of your electricity per day. $ _____
3. How many people are in your family? _____
4. Divide Number 3 into Number 2. This was the cost of your electricity per day per family member. $ _____

As much a fixture as salt shaker

By THOMAS RIZZO
Associated Press Writer
COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The first two fingers of his wrinkled left hand curl around a half-smoked cigar which he uses to point to a newspaper clipping. It's an article all about him.

"This is wrong," the old man says, peering at a visitor through his smoky, gray-framed glasses. "I smoke R.G. Dunns — there's 50 in a box, see. I've smoked them ever since 1947."

"Here, you want one?" he asks with a chuckle, parting the left side of his checked sportcoat to reveal a shirt pocket crowded with seven cigars and two ballpoint pens.

Herman P. Hoffner is sitting at a small table in Rax Roast Beef Restaurant on Columbus' far west side, one of hundreds of fast food franchise outlets that line the freeways of this big Midwestern city.

But this isn't just any restaurant to Herman Hoffner. It is a sort of home. Hoffner is as much a fixture as the plastic container of barbecue salt.

He's not an employee. He's a customer — but one whose social life revolves around the people who work at or patronize the restaurant. He's been coming here since 1968.

"I sit here and watch the people come in and I talk to them, visit with people," Hoffner says. "A lot of them come in here that I've known for a long time and we just make conversations of different kinds. I love it. I like to be around people."

Seven days a week, Hoffner boards a bus and arrives at the employees' entrance about 9 a.m. He gets a cup of coffee and waits while the chocolate chip cookies bake. He heads for his usual table, and there he stays until early evening when either his daughter, one of the workers or a transit service for the elderly drives him back to his small apartment a few miles away.

The restaurant threw a party for him on his 87th birthday, August 17, complete with friends, relatives, cake and gifts.

Politics and the economy are among the topics he discusses during the day.

"This is almost unbelievable," he says, pulling from his wallet two heavily-creased copies of typed menus from the Old Mill Restaurant he once owned in Chillicothe.

The menus, dated 1940, feature Swiss steak at 34 cents; meatloaf for 29 cents; roast pork and dressing, 30 cents; orange juice, 10 cents; and something called the Swan Special of the Week for 15 cents — a three-decker sandwich of cream cheese and jelly.

"That's what I call the good old days," he says with a laugh.

A former central committeeman back in Pomeroy, where he once owned a dairy — "I can't remember what year, it's too long ago" — Hoffner always urges his friends to vote: "I still vote. I wouldn't miss it. Express your opinion — that's your privilege."

He is wearing a wide, blue tie, embroidered with elephants and the letters "YCGVSOYA."

He watches the customer sitting across from him trying to decipher the letters. He doesn't ask for the question.

"You Can't Get Votes Sitting On Your 'A,'" he translates. "You got to get out and shake the bushes. And that's what I did and that's why I beat the man I was running against."

Hoffner says he meets a lot of young people during the hours he logs at Rax, but he thinks they're much different than they were in his days.

"Years ago, you could get people to work. Today, it seems like they don't want to work. All they want to do is put in the time and wait for the check."

"She passed away," he continues, a distant look in his eyes. "I'm all alone now, except for my son and daughter who come and visit me. Edna was her name. We got married in 1916, when we were both 22."

"We enjoyed ourselves, my wife and I, working together every day. It was a lot of hard work," he says. "I was up at 4 o'clock every morning. Never had an alarm clock in my life. Automatically woke up at 4 o'clock. Still don't use one."

He looks around as a few customers come in.

"I like it here very much," he says. "I've been coming here every day... If I didn't have this," he says, tapping the handle of his tripod cane, "I'd be out there helping them."

SAVE THE SEAL. A group of 25 animal lovers succeeded Friday in foiling hunters during the annual cull of gray seal pups in the Orkney Islands, north of Scotland. Reports

TIME TO GO VOTE

AUSTIN — Many have complained about the Texas Constitution — about its length, complexity, and frequent changes. It's not a perfect system.

Despite its weaknesses, it also has its strengths. The greatest strength it has, we think, is its responsiveness to the voters — to you.

You have a chance to participate more in your state government than the citizens of nearly any other state. You have that chance on Tuesday, November 3, at the polls. We hope you take advantage of the chance you have.

You will be voting on these seven amendments:

1. Bonding authority for cities and counties to encourage redevelopment of decaying areas, which would be known as "reinvestment zones" or enterprise zones.
2. Good titles for people who bought land in good faith and have lived on it and paid taxes on it for 50 years or more.
3. A committee of high-level state officials to oversee the state's budget when the Legislature is not in session.
4. Deduction of half the state's surplus revenue to try to make sure Texas does not run out of water in the future. This is undoubtedly the most important issue in the election.
5. Exemption of livestock and poultry in the hands of the producer from property tax.
6. Local option exemption of up to 40 percent of the appraised value of homesteads.
7. Authorization for additional bonding authority for Veterans' Land Fund.

All of these amendments affect all Texans to one degree or another. One of them, Amendment number 4, the Water Trust Fund, affects us in the Panhandle and the South Plains to a tremendous degree. We hope you all will vote for water for Texas — there is no substitute for it.

November 3 is your chance to protect your interest in the government of this state. It is too important a chance to throw away.

We want to know what you think about how we could improve the government of Texas. Please write to Senator Bill Sarpalius, P.O. Box 12068, Austin, Texas 78711.

Dynamite removed

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Authorities removed 60 sticks of dynamite from a North Fort Worth area Saturday, one day after evacuating about 130 residents while bomb experts neutralized the potentially deadly explosive.

The residents and workers were removed Friday while bomb squad members used a chemical to neutralize the dynamite, which was discovered by a rabbit hunter, police said.

Police had considered a second evacuation while bomb squad members removed the hazardous material, but a fire department dispatcher said the operation was completed Saturday without moving any residents.

Gardening by Moon Signs

Advice on winter gardening

By LOIS BOYNTON

The moon will be increasing: 1-11, 26-30. The moon will be decreasing: 12-25. The fruitful signs are: 6-7 (Pisces); 14 until 10:30 p.m. (Cancer); From 11:30 23 through 25 (Scorpio).

The semi-fruitful signs are: 1-3 (Capricorn); from 10 a.m. 10 through the 11 (Taurus); 21 until 11:30 a.m. 23 (Libra); from 1 p.m. 29 through the 30 (Capricorn).

The barren signs are: 4-5 (Aquarius); 8-9 (Aries); from 10:30 a.m. 16 until 4 p.m. 18 (Leo); from 4 p.m. 18 through 20 (Virgo); 26 until 1 p.m. 28 (Sagittarius); 12-13 (Gemini).

Use the sign of Leo to destroy henbit.

October gave us moisture getting everything ready for a good winter. When plants have plenty of moisture they will stand a hard winter much better than if they go into the season dry. Henbit is coming up thick as hair, so get out with your hoe the 18th and just move the top inch of soil and you will have it whipped.

The elm trees have been so pretty all over town, we missed the infestation of the beetles. You remember back in early May when they were hatching out, we had cold rainy weather this caused them to go into an inactive state, not eating, so they died. Our large 45 year old elm tree looks wonderful and has all summer. This is the first time we have not had to have it sprayed in a number of years. (Of course we do not like to have it sprayed.) It was great we did not have to have that done this year. Occasionally nature does help us out.

Check evergreens for bag worms very closely. If there is one dried bag left, you will have a big infestation of bag worms next spring.

Now is the time to fertilize your vegetable garden, flower beds, and grass. We use horse manure. Manures are double-bonus fertilizers. The soil conditioning benefit of their organic content is probably their prime benefit, and their contribution to soil fertility is an extra bonus. Both the physical and chemical balance of the soil is improved for good plant growth. They are best to be used during the fall and winter season so there will be no plant burn. It is better to keep manures from direct contact with stems and roots. It is safe to put on lawns at this time, watering them in well.

With chemical fertilizers that you may use, the label on the bag identifies its contents. There are generally three numbers, 21-0-0, 16-20-0, etc. The first number indicates percentage of nitrogen, the second percentage of phosphorus, and the third tells the percentage of potassium. Nitrogen is the growth stimulator. Phosphorus is not generally deficient enough in our soil for regular application; however, some plants may respond to its application. It should be worked into the top few inches of soil for it to get down to the root system. Just surface application is not sufficient.

Potassium is usually adequate in our soils, but deficiencies do occur with some plants that have greater requirements for this nutrient. It is moderately soluble and will move with the water to the plant roots.

Iron and zinc are minor nutrients, but alkaline soils may need these nutrients. You can buy these in chelated forms. They should be applied properly and with caution. You can also find these in sulfate forms, which are easier and safer to use.

We plan to feed our pecan trees zinc. We will make a trench about two inches deep and three inches wide out from the trunk about 12 inches. Our trees are mature trees but we will use only about a cup to each tree. After we have placed it in the trench, we will cover it and water it in well.

Are you having trouble with bugs on house plants? One of the secrets is clean plants. Some plants get more bugs than others, but even these can be grown with a little extra care. Always inspect plants before you add them to your collection.

But you will get bugs in spite of good sanitation. You have a choice of using organic or chemical sprays. We prefer to use organic sprays. Here is a formula that will help you to get rid of aphids and leaf chewing pests: fresh mint leaves, onion tops, horseradish roots and leaves, and red hot peppers. Run these through the blender adding a little water. Pour this into a gallon of soapy water, then add a cup of any liquid detergent. Dilute this by adding a half cup of the mixture to a quart of water. Pour the liquid over the plant as is, or strain and spray it on. A window cleaner sprayer works fine in the greenhouse or home.

Plant spring flowering bulbs the 1, 2, 3, 6, 7, 10, 11, 29, 30. Tulips can be planted 29 and 30. We will not plant them sooner than that.

Prune the 24th and 25th. We have been called about pruning roses. We do not prune hybrid teas at this time. We do that next March or April. We do prune our ramblers now. We always cut back all branches to the ground with the exception of about 3 or 4 strong ones. We tie these to the fence. (We grow our ramblers along the fence.) Otherwise they grow so rank and become so hard to prune, and they always bloom well.

We hope you are growing an amaryllis bulb for Christmas. Their blooms are so spectacular and rewarding. They should be grown in a sunny window and turned regularly. We feed ours with a light solution of fertilizer with each watering, they should never be allowed to dry out. Keep the soil moist at all times, not soggy.

If the bulb is new, when it has finished blooming don't throw it out. Cut off the blooming stalk, sometimes they bloom the second time for sure.

If you care to carry the bulb over, it should be kept moist until the top growth has shriveled. Watering should cease entirely. They need a rest of at least four months.

They can then be repotted in good potting soil, covering the bulb only about two-thirds. Begin watering. It takes about three weeks for the top growth to show. Put the pot in a bright window and give it the same treatment as before.

Perhaps you are looking back over the year feeling discouraged, disappointed in the results of your gardening. A good horticulturist should be prepared for anything to happen with plants. Good culture does not always bring good results, although it helps to make success more likely. There are variables that effect plant growth which we do not entirely understand and probably never will.

When a gardener feels that he knows exactly what to expect, he is undoubtedly a beginner. Old hands have long since learned to end with the wind; take things as they come.

Happy Thanksgiving!

Shuttle gives U.S. edge on space

WASHINGTON (AP) — American space reconnaissance photos are already so good that they can tell whether a soldier has shaved — from more than 100 miles up.

That's today. What about the future? Laser battle stations armed with "death rays" and protected by dart-like spaceships.

Orbiting command posts directing ground, sea and air forces.

Killer satellites stalking the skies. The United States and the Soviet Union have these capabilities under way or on the drawing boards. Should an all-out arms race occur in this decade, these space-age military concepts could transform global military strategies.

The space shuttle gives the United States an edge — for now.

The Soviets — with nothing similar — have denounced the shuttle as a weapon system in disguise, claiming its sole purpose is to help America dominate the Earth. They don't mention that the Soviet Union itself possesses the only operational space weapon system — a satellite killer capable of blowing U.S. payloads out of the sky.

Pentagon officials say that in the last decade the Soviets have invested about twice as much money as the United States in military research and development, creating a growing risk of technological surprise.

American observers say that that 75 percent of the more than 100 satellites the Soviets launch each year have military assignments and that their active Salyut space station project is aimed primarily at perfecting a manned military capability in orbit.

The military will fly nearly 100 shuttle missions in the next decade. But the Pentagon says these so-called "blue shuttle" missions are defensive in nature, using man to more efficiently and cheaply do the jobs now being done by expendable rockets — principally placing military payloads in orbit, with the added dimension of being able to service them periodically.

On the more exotic and ominous side, the shuttle within a few years will be a testbed for laser beam weapons that could, if perfected, attack hostile satellites and destroy enemy missiles as they rise above the atmosphere. And shuttles could ferry up men and equipment for the construction of those battle stations if they become necessary.

From the very beginning of the space age, the military leaders of the United States and the Soviet Union saw the benefits of using this new "high ground." The first military satellite was America's Discoverer 1, launched in 1959, to take photographs and return the film to Earth in a capsule that was snared over the Pacific by an Air Force plane.

Technology has taken great strides since then, and now the security of both nations is increasingly dependent upon orbiting satellites.

U.S. and Soviet payloads dispatch military messages around the world; send navigation signals to ships, planes, submarines and troops in the field; are alert to warn instantly of a missile attack, and spy on each other and other nations with high-resolution cameras.

U.S. space cameras for months have taken special notice of Soviet troop movements in and around Afghanistan and Poland.

President Johnson once said that the reconnaissance photos were worth many times the entire U.S. investment in all space technology.

And last year, President Carter said: "Photo reconnaissance satellites have become an important stabilizing factor in world affairs in the monitoring of arms agreements."

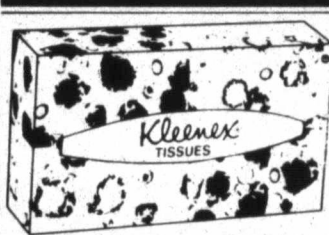

There is growing concern at the Pentagon because the Soviets have introduced a new destabilizing element with their development of a killer satellite: a satellite that can track down its orbiting target, maneuver near it, and explode, destroying both.

Pentagon observers say the hunter satellite can strike targets out to 600 miles, which makes America's navigation and reconnaissance satellites vulnerable. Communications and missile-warning satellites are stationed 22,300 miles up, but within a few years they too may come within range of advanced killers or laser beams.

The United States has sought for more than two years to negotiate a ban on killer satellites, but talks with the Soviets have been unsuccessful. So, the Defense Department is developing its own satellite destroyer, to be operational in about two years.

Grain inspector says precautions taken

DALLAS (AP) — An explosion that tore through a Corpus Christi grain elevator, killing a federal inspector and eight other persons, started when a cigarette or heat from six other possible sources ignited volatile dust, a federal safety report said this week.

Occupational Safety and Health Administration officials listed a worn conveyor bearing, smoking in dusty areas and electrical sparks among possible ignition sources for the blast that injured 29 persons and caused an estimated $30 million in damage. The report also suggested ways to improve worker safety in grain elevators.

But a federal grain supervisor said Thursday his inspectors already were following the recommended safety precautions when the blast occurred in April.

"Most of what they suggested we were already doing or were scheduled to do," said Larry Nafziger, field office supervisor for the Federal Grain Inspection Service in Portland.

Many of the six inspectors injured in the blast had been working in two grain laboratories that were scheduled to be moved further from the Corpus Christi Public Grain Elevator, he said. Four of the men have not returned to work since the blast and one inspector is paralyzed from the waist down.

A spokesman for the Port of Corpus Christi, which owns the elevator, disputed portions of the report, saying it contained "significant generalizations" and unsupported findings.

"It is important to note that there is no evidence that many of the locations they cite played any role in the explosion," said Don Rodman, port director of public affairs. "Many of the points were extraneous."

OSHA officials said three possible ignition sources were at a rail dumping pit between the elevator headhouse and "A" House. Rodman said no evidence at the site suggested that it or a second dumping site were at the explosion's origin.

"Even though we realize that the grain elevator ... was a public elevator, and not under the control of FGIS, we have listed a number of hazardous conditions that were determined to exist at or prior to the time of the explosion and fire," Thorne G. Auchter, OSHA assistant secretary of labor for occupational safety and health, wrote in the report.

The American Federation of Government Employees requested the OSHA investigation after the grain inspectors' injuries. D.R. Galliard, FGIS deputy administrator, said the report is still being reviewed.

Rodman said the findings will be studied by two Toledo, Ohio consultants who are developing their own independent reports.

OSHA recommended that airborne and accumulated grain dust should have been minimized by "frequent and effective housekeeping." Ironically, dust collection and emission control devices costing almost $4 million had been operating in the elevator for the past three years, port officials said.

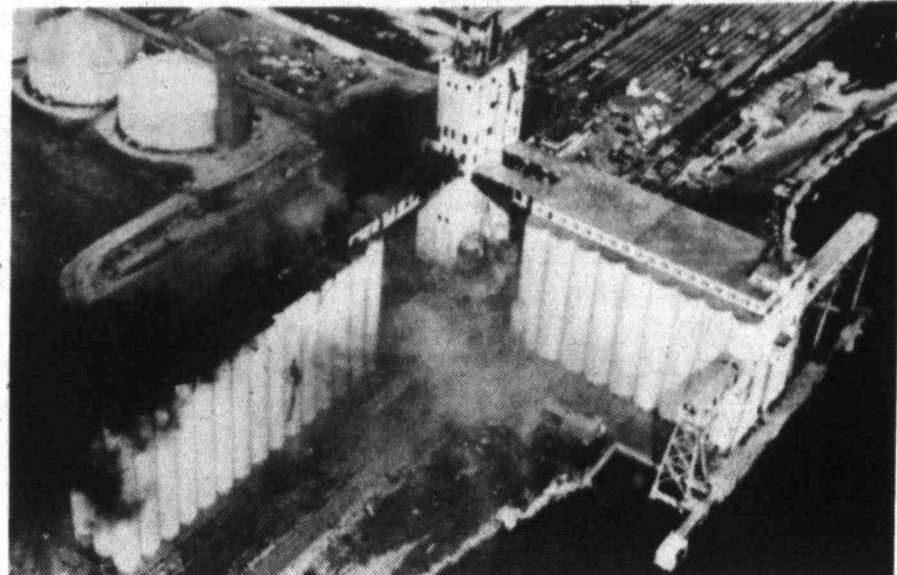

A member of a NAS panel studying grain elevator explosions said dust collection hoods installed over a basement conveyor belt as part of the system actually trapped dust inside that carried an explosion throughout the elevator.

FFA booster club selects new officers

The Pampa FFA Booster Club met last week to elect new officers for the coming year.

New officers are president, James Richardson; vice president, Neil Fulton; secretary, Regina Jordan; treasurer, Geneva Schiffman; reporter, Mary Caddel; and directors, Bob Caddel, Wayne Jones, Donald Maul, Bill Kidwell and Jack McAndrews.

The club will meet the first Thursday of each month at 7:30 p.m. in the Ag room of Pampa High School.

EXPLOSION REPORT RELEASED. A federal report released last week says the explosion which ripped through the Corpus Christi Public Grain Elevator, shown in this April 16 photo, was probably caused when a cigarette or heat from six other possible sources ignited volatile grain dust. The explosion killed nine people. A Port of Corpus Christi spokesperson disputed portions of the report, saying it contains "significant generalizations." (AP Laserphoto)

LANDSCAPE TOUR

Last Tuesday was a delightful day for all of those who made the Foliage and Landscape Research Tour to Woodward, Okla. Although the fall colors were not yet at the peak, the scenery was pretty. The visit and tour around the USDA Southern Great Plains Research Center at Woodward was most enlightening.

Landscape plantings go back to the early 1900's as the station was established in 1913. We saw a lot of trees and shrubs planted in the 30's, 40's, and 50's. Many of these are large specimens and serve to illustrate how well some of these grow and how big they can get.

Some of the trees that caught my attention as far as being good, large landscape trees are the: Chinese Pistache, Lacebark Elm, Pond Cypress, and Bald Cypress. In the smaller tree category, some new ones we saw were the Pink Lady Euonymus, Golden Rain Tree, Bradford Pear, and a Golden Lacebark Elm. We saw many, many others that can do a good job growing in our area — in fact, they have over 10,000 specimens of trees and shrubs growing.

I guess the sad thing is that there is no one presently working with these landscape plantings at this USDA Center. We saw the trees and shrubs as they have survived without any particular care or attention for many years.

BULBS FOR INDOOR WINTER CHEER

To add cheer and color to indoor landscaping this winter, set aside a few choice spring flowering bulbs for indoor forcing.

Bulbs good for indoor forcing include crocus, grape hyacinths, daffodils, tulips and hyacinths.

As soon as bulbs are available, begin potting by mixing equal parts of soil, peat and sand. Place a one - inch layer of gravel at the bottom of the pot, then firm soil around the bulb. Be sure to leave tips of large bulbs showing above the surface, and barely cover small bulbs, spacing them a half inch apart.

Store potted bulbs at 40 - 50 degrees Fahrenheit, since success of forcing bulbs depends on developing roots during the cold storage period. The vegetable drawer in the refrigerator is an excellent storage place.

After six to 10 weeks in cold storage, place bulbs in a cool, semi - lighted location. Gradually move to a sunny location for good growth and color. Don't allow bulbs to dry out at any time.

While most bulbs will flower by January, those bought pre-cooled or pre - treated may bloom by Christmas.

Spring flowering bulbs also can be grown without the "forcing" technique. Chilled bulbs can be placed in pots and left outdoors prior to flowering, then brought inside for blooming.

Most "forced" bulbs are best discarded after flowering since they usually won't bloom the next year.

Private grain cars to stay on Santa Fe

AMARILLO — Santa Fe Railway has decided to continue allowing grain shipments to be loaded on its lines in private covered hoppers for which OT - 5 authority has previously been granted. F.J. Wright, vice president - traffic, announced in Chicago.

"Earlier this year we announced consideration of a program to restrict use of private jumbo covered hoppers for grain loading on our system after May 1, 1982," Wright recalled. "Under this plan Santa Fe would have acquired shipper-owned or leased equipment in proportion to its use on our railroad. We indicated then that we would discuss this proposal with our shippers to get their individual reactions, identify the problem areas and seek possible alternatives."

Wright said those discussions have been completed, and as a result Santa Fe has concluded not to implement the proposed change. "We will continue to accept private cars for loading that now have OT - 5 authority on the Santa Fe," he said, "and will work with the grain industry to develop an equitable solution to problems created by the industry - wide surplus of covered hoppers and resulting poor utilization."

Acreage interviews will be launched soon

The Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service will begin interviewing Texas farmers and ranchers in mid - November on 1981 final acreage, yield, and crop production and end - of - the - year poultry and livestock inventories for Texas and individual counties.

The confidential interviews will be conducted through the mail or phone or in person by field enumerators. Data collection will end in early January.

Doug Murfield, State Statistician, has urged farmers and ranchers to return questionnaires promptly. He said all information reported is kept confidential and is combined with other reported information for state and county estimates. These estimates give Texas farmers and ranchers information on which to plan their production and marketing activity in a way that will be most beneficial to their individual operations.

The reports help in transporting, storing, marketing and processing farm products to maintain an orderly flow from producer to consumer. They also assure competitive markets, Murfield said. Without them, most producers would have to depend on trade sources for information on crop and livestock prospects.

The cooperative effort between the Texas Department of Agriculture and the U.S. Department of Agriculture eliminates duplication of effort and saves tax dollars.

County estimates are available for livestock, dairy, poultry, field crops including cotton, small grains, vegetables, fruits and pecans, and cash receipts from the sale of Texas farm commodities.

They can be obtained by writing the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service, P.O. Box 70, Austin, Texas 78767 or Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown, the Texas Department of Agriculture, P.O. Box 12847, Austin, Texas 78711.

Dallas waiting for shot at Eagles

By The Associated Press

The Dallas Cowboys have been waiting for Sunday's game a long time—since last Jan. 11, to be exact. That's when the Philadelphia Eagles buried them and headed to the Super Bowl.

That 20-7 victory, built on Wilbert Montgomery's 194-yard rushing performance, left the Cowboys feeling they had somehow been suckered into complacency by, of all people, the Eagles.

"I just told them (the Eagles) in meetings that Dallas was a better team because they had beaten the teams at the end of the year that had beaten us," Philadelphia Coach Dick Vermeil said. "I told them that because of that the Cowboys might not be coming to Philadelphia respecting us and we should try to take advantage of it."

"I didn't consider us superior to the Cowboys... I wasn't trying to set anybody up," Vermeil said.

Dallas Coach Tom Landry said the Eagles' victory in that National Football Conference championship game was due in part to the Cowboys' just having played in two supercharged playoffs — a 34-13 pounding of Los Angeles that averaged a 38/14 romp by the Rams two weeks earlier, and a 30-27 thriller in Atlanta where they scored two TD's in the final 3:04.

"When you play an emotional game, there is a tendency to have a letdown the following week," Landry said. "That is what happened to us in Atlanta where we were able to work ourselves out of it in time against the Falcons, but we were emotionally drained when it came time to play Philadelphia."

Philadelphia also has a 7-1 record and a one game lead over the Cowboys of the NFC East. Both teams are coming off tough victories last Sunday. The Eagles defeated Tampa Bay 20-10, breaking a tie with 4:28 remaining on Tony Franklin's 32 year field goal, while Dallas beat Miami 28-27 on Danny White's two touchdown passes 31 seconds apart with less than four seconds left to play.

In Sunday's other NFL games, it's Kansas City at San Diego, San Francisco at Pittsburgh, Houston at Cincinnati, Detroit at Los Angeles, Atlanta at New Orleans, Baltimore at Miami, Chicago at Tampa Bay, Cleveland at Buffalo, New York Jets and the New York Giants, Seattle at Green Bay, New England at Oakland, and St. Louis at Washington. Monday night's game is Minnesota at Denver.

UIL may lower Pampa to 4A district

BY L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

Will Pampa be a part of a nine-team district in sports in 1982-83?

Although right now it's pure speculation, the (ADA) average daily attendance used by the University Interscholastic League in its reclassification procedures points toward that possibility.

"Our average daily attendance at Pampa High School is 1,197," said PHS athletic director Loyd Waters. "The cutoff for Class 5A is 1,310 so we're considerably below the present guideline."

The UIL will announce the reclassification of the high schools at 9 a.m. Monday in Austin. If current policy stands, Pampa would drop from Class 5A to Class 4A.

Waters said the Harvesters could fall into a district with Canyon, Dumas, Borger, Lubbock Estacado, Lubbock Dunbar, Brownfield, Levelland, and Lamesa.

"You could second guess them all you want to and still be wrong," Waters said. "It's hazardous to guess what's going to happen because the UIL has not made any information available as to what they're thinking is."

Just in case, a meeting of Class 4A district officials will be held in Plainview Tuesday morning to set up a district schedule.

Waters would like to see Pampa stay in its present district with the four Amarillo schools.

"It's going to be an expensive situation if we go into a 4A district because of the travel involved," Waters said. "Also, it's going to make it difficult for the fans to attend the out-of-town games because of the distance involved."

Levelland and Brownfield are located in the Lubbock area, around 200 miles away. Lamesa is about a five-hour drive from Pampa.

"It's possible that the 5A enrollment figure could be raised which would put schools like Palo Duro and Caprock into 4A," Waters said. "It's hard to tell at this point."

Whatever the outcome, Pampa would not be reclassified again for the next two years.

Harvester football coach Larry Gilbert says it doesn't make much difference to him which classification Pampa falls in, but the main concern should be the athletes.

"We should forget about our own wants and egos and think about the kids and what's best for them," Gilbert added. "I feel like the UIL is trying to do what's fair."

Gilbert said the competition would be stiff no matter what district Pampa is in.

"That's the way it is in Texas," Gilbert said. "If we have a 4A enrollment, we should be in a 4A district. I think we would have a better chance to make it to state, not only in football, but in other sports. The schedule would be more fair from top to bottom."

"If we stay with the Amarillo schools that would be fine too. We'll still work hard to win."

Bumphus wins title from Rodriguez

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Johnny Bumphus, scoring heavily in the last six rounds, took the U.S. Boxing Association junior welterweight title from defending champion Willie Rodriguez Saturday.

Bumphus, a gold medalist in the 1980 Olympic trials, won a unanimous decision in the 12-round title fight over Rodriguez, a five-time holder of the title from Allentown, Pa.

Judge Harold Lederman scored it 8-3-1, judge

Charles Spina had it 8-4 and referee Arthur Mercanti scored it 7-5 in favor of the Nashville, Tenn. native.

Now 12-0 as a professional with eight knockouts, Bumphus said his slow start was due to "trying to punch too hard instead of just landing punches. I was psyched up too much. I was trying to do my best."

A Rodriguez right caused Bumphus' nose to bleed

in the third round and a left-right-left attack to Bumphus' head in the fifth swelled his right eye.

Even so, Bumphus said, "I didn't know my eye was closed. It was never a factor that I couldn't see out of it."

After the fifth round, Rodriguez lost control of the bout as Bumphus used his jab. After the sixth round, in which both fighters launched furious body attacks, Bumphus began connecting with his right jab.

Kicker gives Odessa Permian enviable win

By JAY JORDEN
Associated Press Writer

Odessa Permian's black magic weaved a spell on kicker Bobby Knott, who drilled home a 37-yard field goal in the final 13 seconds of play against Midland Lee to eke out a 9-7 victory in schoolboy football play Friday night.

The Panthers, third-ranked in The Associated Press Schoolboy Football Poll, led off with a 14-yard scoring run by Mike Troglin in the first quarter.

The Rebels responded when Lee linebacker Terry

Thompson intercepted Panthers quarterback Coy Brown's pass and returned it to the Permian 24.

The Rebels' Darren Williams got the final two yards in the waning moments of the second quarter, and Van Gravitt kicked the PAT to tie the score at 7-7.

Brown led the winning drive by throwing passes for 15 and 13 yards to Jay Fuglaar and another 10-yarder to Steve Striffler.

It was a game Lee could have won, but didn't. The picture-perfect drive by Permian's senior quarterback leaves the Panthers in the enviable position of being able to lose one of their next two games and still win the District 5-5A crown.

In other Class 5A action, Port Arthur Jefferson's Bruce Miller rambed for four touchdowns as the Yellow Jackets ran past Port Arthur Lincoln, 38-13, and earned its second straight district crown.

First-ranked TJ gave tailback Miller an opportunity that he lost no time in seizing. He made a 1-yard scoring dash in the first quarter, followed by touchdown runs of 2 and 7 yards in the second period and a 1-yard push in the third.

Place kicker Marty Tatum also joined the scoring parade, booting a pair of extra points and field goals of 32 and 45 yards. TJ quarterback Clifford Landry polished off the Yellow Jackets' attack by hitting tight end Reginald Sutton from five yards out with 42 seconds left in the third quarter.

Also in 5A, No. 2 San Antonio Holmes crushed San Antonio Edgewood, 41-0; No.

6 Alice whipped Corpus Christi Carroll, 41-20; No. 7 Richardson Lake Highlands overturned Turner, 38-0; No. 8 Dickinson swamped Alvin, 31-0; No. 9 Lewisville trampled Sherman, 14-0; and tenth-ranked Temple squeezed past Killeen, 10-9.

In Class 4A, No. 1 Huntsville hammered down King, 42-0; No. 2 Rockwall roasted Sulphur Springs, 7-6; No. 3 Brownwood routed Stephenville, 36-0; No. 4 Beaumont Hebert battered Jasper, 40-7; and No. 5 Andrews antagonized Fort Stockton, 35-8.

Also in 4A, No. 6 Sulphur Springs fell to Rockwall, 7-6.

JV's unofficial district champs

The Pampa High School girls junior varsity volleyball team became the unofficial District 3-5A winners Saturday night when they won against Amarillo High School 15-11 and 14-8, ending their season with an 18-2 record, according to Coach Lynn Wolfe.

The varsity team ended its season with a 16-10 record, after being defeated by Amarillo High Saturday 15-13 and 15-5.

"The varsity team had a good serving night and a real good match," Wolfe said.

"They were fighting real hard the whole time, although there were some let-ups," she said.

"They've had a good season this year," the coach added. "We started out the season looking like we weren't going to be able to get it together, but we surprised some of those teams, even though we haven't beaten Amarillo High or Tascosa."

Harris' touchdown was set up when Wellington recovered a bad snap from the center on the Shamrock 17 yard line on a punt attempt.

Wellington's victory, the Rocket's third straight in loop play, sets up a showdown next Friday when Clarendon travels here. Wellington is now 7-1 overall.

Shamrock, now 4-4 overall and 0-3 in district, missed its best opportunity in the second period when it lost the ball on downs after recovering a Wellington fumbled punt snap on the Skyrocket's 6 yard line.

Wheeler 7, Memphis 6
MEMPHIS — Wade Willis kicked an extra point to provide the difference as Wheeler edged Memphis, 7-6, in District 2-2A play Friday night.

The Cyclones scored first on a 13 yard run by Terry Foster, but the kick for the extra point missed.

The Mustangs came right back in the second quarter for the winning points. Scott Wright passed to Tom Childress for 12 yards; Willis kicked the point.

Texas Longhorns roll over Texas Tech with six sacks

AUSTIN, Texas (AP)—Sixth-ranked Texas' rowdy defense sacked Texas Tech quarterback Ron Reeves 13 times Saturday and the Longhorns rolled to a 26-9 Southwest Conference football victory behind Raul Allegre's four field goals.

The victory before a rain-soaked gathering of 56,439 fans in Memorial Stadium boosted Texas' record to 6-1 overall and 3-1 in the SWC race. Tech dropped to 1-6 and 0-5.

Reeves, hounded, unmercifully by All-American tackle Kenneth Sims, tackle Mark Weber and linebacker Jeff Leiding, lost 86 yards on the sacks trying to pass against the fourth best defense in the country.

Texas added two more sacks for 13 yards in losses late in the game against backup quarterback Richy Ethridge. Weber had three sacks and Sims and Leiding two each. It was a Tech school record for being sacked trying to pass.

Tailback Rodney Tate bolted 52-yards for a touchdown on Texas' first possession to immediately dim upset hopes of the 20-point Red Raiders.

Texas built a 17-3 halftime lead on a 39-yard field goal by Allegre and Herkie Walls 20 yards romp for a touchdown on an end around.

Tech's only first half points came on Jesse Garcia's career record 49-yard field goal, and the Raiders only touchdown was produced with 38 seconds to play on a 35-yard Ethridge to Bryan Williamson scoring pass.

Allegre, who tied a school record held by Russell Erxleben and John Goodson, kicked field goals of 35, 43 and 34 yards in the second half.

The Longhorns charged to the lead the first time they had the ball, rolling 76 yards in only four plays for a touchdown.

On a third down and one, Tate, who beat out A.J. Jam

Jones for the first string tailback job, and circled left end behind guard Joe Shearin. Tate stumbled at the Tech 20 but steadied himself to complete a 52-yard scoring run, his longest for Texas.

Tech rallied late in the first quarter, moving all the way to the Longhorn 19 before a drive was stalled by a holding penalty.

The Red Raiders made it 7-3 late in the quarter. Reeves threw a 44-yard pass to Leonard Harris who carried to the Texas 33. The Longhorns held and Garcia kicked a 49-yard field goal, his longest for the Red Raiders.

A 32-yard Rick McIvor to Donnie Little pass setup Allegre's 39-yard field goal on the first possession of the second quarter.

Texas made it 17-3 on a 51-yard four play drive. John Walker ripped off gains of 5 and 23, and Carl Robinson gained 5. Then Walls took an end around handoff from McIvor and followed a block by tackle John Tobolka untouched for the 11-yard touchdown run.

Tate rushed for 63 yards in the first half but had to leave the game with a bruised knee in the second quarter and never returned.

Notre Dame crushes Navy

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Freshman split end Joe Howard scored two touchdowns and Blair Kiel hurled a pair of touchdown passes including one of 52 yards to Howard Saturday to lead Notre Dame to a crushing 38-0 victory over Navy.

Howard, making his first start at Notre Dame, caught a 34-yard pass from Kiel to set up the game's first touchdown, took an end-around reverse 13 yards for a touchdown and then snared a 52-yard Kiel pass for still another touchdown.

The victory broke a two-game Notre Dame losing streak and lifted the Irish record to 3-4 while Navy's three-game winning streak ended, leaving the Middies with a 5-3 record.

Navy was bottled up completely in the first half and limited to one first down. The Middies did not cross into Notre Dame territory until the third quarter.

Kiel scored Notre Dame's first touchdown on a one-yard sneak. After Howard went on his end-around touchdown, Kiel hurled a 27-yard touchdown pass to Tony Hunter before the long strike to Howard with a little more than three minutes left in the half.

Harry Oliver booted a 37-yard field goal for the only scoring in the third quarter to make it 31-0. Kiel left the game after the third quarter and finished with 13 completions in 23 attempts for 225 yards and the best game of his career.

The Irish scored another touchdown midway in the fourth quarter on a 20-yard pass from Tim Koegele to Larry Moriarty.

Air Force scores lone touchdown against Army

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) — Air Force, squandering numerous scoring opportunities in the first half, scored the game's lone touchdown early in the final quarter on fullback Charlie Heath's 8-yard run to beat Army 7-3 Saturday in a service academy football rivalry.

The deciding score came with 14:26 left in the game. The Falcon defense then preserved the lead on cornerback David Carraway's pair of interceptions, the last one coming on a diving grab in front of an open Army receiver at the goal line on the final play of the game.

Heath's touchdown was set up by an Army fumble at midfield. Punt returner Gary Bastin was hit almost immediately after fielding a punt and Air Force's Rick Oleszczuk recovered.

AUSTIN - Texas Parks and Wildlife Department officials, after consulting with appropriate state and federal officials and wildlife scientists, have concluded that the recent incidence of Endrin residues in waterfowl in Montana should not jeopardize the upcoming waterfowl hunting seasons in Texas.

Ted Clark, director of the department's Wildlife Division, said this evaluation was based on analyses of information received from a number of agencies, including the U.S. Fish and Wildlife and Fisheries Science, Texas Department of Health, Texas Department of Agriculture and other state wildlife agencies in the Central Flyway.

The agencies concurred that unless additional information is received to indicate otherwise, there is no reason to close or delay Texas' waterfowl seasons. The duck and goose hunting season opens in West Texas, Oct. 27 and in the remainder of the state on Nov. 7.

The highly publicized incident began in early September, when residues of the pesticide Endrin were detected in waterfowl and other wildlife in the farming region of eastern Montana where wheat crops had been sprayed for control of cutworms.

Clark said Montana wildlife officials already have approved normal opening of their duck season, but delayed opening the goose season until Nov. 15 only in the eight counties where Endrin had been sprayed.

The Texas situation is vastly different from Montana, Clark noted. "First of all, we have no reports that Endrin was used on or near the water areas used by most of the ducks and geese in Texas," he said.

"Second, the chance of an individual hunter getting a contaminated bird from Montana is fairly small because of the dilution with large numbers of waterfowl from other areas, and the odds of his taking more than one are extremely remote."

Wildlife areas open to public quail hunting

AUSTIN - Quail hunters are reminded by Texas Parks and Wildlife Department officials that several wildlife management areas offer public quail hunting during the open seasons.

On five of the areas, hunters are required to report to a check station and pay a $5 fee before hunting. Five additional areas are open to quail hunting with no fee charged. There will be no limit on numbers of hunters participating at any of the management areas.

The public hunts are not necessarily indicative of high game populations, but rather are a part of ongoing management programs.

The management areas where public hunting is available and the dates and locations of hunts are as follows:

Black Gap, 55 miles south of Marathon of FM 2627 in Brewster County, Oct. 3 - 4, 10 - 11, 17 - 18, 24 - 25 - 31, Nov. 1 - 1981.

Chaparral, eight miles west of Artesia Wells on Highway 133, dimit and LaSalle counties, Nov. 1 - 7 - 8, Dec. 19 - 20, 1981. Jan. 9 - 10, 16 - 17, 23 - 24, 30 - 31, Feb. 6 - 7, 13 - 14, 20 - 21, 27 - 28, 1982.

Choke Canyon - 10 miles west of Three Rivers on Highway 72, Live Oak and McMullen Counties: Nov. 1 - 6, 10 - 12, 16 - 19, 1981.

23 - 26, 30 Dec. 3, 7 - 10, 14 - 17, 21 - 24, 30 - 31, 1981. Jan. 4 - 17, 22 - 24, 29 - 31, 1982.

Gene Howe, six miles east of Canadian on FM 2266, Hemphill County, Oct. 31 - Nov. 1, Nov. 7 - 8, 14 - 15, Dec. 5 - 6, 12 - 13, 19 - 20, 26 - 27, 1981. Jan. 2 - 3, 9 - 10, 16 - 17, 23 - 24, 30 - 31, 1982.

Matador, 11 miles north of Paducah on FM 3256, Cottle County, Oct. 31 - Nov. 1, Nov. 7 - 8, 14 - 15, 21 - 22, 28 - 29, Dec. 5 - 6, 12 - 13, 19 - 20, 26 - 27, 1981. Jan. 2 - 3, 9 - 10, 16 - 17, 23 - 24, 30 - 31, 1982.

No fee will be charged for quail hunting during the regular open quail seasons at the Eastern Wildlife Management Areas. They are: Toledo Bend Unit, northeast Shelby County near Joaquin off FM 139; Dam "B" Unit, Jasper and Tyler counties approximately 14 miles west of Jasper; Granger Unit, Williamson County, seven miles east of Granger; Pat Mayse Unit, west end of Pat Mayse Reservoir in Lamar County; Somerville Unit on Somerville Reservoir in Lee and Burleson Counties about 17 miles southeast of Caldwell.

Dove hunting also is currently being allowed at several management areas across the state where the season is open. For further information on public hunts call the department's toll - free information line, 1-800-792-1112.

Hotline available to report game violations

AUSTIN - Effective immediately concerned citizens may call a toll - free telephone number to report flagrant violations of Texas' Wildlife and fish laws and receive cash rewards if the information they provide results in an arrest and conviction.

"Operation Game Thief" now is underway, and the 24-hour number is 1-800-792-GAME.

The six - member Operation Game Thief Committee held its organizational meeting in Austin last week and adopted basic guidelines for the rewards program.

No public funds will be used in the program. The rewards, ranging from $50 to $200, will be funded by donations from individuals and organizations.

"I consider a poacher to be every bit as much a thief as someone who holds up a grocery store," Harry Tension of Fort Worth, the committee's first chairman, said.

"I've realized for a long time the need for a program like this in Texas," he said.

Joining Tension on the committee are Ed Spencer of Dallas, Walter Fondren III of Houston, Ed Stedman Jr. of Beaumont, Mrs. Modesta Williams of Midland and Radcliffe Killam of Laredo.

Tension said the program already has received pledges totaling more than $20,000 from individuals and organizations to get the program started.

The concept of rewarding informants for game violations was first explored by the New Mexico Department of Game and Fish. Their Operation Game Thief program was initiated in 1976. It has received strong financial support, and during 1980, the information received from informants led to 109 prosecutions, according to Dan Pursley, director of the New Mexico program.

Pursley told committee members that he anticipated the Texas program will result in at least 2,000 investigations and 500 prosecutable cases annually.

The game thief program was authorized by House Bill 1421 passed by the 67th Texas Legislature. The bill directed the executive director of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department to consider nominations and name the committee's six members, who have been appointed to staggered six - year terms without pay.

Persons calling in tips about law violations must provide certain information when making the report, but they may remain anonymous if so desired. If the officer taking the information believes there is sufficient information to suggest a flagrant violation has occurred, the information will then be relayed to one of the department's 10 regional law enforcement supervisors.

Houston rolls over TCU in soggy game

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - Quarterback Lionel Wilson scored one touchdown and passed for another Saturday as Houston rolled to a soggy 20-16 Southwest Conference football victory over Texas Christian.

A skimpy homecoming crowd of 13,527 and a regional television audience witnessed the Halloween contest under overcast skies and intermittent heavy rain.

Wilson, a sophomore, rifled a 20-yard scoring shot to flanker David Robertson, and, with a nifty fake, galloped 12 yards for the second TD.

Mike Clendenen booted chip-shot field goals of 19 and 18 yards after a pair of TCU turnovers and a swarming Cougar defense torpedoed the potent Horned Frog passing attack.

Steve Stamp, TCU's passing wizard, suffered an apparent shoulder injury early in the fourth period after Grady Turner's interception set up Clendenen's second field goal.

The triumph came on the heels of a 20-17 victory over Arkansas last week and kept the Cougars, 5-3 and 3-2, within sight of the SWC leaders.

The Frogs, 0-6 in the Houston series, are 2-4-1 and 1-4 on the year.

Greg Porter's 23-yard field goal staked TCU to a 3-0 lead with 8:20 left in the half after Ron Brewer's fumble recovery at the Houston 17.

Wilson drove the Cougars 81 yards in eight plays for the go-ahead touchdown, a bullseye to Robertson alone in the end zone.

Just seconds later, DeWayne Calloway recovered a TCU fumble at the Frog 8. Clendenen's kick cleared the upright with one second left in the half.

With Houston leading 17-3 in the third quarter, TCU guard Lionel Williams grabbed a Cougar fumble in the mid-air and lumbered 11 yards for a touchdown.

Amid a driving rain storm, alternate quarterback Eddie Clark took TCU 54 yards in six plays and winged a 2-yard scoring pass to Marcus Gilbert with 2:09 left.

Then TCU recovered an on-side kick at the Cougar 46, but the threat died on downs.

Hope in housing

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Can the purchase price and operating costs of a new, single-family home — now beyond the reach of all but a small percentage of Americans — be brought again within range of middle-class Americans?

Nobody promises. They cannot. The future, always deep in the haze of time to come, is now almost obscured by problems of the U.S. economy, of the building industry, of finance. Hope instead is offered.

One of the more confident forecasts is by William McKenna, chairman of the President's Commission on Housing. "There is nothing I can see in the housing picture that cannot be handled," he said in an interview.

The biggest problem, said McKenna, is interest rates, a statement with which few in housing or finance would argue. Lower rates are the key to unlocking the market, says the National Association of Home Builders.

If mortgage rates dropped to 13 percent from 17 percent, the NAHB estimates, about 6 million more Americans would qualify for home loans.

Almost all agree also that to obtain lower rates the economy must be stabilized, but there is great doubt in the industry over whether the president is on course and can obtain the stability goals he seeks.

Meanwhile, there is hope for some success, partial or perhaps more lasting, in less fundamental ways.

FINANCING
—Healthier Savings & Loans. If savings obtained by lenders from tax-exempt All Savers Certificates are used as Congress intended, up to $37.5 billion, would go to finance housing or agriculture, says Jack Carlson, executive vice president, National Association of Realtors.

Partly because of this, he says, "Mortgage rates could trend down to the 15 percent to 16 percent range by year's end and decline further to 14 percent to 15 percent during 1982." Still too high for most, but an improvement.

—Pension funds, the largest pool of investment money, are seen as a possible major source of future loans.

TAX INCENTIVES
—Many are proposed. The NAHB, among others, suggests a housing and educational savings account in which interest earned would be tax-exempt so long as the money eventually went to buy a first home or pay for higher education.

TECHNOLOGY
—Some technological advances, such as unit construction, already have been used widely. Houses that are totally factory built may offer savings in the future. New mass produced products, sometimes regulated from use in certain local areas, offer big possibilities.

While these and other savings opportunities exist, however, most housing spokesmen warn that unless drastic changes occur, especially regarding interest rates, millions of Americans may be disappointed.

Sculptor preserves the West

Realism touched with the mystic Eyes wide in bone freezing fright, a plait of Indian hair spiraling into a child's hand, a buffalo hunter's look of despair...

Pampa sculptor Gerald "Sandy" Sanders weaves Indian folklore and superstitions into his bronzes. With no formal art education, he brings to life the quickly fading past of the West and preserves the spirit of the native Americans.

Viewing Sanders's work which has been exhibited at many of the major art shows in this area, one is immediately impressed with the minute attention to detail, the sure, realistic touch reminiscent of Frederic Remington and Charles Russell.

However, it is when he describes the subject's feelings at the moment it was frozen in bronze that the spiritual element of Sanders's work comes to light.

"Indians are a strange folk. Not strange, really, but different," he says. "You don't ask them to tell you something. If he asks to tell you, you listen. And if you don't, he may never ask you again."

Indians believe that souls are embodied in owls, an evil omen. An Indian will not have anything related to an owl in his home, for this reason.

Sanders describes how he captured this belief in one of his bronzes.

It depicts an Indian brave with the woven blanket around his shoulders. It is dark. A wind catches the blanket sweeping it up around the brave's head. As the tail of the blanket flaps, the Indian sees the head of an owl. Unspeakable fear fills the eyes of the Indian in the sculpture, the mouth is open in a silent scream.

"The Vision" is a bronze that has a doubly interesting history. An old warrior looks ahead as if into time, his long hair swirls into an Indian woman holding a child being taken away by an eagle. The child looks below, his tiny hand grasping a plait of the old man's hair.

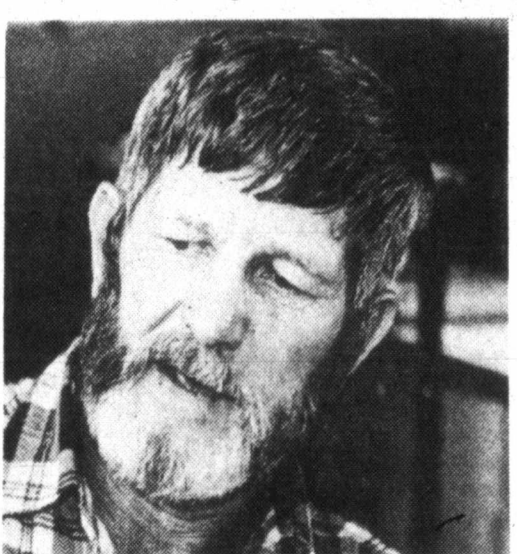

Sanders says this piece symbolizes the old Indian's vision of the future of his people, as they were, dying away. The hair held by the child is meant to be the "ribbon of hope," he says.

Several times, unexplainable things have happened in connection with his work, Sanders says. One of these was directly associated with "The Vision."

A group known as "The Gunfighters," appearing in Pampa, were invited by Sanders to his studio. One of the men stopped short when he saw "The Vision," his face drained of color. He pulled out his wallet and showed Sanders a photo.

It was an exact duplicate of the old Indian warrior in the sculpture. It was also the man's father, a full-blooded Indian.

Sanders, commenting on the faces of his subjects, says, "I get them out of the sky." He rarely uses models, and then only for anatomical details when necessary.

"I really have to concentrate to keep the faces as far from mine as I can. I know a guy who is a fine painter, a fine painter. But every one of his Indians looks just like him," the sculptor says.

A bust, called "The Mountain Man," is practically a self-portrait of Sanders — the same full beard, craggy face, and squinty eyes drooping in the corners. What it does not show is Sanders' deep blue eyes, and brown hair sprinkled liberally with gray.

Sanders has worked full time in sculpture for only a short while, having recently retired from Southwestern Bell Telephone after 35 years.

"As soon as I saw I could make a living at this, I retired," he quips, eyes crinkling into a smile. "Now, every day is Saturday."

One of Sanders's favorite sayings is, "I'm not an artist. I don't know anything about this business."

Actually, Sanders has no formal training. He says he has no idea how he got his abilities.

"I've been pretty much on my own ever since I was about 13," Sanders recalls a youth of wandering from job to job. When he got enough money, he would move on, occasionally stopping for a time at his aunt's in Fort Worth.

The western influence came from his uncles who worked on the Matador Ranch telling him stories of the West and from Indians he has met through the years who have given him a glimpse of their complex culture, Sanders says.

For himself, Sanders's joy is carving great elk horns into intricate natural scenes. He went to Washington once to copyright the unusual art, but found it was originally done, although much more primitively, by the early Indians, he says.

He gets his horns in a yearly elk hunt in Colorado. Throughout his studio, massive racks of elk horns lean against the wall. A special cabinet displays the three-dimensional carvings ranging from a delicate herring crane to a grizzly bear scratching his back on a tree. Tiny details can be seen in the carvings, such as a perfect replica of a turtle.

Sanders does not carve with a knife or scalpel, but with a hand-held drill. For the elk horns, he uses a tiny dentist's drill bit.

The elk horns are not for sale. "They're one of a kind. There is no way to duplicate them," he says. "Besides, I've put too many hours in them. They're like a part of me," he comments. Hours, here, means from 100 to 200 — agreeably, a sizeable amount of time.

Sanders's desire to create has been growing in him "like a cancer," he says, for as long as he can remember. Working for the telephone company, he remembers the need to express himself artistically.

"I even got into taxidermy," the sculptor recalls, but this did not satisfy him either.

The revelation came one day when he was working on a home-made knife handle made out of elk horn. The tip of the horn, instead of a knife handle, became the crane, its delicate bill reaching to the sky.

Sanders works aggressively. The work lights in his studio are sometimes on until two or three in the morning. ("When I get carried away," he jokes.)

He works in all types of mediums, bronze castings, alabaster, mesquite, ironwood, black walnut, and, of course, the elk horns.

Oil painting and life-size works are two fields Sanders wants to expand his talents in. "If I could sell them, I'd get something 5 1/2 to 6 feet. But, I don't have room for it here," he says. "I know I can paint, too," he adds.

"I have so many, many ideas. I hope I have enough time left on this earth to get them all done."

MRS. FRANK W. MORRISON

Stephenson, Morrison wed in afternoon ceremony

A Victorian theme dominated the uniting of Elizabeth Stephenson and Frank W. Morrison as they were wed Oct. 25 at 2 p.m. at the Wiley Reynolds Sr. Ranch north of Pampa, with the Rev. Claude Cone, pastor of the First Baptist Church, officiating.

Fresh grease stains on light-colored fabrics can be removed with common household absorbents such as cornstarch, talcum or cornmeal. Place fabric on clean cloth or towel and sprinkle with absorbent. Let stand overnight, then brush clean. Works on rugs, too.

When making iced tea from a mix, add a small amount of very hot water to crystals before adding cold water. The crystals will dissolve completely for better flavor.

On Saturday, you can drive around Pampa and see young boys and girls participating in soccer games. Soccer is a good sport which helps provide good exercise, an outlet for excess energy, and good coordination. In addition, have you noticed how many parents are drawn into the activity with their children?

Sports of all types offer parents and children a chance to be together and communicate with each other. However, it also puts a great deal of responsibility on parents.

Parental expectations, whether it be in sports, school, or other activities, may dictate success or failure in a child. Many times parents have different expectations from their children. Some parents tend to be very rigid and set parental expectations too high. As a result, the child is never able to experience success. The child always seems to fail. When a child is faced with failure after failure, his value or his worth in his own eyes goes down. The result is a low self-concept.

Other parents have more realistic expectations for their child. Hence the child can achieve, can taste success and can receive praise. The child with a high self-concept will feel more confident and see life in a more positive manner. He will want to try new things, but will not be shattered if "something doesn't work out." He will be friendly and able to mix with other children. In school, he will achieve and will not have to seek the attention of the teacher in a disruptive manner.

Parents must base expectations of children on the fundamental facts of child development. In other words, the parent should know what the child is able to do at a particular age. After considering the basic or general facts of child development, check your own expectations against these facts.

One way to accomplish this task is to catch yourself when you yell at or otherwise correct your child. Keep a small notepad handy and make a note about the incident. At the end of the day, survey your list and notice those things the child did that you felt you had to change or scold him about. After a week or so, you should have a clear idea of your expectations. Now check them against the basic facts of child development and your own child's development. With some creative thinking, you should be able to adjust, if necessary, your parental expectations.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Woman's past tricks leave her trapped

DEAR ABBY: I hope I'm not too messed up to be helped. I'm a nice-looking 26-year-old girl with a past I am not very proud of. I was a hooker at 15. By the time I was 19, I had three kids and was married (and divorced) twice.

I went to work in a strip joint as a "B" girl. All I had to do was sit with guys and get them to buy me drinks. It was an easy $400 a week. I worked four nights a week from 9 p.m. to 4 a.m., which enabled me to be home every day and be a good mother to my kids.

For the last five years I've been married to a guy I met at work. I suppose I should tell you I started taking guys in the back room and making from $800 to $1,000 a week. I'm not very proud of this, but I only had to work three nights a week. I hate this job, but my husband won't let me quit because the money is so good. He says we could never make it on what he brings home. (He drives a cab.)

Abby, do you think if he really loved me he would let me do this kind of work? I take a lot of abuse from guys and I'm ashamed of what I do. I feel trapped. Please tell me what to do.

MONA LISA IN JOLIET, ILL.

DEAR MONA LISA: Don't ask your husband — tell him you are quitting your job. Then quit! And if he gives you any static, leave him.

DEAR ABBY: I just read that a 31-year-old Pennsylvania school teacher (a married woman with a 6-year-old daughter, no less) was charged with raping two teen-age boys. One was 13 and the other 15. The teacher was said to have seduced these boys in various places, including her home, her car and a schoolroom closet!

Abby, the whole thing sounds ridiculous to me. Any boys big enough to have sex are old enough to defend themselves. (I'd like to see the teen-age boy who couldn't run faster than a 31-year-old woman.)

I can't believe a woman can force a man or boy to have sex against his will. Please comment.

SKEPTICAL IN SCARSDALE

DEAR SKEPTICAL: The woman was charged with statutory rape — engaging in sex with a minor. Whether the boys were "willing" or not is irrelevant.

Coronado Center "Where you are always Welcome" 665 5033

I lost 82 pounds on the Diet Center program--and I'm still losing

The Diet Center located on the first floor of the Hughes Building, is offering local dieters a weight loss program that is fast, safe, effective and totally natural.

Diet Center counselor Louise Prentice works at the center to aid dieters with their daily weight loss and to give them moral support and constant encouragement. Support is needed especially in the plateaus, a time when a dieter levels off and ceases losing weight consistently.

Louise has been in the diet center program for eight months. She has shed 82 pounds and according to her calculations she has 30 pounds to go.

"I came to the program when I was 39, after spending three weeks in bed during the pre-holiday month of November," Louise said.

"This hospitalization was due to an arthritic condition that affects my hips and legs. This condition made walking very painful and difficult," she said.

Louise entered the diet center program after several unsuccessful attempts at dieting with other programs.

"I had checked into all the aids, the pills, the organized weight loss clubs, hypnosis and even starvation diets. But the Diet Center offered me a program without drugs and that was what sold me," she said.

"The main reason I sought outside aid, was that I didn't like myself very well," she said.

"Most overweight people do not like to admit they have a weight problem. They often compare themselves to even heavier persons and then feel they are not so bad. I worked at keeping myself neat, and I used all the words I could to keep myself from admitting that I had a big weight problem," she said.

Louise decided that if she was ever going to do something about her weight — now was the time!

At the Diet Center Louise met center owner Sherry Conklin. Sherry had attended classes in nutrition and the Diet Center program in Rexburg, Idaho with the founder of the Diet Center, Sybil Ferguson.

Sybil Ferguson, an Idaho housewife decided some ten years ago to lose 60 pounds, she had no idea that it would result in a business that spans the nation.

She had tried so many different programs and diets that when she put her mind to it, she created her own. Her diet so impressed her physician that he started to refer many of his overweight patients to her.

For a while her business was just a homespun hobby then, through the vision of her husband Roger Ferguson, she started to create a nationwide program.

There are currently 850 operating Diet Center franchises in the U.S. Besides keeping her own weight down, Sybil Ferguson has helped dieters lose over 40 million pounds.

Sherry knew when she met Louise in the Pampa Diet Center office, that Louise's determination should make her a success.

"After talking to Louise I tried to tailor the diet to her own health problems, which, at that time were numerous. I gave her an information sheet and told her to take the information to her physician," Sherry said.

Louise received permission to start the diet center program from her local physician.

"The diet gives no drugs and it allows a balanced diet so anyone can use it," Sherry said.

Louise set her goal at losing 120 pounds.

"The first week on the diet I realized I wasn't hungry but still I was losing weight," Louise said.

"At the end of the first week the scale showed I had lost 10 pounds. I knew then I was on my way," she said.

After the first six weeks Louise had lost 30 pounds.

Sherry explained that the diet works due to the fact of an excellent balance of foods.

"People do not eat the junk foods that don't fill the stomach. They eat good foods that satisfy and give necessary energy. The craving for sweets is lost," Sherry said.

"Louise lost weight because she had determination and enthusiasm for the program. She tried the new foods and the new recipes, she made the program fun," she said.

With only 30 pounds to loose, Louise has been made aware of how she lives and how she eats.

"We Americans eat so much junk food and we allow our children to consume as much as we do," Louise said.

"Now I am really aware, you will always be hungry if you eat junk food. One sandwich leads to another, and everyone knows that one potato chip leads to another. When you eat right you feel good," she said.

Anyone can lose weight, but the key to successful dieting is in learning to keep the weight off, the Diet Center program helps people to lose weight and at the same time teaches the dieter how the body functions and why proper nutrition can be so important to a weight-reduction program.

Diet Center dieters do not count calories they learn instead to count nutrients.

The Diet Center program consists of a balanced diet of proteins, carbohydrates, fats and water each day.

"Without the proper balance of essential foods in the body. You cannot lose weight and feel good at the same time. The Diet Center diet is an all natural diet and all the normal everyday junk food is just not allowed," Sherry said.

The Diet Center program has four actual diet steps, a conditioning diet, a reducing diet, a stabilization program and a maintenance program. Dieters can expect to loose between 17 and 25 pounds in six weeks.

"The conditioning diet is a short two-day program that starts the dieter on the right road. During this program the dieters see a counselor once a day. The reducing diet reduces body weight. This phase can last up to six weeks and again the dieter sees a counselor once a day.

The stabilization diet stabilizes the weight loss as it firms and retones tissues. The dieter may come to the counselor as necessary. The maintenance diet requires the dieter to continue eating a balanced diet but allows a wider variety of foods. The dieter may see a counselor for a year any time," Sherry said.

"Our program also stresses the importance of water in the diet to keep the body flushed of wastes and impurities. Water also aids in keeping fluid retention down. Due to the well balanced diet, the dieter will not be left with drastic wrinkling or flabby skin," Sherry said.

"The body tones as you lose and during the stabilization program the skin tones even more. The dieter loses only the adipose tissue which is the outside layer of fat and not the cushioning or structural fat which is essential to the body. On fat diets or during illness, these essential fats are usually the first to be lost," Sherry said.

What does the program mean to Louise?

"It has been the greatest thing to ever come into my life," she said.

MR. AND MRS. T.O. UPSHAW

Peeking at Pampa

Weren't the "News" pictures of the Chamber of Commerce banquet marvelous? Hope you noticed the happy and natural smiles of Louise Fletcher and Reed Echols. So many people make "stage" smiles for pictures, but these two gals looked exactly right. We're just proud of both of them.

The whole evening was a huge success, many said the best ever. The new Show Choir of Pampa High School performed under the direction of Billy Talley, with band pieces in accompaniment. Heidi Allen sang the National Anthem and was resplendent in her blue formal with her shoulder-to-waist sash proclaiming her as "Miss Top O' Texas." Ed Sweet, new first vice president of the Chamber, introduced Joe Griffith, who described himself as "a 40-year-old bachelor" and gave an enjoyable humorous talk. Louise Fletcher, publisher of the Pampa News and Chamber director, presented Reed Echols as Citizen of the Year, a most deserved honor in light of all the community services that Reed has done. And wasn't it lovely that her whole family came for the occasion? Imagine daughter, Susan, coming from England!

Many beautifully dressed ladies were there. Heard several say that Shanta Mohan (wife of "Dr. Vijay") was outstanding in her golden yellow sari. Aren't we glad the Mohans are here instead of in their native India?

Jim Ward closed his year as president of the Chamber and turned the gavel over to Carl Kennedy. We owe so much to our Chamber of Commerce here in Pampa.

Just got the word that one of our younger citizens is about to assume new responsibility. Keith Coffee, son of Doug and Nancy, has finished college and plans to take a break and travel before he begins his medical studies. But he won't be touring for pure pleasure. He's going to Africa with a good knowledge of the care of the ill because he has worked as an orderly at the hospital here during summers while he was in college.

Sorry to hear that John Gay, minister of the Mary Ellen and Harvester Church of Christ will be moving to Fayetteville, Ark. soon. We'll all miss him.

Big crowd attended the film on Holland at the Heritage Room last week. Gary Stevens introduced the speaker, Harry Reed, who narrated his own film. A name was drawn for a $25 prize, a new "wrinkle" this year. David Hunter's name was drawn but he wasn't there. Hope he got the money later.

Heard that the Guy Lombardo orchestra will play for a private club in Pampa in February of 1982. Seems the Lombardo family has kept the band up to the standard that Guy set when alive. Should draw a capacity crowd for dancing when they come here.

Mentioned Jim Thompson, son of Jimmy and Margaret, last week. Heard he played and sang with Mike Pittet for the Pampa Rotary Club recently and was a great success. The audience gave them a standing ovation. Jim has been a soloist at churches and dinner theaters. Hope fame awaits them both.

Heard that David Nail disbanded his band. Too bad. He made excellent country-western music and had a big following of friends here.

Nice to see Billie and Hansford Ousley out partying sometimes. They still live in Pampa but he works in Amarillo and gets up very early in the morning, so they aren't late-nighters.

Have you heard about the Pampa News Women's Volleyball Team winning the Invitational Tournament in Canyon not long ago, a real victory for our town? They beat a team from Hereford in the finals. Chico Ramirez coached the team. Players were Doris King, Jeanette Britt, Demetra Simmons, Mia Dacus, Rosie Martine, Maria Santa Cruz and Peggy Jo Karbo. Congratulations to them!

Hear there were ever so many Halloween parties held, this last week. Will tell you about them next time.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

November 1, 1981

A forward-minded individual you'll make friends with this coming year could be the tonic you need to inspire your imagination and help you to broaden your outlook.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your restless spirit will be gratified today if you share your hours with persons equally as active. Mix with the doers, not the dreamers. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) It will be difficult to dismiss commercial matters today, so why not involve yourself socially with those with whom you're conducting business?

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) When others see how fervently you believe in the causes you espouse, you will be able to readily attract them to your banner today. Get on your soapbox.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) It may be wise today to step to the sidelines in a joint venture if your associate is doing as good a job as you feel you could do. Why rock the boat?

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) If there's something important you think should be discussed with a close associate, don't let too much time go by without ironing it out. Act today.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Being a go-getter is admirable, but be careful today you don't push those assisting you a bit too hard. What arouses your ambitions may not awaken theirs.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Exchanging ideas with persons in accord with your way of thinking will prove enjoyable today. Avoid those whose views differ from yours.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Instead of waiting for others to get procedures moving, use your own initiative today. Be responsible for starting things which could be helpful to the entire family.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It may be necessary to be more assertive in making decisions today which collectively affect you and your mate. Be firm, but not nasty.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) The possibility of substantial returns on personal enterprises looks exceptionally good today. Be prepared to put in extra hours, if necessary.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Don't keep Dan Cupid waiting in the wings if there is something you met recently whom you find attractive. Do something about it now. Don't leave things to chance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) There is a responsibility you failed to attend to properly, but no one knows about it except you. Take the time to clear it up.

Lorne Greene may have found new Bonanza

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's possible that in ABC's "Code Red" fire-fighting series Lorne Greene may have found his new "Bonanza."

The show has all the ingredients that kept "Bonanza" on the air for 14 years — plus fires, sirens, fire engines and helicopters. The stories may not have much sophistication, but pyrotechnics designed to keep youngsters huddled in front of the set are there in abundance.

Greene plays Joe Rorchek, a battalion chief who's the head of a family of fire fighters. One son's a fireman, another is a fire helicopter pilot. A young wife he's taken in is in the fire department's Explorer Scout program. And regularly welcomed into the bosom of the family is the city's first woman fire fighter.

The only "civilian" among them is Rorchek's wife, who's gone back to college to finish her education.

"I remember when the mudslides hit Mandeville Canyon in 1969," says Greene. "My neighbor across the street got caught in a slide and the fire department came to rescue him. They got a rope on him but a side of the hill came down. He was killed and six firemen were injured."

"You don't hear much about that. I think one of the values of 'Code Red' will be to let people see these invisible fire fighters up close. We know they're there and we feel safe, but we don't know who they are. The police are very visible, but you never think of firemen until you see the red truck screaming by. And then you never see their faces."

Green wears his gold-trimmed navy blue chief's uniform, and his hair, which was still dark when he began "Bonanza" in 1959, is now snow white. He says, "If your cat's up a tree, you call the fire department. If someone's hurt, you call the fire department. If there's a mudslide or your house is on fire, you call the fire department. They're our first line of defense."

He says "Code Red" isn't the show he set out to do when the pilot was filmed. His character originally was an arson investigator, and the stories were to be aimed more toward adults. Then ABC decided to put the series in the so-called "children's hour" at 7 p.m. Sunday.

"As soon as they did that we had to start putting in things to educate children," he says. "In the next show we film, for instance, we talk about all the things the fire department has invented to help the blind and deaf in case of a fire."

"That's why we changed it — we had to orient it more toward children, and that meant tips on fire prevention and what to do in a fire. We felt I could get more involved in these things if I was a battalion chief. He's at the scene of a fire and gets involved in every facet of fire fighting."

Tube talk: Bruce Weitz and 'Death of a Centerfold'

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dorothy Stratten lived a Cinderella-like existence when she came to Hollywood, but Paul Snider was no Prince Charming.

The NBC movie "Death of a Centerfold: The Dorothy Stratten Story" is the tragic tale of a young woman slain by Snider, her estranged husband, just when her career seemed ready to take off. Snider killed the 20-year-old centerfold model and actress with a shotgun on Aug. 14, 1980, then took his own life.

Snider found Miss Stratten in an ice cream parlor in Vancouver, Canada, and instantly realized that he could make money off her beauty. She became a Playmate in Playboy magazine, the 1980 Playmate of the Year, and got roles in several movies. Her most important film, "Galaxina," opened the week she was killed.

Jamie Lee Curtis stars as Miss Stratten, whose fate was sealed when she decided she no longer needed Snider and left him after a brief marriage. Bruce Weitz stars as Snider, and Robert Reed is the movie director who takes her under his wing.

The two-hour movie will be broadcast Sunday night.

"After we began shooting, I met people who had known Paul Snider," said Weitz, who is best known as Mick Belker, the scruffy undercover detective in NBC's "Hill Street Blues." "No one ever had a kind word to say about him."

"But I didn't believe it. Anybody so full of self-pity that he would take another life and his own life had to be more than just pure evil."

Weitz was not first choice for the role and was signed only the day before production began. "I think MGM wanted someone with a more recognizable name," he said. "I don't think Bruce Weitz is a household name. But NBC wanted me because it benefits them to have their series people in movies."

Weitz plays the role with an oily charm and an undercurrent of hostility. "He was a man who saw in this woman his future," the actor said. "He was a small-time hood in Vancouver and he was being run out of town by the underworld bosses. He placed his future in her hands. And somewhere along the line I think he fell deeply in love with her. I'm sorry there're not more suggestions of that in the film."

Colbert likes audience to have good time

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "That was a sweet audience. I love it when they have a good time," Claudette Colbert says, greeting an interviewer to her dressing room after a performance of the Broadway show in which she's starring, "A Talent for Murder."

The actress, who was 78 in September, adds, "I think really the only advantage that comedians have over tragedians is the kick it is to hear people laugh. I can't tell you what a pleasure that is."

"I feel people know me," Miss Colbert says, adding with her warm, light but throaty laugh, "They should. They grew up with me. It's a terrific joy."

She made her Broadway debut in 1923, first starred on Broadway in 1927, and started a career of 64 movies in 1928. She, Clark Gable and director Frank Capra won Academy Awards for "It Happened One Night" in 1934. That classic stamped Miss Colbert's heart-shaped face, fluffy bangs and comedy talent on the minds of generations of viewers of its reruns. In 1945, she was nominated for an Academy Award for her wartime wife and mother role in "Since You Went Away."

Her return to Broadway was in 1956, followed by "The Marriage-Go-Round" with Charles Boyer in 1958. Her last previous appearance was in 1979 opposite Rex Harrison in "The Kingfisher."

"The reason why I don't do a play so often," Miss Colbert says, "is that I get scripts I don't like. What I loved about this, frankly, was the character. I was a very wicked girl in a small town, Midwestern carnival in 'The Barker' in 1927. But it has been my fate, mostly, that I didn't play tough ladies. So, when I read this tough old bird, I thought, 'That's for me.'"

Jean-Pierre Aumont is billed, with Miss Colbert, above the title of "A Talent for Murder." They're both natives of Paris. She came to America at 3, spoke French at home and didn't learn English until she went to school. She recalls the other children laughing at her accent and wonders if that's why she started acting in comedy.

She and Aumont both acted in a French movie about Versailles once, though they didn't meet. "He played a cardinal and I played one of the mistresses of Louis XIV. We worked right in the palace, at night because they had tourists going through in the daytime. I can not tell you the feeling."

"They couldn't light up the whole thing every night. They'd only light the scene being used in the palace. The dressing rooms had been stables. A fellow with a big flashlight would come get you. I'd walk up these marble steps to the room where we were working, two ladies holding up my train. There'd be an echo in the dark. My hair was standing straight up."

"I swear I used to feel ghosts looking down those marble steps, wondering what we were doing."

Miss Colbert plays a successful mystery writer who may become a victim of somebody named in her will. Or she herself may be the murderer. There are laughs, but the situation is going to be serious for somebody. So, Miss Colbert has taken her bangs, which she considers her comedy trademark, and brushed them a bit to one side.

The critics didn't like the play but did like the star. At this performance, the audience, one could tell, enjoyed both. They weren't merely charmed by seeing, live, a long-time famous performer.

Joseph Levine and 'Tattoo'

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — That tireless apostle of sell, Joseph E. Levine, was in town recently with his latest hustle. It's called "Tattoo."

The 20th Century-Fox release stars Bruce Dern and Maud Adams and reflects producer Levine's latter-day taste for the bizarre. Dern is back with one of his crazies, this time a tattoo artist who captures and decorates a fashion model. They end up like a pair of love-making billboards.

Critical reception for "Tattoo" has ranged from the Los Angeles Times' "exquisitely wrought, terrifically stylish, ambitious and far-out" (Kevin Thomas) to Daily Variety's "a picture everyone can hate."

The pre-release reception to "Tattoo" was something else. Following his usual pattern, Levine had built his selling campaign around a striking piece of art, this time the reclining lower torso of a tattooed woman, her ankles bound. Feminists in New York raged against the ads and defaced them in the subways. The Transit Authority, reacting to protests from a group called Women Against Pornography, removed the posters from the subways.

While his rights may have been trampled, showman Levine admitted, "I don't object to the controversy; I wish I had thought of it."

Ever since he sold his Embassy Pictures to Avco, Levine has devoted himself to producing one film at a time, following through from first script to final promotion. He demonstrated his acumen with his first independent venture, "A Bridge Too Far." He spent $26 million to make the World War II spectacle and collected $36 million in guarantees from film distributors throughout the world — before the film's release.

Two years ago, Levine fell in love with the script of "Tattoo" and wanted to produce it.

"Tattoo" cost $5.5 million, and the producer figures it's a sure investment (he finances his own films). Even if the movie fails to turn on American audiences, he can make a profit on foreign rights, cable TV and cassettes.

His next project? He has several properties in mind and meanwhile is entertaining offers. One giant agency suggested a property with a budget of $17 million, which included fees of $2 million and $3 million to the two stars. When Levine protested such salaries, the agent replied, "Well, you started it all."

THE BODY HUMAN

"The Body Human: The Loving Process—Women," a new two-part informational special with Linda Gray of "Dallas" as informal host and participant, concludes WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 4 on CBS-TV. The special explores feelings about female sexuality, addresses the question of what sexuality is and the role it plays in women's lives, and explores the unique phenomenon we know as sexual pleasure.

Part two continues Linda Gray's growing involvement with three women—one married, one divorced and one single—in Santa Fe, New Mexico in a program that is concerned with the physiology of what occurs during sexual pleasure. The program's narration complements the women's candid and emotional conversations.

HILL STREET BLUES

Captain Furillo (Daniel J. Travanti) tries to recover from his recent break-up with Joyce Davenport (Veronica Hamel) by concentrating on the slaying of a prostitute, a rash of cab robberies and the ominous intentions of an ex-gang leader (Danny Glover) in the "Blood Money" episode of NBC-TV's "Hill Street Blues," THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 5.

Detective Washington does a slow burn when he is misled by a well-paid snitch concerning the prostitute's slaying. Meanwhile, when a huge cache of arms is stolen, Furillo continues to keep a vigilant eye on Jesse John Hudson's veiled strong-arm tactics, as the former war lord of the feared Black Arrow gang maneuvers to regain control under the innocuous guise of community involvement.

DALLAS

Bobby Ewing (Patrick Duffy) tries to console his wife, Pamela (Victoria Principal), after she suffers a life-threatening emotional breakdown triggered by her inability to conceive a child. Meanwhile J.R.'s (Larry Hagman) frustration at not being able to gain custody of his son erupts in a no-holds-barred attack on the Farlow's Southern Cross Ranch where his wife and son are now living, on CBS-TV's "Dallas," FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 6.

Also in this episode, Mitch Cooper (Leigh McCloskey) considers a career change when he is offered an internship by Dr. War-

THE BODY HUMAN

"The Body Human: The Loving Process—Women," a new two-part informational special with Linda Gray of "Dallas" as informal host and participant, concludes WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 4 on CBS-TV. The special explores feelings about female sexuality, addresses the question of what sexuality is and the role it plays in women's lives, and explores the unique phenomenon we know as sexual pleasure.

Meanwhile, when a huge cache of arms is stolen, Furillo continues to keep a vigilant eye on Jesse John Hudson's veiled strong-arm tactics, as the former war lord of the feared Black Arrow gang maneuvers to regain control under the innocuous guise of community involvement.

DALLAS

Bobby Ewing (Patrick Duffy) tries to console his wife, Pamela (Victoria Principal), after she suffers a life-threatening emotional breakdown triggered by her inability to conceive a child.

Meanwhile J.R.'s (Larry Hagman) frustration at not being able to gain custody of his son erupts in a no-holds-barred attack on the Farlow's Southern Cross Ranch where his wife and son are now living, on CBS-TV's "Dallas," FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 6.

Also in this episode, Mitch Cooper (Leigh McCloskey) considers a career change when he is offered an internship by Dr. War-

Stolen autos crossing border; few returning

By STEVE BREWER
Associated Press Writer

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Stolen cars and trucks taken across the border into Mexico probably should be marked like soda bottles. "No Return."

"We get some back from over there, but we know we're not even scratching the surface," said Capt. Roy Newman of the auto theft section of the Texas Department of Public Safety.

Problems with recovering stolen goods from south of the border is one reason a 1936 treaty between the United States and Mexico recently was rewritten. The treaty presently is pending before Congress.

State Department officials estimated in a preface to the treaty that stolen vehicles and airplanes taken into Mexico each year costs the United States more than $100 million.

"We estimate that 20,000 to 30,000 vehicles a year are going into Mexico and Central America," said Charles Evans of the National Auto Theft Bureau in Dallas. "That border is bleeding this country dry through stolen merchandise."

Newman said more than 79,000 vehicles were reported stolen last year in Texas alone.

"We're almost certain to go over 80,000 this year," he said, "but we have no way of knowing how many stolen vehicles end up over in Mexico."

Car thieves have no problem smuggling the vehicles out of the United States. U.S. Customs officials only check vehicles entering the country and Mexican officials normally send American vehicles through their checkpoints with a wave.

Because no checks are made, American officials are at the mercy of Mexican law officers when it comes to recovering stolen cars.

"Why should they give them back?" Evans said. "There's no advantage to them to return automobiles."

Evans said enormous duties must be paid by Mexicans who want to import American cars. Also, he said cars made by American companies in Mexican factories come with price tags that nearly double the price for the same car north of the border.

"Automobiles are very, very valuable in Mexico," he said. "Trucks are just like gold."

Evans said he believes other stolen vehicles like tractor-trailers and heavy equipment are even more desirable in Mexico.

"In a developing country like Mexico, that kind of equipment is invaluable," he said. "And it's hard for them to get. The bottom line is that it's not coming back."

Li Luis Barba of the El Paso Police Department said his auto theft division recovered 184 vehicles from Mexico last year and 59 during the first nine months of this year.

Barba said 1,482 vehicles were stolen in the El Paso area during the first nine months of 1981 and 2,363 were stolen last year. But he emphasized that there was no way to tell how many of the "hot" cars crossed the border.

Recovering the vehicles is difficult because Mexican authorities have no set system for reporting and returning stolen cars.

In Canada, authorities have a computer link-up to the U.S. nationwide system of tracking stolen vehicles. But Mexico, which lacks that sort of high technology, has no way to exchange such information.

The recovery problems are the reason for the new treaty, which was drafted earlier this year by Mexican and American diplomats and submitted to Congress in September. Erick James of the State Department's Mexican Desk said the treaty "definitely" will be ratified by Congress by the end of the year. Under the proposed agreement, Mexican officials would be required to notify the U.S. Embassy within a month of any seizures of stolen American vehicles.

The treaty requires the Mexicans to store, not use, recovered American vehicles. Mexican law presently allows agencies that confiscate stolen vehicles to keep and use them.

Finally, the treaty outlines a recovery procedure similar to the present compact. The owner is required to produce certified copies of the car title and the theft report in Spanish and designate someone in Mexico to act as his representative.

In El Paso, a system has been worked out that is faster and requires less paperwork, according to Robert Kile, U.S. consul in Ciudad Juarez.

"Once we prove to them it actually has been stolen, we can recover it in a matter of hours," Kile said. "We have an informal agreement. It's based on a letter from me, on my signature. They return the car to me. I, in turn, turn the car over to the El Paso Police Department. It makes it a lot easier on all of us."

Kile was hesitant to discuss the system since it doesn't conform with the proposed treaty.

"I just wonder whether somebody is going to say, 'Where in the hell did these guys get the authority to supersede the treaty?'" he said. "We've managed to convince (the Mexicans) that it's just too encumbering to operate on the treaty."

However, he hasn't convinced the Mexicans to promptly report every recovered vehicle.

"They don't tell me about every single car, but we've never found any evidence that anyone was trying to cover up," he said. "In many cases, they will notify me that they have recovered a stolen American car. I make the rounds. I'll notice a car and call up and they'll say, 'Oh yeah, we just picked it up.'"

There have been problems with Mexican officials allegedly being involved in the stolen car racket.

In July, five men, including three identified as Mexican national security agents, were arrested and accused of running an international auto theft ring headquartered in the San Diego area.

In 1980, a Juarez police officer was among three men arrested in an investigation of auto thefts in the El Paso area.

State Department officials say the problems have subsided somewhat since the treaty talks began.

"There are fewer complaints because the heat is on right now because of the acknowledgment that the problem exists," James said.

But Evans complains "that it's time that we quit acknowledging and start doing something."

He said insurance companies, which fund his agency, usually already have paid the theft victim by the time the vehicle is returned.

"By the time you get it back, you have forgotten you ever filed," he said. "Some of them come back a year later."

He also said the vehicles often have been damaged so badly by the time they are returned that they are worthless.

"If a car is recovered abandoned on the street, the spare, the jack, the radio and the battery will be gone," Barba said. "Somewhere along the way they get lost. Who took them? We don't know. We can't go over there and investigate."

Other cars, he said, will be missing fenders, transmissions or engine parts by the time they are recovered.

There also reportedly are "chop shops," or garages that dismantle stolen vehicles and sell the parts operating in some border cities.

"Who knows how many are going through the chop shops?" said Kile. "But if it's a fairly good car, I can't imagine them taking it apart. I don't see any tremendous parts trading over there."

Another aspect of the stolen car trade is bogus thefts, which the DPS' Newman said are increasing.

"We're finding more and more all the time that have been reported stolen when it's not a bona fide theft," Newman said. "The owner pays someone to steal his car and then he reports it stolen. Or they report the car stolen to the insurance company, get their money and bring the car back (across the border). The guy just keeps driving it around."

Despite the problems, Evans and the law enforcement officials say they must continue their push to return stolen vehicles to their American owners.

"Even if the car is worthless, you have to take it back," Evans said. "You set a precedent if you start not taking it."

"We may win, lose or draw, but it's a game you play whether you win or lose," he said.
