Red Armies Threaten Breslau, Poznan

Ardennes Is Cleared By Airpower

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR
Associated Press Staff Writer

PARIS, Jan. 23—The American First and Third armies and the Ninth airforce delivered a knockout blow to the last German defenders of the Ardennes today when the doughboys closed to within four miles of the Reich frontier with gains up to five miles on a 30-mile front and the airmen destroyed or damaged nearly 2,000 fleeing enemy vehicles.

St. Vith, eastern Belgian highway center and last major bastion in the once-dangerous bulge, fell to units of the First army at 5:45 p. m. after an all-day fight, according to a frontline dispatch from Associated Press Correspondent Edward D. Ball.

Lines Near Border

As the two American armies swept in behind the retreating Germans, thrusting to within an average of five miles of the border all along the line, Ninth airforce fighterbombers carried their annihilation of the enemy through a second day and were joined by Invader and Havoc bombers which were used in this theater for the first time as deck-level strafing planes.

The recapture of St. Vith came one month and two days after the Americans were pushed out by the Germans' December counteroffensive. Ball said that the town had been beaten into an almost unrecognizable pulp by American artillery and planes.

To the north the British Second army lunged within three miles of the Roer river, threatening the last two enemy communications centers west of the river and north of the American held Duren-Julich-Linnich line.

British Take Monfort

In gains of two miles on a six-mile arc extending more than seven miles inside the German frontier the Tommies fought into Monfort and Aphoven, both highway hubs, and captured Measbracht, Straten and Schieffendahl.

To the south the French First army unleashed a new attack against the northern side of the German's Colmar pocket, turning Maj. Gen. Jean de Lattre de Tas-

Concern Slight On West Front

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press War Analyst

In comparison to German broadcasts claiming a new break-through against the American Seventh army in the west to capture Haguenau, communications hub of the Rhine-Lauter salient above Strasbourg, Allied supreme headquarters gave small evidence of grave concern.

General Eisenhower's spokesmen seemed wholly confident that the Russian sweep across Poland put an end to Nazi offensive possibilities in the west of any major scope for the winter at least, if not forever.

That conclusion seems well justified. Certainly with Russian spearheads less than 150 miles from Berlin at two or more points and still rolling, the mass of German strategic reserves must be moving eastward.

German Power Blunted

Quite aside from the sapping effect on the German deployment in the west the astounding Russian winter campaign may have, however, events in the west of themselves tend to wash out the possibility that the Nazis can mount another counter-attack of anything like the hitting power displayed in the Belgian breakthrough. There is far more reason to expect early Allied resumption of major offensive operations than to view enemy operations on the Seventh army front in the Karlsruhe corner as more than diver-

B-29s Lash Nagoya And New Jap Interceptors Take Air

Swirling Battle Takes Toll Of Jap Airmen

(By The Associated Press)

TWENTY-FIRST BOMBER COMMAND HEADQUARTERS, Guam, Jan. 23—American Superfortresses flying in tight formations for protection against fierce Japanese air resistance bombed factories at Nagoya, Japan, today. One B-29 was lost.

A sizeable force of the Marianas-based bombers (Tokyo radio said there were "some 70") hit the industrial city, on Honshu island, in two waves of two formations each. They struck at a lower altitude than any of the recent blows given Nagoya.

The first wave flew over at 3:35 p. m., bombing visually but with unobserved results. The second wave, hitting an hour later, bombed by instruments through an overcast.

(The Japanese communique, broadcast from Tokyo, said "damage on the ground was slight").

Enemy Swarm Intercepts

Swarms of enemy fighter planes met the raiders over the Honshu coast and stayed with them through the bombing runs, breaking off action only when the B-29s were 50 to 100 miles at sea on the return trip.

Raiding crewmen reported a large number of the interceptors was shot down, observers in one B-29 alone reported they saw 15 enemy planes destroyed.

Antiaircraft fire hit the B-29 that was lost. It crashed in flames into the sea a few miles off Honshu.

The raid was the fifth heavy blow by Superforts from Marianas bases in a little over a month. Prime target in the previous attacks was the huge Kokuki aircraft plant of the Mitsubishi interests.

Twenty-first Bomber command headquarters said aerial photographs showed the Kokuki factory to be 40 per cent damaged after the first two raids of Dec. 13 and 18.

Japanese aerial opposition has been heavy in the last three B-29 attacks on Nagoya — Jan. 3, 14th and today.

The attack today gave emphasis to the avowed intention of Maj. Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, new commander of the 21st Bomber command, to hit Japan "more and more until they decide they have had enough."

The tight formation held by the Superforts over Nagoya today enabled them to better fight off Japanese interceptors, officers said.

Many of the Nipponese planes were new twin radial engine craft resembling the British Mosquito.

CAMP O'DONNELL PRISON CAMP, Luzon, Jan. 23.—Several thousand American and Filipino war prisoners who died of disease, starvation or maltreatment after surviving the "Death March" on Bataan now lie beneath wild grass covering the pitiful cemeteries near this deserted, rotting camp.

I counted graves which probably contained at least 4,000 Filipinos and several scores of Americans while visiting this lonely camp of horrors a few hours after the Yanks occupied it. All evidences were that the Japanese some time previously had removed whatever prisoners had survived their 30-months' ordeal, then had attempted to obliterate all evidence of their infamous rule by destroying prisoners' barracks in fires which whipped across several acres of dry grass and blackened the mounds where Filipinos were buried.

Filipino civilians said the Japanese garrison had departed Jan. 21, hiking across unkempt pasturelands toward the distant blue foothills where they evidently joined other bands of Japanese holding out on the right flank of the main American advance.

They left behind only death and desolation.

Wallace Action Further Delayed

(By The Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23. — Henry A. Wallace's nomination to be secretary of commerce was shoved on to a Senate sidetrack today, while his critics sought to hack away the job's vast financial responsibilities.

The Commerce committee voted 10 to 2 to defer consideration of the nomination and take up first the proposal by Senator George (D-Ga.) to strip the government's big lending agencies from the Commerce department. Hearings on the George bill were called for 2:30 p. m. (EWT) tomorrow. George and Wallace were invited to testify as was Jesse Jones, the banker President Roosevelt removed as commerce secretary to make room in the cabinet for the former vice president.

Jones Accepts

Jones accepted the invitation, but there was no immediate word whether Wallace would be present.

Chairman Bailey (D-NC) said the Commerce committee had no intention of delaying action on the nomination. Senators who have been outspoken in opposition to putting the government's lending powers into the hands of Wallace, whose economic ideas they regard as radical, made it no secret, however, that they hoped the nomination would stay in the committee pigeon-hole until a decision is reached on the George bill.

Angrily, Senator Pepper (D-Fla), a warm supporter of the Wallace nomination, told reporters "it is obviously a move to make passage of Senator George's bill a condition precedent to a vote on Mr. Wallace's confirmation."

Charges Fly

Pepper also described the George bill as "slap in the face" for Wallace. He added: "This is another way of undercutting the President and glorifying Jesse

Ousted Premier Turns To Tito

LONDON, Jan. 23 (AP)—Defying King Peter and refusing to resign, Premier Ivan Subasic and his "dismissed" cabinet ministers prepared tonight to take "protective steps" within the next 48 hours to establish with Marshal Tito a federal democratic government in Yugoslavia.

An authoritative source said Subasic, with British approval, had decided to ignore King Peter's request that he resign and would proceed to put into effect the agreement he signed with Tito.

At the same time all Yugoslav associations in London unanimously demanded that the Subasic government continue in office and return to Belgrade to put into effect the agreement with Tito.

The associations called on the Subasic government to "refuse any collaboration with any Fascist government which the king may try to form."

Concerted Opposition Made

The agreement, which was signed by eight Yugoslav associations in London led by the powerful United Committee of South Slavs, charged that Peter's dismissal of Subasic was unconstitutional and that the young monarch was "attempting to provoke civil war in Yugoslavia and disagreement among the Allies so as to create favorable conditions for his selfish political aims and his undemocratic political game."

The statement by the associations charged that Peter had "done nothing for his people in the whole course of the war" and declared that by delaying the conclusion of the Subasic-Tito agreement he was "hindering commencement of work to bring assistance to the people of Yugoslavia in their terrible suffering."

Meanwhile the youthful monarch was battling virtually alone to save his crown. He gave the task of forming a new government to Milan Grol, a former foreign minister and known opponent of Tito.

Births Lead Deaths Two To One In '44

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23 (AP) — The stork handled twice as many cases as the grim reaper in 1944.

About 1,400,000 people died in the United States, compared with 1,459,544 in 1943, the Census bureau estimated today.

The bureau had previously estimated there were 2,800,000 registered births in 1944, a considerable drop from the war-influenced record of 2,934,860 in 1943. (There were an estimated 200,000 unregistered births each year).

Yank Airmen Soften Way On Luzon

By RAY CRONIN
Associated Press War Editor

AMERICAN land forces headed for Manila advanced five miles southwest on the central Luzon plains, captured a former U. S.-Filipino army base and gained new positions 54 miles north of the Philippines capital, Gen. Douglas MacArthur reported late Tuesday.

As American planes continued their smashing attacks on Japanese lines of communications and Luzon airfields, the doughboys took camp O'Donnell, in southern Tarlac province, and captured the roadside town of Concepcion.

Meanwhile official reports from other American sources said hard-hitting Army and Navy fliers again struck Japan's homeland industries and the Ryukyu islands. The latter raids, by carrier planes, were designed to protect Luzon invasion forces from aerial attacks.

Airmen Keep Hammering

On the northern Luzon front, in the troublesome Benguet mountain foothills, the Yanks wiped out a Japanese stronghold on Mt. Alava taking great stores of supplies, including 2,000 tons of ammunition and a half dozen field guns.

Manila district airdromes and gun positions and barracks on Bataan peninsula were hammered by airmen. The fliers also bombed strategic Balete pass, mountain gateway to the Cagayan valley of northeastern Luzon.

Official communiques Monday afternoon told of the new air strikes.

Naval pilots off Third fleet carriers, flying in furious support of Luzon ground forces, lashed the biggest Japanese air base in the Ryukyus last Sunday.

Superforts Rain Bombs

American Superfortresses out of Saipan, flying in sizeable force, took on industrial targets at Nagoya, on Japan's main Honshu island, late Monday, Tokyo time.

Reports from the Guam B-29 base said the sky giants, operating at lower altitude than usual, smashed Nagoya war industries. One Superfort was lost to Japanese gunfire as the Nipponese offered the strongest air opposition yet encountered over that target. The B-29 gunners were believed to have bagged a large number of the Japanese interceptors. One crew saw 15 Nippon planes crash.

Radio Tokyo said some 70 Superforts were in the Nagoya strike.

Adm. Chaster W. Nimitz reported the attack in the Ryukyus by a "strong force" of carrier planes. The naval fliers hit Okinawa last Sunday, the fourth attack there this month. The day previously the carrier aircraft lashed Formosa, destroying 140 planes and hitting many ships.

Okinawa forms a part of Japan's "bridge of islands" leading from the Nippon homeland via the Ryukyus and Formosa to Luzon.

The Japanese pressed their

HIMMLER TO FRONT

LONDON, Jan. 23 (AP)—Hordes of German refugees streamed out of Poland and eastern Germany today as Berlin admitted the Russian tide still was largely unchecked and Hitler sped Heinrich Himmler and other "iron willed" leaders to the critical Eastern front with orders to "make and execute drastic decisions."

Helmut Sundermann, deputy Reich press chief, said: "We view the present situation with the realistic seriousness that is called for in these decisive hours and we know that these hours will tell whether we are to go down in a red inferno or emerge from the ordeal to a greater future."

Lt. Gen. Kurt Dittmar, German military commentator, said the situation in the east "balances on a knife's blade."

The tremendous sweep of the Soviet winter offensive, now in its thirteenth day on a front of more than 600 miles, was heralded by Premier Stalin in four orders of the day and by the midnight Moscow communique broadcast. The Russian offensive in a single day had captured more than 3,350 communities, 1,500 of them inside Germany.

Reds May Reach Berlin First

By ROGER D. GREENE
Associated Press Staff Writer

21ST ARMY GROUP HEADQUARTERS IN EUROPE, Jan. 23—It is becoming probable that the Russians will be the first of the United Nations armies to reach Berlin, and whether Germany will fight on after her capital has fallen is a big question mark in the Allied camps tonight.

Germany had hoped to strike the Allies a paralyzing blow with her December counteroffensive in the west, but with this failure she has both the East and West fronts aflame. Will the Nazi command weaken its forces on the Western front in an attempt to stem the Soviet avalanche in the east?

There is speculation that the Germans in their dire fear of the Russians might even deliberately open the gates for the Allies to reach Berlin first in an attempt to escape a Soviet blood bath. But if Hitler has sent our cards inviting the Allies to march down under Den Linden before the Russians break through to the capital, there is no indication that they have been received so far.

Problem Faces Nazis

On the basis of past experience, it is unlikely that Field Marshal Karl Gerd von Rundstedt would yield any major part of his western armies to bolster the Eastern front. Two German divisions shifted from the west have been

U. S. May Take Pacific Islands

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23. (AP)—Congress eyed Japanese islands in the Pacific tonight with the possibility they may be taken over permanently by the United States as outer defense bastions.

Chairman Vinson (D-Ga.) of the House Naval Affairs committee appointed a seven-member subcommittee to study the Japanese mandaged islands and said:

"Everybody recognizes that we've got to have a defense ring beyond Pearl Harbor which, in the past, has been the advance defense base of the United States mainland."

The committee will study the armament, location and resources of all Japanese mandated islands, said Vinson, "to see what relation and bearing these mandated islands will have on the future defense and protection of the United States."

To Keep Nation Strong

The study was undertaken with the approval of the Navy department. Chairman Drewry (D-Va), of the subcommittee said representatives of the Navy, War and State departments will participate in the committee's deliberations.

"We are going into the whole scope of the Japanese islands in the South Pacific first," he said, "We will determine whether it will be worthwhile to fortify the islands, whether all or part of them will be of use to the Navy after the war."

The Navy already is making plans for a postwar fleet that will keep this nation in the front rank of sea powers.

LUMBER PRODUCTION OFF

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23 (AP) — Lumber production in the first 11 months of 1944 fell 5.1 per cent below the corresponding period of 1943, the War Production board reported today. Shorn Military Power Planned

LONDON, Jan. 23 (AP) — An American official placed tonight at the top of the agenda of the forthcoming "Big Three" parley the question of an agreement on a political and economic pattern to guarantee the military impotence of Germany.

What specific proposals President Roosevelt may have to present to Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Marshal Stalin when they meet were not mentioned.

The implication was left that some form of international administration of the Rhineland industrial areas has the support of some American official circles.

No official announcement has been made, but The Morning Avalanche learned yesterday from dependable sources that South Plains Army Air Field is being considered for a prisoner-of-war camp after February 15, when the Army Air forces will have compelled use of its facilities.

Col. James A. DeMarco, commanding officer at SPAAF, said he had heard nothing about future use of SPAAF's facilities, either as a prisoner-of-war camp, or in any other way. However, from out-of-town sources The Avalanche has been advised that plans are under way to fence and otherwise change the field for use as a prison camp.

Mastiff's Air Travels Start Senate Probe Of Priority Plan That Allowed "Bumping" Of Servicemen, Left Dog Aboard

By ERNEST B. VACCARO
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23. — The Senate Military committee today assigned a top priority to "Blaze," Col. Elliott Roosevelt's high-riding mastiff, in launching an inquiry into the whole system of travel priorities.

Senator Stewart (D-Tenn), who took over direction of the inquiry, told a reporter it would be comprehensive" and include "both dogs and men."

In setting up Stewart's subcommittee to check on the priority practices, the committee acted at the request of Senator Bridges (R-NH).

Bridges said he told the closed session that the "bumping" of three service men from an airplane at Memphis while "Blaze" rode on in the same plane was "a disgraceful incident."

Bridges said the fact that the English bull mastiff, en route from the President's son to Faye Emerson, his actress third wife, at Hollywood, was allowed priority over the service men, had "shocked every right-thinking citizen."

Asserting the dog was delivered to theactress by Army truck, and chaperoned by an Army major in uniform, Bridges declared that "if Army officers are so plentiful as that, perhaps some additional men might be sent to the fighting lines to lead the battles."

Named to serve on the subcommittee with Stewart and Senator Maybank (D-SC), Bridges said he would seek to find out how the dog got top "A" travel priority.

Stewart said he regarded the committee's functions in the nature of an "inquiry" as distinguished from "an investigation" but that the procedure by which the dog got its top billing was a necessary part of the whole picture.

"Two dogs, Blaze and another bull mastiff, were brought or sent from England by young Roosevelt, apparently under a priroity rating," Bridges, statement, read to the committee, asserted. "Were any other servicemen 'bumped' or denied travel homeward in order to accommodate these dogs and Colonel Roosevelt?"

None Will Make Admission

Bridges added that "no member of the Roosevelt clan," including Blaze's master, the President, the First Lady or any one in the War department "will admit knowing how the dog got top 'A' priority travel rating when battle-weary soldiers on limited and emergency leave could not."

Could it be, he asked that "the dog arranged for its own priority?"

He said among rumors discussed at the closed session was one that cases of whisky and rum for "a select few" and refrigerators for quarters of high ranking officers have been given priorities over soldiers.

"Some of the Senators had heard that English officers get higher priority on American planes than American officers," he added. "Others said they had been told Army officers have had to tip air officials in some instances to get priorities high enough to make trips home."

Increased Emergency Funds For Old Age Assistance Up To Solons

AUSTIN, Jan. 23. (AP)—Increased emergency appropriations for old age assistance, to help recipients meet increased living costs, and recommendations for an overhauling of the laws applying to river authorities were laid before the Legislature today.

Gov. Coke R. Stevenson made immediate consideration of a bill boosting old age pension payments possible by submitting the matter as emergency legislation. He also submitted pay increases for state workers in the lower brackets and a $14,87 appropriation for the department of education as emergencies.

Would Revamp Statutes

Suggestions for completely revamping the statutes governing river authorities and similar agencies created under the conservation and reclamation amendment to the constitution came in a report submitted this Legislature by a special committee named during the 48th regular session. This committee investigated the Guadalupe Blanco river authority, the Lower Colorado River authority, and various negotiations involving them and the city of San Antonio. Litigation growing out of some of these negotiations is still in the courts.

The committee report, filed with the speaker and ordered printed in the journal, recommended a 13-point legislative program strictly limiting activities of agencies created under the reclamation amendment. Among other recommendations were these: that salaries be limited; that such agencies be prevented from acquiring properties outside their territorial limits.

Both Houses Recess

Both House and Senate recessed until tomorrow after very short sessions. Committee chairmen from both houses met with the speaker and lieutenant governor to further expedite legislative machinery.

In submitting the additional matters for emergency consideration, the governor told the legislature:

"The thought is quite generally expressed that it would be better to get these items out of the way asearly as possiblein order that attention might be given to the other matters already submitted as emergency legislation, such as redistricting the state for legislative purposes.

Pilot Lands With Supplies With Tow Plane Afire

SANTA MONICA, Cal., Jan. 23. (U.P.)—Glider Pilot J. D. Hill of Abilene, Tex., landed with supplies for besieged American forces at Bastogne, after his pilotless Douglas C-47 tow plane burst into flame and was abandoned by its crew, but kept miraculously on its course.

Douglas aircraft officials released the story today of the incident that happened during the flights of the C-47's hauling supplies to troops that stopped the Germans from crashing through into Belgium.

Capt. Thomas Corrigan of Kansas City, Mo., said he saw the plane burst into flame after being hit by flak.

"The crew bailed out, but the plane apparently was set on automatic pilot and continued like a flaming arrow straight ahead, pulling the glider as if nothing had happened," Capt. Corrigan said.

Teeh Registration Is Proceeding Smoothly

Students registering for the spring semester at Texas Tech numbered 1,041 late Tuesday afternoon with formal registration to be held from 9 a. m. to 12 noon and 1:30 to 5 p. m. today and Thursday W. P. Clement, registrar, announced.

Clement said pre-registration figures are "encouraging and we are very well pleased." An expected decrease in enrollment will be offset by a large number of mid-term high school graduates enrolling as freshmen, it is believed by Clement.

He added that students who have enrolled thus far are predominately women.

Von Block Said In List Of Nazi Dead

LONDON, Tuesday, Jan. 23. (AP)—The body of Lt. Gen. von Block, commander of the 58th German Tank division was found on a Silesian battlefield today along with those of 4,000 other Germans after an encircled enemy group was liquidated in the day's fighting, Moscow announced early today.

The commander and chief of staff the 10th German Motorized division were among the prisoners, the supplement said. German resistance to the Red army was described as "fierce" everywhere, but it was overwhelmed at all points. The Nazis are throwing cooks, bakers, sappers and other specialists from the rear into the front line, the Moscow report said.

Cards Received By Mother Of Prisoner

Two cards from Pvt. George Parks, prisoner of war of the Japanese, have been received this week by his mother, Mrs. Rachel Lawley of 2622 Twenty-fourth street, and have been the first from him since December of 1943.

A member of the "Lost Battalion" taken prisoner on Java, Parks has been a prisoner almost three years. He now is confined in Camp No. 3, Nike, Thailand. The cards, routine prisoner's cards, contained no personal message other than "Best regards to all the family." One was dated May, 1944, and the other, containing a Christmas message, was undated.

Relatives of several other members of the "Lost Battalion" have received cards recently.

Trial Arguments Expected Today

Testimony in the 99th district court trial of Luis Romo, charged with assault with intent to murder Pilar Turrubiartez in a brawl Jan. 7 in Slaton, was completed Tuesday afternoon and closing arguments were scheduled to begin this morning.

Procedure in the case was slow as the testimony of several Mexican witnesses had to be relayed to the jury by an interpreter. One of the state's witnesses was J. R. Whitmire, highway patrolman.

Defense counsel attempted to prove self defense through its witnesses.

District Attorney Burton S. Burks said Tuesday night that the case was expected to go to the jury sometime this morning.

Shot In Back

Turrubiartez, about 40, was hit in the fleshy part of the back with a pistol slug. His recovery has been reported.

Romo, whose age is in the early thirties, is charged in another indictment with the same offense against Juan Ariaz. Romo allegedly shot at Ariaz, missing him.

The theft from the person case against Johnnie Dyer, a negro, was dismissed.

Judge G. V. Pardue granted a temporary injunction against C. T. (Jack) Pierce to prohibit Pierce from carrying out his alleged threat to traffic in liquor. The state filed the civil action, accusing Pierce of having violated the Texas liquor law six times.

Intermediate Course In Chinese Offered

An intermediate language course in Chinese will be offered for the first time this semester to students of Texas Tech, Dr. Bing-Chung Ling, professor in Chinese, announced.

Various phases of contemporary China will be studied, with emphasis to be placed on geography of the country. In the course students will learn customs, habits, schools, religion, philosphy, and characteristics of the Chinese people, incorporated with poems and prose.

Prerequisite of this course is Chinese 131 and 132, which will again be offered this semester, Dr. Ling said. No prerequisite is required for course 131 which gives an elementary knowledge of "national dialect." Written and oral work in course 131 covers the study of more than 250 characters. This elementary Chinese course offers three hours credit and class hours will be arranged.

Basic Chinese or course 132 is a direct continuation of elementary Chinese and approximately 300 words will be added to the student's vocabulary acquired in 131. The class will meet from 7 to 8:30 p. m. Monday and Friday in room 221 of the Administration building.

The advanced intermediate Chinese course will meet from 8:30 to 10 p. m. Monday and Thursday in room 221 of the Administration building.

Scholarships Offered By Chinese Ministry

For the first time, the Chinese Ministry of Education is offering to American students cultural scholarships in several American universities for the purpose of encouraging Chinese studies, it was announced by Dr. Bing-Chung Ling, professor of Chinese at Texas Tech.

The scholarships are available to all students, except those of Chinese nationality, who have shown merit in at least one year of Chinese study, history, literature, art, geography, or social sciences in relation to China.

Each scholarship will carry an annual spitend of $1,500 in United States currency. Tenure is one year and may be renewed upon expiration, but no one will be permitted to hold a scholarship more than 3 continuous years, Dr. Bing said.

Five scholarships each will be instituted in Columbia university, Harvard, Michigan university, University of California, Yale, and the University of Chicago. All applications should be made direct to one of the above universities.

Greatest Day In Air War Since 1940 Unfolds In Tiny Trailer

By WALTER CRONKITE
United Press War Correspondent

NINTH AIR FORCE CONTROL STATION, WESTERN FRONT, Jan. 23—Here in a tiny trailer, smaller than a modern kitchenette, was unfolded the whole drama of yesterday's great day in the air war since 1940.

Here a telephone jangled with the first report that the Germans had dared to bunch up their transport in the longest and most vulnerable column since the falaise gap.

Unleashes Attack

Here a soft-spoken young flight officer from Arizona spoke into a microphone the few words that unleashed the dread Thunderbolt fighter-bombers on the Germans.

And here, through a small loudspeaker, came back the voices of excited pilots, reporting the second by second destruction of dozens upon dozens of trucks and tanks.

The battle, exceeding any ground-air engagement yet joined in the war, was fought out under the leaden skies of the German-Luxembourg border region.

It was won back here in this little six by 10 foot trailer. For without this trailer and its one or two auxiliaries, nestled in the snow under a clump of Ardennes pine trees, those white-starred death-spitting fighters perhaps never would have found and destroyed the massed enemy.

Here is a play by play account of how the air force's greatest kill was made:

Report Concentration

Somewhere out over the German lines this morning, an artillery observation patrol of Piper Cubs—little two-place sport planes that used to rattle around the airports back home—skipped in and out of the clouds looking for the enemy.

Two of the pilots, 1st Lt. Ellis E. Thompson of Fairfield, N. D., and 2nd Lt. Bernard B. Mackell of Pittsburgh, Pa., were given equal shares of credit tonight for discovering and reporting the enemy vehicle concentration.

Off in the distance they had seen a fine snow slit, such as a column of vehicles spins behind it. They flew closer to look and what they saw was almost unbelievable.

There below was a column of tanks, trucks, halftracks, busses and trailers that stretched through the woods, down a dale and up and beyond a hill.

One of the pilots lifted his microphone and back at the infantry division for which he flies the radio crackled:

"There are trucks and tanks up here—millions of them," the pilot yelled. "Let's have some air quick."

Word Relayed

From division headquarters word was relayed to the air liaison officer up in a forward observation post and he flashed word to the tactical air force. At TAC they took a quick look at the operations chart and called this fighter control station.

Flight Officer William Stephens of Glendale, Ariz., took the call As the voice at the other end spit directions Stephens drew on a map which coordinates all available information a heavy black circle to mark the spot where a Nazi column was doomed to die.

Stephens hung up the receiver and reached for the microphone.

"Red leader, Red leader, Red leader," he called. "I have a target for you."

He gave the map coordinates and then he called in a lot of other flights—Yellow flight, Blue flight and Green flight. Those were not their code names but they will have to do.

As the Thunderbolts roared toward the targets up above a heavy cloud layer Stephens gave directions by radio and kept them right on the track.

"You should be over the target now," he called at last.

"Rodger, dodger," crackled back the voice of the Red leader. "We're going down."

There was a minute's silence, which seemed interminable, and the loudspeaker crackled again:

"This Red leader. There's plenty of stuff down there. We really let 'em have it. We're going in again to give them another dose."

That was the story throughout the day. Flight after flight was steered to the target and flight after flight crackled out success reports logging through ether the greatest day in the air war.

Stilwell Rumored To Succeed Lear

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23. (AP) — The War department declined comment today on a report that Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell will be named chief of the Army Ground forces, replacing Lt. Gen. Ben Lear.

Stilwell was recalled last October as commander of United States forces in the China-Burma-India theater. The War department announced at the time that he would be given a new and important assignment.

Lear, according to the reports, would be given an overseas assignment. He became commander of the Army Ground forces last year, replacing Lt. Gen. Lesley J. McNair who was killed in Normandy.

RUSSO-JAP ACCORD
(By The Associated Press)

The Japanese diet heard today (Japanese time) from Foreign Minister Mamoru Shigemitsu that diplomatic relations with the Soviet union are being "securely maintained in accordance with the neutrality pact" and then went into secret session to hear a detailed report from the cabinet member.

TULSA VISITOR

WE had a pleasant visit Tuesday afternoon from Mrs. Herman Aweas of Tulsa, the former Maurine Cunningham who taught Spanish at Senior High school several years ago. She was looking very smart in a beautifully tailored black suit, a tri-corn felt with veil and a smart amber bracelet and lapel gadget.

Mrs. Aweas told us the pronunciation of her name which has always bothered us because no one knew for sure what to call her. It's "Ax" or perhaps "Oz" would come nearer, as in "The Wizard of Oz."

Last Summer Mrs. Aweas and her husband were in a car wreck when they were going from Oklahoma City to Tulsa. He is an oil man and she travels with him quite often. The accident resulted in Maurine being confined to the hospital for three months and she said she didn't receive much sympathy becaues she looked fairly healthy and wasn't placed in a cast but she suffered quite severe internal injuries. Even now she is bothered with arthritis in both knees but typical of the former teacher, who has a marvelous sense of humor, she says she is so glad to be alive she isn't complaining.

HAND EXERCISES

SINCE we've noticed many women drumming their fingers on the arms of their chairs or the pews at church or snapning and unsnapping their handbags or wringing their hands, we've decided they might like to learn a few exercises for grace and beauty as advocated by Helena Rubinstein.

1. Shake your hands briskly from the wrists, following the movements of an orchestra leader.

2. Hold your hands high over your head for a minute. Then bring them down to your sides, slowly and completely relax.

3. Imaginary piano playing exercises help to keep your fingers young and graceful. Keep the palm of the hand parallel with the table and in such a position that you could easily hold a coin on the back of your hand, just above the knuckles. Now raise each finger, separately, five times, hold the other fingers firmly on the table. You will find your fourth finger is the weakest.

4. Hold the thumb stiff. Bend each finger to meet the thumb, stretching the ligaments. Try this twenty time, slowly, and you will certainly feel you have exercised your hand muscles.

5. The flying bird movement is always fun to do. You simply move your hands through the air, imitating the motion-swaying slightly up and down of a bird in flight. (Of course you'll do this alone or your family might think you were slightly nuts!)

6. Mold the fingers of your left hand with the thumb and first finger of your right hand. Reverse the procedure by working on your right hand with the thumb and first finger of your left hand.

Allied Confidence

sionary and strictly limited in scope.

That is true for several reasons. For one thing, there is no strategic objective at which the Nazis could be aiming in the Karlsruhe corner sector as warranted the attempt in Belgium which came perilously close to disrupting the whole Allied west front deployment. The vital hinge in Allied rear communications once lay just beyond the German bulge front. There is no comparable situation in the Karlsruhe corner, important as the Haguenau road and rail hub is locally to the American front there.

Another factor the Nazi commander in the west must weigh is that General Eisenhower has available massed forces in the center to throw either north or south now that the Belgian bulge is all but flattened out.

The Pacific command added that persons harboring any of the men would be liable to prosecution.

Big Three Parley

possible no decision had been reached. There was strong evidence, however, that the French government will be consulted in advance of the meeting.

Without discussing French participation in the parley, the official made it plain that the United States regards French participations in post-war settlements as essential to enduring peace.

Realistic Agreement Sought

In a guarded discussion of the projected meeting, the official placed emphasis on the thorny post-war political and social problems of all Europe. The statement was made that many decisions necessarily may be disillusioning to the American public because of the impossibility of achieving a joint program among the three great Allies—four if France is included—will fit the pattern of an American ideal.

The United States was said to have a definite interest in the all-European settlement, and its own policy on vital matters, but the Allied decisions necessarily will be reached on the basis of a realistic agreement to compromise differing views.

Mexican Air Unit To Finish Training

MAJORS FIELD, Jan. 31 (U.P.)—The 201st Mexican Fighter squadron, first Mexican air force unit to be trained in the United States since Mexico's entry into the war, will receive a flag presentation ceremony at this P-47 fighter base Feb. 20.

The squadron, which completes its training with the Army Air forces next month, is using AAF aircraft and equipment and is being instructed by AAF pilots, many of them returned combat airmen.

During the ceremonies, a specially made flag will be presented to President Avila Comacho's personal representative, General Francisco L. Urquizo, under secretary of national defense, by a high ranking U. S. Army Air forces officer.

The personnel of nearly 300 Mexican officers and enlisted men had to pass rigid competitions and tests for eligibility prior to the squadron's entry into the United States in July, 1944, at Laredo.

Major Gen. R. B. Williams, commanding general of the Second Air force, recently cited the squadron for an exceptionally fine training record.

identified on the Soviet front in recent days—one in Hungary and one in Russia—but it is dubious whether von Rundstedt would part with a whole Panzer army without resigning his command.

Top German army commanders are notoriously jealous in safeguarding their own prestige, and as a consequence the Allies may look forward to a violent row in the Nazi command over the question of replacements on the Eastern and Western fronts.

At present Germany has roughly 160 divisions on the Russian front, compared with 80 in the west. In addition, there are between 25 and 30 divisions in Italy, between 10 and 20 being refitted in Germany and less than 20 now left in Scandinavia.

The German command is trying to bring troops down from Norway, but they are not moving as briskly as expected due to traffic blocks caused by the incessant blasting of rails and roads by Allied warplanes.

Engineer Of 1909 Train Visits Here

The engineer who brought the first train to Lubbock in 1909, Joe H. Smith of Cleburne, was greeting old friends in the city Tuesday. He is a retired engineer for the Santa Fe railway.

Smith is a former resident of both Lubbock and Slaton. He lived here at the time of his retirement, in 1940, when he was on the Santa Fe "run" to Seagraves.

He spent 33 years as an employe of the Santa Fe. At one time he and six brothers all were working for the Santa Fe. Now only one of the brothers, L. W. Smith of Slaton, is with the railway.

Smith had lived in Lubbock 11 years when he retired.

He has spent the last several months in San Angelo for his health.

Army Drive Against Black Market Widens

PARIS, Jan. 23 (AP)—The U. S. Army's drive against black market looting of its supplies widened in scope today with a prosecution announcement that six and possibly seven officers would be brought to trial—the first one next Saturday.

Five enlisted men of the 724th railway operating battalion were brought before a courtmartial charged with the theft and sale of supplies en route to the front.

Ten soldiers from the 716th railway operating battalion were convicted yesterday and sentenced to 20 to 30 years at hard labor.

The new group of five soldiers brought to trial today were: Pvt. Anthony T. Chiaro, Sgt. Herman Duck, T/5 Robert W. Meegel, T/4 Nathaniel W. Ray, Pvt. Tony Diomedes, all are members of the 724th battalion.

Wallace Action

Jones as if he were theonly man in the world qualified to hold the place."

Pepper and Senator Overton (D-La.) were the two commerce committee members who voted to take up the Wallace nomination. Seven members were absent and Bailey declined to say who voted to go ahead first with the George bill.

Wallace's backers were not talking openly of the strategy they might use. A possible move, in event hearings on the George bill should be prolonged, would be to ask the Senate to recall the nomination from the committee.

"If the George bill is good legislation, it doesn't have to be taken up before the nomination," Pepper remarked.

Previous Experience Cited

On the point of Wallace's experience in government banking, Pepper observed that he "has run the Department of Agriculture with its thousands of employes, and that department has made loans probably aggregating hundreds of millions of dollars. He was elected vice president by the people of the United States, which meant he was considered capable of becoming president if the President were incapacitated."

A point of speculation that went unanswered for the moment was whether Wallace would be interested in taking the commerce post if the lending functions were removed.

Bailey did not express himself directly on the George bill, but there seems little question that he will favor it.

He and Senator Connally (D-Texas), a close friend of Jones, went to the White House last week to urge President Roosevelt to separate the lending agencies from the Commerce department and keep them under Jones if he were determined to appoint Wallace to the commerce post.

WASHINGTON, Jan. (AP)—Brig. Gen. Roger M. Ramey, a Texan, will become commander of the China and India-based B-29 superfortresses, succeeding Maj. Gen. Curtis E. Le May, who is transferring to command of the superfortresses operating from the Marianas.

Gen. H. H. Arnold announced Le May's appointment today as commanding general of the 21st bomber command to replace Brig. Gen. Haywood S. Hansell of San Antonio, who will return to the United States for an undisclosed assignment.

Gen. Ramey, former chief staff of the 21st Bomber command, is from Sulphur Springs, Tex.

Nubbins Is 10 Pounds Heavier; Doing Well

Hospital attendants reported: "Ten pounds heavier and spry as a squirrel."

Kidnaping Case To Go To Grand Jury

FORT WORTH Jan. 23 (AP) — Mrs. Melba Branson, 18-year-old wife of a Laredo Army Air field gunnery instructor, was bound over to await action of the grand jury today when given a hearing before Justice of Peace Frank Hurley on a kidnaping charge.

The attractive young woman is accused of taking the 3-weeks-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. McGill Jan. 9 and leaving it in a San Antonio bus station the day afterward.

She was arrested at Laredo Friday and at that time was quoted by Fort Worth Chief of Detectives Howard Grant as saying she had expected a baby but there was a miscarriage when she fell at a Fort Worth swimming pool and that she had decided to take the McGill child.

Her bond was continued at $10,000.

Spears Bill Would Shorten The Ticket

Austin, Jan. 23 (AP)—Texas voters in general elections would mark a much shorter ballot under provisions of a bill introduced today by Sen. J. Franklin Spears of San Antonio.

The measure would eliminate the necessity of printing the names of presidential elector candidates. Instead the ballot would carry only the names of the presidential and vice presidential candidates of the political parties represented.

Printing of the names of electors on the 1944 general election ballot contributed considerable political pyrotechnics in the battle for party control preceding the November election.

Mrs. F. L. Kirkland of 301 Ave. W reported to police that her purse, containing $11 in cash, important papers and car keys had been stolen Tuesday night.

Jess Ligon, listed by the city directory as a carpenter, was charged with receiving and concealing a stolen automobile in a complaint filed Tuesday in the justice of peace court of C. E. Lynn. Justice Lynn set bond of $1,000, binding Ligon over to action of a grand jury. Ligon posted the bond yesterday afternoon. The complaint recited that the car was taken from R. T. Dotson of Hugo, Okla. The complaint was signed by Highway Patrolman John Hollyfield and prepared by District Attorney Burton S. Burks.

Lubbock police Tuesday night were holding for the Dallas shore patrol two sailors who allegedly were AWOL, apparently from Dallas. The sailors, each 19, were arrested by Capt. Aubrey Fawver. One is from Oklahoma City and the other from Ardmore, Okla. Police said no further report had been received on a green, 1938 Buick automobile, which was reported to them Tuesday by Clovis, N. M., authorities as stolen in Amherst Monday. The car has New Mexico license 78-164.

Further Probes Of Labor Asked

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23 (AP)—The Senate war investigating committee talked today of following up its manpower study in the Norfolk Navy yard in other cities, while the Navy came to the defense of Norfolk's record.

An "alarming condition" of wasted labor and "enforced loafing" had been the committee's verdict on the Navy yard at the Virginia city. And Chairman Mead (D-NY) said it was apparent that the supervisory system at Norfolk and elsewhere seemed to need improvement.

Senator Ferguson (R-Mich) told reporters he wanted a subcommittee to look into the situation in Detroit. Both Navy yards and war plants are under such committee scrutiny.

Navy Cites Record

A Navy statement said:

"The most emphatic answer to the charges which have been raised against the Norfolk Navy yard is the record of the yard's achievements in 1944, when in addition to the construction of a large aircraft carrier, the yard repaired 2,458 ships, of which 830 ships had to be drydocked—a record of 2 1-3 ships docked per day.

"On an overall basis, the Navy is proud of the acomplishments of the officers, supervisors and workmen employed in its production facilities. We shall continue to do our utmost to improve our Navy yard operations."

The Navy explained that checkerboards and other articles which the senators said had been made on Navy time and with Navy materials were for morale-recreational purposes and cost less than $200 put together.

In addition to reporting wasted labor, there were hints that the committee might look into the Army's and Navy's use of uniformed manpower.

Mead said the armed forces "must clean their houses—not only their arsenals and Navy yards, but also their actual uniformed ranks."

"There has been too much evidence of wasted manpower in uniform," he added.

Vet Says Japs Use Women For Shields

TEMPLE, Jan. 23. (AP)—The Japanese used women and children in battle, a war veteran convalescing in McCloskey General hospital here said today.

T/4 James Cole of Houston, said Jap soldiers pushed women and children out in front of them and then followed close behind.

Cole fought with an outfit of combat engineers of the 27th division from Oahu through the Gilberts to the Marianas. He has five brothers, four in the service and one who was discharged recently.

Ratification Of Oil Treaty Protested

AUSTIN, Jan. 23. (AP) — Ratification of an Anglo - American petroleum treaty in which "Texas will not even get a blind horse in the trade" was opposed here today by vote of the House.

Rep. M. B. Morgan of Denison was author of the resolution which opposes a treaty (recently with-Foreign Relations committee pending revision) between this country and Great Britain.

Morgan said the treaty as originally proposed would vest in an international oil commission, dominated by Great Britain, powers "not now vested in the federal government" including the fixing of production quotas, making market allocations, fixing prices, and even "shutting down all wells in the United States for three years" while those of the East remain open.

Germans Open Drive, Berlin Announces

LONDON, Jan. 23. (AP) — Nazi broadcasts, declaring a new Allied offensive was imminent, claimed tonight that the Germans had opened a drive of their own in northern Alsace which had broken through the maginot line on a 40-mile front.

"Patch's Seventh army is in full retreat before pursuing German forces," said the Nazi agency, Transocean. "Exits of the lower Vosges valleys were reached at several places."

Among the towns Transocean claimed were captured were the French fortress of Haguenau, 15 miles north of Strasbourg.

The same agency's Walter Plato said in a broadcast that Gen. Eisenhower "appears to be doing everything" to get an offensive underway synchronized with the Russian drive.

Germans Say 1,000 Americans Captured

LONDON, Jan. 23. (AP) — The German communique asserted today that 1,000 or so Americans were captured yesterday on the Western front and that more than 100 British tanks had been disabled in the last five days.

Some 330 men and 11 officers were said to have "capitulated in the face of our artillery fire" in the Ardennes battle. Another 450 of the 45th division were reported captured at Reipertsweiler in the Bitche sector of Alsace.

Van Brookshire of Tahoka captured the flyweight championship when Billy Jackson of Lamesa failed to answer the bell for the final round, in a battle that produced plenty of flying leather.

Godoy Leaves Today For Invasion Of U. S.

SANTIAGO, Chile, Jan. 23. (AP) —Arturo Godoy, the strong man of the Andes, hopes his third boxing invasion of the United States will be a distinct omen.

The Chilean, who twice has met Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis in title bouts, left for the United States by plane today. He lost a 15-round decision to Louis Feb. 9, 1940 but was knocked out in the eighth round of their second scrap on June 20, also in 1940.

"My punch has gained a lot of power," Godoy said just before boarding the plane.

Godoy twice has knocked out Fernando (The Mighty) Menichelli of Argentina, currently unbeaten in a visit to the United States.

Godoy's first American appearances were made in 1936 and 1937. On that trip he twice outpointed Tony Galento, among others.

Section C Cagers Nose Out Westerners In Fast Battle

Section C Hanger nosed out the Lubbock Westerners Tuesday night at the Westerner gym in a game that provided a flashy finish that gave the fans a real run for their money, and gave the soldiers an even break for the night with a 27-25 victory after the Westerner B team had won a 25-17 victory over the soldier B team.

The high scoring soldier club pulled away to an early lead in the ball game, and held the lead all through the first half. But the Westerners were never far behind them and stayed within striking distance.

Army Sets Pace

The soldiers pulled out to a 6-2 lead in the first period, and held this same margin through the second quarter, with the half ending with the score 12-9 in favor of the soldiers.

The Westerners found the range in the third quarter, and pulled up to a 19-19 tie as the two teams moved into the home stretch. From there on, the action became fast, but the soldiers slipped in the winning points just before the final gun.

Brewer, Harris Star

Both clubs used the five starters all the way, and every man in the ball game scored at least one point. Scoring honors were divided between the two closely matched ball clubs, with George Brewer, Westerner letterman, pacing the schoolboys and Harris, rangy center, leading the soldiers. Each leader swished five baskets through the loop for ten points.

The Westerner B team took an early lead in the opening game, and were never headed off as Bob Galey, a recent addition to the squad, found the range for several long shots and piled up 11 points with five field goals and one free pitch for scoring honors. Stoney Wall, with six points, was in the opening game, looping in seven points for scoring honors, while Harvey accounted for half the Smyer total with three points.

One of the best battles of the night set the lightweight crown on the head of Lonnie Balch of Lubbock as he punched his way through three rugged rounds to defeat Buddy Bragg of Tahoka.

Vaughn Hits Again

Wwayne Vaughn, hard hitting Tahoka lad, continued his blistering pace through the meet by winning the featherweight championship by nailing a clean knockout on the whiskers of H. L. McMillan, popular Tahoka youngster who was the big show in last year's Golden Gloves meet at Lubbock.

Another good, fast fight, brought the bantamweight championship to Jackie Driver, who won the nod over Charles McLaurin of O'Donnell in one of the fastest, and best fights of the show.

Van Brookshire of Tahoka captured the flyweight championship when Billy Jackson of Lamesa failed to answer the bell for the final round, in a battle that produced plenty of flying leather.

Semi-Final Bouts

Three semi-final bouts on the closing card provided plenty of action, and warmed up the fans for the finals. Lonnie Balch of Lubbock winning a decision over Hollis Black of Petersburg that produced a thriller. Balch punched his way to the decision over the hard hitting Black in a battle that was close to the final bell.

Brookshire moved into his final fight with a decision over Frank Mannon of Petersburg in the flyweight semi-final that was another fast scrap.

McLaurin had gained the finals with a fast decision over Alva Billingsley of Lamesa in a semi-final bantam weight battle that gave another great show.

Lobos Trim Fighting Wildcat Team, 40-17

LEVELLAND, Jan. 23. (Special) —After being outplayed throughout the first half and part of the third quarter, the Levelland Lobos came from behind to trounce a fighting Littlefield Wildcat basketball team here tonight by a score of 40 to 17 in a conference game.

Littlefield took a long lead of 10 to 3 in the first quarter, but lost most of it in the second period when the Wildcats were held to two points, while the Lobos were scoring eight. Half-time score was Littlefield 12, Levelland 11.

It was late in the third quarter that the Lobos offensive began to click and the local lads took a long lead and coasted to a victory.

The fine offensive and defensive play of Billy Lyman of Littlefield featured the game, and it was only after he was taken from the game on fouls late in the third period that the Lobos took the lead. Lyman was high point man for the Wildcats, scoring six points.

Jess Clarity of the Lobos was high point man for the night, scoring 13 of his team's 40 points. Joe Garrison and Burl Pierce of the Lobos scored seven and six respectively. Junior Graham of the Wildcats scored five points.

In the opening contest, the Levelland "B" team took the measure of the Littlefield "B" squad, 28 to 8. Levelland led at the half, 17 to 5. Bobby Hart and Gwyn Petty, with six and five points respectively, were high point men for Levelland, while Bill McCanlis with four was high for Littlefield.

ABERNATHY, Jan. 23 (Special) The Abernathy Antelopes ran their victory string to 16 wins in 17 games here tonight by romping to a 37-13 win over Roosevelt to make it a clean sweep of the three game series.

Abernathy's junior boys won a 28-7 victory in the opener and the girls took the second game by a score of 22-13.

Charles Lambert copped scoring honors for Abernathy in the feature game with 13 points, closely pressed by Harvey Lutrick, who poured in 12 points. Leich and Norris tied for Roosevelt honors with six each, as the two accounted for all but one point of the losers score.

The Abernathy club rolled up a 15-2 lead in the first quarter, and boosted this to 29-6 at the half. At this point the B team took over, and finished out the game. The B string held a 37-11 lead at the end of the third quarter.

The Abernathy girls held the lead all the way, leading 14-5 at the half, then playing a scoreless third quarter. Ann Lutrick won scoring honors of the game with 12 points, while McCallister paced the losers with eight.

The Shallowater five romped to an 11-6 lead at the half, and were never pressed by the visitors. Jackie Davis accounted for all six of the Lubbock points in the first half, and paced the scoring for the visitors with these points.

Godoy Leaves Today For Invasion Of U. S.

SANTIAGO, Chile, Jan. 23. (AP) —Arturo Godoy, the strong man of the Andes, hopes his third boxing invasion of the United States will be a distinct omen.

The Chilean, who twice has met Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis in title bouts, left for the United States by plane today. He lost a 15-round decision to Louis Feb. 9, 1940 but was knocked out in the eighth round of their second scrap on June 20, also in 1940.

"My punch has gained a lot of power," Godoy said just before boarding the plane.

Godoy twice has knocked out Fernando (The Mighty) Menichelli of Argentina, currently unbeaten in a visit to the United States.

Godoy's first American appearances were made in 1936 and 1937. On that trip he twice outpointed Tony Galento, among others.

Section C Cagers Nose Out Westerners In Fast Battle

Section C Hanger nosed out the Lubbock Westerners Tuesday night at the Westerner gym in a game that provided a flashy finish that gave the fans a real run for their money, and gave the soldiers an even break for the night with a 27-25 victory after the Westerner B team had won a 25-17 victory over the soldier B team.

The high scoring soldier club pulled away to an early lead in the ball game, and held the lead all through the first half. But the Westerners were never far behind them and stayed within striking distance.

Army Sets Pace

The soldiers pulled out to a 6-2 lead in the first period, and held this same margin through the second quarter, with the half ending with the score 12-9 in favor of the soldiers.

The Westerners found the range in the third quarter, and pulled up to a 19-19 tie as the two teams moved into the home stretch. From there on, the action became fast, but the soldiers slipped in the winning points just before the final gun.

Brewer, Harris Star

Both clubs used the five starters all the way, and every man in the ball game scored at least one point. Scoring honors were divided between the two closely matched ball clubs, with George Brewer, Westerner letterman, pacing the schoolboys and Harris, rangy center, leading the soldiers. Each leader swished five baskets through the loop for ten points.

R. W. Moyers of the Westerners was runnerup to the two leaders, slipping in six points, while J. Smith of the Army club pressed him with five.

The Westerner B team took an early lead in the opening game, and were never headed off as Bob Galey, a recent addition to the squad, found the range for several long shots and piled up 11 points with five field goals and one free pitch for scoring honors. Stoney Wall, with six points, was in the opening game, looping in seven points for scoring honors, while Harvey accounted for half the Smyer total with three points.

Ray McCoy looped in 11 points in the boys game for scoring honors, while Lamar scored six points for Smyer.

The opening game was a thriller all the way, and the score was tied many times during the ball game, and the regulation time found the clubs knotted at 20-20. In the overtime session, Sowder slipped in for a crip shot, and the only goal of the overtime.

Lanham set the pace for the Cowhands, looping in 11 of the points for scoring honors of the game. Steely paced the locals with six points.

The fast scoring Idalou A team had little trouble in winning the nightcap, but Coach Shorty Hayhurst's lads turned in a good account of themselves.

Scoring honors for the game went to a pair of Idalou lads, Bishop and Isom, who looped a half the winner's points, each getting ten points. They were closely pressed for the honors by two Cowhands, and one Idalou boy as this trio tied for runnerup honors with eight points.

Unity Versus Politics

A Bad Time To Split The Spoils

UNDER all the rules of bread-and-butter politics, which are well understood and meticuliusly practiced by President Roosevelt, former Vice President Henry Wallace has a fat administration job coming to him.

The high principled, but impractical Mr. Wallace sacrificed personal ambition to loyalty to Mr. Roosevelt when, after a series of rebuffs, he "went down the line" during the Fourth Term campaign, stumping the country on his own volition and without aid from the campaign committee, to urge reelection of the President. Unceremoniously dropped from the Fourth Term ticket with at least the tacit approval of Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Wallace proved himself a broadminded man, and one true to his political philosophies, by his active support of the New Deal. That, not even his enemies can take from him.

Few will deny that, under the "backroom" rules of American politics, Mr. Wallace "should be taken care of." Mr. Roosevelt owes him something and when he pays Mr. Wallace off, even in a job supported by public funds, he is doing nothing more than winning politicians of all tickets have forever done.

But Mr. Roosevelt, while owing a personal political debt to Mr. Wallace, also owes something to the people of the United States whom he must, as must all men in public office, profess to serve to the best of his ability.

As President of the United States, Mr. Roosevelt owes more to the people of the country than he owes to Mr. Wallace—to any political figure, or to any collection of political figures. Therefore, as he sets up the "pay-off for Henry," he should engineer the deal so "squaring Mr. Wallace" won't hurt the country. When he seeks to place Mr. Wallace in a position for which Mr. Wallace is eminently unfitted by experience, or by training, then he is not toting fair with the people no matter how handsomely he may be rewarding his faithful servant.

THE current plan in the Senate to divorce the financially important Reconstruction Finance corporation from the Department of Commerce, so Mr. Wallace may become Secretary of Commerce without the RFC's billions to experiment with, seems to us to be worthy of general support by those who like the New Deal and by those to whom it is the worst sort of hair shirt.

While Mr. Wallace is not an authority on commerce, at the worst he can't do much harm as Secretary of Commerce. Since he is eminently honest and has shown an admirable desire to learn, he might even become highly capable in that cabinet position. If the RFC is divorced from Commerce, and continued under some practical, able and experienced financial administrator, the taxpayers will be protected from Mr. Wallace's burning desires to reform the world at the expense of the U. S. Treasury yet, at the same time, the ex-Vice President will have a post of prestige to which practical politics entitles him.

That sort of compromise in l'affaire Wallace, it seems to us, would come about as close to suiting everybody as is possible under present conditions. The truth is, we shouldn't be surprised if such a compromise was worked out in advance. Mr. Wallace owed Jesse Jones a whack, or two, as did the President in return for the Houstonian's refusal all these years to bend the knee to the more radical leanings of the New Deal. Both may have hit upon the commerce appointment in order to retire Mr. Jones to private life, knowing that while Mr. Wallace would come out with a cabinet post, he wouldn't be left the RFC.

It will be bad for the country, of course, if Mr. Jones is kept on the sidelines in these days when men of outstanding ability are sadly needed in the government—and Mr. Jones' handling of the RFC has been almost miraculously efficient. However, Mr. Jones, in refusing to knuckle under to the whole New Deal program, must have known that sooner or later politics would "get him." It is surprising that he has been able to stay as long as he has as an important cog in an administration with philosophies diametrically opposed to his own and to those of sound business.

IT is too bad, we think, that Mr. Roosevelt chose to promote another domestic row at this particular time in his nomination of Mr. Wallace to be Secretary of Commerce, and by sending up the name of Aubrey Williams, a perennial hanger-on among radical New Deal bureaucrats, to be director of the Rural Electrification administration. The President knew those highly questionable nominations were certain to cause furores, yet he went ahead with both at a time when home front solidarity is greatly needed.

The whole situation indicates that when the President calls for "unity," he expects to be permitted to state all the terms upon which "unity" shall be built. Instead of promoting unity, his Wallace and Williams appointments again have set Americans to fighting each other, instead of the enemy.

Even though "to the victor belongs the spoils," there are times when the division of spoils should be postponed—and this seems to be one of those times.

A Puritan Village in 1680

Waitstill Walling had lived in Sudbury all his life. He claimed, in his expansive moments, that he was the first white child born in that community. Some of the older people disputed that claim; they said that Patience Harden, a girl of low degree, who had run off with a sea captain when she was only 14, was the first Sudbury baby. Most of Walling's fellow-citizens took no stock in the Patience Harden story, and the honor of being the first child—whatever that honor may have been—belonged in their opinion to Waitstill Walling.

In 1680 Walling, then 43 years old, was one of Sudbury's leading citizens, popular with everyone from the minister down to the farm hands.

During King Philip's War Walling served as captain of the local defence company and, in 1676, had saved the village from total destruction during an Indian raid. Under his direction the meeting-house (the Puritan name for a church) had been turned into a fort. It had thick walls, small windows and a gelfry that made an excellent firing place for a squad of musketeers. As soon as the alarm was sounded he sent all the women and children into the meetinghouse together with enough men to defend it. The rest of the armed force proceeded, under his command, to attack the Indians from the rear. They fled without taking any prisoners, but before their flight they burned several houses. Among them was the home of the Walling family, which had been built by Waitstill's father back in the 1640's. It was a ramshackle dwelling that had begun its existence as a one-room cabin. As the family increased in size the house had grown, rooms being added here and there without any definite plan. It had one crude, clay-and-stick chimney, a thatched roof which leaked, and a dim interior, as the sunlight came through windows of oiled paper.

When Captain Walling looked over the smouldering ruins he felt an inward and unexpressed pleasure. "The old wigwam has gone up in smoke," he reflected, "and I'm glat to see the last of it." To his wife, Rebecca, who stood at his side with tears running down her cheeks, he offered consolation. "Awe, Rebecca," he said gloomily, "'tis a sad loss. But God willing, we shall have another house, and it may be, a better one."

The new dwelling was of the salt-box type, and all the Wallings, including the tearful Rebecca, were very proud of it. The salt-box house was a typical New England creation; few, if any, such houses were ever built in the other colonies. The word "salt-box" was used to describe them because they were shaped like the salt receptacles in New England kitchens.

The Walling house had nine rooms—four on the ground floor, five on the second floor — and there was also an attic. For that period it was considered a very large house, for most of the colonial families lived in cabins that consisted of one room with a loft overhead that could be reached only by climbing a ladder.

All the rooms of the new Walling home were small; indeed, they were tiny as compared to the rooms in modern dwellings.

There were no bathrooms in the house, but they were not missed, for no one in that era ever took a bath. The fanciful medical lore of the 17th century ascribed many human ailments to contact with water. Consequently, washing with water was limited to the hands and face.

The front door on the ground floor opened on a short entrance hall. On the right of the entrance was the common room; on the left the combined kitchen and dining room. The Wallings, who were neither poor nor rich, but well-to-do according to the standards of the time, might have had a dining room apart from the kitchen, but they and their friends looked upon such devices as marks of vanity and hateful pride.

The doors of early colonial houses were usually fastened by a latch. Just above the latch a hole was made in the door panel and the latchstring was passed through it, so the string dangled outside. To enter the house a visitor had only to pull the string and give the door a slight push. At bedtime, or whenever the family did not care to receive callers, the latchstring was pulled inside. "For you the latchstring is always out" was an old-time invitation extended to intimate friends.

Waitstill Walling's latchstring was always out to a lot of people, for besides managing his farm of many acres, he was engaged in public affairs.

Some of his callers came every day. Samuel Gaylord, the head man on the Walling place, appeared every morning an hour after sunrise to report on the affairs of the farm; and the next visitor was usually James Lawson, the village constable, who was a walking newspaper of local happenings.

Looking At Life - - - - - - By Erich Brandeis

"SODA jerks and grocery clerks! Look at them! Pimplyfaced mothers' boys. Scared school kids. Not a military man among them, and it took this to prove that they're the best damned fighting men in the world."

That's what a high-ranking officers exclaimed after the German offensive had been stopped. He was a seasoned old warhorse, but he had tears in his eyes when he looked over the rubble and over those tired, hungry, wet kids who had saved America once more for you and me.

BRANDEIS

And there was something very, very tender in his voice, when he added: "Sure I did a good job. But if I'd done 10 times better I still wouldn't be worthy of those kids."

That was an old general. There he was standing in a cold, wet fog. He and his men—those kids are men!—had just gone through hell, and yet—"if I'd done 10 times better I still wouldn't be worthy of them."

I read my papers in the morning and I read them at night. I listened to the radio and to arm-chair strategists, to amateur statements to night-club senators and barroom presidents, and I wonder.

I read about men asking for more money and about people rushing to Florida for the winter; I read about drunken brawles and complaints about tough steaks and not enough gasoline to go joy-riding.

And then I read about "soda jerks and grocery clerks and pimply-faced mothers' boys," fighting in stinking fox holes and losing arms and legs and eyes and lives—for what?

The other day there was a story in one of the magazines about a boy who had been discharged from the Army after having been crippled at the front.

When he came home they gave him a hilarious party and there was dancing and drinking, and a man offered him a job which wasn't quite clean, but had a lot of money in it.

And this boy went out into the dark and thought of his buddy whom he had left in a field hospital in France—blind and all alone. And he was wondering, just like I wonder when I read and listen.

All the time he was at the front he had thought that the folks at home were fighting the war with them—in their own way, but fighting.

All that time he had thought that they would be thinking of only one thing—to win the war and to make this a better world to live in for the boys whom they had sent away with so many tears and so many promises and so many high resolves.

HE didn't think that he would have to fight for this world and then come home and make it the kind of a world for which he thought he was fighting.

My wife and I usually go out for a pretty hilarious time on New Year's Eve.

But this time we went to the midnight service in our church instead.

And never before did the old "Oh Come All Ye Faithful" have so much meaning for us.

We, too, have kinfolks fighting for us.

Pay Hikes To Cost Public

Anti-Inflation Barrier Ripped

WASHINGTON
By Ray Tucke

THE AMERICAN people may pay a terrific tribute in higher living costs for the pay increase recently granted four hundred thousand Hillman-Murray steel workers by Economic Stabilizer Fred Vinson on the recommendation of the War Labor Board. The raise allowed this CIO union tore a gaping hole in the anti-inflation barrier.

Mr. Vinson himself hesitated to approve the wage "adjustment", as it will mean an annual hundred-million-dollar increase in the price of such a basic material as steel. In view of that product's key role in our wartime and peacetime economy, the additional cost may start an upward spiral which will be felt in all lines of consumers' goods now and in the postwar period. It will also add to the total bill for manufacture of future weapons.

TUCKER

Price Administration experts figured originally that the bonus would amount to only three or four cents an hour per man, as against the seventeen cents demanded by the unions. Now it is estimated that the net boost will come to seven or eight cents an hour.

The most unfortunate feature of the award, in Mr. Vinson's opinion, is that it will encourage similar requests from numerous other groups of workers. Among those who withheld petitions for more money pending the settlement of the steel controversy were CIO units in the textile, electrical, automobile and aluminum industries.

Naturally, William Green of the American Federation of Labor and John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers will want to share in the spoils. Although they did not match the Hillman-Murray contributions in the recent presidential campaign, they must obtain increases in order to maintain their prestige with their followers.

PRICE: Office of Price Administration experts had to juggle facts and figures with a magician's skill to substantiate their contention that the wage advance would not necessitate a general increase in the price of steel. In fact, they had to write at least three different documents before they fromed one acceptable to Mr. Vinson.

Their predicament resulted from the administration's desire to placate the CIO-ers and its attempt to demonstrate that the upping would not violate the socalled stabilization accord. In short, Washington wanted to reward the Hillman-Murray faction without antagonizing or penalizing ultimate consumers.

So, OPA calculators found that some metal manufacturers were being turned out at a loss and would have to be priced higher even if no wage boosts were given. Despite this admission, Chester A. Bowles' men also argued that the industry should absorb the higher production costs and not try to pass them on to their customers. Their memo to Mr. Vinson was couched in highly technical language, but here is the key sentence:

"It is the judgment of the price administrator that after these price adjustments are made, the proposed wage increases will not require any further net rise in the general level of iron and steel prices."

The significant word is "net". OPA admits that after fatter pay envelopes will advance prices on some products, but it aims to offset that by forcing a reduction in other metal goods.

Impartial observers, including some government officials, hold that the grant will force an upward in the cost of steel articles and most all allied lines.

Most important, it will mean that the postwar costs of homes, automobiles, radios, household equipment and similar wants will be kept at such an artificial level that people may not be able to buy or may refrain from making needed purchases. And that could easily plunge the nation into a sharp economic decline.

INFLATION: The workers maintain—and statistics seem to substantiate their arguments—that inflation is already here in an insidious rather than a blatant form. Their economic researchers also warn that further spiraling is on the way, and that they must cushion themselves against it by cashing in now.

Prices of wholesale commodities, for instance, have reached a new wartime high; they are forty per cent above the August 1939 level and are still going up. Farm prices are one hundred twenty-five per cent higher than in prewar days. Wage rates are sixty-five per cent above 1939, and will move upward as, like the steel workers, other groups get expected concessions.

These basic advances have not yet been felt by the consumers in their full impact. It takes a few months for them to become manifest at the retail level. But the hold-the-inflation-line men at Washington anticipate sharp increases by early spring. Incidentally, these inflationary factors do not take into consideration such items as general shoddiness of clothing and household goods, second-grade food and unsatisfactory substitutes in all lines.

Housewives, rather than statistical experts, can best describe present-day inflation. From practical experience they know how little their money will buy at the market or the department store, and how quickly the purchases wear out.

Replacement outlays for inferior goods do not figure in Government estimates of rising living costs, but they make a fearful dent in the household budget.

WINNING THE WAR

By Albert Leman

THE WAR and Navy departments are perturbed by the strange alliance leagued to block universal service.

Linking arms as buddies are the Socialist Party delegates, War Manpower Commission, AFL and CIO chieftains—and big business, represented by the National Association of Manufacturers and the National Industrial Council.

High priced lobbyists from Union square and Wall street have descended on Washington. The silent millions of fighters, who will be the ones hurt most by munitions shortages, have no official spokesmen at the hearings.

LEMAN

An honest difference of opinion exists as to the best methods of keeping the assembly lines manned. But informed circles in New York contend that there is more behind the news than appears in the blurbs. Clashes of "self-interest" and a scramble for power among Washington bureaus are also factors.

SWARMS: One reason cited for opposition to compulsory work-or-fight measures is the conviction of many economists that all sources of manpower have not yet been tapped.

We have an Army of seven million seven hundred thousand, yet only about ninety divisions are said to be available for combat on all fronts. Foch had over two hundred. A personnel larger proportionately to that of any other war is in the rear, servicing planes and handling supplies.

Critics charge that when Lieutenant General Brehon B. Somervell was WPA administrator of New York, he crammed public works and leaf-raking projects with unnecessary swarms of laborers, and that he has carried this wasteful practice into his Army Service Forces so that three soldiers often perform the duties of one.

Naval boards, which audit the books of war contractors, are packed with young accountants and lawyers who might be useful right now on Luzon or in the bulge. A firm out west was visited by several groups of these youths who managed to make the job last for a couple of months. Executives, whose operations were disrupted by these callers, cannot understand why retired naval officers would not do just as well.

But no one in authority thinks that pruning the armed forces alone can furnish the necessary battle replacements.

Texans In Washington

Southwest May Have A "TVA"

By TEX EASLEY
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON—The fate of the proposed Missouri Valley Authority, expected to be settled soon in Senate and House debates, probably will determine whether a move will be launched in congress to set up a similar agency to control development of waterways in Texas and the Southwest.

Although there has been speculation as to the possibility of a Texas "TVA", as mentioned by President Roosevelt in an offhand manner at a press conference some time ago, the chances are that if any such authority is sponsored it will be a "Southwest Power Authority" to include watersheds in Oklahoma as well as Texas, and probably parts of New Mexico, Arkansas and Louisiana.

Postwar plans for the distribution of hydro-electric power developed in that section of the country have been discussed here by Douglas Wright of Tulsa, Okla., head of the Southwest Power administration, in conferences with Speaker Sam Rayburn and Interior department officials. The SPA as now set up operates under wartime authority. It was created by a presidential order, and is concerned only with the selling of power produced at Grand River Dam, Okla., Norfolk Dam on the White River in Arkansas and the Denison Dam on the Red River between Texas and Oklahoma.

Has Varied Activities

An authority such as the TVA would also construct dams and power plants, operate navigation works or engage in any other activity in connection with the development and utilization of a waterway. The TVA, among other things, operates dams and locks for tug boats and barges.

The question of the Missouri Valley Authority is expected to come up when the Senate takes up the recently reintroduced Rivers and Harbors bill. The MVA had been a stumbling block partially responsible for the failure of the rivers and harbors legislation to get enacted during the recently expired 78th congress. The new bill omits the MVA features, but undoubtedly attempts will be made to amend it to include those features. Should those attempts fail, separate legislation along that line probably will be introduced.

READY to introduce legislation creating a Southwest Power Authority with all the jurisdiction necessary to function as a TVA, if the MVA is established, is Rep. Bob Poage (D-Tex), one of the principal advocates in congress for public power development in the Southwest.

Expressing his views as he got ready to leave by plane for Texas to attend the national convention of Rural Electrical administration (REA) cooperatives in San Antonio, Waco's Poage said he believed the creation of a new "TVA" limited strictly to Texas would be impracticable for several reasons.

He pointed first to the fact that several Texas rivers border or traverse other states as well as Texas, among them the Rio Grande, Pecos, Canadian, Red and Sabine. It would be difficult to convince other members of Congress that an authority should be limited to those streams which originate in Texas and empty into the Gulf without touching other state boundaries, while still other Texas waterways would be excluded because they did cross state lines.

Legislature Could Help

The Texas legislature could create an agency comprising all of the strictly intrastate streams.

"The trouble with that idea is that it would take hundreds of millions of dollars to carry on the kind of projects that would be self liquidating," continued Poage, "and that amount of money couldn't be raised solely in Texas.

"That is the reason why I would support the idea of a Southwest Power Authority if the Missouri Valley Authority is established. If the federal government is going to sponsor big improvements there out of the federal treasury, there is no reason why they shouldn't do it for the Southwest."

THE Texan declared that the southwest comprised a better natural basin or area for a coordinated program of flood control, navigation and hydro-electric improvements than did the Missouri River Valley and that he would favor such a development even if the MVA was not established.

There already exists in Texas state-authorized agencies for the development and operation of flood control and power dams on several rivers. The Lower Colorado River Authority operates big projects in the Austin vicinity, while the Brazos River reclamation and conservation district operates the Morris Sheppard (Possum Kingdom) Dam near Mineral Wells. Authorities have been set up by Texas state law for the development of the Guadalupe, Neches, Nueces and San Antonio. Flood control and power dams have been proposed along the Trinity by the Trinity River Improvement Association.

Water rights on most Texas Rivers already have been taken up by these various authorities or by private companies. Should an SPA be established by a congressional act, it undoubtedly would have power, as has the TVA in its territory, to buy up through negotiation or condemnation the water rights and physical properties owned by these state authorities or companies; or it might work out a harmonious arrangement for separate ownership and management.

Plants grown in houses should be watered thoroughly and then not watered again until the surface of the soil is thoroughly dry.

MARKET STUMBLES AGAIN

NEW YORK, Jan. 23 (AP)—The stock market suffered its fifth successive stumble today when a half-hearted forenoon recovery move failed and relatively heavy selling of rail and industrial leaders broke out in the final hour.

Volume was 1,365,850 shares compared with 1,467,370 Monday. The Associated Press 60-stock composite was off .3 of a point at 57.8.

Prominent on the retreat were Southern Pacific, Sears Roebuck, International Harvester, United Aircraft and Westinghouse.

Bonds emulated stocks. Commodities weakened and helped chill securities.

Backward in the curb were Solar Aircraft, Cities Service, and Electric Bond and Share.

Higher Grazing Fees Deferred By Ickes

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23 (AP) — Imposition of higher grazing fees has been deferred by Interior Secretary Harold L. Ickes until after further investigation, he told a Senate committee today.

"Facts which may have an important effect on the determination of this department have not yet been ascertained," Ickes wrote a public lands subcommittee. He asked that his testimony on the fee proposal be deferred until after the committee held hearings next month in the west.

campaign to seal off the China coast against expected American landings in the future. Nipponese land forces plunged southward from Wenchow, a port about 250 miles south of Shanghai. Simultaneously amphibious troops landed on the coast 15 miles farther south.

The opening of the vitally needed military land supply line from India into embattled China was dramatically signalized in this brief message sent by Adm. Lord Louis Montbatten from his southeast Asia headquarters to the combined Roosevelt-Churchill chiefs of staff:

"The first part of the orders I received at Quebec has been carried out. The land route to China is open."

At Myitkyina, Burma, a truck convoy, loaded with war supplies, was ready to start over the new Ledo road for Kunming—a 1,000 mile trip through mountainous jungle. It will be the first war supplies moved into China over a land route in two and a half years. The road was declared open after Chinese forces cleared the Japanese out of the Wanting area. The bitter campaign to open the supply line raged for fourteen and a half months through the Burmese jungles and the rugged terrain of China's Yunnan province.

In central Burma, two British columns were converging on the major Japanese base at Mandalay. One was within 25 miles of the fabled city on the west and the other was 40 miles north.

CHICK HATCHING GAINS

AUSTIN, Jan. 23. (UP) — Texas commercial chick hatching gained in December over November but still was behind December, 1943, the U. S. Agricultural Reporting service announced here today. December hatchery output was 1,640,000 chicks, compared with 1,400,000 in November and 1,745,000 in Dec. 1943.

Soviets Gather Force By Hour

western Hungary had recaptured Szekesfehervar, 30 miles southwest of Budapest. Despite the gigantic rout of their forces in Poland, Silesia and East Prussia, the Nazis managed to muster "large forces" of tanks and infantry for the Hungarian drive, Moscow disclosed.

Thirty German tanks were knocked out at Szekesfehervar alone Monday, compared with 26 on all other fronts, the communique said, in a possible hint that much of the Soviet advance was still a pursuit.

What the Germans hoped to accomplish in Hungary was obscure, for both Nazi and Russian accounts agreed that the peril to invaded Germany was growing more deadly with each passing moment.

May Leap Water Barrier

Premier Stalin, announcing the great thrust by Marshal Ivan S. Konev's First Ukraine army group to the Oder, placed the location in the area of Breslau, capital and key city of lower (northern) Silesia. The Moscow communique named towns captured along the eastern bluffs of the river along a 19-mile front southeast of Breslau, between Ohlau and Oppeln, but gave no clue to where the remainder of the 37½ mile river frontage lay.

Nearest announced approach to Breslau was at Ellguth, 13 miles east of that industrial center.

The Oder, long publicized as Germany's greatest natural eastern defense line and probably fortified in depth, already was being put to the test, and the Moscow radio last night stated:

"Tonight Russian armies stand along the Oder in strength—poised to cross the first water barrier in the Reich. On the Vistula and the Warta the cream of the German army was unable to stem the Russian springtide. On the Odor the Volkstrum divisions will be swept aside like ninepins."

3,350 Communities Fall

More than 200 German towns in Silesia fell to Konev's men. They included the big ones of Namslau, 28 miles east of Breslau; Bernstadt, 19 miles east; and Karlsmarkt, 30 miles east.

Across the border in Poland Konev's troops took 450 places, including the big towns of Grabow Ostrzeszow and Tarnowiskie in maintaining a solid front regardless of frontier lines.

The Soviet victories in East Prussia, of great immediate portent, were hailed by Stalin in two orders of the day. One announced that Marshal Constantin K. Rokossovsky's Second White Russian army had captured Saalfeld, 22 miles south of the Baltic port of Elbing, along with more than 600 other German communities.

Once Elbing is reached, the large German forces inside East Prussia will be cut off from Germany proper, to be dealt with at the Russian's leisure.

Almost immediately Stalin in another order announced that Gen. Ivan Cherniakhovsky's Third White Russian army, which is invading East Prussia from the east and northeast, had seized the towns of Labiau and Wehlau, 27 and 32 miles from Konigsberg, capital of the province. Altogether in the day's operations Cherniakhovsky's forces took more than 700 German towns and villages, including the big defensive strong points of Darkehmen, Benkheim and Treuberg, the communique disclosed.

Net Tightly Drawn

It also announced an extension of Cherniakhovsky's drive on the left wing, smashing out westward and northwestward from the vicinity of Augustow, taking more than 350 towns in Poland and reaching the East Prussian border at numerous points at the southeast corner of the province.

Among towns taken were Grajewo and Rajgrod, following the forcing of the Augustow canal, a defensive line that had held the Third White Russians last summer.

The second White Russian army also continued its drive in Poland as well as in East Prussia, taking more than 450 Polish communities along the eastern neck of the Polish corridor, southwest of East Prussia.

Also in the entry to the Polish corridor, the First White Russian army of Marshal Gregory K. Khukov took Bydgoszcz (Bromberg), powerful German defensive center 65 miles northeast of Poznan. This was honored by Stalin with an order of the day.

Posnan Status Vogue

Zhukov's men also took more than 600 other places in Poland in their thrust westward, but apparently were meeting heavier resistance than formerly, for the gains in miles were less spectacular than before.

The communique still placed Zhukov no closer than 165 miles from Berlin, as he had been the day before, but German accounts told of fighting just east of Poznan, while unconfirmed Swedish and French broadcasts said there already was fighting inside the city. It lies only 137 miles east of Berlin.

While the invaders of East Prussia and Silesia and the troops driving for Berlin took the spotlight, the Fifth Soviet army in the field, the Fourth Ukraine group, fought steadily ahead in the far south of Poland, taking Stary Sacz and more than 80 other communities in the rugged West Beskid mountains south and southeast of Krakow.

Inside Budapest, the methodical annihilation of the enemy suicide garrison continued, too, with 25 more blocks taken by the Russians.

German Radio Frantic

The German radio called again and again on the German people to make an epic stand before the Soviet avalanche pouring over Silesia and East Prussia. It spoke of fresh forces employed in the defense, but there was no indication from German or Russian sources that any sort of cohesive line had yet been developed by the Nazis.

It appeared possible that the First Ukraine army, exploiting its phenomenal success in reaching the Oder before the Germans were ready, might hurdle the river without pause and run riot through the district that is Germany's second most important center of war industries next to the Ruhr-Rhineland.

There was speculation whether the task might be facilitated by the Oder being frozen over, but no word on that score came from either Moscow or Berlin.

Western Front

signy's offensive in southern Alsace into a two-way squeeze. The new thrust achieved complete surprise and continued throughout the day with air support from the First Tactical Air force.

However, in the northeastern corner of Alsace it was disclosed for the first time that the American Seventh army had made what supreme headquarters described as a "limited withdrawal" across the Alsatian plain to "more advantageous positions east and north of Haguenau."

Distances Guarded

For security reasons it was not possible to give the distances involved, but SHAEF said the withdrawal was a complete success carried out according to plan and pointed out that neither Haguenau nor any other large town had been given up.

The maneuver obviously shortened the Seventh army's lines, giving depth in the sector where the enemy has concentrated at least five or six divisions and thus relieved the threat of an encircling drive by German forces massed along the west side of the Rhine north of Strasbourg.

Efforts were made to notify civilians in advance of the withdrawal, but this necessarily had to be done on short notice and priority in evacuation was given to members of the FFI and to police and other officials considered most vulnerable to oppressive action upon the Germans' return.

Vianden Cut Off

Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's Third army made gains up to two miles along a 20-mile front in the lower portion of the Belgian bulge.

The Fifth division sent a column a mile northward to Merscheid, six miles north of Diekirch, and the Fourth division struck a mile and a half north and half mile east in an operation which seized a three mile stretch of high ground facing Germany across the Sure river.

This cut off Vianden from the west so that the Germans no longer could use this town on the Our river five miles northeast of Diekirch as an exit for their bulge forces attempting to withdraw into the Siegfried defenses.

Northward in the area of Trois Vierges, eight and a half miles from Germans entrenched along the Clerf river.

Clerf Stand Possible

There was no telling yet how determined a stand the enemy might make along this river line, which runs north and south four to seven miles west of the Our river between Wiltz and Trois Vierges.

It is lined on the east by hills up to 1,600 feet high and well suited to defense.

Trois Vierges itself was entered during the day, however, by the Sixth Armored division.

Near the center of the front the Sixth Cavalry group cut two miles east of Wilwerwiltz and then wheeled five miles north to Eselborn. This strong reconnaissance met slight opposition, indicating that the Germans had withdrawn at least to the Clerf between Wilz and Eselborn.

Eselborn is 13 miles northeast of Bastogne and less than five miles from the German border and the Siegfried line along the Ourthe river.

Air Bag Heavier

With the last German defenders of the Ardennes still attempting to run the flaming gauntlet to the Rhineland, American airmen carried their battle of annihilation to a dramatic pitch.

Giving the ground troops close support and ranging far behind the German lines all the way to the Rhine, the air force had another day of excellent hunting and initial tabulations indicated an even bigger bag than yesterday's total of some 3,000 vehicles destroyed or damaged.

Fighter bombers flew 847 sorties and destroyed 986 motor vehicles and damaged 933, destroyed 39 tanks and armored vehicles and damaged 41, destroyed 207 railroad cars and damaged 313.

In two days the Ninth airforce has destroyed or damaged 4,706 motor vehicles.

Returning pilots said that although enemy traffic was much scarcer than Monday, they still found long convoys on the move northward and eastward in the bulge, or attempting uncussessfully to hide in the leafless woods along the roadside.

The retreating Germans also were pounded by heavy artillery of the First and Third armies, both of which registered overnight advances of more than four miles in their drive to clear the last segment of German-held Belgian territory west of the Luxembourg border.

The French army's new offensive was opened after a slowing down of the onslaught it had thrown against the southern edge of the Colmar pocket around Mulhouse. This first drive gained 2½ miles on a narrow front.

The northern side of the pocket, scene of the new attack, runs from Gerstheim on the Rhine 14 miles south to Strasbourg, westward to Rossfeld, on to Selestat, then to Kintsheim, three miles farther west at the edge of the Vosges, then to Sigolsheim, four miles northwest of Colmar, where it runs back into the Vosges.

The U. S. Seventh army at the northern end of the Alsation front made limited withdrawels in the area north and west of Hagenau for the announced purpose of obtaining advantageous positions. No large towns were yielded in the operation, which was carried out without the least interference from the enemy, it was announced.

Far to the north at the top of the Allied line on the Western front the British Second army smashed nearer to Heinsberg, the most important road center in the dwindling German-held portion of the Roer-Mass triangle, and the prisoner count since the British attack started on Jan. 16 reached 1,400.

The Tommies captured Laffeld, two miles southwest of Heinsberg, Obspringen, three miles northwest of Heinsberg, Waldenrath, midway between Heinsberg and Geilenkirchen, and the smaller towns of Schondorf, Locken and Aandenberg.

In addition to the First army's Seventh armored division which smashed into St. Vith, the 30th division also was closing in on the town from the west and northwest and was only 2,000 yards from the town astride the highway from Houffalize.

The 84th division on the west plunged ahead 6,500 yards in 24 hours and cleared Beho, seven miles southwest of St. Vith.

On the Third army front the 17th Airborne division shat 4½ miles overnight, reaching a point near Limerle, six miles northeast of Houffalize. Third army troops also cleared Asselborn, 13 miles northeast of Bastogne, Eschweiler, two miles north of Wiltz, and Walsdorf, 1½ miles southwest of Vitanden.

Aerial Hunting Excellent

The First army captured 326 prisoners in the past 24 hours, bringing its total since the opening of the German offensive Dec. 16 to 22,088. The Third army captured 480 in the last 24 hours for a total since Dec. 16 of 19,019.

The Germans had little success getting away from the American aerial pounding in the bulge, returning fliers indicated.

Some roads were still jammed with German equipment," said Maj. Varnon A. Boehle, of Indianapolis, Ind., who led a fightbomber squadron in an early morning mission near the northern portion of the German-Luxembourg border.

"We slipped through a protective cloud to the deck and strafed vehicles lined up on the road. At one intersection we found 100 trucks trying to crowd into a small wood. We bombed and stafed them, while many German soldiers stood around apparently dazed. It wasn't until our bullets started kicking up the snow around them that the Jerries started to move."

The RAF Second Tactical Air force, supporting the British Second army, flew more than 600 sorties up to 4:30 p. m., destroying 28 German planes, probably destroying three others and damaging 18. Two others were destroyed on the ground and three were damaged for a total bag of 30 known destroyed, including three lightning-fast jet-propelled craft officially credited as "destroyed in combat" since they were caught in the air, either taking off or landing.

Drama, Pungent With Sacrifice, Is Related From Belgium Front

By KENNETH L. DIXON
Associated Press Staff Writer

ON THE BELGIAN FRONT, Jan. 20. (Delayed) — During the early stages of the German counteroffensive a battalion commander found his outfit nearly surrounded and heavily outnumbered. The position could not be held and it became necessary to withdraw before the final lone corridor of escape was cut off.

But even that corridor was chopped and slashed by shellfire. Mortars burst regularly all along it and small arms fire indicated how difficult it was going to be just getting out afoot. He realized it would be impossible to take 18 wounded men out with the rest of the battalion—regardless of his wishes—and told them so in terse sentences.

There was a quiet moment. Then a medical aid corporal from Oakland, Calif., spoke softly: "I will stay with the wounded, sir. They'll be needing attention until . . .". His voice tapered away into silence.

There was another moment's silence as the men's minds considered the possibilities. Even when the Germans eventually would arrive there had been nothing lately to indicate they would conform to "the rules of warfare" as far as the medics were concerned, and besides, shells, mortars and the like know no Geneva regulations whatever.

Another medical corporal from Portland, Ore., looked at a private, first class, from Berlin, Pa. Then in there quiet words, they said together what they had to say: "count us in."

That is all there is to their story when you put it down on paper. You can't print their names yet and there isn't anything else to tell because you do not know what happened. But there was a lot more in the minds of the rest of the boys in the battalion as they filed out.

As they looked back, they saw three anonymous medics tending the wounded while they waited—for mortars, shells, rifle fire or the tender mercies of SS supermen.

PICTURES CARRY IDEA

Capt. William J. Hagood, of Corbin, Ky., can't speak French but he can understand pictures. When he knocked at the door of a Belgian house, all he wanted was a place to spend the night. He was tired. When an old man answered the door, he spouted French. That failed. Then he made many gestures. That failed.

But Bill was tired and it looked like a good place to spend the night. Finally, the old man invited him inside and Capt. Hagood thought he was set for a night's slumber. But the old man trotted out a picture. It was one of the old man, his wife and their 12 children. Wearily William took the hint and went next door for sleeping quarters.

CURRENCY EXPERTS

By the time the war is over—speaking of payday—the men of the 84th "Railsplitter" division ought to be international currency experts. In five months, they have been paid in money of five different countries and have been involved in financial transactions of several additional lands.

It began when the division was staging for its departure overseas and drew its last home pay in American dollars. The next payday the men were in England and received pounds. The next time they were in France and drew French francs. By the time the next payday rolled around they had slugged through the Siegfried line and then collected in German marks. Then came the German breakthrough and they shifted southward to help halt Marshal von Rundstedt's drive, so they were handed Belgian francs.

Besides all this, they were in Holland briefly and swapped francs for Dutch gulden.

Navy Comissions To Be Available

A special board of naval officers and enlisted personnel will be in Lubbock Friday and Saturday to interview and attempt to qualify a limited number of men interested in appointments to commisions in the U. S. Naval reserve.

The board, headed by Lieut. Comdr. O. H. Swayze, officer in charge of the Office of Naval Officer Procurement, Houston, is particularly interested in discussing availability of billets for medical officers, chaplains and engineers, the three top priorities in procurement. Only men whose professional qualifications place them in the upper brackets of their professions will be considered for officer commissions, Lieut. Comdr. Swayze said.

Emphasis will be placed on procurement of young men, although maximum age limit is 50 years. Men under 35 who apply for commissions as engineers in the construction battalion must hold degrees in civil, mechanical, electrical, mining or general engineering with construction experience in the field. Consideration will be given to granting waivers of slight physical defects, including subnormal vision, if such defects are not organic in nature.

Warrant officer appointments are being made to men who do not possess educational requirements for officer commissions Men between the ages of 32 and 45 who have had field experience as labor foremen or superintendents, may be considered. Design or lay-out men without field experience can not be qualified.

Most urgent need is for medical and theological men, it was pointed out, and the board hopes to interview a large number of men for these posts. Other billets open for exceptionally well qualified civilians include industrial relations officers, procurement expediters, domestic transportation officers, petroleum inspectors, material handlers, ship repair officers, oil terminal supervisors, international business machine supervisors, packaging and cost inspection officers, radio and radar officers. Interviews and examinations will be conducted from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. on Friday and Saturday, at the post office building.
