Overpopulation, health hazards prompt city to call for pigeon kill

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

In an effort to reduce pigeon overpopulation in Midland and cut down on health hazards associated with the birds, some of the pigeons will be eradicated this weekend.

A poison will be set out Saturday to target a portion of the pigeon population.

The city has hired a pest control company to place Avitrol-laced corn kernels on ledges and places where pigeons roost on about 25 buildings. The sites targeted are downtown, the Claydesta complex, the shopping area at Andrews Highway at Wall and Illinois avenues, and the Kingsway Mall.

"The pigeon is about the only bird that will eat that so that's why it's used for pigeon control," said Monette Burke, health department administrator.

■ By the end of another long day of questioning, Simpson still had not been placed at crime scene.

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Dealing O.J. Simpson a major setback, a judge ruled Thursday that a bloody glove and bloodstains found at his estate can be used against him even though the evidence was gathered without a search warrant.

Nicole Brown Simpson's father doubled over in his courtroom seat and sobbed quietly upon hearing the ruling by Municipal Judge Kathleen Kennedy-Powell. At police headquarters, detectives watching the proceedings on TV cheered.

Kennedy-Powell said detectives scaled a 5-foot wall at Simpson's compound and entered the house without a warrant because a spot of what looked like blood on his Ford Bronco on the street led them to fear lives were at stake.

"This would be a very easy decision for me if in fact these officers went in there like storm troopers, fanning out over the property, examining every leaf, every car, every closet, every nook and cranny of this location," the judge said.

Instead, she said, the detectives "were in fact acting for a benevolent purpose in light of the brutal attack and that they reasonably believed that a further delay could have resulted in the unnecessary loss of life."

Judge Kennedy-Powell, top, and Simpson

Kennedy-Powell is presiding over a preliminary hearing on whether prosecutors have enough evidence to put the former football star on trial.

Under the ruling, a bloody glove that allegedly matches one found at the crime scene, bloodstains found on Simpson's driveway, and the apparent dab of blood on the Bronco may be used in the preliminary hearing.

The issue can be raised again in Superior Court if Simpson is ordered to stand trial.

The ruling does not involve the evidence found after detectives finally got a warrant, including blood in Simpson's bedroom and bathroom. Prosecutors said they wouldn't use that evidence in the preliminary hearing, so its admissibility was not at issue.

Dryness, winds hamper firefighters' efforts to control fire near Big Spring

Staff Report

Extremely dry conditions and strong southwest winds hampered firefighter's efforts to control a blaze north of Big Spring Thursday that destroyed two mobile homes and several automobiles.

The fire started about 2 p.m. and soon raged over several acres in the rural Oasis addition just north of central Big Spring, according to Howard County officials.

When firefighters arrived, one mobile home already was ablaze. It is currently unknown whether the fire began as a grass fire or as a structure fire inside the mobile home, said Barney Edens, an officer of the Howard County Sheriff's Department.

Tall, very dry grass fueled the fire, which raced northwest across pasture land, consuming another mobile home and several automobiles in its path.

Panama pulls offer to accept Haitians

■ Move leaves U.S.struggling to cope with new flood of boatpeople.

Associated Press

PANAMA CITY, Panama — Panama withdrew its offer on Thursday to accept up to 10,000 Haitian refugees, a blow to U.S. efforts to divert from American shores the flood of Haitians fleeing their military-dominated homeland.

President Clinton's special envoy on Haiti, William Gray, expressed regret over the decision by President Guillermo Endara, but said other countries would help accommodate the refugee surge.

"We will continue forward with our policy," he said.

Gray said Grenada has agreed in principle to provide shelter for Haitians, joining Antigua and Dominica. He said the United States is discussing opening additional safe havens with other countries.

Endara's government agreed to accept thousands of Haitian boat people only Monday, on condition that the United Nations cover the cost of feeding and housing them.

But Endara said Thursday he had wanted an agreement with the United Nations to shelter

Muslims OK peace plan, put pressure on Serbs

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Bosnia's Muslim leaders recommended Thursday their parliament accept a peace plan demanded by the United States, Russia and Europe, increasing pressure on reluctant Serbs to follow suit.

Ethnic Serbs, who have seized 70 percent of Bosnia in 27 months of war, would have to give up territory under the plan presented Wednesday in Geneva. It would leave Serbs 49 percent of Bosnia and give a Muslim-Croat federation 51 percent.

The Bosnian Serbs' leader, Radovan Karadzic, had fumed that the plan smacked of "an absolute American dictate." But on Thursday, in Belgrade, Yugoslavia, he sounded more conciliatory.

While repeating that the Serbs "had been hurt most by the maps," Karadzic stressed he had not rejected the plan.

He indicated Serb acceptance could hinge on whether their areas would be allowed to unite with Serbia, the dominant state of Yugoslavia.

The Serbs would want constitutional arrangements and questions of access to the sea and control of Sarajevo nailed down before resuming talks, Karadzic said. The two sides could also swap territories, he suggested.

At the United Nations, peace envoy Thorvald Stoltenberg briefed the Security Council on the international plan.

"I think this is the only realistic proposal and I . . . hope this will turn into a peace agreement because what is the alternative? It is continued war," Stoltenberg said after the closed meeting.

The swift Muslim endorsement of the plan, despite its failure to return some towns from which hundreds of thousands of people were brutally expelled by the Serbs, gave the Bosnian government the initial upper hand in the diplomatic maneuvering.

Endorsement from President Alija Izetbegovic and Prime Minister Haris Silajdzic makes it likely the Bosnian parliament will accept the plan July 18.

Izetbegovic said that "by refusing the plan, we would be doing Karadzic and (Serbian President Slobodan) Milosevic a big favor, so they could continue the war . . . putting the blame on us.

"The plan is less favorable to them than it is to us."

This plan is the first in which Washington and Moscow have directly participated, along with European nations. Silajdzic said Secretary of State Warren Christopher assured him the United States would send troops to keep the peace if an accord is signed.

The two sides seemed to be shifting their differences from territory to haggling over constitutional arrangements.

Izetbegovic lauded the plan.

Summit spotlights trade, technology, falling dollar

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — Leaders of the world's seven richest industrial countries gathered for their annual economic summit with U.S. officials hoping initiatives to knock down trade barriers and make the information highway truly global would shift the spotlight away from the falling dollar.

President Clinton, who arrived here late Thursday night from Poland, was pushing both the trade and the telecommunications proposals as his administration continued to scramble for issues that would show the president exerting leadership on the global stage.

However, European officials told reporters Thursday they were not at all enthusiastic about the U.S. call to start a new round of trade liberalization talks so soon after completion of the seven-year effort known as the Uruguay Round.

The U.S. initiatives were an effort to divert attention from the plunging dollar, which threatened to highlight flaws in global economic cooperation just as the world's most powerful economies gathered for their 20th annual summit.

Leaders from the Group of Seven countries — the United States, Japan, Germany, Britain, France, Canada and Italy — will meet in an ornate 17th century palace with a picturesque view of Mount Vesuvius and the Bay of Naples. Modern blond desks and sleek sofas have been added to the period furniture in each leader's private working room.

Workmen were still hammering away at construction of the press facilities outside the Palazzo Reale as more than 4,000 security forces took up positions around the summit sites — additional protection in a country with a history of terrorist attacks.

Many streets were barricaded, throwing Naples' chaotic traffic into further disarray.

The pomp and pageantry typical of these events has been pared down this year to give the leaders more time for private discussions among themselves and with Russian President Boris Yeltsin. On Sunday, he joins the group for the first time as a full-fledged participant in political discussions of the world's trouble spots.

U.S. officials said Thursday that they had obtained agreement from the other G-7 countries to hold a conference this fall designed to promote the spread of state-of-the art telecommunications products and services, areas where American companies are world leaders.

The officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Commerce Secretary Ron Brown would organize the conference, which will focus on reducing trade barriers to telecommunications products.

U.S., North Korean talks to begin today in Geneva

■ Talks will prove whether N. Korea is serious or stalling on nuclear issue, analysts say.

N.Y. Times News Service

American and North Korean negotiators meet in Geneva today to begin a critical round of talks that some experts say offers a final chance to end the crisis on the Korean peninsula.

The United States hopes to persuade North Korea to abandon its controversial nuclear weapon development program, to comply fully with the Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty and to continue a North-South dialogue whose ultimate goal is the peaceful reunification of the two Korean nations created in 1945.

Even as the negotiators meet in Geneva, South and North Korea are working out the details of an unprecedented presidential summit July 25-27 in the North Korean capital, Pyongyang.

The success of both sets of talks will turn on North Korea's true intentions, U.S. officials and outside experts say: whether the isolated regime is willing to exchange nuclear weapons for international recognition and economic development assistance, or whether its willingness to talk is a stalling tactic to provide enough time to create a handful of crude nuclear bombs.

Thus the Geneva talks, coming

■ Related story/6A

two weeks before the scheduled Pyongyang summit, will provide an early signal on whether the Korean crisis is heading for resolution or escalation, experts say.

Robert Gallucci, the chief U.S. negotiator in Geneva, says there is no doubt that the U.N. Security Council will resume work on economic sanctions against North Korea if the U.S.-North Korean talks and the North-South summit fail to open up the North's nuclear program.

Communist North Korea has repeatedly said it would regard such sanctions as an act of war.

The Clinton administration's decision to go ahead with the meeting in Geneva came after former President Jimmy Carter's visit to North Korea last month, at which North Korean President Kim Il-sung proposed a summit with his South Korean counterpart, Kim Young-sam, and subsequently agreed to freeze his nuclear weapons program pending talks.

In response, Clinton temporarily halted work on sanctions and plans by the Pentagon that included options for sending military reinforcements to South Korea.

City turns new shade of hot

Staff Report

After another record-breaking hot day, forecasters are giving the area a chance for rain and lower temperatures today.

Thursday's high reached 108, which beat the record high for that date of 103 set in 1964, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

However, today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies and a 20 percent chance of rain. The high is expected to reach the mid-90s and winds will be southeast at 10-15 mph. Tonight should be partly cloudy with a continued 20 percent chance of rain and a low near 70.

Saturday should remain partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of rain and a high in the upper 90s.

Thursday's overnight low was 76, compared to the record low for that date of 56 set in 1952.

STATE

The Panhandle cooled down Thursday, but temperatures across the rest of Texas continued to be blistering high.

Midland sat a temperature record of 108 degrees, topping the previous high of 103 degrees set in 1964. Abilene also had a record temperature. The 104-degree reading topped the earlier high of 103 degrees set in 1978.

Heat indices topped the century mark at nearly every spot in North Texas. Several spots across the state registered indices of 106 degrees including Dallas, Tyler, Wink, San Angelo and Mineral Wells.

NATION

Heavy rain continued Thursday in flood-ravaged portions of the Southeast and another storm system brought thunderstorms and steamy temperatures to the Midwest and Northeast. An Illinois man was killed by lightning.

Rain left over from Tropical Storm Alberto hung over Georgia and Alabama and showed no signs of moving much in the next few days. The rain has killed at least 16 people in flooding since Monday.

In Joliet, Ill., a 36-year-old man was killed by lightning as he walked in a YMCA parking lot. Thousands lost electrical power because of storm damage. In Aurora, Ill., several big rig truck trailers were knocked over by high winds.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

12 perish in rush of flames up mountain ridge

"Burning to death on a mountainside is dying at least three times. ... First, considerably ahead of the fire, you reach the verge of death in your boots and your legs; next, as you fail, you sink back in the region of strange gases and red and blue darts where there is no oxygen and here you die in your lungs; then you sink in prayer into the main fire that consumes, and if you are a Catholic about all that remains of you is your cross."

— Norman Maclean in "Young Men and Fire," about the 1949 Mann Gulch fire in Montana in which 13 firefighters died.

By Robert Weller
Associated Press

GLENWOOD SPRINGS, Colo. — Skilled firefighters all, they had laid out three escape routes amid the Ponderosa pines high up on a mountain called Storm King. Only two held.

Twelve firefighters perished Wednesday in a roaring firestorm that swirled over them as they worked to carve a fire line. Some died trying desperately to pull their aluminum fire tents over them. Two were still missing late Thursday.

From Glenwood Springs, 5 miles to the east, people said the blowout looked like the mushroom cloud of an atomic bomb.

"There was no place to go," said a haggard Bryan Scholz, a fire crew boss from Prineville, Ore. "We kept going up the ridge, and it kept going up the ridge."

Nine of the dead, five men and four women, were part of Scholz's 20-person "hot shot" crew from central Oregon. The crew's fifth female member was hospitalized with smoke inhalation.

The other victims were members of crews from McCall, Idaho; Grand Junction, Colo.; and Missoula, Mont., the U.S. Bureau of Land Management said.

"This is obviously an extraordinary tragedy," Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt said glumly from the fire scene Thursday. "This underlines that even with the best training, the best professionals in the world, this is still a hazardous business."

Fifty-two elite firefighters were working the line Wednesday, on the lee side of a ridge where the Canyon Creek fire had been burning lethargically since a lightning strike Monday.

FORECASTERS HAD predicted a new weather front for Wednesday, but the sudden 30 mph winds took crews by surprise. Within hours, the fire exploded from 50 acres to 2,200. The cold front had created a blast furnace.

"The wind just took fire bands over the tops," local volunteer firefighter Larry White recounted, describing with awe the waves of flames that jump from treetop to treetop.

In moments, the fire topped the ridge, blown from behind. Then, horrifically, fierce crosswinds forced the flames back down onto the firefighters.

"Those two winds just came in and sheared together and blew that thing up," White said.

The crews split up and sprinted through the thin, 7,000-foot air for the pre-arranged escape chutes; 38 made it.

"I just can't describe how quickly it grew," surviving firefighter Brad Haugh told KCNC-TV in Denver. "I simply outran the fire up one hill. It crested the hill and headed down the other side. It doesn't travel downhill as fast as it does uphill, so I was able to get out of there."

THE DOOMED firefighters first bolted downhill then tried to get up the opposite ridge. They were overrun by hot blasts of wind and towering flames as they struggled to get into their lightweight aluminum "shake-and-bake" shelters. Some never even managed to unpack them from their bright yellow packs.

Burned beyond recognition, all 12 were found within an area about 400 yards across, according to Rep. Scott McInnis, R-Colo., who surveyed the mountainside Thursday.

"They were some of the best we had," McInnis said.

Men and women who fight wildfires in the nation's forests wear yellow shirts and green pants coated with No Mex fire retardant, heavy boots, and hard hats they call "salad bowls." In a field pack, they carry goggles, gloves, headlamps, first-aid kits and maps. Each totes a shovel, an ax and a brush hook.

From a nylon-web equipment belt dangle canteens and, in a pouch, the vital but dreaded portable fire shelter.

Getting into the shelter, a combination of tent and sleeping bag, is a firefighter's worst nightmare, said Faith Duncan, a Forest Service official who has fought dozens of fires in five states.

Veteran firefighters "don't want to think about the shelters because they think they are invincible," she said. They'll spend hours of training learning how to avoid situations where the shelters are needed.

Duncan had to save herself with a shelter in her second major fire.

"You know you can't outrun it. You have to just lie there and be patient," she recalled. "It felt like it lasted an hour, but it was probably only 20 minutes."

THEN SHE was afraid to come out.

"I was afraid of what I'd see. My comrades, you know, fallen."

The fallen firefighters from Oregon were based at the dusty Lamonta Compound, an old Forest Service facility outside Prineville.

"These guys were the best," said Jeff Bell, fire suppression officer for the adjacent Ochoco National Forest. Bell said crew members get at least 80 hours of training a year.

This hotshot crew, typically used in "the toughest territory, the toughest situations," was "molded together," Bell said. "They're almost a family for the whole season. They will definitely be missed."

Late Thursday, the BLM provided 14 names but could not say which belonged to the 12 bodies and which to the two missing because the bodies were so severely burned.

BLOW: Ruling allows bloody evidence

(From 1A)

The detectives said they didn't wait for a warrant because they didn't suspect Simpson and because they feared someone at the mansion may have been in danger after his 35-year-old ex-wife and a friend were stabbed to death two miles away. Later in the morning of June 13, they obtained a warrant.

The 46-year-old Simpson is charged with murdering his ex-wife and her friend Ronald Goldman, 25, on June 12 outside Ms. Simpson's condominium.

After the ruling, defense attorney Robert Shapiro raised the possibility that a 911 call to police that alerted them to the murder scene concerned a white burglary suspect.

Shapiro offered no evidence, mentioning it only during cross-examination of Detective Tom Lange, who insisted he knew little of the original call.

"Was there any report that the burglary suspect that was there was a Caucasian?" Shapiro asked.

"I'm not familiar with the details of that report," Lange said.

Lange also testified that five drops of blood that did not belong to either victim were found at the murder scene.

Detective Philip Vannatter, the lead investigator, testified he first encountered Simpson at his estate about 11:30 the morning after the killings as the former football player was already handcuffed.

"I removed the handcuffs and noticed a bandage on his left middle finger on the upper knuckle area," he said. Vannatter also said there was a smaller cut lower on the finger.

Simpson has said he cut his hand on a water glass in the Chicago hotel room where he received news of the deaths.

Vannatter said he took Simpson to police headquarters to photograph the cuts — a picture that was placed in evidence on Thursday by the prosecution.

On cross-examination, Vannatter acknowledged he didn't ask a doctor to look at the wound to determine its cause or severity.

However, a police nurse who tended to the wound testified, "It just looked like a little small cut."

Vannatter acknowledged that there was no cut on the left glove that would coincide with a cut hand.

For the first time, under questioning by Simpson's lawyer, Vannatter offered a theory about how one glove wound up at the crime scene and the other, behind a guest house at Simpson's place. A witness who lived in Simpson's guest house testified earlier that he had heard thumps the night of the slayings in the area where detectives found the glove the next morning.

"I believe that at the time of the murder the person was wearing gloves and during the struggle with the man, one of the gloves was dropped at the crime scene and the other glove was then transported to (Simpson's estate)," Vannatter said.

"From looking at the scene, and from knowing all the circumstances that surround that, I believe it was dropped back there by the person that transported it up to that location, doing whatever he was doing back there that created the loud thumps on the wall."

When court recessed, a blood expert was about to say whether Simpson's blood was the same type as the five droplets found at the crime scene that didn't match the type of either victim.

In her ruling, Kennedy-Powell gave prosecutors everything they had sought.

She carefully retraced the detectives' actions, from when they first saw the bloody crime scene to their decision to obtain a search warrant for Simpson's estate hours later, after they had found the bloody glove.

The judge agreed with the detectives' original reasoning that they should go to Simpson's home to inform him that his ex-wife had been slain and that their two young children were in police custody.

She also noted that the detectives went over the wall after being unable to get a response on an intercom and by telephone.

Also Thursday, the former manager of the Chicago hotel where Simpson stayed after the slayings was quoted as saying police found bloody sheets and pillowcases in the room. They seized the items, along with a glass Simpson later said he cut his finger on, Peter Phillips told the Boston Herald.

bilized to halt the fire's progress, but conditions kept it from being controlled for more than two hours.

Later, a separate fire in the Howard County farming community of Vincent, farther north in the county, diverted five units of firefighters from the site of the original blaze, Edens said.

To prevent a re-kindling of smoldering material, firefighters remained at the scenes of both extinguished fires late into the evening.

KILL: City tries to cut pigeons

a preferred method of reducing the pigeon population, but the widely used drug was taken off the market about two months ago by the federal government.

Avitrol is about the only poison approved for the control of pigeons and an animal eating a pigeon that ingested the poison will not be affected, according to Coy Willis, director of the Animal Shelter.

Avitrol works in 12 to 24 hours.

"On Sunday, animal control officers will be out picking up the birds," Ms. Burke said.

About 8 percent of the pigeon population is expected to be killed. Officials estimated, roughly, that there are about 2,000 to 4,000 pigeons downtown and anywhere from 15,000 to 25,000 at all the target areas.

Because no birth control will be used, building managers are being asked to maintain the extermination in the future.

The pigeon control measure was prompted by health hazards to the human population, officials said. The birds pose a threat of passing bacterial, viral and fungal infections, generated in part from the droppings, officials said.

If anyone finds affected pigeons Sunday, they can call Animal Control at 685-7420 or the Health Department at 685-1370.

PULLS: Panama withdraws Haiti offer

(From 1A)

the refugees on an island off the Pacific coast. U.S. officials wanted their own accord to place the refugees on U.S. military bases in the Panama Canal Zone.

Endara said a new agreement with the United States would require the approval of the National Assembly, whereas Panama has signed earlier accords with the U.N. High Commission on Refugees concerning refugees.

"Because of the national situation and the growing problems of understanding, I have preferred to withdraw my offer," Endara said. "I regret what happened with the government of the United States but the result ... is not due to us."

The U.N. agency had agreed in principle to provide humanitarian aid to Haitian refugees in Panama. There was no immediate reaction from U.N. officials to Endara's announcement Thursday.

Panama's agreement Monday to temporarily accept refugees was widely criticized at home. Some Panamanians complained that Endara failed to consult with congress. Others said Panama should deal with its own troubles.

"This is a problem of the United States," said lawmaker Olimpo Saenz, who was among some 100 protesters outside the Foreign Ministry on Monday. "They want to bring us more Haitians when there is hunger and misery here."

President-elect Ernesto Perez Balladares, who takes office Sept. 1, did not reject Endara's plan, but said the United States should bear the responsibility of caring for the refugees at its own military bases — a plan Endara said he rejected.

Since June 16, U.S. vessels have picked up more than 15,000 refugees from Haiti, which is being squeezed by a U.N. embargo aimed at driving out the military rulers who overthrew an elected government in that Caribbean nation.

Arafat agrees to scrap PLO doctrine on destruction of Israel

■ Rabin, Arafat OK more self-rule talks, but Rabin plays down idea of withdrawing Israeli troops, elections.

Associated Press

TEL AVIV, Israel — Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat and Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin agreed Thursday to press ahead with talks on extending self-rule to the rest of the West Bank.

Wrapping up two days of talks in Paris, Arafat said he would soon convene in Gaza the Palestinians' self-styled parliament-in-exile to repeal parts of the PLO charter calling for the elimination of Israel.

Both sides said the talks on expanding autonomy beyond the Gaza Strip and West Bank town of Jericho constituted one of the most difficult phases of peace talks.

"It's good we started the second chapter and now a lot of work lies ahead," Uri Savir, director-general of the Israeli Foreign Ministry and a leading negotiator, told Israel radio. "There are a lot of enemies to this process, a lot of obstacles ahead."

But Rabin, speaking upon his return to Israel, played down the idea of withdrawing Israeli troops from the West Bank towns and holding elections there anytime soon. Arafat had called for a withdrawal by next month.

Rabin said negotiations would be protracted and should now focus instead on the more limited goal of empowering West Bank residents to handle departments that control health, education, agriculture, tourism and taxes.

"Whoever wants any movement in the coming few months should focus on early empowerment," Rabin said. Troop withdrawal and extending full autonomy in the West Bank "is much more complicated" than in Gaza and Jericho, he said.

In Israel, two killings Thursday in the West Bank were sure to intensify Israeli opposition to the peace process. Palestinian gunmen shot and killed an Israeli girl in a drive-by shooting, and the body of an Israeli soldier was found riddled with bullets and stab wounds, army and media reports said.

No group claimed responsibility for either killing, but suspicion fell on radical Islamic fundamentalists opposed to the peace process.

A joint Israeli-Palestinian communique said the negotiations would resume Monday in Cairo, Egypt. Key topics include the organization of elections in the self-rule zones and the release of more Palestinian prisoners.

Arafat also is pressing for the release of Sheik Ahmed Yassin, 58, the spiritual leader of the Hamas movement, the main Islamic opposition to peace talks.

Getting him free would give Arafat the chance to show the talks benefit all Palestinians, not just his followers. The bulk of more than 4,000 prisoners released so far have been from Arafat's Fatah faction.

Rabin said he was ready to free Yassin if he agreed to stay away from the Gaza Strip for 10 years and counseled his followers to renounce violence. It was the first time an Israeli leader mentioned exile for Yassin, who is serving a life term for ordering the murder of four suspected Palestinian informants.

The communique said the assembly, the Palestine National Council, would convene in Gaza shortly to repeal the clauses saying Israel should be destroyed. The amendments were called for in the Israeli-Palestinian accord signed May 4 that established limited Palestinian autonomy.

Israeli right-wingers have cited the clauses in their campaign to weaken public support for the peace agreement.

Since many of the assembly members represent Palestinians living outside the occupied territories, Israel might not let all of them into the autonomy zones. Arafat said he could not pinpoint a date for the council meeting, in part for that reason.

Palestinian officials have said representatives elected in the future from the autonomy areas might be added to the assembly, which would then serve as the self-rule parliament.

Rwanda stays relatively quiet for 2nd day

KIGALI, Rwanda (AP) — Tutsi-led rebels reported skirmishes with retreating government troops Thursday, but Rwanda appeared generally quiet with a new emphasis on recovery from three months of civil war and ethnic massacres.

The rebel Rwandan Patriotic Front, which has chased the Hutu-dominated government into the northwest of the small Central African nation, worked on setting up a rival, multi-ethnic government in Kigali, the capital.

Aid workers, meanwhile, made plans to step up shipments of food, shelter and medicine for the hundreds of thousands of people displaced by bloodshed.

Rebel soldiers drove the last government defenders from Kigali on Monday, after weeks of bitter fighting in the city.

With two-thirds of the country under rebel control and government forces in disarray, diplomats hope the way is open for a peace settlement in fighting that has killed 200,000 to 500,000 people since early April. Most of the victims have been Tutsi civilians slain by extremists from the Hutu majority.

The massacres, however, appear to have subsided. The extremist Hutu militias trained by the government army and blamed for orchestrating the carnage have been driven out of much of Rwanda.

A U.N. envoy shuttled between the rebels and leaders of the Hutu government Thursday trying to work out a cease-fire. While numerous truces have failed, Gen. Romeo Dallaire, the Canadian commander of U.N. forces in Rwanda, said he thought a cease-fire was near.

Faustin Twagiramungu, a moderate Hutu who had been designated to form a multi-ethnic government under a peace accord last August, said in Belgium that he accepted an invitation from the rebels to lead a government that will include Hutus and Tutsis. He said he would come to Kigali next week to name a Cabinet.

The peace accord shattered after President Juvenal Habyarimana, a Hutu who signed the agreement, died in a mysterious plane crash April 6. The Hutu militias began massacring Tutsis and moderate Hutu leaders, and the rebels took up arms again.

U.N. officials said there were no reports of any major fighting in Rwanda for a second straight day.

One sign of a new calm was a relief line of more than 10,000 Hutu and Tutsis outside a refugee camp near the northern border. It was the first time that the refugees, Hutus and Tutsis who had taken shelter under rebel guard, were able to venture outside the camp since the slaughter began.

"I'm not living in a hole, afraid. It feels like spring," said Felix Aitayeze, a Hutu pharmacist turned Red Cross volunteer, as he doled out food at the head of the line.

Clinton offers reassurance, money to Poles

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Carved up and invaded throughout its sad history, Poland was told Thursday by President Clinton its fate must never again be decided by others. "You will not be alone," he said, offering $210 million to promote security and free markets.

"We will not let the Iron Curtain be replaced by a veil of indifference," the president assured the Polish parliament, which assembled to hear him celebrate the former communist country's emergence as crucible for reform.

"Do not give up or turn back," Clinton told the Sejm, meeting in a hall that had been all but destroyed during World War II.

He announced he would ask Congress for $100 million to support the new ties that 21 former communist and neutral governments have established with the North Atlantic Treaty Organization through the Partnership for Peace program. Poland's share would be $25 million.

Moreover, Clinton virtually promised Poland full membership in NATO, which was created in 1949 to confront the Soviet Union, Poland and other members of the now-dissolved Warsaw Pact. Bringing in new countries, he said, is "no longer a question of whether but when and how."

Thursday night, Clinton flew to Naples, Italy, for the annual economic summit meeting of the leaders of the world's richest industrial democracies.

The arrival ceremony at the Naples airport was delayed while Clinton remained aboard Air Force One. Aides said he took a telephone call from Vice President Al Gore, who told him Panama had withdrawn its offer to accept Haitian refugees.

After a brief ceremony, including greetings from Mayor Antonio Bassolino, a former communist, Clinton left in a limousine with Mrs. Clinton, daughter Chelsea and Mrs. Clinton's mother, Dorothy Rodham.

Crowds lined the road into the city, many waving flags.

Poland, divided by Germany and the Soviet Union in World War II, still harbors anxieties about its more powerful neighbors.

President Lech Walesa warned Wednesday night that "paper guarantees" would not suffice. But, following Clinton's remarks and another meeting Thursday with the American president, he said, "I must underscore that we are very satisfied."

Clinton, mindful of his host country's fears, told Parliament, "The simple fact is that Poland should never again have its fate decided for it by others."

Throughout the day, Clinton stirred memories of Poland's tragic past and talked of a hopeful future.

Before his speech, he visited the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Marshal Pilsudski Square.

North Yemen troops seize southern capital, claim to win war

■ N. Yemen announces 'end to all military operations,' pledges to uphold democracy which some analysts think may worry Saudis.

Associated Press

ADEN, Yemen — Government troops seized the secessionist stronghold of Aden on Thursday, claiming victory in the 65-day-old civil war with southern Yemenis. Leaders of the revolt reportedly fled to neighboring Oman.

Troops of the northern-based government rode into the center of the port atop tanks and armored personnel carriers. Residents, who endured weeks of shelling during the siege of the city, met them with cheers of "Welcome!"

Thousands of others fled downtown. Men, women and children packed pickup trucks and minivans. Some sat on top of clothes, mattresses and other household goods.

A southern statement accused government soldiers of committing "massacres, killings and destruction" when they overran Aden. But there was no sign of slaughter, only looting by civilians.

"Thank God. Everything is perfect. We are one nation," said one resident, Khaled Mahmoud, who was interviewed in the street.

Northern Yemen's Presidential Council announced an "end to all military operations" Thursday night and pledged to uphold democracy in the country, on the Arabian peninsula's southernmost shore. San'a radio, monitored by the British Broadcasting Corp., quoted a military spokesman as saying all southern forces had surrendered.

It was unclear whether there were still some holdouts. The Kuwait News Agency reported about 2,000 southern soldiers attacked northern forces Thursday evening in Aden's eastern suburbs. There was no confirmation from other sources.

The war began May 4 after months of disputes over apportioning power in the 4-year-old union of North Yemen, a conservative, Islamic state, and South Yemen, which had a Marxist regime.

Despite the divisions among their leaders, Yemenis widely supported the union and hoped it would end chronic conflict between the two states. The nations fought several wars and skirmished periodically since the 1960s.

Thousands of people are believed to have died the last two months.

The north's capture of Aden was likely to anger Yemen's oil-rich Arab neighbors, which had threatened to recognize the south's breakaway state.

Saudi Arabia, in particular, was accused by the north of funding the south. Saudi Arabia traditionally has played tribes against each other in Yemen, the Arabian peninsula's most populous nation.

A strong Yemen with aspirations to democracy is seen as a threat by thinly populated, royally ruled Saudi Arabia and other family-ruled nations on the peninsula.

The south's other main stronghold, Mukalla, a port and the capital of oil-rich Hadhramaut province, 380 miles east of Aden, fell Monday.

"Thank God, the war is over," Yemen's ambassador to Saudi Arabia, Ghaleb Ali Jamil, told The Associated Press by telephone from Riyadh on Thursday.

He said the separatists' leader, Ali Salem al-Beidh, and five of his aides fled Aden by boat Wednesday night to Oman.

S. Koreans push tours of war zone

By Laura King
Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — Let's say you're planning a vacation. The beach? The mountains? Nah. How about a war zone?

With tourism in the doldrums due to the long-running nuclear standoff with the North, South Korea is actively promoting the demilitarized zone — a grim 150-mile-long strip of no man's land surrounded by troops and armaments — as a travel destination.

"Well, yes, it's a little bit strange, when you think about it," conceded Kim Doh-hong of the national tourist office, spreading out a handful of glossy brochures. "But it's an interesting part of the country, and visitors want to see it. So we want to make it possible."

Technically, the Koreas are still at war. A battlefield armistice ended fighting in 1953, but no permanent peace treaty was ever signed.

After months of growing tension over whether the North is building nuclear weapons, nerves have calmed with a pledge by the North to freeze its atomic program pending talks.

A North-South summit is set later this month, and the United States begins high-level talks with North Korea today in Geneva.

Officials say it's too soon to say whether the latest developments will help the tourist industry.

But they say there's no doubt that the 16-month nuclear impasse has hurt efforts to lure visitors, despite an ongoing $30-million tourism campaign, the country's biggest such promotion ever.

"It's been a big obstacle," said Kim. "When people arrive, they see the country is peaceful and safe, but they don't know it unless they come here."

Seeking to turn a liability into an asset, tour operators offer trips that spotlight tensions with the North, including observation posts with cross-border views and "invasion tunnels" dug by the North in apparent preparation for a surprise strike.

Last year, more than 24,000 foreign tourists took DMZ tours, most of them traveling to Panmunjom, the eerie little "truce village" where the two sides face off at spitting distance.

"There used to be the Berlin Wall, but now this is the last place to see firsthand what the Cold War is about," Kim said enthusiastically. "Where else in the world can you find this?"

Foreigners only need present their passports in order to take the daylong Panmunjom tour, which costs about $50. South Koreans who want to visit the security area must go through a separate and complicated application process.

Visitors must follow a strict dress code — no short skirts or jeans. And they are admonished not to make faces at scowling North Korean guards.

At U.S. Camp Bonifas, incongruities abound. A cheerful, clean-cut American military briefer hands out statements for visitors to sign, waiving responsibility in the event of their death or injury in hostilities. Tourists can buy DMZ trinkets such as souvenir coffee mugs and key chains.

As a travel destination, South Korea has much more than Cold War chills to recommend it.

Scientists: T-Rex was warm-blooded

By Malcolm W. Browne
N.Y. Times News Service

If oxygen trapped in the bones of a well-preserved tyrannosaur skeleton tells a true tale, the king of Cretaceous dinosaurs was almost certainly warm-blooded, capable of maintaining its body temperature by adjusting its metabolism, two scientists at North Carolina State University report.

The paper is the latest volley in a long-standing debate between scientists as to whether dinosaurs were warm-blooded or not.

Dr. William Showers, the paper's co-author, said in a recent interview that although new evidence strengthens the case for warm-bloodedness, he does not expect his report to settle the question. His article, written with Reese Barrick, is to be published today in the journal Science.

The tyrannosaur used in the study is an unusually well preserved skeleton that was excavated in 1990 from the Hell Creek Formation in Montana. The bones are not completely fossilized, and therefore much of their original phosphate mineral has survived during the 65 million years the animal lay sealed in rock.

Phosphate is a compound of phosphorus and oxygen, and the oxygen incorporated in various bone phosphates can act as a thermometer, telling scientists what the temperature was at the time the bone was formed, provided that nothing has since disturbed the oxygen.

Oxygen in phosphate found inside dinosaur bone can tell scientists what temperature was at time bone was formed.

The oxygen absorbed by a living animal from its environment comes in two isotopes, or nuclear forms: oxygen-16 and oxygen-18 (which has two more neutrons in its nucleus than oxygen-16).

Although these two isotopes are almost identical in chemical properties, temperature affects them slightly differently when they undergo reaction with other substances.

When bone forms in relatively cool conditions, a slightly higher ratio of oxygen-18 to oxygen-16 is incorporated; under warmer conditions, the ratio shifts toward oxygen-16.

Barrick and Showers built their case on what they have learned about the ratios of oxygen-16 to oxygen-18 in the bones of present-day animals.

In cows and other large, warm-blooded animals, there are only small average temperature differences between bones of the "core" of the animal — its ribs, spine and pelvis, for example — and its legs and other extremities.

But in large cold-blooded animals like the Komodo dragon, the scientists found relatively large differences in the average temperatures of core bones and extremity bones.

The oxygen ratio in the bones of the Montana tyrannosaur was fairly constant, they reported — a pattern that more closely matches that of a modern elephant than what would be expected in a six-ton reptile.

Showers said that a major problem in the study, in which 54 samples from 12 bones were analyzed, was the question of whether the oxygen isotope ratio in the original tyrannosaur bone had been altered by interaction with the environment over millions of years. The evidence suggests, Showers said, that the original isotope ratios remain reasonably intact.

For more than a century scientists assumed that dinosaurs were true reptiles and were therefore more or less cold-blooded.

Comptroller's audit should get action

It's always uplifting to receive a compliment. With that in mind, we believe Midland's taxpayers should be pleased with the praise handed out by the Texas Comptroller's Office recently to officials of Midland Independent School District (MISD).

Olga Garza of the comptroller's office said MISD is one of the very best districts in Texas at getting the most for its tax dollars and Comptroller John Sharp referred to MISD as a "benchmark for the entire State of Texas."

Those are words every taxpayer should appreciate. It's good to hear that your local school district is watching out for the taxpayer's interests particularly when compared to other districts around the state.

The comptroller's audit of the school district resulted in praise for a number of district programs, including the maintenance department's use of contract services for peak-load periods and specialized jobs. The audit did result in recommendations that potentially could save an additional $5.6 million.

Recommendations included improved planning and scheduling, reducing the number of leased automobiles available to school district employees, selling off redundant technology systems, streamlining payroll and purchasing procedures, improving transportation efficiency and more aggressive pursuit of state and federal funds and grants. We believe most of Sharp's recommendations are worthy of strong consideration, although pursuing more federal and state grants can be a mixed blessing and should be approached with caution.

Overall, however, the comptroller's audit of MISD was extremely positive. In fact, Ms. Garza called the district "a school district that other school districts can learn from."

That's a good report. Midland's taxpayers should be pleased.

Today in History

Today is Friday, July 8, the 189th day of 1994. There are 176 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On July 8, 1896, William Jennings Bryan captivated listeners at the Democratic National Convention in Chicago with his famous speech denouncing supporters of the gold standard, saying, "You shall not crucify mankind upon a cross of gold."

On this date:

In 1663, King Charles II of England granted a charter to Rhode Island.

In 1776, Col. John Nixon gave the first public reading of the Declaration of Independence to a crowd gathered at Independence Square in Philadelphia.

In 1889, The Wall Street Journal was first published.

In 1891, Warren G. Harding married Florence K. DeWolfe in Marion, Ohio.

In 1907, Florenz Ziegfeld staged his first "Follies," on the roof of the New York Theater.

In 1919, President Wilson received a tumultuous welcome in New York City after his return from the Versailles Peace Conference in France.

In 1947, demolition work began in New York City to make way for the new permanent headquarters of the United Nations.

In 1950, Gen. Douglas MacArthur was named commander in chief of United Nations forces in Korea.

In 1975, President Ford announced he would seek the Republican nomination for the presidency in 1976.

In 1986, Kurt Waldheim was inaugurated president of Austria despite controversy over his alleged ties to Nazi war crimes.

In 1986, Adm. Hyman G. Rickover, widely regarded as the father of the nuclear navy, died in Arlington, Va., at age 86.

Ten years ago: John McEnroe defeated Jimmy Connors in straight sets, 6-1, 6-1, 6-2 to become the first American man in 46 years to capture back-to-back Wimbledon tennis titles.

Five years ago: Carlos Saul Menem was inaugurated as president of Argentina in the country's first transfer of power from one democratically elected civilian leader to another in six decades.

UPS-backed bill encounters turbulence

WASHINGTON — Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky., has given new meaning to the phrase "overnight delivery."

Anderson

United Parcel Service recently told Ford that it absolutely, positively needed a legislative favor to keep pace with rival Federal Express. Ford — the wily, old deal-maker — delivered.

Just before midnight on June 16, Ford tacked a trucking provision onto an airport bill. Critics say Ford's efforts will lead to a windfall for large companies, like UPS and FedEx, at the expense of small firms.

The late-night voice vote on the provision was the last in a series of maneuvers Ford undertook for UPS, whose PAC has contributed over $1 million to various members of Congress this year — more than any other corporate PAC in America. Amid the recent clamor about congressional reform, one source familiar with this case calls it "a perfect example of how the inside game is still being played."

Back in 1991, the Ninth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals gave FedEx exclusive right in eight states to transport goods between any two points in a single state without being subject to its trucking regulations. The Court ruled that FedEx is an air cargo carrier whose intrastate ground transportation is incidental to its main business and should be protected from state economic regulation. UPS sought redress of what it claimed was favoritism toward FedEx.

UPS, a Kentucky-based firm, found a friend in Ford. Since becoming chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on Aviation in 1987, Ford has opposed increases in aviation taxes and pushed for awarding federal grants to small airports based on cargo instead of just passenger traffic. When Ford ran for re-election in 1992, FedEx pitched in $10,000, while UPS contributed $9,000.

UPS recently asked Ford to author legislation extending the special status FedEx enjoys in a few states to several companies — including FedEx and UPS — in all 50 states. Ford quietly inserted "Section 211" into the Federal Aviation Administration Act of 1994. It will eliminate a state's right to regulate the rates, routes and services of trucks travelling between two points in the same state. In order to qualify, the truck must belong to a shipping company which is affiliated with or utilizes an air carrier "at least 15,000 times annually."

"It has the ability to totally change the motor carrier industry," one congressional source told our reporter Aaron Karp. "Smaller companies are concerned that if you pre-empt state regulation, big companies will swoop in and put them out of business."

Such concerns are normally dealt with during congressional hearings, but Ford refused to hold them. Frustrated by Ford's heavy-handed tactics, several Democratic senators privately tried to throw up a road-block.

Ford was furious about the flack from junior colleagues.

Perhaps in anticipation of the trucking fight, UPS's PAC has had the largest increase in contributions in this year's election cycle.

"We think it's a wonderful example of the government system at work," UPS spokeswoman Gina Ellrich said of the passing of Section 211. "We contribute to members who understand and support issues which are important to our business.

Charley Reese

Lee remains role model worth emulating

Gen. Robert E. Lee, who led the Army of Northern Virginia in the War Between the States, was widely respected for his military skill but revered for his personal character.

Reese

A letter Lee wrote to his son in 1852 and reprinted in Confederate Veteran magazine provides an insight into that character. The advice is as valid in 1994 as it was in 1852.

"You must study to be frank with the world: frankness is the child of honesty and courage," Lee wrote. "Say just what you mean to do on every occasion and take it for granted you mean to do right. If a friend asks a favor, you should grant it, if it is reasonable; if not, tell him plainly why you cannot: you will wrong him and wrong yourself by equivocation of any kind.

"Never do a wrong thing to make a friend or keep one; the man who requires you to do so is dearly purchased at a sacrifice. Deal kindly, but firmly, with all your classmates. . . . Above all, do not appear to others what you are not. If you have any fault to find with any one, tell him, not others, of what you complain; there is no more dangerous experiment than that of undertaking to be one thing before a man's face and another behind his back. We should live, act and say nothing to the injury of any one. It is not only best as a matter of principle, but it is the path to peace and honor."

Lee then related a story about a day in the past when the sun suddenly went dark without explanation. Some members of the Connecticut legislature, fearing that it might be the last day, the day of judgment, moved for an adjournment. But an old Puritan legislator rose and said that if the last day had come, he desired to be found at his place doing his duty.

"Duty, then," Lee admonished his son, "is the sublimest word in our language. Do your duty in all things, like the old Puritan. You cannot do more, you should never wish to do less."

It's interesting how many problems would vanish if people could live up to the advice in this letter. It's not far off the mark, I think, to say that most, perhaps all, social problems in our society are caused fundamentally by moral failure.

How many contract disputes would there be if both parties were frank, honest and committed to fulfilling their obligations — doing their duty? How much of a welfare problem would we have if men and women did their duty as husbands, wives and parents? Would we need to study Japanese management styles to produce quality products if workers and management alike were committed to doing their duty?

And how much better government would we have if politicians abandoned equivocation and spoke honestly and firmly on all the issues? If they did their duty, which is to obey the Constitution, there would be less need for federal litigation.

Sometimes it seems that people today want to live immorally in an honest and orderly society, but that's impossible. You can stack laws to the moon, hire geniuses to design systems, but neither laws, systems nor institutions can be a whit better than the people. If the people are brutish, selfish, irresponsible and dishonest, then so will be society in all its manifestations both public and private.

Our age is so cynical that few people even believe a Robert E. Lee really was decent, but in fact, in the context of his times, he came as close to the ideal of a Christian gentleman as anybody probably could. Fierce, courageous and brilliant in battle, Lee was nevertheless humble and compassionate in his personal life. He never boasted or tried to become a celebrity or cash in on his fame. He never once tried to shift the blame or make excuses for what he considered his failures.

He remains a role model worth emulating.

It's time to get out encyclopedia, talk bill to death

U.S. senators, with the pompous gravity of their profession, call it "extended debate." Everyone else calls it filibuster.

Murchison

The idea, as the media laboriously explain when occasion demands, is to "talk a bill to death" — literally to talk and talk and argue and argue and read in a droning voice the Encyclopedia Britannica — until the bill's proponents throw in the towel. The bill is pulled from the calendar. Another victory — so the liberal media thereupon assure us — for the Forces of Reaction, Negativism and Minority Rule!

Some of us would inquire sweetly: Who cares about all that? Better to stab a bad bill in the back than let it stab us in the front.

These reflections come as the health care bills, like a passel of Boris Karloffs, stalk from the committee rooms and onto the floors of the House and Senate. These creatures, hungry for prey, deserve to die, by whatever means of execution seems most fitting when the time comes. This is to spare the taxpayers the mammoth cost and burden of a half-digested "reform" for which there isn't even a discernible consensus. If that means the good guys must resort to the despised, maligned, "undemocratic" filibuster, fine with me. Let the droning commence.

The time to talk seriously of the filibuster is now, before shame-faced Republican senators let the liberal media browbeat them into letting a nominal majority have its way with health care.

It may not come to this. Because Congress exhibits such diversity on health care, the forming of a consensus may prove impossible. Employer mandates vs. no mandates, "universal" coverage vs. incremental gains in coverage — such are the issues that still divide the reformers. The critical issue to keep in view is that Democrats mean to pass pretty much anything they can whip through each house, then let a conference committee write the final product, daring Senate and House to refuse final approval.

A fine way to resolve the most monumental social and budgetary issue of our time! You would hope we'd be careful about such an enterprise, refusing to pass something just for the sake of passing it. On which score, the contortions of the congressional committees have been deeply discouraging. The objective hasn't been so much to have a sound reform we all can support as it's been to have A reform — a sort of legislative trophy to display on the hustings.

No, thanks. Congress — an institution Americans seemingly trust about as far they can throw a grand piano — isn't going to pay for this thing. We, the taxpayers, are going to pay for it. All Congress is going to do is issue the bills and commission the regulations.

We know, of course, the pressures to act on health care. Clinton — though only 43 percent of us voted for him — has promised to stuff mandates and universal coverage down our throats. His party doesn't want to embarrass him or to suffer the media's reproaches about "gridlock."

None of this weighs, or should weigh, more heavily than the people's liberties, which are at stake in this fight. A jerry-built health care plan is no present for a free people.

Republicans have the 40 votes (and four besides that) to keep the Democrats from bringing health care to a vote. Whether they have the gumption is another question. The present contingent of Senate Republicans has suggested more than once that it has the backbone of a chocolate eclair. Until a few days ago, when Bob Dole belatedly stepped in, Senate Republicans didn't even have a health care plan of their own. Several "moderates" are actively collaborating with the Democrats.

Can such a bunch be counted on, in the last ditch, to talk a bad health care bill to death? Better to face the question now than when we're lying in that ditch, wondering how we got there and how to get out. At such a moment, with our liberties in the balance, the slumberous sonorities of Sen. Jack S. Phogbound, plowing into Vol. "A" of the Encyclopedia Britannica would seem more sublime than any Bach cantata.

Muddy floodwaters cover the streets of downtown Montezuma, Ga., Thursday. More than 300,000 people were without safe drinking water for a second day. Remnants of Tropical Storm Alberto also submerged tens of thousands of acres of prime farmland.

Floods kill at least 18 in Georgia

■ Dams wash away; towns, roads, railroads are submerged; Clinton declares it major disaster area.

N.Y. Times News Service

AMERICUS, Ga. (AP) — Divers searched for bodies in murky floodwaters and rescuers plucked people hanging from a tree Thursday as rain fell for the fourth straight day in southwestern Georgia. The death toll reached 18.

More than 300,000 people were without safe drinking water for a second day, after floodwaters from remnants of Tropical Storm Alberto knocked out water treatment plants. Tens of thousands of acres of prime farmland were under water, while cities along the Flint River braced for a record flood.

President Clinton on Thursday authorized federal disaster aid for four counties.

Eighteen people have been killed, 10 of them in Americus, as flash floods swept through. Four people were reported missing, though Sumter County Coroner Lynwood McClung held out hope. "These creeks went way back in the woods. It's possible we could find these people hanging in trees, still alive," he said.

In Macon, about 80 miles northeast of Americus, firefighters on a hook-and-ladder rescued three men from a tree in the raging Ocmulgee River.

By Thursday evening the floodwaters began to recede slightly in Macon, though rain remained in the forecast overnight.

Residents of Albany prepared for the worst as the Flint River flowed over its banks and sent water rushing into streets in a low-lying area. At least 14,000 residents were ordered to evacuate.

"We're just trying to reinforce the levees with sandbags," Albany State College spokeswoman Jackie Ryan said.

The Flint is expected to reach 44 feet — 24 feet above flood stage — by Saturday. Most Albany businesses sent employees home, and a dusk-to-dawn curfew was ordered.

The Ocmulgee was believed to have crested at 35 feet Thursday at Macon, where flood stage is 18 feet. But officials couldn't say for sure because the river gauge was swept away.

A 245-foot section of an earthen levee in Macon that washed away Wednesday night was stabilized Thursday, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers said.

About 150,000 people in Macon and surrounding areas have been without water since the treatment plant flooded Wednesday. Statewide, more than 300,000 people were without water. The Clayton County water system, one of the biggest of those knocked out earlier in the week, was back up Thursday.

Water was brought in by tanker trucks. At one water distribution site, 750 people stood in an hourlong line. People were asked to restrict themselves to one gallon per house, but some walked away with five gallons.

"I'll check with some of my homebound friends to see if they could use a jug or two," said Mary Eva DuBose, who was carrying five empty jugs.

Twenty-five inmates on work-release helped people carry jugs.

Poultry to get stricter inspection

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 7 billion chickens and turkeys slaughtered each year would undergo stricter inspections under new rules aimed at preventing food poisoning from bacteria.

The proposed rules, being announced next week, would add an inspector to make a visual check of the birds at a critical point in the slaughterhouse where fecal contamination is most likely to occur. They would require use of germ-killing sprays or rinses that many of the nation's 300 poultry plants already use voluntarily.

The regulations, however, would mean fewer federal inspectors on many of the rapidly moving lines that carry the carcasses. And some safety responsibilities would be turned over to plant operators, according to a draft obtained by The Associated Press.

That has already provoked criticism from advocates for the 2,100 poultry inspectors, who say the industry should not be trusted to police the processing lines.

Although the proposal would require an additional visual test of carcasses, they would not mandate scientific tests for potentially harmful bacteria on carcasses or equipment. The Agriculture Department says it lacks the data or a standardized test to make such a requirement, although testing is already used in much of the industry.

Scientific experts and the General Accounting Office, a congressional watchdog agency, have said that no system for enhancing food safety can be proven effective without routine testing of the workplace for germs.

"If there's going to be any legitimacy for improving consumer confidence in poultry, there has to be some kind of microbial testing," said Elaine Dodge, attorney for the Government Accountability Project, which represents inspectors.

Agriculture Secretary Mike Espy announced last March he would require the new standards, which would allow no visible contamination from feces on poultry carcasses.

The same standard has been enforced for red meat since last year. Espy has been sued by cattle producers for allegedly giving favorable treatment to poultry.

About 25 percent of poultry carcasses carry salmonella bacteria, the major cause of food poisoning in this country. Poultry also accounts for 40 percent of the illness from campylobacter, another major cause of food poisoning.

Under the proposed regulations, an inspector would enforce the zero-tolerance standard for poultry by examining birds after their entrails have been separated from the carcass. Removal can cause the release of bacteria-containing feces onto the carcass.

That would be a new step requiring a new inspector on the line. To compensate, many plants would have fewer inspectors elsewhere on the line, although there would be inspectors elsewhere in the plant.

All birds would have to undergo a rinse with an antimicrobial substance before being chilled. Chlorine rinses are already widely used in the industry.

Exxon: Oil alone didn't hurt fish prices

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Experts testifying for Exxon on Thursday said there's no cause-and-effect relationship between the Prince William Sound oil spill and a collapse in herring stocks and salmon prices.

"The herring population has buffered itself from this insult," marine scientist Walter Pearson said. "The data tells me there's no impact at the population level."

Robert Olley, a retired economics professor from the University of Saskatchewan, said Thursday that worldwide salmon prices already had begun to slide before the tanker accident March 24, 1989.

The Exxon Valdez dumped nearly 11 million gallons of North Slope crude oil and fouled some of the state's most productive fishing grounds. Claims of depressed prices and poor fish runs since then are at the heart of a federal class action filed by more than 10,000 fishermen.

Commercial harvests of Prince William Sound herring failed this year and in 1993 when too few fish returned. At least one state fisheries biologist has concluded that oil played a part in the failure. Biologists also have reported organ damage and lesions in the herring.

The Anchorage trial before U.S. District Judge H. Russel Holland was scheduled to go to jurors next week, following closing arguments Monday. The trial's second phase began June 20 after an initial phase in which Exxon and skipper Joseph Hazelwood were found reckless in the tanker grounding.

The same jury will hear all phases of the case. Plaintiffs overall were seeking $1.5 billion in damages and up to 10 times that in punitive damages, to be decided in a third phase.

Pearson, a researcher at the Battelle Northwest laboratory in Sequim, Wash., said even if herring spawned in 1989 had been lost to the spill, population data indicate they would have accounted for 4 percent or less of Prince William Sound herring in 1993.

Herring spawn in huge numbers to compensate for natural hazards that annually wipe out more than 99 percent of eggs, Pearson said.

He also claimed that in weeks following the spill, dissolved oil in most places in the sound was at levels that would not be toxic to adult, juvenile or spawning herring.

Plaintiffs' lawyers attempted to rebuff Pearson by suggesting his science was incomplete.

Olley, who studied markets for British Columbia salmon following the spill in 1989, said fishermen were at the end of a "whiplash" when prices worldwide began to skid following record highs in 1988.

Questions arise over Simpson lawyer, judge

By Seth Rosenfeld
N.Y. Times News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Gerald Uelmen, a member of O.J. Simpson's defense team, taught the judge presiding over the former football star's pretrial hearing some of what she knows about the law when he was a professor at Loyola Law School in the 1970s.

Given the passage to time, there is nothing improper about Los Angeles Municipal Court Judge Kathleen Kennedy-Powell hearing arguments from her former professor, according to legal experts.

But the situation underscores Uelmen's long and wide-ranging career as a lawyer, educator and expert on criminal law. He has a well-established reputation among California lawyers as a pre-eminent expert on the state's complex criminal trial procedure, especially pretrial issues that often shape a trial's outcome.

Kennedy-Powell took several courses from Uelmen while studying at Loyola, according to their resumes.

"He had her for several courses," said his wife, Martha Uelmen, in an interview Wednesday with The Examiner. "It was just a regular student-teacher relationship."

Uelmen taught criminal law at Loyola, also called Loyola-Marymount, from 1970 to 1986. Kennedy-Powell graduated from the Los Angeles law school in 1977, according to the California Courts and Judges Handbook.

Robert Weisberg, a professor at Stanford Law School, said, "I really don't think there's an an ethical problem here."

But, Weisberg added, had it been much more recent, the judge might have a moral duty to consider recusing herself. In that case, "the concern would be that she would be hearing him as her law professor lecturing on the Fourth Amendment," he said, adding, "I really don't think there's any ethical problem here."

Uelmen, until last month dean of Santa Clara University School of Law, hasn't handled a murder trial since 1990, when he teamed with Simpson co-counsel Robert Shapiro to defend Marlon Brando's son against murder charges for killing his half-sister's lover. Christian Brando ultimately pleaded guilty to the lesser charge of manslaughter.

But his recent absence from active practice hasn't diminished his reputation.

"He's probably the best scholar on California criminal law," said San Francisco Public Defender Jeff Brown.

But already, his joining Simpson's legal team has paid off, said Ephraim Margolin, a San Francisco defense lawyer. Uelmen helped craft a bold and unusual defense challenge to grand jury proceedings in the case.

Simpson, arrives Thursday at the Los Angeles Criminal Courts Building with Gerald Uelmen, a defense team member who once taught the judge who presided over Simpson's pretrial hearing when Uelmen was a professor, and the judge was a student at Loyola Law School. Uelmen has been described as 'best scholar on California criminal law.'

Pro-lifers open 3 days of protests in Little Rock

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Pro-life forces took their fight to President Clinton's home state Thursday, targeting two places as they began three days of demonstrations.

Abortion rights groups were monitoring the pro-life activists, looking for violations of the new Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrance Act, which threatens prison time and fines to anyone who blocks access to clinics, damages clinic property, or injures or intimidates their patients or staff.

The law, signed by Clinton in May, was first invoked last month in Milwaukee after six demonstrators shackled themselves to cars and a concrete-filled drum outside a clinic.

"What we are seeing before our very eyes is the criminalization of Christianity," the Rev. Flip Benham of Operation Rescue told supporters before they went to the first clinic.

During the second encounter at Baptist Medical Towers, two pro-life demonstrators entered the offices of Dr. Maxwell Baldwin, who performs abortions. The two were escorted out of the building, police said.

"Life yes, abortion no, Maxwell Baldwin's got to go," protesters chanted outside the building.

Several women dropped to their knees and prayed in front of officers lined up on a sidewalk at the Medical Towers.

Several area ministers who support abortion rights talked with some of the protesters.

'What we are seeing before our very eyes is the criminalization of Christianity.'

the Rev. Flip Benham, Operation Rescue.

"We respect you in your conviction, we truly do," Rabbi Matthew L. Friedman told Benham. "I really believe that there is a commonality."

Benham, a tiny, empty coffin at his feet, said later: "There's not common ground. There's no middle ground."

At the first clinic, police barricades and a line of uniformed officers kept apart the factions.

Ministers holding Bibles and color photos of what they said were aborted fetuses preached to the abortion rights demonstrators.

The Rev. Aram Berard, a Roman Catholic priest with Operation Rescue, singled out Anne Drake, who stood behind a barricade, telling her in a low voice that such clinics "kill innocent children."

She didn't flinch. "I've heard it before, much worse," Drake said. "I was trying to remember the ingredients for a macaroni salad recipe."

Some blacks grapple with ideas, images connected to O.J. case

By Gregory Lewis
N.Y. Times News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — In the court of black public opinion, the O.J. Simpson case poses a troubling set of circumstances, aggravated by its racial implications and a trail of imagery that has historically painted black men as brutes.

"It's the only topic in America," insisted Cheryl Towns, a community relations specialist at the University of California-San Francisco.

"It's hard not to follow these days," said Richard White, a 32-year-old accelerator operator at Stanford University. "There are lots of murders that go on and don't get reported. It's definitely not balanced, and it's overdone. I understand that it involves people everybody knows and supposedly loved, but still it's only one case."

White and the other customers played down race. For them, the case is a classic whodunit.

But San Francisco civil rights lawyer Eva Paterson-Jefferson looked at it another way: "It doesn't matter what color you are. People say there's another black man out of control."

Even more unsettling for African Americans is that a black man able to escape the trappings of race has become the latest in a series of prominent black men at the forefront of the major sex or gender issues of the '90s.

The list includes: Clarence Thomas and sexual harassment; Mike Tyson and date rape; Michael Jackson and pedophilia; and now Simpson and domestic violence.

"The airing of dirty laundry of other groups is hidden and secret," said Oakland writer Ishmael Reed. "So blacks become surrogates for discussions about not only sex and gender issues but politics also."

The talk among African Americans — in public and private — takes into account racial imagery in the media, the country's history of things black and white, and how one black's failure becomes the black man's burden.

Frequently in black America, O.J. Simpson is compared to Shakespeare's tragic figure Othello, a black Moor who slays Desdemona, his younger, and white, wife, in the belief he has been cuckolded.

MISD gets ready for new school year's early start

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Trying to beat the heat of one of Midland's record-breaking hot summers is foremost on everyone's minds, yet the first day of school is little more than six weeks away.

Midland public schools open and close a little earlier this year. The first day of school is Aug. 16, and the last day of school is May 26. High school graduation has been set for May 27.

Midland Independent School District employees, especially teachers, were overwhelmingly in favor of the 1994-95 calendar, which ends the first semester prior to the Christmas holidays. School calendars in the past brought students back from the holiday break with a week or two to review before final exams.

"Test scores are higher when we don't have that two-week Christmas break, which was the main reason for the push," said teacher and past president of Classroom Teachers Association of Midland Donna Kelly in a previous Reporter-Telegram report.

MISD superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. said the new calendar could result in cutting back on some Christmas concerts and activities, since there will be no performances during final exams.

The superintendent said administrators had considered moving to a calendar with the first semester ending before the holiday break in the past. However, new schools being built did not have construction completed in time to start early enough.

So, the new calendar makes for a shorter summer than students and parents have experienced in the past.

"Where has our summer gone to?" asked Jane Carrens, Midland High School principal. She noted that the "Dawg Days of Summer," MHS registration, is set for Aug. 9 for seniors, Aug. 10 for juniors and Aug. 11 for sophomores.

"Rebel Muster," high school registration for Lee High School students, has been set for Aug. 2 for seniors, Aug. 3 for juniors and Aug. 4 for sophomores.

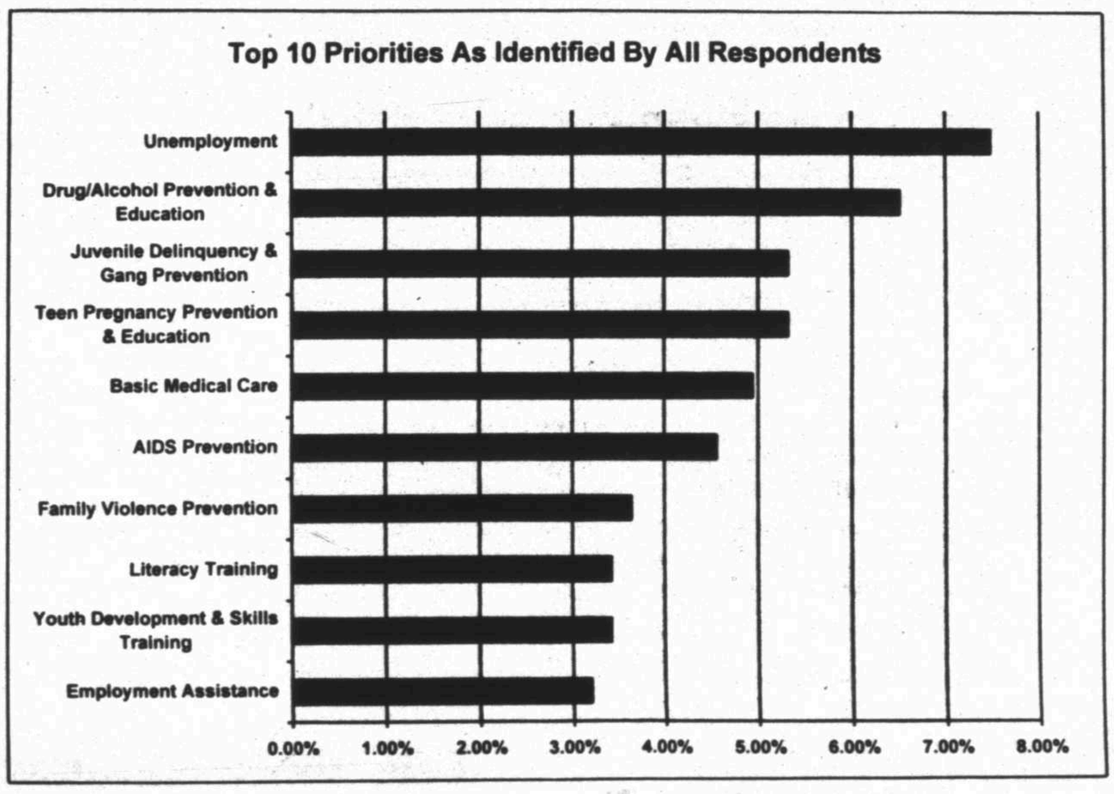
This school year, students will be out before Memorial Day. Christmas holidays are set for Dec. 21 through Jan. 8.

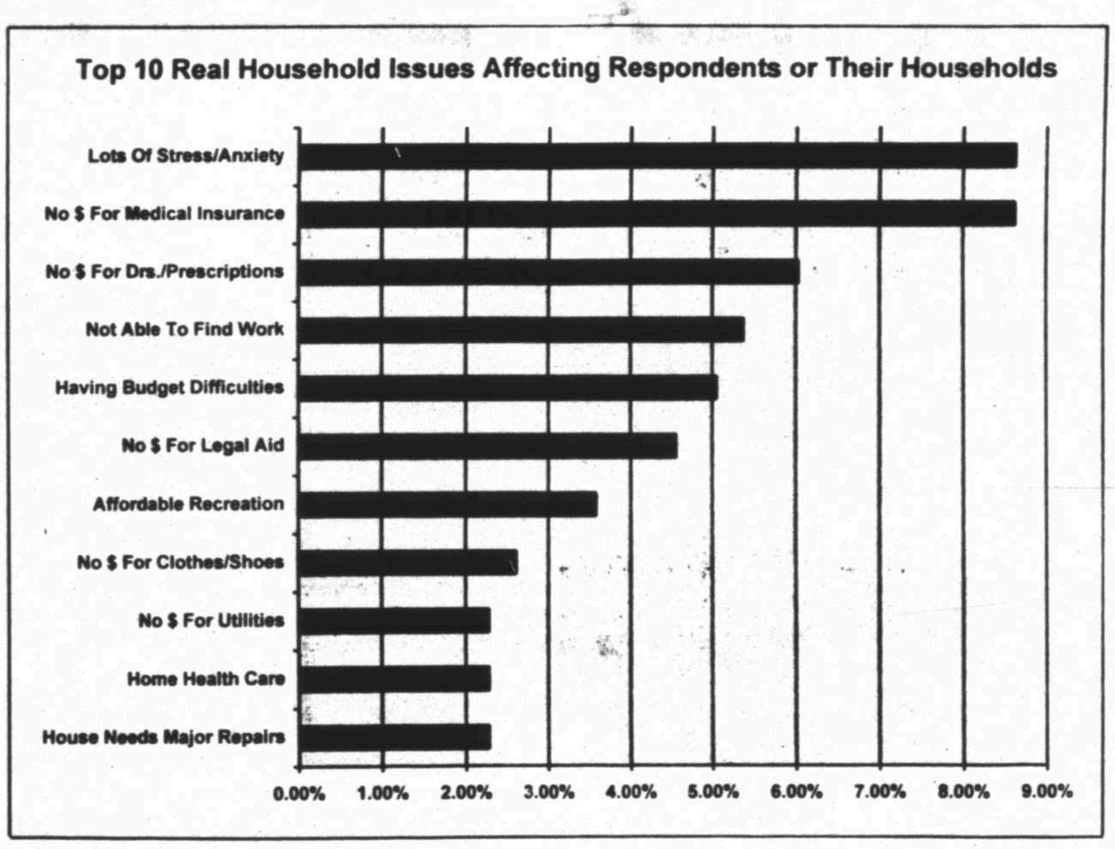
Spring break is scheduled for March 13-17, with a possible additional day, March 20, if it isn't used as a bad-weather makeup day.

Easter holidays are set for April 13 and 14, with the possible addition of April 17, another bad-weather makeup day.

About 1,184 MISD employees voted for the new 1994-95 calendar in a run-off election with another calendar option. The second option received 880 votes.

Survey identifies Midland's needs





■ Introspective '93 results show problem areas in broad range of human service issues, provide tool for solutions.

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

Results from Midland Introspective '93 — a countywide survey assessing current human service needs — indicates a broad range of needs for residents, ranging from educating youth to providing services for the poor and elderly.

Midland Introspective '93 is the second time Midland residents have been surveyed to assess current human service needs.

Like Midland Introspective '88, this project assembled a broad spectrum of service providers, community leaders, students and randomly selected households in an effort to identify current trends.

'This survey has provided a considerable amount of data regarding critical needs and issues facing Midland. The solution to many of the needs and issues reviewed here requires major community coordination and a combination of funding sources.'

— Introspective '93 executive summary

The Introspective results were summarized and placed in a report called the Midland Introspective '93 executive summary.

"At a time when human service needs are changing rapidly, maximizing and focusing the available resources become a critical reality. This report is the result of effort put forth by many people who have been challenged by the shifting service demands and who are also involved in raising and allocating scarce resources.

"This major research project was coordinated by the United Way of Midland, but was sponsored by many and represents the second comprehensive community needs assessment conducted in partnership during the last six years," according to K. Michael Conaway, Midland Introspective '93 steering committee chairman.

"Midland Introspective is proud to offer this report to the community. It identifies the many human service problems that we face and the challenges for our tomorrows.

"The work has just begun — the volunteer leadership of Midland Introspective invites you and other community groups to offer suggestions so that together we can better address our current problems," Conaway said in the opening of the Introspective executive summary.

The Introspective survey results don't offer solutions to any of the problems presented. However, the results provide a tool for community leaders to seach for solutions through task forces or other action.

The Introspective executive summary also outlines demographics of the city and county, identifying population growth, immigration and diversity and population age structure.

Additionally, it touches on societal issues including crime and the growing presence of gangs in the community, as well as giving statistics on poverty.

Those sent a survey — service providers, community leaders, students and randomly selected household heads — were asked to complete four sections based on different areas of inquiry.

First, respondents were asked to rate a series of issues for their neighborhoods based on their perceptions with regard to areas such as affordable child day care, crime, employment, drug abuse and more. The ratings were based on a scale from never occurs to don't know if it occurs in the neighborhood or not.

Among the top 10 most often perceived neighborhood issues, as identified by all survey respondents, were lack of recreation facilities and programs, as the top issue, and lack of sexual assault prevention

Stress, medical issues top list of concerns

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

United Way of Midland representatives presented results of the Midland Introspective '93 survey to the public Thursday citing "stress" and the "inability to pay for medical" needs as two of the top household issues discovered by the survey.

Midland Introspective '93 was a countywide survey assessing current human service needs in the community. The research project was coordinated by the United Way of Midland with the survey conducted and results compiled by Renee Zimmerman of the United Way of the Plains in Wichita, Kan.

Midland Introspective '93 is the second time Midland residents have been surveyed to assess current human service needs. The first time was in 1988.

As in the first survey, this project assembled a broad spectrum of service providers, community leaders, students and randomly selected households in an effort to identify current trends.

However, in the 1993 survey, respondents were solicited from different census tracts rather than by ZIP codes as in the 1988 survey. Ms. Zimmerman indicated that this more fairly represented the different sections of the city and county.

The 1988 survey resulted in such projects as the after-school child care program at 13 elementary

Club honors efforts of marathon golfers

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

The Boys and Girls Club of Midland honored golfers Thursday for their efforts to raise money for the organization during the hottest day in Midland's history.

John Farr, director of the organization, presented awards to individuals and companies that participated in "Birdies, Bunkers and Bogies," the Boys and Girls Club's second annual golf marathon. The event was held June 27 at the Green Tree Country Club, during 116-degree temperatures.

The event helped raise $59,030 for the club.

"Our goal had been $100,000," Farr said. "We set it expecting about 40 teams raising about $2,500 each. We had 24 teams this year, but those teams averaged more than $1,000 each, which is pretty commendable. Plus, last year's marathon brought in about $45,000, so we have topped last year."

Farr said the golf marathon replaced the club's Steak and Burger Dinner that it used to raise money in the past.

FRIDAY DAY WATCH

Lights & Siren

Q. What is mutual aid?

A. Emergencies vary as to size and location. Occasionally an incident requires more resources than one fire department can provide without leaving an area unprotected. Mutual aid agreements, whether formal or informal, are when fire departments agree to assist each other. High-rise fires, large grass fires and aircraft crashes with mass casualties are some examples where mutual aid is a great asset to have among several departments.

Questions about emergency medical services or firefighting should be sent to Lights & Siren, P.O. Box 1152, Midland, 79702-1152.

Ruling on motions

Pre-trial motions were heard Thursday by 238th District Court Judge John Hyde in the attempted murder trial of Mark Mitchell Jr. However, the judge has reserved making his ruling until this afternoon. Mitchell is set to go to trial Monday on charges of aggravated robbery, aggravated assault and attempted murder for an April 2, 1993, attack on a convenience store clerk. Mitchell is charged with hitting a convenience store clerk with a baseball bat in the head before fleeing the store with a 12-pack of Dr Pepper. Mitchell's defense attorney Glen Aaron made motions to suppress certain evidence and testimony from the trial. Another pre-trial hearing is scheduled for this afternoon at which time the judge may make his ruling on the motions.

Principal award

GREENWOOD — Faye Welch has been named Outstanding Junior High Principal in Region 18 by fellow principals. The Greenwood Junior High School principal recently was recognized by the Texas Association of Secondary School Principals summer workshop, held in Austin. Principals qualifying had to be TASSP members for three years. They were judged on taking steps to keep current in education philosophy and technique and actively pursuing excellence in their schools. Ms. Welch has been an administrator in both the elementary and junior high schools in Greenwood Independent School District for the last five years. Last year she served as president of Region 18 TASSP and vice president for membership in Phi Delta Kappa Midland Chapter.

DEATHS

Fannie Cranfill

SWEETWATER — Services for Fannie Bonner Cranfill, mother of Margaret Willis of Midland, are pending with Cates Funeral Home in Sweetwater.

Although the time and date have not been confirmed, the services will be held at the 4th and Elm Street Church of Christ in Sweetwater.

Mrs. Cranfill died Thursday.

Marvin Madden

ODESSA — Services for Marvin E. Madden, 68, of Odessa will be at 2 p.m. Saturday at Cumberland Presbyterian Church with the Rev. Robert Weston officiating. Burial will be in Sunset Memorial Gardens under the direction of Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home.

Madden died Thursday at his residence.

He was born Feb. 22, 1926, in Turkey. He married Doris J. Stringer on Aug. 26, 1947, in Borger. He moved to Odessa in 1969. He worked for Cable Tool and Rotary Drilling Rigs from 1947-53 and then for J.M. Huber from 1953-62. He was co-owner of Diamond Well Service from 1962-66. He returned to J.M. Huber Corp. in 1966 as an electrician, was transferred to oilfield equipment division in 1969 and moved to Odessa as regional sales manager until his retirement in 1985. He joined Madden Sales and Service, Inc., as sales manager in 1985 and retired in May 1991. He was a member of Cumberland Presbyterian Church, ISOM 1242 Masonic Lodge in Borger, American Legion and Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association.

Survivors include his wife, Doris J. Madden of Odessa; two sons, Raymond D. Madden and Edward H. Madden, both of Odessa; a daughter, Linda Marlene McKinney of Borger; a brother, Howard Madden of Midland; two sisters, Murrell Jones and Nadine Nisbett, both of Borger; nine grandchildren; and eight great-grandchildren.

Rosa Copelyn

Graveside services for Rosa Lee Copelyn, 91, of Midland were Thursday at Oakwood Cemetery in Waco. Arrangements were under the direction of Midland Funeral Home.

Mrs. Copelyn died Sunday at her residence.

She was preceded in death by her husband, two brothers and three sisters.

Survivors include a daughter, Verna Willis of Midland; six grandchildren; 15 great-grandchildren; two great-great-grandchildren; seven nephews and several nieces.

Barbara Spence

Graveside services for Barbara Spence of Midland have been set for 3 p.m. Friday at Fairview Cemetery with the Rev. Leland Maples of Belmont Baptist Church officiating. Ellis Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. Spence died Monday at her residence.

Luis Salinas

Services for Luis Salinas of Midland have been set for 9:30 a.m. Saturday at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel. Burial will follow at Fairview Cemetery with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Salinas died Thursday at a local hospital.

He was born Nov. 23, 1932, in Sebastian, where he was reared. He graduated from Lyford High School and later became a deputy sheriff for Willacy County. Salinas served in the U.S. Army during the Korean War.

He married Christine Cumby in Raymondville.

He moved to Midland and worked for the Midland Police Department from 1961-81.

Salinas became a bailiff for the Municipal Court until his retirement in 1987.

He was a member of the Lions Club and was past president of the Midland Junior Baseball Association.

Survivors include one son, Donald L. Salinas of Houston; his mother, Amelia Salinas of Harlingen; five brothers, Gilbert Salinas and Alfredo Salinas, both of Harlingen, Willy Salinas of Lyford, Junior Salinas of Chicago, Ill., and Frank Salinas of Alabama; two sisters, Mary Ramos of Harlingen and Gloria Russell of Baltimore, Md.; and two grandchildren.

Closer to reality

The new George Bush exhibit at the Confederate Air Force Museum continues to move closer to reality as Dan Robertson, left, public relations chairman for ARCO Permian, announced that the ARCO Permian Foundation would be donating $5,000 to the exhibit, which is expected to open in early September. Visiting with Robertson is Frank Cahoon, chairman of the CAF Foundation.

SURVEY: Results show range of human service needs and eduction, as the second most important issue.

The subsequent neighborhood issues include affordable medical care, AIDS awareness and education, lack of youth development programs, unemployment, affordable housing, juvenile delinquency, affordable dental and eye care and racial discrimination.

The second section of the survey dealt with real household issues experienced within the past 12 months by the respondent or any member of their household. They were asked to rate the severity of the issue on a scale ranging from not an issue at all to don't know if it is an issue in the family. Questions ranged from not having enough money for food and not being able to pay the utility bills to having a lot of anxiety, stress or depression.

"Lots of anxiety, stress or depression" and "no money for medical insurance" tied as the top "real issues" of the survey respondents and their households.

The remaining top 10 real household issues included no money for doctors or prescriptions, not able to find work, having budget difficulties, no money for legal aid, affordable recreation, no money for clothes and shoes, no money for utilities, home health care and house needs major repairs.

The No. 1 issue for both the community leaders and randomly selected households was lots of "anxiety, stress or depression." Almost six percent of the community leaders and eight percent of the households cited this issue as real for them and their families. This same issue ranked third for youth and tied for second for agency executive staff.

"Roughly nine percent of the total respondents stated that lots of anxiety, stress or depression has been a real major concern for their households in the last 12 months. While this may seem a small percentage, it represents approximately 3,360 households in Midland County," according to the Introspective executive summary.

The third section of the survey asked the respondents to identy whose primary responsibility, besides the individual or family, it is to address various issue areas with financial resources. The options given were charity, government or a combination of these two groups.

The majority of respondents indicated they strongly believe each issue area should be jointly funded by governement agencies and charitable organizations.

The last section of the survey asked the respondents to identify three top priorities for Midland County from a list of 40 different variables.

The No. 1 issue identified in terms of priority by all respondents was unemployment/underemployment in Midland County. The other issues that rounded out the top priority positions included drug/alcohol prevention and education, juvenile delinquency/gang prevention and teen pregnancy.

"This survey has provided a considerable amount of data regarding critical needs and issues facing Midland. The solution to many of the needs and issues reviewed here requires major community coordination and a combination of funding sources. The challenge now is to take responsibility and work together to design the most effective plan for the future," the conclusion of the executive summary reads.

The survey was conducted and compiled by Renee Zimmerman of the United Way of the Plains in Wichita, Kan.

The Midland Introspective research project was coordinated by United Way of Midland, but was financially sponsored by the Davidson Family Charitable Foundation, Permian Basin Area Foundation, City of Midland, Midland Independent School District, Memorial Hospital and Medical Center, Midland College, Midland County, Junior League of Midland, Midland Chamber of Commerce, Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs and the United Way of Midland.

Copies of the executive summary report are available by calling the United Way of Midland at 682-4358.

schools and the Memorial Community Health Clinics at Southeast Senior Center and Casa de Amigos.

"In 1993 we asked Midlanders what they believed were the needs of our community," said K. Michael Conaway, chairman of the Midland Introspective '93 steering committee.

"This survey shows the problems facing the community as they saw it . . . and we hope to use the results to make Midland a better place to live," Conaway said. "Anyone can use this information to improve the quality of life here."

He said the results of the 1988 survey impacted the community by the forming of numerous task forces that created the after-school day care program as well as forming the health-care clinics.

Ms. Zimmerman said the survey results can "guide us through the process" of addressing the community's needs.

"The top three needs identified by the community included addressing stress, anxiety and depression, and those are tied with not being able to find medical insurance and not being able to pay doctors.

"These are basic human care needs . . . this is where the work begins through task force development and by taking action to overcome the problems.

She said everyone has stress, but indicated life events such as death in the family, loss of a job, severe financial problems, sudden illness, divorce or separation, suffering a disabling injury, teen pregnancy, AIDS in the family or close friend, and incest or rape were all stressful events listed by the survey respondents as causes of their stress.

"This is where the word needs to get out that there are agencies out here willing to help people facing these situations and to make the quality of life for Midlanders better," Ms. Zimmerman added.

Conaway said one of the significant differences in the 1993 results as compared to the 1988 results is that alcohol and drug abuse didn't seem to rank as highly as a problem. He added child-care issues appear to have been better addressed as well since they weren't high-ranking problems according to these results.

Ms. Zimmerman added that AIDS awareness and education as well as concerns about juvenile delinquency and gang prevention were higher ranking now than before.

The results also showed an increase in the numbers under the poverty level in Midland County. Conaway said those numbers are up 30 percent since the 1990 census and indicated the health-care issues were the most prevalent among the poor.

Ms. Zimmerman noted that 20 percent of the survey respondents indicated they had no health benefits.

Another concern with the respondents was the issue of employment. Ms. Zimmerman said not having a job or fear of losing a job — which was a top priority of the survey respondents — adds to the anxiety level of people. Conaway noted that local reports of oil companies downsizing is indicative of this concern.

While the survey results and subsequent report released Thursday don't offer any solutions to the problems, Conaway said they are the first step in getting solutions on line.

He said it will take some time to disseminate the information, but he anticipates task forces being formed as well as some leading institutions helping form some remedies for the problems.

"There will be a broad group of folks deciding on how best to address these topics," he added.

Conaway said all the agencies who were involved in sponsoring the survey will review the survey responses and offer their opinions on possible answers to the problems.

The '93 Introspective results were summarized and placed in a report called the Midland Introspective '93 executive summary and presented Thursday during a public forum to respond to any questions about the report. The report is available to the public by calling the United Way of Midland at 682-4358.

Health center to hold farewell reception

Staff Report

ODESSA — Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center in Odessa is hosting a farewell reception for Dr. Brenda Cleary, regional dean of the school of nursing.

The reception is set for 3-5 p.m. Wednesday in the rotunda of the center, 800 W. 4th St.

Ms. Cleary has been employed with Texas Tech since 1989.

As a gerontological clinical nurse specialist, she has worked with Seabury Nursing Home and has also served on the board and as chair of the Alzheimer's Association of the Permian Basin and president of the Alzheimer's Coalition of Texas. She received the National Research Service Award from the National Center for Nursing Research as well as an additional NIH research grant, the President's Academic Achievement Award and the Teaching Excellence Award from Texas Tech and District Nurse of the Year honors from the Texas Nursing Association.

Ms. Cleary will assume the position of executive director of the North Carolina Center for Nursing.

Gayleen Ienatsch, instructor for the school of nursing at Texas Tech in Odessa, has been named Acting Regional Dean.

UTPB's fund drive gets kick start

Staff Report

ODESSA — The 1994 Partners for the UT-Permian Basin's annual fund drive recently kicked off with a $15,000 gift from Phillips Petroleum Foundation.

"The consistent support from Phillips leads the way for other corporations," UTPB President Charles Sorber said.

Paul Appel, vice president of the West Texas Region for GPM Gas Corporation, a Phillips subsidiary, said, "We recognize that the university is important to the Permian Basin."

According to Appel, the corporation sees the partnership as essential in strengthening the area economy.

Contributions to Partners for UT-Permian Basin benefit such programs as scholarships, student recruitment and retention, teaching innovations and faculty development.

The 1994 "Partners" campaign will run through Dec. 31.

and caddies from local companies, and each solicited donations on the numbers of holes they played. Each team played from dawn until dusk or until they finished the 100 holes.

Awards were presented for performance on the green to teams that raised more than $2,500 and $1,000 and to teams that raised the most money for the organization.

Bill Dingus and Larry Holden received a trip to a Dallas Cowboys game for raising the most pledges — $5,342 — for the club.

Second place went to Wayne Esslinger and Paul Davis, who brought in $4,607; third place went to Bill Hill and Buddy Sipes, who raised $3,673; and fourth place went to Phil McKown and Sheila Kinsey, who raised $3,355.

Awards also were given to Arco Permian for raising more than $10,000 for the club and the Inwest Group, which raised about $9,000.

Farr said the money will be used for general operations, facility improvements and to add new programs.

Established in 1860, the nationwide non-profit organization's mission is to help youngsters of all backgrounds, with special concern for those from disadvantaged circumstances. The Boys and Girls Club works at developing youth to become responsible citizens and leaders.

"Our mission is to provide a core program of activities based on the physical, emotional, cultural and social needs of boys and girls in their communities. This in turn gives our youth a sense of belonging, usefulness, competence and influence that enhances self-esteem and encourages them to achieve their full potential," according to a Boys and Girls Club statement.

Panel OKs more money for Texas prisons

AUSTIN (AP) — Legislative leaders Thursday approved another $114.6 million for speeded-up prison construction, a program designed to give the state more than 152,000 prison beds by August 1995.

The unanimous vote by the Legislative Budget Board was the second time in three months money has been transferred into prison construction. The board shifted $102.7 million in April.

Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock said lawmakers are following through to meet the top concern of Texas citizens.

"That's where the priority of Texas people is," Bullock said.

"I don't believe in government by polls . . . but the vast majority of the people that talk to me still rank their safety at home and their place of business as No. 1."

Thursday's action gave the prison-building program $33.4 million from the Treasury's unclaimed money fund, which includes money from dormant bank accounts, and shifts $81.2 million from the state employee group health insurance. Officials said that money had been saved through use of a "managed health care" system.

Another $11.4 million for prison expansion is expected to come from savings within the Texas Department of Criminal Justice itself, officials said.

Midlander attends Girl Scout conference

Staff Report

Mary-Elizabeth Prentice of Midland, a member of the Permian Basin Girl Scout Council, currently is attending "It's a Shore Thing! Wider Opportunity" conference, hosted by the Chesapeake Bay Girl Scout Council in Newark, Del.

Only 120 girls from across the United States have been selected to participate in this two-week event, which is focusing on environmental research and careers.

It concludes July 21.

The participants will be visiting differents areas in and around the Chesapeake Bay and Atlantic Ocean area, including the U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., and Assateague Island, Va. They also will have the opportunity to work with research scientists, marine police and forestry personnel.

Miss Prentice is a member of Senior Girl Scout Troop 88. She recently earned her Silver Award in Girl Scouts. She is the daughter of Dick and Betty Ann Prentice.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, JULY 8, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR: Corporate headhunters may have the answer for those of you seeking higher paid employment. Practice small economies to cut monthly expenses. You will find yourself on the busy social circuit in December. Family members who spend most of 1994 quarreling could reach a new understanding early in 1995. Follow your heart in romance. Giving someone a second chance could be a wonderful and wise move. Next May and June look ideal for travel.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Anjelica Huston, ballerina Cynthia Gregory, actor Kevin Bacon, baseball player Alan Ashby.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You may find it necessary to pressure others to get the results you need to move forward. Postpone negotiating or signing contracts. Lost articles will surface in mysterious places.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Lend a helping hand to a partner in distress. A dream could prove prophetic. Display your leadership qualities at work. Your keen business acumen will win you new admirers.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Add to your fun by including a fresh face in your plans. A change in your work routine will produce impressive results. Get more protection for your cash and jewelry.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Behind everything you do right now is one objective: to improve the lot of others. Efforts to ease someone's financial burden will be successful.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A world of good results from a small thing you do today. A self-made individual could greatly influence your aims. Focus on the most lucrative business opportunities.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Communication mix-ups can cause problems at a distance. A phone call or quick trip will straighten things out in a big hurry. The young-at-heart find new adventures.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): If you insist upon having your own way, be prepared to accept the consequences. Talking shop at social events could lead some people to think you are boring.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): If someone refuses to hear your side of things, shift your attention to other activities. Career gains can be made if you temper will power with tact.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Redouble your efforts to win the battle of the bulge. Satisfy a sweet tooth by eating fruit. A potential romantic partner shares your family-oriented values.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Calmer heads must prevail. Use your skills as a diplomat or mediator to win over your peers and relatives. Read books that are inspiring as well as entertaining.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Tolerating someone's sarcasm will only allow the situation to get worse. Be firm. Shopping in your neighborhood can save both time and money. Accept a last-minute invitation.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Part-time employment could be the answer to a temporary financial crunch. Become more assertive if you feel taken for granted. Relax at home with your loved ones tonight.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are dreamers, always fantasizing about exciting adventures. Even as tots, these Cancerians will be good travelers — ready to take off at a moment's notice. Count on them to be especially fond of vacations by the water! Highly sensitive to criticism, these children may brood over the smallest slight. Concerned parents will encourage them to develop a thicker shell.

Opening lead: Jack of ♣

The probability of one of two finesses succeeding is 3-to-1 in your favor. Those are pretty good odds, but if you can improve on that at no cost, why not?

When North confirmed at least three-card spade support by raising, South decided that, even though partner's hand might be minimum, there should still be good play for slam. South wasted no time in getting there.

West led the jack of clubs and a cursory glance at dummy might lead to the conclusion that, to get home, declarer must find West with either the king or jack of hearts and take two finesses in the suit. While that is clearly the primary line, there is one additional chance that should be tested first, made possible by the ten of diamonds on the table combined with a normal trump division.

Declarer won the first trick in dummy with the king and immediately drew the outstanding trumps in three rounds. Next came the king and ace of diamonds, followed by a diamond ruff. When both the queen and jack of diamonds came down, dummy's ten was promoted to the fulfilling trick and declarer had the luxury of taking the heart finesse in a forlorn attempt to score an overtrick.

It is not easy to spot the extra chance in the diamond suit. Indeed, when this hand was played in a pair tournament, the vast majority of players who bid the slam failed by a trick when both heart finesses lost.

Group of Mike Tyson wannabes turn out for shot at role in movie

NEW YORK — Lights. Camera. Tyson.

A roomful of Mike Tyson wannabes turned out Thursday for a shot at portraying the jailed former heavyweight champion in an HBO movie due out next year.

There were Tyson affectations — gold teeth, sleeveless shirts, tattoos, close-cropped haircuts — but no dead ringers. And there were two guys named Tyson — brothers Leonard and Melvin. Neither had experience on the screen or in the ring.

"We're amateurs," said Melvin, a 6-foot-1, 227-pounder.

His brother, who is 6-3 and 230 pounds, is a big Tyson fan.

"I just had to give it a shot," he said. "I'm hoping for the best."

The movie, "Tyson," is based on a biography written by former light heavyweight champion Jose Torres. Filming starts in August.

Tyson is serving a six-year prison sentence for rape and won't be out until May 1995 at the earliest.

MOBILE, Ala. — Winston Groom stayed out of the way while his novel, "Forrest Gump," was made into a movie starring Tom Hanks.

But the writer was front and center at the film's screening in his hometown.

"I thought Hanks was very good. He's one heck of an actor," the 50-year-old author said Tuesday night.

The 1986 book is about a rural Alabama man with an IQ of 75 who becomes a football star, a war hero and a successful businessman. Gump's mother, played in the movie by Sally Field, battles to make sure he has a fair chance in life.

Groom said he was pleased with the movie. He was invited with his wife to the Los Angeles premiere last month, but they declined.

"I've been to Hollywood before," Groom said. "It's no big thing meeting movie stars. They're perfectly nice people, but it's not a priority to me."

SEATTLE — Courtney Love, the widow of Nirvana's Kurt Cobain, obtained a court order against a man she says showed up at her house one night and demanded to see her.

A judge on Wednesday barred 25-year-old Robert Z. Sceeles from contacting Love or coming within 100 yards of her or her daughter.

Love, lead singer for the rock band Hole, said she feared for her safety and that of her daughter after Sceeles arrived at her home June 21.

"He stated that he was here to get me," she said in court papers. He was quoted as telling a guard: "I do not care if I die tonight. I want to see Courtney."

Love said Sceeles' parents told her he had boasted he was going to marry her.

Sceeles was arrested on charges of criminal trespass and stalking.

Cobain committed suicide at the couple's home in April.

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — Julio Iglesias reigns supreme among Hispanic entertainers in the United States.

Julio Iglesias reigns supreme among Hispanics.

Hispanic Business magazine ranked the Spanish crooner the top Hispanic crowd-pleaser, based on earnings. His gross income for 1993 and 1994 is expected to total $51.5 million, the magazine said.

Iglesias, a superstar in Europe and Latin America long before his arrival on the U.S. charts, has more than 200 platinum and gold records worldwide.

Following Iglesias was singer Gloria Estefan, with gross earnings of $38.5 million. Talk show host Geraldo Rivera was No. 3 with $37.5 million.

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Former heavyweight champion James "Buster" Douglas will have to watch his diet and stay in shape to control his diabetes.

The 34-year-old boxer, who knocked out Mike Tyson, remained in a hospital Thursday in serious but stable condition after he fell ill Monday at his home.

"He will need to follow a diet the rest of his life, eating the right proportions of certain foods and the right amounts," said Janet Gorman, a nurse for the Central Ohio Diabetes Association.

FAMILY MATTERS

Friendships important, especially after divorce

By Jim May, PhD.

DEAR FAMILY: When I first got married, I thought it was forever. But that isn't my problem.

May

My problem is that when I was first married, I pretty much disassociated myself from all of my friends to hang out with his friends and to make him happy. But now that we are divorced, I'm not sure where to start over with these people that I pretty much quit associating with, or even if I should.

Can you please give me some suggestions as how I should approach them again. Or should I just try to make new friends on my own? — REALLY ALONE

DEAR ALONE: I do not think that it has to be an "either/or" situation. I encourage you to do both — to re-contact your old friends and to set about making new friends.

In terms of your old friends, you may consider writing each a note to tell them what happened — that with your marriage you lost touch with them. Give them your new address and telephone number.

Now that you are divorced and free to choose your friends again, tell them you would like to get together. You can follow-up the notes with telephone calls to arrange a meeting, say for lunch. Each person's response will give you some indication of how they feel about the situation.

I also encourage you to attend one or more of the "Divorce Recovery Workshops" offered by local churches. Two of the more active programs are at Golf Course Road Church of Christ and First United Methodist Church. While the workshops are offered in a church environment, neither will try to convert you to their beliefs. These programs offer a great place to help deal with the pain of divorce in a safe environment and to begin to make new friends.

I also refer you to Dr. Bruce Fisher's book, "Rebuilding When Your Relationship Ends." It is an excellent book that breaks the divorce recovery process down into a series of 19 stages or building blocks. One of those building blocks is "Friendships." Typically, divorces are polarizing and you tend to lose friends just because some will choose your ex-husband. Your situation is exacerbated by your giving up your friends to please him.

Dr. Fisher believes that one's goal in this stage of the process should be to "get to know people." He goes on to suggest that you should, "Start by expanding your 'pool' of acquaintances. You can meet new people wherever you go — the grocery store; classes in tennis, ceramics, cooking, language, personal growth; community groups; volunteer service organizations; the library; work; or just out walking the dog." I want to add church to his list of suggestions.

Participating in a divorce recovery workshop and/or divorce recovery groups also are two ways of meeting people. Many of the local churches have adult singles groups.

Dr. Fisher does make one other observation that I want to share with you. He notes that, "If you are genuinely interested in the people with whom you come in contact, you are sending out vibrations that make people want to respond. But if you are coming across as lonely, desperate, and needy, people will not want to be around you." This difficult situation can be the beginning of the rest of your life — an opportunity to find yourself and your purpose in life. Best of luck to you on your journey.

WITH SUMMER IN FULL FORCE, THE CENTER FOR CHILDREN AND FAMILIES OFFER THE FOLLOWING "EIGHT RULES OF SAFETY" FOR CHILDREN:

- Before you go anywhere, always check with your parents or the person in charge. Tell them where your are going, how long you will be there, who will be going with you, and when you will be back.
- Check first for permission from your parents before getting into a car or leaving with anyone — even someone you know.
- It is safer for you to be with other people when going places or playing outside. Always use the "BUDDY SYSTEM."
- Always say "NO" if someone tries to touch you in ways that make you feel frightened, uncomfortable or confused. Go and tell a grown-up you trust what happened.
- It is not you fault if someone touches you in a way that is not OK. You don't have to keep secrets about those touches.
- Trust your feelings and talk to grown-ups about problems that are too big for you to handle on your own. You are NOT alone.
- It is never too late to ask for help. You can keep asking until you get the help you need.
- You are a special person and deserve to feel safe.

Therapy session is as close as your telephone

By Brett Pauly
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — So you're in the middle of asking "What's up, doc?" and you hear a second, computerized voice, "Please deposit another 60 cents for the next three minutes."

Worse, you just spent your last dime.

Or your shrink's receptionist puts you on hold, then goes to lunch.

Or a knock on your office door during an anxiety attack interrupts the sound of your therapist's soothing voice.

Telephone therapy can have its downfalls. But the serious practice of making diagnoses and conducting sessions over the telephone has been around as long as therapy and telephones have, experts agree.

The practice has gained national attention in the case of murder suspect O.J. Simpson who, following a 1989 charge of wife beating, was sentenced to two years' probation, community service and twice-weekly psychological couseling sessions. Less than four months later, the judge permitted the former gridiron great to continue the sessions by telephone when Simpson moved to New York to work as a football broadcaster.

NATIONAL PSYCHIATRIC and psychological associations say they don't keep tabs on the number of members who employ phone therapy, or how frequently it is used.

But Palo Alto psychologist Thomas F. Nagy, who chaired the committee in charge of the American Psychological Association's Ethics Code general revision in 1992, has been evaluating the practice of phone-shrinking, as it's called, for nearly a decade.

Nagy said he believes that every therapist who works with patients on a long-term basis — 10 or more sessions — has used therapy over the phone in limited capacities. He said he is not aware of any who do it exclusively or for patients with whom they do not already have a strong face-to-face rapport.

Although technical advances may someday turn laptop computers and videophones into household staples, experts say the therapeutic value of such high-tech gadgets remains unclear at this early stage.

"I can see their applications. The information superhighway will allow us to do things we can't even imagine," Nagy said. "But certainly seeing a person will always be important."

"For the therapist," added Beverly Hills psychiatrist Peter Gruenberg, "it's hard enough to do psychotherapy the old-fashioned way, face to face. But the imposition and impersonality of the telephone make it well-nigh impossible.

"People have asked me about on-line applications, and, frankly, I don't know," Gruenberg said. "There are medical health bulletin boards where people get on and chat and bulletin boards for people with certain sexual proclivities. But you don't know who they are, so don't call it therapy."

LOS ANGELES psychiatrist Marcia Goin, past chairwoman of the American Psychiatric Association's Committee on the Practice of Psychotherapy, said visual cues are an important part of therapy that phones can't address.

"You don't want to miss something that will be detrimental to the client's health," she said.

Also, "callers can't be certain if they're talking to a psychiatrist, psychologist, social worker, family counselor or a bartender," said Gruenberg, vice chairman of the American Psychiatric Association's Ethics Committee.

Nagy said a videophone can provide visual information about a patient, but that a computer would decrease client information because vocal intonations are sacrificed.

"The advantage of seeing someone in your office is that you are able to observe their physical appearances," Goin said. "Do they look disheveled, down or worried? It might be an indication of a bad day. On the phone, they can sound cheerful and mask it.

"You can pick up on someone's mood and psychological state by the way they look — whether they are able to make good eye contact, wringing their hands, feeling more anxious or more paranoid," Goin said. "These are cues that something is going on and to ask more questions. You miss all that on the telephone."

Reactions to questions and distractions can be misunderstood over the phone, she said. The caller — or the therapist, for that matter — could be bored, making hand shadows or doing paperwork on the other end of the line.

WHAT ACTUALLY qualifies as phone therapy is hard to define, Nagy said. It's a loose term that can include everything from crisis intervention, to suicide hot lines, to individual therapy sessions. There are instances of car-, mobile- and group-phone shrinking, as well as fax-shrinking.

No laws or licenses govern the practice and no formal studies have determined its effectiveness, Nagy said.

The American Psychiatric Association's Ethics Committee did, however, issue an opinion in February on short-term therapy offered over "800" and "900" phone lines.

"Experience has amply demonstrated that evaluation and diagnosis are difficult enough under the best of circumstances," the committee noted. "Without the direct contact that a face-to-face initial evaluation entails, it is very hard for us to see how the provision of competent medical (or other mental health) services can be ensured."

The opinion went on to state that psychiatrists participating in such services risk violating medical ethics.

"It's part of doing evaluation and treatment that you have feedback of what the patient looks like," Gruenberg said. "The argument from the other side is, 'What about a blind therapist? Can't he do a good job?' Yes, but it's not ideal."

Pauline Bart, a professor of psychiatry and sociology at the University of Illinois at Chicago who taught O.J. Simpson at USC during her first year as a professor, takes it a step further.

"It is one thing to call a therapist with whom one already has a relationship if one is in crisis.

"But since an important part of therapy is the therapist noting the non-verbal cues — what one does with his or her hands, how one holds his or her body, whether one makes eye contact — what O.J. Simpson did was relatively useless," Bart said.

MANY THERAPISTS agree, however, that phone-shrinking is acceptable, ethical and helpful in some instances — namely in times of crisis, injury or illness, and during travel or relocation — when a client and therapist already have a trusting professional relationship.

Guidelines for phone therapy suggested

By Brett Pauly
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Palo Alto psychologist Thomas F. Nagy, who has been evaluating the practice of therapy over the phone since 1985, offers these recommendations:

FOR THE CALLER:

- Ask if the therapist is licensed as a mental health provider.
- Inquire about any degrees the provider holds.
- Establish credentials. If a provider is found to have lied, that constitutes fraud, which is illegal and unethical.

FOR THE THERAPIST:

- Clearly define the service you are providing.
- Refrain from advertising or offering psychotherapy over the telephone when clients are able to make office visits.
- Impress upon the caller the importance of face-to-face consultation, and encourage it.
- Take precautions to try to compensate for the loss of contextual cues — body language, gestures, physical appearance, avoidance of eye contact — that may reveal intensity of emotions.
- Practice within your area of competence. Many therapists are not trained to perform telephone therapy with someone they have never met.
- Keep in mind that accurate diagnosis often is more critical in phone therapy. Certain problems — panic and depressive episodes, for example — can be treated over the phone better than others, such as personality disorders.

Massage can soothe savage beast too

By Tina Kelley
N.Y. Times News Service

SEATTLE — The testimonials come in from all over the world, from every province of the animal kingdom: This massage technique has helped us relax. It has soothed us. It has made us well.

They come from handlers of Herman the Black Indian Rhino in the Los Angeles Zoo, who no longer tries to rub his horn off against his cage. From Mr. Hulk the well woodchuck. From Majestic, a red-tail hawk. From snow leopards in Zurich. From trumpeter swans. A camel. An octopus.

And from Harriet Crosby of Washington, D.C., who writes glowingly of her 2-month-old puppy, Adonis. He had bladder stones. But not after a good massage.

"I worked on him for two hours and when he finally woke up, he peed and peed and peed all over my bed," she wrote.

More than two dozen local pet owners had a chance to learn this magic massage, the Tellington Touch, at a Humane Society meeting last week.

The technique was developed by Linda Tellington-Jones, a New Mexico horse specialist who is probably one of the few humans in the world to boast of success in massaging the private parts of a sexually recalcitrant elephant. The creature's name was Sari, and she became a mom soon afterwards.

THE THERAPY uses a variety of touches, with names like "flick of the bear's paw," "lick of the cow's tongue" and "tarantula pulling the plow." That's for advanced Touchers.

At last week's meeting, the group of 26 women and one man learned only the basic circles, which run clockwise, with medium pressure, one and a quarter rotations.

According to Bonni Sundberg, an equine massage therapist who helped lead the workshop, the circles have to be drawn carefully on the animal's skin.

Done correctly, the touch will activate all four kinds of wavelengths in the dog's brain — alpha, beta, delta and theta. Studies using biofeedback techniques have shown the Tellington Touch releases all four, while regular massage does not, said Sundberg.

"It increases circulation and the body's ability to heal," she said. "It teaches the body to learn to relax, to learn how to learn."

The room had the air of a Tupperware party, with people cheerfully eager to learn to do something nice for their cat or dog. "Oh, Honey's going to like this," one woman said to her companion.

If the instructors' two prop dogs, Ray and Blue, are any indication, the massage is certainly not painful. Both are 10-year-old Labrador retrievers. Blue is arthritic and Ray has terminal cancer, but they seemed to trundle along fine, and certainly didn't balk at the little circles being rubbed in their skin. If they seemed a bit lobotomized, there's no sure way to attribute that to the massage technique.

"Actually, both these dogs used to be killers," Sundberg said with a laugh.

JODY McINTURFF, the other instructor and Ray's owner, admitted that the two aren't party animals. "One of my favorite comments from the workshop evaluations was, 'Could you please bring live animals next time?' "

Ray has lived two months longer than his vet expected, and McInturff believes the T-Touch contributed to that. She caught his problem early because she was so well acquainted with his body.

The instructors also said the Touch increases circulation and opens up new neural pathways to the brain. It's supposed to be good for animals who are old, arthritic, young, aggressive, timid or submissive, and for those who have hip dysplasia or difficulties coming out of anesthesia. And for healthy animals, as a preventive thing. And for pets who are terrified of going to the vet.

Sundberg even said the touch can keep an animal from going into shock, and thus "can save your animal's life." There are certain points, she said, like the tip of the ear, that are used by acupuncturists and T-Touchers to keep an injured creature from going into shock. The evidence given was purely anecdotal, however.

More convincingly, Sundberg said Blue used to have to be muzzled when she got her toenails clipped, but years of the Touch made her more used to being handled by humans. Now the thought of Blue needing a muzzle is like Barney's wife needing a restraining order. During all this, she lay there, getting scratched by strangers and shedding like a big dog.

IF THERE WAS an eerie zealousness to the crowd, that excitement of new converts, there's basically no harm done.

Sharon Crowell-Davis, of the American College of Veterinary Behaviorists, said she's not aware of any controlled, scientific evidence the technique benefits animals.

"Certainly, if nothing else, it provides an opportunity for the owner and dog to interact in a positive way," she said. "As far as there being any particular technique as opposed to just petting your dog, I'm not aware of evidence to support that."

Some people have reported the massage helps women during childbirth. Sundberg said her husband uses the technique on her if her muscles are sore.

There are certain techniques for specific pet problems. Sundberg advised working on the snout area of aggressive, mouthy or teething dogs.

DEAR ABBY
Widow's lonely heart aches for love

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 79-year-old widow. I have been alone for 17 years, with no love or help from anyone. I was doing all right and was fairly content until I fell ill and was hospitalized. This led to my retirement at age 75. Now I feel like a discarded puppy left out on a road all by myself. I am under a doctor's care, but pills can't cure my loneliness and yearning for love.

Van Buren

I could move to the state where my daughter and her family live, but I'm sure they're too busy to spend much time with me, so I would have to live alone. Besides, I was born and raised here, and have some good friends and neighbors. Here, at least, I have someone to talk with. If I moved, I would be with strangers. (I don't need a nursing home yet.)

Abby, I have called around trying to be put in touch with a homeless person who would appreciate a home — but no luck. I am not a complainer and try to put on a happy face for my friends. Where can I find a good Christian person who needs a home and a good friend?

Please don't use my name. I don't want sympathy — just someone to help and love. I can't stand this loneliness much longer. — LONELY IN BLOOMINGTON, ILL.

DEAR LONELY: You appear to be a loving and generous person, but taking a stranger into your home out of need for companionship and love is extremely risky.

Since you have good friends and neighbors and have enjoyed your independence for 17 years, please consider discussing your feelings of depression and loneliness with your doctor. Also, a call to your clergyperson or local senior citizen's center might help resolve your problem.

A housemate might provide companionship, but "love" requires time to cultivate and grow. You may not need a nursing home yet, but a retirement facility would relieve you of housekeeping and cooking responsibilities — and at the same time provide you with as much company as you desire.

DEAR ABBY: Your advice to "Concerned Aunt," whose niece sleeps with her 4-year-old son, was dead wrong. Sleeping with a parent, especially since birth, is completely natural. Every mother I know has dealt with the issue of her child's wanting to share her bed.

Most parents, rather than allowing it, expend a lot of energy trying to prevent it. Many so-called experts in our culture have attitudes about parenting that absolutely defy nature, wrongfully encouraging parents to sleep separately from their children. Abby, given the opportunity to mature naturally, the child will eventually choose to have his own bed.

I don't know all the facts in the case, but my feeling is that the son's security needs are being met — not the mother's emotional needs. Besides, unless there is some inappropriate behavior going on, which I doubt, why should the aunt be bothered? Two people are sleeping peacefully in her home. What more could a hostess want? — KAREN DUNCAN, ATLANTA

P.S. Abby, to put it bluntly: The problem is that our perverse culture cannot think about "sleeping with" someone without associating it with sex.

DEAR KAREN: I stand by my original answer. There was not a hint that anything sexual was going on, but most experts in the field of child psychology believe that children develop independence far better when they sleep alone.

To receive a collection of Abby's most memorable — and most frequently requested — poems and essays, send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's "Keepers," P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)

Dog also is woman's best friend, as well as man's

By Elizabeth Schwinn
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Not only is dog man's best friend, but apparently woman's as well: In fact, most women who were asked to choose between a pet they own and a future mate picked the pet over, according to a national poll released Thursday by Redbook magazine.

Asked to decide between their pet and a prospective husband who would insist that they get rid of the animal, fewer than a third of the 500 women polled went for the human.

Four out of 10 women polled said they'd marry the guy if he agreed to let them keep their pet. However, 22 percent said they would refuse to marry the man whether or not he later changed his mind in favor of the pooch.

Only 28 percent of the women surveyed said they would get rid of their pet if a man who had proposed said he couldn't stand the animal.

The random telephone survey also asked women whether they'd marry a man if he had a pet they couldn't stand (57 percent said they would), and whether it's a good idea or a bad idea to allow any pet share a couple's bed (bad, said 52 percent; don't care, said 38 percent, and good idea said 3 percent).

More respondents were adamant against feeding a pet from the table — 83 percent said they wouldn't.

Not all the respondents were pet owners: 64 percent had an animal, and 12 percent said they wished they did.

The telephone poll had a margin of error of plus or minus 4.1 percent.

It was conducted by Redbook with EDK Associates, a New York-based research firm.

Book helps women embrace aging

By Susan Phinney
Hearst News Service

There's nothing like that 40th birthday to send a woman into a funk. For many, it signals a time to begin facing the physical aspects of aging, and coping with ageism.

In a society that values youth, pretty faces, perfect bodies and elder statesmen, older women haven't had an easy time. But with aging baby boomers swelling over-40 ranks, and women gaining political and economic clout, there's a growing number who are "aging with knowledge and power."

That just happens to be the subtitle of "Ourselves, Growing Older" by Paula Doress-Worters and Diana Laskin Siegal (Simon & Schuster, $18). It's a new version of a book first published in 1987 — a book done in cooperation with The Boston Women's Health Book Collective, the organization responsible for the classic, "Our Bodies, Ourselves."

While it may appear to be a guide to health and medical care, "Ourselves, Growing Older" offers advice and resources on topics ranging from housing and hearing loss to mastectomies and money matters. And it's a very different book from the 1987 version.

THE AUTHORS SAID they completely rewrote the chapter on menopause and brought back the term favored by their grandmothers, "change of life," because menopause has become synonymous with disease. "We do live half our adult life after menopause and we wanted the baby boomers to know this is a change of life," Siegal said.

Doress-Worters believes women are naturally more knowledgeable about health care because they use it more often.

That's why there's a whole chapter titled "Women's Health and Reforming the Medical-Care System" — a chapter that details how women are treated with less respect and receive poorer medical care than men.

"We wanted to give women the tools to analyze information, a feminist perspective of health-care policy," Doress-Worters said.

Although neither author is a physician — Doress-Worters, 55, holds a doctorate in social psychology, and Siegal, 62, a master's degree in public administration — they worked with physicians, nurse practitioners and about 300 other contributors to assemble the book.

Doress-Worters said we have a cancer phobia in this country and overlook other major diseases, like diabetes. Diabetes is more likely to affect women over 40 than men. It's often an underlying cause of heart and kidney disease. So the authors detail the two types and four classes of diabetes and explain how to use many facets of the health- and medical-care systems to manage the disease.

THE TEXT IS heavily laced with anecdotes about real people, their physical and social problems, and how they've handled them. Candid photos appear frequently and drawings illustrating everything from fibroid tumors to incontinence are easily understood.

Midlife childbearing, osteoporosis, cancer, hysterectomy and oophorectomy are all covered by the authors.

They added a chapter on AIDS to this edition because 25 percent of HIV/AIDS cases among women are in women over 40, Doress-Worters said.

Siegal said it's more important than ever for women to keep track of their bodies. And women need to address housing and social issues.

DR. PAGE

Treasures found 'in your own backyard'

Dr. Henry F. Page

The Rev. Russell Conwell, a Philadelphia clergyman and world famous preacher, gave a talk entitled "Acres on Diamonds" more than 6,000 times in 55 years, with fees totaling more than $8 million, all donated to benevolent enterprises.

Page

The parable depicted a man who porwled world-wide for many years and endured severe hardships searching for treasure and who finally returned home broke and broken only to discover too late that his own back yard was replete with diamonds.

One of the fundamental joys of life consists of observing the world with particular reference to its inhabitants all so variated in appearance, behavior and dietary customs. Many lucky individuals accomplish this by indulging in extensive foreign journeys at the cost of thousands of dollars. But the hectic nature of travel today plus the ever rising expense both tend to narrow and limit one's horizons. What a waste of time, money and energy it is when the answer to such intellectual curiosity lies, as illustrated by the reverend doctor's thesis, right in our own back yard with the diamonds in this case buried in Midland's Supermarkets.

It is there that you can rub elbows with "the Colonel's Lady and Judy O'Grady; Yankees' and Southern gentlemen; the tall, the short, the fat, the lean, the lame, the halt, the blind; the mean, the meek, the happy, the sad; Nordics, Slavs, Afros, Orientals, Indians (East and West), Mediterrians, Latins, plus other scattered specimens of humanity.

Amiable and cooperative clerks, check-out personnel and bag-persons all generate a warm supportive environment. The vast assortment of food stuff and fruits and gourmet tid-bits, all availabel practically the whole year-round, add color, flavor and a sense of global fecundity. All the above creates such a compelling attraction that several worthy couples lucky enough to possess a permit for parking for the handicapped cozily sit in their cars outside the entrance in warm fascination for hours at a time observing the societal promenade.

So here's the World at your very gate for you to savor and appreciate.
May the good fortune of living in the USA create heartfelt joy that will last for aye!

Caray comeback

CHICAGO — Chicago Cubs broadcaster Harry Caray was released from the hospital Thursday, two weeks after he stumbled and fell before a Chicago Cubs game in Miami.

The Hall of Fame broadcaster was being treated for an irregular heartbeat discovered after he apparently was overcome by heat before the June 23 game at Joe Robbie Stadium.

"He's improved a lot from the medication he's been receiving ... and he is expected to return to work with little or no restrictions," said Dan Parker, a spokesman for Northwestern Memorial Hospital.

Caray, 74, has not told WGN-TV when he plans to return to the broadcast booth, said WGN-TV general manager Peter Walker.

"There's hope for a return as soon as possible; however, I understand that Mr. Caray is still conversing with his doctors," Walker said.

He said the date probably would be set after next week's All-Star break.

Caray is the play-by-play voice of the Chicago Cubs on cable superstation WGN-TV. He's in his 50th year broadcasting major-league baseball.

Anderson retires

CHICAGO — Neal Anderson, the Chicago Bears' No. 2 career rusher, is retiring after eight seasons.

Anderson, an unrestricted free agent the Bears decided not to re-sign, announced his decision Wednesday. He will be 30 next month.

"Football was never No. 1 in my life," he said. "When I came into the league, it was not No. 1. I tried to keep God first, my family second and then wanting to do well at whatever I did."

Anderson could have signed with other clubs for considerably less than the $1.6 million he was paid by the Bears last season.

"I could have definitely played," he said. "But it just wasn't in my heart."

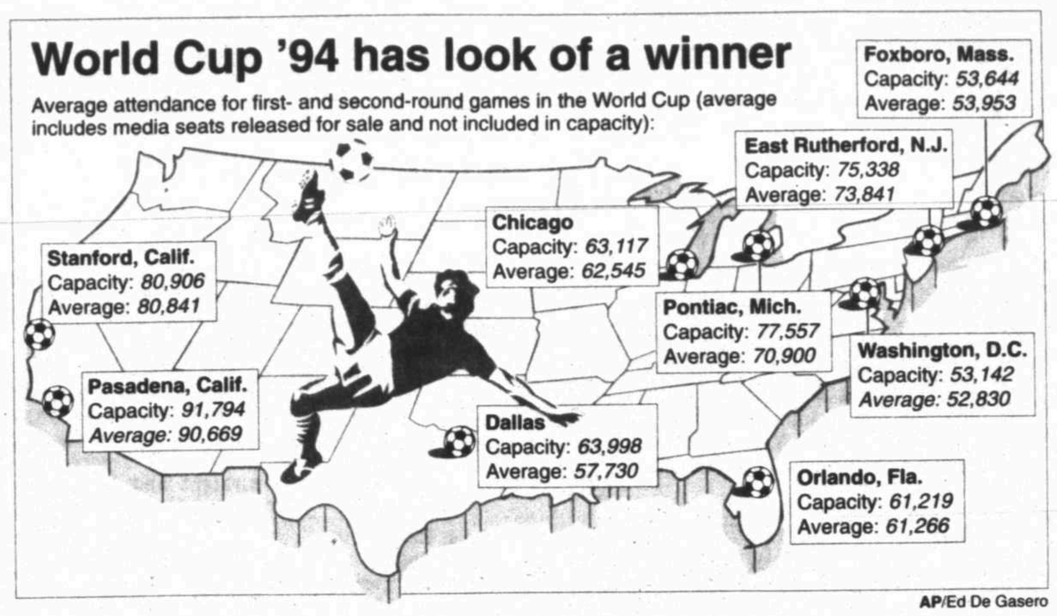
Cup hosts reap financial benefits



AP/Ed De Gasero

■ With only a few exceptions, merchants in the cities hosting World Cup games say business is more than brisk.

By Larry Siddons
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — The first American edition of the world's most popular sports event has been a winner at that most American of games: making money.

The World Cup, soccer's world championship, is pumping billions of dollars into the economies of the nine host cities, according to economists, business people and political leaders.

Just like the occasional 0-0 draw in soccer, there have been some misses: Restaurants near the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Calif., where the championship match will be played July 17, say fear of soccer crowds has cut into their patronage. And hotels near Walt Disney World and other theme parks in Orlando, Fla., say business was down because families didn't want their vacations to coincide with the soccer crush.

But overall, an Associated Press survey at the midpoint of

Straw's stick not stirring in debut

By Wendy E. Lane

SAN FRANCISCO — Darryl Strawberry got plenty of cheers but no hits in his return to the major leagues.

On a bright, warm Thursday at Candlestick Park, Strawberry took the first step in yet another comeback from injury and substance abuse, making his debut with the struggling San Francisco Giants. It was his first major-league game since last June 16 with the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Since then, he's been out with back injuries and in the Betty Ford Center getting treatment for drug and alcohol abuse.

"Today ranks with me as a new beginning, a new birth as far as my career," Strawberry said. "Today is a good start for the Giants and also for myself."

When he stepped to the plate for the first time, there was only a smattering of boos among the cheers. Batting fifth behind All-Stars Barry Bonds and Matt Williams, he went 0-for-3 and was walked intentionally in the eighth before being removed for a pinch runner.

The Giants went on to beat the Philadelphia Phillies 5-4.

"He brings a lot of threat with him," Williams said. "It's good for everybody, not just me and not just Barry."

After grounding out to second base his first two times up, Strawberry jumped all over a pitch from starter Shawn Boskie in the sixth, just after Williams homered. But Milt Thompson robbed Strawberry of a home run, snaring his fly ball just above the fence in straightaway center.

Sebach notches shutout

Staff Report

SAN ANTONIO — Midland Angel hurler Kyle Sebach didn't have a clue as to where his pitches were going Thursday night, but neither did the San Antonio Missions.

Sebach hurled a complete game shutout at the Missions as the Angels ended a two-game losing streak with a 5-0 victory before 9,497 fans. The win also gave the Angels a chance to split this six-game series with the Missions when the two teams meet tonight.

Sebach (2-1) gave up 10 hits in the game, but also stranded 10 San Antonio base runners. It was the second complete game victory for Sebach this sea-

Aggie linebacker overcomes family tragedy

■ Texas A&M linebacker Antonio Armstrong has a new name and more than Texas A&M's recent SWC football domination to live up to.

By Jerry Wizig
Houston Chronicle

HOUSTON (AP) — The time is right. So the uniform will be the same (No. 56) and the face will be the same, but the name on the back of the jersey will read "Armstrong" instead of "Shorter."

Antonio Armstrong decided in the spring that he would change his name from Shorter, as he was known his first three years at Texas A&M. Antonio Shorter helped to continue the school's excellence at linebacker as the Aggies won their third consecutive Southwest Conference title in 1993.

They will not win a fourth in a row, the result of NCAA sanctions, but Armstrong isn't concerned. He feels he has even more to live up to than the Aggies' SWC domination.

After all, that is the reason he took the surname of his late father, Don Armstrong, fatally stabbed nearly four years ago during an argument with Antonio's uncle. Shorter is the family name of Antonio's mother.

"I don't mind sharing it with the world," Antonio says of his reasons. "Since I first came to A&M, I have thought about doing it. I considered it for a long time. It never felt like the right time until now.

"I think my father would understand."

Four days before he was to leave in August 1991 to report for his freshman year at A&M, Antonio, 17 at the time, was at his mother's home, where he lived. His grandfather appeared to relate the grim circumstances of his father's death.

"It was an argument over just a little bit of money," Antonio says. "It grew into something it shouldn't have."

Antonio spent part of the summer in Dallas with another uncle, Harvey, a former All-SWC defensive tackle at SMU who played nine seasons in the National Football League.

Like Antonio, Harvey Armstrong went to Kashmere High School. So did Don Armstrong.

"He was a great athlete at Kashmere," Antonio says of his father. "But he had to leave school to take care of my mother. I feel partly responsible for his downfall."

To surmise from Antonio's frank and stark description, life couldn't have been easy for Don Armstrong, or for his mother, Kay.

"Things just didn't work out for him," Antonio says. "Temptations occurred. He got caught up in the wrong things, He handled it as best he could."

After the 1993 season, when he was voted the most valuable defensive player in the Cotton Bowl, Antonio gave the thought further nurturing.

"Once I got established, the priority came up," he says. "I felt only right that I should recognize my ton, which finished with 17 hits and turned five double plays.

The Astros (49-36) are 13 games over .500 for the first time since Aug. 21, 1989. The Cubs, meanwhile, fell to a season-low 15 games under, a depth not reached since July 1990, when they were 16 under.

Kile (6-3) won for the first time in four career decisions against the Cubs. He gave up seven hits in six innings and was backed by four double plays in the first five innings.

The Astros went ahead for good 2-1 in the third as Ken Caminiti singled, stole second and scored on a single by Luis Gonzalez off Willie Banks (8-7).

Servais hit his seventh homer for a 3-1 lead in the fourth, and consecutive doubles by Caminiti and Kevin Bass in the fifth made it 4-1. Gonzalez produced another RBI single for a four-run cushion.

Finley tripled for his third hit — the 12th off Banks — to give the Astros a 6-1 lead in the sixth, and Bass had an RBI single off reliever Blaise Ilsley.

Steve Buechele hit a two-run homer, his 10th, in the sixth to get the Cubs within 7-3, but Houston rallied against reliever Dave Otto on Biggio's two-run single in the seventh.

Rockies 2, Marlins 1

MIAMI — David Nied pitched a seven-hitter and Andres Galarraga hit a tie-breaking single in the eighth inning as Colorado beat Florida for its fourth straight victory, matching its longest winning streak of the year.

Nied (8-4) retired the last nine batters in his third straight victory and second complete game. He walked four and struck out five.

Eric Young reached on an error to start Colorado's eighth. Walt Weiss walked and Galarraga singled an out later off John Johnstone (1-1).

Florida's Rich Scheid, making his second major-league start and first since 1992, allowed five hits and one run in seven innings. He struck out seven.

Giants 5, Phillies 4

SAN FRANCISCO — Matt Williams' 31st homer highlighted a three-run sixth inning Thursday as San Francisco edged Philadelphia.

Darryl Strawberry, making his debut with the Giants in right field, went 0-for-3 with a walk in his first major league game since undergoing treatment for drug and alcohol abuse. He was lifted for a pinch-runner after an intentional walk in the eighth.

The Giants broke a three-game losing streak and sent the Phillies to their fifth loss in six games.

With San Francisco ahead 2-0 after five innings, John Patterson led off the bottom of the sixth with a single and scored on Barry Bonds' double. Williams followed with the home run off Shawn Boskie (4-5), putting the Giants ahead 5-0.

Phillies center fielder Milt Thompson then robbed Strawberry of a home run, snaring his fly ball at the top of the fence.

Reds 8, Pirates 7, 11 innings

CINCINNATI — Kevin Mitchell singled home the winning run with one out in the bottom of the 11th inning night to give Cincinnati a victory over Pittsburgh.

Carlos Garcia and Jay Bell singled home runs in the top of the 10th inning to put the Pirates up 7-5, but Hal Morris hit a two-run homer, his seventh, against Blas Minor to tie it again.

Mets 3, Dodgers 0

LOS ANGELES — Jason Jacome pitched six-hit shutout in only his second major league appearance and New York beat Los Angeles for its fourth straight victory.

Jacome (1-1), who joined the Mets' rotation when Dwight Gooden was suspended for violating his substance abuse aftercare program, did not walk a batter, struck out four and allowed four hits over the final 8 1-3 innings.

Todd Hundley hit his 13th homer to spark a three-run fourth against Tom Candiotti (6-4), who gave up six hits in eight innings and fanned six.

In pitching the Mets' third shutout this season, Jacome allowed only one runner as far as third base. That came in the seventh when Cory Snyder doubled off the glove of Joe Orsulak in right and advanced on a groundout.

Expos 7, Padres 0

SAN DIEGO — Ken Hill pitched a five-hitter and Darrin Fletcher hit a three-run homer, leading Montreal over San Diego, its sixth in as many tries this season.

Hill (13-3) won his fifth straight decision to join Jimmy Key of the New York Yankees for the most wins in the majors. The right-hander matched his season-high with eight strikeouts and walked one in his first shutout and second complete game of the season.

The Padres did not manage to get a ball out of the infield until Tony Gwynn singled with two outs in the fourth.

batters, but Midland Lee graduate Randy Velarde, who had homered in the first, walked.

Langston got two strikes on Boggs before the All-Star third baseman singled to left, scoring Williams. Tartabull followed with his RBI.

The Angels threatened in the eighth when Chad Curtis opened with a single and Damion Easley reached on an error by Dave Silvestri. But Rex Hudler grounded into a double play and after Chili Davis walked, Bo Jackson struck out for the fourth time.

Paul O'Neill's two-out single drove home the Yankees' fifth run in the eighth.

Velarde's seventh home run gave the Yankees a run in the first.

California tied it in the second when Davis singled and scored on Chris Turner's two-out double, Turner's seventh consecutive hit, one short of the Angels club record. His streak ended in the fifth when Yankee second baseman Pat Kelly made a leaping catch of his bid for a single.

Mariners 4, Red Sox 3 (10 innings)

BOSTON — Brian Turang singled in the winning run in the 10th inning as Seattle overcame a 3-0 deficit and beat Boston.

The win ended Seattle's four-game losing streak and increased Boston's slide to three games.

Held to one run and three hits in eight innings by Boston starter Aaron Sele, the Mariners got three runs and six hits in the last two innings off reliever Ken Ryan (2-2).

Marc Newfield, in a 1-for-15 slump, led off the 10th with a double and moved to third on Dan Wilson's sacrifice. Turang then lined the game-winning single to center.

Randy Johnson (10-4) struck out nine, walked three and allowed five hits in nine innings. Bobby Ayala pitched the 10th for his 12th save.

The Mariners tied the game with two runs in the ninth. Turang singled and Ken Griffey Jr. doubled one out later before Edgar Martinez and Tino Martinez hit consecutive RBI singles.

Griffey hit his major league-leading 33rd homer in the seventh, breaking his 11-game, 45 at-bat homerless streak.

Royals 8, Brewers 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Mike Macfarlane's three-run homer climaxed a six-run seventh inning and rallied Kansas City past Milwaukee.

Cal Eldred (9-9) took a three-hit shutout into the seventh but gave up six runs in the inning. Brent Mayne had a homer and David Howard had an RBI single. With two out, Macfarlane hit his 12th homer.

Howard added a two-run double in the eighth, tying his career best with three RBIs.

Tom Gordon (9-4) won his fourth straight, giving up five hits, walking three and striking out a season-high nine in eight innings.

White Sox 9, Tigers 5

DETROIT — Robin Ventura broke out of a 2-for-23 slump in a big way Thursday, triggering a four-run Chicago second and later homering as Chicago defeated slumping Detroit.

The White Sox, who entered the game trailing first-place Cleveland by two games in the AL Central, have won 15 of their last 19 games. The Tigers have lost five straight and 13 of their last 16 games to fall eight games under .500.

Wilson Alvarez (10-4) allowed four runs on six hits over the 5 2-3 innings he worked for the White Sox. He walked two and struck out seven. Jose DeLeon finished up for his second save, striking out five in 3 1-3 innings.

The White Sox jumped on Detroit starter Mike Moore (8-8) for six runs on nine hits in 4 1-3 innings.

After Detroit had taken a 1-0 lead in the first on Tony Phillips' RBI single, Ventura and Dann Howitt started the Chicago second with doubles.

Craig Grebeck singled Ventura home, Howitt scored on an RBI grounder by Lance Johnson, Grebeck scored on a single by Tim Raines and Johnson scored on a single by Frank Thomas.

Blue Jays 4, Twins 3

MINNEAPOLIS — Rick Aguilera's two-out ninth-inning wild pitch scored pinch-runner Rob Butler and gave Toronto a victory over Minnesota.

Butler, who ran for for Darnell Coles after Coles' leadoff single, advanced to third on Dick Schofield's one-out single. After Mark Guthrie struck out John Olerud, Aguilera came on and delivered the wild pitch to Devon White, the first batter he faced.

Tony Castillo (4-1) picked up the win with 3 2-3 innings of four-hit shutout relief and Darren Hall pitched the ninth for his seventh save.

Rangers 6, Indians 4

ARLINGTON — Dean Palmer continued his clutch power hitting Thursday with two homers and five RBIs, and retread Tim Leary gave Texas another solid outing as the Rangers beat the Cleveland Indians 6-4.

Palmer's two-run homer in the fourth tied the game 2-2, and his three-run, 438-foot blast in the fifth put the Rangers ahead to stay, 6-3. Eight of his last nine homers have tied a game or given Texas the lead.

Leary (1-0), despite pitching out of trouble all night, earned the victory in his first start of the season. He began the year at Class AAA Ottawa and was signed by the Rangers on June 29. In his first appearance for Texas, he allowed only one hit and struck out five in 4 2-3 innings.

Charles Nagy (7-5) pitched his third complete game and allowed 10 hits. He walked two and struck out three.

Leary, pitching for his seventh different major-league team, gave up eight hits, four runs and two walks in 5 2-3 innings. He's the 12th different starter the Rangers have used this season.

Tom Henke pitched the ninth for his ninth save, striking out Jim Thome with the bases loaded to end the game.

Leary allowed the leadoff man to reach in each of the first three innings, and Paul Sorrento hit a two-run single in the second to put Cleveland ahead 2-0.

Athletics 6, Orioles 4

BALTIMORE — Geronimo Berroa singled in two runs to cap a three-run sixth inning that carried Oakland past Baltimore, ending the Orioles' four-game winning streak.

Scott Brosius had three hits and scored twice for the A's, who have won five straight and 13 of 14. The victory moved second-place Oakland eight games under .500 for the first time since April 28.

Jeffrey Hammonds went 3-for-4 for the Orioles, who had won 14 of their last 16 games against the A's. Baltimore has won four in a row six times this season but has not yet won five straight.

ANGELS: Sebach wins

son, who once went 10 innings in a 5-4 win.

"I really didn't have a clue as to where some of my pitches were going tonight, but I had good movement on my fastball," Sebach said.

The Angels gave Sebach all the support he needed in the fourth inning with a four-run uprising. Chris Smith, who had a perfect 4-for-4 night at the plate, had a two-run triple and Emmitt Cohick drove in Smith from third with a hit. Midland catcher Fausto Tejero also had an RBI single in the game.

Sebach gave up a hit to lead off the ninth inning to Henry Blanco, but was given a chance to finish his start. He responded by starting a 1-6-3 double play on a ball hit back to the mound by Chris Abbe. Sebach then gave up a two-out single to Frank Smith, but got Vernon Spearman to ground out to end the game.

Midland trails in the current series with the Missions 2-3, but can split the series with a win tonight before heading back to Midland for a 10-game homestand, beginning Saturday at Christensen Stadium against Tulsa. Shreveport will also be in for five games in the homestand. It will be the only time this year for Tulsa and Shreveport of the East Division to visit Midland.

He hasn't come close to equaling the three straight wins that Rusty came up with last month but, going into Sunday's Slick 50 300 at New Hampshire International Speedway, the 35-year-old racer is definitely heading in the right direction.

Mike, the middle-man of the three racing Wallace brothers — Kenny is the youngest — is a rookie on the Winston Cup stock car tour, and things seem to finally be coming together for Wallace, who has been racing Ford Thunderbirds since March 8 for noted driving mentor Junie Donlavey.

Wallace, who already had one ARCA stock car victory to his credit, won his first Busch Grand National event at Hickory, N.C., earlier this season, and added another Grand National win last Sunday at Milwaukee.

■ Slick 50 300

Perhaps more important, though, Mike had his best Winston Cup result last Saturday at Daytona, where he finished 12th.

"What a great Fourth of July," Wallace said. "To run as well as we did at Daytona shows the progress we are making with the Heilig-Meyers team, and then to come back a day later and run as well as we did at Milwaukee ... "

Sunday will be only the 19th Winston Cup start for Wallace, including nine this season. Before Daytona, his best finish had been 13th at Dover and he had failed to finish eight races.

After the uplifting holiday weekend, though, Wallace is feeling confident and ready for the second half of the 31-race schedule.

DEBUT: Darryl happy to return to big leagues

(From 1C)

joked.

"No, I hit it pretty good. Milt made a good play. It's shows I'm capable of hitting the ball."

Thompson knew if he didn't catch the ball, it was gone.

"I could prepare myself to jump becuase I got back there so fast and because the ball was hit so high," he said.

Signed by the Giants on June 19, less than a month after getting out of rehab, Strawberry hit .300 in three games at Class AAA Phoenix of the Pacific Coast League.

"It's nice to be back in a big league ballpark," he said. "It's been a long time since I performed in a big league ballpark."

To say Strawberry was eager to get back to the bigs would be an understatment. After just two Triple-A games, in which he homered twice, he told the Giants he was ready to come up. They asked him to wait a day, so he played one more game with the Firebirds on Wednesday night.

But at 6:15 a.m. Thursday, Strawberry was on a plane bound for San Francisco and was at the ballpark before 9 a.m., a departure for a player fined numerous times for showing up late.

Even in his new No. 17 uniform, he looked like the same old Strawberry in batting practice, a wad of chew stuffed in his cheek.

Certainly, his bat was as quick as ever. Strawberry, who played just 75 games the last two seasons, hit six balls out, two into the upper deck, sending fans scurrying to retrieve the balls.

When he was finished, a group of about two dozen fans standing behind the dugout applauded enthusiastically and begged for autographs, but Strawberry strode quickly into the clubhouse and back to his locker, right next to Bonds'.

Starting in right field, Strawberry handled five chances cleanly.

Despite Strawberry's troubled past, the fans gave him a warm welcome when the lineup was introduced. He even had his own cheering section: six young men dressed as strawberries, green bandanas on their heads and chests painted red. They hung a "Strawberry Patch" banner from their seats in the center field bleachers.

A sign reading, "We are behind U Darryl," hung in right field.

PROFITS: Too early to determine Cup draw

(From 1C)

the World Cup found hotels crowded if not overflowing, restaurants and bars doing a steady business, and local officials pleased they lured the tournament to their cities.

"The exposure the city has received, especially because of the opening ceremonies being held here, will do a lot for people learning about Chicago as a vacation and business destination," said Kate Haymaker, spokeswoman for the Chicago Convention and Tourism Bureau. "The games were worth more advertising dollars than we could ever pay."

In December 1992, a study by two University of Southern California professors forecast the World Cup would pump a total of $4 billion into local economies. That figure included spending by the organizers but did not include such things as air fares and other inter-city travel.

With more than a week to go in the tournament, it's still too early to say whether that forecast was accurate. But most people who had hoped the World Cup would be a financial hit in their cities and shops like what they see:

■ Nicholas Lyras, the deputy director of the New York City Sports Commission, estimates the cup will pour $215 million directly into the economy of the New York-New Jersey area, and $430 million indirectly. Hundreds of Italian, Irish and Mexican fans came to the area to root for their teams, and "they wouldn't have been here without the World Cup, so the games were very positive events for the city," said Joseph Spinatto, executive director of the city's Hotel Association.

■ In Boston, organizers are confident the cup will wind up adding $255 million to the tills of the city's merchants. "It's really the entire package: the hotels, food, leisure activities," said Derek Ray, spokesman for Boston Soccer, Inc.

■ In Stanford, Calif., merchants around the game site at Stanford Stadium can't serve the crowds quickly enough. "It's been great," said Janene Gilmartin, manager of the Stanford Track House, a sporting goods store adjacent to the stadium. "Game days have been a little out of control at times, which is good."

■ Games at the Citrus Bowl in Orlando have been flowing with money for bars and eateries. An informal survey by the Downtown Development Board showed that two downtown bars, Scruffy Murphy's and Mulvaney's Irish Pub, reported sales 300 percent higher than before the World Cup. The nighttime entertainment complex at Church Street Station was turning away crowds every night of the tournament, and three downtown restaurants were reporting more than a 100 percent increase in business. "Business in downtown Orlando is extremely strong. Merchants are very, very happy," said city spokesman Wayne Weinberg. "Downtown-area hotels have had two strong weeks."

■ In Pontiac, Mich., David Littman, senior economist with Comerica Bank, said the four World Cup games at the Silverdome lived up to expectations, bringing in more than $60 million so far. "All indications are there was increased mall activity, with good sales of souvenirs and other goods. It will probably fall right about $80 million," he said.

The key to all this cash is people — soccer fans from around the world, flooding to the United States to cheer on their teams and get a U.S. vacation in the bargain.

Four years ago, merchants and officials in Italy prepared for a flood of World Cup tourists and a financial bonanza that never came. Attendance for many games was low.

AGGIE: Armstrong will fill rushing linebacker role father. He gave me life. Part of the God-given talent I have comes from his genes."

(From 1C)

Finally, in May, Antonio told Alan Cannon, A&M sports information director, that he preferred to be listed as Armstrong instead of Shorter.

During A&M's 24-21 Mobil Cotton Bowl loss to Notre Dame, Armstrong recorded three sacks and a share of another after speeding past Aaron Taylor, the Irish's Lombardi Award-winning offensive tackle.

This season, Armstrong steps into the role of rush linebacker filled last year by Steve Solari in the unit ranked third nationally in total defense, second in scoring defense.

With Larry Jackson, another linebacker starter, moved to defensive end, Armstrong is the only linebacker regular returning. The defense also lost the starting front three of Sam Adams, Lance Teichelman and Eric England and corner Aaron Glenn, a first-round NFL draft pick. The Aggies retain their 3-4 scheme although seven new assistant coaches are on board. Head coach R.C. Slocum hired Tom Tuberville from Miami as defensive coordinator after Bob Davie went to Notre Dame.

"I have to become more of a leader," Armstrong says. "I'm expected to do things and help motivate others, and they have to step up for the players we lost.

"The only thing they changed in the defense benefited me. It gives me a chance to be loose and reckless."

Much like the first Aggie linebackers Armstrong became aware of while in high school. "Aaron Wallace and John Roper," Armstrong names them with obvious relish, "the Blitz Brothers." Armstrong and Andre Walker, his Kashmere linebacker teammate at the time, also took up the name.

The Aggies have won 22 straight SWC games, the nation's longest current conference winning streak. They are 24-0-1 at Kyle Field since a 1989 loss to Arkansas. Even though barred from the SWC title, bowls and TV by the NCAA sanctions, that is enough to play for, Armstrong says.

"The (championship) ring was nice, and going to the Cotton Bowl was great," he says. "Whoever goes to the Cotton Bowl this time doesn't matter.

"If we win it, everyone is going to know who the conference champ is."

And Armstrong, after all, has yet another reason to play for a championship.

Restraining order for Maxwell

RICHMOND, Texas (AP) — Houston Rockets guard Vernon Maxwell has been hit with divorce papers and a restraining order by his pregnant wife.

Resharita Rochelle "Shell" Maxwell, 28, was granted a temporary restraining order barring Maxwell or his financial manager from threatening her or tampering with the couple's assets.

In a lengthy divorce petition filed Wednesday in suburban Houston's Fort Bend County, Mrs. Maxwell accuses her husband of adultery and cruel treatment.

The petition, before State District Judge Thomas O. Stansbury, names accountant Tracy Decrosta.

Europe well spoken for in quarterfinals

Associated Press

Klinsmann, Romario, Baggio, Hagi. These are the names that dominate European soccer. Guess what? They're doing much the same at the World Cup.

Heading into the quarterfinals, seven of the eight survivors are from Europe. On Saturday, Italy plays Spain at Foxboro, Mass., and the Netherlands takes on the lone interloper, Brazil, at Dallas. Sunday, it will be Bulgaria against defending champion Germany at East Rutherford, N.J., and Sweden against Romania at Stanford, Calif.

Of course, even with the European flavor, the Brazilians are the favorites, and Romario is a major reason.

And where does the dangerous striker play club ball? In Europe, of course, for Barcelona.

Germany's Juergen Klinsmann is with AS Monaco of the French League. Italy's Roberto Baggio, who came alive late in the second-round game after an indifferent start to the tournament, is with Juventus of the Italian League. Romania's Gheorghe Hagi plays in the Italian B division with Brescia.

All are creative stars, attackers. Now that Baggio has awakened, all four seem capable of carrying their teams to the title.

"I know they'll throw the responsibility on me if Brazil is eliminated, but I'm ready for it," Romario has said. "I'll give my life to bring the fourth (championship)."

Just getting Romario to play for the national team was a chore that had all of Brazil holding its breath.

Known as much for his swagger as for his skills, he ticked off teammates and coaches back home with amazing regularity. Leading up to this tournament, he still complained about being left off the 1990 team.

But when Brazil struggled in qualifying, coach Carlos Alberto Parreira had no choice but to summon — plead with — Romario to rejoin the national squad. Brazil hasn't lost since.

Romario is the leading candidate for FIFA player of the year, an award Baggio won in 1993. Klinsmann and Hagi also are strong contenders.

Hagi's creativity has been even more impressive than his finishing touch. He was expected to star in the 1990 World Cup, but struggled even as Romania made the second round.

He's making up for it here, and Romania looks strong enough to actually win the title.

"This is what any player tries to do," Hagi said. "When everyone on the team is playing up to their abilities, we can win many games."

Klinsmann practically carried Germany through its first four games. The team's usual precision with the ball has been missing, but Klinsmann has not — with five goals, he leads all players still in the tournament.

"When the spotlight was on me to score, I was able to do so," he said.

Ten-under-par round gives Lohr lead

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — There have only been two scores better than the 10-under-par 61 Bob Lohr posted in Thursday's opening round of the Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic.

Lohr, a 10-year PGA Tour veteran with just one victory, offset a three-putt bogey with 11 birdies at Kingsmill Golf Club.

"Just a great round," Lohr said. "I've never made 11 birdies in a round before."

"I don't think I'd even know how to pencil in a 61," said Nike Tour regular John Wilson, whose 64 put him in a second-place tie with PGA Tour rookie Glen Day.

The only tour scores better than the 61 were the 59s of Al Geiberger at Memphis in 1977 and Chip Beck at Las Vegas in 1991 and nine rounds of 60, the latest by Davis Love III at Hawaii in January.

Lohr, Wilson and Scott Hoch, who had a 65, all played in the morning on Kingsmill's 6,797-yard layout. In the afternoon, the temperatures and humidity rose to steamy levels, and play was interrupted for nearly three hours by a thunderstorm that left standing water in many parts of the course. Twenty-four players were left on the course at dusk and were to return Friday morning to complete their first round.

"It was a big bonus playing early," Wilson said. "You know things are going to get tougher as the day goes along."

Indeed, Day was the only player in the afternoon pairings to mount a serious assault on Lohr's gem. Day's seven-birdie, bogey-free round also included two other solid birdie opportunities that he couldn't convert.

"I got out here," Day said, "and Bob was already nine under. I just laughed."

Lohr's score was one stroke lower than the previous best round of his career. He opened with a 10-under 62 on the way to his victory at the 1988 Walt Disney World Classic.

His round also was one shot lower than the previous Kingsmill record set by Mike Sullivan in 1990 and matched in 1991 by Ian Baker-Finch, Brian Claar and Kenny Knox and in 1993 by Dillard Pruitt.

None of those five went on to win the Busch, and Lohr isn't about to predict that his course-record effort will translate into a victory in the $1.1 million event.

"I don't think I'll have any expectations," he said. "Hopefully, I'll just shoot as low as I can and add it on to this."

Lohr had shown no indication that a 61 was on his horizon.

Race finishes England run

PORTSMOUTH, England (AP) — The Tour de France completed its two-day excursion into England Thursday with a thrilling sprint finish, huge crowds and promises to return again soon.

Tour de France

In two days, more than 2 million English spectators lined the streets, perched on hills and hung out of pub windows to watch the world's biggest cycling race.

"We waited 20 years before we came back with the Tour de France, and I'm very sure it won't be 20 years before we come back again," said tour director Jean Marie Leblanc.

For the first time since a single stage was held in Plymouth in 1974, and only the second time in its 81 years, the tour came to England — this time for two legs, from Dover to Brighton, and an out-and-back course from Portsmouth.

The supporters and curious who lined the 116-mile circuit from Portsmouth Thursday were treated to another tight finish.

Italy's Nicola Minali won the fifth leg in a sprint, edging Germany's Olaf Ludwig by less than a wheel. Another Italian, Silvio Martinello, was right behind in third. All but 35 of the 182 finishers were given the same time of 4 hours, 10 minutes, 49 seconds.

Flavio Vanzella of Italy maintained the overall leader's yellow jersey. Belgium's Johann Museeuw kept second place, with tour favorite and three-time champion Miguel Indurain of Spain in third.

The riders returned to France after Thursday's stage. On Friday, they face the sixth leg — the longest of the 20-stage tour — a 169-mile journey from Cherbourg to Rennes.

"We had two exciting stages in Britain," Leblanc said, "But one of the things which has really shocked the people that follow the Tour de France has been the reception we've had from the British public. It has been incredible.

"One of the most satisfying things that's happened to me is that I was recognized by some British children and they came to me and said 'Thank you very much for bringing the tour to England.'"

The tour's return to England was the result of 2½ years of work by Leblanc and his helpers, including political lobbying. Even the English police went to France to see how to control the 3,000 personnel on the tour and the millions who line its route.

"The result of the work has been completely without fault," Leblanc said. "It's been a superb operation. It's been a very long hard job, and it's been very succesful."

"There is a bit of a problem. We are the Tour de France and we have to keep the French people happy. But it may well be possible to put in the Tour de France program to come back to the U.K. every five or six years. It would be nice to come back on a regular basis."

Minali, Ludwig and Martinello were part of the main pack which set chase after a breakaway group of four riders.

Golfer Burton to miss Toledo

SYLVANIA, Ohio (AP) — A rib injury has sidelined defending champion Brandie Burton from this weekend's Jamie Farr Toledo Classic.

She decided to withdraw from the tournament after playing nine practice holes Wednesday, saying she was in too much pain.

Kim Williams also said there was a good chance she will play.

Williams was shot Saturday as she was walking into a Phar-Mor discount store in Niles about 60 miles southeast of Cleveland. She was in town for the Youngstown-Warren LPGA Classic tournament, played last week at Avalon Lakes Golf Course.

Prices slump

NEW YORK — Crude oil prices finished lower on Thursday on signs of new supplies as northern forces claimed victory in the Yemeni civil war and U.S. government figures showed higher domestic oil inventories.

Also, the Nigerian government began dispatching soldiers to replace oil workers who have been striking to protest the military dictatorship.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in August settled at $19.12 per barrel, down 12 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

In Yemen, government troops claimed victory in the 65-day civil war after capturing Aden and sending southern Yemeni secessionist leaders fleeing to neighboring Oman.

The country had been producing about 350,000 barrels of oil daily before the war broke out.

The market also found some bearish news in figures released by the Department of Energy that contradicted American Petroleum Institute figures. The government numbers showed an increase of 900,000 barrels last week, while the API had reported a slight drop.

The Energy Department numbers, released Wednesday morning, also showed a much smaller drop in gasoline supplies than the API.

Natural gas prices were lower, with contracts for delivery in August settling at $2.072 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 5 cents.

Dollar falls

NEW YORK — The dollar continued to fall Thursday against other major currencies as participants in Friday's summit of industrial nations indicated that a combined effort to support the greenback is unlikely.

Gold prices were mixed. The metal was lower in London, but rose in New York. On the Commodity Exchange in New York, gold for current delivery rose $1.20 a troy ounce to $384.60.

In New York, the dollar fell to 98.75 yen from 98.95 Wednesday.

Other late dollar rates in New York compared to Wednesday: 1.5720 marks, down from 1.5760; 1.3240 Swiss francs, down from 1.3280; 1.3885 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3847; 5.4020 French francs, down from 5.4170; 1,565 lire, up from 1,564.

In New York, the pound fetched $1.5395, down from $1.5460 Wednesday.

On the New York Comex, silver for current delivery fetched $5.209 an ounce, off from $5.232 Wednesday.

Stocks advance

NEW YORK — Stocks advanced Thursday as investors overcame their uneasiness about interest rates, focusing on economically sensitive companies and on recently depressed issues.

Despite the gains, analysts said trading was restrained by anticipation of important economic data due Friday.

First-time jobless claims drop

■ Surprising decline is biggest drop in 10 weeks.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The number of Americans filing the first time for state unemployment benefits dropped last week to the lowest level in nearly four months, the government reported Thursday.

The surprising decline of 21,000 was the biggest decrease in 10 weeks.

The report was released a day ahead of the June unemployment statistics. Most economists expect a slight increase in the unemployment rate, to 6.2 percent from 6 percent in May.

A seasonally adjusted 332,000 people filed initial claims for jobless benefits in the week ended July 2, the Labor Department said. That was down from 353,000 in the week ended June 25.

The decline was three times as large as most economists were expecting, coming after weeks of relatively small changes. The figure had not gone up or down by more than 10,000 in the previous six weeks and in four of those, the difference was 4,000 or less.

Most economists were expecting a more modest decline of about 7,000. Instead, the decrease was the biggest since April 23, when a drop of 30,000 was reported. The 332,000 claims was the lowest number since March 26.

Many economists have looked for smaller weekly differences as the rapid job creation shown in the early months of this year slowed to a more sustainable rate.

The Labor Department's four-week moving average of initial claims dropped to the lowest level since April 16. At a seasonally adjusted 346,000, the average was down 6,750 from the previous week.

Because it smooths out weekly bumps and dips, the four-week average is considered a better indicator of hiring trends than the weekly number. It is more closely watched by economists.

The Labor Department said 23 states and territories reported increases in initial claims in the week ended June 25, while 30 states had increases.

The state numbers lag a week behind the national figures.

Reporting the largest increases were California, 4,529; Kansas, 1,780; New York, 1,702; Massachusetts, 1,689; and New Jersey, 1,525;

California had layoffs in service and food processing industries, while Kansas had layoffs in services and manufacturing, the Labor Department said.

The largest decreases were reported Ohio, 1,082; Wisconsin, 1,056; South Carolina, 1,015; Missouri, 964; and Illinois, 808.

Compaq develops TV receiver for info superhighway

HOUSTON (AP) — Compaq Computer Corp. is building a television-computer hybrid intended to receive electronic data that may someday be found along the so-called information superhighway.

Robert Stearns, senior vice president of corporate development for Houston-based Compaq, said the prototypes will be tested soon with major cable television companies and programming producers.

Stearns would not name the companies Compaq is working with on the project.

The device looks like television, but would have far greater capabilities, he said.

"It is certainly true that you will have a big screen in your living room, and you'll still use it to watch stories in the dark from 10 feet away," Stearns told the Houston Chronicle.

'It is certainly true that you will have a big screen in your living room, and you'll still use it to watch stories in the dark from 10 feet away.'

— Robert Stern, senior vice president

"But it will be a computer, not a TV," he said.

That machine, Stearns said, could be linked to devices in other parts of the home, including the traditional personal computer. For example, a machine in the kitchen might display recipes or allow a user to order groceries.

"These are not technically difficult things to do," Stearns told the newspaper. "But they have to be done in partnership. If there is nothing to connect to, no one is going to buy it."

Compaq has been largely mum about how it will participate in the new age of information delivery, when computers, cable television and telephones converge to bring everything from interactive entertainment to video teleconferences into living rooms.

Stearns said the building and marketing of the new machines could lead Compaq to create a new business unit. He emphasized, however, that, "I'm not announcing a reorganization."

"I don't know what it would take, but I think we'd have to make some changes," he said.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Dividends, distributions not part of capital gains

By Bill Doyle

Q: My mutual fund pays a dividend every month and makes a capital-gains distribution at the end of the year. I report these on my income tax return and pay taxes on both.

If the value of the fund's shares increases and I redeem my shares, how do I arrive at the amount of capital gains on which I am required to pay tax?

Doyle

A: The difference between the per-share price you paid and the per-share price you receive when you redeem is your per-share profit or loss. Multiply that by the number of shares you redeem and you have your profit or loss, which you report as a capital gain or capital loss on Schedule D of the Form 1040 federal income tax return you file for that year.

If you owned the fund shares for no more than one year it would be a short-term capital gain or loss, in which case the tax treatment would be the same as if it were ordinary income. If you held the shares for more than one year, you would have a long-term capital gain or loss.

The federal tax on long-term capital gains is capped at 28 percent, which isn't as steep as the 39.6 percent maximum federal tax bite on ordinary income.

The fact that you have received and paid tax on capital-gains distributions doesn't change things. Those distributions are made to all shareholders of the fund in proportion to the number of shares owned.

Your capital gain or capital loss on the redemption of shares you owned is a different story. It results from your personal transaction — the redemption of shares you owned.

Q: Where does a mutual fund get the money to make a capital-gains distribution? Are those distributions always "long term" and consequently subject to favorable tax treatment?

A: The money for a fund's capital gains distribution comes from the net profits the fund realizes by selling securities it formerly held in its investment portfolio.

Note the word "net." No fund ever turns a profit on every portfolio transaction. And sometimes funds post net losses buying and selling investment securities. When that happens, there are no capital gains to distribute to fund shareholders.

Funds sometimes make short-term transactions — some more than others.

Q: I am a 34-year-old man with a $27,000 annual income. I make $300 monthly car payments and owe $4,000 on credit cards. I had less than $3,000 invested in each of four mutual funds and recently added a fifth — a Latin American fund.

A friend tells me I have too many funds, and says an international fund would have been better. Isn't the economic situation perfect for investing in Latin America now?

A: I'll go far enough out on the limb to call it "good," but you will never see the word "perfect" used in this column to describe any investment situation.

Five mutual funds is about the limit any one person can follow, without making investments a full-time job.

And I do feel you are far too deep in debt.

Auto loans and credit-card debt carry horrendous interest charges. Your first move should be to get out from under those burdens by paying off both as soon as possible.

It's possible that the only way you will be able to eliminate your debts will be by redeeming mutual fund shares and using the money you receive to cancel both loans.

If that is the case, so be it. Wipe out your debts and start over with a clean slate.

North Central LL finds survival

Midland North Central stayed alive in the District 3 Little League Tournament at Bluebird Park Thursday night, but Midland Western wasn't as lucky.

North Central pounded West Odessa 11-3 in a loser's bracket contest behind the pitching of Chad Wheeler and the home run power of Brandon Lucas and Jason Matthews. West Odessa fell from the tournament with its second loss.

Western was eliminated in a 13-6 loss to Odessa North Ector. North Ector's Dustin York, who also doubled in the game, got the victory and Bobby Easterly took the loss, despite hitting a home run in his own cause. Justin Simpson, J.P. Uranga and Ryan Fortenberry all doubled in the contest.

In other action Thursday, Greenwood fell from the tournament with a 23-5 loss to Big Spring National. Big Spring's Clements was the star of the game, hitting a double and homer while getting the win on the mound.

Big Spring International fell from the tournament, however, in a 12-2 loss to Odessa Floyd Gwyn. Tim Robinson picked up the win. Doubles went to Chris Rios, Blake Gee, Jay Kuykendall, Brandon Browning and Jeff Marrs.

It's back to the winner's bracket tonight at 6 p.m. with Midland Mid Cities taking on Odessa Sherwood and El Paso Frank Manning facing Odessa Salinas. None of those teams have lost a tournament game.

Midland Northern will face Odessa Jim Parker while Midland Tower faces Midland Eastern in two 8 p.m. contests.

American falls to Sherwood, 8-4

Midland American fell to Odessa Sherwood by an 8-4 margin in the District Junior League baseball playoff tournament Thursday night at Redfern Field to fall into the loser's bracket.

Chris Sheldon got the win for Sherwood while Shane Simpson had a double. American got doubles from Tony Zarate and Seth Denson.

In the other game Thursday, Odessa Jim Parker defeated Big Spring 9-7 after the two teams were tied at 6-6 after five innings of play. Jim Parker's Cy Rogers got the win and also had two doubles in the game. Jim Parker also got doubles from Zeke Patton, Will Nelson and Kyle Groves and a triple from Jason Brewster.

The double elimination tournament continues tonight. No teams have been eliminated as of yet.

El Paso, Midland in Big League final

El Paso and Midland were still battling late Thursday for the championship of the Big League playoff tournament.

El Paso defeated Midland by a huge 20-4 margin in the first game Thursday night, forcing the deciding "if" game late Thursday. The two teams were still tied at 5-5 after the first three innings of play in the championship finale.

In the Senior League playoff tournament at Hogan Park Thursday night, two Odessa teams came away with victories.

Odessa Sherwood ran past El Paso by a 7-1 margin while Odessa Jim Parker defeated its own cross town rival Odessa Salinas by a 12-3 margin. None of the teams were eliminated from the double elimination tournament.

Action continues today at Hogan Park.

Mission downs Green Tree in golf

Mission Dorado defeated Green Tree Country Club in a Ladies Golf Challenge Match Thursday.

Low net honors for Green Tree went to Pat Daugherty with a 66 while Trina Albright had the low gross score of 87. Jo Dickson paced Mission with a low gross 78 while Betty Gardner had the low net with a 70.

Brother-sister team fetch eight skating gold medals

■ Olympic Festival

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A brother-sister team from Wisconsin left their mark on the competition and the record book at the U.S. Olympic Festival.

Tony and Julie Goskowicz of New Berlin finished with eight gold medals in short-track speed skating. Tony won three Thursday while Julie picked up two.

"My brother and I knew we had a good chance of doing well here," said Julie, 14. "We had a great (Festival) trials and we definitely felt coming into this we would contend for gold medals."

Tony, 16, won the 1,000 meters in Festival-record time, won the 3,000, and was part of the victorious 5,000 relay team that broke a Festival record.

His time in the 1,000 was 1 minute, 36.73 seconds, breaking the mark of 1:39.26 set in 1987 by Brian Arseneau. The relay team finished in 7:55.48, breaking the record of 7:57.68.

"I had a good feeling about our chances at the Festival," said Tony, who had won the 500 and 1,000 Wednesday night. "The only race I wasn't sure about was the relay. In that race, anything can happen."

Julie won the 1,000 Thursday and was part of the 3,000 relay team that set a Festival mark in 4:55.27. The previous best time was 4:56.49 set in 1986.

She had won the 500 Wednesday night but was disqualified in the 1,500 after an illegal pass.

"My coach and I agreed that was one of the smartest races I've ever skated," she said of the 1,000. "With about two laps to go, I was in third place and just looking for an opening. Once I got it, I charged to the front and just finished it up."

Julie almost had a Festival record in the 3,000. She and Kirstin Holum of Waukesha, Wis., both finished in 5:28.12, smashing the record of 5:48.36 set last year.

To break the tie, the time was carried out to thousandths of a second and Holum finished .002 faster, leaving Julie Goskowicz with the silver.

Gymnastics started Thursday night with Bo Haun of the University of Minnesota winning the all-around competition.

Haun was in fourth place heading into the final rotation, then scored a 9.65 on the high bar to win with a score of 56.760.

"My only goal when I came in was to do six events," said Haun, who failed to qualify for the NCAA regionals in March. "I didn't expect to go for a medal. But I thought if I hit six events, I might have a chance."

The silver medal went to Bill Roth of Philadelphia with 56.700, and Steve McCain of UCLA won the bronze with 56.675.

Roth, an assistant coach at Temple, won five golds in his only previous Festival in 1990 and has recuperated from chest and knee injuries that hampered him through 1992.

In ice hockey, the South clinched a spot in the gold medal game with a 5-3 victory over the West.

Five players scored for the South (2-0), including Jacques Jaubert of Boston University who scored what proved to be the game-winner at 12:58 of the second period.

J.P. McKersie of Boston University and Tom Noble of Hanover, Mass., made 12 saves apiece in goal for the winners.

After six days of heat and humidity, the weather finally broke at the Festival. A storm moved through the metro area during the afternoon, bringing heavy rain, thunder, lightning and strong winds.

The brief storm caused a 58-minute rain delay at Busch Stadium for the first baseball game of the Festival, between the South and the East. The South won 13-7, scoring nine runs in the eighth — three before the rain, six after.

Adam Piatt of Fort Myers, Fla., had a two-run double and Michael Barrett of Atlanta drove in two runs with a single. Piatt finished with two doubles and three RBIs, while Barnett had three singles and three RBIs.

In the late game, the North beat the West 4-2. The North had just five hits, but took advantage of three errors in the second and third innings to score all its runs. Dana Harrison of Los Angeles and Bryan LaCour of Chatsworth, Calif., had two hits east for the West.

There were no significant problems reported at field hockey, soccer or modern pentathlon, the other outdoor events.

The rain did cool things off a bit. The St. Louis area has been baking all week, with temperatures in the mid-90s each day and enough humidity to send the heat index soaring.

Louganis stirs controversy

ST. LOUIS — (NYT) Greg Louganis, who last month openly declared that he was gay, on Thursday afternoon stunned an audience that included U.S. Olympic officials when he said the 1996 Olympic volleyball competition should be taken away from Cobb County in Georgia because of a controversial resolution condemning the gay life style.

The resolution, passed last August by the Cobb County Commission, said among other things "that the life style advocated by the gay community should not be endorsed by government policy makers because they are incompatible with the standards to which this community subscribes."

The U.S. Olympic Committee will discuss the matter on Wednesday during its board meeting.

The USOC, the Atlanta organizing committee and members of the Cobb County Commission have been meeting to work toward a resolution of the issue. A senior USOC official, who asked not to be identified, said the committee was looking for a way to move the volleyball competition out of Cobb County, but without inflaming politicians by appearing to have caved in to pressure from gay and lesbian groups.

Shortly after receiving the Robert J. Kane Award (which honors athletes who had success at the U.S. Olympic Festival and continue to give back to their sports), Louganis told the audience that he believed the resolution violated the Olympic spirit.

"I'm concerned about some of the athletes who are scheduled to participate in the volleyball preliminaries at the 1996 Olympics in Atlanta," Louganis said. "The volleyball preliminaries are set to be held in Cobb County, Georgia. Last year, Cobb County adopted a resolution condemning gay people. So now, in addition to the normal pressures of competition, gay athletes who are participating in the preliminaries will have the added pressure of knowing that they are not welcome in Cobb County."

"People have a right to pass any resolution they like, but they made it clear that the athletes were not welcome," Louganis said. "The U.S. Olympic Committee has already sent a strong message to all Olympic athletes by giving the Robert J. Kane Award to an openly gay athlete.
