PROPOSED ORGANIZATION OF FAIR ASSOCIATION FOR KIMBLE COUNTY

Expenditure of $10,000 Will be Necessary. Will Benefit Sheep and Goat Industry, and Tend to Advance All Other Interests.

"Let us develop the resources of our land, call forth its powers, promote all its great interests and see whether we also in our day and generation may not perform something worthy to be remembered."—Daniel Webster.

We feel sure that every right thinking citizen of this county has an ambition at some time in his life that would compare with the one expressed by one of our most profound Americans, and in line with this idea a number of men working through the Kimble County Chamber of Commerce are endeavoring the organization of a Kimble County Fair Association for the betterment of every locality in the county, in order that they may have increased business, enhanced property valuation and a bigger, better and more prosperous community.

The promotion of industry is the big factor in the permanent building of a community, or town and we believe this can be accomplished through a unified effort in making a Fair Association a success. We all realize that the major industry of this county is the production of sheep and goats and that anything that would tend toward the survival of the fittest among these live stock is a valuable asset to this major interest. By comparison only can a proper classification be made.

A Fair offers the only medium through which an exhibition of live stock can be accomplished on a large scale. The same principle applies in the production of our field crops and by reason of the fact that there are more than 125 successful Fair Associations in South, Central and West Texas, this project is beyond the field of experimentation and unquestionably a good movement for the proper advancement of all lines of activity in plant production and animal husbandry.

In addition to the matter mentioned above we have a number of lesser interests that can be improved, such as, the construction of an exhibit hall for the exhibition of ladies' needle work and other similar arts; the exhibition of the activities of every individual community; a proper place for the housing and keeping of a small museum. In addition to this there can be constructed stock yards where at any part of the year, bunches of goats and sheep could be held, watered and fed and offered for sale if the owner so desired; a place where fine goats or sheep could be dipped and offered for market; a cotton yard and many other conveniences that are necessary for the proper marketing of live stock and agricultural produce.

To the people who are interested in sports, a grandstand could be made and equipped where all these events might be witnessed by every member of the family while they are comfortable and advantageously seated. One of the rising sports of this section of Texas which tends to the production of good horses is polo. We have had in various sections of this county as many as five clubs and if you wish to see the best horses in the county you can in all probability find them belonging to members of one of our local polo squads. Also in addition to it being an interesting game, it is one that adds much to the interest of producing good horses, a necessity of our country.

Like all other projects this will cost money and it has been estimated by business men and stockmen familiar with the cost that an expenditure of $10,000 will be necessary. Those interested have felt that by providing a method by which farmers and ranchmen could sell their live stock and improve their breeds, this would be a wise investment, hence they have decided to approach this matter from an equitable manner provided by law, to-wit, taxation.

The law makes provision for a county to vote a tax not to exceed five cents on the $100.00 taxable valuation for the purpose of purchasing and improving a park site of not to exceed 100 acres in area. This can be utilized for a Kimble County Fair Association ground, and in as much as the limit of taxation is one nickel on the $100.00 taxable valuation it means about 5 cents on an actual value of $300.00. The tax can never be prohibitive and the revenues from the Association must be turned into the Commissioners' Court and used for the improvement of the grounds and would probably be sufficient, after five or six years, to keep it up and mean that no tax would be levied.

The cost to each man would be very little, as a matter of example, a man who renders his property for $1500.00 would probably have property of a reasonable market value of $4500.00, and would only pay each year seventy-five cents. If he is interested in the development of his county and his own business he would give more than this amount at any time and he could probably park his car for one day and pay his tax without missing it.

There is to be circulated a petition for this election and we feel that every farmer, ranchman and business man in the county will lend his efforts toward its success.

The entire purpose of this organization will be the arousing of all interests of every community by bringing them into closer unity in order that there may be crystallized a spirit of co-operation for the material advance and upbuilding of each and every community in Kimble County. Our people who become identified with this movement will find it reflected in personal gain, in civic loyalty and civic pride.

The measure of our achievements in this matter will be measured by the effort placed in obtaining its success and the measure of the future growth of Kimble County is circumscribed only, by organization to properly meet the problems that will face us tomorrow.

Let us keep stride with our neighbors and friends and offer the same advantages to our farm and ranch interests, as is being offered them in the many other counties of Texas.

Mr. W. R. Eckert is in receipt of a letter from the State University at Austin, informing him of the honors earned by his daughter, Miss Flora. The communication states that Miss Flora is on the Honor Roll at the University for the Winter Term. Mr. Eckert is very much elated over this piece of information, as well he may be, for it is well known that all honors gained at the State are absolutely earned.

NEW FRITZ HOTEL NOW OPEN TO THE PUBLIC

There seems to be a little disappointment in some quarters because the New Fritz Hotel was not formally opened with a big banquet and ball and a lot of addresses by out of town orators. Nevertheless, the Hotel is now open to the public and is catering to the tourist and traveling public in a manner wholly acceptable to its patrons. The table service, which is well known to the patrons of the old Fritz is being maintained and at the same prices that have obtained for the past ten years or more.

There has recently been afloat a rumor to the effect that the prices in the new hotel would be prohibitive for some of those who had heretofore been visitors at this popular hostelry, and to correct this erroneous impression, Mr. and Mrs. Fritz are this week running an announcement in this paper, setting forth their method of management and stating their prices, and in justice to them as well as the town of Junction, it would be well for this erroneous impression be corrected.

The New Fritz is a credit to Junction and should be given all support possible by every citizen, as its completion and operation has meant more to the town than any other one thing that has taken place here in many years.

If you can't Boost, don't Knock!

LE ROY THEATRE WAS OPENED TUESDAY NIGHT

The long look-for night arrived last Tuesday, when the patrons of the picture show were permitted to witness one of the very best films on the screen today. "Slide Kelly, Slide," was the opening attraction at the Le Roy Theatre and was enjoyed by a crowded house.

Preceding the picture, Judge Weaver Baker, in a few appropriate remarks, told the audience the advantages of a first-class amusement house in a community, and predicted that the Le Roy would meet with the approval of the public, and prove a success for its manager, Mr. E. G. Lockley.

Mr. Lockley has been at considerable expense in fitting this place with all the latest equipment for the comfort and convenience of his patrons, with a view to giving the public the best both in comfort in the house and pictures on the screen, and if one is to judge by the attendance on the opening night, the patronage will run beyond his expectations. He has booked some of the best attractions produced and will continue to book others of like nature.

The Le Roy is strictly up to date in every particular, its stage, while small, is draped in a very appropriate manner, which no doubt will frequently be used for home talent theatricals.

The Le Roy deserves and will unquestionably get the whole-hearted support of the moving picture lovers.

CALLED MEETING EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MARCH 30; CALL OF C. C. 31ST

Executive Committee Transacts Business of Importance Which is Ratified by Membership. Other Committees Now at Work.

The Executive Committee of the Chamber of Commerce was called in special meeting last Friday night, and the following members were present: Emil A. Loeffler, W. H. Baker, E. C. Jordan, J. A. Heyman, J. N. Hodges and W. P. Riley.

This meeting was called for the purpose of considering a proposal offered by Dr. L. E. Standifer, of Lamesa, Texas, to build a hospital in Junction, of frame and stucco construction, 24x60 feet in size, having 15 rooms and hall, to be built according to plans submitted, at a cost of $15,000, including equipment, providing the Chamber of Commerce secure location for same on lot 8, block 9, West, at a cost to him of not more than $250.00; work to begin immediately upon approval of title to property.

The location being property of Junction State Bank, and the same being placed on the market at a valuation of $5,000, W. P. Riley was requested to set a price for which the property could be purchased. The price being set at $2,500, the committee unanimously agreed that the C. of C. could not consistently contribute more than $1,000 of the amount, and Dr. Standifer agreed to increase his part of the cost to $1,000, refusing to pay more, or accept any of several other locations offered, which could be had for less money.

With the understanding that the State Bank be relieved of obligation of any part of the $1,000 to be raised by the C. of C., W. P. Riley agreed to reduce the price of the property to $2,000. This arrangement was accepted by the committee, subject to the approval of the membership, to be obtained at a meeting to be called by the secretary on the following evening, March 31st, with notice given as to its purpose.

At this special called meeting of the Chamber of Commerce held at the Court House 28 members were present, the purpose of same being to ratify the agreement of the Executive Committee relative to the hospital to be erected by Dr. Standifer. The Executive Committee was given the unanimous support of this called meeting, and subscriptions were then received amounting to $220.00, and the secretary has since been out with a list and up to Wednesday of this week had secured further subscriptions which now totals nearly $500.00, and it is confidently expected that the entire amount of $1,000 will be raised within the next few days.

It now appears that Junction is practically assured of a hospital, which will be another forward step in path of progress. And the building of a hospital here in Junction means more to the people of the ranches than it does to those of the town. In cases of emergency it will not be necessary to go 50 to 130 miles for an operation. Dr. Standifer and his staff are highly recommended as competent surgeons, and the hospital will be equipped in the most modern and approved way.

At this called meeting, a band for the town was discussed, and resulted in the appointment of a committee composed of K. G. Durst, H. O. Patterson, Adolph Meyers and H. O. Denman, to investigate the possibilities of the organization of a municipal band; costs of necessary instruments, uniforms, etc. This committee will report at a later meeting.

WOMEN INTERESTED IN O. S. T. BEAUTIFICATION

In an open letter from O. S. T. headquarters addressed to the various points along the line, it is stated that the women of the O. S. T. Beautification Department intend making a trip from San Antonio to El Paso about April 21, 22, and 23, meeting the women along the line, and discussing with them the organization of local bodies for the purpose of beautifying the Old Spanish Trail.

Mrs. F. W. Sorell, National Director of the Beautification work will lead the party; other women members of the National Board of Managers will accompany her. A State director for West Texas will be appointed and wherever the people are ready, a local or county organization will be effected among the women. Mrs. Sorell states that stops will be made wherever local people are sufficiently interested, and this can be arranged by letter to O. S. T. Headquarters at San Antonio.

"We are Texans," states Mrs. Sorell, "and while we want the whole of the Old Spanish Trail to be made and kept Scenically attractive, we also want Texas to be the nicest of all."

It is up to the members of our Parent-Teachers' Association to try to arrange a "stop-over" in Junction for the ladies of this party, as it would be the means of some good advertising for the Hill Country if no other good came of it.

Mrs. W. P. Riley is an Austin visitor this week.

C. OF C. COMMITTEE MEET LONDON PEOPLE

Representatives of the Kimble County Chamber of Commerce met with the citizens of London community Saturday night of the past week for the purpose of discussing the proposed Kimble County Fair Association.

There was a representative body present and it was decided by an overwhelming majority to lend every aid to the move. This community will be greatly benefited by this organization as, without a question, it has the best agricultural lands in the county, and as good as there is in Texas. Through the medium of a Fair this fact can be made known and property values thereby enhanced.

In a communication from Roswell, New Mexico, it is learned that Joseph H. Clements died in that city the latter part of March. The Clipping that was sent to the Eagle bore no date and the letter with it only stated that he was formerly a resident of Kimble County, having been among the first to settle in this county. Mr. Clements was an old school mate and lifelong friend of T. M. Hodges, Sr., who states that they were about the same age.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Hamer, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Hamer, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Riley, John Phillips, Johnnie Blackburn and Clifford Hamer were among those who attended the opening of the Bluebonnet Hotel at Kerrville.

Mr. and Mrs. Sallie

—being the Confessions of a new wife—

Illustrated by Paul Robinson Gladys Baker

Sallie Makes a Resolution

I hurried from the living room and got back into bed before Father and Curtiss finally stopped talking and then, for a long time, I lay thinking over the strange story that I had just heard revealed. At first I felt only resentment towards Father for his interference, and then, a great wave of tenderness surged over me as I analyzed his reason for doing so and realized that he had wanted to save me from the unhappiness my mother had known because she had raised her eyes from the matrimonial path. There was no doubt about it, the suggestion he made to Curtiss had been the most unusual coming from him, and yet when I remembered that his whole married life had been anything but orthodox, I began to understand. He had evidently felt that I would be happier in the end and perhaps he was right. For up to the time that Letitia Evans had come along with her haunting charms, I had regarded Curtiss as uninterestingly safe and since that time I had thought of him in an entirely different light. Men have greater love for their wives, I've been told, when they feel that they are also desirable in the eyes of other men and the same fundamental law also holds with women to an unbelievable extent.

So dad had succeeded in his plan, for certain it was that I cared more for Curtiss than I had at any other time. Regardless of the way I should have felt about the way he had collaborated with father in the plan, I was only conscious of a great joy of possession welling up in my heart which completely obliterated all the jealous fears and suspicions with which I had been obsessed. It was most satisfying to know just how the flirtation with Letitia Evans had begun and how it had come to an end. I was so thoroughly deceived about the whole entanglement that I could even be amused at certain complications which had come about.

And so I decided that I would not confess to either of them what I had heard. It would only be embarrassing to everyone concerned and would cause explanations from them both.

That question settled in my mind, another arose. Should I tell Curtiss about Barrington Pierce? I had put the matter entirely out of my mind since my return but now I wanted to fight the thing out. I wanted to be honest with him at all times and yet I wondered how much a woman should confess to her husband and how much she should leave untold. It was an age-old struggle. On one side sentimental frankness urged me to make a clean breast of the things which had occurred in New York and, on the other, wisdom and common sense pleaded with me to let well-enough alone. I disliked deceit and yet I longed for that perfect harmony which, after so long a time, it now seemed possible for me to obtain.

On the other hand, if I did not tell Curtiss and he discovered later that Barry and I had been practically engaged it would probably destroy his faith. I had kissed him too? What would he think of that? Ohhh! I shivered a little under the blankets for I knew he would never understand. It was true I had expected to divorce Curtiss at the time, believing he wanted to marry someone else and, from my own viewpoint I felt that I was absolutely justified in what I had done, but, I knew that it would look to Curtiss as if I were still inclined to be a flirt.

Besides, I argued with myself, what good would it do him to know? It was certainly my duty, as I saw it, above everything else, to keep him contented and happy and I wanted so to be a successful wife! Of course I had many qualms of conscience because the thing had happened at all, but I tried to put it from my mind for I felt there was nothing to be gained by dwelling in the past. My happiness with Curtiss lay in the rich companionship that the future would hold. Besides, he had the best of my love, and in comparison to that what did a few kisses matter that had been given more as a sister or a friend? So I definitely decided that I would not bring unnecessary pain to Curtiss by foolish confessions of the past and I resolved never to be flirtatious again. We rise only by mistakes and as long as I had gained experience, which in the future would stand me in good stead, I determined to let it go at that.

Thankful Brown

Since my return from New York I had become part of the social whirl, which in a town the size of Birmingham, is a ceaseless round of bridge-parties, dances and teas. Curtiss had made rapid strides financially and I felt that once again I could afford to take part in the sort of life I had led before our fortune was swept away.

The morning of the day father arrived had been taken up with a meeting of the church unit to which I belonged and which was composed of a group of young matrons who met once a week, presumably to sew but the sessions had resolved themselves into more of a social function with its exchange of gossip and a delectable luncheon served at one of the member's homes. Some persons scoff at this type of effort which is being put forth by various "guilds," "circles," "units" and "bands" all over the South. They claim that the whole idea is incongruous since the women first donate the articles, then sew on them for days, later selling them at an annual bazaar for less than the original cost. They believe that an out-and-out gift of money would serve the purpose of the Church equally as well. However there is a certain class of women who feel that some sort of church work is "good for the soul," balancing, as it were, the utter materiality of their social lives.

One splendid feature of the movement is that certain girls who have little or no social activity, are thus meeting other women their own age and it is often the only recreation that brightens their lives. One girl of this type was Thankful Brown. Certain characteristics belong legitimately to certain names. For instance, Thankful Brown was quiet, old-fashioned and demure. Just as the name implied. She was past twenty-five and seemed even older, with a sweet understanding nature which had been enriched, no doubt, by a hard life in which she struggled to keep house for a widowed mother and two sisters younger than herself.

She had taught me to cross-stitch a cup-towel on my first visit to the guild, sensing immediately the fact that I could not sew. She had taken infinite pains with me on each thing which I had attempted since that day and I felt that sympathetic spark which, once in a great while, we feel when we have made a friend.

Although Thankful was born of aristocratic parents and was one of the most estimable characters in town she did not enter into any of the gaieties of our set and it was only during the guild meetings that I saw her at all. But at times she invariably made an impression on me which lasted for days. That very morning she had said something to me which haunted my thoughts. We had been sitting apart from the others when the conversation began. I had complained of being tired because I had been up so late dancing the night before and also sighed when I thought of so many parties I had to go to during the day.

"What do you get out of it?" she asked in her quiet, beautiful voice, "you're really much too fine to give your strength and beauty and intelligence to that sort of thing."

I was frankly amazed at her expression of disapproval, which was made more impressive by the ring of sincerity in her voice. "It does seem a pointless way to live, I'll admit," I replied. "Then why don't you quit? Be brave enough to come out and be separate from the crowd! Then when night came, and you were tired, it would be the natural exhaustion of work well done, than which there is no greater joy!" Her eyes gleamed.

"But what could I do?" I asked.

"I've thought out a plan for you," she said, "and, if you are interested I will talk it over with you tomorrow morning at ten."

I felt peculiarly happy to think that perhaps, through the plan of this unselfish girl, I would be able to follow an urge which had ever struggled within me against the frivolity of a butterfly life.

Texas Population Gains

According to a survey by the Dallas News, Texas receives 200,000 new citizens from other states in 1926. The largest part of this increase in population went to the Rio Grande valley and the Panhandle, the larger cities and the oil sections getting a good share. The greatest need of the State is more people to assist in its development. A point has been reached where capital for manufacturing is available provided sufficient man power can be secured to provide the necessary labor. Farms are being developed faster than the industries. A million industrial laborers are needed right now to consume the surplus farm products that are being grown. It is up to the cities and towns to turn their attention to the industrial rather than the agricultural development of Texas in order that agriculture may be made more profitable. The cities that do this will be assured a prosperous agricultural patronage, as well as the steady growth that always attends prosperous industry.

Ozona's Sheep Show

Ozona is already making preparation on an extensive scale for its annual sheep show to be held July 4-6. There will be a rodeo and race meet in connection, but special emphasis, as heretofore, is again being placed on the showing of Rambouillet sheep, for which large prizes are being offered. Around 600 sheep will be entered from Crockett County alone. Ozona is following the right plan to make for herself a reputation as the center of the sheep growing industry of Texas, a reputation of a kind that will bring wealth to that part of the State. Inquiries are already being received from Russia about Ozona sheep. To attain and hold prominence a place should make itself a leader in some one activity and should leave nothing undone that will emphasize that leadership. And while stressing one activity, it should not forget to diversify its interests. Alvin is known all over the country for its beautiful cape jasmynes, but could not thrive on cape jasmynes alone. San Saba is establishing a great reputation for its pecans, but San Saba has many other crops. By emphasizing one crop or product and at the same time giving attention to all the other things that may be grown any community may be assured of prosperity.

Proper Farm Diversification

A South Texas cotton planter not long ago, while deploring the fact that exclusive cotton growing is not paying the growers, ridiculed diversification as a remedy for farm failures, on the ground that cotton farming requires its special tools and machinery not adapted to other lines of farming. He stated that it would be as sensible to advise the maker of men's clothing that he should also make women's wear as to tell the cotton farmer that he should grow grain or raise poultry. The mistake of this planter was in assuming that farming should be conducted along the same lines as a manufacturing plant. Factory methods can not be applied to the farm with success, at least not for any great period of time. The exclusive wheat grower or cotton planter may make money for a time if he is a large employer of labor and can secure and discharge labor at his pleasure, but the small farmer, who must keep himself and his help busy the year round, must practice diversification to be profitably employed all the time.

Showing the "Wild West"

In entertaining a group of Eastern educators recently, gathered in Texas for a conference, the local entertainers thought to make a "hit" by giving what was termed a typical Texas program with sombrero hats, leather leggings, spurs, pistols, cartridge belts, cowboy ballads, "longhorn" souvenirs, "chuck" wagon lunches, and all the other appurtenances of the wild west, cowboy days once familiar to Texas, but now fast being forgotten. The visitors were entertained, it is true, but they took it all as a verification of their preconceived views of delayed Texas civilization. Of course, they saw something of culture and refinement on the part of those they met, but naturally they regarded these as exceptions and the show put on for their entertainment as the prevalent condition with which Texas educators have to deal. There is little wonder that Eastern visitors regard us as a hundred years behind Eastern civilization when we do our best to create that impression.

Laredo Ships Onions

All seasons are good seasons for some parts of Texas. Laredo is now shipping Bermuda onions by the car load and these are bringing back wealth to the onion growers. As onions may be grown in all parts of Texas, there is no reason why shipments might not be made from some parts of the State all through the year, where sufficient quantities are grown for car load shipments.

Corpus Christi Shipping

A regular sailing schedule will soon be inaugurated between Corpus Christi and the Eastern seaboard, it having been ascertained after a careful survey that the available tonnage will be sufficient to justify it. This will mean an earlier service for that section by 24 hours, which is in itself a great advantage to the Southern coast section of Texas. Texas shipping is increasing rapidly.

Paris Shows Its Goods

Paris, Texas, has 45 manufacturing concerns that have been giving a "factory week" during which Paris made products were extensively exhibited both in a centralized exhibit and in the display windows of the mercantile establishments. A program was arranged with a view to induce Paris people to give preference to the products of the home factories.

Sectional Music Festival

The towns of the South Plains country have been holding a music festival at Lubbock, some fifteen towns participating in the events in entertainments of a competitive nature. Some 450 music lovers appeared on the program, demonstrating that there is much musical talent in that part of the State. The South Plains Music Teachers' Association sponsored the event.

One Million for Roads

San Jacinto county, of which Cold Springs with a population of 1,000 is the county site, has voted a million dollar bond issue to build highways. These highways will connect the whole county with the principal marketing places and furnish an outlet for the varied products of the county, which, without roads, is largely cut off from the outside world.

The Financier

A colored man came into a ticket office and asked for two round trip tickets to Charleston. The agent knew him and asked who was going with him.

"My brother," said the colored man.

"Your brother?" asked the agent. "Where is he?"

"Out there in de box. He's dead," answered the colored man.

"Well, if he is dead you don't want a return ticket for him."

"Yes, suh," said the colored man; "You see, we ain't gwine to bury him in Charleston; but we have about forty kinsfolks down there, and we fig'ed it would be cheaper to carry him down to Charleston fo' de funeral service and bring him back, den to bring de whole family up here."

JUNCTION BREAKS
EVEN AT ANGELO

Junction participated in two baseball games at Angelo last Friday and Saturday, April 1st and 2nd. The first game was lost by a close decision at first base at the end of the 8th inning of a seven inning game.
At the end of the seventh inning the score was 9-9. The result was 10-9 in favor of Angelo.

The second game was also a close affair. Junction won out in the 11th inning with a score of 6-5.

The Junction boys played an almost errorless game behind good pitching.

McKinney relieved Murrah and retired Angelo in the 10th by the strike-out method. Only one of them got on base in the 11th due to "Mac's" good pitching. Murrah also showed good judgment and fine work in his pitching. Don Maddox and Mc-Kinney starred both days in stick work. Webber playing his first game at second bag looked fine.

Battery: First day—Newman, McKinney, Motley.

Second day—Murrah, McKinney, Motley.

Those making the trip were:
Bill Cummins, Fred Beasley, Frank Hubbell, Herbert Newman, Ford Webber, Linville Mc-Kinney, Don Maddox, Cloma
Murrah, Dillard Motley, Louie
Ragland, H. T. Richardson,
Coach Blackburn and Manager
Bissett.

The boys will put in a busy week so as to be in shape to cross sticks with their rival, Menard, here Friday, April 8th.

They will play Angelo here Saturday, April 9. So far this year Junction has played 6 games and won 3. This is one of the best records Junction High School has ever had in baseball. Reporter.

Silent Star Eliminates Vibration By Suspension

Elimination of vibration is the outstanding feature of the new silent Star four. This has been accomplished by the adoption of a rubber motor suspension that prevents any metal-to-metal contact between motor and chassis.

The new method of engine suspension has been in use on a number of higher priced cars for some time and is a proven success. It remained for the Star car, however, to introduce this refinement to the low cost transportation field.

By eliminating vibration the silent
Star four now is a revolutionary low cost automobile. Driving comfort has been materially increased and a smoothness of operation equal to six cylinder performance is found.

Come in and ask for demonstration.

TEXAS TALKS

(By Wesley Peacock, Ph. B.)
The Only Son

A colonel of aviation in San Antonio says that in all his experience in training cadets to become fliers he has never known an only son to succeed. When asked to name some of the causes for the failure or disqualification, he thought it due to too much petting in childhood. He explained that the valuable and essential qualities of an aviator are courage, perseverance, self-denial, and fishiness, the ability to make quick judgments, initiative, perseverance, self-denial, and the power to take criticism for constructive purposes. The colonel thought that, while the only son in the family, especially in a rich family, might possess the first two qualities of courage and assertiveness, yet he is apt to be lacking in some or all of the last qualities.

A spoiled child is the product of false training, or of the lack of training, for which he is not to blame. All babies are unable to differentiate between themselves and other objects, such as their mothers, fathers, members of the household, the bed, the furniture. So far as their little minds can grasp the situation, which is new to them, there is only one thing in all the world, meaning their own little subjective selves. The baby bites his toe because it is part of himself. He cries for the moon because it is a part of himself, or he thinks it is. When he is a little older he becomes a robber and a brute, seizing the toys of the other child and beating him up, because "the world is his and the fullness thereof." He is not old enough to exercise judgments, much less moral judgments in property rights. This condition is apt to continue too long in case of the petted child, and he becomes anti-social.

When my friend offered me my choice of pointer puppies I selected the ugliest whelp in the litter, because I knew no one would be apt to smother him with too much fondling and petting. Then I brought him up like other dogs, made to stay in his place, to sleep in his kennel, to give and take with the other dogs, to be pecked and clawed by the mother hen when he attacked her chicks, to eat what the other dogs ate, and to scratch fleas like the other dogs. Did you ever know the prettiest pup in the litter to turn out a field trail winner? Even if he succeeds for a while, he will receive so much coddling by every passer-by that he will not stay at home, or take the briars to retrieve a wounded bird.

The only child is apt to get the wrong viewpoint of life, to become introspective, selfish, egotistical, and effeminate. "The world is his oyster." Little Lord Fauntleroy, with long hair at ten, has queered thousands of children by spoiling a rich inheritance.

ROBERT MILTON STEVENSON

Born at Fayetteville, Ark., Feb. 16, 1854.

Joined the Methodist Church in Kimble County, Texas, in July 1887 in a meeting conducted on Red Creek by Rev. Andrew Jackson Potter and Rev. J. M. Bourland. The remainder of his life was spent in the active work of the church. His membership from the first to the last was in the Junction Circuit.

On May 20th, 1887, he married Miss Virginia Hurley at Katemcy, Mason County, Texas. To this union were born eight children, four boys and four girls, all of whom with their mother survive.

He was the son of Rev. J. M. Stevenson, a Methodist preacher for more than sixty years. Rev. Stevenson filled various appointments in Arkansas and Eastern Texas, until 1876, when he moved to Llano County, Texas, and settled his family near Valley Springs. The home he established more than half a century ago has never passed out of the Stevenson family. He was no stranger to Western conditions. The pioneers accepted him readily and he became widely known as "Uncle Joe."

R. M. Stevenson came west with his father's family in 1876 and with the exception of a brief stay in New Mexico he spent the past half century in the Hill Country of West Texas. He was a pioneer surveyor and school teacher. He did private surveying in every county of the Hill Country, and was official County Surveyor of Sutton and Kimble Counties.

Interwoven with his surveying was his school teaching. He began teaching at Peter's Prairie, in Mason County, in October, 1886. He taught every year, with the exception of the year he was in New Mexico, until the spring of 1902. His last school was at Cedar Hill in Sutton County, Texas.

He moved into the town of Junction in 1904 and resided there ten years. In 1914 he moved on the South Llano, near Telegraph, in the vicinity of which he spent his declining years, and where he died at 8:35 a. m. Wednesday, March 30, 1927. He died as he had confidently expected, without pain or struggle, and his last moments were as calm and peaceful as a little child falling asleep on its mother's breast.

The remains were laid to rest in Junction Cemetery on Thursday, March 31, at 2 p. m., Rev. J. A. Ludlam, pastor of the M. E. Church, officiating.

THE REWARD OF IMPROVEMENT

It is with few pleasant anticipations that the householder looks forward to the job of cleaning up his grounds and back yard, which he is supposed to take care of about this time. It looks like back breaking work to grub up a lot of old weeds and cart off refuse.

He should realize the pleasure that comes from creating an improvement. Every time he looks out now at his disorderly home place, a feeling of depression comes over him. It is much as if every morning he had to put on ragged and soiled clothes, and go out among a lot of men who are clean and smartly dressed.

But now he will polish that shabby old place, and make it shine, he will feel as if someone had ordered him a spring suit of the latest style. Every time he looks at it, he will have a feeling of pride, and those grass plots and shrubs will seem to say, "See what a bright and progressive man my owner is. That fellow is going to make good in the world."

1927 BIG YEAR FOR ROAD BUILDING

The United States is out for "bigger and better roads," and the construction program shows that 26,841 miles of road and maintenance of 239,847 miles are included in the 1927 state highway anticipations of 47 sovereign states. The programs also include many bridges. Every State except Connecticut shows up in the estimates. That automobile owners have effectively supplemented other kinds of taxes is apparent when one reads official Government figures showing that the highway movement for the current year will cost $648,483,000. In addition to this tidy sum there are counties, cities and towns which will kick in an additional $475,000,000. Thus more than a billion dollars will be spent in highway work in this year of our Lord. States that will build more than 1,000 miles of new road this year are Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Nebraska, New York, North Dakota, Pennsylvania, Texas and Wisconsin.

WHAT CHILDREN SHOULD KNOW

Government and People
The Government protects and rewards brain-workers. It gives these brain-workers patents to protect their inventions, copyrights so that no one can steal things they write, and trademarks that distinguish manufactured goods and products so that the public knows just what it is buying. If one manufacturer tries to use another business firm's name, or if fraudulent advertising is attempted, the Government will stop it.

The Patent Office issues patents, trade-marks, and approved designs. Nearly everyone knows what a patented article is, but there is scanty knowledge regarding trade-marks.

When you see a distinctive or peculiar mark, device, or symbol that always appears on some manufacturer's goods, it is likely to be a Government-authorized trade-mark. A few days ago a very important trade-mark came up. The Beech Nut Packing Company has a well-known trade-mark for its candy, gum, bacon, ham and other products. The P. Lorillard Company imitated this trade-mark label on tobacco and cigarettes. The Supreme Court of the United States has just tried the case, and the decision will be of great interest to all manufacturing interests.

Over 84,000 patents were applied for in 1925. The total number of patents issued in the United States up to about a year ago, amounted to 1,577,999.

In 1926 there were 177,635 copyright registrations made with the Librarian of Congress. The Library collection comprises over 3,420,000 printed books and pamphlets, while there are about 2,000,000 maps, prints, engraving and lithographs.

TRIBUTE TO THE LAZY MAN

Whether there is any connection between congressmen and laziness, it remains a fact that Albert Payson Terhune, the well-known author, paid a visit to Washington a few weeks ago, and immediately proceeded to write a "Tribute to the Lazy Man," which appears in the April issue of the American Magazine.

His visit to Washington set him thinking, he says, not of the mechanical age we live in, but of the startling fact that the world's progress is due to laziness rather than to applied industry.

Mr. Terhune explains: "Long ago armies of men rolled cumbersome logs and rocks from the forest to build their homes. Some lazy fellow hated the back-breaking job so much that he set out to devise an easier way to get it done. Probably the rolling gave him his idea. He found circular sections of logs and bored holes through their centers. In a trice, the first wheel was made, and thereby human effort was cut down 50 per cent."

"Again, long before the days of the Pyramids, a lazy man loathed the task of helping to lift crushingly heavy stone and timber. So he thought out the pulley. Laziness has scored again."

"So it was when the lazy load-bearer trained a horse or a donkey to bear him comfortably from place to place, because it was too much bother for a lazy man to do so much walking."

"Down the centuries, the onerous tasks of mankind have been solved one by one, through a lazy wish to make work easier, until at last the world was honest enough to speak of such effort as labor saving contrivances, and to offer high rewards to their makers. In brief, while hard manual labor continues to earn low wages, wealth and honor wait for the lazy man who can discount that labor."
