City Group Seeks More Tax Cuts

Auto Use Controls Sought

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Although the ink is barely dry on the 1978-79 city budget, Lubbock Property Owners Association members this morning presented their demands for a 1979-80 budget which would be 30 percent less than this year's.

The LPOA wants the city to:

— "Cease and drop all taxes and tax collection on automobiles.

— "Reduce the city budget and city taxes of 1979-80 by 30 percent.

— "Reduce all surplus monies, including revenue sharing to one half of one percent of the total city budget."

The group also asked the city to "justify or be able to justify all expenses in the city budget."

LPOA president Jack House complimented city officials, saying, "I don't think we have free-spenders in office" but said the group plans to help the council "see the forest from the trees."

Although he had said earlier there was widespread abuse of governmental vehicles, House said he had no evidence of city employees misusing their cars.

Council members received a report on the use of city vehicles from City Manager Larry Cunningham, so they did not comment on the association's demands until they could review the report.

Regarding removal of the automobile tax, City Attorney John Ross Jr. said the city "could have some legal problems with eliminating some items on the tax roll once they are set."

The LPOA demands are very similar to those made of the council last summer, except that a 25 percent tax cut was requested at that time.

House praised a resolution passed by the council this morning which would require an annual review of city fees and charges.

The LPOA is attempting to formulate specific recommendations on fees it thinks should be raised to support services performed.

Councilman Alan Henry proposed the resolution, which would require the city manager to review city fees three months before each year's budget session.

Council members accepted an airport board recommendation to hire three additional security guards and two additional parking attendants.

In anticipation of the increase in passengers during the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays, aviation director Marvin Coffee was authorized to hire ad-

ACTION LOUDER THAN WORDS — Texas Tech senior Kim Harrison uses drastic action instead of mere words to express how she feels about smoking as she puts Karen Andrews' cigarette out of commission with one quick snip. 'Smokeout' Drive Gets Boost

The ashtrays in various Lubbock offices and homes will presumably stay clean today as some citizens attempt to kick the smoking habit in observance of the "Great American Smokeout.

The smokeout is a national campaign, sponsored by the American Cancer Society, aimed at getting people to stop smoking for one day.

Mayor Dirk West for one is doing his part to promote the campaign. "I'm trying to refrain today," said West. "I've worked with those people there (at the ACS) and I think it's an excellent program. I'm trying to remind myself every time I reach for a cigarette today to cool it. I don't know if I'll make it — it's too early yet."

Asked if he intends to quit for good, West replied diplomatically, "Well, I sure ought to."

Justice of the Peace L.J. Blalack made a valiant effort at participating, but didn't quite make it. He had a good excuse, though. "I quit smoking about eight years ago," he said. "I tried to start back so I could participate, but it just tasted so bad."

County Clerk Frank Guess apparently thought he had sufficient activities on his agenda without adding an effort to stop smoking to his list. When asked if he had considered participating in the smokeout, Guess said, "With a recount coming up and a commissioner's court meeting today? No, I haven't."

Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy is a smoker, but didn't know anything about the anti-smoking event.

Though the campaign is primarily aimed at cigarette smokers, pipe smokers are getting in on the act also. Dr. Gerald Woolam is giving up his pipe today and hopes that it will be for good.

"Even though the hazards of smoking a pipe are less than those of cigarette smoking, I think pipe and cigar smokers should consider stopping too," said Woolam. He cited heart disease and cancer of the mouth as possible hazards to pipe smokers.

"I think the campaign is more a way of trying to draw attention to the problem than as a technique to quit smoking," said Woolam. "But I think some people just need an excuse to stop and the campaign serves as one."

Charles Dahle of the ACS national headquarters also views the campaign as an excuse for smokers to quit. "This is supposed to be fun," he said. "This is a lighthearted approach. A lot of people out there want to quit and need some kind of excuse to do it."

Last year, the day was considered a success by the anti-smoking crusaders. Dahle said an estimated 2 million of the nearly 18 million who tried to quit during the first Great American Smokeout stayed off cigarettes for at least 60 days.

The ACS estimates that at least 5 million people will participate in the national smokeout campaign.

Trustees To Study Request

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock Independent School District budgetmakers today were asked by property owners to cut taxes by nearly a third for next year. While not making any promises, district trustees said they would consider such tax relief.

"We're forewarned. Let me assure you, we'll consider this next summer," school board president Charles Waters said after hearing the Lubbock Property Owners Association request.

The group is asking the board "to reduce our school taxes and 1979-80 school budget by 30 percent, drop the automobile tax and to increase the homestead exemption to our elderly to $10,000."

"Further, we ask and will insist you justify or be able to justify all expenses in the school budget," D.J. Faulkner, association vice chairman, stated. He gave the board a letter reiterating the organization's request.

Faulkner said such tax reductions should be possible in light of last week's passage of the state Tax Relief Amendment and this year's drop in student enrollment.

Waters asked whether the association had conducted any study of how the proposed cuts would affect school system revenues or operations. Faulkner said no such study has been made, but that the group believes its suggestions are "reasonable."

"We hope to see you next summer," Waters said, suggesting that Faulkner and other group members should point out where they feel spending can be trimmed.

"We are as dedicated to lowering taxes as any member of LPOA. We joined (the tax-cut movement) a long time before LPOA was organized," Waters said.

Over the past four years, the school board has cut the district's tax rate 50 cents, to its present level of $1.38 per $100 assessed valuation. The board knocked 20 cents off the rate this past year alone. Most of the rate reductions were the result of increases in state aid or local property revaluations.

Lubbock schools probably will be getting an increase in state funds next year after the legislature rewrites the school finance program and okays laws for implementing the tax relief amendment that voters tacked on to the state constitution last week.

The amendment alone will allow each homeowner to subtract $5,000 from the market value of his home before a school tax assessment ratio and tax rate are applied. In Lubbock, that will mean a savings of about $41 per home.

The amendment provides homeowners age 65 or older an additional $10,000 market-value exemption.

Also, the amendment allows the legislature to exempt up to two automobiles per family from property taxes.

Superintendent Ed Irons said the school district cannot simply drop motor vehicles from the tax roll, as the property owners group suggested. But the district will abide by whatever exemptions the state mandates, Irons said.

The school board today also heard reports on the transportation and instructional aspects of the district's court-ordered desegregation plan.

Bob Wyett, the district's safety coordinator, said busing is "off to a very good start." He attributed the success to citi-

Carter Discounts Fears Of Another Depression

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter, reacting to comments of his chief inflation fighter that a 1930's style depression is not out of the question, said today he remains confident his voluntary anti-inflation plan will work.

Carter made the comments at a breakfast meeting with reporters at the White House. He said only a "complete failure" of his program could lead to a recession or a depression.

"I just don't think we're going to have a substantial economic setback next year," he said. "I think we'll be successful. We do not anticipate a recession or a depression."

Carter also said he anticipates a 3 percent growth rate next year.

In the foreign policy field, Carter said he has no current plans to call for another Egyptian-Israeli peace summit meeting and "hopes and prays it will not be necessary" in the future.

The problems standing in the way of a treaty, Carter said, are miniscule.

Carter's statement on the economy came a day after administration inflation fighter Albert Kahn raised the slim possibilty of depression for the first time at a retailers conference.

His use of the term threw an immediate chill into the stock market, which is already nervous about continuing inflation snd skyrocketing interest rates.

Carter, in his remarks this morning, also stressed he does not foresee any circumstances, barring an emergency such as war, under which he would ask for mandatory controls on wages and prices, even on a standby basis.

"I don't have any intention of asking Congress for wage-price authority," he said.

Carter said again he does not believe mandatory wage-price controls will work.

"If our nation was in such a serious state, approaching a national emergency or danger to our own security, there might be aroused in the public consciousness and in Congress such a commitment to controlling inflation that wage and

Snow Deep In Portion Of Plains

A-J News Services

Heavy snow blanketed northern portions of the South Plains overnight, but the Lubbock area appeared to have missed out on a 1-to 3-inch snowfall predicted for most of the region.

Muleshoe reported 6 inches of snow, Dimmitt and Friona 3 inches, Hereford 1½ inches and Littlefield an inch.

Lubbock had some sleet and occasional snow this morning as the freezing, misty rain that has come and gone during the past week went into another day.

Forecasters called for a 30 percent chance of light snow mixed with sleet early this afternoon, followed by clearing and colder weather tonight.

Temperatures were expected to be in the mid-40s today, near 30 tonight and in the high 50s Friday as the sky clears, weathermen said.

Northerly winds of 10 to 15 mph today will become light and variable tonight, they said.

Meanwhile, a travelers' advisory was being issued for the snowy Panhandle and portions of the South Plains.

"We're expecting some additional snow north of the Lubbock area up through Hale and Floyd counties and

Slain Amarillo Couple Found In Colorado

PAGOSA SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — A frustrating three-month search has ended with the discovery of two bodies believed to be a missing Texas couple whose van was used by two escaped Arizona convicts to crash a roadblock, authorities say.

Archuleta County Sheriff Neal Smith issued a statement saying the bodies found southwest of here Wednesday "from all appearances and information available" were believed to be those of James Judge, 23, and Jeanette Margene Judge, 26, of Amarillo.

The couple had been married less than a week and were on a honeymoon capming trip in southern Colorado when they disappeared Aug. 8. For several weeks, dozens of searchers combed the rural areas of southern Colorado for a trace of the Judges.

Judge's brother, John Judge of Amarillo, an attorney, said Wednesday that relatives of the slain couple had been notified.

"They have some pretty positive identification," he said. "We're glad they're found. It's over as far as we're concerned."

Jeanette Judge's father, F.H. Davis, said in Borger that he had been told the bodies "did show gunshot wounds."

District Attorney Craig Westberg told reporters in Durango that the deaths were being classified as homicides and he expected to file murder and kidnaping charges against three members of the Tison gang, who still are alive and being held by Arizona authorities.

The bodies will be taken to the Bernalillo County Medical Center in Albuquerque, N.M., for an autopsy, Westberg said.

Smith's statement said the bodies were found about 11 a.m. Wednesday by himself and other law enforcement officers, but provided no other details.

Tison, 42, and another convicted killer, Randy Greenawalt, 29, of Thornton, Colo., escaped from the Arizona State Prison on July 31. They were aided by Tison's three sons, Donald, 20, Rick, 18, and Raymond, 19, who held guards at bay in the visitors' center with guns apparently smuggled into the prison in an ice chest.

Burger Chain Denies Use Of Worms

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Burger Chef Systems, with 900 restaurants in 40 states, today joined McDonalds in denying it uses worms as meat additives in its hamburgers.

The company took out full-page newspaper ads in Indianapolis to say its hamburgers contain "No additives. No extenders. Just 100 percent pure beef."

Rick Bollinger, public relations director for the Indianapolis-based firm, said the ads were a response to rumors circulating in some of Burger Chef's territory that it adds earthworms to its meat.

"We are affected. We are concerned," he said. "We can't keep tabs in all 40 states, but we have not been affected in a majority of our markets."

He said the firm had been reluctant to give wide exposure to the rumors with a publicized denial but decided to act after McDonalds Tuesday denied similar stories at an Atlanta news conference.

Bollinger said Burger Chef planned to issue a full statement later today or Thursday.

A third national hamburger firm, Wendy's, of Dublin, Ohio, has been running ads similar to those of Burger Chef in Indiana newspapers since the beginning of the month.

The worm stories heard in central Indiana in recent days have involved all three firms.

Tips to Save Time And Money Too, with Comet® Long Grain Rice

My family loves rice so I cook twice as much as I can use for one meal. When it is thoroughly cooled, cooked rice can be refrigerated a few days or frozen for longer. Just place in container and cover well so that the grains won't dry out. My "left-over" rice can be turned into a great dish on short notice. Here are two of my favorite recipes. Both are delicious with steak or chicken and a green salad.

Rice with Cheese

INGREDIENTS
3 tablespoons butter
4 cups cooked Comet Long Grain Rice
2 tablespoons freshly grated Romano cheese
⅛ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper

DIRECTIONS
Heat butter in a large skillet; add rice, cheese and black pepper, and stir gently with a fork until well heated.
Preparation and Cooking Time: 5 minutes Serves 4

Baked Rice Pie

INGREDIENTS
4 cups cooked Comet Long Grain Rice
½ cup freshly grated Romano cheese
¼ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
3 eggs, beaten
2 tablespoons butter
½ pound mozzarella, cubed

DIRECTIONS
Mix together in a large bowl cooked rice, grated cheese, black pepper and eggs. Put in a buttered 9-inch pie plate; top with dots of butter and cubed mozzarella. Bake for 20 minutes at 400° F. Slice and serve like pie.

Kenyatta's Political Heir Maintains Modest Style

By CHARLES P. WALLACE

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — At the Organization of African Unity summit conference last summer, Liberian President William Tolbert attended each meeting in the gleaming white suit and fur hat that have become his trademark.

Uganda's Idi Amin entered the conference hall surrounded by bodyguards, wearing on his hip the revolver which has become the more sinister symbol of his rule. Photographers jostled for pictures.

There were no bodyguards or photographers when tall Daniel Arap Moi, wearing a conservatively tailored dark blue suit, entered the building. Although as vice president of Kenya he had attended such meetings for 11 years — President Jomo Kenyatta refused to fly — Moi went virtually unnoticed.

The scene was a testament to Moi's retiring and self-effacing style on a continent where political leaders are often characterized by their flamboyance.

To a certain degree, it illustrated the extent to which even close political intimates were compelled to live in the shadow cast by Kenyatta's towering presence.

For all his modesty, Moi moved quickly after Kenyatta's death Aug. 22 to establish himself as the sole politician with sufficient experience and appeal to fill the shoes of the only president Kenya has known since independence in 1963.

The result was an outpouring of effusive support that made the presidential selection process seem an academic exercise, and appeared to refute privately voiced fears that the post-Kenyatta era would be tumultuous for this East African country, which has made moderation a byword. Moi was made "interim president" following Kenyatta's death but the qualifier was soon dropped.

"President Moi," commented the tabloid Daily Nation, "stepping into the breach and standing firm at the helm, has confounded the prophets of doom."

Not surprisingly, the 54-yearold Moi has made a virtue of his proximity to Kenyatta, and as a result there are expected to be few substantive changes under his presidency.

The soft-spoken former school teacher called on all Kenyans to follow the principle of "harambee," a national motto which means "let's all pull together."

Moi promised to pursue Kenya's traditional "non-aligned" course, which in practice has cast Kenya as one of the west's closest supporters in Black Africa.

He also pledged not to interfere with the nation's capitalistic economy, and assured foreign investors that their attention would be courted and their money safe. Moi is himself the owner of the East African distributor for International Harvester and has large holdings of farmland.

One western diplomat remarked, "this is exactly what everyone wants to hear — both at home and abroad."

Implicit in this assessment is the knowledge that Moi, like Kenyatta, draws on the advice of influential cabinet members, and these "powers behind the throne" have not changed.

But Moi is a more active man than Kenyatta could be in his later years. Moi had the day-today running of government thrust upon him as vice president, and seems unlikely to relinquish those tasks which are now his by right.

By the same token, Moi will not benefit from Kenyatta's stature as the "Mzee" — the old wise one — which set him above political squabbling.

Moi makes a point of projecting the image of a devout Christian. Many of his speeches have an evangelical air, exhorting politicians and peasants alike to "spreed the gospel of brotherhood and unity."

He quotes liberally from the Old Testament, and was able to tell his followers without sounding pompous:

"All Kenyans, including ministers and civil servants, are answerable to me, but I am answerable to God."

One of the more remarkable aspects of Moi's elevation is that he is a member of the tiny Tugen tribe in a country where it has always been stated that political power rests with Kenyatta's majority tribe, the Kikuyu.

But some suggest it is Moi's removal from tribal politics that has made him so acceptable to all groups in a nation of wide ethnic diversity.

"Despite the various geographic areas you come from, identify yourselves as Kenyans, not by tribal and ethnic groups you hail from," Moi said recently. "We are a united nation."

Torortich Arap Moi (Arap in the Tugen language means "son of") was born in Kuriengwo, a small village in Baringo district about 150 miles north of Nairobi, in 1924.

His father died when he was four, leaving Moi, his mother Kabon, and a brother to eke out an existence by tending a small herd of goats and sheep.

Moi's paternal uncle, the senior chief of Baringo, sent Moi to the African Inland Mission school, where he was baptized Daniel, a name he later chose in place of his tribal name.

He eventually entered the government African teacher training college at Kapsabet and started teaching in 1948. He became assistant principal of the region's Tambach college.

Moi entered politics when one of the six African members of the British and settler-dominated legislative council resigned and he was nominated for the Rift Valley region.

Moi was somewhat removed from his countrymen who took up arms in the Mau Mau rebellion. But he says his sympathies lay with the movement, and at one point he gave sanctuary to fugitives from the colonial authorities.

Moi was a leading light in the Kenyan African Democratic Union, which at the time of independence was seen as the main opposition to the Kikuyu-dominated Kenya African National Union.

His party was dissolved in 1964, and Moi and other leading politicians readily joined its former competitor. Moi was named minister of home affairs in 1964, and Kenyatta appointed him third vice president in 1967.

Moi fathered seven children with his wife Lena, but he was reported to have been divorced several years ago and his family is not seen in public.

Buyers Say Economy Stronger

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — It isn't all bad. Blended faintly through the new consensus recipe, which calls for a weakening economy through the next few months, are a few sweeteners to keep the taste buds alive.

Whether they are simply the pleasant aftertaste of four years of economic expansion or, instead, ingredients that could indeed sweeten the economic pie, is debatable. But they can't be ignored.

One survey of purchasing managers, the people who buy the commodities and such that are processed into products of greater value, leads to the conclusion that the "economy looks like its been pumping iron."

That's the opinion of Purchasing Magazine, reached after interviewing representative buyers. "It (the eeconomy) is putting on more muscle without serious supply disruptions," it states in the current issue.

Like so many surveys, however, this one was completed just prior to the combined anti-inflation, save-the-dollar program announced simultaneoulsy by the White House and the Federal Reserve Board.

The program's impact, in the form of a new business psychology and higher interest rates, won't be determined for several weeks. Even so, it isn't likely to totally demolish the purchasing agents' confidence.

The magazine study is buttressed by one released Nov. 6 by the National Association of Purchasing Management. It found 43 percent of respondents expect fourth-quarter business to improve over the third.

The NAPM study does include evidence of a slowing of economic activity. Inventories are being tightened, for example. But the overall verdict of a strong economy was termed "unexpectedly good."

Manpower, Inc., a temporary help concern, claims that a survey of 6,000 public and private employers suggests the economy will avert a recession, although there is likely to be some downturn early in 1979.

It's opinion that hiring should remain fairly strong is based partly on "the psychology of economics and politics," both of which, however, might have turned down after the Washington announcements.

While declaring that business confidence has declined, Faculty Associates, a surveyor of small business, notes that 47 percent of respondents still expected sales increases in the fourth quarter.

Based on random sampling of the 500,000 members firms of the National Federation of Independent Business, based in San Mateo, Calif., Faculty Associates said only 24 percent expected sales declines.

What the various studies indicate is that despite fears, business has been able to retain a degree of faith, and in some instances a very strong faith, despite rising personal debt, interest rates and prices.

Nobody can say at this point whether the administration's recommitment to fighting inflation, and the Fed's determination to risk recession in order to slow economic activity, has poleaxed that faith.

It seems to have done that to economists, who generally are raising the odds on a recession, although as usual they are hedging their bets. Long-lived economists are not noted for fearless forecasting.

But business people are different. For one thing, they cannot so easily hedge, because they often deal in hardgoods and cash rather than opinions. Besides, by their nature they are risk-takers.

It is, in fact, this very tendency that might account for the persistence of the current expansion — yes, folks, the economy is still expanding — well into its fourth year, an unusually long span.

And it could be that grit and persistence through all sorts of obstacles that might permit the economy to correct itself short of the recession foreseen by a growing number of economists.

But if the attitudes expressed in the surveys of business people turn sour, then the economic pie will surely be bitter to the taste.

Executive Predicts More Diesel Trucks

BLUE BELL, Pa. (AP) — A trucking-industry executive predicts that as many as 48 percent of mid-range trucks registered in 1985 could be diesel-powered, compared with 3.8 percent in 1976.

Raymond S. Reardon Jr., president of IVECO Trucks of North America, says the rapid dieselization of America's mid-range truck fleet is being spurred by the influx of European truck manufacturers into the U.S.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Worst Is Yet To Come

WITH THE first real wintry blast, most persons, those who walk and those who drive cars, are caught unawares, especially in these parts.

Suddenly, everyone remembers that they forgot to remember to check the anti-freeze, the tires, chains, windshield wipers, what have you.

Well, the latest cold blast is only the preliminary. There's still time for all of those things, and some other preparation as well.

EACH YEAR, as wet, cold weather moves in, the number of mishaps in major metropolitan areas soars.

Accidents on rural roads also show a marked increase.

Part of the reason for this is that motorists, long used to the area's usually dry and clear climate, forget what happens when you step on a brake on a slick street or highway, even at 30 miles an hour.

They forget that windows fog up, that other drivers can't see as well, that pedestrians become targets on dark, wintry nights.

THIS THEN is an appeal for motorists throughout the South Plains to take advantage of the next respite in what may turn out to be a long, hard winter and prepare for it.

Get all those things checked, including battery and engine, that can go wrong on a cold morning.

Get in the habit of leaving for work and school five to 10 minutes earlier, so as to be able to drive somewhat slower and watch more carefully.

And, mentally, watch out for those who may dart across darkened streets, afoot or on bicycles or in cars.

SUCH THOUGHTS as these may not be as weighty as, say, a discourse on what happens in Congress or the United Nations.

But, while these actions taken in those august bodies may give us ulcers, break us financially or take us into the wild blue yonder eventually, a traffic mishap can bring it all home in a matter of seconds.

While on the subject, homeowners should check their heating equipment, fire hazards. Annually, several persons die in fires and of suffocation in this area.

It's not earth-shaking. But it may save a life. Yours, for instance.

Getting Involved

The Office Radical says "yeah, especially to any one who wants to get rich from a TV interview or a book."

★

The City-School Tax Office is cranking out lawsuits against persons who are delinquent in paying their property taxes on cars.

Good timing. After decades of hand-sorted filings, the tax office gets computerized filings underway less than a week after voters overwhelmingly authorized the Legislature to wipe out the hated wheel tax.

★

No, Virginia, the stock market didn't decline on news that President Carter had vetoed a bill to limit beef imports.

★

THE CRIME HOTLINE is the freshest idea here in a thus-far halfhearted war on crime.

Simply by calling 763-1133—anonymously—any citizen can "get involved without getting involved" in the effort to make Lubbock a safer place in which to live.

Sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce and sparked by businessman Frank McGlaun, the hotline is part of a Crime Abatement Program with the slogan "Put a CAP on Crime."

Tips on perpetrators of crime, or information about crimes that are being plotted, can be 'phoned in on the hotline number. The caller's identity will be protected and the information will be passed along to appropriate law enforcement agencies.

Ever since cities sprawled out and policemen got off their feet and into patrol cars, that personal element necessary to getting good tips on who's committing what crimes has been missing.

Let's all hope the CAP program helps fill that vacuum. A city in which rapes, robbery, burglaries and a you-won't-get-caught attitude are becoming commonplace is nothing to be proud of.

NOTE TO COUNTY Eleetion Board: Some of the folks who voted in Box 52 this month were upset that they had to go down to the basement to cast their ballots.

Also, there weren't enough voting machines in some polling places to keep lines from forming. Having to wait for others to study the ballot and make up their minds before he can vote and get on out of there is an unfair imposition on a voter.

It's a matter you'll need to take care of before 1980, when the ballot is likely to be longer and more complicated and when the turnout is likely to be much greater.

WHILE THE ELECTIONS are still fresh on everyone's mind, there's an election law reform I'd like to recommend to the Legislature.

Let's eliminate the "straight party ticket" option for voters.

Straight-party voting has always been a tempting way for political machine bosses to instruct their sheep. Now, with voting machines—mechanical type—in widespread use, even many independent but undedicated voters are tempted to punch the "Democrat" or "Republican" slot or pull the party lever.

This is particularly true at crowded polling places where people are lined up to vote. Unless a person is really committed to the idea of splitting his votes among Democratic and Republican candidates, there is a temptation to punch one hole and move on out.

UNDER EXISTING law, computers counting machine ballots are supposed to be programmed to count each vote separately if a voter—either through confusion or inadvertence—first punches a straight-party preference but then votes on each race separately.

Even ignoring the potential for fraud that this provides, the straight-ticket option isn't good, in my opinion.

If someone wants to vote for a candidate just because he's a Democrat or a Republican, he ought to at least have to go to the trouble to find his name on the ballot!

U.S. Weak After Feint-ing Spell

WASHINGTON—America's instinctive historical distrust of treaties—"entangling alliances"—has taken a wicked bounce in the SALT pacts.

Our aversion to war-related treaties in the case of SALT has taken this unpredictable hop which gives the enemy an unearned run.

It amounts to American acceptance of the detestable treaty-idea, for the simple reason it has ricocheted beyond our reach.

SALT today is at a point, or nearing it, when to reject Russia's most outlandish proposals would be a losing proposition for our side. In a deep-background interview, which means it is authoritative but anonymous, I learned:

"If there's going to be any more flexibility, it's got to be theirs. It won't be ours."

BUT SO MUCH flexibility by the U.S. has already taken place that we are up against the hard business of turning it around. We have cancelled the B-1 bomber, but allowed the USSR unrestricted use of its Backfire.

We have closed down our Minuteman III production and slowed down production of the MX missile (the heaviest slugger of them all), and vetoed the newest and best nuclear aircraft carrier.

Carter has made a feint toward reactivating production of the enhanced nuclear warhead (the misnamed neutron bomb).

The feint is suspected because the White House chose to let the State Department (not the Defense Department) make the announcement at the time of Secretary Vance's Moscow mission.

WAS THE RATTLING of this warhead intended to wring concessions from the Kremlin? If so, it didn't work, for Vance came home with empty hands. In this instance, as in every other, we are up against the hard business of deploying a war-like weapon or of being "flexible" in accepting Russia's SALT terms.

Another sign of possible preparedness for war is the new emphasis on civil defense. The Russians, as we all know, are dug in to take heavy casualties, sacrificing lives in order to turn an "unthinkable" war into a "winnable" war.

Whether Carter, who is a military man by training, intends to ask that of the American people, no one will say, if anybody knows.

The President and Secretary of State are under pressure by the Russians to clip the wings of our fighting hawk, the Cruise Missile, and it's administration talk that this is where Security Advisor Brzezinski draws the line. No restrictions on the Cruise Missile! But Carter is the boss.

Then there is the resignation and/or removal of Paul Warnke from his two-hat job of ACDA director and chief SALT negotiator.

It is good to have Warnke, a peace-through-weakness McGovernnik, out of there. But before we rejoice we had better find out whether he was replaced by two of the same ilk, Lt. Gen. George Seignious at ACDA, and Ralph Earle, as chief negotiator. Both are Warnkeniks by reputation.

Getting back to the baseball analogy, it looks increasingly probable that a "pebble" hit, bouncing over the infield, has at worst cost us the game, at best sent us into extra innings.

If we hadn't agreed to treaty-making in the first place, we wouldn't be in this fix. If we refuse to accept the Russian-oriented treaty, we must face world censure while arming to our technological teeth.

Sylvia Porter:

Fat Chance Of Getting Weight Under Control

WITHIN ANY 24-hour period, some 20,000 Americans 13 years old and over will drink a sugar-free, carbonated soft drink.

More than 7,000 will chew sugar-free gum; roughly 3,000 will use low-calorie salad dressing; about 1,000 will consume a portion of diet yogurt.

These survey results prepared for the Calorie Control Council, a diet food trade association, merely hint at Americans' reliance on low-calorie foods—and for an obvious reason.

Approximately 40 million Americans, about twice the population of Canada, are overweight.

To help these 40 million select foods which will genuinely save them calories, the Food & Drug Administration has created new labeling rules for foods that you will find useful in weight control (if you learn and heed them).

• BEGINNING NEXT July 1, foods labeled "low calorie" can contain no more than 40 calories per ordinary serving.

• Foods marked "reduced calorie" must contain at least on third fewer calories than another food of the same type. Such "reduced calorie foods" also must carry a statement comparing them to the same food as it is normally eaten.

"Reduced calorie" peaches, for instance, would carry a label stating, "peaches packed in water contain 38 calories per one half cup serving, 62 percent less than 'Brand X' peaches packed in syrup."

• Food products claiming to be either low or reduced in calories will have to carry a complete nutrition label.

You must be told how many calories are in a serving, as well as the amounts of protein, carbohydrate, fat and percentage of U.S. Recommended Daily Allowances for vitamins and minerals.

• FOODS WHICH ARE normally low in calories, such as cucumbers, could not be labeled "low calorie" immediately before the name.

This would suggest, says the FDA, that the particular cucumber was lower in calories than other cucumbers. The vegetable could, however, be labeled "cucumber, a low-calorie food."

• If a food is to carry such terms as "diet," "dietetic," or "artificially sweetened," it either must be labeled as low or reduced calorie or indicate that it is useful for certain other dietary purposes (low-sodium diets, for instance).

• The same applies for such terms as "sugar free," "sugarless," or "no sugar."

Since you reasonably might assume foods carrying these designations to be useful in weight control, the food must meet the requirements for low or reduced calorie foods, be so labeled, or carry a clarifying statement, such as "not a reduced calorie food," or "not for weight control," or "useful only in avoiding tooth decay."

• AND FINALLY in the interests of the roughly 5 million diabetics in the U.S., the FDA has required that a food cannot be labeled "diabetic" unless it is useful for such individuals.

If it is, then it must carry the statement, "Diabetics: This product may be useful in your diet on the advice of a physician."

These requirements may sound complicated when spelled out this way. But in fact they are meant to bring uniformity to the array of terms now used to suggest that a food is helpful for overweight people or those on special diets.

But if you are dieting, reliance solely on the new labeling rules and a few of the low-calorie items they govern won't help you much.

Reduced-calorie foods are really of value only to those of you with pounds to shed when combined with increased exercise and the consumption of smaller portions than you have been eating.

ALTHOUGH MOST of you are, as FDA chief Donald Kennedy said, looking for a "quick fix" to your overweight problem, you will not find the answer through crash dieting, monotonous diets, or a single low-calorie product.

The fundamental answer always has been and is: a balanced but reduced diet of commonly available foods.

A last word from the FDA as part of its new labeling order: if you must lose weight, start moving! For the longer you remain overweight, the less likely it is that you will succeed in your reducing program.

Bill Eats At Burger's Kind

WASHINGTON—Chief Justice Warren Earl Burger has been taking his lumps lately. The junior senator from Arizona, Dennis DeConcini, complained piteously that Burger had "shouted" at him.

Muckraker Jack Anderson, belaboring the point, called Burger a pompous windbag and implied that he had shattered the principle of separation of powers.

Burger is quite capable of taking care of himself in these horrid affrays, but I am minded to jump in anyhow.

HE FEARED THE bill was about to turn into a bad piece of business, and in that view he was absolutely right: The bill was a bad piece of business.

Two issues are entangled. The first has to do with the particular bill. The second has to do with the mistaken notion that judges should be seen and not heard when it comes to legislative affairs. Burger was on sound ground all around.

Certainly the chief justice of the United States should be heard on bills directly affecting the judiciary. Who has a better right to be heard?

In recent years the Congress time after time has piled new obligations upon the federal courts —voting rights, civil rights, election law appeals —without giving thought to how the burden could be carried.

Burger has played a leading role in getting additional judges to carry out the congressional mandates.

AND CERTAINLY BURGER had every right to make his views known on the bill to rewrite the federal bankruptcy laws. The bill was the product of six years of off-and-on study.

Its purpose was to update the bankruptcy code that last was overhauled 40 years ago. Congressman Don Edwards of California took the lead in the House; DeConcini handled the bill in the Senate.

Together, they lined up impressive support from banks, credit agencies, small loan companies and others who often wind up as creditors in bankruptcy proceedings.

The bill that President Carter signed into law Monday before last was a vast improvement over the bill that passed the House in February.

IN ITS ORIGINAL form, the bill would have given bankruptcy judges one of the lushest retirement pensions in the land—80 percent of their salary, for life, if they had reached age 55 and served for only 14 years. The original bill also was pretty well tilted to the advantage of creditors.

By the time the bill reached the President, the retirement bonanza had been quietly shelved and the long and complex act had been much improved by its voyage through the Senate.

In the closing hours of the 95th Congress, however, it was far from clear what was happening, and it was at this point that Burger sought the attention of the senator from Arizona.

So They Say...

A little boy said, "Grandma, do your glasses magnify very much?"

"Yes," said grandmother, "my eyes are very bad so my glasses have to make everything much larger."

"Then," said the little boy, "would you please take them off when you cut my piece of cake."

The act creates a wholly new system of federal courts. Future Presidents will have power to appoint roughly 215 to 225 bankruptcy judges to serve in the 94 federal judicial districts.

THESE JUDGES WILL serve for 12-year terms, rather than for life, and they will be paid $50,000, a bit under the $54,500 salaries of district judges.

Otherwise, the bankruptcy judges will be living in high cotton. It will be "may it please the court," and "if your honor please." They will have their own courtrooms, their own law clerks, their own secretaries and staffs and libraries.

In former days, they were known as "referees" in bankruptcy. The new law makes their title official. They will have representation on the influential Judicial Conference.

They will be working with newly exalted trustees, named by the attorney general at high salaries in the civil service. The act will cost the taxpayers an estimated $52 million to $63 million a year in added court costs.

THE BANKRUPTCY Reform Act slipped through the House in February; it passed the Senate in September. In both instances, there was little debate and no rollcall vote.

Conferees never did meet formally to reconcile House and Senate differences. A deal was struck verbally, and the bill sailed through in the chaotic closing hours.

Burger has denied "shouting" at DeConcini, but he may have emulated the fellow who took the 2 x 4 to the mule. In any event, it's a good thing Burger spoke up.

We wound up with a very expensive bill, but it's better than it might have been if Burger had kept still.

Conservation Group Says Bobcat Threatened By Exports

WASHINGTON (AP) — The bobcat, North America's most common wildcat, faces a dire threat in a government move to permit unlimited exports of the spotted pelts, a major conservation organization asserts.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service says the bobcat — still nearly one million strong in the United States — gets plenty of protection from state laws.

In a statement released this week, John W. Grandy, Defenders of Wildlife executive vice president, said bobcat populations in some parts of the nation already have declined substantially.

And he added that "the astronomic prices now paid for a prime pelt insure that the beleaguered cat will be pursued by an army of trappers rivaling John Jacob Astor's legions of mountain men."

Astor earned a fortune in the fur market in the late 1700s and early 1800s. His trappers virtually exterminated the beaver in many parts of the United States.

Last year a prime bobcat pelt brought as much as $400, said the Fish and Wildlife Service. Ten years earlier, it added, a bobcat pelt sold for $20.

The Endangered Species Scientific Authority now controls bobcat pelt exports under the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Flora and Fauna. The authority set limits last year on the number of bobcats that could be exported and on the states from which pelts could be taken. And the convention requires the Fish and Wildlife Service to issue an export permit for each pelt.

However, the service has decided to remove the bobcat from the strictures of the convention.

Grandy asked Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus to overturn the decision. An Andrus spokesman said the secretary had no immediate comment.

Grandy said few states limit the number of bobcats that can be killed, but the Fish and Wildlife Service says 38 states limit the taking of bobcats and 12 completely protect the cats. In three states they are classified as varmints which can be killed at any time.

The Fish and Wildlife Service estimates the total number of bobcats in the country at 750,000 to one million animals. Last

Primitive Appeal Of Fireplace Inspires Romance

By ELAINE G. HARROW
Associated Press Writer

The primitive appeal of a blaze in a fireplace can inspire more romance than any other feature of your home.

You gaze into the flickering flames and become almost mesmerized. Whatever tensions you feel seem to vanish in a soothing sense of serenity.

If this is your response, you're not alone. A recent builders' poll showed that among the top four features home buyers look for is a fireplace.

The Bureau of Census reported that fireplaces were built in 68 percent of the new homes constructed in 1975, an 18 percent increase over 1971.

If starting the fire falls to your lot, you don't need a woodsman's merit badge to handle it. It does take technique and practice, but it follows a pattern like a recipe for preparing a special dish.

Choice of wood is a good starting point. Hard woods like oak, maple, birch and hickory burn longer with a minimum of smoke. Soft woods — pine, spruce or fir — burn hot and fast. They are best used as kindling or combined with harder woods.

Well-seasoned woods are rated No. 1 because of their lower moisture content. And here's some forest lore: You can tell seasoned wood by the cracks in the grain. Also, when you clap two logs together, there is a hollow, ringing sound.

Wood is most commonly sold by the cord, a neatly piled stack of logs, but the amount of wood varies. Probably the least confusing approach is to buy it by weight and ask if the price includes delivery and stacking.

Next comes the way you lay the wood in the fireplace. Having a grate is a good idea because it elevates the logs above the firebox floor and permits all-round circulation of air. Keep in mind that the blaze feeds on both wood and air; the mixture is a must for combustion.

Air circulation, then, is a consideration when you position the logs. For the average fireplace, three to four logs that touch — but don't block the flow of air — make a good fire. A log larger than the others, placed at the rear, can serve as a backlog. It is a heat "holder" and helps to radiate the warmth into the room.

Finely splintered kindling can be spread beneath the logs, either inside the grate or beneath.

According to the Fireplace Institute, a trade association, one should always remember to open the chimney damper before lighting the fire. This not only takes smoke away, but increases the draw of air.

A word of caution. Regardless of impatience to get a blaze going in a hurry, never use chemicals or "lighter" fuels. It's not worth the danger of spreading the fire out of control. Also, most of them have a disagreeable odor.

Your choice of screen to prevent sparks from popping into the room depends on how much you want to spend. The lowest-priced type is a rigid mesh screen that is placed standing across the front of the fireplace.

A surer barrier is a more costly one with a frame that is fitted into the fireplace opening. A series of dangling chains block the opening and, because they yield slightly when struck, absorb the momentum of a flying spark, preventing penetration.

A practical point discovered by some homemakers involves the house thermostat which controls the temperature of the house as a whole by turning the heating unit on or off.

A great number of these thermostats are located in the same room as the fireplace, often within 10 feet. Small wonder that when heat is radiating from the fireplace, the thermostat responds by dropping the temperature in the rest of the house.

If you need a rationale for enjoying a fireplace, consider energy conservation. It's a worthy source of supplemental heat. Unlike oil and other fossil fuels, wood is a renewable fuel source. A Federal Energy Administration booklet notes that America has enough surplus fuel woods available to heat 33 million homes all winter.

Report Says Federal Employees Overpaid

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's personnel specialists estimate that 11.5 percent of the federal government's white-collar employees are overpaid, at a net cost to taxpayers of roughly $[illegible] million a year.

And nearly half the problem apparently stems from "management considerations" rather than from honest mistakes.

The personnel specialists' report said "management considerations" include things such as deliberately pressuring personnel officers to give someone a higher rating. Such pressures can be applied to reward a favorite employee improperly or to get around restrictions on pay raises.

The report is the result of a 21-month Civil Service Commission study of the duties performed by a randomly selected sample of 853 federal employees in 21 different agencies.

Although earlier spot checks have yielded similar findings, the new study is the first in which the commission has tried to come up with a statistically valid answer to the question of how many of the government's 1.3 million white-collar employees hold job ratings too high for their responsibilities.

The study was released without fanfare earlier this month and so far has attracted relatively little attention outside the government.

Commission Chairman Alan K. Campbell sent a copy to federal department heads Nov. 8, with a covering bulletin noting that "position misclassification is wasteful and inefficient." He urged corrective measures.

The report was denounced by a union spokesman as an attempt to malign federal workers. Kenneth Blaylock, president of the AFL-CIO's American Federation of Government Employees, said what he characterized as the error rate in classifications was within normal limits. "We suspect that the only reason the commission has brought these distortions before the public is to create the impression that the American taxpayer is being ripped off," he added.

The commission's specialists, after interviewing jobholders and their bosses and reviewing documents associated with the jobs, concluded that 98 of the jobs, or 11.5 percent, were "overgraded." They based their opinions on standard commission rules governing job classifications.

They also found 3.3 percent of employees were "undergraded" and therefore underpaid.

Subtracting the estimated underpayments from the overpayments, the authors said "we estimate that it costs taxpayers about $335.5 million in direct salaries and another $100.6 million in benefits costs."

The authors said the scope of the survey makes them 95 percent sure that between 8.5 percent and 14.5 percent of white-collar jobs are overgraded, with 11.5 percent their "best estimate."

The specialists cited "management considerations" as the reason for 46 percent of the overgradings, and errors in judgment in 23 percent of the cases.

The authors said this finding "is startling" and points to a need for "management training, more precise application of existing controls and better preparation for classifiers."

The study also indicated personnel specialists in the agencies tend to be less critical of grading practices in their own agencies than the Civil Service Commission's specialists.

While the commission combed through its sample, agency specialists examined a separate sample of 882 workers and found roughly half as much mistaken grading: 5.3 percent overgraded and 1.5 percent undergraded.

Campbell urged department heads to pay greater attention to job classifications, and recommended they correct overpaid jobs either by adding duties or by transferring the overpaid workers to jobs that suit their pay and rank.

Attack Plan Calls For Evacuation

NEW YORK (AP) — Where do you put eight million New Yorkers in the face of a nuclear attack — shuffle them off to Buffalo?

The federal government has spent $500,000 and state and federal officials have taken three years trying to come up with a disaster evacuation plan that Mayor Edward Koch says no one consulted him about.

The plan, which is not expected to be completed for another three years, calls for evacuating residents to "host areas" in upstate New York where the threat of nuclear attack would be less likely. No specific areas were named.

Caspar Kasperian of the federal Defense Civil Preparedness Agency, a division of the Defense Department, said the plan assumes there will be up to a two-week warning of the possibility of attack. The estimate is based on the increase in international tensions similar to the Cuban missile crisis in 1962.

When asked if he thought the plan could work, Kasperian said: "We're not talking about anything practical. Practical is not the name of the game. The name of the game is survival."

Koch said Tuesday that while he is "not averse to examining alternatives" should an attack come, he is baffled that he was not consulted.

"I would not want one single dollar spent on a plan until I had the opportunity to review and approve it," he said.

And Lt. Robert Hogan, chief of the Police Department's Office of Civil Preparedness, said he has "serious misgivings" about the plan. He said his office is more concerned with [illegible] such as floods, blackouts or [illegible].

"We don't spend [illegible] worrying about what will happen if the bomb drops out of the sky," he said.

Dress Code Allows Girl To Go Braless

PORTAGE, Mich. (AP) — A 14-year-old girl who was sent home from school twice because she wasn't wearing a bra has won a victory of sorts. Superintendent George [illegible] told principals in this Kalamazoo [illegible] Tuesday not to ask female pupils if they were wearing bras.

Carrie Koch was sent home from Portage Central [illegible] on orders of Principal Michael Pyles, who acted under a district dress code banning clothing considered distracting to the process of education." But Koch said Tuesday that he never intended to regulate the wearing of bras. His only policy was intended to free school officials from discussing this or questions about the subject.

Financially Troubled Railroad To Receive Association Loan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Over objections of the Transportation Department, the executive committee of the United States Railroad Association voted this week to loan the financially troubled Delaware & Hudson Railroad an additional $2.7 million.

That will raise to $90 million the total loans USRA has made to the railroad since Congress authorized that amount in 1975. The additional money will be spread out over several months, with $750,000 allotted in November, primarily to meet payrolls.

After the final $2.7 million is allocated, the D&H probably will have to declare bankruptcy.

Transportation Secretary Brock Adams urged the executive committee Tuesday not to advance any more money and to allow the railroad to go into bankruptcy as soon as possible.

In a letter to USRA Chairman William K. Smith, Adams said that once bankruptcy has been declared, his department could provide reorganization assistance under the Emergency Rail Services Act.

"Federal funds should not be used to avoid the reorganization of a private company unable to sustain itself," Adams wrote. "The reorganization proceeding is likely to provide for a more rapid restructuring of D&H and therefore a quicker end to federal assistance."

But the committee voted 2-1 to approve the additional loan. Voting yes were Smith and Daniel O'Neal, chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Opposed was Alan Butchman, who is Adams' deputy at DOT.

Smith said the intent of the law passed by Congress was that USRA should use all the funds it had available to assist the carrier and keep it out of bankruptcy as

Retiree Runs Own Community Train

By PAT LEISNER

HOLIDAY, Fla. (AP) — A whistle pierces the quiet of a small retirement community. Then, out from between an oleander bush and a grapefruit tree, rumbles Ralph Barker aboard his six-car train.

Barker, who has more than 600 feet of double track in his yard, guides the locomotive past the fruit trees, the palms, the Florida honeysuckle, across his cement driveway, around a neighborhood water tank, under a clothesline and past a birdhouse in this small Florida Gulf Coast community near Tarpon Springs.

The 70-year-old retired millwright from Buchanan, Mich., built the Ralph and Verti Railroad himself. It took him four years and $14,000.

He has two trains: two engines, two cabooses, four gondolas, two flat cars and a crane car. One train is powered by a meticulously detailed steam engine — a replica of a 4-4-2, turn-of-the-century locomotive, which has four small wheels in the leading truck, four main wheels and two wheels in the trailing truck. The other engine is a replica of a diesel locomotive, run by a lawnmower motor.

He turned his garage into a workshop and his carport into a railroad repair yard. He built the gravel roadbed, the rails of hard aluminum, the switches and coupling devices, the wheels, the crossing signs and the markers that show which track is clear.

Out of plywood and aluminum he crafted the 2-foot-high cars on a scale of 1 1/2-inch per foot, spending as much as 16 hours a day on his hobby.

He took a stove pipe and hooked it to an old vacuum cleaner to get the steam engine chugging — a pcess that takes about 45 minutes to build up pressure to the 125 pounds per square inch needed to roll. On 14 gallons of water, Baker can ride for two hours using lava rock to keep the engine puffing.

Air Force Sergeant Boasts Extensive Card Collection

ZARAGOZA AIR BASE, Spain (AP) — Who knows that Marv Throneberry hit 16 home runs in '62 for the Mets, or that Chuck Essengine pinch-hit two home runs in the '59 World Series for the Dodgers?

Who cares?

A man who works at the dental clinic at Zaragoza Air Base in northern Spain cares. He's Sgt. Frank Donati, 25, of Manville, N.J., and he's a baseball-card collector.

"I got started young," he says. "Every day, on the way home from school, I took my dime allowance and bought two packs of gum. I saved the cards inside and gave the gum to my sister.

"Then, when I had ended up with five Mickey Mantles, I would trade them for a Dick Groat or Ted Williams — or someone else that was hard to find. It took me most of the baseball season to get Dick Groat in 1964. I ended up trading 10 Yankees and about 14 other players before I finally got him."

But disaster befell the young baseball card collector, he recalled.

"By 1968, I had about 40,000 baseball cards saved up — give or take a thousand. My grandmother used to come down to New Jersey to help us spring clean. I was at school, a sophomore in high school — and she decided I was too old to be collecting baseball cards.

"She threw them out. At 15, this was the saddest moment of my young life. It was just as the 1968 sets were coming out, too."

It was someone else's grandmother who gave him his second start.

"I was at a flea market in 1974 and another grandmother had discarded a box of 5,000 baseball cards that ended up there," he relates. ' was looking through them, got interested, and bought them for $25."

Donati's collection is back up to 50,000 cards and "I trade about $500 worth of cards each year, and I spent about $900 last year on this hobby. You can really get carried away."

Being in Spain, he adds, makes trading difficult, but Donati does a lot of business through hobby magazines. And he stays abreast of the latest sets out, as well as with the vintage-card market.

"For example, a 1910 Philadelphia A's Eddie Plank goes for about $800 nowadays. They broke the printing plate when running them off and quit printing rather than make another plate," says Donati, whose own most expensive card is a 1954 Ted Williams he says is worth $125.

"In 1974, it was rumored that the San Diego Padres would be moving to Washington, D.C. A company printed them up as the Washington Nationals. I've got that set plus the correct set that came out later. The Padres are still in San Diego.

"In 1910, the T-206 set had Honus Wagner included in a cigarette pack set. He ordered his cards pulled out because he didn't want kids thinking they should use tobacco. There are only 14 known cards today."

Carter Gets Funds Plan For Missile

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Defense Department has sent the White House a proposed $190 million appropriation to speed development of a new strategic missile that could be fired either from submarines or from mobile land bases, sources say.

President Carter will make a final decision on the proposal before submitting it to Congress in January as part of a $2.2 billion supplementary appropriations bill that would replace those funds saved by the president's veto of a $2 billion nuclear aircraft carrier.

The sources said Wednesday about $500 million of the $2.2 billion would be earmarked for nuclear weapons — most of which are strategic but also including some tactical nuclear weapons.

In addition to development of a sea-land missile, they said, the request will include more money for the air-launched cruise missile program and extra Navy ships.

Tentative funding levels in the bill have been approved by Defense Secretary Harold Brown, the sources said. Carter still must give final approval but is not expected to make major changes in the combination undersea-land missile plan.

Total costs of the combination missile are now projected at about $25 billion for a landbased system of around 250 rockets and $10 billion for submarine weapons.

The Pentagon wants to move ahead on development of the missile so that it can be ready by 1986.

But the administration has postponed, for up to a year, a decision on controversial basing methods that have generated environmentalists' opposition and also raised questions as to whether they would be safe from attack.

One prospective mobile land-basing method is the so-called "shell game" plan that would shuttle missiles among thousands of holes in the ground and use decoys to fool Soviet targeters. Another would move missiles on tracks in underground tunnels.

As a result of opposition, the administration is now considering another plan to shuttle the land-based missile among potential launch sites above ground in giant airplanes.

The sea-based version of the missiles would share many common parts with the landbased ICBM.

Geese Stand Guard At Man's Nursery

By JULES [illegible]

BRICK TOWN, N.J. (AP) — Dare to swipe a stub from Vincent Dvorak, broker, and your goose is cooked. If you don't believe it, take a gander at what he's got guarding his nursery.

Geese.

"I can tell you this," Dvorak said, "they have put a stop to the pilfering and vandalism."

Why not? If honking geese could save Rome from marauding Gauls creeping in at night they ought to be able to protect a mere nursery, but Dvorak said that wasn't what gave him the idea.

"A wine merchant told my grandfather, who is in the liquor business, that some of the wineries in upstate New York use geese to watch over their premises," Dvorak said. "My father and I decided to give it a try. Nothing else seemed to work.

"We have 2 acres here. As you can see, except for the fence out front, it's wide open.

"For several years we had trouble with people stealing supplies from the back — bales of peat moss, topsoil, even shrubs. There was nothing to stop them.

"We tried dogs. We had a succession of German shepherds, three or four at different times. They weren't at all satisfactory.

"The dog had to be chained, of course, and were effective only the length of the chain. Also, we were afraid they might really hurt somebody. Watchdogs are not pets. Besides, dogs are messy and require a good deal of care.

"Geese turned out to be the perfect answer.

"They roam around the place, summer and winter, and need no shelter. They have their down jackets, you see. All they need is a little corn and a kiddie pool to splash around in. And they do the job."

My, yes. They do the job, all right, and anyone who has been the direct object of a wild goose chase can understand why.

Slip up unexpectedly on those eight rascals and the whole nursery, it seems, explodes in the wildest flapping and honking and hissing you ever beheld, truly frightening, all eight of the blamed things coming at you at once with fire in their eyes.

That racket, in turn, sets the guinea hens to shrieking and the Rhode Island Reds to cackling and the Polish roosters to crowing, all of which mightily disturbs Remus, the black billygoat, who goes bucking around his pen butting errant chickens and acting crazy.

Oh, no, geese are not the only critters at Dvorak's nursery, but all the others are there for fun. The watch geese mean business.

"We started with a pair of African geese," Dvorak said. "Those are the ones with the black bills and brown breasts. They weigh about 50 pounds and have a wingspread of about five feet.

"The white and brown ones are Chinese geese. The all-white ones are plain old domestic geese. None of them fly, although they can glide low over the ground and cover a considerable distance in a hurry.

"When my father went on vacation he left three of them, the African geese, to watch his house. Nobody bothered it.

Police Arrest Suspects In Field Near Tahoka

Two burglary suspects were arrested about 1:30 a.m. today in a cotton field near Tahoka after Lubbock police, who had been in high-speed pursuit of the men since spotting them on 82nd Street in Lubbock, shot at the suspects' car.

During the chase, police fired at the car, one patrol car was forced off the road and the suspects allegedly threw stolen stereo equipment out of their vehicle while being pursued at speeds reaching 100 mph.

The Lubbock men, ages 19 and 20, were being held today in the county jail on suspicion of burglarizing the Radio Shack at 8203 Indiana Ave. shortly before 1 a.m. today and making off with more than $2,000 in merchandise.

Reports show that soon after police received the burglary call, Sgt. James Fielding spotted the suspects' automobile going eastbound on 82nd Street near the Tahoka Traffic Circle.

Fielding said the men would not stop their car and ran a blockade set up by another policeman.

The chase continued on U.S. Highway 87 where Fielding said the suspects tried to run him off the road. The officer said that after he fired at the speeding vehicle, one of the suspects began throwing stereo equipment out of the car.

Joining in the chase were Sgt. James McCauley and officer Troy Coon, who reportedly was forced off the road after shooting at the men's vehicle.

The suspects' car left the highway about 6 miles north of Tahoka and ended up in the middle of a cotton field, according to reports. The men attempted to flee on foot, but were caught by the three officers and transported back to the Lubbock County Jail.

In an earlier arrest made Wednesday, a 35-year-old Lubbock motorist was taken into custody about 8:15 p.m. after he allegedly struck a pedestrian and then drove off.

The man, who was arrested at Fourth Street and Avenue G, admitted hitting the woman at Fourth and Avenue Q but said he looked back and presumed she was all right after seeing her get up and walk to a curb, reports show.

The victim, Shirley King, 32, of 1810 Third St., No. 206, was taken to West Texas Hospital, where she was admitted for observation.

In one of several burglaries, Bobby Garza of 2614 First St. said he was gone between 5:30 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. Wednesday when his house was burglarized and $800 in stereo equipment and jewelry stolen.

Charles Stilwell, owner of Stilwell's of Lubbock at 1116 Broadway, said it was discovered about 10:15 p.m. Wednesday that someone had entered his business and taken about $900 in clothing.

An ill-conceived plot to bilk a blind man out of $5 failed Wednesday morning when a bystander broke up the attempt and captured one of the teen-agers involved.

Billy Pullin, 56, of 3318 33rd Street, said two teen-aged boys approached the small concession stand he operates in the lobby of the U.S. Post Office at 1515 Ave. G about 10 a.m. Wednesday and tried to pass off a blank piece of paper they said was a $5 bill. About that time, according to police reports, an unidentified man noticed what was going on and grabbed one of the youths.

The man held the youth until police arrived, and the second boy was picked up several minutes later in the 1700 block of Ave. E. Both were turned over to the Lubbock Police Department's Juvenile Division.

Shortly after that incident, a man claiming to be Jesus Christ climbed onto a second-story ledge of the Mission Development Center at 1310 Texas Ave. and threatened to jump.

The 28-year-old Lubbock man, who had been receiving treatment at the center, broke out a window and climbed onto the ledge after something disturbed him, said Police Det. Edward Hernandez.

Hernandez said he and police officers Larry Jenkins and John Wiseman talked with the man for about 15 minutes before wrestling him from the ledge. The man was taken to Methodist Hospital for treatment.

Edgar Haichell said someone pried open a door of his 705 Ave. R residence sometime Tuesday night and made off with his TV set and a cable TV converter. He said his loss was approximately $385.

Some tools, a briefcase, some calculators and other miscellaneous items were taken from a car parked at Smuggler's Inn, 1919 50th St., between 7 and 8:30 p.m. Tuesday, said police. The car, which belongs to Andy Mungenast of Midland, did not show signs of forced entry, police said.

James Keaton said someone jacked up his car and took a wheel and a tire, worth $125, sometime early Wednesday morning. The car was parked in front of Keaton's residence at 4421 82nd St. at the time of the incident.

Consultant Recommends Japanese Philosophy

CINCINNATI (AP) — American executives should import the Japanese management philosophy to motivate their employees, suggests a management consultant.

"Traditionally, U.S. managers pass ideas down to the workers and then wonder why the workers aren't motivated," said J. Edwin Whitlow, a lecturer for Dale Carnegie courses seminars for upper level management officials.

"In Japan, a decision that affects all goes to the bottom. All work on it on its way back up."

Japanese workers might even be allowed to work on the question of merging with another firm, he said. Such questions as where to locate a company-owned vacation retreat are decided by all members of a company.

"Most Americans don't know their business well enough to discuss such things," Whitlow said.

American companies, he said, would do better to soliciting ideas of employees and regarding them as important, he said.

"I travel all over the county and ask employees how many workers are motivated. They usually say between 35 and 55 percent. A Department of Health, Education and Welfare survey finds most workers just work for their paychecks," said Whitlow who was conducting a series of seminars with business executives this week.

Although there are cultural differences, he argued that experiences of Americans working for Japanese-owned U.S. companies prove the management technique can be transplated.

In Japan, he said, workers benefit from of a society in which workers seek their identity through groups rather than as individuals, as is the case in the United States. But the problem, Whitlow said, was with the manager and not the worker.

The Japanese system of management appears to work well with Americans too, Whitlow concluded.

"We're finding Americans like working for Japanese businesses that locate in the United States," he said.

"Managers can get good ideas from the workers who are on the line," he said.

Russian Men Speaking Here

Two Russian ministers, Alexei Bichkov and Michael Y. Zhidkov, are to speak at a luncheon beginning at 11:30 a.m. Friday at Goodner's Steakhouse, 4434 50th St. The ministers are speaking to Lubbock-area church leaders about their experiences in their native land as Christians.

Bichkov is general secretary of the All Union Council of Evangelical Christians-Baptist in the USSR. He also is president of the European Baptist Federation, a fellowship of Baptist groups throughout Europe.

Born in 1928 to a Baptist family near Moscow, he was converted to Christianity in 1949 and was baptized in 1954 at the Moscow Baptist Church.

Bichkov began preaching in the Moscow church in 1967 and was ordained to the ministry in 1970. He has worked as a teacher of Bible classes sponsored by the All Union Council, represented Russian Baptists at international Christian conferences and has been a member of the General Council of the Baptist World Alliance since 1970.

He was born in 1928 in Leningrad, the son of Yakov I. Zhidkov, a well-known Baptist leader and was converted at the Moscow church in 1943. He has been a full-time Christian worker since 1957, and was ordained to the pastoral ministry in 1965. His theological training is from Spurgeon's College in England and MacMaster's University in Canada.

Retiree Runs Own Community Train

By PAT LESSNER

HOLIDAY, Fla. (AP) — A whistle pierces the quiet of a small retirement community. Then, out from between an oleander bush and a grapefruit tree, rumbles Ralph Barker aboard his six-car train.

Barker, who has more than 600 feet of double track in his yard, guides the locomotive past the fruit trees, the palms, the Florida honeysuckle, across his cement driveway, around a neighborhood water tank, under a clothesline and past a birdhouse in this small Florida Gulf Coast community near Tarpon Springs.

The 70-year-old retired millwright from Buchanan, Mich., built the Ralph and Verti Railroad himself. It took him four years and $14,000.

He has two trains: two engines, two cabooses, four gondolas, two flat cars and a crane car. One train is powered by a meticulously detailed steam engine — a replica of a 4-4-2, turn-of-the-century locomotive, which has four small wheels in the leading truck, four main wheels and two wheels in the trailing truck. The other engine is a replica of a diesel locomotive, run by a lawnmower motor.

He turned his garage into a workshop and his carport into a railroad repair yard. He built the gravel roadbed, the rails of hard aluminum, the switches and coupling devices, the wheels, the crossing signs and the markers that show which track is clear.

Out of plywood and aluminum he crafted the 2-foot-high cars on a scale of 1 1/2-inch per foot, spending as much as 16 hours a day on his hobby.

He took a stove pipe and hooked it to an old vacuum cleaner to get the steam engine chugging — a pcess that takes about 45 minutes to build up pressure to the 125 pounds per square inch needed to roll. On 14 gallons of water, Baker can ride for two hours using lava rock to keep the engine puffing.

Air Force Sergeant Boasts Extensive Card Collection

ZARAGOZA AIR BASE, Spain (AP) — Who knows that Marv Throneberry hit 16 home runs in '62 for the Mets, or that Chuck Essegine pinch-hit two home runs in the '59 World Series for the Dodgers?

Who cares?

A man who works at the dental clinic at Zaragoza Air Base in northern Spain cares. He's Sgt. Frank Donati, 25, of Manville, N.J., and he's a baseball-card collector.

"I got started young," he says. "Every day, on the way home from school, I took my dime allowance and bought two packs of gum. I saved the cards inside and gave the gum to my sister.

"Then, when I had ended up with five Mickey Mantles, I would trade them for a Dick Groat or Ted Williams — or someone else that was hard to find. It took me most of the baseball season to get Dick Groat in 1964. I ended up trading 10 Yankees and about 14 other players before I finally got him."

But disaster befell the young baseball card collector, he recalled.

"By 1968, I had about 40,000 baseball cards saved up — give or take a thousand. My grandmother used to come down to New Jersey to help us spring clean. I was at school, a sophomore in high school — and she decided I was too old to be collecting baseball cards.

"She threw them out. At 15, this was the saddest moment of my young life. It was just as the 1968 sets were coming out, too."

It was someone else's grandmother who gave him his second start.

"I was at a flea market in 1974 and an other grandmother had discarded a box of 5,000 baseball cards that ended up there," he relates. ' was looking through them, got interested, and bought them for $25."

Donati's collection is back up to 50,000 cards and "I trade about $500 worth of cards each year, and I spent about $900 last year on this hobby. You can really get carried away."

Being in Spain, he adds, makes trading difficult, but Donati does a lot of business through hobby magazines. And he stays abreast of the latest sets out, as well as with the vintage-card market.

"For example, a 1910 Philadelphia A's Eddie Plank goes for about $800 nowadays. They broke the printing plate when running them off and quit printing rather than make another plate," says Donati, whose own most expensive card is a 1954 Ted Williams he says is worth $125.

"In 1974, it was rumored that the San Diego Padres would be moving to Washington, D.C. A company printed them up as the Washington Nationals. I've got that set plus the correct set that came out later. The Padres are still in San Diego.

"In 1910, the T-206 set had Honus Wagner included in a cigarette pack set. He ordered his cards pulled out because he didn't want kids thinking they should use tobacco. There are only 14 known cards today."

Carter Gets Funds Plan For Missile

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Defense Department has sent the White House a proposed $150 million appropriation to speed development of a new strategic missile that could be fired either from submarines or from mobile land bases, sources say.

President Carter will make a final decision on the proposal before submitting it to Congress in January as part of a $2.2 billion supplementary appropriations bill that would replace those funds saved by the president's veto of a $2 billion nuclear aircraft carrier.

The sources said Wednesday about $500 million of the $2.2 billion would be earmarked for nuclear weapons — most of which are strategic but also including some tactical nuclear weapons.

In addition to development of a sea-land missile, they said, the request will include more money for the air-launched cruise missile program and extra Navy ships.

Tentative funding levels in the bill have been approved by Defense Secretary Harold Brown, the sources said. Carter still must give final approval but is not expected to make major changes in the combination undersea-land missile plan.

Total costs of the combination missile are now projected at about $25 billion for a landbased system of around 250 rockets and $10 billion for

Police Arrest Suspects In Field Near Tahoka

Two burglary suspects were arrested about 1:30 a.m. today in a cotton field near Tahoka after Lubbock police, who had been in high-speed pursuit of the men since spotting them on 82nd Street in Lubbock, shot at the suspects' car.

During the chase, police fired at the car, one patrol car was forced off the road and the suspects allegedly threw stolen stereo equipment out of their vehicle while being pursued at speeds reaching 100 mph.

The Lubbock men, ages 19 and 20, were being held today in the county jail on suspicion of burglarizing the Radio Shack at 3203 Indiana Ave. shortly before 1 a.m. today and making off with more than $2,000 in merchandise.

Reports show that soon after police received the burglary call, Sgt. James Fielding spotted the suspects' automobile going eastbound on 82nd Street near the Tahoka Traffic Circle.

Fielding said the men would not stop their car and ran a blockade set up by another policeman.

The chase continued on U.S. Highway 87 where Fielding said the suspects tried to run him off the road. The officer said that after he fired at the speeding vehicle, one of the suspects began throwing stereo equipment out of the car.

Joining in the chase were Sgt. James McCauley and officer Troy Coon, who reportedly was forced off the road after shooting at the men's vehicle.

The suspects' car left the highway about 6 miles north of Tahoka and ended up in the middle of a cotton field, according to reports. The men attempted to flee on foot, but were caught by the three officers and transported back to the Lubbock County Jail.

In an earlier arrest made Wednesday, a 35-year-old Lubbock motorist was taken into custody about 8:15 p.m. after he allegedly struck a pedestrian and then drove off.

The man, who was arrested at Fourth Street and Avenue G, admitted hitting the woman at Fourth and Avenue Q but said he looked back and presumed she was all right after seeing her get up and walk to a curb, reports show.

The victim, Shirley King, 32, of 1810 Third St., No. 206, was taken to West Texas Hospital, where she was admitted for observation.

In one of several burglaries, Bobby Garza of 2614 First St. said he was gone between 5:30 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. Wednesday when his house was burglarized and $300 in stereo equipment and jewelry stolen.

Charles Stilwell, owner of Stilwell's of Lubbock at 1116 Broadway, said it was discovered about 10:15 p.m. Wednesday that someone had entered his business and taken about $900 in clothing.

An ill-conceived plot to bilk a blind man out of $5 failed Wednesday morning when a bystander broke up the attempt and captured one of the teen-agers involved.

Billy Pullin, 56, of 3318 33rd Street, said two teen-aged boys approached the small concession stand he operates in the lobby of the U.S. Post Office at 1515 Ave. G about 10 a.m. Wednesday and tried to pass off a blank piece of paper they said was a $5 bill. About that time, according to police reports, an unidentified man noticed what was going on and grabbed one of the youths.

The man held the youth until police arrived, and the second boy was picked up several minutes later in the 1700 block of Ave. E. Both were turned over to the Lubbock Police Department's Juvenile Division.

Shortly after that incident, a man claiming to be Jesus Christ showed up a second time at the Mahon Hotel, operated by Carmen at 1009 Texas Ave. and threatened to jump.

The 28-year-old Lubbock man, who had been treated yesterday at the county jail for a wound and charged with the holdup after receiving first-aid, said Police Det. Edward Harrington.

Harrington said he and police officers Larry Jackson and Jesse Martinez argued with the man for about 15 minutes before wrestling him from the ledge. The man was taken to Methodist Hospital for treatment.

Edgar Halsell said someone pried open a door of his 70X Ave. K residence sometime Tuesday night and made off with his TV set and a cable TV converter. He said his loss was approximately $300.

Some tools, a briefcase, some calculators and other miscellaneous items were taken from a car parked at Smuggler's Inn, 1919 50th St., between 7 and 8:30 p.m. Tuesday, said police. The car, which belongs to Andy Mangrum of Midland, did not show signs of forced entry, police said.

James Keaton said someone jacked up his car and took a wheel and a tire, worth $125, sometime early Wednesday morning. The car was parked in front of Keaton's residence at 4021 42nd St. at the time of the incident.

Consultant Recommends Japanese Philosophy

CINCINNATI (AP) — American executives should import the Japanese management philosophy to motivate their employees, suggests a management consultant.

"Traditionally, U.S. managers pass ideas down to the workers and then wonder why the workers aren't motivated," said J. Edwin Whitlow, a lecturer for Dale Carnegie courses seminars for upper level management officials.

"In Japan, a decision that affects all goes to the bottom. All work on it on its way back up."

Japanese workers might even be allowed to work on the question of merging with another firm, he said. Such questions as where to locate a company-owned vacation retreat are decided by all members of a company.

"Most Americans don't know their business well enough to discuss such things," Whitlow said.

American companies, he said, would do better to soliciting ideas of employees and regarding them as important, he said.

"I travel all over the county and ask employees how many workers are motivated. They usually say between 25 and 35 percent. A Department of Health, Education and Welfare survey finds most workers just work for their paychecks," said Whitlow who was conducting a series of seminars with business executives this week.

Although there are cultural differences, he argued that experiences of Americans working for Japanese-owned U.S. companies prove the management technique can be transplated.

In Japan, he said, workers benefit from of a society in which workers seek their identity through groups rather than as individuals, as is the case in the United States. But the problem, Whitlow said, was with the manager and not the worker.

The Japanese system of management appears to work well with Americans too, Whitlow concluded.

"We're finding Americans like working for Japanese businesses that locate in the United States," he said.

"Managers can get good ideas from the workers who are on the line," he said.

summer and winter, and need no shelter. They have their down jackets, you see. All they need is a little corn and a kiddie pool to splash around in. And they do the job."

My, yes. They do the job, all right, and anyone who has been the direct object of a wild goose chase can understand why.

Slip up unexpectedly on those eight rascals and the whole nursery, it seems, explodes in the wildest flapping and honking and hissing you ever beheld, truly frightening, all eight of the blamed things coming at you at once with fire in their eyes.

That racket, in turn, sets the guinea hens to shrieking and the Rhode Island Reds to cackling and the Polish roosters to crowing, all of which mightily disturbs Remus, the black billygoat, who goes bucking around his pen butting errant chickens and acting crazy.

Oh, no, geese are not the only critters at Dvorak's nursery, but all the others are there for fun. The watch geese mean business.

"We started with a pair of African geese," Dvorak said. "Those are the ones with the black bills and brown breasts. They weigh about 50 pounds and have a wingspread of about five feet.

"The white and brown ones are Chinese geese. The all-white ones are plain old domestic geese. None of them fly, although they can glide low over the ground and cover a considerable distance in a hurry.

"When my father went on vacation he left three of them, the African geese, to watch his house. Nobody bothered it.

HOLIDAY, Fla. (AP) — A whistle pierces the quiet of a small retirement community. Then, out from between an oleander bush and a grapefruit tree, rumbles Ralph Barker aboard his six-car train.

Barker, who has more than 600 feet of double track in his yard, guides the locomotive past the fruit trees, the palms, the Florida honeysuckle, across his cement driveway, around a neighborhood water tank, under a clothesline and past a birdhouse in this small Florida Gulf Coast community near Tarpon Springs.

The 70-year-old retired millwright from Buchanan, Mich., built the Ralph and Verti Railroad himself. It took him four years and $14,000.

He has two trains: two engines, two cabooses, four gondolas, two flat cars and a crane car. One train is powered by a meticulously detailed steam engine — a replica of a 4-4-2, turn-of-the-century locomotive, which has four small wheels in the leading truck, four main wheels and two wheels in the trailing truck. The other engine is a replica of a diesel locomotive, run by a lawnmower motor.

He turned his garage into a workshop and his carport into a railroad repair yard. He built the gravel roadbed, the rails of hard aluminum, the switches and coupling devices, the wheels, the crossing signs and the markers that show which track is clear.

Out of plywood and aluminum he crafted the 2-foot-high cars on a scale of 1 1/2-inch per foot, spending as much as 16 hours a day on his hobby.

He took a stove pipe and hooked it to an old vacuum cleaner to get the steam engine chugging — a pcess that takes about 45 minutes to build up pressure to the 125 pounds per square inch needed to roll. On 14 gallons of water, Baker can ride for two hours using lava rock to keep the engine puffing.

Carter Gets Funds Plan For Missile

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Defense Department has sent the White House a proposed $190 million appropriation to speed development of a new strategic missile that could be fired either from submarines or from mobile land bases, sources say.

President Carter will make a final decision on the proposal before submitting it to Congress in January as part of a $2.2 billion supplementary appropriations bill that would replace those funds saved by the president's veto of a $2 billion nuclear aircraft carrier.

The sources said Wednesday about $500 million of the $2.2 billion would be earmarked for nuclear weapons — most of which are strategic but also including some tactical nuclear weapons.

In addition to development of a sea-land missile, they said, the request will include more money for the air-launched cruise missile program and extra Navy ships.

Tentative funding levels in the bill have been approved by Defense Secretary Harold Brown, the sources said. Carter still must give final approval but is not expected to make major changes in the combination undersea-land missile plan.

Total costs of the combination missile are now projected at about $25 billion for a landbased system of around 250 rockets and $10 billion for submarine weapons.

The Pentagon wants to move ahead on development of the missile so that it can be ready by 1986.

But the administration has postponed, for up to a year, a decision on controversial basing methods that have generated environmentalists' opposition and also raised questions as to whether they would be safe from attack.

One prospective mobile land-basing method is the so-called "shell game" plan that would shuttle missiles among thousands of holes in the ground and use decoys to fool Soviet targeters. Another would move missiles on tracks in underground tunnels.

As a result of opposition, the administration is now considering another plan to shuttle the land-based missile among potential launch sites above ground in giant airplanes.

The sea-based version of the missiles would share many common parts with the landbased ICBM.

Geese Stand Guard At Man's Nursery

By JULES LOH

BRICK TOWN, N.J. (AP) — Dare to swipe a shrub from Vincent Dvorak, brother, and your goose is cooked. If you don't believe it, take a gander at what he's got guarding his nursery.

Geese.

"I can tell you this," Dvorak said, "they have put a stop to the pilfering and vandalism."

Why not? If honking geese could save Rome from marauding Gauls creeping in at night they ought to be able to protect a mere nursery, but Dvorak said that wasn't what gave him the idea.

"A wine merchant told my grandfather, who is in the liquor business, that some of the wineries in upstate New York use geese to watch over their premises," Dvorak said. "My father and I decided to give it a try. Nothing else seemed to work.

"We have six acres here. As you can see, except for the fence out front, it's wideopen.

"For several years we had trouble with people stealing supplies from the back — bales of peat moss, topsoil, even shrubs. There was nothing to stop them.

"We tried dogs. We had a succession of German shepherds, three or four at different times. They weren't at all satisfactory.

"The dogs had to be chained, of course, and were effective only the length of the chain. Also, we were afraid they might really hurt somebody. Watchdogs are not pets. Besides, dogs are messy and require a good deal of care.

"Geese turned out to be the perfect answer.

"They roam around the place, summer and winter, and need no shelter. They have their down jackets, you see. All they need is a little corn and a kiddie pool to splash around in. And they do the job."

My, yes. They do the job, all right, and anyone who has been the direct object of a wild goose chase can understand why.

Slip up unexpectedly on those eight rascals and the whole nursery, it seems, explodes in the wildest flapping and honking and hissing you ever beheld, truly frightening, all eight of the blamed things coming at you at once with fire in their eyes.

That racket, in turn, sets the guinea hens to shrieking and the Rhode Island Reds to cackling and the Polish roosters to crowing, all of which mightily disturbs Remus, the black billygoat, who goes bucking around his pen butting errant chickens and acting crazy.

Oh, no, geese are not the only critters at Dvorak's nursery, but all the others are there for fun. The watch geese mean business.

"We started with a pair of African geese," Dvorak said. "Those are the ones with the black bills and brown breasts. They weigh about 50 pounds and have a wingspread of about five feet.

"The white and brown ones are Chinese geese. The all-white ones are plain old domestic geese. None of them fly, although they can glide low over the ground and cover a considerable distance in a hurry.

"When my father went on vacation he left three of them, the African geese, to watch his house. Nobody bothered it.

Russian Men Speaking Here

Two Russian ministers, Alexei Bichkov and Michael Y. Zhidkov, are to speak at a luncheon beginning at 11:30 a.m. Friday at Goodner's Steakhouse, 4434 50th St. The ministers are speaking to Lubbock-area church leaders about their experiences in their native land as Christians.

Bichkov is general secretary of the All Union Council of Evangelical Christians-Baptist in the USSR. He also is president of the European Baptist Federation, a fellowship of Baptist groups throughout Europe.

Born in 1928 to a Baptist family near Moscow, he was converted to Christianity in 1949 and was baptized in 1954 at the Moscow Baptist Church.

Bichkov began preaching in the Moscow church in 1967 and was ordained to the ministry in 1970. He has worked as a teacher of Bible classes sponsored by the All Union Council, represented Russian Baptists at international Christian conferences and has been a member of the General Council of the Baptist World Alliance since 1970.

He was born in 1928 in Leningrad, the son of Yakov I. Zhidkov, a well-known Baptist leader and was converted at the Moscow church in 1943. He has been a full-time Christian worker since 1957, and was ordained to the pastoral ministry in 1965. His theological training is from Spurgeon's College in England and MacMaster's University in Canada.

VET ALCOHOLISM PROGRAMS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Veterans Administration has announced establishment of 15 new medical programs for treating veterans with alcohol problems. Dr. Stewart Baker, national director of the VA's substance abuse programs, said the new treatment centers bring to 93 the number of locations where specialized VA help is available.

Police Arrest Suspects In Field Near Tahoka

Two burglary suspects were arrested about 1:30 a.m. today in a cotton field near Tahoka after Lubbock police, who had been in high-speed pursuit of the men since spotting them on 82nd Street in Lubbock, shot at the suspects' car.

During the chase, police fired at the car, one patrol car was forced off the road and the suspects allegedly threw stolen stereo equipment out of their vehicle while being pursued at speeds reaching 100 mph.

The Lubbock men, ages 19 and 20, were being held today in the county jail on suspicion of burglarizing the Radio Shack at 8203 Indiana Ave. shortly before 1 a.m. today and making off with more than $2,000 in merchandise.

Reports show that soon after police received the burglary call, Sgt. James Fielding spotted the suspects' automobile going eastbound on 82nd Street near the Tahoka Traffic Circle.

Fielding said the men would not stop their car and ran a blockade set up by another policeman.

The chase continued on U.S. Highway 87 where Fielding said the suspects tried to run him off the road. The officer said that after he fired at the speeding vehicle, one of the suspects began throwing stereo equipment out of the car.

Joining in the chase were Sgt. James McCauley and officer Troy Coon, who reportedly was forced off the road after shooting at the men's vehicle.

The suspects' car left the highway about 6 miles north of Tahoka and ended up in the middle of a cotton field, according to reports. The men attempted to flee on foot, but were caught by the three officers and transported back to the Lubbock County Jail.

In an earlier arrest made Wednesday, a 35-year-old Lubbock motorist was taken into custody about 8:15 p.m. after he allegedly struck a pedestrian and then drove off.

The man, who was arrested at Fourth Street and Avenue G, admitted hitting the woman at Fourth and Avenue Q but said he looked back and presumed she was all right after seeing her get up and walk to a curb, reports show.

The victim, Shirley King, 32, of 1810 Third St., No. 206, was taken to West Texas Hospital, where she was admitted for observation.

In one of several burglaries, Bobby Garza of 2614 Flint St. said he was gone between 5:30 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. Wednesday when his house was burglarized and $800 in stereo equipment and jewelry stolen.

Charles Stilwell, owner of Stilwell's of Lubbock at 1116 Broadway, said it was discovered about 10:15 p.m. Wednesday that someone had entered his business and taken about $600 in clothing.

An ill-conceived plot to talk a blind man out of $5 failed Wednesday morning when a bystander broke up the attempt and captured one of the teen-agers involved.

Billy Pullin, 56, of 3318 23rd Street, said two teen-aged boys approached the small concession stand he operates in the lobby of the U.S. Post Office at 1515 Ave. G about 10 a.m. Wednesday and tried to pass off a blank piece of paper they said was a $5 bill. About that time, according to police reports, an unidentified man noticed what was going on and grabbed one of the youths.

The man held the youth until police arrived, and the second boy was picked up several minutes later in the 1700 block of Ave. E. Both were turned over to the Lubbock Police Department's Juvenile Division.

Shortly after that incident, a man claiming to be Jesus Christ showed into a second-floor office of the Mission Hope operated Center at 2109 Texas Ave. and threatened to jump.

The 24-year-old Lubbock man, who had been [illegible] at the center, broke out a window and climbed onto the ledge after [illegible] Chappell said Police Det. Edward Hernandez.

Hernandez said he and police officers Larry Jenkins and Jerry Thomas talked with the man for about 15 minutes before wrestling him from the ledge. The man was taken to Methodist Hospital for treatment.

Edgar Hatchell said someone pried open a door of his 708 Ave. R residence sometime Tuesday night and made off with his TV set and a cable TV converter. He said his loss was approximately $500.

Some tools, a briefcase, some calculators and other miscellaneous items were taken from a car parked at Smuggler's Inn, 1919 50th St., between 7 and 8:30 p.m. Tuesday, said police. The car, which belongs to Andy Mungenast of Midland, did not show signs of forced entry, police said.

James Keaton said someone jacked up his car and took a wheel and a tire, worth $125, sometime early Wednesday morning. The car was parked in front of Keaton's residence at 4421 42nd St. at the time of the incident.

Consultant Recommends Japanese Philosophy

CINCINNATI (AP) — American executives should import the Japanese management philosophy to motivate their employees, suggests a management consultant.

"Traditionally, U.S. managers pass ideas down to the workers and then wonder why the workers aren't motivated," said J. Edwin Whitlow, a lecturer for Dale Carnegie courses seminars for upper level management officials.

"In Japan, a decision that affects all goes to the bottom. All work on it on its way back up."

Japanese workers might even be allowed to work on the question of merging with another firm, he said. Such questions as where to locate a company-owned vacation retreat are decided by all members of a company.

"Most Americans don't know their business well enough to discuss such things," Whitlow said.

American companies, he said, would do better to soliciting ideas of employees and regarding them as important, he said.

"I travel all over the county and ask employees how many workers are motivated. They usually say between 35 and 55 percent. A Department of Health, Education and Welfare survey finds most workers just work for their paychecks," said Whitlow who was conducting a series of seminars with business executives this week.

Although there are cultural differences, he argued that experiences of Americans working for Japanese-owned U.S. companies prove the management technique can be transplated.

In Japan, he said, workers benefit from of a society in which workers seek their identity through groups rather than as individuals, as is the case in the United States. But the problem, Whitlow said, was with the manager and not the worker.

The Japanese system of management appears to work well with Americans too, Whitlow concluded.

"We're finding Americans like working for Japanese businesses that locate in the United States," he said.

Adult Classes Remain Open

Registration for adults 17 and older who are not enrolled in day school and wish to enter the second quarter of Lubbock Evening School will continue through Dec. 10.

More Nutritious Potato Developed By Scientists

By MARK SHENEFELT

BOISE, Idaho (UPI) — If you've notice a hint of difference in the taste of your potatoes recently, you may be one of the first to experience the product of some 28 years of step-by-step work.

Since 1965, in a small laboratory at Aberdeen, Idaho, Joseph Pavek, a U.S. Agriculture Department plant geneticist, has been growing, studying, testing and discarding thousands of varieties of hybrid potatoes. One of his three predecessors at Aberdeen began the job in 1950.

Recently, the laboratory released for limited commercial production the Butte potato — cream of the 1965 crop. It is more nutritious than the nation's top-selling potato variety, the Idaho Russet, also known as the Russet Burbank.

Pavek said the tipoff to recognizing the new spud is a slightly blandish flavor contrasting with the slight bitterness of the conventional variety.

If the Butte continues to grow well, he says it can have a far-reaching, beneficial influence on American health.

The Butte, which to the untrained eye cannot be distinguished from the Idaho Russet, was released for commercial production in the spring of 1977. By the end of this season it will have undergone two years of growth outside the laboratory.

Pavek said the Butte has up to 50 percent more vitamin C, a better balance of amino acids and a better quality of protein than the Russet. The new variety also cooks well, makes a good french fry and has a longer shelf life. And the average Butte has fewer pock marks, nobs and growth cracks. It is being used by Idaho potato processors along with the Russet.

The difference in taste between the two potatoes is not detectable when eaten with butter or sour cream, Pavek said.

Given several years, Pavek said the blander, non-alkaloid Butte may replace the Russet, which accounts for more than 90 percent of potato acreage in Idaho, Oregon and Washington and has a slight bitter taste.

"So far, we haven't detected anything wrong with the Butte," he said. "It's more resistant to some potato diseases than the Russet and seems to grow faster during a long, hot season like last year's."

Pavek said the Butte had a larger per-seed yield than the Russet in 1977 because it picked up steam in the late summer and fall and grew faster. But Pavek said Idaho has experienced cooler temperatures this year and the Butte's yield has been lower because its growth did not have time to accelerate.

He said under ideal conditions the Butte can yield up to 30 percent more in volume than the Russet each growing season. And when grown under less than favorable conditions, the Butte has better texture and does not dry out as much.

When Pavek, 51, moved from Minnesota in 1965 to take over the project, the Butte was one of 1,000 hybrid varieties being studied at the Aberdeen laboratory.

Since then, Pavek said, he has been hoping to develop the one potato with favorable growing characteristics and toughness against disease. Half of the crop is thrown out each year in a constant whittling process.

Of three diseases most common to the Idaho Russet — scab, early dying and early blight — the Butte is affected similarly. But potato viruses harmful to the Russet are resisted by the Butte. 3

"We don't know all there is to know about the Butte," Pavek said. "So far it has performed the same or better than the Russet. But if it gets a bad name for being too specific in requirements — for failing to adapt to a particular environment or showing vulnerability to disease — it may not be accepted."

The verdict on the Butte's eventual place in American potato fields will not be known for several years because of limitations in multiplying the strain, Pavek said.

Each season the variety's numbers can be increased tenfold in seeding. Some 300 acres were grown in 1977, compared to one hill in 1965 — which indicates it would take several years to fill Idaho's 350,000 potato-growing acres, given the rate of reproduction and losses due to disease and other causes.

Pavek and his assistant Dennis Corsini receive help from the University of Idaho and several potato processing firms. Also, the Agriculture Department's Science and Education Administration operates other hybrid potato climate testing areas in Oregon and Washington.

In all, the government spends about $180,000 per year on the Aberdeen project.

Pavek said another hybrid potato will be introduced in the spring of 1980 that has the genetic potential to supplant both the Russet and Butte.

The experimental potato has a number — A68678-1. Pavek said it has survived testing in Wisconsin, North Dakota, Oregon, Washington and Idaho.

"If all the results continue to be favorable, Dash-1 could make both the Butte and the Russet obsolete. But we won't predict anything yet. We know even less about it than the Butte at this point. But the Butte has performed better than we predicted."

Order Reduces Foreign Rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Calling friends and business associates in foreign countries is cheaper starting this week.

As a result of a Federal Communications Commission order Tuesday, overseas phone calls from the United States will be cut an average of 15 percent for about one year. A smaller rate cut will continue after that.

The permanent rate reduction of about $95 million a year applies to station-to-station calls from the United States to 47 countries or territories. The year-long temporary reduction, which will total about $140 million, will apply to all foreign calls except those to Canada and Mexico. Reductions in rates for calls to those two countries were approved earlier.

The reductions are the result of a 1976 FCC order that the Communications Satellite Corp. reduce the rates it charges ATT and other customers using its communications satellites. The delay in the rate cut was a result of litigation over the FCC ruling.

An ATT spokesman gave these examples of old and new six-minute station-to-station rates from anywhere in the United States: To Berlin, daytime, $13.50 to $10.20; a night call to Tokyo, $13.50 to $10; to France, day or night, $13.50 to $10.20; to Tel Aviv, night, $13.50 to $10; to Great Britain, night, $7.20 to $6.10.

USDA Expects Export Mark

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The value of U.S. agricultural exports will probably reach a new record total of $29 billion during the 1979 fiscal year, the Agriculture Department said Tuesday.

The estimate is about 6 percent above the 1978 farm export total, said Thomas Saylor, foreign agricultural service administrator.

The export volume will not be much different than the record 123 million tons of this year, but higher prices for major export commodities are expected to push export value to a new high Saylor said

Foreign demand is strong, particularly for soybeans and protein meal, Saylor said noting the United States will be the only major supplier of these commodities until the Brazilian soybean harvest next spring.

Large increases in grain production in much of the world could push U.S. grain export levels slightly below those of last year, Saylor said.

Chemical Plant Supervisor Loves South

By LeROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — Supervising eight chemical plants for Cyanamid Co. in the Gulf Coast states interferes mightily with John Carl DiPlacido's love of fishing, but he still manages to catch an awful lot.

DiPlacido lives on the Dog River near Mobile, Ala., and has been a resident of the nation's 11th largest port since 1944.

They have a saying in the South that there is no professional southerner quite as avid as a transplanted Yankee and DiPlacido admits he is no exception to that maxim. He just plain loves Mobile, which he has seen grow from a rather small coal, iron and cotton port and fishing town to a cosmopolitan city of 225,000 with big diversified manufacturing interests.

DiPlacido's love of fishing began when he was a small lad jiggling for rock panfish on the banks of Lake Erie at Erie, Pa. Since then he has fished at one time or another for almost everything except the giants of the ocean.

From his home on the Dog River, he can get through Mobile Bay in his power boat out to the reefs where the red snappers and groupers abound in 45 minutes.

"The fishing all around Mobile is wonderful," he said. "We have plenty of freshwater bass as well as the saltwater varieties, and the saltwater fishing has been greatly improved by artificial reefs created by sinking old ships in deep water or even by dumping old automobiles at lesser depths." He said the red snappers, the Gulf's most famous delicacy, are usually found in water 90 feet deep or more.

Many northerners are disappointed when they order red snapper in a restaurant or buy it in a fish market; it just doesn't have the flavor and texture of fresh caught red snapper.

"There's a way to tell if red snapper is good," DiPlacido said. "Look at the gills. If they are still red, the flesh will be firm and flavorsome, but if they've turned whitish, don't buy the fish."

This is a professional as well as personal opinion from DiPlacido. Some years ago Cyanamid discovered that fish could be better preserved by dipping or spraying them with a solution containing the antibiotic acromycin. DiPlacido got the Mobile commercial fisherman to use it. "They quickly learned that they didn't find any more red snappers with whitened gills when they brought in their catches if they used acromycin."

DiPlacido not only is an enthusiastic fisherman but he loves other wildlife. He and his wife, Marie, have a colony of around 25 raccoons that come to their yard.

"We must buy a hundred loaves of stale bread a month to feed them," he said. "The raccoon is a friendly, intelligent animal and is tolerant of people but you can't really tame him like a dog or cat. Years ago our Belgian shepherd dog caught a baby raccoon and brought it home alive. Marie bottle fed the baby and it has been with us about 15 years now. Although it is tamer than those that just come to be fed, it still will not tolerate the control and familiarities a dog or a cat will."

DiPlacido was practically born into Cyanamid. He started in 1928 as an office boy for Kalbfleisch Corp. in Erie where his father worked. Cyanamid bought Kalbfleisch the next year. Young Johnny learned his college chemistry in evening technical school classes in Erie and Utica, N.Y., where he had become an assistant manager of a Cyanamid casein plant. He traveled over a lot of New York state buying milk curd as the raw material for the casein.

Next he was sent to Benton, Ark., as works manager of a bauxite mine, then landed in Mobile in 1944.

Under his leadership, Cyanamid's Mobile plant became the nation's largest supplier of what are known as "wet-end" chemicals for the paper industry. The kraft and other paper mills in the Gulf states were booming.

In the decade from 1960 through 1970, he was given additional supervision over plants in Springhill, Demopolis and Childersburg in Alabama, Monticello, Miss., De Ridder, La., Georgetown, S.C., and Plymouth, N.C.

The company has asked him to stay on but at present DiPlacido is more inclined to retire next February so he can get in more fishing time.

He has always been a very active chap. He had his own airplane as well as a speedboat while he was working in Utica and also owned one of those classic Auburn boat tail speedsters. If he had kept it, it would be worth a fortune on the antique car market now.

During World War II, he operated a land station for the Coast Guard. He has been a civic club leader and for a quarter of a century has belonged to Mobile's socially prominent Mystics of Time, the society that orchestrates Mobile's annual Mardi Gras celebration.

DiPlacido and Marie were married in Utica in 1939. They raised two sons, both of whom became physicians and practice in Huntsville, Ala. They have five grandchildren.

New Game Seen As Ad Trend

CHICAGO (UPI) — The promoters call it a cheap way for advertisers to become household words and compare it to buying a chunk of the "Monopoly" board.

Its a new parlor game called "Tryopoly" and promoters say, in addition to being a compelling game for players of all ages, it could be the start of a new trend in advertising.

Tryopoly is a real estate game with a similar objective to Parker Brother's Monopoly: players try and acquire monopolies of properties and companies all over the board to bankrupt their opponents with high rents.

But, unlike Monopoly, it is played on a triangular game field, players can fashion their own zig-zag route along the board and they can decide where to place their properties. And instead of buying such properties as "Boardwalk" or "Marvin Gardens," players compete for real businesses or institutions in their hometown.

The real businesses pay 15 cents a board for the entire local production run to be one of the 50 properties in the game.

The Chicago production run is set at 50,000 games so advertisers will pay $7,500. They can design their own logos for the property cards.

"It's absolutely dirt cheap for advertising," said Norman Goldring, a promoter in Chicago.

He figures if there are four players per game and each board is used 15 times a year, an advertiser can count on "four million sight and sound plugs" with 10,000 games in circulation.

About 15,000 Tryopoly boards have been sold since last Christmas in four local markets — Rochester, N.Y., Akron and Cleveland, Ohio, and Washington, D.C.

James Davenport, president of Ohio-based Osobo Toy Company, plans on hitting a dozen other markets, including Chicago, by Christmas and eventually hopes for a million games to be sold with 35 local boards. He compares buying into the game to being offered a spot on the Monopoly Board thirty years ago.

"I would have loved to have my name on Monopoly," he said. "It would be very interesting if people back then could get a space on the board. They certainly would be well known now."

Davenport said having local companies on the board enhances the game's fun and provides for a novel advertising vehicle.

"I think this is a way to personalize a game," he said. "It's fun to fantasize you're buying Case Western Reserve University, especially if you went there or the Cleveland Cavaliers who you just watched the night before. I think we may see more of this."

Six properties on the board are reserved for cultural or educational institutions and other businesses range from clothing stores to stock brokers to car dealers, depending upon the city.

Davenport said some advertisers at first are hesitant to buy into the game because of the newness of the idea, but those who wind up a part of the game are satisfied.

And who are some of the advertisers?

If you are playing the game in Cleveland you can buy the Cavaliers, if you are playing it in Rochester you can buy the University of Rochester and if you're playing the game in Washington you can purchase the Watergate Hotel.

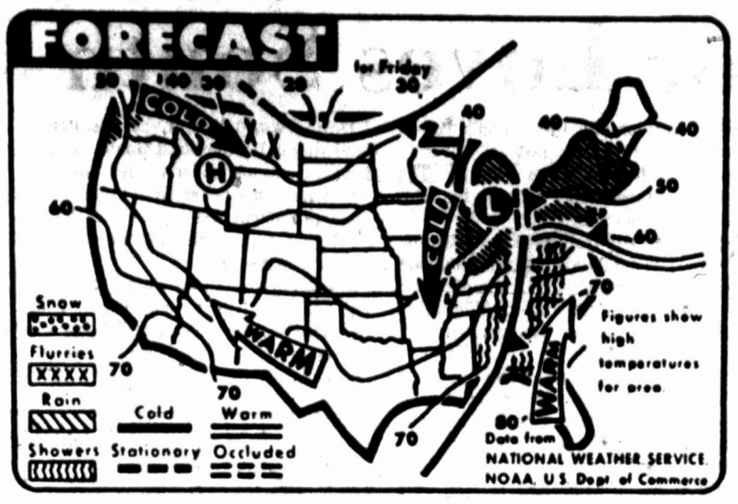
Judge Sentences Kidnapping Trio

HUNTINGDON, Tenn. (AP) — Three men, two of them brothers, have been sentenced to between 25 and 35 years in prison after pleading guilty to kidnapping the teen-age daughter of a wealthy furniture maker.

The three — David Michael Wilson, 25; William Andrew Dixon, 22, and his brother Harvey Douglas Dixon, 20 — unexpectedly pleaded guilty Wednesday to the kidnapping of Jodie Gaines, 18, last April. Wilson and the elder Dixon were sentenced to 35 years in prison and the younger Dixon was sentenced to 25 years in prison. Miss Gaines escaped from a cabin four days after she was abducted.



WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecasts rain from parts of Illinois and Indiana running east into parts of New England. Rain is also predicted for parts of Oregon and Washington. Showers are forecast for parts of Kentucky and the Virginias running south to the Florida Panhandle. (AP Laserphoto Map)

Conversion Rules To Be Enforced

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Tough new regulations to push industry toward coal for fuel could lead to a temporary irony: greater use of natural gas, Energy Secretary James Schlesinger says.

Schlesinger called a news conference Wednesday to announce the regulations, the first under the new coal conversion law, and to discuss a wide range of energy topics.

He said the administration's top energy priority is to cut back on oil imports. That may mean some industries will switch from oil to natural gas, a premium fuel, when they cannot go to coal, Schlesinger said.

He promised the regulations to carry out the new law will be "tough and are intended to be tough."

"The act shifts the burden to the user to demonstrate why it is necessary for him to be out of alignment with the national policy of moving toward our most abundant fuel (coal)," he said.

He said he intends to enforce the act vigorously, making industries that want exemptions prove their need for them.

The act sets more stringent fuel requirements for new industrial plants and utilities than on existing ones, which presumably would have a harder time converting to coal.

"In the case of existing facilities, the department will seek long-term measures to effect their conversion from oil or gas to an alternate fuel, but in the interim will generally favor domestic natural gas over imported petroleum," Schlesinger said.

In response to questions, he said that may mean some additional low-priority industrial burning of natural gas, which is in temporary surplus supply.

"We do not want to encourage movement toward additional facilities that use gas," he said, but the "more stringent" concern is for reducing oil imports.

That being the case, he said, "the preference continues to be to reduce as much as possible our dependence on foreign oil sources. We prefer to burn our domestic supply."

Schlesinger said he sees no sign of winter shortages of natural gas this year.

The news of huge new oil discoveries in Mexico offers the United States a increased potential secure supply from a friendly neighbor, Schlesinger said. But he added the major U.S. energy policy will continue to be to reduce imports from whatever source, to help the nation's balance of payments.

"There never has been any question of the security of Mexico as a source of supply," Schlesinger said. "We are simply trying to reduce the (foreign) source of supply."

CARTER ACTION PRAISED

WASHINGTON (AP) — A New York congressman is praising President Carter for signing the congressionally passed amendments to the Endangered Species Act. Rep. John M. Murphy, chairman of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, said Tuesday that "these amendments, supported by both environmentalists and industrialists, provide intelligent solutions to problems inherent in the previous act."

Study Raises Questions About Welfare Reforms

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Three recent presidents, including Jimmy Carter, have proposed welfare reform entailing some form of minimum income for the poor.

Congress will take another look at the idea next year, but this time it is being seen in a new light.

The new factor is a federally sponsored study in Seattle and Denver that raises fundamental questions about a guaranteed income.

Several thousand poor families in those cities took part in a "negative income tax" experiment beginning in 1971. Some families were guaranteed incomes at various levels above and below the poverty line, some for three years and some for five. A control group received no income guarantee.

The results — some previously published, some new — were outlined to a Senate welfare subcommittee Wednesday:

— People receiving the guarantees worked less than those who did not. In the three-year assistance group husbands worked 7.6 percent fewer hours than the control group; wives, 16.7 percent less; female heads of families, 13 percent less; other family members aged 16-21, 43 percent less for males and 33 percent less for females.

— For the five-year group, the drop-off in work was even sharper, a reduction of as much as 60 percent for young women not heading families.

— When young males became heads of families by marrying, their work remained reduced — by 28 percent in the case of the three-year group — even though they then were taking on family responsibilities.

— Families receiving the assistance broke up more frequently than those not receiving it — 63 percent more frequently for whites and 43 percent more for blacks in groups receiving income assistance at 90 percent of the poverty level.

Robert Spiegeman of SRI International, which handled the Seattle-Denver study for the government, said two opposing factors may lie behind the family separation figures.

On one hand, more income could avoid family break-ups caused by economic need. On the other, more income could make family members, particularly women, no longer dependent on another wage-earner.

But the finding reverses what proponents of welfare reform have been saying: that the existing welfare system breaks up families because a woman with children can receive more assistance if her husband is not around.

Jodie Allen, special assistant to the secretary of labor for welfare reform, said the Seattle-Denver assistance system differed from President Carter's welfare proposals in one major respect: it contained no work requirement, while Carter's plan is designed to create work incentives by giving able-bodied people higher combined wages and assistance than they would get in assistance alone if they did not work.

Coalition Files Lawsuit Over Pennsylvania Law

WASHINGTON (AP) — A coalition of education, civil rights and labor groups announced today it was joining a suit to overturn a Pennsylvania law that gives the state legislature control over federal aid programs.

Spokesmen for six of the 32 organizations said such state control could harm social welfare and education programs because legislatures could block appropriations or spend them for a different purpose than Congress intended.

The coalition told a news conference it was joining Pennsylvania Gov. Milton J. Shapp's legal challenge against his legislature, a suit now on appeal to the Supreme Court. The Pennsylvania Supreme Court upheld the law in a 4-2 decision.

The law gives the legislature power to appropriate all federal funds before they can be spent by a state agency. Pennsylvania's law is the only one in the nation, although other states are considering similar laws, coalition spokesmen said.

"Such laws can cripple or destroy the power of Congress and the executive branch to carry out high-priority programs in the national interest," said Allan W. Ostar, executive director of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities.

"Research grants in health, science, training for the disadvantaged and minorities, and other grants have been delayed or colleges have not been able to meet ... deadlines and have not been able to receive grants."

Albert Shanker, president of the American Federation of Teachers, said such laws could destroy publicly owned colleges, which depend on federal funds.

"We see it affecting possibly all the social programs — housing, welfare, health programs," said Frank Pohlhaus, Washington counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. "It seems it would give the states a veto over programs we fought so hard to get enacted."

Candidate Hampered By Lack Of Recognition

By STEWART SLAVIN

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Pete, who?

That's what 88 percent of California's voters asked when San Diego Mayor Pete Wilson threw his hat into the Republican race for governor last year.

The same question was asked by 40 percent of the voters three weeks before Wilson was defeated in the June 6 primary election, finishing fourth in a field of four while polling only nine percent.

For the mayor of California's second largest city in terms of population and the ninth biggest in the nation, and for a man who was briefly considered as a vice presidential running mate by then-President Gerald Ford in 1976, those figures were downright frustrating.

But the fog has cleared, Wilson is another year older — he turned 45 last month — and he snapped to attention when asked what he would do if he had it to do all over again.

"I'd raise more money and spend it earlier and spend it on television," Wilson said.

Wilson's ill-fated gubernatorial campaign cost him $1.2 million and he said he is still paying off some $30,000 from an $86,000 campaign debt.

The Illinois-born, Yale-educated lawyer said in an interview he has still not decided whether to seek a third term as mayor next year, although the prospect seems likely, and he declined to chart his political future beyond that.

Yes, more than ever, he would still like to be governor of California and someday president of the United States.

"I think it (the presidency) would be great fun," Wilson said. "It's a killing job but I think that if you happen to enjoy that kind of work it's got to be the most stimulating prospect in the world.

"But I've become philosphical about political futures," Wilson said, breaking into a chuckle. "Especially my own. I think you have to realize that there is a great deal to being at the right place at the right time in politics."

Wilson said his failure to gain name recognition in the state was not for lack of money.

"I think it has more to do with geography and media markets than anything else," he said.

"You have to recognize that Orange County, which is a very important county in a Republican primary, is our neighbor. And yet from the standpoint of where they get their news, they're sitting with their backs turned. It's an LA media market."

Wilson said he knew from the outset of his campaign that his name was not a household word and that it would be difficult to make himself known in a statewide race.

"What I thought was true. It depends on either a very hefty war chest or having exposure of a kind that doesn't come from ordinary public service. I was surprised that as mayor of the second largest city in the state and one that has been as dynamic as this city has, that the name wasn't better known.

"But as I reflect upon it, that's unrealistic. Most people know who their mayor is, some know who their congressman and assemblyman is, but a great many don't."

Wilson says he is taking a number of steps to make sure voters don't ask "Pete who?" when another election rolls around.

"I am by nature an activist," he said. Wilson campaigned as a "surrogate" on behalf of Attorney General Evelle Younger and Mike Curb, the Republican nominees for governor and lieutenant governor in the recent election.

It is unlikely, however, that Wilson would have accepted any appointment in a Younger administration if he had been elected.

"I frankly can't think of too many things he could have offered that would interest me as much as this (San Diego mayor)," Wilson said.

But perhaps more significant in the long run are Wilson's appearances throughout the state on behalf of his innovative ideas to spur construction of more low cost housing to avoid the need for rent control.

To Wilson's knowledge, San Diego is the only city in the nation to offer city-owned land to developers at a discount in exchange for a pledge by the developers to keep rents below current levels.

Wilson said he thought of the idea before the gubernatorial campaign began, and during the race urged the state to unhold some of its own land for similar development.

"Brown (Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.) subsequently adopted it as part of his urban strategy without any attribution."

San Diego has 350 units operational in two projects for senior citizens and the handicapped under the plan. Additional developments to serve low income families are in the works with a projection of 1,500 units by the end of 1979.

Wilson said the city is in the process of drawing up an inventory of not only city land, but state and federally-owned land that could be used for the same purpose.

Wilson also unveiled this month a proposal to issue tax-free municipal bonds to buy existing mortgages from private lending agencies to stimulate new housing.

"The purpose of that," the mayor said, "is to permit the savings and loan institutions to finance new construction" with new loans.

Wilson was born in Lake Forest, Ill. He attended elementary and high school in St. Louis, did undergraduate work at Yale and got his law degree from University of California's Boalt School of Law at Berkeley.

His wife, Betty, is a real estate broker. They have no children.

Wilson does a great amount of reading in his leisure time, and is especially interested in English literature. Winston Churchill is one of his favorite subjects. He dabbles in tennis and enjoys smoking an occasional cigar "when the public isn't looking."

Wilson also enjoys the arts, theater, [illegible]

Officials Agree To Allow Test

GATLINBURG, Tenn. (UPI) — Italian church officials have agreed to submit the famed Shroud of Turin to a revolutionary test that may determine the relic's true age, a Rochester University professor says.

A small piece of the shroud that bears the image of a crucified man, believed to be that of Jesus Christ, will be tested to establish how much radioactive carbon is in the thread, said Dr. Harry E. Gove, director of the university's Nuclear Research Laboratory.

Gove said Tuesday the test, if successful, would determine the shroud's age within the nearest century. Historians and theologians have tried to link the relic found 600 years ago to the death of Christ.

"If you want to establish the age, this is unquestionably the most important scientific measurement to be made," Gove told a meeting of the Council for the Advancement of Science Writing here.

"But that won't prove that it's the shroud of Jesus Christ," Gove said. "That much needs to be made clear."

Gove said he had obtained permission from the Archbishop of Turin to examine a tiny fragment of the robe.

"I talked to a number of people in Turin, and they want to find two laboratories that can date the shroud independently," Gove said. "Right now, we have the only laboratory that can do this. I guess it may be a couple of years before we find another."

He said the method, using a device called a tandem electrostatic accelerator, offers new ways to predict earthquakes and other natural disasters, climatology and cosmology. Gove said the machine also can be used to date various kinds of arrhaeological artifacts

GM Denies Being Cautious About Sales

By PHILIP GREER
And MYRON KANDEL

It's no fun to be blamed for $12 billion in stock market losses and Thomas A. Murphy wants no part of it.

"Sometimes the stock market doesn't make sense," he says. "It's more a measure of the disposition of some portfolio managers on any given day. If one of them has dyspepsia, watch out."

Murphy is no disgruntled swinger. He's chairman of General Motors Corp. and on Nov. 6, GM's directors voted to cut the dividend payout for the year to $6 a share from the $6.80 a share paid in 1977. The next day the market dropped sharply and most reports said the loss was a direct result of worry over the GM move. On the New York Stock Exchange, stocks lost an average of 43 cents a share, or more than $12 billion on the 26.4 billion shares listed there.

"The one thig I didn't appreciate was the implication that we felt cautious about car sales," Murphy told us. "We still feel bullish about the sales opportunities ahead of us."

Murphy also denied that GM was saying one thing in its optimistic statement but another in its dollars-and-cents decisions. Inflation is a problem, he said, and "the (administration's anti-inflation) steps that were taken, particularly on the monetary side, there's no question but that they could have some impact, but I don't think the economy is going to turn down. There's always a risk of that when you take strong action on the monetary side, but I don't think it will happen."

The cut in the dividend, which was larger than anybody expected, was made for two reason, Murphy said. One is the rapid growth of GM's spending on plants and equipment, from $2.6 billion in 1974 to an expected $5 billion next year. ("Do you know how much it costs to increase the fleet's average gas mileage by half a mile a gallon?" he asked. "It costs a billion dollars. That's a lot of money.")

The other reason, he said, is that GM overpaid its shareholders last year "to make up for the fact that in 1974 and 1975 when the economy was down and our business was down and our requirements were high, we had to reduce it. So the dividend for 1977 had an element of make-up in it, and I don't think it's quite fair to say that sets a new floor under it."

Murphy may not understand it or agree with it, but the dividend cut hit Wall Street as a big surprise and disappointment.

At Paine Webber Mitchell Hutchins, for instance, automotive analyst Ron Glanz said he'd been predicting a cut since last year, but didn't expect it to be as large as it was.

"It's easy to look back and find good reasons," he said, "but anybody who looked at their cash flow figures had to see it; they didn't have the money. Their cash ratio at the end of the third quarter last year was 35 percent of sales. At the end of the third quarter this year it was 25 percent. You can't let that keep going for too long."

Glanz said he expected a total payout of $6.50 this year. "I thought they'd overpay it again."

He said, too, that Wall Street's reaction was reasonable. "When GM, a triple A-rated company says they can't pay out what they did last year, it makes people wonder what else isn't going to be the same as it was last year."

At L.F. Rothschild Unterberg Towbin, analyst Philip Fricke wrote a month ago that he expected GM to cut its dividend and he doen't think now that they went too far.

"Their spending is skyrocketing and their earnings aren't" Fricke said. "Still, people believe the dividend cut was a reflection of what GM really thinks about the economy next year."

Fricke said he looks for lower auto sales next year because of the squeeze on consumers' pocketbooks and inflationary fears. "The psychology will be bad," he said.

In Detroit, Arvid Jouppi of John Muir & Co. said he thought the market overreacted because "you've never seen a board of directors more separate from the stock market than at GM; they just never think that way."

Jouppi called the dividend decision "the worst I can remember in 25 years of following this business. You can read it as saying 'sure, we said car sales are going to be better in 1979, but we don't really believe it," he said, "but I don't think there's any reason to read any more into it than that they just made a bad call."

There's one more reason for GM to cut its payments to stockholders now. Next September, the United Auto Workers contract expires and GM is considered a shoo-in to be the target of any strike. With or without wage-price-guidelines, it never hurts to add some ammunition.

THE WHITE HOUSE

Bodyguards Give Help To Carter

By JAMES GERSTENZANG

WASHINGTON (AP) — Decisions, says President Carter, are never easy at the White House. The easy ones are decided before they reach the center of government.

The president, making note of this the other day, said he agreed with Harry S. Truman's observation that he would like economic advisers with only one hand, "because they always say 'on the one hand this and on the other hand this. Now, Mr. President you make the decision.'"

A tan Lincoln sedan had been selected for the trip to the Tomb of the Unknowns, but at the last minute someone thought better of the car decision.

The presidential seals and flags decorating the car were yanked and a more somber, black Cadillac limousine was placed in the motorcade awaiting Carter on the White House south driveway.

Secret Service spokesman Jim Boyle said the Secret Service decided that because of the formal nature of the wreath-laying ceremony, "it would be in better taste" if the president arrived in a black car.

Bumper Sticker

A less-elegant vehicle driven by Tim Kraft, Carter's assistant for political affairs and personnel, sports a bumper sticker reading "I've Been to Graceland. Have You?"

Asked whether he had indeed visited Graceland, the late Elvis Presley's mansion in Memphis, Tenn., Kraft replied: "You ask a devotee a crude question like that?"

After prodding, however, he acknowledged that the bumper sticker was the gift of "a wild and crazy lady from New Orleans" and he had never visited the Memphis estate.

Could the aging sedan he uses around Washington make it to Memphis?

"That car couldn't get over the mountain and back," said Kraft. In fact, he said, "it's lucky to get up the hill" to the Georgetown house he shares with some other White House officials.

Nice Introduction

But President Carter told youngsters at the Future Farmers of America convention in Kansas City last week that he learned the hard way introductions can ruin a speech.

He recalled that while campaigning for governor of Georgia he addressed a group of 400 of the state's brightest students as the main speaker at a "career day."

"I was very proud of myself," Carter said.

Then the man who introduced him recounted that Carter had studied chemistry at Georgia Southwestern College, engineering at Georgia Tech, naval science at the U.S. Naval Academy and nuclear physics at Union College.

"Now he is growing peanuts and he is here to tell us how to plan our life's career," said the master of ceremonies.

"Well," the president said, "my speech was over before I got the audience back."

Diamond Reporter

The same day that he spoke to the future farmers, Carter held a news conference in Kansas City. He injected a bit of levity when, instead of calling on a particular journalist by name or a nod in her direction, he addressed her as "the reporter with the large diamond ring on her finger."

The object of the president's attention on nationwide television and radio was Ann Compton of ABC news, a White House reporter about to be married. Miss Compton beamed while her colleagues chuckled.

English Pastor Sick Of Lipstick Smears

READING, England (AP) — The Rev. Brian Brindley has had it with lipstick at communion services.

In the parish magazine, he writes:

"At the risk of contravening the Equal Opportunities Act, may we ask those ladies — or gentlemen — who wear lipstick either not to do so when they come to holy communion or to find some means of ensuring it doesn't come off on the rim of the chalice."

Bell Denounces Solon's Demand

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a sharply worded letter, Attorney General Griffin B. Bell has denounced a demand by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., that the Federal Trade Commission review Bell's approval of the merger of two corporate giants.

In a letter sent to Kennedy on Monday and made public today, Bell said the senator's proposal was intolerable and threatened their personal relationship.

"If the Federal Trade Commission were to institute such an investigation, that would have an adverse impact on effective enforcement of the antitrust laws ...," Bell wrote. "It seems to me that it would be intolerable for the two agencies to undertake a course of action leading to review of each other's enforcement decisions."

The attorney general added: "If this evidences your concern over my ability to discharge my responsibilities, such an attitude would have unfortunate implications for effective future cooperation between us."

Tom Southwick, Kennedy's press secretary, said the letter "expressed disagreement about a specific case and was not intended to nor did it call into question the ability of the attorney general to discharge his duties." He said Kennedy "expects to continue to work very closely" with Bell.

Southwick also said the FTC has jurisdiction over antitrust matters and has looked into such cases in the past.

Alfred F. Dougherty Jr., director of the FTC's Bureau of Competition, said the commission probably would make a decision within two weeks whether to enter the case. Doughtery said Kennedy's request had been referred to him for a recommendation and he expected to make his recommendation later this week.

In a letter last week to FTC Chairman Michael Pertschuk, Kennedy called for an investigation of Bell's approval last June of the takeover of the Lykes Corp. by the LTV Corp.

Kennedy, who said Bell overruled his entire antitrust division staff and other federal officials in granting the merger, said it would lead to decreased competition in the steel industry.

"Clearly, antitrust policy should be to restrain, not to foster, such increases in an already highly concentrated industry," Kennedy said.

The Justice Department released texts of the sharply worded letters following a news report that said Bell had responded angrily to Kennedy's request to the FTC.

In a statement accompanying the letters, Bell denied there has been any deterioration in his relations with Kennedy, who is due to become chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee next year.

"There is no problem between Sen. Kennedy and me," Bell said.

The statement noted that Bell had discussed his disagreements with Kennedy over the merger twice in the past week, including at dinner Monday night at the senator's home.

Bell also said he had no regrets about his letter to Kennedy denouncing the call for a separate FTC inquiry.

"I believed in what I wrote when I wrote the letter. I believe in it now," said Bell.

By sanctioning the merger of LTV and Lykes, Bell approved creation of the third-largest steelmaker in America, behind U.S. Steel and Bethlehem.

The attorney general acted on grounds that the Youngstown (Ohio) Sheet & Tube Co., which is owned by the Lykes conglomerate, was a failing business. Bell said the merger was justified to save the firm and the jobs of its employees.

But in his letter to Pertschuk, Kennedy contended that the Youngstown company's losses were not nearly as critical as Bell made them out to be.

Kennedy said the company suffered severe losses during the third quarter of 1977 but that in the first quarter of this year the losses were more than halved despite the nationwide coal-miners strike and extremely cold weather.

Kennedy said the latest figures from the Lykes Corp. suggest that the Youngstown company made a substantial profit during the second quarter of this year.

"There may well be alternatives much less anti-competitive than this merger," Kennedy said.

Election Recount Planned

Lubbock County commissioners were to meet with a computer elections expert this afternoon to plan a Friday recount of gubernatorial and senatorial votes in Lubbock County.

Larry Ensminger of Computer Election Systems in Dallas was scheduled to be at the 1:30 p.m. meeting at the courthouse.

He is appearing in place of Tom Eschberger, who helped with the new county computer system during the Nov. 7 general election.

They are statutorily entitled to a recount because both lost by less than five percentage points.

County Judge Rodrick Shaw today said representatives of the county, Hill and Krueger and winning Republican candidates Bill Clements and John Tower will meet at 9 a.m. Friday in the office of County Clerk Frank Guess to begin the recount procedure.

"They'll do whatever they feel like, among themselves, that they need to do to have a satisfactory count," Judge Shaw said.

The petitions and related orders by 237th District Judge John McFall stipulate that the recount be carried under the jurisdiction of the same person who had overall responsibility for the election.

That would be Bill McCullough, director of the county computer department and presiding election judge, but representatives of the candidates Monday indicated the participation of Guess and a Computer Election Systems expert also would be expected.

Searchers Find Another Body In Rubble

JOPLIN, Mo. (AP) — Searchers found a body today in the rubble of the aging hotel that collapsed on three workers last Saturday. One man was pulled alive from the ruins on Tuesday and a third was still missing.

Jasper County Coroner Wendell Fuhr said the workman whose body was recovered today, Frederick C. Coe III, 29, of Topeka, Kan., had died instantly of head and chest injuries.

Coe's body was found in the basement area of the nine-story, 70-year-old hotel, about 60 feet from the spot where Alfred "Butch" Summers was rescued Tuesday after spending 3½ days in a cramped tunnel of rubble.

The search for the third workman missing in the collapse of the hotel, Thomas Edweard Oakes, 45, of Jenks, Okla., resumed as soon as Coe's body was recovered.

When Summers was found alive Tuesday, hopes mounted that his companions might also have survived.

"There's always hope," Joplin Police Chief Larry Tennis said when asked about the prospects of finding the third workman alive.

Workers on heavy equipment spent nearly two hours clearing away rubble around the dead man before his body could be removed this morning. The body was spotted first by a worker who noticed a hand protruding from the debris.

Tennis had appeared discouraged Wednesday night after heavy equipment was silenced and sensitive microphones used for coal mine cave-ins probed several chasms uncovered at the site. No sign of life was detected.

Co-Pilot's Log Book Bought For $85,000

NEW YORK (AP) — A log kept by Capt. Robert Lewis, co-pilot of the Enola Gay when the atomic bomb was dropped on Hiroshima, has been sold for $85,000, the highest price ever paid at auction for an American autographed document, auctioneers said.

The log, sold by Sotheby Parke Bernet, was purchased by Forbes Magazine. Lewis noted in it that "a great deal of the notes were written in almost complete darkness" and adds, "Halfway through I ran out of ink." The handwritten description of the Aug. 6, 1945, flight said in part, "... there in front of our eyes was without a doubt the greatest explosion man has ever witnessed."

Printer Fails In Business, Not Pedaling

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — When John Henry Hoyt, 56, failed in business he packed up 50 pounds of cargo, strapped it on his bike and pedaled off on a 10-week, 3,400-mile cross-country trip.

He picked a bike over other forms of transportation because of "the pure romance of it," Hoyt said. "I had just failed in the printing business and wanted some time off before I went back to work. I really had no ties to keep me back and I just happen to be a loner."

Hoyt started his journey Aug. 31 from his home in Santa Ana, Calif.

He followed the southern border of the country, through open cattle country where he shared the roads with livestock, through rugged mountains where he gave up and walked, through pounding rains in Texas, and potholes in Louisiana that cost him several tires.

Red canvas bags draped across the front tire hold his water supply. Two bags in the back are his repair shop and kitchen. Rain gear, a tent, a change of clothes, a sleeping bag and other equipment are piled across the front and back.

Hoyt started biking two years ago as therapy after he quit smoking.

"I made this trip for the adventure of it," he says. "My body can take about six hours of pedaling a day and aside from the fun of it, the thing that really impressed me the most is the size of this country. You just can't grasp it if you're in a car.

"Not everybody could do this, I know. But I'm not trying to set any records. You have to be a lone eagle type. I think as long as you have curiosity and good health, you don't get lonely or tired."

GATHERED INTO BALES — Thousands of aluminum cans are gathered into 775-pound bales at the Aluminum Company of America's Houston recycling center. Alcoa said that it collected a record 700 million cans during the third quarter of 1978. Can collectors were paid nearly $5.8 million for returning the cans, according to the company. Recycling aluminum cans saves 95 percent of the energy needed to make aluminum from ore. (AP Laserphoto)

Zoning Panel Denies Variance Request

By TOM GRIESS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Lubbock Zoning Board of Adjustment refused today a request by J.D. Chandler for a variance to allow the completion of a townhouse at 8633 Knoxville Drive after listening to opposing arguments from neighboring homeowners.

Speaking on behalf of several of the homeowners, Ralph Quest of 8506 Louisville Drive said, "The thing we are upset about is Mr. Chandler knew what he had to conform to when he bought the property.

"Mr. Chandler and the City Council agreed to move back single-story townhouses 20 feet and two-story townhouses 50 feet," Quest said, after he and other homeowners unsuccessfully sought to prevent the construction of two-story dwellings.

The rear yard of the townhouse in dispute was discovered to be only 5.8 feet from an alley dividing the property line of one of the homeowners. Construction of the townhouse is approximately two-thirds complete.

Chandler was unable to explain the error in measuring the site for the townhouse, but asked for the variance, saying the townhouses are single-family dwellings and will blend with the community.

Board member Paul Godwin made the motion to deny the variance on the grounds that the request was "after the fact" of construction. He said Chandler had consented to the council 20 and 50 feet setback restrictions and then proceeded to construct the townhouse in violation without first seeking a variance.

The board also modified a request by Aubrey J. Fouts for a variance to allow the construction of a 45-foot-high, 450-square-foot sign for the the Brass Lantern Inn at 5912 Ave. H.

After lengthy discussion, the board agreed to a new sign meeting the following qualifications: supporting pole not to exceed 15 feet; height of the sign surface not to exceed 15 feet; sign surface not to exceed 192 square feet; total height of the sign not to exceed 30 feet; and the sign must be in conformity with existing restrictions by Jan. 1, 1982.

The current abatement period for oversize signs will end in 1982, and all businesses will be expected to comply with the existing city ordinances, said city zoning administrator Jerrel Northcutt.

"We have a peculiar location problem," Fouts said. He cited the number of larger hotels — Ramada Inn, Howard Johnson's and Holiday Inn are located nearby — and claimed they already have the larger signs.

Fouts argued the traffic circle on Avenue H, with its traffic signs and a neighboring lumber company, obstructs the existing sign.

Jury Assesses Lubbock Man 10-Year Term

A jury shortly before noon today assessed a 10-year prison term to a young Lubbock man accused of attacking a 55-year-old woman inside her residence.

Jurors in Judge William R. Shaver's 140th District Court returned the punishment verdict after deliberating about 90 minutes. The same nine-man, three-woman panel had taken approximately 30 minutes to find Michael Alve Cox guilty of the burglary of a habitation with intent to commit rape charge.

Cox, 24, who lived at 5303 21st St. at the time of the offense, was convicted of attacking the woman as a result of an April 1 incident.

The complainant testified she awoke about 5 a.m. and noticed the silhouette of a man at the foot of her bed. The woman had stated she had earlier opened the door of her small apartment because of the heat, but had left a screen door latched.

The witness said the assailant jumped on her, but eventually fled after a struggle.

Police indicated the defendant was arrested a few minutes after the reported attack after being seen in an alley near the woman's apartment.

Hospital Plans Blood Check

West Texas Hospital is sponsoring a blood pressure screening at South Plains Mall from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday.

Employees of the hospital will be on hand to administer free blood pressure checks to anyone stopping by.

"We hope that many people will take advantage of this opportunity to discover any possible problems they may have," said Donna Woolman, the hospital's director of personnel.

High blood pressure, if untreated, can lead to strokes, heart attacks, kidney failure and other medical problems, medical authorities say.

Stethoscopes, blood pressure cuffs and medical literature for the screening are being provided by the American Heart Association.

FAA Plans New Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Having concluded that the public is "fed up" with slowdowns by air traffic controllers, the government says it is adopting a get-tough policy for future slowdowns.

Langhorne M. Bond, head of the Federal Aviation Administration, said Wednesday "we will be less reluctant in the future" to take action against air traffic controllers engaged in slowdowns such as those that caused flight delays May 25-26 and June 6-7.

Under a plan sent to the FAA by the Justice Department, the attorney general could consider criminal action against controllers. But prior to such a step, the Justice Department and FAA will consider injunctions, fines and administrative actions against individual controllers and their union.

Bond said the FAA was reluctant in the past to take action because slowdowns "are so hard to pin down. There are a lot of subtle ways a controller can slow down traffic."

Bond said the Justice Department proposals came in response to the FAA's request for an investigation of last summer's slowdowns. Those were the result of controller unhappiness about a decision by some airlines to eliminate free overseas "familiarization" flights.

"They decided not to prosecute in those cases," Bond said. But he added that the slowdown "action was enormously costly to the union. It lost its credibility with the Congress and the public. Some members of Congress were livid and outraged."

Violence Spurs Investigations

WASHINGTON (AP) — After meeting Thursday with Teamsters President Frank Fitzsimmons, Attorney General Griffin B. Bell ordered U.S. attorneys and the FBI to look into reports of violence in four states stemming from a strike by dissident steel haulers.

Bell said he has discussed the situation with Labor Secretary Ray Marshall and has ordered an assessment of the reported violence from the truckers' strike in Ohio, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Indiana.

Bell said Fitzsimmons requested the meeting "to discuss his concern about allegations of violence." He said representatives of the steel industry also have expressed concern to the government.

The truckers' strike, now in its sixth day, was called by the Fraternal Association of Steel Haulers in Pittsburgh, a group that is seeking to set up its own collective-bargaining organization apart from the Teamsters.

There have been scattered reports of shootings and rock-throwing at trucks on the road. Pennsylvania State Police reported 25 incidents on Tuesday and Wednesday. But authorities said that the violence seemed to be not nearly as severe as it was during a strike by the steel haulers in 1974.

At Least 199 Die In Crash Of Jetliner

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — At least 199 Indonesian pilgrims en route home from Mecca were killed in the crash of a chartered Icelandic airliner while landing at the Colombo airport in a severe thunderstorm, Indonesian officials reported today.

Hospital spokesmen said there were more than 60 survivors. Indonesian officials said 63 survivors were taken to local hospitals, 20 of them being quickly released after treatment for minor injuries and 43 admitted with more serious injuries.

The DC-8 jetliner was to refuel in this island nation off the tip of India and then fly on to Surabaya, the capital of East Java. It crashed about a mile short of the airport runway just before midnight Wednesday, plowed up 400 yards of coconut plantation, broke into three sections and burst into flames.

One survivor, Saudi Arabian government clerk Amir Husain, said he was looking out from his window seat as the plane made its descent.

"Suddenly I saw the wing hit something," he said. "Immediately the plane rolled violently and I heard a crash. I looked around for my wife and saw her wedged in the debris. People around were wailing. I was dragging my wife out when I saw the first flames." His wife was hospitalized with serious injuries.

Icelandic Airlines said there were 13 airline employees aboard — eight crew members and five flying as passengers. Five of the airline personnel survived.

An airline spokesman in Iceland said the entire crew was Icelandic, and that among those killed were the pilot, co-pilot and flight engineer, and the airline's chief pilot, Asgeir Petursson, who was riding as a passenger.

The airline said no Americans were aboard the plane. The Indonesian government in Jakarta said its embassy here reported the death toll stood at 199 and all the dead were Indonesians.

"It passes all understanding how anybody at all could have come out alive after a wreck like that," said one official, surveying the quarter-acre of charred and twisted debris.

Many of the survivors walked from the crash site to the airport. Ambulances took them to a nearby air force hospital or to the Ngumbo Hospital, about 20 miles to the north.

By mid-day today, police and air force personnel cutting through the smoldering wreckage had recovered almost 100 bodies. Many victims were still strapped in their seats.

Two of the jetliner's four engines were torn off and hurled far from the impact site. Brightly colored Moslem prayer rugs, other belongings and bodies littered the area.

One of the survivors, newspaper editor Mas Abi Karsa, said the pilot was being guided down by the airport's control tower and apparently miscalculated and missed the landing strip.

Sri Lankan aviation officials said they had recovered the two "black boxes" — the plane's flight recorder and cockpit voice recorder. They said the devices would be sent to the United States for expert analysis of what might have caused the crash.

They said tapes of the communications between the plane and airport control tower were sealed and would be played back when investigators arrive from Indonesia and Iceland.

The plane was chartered by Garuda Indonesian Airlines in October to carry Moslems from East Java to Saudi Arabia for a month's pilgrimage to Mecca and Medina, Islam's holiest shrines. Some 70,000 Indonesians are making the pilgrimage this year.

The Indonesiap government sent two military transport planes to Colombo loaded with caskets for carrying the bodies back to Indonesia.

The worst disaster in aviation history occurred March 27, 1977, when a KLM Royal Dutch Airlines 747 crashed into a chartered Pan American World Airways 747 on the ground in the Canary Islands, killing 582 persons.

On March 3, 1974, a Turkish Airlines DC-10 jet crashes near Paris, killing 345 persons in the worst single-plane disaster.

The worst military plane disaster happened April 4, 1975, when a U.S. Air Force C-5A crashed near Saigon, South Vietnam, with a load of orphans. A total of 172 persons aboard the craft were killed.

BIG SALE FOR BOEING — While a mockup of Boeing's next generation of jet airliners, the 767, takes shape at the plant at Renton, Wash., the company continues to take multi-billion-dollar orders for the wide-bodied, twin-jet craft. American Airlines and Delta Wednesday announced orders for 72 of the new 767s, following an earlier order for 30 by United Airlines. The 767 is expected to go into operation in 1981 or early in 1982. Recession Doubted By Carter price controls would be necessary, as in the case of war," he said.

On his moves to bolster the value of the U.S. dollar, Carter said, "I meant and I do mean business."

"I intend to hold my course within forseeable circumstances ... despite temporary aberrations."

Carter also said he will persist in his drive to be "fiscally responsible" and to hold down federal spending.

Carter also reported progress has been made in strategic arms talks with the Soviet Union, but he acknowledged his recent prediction that an agreement would be reached within the next two weeks was ill-advised.

The president, who has acted as prime mediator in the Egyptian-Israeli peace talks since the September summit at the Camp David presidential retreat, said he was disappointed and frustrated by recent developments.

"It is disappointing to me," he told reporters. "I had anticipated in a few days after Camp David that we would have an agreement."

Carter described the differences blocking a treaty as "miniscule."

"We've made progress that is irreversible, in my opinion," Carter said.

Asked about two Israeli newspaper reports that he might call another summit to break the talks deadlock, Carter said he could not imagine "anything more dreary."

"I have no intention of going to another summit and I hope and pray it will not be necessary," Carter said.

He said a peace accord "would be a tremendous leap forward" for peace in the entire Middle East, even for the Arab nations now strongly opposed to the Israeli-Egyptian separate negotiations.

"I think both sides are acting in good faith," he said, but added that both sides want to interpret the Camp David agreement to their own benefit.

He repeated his complaint that press leaks by negotiators and the repeated shuttling between the Middle East and the talks in Washington have contributed to the new deadlock.

About SALT negotiations with the Soviet Union, Carter said, "I think in the last few weeks there's been an alleviation of differences. Since the (Anatoly) Shcharansky trial, I think we've moved forward."

Administration Trying To Avoid Labor Hassle

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an effort to avoid a clash with organized labor, the Carter administration may relax the 7 percent wage and benefits standard of its new anti-inflation plan, the Washington Post reported today.

However, the newspaper quoted the officials as saying that no decisions have been made. The officials, who were not identified, emphasized that any changes would affect only the calculation of the increased costs of maintaining existing fringe benefits.

When President Carter announced his plan last month, Teamsters President Frank Fitzsimmons issued a conciliatory statement indicating the nation's largest union could support the program if there were upward "adjustments" in the wage standard, and progress in holding down price increases.

Meanwhile, the Post also quoted a labor official as saying Wednesday that the changes the administration appears to be contemplating in the wage standard do not go far enough to substantially alter labor's opposition to Carter's program.

The Council on Wage and Price Stability, which administers the anti-inflation program, has said that all increased costs paid by an employer would count against the 7 percent standard.

But labor leaders, such as Fitzsimmons and AFL-CIO President George Meany, have argued that the wage standard in the voluntary program is more rigid than in previous mandatory wage and price control programs.

The angry AFL-CIO is charging that President Carter, breaking his only campaign promise to the labor federation, refused Meany's request to talk over Carter's anti-inflation program a few days before its formal unveiling.

The AFL-CIO president had tried repeatedly without success since late summer for a meeting with Carter to discuss Meany's objections to the plan's voluntary wage and price guidelines, AFL-CIO sources said Wednesday.

Carter's refusal incensed Meany, said the sources who asked to remain anonymous. The 14-million member federation's executive council subsequently rejected the program as unfair to workers and called for mandatory wage-price controls.

Administration officials said a personal meeting was unnecessary and could not be scheduled. One official, noting frequent reports about Carter and Meany not mixing well personally, said the AFL-CIO would not have changed its position had the two men met.

The administration source, who did not want to be quoted by name, said, "It's no secret that there's not perfect chemistry between Carter and Meany." He added that past meetings between the two "all turned out unsatisfactory."

"If the AFL-CIO knew the program in advance and if positions on it were already locked, it (a meeting) would have been a bust, anyway," the administration official said.

But one Meany aide charged Wednesday that "Carter broke the only campaign promise he ever made to us: 'Anytime you have a problem, come see me.'"

"No Democratic president has ever not seen us," added the aide, who declined to be identified.

In the 26 years that he has headed the AFL and later the AFL-CIO, Meany has worked — and tangled — with seven presidents, dating back to Harry S. Truman.

Two years ago, the AFL-CIO was revelling over the election of a Democratic president it had helped to victory. Last week, the 84-year-old Meany was reviling Carter, calling him the most conservative president since Calvin Coolidge.

Meany's last request for a meeting was made Thursday, Oct. 19, five days before Carter announced his program in a televised address. Meany had specifically asked to meet before the program was announced.

Carter turned down the request on Oct. 20, citing a tight schedule that included a long weekend at Camp David, the nearby presidential mountain retreat, the AFL-CIO sources said.

An administration source confirmed that account. He said Carter's aides had been consulting regularly with the AFL-CIO on the program and that the president, weary from campaigning and anxious to rest, felt a personal meeting would be unproductive.

White House spokeswoman Claudia Townsend said Wednesday that she could not reach Carter to confirm that sequence of events.

Asked about the federation's charge of a broken campaign promise, she replied, "The administration and the White House have consulted with the AFL-CIO during the development of the inflation program ... I don't think anyone could deny that the president has been in touch with them."

It is understood that Meany wanted the meeting to extract a firm pledge from Carter that his anti-inflation program would succeed in holding down prices.

Protests Broken Up By Police, Soldiers

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Police and soldiers broke up anti-shah demonstrations in three cities today, but oil production hit 3.4 million barrels as the industry edged back to normal after a 15-day strike.

Troops fired on protesters in Behbahan, near the Kuzestan oilfields, wounding five, one critically, police there said.

In the holy city of Mashad, troops fired into the air and threw tear gas grenades to break up demonstrations for the second consecutive day.

The demonstrators in the three cities were denouncing Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, Iran's absolute ruler.

Daily oil production reached 3.3 million barrels within 24 hours of officials declaring the strike ended Tuesday. But sources said output dipped to 3.2 million barrels Wednesday due to technical factors rather than any disruption by the 37,000 workers.

The government's National Iranian Oil Co. said output was increasing in the vast southwestern Kuzestan oilfield and offshore fields in the Persian Gulf.

Officials reported the Persian Gulf refinery at Abadan, the world's biggest, was turning out more than 470,000 barrels daily, just under its normal level.

Smaller refineries at Tehran, Tabriz, and Kermanshah were reported producing 190,000 barrels a day, and a plant at Shiraz was scheduled to resume work within the next few days.

Western sources said normal daily oil production of 6 million barrels will take several days while wells and other installations are brought back to pre-strike levels.

The oil walkout ended after the shah's representatives assured the strikers he would end martial law declared Sept. 8, release more political prisoners and replace foreign nationals in senior positions in the oil industry with trained Iranians.

More than 1,100 persons have died in Iran since January in violence spearheaded by political activists demanding reforms and Moslem traditionalists who consider the shah's Westernizing reforms contrary to the teachings of the Koran, the Moslem holy book.

Snow Deep In Section Of Plains

through the Shamrock-Memphis-Clarendon areas," a weatherman said.

The advisory is for the Panhandle and northern South Plains.

In a special weather statement at 9:35 a.m. today, the National Weather Service said scattered light snow was still falling over the western half of the Panhandle and adjoining portions of New Mexico.

Heavier snow, the statement said, was falling over much of the East Central Panhandle south of Pampa and Borger and in the South Central Panhandle as far south as Plainview.

Freezing rain and drizzle was reported hampering travel over the Northeast Texas and Eastern Oklahoma Panhandles.

"Travelers should exercise extreme caution while traveling through the area as most roads are very slick," the weather service warned.

The rain and snow is being caused an an upper-level low pressure system moving east across Texas from Arizona and combining with a cold front that moved down from the Rocky Mountains a few days ago.

The front has reached from south of Shreveport, La., to the middle Gulf Coast, and all parts of the state reported rain Wednesday night and early today.

Lubbock had .06 inch of rain in the 24 hours ending this morning.

Spur had sleet and pea-size hail during the night, and it was snowing in Tulia when the sun came up today.

Overnight low temperatures included 34 at Lubbock, 28 at Dimmitt and Hereford, 29 at Olton, 32 at Post and 33 at Matador.

Rainfall was similarly light elsewhere around the state except at Dallas, where 1.35 was reported, and Fort Worth, where 1.46 fell.

The 28-degree readings at Dimmitt and Hereford were the lowest reported in the state.

It was 56 in Houston and 61 at Alice overnight.

In Eastern New Mexico, Clovis had 2 inches of snow and an overnight low of 29.

The sub-freezing weather was blamed for the Wednesday death of Charles E. Rowe, 31, of Blackwell, Okla., whose body was found in his car shortly after noon Wednesday where it plunged off a cliff about 15 miles southeast of Amarillo.

Law enforcement officers said the car skidded off icy Farm 1151 and that the accident probably occurred 10 hours before it was discovered.

Heavy rain posed a threat of flash flooding in Arkansas, Oklahoma and northeastern Texas today, while freezing rain, sleet or snow fell over the Rockies and parts of the Great Plains and Mississippi Valley.

Heaviest rain was in southeastern Oklahoma and southwestern Arkansas, where flash flood warnings were issued.

ditional skycaps as well as a parking lot spotter to keep traffic flowing in the airport parking lot.

In addition, council members asked that the feasibility of a shuttle service between the overflow parking lot and the terminal building continue to be examined.

Also this morning, council members set a hearing on a Pioneer Natural Gas request for an increase in domestic rates for 11:30 a.m., Jaunary 11, 1979.

Ross advised the council it could hear the utility's initial presentation, then continue the hearing pending the completion of the city's hearing on industrial gas rates.

A Citizen's Traffic Commission recommendation for a traffic signal at 34th Street and Chicago Avenue was approved by the council. The signal had been requested by the Bowie Elementary School Parent-Teacher Association.

zen cooperation, hard-working and well-trained employees and the use of two-way radios on all buses.

Wyett said the district's fleet of 87 buses — 40 of which were bought just for the integration plan — has experienced only 12 accidents to date. No students or school personnel have been injured, he said.

One problem is that some buses are crowded, Wyett said. The district probably will have to buy more buses next year, he added.

School trustees and administrators discussed plans for letting bus students out of class 10 minutes early on bad-weather days. Also, Irons said he is re-evaluating the district's criteria for calling off school in the event of snow.

School district consultants in math and reading reported on their efforts to ensure a smooth transition when students change schools at midterm for desegregation purposes.

Teachers are keeping records on where each student stands on the ladder of basic skills so that after the switch, students will be able to pick up where they left off, the consultants said.

U.N. Official Calls 1978 Exceptional For Floods

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United Nations' disaster relief coordinator says 1978 was an exceptional year for floods, with vast areas that normally are safe being inundated and millions of people affected.

Faruk N. Berkol, speaking to the General Assembly's Economic Committee, said Vietnam experienced the worst flood disaster in decades in September. He said other severe floods occurred in Peru, Nepal, Laos, Afghanistan and Thailand. "Water, an essential to life itself, is also a destroyer of life," he said.

Brokaw Defends Loan

BROKAW

The host of NBC's "Today" show defended on Wednesday his obtaining a $345,000 loan guarantee from the Small Business Administration to help him buy a South Dakota radio station.

"I am not taking any money away from any deserving people," Brokaw said. "The government is not out a nickel by this transaction."

The loan was obtained under a program intended to encourage broadcast ownership by minorities.

Brokaw said he and a friend, owners of Tom Tom Communications, Inc. decided to buy a radio station for $400,000 in Rapid City. The local bank in Yankton had a loan limit of $225,000 and suggested they go to the SBA for the guarantee, said Brokaw, a South Dakota native.

"I would never have gone to the SBA for money because I think it's wrong to take money from that pool," said Brokaw, who declined to discuss his salary except to say it was more than $250,000. "But it's not wrong at the suggestion of the local banker. I got my loan from the bank, not the SBA."

Ad Surprises Byrne

Byrne's chief spokesman, Joseph Santangelo, said Wednesday that use of the governor's picture was unauthorized despite his signing a proclamation Monday honoring the 10th anniversary of the Pennsauken-based Subaru of America.

Despite Bryne's surprise, he quickly placed the advertisement in perspective, quipping: "Who would buy a used car from me?"

Wedding Plans Denied

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The rumors are wrong — again, says Gov. Edmund Brown Jr.'s press secretary. He has not asked singer Linda Ronstadt to marry him and has no plans to do so.

The press secretary, Elisabeth Coleman, volunteered the denial Wednesday after one report in The Wall Street Journal and another on gossip columnist Rona Barrett's ABC "Good Morning America" program.

The Journal quoted "well informed" California Democrats as saying the 40-year-old Democrat might announce his engagement to Miss Ronsadt "in the next few months."

Miss Barrett said Brown proposed last weekend at his retreat in the Sierras, but that the singer turned him down because it would hurt his presidential ambitions.

Said Miss Coleman: "There is absolutely no substance to any of these rumors. It's all just total nonsense. There was no proposal."

Hugging Society

JAMUL, Calif. (AP) — The "Jamul Swings" bumper stickers that poke fun at this sleepy little town of 3,000 are being edged by a new sticker, from the Jamul Huggers Society.

The Lighter Side Of Today's News

For one crisp dollar bill, you get a bumper sticker, a membership card and a constitution for the club, which says in part:

"The first, most fundamental right of children is the right to be loved — hugged.

"The first few minutes of the day are the most important. They set the spirit of the whole day. Have a morning love hug.

"Stop what you're doing in the middle of the day, shout 'Time out for love,' and take the time for a big hug.

"Bedtime — 'Good night, Mommy loves you, Daddy loves you, everybody loves you.'"

The Huggers Society was born when Judy Toneck, a police officer's wife, was asked to give the daily thought at a PTA meeting last month. She said children should be treated better and "maybe even a constitution drawn up to protect their rights to be loved."

Her 9-year-old son, Dan, approves. The hugs, he said Wednesday, "make you feel better."

Snowy SOS Leads Rescuers To Hiker

SONORA, Calif. (AP) — A backpacker who discovered a chapter on survival in his first-aid handbook was rescued after four days in the wilderness when a search and rescue team spotted the huge "SOS" he stamped out in the snow.

Arthur Reschke, 47, was airlifted by helicopter from Piute Lake in the Stanislaus National Forest on Tuesday, Tuolumne County sheriff's deputies reported. He said he was passing the time reading his handbook when he came upon the survival chapter and the SOS suggestion.

Book Measures World Economy

By LEROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — Foreign exchange rates are "a rubber ruler" when it comes to measuring the real affluence of nations, says Prof. Robert Summers of the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School.

For the past decade a team of scholars, of which Summers is a member, has been looking for a better ruler under the auspices of a United Nations venture known as the International Comparison Project.

Summers says the better yardstick has been found. It is described with the aid of difficult looking mathematical equations in a thick paperback book filled with formidable tables comparing the wealth of nations by the new measurement and by fluctuating currency rates.

The book is the second since the UN project began and includes studies of six additional countries. It is based on conditions prevailing in 1973 and does not take into account recent sharp fluctuations in currency rates.

An article in the current Wharton Magazine by Prof. Irving Kravis, Prof. Alan Heston and Summers explains the significance the project's work. Summers told UPI the use of currency rates as a measuring ruler gives the false impression that Sweden, Switzerland and West Germany have surpassed the United States in per capita affluence. But using a measurement based on the Gross Domestic Product, it becomes apparent that the peoples of these countries have not made significant gains in affluence or true domestic productivity relative to the United States.

Summers said it also becomes apparent that many of the underdeveloped countries are much more affluent and productive relative to the United States than is supposed because we are used to thinking of these countries' business, wages and standards of living in terms of the currency exchange rates.

Rating the United States at 1.000, for example, India had a relative gross domestic product of .020 when measured by the 1973 exchange rate between the dollar and the rupee, the team found. But when measured by the purchasing power parity ruler, India's gross domestic product that year relative to that of the United States was three times as large — .064.

The significance of such discrepancies is obvious, Summers said and could have international repercussions.

Using the new measurement could affect the allocation of United Nations grants and assessments; it could affect the attitude of the United States and other countries in dispensing foreign aid; it could have a significant impact on overseas investments of industy.

The UN will continue the project and gradually expand the studies to more countries. It also will seek to sharpen the observations and produce an even better substitute for the rubber ruler of the currency markets, Summers said.

Summers said the UN's findings are no surprise to Americans used to living abroad, who have long been aware that in some countries the dollar was overpriced in terms of what it would buy.

In the last few months, though, Americans have found themselves the victims of an underpriced currency.

The study shows that in 1973, West Germany's GDP relative to that of the United States as measured by purchasing power parity was .805 as against an indication of .937 as measured by currency exchange rates. Switzerland's purchasing power parity was .721 against 1.181 as measured by exchange rates.

Jurors Find Hunt Guilty Of Murder

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A state jury's decision that a 45-year-old San Antonio man should serve 18 years in prison for the 1977 "mercy killing" strangulation of his invalid mother is a "travesty of justice," says one of the man's attorneys.

"For a man to be placed in the penitentiary for any term of years for an act of love is a travesty of justice," attorney Jim Law of Dallas said after the jury returned the decision Wednesday against his client, John Maxwell Hunt.

The state jury had taken an hour and 40 minutes minutes Tuesday to convict Hunt of murder in the Oct. 31, 1977 slaying of Frances Adele Hunt, 68.

State District Judge John G. Benavides, who formally sentence Hunt, is legally bound by the jury's recommendation of an 18-year prison term.

Law had fervently sought a probated sentence for Hunt, begging the jury, "Please do not dehumanize this gentle, beautiful man by sending him to the penitentiary."

Law said he would ask for a new trial and file an appeal if that request is denied.

Prosecutors had asked for a prison term, but did not press for the maximum penalty of life in prison.

Mrs. Hunt suffered a stroke in 1964 and was confined to a wheelchair. Hunt testified Monday that he strangled his mother with an electrical cord and his hands after she had fallen from her wheelchair and repeatedly begged, "Don't make me live anymore."

He said he used the cord before he realized it was cutting him and his mother. He then choked her with his hands, he said.

But prosecutor Bill Blagg argued, "Mercy killing is not excused by the law of this state or any other state. This man, on Oct. 31, 1977, took it upon himself to play God."

Blagg said an acquittal would set a dangerous precedent. "We would be stacking bodies up like cord wood," he added.

Unless appeals are successful, Texas law dictates that Hunt must serve at least a third of his prison sentence before becoming eligible for parole.

New Substance Could Reduce High Levels Of Cholesterol

DALLAS (AP) — A manmade substance, which tastes like margarine and could substitute for cooking oil, dramatically reduces high cholesterol levels and the accompanying risk of heart attacks and stroke, say two teams of scientists.

"Sucrose polyester seems to have remarkable potential as a cholesterol-lowering agent," with many advantages over existing drugs, said Dr. Charles L. Glueck, who heads the University of Cincinnati's General Clinical Research Center.

Too much cholesterol in the blood greatly increases the risk of major heart problems, according to heart specialists, who blame much of the problem on Americans' fondness for high-cholesterol foods such as eggs and red meat.

Drugs are available to reduce cholesterol but most are difficult to take because of unpleasant side-effects and "drugs are of no value if you can't get people to take them," Glueck told a news conference.

The experimental substance could simply be used like butter on toast or pancakes, like vegatable oil for fried foods and like shortening for many recipes, Glueck told a news conference.

"It would even be effective with a high-cholesterol, high-fat diet...that doctors would otherwise shudder about," said Dr. John Crouse of the University of California-San Diego. He quickly added that it can never replace a sensible diet.

Glueck said sucrose polyester has produced "no obvious or substantial side-effects" in initial tests. He said it does reduce the level of vitamins A and E, but these are easily replaced.

Considered a drug by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, sucrose polyester is apparently several years from being commercially available. It was developed and patented by Proctor & Gamble.

Glueck and Crouse described their separate studies Wednesday at an American Heart Association conference here.

Glueck said tests with 24 healty males showed the substance reduced cholesterol levels an average of about 10 percent. Crouse, who gave sucrose polyester to 11 obese patients who had been dieting for three weeks, reported decreases of 11 to 15 percent.

The researchers said the substance seems to work by attaching itself to cholesterol in the intestine, before it moves into the blood. Because sucrose polyester cannot be digested, it and the captured cholesterol are passed out of the body with other wastes.

The substance, which results from a chemical reaction of sugars and fatty acids, was developed several years ago for possible use in low-calorie foods, said Fred H. Mattson of Proctor & Gamble's laboratory in Cincinnati.

He said its value in reducing cholesterol was only recently discovered and "it's impossible to guess when or whether it will be put on the market. We're still in the very early stages."

Cholesterol is a fatty substance found in all living things. It is produced naturally by the human body and consumed in substantial quantities in eggs and red meat.

Too much cholesterol in the blood can cause deposits to form on the walls of arteries. That leaves less room for blood flow and sets the stage for heart attacks and strokes.

Courts Bill Hits Snag

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Despite the urging of local lawyers, Lubbock County commissioners say they won't ask the state legislature to create more courts here.

The Lubbock County Bar Association proposal for a sixth state district court and third county court-at-law cannot be justified in light of the costs to taxpayers, commissioners said.

"We are talking about a tremendous amount of money — and I'm still not convinced two new courts are that badly needed," County Commissioner Coy Biggs said.

"The feeling of the commissioners court is that we don't want to have any more courts established until we know we can afford them," Biggs said.

Added Commissioner Alton Brazell, "At the present time, we simply can't ask for any more courts. If we ever do ask for additional courts, it should be on the condition that the state will pick up its rightful share of the costs."

In fact, Brazell said he will ask the bar association to push next year for legislation "to get the state to pay the full cost of the state judicial system." Currently the county and state share the cost of state district courts.

If the county's only fiscal responsibility is for county-level courts and justices of the peace, then "we would be in a much better position" to afford a third county court-at-law, Brazell said.

The Lubbock County Commissioners Court discussed the bar association's request regarding new courts on Tuesday. County Judge Rod Shaw was asked to draft a resolution outlining commissioners' opposition to the proposed additional courts, Brazell said.

The commissioners court will consider the resolution this afternoon.

After a study of caseloads on local courts, the bar association Aug. 18 voted to ask county commissioners to request that the state legislature establish another district court and county court-at-law here.

On Monday, County Auditor Dale Gallimore released a 12-page study analyzing the costs of such new courts. Brazell said the figures were "very surprising."

"Most of us had thought that the county courts-at-law were paying their own way — that the fees, fines and other revenues were enough to offset expenses. But that apparently isn't true," Brazell said.

According to Gallimore's study, the two county courts-at-law in 1979 will have a net cost — total expenses minus total revenues — of $113,000. Creation of another court-at-law would increase the cost to Lubbock County taxpayers to $145,000, the study indicates.

The net cost of the five district courts next year will about $7,675,000, the report said. If another district court is established, taxpayers will be picking up a $761,000 tab, the study said.

Brazell said many costs, namely salaries, would be paid at state expense if two proposed courts were established.

"I haven't had any district judges say they feel they need an additional county court," Brazell said. Instead, he said he was told by [illegible] a court would be necessary.

A local judge of one [illegible] court-at-law has [illegible] for another court-at-law. But the judge believed the cost [illegible] too critical," Brazell said.

"In light of the costs and [illegible] of the judges, we will send a [illegible] the bar association telling them we don't think we can justify asking the legislature for additional courts at this time," Brazell said.

Commissioner Biggs said some of the workload on the county courts-at-law may be alleviated when a new state constitutional amendment, passed by Texas voters last week, takes effect next year.

The amendment allows Justices of the Peace courts to handle cases involving money up to $500. Currently the Justices of the Peace's limit is $200, and cases above that must be handled in a county court-at-law.

Bone Discovery Delays Work On Center

The federal government may have a bone to pick with Lubbock County over the site the county chose for its juvenile detention center.

The $1 million construction project, proposed for the city's north side, is being funded jointly by the county and the federal government. It must meet federal laws meant to protect places of historical or archaeological significance.

Experts from Texas Tech have been digging at the nine-acre, $119,000 site to determine if the site has any such importance. Wednesday they struck what may be an unfortunate discovery for the county — a bone.

"We really don't know what kind of bone it is — whether it's important or whether it might hold up the project. We certainly hope nothing is going to stop us," said Lloyd Watts, the county's juvenile probation office administrator.

"We're going to get together with the archaeologist who found the bone and try to assess the situation as soon as possible," Watts added.

Designers Reveal Summer Collection

By JOANNE WINSHIP

NEW YORK (UPI) — Pancaldi and B, the fashion firm with the intriguing name, has enlarged its spring-summer collection this year, adding Swiss voile and cotton to its extensive group of silks.

This is one of the firm's most colorful collections, all made in Italy, to date. Bright florals and abstract prints predominate.

Gaccordian pleating with yards of fabric, elasticized waists and unpleated matching shirts and tops come in both long evening and short daytime lengths. Soft jackets have small shoulder pads. Sheer voile dresses can be had with or without matching shorts.

Pancaldi and B's large hand screened silks are full of details, such as inverted pleats in solid colors on a print dress or skirt, contrasting color piping on sleeves and silk embroidery on little Peter Pan collars of voile shirts and dresses.

Long silk ribbons in two and three color tones make unusual belts for dresses. Tunics made with three silk scarves are worn with tapered silk pants. Standouts are silk T-shirts or spaghetti strapped camisole tops with flyaway panel skirts and huge matching silk scarves.

Cygne Designs, the firm of Irving Benson, pepped up the first week of the Seventh Avenue's seasonal fashion showings for 1979 with a sophisticated collection including linens and sateen cottons as well as beautiful silks for which the house is famous.

Suiting linen as well as handkerchief linen is used for shirts, blazers and some beautiful little shirts and blouses. Skirts are slit on the sides.

The Cygne silk group gets better each season. Crepe de chine overplaid for beautiful soft skirts is a winner. Ditto for the open stripe silk georgette. A knockout is the toga dress shirred and tied on the hips and slit high on both sides in shades of tea rose, mauve, champagne and cinnamon.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	3 ♠	3 NT	Pass
4 ◇	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
6 ◇	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Four of ◇.

The astute declarer pays attention to the bidding and play, draws whatever deductions are available, and then develops a line of play consistent with those inferences. South's technique at his diamond slam was masterful.

North-South did well to brush aside West's barrage and get to a good slam. After South took out from three no trump to four diamonds, North realized the hand had slam potential. He cue-bid his ace of hearts, implying diamond support—if it was a real suit, he would have shown it over three spades rather than respond three no trump. In view of his tremendous playing strength, South needed no further encouragement to contract for slam.

West did well to refrain from leading the ace of spades. That would have handed declarer his contract on a platter. When dummy appeared, it seemed that the slam depended on the club finesse. However, the bidding and West's failure to lead a spade, which would have been a more likely choice if he did not have the ace, presented declarer with a virtually sure-fire line.

Declarer won the opening lead in dummy and ruffed a spade. He cashed the king of hearts, crossed to the queen and ruffed another spade. A heart to the ace stripped that suit from both his hand and dummy, and the king of spades was led from the table.

When East followed to this trick with the nine, the contract was guaranteed. Instead of ruffing, declarer simply discarded a club. West took his ace of spades, but he did not relish being on lead. If he returned a spade, declarer would ruff in dummy while discarding the queen of clubs from his hand. If he shifted to a club, it would be into declarer's ace-queen. Either way, the slam was sure to make.

Declarer's play is known in the trade as "loser-on-loser." By employing it, declarer telescoped two potential losers into one.

Letter Of Recommendation Promotes Careers Of Terminated Employees

By BETTY YARMON

NEW YORK (WNS) — When you leave a job, no matter what the reason, the way you do it can have important bearing on the rest of your career.

With this in mind, here are two commandments set down by Robert Traxel, career specialist, in a new book, "Manager's Guide to Successful Job Hunting" (McGraw-Hill).

— Thou shalt always leave an employer with good feelings toward you — you will need such feelings some day.

— Thou shalt speak only positively of a former employer.

To a potential employer the most important and credible reference source is your former employer, whereas references from your clergyman, former schoolteachers, neighbors and acquaintances generally are considered to be without much value. And it doesn't take too many negative opinions on the part of a former employer to turn off an employer-to-be.

Basically, Traxel suggests that when you are about to resign or be terminated, you ask for a letter of recommendation. Positive memories can be all too short after you leave. Problems invariably arise and you won't be there either to solve them or to explain them away. You may well be blamed for your boss's errors or for those of others in your department.

Suddenly, then, you might go from good guy to bad guy. In answer to a question about you, your former boss might say: "Yes, I honestly thought he was an excellent employee, and was disappointed when he resigned. However..." Then come the comments and the innuendoes.

If something like this should occur and come to your attention, and you have a good letter of recommendation, at least you could counter with: "If I was so bad, why did they keep me for five years and give me those raises and promotions? They didn't have to give me this letter of recommendation."

If you are let go, try to learn the boss's part of the story and start mending bridges. If feasible, you might even want to invite your boss to lunch, to discuss matters between you and to try to repair the relationship.

Don't argue or fight, but even rather agree with your manager. You want and need a good recommendation, so don't blame anyone for anything. At this point you need goodwill, not ill feelings. Get the boss on your side, then ask for a letter of recommendation.

When you do leave the company's employ, the boss probably will be feeling somewhat guilty. He will understand that you are feeling some pain. But a week or month from now, he probably will not be feeling this way, so this is the time to get that letter from him.

Here is a suggested way to ask for that letter: "Frankly, I need this letter of recommendation to get another job. I understand why you are doing this. I agree that I didn't do..., but I did contribute quite a bit in...I would sincerely appreciate a good letter of recommendation. Would you be so kind?"

Will your employer-to-be check your references? Traxel says probably not, although you can never be sure. Advising that it is best to be safe, he suggests that if you were not able to straighten matters out with your boss before you left, you should explain your former situation to a prospective new employer.

Tell your side of the story he counsels before your potential employer hears the bad news about you from someone else. At that point, the letter of recommendation certainly will come in handy.

If you are let go, incidentally, and you are asked on an application form why you left your former employer, Traxel suggests these responses: personality conflict; communications problem; differences over policy, resulting in resignation.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: My head's spinning with indecision. I'm in the process of getting a divorce, and my husband is begging me to give him another chance.

The problem has always been that Harry can't resist young girls! I was 16 and he was 27 when we married, and during our six year marriage Harry got five girls pregnant! One was barely 15 and he'd have gone to jail for sure if his boss hadn't retained a really good lawyer. After that Harry had a vasectomy and now we can't have any more children. We have one little boy and I've had four miscarriages, and I've always wanted another child.

I decided to divorce him after I caught him in the bushes in broad daylight with his 18-year-old niece at a family 4th of July picnic.

Abby, Harry is really a sweet guy and a wonderful provider. (He's a top salesman.) Half of me says, "Take him back," and the other half says, "go through with the divorce."

I may be crazy, but I still love him.

PRISONER OF LOVE

Dear Prisoner: Listen to the half with the brains in it and don't take him back until he gets into therapy. If you resume your marriage in his present state, prepare to live indefinitely with a weak man who has a weakness for young girls.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: Where is it written that it is bad manners to tip the owner? I mean the owner of a saloon, a restaurant, a beauty parlor or a barber shop.

When the owner is right there serving the public I think he (or she) is every bit as entitled to a tip as an employee.

If there is such a rule of etiquette, I think it is dumb and should be done away with.

A QUESTION OF TIPPING

Dear Question: Some die-hard traditionalists insist that "owners of the establishment should not be tipped." However, I believe good service should be appropriately rewarded regardless of who provides it.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: Please tell SICK OF THE SAME DRESS whose co-worker wears the same dress for two weeks straight that's she's been lucky she doesn't work with my husband.

He wears the same pair of trousers everyday until they wear out.

He says it's too much trouble to take the things out of his pockets every night!

GIVEN UP ON HIM

Dear Given Up: Your husband is slackadaiscal.

Cancer-Estrogen Link Refuted

BOSTON (AP) — Yale researchers who studied cancer of the uterus say earlier studies linking the disease to estrogen pills were based on inaccurate research with a built-in bias toward finding cancer.

The doctors said no evidence exists that connects uterine cancer to estrogen.

Moreover, they said, the faulty research technique may also have caused erroneous findings in studies that reported a relationship between birth control pills and breast cancer.

The new research, conducted by Ralph Horwitz and Alvan Feinstein, was published today in the New England Journal of Medicine, the same journal that carried three of the original estrogen reports.

Women often take estrogen to relieve the ill effects of menopause. Previous studies during the past three years warned that the medicine can cause cancer of the endometrium, the inner lining of the uterus.

Those studies, now challenged by the Yale doctors, showed that women who take estrogen during menopause face up to eight times the risk of uterine cancer as other women their age.

Horwitz and Feinstein counter that there is no evidence that estrogen will cause this kind of cancer. Their study found that estrogen increased the risk of uterine cancer 1.7 times — so slightly that no significant hazard can be shown.

"We conclude that the strength of the much-publicized association between estrogens and endometrial cancer has doubtlessly been exaggerated and needs re-evaluation," they wrote.

The Yale doctors stopped short of saying estrogen definitely does not cause this form of cancer. "All we can say is that the relationship has not been proved," Feinstein said in a telephone interview.

After cancer of the cervix, cancer of the uterine lining is the most common malignancy of the female reproductive tract. It usually occurs in women between 50 and 60.

Estrogen, often taken by women going through menopause, can cause bleeding of the uterus, a major symptom of uterine cancer. This bleeding factor led to what the new study says was a built-in bias in favor of finding a cancer link in the earlier reports.

In the earlier studies, researchers compared estrogen-using women who had been treated for uterine cancer with a group of control subjects — women who had other forms of cancer of the sex organs.

The Yale doctors said it may have been the estrogen, not the cancer, that caused these women to bleed and the bleeding could have prompted them to have hospital tests that detected cancer which otherwise would have gone unnoticed.

This way, they said, an unusually large number of estrogen-taking women were found to have uterine cancer — even though there is no proven link between the two.

Feinstein said, "Estrogen leads to the detecting of cancers, not to the causing of them."

In their own study, the Yale doctors compensated for the apparent bias by using as a control group women who were treated for non-cancerous reproductive disorders. This group contained a much larger proportion of estrogen users.

The doctors said the research method that turned up the purported link between estrogen and uterine cancer may also have caused erroneous findings in other studies.

"The type of problem we have cited is particularly disturbing because it is not unique to (the study of) estrogens and endiometrial cancer," their report said. "The absence of suitable attention to detection bias casts doubt on the odds-ratios found for many other etiologic associations. ..."

In a separate telephone interview Wednesday, the doctors suggested as an example of such other "associations" the widely reported connection between birth control pills and breast cancer.

In the same issue of the journal, an editorial written by two professors at the Harvard School of Public Health defended research methods used in the earlier studies that reported the cancer link.

They maintained that uterine cancer will eventually be diagnosed, so there is little chance estrogen users were over-represented in the studies.

"Instead of providing reassurance about the safety of estrogens," they wrote, "the data presented by Horwitz and Feinstein only add to the accumulating evidence that exogenous estrogens induce endometrial cancer."

Top Campaign Spenders Score Victories

WASHINGTON (AP) — The biggest campaign spenders won 85 percent of this year's contested Senate races, a study of disclosure statements indicates.

The study, released Wednesday by consumer advocate Ralph Nader's Congress Watch, said the winning candidates outspent their opponents in 28 of the 33 races.

"This is a demonstration of the golden rule of politics, which seems to be that 'he who has the gold rules,'" said Mark Green, director of Congress Watch.

In the biggest percentage difference, Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, spent $297,000 in winning re-election over Democrat Donald Hobbs, who spent $2,000. Stevens' total was 148 times that of Hobbs.

The biggest spender by far was Sen. Jesse Helms, whose campaign cost $6,351,000, or 29 times what Democrat John Ingram spent, Congress Watch said.

Another wide disparity came in Georgia, where Democratic incumbent Sam Nunn outspent Republican John Stokes $480,000 to $5,000.

Green said party affiliation made little difference: "When Democrats spent the most money they almost always won; when Republicans spent the most they almost always won."

Congress Watch said the study shows a need for public financing of congressional races, a plan it has supported in the past. "Unless the Senate by the year 2000 wants to be a club of rich men we have to pursue public financing," Green said.

Congress has defeated measures for taxpayer financing of its races, although there is such a system for presidential campaigns.

Pete Teeley, a spokesman for the Republican National Committee, said his party will continue to oppose the idea in congressional races, contending "it poses a disadvantage to the challenger against the incumbent; it is unfair to have the same spending limit on a challenger as on an entrenched incumbent."

In the five races in which the biggest spender lost, four involved defeats of incumbents, Congress Watch said. They were Sens. Thomas McIntyre, D-N.H.; Dick Clark, D-Iowa; Edward Brooke, D-Mass., and Robert Griffin, R-Mich.

Congress Watch said the spending survey includes both primary and general election expenditures disclosed to the Federal Election Commission.

Excluded were elections of Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., and Sen.-elect Howell Heflin, D-Ala., because neither had a major party opponent.

Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, $297,000, vs. Democrat Donald Hobbs, $2,000.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., $480,000 vs. Republican John Stokes, $5,000.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., $6,351,000, vs. Democrat John Ingram, $217,000.

Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., $179,000, vs. Democrat Vern Cook, $22,000.

Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, $369,000, vs. Democrat Dwight Jensen, $51,000.

Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., $826,000, vs. Toney Anaya, $128,000.

Sen. Walter Huddleston, D-Ky., $361,000, vs. Republican Louis Guenthner, $65,000.

Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., $310,000, vs. Republican James Reynolds, $69,000.

Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., $372,000, vs. Republican James Baxter, $150,000.

Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., $1,645,000, vs. Democrat Jane Eskind, $859,000.

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, $3,586,000, vs. Democrat Robert Krueger, $1,946,000.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-N.C., $1,765,000, vs. Democrat Charles "Pug" Ravenel, $992,000.

Sen. Jennings Randolph, D-W. Va., $500,000, vs. Republican Arch Moore, $370,000.

Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., $1,216,000, vs. Democrat Alex Seith, $1,030,000.

Bloomingdale's Agrees To Pay Fine

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government won agreement today on a $50,000 penalty in its first case under a 1975 law banning sex discrimination in granting credit.

Bloomingdale's, a fashionable New York-based department store chain, agreed to pay the penalty in court papers filed in U.S. District Court in Cincinnati. The Federal Trade Commission, which brought the case, announced the agreement in Washington.

In the case, the FTC charged that some of Bloomingdale's policies violated the Equal Credit Opportunity Act. Bloomingdale's and its parent company, Federated Department Stores, Inc., agreed to pay the civil penalty without admitting any violation of law.

The FTC had alleged that Bloomingdale's failed to consider alimony, child support and separate maintenance payments in deciding who was creditworthy. These are frequent income sources for divorced women.

In addition, the FTC complaint said the stores did not include part-time jobs, pensions and public assistance payments, as required by the law.

Under the agreement, which must be approved by the court, Bloomingdale's would be required to contact all rejected applicants whose rights may have been violated and invite them to reapply for charge accounts. The company agreed to consider the re-applications under the standards of the credit opportunity law.

The agreement also would require Bloomingdale's to change its method of complying with the legal requirement that rejected applicants be given specific reasons on request for why they were denied credit.

The FTC complaint alleged that Bloomingdale's failed to disclose such factors as age and type of employment and instead gave vague reasons for rejecting credit applicants.

The 1975 law prohibited discrimination on the basis of sex or marital status in granting credit. It was amended in 1977 to prohibit discrimination on the basis of race, religion, national origin or age.

Legendary Collection On London Display

LONDON (UPI) — The gold of the legendary El Dorado is gathered in London at the Royal Academy, where the treasures explain the myth of the fabulous "kingdom of gold."

The collection of treasures from the Museo de Oro in Bogota, Colombia, with loans from North American, Europe and Britain, will be opened to the public Nov. 21 through March 18.

The 580 gold exhibits, along with ceramics and some archeological material, illustrate the culture of the Colombian Indians.

Airplane Firm Eyes U.S. Market

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — While the world's major airlines are shopping for jetliners to modernize their fleets, a Brazilian company has its sights on a large market in the United States for small, fuel-efficient planes for regional airlines.

The Brazilian-produced plane, a turboprop called the Bandeirante, is about to start flying on a commercial basis in the United States. But there's a cloud on the horizon. The U.S. Federal Aviation Administration is considering new safety regulations that the Brazilian plane was not designed to meet.

"We have had 500 requests from the States for information about the twin-engine plane," said Col. Ozires Silva, president of the manufacturer of the aircraft, a quasi-government company called Embraer.

Silva estimated that there soon could be a market in the United States for as many as 100 of the Bandeirante, which takes its name from the Portuguese word for "pioneer."

Embraer's entry into the U.S. market comes as the large airlines of the world are embarking on a $70-billion buying spree to modernize their fleets of jetliners. Discount fares are sending airline traffic through the roof at a time when many carriers are starting to replace their older jets with a new generation of quieter models that use less fuel.

This double impetus is expected to generate world sales of 3,500 new airliners worth at least $70 billion between now and 1990. The three large American aircraft companies — Boeing, Lockheed, and McDonnell Douglas — face serious competition from abroad for the first time in almost two decades. Airbus Industrie, a four-nation European consortium, has been aggressively marketing its Airbus plane, bloodying the domestic troika earlier this year by winning a $778 million, 23-plane order from Eastern Air Lines.

But that competition is over sales of large jets, planes that are too big for use by many commuter and regional carriers.

The first U.S. firm to purchase the Brazilian plane, Aero-Industries, paid $1 million each for three Bandeirante models it plans to use on its subsidiary feeder line, Denver-based Trans-Mountain Airlines. Embraer says it will deliver the planes this fall.

Robert Terry, president of the California-based Aero-Industries, estimated in Brazil last month that the U.S. could absorb 1,800 of the Brazilian planes in the coming decade because no U.S. manufacturer builds a plane of similar capacity and price. Aero-Industries has an option to purchase nine more Bandeirantes.

Terry's company will be the American sales and servicing representative for the aircraft. He said he has already sent six pilots and mechanics to train at Embraer's installations in southeastern Brazil.

Embraer developed the Bandeirante about 10 years ago when Brazil was looking for a simple, inexpensive plane tough enough to take off and land on short, unpaved runways, yet light and powerful enough to cover long distances speedily. In the meantime, aircraft manufacturers in other parts of the world had turned to the small jets as the answer to the feeder airlines' needs.

But with the oil crisis that began in 1973, fuel price increases have caused the smaller lines to seek planes offering the fuel economy of the turboprop.

The twin-engine Bandeirante model purchased by Aero-Industries, can haul up to 18 passengers at a cruising speed of 253 miles an hour for 1,395 miles. The two-door plane, which has a cruising ceiling of 25,410 feet, can land on a runway of 3,003 feet. It needs a 2,904-foot runway to take off. The Bandeirante's seats can be easily removed to convert the plane into a cargo carrier.

The Bandeirante just last month earned FAA approval to fly commercially in the United States. But a proposed FAA regulation that would create a new category for airplanes weighing less than 12,500 pounds and having 10 or more passenger seats, could jeopardize the plane's operating status in the United States. The proposed rule would demand a set of safety and performance requirements the Brazilian plane was not designed to meet.

Embraer president Silva said the proposed change in regulations might have been politically motivated, possibly because of Brazil's program to limit the purchase of nonBrazilian aircraft to cut the outflow of foreign currency. Silva also said that he thought American manufacturers might be pressuring aviation authorities to keep the Brazilian plane off the U.S. market for fear the airplane will sell successfully in the United States.

The FAA representative in Brazil, Donald E. Kemp, denied the accusations and said that the FAA's sole preoccupation was with safety. He pointed out that safety standards in the United States have evolved considerably since tte Bandeirante was first produced in 1969.

The new regulation is still under consideration and final approval, if it comes at all, would be a couple of years away. Silva said he was optimistic, that despite the possible restriction, there still is a large market for the aircraft because no other of its size and type exists.

Prior to completing the sale of the Bandeirantes to Aero-Industries in July, Embraer had already exported some of the planes to France, England, Australia, Saudi Arabia and other countries. Embraer president Silva estimates that foreign sales by year end will reach 30, bringing total exports close to 60 since the plane first began selling abroad in 1975.

Embraer said domestic sales of Brandeiantes are expected to surpass 200 later this year. The Brazilian Air Force is the major domestic purchaser of the plane.

Embraer, the world's seventh-largest airplane manufacturer, has already produced 1,700 planes. The 87 percent privately owned aircraft manufacturer produced 550 planes in 1977, including 14 different versions of the Bandeirante. The company also manufactures and exports 10 other types of planes.

Doctors Call For Faster Diagnosis

ATLANTA (UPI) — The International Symposium on Legionnaire's Disease ended at the National Center for Disease Control Wednesday with a call for faster ways to diagnose the mysyterious ailment.

One medical expert, Dr. Jay P. Sanford, an infectious disease specialist with the Department of Defense, told researchers at a closing session that the main priority should be "to continue to develop rapid and quantitative methods for diagnosis," which Sanford said is necessary "to define the spectrum of the disease."

He said early diagnosis is the "most critical area at this time" and that new techniques that identify the Legionnaire's disease bacteria in saliva may afford the means for rapid detection.

In addition, Sanford said that in the future "the question of human-to-human spread is going to be important. There is enough concern (among hospital infection control committees) that one wants to start nailing boards across the doors of hospitals."

He said there had been isolated instances of possible Legionnaires' disease spread among hospital personnel and one investigation had shown a high level of antibodies to the disease in hospital workers, indicating exposure to the illness.

He said nasal secretions "may well be delivered into the air and picked up by other people.

"All of which suggests that there may be person-to-person spread," he said.

Air conditioning systems have been incriminated in four major outbreaks of Legionnaires' disease. Because of this, Sanford said, health standards for air handling equipment may have to be established.

Dr. David Fraser, the CDC's main investigator, said studies were under way to determine the best means of killing Legionnaires' disease organisms in air conditioning cooling towers. He said the CDC was also working with the American Society of Heating, Refrigerating and Air Conditioning Engineers on any possible design changes that may be needed.

Sanford said scientific evidence that Legionnaires' disease bacteria has been around for a long time — at least as far back as 1947 — should "quell some of the anxieties that something new has emerged that is going to eat us alive."

Guadeloupe lies in the Leeward Islands of the West Indies. The main crops are sugar and bananas, with cotton, coffee, vegetables and tropical fruits also grown. Fishing and rum propduction are significant activities.

South African Raps U.S. Policy

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Vowing his country "will not commit suicide at the request of the U.S. government," a South African public relations man Wednesday censured the Carter administration's foreign policy and stand on human rights.

Andre Visser, North American deputy director of the South Africa Foundation, said during a Lubbock news conference his country rejects "outside influence" in its internal matters, including apartheid.

"It's our bed, we will make it," he explained.

Visser, on a goodwill swing through the country to drum up grassroots support for South Africa, asked, plainly referring to Carter's criticism of apartheid, "Why should South Africa be singled out as the whipping boy of the world?"

Reeling off a list of past South African government actions supportive of the United States, Visser, who represents a private citizens' foundation and not the South African government, said South Africans are disturbed by Carter's actions, "especially when we hold out our hand in friendship and get rebuffed every time."

He cited as an example the United States refusal to veto the United Nations arms embargo against South Africa.

"This is frankly something we don't understand," he said, adding his country now is in the dilemma of not being able to buy United States military equipment until the government turns communistic.

He also hinted Communists may be behind world pressure against South Africa because of its apartheid policies.

After noting a buildup of Russian military presence in the Indian Ocean and the Communists' wish to "dominate the world," Visser added, "We've always taken the Communist threat very seriously."

The Communists' attempts to "gain control of the Cape of Good Hope" in South Africa is "not recognized by the present U.S. administration," Visser said.

If the USSR were to gain control of South Africa and its shipping lanes and mineral supplies, their next aim would be Europe and then the United States, Visser warned. "It would be a stepping stone to the United States — you, ultimately."

Visser, whose Lubbock trip was sponsored by the Conservative Caucus of the 19th Congressional District, later Wednesday told a group of about 25 persons it is "fashionable" in this country to condemn South Africa.

The South African government "acknowledges discrimination can't be defended," he admitted, adding changes are being made in segregation laws, education inequalities and job training.

But, he charged, the developing "campaign against South Africa" to force United States corporations to withdraw from South Africa is misguided.

Proponents of disinvestment say South African blacks want withdrawal. "This statement is totally false," Visser claimed, saying it would be "hard to find someone who supports it."

Corporate withdrawal would mean "misery" for about 350,000 blacks and their families, who would be left unemployed and hungry, he explained.

Visser appealed to Americans who fear Communist presence in Africa to support his country's cause.

Saying he perceives goodwill and sympathy from Americans in general, Visser added, "Quite frankly, it (the federal government) doesn't respond to South Africa at all.

"We've been holding out the hand of friendship. We've done everything we can to win frienship." But, he added, Washington balks at his country's internal policies.

He noted, too, that the United States is deepening its relations with avowed foes, such as North Korea, Red China and the Soviet Union.

And, he said, more than 60 countries other than South Africa have legal forms of discrimination. Yet, they are not singled out by the United States, he added.

Visser predicted Rhodesia, torn by civil strife, will stand firm. He explained, "They conceded everything the world asked and that was not enough."

And, he added, "We believe in South Africa we won't satisfy the world until we pack our bags and move out. And that we won't do."

Conflicting Stories Arise In McInnis Trial

The longtime South Texas prosecutor is named in an indictment alleging he plotted to have a friend's ex-husband kidnapped and killed. The murder solicitation charge carries a possible 20-year prison term and $10,000 fine.

The hearing ended Wednesday when State District Judge Vernon Harville of Corpus Christi postponed ruling on two key requests from the defense team. Defense attorney Frank Maloney of Austin argued here for dismissal of the charge on the grounds that McInnis was entrapped.

Harville asked the attorneys to submit briefs concerning the entrapment question and a defense motion to suppress secretly compiled tape recordings. Harville postponed ruling on the motions pending the filing of the briefs. The judge did rule on one motion — denying a state change of venue request.

In final arguments here Wednesday, attorneys for the defense and prosecution disagreed on who initiated the alleged plot to have Noe Villanueva lured into Mexico and killed.

Maloney argued that McInnis was entrapped — the helpless victim of a trap set in part by a vindictive local sheriff.

"The question is who solicited whom," Maloney said.

Prisoner Daniel Rodriguez — the prisoner who says he went to Hidalgo County Sheriff Brig Marmolejo after McInnis approached him about finding a hit man — testified here that he first suggested to McInnis that they get someone to "blow (Villanueva's) brains out."

But Rodriguez said the suggestion was offered "jokingly."

Maloney also argued that Rodriguez initiated most of the conversations with McInnis.

But special prosecutor Michael Hinton of Houston, basing his case on the tapes, argued that McInnis initiated the plot. He also contended that there was no entrapment because one of the parties (Rodriguez) consented to having the jailhouse tape recordings made.

"We're not dealing here with the naive. We're not dealing with the gullible or a man who would be prey to clandestine police methods," Hinton said of McInnis. "This is a man who knows and should know the risks of violating the law."

The lawyers also disagreed on who suggested Reynosa, Mexico as the site where Villanueva was to be abducted and killed. Prosecutors allege that Villanueva's ex-wife Patricia Parada set up a phony meeting with Villanueva in Reynosa.

But Maloney argued that a tape made when Villanueva called Miss Parada from a Houston FBI office shows that Villanueva suggested Reynosa for the meeting. Hinton countered by saying Villanueva had suggested several Rio Grande Valley cities before Miss Parada agreed on the Mexican border city.

The three days of testimony included a parade of criminals and lawyers on the witness stand. Villanueva testified that McInnis had harassed him in the past.

The emotional witness said McInnis maliciously prosecuted him for violating court child custody orders. The district attortney had also represented Miss Parada in the child custody battle.

Villanueva's testimony, marked by outbursts of sobbing, was the first to include statements about what sources close to the prosecution say is the purported motive.

Villanueva said he heard a "rumor" that McInnis was dating Patricia Parada, Villanueva's ex-wife. Miss Parada, 24, of McAllen had been named in a dismissed federal indictment stemming from the alleged plot.

Another witness said she had seen McInnis and Miss Parada at a Reynosa restaurant. The witness testified McInnis and the woman were seated together at a table and eating.

Airline To Move Offices To Texas

NEW YORK (AP) — Flying other people hither and thither, American Airlines has decided to fly itself next summer from New York to Texas, where it plans to set up its new corporate headquarters.

Airline president Albert V. Casey said Wednesday that city and state officials here had hoped to persuade the airline to remain in New York, but could not "begin to match the Dallas offer."

American Airline's board of directors voted unanimously Wednesday to relocate the company's corporate headquarters and an estimated 1,300 jobs to the Dallas-Fort Worth area next summer.

Casey said the move would enable the airline to combine its operation with its flight academy and training center, which already is located in Forth Worth and has 5,000 employees. He said the company belongs in "mid-America" and planned to add six new Southwest routes.

Secondly, he said there would be a 6.6 percent increase in worker productivity because employees would work a 40-hour week instead of the 35 to 37 hours which employees here are currently working for the same wages.

Casey denied that he ever said employees would work harder in Texas, while Mayor Edward Koch insists he did. At a recent City Hall meeting Koch asked Casey, "what do you do down there, whip them?"

Casey said the most important reason for the move was the financial arrangement made with Dallas-Forth Worth Airport officials.

The Texas communities arranged a $143-million tax-exempt bond package to finance facilities for the airline to occupy and paid for the 825 acres of land south of the airport. They also agreed to construct the new headquarters and a new reservation center.

Casey said there was "no point" in New York City even trying to match those conditions.

"It's like trying to add apples and oranges," he said.

Casey also said the city could not guarantee American a 40-year lease, which the Texans could offer.

Although Casey insisted that consolidation of facilities and a good lease package were the "only" reasons the airline decided to move, he did admit that American would save about $1 million in labor costs and about $5 million overall each year.

He said the airline plans to move its personnel next summer, but the new headquarters would not be completed before 1981.

American's Eastern Division headquarters will remain in the city, along with a metropolitan sales and service office, flight operations, airport services and maintenance units with a total staff of 10,000.

Saddle Tramps To Attempt Balloon Record

With enough balloons on hand to make a circus vendor envious, Texas Tech Saddle Tramps will bid Saturday for a few lines of space in the Guinness Book of World Records, as well as add a colorful prelude to the Raiders' Southwest Conference battle with SMU.

The Tramps, the school's spirit organization, joined by other organizations will release 151,000 balloons just prior to the 2 p.m. kickoff in Jones Stadium. And when the gigantic balloon barrage goes up, work involving almost 300 persons will be at an end.

The balloons were donated, Tramps officials reported, and the helium needed to inflate them is being paid for by the Tramps and from donations from Lubbock businessmen.

To fill the 151,000 balloons, the Tramps had to purchase 50,000 cubic feet of helium.

Workers will begin at 7 a.m. Saturday inflating the balloons which will be stored around the edge of the floor of the football field, and in the ramps leading to the playing field. Then, just before game time, the entire collection will be released.

Adding to the atmosphere, a hot-air balloon will be floating in the air of Jones Stadium.

Saddle Tramps officials reported that between 250 and 300 persons will have worked on the project by the time the show begins.

Two representatives of the Guinness Book of World Records will be on hand to witness the record-breaking effort.

In the past, the Tramps and other campus organizations have inflated balloons and released them at football games, usually at homecoming.

Sudduth To Conduct Regional Orchestra

James Sudduth, director of bands at Southwest Texas State University and formerly of Lubbock, will conduct the All Region Junior High Orchestra in concert at 7:30 p.m., Dec. 2 in the Recital Hall of Texas Tech.

One hundred of Lubbock's outstanding junior high orchestra students, will be presented under the supervision of directors in the Texas Music Educators Association.

The students of the orchestra will be selected Nov. 22 during competitive auditions hosted at Smylie Wilson Junior High by Jeff Whitmill, organizer for this year's concert. The students will rehearse two days under Sudduth's direction in preparation for the concert.

Judge Killed By Gunmen In Spain

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Two young men on motor scooters shot and killed a judge who sentenced many Basque separatists to prison during the Franco dictatorship, police reported.

Judge Jose Francisco Mateu, 58, was assassinated shortly after he left his Madrid home to walk to his office. The superintendent of a nearby building was wounded in the foot, apparently by a ricocheting bullet, the police said.

After gunning down the judge, the killers hurled hand grenades apparently to keep police from pursuing them, but the grenades failed to explode. The killers escaped anyway.

Mateu was president of the political crimes court in the last years of Generalissimo Francisco Franco's dictatorship. The court was abolished after Franco's death in 1975, and Mateu became a substitute judge of the national criminal court.

"We had been expecting this," Mateu's 21-year-old son, Jaime, told reporters.

He said his father had received telephoned threats, including some from ETA, the guerrilla organization that has been waging a terrorist campaign for the independence of the Basque provinces in northwest Spain.

The newspaper Pueblo reported that several Madrid judges had received death threats believed to have come from ETA or GRAPO, an ultra-leftist Maoist group. The paper said the police were arranging protection for the judges.

The slaying of Mateu was the third political assassination in Madrid this year. In one attack, ETA guerillas killed an army general and his aide, while in the other Maoists killed the national prison director.

Police said Mateu's killers wore nylon jackets and waited outside his home for him to leave for his office. They said one of the gunmen was bearded and the other wore dark glasses.

The assassins used pistols. Neighbors told police they heard four shots. Mateu was hit in the head.

The body lay in a pool of blood on the street for some minutes before an ambulance could get through the morning rush-hour traffic.

Two other young men believed to be ETA guerrillas were killed Wednesday in the Basque region by members of the paramilitary civil guard, the national police. A third guerrilla was wounded.

The guerrillas fired on a civil guard headquarters, an in the gun battle that followed, a housewife was killed and three other civilian bystanders were wounded.

Leftist Basque parties and unions called a strike in the San Sebastian area of the Basque country today, charging the guardsmen fired indiscriminately into a crowded plaza.

In Mondragon, where the shooting occurred, shops closed and police prepared for trouble at the funeral later today of the guerrillas.

GRANTED PERMISSION TO LEAVE — The Soviet Union yielded to American pressure and gave permission Wednesday for Jessica Katz and her Jewish activist parents, Boris and Natalya, to emigrate, ending their year-long battle to obtain American medical treatment for the baby's rare digestive illness. The baby, shown here with her parents earlier this year, suffers from malabsorption syndrome, a rare intestinal condition in infants that interferes with digestion. (AP Laserphoto)

Couple, Baby Allowed To Leave

MOSCOW (UPI) — A Jewish couple who fought for a year to get their 1-year-old daughter to the United States for treatment of a rare illness has received permission to leave Russia with the help of Sen. Edward Kennedy.

Boris and Natalya Katz were told Wednesday they will be given visas along with their 1-year-old baby, Jessica, who the Katzs say needs medical treatment for a congenital inability to digest normal food.

The Katzs say Soviet doctors have said they cannot help Jessica, who the family says has barely been able to survive over the past year on a special milk formula imported from the United State.

"I am happy, it was a great surprise," said Mrs. Katz Wednesday after receiving a postcard from the Moscow Passport and Visa Office instructing the couple to prepare final documents and pick up the visas.

Mrs. Katz, who is pregnant, said her husband would need some documents from his former employer and $2,000 to get the visas.

The family expects to fly to Vienna — the normal first stop for Soviet emigres — before coming to the United States. Boris Katz' mother and two brothers live in Cambridge, Mass.

The news that the family would be granted exit visas coincided with a visit to Moscow by a delegation of 12 senators.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., who visited Moscow last September said afterward he had obtained a personal assurance from Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev that the cases of 18 families seeking permission to leave the country would be reviewed. The Katzs were on that list.

Asked if she thought Kennedy's intervention may have helped their case, Mrs. Katz said, "Of course."

Boris and Natalya Katz worked as computer specialists before their first application to emigrate was turned down on grounds whe was on a sensitive security list. She was notified last month that she had been taken off the list.

Embassy Assists U.S. Businessman

MOSCOW (AP) — The U.S. Embassy said today it is trying to make sure the Soviet investigation of American businessman Leo Sonner's traffic accident doesn't interfere with his doing business in Moscow.

Asked if the embassy had interceded with the Soviet goverment on behalf of Sonner, the Dow Chemical Corp. representative in Moscow, a spokesman replied:

"Yes we have been in contact with the Ministry of Foreign Trade to insure that the inquiry regarding the traffic accident does not adversely affect Mr. Sonner's ability to conduct business here on behalf of Dow. We are not at liberty to discuss further either the nature of our conversation or its level."

Other U.S. officials reported that Sonner said a Soviet police car was behind his car when he was involved in the accident Oct. 30, but one source said there was no reason to believe he was tailed.

Sonner, 32, also had another Dow employee, Gerhild Osond of Vienna, in the car at the time, other sources said. The company's East European headquarters are in Vienna.

Sonner had told the U.S. Embassy a pedestrian walked or dashed into the side of his car. Police questioned him at the scene, then let him drive away. The pedestrian apparently was not seriously injured, and an ambulance team treated him at the scene.

Sonner's office said today he was not immediately available for comment.

Since the accident he has referred all queries to the company's director of communications in Zurich. He has also told the U.S. Embassy not to release details, availing himself of the protection of the privacy act.

Soviet authorities have told Sonner that he may not leave the country pending further investigation of the case. Some diplomats and businessmen have speculated that he might be charged with negligence or reckless driving, which is punishable by three to 10 years in prison.

A spokesman for the Ministry of Internal Affairs said he could give no report yet on the investigation.

Malaysia Awaits Refugee Offer

PORT KLANG, Malaysia (AP) — Western diplomats and a United Nations representative asked Malaysia today for two more days to find haven for 2,000 Vietnamese refugees, most of them ethnic Chinese, crowded on a ship anchored here before the government forces the ship out to sea.

Refugee officials reported that while governments and newspapers debated the plight of those stranded off this west coast port aboard the 1,500-ton freighter Hai Hong, 3,000 others fleeing from Vietnam arrived in small boats in the past four days and were admitted to refugee camps on islands off the east coast.

Diplomatic sources speculated that the government would grant the Hai Hong's passengers temporary asylum after it received concrete assurances that France or Canada would take them off its hands.

Most of the Hai Hong refugees are ethnic Chinese, members of a community that has been fleeing from southern Vietnam since the Communist government ended its domination of commerce there. They are reported to have paid a Hong Kong syndicate $5 million to send the Hai Hong to pick them up off Vietnam a month ago, and the Malaysian government said because of this they were not legitimate refugees and could not land.

The Hai Hong arrived at Port Klang eight days ago and has been anchored off the port since then while the government threatened to have it towed out to intenational waters. Navy patrol boats kept most reporters away, but some who managed to get aboard reported living conditions were very cramped and many of the passengers were sick.

Olivier Stirn, the French deputy foreign minister, told the National Assembly in Paris his government is willing to take in all those who "express a wish to settle in France." He said the French government has a long-standing policy of offering asylum to refugees from its former colonies.

Canadian immigration officials in Ottawa reportedly told U.N. refugee authorities Canada may open its doors to some of the refugees, especially those who have relatives in Canada.

A U.N. spokesman in New York said Poul Hartling, the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, was trying to get the United States, Australia and Canada to take those of the Hai Hong passengers who did not go to France.

There was no explanation of why, since the refugees were ethnic Chinese, the procedure was not being made by the Chinese government in Peking or that International Chinese government on Taiwan.

In Washington, the State Department expressed "deep concern" for the Hai Hong's passengers but did not offer them asylum. The United States admits a maximum of 25,000 Indochinese refugees a year, and this year's quota has been filled.

Diplomats say Malaysia has become a favorite target for Vietnamese refugees because conditions in Malaysian refugee camps are much better than those in other Southeast Asian countries. The Malaysian government claims the increasing flow has placed a heavy burden on the nation and is raising serious social and political problems. A big influx of ethnic Chinese would threaten the delicate balance between Malaysia's native Malays and Chinese and raise the prospect of racial strife.

The Home Ministry reported Wednesday that since the Communists took over South Vietnam in 1975, 51,130 Vietnamese have entered Malaysia, only 10,506 have left for other countries, and 34,653 are still in island camps off the east coast.

Drug Arrests Spark Student Violence

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — Three drug arrests sparked a rock-and-bottle melee involving 500 New Bedford High School students and more than 30 police officers, police said. No serious injuries were reported, but windows in police cruisers and cars in the school parking lot were smashed.

Police Capt. A.J. Correia said the battle outside the school Wednesday resulted in the arrests of 14 youths on disturbing the peace charges. All pleaded innocent and were released. Correia said the fracas broke out shortly before the school opened when undercover agents moved into a parking lot to make drug arrests.

Debate Erupts Over Arab Resolution

PARIS (UPI) — Israel and Egypt are quarreling at a U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization general conference over an Arab resolution accusing the Israelis of providing inadequate education for Palestinian Arabs.

The resolution, submitted by 20 Arab states led by Jordan, asked UNESCO to send experts to occupied territories to investigate education. The UNESCO culture committee passed the resolution condemning Israel by a vote of 64-4 with 26 delegations abstaining and many absent.

The same UNESCO committee passed another resolution Monday that repeated 1974 charges that Israel had harmed Arab monuments in Jerusalem.

Before the vote, Israeli chief delegate Amiel Najar departed from the subject of education to chide Egypt for joining other Arab countries in the resolution.

Replying to a plea from the U.S. delegation that the vote be postponed because of current Middle East peace talks, the Israeli delegate said, "We are awaiting the outcome of negotiations where everyone will find their place in the region.

"We should seek a final peace through negotiation, not here through threats or insults.

"I wish to remind Egypt that it did not respect the 1948 U.N. decision (creating Israel) and joined Arab states in trying to destroy Israel in 1948."

Egyptian chief delegate Gamal el Oteifi accused Israel of censoring Arab schoolbooks in the occupied territories. "What country has constituted a greater violation against UNESCO, to distort the history and geography of the Palestinian people?" Oteifi said.

KIDS-ONLY CLUB

Story Sack Produces Game

By SHARI LEWIS

Storybooks are great when you're alone, but when you are with friends, what you need is a Story Sack. Here's how you can make one:

Take five paper bags and (with crayon) write "Who" on one bag, "Where," "When," "What" and "How" (one word on each) on the other four bags.

Each club member (or party guest) gets five slips of paper and a pencil. On the first piece of paper, each person writes the name of a person (famous or known to the group). All of those "Who" slips go into the "Who" sack. Then everyone writes a name of a place. Those go into the "Where" sack. On the third piece, each person writes a time, day or year in the past, present of future. That goes into the "When" sack. Into the "What" sack goes a piece of paper from each telling what happens — an event or an experience. And, of course, into the "How" sack goes the description of how it happened — "slowly," "explosively" or whatever.

Then shake up the bags and each player pulls out one slip from each bag. Using the "person" from the "Who" bag, the place from the "Where" bag and so on, each player gets to make up a silly story. And since none of the people, places, times or happenings will match, the Story Sack should produce some topsy-turvy tales!

Yesterday's Brain Twister: If you can find an olive branch on an American $1 bill, you will be able to locate a brace of arrows as well.

Answer: Both the arrows and the olive branch are held by the eagle on the back of the bill.

Today's Brain Twister: Can you place four 5s in such a position that they equal 6½? (Look for the answer in tomorrow's Kids-Only Club column.)

Scientist Says Doomsday Three Billion Years Away

GATLINBURG, Tenn. (UPI) — New data indicates Earth won't become a "dead" planet for three billion more years, unless man destroys it first, a leading scientist says.

N. Mafi Toksoz, a geophysics professor at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, told a science writers' meeting here this week his prediction on Earth's life span is based on discoveries about the evolution and history of planets made through space exploration in the last decade.

Toksoz told the 16th annual briefing of the Council for the Advancement of Science Writing Monday that the most up-to-date data shows Earth's crust has changed composition significantly from when it was formed 4.6 billion years ago.

Created from gaseous solar masses, Earth was similar in composition to the moon, Mars, Mercury and Venus. But its evolution as a planet that can sustain life is due to three factors, Toksoz said.

He said Earth's chemical composition, its size and atmospheric temperature have made it able to support life.

Comparing Earth with Venus, Toksoz said both planets are about the same size and both have similar iron cores. But Venus, a hotter planet with more carbon dioxide in its atmosphere, has no water; and any trace of life there has long since burned up and vanished.

A simliar carbon dioxide problem could affect Earth, due to man's heavy combustion of fossil fuels such as coal and oil. But Toksoz said he could not be sure whether that would speed up the rate of Earth's decay.

Still, the professor warned, the risk of a "runaway effect" from carbon dioxide pollution cannot be taken lightly.

Other scientists have predicted increased carbon dioxide in Earth's atmosphere will make polar ice fields melt quicker and cause a rapid rise in ocean water levels.

Toksoz ended his address by predicting an increase in space exploration by the end of this century, adding that he thought some of the American missions again will be manned.

Americans Drinking More Wine

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans are drinking more wine than ever — an average of seven quarts per person per year, a new Agriculture Department survey shows.

The figures for 1976, the latest year for which statistics are available, showed that average wine drinking doubled from the early 1960s, when the consumption was less than four quarts annually.

Department figures for other beverages show that Americans drink nearly 17 quarts of orange juice and 132 quarts of milk a year on the average.

A soon-to-be-published report on wine drinking based on research by economists Raymond J. Folwell and John L. Baritelle shows that California continues to dominate American wine production, accounting for 90 percent of the U.S. wine flow.

The new issue of the department's Farm Index magazine notes several observations from the economists' wide-ranging study, which was based on a scientifically selected sample of 7,000 households around the country.

Among those observations:

—More than 30 percent of the [illegible] that doesn't drink any wine at [illegible] parts of the country.

—The heaviest [illegible] in the least [illegible] in the South.

—Almost four out of [illegible] said they drink for pleasure or [illegible] reasons, but the majority [illegible] didn't know what they [illegible] were consistent or not.

—Regular drinkers [illegible] as income comes, better education and [illegible] they prefer table and sparkling [illegible]

Government Declines Regulatory Position

By MICHAEL PUTZEL

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government Wednesday declined to take a direct role in regulating psychosurgery performed by private physicians to alter human behavior.

Responding to recommendations of the National Commission for the Protection of Human Subjects, HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. opened the way for his agency to pay for mind-altering brain surgery under some circumstances.

At the same time, Califano said it is up to the medical profession and its organizations to regulate voluntarily the conduct of psychosurgery in the United States.

The Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare said he will propose regulations prohibiting use of HEW funds to finance psychosurgery on prisoners, children, involuntarily confined mental patients and legal incompetents until "the safety and efficacy of the procedure is more clearly demonstrated."

But the same regulations will establish criteria for federal reimbursement of doctors performing pschosurgery on Medicare and Medicaid patients, Califano said.

The commission is a federally financed advisory group which has spent years studying U.S. biomedical and behavioral research. After studying 600 psychosurgery cases, it dismissed claims by some opponents of the procedure that it is used primarily against minorities and women as a means of mind control.

But the panel also found that psychosurgery has not been proved safe and effective and should not be considered "accepted practice."

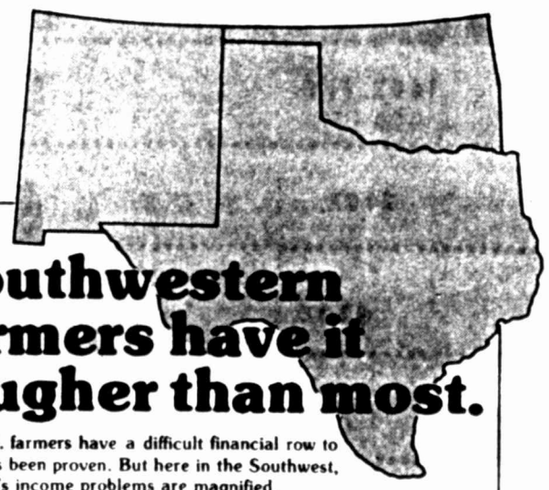
The commission asked Califano to require any institution permitting use of the technique to set up a special review panel whose members are approved by HEW.

The panel also recommended that a psychosrugery advisory board composed of outside experts be established to review the state of the art and advise the HEW secretary on policy matters.

In his announcement, published in today's Federal Register, Califano declined to inject the government into this particular area of medical practice, saying he preferred to rely on a voluntary approach overseen by a professional committee.

Lyle W. Bivens, a psychologist at the National Institute of Mental Health, said about 400 to 500 psychosurgery procedures are performed each year, generally on severely depressed or suicidal patients who haven't been helped by drugs or electroshock treatment.

Psychosurgery, which usually involves insertion of an electrode into a section of the brain and destruction of a portion of brain matter, also is used to treat severe obsessive-compulsive behavior and intractable pain of no apparent physiological origin, Bivens said.



Southwestern farmers have it tougher than most.

Crop-killing heat spells get national news coverage when they happen in the Midwest. But Southwestern growers accept heat and drouth as just two of the normal hazards they regularly face.

And fuel bills? Southwestern farmers who irrigate spend more dollars on fuel alone than Midwestern farmers spend on seed, chemicals, labor, repairs, grain drying and fuel! (Based on U.S.D.A. figures for 1978.)

At the Southwestern Division of Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc., we're aware of the special problems faced by our farming customers. We, too, farm in the Southwest producing seed that's bred to meet area conditions. And because we market our products here, our success as a company is directly dependent on the success of Southwestern farmers.

We're proud to join the Southwestern farmer in meeting his special farming challenges. We know he has it tougher than most.

HERE'S WHY.

- Farm machinery ownership including purchase costs, interest, taxes and insurance is more than twice as high in the Southwest as in the Lake States and Corn Belt. Repairs are more than three times higher.
- Custom operations including chemical application, custom harvesting and hauling have been calculated to be nearly twice as high in the Southwest.
- Fuel and lubrication costs to provide much-needed irrigation on the arid plains make the Southwestern farmer's per-acre fuel cost an unbelievable ten times that of his midwestern counterpart.

Holiday City Growing On Outskirts Of Ancient Korean Capital

By ANDREW HORVAT

KYONGJU, Korea (AP) — Surrounded by thousand-year-old temples and tombs, a holiday city complete with gambling casinos, night clubs and luxury hotels is taking shape on the outskirts of this ancient capital of Korea.

The Bomun Lake resort, within walking distance of the walls of the old city of Kyongju, is part of a $233-million, government-sponsored project. Plans call for turning the present provincial town of 100,000 people into an international playground visited by a million foreign tourists a year.

In 1977 South Korea attracted 950,000 tourists who spent more than $370 million. The Korea National Tourism Corporation estimates this year's figure will surpass the million mark and that by 1982, the year the first phase of the Bomun Lake project is completed, two million foreigners will visit the once war-torn country.

Korea has been a popular rest and relaxation area for Americans in the Far East as the won is pegged to the dollar, while for Japanese visitors the country is a virtual bonanza. The yen has appreciated by 35 percent against both the won and the dollar in the past 18 months. One out of every five Japanese who goes abroad heads for South Korea.

The Bomun Lake plan appears to be an attempt to upgrade the quality of South Korea's tourism by combining golf courses and inexpensive night life with the rich cultural heritage of the Kyongju area.

But, while few people doubt the soundness of the Tourism Corporation's Kyongju master plan as a business proposition, some educated Koreans have said they are upset by the exploitation of priceless cultural treasures for short-term financial gain.

One Korean who revisited the city's famous Pulguksa Buddhist temple after its reconstruction four years ago said, "It may now be a great attraction, but it is no longer much of a temple."

Another complained that one building, reconstructed from ancient plans in 1974, was not executed with the same skill as the original 1,500-year-old structure.

The remodeling of an ancient burial mound into a museum using modern construction methods also has irked purists who wanted the fifth-century tomb to be preserved closer to its original state. Known as the Tomb of the Heavenly Horse, the mound yielded a priceless jewel-studded gold crown during excavations five years ago. Today the tomb is lined with concrete and visitors by the hundreds enter the mound through modern sliding doors of stainless steel and glass.

Forestry Firm Plans To Move

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia-Pacific Corp., the largest producer of forest products in the U.S., has decided to move its corporate headquarters here from Portland, Ore., the Atlanta Journal reported.

The Journal said it had learned that the relocation would be announced today in a joint news conference by Georgia-Pacific Chairman Robert Floweree and Gov. George Busbee.

Georgia-Pacific, with sales last year of $3.67 billion, was ranked 56th on Fortune magazine's list of the nation's 500 largest manufacturers. It would become the largest corporation headquartered in Atlanta — nudging the international soft drink giant Coca-Cola into second place, the Journal said.

The forest products company, founded in Augusta, Ga., and transplanted to Portland 25 years ago, employs 37,000 persons in 202 plants, 151 distribution centers and 129 sales offices worldwide.

1880s Home Becomes Restaurant

By ROB WOOD

CUERO (AP) — It wasn't that Dr. John Wheeler was bored or that he didn't have enough to do. The appointment book in his Cuero dentist office was filled for six months in advance.

It was just that Dr. Wheeler felt he needed some outside activities.

So, he purchased a home built back in the 1880s, one of those old places that appear to be falling down with the yard waist-high in weeds.

During the weekends and after office hours, the dentist and his family restored the once fashionable home, replaced the weeds with grass and flowers and when it was finished decided to make it a bar-restaurant.

The front parlor, where Sunday visitors once sat and sipped tea, is now the only mixed-drink place in DeWitt County.

Dr. Wheeler, who spends most of the day telling patients to "open wide" as he fills or caps or pulls a tooth, spends his nights cooking steaks and telling his customers to "open wide" for a bite of beef.

"Yes, I do most of the cooking," he said in a recent interview, because "it is a hobby of mine. That's why we have only steaks and some seafood. That's the limit of my cooking ability."

The dentist also chips in when needed to wash dishes, serve tables and sweep the floors.

The next morning he is back in his crowded office to handle the dental needs of the community.

"This whole thing was a real challenge," the 59-year-old Wheeler said, "from the renovation to the yard to the restaurant. If you don't have a challenge, you can grow stale. And it helps to do some sweating now and then."

A dentist for the past 36 years, Wheeler said he planned to continue his practice "as long as possible, but to keep other interests at the same time."

As if to prove that point, he talked of bulding a new motel on the outskirts of Cuero and pointed to a nearby building where he has a successful nursery opearating.

"My family always had an interest in plants," he said, "and so I came by it naturally. The nursery is going good and I do find a few hours a week to work there."

A visit to Dr. John's is a return to the past. The old home, built of pine and cypress, and the gardens surrounding appear to be untouched from those days when horses and buggies were tied at front, instead of fast cars parked along the side.

"I like the present and the future," Dr. Wheeler said, "but one should never let the past blow away. I even saved that old player piano in the front parlor and it is as good as new. Go try it."

Religious Community Needing Cash To Prevent Foreclosure

EUREKA, Calif. (AP) — The religious community of Bridgeville, established with fervor and faith, now has one last week to come up with hard cash that could save it from foreclosure.

The community's minister and his handful of followers have until next Tuesday to stop the auction of the 87-acre town of Bridgeville in the extreme northwestern corner of California, which they bought for $450,000.

Because of a procedural problem, the auction scheduled for this Tuesday that would have returned the town to its original owners, the Lapple family, did not take place and was put off one week.

The Lapple family is foreclosing the mortgage because the Rev. Alvin M. Stevens and 45 other residents are still $90,000 short on their $150,000 down payment and have not paid any of the $2,500 monthly installments.

Stevens and members of the Full Gospel Stonybrook Church in the San Francisco suburb of Fremont quit their jobs, sold their homes and bought Bridgeville last spring to build a Christian community that would "please the Lord."

They spent $50,000 to make the town habitable, repairing dilapidated housing and fixing a condemned sewer system, and just didn't have enough money to pay the mortgage, Stevens said.

They tried to raise money by selling raffle tickets, but raised only $12,000.

"We regret this whole business," said Ed Lapple, whose family is representing the town. "We really wanted to see them make a go out of it."

Rural Crimes Reportedly On Increase

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — It's 2:30 a.m. when someone gets into a $29,000 tractor on a dealer's lot and drives it away. A few people notice it going down the rural highway in Champaign County, but no one calls the police.

These isolated incidents are indicative of what is happening all over the country — crime in the rural areas has been on the upswing this decade.

The rate of serious crimes, known as the crime index, increased 43 percent in rural areas of this country between 1972 and 1976.

"This thing sort of exploded on us," said Ken Cheatham, director of local governmental affairs for the Farm Bureau. "We know that across the nation rural crime is going up 2-to-1 to urban crime."

In Illinois for example, there was a 1.1 percent increase in crime in rural areas from 1975 to 1976, while crimes in major cities declined 7.3 percent and in suburban areas they went down 5.7 percent.

"Law enforcement agencies everywhere say it is a rapidly escalating problem, but it's hard to say what the volume is," said Cheatham. "Our best estimate from talks with law enforcement people across the country is about $500 million annually."

One reason rural areas seem to be attracting more thieves is the isolated nature of the area.

"They think they won't be caught," said Sheriff Jim Durst of Woodford County, who is secretary-treasurer of the Illinois Sheriff's Association. "Out in the country, there will be no witnesses who might see something."

People who moved from big cities to rural areas to escape crime may be surprised, said Cheatham.

"A farmer who was isolated back on a country road used to be safe, and he didn't worry about crime," he said. "Now, they are being selected by the thief because they are isolated."

Wayne Baughman, executive director of field services for the Farm Bureau, said the interstate highways had made the criminals more mobile.

"They can make a raid on property and be on their way in short order," said Baughman. "You can get $3,000 to $5,000 worth of agriculture chemicals on a pick-up without any trouble."

Another factor, cited by many sheriffs, is the attitude of some country people.

"I drove over to my neighbor's place," said Baughman. "The car was gone but the garage was open and the house was totally unlocked. That's commonplace but ... that's an open target."

Murphy Battles Red Tape To Do His Thing

By JAMES THORNTON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ed Murphy is a hotel man. He wants that to be clear — he is not and won't be anyone's "project."

Murphy, a well-known black Washington supper club operator for more than a decade, has launched himself into a much bigger financial pond — a $7 million hotel named Harambee House, from the Swahili word for "unity."

Murphy says his nine-story 165-room hotel, which opened in January, is "the finest institution" of its kind "in the history of the country."

"What it represents is saying 'yes we can'," said Murphy. "My thing here is to do a first class hotel, not a black hotel. It just so happens I'm black and owner."

"I don't expect you to come in if I don't give you good service."

The hotel — with its beauty shop, barber shop, gift shop, banquet rooms, indoor swimming pool, health spa, night club — contrasts with the sometimes decaying surroundings, just a few blocks off the 1968 riot corridor.

"The concept here is number one, to sort of stabilize the community and rebuild the area — which is happening. You see buildings going up all around. Number two, jobs — which is taking place. Three, and most important, is minority ownership — that it survive."

After high school and the army, a 20-year-old Murphy returned to his native Washington, worked odd jobs and owned a business by 1953.

In 1965, he opened Ed Murphy's Supper Club, which became a Washington institution. A haven for nightclub artists and headquarters for many civil rights strategy sessions in the 1960's, the club has now moved into the hotel.

Murphy obtained the first financing for the hotel in 1971 through a community development corporation and grants and loans from the Commerce Department's Economic Development Administration. Construction and financing problems delayed realization of his dream until this year.

He expects to gross $3.5 million in the first year of operation.

Murphy contends government and private business have "never really fulfilled their promise when it comes to black entrepreneurship."

"We're not stupid, but where do you have to go for the money in the most part? The government."

"Even at this late date we got superstars in all the damn sports. We don't own any seat — not one seat in any damn stadium — and we're still at this late date fighting to be manager of a football team or a baseball team."

Murphy obtained the government funds for the hotel under the Nixon administration and he said he found them easier to deal with than the "Carter folks."

"Those (Nixon's people) were business folks and when I had a problem, they had a problem, and we worked it out. Now it's different ... I got a problem and dismiss me for my problem and whether I caused the problem — which I haven't — everybody that dealt with this hotel or is dealing with it is in default in terms of what they should have done."

Murphy said the government is "trying to treat me as though I'm a project. I have a straight out business deal. I haven't been given anything but the opportunity to do this and so, follow the rules that others (do) who borrow from the Department of Commerce."

"Some of it may be unintentional, it might just be bureaucratic red tape. But what they're doing to me is damaging the operation. They may not be aware of it."

However, Murphy suspects he is encountering resentment, "especially when we're independent and try to help others and deal within the community and display blackness so vividly."

Complementing the hotel's warm earth-toned interior are copies of ceremonial masks from all over Africa.

"You're not going to go into the Hilton or the Holiday Inn, for the most part, and see some of this on the wall — something that means something to us ... regardless of how much money they take from us. And very seldom we see them putting anything back into the community."

"Number one, I insisted on being first class and they accepted. Number two, that we be as black as possible, which they accepted. So we had a black architect, black interior decorator, the construction firm — we had a quota system — and throughout the hotel, yes, as black as possible."

But, "In the hotel industry, for whatever reason, I don't think you have over three black managers in the country," Murphy said.

Harambee is managed by an established firm, "although I have to give them directions because they don't know anything about black hospitality. They've always taken us for granted. At one time they said there was no such thing as a black market."

Murphy said hotels are not geared to support a balanced, "50-50", integrated clientele, though "it's not racism as such, it's business."

Harambee does have about a 30 per cent white clientele — "and they love it," Murphy said.

The hotel gets overflow referrals from the Hyatt Regency, the Gramercy Inn and other Washington hotels. "I must say the hotel managers and what not, the hotel folk in general have been very hospitable to me," Murphy said.

The black community also has been responsive. "I thought at one time I'd have to beat the bushes and really do a hard sell job, but they're just knocking the doors getting here ... in fact the rooms are booked solid now."

Admittedly a hustler, Murphy has been "off the streets for some time," but still has grass roots community ties.

"I identify with the streets, that's my background. I don't try to duck it or hide it, no, not at all. I need it, that's part of me —that's where I was brought up and that's where I got my training —survival out there in the streets."

"Most of our parents were Pullman porters, waiters and what not ... service used to be our thing," Murphy said. For a time, only the service industry would accept blacks. As other opportunities developed, blacks were made to feel those jobs were "demeaning." Consequently, Murphy said, "we lost the art... there's an art to this work."

Murphy envisions a transoceanic chain of hotels. "I am presently negotiating with folk in Atlantic City through the casino and also talking with some folks out of the country — Liberia in particular, and a few other countries."

Murphy sees himself "filling the vacuum" of expertise, a resource for the black community and "in some cases just helping from my past experience. If I can help someone get theirs off the ground, or whatever the case may be."

"My commitment is doing, not how much money I'm going to make out of it ... If you're not into something you really enjoy, and you're just trying to make a buck and money is your whole object, you have no chance of being a winner, you might say.

"You might accomplish, and get that amount of money, but your feet aren't going to be on the ground because you're going to forget how to live and enjoy ... money is just a necessary evil and a means to an end but some get possessed by it and I have no intention of getting gobbled up in that."

Play Producer Likes Intimacy In Theaters

BOSTON (AP) — If producer-playwright Frederic M. Zollo had his way, plays, including musicals, would be staged in theaters with 100 to 1,200 seats.

He would stage musicals in theaters with up to 1,200 seats; plays with casts of 10 in theaters with 500 to 600 seats, and plays with one to three actors in theaters seating 100 to 200.

"Then you'd have the intimacy," Zollo said in an interview. "I think the future is not in (large theaters) where you pay $25 a ticket."

Zollo likes theaters such as the Wilbur and the 325-seat Charles Playhouse, where he co-produced the David Mamet plays, "Sexual Perversity in Chicago" and "The Duck Variations."

He produced "Vanities" and "Give 'Em Hell, Harry" at the Charles earlier.

"I'm tired of waiting for New York to produce new theater," the Boston native and Boston University graduate said. "There should be a resident company in Boston, a resident company of playwrights, too." He suggested that the Charles Playhouse should be its home.

"Boston needs a resident company that changes once a year — a resident director, who could choose the company. He and the artistic director would choose the plays," Zollo said.

"I would love to see an ever-changing resident company, with a resident playwright. You wouldn't believe how many major actors want to come to the Charles Playhouse," he said. "I know playwrights who would be interested in this."

At 38, Zollo has been a journalist and has written films and plays.

SUBJECT OF SUIT AGAINST BOY SCOUTS — Handicapped Boy Scouts Frank Burrell, 20; Steven Cerbasi, 18; Chester Stauffer, 20, and Tyrone Towers, 16, left to right, pose in front of their Toms River, N.J., Convalescent Center Wednesday. The four, who suffer from muscular dystrophy, are the subject of a suit filed Wednesday in federal court charging the Boy Scouts of American with failing to establish programs by which handicapped scouts can earn their awards. Federal Suit Filed On Behalf Of Handicapped Boy Scouts

TOMS RIVER, N.J. (AP) — A federal court suit alleging that four Boy Scouts were discriminated against because of physical handicaps has been filed against the Boy Scouts of America.

And while the youths' scoutmaster has stopped handing out awards, it isn't slowing his troop down.

The suit was filed Wednesday by the New Jersey Public Advocate, an ombudsman-like agency, saying the national organization violated a 3-year-old federal law.

D News
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal
Thursday, Nov. 16, 1978

"You got everybody talking about how wonderful scouting is," said one of the scouts, Frank Burrell, 20. "But when you get people trying to do something (for handicapped scouts), it's a different story."

The suit says the national scout organization violated the 1973 federal Rehabilitation Act by accepting federal financial aid while maintaining a discriminatory advancement program. It seeks to bar the organization from continuing such practices, and asks the court to order formulation of a policy giving disabled scouts greater opportunities.

Scoutmaster Edward Mattern recommended that Burrell and Steven Cerbasi, 18, receive the Eagle award in September 1975 after they passed oral examinations substituted for the physical tests.

The Ocean County Council approved the applications, but they were rejected by the national council, which said Boy Scouts must "do and not just tell," the suit says.

Another scout, Chester Stauffer, was denied his Second Class progress award and the fourth scout, Tyrone Towers, 16, was denied a Tenderfoot award.

Burrell, Cerbasi and Stauffer were born with muscular dystrophy, and Towers suffers from cerebral palsy.

Scout Troop 89 continues to meet, but Mattern has stopped training scouts for merit badges, because, Assistant Deputy Public Advocate Nancy Geltman said, he did not want to give the youths "any false hope."

But Burrell said: "You couldn't just quit.

"In life itself, sometimes the going gets rough," he added. "If you're going to quit every time it gets rough, you don't deserve to be around."

Irate Citizen Shoots Canadian Mayor

NICKEL CENTRE, Ontario (AP) — A man protesting the expropriation of his land pulled a .45-caliber pistol and fired three shots at Mayor Mike Solski, critically wounding the politician at the Nickel Centre Town Council meeting.

Police said Solski was hit in the side and stomach before council members wrestled the gunman to the floor Wednesday night. The 59-year-old mayor was presiding over his last council meeting after losing a re-election bid in Monday's municipal election.

Police identified the suspect as Romeo Kerim, 63, of nearby Sudbury, Ontario, about 260 miles northwest of Buffalo. They said he was charged with attempted murder and was appearing today in a provincial court.

Teacher Points Way Up Social Ladder

By ANN BLACKMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Want to be mentioned in a gossip column? Crash an embassy party? Or learn the fine art of name dropping?

Then there's a course here just for you.

Called "The Washington Connection," its subject is social climbing. And Roxanne Weissman, the Cleveland-born instructor, says she has taught 18 classes since last January to about 400 students.

"I found that I was meeting a lot of people who were reading about the glittery Washington social life and knew nothing about it, even though they lived here," said Miss Weissman, 36, a free-lance writer and public relations woman who has lived in Washington for 11 years.

Miss Weissman teaches the three-hour, $9 course, sponsored by the city's Open University, in an overheated second-story classroom wedged between a pizzeria and dry cleaner not far from the zoo. Calypso music from a dance studio next door blares in the background.

"To make it in this town, you need chutzpa — gutsiness. No social climber has made it in this town without that quality," Miss Weissman told her students, including a gray-haired Air Force instructor new in town, a computer analyst from suburban Virginia who wants to be invited to the White House and a nurse who dreams of being invited to a party at the Washington Post.

Bob Barr, 36, a bearded safety specialist with the Coast Guard, took notes. "The gutsiest thing I ever did in Washington was join the ski club," he said. "This course sounded interesting."

To make it on the embassy circuit, Miss Weissman advises: "Forget Great Britain and France. Go to the smaller embassies. Say you're interested in visiting their country, and do they have any activities you could attend."

On crashing an embassy party: "If you look nice, chances are they won't mind ... Ambassadors don't like to pay all this money for appearances and not have a full-house. Sometimes crashers end up on invitation lists if they are good conversationalists."

Miss Weissman said secrets to crashing other parties include:

—Go later in the evening when no one is checking invitations.

—Go in a male entourage.

—Whip past the front desk and say you have an important message for Spiro Agnew.

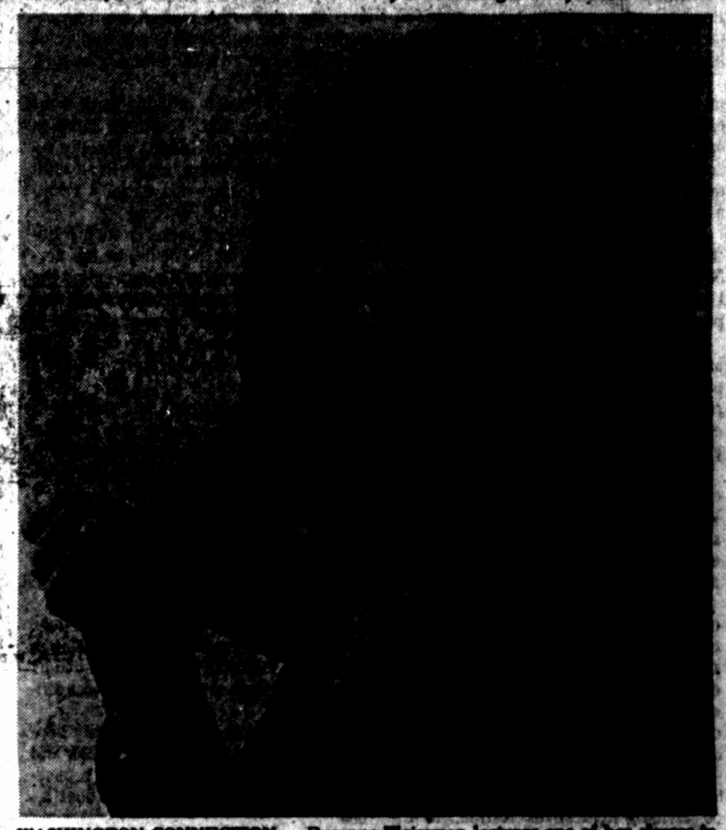
—Hold a glass in your hand and back in the door, so when you turn around, you'll look as though you've been there awhile.

And most important, dress appropriately, preferably designer dresses for women, three-piece suits for men. "I don't want to see any man who has taken my class at the zoo anywhere in a safari suit," said Miss Weissman, who was wearing a two-piece gray wool outfit.

To be mentioned in a gossip column, Miss Weissman suggests reading the social pages to find out where the stars hang out. Then go to the event and telephone the gossip columnist with tidbits.

Call often and you may get mentioned too, she said. "All Elizabeth Taylor has to do is manage to be in, but you have to do more."

Miss Weissman also suggests students learn the art of "negative name-dropping — like saying, 'I had Julia Child for dinner and dropped the soufflé. That way they'll know you had someone important over but that you're making fun of yourself."



WASHINGTON CONNECTION — Roxanne Weissman lectures one of her classes in Washington in the art of getting ahead in the nation's capital. Weissman says she has taught 18 classes, a total of over 400 people, all they need to know about how to crash an embassy party or get into a gossip column. (AP Laserphoto)

War Changes Falls Resort

By SERGE SCHMEMANN

VICTORIA FALLS, Rhodesia (AP) — A fortified enclave of spectacular beauty and princely luxury surrounded by wild bush and escalating war, Victoria Falls has become a front line and a refuge in Rhodesia's bitter struggle.

American, British, French and other foreign tourists arrive in dwindling numbers to stroll from flower-bedecked resort hotels to stand at the end of one of the world's most awesome sights, the mile-wide cascade of the Zambezi River into a 330-foot deep gorge.

But the casual informality and colonial luxury inside the 25-square-mile resort complex adjacent to the great falls belies the rigid security.

Airliners approach the airport on a low zigzag course to elude potential rocket attacks and a heavily armed police escort leads the airport bus into town.

The enclave itself hosts a large military force and is ringed by a heavily fenced cordon of land mines on which hapless elephants and baboons stumble daily. On a recent morning, security forces tiptoed deep into the land-mine belt to finish off a badly wounded elephant.

Across the falls is Zambia, haven for the black nationalist guerrillas of Joshua Nkomo's Zimbabwe African People's Union, and front-line foe of Rhodesia's present biracial government.

A year ago the guerrillas fired an anti-aircraft missile at a Rhodesian excursion plane over the falls and missed. The rocket slammed instead into the luxurious Elephant Hills Hotel, setting off a blaze that gutted the modern, hill-top resort.

Only 12 months later professional golfers were once again competing in the Victoria Falls Classic, playing under the shadow of the ruins of the hotel. Organizers conceded, however, that most top names stayed away this year.

For those who come, Victoria Falls still offers the longest and one of the most challenging courses in Africa. There are special rules for dealing with the deep elephant and buffalo footprints, and on the eighth hole, Charlie the alligator grows ever longer and hungrier in his water hazard home.

Despite the missile fired a year ago and the subsequent downing of an Air Rhodesia civilian flight over Kariba, to the north, small excursion planes still take tourists on regular spins over the falls.

Above the falls, Rhodesian excursion boats still take tourists on an hour-long "booze cruise" along the Zambezi River, dividing Rhodesia from Zambia. Now and then they pass a similar excursion boat from Livingstone on the Zambian side and the tourists cheerily exchange greetings.

Two Americans, Bill and Ann Dodson of Ogden, Utah, recently relaxed at the baronial Victoria Falls Hotel after an elephant safari in nearby Botswana.

"This isn't anything like the terrible things we read about back home," the Dodsons said.

A short while later, a helicopter rose out of the military compound in town after reports that 25 "terrs," or black guerrillas, had been sighted nearby.

In one of the endless contradictions of Rhodesia's 6-year-old war, even while the soldiers hunted for guerrillas, a steam-driven Rhodesian locomotive pushed 40 South African cars laden with fertilizer across the Victoria Falls bridge into Zambia. The locomotive pushed the train exactly to the white line in the middle of the bridge, where a Zambian engine took over.

Trains have been crossing both ways regularly since Oct. 6, when Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda officially reopened the Rhodesian border in an 11th-hour bid to salvage his nation's crumbling economy.

But it is an open secret among trainmen here that rail traffic in fact has never stopped, even after Kaunda closed the border in 1973. Freight trains to and from Zaire have regularly transited Zambia and Rhodesia through all the years of international sanctions against Rhodesia and border closures.

What is evident here is that survival of the famed resort has become a major priority of the Rhodesian government. One reason cited is the hard currency brought in by foreign tourists.

Despite the security and bargain rates offered tourists, tourism has dropped sharply, especially since the downing of the airliner at Kariba two months ago.

Of this town's six principal hotels, one was destroyed by a rocket, two have been closed, two others are usually near-empty and the Victoria Falls Hotel has had its average occupancy cut by half, local officials said.

The permanent white community here has dwindled from about 600 to 280, and the black population has dropped proportionately, from about 6,000 to about 3,000.

So far, despite occasional mortars and rockets, the resort has remained relatively secure. There had been no "contacts" reported with guerrillas for five weeks, probably because they have been told to leave the rail line alone while it carries Zambian goods.

Japan's October Trade Surplus Slips

TOKYO (AP) — Japan posted a customs-clearance-based trade surplus of $1.535 billion in October, down from the September surplus of $2.110 billion, the Finance Ministry said Wednesday in a preliminary report.

Dollar-based exports showed an annual gain of 21.2 percent to $8.516 billion, but were below September's exports of $8.921 billion.

Imports rose 20.1 percent to $6.980 billion and were ahead of September's $6.810 billion.

Seasonally adjusted, exports dropped 7.2 percent in October to $8.278 billion from September's adjusted $8.918 billion. Imports dropped 0.4 percent to $6.956 billion from September's $6.986 billion.

The surplus with the United States fell to $787 million in October from $1.035 billion in September, and was slightly higher than the $772-million surplus in October 1977, the ministry said.

On a yen basis, Japan's overall trade surplus in October was 287.766 billion yen, sharply down from 402.683 billion yen in September, and down from 316.648 billion yen in October 1977.

Yen-based exports fell to 1.598 trillion yen from 1.703 trillion yen in September, and from 1.838 trillion yen the year before.

Imports in October totaled 1.311 trillion yen, up slightly from 1.3 trillion yen the previous month, but down from 1.522 trillion yen in October 1977.

Seasonally adjusted, exports in October dropped 8.9 percent to 1.547 trillion yen from 1.698 trillion yen in September. Imports fell 2.4 percent to 1.299 trillion yen from 1.330 trillion yen in the previous month.

The adjusted surplus was 248.223 billion yen, down from the 367.465 billion yen adjusted surplus in September.

The October figures for exports were based on a conversion of 187.70 yen to one dollar. Imports were calculated at 178.76 yen to the dollar.

In September, the conversion for exports was 190.92 yen to a dollar, and a year ago it was 261.59 yen. For imports, the September conversion was 190.94 yen, while in October 1977 it was 261.78 yen.

On a yen basis, motor vehicle exports in October were down 10 percent from the same month last year and steel exports were down 19.8 percent from last year.

Yen-based imports of crude oil were down 31.2 percent from a year ago, metal imports were down 23.2 percent and foodstuff imports were down 7.1 percent.

Ombudsman Sees More Boycotts

By JOSEPH ST. AMANT

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — David Horowitz, a consumerism specialist with a television audience of millions, blames big business, schools and consumers themselves for many complaints about goods and services.

Horowitz predicted there will be more unofficial boycotts such as brought down the price of beef, sugar and coffee at the retail level because of a relatively new consumer awareness.

At 41, a veteran newsman in the print and electronic media, Horowitz does not want to be labeled a consumer advocate or a follower of Ralph Nader. He prefers the term consumer ombudsman because he said he is not out to get big business but wants to improve goods and service through education.

To the consumer he says: Read the fine print in your sales and services contracts.

To educators he says: Teach the kids in school something about business in basic math classes — what a mortgage is, how a home is purchased, something about credit ratings and installment plans.

"A consumer ombudsman differs from an advocate," he said. "When a consumer is wrong, I tell him he's wrong. An advocate, on the other hand, pleads the case of the consumer. What I've been able to do is to go out and fight for the people who can't get problems resolved for themselves."

Horowitz gets 15,000-20,000 complaints a week from TV viewers. In many cases, he must tell them they haven't read the fine print on their installment buying contracts or insurance policies and he can do nothing. If he uncovers a legitimate beef he goes after the seller.

His half-hour show "Consumer Buyline" is syndicated by NBC and goes to about 50 TV outlets in the nation, "all the big cities" — New York, Cleveland, Chicago, Madison, Wis., Portland, Ore., Seattle and of course at his home base in Los angeles.

With a flair for showmanship, he tests commercials on his show with audience participation. Some advertisers have pressured him to lay off but he has a free hand as far as NBC is concerned, he said.

Horowitz keeps many speaking engagements throughout the country, addressing manufacturers, bankers groups and bar associations, and also holds seminars at colleges to tell students how they can become aware consumers.

He faults the business community for not handling many consumer complaints and for not having a consumer affairs department to handle them.

He said most big companies are guilty of "indifference, apathy and ignorance" in dealing with consumer complaints.

He tells businessmen:

"Why should your name be bandied around on TV because of a simple consumer problem? Why don't you have someone handle consumer problems?"

Some of the solutions he offers are remarkably simple. He received a recent complaint from a woman who sent flowers to a relative in an eastern city. He contacted the local florist and also the florist who was supposed to deliver the flowers. At the delivery point, he was told the party to whom the flowers were addressed was not at home but there was no follow-up.

"I suggested the delivery service provide an addressed postcard at the delivery point which could be signed by the receiving party and returned to the sender to confirm receipt. Why can't business think of things like that?"

Consumer awareness is still on the upswing, he said, when he predicted more boycotts because of resistance to inflationary prices and dissatifaction with shoddy services.

"Now we have a tremendous amount of anger among consumers," he said. "Proposition 13 which limited property taxes in California is the mark of consumer anger. People want to be treated as individuals. Business should take heed — it's a lot less expensive if it regulates itself rather than be the target of government action.

"We should try to get industry to be part of an educational movement in consumerism, to provide educators with materials designed to make students aware of their rights.

"My purpose is not to make advertisers look foolish on my show but to improve the products."

Of the new wave of consumer awareness, he said, "This is fighting from within, what I like to think of as the 1776 independent philosophy. People now realize you can fight city hall. When meat prices went sky-high, people bought less meat and the price came down. There was the same story with sugar and coffee. Look for more of the same."

Horowitz, born in New York City, got a master's in journalism at Northwestern, worked on newspapers in Illinois and made his way back to New York as a television reporter.

In 1966, he came to NBC in the Los Angeles area and still does spots on nightly news shows in addition to his syndicated "Consumer Buyline" half hour. He also is seen regularly on the network show "America Live."

His slogan: "Don't Be A Sucker — Fight Back."

New Park Geared For Handicapped

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Every piece of equipment is geared to the needs of the handicapped in the new city park here specifically designed for handicapped children.

The picnic tables, sandboxes, and waterboxes for youngsters who like to play in water, are elevated for wheelchairs, as are the water fountains. The park contains only slopes, no steps, and the swings are propelled by hands rather than feet.

A special feature of the park, built on city land and sponsored by a council of 11 area Lions clubs, is a merry-go-round where children are strapped in, wheelchairs and all.

DRILLING BONUS

TOKYO (AP) — An oil-drilling team in China has been awarded a 5,000-yuan bonus — $3,125 — for drilling a national record of 19,700 feet in 166 days, Peking's official Hsinhua news agency reported Monday. Such bonuses are part of the communist government's program of incentives for achieving its goal of modernization by the year 2000. The Hsinhua report, monitored here, did not say how many workers were on the drilling team.

The Almanac
TODAY IN HISTORY

By United Press International

Today is Thursday, Nov. 16, the 320th day of 1978 with 45 to follow.

The moon is between its full phase and last quarter.

The morning stars are Venus, Jupiter and Saturn.

The evening stars are Mars and Mercury.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Scorpio.

Famed American negro composer W.C. Handy, known as the "Father of the Blues," was born Nov. 16, 1873. American actor Burgess Meredith also was born on this date in 1909.

On this day in history:

In 1907, Oklahoma became the 46th state admitted to the Union.

In 1933, the United States established diplomatic relations with the communist Soviet Union.

In 1953, former President Harry Truman went on nationwide radio and television to deny charges by the U.S. attorney general that he had appointed Harry Dexter White to high government office (director of the International Monetary Fund) knowing that White was a Russian spy.

A thought for the day:

Harry Truman of Missouri, 33rd president of the United States, said, "We must build a new world, a far better world — one in which the eternal dignity of man is respected."

DR. LAMB

Lost Desire For Sex

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 57 and I had my uterus removed when I was 25 because of a tumor. Everything was just fine until after I went through the change of life, and then my sex desire left me completely. That was about four years ago. My doctor says he does not have a pill to take care of it. Do you have any thoughts of advice that would help me?

DEAR READER — Your letter points out a fact that I have tried to make to many of my readers about hysterectomies. If you have all of your uterus removed, but the ovaries are left alone, you will continue to have a normal hormonal balance. That's why you had a normal balance from the age of 25 when you had your surgery until age 53, which is when your ovaries failed.

The woman who has a hysterectomy and needs hormone support already has ovarian failure, or may have had her ovaries removed because of disease at the time of the surgery. It's the ovaries that provide the hormone function and not the uterus.

Your doctor can check to see if you have an adequate amount of female hormones or if you need additional hormones for your body. While I don't know what the tumor was that caused you to have a hysterectomy 32 years ago, it's unlikely that it would be a significant factor in deciding whether you could or could not use female hormones now. Certainly, 32 years after removal it would seem logical that you wouldn't need to worry about a malignancy.

Since you don't have a uterus, you certainly can't develop a malignancy of the uterus now. The other question is the status of your breasts. If you do not have a lumpy breast and need female hormones, there shouldn't be any good medical reason why you couldn't use them. Of course, if you don't need them, then there is not much point in prescribing them.

A lack of sex desire in middle age may have nothing to do with the menopause, but may be associated with psychological factors in some women. This is a common age in life for depression, disappointments and changes in attitudes, whether one has normal hormone function or not.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 5-12 on menopause because it gives you some basic information on how the female hormones work, and what changes a woman can expect during her change of life. Other readers who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Address you request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am concerned about my 25-year-old husband's health. He has been throwing up blood occasionally for the last two years, usually when he is upset or has too much alcohol. He refuses to see a doctor believing that he probably has an ulcer and there is nothing to worry about. Could this be a sympotom of something serious?

DEAR READER — You bet it can be. An ulcer that bleeds is serious in itself. If that is the cause, he could develop massive bleeding. Anybody who vomits blood should certainly be seen by a doctor.

You can bleed from the lower esophagus (food tube) from wretching, even with induced vomiting. And alcohol can irritate the stomach to the point that it bleeds, but that certainly deserves medical attention, too. There isn't any really good advice I can give you except to urge your husband to see a doctor as quickly as possible.

Finding Supplies Difficult For Scrimshaw Artists

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

There was once a young man from West Texas who was intrigued by the sea. Like many people, he was interested in something that was foreign to his experience and his childhood environment. It seems, he says now, that we are most interested in the places where we do not live.

His fascination eventually focused on a particular aspect of the sea. As a child, he had seen pictures of John F. Kennedy's scrimshaw (carvings and decorative work on whalebone and ivory) collection and he was fascinated.

When he was in college, his girlfriend gave him a whale's tooth and the interest he had known as a child gave way to a hobby, and later a profession, involving an art form that was born on the sea, that was created by men whose life was the sea.

That young man was John Mangrum, who today is one of fewer than 50 (that he knows of) registered guild scrimshanders (makers of scrimshaw) in the continental United States. Like the whalers whose skills he preserves, he transforms rough pieces of ivory into finely detailed etchings of gracious old ships and mighty whales.

Mangrum has been in Lubbock this week to display and sell his wares at the Fall Festival of the Arts at Texas Tech University. He spoke quietly and knowledgeably about an uncommon art that he has studied extensively and that he treasures highly.

"There are 48 registered guild scrimshanders and about 150-200 hobbyists," said Mangrum. "The problem now is that they can't get supplies. The whale and walrus were put on the federal endangered species list in October 1972 and elephants went on the list last December."

As a result of those actions, the importation into the country and the interstate transportation for resale purposes of the ivory of those species was made illegal. Consequently, all of Mangrum's work is done with existing supplies. "What I have now is what I'll have the rest of my life," he said.

The only other ivory he works with is mastodon ivory, which can be transported across state lines. Surprisingly, the supply of mastodon ivory is plentiful. "They find it when they're digging up roadbeds in Alaska," said Mangrum.

The bearded scrimshander is still working with a supply of whale's teeth that he found in 1971. "I found a barrel of whale's teeth in Nantucket that was sealed in 1823," he said. "I floated two loans to buy it. But I sold the barrel itself, which was solid oak, for more than the total of the two loans."

The teeth in the barrel were sealed in seaweed, and the salt had destroyed about a third of the contents. He salvaged about 200 teeth.

Mangrum manages to extend his supplies by making small pieces of jewelry from the solid pieces of the ivory. "It wasn't until 1968 that scrimshaw jewelry came into its own as a way to conserve supplies," he said.

The traditional scrimshaw is done on the large hollow teeth. Mangrum works on only about five of the whole teeth a year, again as a conservation measure. He uses about three to four pounds of elephant ivory a year.

Mangrum's skill was originally self-taught. "Scrimshaw started out as a hobby for me," he said. "The only way I could draw a ship and have it come out right was on ivory. For some reason, on ivory it works."

But his hobby eventually evolved into more than a casual pastime. "After I graduated from Tech, I moved to Washington, D.C., where I was a field agent for the Commerce Department," said Mangrum. 'We used to go to Nantucket for vacations. Then in the summer of 1974 I bought a glass-blowing shop there. A guy offered me a deal on a shop that I just couldn't turn down. I learned glass-blowing in 15 days."

According to Mangrum, there are two classes of people on Nantucket — the outsiders and the islanders. Outsiders are not readily accepted. But he managed to work his way into the social structure after summers of entertaining the islanders' children. And most important, he was accepted by some people who would help turn his scrimshaw hobby into a profession.

"I studied scrimshaw with some of the old masters on Nantucket," said Mangrum. "They don't take many people — I don't know why they accepted me, but I studied under them for four months. The majority of the finest scrimshanders are on Cape Cod."

It was on Nantucket that he learned a formula for the black color used to fill in the ivory etchings. He listed the ingredients of india ink, lampblack and sperm whale case oil, but he won't reveal any proportions. The secret recipe that takes about a month to prepare is the only formula that Mangrum has found will last on the ivory.

"For other colors, I go back to what the original whalers used — tobacco juice, roots and berries," he said. The colors are a long time in preparation, so he makes them up only about once a year.

Scrimshaw is an exacting art requiring time and patience. "It takes about three hours for Mangrum to prepare the ivory of, for instance, a whale's tooth. The raw tooth is rough and rigid and must be polished to smoothness. Then another eight to 10 hours are needed for the etching and final touches.

Mangrum is concerned with preserving the scrimshaw tradition. "I will etch most any design on elephant ivory, but with whale ivory, it's strictly traditional. I won't do anything the whalers didn't do on whale ivory," he said.

He describes his preference for whale ivory as the canvas for his art: "Whale and elephant ivory darkens and holds together, but walrus ivory splits and cracks. You get 20-30 times more detail in whale ivory because it's harder and the grain is finer . The art of scrimshaw is not so much being able to etch the ivory, but to incorporate tthe design, to build it into the grain."

Mangrum was a professional scrimshander for about two and a half years, but got a job when he moved to Houston. His skills are now used to help him relax. "I do it more for pleasure now," he said. "It's an escape valve that gives me a chance to blow off steam that results from a high-pressure job."

He doesn't travel as much as he once did because of the interstate transportation laws. The only way around those laws is to resell the ivory where he purchased it, according to Mangrum. He can do his work in Texas, but he must resell it in the seven states where he first purchased the ivory.

Mangrum enjoys the shows like Tech's art festival. He reduced his prices for the Tech show to 50 per cent below his standard retail values because "I remember what it was like before Christmas when I was a student. I didn't have much money."

His elephant ivory pieces sell for $20-$125 at regular retail, and his whale ivory designs start at $35-$50 and go up to $300.

"You just fall in love with the way ivory reacts," said Mangrum. "I know it sounds cliche, but it's true — it's so much fun to watch the ivory come alive under your tools."

DETAILED DESIGNS — Most of John Mangrum's designs are of intricately carved sailing ships and whales, colored with a special black ink concentrate that won't fade from the ivory. Charges Dropped Against Newsman

DALLAS (AP) — Criminal trespass charges against a Dallas newspaper reporter arrested after writing an unfavorable story about the sheriff, were dropped Tuesday when a justice of the peace ruled the charges were filed in the wrong precinct.

But Sheriff Carl Thomas said charges against Dallas Morning News reporter Bruce Selcraig would be refiled in a court with jurisdiction.

Selcraig, 23, was arrested Oct. 30 when he refused to leave the waiting area of Thomas' outer office where he sat with other reporters. Thomas said he had earlier banned Selcraig from the waiting area.

A copyright story quoting two Dallas police officers as saying Thomas was intoxicated and unruly at a hotel bar the night of the Texas-OU football rally Oct 6. appeared in the Morning News the Saturday before Selcraig's arrest.

Bake These And Save 40¢

GLADIOLA GINGERSNAPS

3/4 cup shortening
1 cup dark brown sugar
1/3 cup molasses
1 egg
2 1/4 cups sifted Gladiola All-Purpose Flour
2 teaspoons soda
3/4 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon ground ginger
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon ground cloves

Heat oven to 375°. Grease 2 cookie sheets. In a large bowl cream together shortening, brown sugar, molasses and egg. Sift soda, salt and spices with flour and stir into molasses mixture. Shape with hands into small balls. Roll in granulated sugar and place about 2 inches apart on baking sheets. Bake 10 minutes. Makes about 5 dozen.

NOTE: If using Martha White's Gladiola Self-Rising Flour, omit salt and 1 teaspoon soda.

GLADIOLA CORN BREAD DRESSING (for chicken or turkey)

1/4 cup finely chopped onion
1 cup finely chopped celery
3/4 cup melted butter or margarine
4 cups toasted dry bread cubes or 4 cups crumbled biscuits
3 cups crumbled corn bread
2 teaspoons salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon poultry seasoning
2 cups broth from cooked giblets

Brown the onion and celery in butter in a heavy skillet. Combine with bread cubes, corn bread and seasonings. Pour on the broth and stir lightly to blend. Stuff fowl and roast according to weight of bird. This amount of dressing is for a 4½ to 5 lb. bird, for larger fowl double the amount. If desired, BAKE DRESSING IN THE OVEN. Heat oven to 350°. With hands, shape dressing into pones or balls and place in baking pan. Cover and bake 20 minutes. Uncover, and bake 10 more minutes.

You can trust Martha White for better baking.

Agriculture Bill To Aid Plains

The agricultural appropriations bill recently passed by Congress contains an $800,000 scientific project designed to assist America's "bread basket," the Great Plains, in continuing to produce high yields in the face of droughts and a declining water table.

The funds, aimed particularly at the southern Great Plains, will be used for research and to initiate program planning for a Soil Moisture Conservation and Plant Stress Laboratory at Texas Tech.

The appropriation was initiated through the House Approprications Committee headed by U.S. Rep. George Mahon of Lubbock. The agricultural research efforts has received strong support in the Senate from Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas. Both legislators have been working closely with the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) to insure continuing efforts to sustain and bolster the strong agricultural economy of the southern Great Plains.

USDA scientists will man the laboratory, but research funded by the federal government will be done by both USDA agronomists and scientists from other universities throughout the area.

Scientists affiliated with the laboratory are expected to concentrate their studies on efficient water use by non-irrigated crops and grasslands as well as on energy efficiency in crop production.

In the future the USDA could construct a facility consisting of offices and support areas for greenhouses, storage, processing and growth chamber.

In 1959 USDA officials first proposed such a laboratory to the U.S. Senate. Last year the Senate allocated $100,000 for a study of possible locations. The Lubbock site was found "ideal".

Tech's College of Agricultural Sciences and International Center for Arid and Semi-Arid Land Studies (ICASALS) have co-operated over the past three years to focus USDA attention on the resources and potential of this region, with Texas Tech suggested as the lab's site. Texas Tech has offered the USDA suitable land on the Lubbock campus for construction of the laboratory, to be operated cooperatively with the College of Agricultural Sciences.

Dr. William F Bennett, interim dean of agricultural sciences, said the laboratory should serve immediate needs in West Texas, threatened particularly by a declining water table in its underground aquifer. The lab also is expected to help accelerate development of more drought resistant plants and soil moisture conservation technology for other semi-arid western states and similar areas throughout the world.

The significance of the laboratory, he said, can best be seen in statistics. In the Great Plains, about 160 million acres are cropland, primarily in wheat, grain sorghum and corn. About 62 percent of U.S. wheat is produced in Great Plains states, 93 percent of the grain sorghum, 16 percent of the corn, 43 percent of the barley, 31 percent of the cotton, 58 percent of the flax, 37 percent of the sugar beets, 28 percent of the alfalfa and 23 percent of the oats.

In the High Plains of Texas there are about 11 million acres of cropland, half irrigated and half dryland, but the irrigated acreage is expected to decline from 6 million acres in 1985 to 2.25 million in 2015.

In addition, drought in the High Plains has occurred every 20 to 22 years for the past 160 years, and scientists predict that a three to five-year drought on the High Plains could reduce the entire U.S. grain crop by 8 to 10 percent.

Internationally, Bennett said, there are two factors which make the new laboratory significant.

The U.S. balance of trade position is significantly bolstered by the export of grain and other farm commodities, and this balance is important to the value of the U.S. dollar.

Cattlemen Continue Cutback On Herds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cattle producers still are hanging back from expanding herds and could decide to continue their liquidation longer than some experts predict, says a Colorado livestock economist.

Robert Reierson, who works for one of the nation's largest feedlot and packing firms, told an outlook session at the Agriculture Department that most experts think the current liquidation phase in the cattle business will end next year.

But for this to happen, he said Wednesday, producers will have to begin moving more heifers into breeding herds in addition to reducing the number of older cows they are sending to slaughter plants.

So far, Reierson said, this has not occurred to a significant degree, although cow slaughter is declining.

Meat comprises nearly one-third of consumers' grocery spending, and beef is the biggest item in the meat bill.

A cutback in cattle numbers the past several years has resulted in much higher animal prices and is a major factor in overall food prices going up 10 percent in 1978, the sharpest rise in four years.

Led by beef and pork, food prices are expected to go up again in 1979, "most likely" by about 7.5 percent, according to department economists.

Reierson said that "for whatever the reason, cow-calf operators are not yet sufficiently encouraged" by higher market prices to expand their herds.

Reierson said U.S. cow slaughter in 1976 totaled about 10.5 million head but has declined to an estimated 8.5 million head this year. He said the slaughter will probably be less than 7 million head in 1979 and drop "towards or even under" the level of 6 million head a year in 1980-82.

Cow beef is the main source of hamburger. Thus, with reduced cow slaughter, hamburger prices probably will go up relatively faster than cuts from grain-fed cattle.

But Reierson and others said that as hamburger prices rise, more meat from chucks and other cuts of grain-fed beef probably will be ground to meet the demands of consumers.

President Carter's decision to veto a new meat-import law favored by cattlemen and uncertainty about future prospects for price controls and other federal regulations are contributing to the situation, he said.

Pork production has not increased nearly as much as USDA experts had counted on, and Reierson said that the larger capital requirements and uncertainty about federal controls — including what do about the use of nitrite as a bacon preservative — are factors that are similar to those in the cattle business.

Trading in the Lubbock spot cotton market was slow to moderate on Wednesday. Supplies of cotton for sale were moderate to heavy and demand was weak to moderate.

Prime-Time Election Programs Appear At Bottom Of Ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — Television watchers election night turned in droves to movies and specials offered by independent stations, or they left their sets off altogether, ratings from the A.C. Nielsen Co. show.

The networks' prime-time election programs Nov. 7 showed up at the bottom of the ratings for the week ending Nov. 12 — CBS' "Campaign '78" ranked No. 54, followed by "Decision '78" on NBC and "'78 Vote" on ABC.

The rating for the best of the three was 10, and Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with TV, just 10 percent saw all or part of the show.

The networks wouldn't say exactly how much the election night programming cost — it was in the millions — and the effect on the ratings was barely felt.

ABC, with six of the week's Top 10 programs, finished with a rating of 18.9. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute, 18.9 percent of the homes in the country with TV were tuned to ABC.

CBS was second at 17.9, NBC third at 17.8. It was the third consecutive week that the networks finished in that order.

Election night programming did put something of a wrinkle in the ratings — with ABC's Tuesday night comedy lineup pre-empted, NBC's "Little House on the Prairie" nudged its way into first in the ratings. "Three's Company" or "Laverne and Shirley," both on ABC generally grab the No. 1 spot.

"Little House on the Prairie" had a rating of 27.1.

Second place went to the first chapter in a CBS miniseries, "The Word," with three ABC shows trailing — "Love Boat," "Mork and Mindy" and "Eight is Enough."

CBS had two other shows in the first 10, No. 6 "60 Minutes" and No. 9 "M-A-S-H."

Here are the week's Top 10 shows:

"Little House on the Prairie," with a rating of 27.8 representing 20.7 million homes, NBC; "The Word," Part 1, 26 or 19.4 million, CBS; "Love Boat," 25.9 or 19.3 million, "Mork and Mindy," 25.1 or 18.7 million, and "Eight is Enough," 24.9 or 18.6 million, all ABC; "60 Minutes," 24.8 or 18.5 million, CBS; "Charlie's Angels," 24.1 or 18 million, and "What's Happening," 23.9 or 17.8 million, both ABC; "M-A-S-H," 23.7 or 17.7 million, CBS, and "Fantasy Island," 22.8 or 17 million.

The second 10 shows:

"Monday Night Football," ABC; "One Day at a Time," CBS; "Barney Miller" and "Soap," both ABC; Monday Movie-"Rainbow," Big Event-"Ode to Billy Joe," and "CHiPs," all NBC; and "Dallas," Wednesday Movie-"First You Cry," and "Barnaby Jones," all CBS.

Life Sentence Given In Stabbing Deaths

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Stuart Kreiner, 17, was sentenced Tuesday to life in prison for the stabbing murders of three Anne Arundel County girls a year ago.

Circuit Judge Bruce C. Williams ordered Kreiner sent to Patuxent Institution, a prison-hospital with special psychiatric facilities, and said there was little chance that he would be released early. Kreiner pleaded guilty last month to charges of murdering three neighbors: Theresa Hogan, 8, her 10-year-old sister, Deborah, and Ann Brzeszkiewicz, 8.

ABC To Televise WW[illegible] Drama 'Pearl' Toni[illegible]

By JAY SHARBUTT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC is remaking "From Here to Eternity," but hasn't scheduled it yet. But ABC has done its own "Eternity" and will air it tonight, Friday and Sunday as "Pearl."

Like its rival, "Pearl" has a military setting in Hawaii and its time is December 1941 just before Japan's attack on Pearl Harbor.

It comes via Warner Bros., but Warners admits some of its Japanese-side prelims and attack scenes are from "Tora, Tora, Tora" by 20th Century-Fox. This is Hollywood's version of the Allies.

The premiere depicts the prelude to war, the warning signs. And it offers one Eternity-like Army officer, one tough-but-fair sergeant and one sadistic NCO, one troubled private and, of course, the women.

Gregg Henry is a young Navy-family officer planning to resign, thus dismaying his father, Cmdr. Richard Anderson. Leslie Ann Warren is a Navy doctor Wagner stops from committing suicide.

Meanwhile, back at the Army, Max Gail of "Barney Miller" is a tough but honest 1st sergeant even though his chevrons show three stripes, a diamond and two rockers (three rockers are customary).

His role is sort of mild Milt Warden. The Pvt. Prewitt part is given to Christian Vance, but instead of playing bugle and refusing to box, he's suspected by his pals and the colonel of being homosexual.

Assigned to drive for the colonel (much against the latter's wishes), he later will be seen getting seduced by someone's wife as the camera pans up to a full moon and Frank Ivers moves in action.

Darn, I revealed part of the ending. Well, part of the beginning has the landscape carriers of "Tora" planes planing through the stormy Pacific at night, heading for a rendezvous with destiny.

Amid the plowing, deep ahem, to remind you war is pending, are B-movie scenes, character studies and dialogue that may make you wish the carriers would go to flank speed pronto.

The whole caper is so stock and cliche-ridden it's hard to believe that Ben TV veteran, Stirling Silliphant, wrote the show. But he did, [illegible] the prerequisite [illegible]

Neither does tonight's premiere of "Pearl."

TV Critic Puzzled By Liz's Selection

By JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (UPI) — By all means tune in "Return Engagement" to see what Liz Taylor looks like these days (there's plenty to look at), but better have an alternate entertainment in mind.

In films Miss Taylor's choice of vehicles has been educated and interesting, which makes it difficult to understand how she came to pick this static script for one of her few television appearances.

"Return Engagement" is a Hallmark Hall of Fame production to air on NBC Friday, 8:30-10 p.m., Central time. It's the story of the relationship between a repressed middle-aged professor and her disagreeably neurotic young student. There's no sex involved, and very little else to relieve the tedium.

Miss Taylor plays a professor of ancient history who has a secret past — she was married to a big-time television star and appeared twice on the Ed Sullivan show.

Her secret is discovered by her co-star, Joseph Bottoms, a student who has forced his way into her home as a boarder, put a television aerial on her roof against her wishes, plays his rock [illegible] decibel count and wakes her up at 6 A.M. to request they have a chat at once.

Any normal woman would have kicked him on the spot, but Miss Taylor's character has her own problems.

Bottoms, an old movie buff, discovers her show business background and charms her into relating her life story. Given Bottoms' repulsive personality, that's hard to understand.

After solemnly promising to keep her secret, he reveals her past to the director of the school variety show. Liz, who's just a girl who can't say no, agrees to perform but forces Bottoms into being her partner.

But in "Return Engagement," it's not the play that's the thing — it's Elizabeth Taylor. How does she look? Hefty, even matronly. She has abandoned the bouffant hairdo, which is a blessing, but she evokes the feeling that inside the portly woman is a beautiful young girl trying to escape.

Baryshnikov Appearing In Balanchine Ballet

NEW YORK (AP) — Mikhail Baryshnikov, the brightest star in ballet, is dancing with George Balanchine's New York City Ballet, which has a no-star tradition. But at the season's festive opening night Tuesday, the Russian made some movements that looked more like Baryshnikov than Balanchine.

But Baryshnikov is such a good dancer that he doesn't look out of place, he just looks individual. One wouldn't want a great dancer to forgo greatness and become exactly like everybody else.

The opening night — featuring "Jewels" — was a benefit, to help the company raise $1 million so it can receive its $1 million "challenge grant" from the National Endowment for the Arts.

The plotless "Jewels," which Balanchine choreographed in 1967, has three sections. The first is "Emeralds," in which big green "gems" hang from invisible wires above the stage to catch the light and shine while dancers in shiny green move lyrically to music by Faure. The last section, "Diamonds," is bright and sharp-edged to music from Tchaikovsky's "Third Symphony."

Baryshnikov will dance in a Balanchine ballet, "Prodigal Son," on a Public Broadcasting Service TV special Nov. 29. The company will dance in Lincoln Center through Feb. 18 and in Rochester, Syracuse, Buffalo and Chicago in March and April.

Weekly Run Slated For 'Weekend'

By JAY SHARBUTT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC's "Weekend" newsmagazine show, first set to start a weekly prime-time run in September, then given guest-show status, still will go weekly, no kidding. Dec. 2 is the date.

Reuven Frank says it's the real thing this time. He should know. He's executive producer of the Peabody-winning program, which only has aired this season on Sunday, Sept. 10, and on Oct. 12, a Thursday.

Not only is it definitely starting its weekly run next month, he says, there is no talk at NBC of another postponement so an entertainment effort can get a tryout in his show's Saturday night slot.

"I have us scheduled through the (winter-spring) cycle," said Frank, who has run "Weekend" ever since it began as a late-night, once-a-month Saturday show in October 1974.

"We go through, I believe, the end of June, we're off in July, and then we have some repeats in August and early September, the same as '60 Minutes' (on CBS)."

And after that? Well, the keepers of NBC's till want him to ready a budget for the 1979-80 season, which doesn't suggest authorities there are planning a half-season run and then a discreet fadeout.

"To the degree these things matter, they've done all the right things and said all the right things," says Frank, with NBC News since 1950 both as a producer and as president circa 1968-73.

His show, begun with Lloyd Dobyns at the podium (Linda Ellerbee joined the on-air roster this fall), so far this fall has done features ranging from college football hype to a troubled home for old folks.

On Dec. 2, its yarns will include one about Idi Amin's double and a report on artificial insemination that includes a chat with a lesbian mother in London who had a child by that process.

The general "Weekend" style seems sardonic, often impressionistic, unlike "60 Minutes" which tends to employ what some print newshawks might call the old blow-the-lid-off-this-town approach.

"Well, I don't mind blowing the lid off," says producer Frank, whose past includes a print stint as rewrite man and night city editor at the Newark Evening News in New Jersey.

But for "Weekend," he says, the story has "got to be interesting, it's got to satisfy someone's curiousity rather than sense of mission and it's got to be a picture that tells a story."

What also has been called brashness, irreverence or just plain whimsy also is a key part of his show, which in its Sept. 10 edition continued the tradition by needling a rival newsmagazine show.

It made sport of the way ABC's "20-20" sometimes starts a story when it types a word on the screen, then types out the meaning.

"Weekend" also typed out a word on the screen, "egregious," then typed out the meaning. Then, to the sounds of machine-gun fire, it put bullet holes in the whole thing.

Frank says he got a tart note from a "20-20" executive about that.

"He thought it was a cheap shot," he groused. "Which I didn't like, because the bit was film animation and cost like hell."

Kuwait Firm May Buy U.S. Hotel

BALTIMORE (UPI) — The controlling interest in the Baltimore Hilton may be sold to a Kuwaiti firm for $3 million so the hotel can be renovated.

Tyhierr Abughazaleh, the Dallas representative for United International Hotels of Kuwait, told the Dallas Times-Herald his firm is investigating the possibility of purchasing the majority interest in the Baltimore Hilton, the newspaper reported Tuesday.

"There have been some preliminary talks, there is nothing definite," Abughazaleh told the newspaper.

He said United International Hotels owns six hotels in the Middle East and wants to buy establishments in the United States.

William L. Siskind, owner of the downtown Hilton, admitted he is negotiating with a firm in Dallas, but refused to confirm talks with the Kuwaiti corporation.

Siskind said he decided to sell a majority interest in the hotel for $3 million so he could pay for renovations demanded by the Hilton Corp.

New financing also would help the Hilton compete effectively with the new Hyatt Corp. hotel planned for Baltimore's Inner Harbor, Siskind said.

He said the hotel had lost $7.6 million in the last four years.

Siskind had received complaints from guests at the Baltimore Hilton concerning food and availability of rooms.

Hilton Corp. officials said quality checks indicated the Baltimore Hilton "was not being operated up to Hilton standards."

SOPHISTICATED NEANDERTHAL

Neanderthal man, who lived as recently as 60,000 years ago, may have been more sophisticated than the brutish creature traditionally pictured. Recent excavations in Iraq indicate he had some knowledge of useful plants. Skeletons from ritual burials had been laid on beds of branches and wildflowers withknown medicinal properties.

New Pope's Popularity Grows

By SAMUEL KOO

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II in his first month in office has become Italy's No. 1 crowd pleaser. His utterances indicate he will adhere to the policies of Pope Paul VI.

"He turns on," says a young Vatican priest of the robust, urbane Pole who likes to mingle with crowds, kiss babies and prefers to address the faithful as "brothers and sisters" rather than "children."

"He reaches the people. It is very, very evident that he has direct communication with them," says the Rev. James Long of the Vatican Secretariat for Christian Unity.

The traditional bursts of "Viva il Papa!" — "Long Live the Pope!" — greet him wherever he appears. Many say he displays personal qualities that could make him one of the most popular popes in memory.

The pope has been busy since his election Oct. 16 trying to become part of his "second homeland." This has endeared him to the Italians.

"Since I was not born on this soil, I feel all the more need here for a spiritual 'birth'," the former Karol Wojtyla said, paying homage to St. Francis of Assisi, a patron saint of Italy.

In audience after audience and in visits outside the Vatican, he struck the Italian theme. In a typical tribute to Italy, he said in fluent and only slightly accented Italian:

"All the more do I feel the need to insert myself in this new land that Peter chose ... This land has always been near to me; now it has become my second homeland. I desire to be part of Italy in all its historical richness, and at the same time in all its current reality."

Vatican sources say it may be some time before the pontiff begins issuing concrete policy statements, elaborating on his early declaration that his primary duty will be to complete with "prudent but stimulating actions" reforms introduced into the Roman Catholic Church by the Second Vatican Council. They point out that the pope hardly has had time to think out a policy and put it into execution.

In brief speeches and extemporaneous remarks, however, these broad outlines of his views have emerged:

—Celibacy: The pope reaffirmed the 1,-

Analysis

500-year-old ban on marriage for priests, saying, "We must retain the sense of our unique vocation; we are in the world but we are not worldly." The church's position on this controversial issue is believed to be a main cause for the steady defection of priests over the past 15 years.

—Human Rights: Describing it as "the great effort of our time," he indicated that the church will play a more active role in promoting human rights around the world. But he has also said the church is not "a rival" of any political system.

—Ecumenism: He said the church, despite "obstacles ... must go forward on the track" of unwon with other Christian faiths but without compromising "the true Catholic doctrine." He called divisions among Christians "an intolerable scandal."

—Doctrine and church discipline: He called for a renewed emphasis on the role of doctrine in the life of the church and on the preservation of discipline.

—Detente: The pope vowed to continue the policies of his predecessors and maintain a dialogue with governments whose policies the church does not approve of.

The Hall of Fame for Great Americans was founded in 1900 by Dr. Henry Mitchell MacCracken, chancellor of New York University. it honors persons who se outstanding achievements have influenced the culture and course of the nation.

CB Convac

By INK DIPPER

The World Administrative Radio Conference (WARC) in Geneva, Switzerland, in 1979 will have significance for all CBers.

Among other matters, frequency allocation negotiations will take place at the session — the first general conference to be held in 20 years.

Specialized WARCs are called fairly often: one earlier this year dealt with the frequency allotment plan for aeronautical mobile services.

The function of most WARCs is to allocate frequencies on an exclusive or shared basis.

Obviously, technology has increased the variety of services that the electromagnetic spectrum can support.

These conferences are necessary to minimize the possibilities of interference among the different nations. Membership is reportedly 154 nations, with more than 100 representing the Third World.

There will be many thorny issues involved in next year's conference.

This column has discussed several times the proposal being articulated by CBers and radio engineers that citizens band must move from its present location of 27 megahertz to 450 or 900 megahertz.

Also at issue is the suggestion by some that CB-type two-way communications could ultimately be important in the Third World — perhaps as an instrument for organizing an underground.

Third World countries have begun arguing for more adequate spectrum assignments — even for reservations of space until they have the technology to utilize the reservation.

Timothy J. Logue, of Silver Springs, Md., is one of the formulators of the International Communications Agency "bible" on the debate over a world information. He feels the media is creating the wrong impression of the Third World and its interest in radio.

"American communications often have a rather simple view of the complex issues involved," Logue says. "There is no threat of widespread use of CB radio among a restive population. Radio is already a powerful force in much of the Third World and is being widely implemented for educational and entertainment purposes on a mass level."

Lack of money and electrical energy as well as limited spectrum in much of rural Latin America, Africa and Asia seem to make two-way communications of the CB-type unrealistic, according to Logue.

WARC is sort of the great-grandson of the International Telegraphic Union, which held its first conference in 1865.

At that time telegraph messages were sent to the border of a country, hand-carried across the border-line, and re-telegraphed to their destination.

Power Of Positive Speaking

MOST OF THE TIME persons of the print media pay little attention to what those boys of the airwaves have to say or do, unless of course they give out a wrong ball score or develop a permanent case of throat clearing.

But recently a newscaster — not known for his abundance of humor, mainly because he is more interested in saying things that make sense rather than things that don't — stated: "The news media tend to build public figures up only to tear them down."

It's a quote worthy of mention and one that makes sense.

But not only can the statement apply to public figures. It can also apply to events as well. We of the print media — as well as the golden-throated big voices — try our best to build up an event only to rip the losers instead of praising the winners, once the contest is completed.

Maybe that's why we as a group often times dwell on the negative instead of the positive.

It is the loser, the team that can't win the big one, that most people want to hear about. Fans and writers want to know not how the game was won but rather how it was lost.

In other words, instead of trying to place a team on a pedestal, we try to put them under it.

MAYBE IT IS DONE because as one writer so boldly suggested "we are hounded with the notion of being a free press, so each glowing adjective spent beforehand must be balanced with an arrow afterward."

To most critics to lose a championship game even on the high school or college level ranks somewhere in the vicinity of bending over the pick up a napkin dropped on the floor at a formal dinner party only to have your pants rip. There is nothing to do about it except to grin and turn crimson.

Following the Super Bowl, where the Vikings had lost their fourth bid for a world crown, what most folks read in the sports pages was how the Vikes suffered a great embarrassment. It was suggested that the next time Minnesota gained the finals, it shouldn't show up; it should mail in their loss.

The stigma of not being able to win the big one is a brand that no team wants to get saddled with. Merely being in a big game isn't enough for a team anymore. To be remembered they have to win the shootouts. The ghost of Vince Lombardi, remember, keeps tabs.

WHY CAN'T WE, as chroniclers, present the premise that a losing team is sometimes not its own undoing in a big game? But that the winning team was simply a much better one on that particular day in time. That the loser should not be buried, but the winner be hoisted, might work out just fine.

Why can't we praise the men that do a good job instead of hurling darts at the men that didn't. Give the good player a medal and forget the bad one, a fan suggested. After all, the loser will have his day sometime sooner or later.

You have to go with the guy that can hit the breaking ball, as you have to go with a quarterback like Ken Stabler who calls his own plays and flaunts regimentation. Everyone knows that you are supposed to rush the middle of the line twice, and then try the rollout pass-run option when you are on a guy's 1-yard line. Instead, Stabler rolls out and passes on that first down, after faking a run up the middle. A touchdown for the Raiders. Clear and simple, a good football play.

There were probably no mistakes on the defensive side, either. But instead of saying it was what it was — a fine play — most folks will try to put the blame on a mixup in the secondary.

A high school group once asked which dressing room is the best to go into following a game. Well, it was explained, the winner's is a lot better, at least they usually talk. But the loser's room is where the story is at in most instances.

Maybe we should let coaches and players, who are on much superior teams enjoy a victory and let the loser just forget about it.

But then again, as everyone knows, it just doesn't work that way in these days and times. Would the public have it any other way?

Probably not.

MUSTANG LEADER — Mike Ford, a 6-3, 225-pound sophomore, is leading the nation in total offense, and he will be the leader on the field Saturday when SMU visits Texas Tech in a Southwest Conference contest. He was the SWC newcomer of the year last season and in the running for all-SWC honors this fall.

Raiders Ignore Cold, Brace For Mustangs

By DON HENRY
Executive Sports Editor

By the time the Raiders grew accustomed to the weather, it was time to go to the house.

But, there was plenty of work to be done, and Tech coach Rex Dockery had to get his troops out in the weather.

"It's cold," said the head coach, following the workout, "but we had to get outside, to get something done."

Maybe he was remembering two years ago when the two teams collided — or slid into each other — in a game with the temperature in the low 20's and a layer of snow covering the AstroTurf the last half.

"We had to give our defense some of the looks that we'll face," commented Dockery. "What passes do they run? All of them. They throw outs, long, short, over the middle, you name it.

"Shoot, as much as they throw, they have to throw them all."

Even as strong as the Mustangs are in the passing department, Dockery is just

By DON HAJACKSON
Associate Sports Editor

Maybe, it should be stipulated that two high school football coaches looking for the district title should avoid the same.

But no matter.

The Middle East peace treaty negotiators should be so complementary.

The records are a reflection of the coaches' thoughts. Estacado and Canyon will both bring 4-0 1-AAA district records into the game.

Kimbrough Stadium in Canyon will be the sight where the district championship will be determined Friday night. Kickoff is slated for 7:30 p.m.

Overall, only a half a game separates the two foes. Canyon sports an 8-0-1 mark to Estacado's 8-1.

And it's ironic that both teams stumbled on the first weekend of play. Monterey tied Canyon 6-6, while Plainview bombed Estacado 40-6.

Anyway, decide for yourself the differences in the two football teams.

What has been the main reason for success—offense or defense?

Kelley: "Defense, definitely has been the main reason for our success. We like to hit people. We play more consistently on defense."

Wright: " Our defense has been more consistent. But I think it's true to win you always have to have a good defense."

Why have the respective offenses lacked consistency?

Kelley: "I don't know. We've been playing in spurts. We're able to drive 80 yards for a score, but when our defense turns the ball over deep in opponents' territory, we'll have a turnover..."

Wright: "It's not easy and we don't have a good offense. We've been moving up the field between the 30's pretty good, but when we get down in the red zone, we just can't get the ball across the goal line."

In district competition, Canyon has put 81 points on the scoreboard to its opponents' 28. Estacado, on the other hand...

LCC Cagers Open Year

Lubbock Christian College, trying to start its 1978-79 basketball campaign on a high note, hosts Paul Quinn College tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the LCC Fieldhouse.

The Chaps, under new head coach Larry Hays who took over the LCC reins after a seven year tenure, have lost 20 or more games during six of the past seven seasons.

However, LCC will attempt to improve on a dismal 4-22 mark it posted last year as it returns three lettermen to the fold.

Paul Quinn enters the game with a couple of games already under its belt. In its season opener, PQC defeated Arkansas Baptist 94-91. However a week later Wiley College ambushed LCC's guest 101-76.

According to Hays, Bruce Carver and Marshall Smith will start at the guard postions. The front line will include Brian Fortner Kevin Harris and Mike Wrinkle. Hays, however, indicated that most of the Chap players would see some action tonight.

Jail Sentence Issued For Shoving Incident

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — A Wichita man accused of attacking a referee during a football game between Kansas and Texas A&M on Sept. 9 faces 60 days in jail or 50 hours of community service work in Lawrence.

That was the alternative given David Dwyer, 30, Wednesday by Douglas County District Judge Mike Elwell.

Elwell stayed a 60-day sentence, provided Dwyer completes the community service work within the next month.

Martina, Evert Vie For No. 1

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — The richest women's tennis tournament ever has been dominated thus far by the acknowledged top pair of players in the sport. The question of who's No. 1, at least for now, figures to be answered Saturday.

Chris Evert and Martina Navratilova coasted to one-sided victories in second-round action of the $250,000 Series Championship at Mission Hills Country Club Wednesday night to advance to the event's semifinals. But the way they won makes it easy to look ahead.

Miss Evert whipped Virginia Ruzici of Romania 6-1, 6-3, and Miss Navratilova demolished Virginia Wade of England 6-2, 6-1. The winners will rest today while the other pair of semifinal berths are filled in the eight-player tourney.

The semifinals are scheduled Friday night, with Miss Evert and Miss Navratilova in different brackets. Miss Ruzici meets Betty Stove of Holland, and Miss Wade faces Terry Reid of Australia tonight, with the winners qualifying for Friday's play. The semifinal pairings won't be known until after tonight's competition.

Also tonight, Wendy Turnbull of Australia takes on Regina Marsikova of Czechoslovakia for seventh place. Miss Turnbull was ousted from championship contention by Miss Stove Wednesday night 2-6, 7-5, 7-5, and Miss Marsikova was knocked out by Miss Reid 7-6, 6-0.

"She had me moving," said Miss Evert of Miss Ruzici. "Virgina's forehand is one of the best among the women. She would have done better if she had gotten her first serve in more."

"Chris is so complete, I never know how to play her," said Miss Ruzici. "In the end she was tougher than me in everything. But I thought I played better against her tonight."

EYES AHEAD — Chris Evert, using the two-handed swing, keeps her eyes on the ball as he returns a shot during her Wednesday match with Virginia Ruzici in the Colgate Series Championships at Rancho Mirage, Calif. Miss Evert will play in the semifinals Friday. (AP Laserphoto)

Overall, the two teams have about the same point differential.

Thus, while Canyon has accumulated 116 to the opposition's 34, Estacado has outscored the competition 161-74.

Estacado and Canyon seem to be so compatible that both clubs have compromises for each other's strengths.

Kelley: "I would have to think that we're a little faster than Canyon. But though we have better overall team speed, Canyon has good quickness."

Wright: "Estacado is faster than us. But I hope we'll have a little more team consistency. I hope that will offset their (Estacado's) speed."

The way both teams are so evenly matched there seems to be only one way that the I-AAA championship game can end—that's in a tie.

Sipe Claims Browns Near Titlist Plateau

BEREA, Ohio (AP) — Cleveland Browns quarterback Brian Sipe insists the team is "not that far away" from a championship year and he thinks he's the quarterback who can lead the Browns to a successful season.

"I'm not the kind of a quarterback you build a team around, like Bert Jones, for example," Sipe said. "But I am good enough to take a team to a championship.

"I'm confident there's a nucleus here to build a championship around, and I believe I'm the guy who'll take the Browns to that championship, whenever it is."

Sipe obviously wasn't talking about this year; the Browns have lost four of their last five National Football League games after winning three in a row.

Head coach Sam Rutigliano has said he will work rookie quarterback Mark Miller into the Browns' remaining five games "for at least five or six series in each."

"I see the wisdom in what Sam is doing," Sipe said Wednesday. "I will only be disappointed if Sam feels it's more important for Mark to get experience than to win."

Sipe was jeered by the fans as the Browns lost 19-7 to the Denver Broncos Sunday, but his performance moved him up a notch to sixth place in the ranking of American Conference passers. He has completed 152 of 284 passes for 1,818 yards and 11 touchdowns, with 13 interceptions.

That gave him a 67.2 rating. Pittsburgh's Terry Bradshaw leads the conference with 89.3, followed by Joe Ferguson of Buffalo; Dan Fouts, San Diego; Dan Pastorini, Houston, and Jim Zorn, Seattle.

Sipe said he was not oblivious to the booing. "I'd be lying if I said I'm not aware of it, but it's more important for me to prepare for Sunday's game than it is for me to be preoccupied about my popularity with some of the fans.

"And my rapport with the players is much more important than the speculation that I may — or even should — be replaced."

He said he couldn't blame fans "for being frustrated with our offense. I am, too, very frustrated.

"But I'm getting support and reassurance from the people I care about, the people who are important to me.

LCHS Opens Season Against 'Horn Quintet

By BOB BAJACKSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Lubbock Christian High School basketball coach Gary Bowe just hopes his Eagles will be as organized on the court tonight as the practice schedule when they open the 1978 season in Lasbuddie. Tipoff is at 8 p.m.

Because of a crowded workout schedule, which ranges from junior high to college, the Eagles take the court at 3:45 each day and must be finished by 5 p.m.

Is that enough time to getting everything accomplished?

"We have four of five starters back that have some playing experience," said Bowe. "They played in about 24 or 25 games for us last year."

Those players Bowe is referring to include Shawn Williams, 6-3, post; Shawn Bowe, 6-3, forward; Tim Perrin, 6-2, forward; and Billie McConnell, 6-1 guard. The other starter will be Tim Maynard, 5-11, guard.

Last season, Lubbock Christian High School finished with a 19-7 record. This season, the Eagles have some added inspiration to improve on that mark.

"This year, we're a member of the Texas Association of Private Schools (TAPS)," said the Eagle coach. "Now, that we will be playing for a championship (the west zone crown), it'll be easier to get our kids motivated."

"We're going to fast break it whenever we can," said Bowe. "But our entire offense is not just blow and go. If the easy bucket is not there, then we'll set up and work for the good shot."

According to Bowe, McConnell is the team's best passer, his son Shawn is the best inside shooter, with Williams and Perrin having good outside touches.

In regard to the outside shooting attack, Bowe said Perrin's range is from 20-25 feet, while Williams is accurate from the free throw line and at the high post.

"But in all honesty, there is no one star on our team," said Bowe. " The main thing I've been pleased with is our team play. We are more team oriented."

Since, the Lubbock Christian football team qualified for the TAPS playoffs by winning the west zone title, the Eagle basketball team won't be a full strength.

"We're going to be hurting until the football season ends," said Bowe. "What's hurt is our lack of depth."

Five of six players on the Eagles' 10-man basketball roster will miss Lubbock Christian's first cage encounter because of the grid playoffs. The lone exception is Williams. Williams will participate in both sports.

"Shawn is the only exception because he's the only one that had some varsity basketball experience last year," said Bowe. "The others played on the junior varsity."

Thus, Bowe is going to use the first couple of games to let his players get adjusted to game conditions.

"Without a full roster, we'll play a little more conservative," said Bowe. "Of course, when you fast break, there is always the risk of turnovers. But maybe, our speed and willingness to pass to each other will negate the turnovers.

"We're entered in the Plainview Tournament," said Bowe. "There will be a number of AA, AAA teams in the competition."

As the interview progressed, Bowe became more and more excited about getting the season underway.

"Our kids are ready," repeated the Eagle coach a number of times during the interview. "In fact, last night (Thursday), a number of our kids went over to Cotton Center to watch the girls play. I'll tell you by halftime, our kids were ready to get into the dressing room and suit up. We're ready."

So, let the season begin.

as impressed with the SMU defense.

"They've improved so much over last year. It's a case of the older guys getting better — especially (linebacker) Putt Choate — and also, they've gotten some good young players, who have made them a lot stronger defensively.

"Nelson (senior linebacker Gary) has made a lot of difference, and their freshmen, people like (linebacker) Eric Ferguson and (tackle) Harvey Armstrong," Dockery added.

The Raiders will continue to work today on the SMU game, which will begin at 2 p.m. Saturday at Jones Stadium. Both teams will be shooting for victories to pull them over the .500 hump. SMU is 4-4-1, Tech 5-3.

Coronado Set To Begin '78 Basketball Season

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Barry Arnwine admitted that he didn't rightly know how good the Coronado Mustangs might be this season, but he said "I'm anxious to find out."

"Until we go against some different people other than ourselves," the coach said on the eve of the season-opener against Midland Lee, "I won't know how good we will be. You really can't tell too much in scrimmages and intra-squad games."

While Coronado is opening the season down in Midland, Monterey will play host to Odessa Permian at 8 p.m. and the Lubbock Christian High Eagles travel to Lazbuddie, in other boy's action.

With the return of only one starter —senior Steve Ahlenius and three lettermen, it would appear the Mustangs are a little high and dry in the experience department. Although that might be a known fact, Arnwine doesn't seem dispondent about the situation.

"We've got some kids who are going to step in and do the job," the first-year head coach said. "We'll have let them get some playing experience, though, before we do start district play."

Arnwine, who lead Hereford to the District 4-AAAA title two years ago and then turned around and pulled off the same feat at Amarillo High last season, feels the club's "overall physical strength" and "shooting ability" are two of the Mustangs' real plusses this year.

"We're not real tall (Ahlenius is the team's tallest player at 6-4)," said Arnwine. "But I hope we'll make up for the lack of height with good agressive play under the boards.

"When it comes to rebounding we're not going to be sissies."

And on the subject of shooting the ball —one aspect Arnwine seems to be quite pleased with—he commented: "Overall this team shoots extremely well from the outside. During our scrimmages so far we've hit the shots we've take, handled the ball very well and didn't turn it over a whole lot. That's important."

Speaking about the club's weaknesses, the coach pointed out that the lack of height—particularly at foward—worries him even more than the lack of experience.

"For a class AAAA team, we're average maybe a little below," he lamented. "That means we really don't have the dominate big man under the boards that it takes. But we'll make up for it with agressive play and strength, I feel."

Along with Ahlenius, returning lettermen include seniors Bill Tate (6-0) and Mark Reed (6-1).

Arnwine commented that help in rebuilding the Mustangs should come from a group of players up from the junior varsity, including guards Same Law (6-1) and Scott Williams (5-10) and forwards Bob Griffin (6-0), Dennis Boyles (6-4), and Russell Johnson (6-2).

Because of the inexperience Arnwine said all but one of the starting jobs is still up for grabs. Only Ahlenius at the post slot has established himself as a starter, Arnwine concluded.

Asked if the Mustangs would employ a running or slow down type offense, Arnwine quiped: "We'll play the kind of offense it takes to win. We'd like to control the tempo of the game, but if we have to go then we'll go, if we have to hold onto the ball we'll hold on. We really have no one particular style of play."

If the Mustangs are able to do that, he said, maybe they can achieve some of the goals they set down earlier in the year.

"We want to establish ourselves as winners here at Coronado," said Arnwine, speaking on the subject of season goals. "And we'd like to come out over .500 and win district."

But then he went even a step further.

SMU Backs Get Call From Oilers

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers, suddenly short on runningbacks, Wednesday signed a pair of former Southern Methodist players, Brian Duncan and Alvin Maxson.

Duncan, 26, played two seasons with the Cleveland Browns before being cut prior to the start of this season. He rushed 60 yards on 16 carries in his Brown career.

Maxson was drafted in the eighth round by New Orleans in 1974 and played there through the 1976 season. He later played at Pittsburgh and was waived last week by Tampa Bay.

Maxson has a career rushing total of 1,261 yards on 356 carries.

Prior to the arrival of Duncan and Maxson, the Oiler were down to three healthy runners, starters Earl Campbell and Tim Wilson and free agent signee Larry Poole.

Anthony Davis has been lost for the season, Ronnie Coleman is recovering from a knee injury and Rob Carpenter was lost for the season Sunday when he injured a knee against New England.

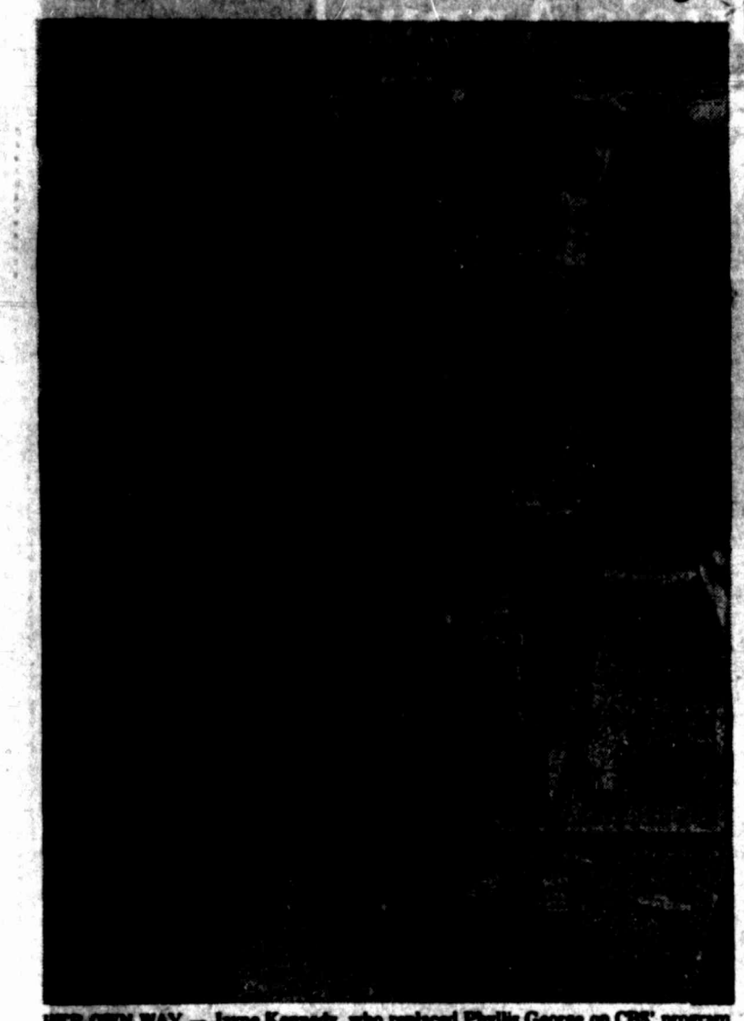
Jayne Kennedy Resents 'Pretty Face' Image



HER OWN WAY — Jayne Kennedy, who replaced Phyllis George on CBS' program "The NFL Today," walks unnoticed on New York's Fifth Avenue near the studio. It isn't easy to follow a legend like Miss George and Miss Kennedy isn't even trying. She wants to do it her own way. (AP Laserphoto)

By HOWARD SMITH
Associated Press Sports Writer

When Jayne Kennedy got the job as Phyllis George's replacement on CBS' "The NFL Today", a network official called her parents' home with the news.

Her 13-year-old brother Herb took the call.

"This is CBS calling and we thought you'd like to know that we've hired Jayne to replace Phyllis George on 'The NFL Today,'" said the caller.

Silence.

"Is anything wrong?" asked the offical. "You don't seem too excited."

"You mean Phyllis George isn't going to be on the show anymore!" cried Herb. "How am I going to watch Phyllis?"

It isn't easy to follow a legend and Jayne Kennedy isn't even trying. She wants to do it her own way. She hasn't watched any tapes of Phyllis and she hasn't asked her for any pointers.

Analysis

Phyllis was a media phenomenon. Somehow she became a star by doing a series of soft interviews with football players and smiling to beat the band. She became a household name. People who don't know a football from an eggplant shouted greetings when they saw her on the street.

Miss Kennedy is more reserved than Phyllis, less sure of herself, less of a natural on camera. She is intelligent, has a genuine love of football, is eager to please but slightly confused by all the technology involved in the show.

She is friendly, honest, very religious, a bit shy, cooperative, very teachable and intent on making a substantial contribution to the show.

"Jayne wants to say something every time she opens her mouth," says Mike Pearl, the show's producer. "If she has nothing to say, she won't talk."

She is an actress, having made occasional appearances in TV series and a handful of movies. She survived a tryout with 19 other women, started out on trial for six weeks but had her contract extended for one year with options after her first two shows.

And she resents inferences that (a) she got the job because she's gorgeous and a former Miss Ohio and (b) she doesn't know anything about football.

"I don't like to talk about that Miss Ohio thing," she says. "That was eight years ago. The fact that I was Miss Ohio didn't help me get this job. There were 19 girls at the audition and they were all beautiful.

"When I got the job everyone was saying I knew nothing about football without even talking to me about it. That hurt. I came into the show knowing football, how it's played. I've loved it since I was a kid."

Miss Kennedy, 26, admits she is not an outright expert but, then, she doesn't have to be. Irv Cross is the show's expert, Jimmy The Greek contributes "analysis," Jack Whitaker does the essays and Brent Musburger pulls it all together. Mis Kennedy does the personality pieces, the soft interviews designed to bring out someone's character rather than elicit hard information.

That's her role. She goes out and interviews someone for 30 minutes, then turns the tape over to an editor who extracts two minutes of questions and answers for use on the air. She chats for a few seconds before the piece to set it up and chats a bit afterwards and that's it.

"She's finding more and more confidence in what's she's doing," says Pearl. "As far as her role in the studio goes I would hope that as time goes by we'll be able to use her more and more."

A couple of weeks ago Miss Kennedy got her first chance to update everyone on the scoreboard. It took her by surprise and she didn't do well.

"The first time I messed it up royally," she admits. But she came back the second time and did much better. "I don't get nervous on the show except when I'm doing something I'm not familiar with," she says. "But I'd like to be able to do everything on the show. I want to be ready for anything."

She has taken to carrying around an involved chart on all the NFL teams and is constantly updating it with personnel changes, injuries, etc. She takes her job very seriously and studies cassettes of the show, looking for ways to improve.

"I know I'm not going to be doing the show for the next 30 years," she says, "but right now I'm not thinking too much ahead. I'm just trying to do it right.

"I never really thought I'd be involved in sports but I like it so much that I want to be good at it."

Akers Claims Block 'Good One'

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas coach Fred Akers may figure the officials in Texas' 10-7 loss to Houston on Saturday owe him one — one penalty.

Akers told the Longhorn Club on Wednesday an official erred in calling a clipping penalty that might have cost Texas the Southwest Conference football championship.

The punt return on which the clip was called "was the kind of play that gets you in or keeps you out of the Cotton Bowl," Akers said.

Houston's victory Saturday enabled the sixth-ranked Cougars to remain undefeated in the Southwest Conference. It was No. 9 Texas' first loss after four SWC victories.

Houston will represent the conference in the Jan. 1 Cotton Bowl at Dallas if it wins one of its two remaining conference games.

The clipping call against defensive tackle Kenneth McCune erased a 54-yard return by Texas safety Johnnie Johnson to the Houston 21 in the second quarter of what was then a 0-0 game. It amounted to a 63-yard penalty, Akers said.

Asked if the coaches' film showed a clip, Akers said, "No, it does not." He said McCune's block "was a good block."

The film the club watched showed numerous other apparent officiating mistakes but there was not a clear view of McCune's block.

"It was just one of those things they missed," Akers said of the clipping call. "But you're going to miss a lot any game. . .Things in the game went unnoticed that we did wrong. . .Who's to say which play that is missed (by the officials) is a key one? They (officials) can't see everything. I've had it work both ways as a coach."

One club member, however, said he was concerned that "A&M people" officiate Texas games.

Former Texas A&M player Glenn Lippman was the line judge in the Houston game but another official called the clip.

Akers said there probably will be some changes in officiating lineups before the 1979 football season. "The preparations have been under way for some time," he said.

Akers said, "I'm very discouraged we did lose, but there were a lot of positive things toward team development. We attacked from the word go and did the best we could. There were two good teams out there — Houston had a fine team. . .Either team could have won."

"I hope," Akers said, "that we get it (the loss) out of our system. We have three games left."

Asked if he had talked to the squad about possibly going to a bowl, Akers said that he had and "they indicated a preference if we get an invitation." He did not say what bowl the team preferred.

Most bowl invitations are expected to go out Saturday.

Class B Teams Face Playoffs; Wilson Takes On Jayton In 3-B

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Amherst with the Johnson cousins plays Valley with Darrell Dowd and a stone wall defense while Jayton with the playoff experience and Robert Segura meets Wilson with Calvin Wilke and a defense that has allowed only 28 points this year.

With advance billings like that, you must know that it is playoff time in Class B.

And the first step is the district competition, pitting the winners of each of the two zones in each district.

Winning 2-B's southern sector was Amherst with a 5-0 conference record and a 9-1 mark overall. Winning the North was Valley, 5-0 and 8-0-1. .

In the other area Class B district, (3). Wilson, 5-0 and 9-1) will meet Jayton (5-0) 8-2).

So far this year, Wilson's Wilke has rushed for 1,104 yards and scored 70 points. That, combined with the stingiest defense in the area, has accounted for 284-28 scoring difference the Mustangs hold over their opponents.

Jayton has been to the quarterfinals of the Class B playoffs for the last three years. Last year they lost to Wheeler, the eventual state champ, by 28-20.

The 'Birds are led on the ground by Segura, a shifty tailback who has accounted for 1,200 yards this year, despite missing some playing time with injuries.

He is backed up by fullback Donnie Shipp, an 800-yard rusher.

That game will be played in Snyder Friday night at 8 p.m. Tonight in Plainview, Amherst and Valley will match up.

Do you wonder why? Tailback Darrell Dowd has rushed for over 1,100 yards despite missing two games; sophomore flanker James McNary is over 1,000 on the year and fullback Kenneth Helms is right around 700 yards.

That ain't bad.

Especially when you combine it with a defense that has allowed only 44 points. The only blemish on the Valley season was a 6-6 tie with Crosbyton, a very strong Class A team.

Kroc Wants Shakeup Of Baseball Leagues

SAN DIEGO (AP) — San Diego Padres owner Ray Kroc wants the National and American Leagues dissolved and major league baseball to go into an inter-league play format much like the National Football League.

"Why don't we do like the football teams do?" Kroc asked Wednesday. "It would be more sensible and economical and more practical."

What Kroc proposes is putting all the teams under the heading Major League Baseball, with the various teams then splitting into four geographic divisions — the West, Midwest, Mideast and East.

Instead of having separate National and American League presidents, Kroc prefers a central baseball commissioner's office, as with Pete Rozelle in the NFL, with all decisions emanating from there.

"That alone would save money, but the really big savings would be from the improved efficiency and economy in travel," says the 76-year-old Kroc, who used some of the proceeds from his McDonald's hamburger empire to buy the Padres in January 1974.

Kroc hasn't worked out all the details, but he envisions the West Coast Division as having San Diego, Los Angeles, the California Angels, San Francisco, Oakland and Seattle. The other divisions would contain similar geographic distribution.

Teams would play the bulk of their games with geographic rivals, but with enough contests outside the division to provide fans with a glimpse of special players and teams.

Kroc realizes that the letter he sent to his fellow big league owners outlining his realignment proposal is akin to heresy to old-line baseball traditionalists.

"It doesn't have a prayer," Kroc said with a smile. "It would take a unanimous vote, and some of the old stalwarts, the traditionalists, just can't accept change. The National League is especially conservative. At least the American League has come up with some progressive ideas (such as the designated hitter).

"People resist change," Kroc said, alluding to the Dodgers' Walter O'Malley as the No. 1 traditionalist. "I think change is extremely important when it's well thought out."

Kroc said he's received some letters back from league owners, most of which say something like "Your thoughts are very interesting. We'll think about it." Something like "Don't call us, we'll call you."

Kroc says he doesn't expect them to think about it very deeply.

Namath's Super Bowl Ring Still Missing

ENID, Okla. (AP) — Enid businessman Delbert Cearley had hoped to meet Joe Namath to return what Cearley believed was the ex-professional football star's stolen 1969 Super Bowl ring.

But Cearley's expectations plummeted Wednesday when he learned the ring may be a sample manufactured by a ring company which lost a bid on producing the Super Bowl jewelry.

The Enid sporting goods and pawnshop owner said he purchased the ring from a man who said he bought it from a coworker.

The ring carried the inscription: J. Namath, and Cearley was anxious to return it to Namath.

"I'm going to get $100 for it from Joe, just what I paid," Cearley said Tuesday.

He showed the ring to two former football players who took part in Super Bowls and now live in Enid — Jim Riley of the Miami Dolphins and Harry Jones of the Baltimore Colts.

Both agreed the gold ring was a Super Bowl ring and Cearley called the security office of the National Football League at their suggestion.

The pawnbroker said he was told a 1969 Super Bowl ring Namath had received while playing for the New York Jets had been stolen and never recovered.

But as he was informing "Broadway Joe's" New York attorneys about the find, Chris Butler, a reporter for the Enid Morning News, was tracking down the real origin of the ring.

Butler noted the ring also had the name John Roberts engraved inside the band and started making phone calls.

John Roberts turned out to be the name of a ring company in Austin that had made up a large sample order of rings for sales presentations during bidding on a Super Bowl contract.

A company spokesman said all of the rings carried the "J. Namath" inscription that had peaked Cearley's interest.

It's possible, the spokesman said, the ring was one of several stolen during a San Francisco meeting in 1977.

Cearley said his phone has been ringing off the hook since news of the ring got out.

"I'm just going to throw it in a safe-deposit box and leave town awhile," he said.

Schools Offer Sports Tickets

With hopes of increasing attendance and interest, the Lubbock Independent School District's Board of Trustees has approved the sale of student and adult activities cards for all athletic contests in Lubbock except Lowrey Field football games, playoff games and special, fund-raising programs.

The cost of the card wil be $10 for students and $15 for adults.

Student cards will be sold at each secondary school in Lubbock, while adults can purchase their cards at the Athletic Office, located at 1628 19th Street.

According to athletic director Pete Ragus, the holder of these cards will be entitled to attend primarily boys' and girls' basketball games, track meets and baseball games.

Nebraska Needs Goal Posts

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — The goalposts are back up for the Nebraska-Missouri game, but University of Nebraska officials are trying to retrieve at least part of the two standards torn down after the Oklahoma game last Saturday.

A University official said the telephone was ringing off the hook after an appeal went out Wednesday offering a $100 reward — no questions asked — for the return of an expensive part of the goal posts.

Jubilent Cornhusker fans made off with both goal posts following Nebraska's 17-14 win over Oklahoma last Saturday in Memorial Stadium.

The cross bar and the upright arms of the goal posts were probably broken into hundreds of pices and now adorn basement rec rooms all over town, a campus police spokesman said. That part of the post is easily available.

But the main standard — a big piece which curved forward from the ground and rose 10 feet in the air — is another problem. The curvatures cost about $1,500 each and will have to be replaced through a special order.

Campus police said an anonymous source offered $100 each for the return of the curved standard, although police said they've heard at least one of the expensive pieces has been cut up for souvenirs.

An athletic department official said the university's grounds maintenance department found two spare goalposts and have installed them for Saturday's final Big Eight game with the Tigers.

ISABEL NAVARRO

Navarro Makes Second Run At National Meet

For the second consecutive year, Texas Tech sophomore Isabel Navarro will represent the Raider's fem cross country team at the AIAW national championship.

But according to the former Brownfield High School competitor this time around should be a lot different than the last.

"It was scary last year," recalls Miss Navarro, who placed 51st out of 269 runners. "I was surprised I qualifie for Nationals. I was running okay in our area but I didn't think I was good enough to qualify.

"When I got there I thought there were so many fast girls competing that I'd be lucky if I finished in the top 100."

Miss Navarro garnered a spot in the National finals at Boulder, Colo. set for Saturday morning by placing fourth at the State championship. During the season she has run six 5,000-meter races place first once. third twince, fourth , fifth and seventh.

"Isabel is, stronger on the hills," explained MissxLit the Tech coach. "and she can maintain a faster pace longer this year. Her times are still improving every week, and they's quick better than last year."

Miss Little proved her point by pointing to the fact that Miss Navarro ran a 17:50 at the regional meet . As a freshman she posted a 19:20 on the same course.

Not only has Miss Navarro's steady improvement impressed the Tech coach, but her durability has also pleased the mentor.

"I never have to worry about working her too hard," explained Miss Little. "I'm afraid to push most girls in practice as hard as Isabel because it will hurt their performance in races, but not with her."

Miss Navarro admitted that qualifying for the nationals really came as no great shock.

"Coach Little told us that the requirements for qualifying would be harder," said Miss Navarro, " but I expected to make it again. I would have been disappointed with myself if I had not made it."

For the past two months, Miss Navarro has been working out twice a day in preparation for the season finale, kaa

Now she hopes all the hard work will pay off.

"I have set a goal of finishing with the first 25 runners," said Miss Navarro. "I don't know if I can, but I'm going to try."

To Players, 'Doctor' Answers To Coach

BROKEN ARROW, Okla. (AP) — You can still call him Dr. Kent Lashley, even though he gave up use of the title, and the status of head of a college graduate school, to become football coach at Broken Arrow High School.

And he isn't sorry.

Lashley was head of the graduate and undergraduate schools at Henderson State University in Arkansas when he decided to return to coaching.

Lashley, a Muskogee native, waas an all-stater in football and track in high school. He went to Oklahoma State University on a football scholarship and started at wide receiver and punter as a sophomore. But he wasn't happy.

"At that time they had a Bear Bryant type of coaching regime," he said. So he transferred to Northeastern State University at Tahlequah and during that time held the NAIA punting record.

He was drafted by the Kansas City Chiefs but he got hurt and after three operations he decided to return to school, taking a coaching fellowship at East Texas State University.

"My friends told me that if I wanted to get ahead at all in coaching, I should get another degree," he explains. Upon receiving his doctorate he took the job at Henderson State.

He enjoyed the work but in the back of his mind he kept thinking about coaching. When he started looking, he ran into trouble because he was over-qualified with his doctor's degree.

Finally he found a high school coaching job at Tahlequah where he led the team to three winning season and two state playoffs.

When the Broken Arrow coaching job came open last January he saw it as a challenge in a team that had not had a winning season in a decade.

Although he was offered an assistant's position with Oklahoma State he remained at Broken Arrow and led the team to a 5-5 record his first year. One of the losses was in double overtime to Jenks, another was in the last two minutes against Sapulpa and and the other in the last few seconds to Muskogee.

Besides coaching, Lashley teaches four psychology classes at the high school, speaks at numerous meetings and conventions and teaches a Sunday School class. Last summer at the school he led workshops on motivation and attitude for everyone from teachers to bus drivers to food service workers.

If you've got the time, we've got the beer.

Boise Coach Admits Illegal Scouting Trip

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Boise State University football coach Jim Criner said Wednesday night he had financed an illegal scouting attempt by a California teacher against Northern Arizona's football team.

Criner, after having denied for the last week any involvement in a scouting venture, said he paid for an attempt to scout NAU's football practice last Tuesday, before last Saturday's Big Sky Conference championship game. Criner paid the expenses of Bob Rodrigo, a physical education teacher at Cal State-Hayward, who went to Flagstaff, Ariz., attempting to scout the Lumberjacks.

Rodrigo told Northern Arizona coach Joe Salem he was a scout for the Pittsburgh Steelers. When NAU officials checked with the Steelers, they determined Rodrigo had never been employed by the team. Salem then accused Boise State of spying on NAU and filed a protest with conference officials.

"At my request, Rodrigo scouted, or at least was in the locker room and watched the films of Northern Arizona," Criner told a news conference. "I paid for the plane ticket with my own personal funds."

Rodrigo refused comment on Criner's statement saying all comment would have to come from Boise State officials. All last week, Criner steadfastly denied he had sent Rodrigo to Flagstaff.

At one point, the BSU coach said he regretted even knowing Rodrigo and called Salem an "egomaniac" for pressing the issue.

But, the coach said, after talking to Rodrigo and learning of difficulties he was experiencing because of the incident, he decided to come forth with the whole story.

"The reason I did it was because I wanted to win," Criner said. "As to why there's a different story now than there was last week, we were trying to win a football game last week and I had not been able to get the facts and find out about Bob's position."

Criner said he told BSU president John Keiser and athletic director Lyle Smith that he had made a mistake when he didn't tell them the truth.

"My decision last week to say what I did was in poor taste and I have never done anything like that previously," Criner said. "I was wrong, I knew what I said hurt Bob but I didn't want to hurt him or anyone else."

Criner said he is sure he will be penalized by the university and assumed the football program at Boise State would be punished by the conference.

"I illegally scouted someone," Criner said. "I'll receive a penalty from BSU, there's no question about it. And we'll probably also get one from the conference that will affect us as a football staff."

Criner said he wasn't worried about his future at Boise State and said he hadn't discussed his job with Keiser or Smith. Keiser refused to comment on the coach's future.

"I think that's something I will have to consider very carefully with Lyle Smith," Keiser said. "We'll do the thing that's best for the university."

Erving Regrets Loss Of ABA Nets' Team

PISCATAWAY, N.J. (AP) — It still hurts Julius Erving that the old American Basketball Association New York Nets never were given a chance to strut their stuff in the NBA.

The financial problems of former owner Roy Boe forced him to disband the nucleus of the team that won two ABA championships in the league's last three years.

Erving was sold to the Philadelphia 76ers for $3 million on the eve of the 1976-77 season after he reached an impasse in contract negotiations. People like Larry Kenon, Billy Paultz, Mike Gale and Brian Taylor were traded or sold for the same reason.

Erving, who scored 25 points Tuesday night as the Nets scored a 124-108 victory over the 76ers, feels if the Nets had remained intact, they would have been an NBA power.

"They would have been great, but the circumstances surrounding the situation took its toll. It's all part of history," he said.

Dr. J admits he still keeps a close watch on his former team.

"I'm still friendly with a lot of the guys," Erving said "I'm happy that they are doing well and I'm happy for Kevin (Coach Loughery). We had a pretty good relationship."

The Doctor said, however, the Nets are just another team once he steps on the court.

"I'm beyond the point of thinking about it now, it's my third year away," Erving said. "I don't get any higher or lower than playing against another team. I try to do the same thing every night, which is hard to beat."

After Tuesday night's victory, the Nets improved their record to 11-6 and moved to within 1½ games of the 76ers in the Atlantic Division. Erving said it could be the team's most important night in the NBA.

"But it's up to them to decide how big they want to make it," Erving said. "I think they play very much under control. The control factor is the biggest thing, they are putting more of a premium on the ball. They have some guys who can really do it and they rally around them."

Erving feels the Nets, with wealthy new owners and a replenished supply of talent, have turned the corner in the NBA.

Rockies Dislike Pattern Of Hockey Scheduling

By The Associated Press

The National Hockey League schedule maker and the Colorado Rockies will never be the best of friends.

Wednesday night, for example, the Rockies had to face the Montreal Canadiens in Denver just 20 hours after the Rockies had played the Islanders at Uniondale, N.Y.

Another time, they hosted Toronto on a Saturday and played in Philadelphia the next night. Once they played at Detroit on Wednesday, hosted Detroit on Friday and played in Minnesota Saturday.

You get the idea.

While the Rockies were in Uniondale Tuesday night, the Canadiens relaxed in Colorado Springs, where they had been since Sunday.

"They were more used to the altitude than we are," said Rockies left wing Andy Spruce after Montreal's 6-1 triumph Wednesday night.

"What does the league expect?" asked Spruce. "They (the Canadiens) have been here since Sunday and we had to play in the East last night. We ran out of gas in the third period."

That's when the Canadiens blew it open, getting four goals in less than 10 minutes to put the game away.

In other games, the New York Rangers routed the Chicago Black Hawks 8-1, the Atlanta Flames trimmed the Detroit Red Wings 5-3, the Toronto Maple Leafs and Buffalo Sabres tied 2-2 and the Washington Capitals trimmed the Minnesota North Stars 3-2.

Third-period goals by Pierre Mondou, Pat Hughes, Yvon Lambert and Mark Napier helped Montreal extend its unbeaten streak to eight games. Their slump of four losses in six games is all but forgotten.

"We've been playing well," said Canadiens Coach Scotty Bowman. "I was glad to see Hughes get his first goal. He and Napier haven't played a lot, but they played well tonight."

The Rockies, outshot 43-21, might refer all inquiries on the outcome to NHL headquarters.

Rangers 8, Black Hawks 1

New York's big line of Pat Hickey, Anders Hedberg and Ulf Nilsson exploded for a total of five goals and eight assists as the Rangers won for the ninth time in their last 11 games. Hickey led the charge with three goals, two assists and six shots on goal, while Nilsson had a goal and set up four others.

Hedberg had a goal and two assists and defenseman Carol Vadnais added a shorthanded tally for New York, which has lost just one of its last 11 games against the Black Hawks.

Flames 5, Red Wings 3

It didn't do much to salve the hurt of last year's playoff elimination by the Red Wings, but Atlanta got third-period goals 46 seconds apart from Jean Pronovost and Willi Plett to beat Detroit.

The triumph extended the Flames' home winning streak to nine games and their home unbeaten string to 18. Both are club records.

Atlanta fell behind 3-1, but goals by Guy Chouinard and Pat Ribble — the latter with eight seconds remaining in the second period — brought the Flames even.

Maple Leafs 2, Sabres 2

Capitals 3, North Stars 2

Lakers Pick Up 11th Straight NBA Victory

By The Associated Press

It isn't the kind of talent you have, says Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, it's the way you use it.

And the Los Angeles Lakers are in the enviable position of having both the talent and the ability to use it wisely. That was evident Wednesday night after the Lakers posted their 11th straight National Basketball Association victory with a 133-126 triumph over the Detroit Pistons.

"Frequently teams have great talent," said Jabbar, "but it's the style of the players and their individual play that keep them from winning. We seem to have overcome those problems this year."

Coach Jerry West has certainly seen the dramatic difference from last season, when the Lakers finished fourth in the Pacific Division. Currently, they're just a half-game off Seattle's division-leading pace with a solid 12-4 record.

"The Lakers are a super-talented team," he said. "They just beat us with talent."

Elsewhere in the NBA, the Philadelphia 76ers defeated the Denver Nuggets 109-103 in overtime; the Seattle SuperSonics routed the New Orleans Jazz 135-118; the Washington Bullets hammered the Milwaukee Bucks 138-111; the Chicago Bulls turned back the Houston Rockets 117-103; the Phoenix Suns stopped the San Antonio Spurs 125-119 and the Kansas City Kings turned back the Atlanta Hawks 109-100.

Adrian Dantley's early scoring and Abdul-Jabbar's late flurry provided the Lakers with their victory. Dantley, who finished with 33 points, had 17 in the second period when the Lakers outscored Detroit 43-20 and added eight more early in the third to help Los Angeles roar in front 86-71.

At that point, Abdul-Jabbar was sidelined with his fifth personal foul and Detroit countered with a 25-10 uprising of its own, led by rookie John Long's five baskets to even the score at 96. But Abdul-Jabbar returned and hit four straight baskets to put the Lakers in front to stay.

The 76ers scored their 10th victory in the last 11 games despite a 29-point performance by Denver's George McGinnis, who returned to Philadelphia for the first time since being traded to the Nuggets last summer for Bobby Jones. McGinnis fouled out with 4:17 remaining in the overtime period.

Sonics 135, Jazz 118

Fred Brown led seven Seattle scorers in double figures with 20 points as the SuperSonics defeated New Orleans.

Seattle trailed 26-22 with 2:39 left in the first period, but took control with a 16-5 spurt that carried into the second period. Wally Walker, who scored 14 points, capped the rally with a basket that gave Seattle a 38-31 lead with 9:36 left in the half.

The Sonics outscored the Jazz 12-5 at the end of the half to take a 68-54 lead and later built their lead to as much as 23 points.

Bullets 138, Bucks 111

Kevin Grevey's 24 points led Washington over listless Milwaukee. The Bullets jumped to a 31-14 lead midway through the first quarter and never were threatened while coasting past the slumping Bucks, who now have lost nine straight road games.

Bulls 117, Rockets 103

Reggie Theus scored a career-high 27 points and Mickey Johnson added 25 more as Chicago raced past Houston. Artis Gilmore added 20 points and pulled down 11 rebounds as the Bulls spurted to a 12-point halftime lead and never were headed.

"It's an important win for us, but it's only the beginning of what we have to accomplish," said Theus, whose team is off to a woeful 3-13 start. "We have a long way to go. It was really a big win for us because it was our first game on a six-game road trip.

Suns 125, Spurs 119

Paul Westphal hit six key points in the final 46 seconds and finished with 39 to propel Phoenix past San Antonio.

San Antonio's Larry Kenon had tied the game at 117 with a pair of free throws with less than a minute remaining. But then Westphal tossed in two free throws with 46 seconds remaining to put the Suns ahead by two points and added two consecutive baskets in the next 29 seconds to ice the game.

Kings 109, Hawks 100

Otis Birdsong scored 26 points and Sam Lacey added 22 to lead Kansas City over Atlanta and move the Kings into a first-place tie with Denver in the Midwest Division.

Kansas City, which had not been in first since early in the 1974-75 season, took the lead early in the first quarter and held it the rest of the way.

"It was quite obvious Kansas City wanted this more than we did, from the physical effort they put into it," said Atlanta Coach Hubie Brown.

Auburn, UCLA Picked For Major Upsets

By WILL GRIMSLEY
Associated Press Special Correspondent

It's showdown in show town when Southern Cal and UCLA renew their backyard feud in Los Angeles, while an extra helping of grits is the order in the Deep South where unpredictable, unimpressive Auburn challenges the title aspirations of eighth-ranked Georgia.

These are the sources of this week's upset specials in college football. The Trojans and Bulldogs have the edge in talent and statistics, but, as the commercial says, it's not the dog in the fight that counts — it's the fight in the dog.

Last week: 38-15, .715 (Nebraska over Oklahoma). Season: 348-124, .737.

UCLA 25, Southern Cal 22: Rick Bashore picks up more yardage with his arm for UCLA than Charles White gets for USC with his legs.

Nebraska 38, Missouri 13: Hipp, Berns Co. still on the wave of euphoria but should beware of a letdown.

Oklahoma 21, Oklahoma State 13: Normally the difference would be greater but this isn't a normal week for the downcast Sooners.

Michigan 34, Purdue 20: Rick Leach gets a chance to build on his Heisman Trophy credentials.

Auburn 18, Georgia 15: The Plainsmen have looked alternately good and miserable — should be ready for a high.

Texas 30, Texas Christian 7: Rarely do the Longhorns come so far with so little to play for.

Notre Dame 20, Georgia Tech 7: Our Dixie spies say Tech will pull an upset. The Irish are too deep in talent.

Clemson 22, Maryland 17: The Terps are slightly favored among the odds-makers. Clemson has Steve Fuller and a good defense.

Arkansas 26, Texas AM 20: The Razorbacks' Ron Calgagni has a 61 percent completion average, which should suffice.

Mississippi State 24, Louisiana State 20: Both come off losses but Charley McClendon's boys at LSU took the worst beating.

Ohio State 38, Indiana 14 Woody Hayes, with a 6-2-1 mark, is just playing out the string.

Yale 15, Harvard 7: The Blue and the Crimson — there was a day the whole nation would be watching and listening.

Florida State 22, Navy 14: A fine year for the Midshipmen, who can turn attention to the Army game.

Stanford 25, California 14: They call it simply "The Game" in Northern California. Stanford is the best 6-4 team extant.

Mentioned Briefly

BASEBALL

NEW YORK — Dave Parker of the Pittsburgh Pirates, the National League batting champion the last two seasons, was named winner of the NL's Most Valuable Player award for 1978 by a landslide vote. Parker batted .338 in 1977 and .334 this year.

TENNIS

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. — Top-seeded Chris Evert downed Virginia Ruzici of Romania 6-1, 6-3 and Martina Navratilova beat second-seeded Virginia Wade of England 6-2, 6-1 to advance to the semifinals of the $250,000 Series Championships tennis tournament. Ruzici meets Betty Stove of Holland and Wade takes on Kerry Reid of Australia tonight to determine the other two semifinalists. Stove and Reid upped their records to 1-1 in the modified round-robin tournament by defeating Wendy Turnbull 2-6, 7-5, 7-5 and Regina Marsikova of Czechoslovakia 7-6, 6-0, respectively.

WEMBLEY, England — Adriano Panatta of Italy upset second-seeded Eddie Dibbs 6-1, 6-3 and Dick Stockton downed eighth-seeded Roscoe Tanner 6-3, 6-4 in the second round of a $175,000 Grand Prix tournament.

TAIPEI, Taiwan — Butch Walts eliminated seventh-seeded Terry Moor 6-3, 7-6 in the quarter-finals of the $50,000 Taipei Open tennis tournament.

BOGOTA, Colombia — Jose-Luis Clerc of Argentina defeated Patrice Dominguez of France 6-3, 6-1 in the second day of action in the Bogota International tennis tournament.

GENERAL

NEWARK, N.J. — William "Willie" L. Gilzenberg, a boxing and wrestling promoter who had a hand in developing fighters such as Vince Dundee and "Two Ton" Tony Galento, died of cancer. He was 77.

NEW YORK — Veterinarian Mark Gerard was granted a postponement of a one-year sentence term he received for a conviction in a horse ringer scandle. Dr. Gerard was convicted of two misdemeanor charges in September forinvolvement in the Lebon-Cinzano ringer case at Belmont Park and was sentenced to one year in jail and a fine of $1,000. Gerard was due to surrender to begin his prison term Wednesday, but Justice Irwin Shapiro of the Appellate Division of the State Supreme Court issued a ruling granting Gerard a stay of the sentence until the division's next term begins Feb. 20.

EQUESTRIAN

TORONTO — Dennis Murphy of the United States picked up his second consecutive victory at the Royal Horse Show, Riding Tuscaloosa in the jumpoff of the International Doubles and Trebles. Murphy covered the course in 24.1 seconds, easily beating Ian Millar of Canada aboard Gandit. Terry Lolliot of Canada, on Merchant of Venice, was third. Canada remained on top in the team standings with 89 points to 84 for the United States. Ireland had 34 and Belgium 19.

HORSE RACING

NEW YORK — Sonsam, a sensational pacer, has been syndicated for $3 million, a world record for a 2-year-old racehorse. It was announced by Morton Finder, president of Pine Hollow Standerdbred Sales and Management. The syndication was broken in 40 shares of 75,000, with owners Barry and Cynthia Epstein of Los Angeles retaining 20 shares. Pine Hollow buying 10 and Louis Guida, a standerdbred breeder from Trenton, N.J., buying 10 shares.

Ceasefire Allows Beirut To Return To Normal

By BJORN EDLUND

BEIRUT, Lebanonn (UPI) — In the wake of the worst fighting in more than 3½ years, the people of Beirut are using a bullet-riddled ceasefire to pick up the pieces of their life in this shattered city.

The tenuous calm that followed on the heels of the Syrian-Christian ceasefire last month has allowed some Lebanese to return to a more "normal" life.

In a city cut in two with snipers firing across the dividing line, in a country with 30,000 foreign troops in the Syrian-dominated Arab deterrent force, plus an estimated 10,000 Palestinian guerrillas and some 20,000 Christian militiamen — "normal" means only a cherished pause in open hostilities.

Authorities called on industrialists to reopen factories in the eastern suburbs of Beirut — the security situation is under control, they said.

Mitri Nammar, governor of Beirut, toured the Christian east, which was heavily damaged by artillery fire, and told people to clear the streets of rubble.

Nammar said the garbage collectors last week picked up loads for the first time since the outbreak of Christian-Syrian fighting more than a month ago.

The prestigious Au Vieux Quartier restaurant, situated across the road from a Christian Phalangist stronghold in east Beirut, advertised its reopening.

"This is the barometer of the situation," a Beirut student said. "When things are bad, Hamra clears at dusk."

But not everybody agreed that life was going to return to normal.

Deputy Fuad Lahoud said life in Lebanon has become "hell".

"I passed by the British, American, French and West German embassies and found long lines of Lebanese waiting in front of every one of them, requesting visas so that they can leave this country, which has become hell after having once been a heaven," Lahoud said.

"I wish that those responsible for making Lebanon into a hell could see that sight," he said.

With electricity erratic, at best, and telephones also working only occasionally — and never when it rains — life is still difficult.

"Give us three years of peace, real peace, and Lebanon will again be the 'pearl of the Middle East,' as it was before," a businessman said.

Asked whether he believed in the current plans for reinforced security — including the dissolution of all armed groups —he said:

"No, the sad thing is that we cannot hope for three years of peace, not in a long time."

ID PROPOSAL ENDS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government Tuesday dropped a year-old proposal that would have ended the practice of permitting pilots to request special identification numbers for their private aircraft.

Big Four Automobile Sales Continue See-Saw Pattern

By DONALD WOUTAT

DETROIT (AP) — Where auto sales are concerned, it seems what goes up must come down eventually.

Sales continued their see-saw pattern in early November, dipping 5.5 percent, the domestic car companies reported Tuesday. Low stocks of some 1979 models contributed to the drop.

No. 1 General Motors Corp. finally cooled off a bit after its record-setting October as Americans bought 238,373 new domestic cars in the Nov. 1-10 period. All four U.S. automakers fell below a moderately strong year-ago tally of 252,148 cars.

GM had single-handedly put the industry's October sales narrowly ahead of the previous October while the other automakers struggled with uneven sales and inventories of 1979 models. Sales were up, down and up during the month's three reporting periods.

One auto executive described the figures reported Tuesday as "reasonable," and GM said its letdown was inevitable after October. GM's competitors edged a bit closer to their 1977 levels, while still having nagging sales problems with certain cars.

Early November pushed the domestic industry over the eight-million mark in car sales since Jan. 1. The 8,121,198 new-car deliveries are 1.9 percent ahead of the 1977 pace.

GM was off 2.8 percent to 139,934 cars, No. 2 Ford Motor Co. dropped 7.5 percent to 67,451 cars, Chrysler Corp. fell 12.5 percent to 28,178 cars and American Motors Corp. sold 4,810 cars, a 10.4-percent slip.

Volkswagen of America said it sold 1,399 U.S.-built Rabbits, bringing the number of domestically-built cars sold in early November to 239,772 — off 4.9 percent from a year ago when all Rabbits were imported.

Ford and Chrysler continued to suffer from low stocks of their new full-sized cars, but both said they were gradually "filling the pipeline."

The down-sized Ford LTD was ahead of year-ago sales for the first time, by 5 percent, while inventories of the car were 6 percent smaller than at this time last year.

Chrysler had early production problems with its down-sized big cars, while high inventories of poor-selling compacts and mid-sized cars will force a week-long shutdown of two Chrysler assembly plants the week after Thanksgiving.
