Pistol Held To His Head. . .

Commandos Free Dozier

PADUA, Italy (AP) — Police commandos burst into an apartment in this northern Italian city today and freed U.S. Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier as terrorists from the Red Brigades held a pistol to his head, Italian and U.S. officials said.

The rescue ended his 42-day ordeal in a "people's prison."

"At the time they arrived, a pistol was being held to the general's head," National Security Adviser William Clark told ABC in Washington. He said one shot was fired.

"He's a bit tired and a bit shaken by events, but in good health," said a U.S. Embassy official in Rome.

A special commando unit of the Italian security police had located the apartment Wednesday night but held off the raid until daytime for fear a night attack might endanger the 50-year-old general's life.

Five terrorists holding Dozier gave up without resistance, police said. All were Italians.

One of the police who raided the apartment told the Italian news agency ANSA "we found Dozier barefoot but in good condition."

According to U.S. officials, Italian police in recent days cracked the Red Brigades terrorist "column" which operated in the area of Verona, where Dozier was kidnapped Dec. 17.

"It was a textbook operation. They cracked the column, the people talked and they followed up every single lead. They did it right and it worked," said a U.S. official, who asked not to be identified.

Shortly after being taken to police headquarters, Dozier telephoned his wife, Judith, who left their apartment in Verona and went to West Germany about 10 days ago, U.S. officials said.

The terrorists, several of whom were dressed as plumbers when they kidnapped the NATO general, transported Dozier 40 miles east, in the direction to Venice, to this city.

The White House said President Reagan was awakened at 6:50 a.m. EST, by William Clark, director of the National Security Council and the president's national security adviser.

"A lot of prayers have been answered. It's difficult to express gratitude to all those who assisted in his release," deputy press secretary Peter Roussel quoted Reagan as saying.

Dozier's sister, Joan Townsend, of Alvin, Texas, told a Houston radio station that she had clung to the hope he would be rescued. "We got used to the hopes. I did have a sense of calm all along that this would turn out positive," said Mrs. Townsend.

ANSA said word of Dozier's release was relayed to the head of Rome police by the prefect of Verona, the local representative of the national government, who has directed the probe of Dozier's abduction.

Interior Minister Virgilio Rognoni immediately informed President Sandro Pertini, Premier Giovanni Spadolini and U.S. Ambassador Maxwell Rabb.

74 Hostages On Board. . .

Leftist Guerrillas Hold Crippled Colombian Jet

CALI, Colombia (AP) — Leftist guerrillas were reported holding 74 hostages on a crippled Colombian airliner at the Cali airport today, threatening to blow up the Boeing 727 and all aboard if they were not given another plane.

Shots or explosions reportedly were heard aboard the jetliner Wednesday night when it hit an army jeep that blocked the runway as the plane attempted to take off from Cali. But it was not known if there were any injuries in the collision or in the reported "detonations" aboard the aircraft.

The collision appeared to damage the plane's landing gear and part of the fuselage, but the hijackers would not let mechanics inspect it.

A control tower official said the guerrillas were demanding another plane to take them and some of the hostages to an unspecified destination. They also demanded that the mayor and the Roman Catholic bishop of Cali be brought to the airport to negotiate with them.

The official said one of the guerrillas told the control tower: "Don't delay the matter too long. This is a warning."

Seven guerrillas seized control of the Aerotal jet with 121 other people reported aboard shortly after it took off from Bogota Wednesday afternoon on a domestic flight to Pereira, in west-central Colombia. They returned briefly to Bogota, then forced the pilot to fly to Cali, 275 miles southwest of Bogota.

The hijackers reported by the plane's radio that they were members of M-19, the nation's most active guerrilla group, and claimed they were armed with automatic weapons, fragmentation grenades and explosives.

A communique signed by M-19 indicated that the hijacking was an attempt to force the government to grant it amnesty and let the organization's leader, Jaime Bateman, run for the presidency in the May 30 election.

Valve Aggravated Problem

ONTARIO, N.Y. (AP) — The accident at the R.E. Ginna nuclear plant was aggravated when a valve opened to release pressure during the emergency couldn't be closed, allowing water in the reactor to boil and create a steam bubble, officials say.

Richard Sullivan, a spokesman for Rochester Gas & Electric, said today the boiling was stopped before the nuclear fuel in the reactor core was exposed.

A health physicist, a quality-control officer and a maintenance man donned protective clothing and respirators and took a look inside the reactor containment building Wednesday, officials said at a news conference. They gave a detailed account of the accident that led to a leak of radioactive steam into the atmosphere. The first post-accident inspection took place after employees had pumped 1,690 gallons of radioactive water into an auxiliary tank, officials said.

Indictments Sought

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Thirty undocumented aliens still "don't know what is happening" to them as federal authorities seek indictments against homeowners and businessmen who allegedly paid $1,500 to $2,000 apiece to buy them as slaves, an interpreter says.

The aliens, some visibly frightened and weeping, were shuffled from floor to floor of a federal courthouse for three hours Wednesday as officials decided which judge was going to designate them material witnesses in a grand jury investigation.

Late in the day, a clerk said their appearance was postponed until today before U.S. Magistrate James Penne.

500 Die In Floods

TINGO MARIA, Peru (AP) — The first rescue team to reach a remote valley flooded by a jungle river in Central Peru said today that at least 500 people drowned or disappeared.

"Many people died or were swept away when they were sleeping," said Capt. Luis Ramos Tejada, who led 25 civil guards to the disaster zone Saturday morning, only six hours after the Chontayacu River carried an avalanche of mud, rocks and trees down the valley.

Democrats Say. . .

Redistricting Squabble May Threaten Primaries

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Democrats say the redistricting squabble that threatens the May primaries is the Republicans' fault. Republicans blame the Democrats.

Each party says it is watching out for the interests of black and Mexican-American voters. Each claims the other is using minorities for their own political benefits.

It's a political year in Texas, and redistricting brings out political potshots from both camps.

On Tuesday the U.S. Justice Department — a Republican-controlled agency — said Texas' plans for redistricting of the Legislature improperly diluted minority voting strength.

The plans rejected by the federal officials had been approved by the all-Democratic Legislative Redistricting Board.

Gov. Bill Clements, a Republican, agreed with the Justice Department and told Texas Attorney General Mark White to ask a three-judge federal panel in Dallas to draw the lines. That panel is considering a lawsuit filed by Republicans against House and Senate plans.

White, a Democrat seeking his party's nomination to challenge Clements, said Wednesday he would do the opposite of what Clements' asked. White said his department would ask the judges to OK the maps rejected by the Justice Department.

White said he also would ask for a meeting with U.S. Attorney General William French Smith to discuss the case. White said minority legislators and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby would accompany him to see Smith.

Monday is the filing deadline for legislative races. White says court approval of the previously rejected districts would allow the May primaries to go on as scheduled. Clements said a court version of the plans would mean postponing the filing deadline, but no delay in the primaries.

Democratic leaders on Wednesday, during a rapid succession of news conferences, said they would fight Clements' idea.

"In (Clements') letter he has urged me to surrender to an obvious political decision by the current Republican administration in Washington," said White. "If the governor and his secretary of state want to surrender, that's their privilege. But I do not intend to do so."

The Justice Department ruling, he said, was a "a new low in partisan politics."

Texas Democratic Party Chairman Bob Slagle said the decision was a "blantantly political act."

Foundation Ballots Due Tomorrow

Tomorrow is the last day for members of the Scurry County Industrial Foundation to get their ballots in for the organization's election.

The foundation members are in the process of electing four members to the board of directors, and ballots were mailed out to the members last week. Ballots should be returned to the chamber of commerce office, and the results of the election will be announced at the foundation's annual membership meeting set for 4 p. m. Monday in the chamber conference room.

Each member is allowed one vote for each dollar invested in the foundation.

Candidates for the four positions on the board are Don Adams, Bill Dryden, Joe V. Fowler, Joe Jackson, C. A. McCown, Marlin Terrell, Ed Thrift and Don West.

Ask Us

Q.—Can the Boys' Club of America, the nursing homes, grocery stores, Country Club, VFW or American Legion ever play bingo if bingo isn't legalized?

A.—Not legally, that is if they charge a fee for playing. Anyone can play bingo so long as it is for fun, but if a fee is charged, it is gambling according to law. The type that grocery stores operate in their promotional events is not covered because no fee is charged to "play."

The SDN Column

The Super Bowl football game and the State of the Union Message of the president have two things in common. They keep millions of people beside their televisions and radios, and afterwards there are plenty of people in front of the cameras and microphones to tell us what we saw and heard.

There were new faces in the spotlight for both of these events this time, and, relatively speaking, the president's speech probably was better than the football game.

Compared to other State of the Union talks of recent vintage, we found Tuesday night's version more interesting if for no other reason than it proposed something new.

We also noted one glaring omission. Whether by design or oversight, not one word was mentioned about agriculture.

But perhaps this is just as well from the standpoint of the farmers and ranchers. There was plenty more said, and by the time the president finished, the analysts and critics had enough to talk about without showing their ignorance about food and fiber. The blockbuster, of course, was the president's proposal to shift social programs from Washington to the states. This put him in the corner for state's rights, something Texans have argued for since the Tidelands battle of the 50s. But you could tell by the reaction that some states may not necessarily want more rights if it means that they might have to raise more dollars on their own. Even Gov. Bill Clements of Texas expressed skepticism. If you take the figures mentioned at face value, the proposal would give the states full jurisdiction over programs now costing the federal government $47 billion and tax assistance via excise levies and windfall profits taxes totalling $28 billion.

You could tell quickly that officials of the states were wondering where the other $19 billion would come from. The idea, of course, is to give the states a chance to whittle the burden. It would be up to each state to decide whether these programs would continue at current levels within its boundaries. That leads to speculation on some interesting possibilities. Suppose some states that have gone for social programs even heavier than Uncle Sam decide to continue on the current basis, but others, such as Texas, decide to hold the line, or even retrench. The professional welfare hunters could be expected to find their way to the greenest pastures, leaving others with fewer deadbeats.

It might not have been in their best interest politically for lawmakers called upon for comments to mention this possibilty. But some back east did. We didn't watch a lot of the follow-up comment. We started out to listen, but when Ted Kennedy came on, we got sleepy.

We always find it interesting to hear politicians complain that something is politically motivated, and this always occurs following a State of the Union speech. In fact, we marvel at the incongruity of people everywhere who claim that they are loyal to the type of government established by this nation's founders, but they abhor politics. You can't have the government molded by Jefferson, et al, without politics.

He has been active in veterans organizations, including the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the American Legion, also served as a captian and commander of the Texas State Guard.

Progress In Talks Seen

JERUSALEM (AP) — Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir said Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. made "real progress" in talks with Israeli officials on Palestinian autonomy, but Haig was less optimistic as he flew to Cairo today to meet with Egyptian officials.

"We made progress in clarifying some of the issues and developing possibilities for solutions for some. There remain very important differences in a number of other areas," Haig said at an airport news conference.

He said his 23-hour visit to Jerusalem "made it more clear ... that the topics associated with autonomy are extremely complex and difficult."

Neither Haig nor Shamir would specify what "progress" had been made toward breaking the deadlock in the U.S.-sponsored Egyptian-Israeli autonomy talks.

Oil And Gas...

Employees Culprits In Thefts

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas independent oil and gas operators say often their own employees are the culprits in thefts totaling $100 million a year in crude oil and equipment.

"Dopers" seeking money to feed drug habits also are among the thieves that "will take anything left above ground in isolated" fields, says Tom Haywood of the North Texas Oil and Gas Association.

Haywood on Wednesday attributed part of the theft problem to industry growth that is so rapid employers do not have time to screen prospective employees.

Some employees are "in collusion," Haywood said, while others "turn their back at the right time, presumably for a price."

He and other independents told a news conference they would hire armed guards and special prosecutors to stop oil field losses that cost them $40 million last year, with losses by major companies accounting for at least another $60 million.

Spokesmen for more than 10,000 independents also said they would try to develop group theft insurance to protect operators they described as "risk-takers" that have "no way of covering their losses."

They announced the formation of Petroleum Industry Security Council, Inc., a statewide, nonprofit organization, to direct the anti-theft effort.

Haywood said the council was considering hiring special rangers who could carry weapons, similar to agents employed by railroads and cattle raisers.

President L. Frank Pitts of the Texas Independent Producers & Royalty Owners Association and Gene Wright, chairman of TIPRO's task force on theft, pledged a "vigorous special prosecution program" to secure theft indictments and convictions.

Wright stressed that the security council would act in support of — not in place of — law enforcement agencies.

Among the council's first efforts will be a state hotline to receive tips on thefts — with rewards for tips leading to convictions, training seminars to reduce "in-house theft" and a standard marking system for oil field equipment.

The statewide program is an outgrowth of a hotline set up last August in Wichita Falls. Haywood said in six months tips from the hotline led to the recovery of $200,000 in oil field equipment. Also, he said, one person received a 10-year prison sentence for theft, eight people are under indictment and five parolees have had their paroles revoked for theft.

Involved in the organization of the security council are TIPRO, North Texas Oil and Gas, Permian Basin Petroleum Association, Panhandle Producers and Royalty Owners Association, West Central Texas Oil and Gas Association, Texas Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association and the Association of Oilwell Serving Contractors.

"The more (thieves) we put behind bars," said Pitts, the more money will be saved for independents "to use for drilling for oil and gas."

Haywood said, however, despite huge industry losses, it is not a tax problem because stolen oil is usually transferred to tanks on other leases and those operators pay the state and federal tax.

Vietnamese Happy To Be American Policeman

WAILUKU, Hawaii (AP) — There's a new officer on the Maui police force who could surprise some people as he drives by in his patrol car.

He just might burst out laughing, because he's glad to be a cop, he's glad to be in America and he's glad to be free.

Had it not been for a tough family decision made six years ago many thousands of miles away, Hai McKinney most likely would be a soldier in the Vietnamese army today.

At the age of 16 in 1975, sey lived in Saigon with his family — his father, a martial-arts instructor; his mother; four sisters and five brothers.

"The communists were very close then. We knew that if I stayed I would have to go into the communist army," said McKinney, now 22 and a recent graduate of the Maui County Police Department recruit class.

"It was a very hard decision. We cried a lot, but my father decided that I should go to America and have a chance to live my life like a free human being," said McKinney.

And, to America he came, a frightened youth in the waves of refugees fleeing the communist takeover. He spent time in refugee camps in Guam and California.

He wrote to the VietnameseIndochina Refugee Office in Honolulu, seeking sponsorship and was invited by the organization's chairman, Dr. Wayne McKinny, to stay with the pediatrician and his family in Hawaii.

After a year living with the family, the McKinnys invited Hai to be adopted, and he changed his name to theirs, although he uses a slightly different spelling.

Although he spoke Vietnamese, French, and Cantonese, he spoke no English and had to struggle to finish high school. After high school, there was no doubt in McKinney's mind of what he wanted to do.

"Even when I was a little boy, I always dreamed about going to America and going through the police academy to get my degree and become a policeman in America, but not in Vietnam," he said.

at wits end

A group of us were sitting around the other night talking about will power when Phyllis said, "You have to admit it takes more will power to quit smoking than anything you can think of."

A voice shouted, "No! No! You've got incentive going for you. Dieting has to be the most demanding sacrifice a person will ever have to make. After all," said Ellen, "you're surrounded by food all the time that follows you around and begs, 'Eat me! Eat me!'"

Just then Marilyn interrupted by saying, "Wait a minute. You all don't know what you're talking about. You want to talk will power? Stop drinking. Now that takes real hardcore, gut-defying tenacity."

I let them ramble on for awhile before I reminded them that there was one thing that took more will power than not smoking, drinking and eating all rolled into one...letting your hair grow long.

They all sat there for a full five minutes in silence, no one saying a word, each one recalling the agonizing journey down the yellow brick road to long hair.

"How may times have I tried?" said Phyllis softly. "Five hundred? A thousand? Five thousand times? Then my bangs grow into the twilight zone where they won't go back and they won't go sideways. They just keep growing over your eyes."

"And what about that awful stage where the sides of your hair reach Neanderthal length," said Marilyn, "and stop? I was going for Grace Kelly once where you pulled your hair back from your face and secured it in a bun and during the entire year the sides of my hair never grew past my earlobe."

"I can't stand having hair grow until it reaches your coat collar," said Ellen. "It's like being followed by a whisk broom. It won't go in your collar and it won't go out."

"I was a woman obsessed," I said. "Once when I had let my hair grow for six weeks, a hairdresser wanted to 'even it up.' They tell me I pinned him against the wall with the scissors over his throat and threatened to make a topiary tree out of his mustache if he touched my hair. Believe me, Jaclyn Smith and Brooke Shields deserve everything they get. Let's hear it for fat hair."

Phyllis grabbed for a cigarette.

Ellen went for the chip dip.

Marilyn drank to it.

I ran my fingers through my hair and nothing moved.

Hidden Price Tag Is Sought Out

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nancy Reagan's high-fashion, cost-free official wardrobe may have a price tag after all — if the Internal Revenue Service decides the gifts amounted to income for the first family.

Several tax lawyers say that under existing legal precedent, the thousands of dollars worth of apparel might be considered part of the Reagan's income because it was donated by designers who stood to gain publicity by having Mrs. Reagan wear it.

If that determination were made, the Reagans would be liable for taxes on the value of the clothing, the lawyers said.

White House officials refused to discuss the issue Wednesday and one tax expert said he seriously doubted the Reagans would be forced to pay the taxes if the case ever went to a jury.

Earlier this month, Sheila Tate, the first lady's press secretary, said Mrs. Reagan had accepted evening gowns, designer dresses and sport clothes as "loans" from leading designers. While refusing to estimate the value of the free clothing, Mrs. Tate said much of it eventually would be donated to museums.

But tax attorneys interviewed by The Associated Press said that regardless of what ultimately happens to the clothing, its value could be considered part of the Reagan's taxable income.

"Communications Throughout the World" was the program topic for the January meeting of Zeta Lambda Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma. June McGlaun, chairman of communications, led a discussion of the communication gap we experience in today's world. Participating in the discussion were American Field Service exchange students, Monica Couto, of Brazil and Nettie Moss, Americans Abroad student to Turkey this past summer, and Monette O'Day.

Each student told of the communication problems they experienced as a result of the language barrier or the failure of sign language. Both girls answered questions concerning their impressions of their host families, the customs, the similarities, and differences in their home countries. They expressed their gratitude for the privilege of participating in the exchange program and feel that it has helped them to better understand and communicate with other people and other cultures.

Monette O'Day led a discussion of music as a universal language demonstrating how the drum, once described as the heart beat of Africa, could be used as a tool to fill the gap in communication. She closed the program by leading the group in singing "A Lei of Friendship."

Donna Stehley gave the meditation entitled "Footprints."

Serving as hostesses were Mary Davenport, Georgene Galloway, LaNelle Rambin, Maribeth Thomas, and Johnnie Harber in whose home the meeting was held.

President El Wanda Nall conducted the brief business session before adjourning the meeting.

There are more households in the United States than a decade ago but fewer persons in each, on average. The number of American households grew by 27 percent in the '70s, reaching a total of 80.4 million, U.S. Census figures show. During the same period, however, the average household declined in size from 3.1 to 2.8 persons.

Recognize Children's Manipulative Behavior

PROVO, Utah (AP)—Children, not parents, often rule the roost at home, says a Brigham Young University psychologist, who suggests the best way to change the situation is to recognize their manipulative behavior.

Dr. Paul W. Robinson, BYU professor of psychology and author of the book, "Manipulating Parents," says that parents can learn to obtain obedience and cooperation at home in a loving way if they know how to respond to manipulative situations, and then consistently apply those responses.

"Ninety percent of what most parents are doing with their children is right," said Robinson. "But they run into problems because their timing is off. They just aren't sure when it's proper to show love and how much, or when to punish."

For 15 years, Robinson has taken several problem children into his home and treated them as part of his family.

By studying the tactics used by the children during those years, Robinson has found that most children get labeled negatively because they have developed effective strategies for manipulating adults.

While parents often want to talk out situations, children have learned that actions carry more weight.

Robinson explains that among the techniques parents can employ to handle misbehaving children are punishment, ignoring, physical restraint and stimulus change response.

For example, Robinson believes it is essential and necessary to show love after a child has been disciplined but he suggests that parents need to let the effect of the consequence "sink in" for a while, then express love later.

"If you reward the child immediately after punishment the attention will override the effect of the discipline," he points out. "Leaving time for impact is important."

To preserve valuable household items, parents may often use a physical restraint approach by hiding them from children so they won't accidentally break them. But Robinson believes that this "may be a valuable tactic for special circumstances but doesn't teach the child self-control."

There are inevitably times when children push undesirable demands and do things they should not do. In such cases firm discipline is often required, and parents should not feel guilty for standing firm and doing what needs to be done."

When a child reaches for something he or she shouldn't have, the parents could spank the child's hand or tell him "no" firmly, according to Robinson.

If a child falls off his bike and is not seriously injured but continues to cry, this behavior can be effectively terminated by using the technique known as stimulus change, he says. To stop the crying a parent can call the child's attention to birds flying overhead or a billboard sign nearby. A quick refocusing of the child's thoughts often causes the child to lose interest in seeking attention through crying or tantrums.

"In most parent-child relations parents should use actions, besides words, to handle children," he said. "These strategies are frequently more powerful than talking."

NEW YORK (AP) — American youngsters apparently are more intrigued with science than ever before, according to a survey for the producers of a television science series for teenagers.

The Children's Television Workshop award-winning science program, "3-2-1 CON-TACT," which has opened its third repeat season, showed a 26 percent increase in viewers during the 1981 repeat over its highly successful premiere run, the study reveals.

"Much of the reason for the gain might be attributed to new viewers introduced through increased school use of the series," says CTW executive director Keith Mielke.

West opens the king of diamonds and continues with the ace after East plays the nine. East ruffs the third diamond and leads back a trump.

Most bridge players either concede down one or play the hand out lackadaisically and go down one, but if South knows about count squeezes and he counts correctly he can find a 10th trick.

He has to cash four spades to pull West's trumps and must discard two hearts from dummy. He is now down to a six-card ending and if he can decide just how many clubs and hearts East has retained as his last six cards he can score that vital 10th trick.

Suppose East is holding three of each. South simply plays three rounds of clubs to ruff the third one and establish dummy's last club as a winner.

Suppose East is holding four clubs and two hearts. South cashes dummy's ace-king of hearts and sets up his own seven of hearts as a winner.

Suppose West was dealt three hearts. The squeeze could not develop.

Indian Tribes Argue Against State Game Laws

INDIAN VILLAGE, Texas (AP) — The Alabama and Coushatta Indian tribes have hunted the dense forests of their East Texas reservation for almost 130 years without interference from the state of Texas.

But now the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department is trying to strip them of their traditional hunting rights and force them to comply with state game laws.

Boyd Johnson, counsel for the Parks and Wildlife Department, claims Indians are not exempt from state law and he has asked state Attorney General Mark White for an opinion on which the wildlife code can be enforced on the 4,600-acre reservation.

Roland Poncho, superintendent of the 500-member Polk County reservation, said he is enraged at the state's attempt to wrest management of the reservation's wildlife from the tribal council, which he claims is given the right to control hunting by tradition and state law.

"Our people have hunted in these woods since coming here long ago," Poncho said. "It's a traditional thing. Not everybody hunts, but those who do might kill seven or eight deer, then distribute the meat to elderly tribe members of others who can't hunt."

Texas law requires all hunters to be licensed and limits the number of game an individual can kill during a season.

So when game wardens Robert Hall, of Livingston, and Donald Robertson, of Blanchard, spotted Lyndon Alec, 19, butchering a doe outside his reservation home last November, they asked to see his hunting license.

He didn't have one.

Neither did Clayton "Smiley" Sylestine, 49, former chairman of the Alabama-Coushatta Tribal Council and a forester Hall and Robertson discovered a few minutes later butchering two does and a buck.

"We were just driving down the road when we saw them cleaning those deer. It didn't enter my mind at the time that the Indians might be different from anybody else," Hall said.

After checking with a supervisor, the officers arrested Alec and Sylestine, even though both men insisted they had hunted all their lives on the reservation and had never needed a license.

Mrs. Armstrong said she believed the Indians' story and agreed to release Alec and Sylestine on their own recognizance until the legal question could be answered.

Parks and Wildlife officials dropped the charges against the pair a few days later, and after meeting with tribal leaders agreed to allow the Indians to hunt as they had done for years — without supervision — until Jan. 3 when the hunting season closed.

But the conflict in state law remains, and Johnson said he expects the attorney general to rule that hunting laws apply to the reservation.

That would mean next hunting season, which begins in November, the Alabama-Coushatta hunters would have to get licenses and obey game regulations.

A charter adopted by the Alabama-Coushatta tribe and approved by the federal government in 1938 gives the tribal council — the reservation's governing body — authority to "protect and preserve the property, wildlife and natural resources of the tribe."

The Alabama-Coushatta tribe was one of many American Indian tribes removed from federal jurisdiction with the Indian Termination Act of 1954. The reservation lands were deeded to the state of Texas.

However, that law also terminated "any powers conferred upon the tribe by its constitution and bylaws," including the right to supervise wildlife resources which were approved while the reservation was under federal jurisdiction.

In his letter to the attorney general, Johnson pointed out the legislation which placed the reservation under Texas' control stipulated the "laws (of the state) shall apply to the tribe and its members in the same manner as they apply to other citizens."

Johnson argues that without a specific exemption from state or federal wildlife laws the Indians should be made to follow the same rules as other Texas hunters.

But a 1957 opinion from then-Attorney General Will Wilson complicates the matter.

"The 1938 constitution and bylaws adopted by the Alabama-Coushatta tribes of Texas are still in force," Wilson wrote.

Poncho said Wilson's opinion makes it clear that the tribal council still has the authority to regulate hunting on the reservation and that state laws do not apply.

"When the state begins to take liberties and to dispense with rights that are traditional, it can lead to other things.

"We see this as a direct threat, a threat to our foothold on our tribal land. We have always done a good job of policing our tribal land ... We only hunt during the regular hunting season and any of our members who hunt off the reservation do get licenses," Poncho said.

"We've certainly not had any help from the Parks and Wildlife people in controlling white poachers on our reservation. Now they are eager to make us obey the law," he said.

To 'New Federalism'...

Philosophical Support, Caution Are Reactions

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — President Reagan's "new federalism" — a plan to turn over federal programs to the states, announced in his State of the Union address — has drawn philosophical support cut with practical caution from Texas officials.

"I was pleased with the speech and I am certainly philosophically in agreement," Gov. Bill Clements told reporters Wednesday. "I have no objection in principle to the proposal at all, but I want to see the details.

"There is a vast difference between making a state of the state speech and the finished legislation on his desk," he added. "This thing is going to take many a zig and a zag in the House and Senate."

Reagan proposed that control of many social service, transportation and education programs revert to the states, with a $28 billion annual trust fund of federal money set aside to operate them.

"I believe the states, particularly Texas, are better able to determine the course of many of our domestic programs," Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said at Wednesday. "However, just as the president stated that he does not propose balancing the federal budget on the backs of the American taxpayer, I hope he does not plan to use the backs of the states."

Reagan proposed that the states take over major welfare programs, including Aid to Families with Dependent Children and food stamps, but said the federal government would assume responsibility for Medicaid.

Department of Human Resources spokesman Bill Woods said that swap, according to current figures, would leave Texas "on the short end of the stick by about $133 million."

But Woods said until state officials know how much of the fund Texas will get, and state legislators divvy it up among the programs, any estimates would be "wild conjecture."

Clements said that health care costs and a corresponding increase in the cost of administering Medicaid would balance out in Texas' favor. But he also insisted Texas could administer any program better than Washington, even Medicaid.

"I can't think of any federal program we couldn't do better than the federal government," he said, and if Reagan turned over Medicaid to the state, too, "I'd like that even better."

Both Hobby and Attorney General Mark White expressed concern at separate news conferences about an apparent discrepancy in the "swap." Hobby said as part of the deal, the states would assume programs costing more than $30 billion, but would get only $28 billion a year to operate them.

"There is a difference between those numbers yet to be explained," Hobby said.

"My only concern," said White, "is that (Reagan) hopefully — unlike (Budget director David) Stockman — added up all the numbers before he made the decisions. It seemed like they made a little slip on those numbers. It didn't seem like it balanced."

Clements said, "I don't think anybody knows what the dollar amount of the difference is or isn't. This is going to go through a wringer, and that wringer is called Congress."

Complaint Is Dropped

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A customs complaint has been dropped against a 33-year-old woman who was jailed here last month in connection with the investigation of a former CIA agent, officials said.

Roberta Barnes had been detained by federal authorities last December as a material witness in the investigation of former CIA agent Edwin P. Wilson. Assistant U.S. Attorney John Sweeney refused to comment Tuesday on the decision to drop the charge against her.

Mrs. Barnes is contesting her scheduled appearance as a material witness before a Washington grand jury investigating Wilson. Grand jurors are reviewing charges that Wilson allegedly helped organize a terrorist training camp.

The customs complaint accused Mrs. Barnes of failure to declare all the money she carried on a holiday trip from London to Austin.

Embarrassed by acne

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Can you please tell me why teenagers get pimples? I am a 19-year-old male with pimples. I am trying to get rid of them but they will not go away. The doctor gave me some cream. It did not help. I am very disgusted with pimples and oily skin. I've had this problem since I was 17. That is two years of embarrassing acne.

DEAR READER — About 99 percent of males and almost as many females develop acne when they enter the teen years, or before. It coincides with sexual maturation. The sex hormones literally make the skin more juicy. The sebaceous glands in your skin are oil glands. They produce sebum, which is nature's own skin moisturizer. There may be nearly 6,000 of these small sebaceous glands per square inch of skin.

The sebum may form a plug in the opening of the gland which you call black heads or white heads, depending upon whether they are pigmented or not. These are beneath the surface and cannot simply be washed off with soap and water. Soaking the skin helps soften them so they will be extruded easily but the black heads are not dirt as some people erroneously think and do not mean a person is not washing adequately.

In some instances the sebum is broken down by bacteria living beneath the surface of the skin within the opening to the glands. The broken down fatty material is irritating to the skin and causes the reddened inflammation that you may have experienced.

The approach to treating acne then is to help cut down or eliminate the excess oily sebum formation. Washing or soaking the skin with a warm cloth twice a day helps — more often if oil accumulates. Antibiotics may be given to kill the bacteria, preventing the breakdown of sebum and the subsequent red pustules. And peeling agents may be used on the surface of the skin to peel off the outer layers and permit the sebum to escape naturally. These are vitamin A acid (not vitamin A pills) which is tretinoin marketed as Retin-A. The creamy salve is not so good as it adds to the greasy problem but there is a gel product that works better.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 8-2, Acne Can Be Treated, to outline management of acne for you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

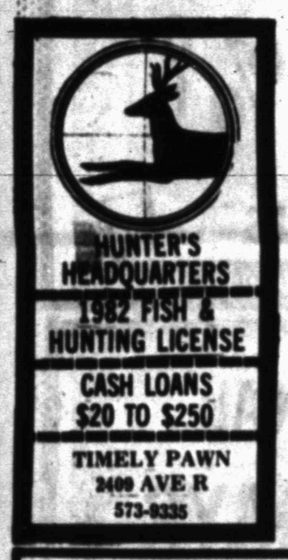

DEAR DR. LAMB — I would like to know what platelets in the blood are. I always have blood counts taken. What causes them? Is it what I eat? What should I eat and what can I do? Is it serious? I'm 86 years old.

DEAR READER — Sometimes we doctors forget that our patients don't always speak our language. Be glad you have platelets. All healthy people do. They are formed by your bone marrow just as other blood cells are. The tiny cells are essential to your blood clotting mechanism.

When the wall of a blood vessel is injured the platelets clump together to form a vascular plug to prevent bleeding. Some medicines used to prevent blood clotting as in heart attacks and strokes have their effect by preventing this clumping or stickiness of the platelets.

Without platelets you cannot form a normal blood clot and there is an increased tendency to bleed. You should have from 150,000 to 350,000 in each ml of blood or about three to four times that number per teaspoon of blood.

Blackjack Tables Crowded In ND

FARGO, N.D. (AP) — Swearing is discouraged, the music is likely to be a local band, and the drinking is controlled, but on most nights, the blackjack tables are crowded in North Dakota bars and motels.

The betting limit is $2 a hand. If you lose, the money goes to charity.

Since the state put blackjack on its charitable gambling list in July, more than 300 playing sites have been opened across the state by service groups ranging from a community theater to the state's public television network to the Multiple Sclerosis Society.

Fargo, a city of 62,000 on the Minnesota border, is suddenly seeing tourists from neighboring Minneapolis and Winnipeg, Manitoba come to play blackjack. "It's cheaper than Las Vegas," said one customer.

Bar sales are climbing and at least one motel has built a new addition just for blackjack tables.

North Dakota lawmakers are surprised at its success.

"We were looking for a way to allow people to do legally what they will do anyway — gamble — and for a way to help out the charities," said state Rep. Pat Conmy, a co-sponsor of the blackjack law. "We didn't think blackjack would be so popular. We were awfully naive."

The bars and motels lease sections of their establishments to the service groups. Larger motels have from six to 15 tables in the bar area, where players trade names and make small talk as the cards fall. Profanity is frowned upon, and pit bosses firmly escort those who have had too much to drink away from the table.

"You can maybe win $100 or $200, but with a $2 betting limit you have to play quite awhile," said Duane Hoppe, who drops into a local tavern three or four times a week to play blackjack.

"I just play for the heck of it, not to win a bunch of money," said the tall bar manager from Moorhead, Minn.

He says bars in Moorhead, across the Red River fom Fargo, have lost business because of blackjack, although they still get the college crowd because Minnesota's drinking age is 19 and North Dakota's is 21.

"It's still too early to tell how much it's increased our business. But we are seeing a number of people staying longer," one Fargo motel manager said.

Bob Myers, general manager of the Fargo-Moorhead Community Theater, said the theater's decision to sponsor gambling at a motel was based on economics.

"We realized federal cutbacks were on the way and that our public sources were drying up," he said. "We felt our ability to deliver services would be severely hampered — especially our children's theater — and that we might be forced to raise ticket prices to the point where they would not be affordable."

With only a month's experience, the theater can't say yet how successful its gambling operation has been, Myers said, but "the trend is good."

Dave Drenth, who manages the theater's tables at the Doublewood Inn, said even casino operators from Las Vegas were curious.

"I think they expected wooden floors and spittoons," Drenth said. "They said it looked nice, but they didn't seem worried about too much competition from us."

Roxanna Clower, who runs a dealers school in Fargo, estimates 350 people have taken the 32-hour course since it started in May. She's taught many college students, a few lawyers and several grandmothers.

"People need jobs and the hours are flexible," she said. Starting salaries vary, but dealers can make $8 or $9 a night including tips.

Fargo Chamber of Commerce Director Ken Larsen said he has no direct figures, but "I suppose when you consider the number of tables and the people needed for each table, it does add up to quite a few part-time jobs."

Charitable gambling brought in $3.5 million in gross receipts last year between July and September. That compares with $4.9 million during the first half of 1981, before blackjack was legal. Bingo, raffles, and sports pools were allowed earlier.

Blackjack managers say it costs $12,000 to $20,000 to set up a blackjack operation. The state allows the groups 35 percent for operating costs and collects a 5 percent tax which goes into the general revenue fund.

Some operators say 35 percent is not enough and others would like to see the $2 limit increased. Meanwhile, Conmy said he's received calls and letters from people who wonder whether the state has gone too far.

State Attorney General Robert Wefald knows of four violations. One club manager misused money and two other clubs ran gambling activities not specified under the law. A Fargo man was charged in December with keeping around $5,000 from a tip jar and bingo operation.

Internal Revenue Service spokesmen say they are concerned about the amount of money involved in North Dakota gambling operations and are investigating the possibility that some of it may be subject to a business income tax.

Fargo Police Chief Edwin Anderson said he hasn't seen an increase in the crime rate because of blackjack but added, "You've got a new business, which obviously is going to create violations sooner or later."

Reagan To Begin Taking New Show On The Road

WASHINGTON (AP) — His 1982 debut before Congress behind him, President Reagan is taking his show on the road.

Reagan, who opened his all-new, 1982 economic drama before Congress on Tuesday evening, will try out his script for transferring social programs to the states on the Republican Party faithful and state legislatures in the coming months.

With Congress less than certain to rush to the president's side, his aides are charting a late winter and early spring schedule that will send Reagan around the country drumming up support for the program he outlined in his State of the Union address.

It was just such a series of trips that was planned for Reagan a year ago to build support for his 1981 plan of tax and spending cuts. The attempt on his life forced cancellation of the travel.

It is on the legislatures and governors that most of the burden of Reaganomics '82 will fall, as the states take over responsibility for welfare and food stamp programs.

The plan, said Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., "has extraordinary implications for the ... improvement of federal, state, and local government relationships."

In drawing up the plan, Reagan listened to his White House advisers, said to be unanimous in advocating increases in excise taxes, and heard an opposing view, according to a White House source, from "the wise men" — private economic advisers — and "the money managers" from Wall Street.

Having wound up that round of consultations with the script writers, the president will see how the show plays, if not in Peoria, well, then, in other towns around the Midwest and other sections of the nation.

Over the next two months, said deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes, "a very thorough process of consultations" will be undertaken, while the "nuts and bolts" of the program are developed.

Under the guidance of Rich Williamson, the president's assistant for intergovernmental relations, the White House has been contacting governors — and will have reached all very soon, Speakes said — to go over the program.

In addition, said Speakes, "the president will go all out to present his program to the people and the Congress."

David R. Gergen, the White House director of communications, acknowledged, "We do think this is going to be a tough year, particularly in the early months."

Indeed, local reaction followed partisan lines.

The trips will begin within a few weeks. By the end of the spring, the president, if he holds to the current plan, will have visited every section of the nation with the exception of New England.

For Minorities...

Some Colleges Are 'Dead End'

NEW YORK (AP) — Community colleges meet the needs of many Americans but can lead to a "dead end" for students who want to go on to four-year colleges, a new study on minority education says.

The problem is particularly acute for minority students because they attend such schools in disproportionate numbers, according to the "Final Report of the Commission on the Higher Education of Minorities," released Wednesday.

While praising community colleges for their vocational and adult training efforts, the study recommended that students who aspire to bachelor's degrees be encouraged to enroll in four-year institutions at the beginning of their college careers.

The report also said that after more than a decade of gains, growth in minority representation at the nation's colleges has stalled in the past several years.

Proportionately, far fewer minority students graduate from high school, get into four-year colleges and receive bachelor's degrees than white students, said the report, financed with a $700,000 grant from the Ford Foundation.

Among reasons the report cited were misuse of standardized admissions tests, financial problems of minority students, and failure of community colleges to transfer students to higher levels.

"Community colleges have succeeded in providing vocational training and adult education for many Americans," the report said, adding the schools can be particularly effective in meeting local career needs with their associate degree programs.

But it said these schools have not been successful starting points for seeking a bachelor's degree. "Our data indicate that whereas three in four community college freshmen intend to get the baccalaureate, only one in four actually does so."

Carter Gets Invitation To Norway

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Former President Carter has accepted an invitation to visit Norway for three days in the spring followed by a visit to Stockholm, the Swedish capital, a Norwegian publisher announced today.

Carter will be the chief speaker May 5 at a foreign policy seminar organized by the publishing house Hjemmet Fagpresseforlag, its managing director Nils Schjander said.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Some adjustments may be required today regarding a venture involving friends. If it's handled properly, all will benefit equally.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Even though you may prefer to stay in the background today, conditions could make it necessary for you to assume control of a situation affecting your reputation or career.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Companions or associates could be a trifle lethargic today, so it will be up to you to arouse them to action if you hope to advance joint interests.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your possibilities for success in what you set out to do today are very good, provided you don't rely upon Lady Luck instead of hard work.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Avoid making hasty judgments or decisions today. You could initially overlook pertinent facts. You won't miss a trick after a second study.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Try not to be presumptuous today, or feel your ideas are superior. Problems can be resolved if all concerned are given a chance to make a contribution.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't be afraid to bargain a bit today in business, or when purchasing a costly item. You can get better terms by negotiating a little further.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) There is material opportunity around you today, but if you take things for granted you might overlook it. Pay attention to even the smallest signals.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You could start off a bit indifferently today, but once involved in something challenging, your enthusiasm will be aroused and you'll play to win.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your possibilities for personal gain look promising today in situations where you call the shots. In matters where others are involved, you may not do as well.

Fargo, estimates 350 people have taken the 32-hour course since it started in May. She's taught many college students, a few lawyers and several grandmothers.

"People need jobs and the hours are flexible," she said. Starting salaries vary, but dealers can make $8 or $9 a night including tips.

Fargo Chamber of Commerce Director Ken Larsen said he has no direct figures, but "I suppose when you consider the number of tables and the people needed for each table, it does add up to quite a few part-time jobs."

Charitable gambling brought in $3.5 million in gross receipts last year between July and September. That compares with $4.9 million during the first half of 1981, before blackjack was legal. Bingo, raffles, and sports pools were allowed earlier.

Blackjack managers say it costs $12,000 to $20,000 to set up a blackjack operation. The state allows the groups 35 percent for operating costs and collects a 5 percent tax which goes into the general revenue fund.

Some operators say 35 percent is not enough and others would like to see the $2 limit increased. Meanwhile, Conmy said he's received calls and letters from people who wonder whether the state has gone too far.

State Attorney General Robert Wefald knows of four violations. One club manager misused money and two other clubs ran gambling activities not specified under the law. A Fargo man was charged in December with keeping around $5,000 from a tip jar and bingo operation.

Internal Revenue Service spokesmen say they are concerned about the amount of money involved in North Dakota gambling operations and are investigating the possibility that some of it may be subject to a business income tax.

Fargo Police Chief Edwin Anderson said he hasn't seen an increase in the crime rate because of blackjack but added, "You've got a new business, which obviously is going to create violations sooner or later."

Machu Picchu Trial Popular

CUZCO, PERU (AP)—An ancient trial constructed when the Incan Empire ruled the Andes is fast becoming one of the most popular tourist attractions.

The trail, hidden for hundreds of years, leads to Machu Picchu, the fabled lost city of the Incas.

Seventy years ago, Hiram Bingham, the American who discovered the ruins, had to hack out a path to the site through virtually impenetrable jungle and over the sheer granite walls of the rugged Andean countryside.

Today, the trail is being hiked to the ruins by those who enjoy the challenge or yearn to feel a part of the mystery of the Incas.

The government estimates more than 3,125 people hiked the trail between August and December of 1980.

Most of the trekkers are foreigners.

"It's one of the routes most favored by people who do trekking," Freddy Pandovani, a local guide, said. "It's compared favorably to Nepal."

Pandovani is the Cuzco administrator of Explorandes, one of several Peruvian companies that outfit and cater to tourists interested in trekking, mountain climbing, river rafting and jungle exploration.

The 33-mile-long trek begins at a desolate train stop in a wild river valley.

To cross the river, hikers must ride an "oroya" a five passenger wooden platform suspended from a rope by a pulley, and powered by the strong arms of a local peasant.

The trail itself starts out through a fragrant eucalyptus grove and passes farmland still cultivated by ox-drawn plows, and dotted with the huts'Indian owners.

The trail soon turns steep and relentless, up mountainsides to the snow line and vistas of breathtaking scenery, then descending to cross over pure, rushing streams and rivers and through semitropical jungle.

Alexander von Humboldt, a famous 19th-century explorer and chronicler, wrote: "The roads of the Inca were the most useful and stupendous works ever executed by man."

During the first part of the journey, that judgment seems somewhat overblown, as the road resembles little more than a series of trails of gravel and dirt.

But the higher and closer to Machu Picchu the traveler climbs the better the road becomes, until it offers long stretches of stone steps and pavement and fine supporting masonry.

Along the way, the visitor walks in the shadows of waterfalls, the stone work of ancient Inca shelters and fortresses, and through natural rock caverns and arcades formed by jungle overgrowth. Brightly colored hummingbirds, placidly grazing cattle, orchids and an occasional condor soaring overhead provide added delights. Nowhere along the trail is the hiker far from running water.

At trail's end, usually a journey of three or four days, the visitor looks down from a sturdy stone Inca for a lofty promontory, a sugar-loaf hill, and the ruins of Machu Picchu.

Far below, the mighty waters of the Urubamba River flow almost silently past.

Although the hiking season begins in March and runs to early October, the time of the dry sierra winter, June is considered to be the best hiking month, as many mountain flowers are in full bloom. July and August — vacation time for most Americans and Europeans — find the trail at its most congy;

Indeed, the trail may be falling victim of its own success.

The lack of toilet, waste disposal and camping facilities has created serious problems, with careless travellers despoiling both the trail and the surrounding ruins.

Badly marked trails and a lack of emergency or first-aid centers also are criticized. Plastic wrappers and tin cans from around the world litter the trail and its rest spots.

Enrique Velarde, a Ministry of Tourism official in Cuzco, said a mixed commission of government and private interests had planned a series of improvements along the trail, including garbage incinerators, toilet facilities and small shelters.

CELEBRATION—An exuberant Alfred P. Dolittle is shown celebrating with his many friends after he learns that his daughter has gone to live with Professor Higgins. Dolittle will be played by Calvin Wimmer in the Snyder High School production of "My Fair Lady" slated for a three night run tonight, Saturday and Monday. Show time is set for 7:30 each evening. Garratt Pictures Help Preserve Steam Trains

A rarity in the developed world, steam trains are so plentiful in other places around the world that Garratt says he may never find them all. "I am racing against time and I am losing the race."

Having visited 32 countries on four continents over the past 12 years, Garratt complained: "Well over half the remaining countries are running steam and their locomotives will outlive me."

The 41-year-old Englishman, interviewed by telephone at his home in Loughborough, Leicestershire, said he worked 110 hours a week at his self-appointed task.

His travels occupy six months of the year, and after that he earns his livelihood by giving lectures, with color slides, and by writing books about steam trains. He estimates each slide costs him $152 to acquire.

Garratt is anxious to get to China.

"The Chinese are the only nation in the world still building steam engines. They've got the coal and they believe steam is not an outmoded form of technology if labor is available.

"I believe in steam. I drive a car but whenever possible I go by train. I think they are sensible when the world is rapidly drinking up all its oil, and there's nothing to compare with steam for nostalgia.

"The steam engine is discredited. The developing nations want to ape the modern world and have diesels — it's become a worldwide fad. But the Chinese are building firstclass steam engines and running very heavy trains with them."

In Britain, which pioneered steam passenger trains in 1825, steam was phased out in the 1960s. But state-run British Rail occasionally runs a steamer as a curiosity and sells every seat.

Garratt, however, is not interested in museum pieces and that's why he has not visited North America. "No working steam left there," he said.

More interesting to him is the 108-year-old locomotive still at work in India and the model aged 109 in Hungary which he hopes to track down.

Garratt spoke of an "amazing discovery" on the tiny Atlantic island of Sao Miguel in the Portuguese Azores.

He went there in search of a railway hauling stone from a quarry. He found the line disused and overrun by trucks, but under a pile of debris he discovered what is probably the last relic of the 19th-century battle of the gauges, a British-built locomotive that ran on a track 7 feet wide.

Pioneers George and Robert Stephenson ran their trains on a track 4 feet, 8½ inches wide. Their rival, Isambard Kingdom Brunel, built the Great Western Railway from London to Bristol on a 7-foot gauge, so that his trains carried greater loads with great economy.

Brunel was too much of an innovator. No other railroad company emulated him, and at the end of the century the Great Western scrapped its broad-gauge track and trains and adopted the Stephenson gauge, which became the British standard.

"I expected to find a 2-foot gauge on Sao Miguel but instead there was this fantastic engine," Garratt said. "It must have been sold off cheaply and shipped out there when the island wanted to haul stone to build a harbor. I took pictures of it and there it stays, slowly rotting away."

"Beautiful people and a beautiful island, liberally laced with the most exotic locomotives, all American-built. I've been once and I can hardly wait to get back."

Spices Justice With Humor

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Less than a mile separates the Albany Police Court from New York state's highest court, the Court of Appeals.

But no one is likely to confuse Judge Thomas Keegan's courtroom with the appeals court, that august tribunal which quietly molds and shapes the state Constitution, routinely setting legal precedents that affect millions.

With his courtroom, anteroom and lobby filled to overflowing with accused shoplifters, prostitutes, drunken drivers and burglars — all being watched over by uniformed police officers — the casual observer of Keegan's domain might think he had stumbled into a somewhat elegant bus terminal.

"This would be a difficult place to work without a sense of humor," said the 41-year-old Albany native who has spent nine years dispensing what is for many their first and only taste of criminal justice.

In Keegan's courtroom, the taste of justice is often bittersweet, and tempered not only with mercy, but with humor.

Five days a week and two Saturdays a month he enters the courtroom grinning, and puts at ease with a cheerful, "Good morning and welcome to Police Court."

Aircraft Carrier Duty Plants Seed For Book

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — It was two decades ago when Peter Kilduff was a "bright eyed young kid" that a tour of duty aboard the USS Lake Champlain initiated a career, a love of aircraft carriers and, now, a book.

"I just couldn't believe the Navy would pay me to ride on a carrier and report on its operations," Kilduff recalled of his days as a Navy journalist serving on the Champlain in 1960. "It was a heady trip."

Ten years later, the aviation historian spent four days aboard a carrier of the same class as his old ship, writing an article for a British magazine.

"It was a great experience. It brought back all the memories and I think that was when the idea of a book about carriers really began," said the 40-yearold New Britain resident, author of "U.S. Carriers at War." Published in Great Britain this fall, it has now been issued in the United States.

The book was five years in the making, Kilduff said. Initially, it was going to be a full issue for a British aircraft quarterly, but publisher Ian Allen suggested that it be expanded into a book.

Kilduff focused on American carriers of World War II, but tried to make the book more than a recitation of major battles in the Pacific campaign.

"I wanted to mention the three types of carriers — escort, light, and battle carriers — and I wanted to touch on the major theaters of the war. Most people don't know about the carrier activity in the Mediterranean and in chasing U-boats in the Atlantic," he said.

"The aircraft carrier was really the 'American blitzkrieg weapon' during the war," he said. "The American carrier fleet gave the U.S. Navy a fast, mobile strike force unprecedented in the history of warfare."

Kilduff's book includes a chapter on the "Navy's Ace of Aces," David McCampbell. A medal of honor winner, McCampbell downed many enemy aircraft, including nine is one 90-minute battle.

But "U.S. Carriers at War" focuses more on average American pilots — and not just fighter pilots, but also torpedo bomber and dive-bomber crews—whose mere survival, the author maintained, was often remarkable.

"I'm really only the nominal author of this book," Kilduff said. "I try to let the men who served (aboard the carriers) tell their stories, so I'm more the author-editor."

He either interviewed the men or sent them a list of 30 questions and a blank tape cassette for their answers. Kilduff fashioned their responses into a narrative, which he then sent to the men for their approval.

Paraplegic May Get Married

CHICAGO (AP) — A paraplegic who was denied a Roman Catholic marriage because he is impotent says he has been told that a parish priest was given church permission to proceed with wedding plans.

Larry Bonvallet, 32, of suburban Elmwood Park, who is paralyzed from the waist down, said he received a call Wednesday night from the Most Rev. Joseph Imesch of the Joliet Diocese.

"He was very kind and gentle and said he had checked around with doctors in his area that treat spinal-cord injuries and said he sees no reason why my marriage can't take place."

"He said he has given the parish priest the go-ahead."

Bonvallet said his fiancee, a nurse at Riverside Hospital in Kankakee who has asked to remain anonymous, "seems very happy" and that they plan a May 15 wedding.

"I'm not personally going to pursue the matter, but I just hope they (church officials) might look at it a little further and clear the way for other people like myself."

Earlier, Imesch, former bishop of Detroit, told the Detroit Free Press he would intercede on behalf of Bonvallet. He said he made the decision after reading newspaper stories about Bonvallet's plight.

"The parish priest simply told him that the laws of the church prevent persons who are impotent from Catholic marriage," Imesch told the Free Press. "The law does say that, but we have a process of appeal to the (marriage) tribunal and finally to the bishop.

"All this unfortunate big splash in the newspapers could have been avoided if those appeals had just been made."

Bonvallet, who became paralyzed after a fall five years ago and met his fiancee while recuperating, had sought a doctor's letter stating that his impotence might be reversed.

But, he said, the doctor refused, saying he wasn't sure.

"Isn't love and understanding in a relationship between the two of us more important?" Bonvallet said he asked the priest, the Rev. Michael Sawlewicz of St. Stanislaus Church in Kankakee.

Imesch served as an auxiliary bishop in the Archdiocese of Detroit from 1973 to 1979, when he was made head of the 420,000-member Joliet Diocese.

As Deficit Widens Further...

U.S. Treasury Plans Record Borrowing In '82

By JAMES PELTZ
AP Business Writer

As the annual federal deficit approached record proportions after only three months of fiscal 1982, the Treasury Department gave credit markets a blow by saying it plans to cover the red ink by borrowing a record $41.3 billion by the end of March.

The government was nearly $20 billion short in December, pushing the gap for the fiscal year that began Oct. 1 to $48.2 billion. That was more than two-thirds of the way to the government's record $66.4 billion deficit in 1976, with nine months of the year to go.

The Treasury said Wednesday it would have to borrow $41.3 billion in the first three months of this year to cover the red ink, breaking its previous record quarterly borrowing of $38.4 billion, set in the first quarter of 1980 when a recession was beginning.

Economists and credit analysts say the heavy Treasury borrowing to pay for large deficits pushes up interest rates, because it boosts credit demands at the same time the Federal Reserve is trying to limit credit availability to fight inflation.

In his State of the Union address Tuesday night, President Reagan confirmed reports the fiscal 1982 deficit will near $100 billion, making the latest official forecast of $91.1 billion obsolete. The shortfall for fiscal year ended Sept. 30 was $57.9 billion.

The new estimate shows the deficit "is going to be large," said Treasury Undersecretary Beryl Sprinkel. "It's very large; we should not be kidding about that matter."

Richard Davis, director of fixed-income research at First Boston Corp., said that the high yields the Treasury pays are attractive to investors and have made it difficult for corporations to sell bonds.

Other analysts said credit markets need a clear signal. George Rocourt, an economist at a the Mercantile-Safe Deposit and Trust Co. in Baltimore, said the markets need "some assurance that these deficits will not continue forever and will not lead to more inflation."

Prices of outstanding Treasury notes and bonds declined modestly after the announcement largely because the financing was larger than had been widely forecast by securities dealers.

Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker warned earlier this week that unless Reagan and Congress kept deficits from going higher, interest rates would again rise, smothering economic recovery.

Yet Volcker came under fire Wednesday by Treasury Secretary Donald Regan, who complained about what he called the Fed's "erratic control" over the money supply.

"Steady monetary policy is absolutely essential if we are to steady the financial markets and reduce interest rates," Regan said.

There had been calls for tax increases to help pare the deficit, but Reagan in his speech said "raising taxes won't balance the budget." Instead he proposed more domestic spending cuts, plugging tax "loopholes" and strengthening the law requiring larger, profitable companies to pay a minimum tax.

Regan told a congressional committee Wednesday Reagan will ask Congress to withhold tax on interest and dividend income to help trim the 1983 deficit.

Some private economists, despite lowering inflation, the "highly volatile movement" in the money supply "has the financial markets so uptight that they demand a tremendous premium above the inflation rate," keeping interest rates high, said Robert Genetski, chief economist of Harris Trust & Savings Bank, Chicago.

But another administration official said he was satisfied with the central bank's performance.

Lawrence Kudkow, assistant director for economic policy at the Office of Management and Budget, told Wall Street executives in New York on Wednesday night that "the Fed's done a fine job this (past) year" on controlling monetary growth.

"To go after the Federal Reserve Board is an exercise in futility," said Kudlow, a former Wall Street economist. Instead, he said, a sound fiscal policy and "tighter budget" should be pursued to complement steady money growth.

The building industry has been hit hard by high interest rates, and its leaders said they were "disappointed" Reagan offered no immediate relief to them in his speech.

Sales of existing houses fell nearly 20 percent in 1981 but were picking up slightly as the year ended, the National Association of Realtors reported Wednesday. Although total sales fell to about 2.35 million homes in 1981, it said, December sales — at an annual rate of 1.95 million — were up 1.6 percent from November.

In 1908, Florence Nightingale was presented with the freedom of the city of London, England.

Philadelphia Bulletin To Print Final Edition

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Even as The Bulletin's executive editor urged his gloomy staff to help the 134-year-old newspaper go out in style, publisher N.S. Hayden said that for afternoon dailies, there was only bad news ahead.

"I have no hope for afternoon newspapers in metropolitan areas," he said Wednesday as he announced The Bulletin, once the nation's largest afternoon newspaper, would cease publication with its Friday issue.

The Bulletin is the fourth large daily to close in the past six months. Its demise follows the closure of the afternoon Washington Star, the New York Daily News Tonight edition and the morning Philadelphia Journal.

The problems of The Bulletin and other afternoon dailies that closed generally have been attributed to competition from evening television news, the migration of subscribers to suburbs and city traffic that hampers afternoon distribution.

"Until Friday, no place in the country will have better newspapers," said Executive Editor Craig Ammerman, who told the 250 editors and reporters that The Bulletin would help employees find new jobs.

Applications Suspended Until Later

The Texas Veterans' Land Board has stopped accepting applications for loans until additional bonds can be sold, Bob Armstrong, Texas Land Commissioner, has announced.

In a memo received by E. H. (Dan) Dever Jr., Scurry County Veterans Service Officer, Armstrong said that the land board does not anticipate being able to sell bonds during the first or second quarter of 1982.

The board feels it is important that bons be sold at an interest rate that would not result in an excessive interest rate to veterans, Armstrong said. The sale of bonds provides money for loans to veterans who want to puchase land in Texas.

"In the meantime, we are operating on the remainder of funds from our last bond sale in August, 1980, and on rotating funds that become available from a portion of the payments made by veterans who have existing loans," Armstrong added. "We are presently mailing 75 application packets a week to veterans on the waiting list in the order in which their requests were received."

Dozier's Sister Elated At Brother's Rescue

ALVIN, Texas (AP) — Joan Townsend, sister of rescued Air Force Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier, said today she felt all along her brother would survive his ordeal with Italian terrorists.

"I was surprised when I got the call this morning — I was sound asleep — but I felt it was going to work out all right," said Mrs. Townsend, who said she was awakened by a radio station about 5:15 a.m.

"A local reporter called and read the communique to me and that certainly got me awake," she said from her apartment in this small town just south of Houston.

She was worried at times during her brother's six-week ordeal — "Was he warm, was he being taken care of physically."

"I figured he would be able to handle the emotional and psychological part," said Mrs. Townsend, 48.

She spent the morning answering the telephone and talking with a half dozen reporters in her living room.

She said she would not report to work today at Alvin Community College, where she is chairman of child care development.

"I'm going to stay at home and just react. I haven't had time to plan any specific activities."

Between receiving calls from reporters all over the country, she tried several times to telephone her brother in Italy but got no answer at his Verona apartment. She did not know her brother, two years older, had been taken to a hospital at a nearby NATO base.

Mrs. Townsend lives alone in the two-bedroom apartment. Her 15-year-old son, David, was there today helping her answer the telephone.

U.S. Aid To Continue Despite Massacres

WASHINGTON (AP) Ronald Reagan was expected soon — possibly today — to certify that conditions are met for continued U.S. assistance to El Salvador, despite unconfirmed reports that Salvadoran government troops massacred hundreds of civilians in December.

Reports of the alleged massacre in The New York Times and The Washington Post, based on interviews with peasant survivors and viewing of dozens of bodies in Morazan Province, were discounted by the State Department. "It is clear that a massacre of major proportions occurred here in December," the Times reporter wrote from the mountain village of Mozote.

Department spokesman Alan Romberg quoted U.S. ambassador Dean Hinton as saying he did not have "any reason to believe they (the reports) are true." Hinton was quoted as saying such stories "frequently have a politically motivated overtone" and that reliable figures and impartial witnesses are impossible to find.

The newspapers quoted Salvadoran ambassador Ernesto Rivas Gallont and a spokesman for the Salvadoran armed forces, Col. Alfonso Cotto, as denying government troops had taken part in a massacre.

The Times and Post said the killings of several hundred civilians, including women, children and elderly people, occurred during an army sweep of the province which is largely controlled by leftist guerrillas.

The Times said villagers compliled a list of 733 victims, and that the Human Rights Commission of El Salvador, with works with the Roman Catholic Church, put the number slain at 926.

Reagan was reported prepared today to certify to Congress — under terms Act approved last month of the Foreign Assistance — that the military-civilian junta ruling El Salvador is making "concerted and significant efforts" to respect the human rights of its countrymen, and is in "substantial control" of its security forces.

Auto Talks Move Toward Deadline

DETROIT (AP) — With a midnight deadline looming tonight for talks on wage and benefit concessions, the United Auto Workers and General Motors Corp. remain "far apart on several key issues," a top UAW negotiator says.

Meanwhile, Owen Bieber, UAW vice president and head of the union's GM department, said the two sides had discussed a UAW proposal that automatically would reopen a revised contract if some economic measure — such as car sales — should improve.

He declined to elaborate.

"I think we still have time to meet that deadline," Bieber said. "We obviously still have some ground to cover. We are still ... far apart on several key issues."

And at Ford Motor Co., where talks were to resume Friday, the automaker's top negotiator said Wednesday that bargainers may come up with a different proposal than the one for GM, which would mark the first time since World War II that there would be three wage and benefit contracts at the Big Three automakers.

Chrysler Corp. already has a lower scale of wages and benefits.

Negotiators returned to the GM bargaining table Wednesday morning and continued until 12:30 a.m. today. Bieber said "some progress" was made but he would not discuss details of the talks.

The idea of writing an automatic reopener clause into the contract was raised Sunday by UAW President Douglas Fraser during a speech to union leaders in Washington for the UAW's annual political strategy conference.

"What if the economy really takes off? What if we're wrong about the outlook in the economy?" Fraser said. "Well, the way to manage that and the way we intend to manage that is to negotiate a reopener so that given a certain set of economic circumstances — perhaps a certain level of sales of cars — we get an automatic reopener."

If accepted by GM, the reopener could increase chances for approval of any new contract by union rank-and-file members who fear the automaker would benefit unfairly in the event of a sales upturn.

UAW spokesman David Mitchell said the automatic reopener clause is something the union wants, but leaders have not made it an absolute must.

Dear Abby

Gay Marriage May Be Happy, But It Won't Be Legal

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Two weeks ago I received a telephone call from my youngest son (29) who has been living in San Francisco for the last three years.

He told me that a priest had just married him to his friend, Jerry — another guy. He said he has never been happier in his life, and he asked me to tell everyone in the family about it.

So far I haven't told anybody because I'm not sure how some of our relatives will take it. For my part, I love my son, and all I want is for him to be happy.

Abby, is marriage between two men legal in California? This is a new one for me. And I would like to know what kind of a "priest" would perform this kind of ceremony.

PENNSYLVANIA MOM

DEAR MOM: Congratulations. You haven't lost a son, you've gained another son. Same-sex marriages are not legal anywhere, but there are members of the clergy (Metropolitan Community Churches) who perform such ceremonies.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I'm 18, the oldest of three children in our family. Our father died a year ago. We all felt terrible for a long time, but gradually the hurt subsided — except for Mom. She was always so active and cheerful, but since Dad died she has changed so much. She quit her part-time job and rarely leaves the house, except for church. She sleeps a lot, and when she isn't sleeping she just stays in her pajamas or housecoat, lying around the house. She's gained a lot of weight and doesn't seem to care about herself anymore.

She's still a great mother. She cooks and keeps house for us, but she doesn't want to go to the movies or even for a walk. She says nothing is any fun anymore without Dad.

We have tried to get her to see a counselor or someone to help her deal with her grief, but she keeps saying she'll be all right, it just takes time. She hardly sees any of her old friends, and we have no close relatives.

She's only 42, but she acts like her life is over. Is there anything we can do to help her?

HER CHILDREN

DEAR CHILDREN: Yes. Enlist the help of your clergyman. He will know what help is available in your community. There are counselors who specialize in teaching people to learn to handle their grief. There are also support groups, comprised of others who have experienced grief and learned how to cope with it. Your mother can be helped. Please don't take no for an answer.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: "Curious" asked you to define "success" and you replied by quoting Christopher Morley: "There is only one success — to be able to spend your life in your own way."

Please consider another point of view from Ralph Waldo Emerson:

"To laugh often and much; to win the respect of intelligent people and the affection of children; to earn the appreciation of honest critics and endure the betrayal of false friends; to appreciate beauty; to find the best in others; to leave the world a bit better whether by a healthy child, a garden patch, or a redeemed social condition; to know even one life has breathed easier because you have lived. This is to have succeeded." Sincerely,

A FREQUENT READER

Proof Will Be Required

WASHINGTON (AP) — Education Department officials say the agency is considering a proposal to require college students who apply for federal grants in the next school year to submit copies of income tax returns as proof of need.

Dr. Edward M. Elmendorf, deputy assistant secretary of education, told a House subcommittee Wednesday that the aim would be to reduce overpayments which stem from erroneous information from applicants.

He said 44 percent of all recipients of the so-called Pell Grants inaccurately reported their monetary resources in the 1980-81 academic year, resulting in overpayments of $289 million.

If the regulation is adopted, said Richard Hastings, another Education official, for the 1982-83 school year self-supporting students would have to submit a copy of their own tax return for 1981; dependent students would have to provide their parents' return.

College Roundup...

Kentucky Tripped Up

by The Associated Press

When he was coaching at Southern Cal in the Pac-10 Conference, Bob Boyd's teams played in the shadow of UCLA and generally played second fiddle.

Now that he's with Mississippi State in the Southeastern Conference, Boyd has another college basketball giant to contend with in Kentucky. But he got off on the right foot against the Wildcats Wednesday night.

"I certainly don't want to negate this fine victory, but I think we caught Kentucky a little flat," said Boyd after a shocking 56-51 upset of the nation's No. 7 team.

To make the game even more significant in Boyd's first year, it was the first victory for Mississippi State in the SEC after 16 losses.

"It was a great win for us, and it was nice to end the conference losing streak," said Boyd. "Our Kalpatrick Wells was by far the best defender on the court. I don't think there is a post man in the league that can play defense better."

Wells blocked three Kentucky shots and made two critical steals late in the game, while Butch Pierre sank key free throws for Mississippi State.

Mississippi State was leading 52-49 with 33 seconds to play when Jeff Malone hit two free throws. Kentucky's Jim Master responded with two of his own, but his team couldn't score in its last four possessions.

Mississippi State last beat a Top Ten team in 1976 when it edged Kentucky 83-76.

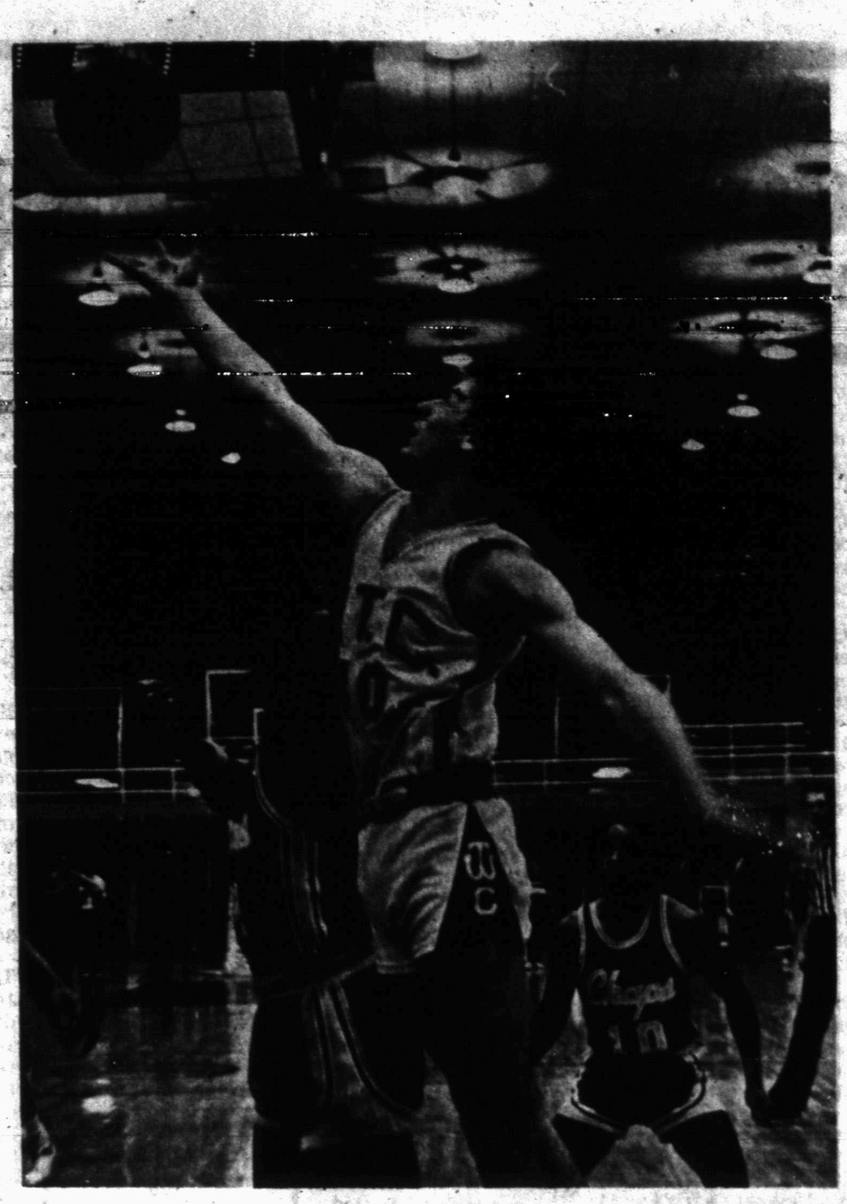

Kentucky Coach Joe B. Hall credited Mississippi State with "an exceptionally fine game. The tempo was such that it messed up our game. They broke us down offensively and defensively. Their defense intimidated us. They did what they had to do to win, and they deserve it."

In other games involving the nation's ranked teams, No. 1 Missouri whipped Iowa State 86-73, No. 2 North Carolina defeated Clemson 77-72, No. 3 Virginia downed Wake Forest 69-66, No. 4 DePaul outclassed St. Louis 99-80, No. 13 Alabama beat Auburn 67-65, Oklahoma upset No. 14 Kansas State 56-53, No. 15 Tennessee nipped Georgia 66-64 and No. 20 Villanova walloped LaSalle 117-82.

The Top Ten

Ricky Frazier collected 21 points and four other Missouri players scored in double figures as the Tigers defeated Iowa State. The Tigers, playing their first game since taking over the No.1 spot, improved their record to 17-0 for the season and 6-0 in the Big Eight. Iowa State was led Ron Harris' 20 points.

"Our players didn't react any differently," said Missouri Coach Norman Stewart of the No. 1 ranking. "It was great the way our players came out on to the court very loose and it showed in the way we shot the ball. I thought we played better in the first half than in our last two to three games."

Shipp Resigns As SHS Coach

Winfred Shipp, a coach at Snyder High School for almost seven years, submitted his resignation earlier this week to enter private business here.

Shipp came to Snyder in 1975 as boys track coach and held that position until the 1981-82 school year. He also served as junior varsity football coach.

Snyder boys track team won several district, regional and state honors with Shipp at the helm, and during the period of 1978-79 and 79-80 sent five athletes to Austin. In 1979-80 Shipp had two individuals win state titles.

Several of his former students are now competing in college track programs.

Shipp was relieved of his position this school year when a new coaching staff was hired. He coached freshmen sports until his resignation and was to be varsity assistant baseball coach.

Coach Albert Lewis, head baseball coach and a junior varsity football coach for several years along with Shipp, commented, "We are going to miss his help this year. I was really looking forward to having him with the baseball team. He's an excellent coach. He told me this opportunity was just too good to pass up."

It was not known when an assistant baseball coach would be named to replace him.

Cats Entertain Pecos Friday

Coach Larry Scott's Tigers hope to find the end to a losing streak that has all but knocked them out of the District 2-AAAA race Friday night as they entertain Pecos High School at 8 in the coliseum.

Snyder, 18-7 for the season, dropped its last three conference games to take second place in the first-half of loop competition and go 0-2 in the beginning of the second round.

Meanwhile, Pecos hopes to extend its 1-0 second-round start and work its way into the playoff picture. The Eagles, who come off a 62-52 nonconference victory over Van Horn, are 10-12 for the season.

At least one starter for each team is expected to be missing from Friday's game. Pecos lost Bobby Jenkins for the season recently to a broken leg, and Snyder's Riley Kitchens may still be out with a sprained ankle. Kitchens missed Tuesday's game with Lamesa.

On the road, Coach Ken Housden is looking for his Felines to extend their 3-1 second-round start with a win at Pecos. That game will also be held at 8.

Snyder's girls are in the 2-AAAA race, but need some outside help to wind up in the playoffs. Andrews' girls, winners of the first-half, must lose two games before the doors would be opened for the Felines to make their attack on a title.

Both games will be preceded by junior varsity contests at 6:15.

Tonight In Coliseum...

Westerners Ready For NMMI

By BILL McCLELLAN

It's time to turn the tables, or at least that's the plan, and Coach Larry Dunaway's Westerns want to start tonight at 8 o'clock against New Mexico Military Institute.

What the Westerners intend to do is turn the narrow losses that produced a first-half 2-7 conference record around and hopefully contend for a regional playoff berth.

But it won't be easy.

"Their starting lineup is about as good as any of the top two or three teams in this league," said Dunaway of the Broncos, who are also 2-7 in conference play. "The problem they have is depth. They have a very, very good starting lineup but they've gotten in trouble when one or two of those guys come off the floor."

NMMI is led by a trio of big men, including 6-8 Leroy Paris, who leads the conference in blocked shots and averages 7.8 rebounds a game. The rest of the front line is made up of a pair of 6-6 leapers, J.C. Baty and Mark Walker. Walker led the conference in rebounding earlier in the season and is currently averaging 9.5 a game. Baty, who leads the team in shooting at an 18.4 per-game clip, averages 8 boards.

In addition, the Broncos can boast of an 89-74 victory over WTC earlier this season.

"I think their press was what affected us more than anything last time," said Dunaway. "The score is misleading because it was a close game until the final minutes. We missed seven one-and-one situations and they converted them. As a result, the final score looked pretty bad.

"At that time we were playing with one (ball-handling) guard, Jerrold Whitmore. Other teams would try to force our other players to handle the ball, and it worked," he added. "But we've got Daryl (Hunt) now and Clarence Cephas played real well the other night against South Plains when Jerrold and Daryl fouled out. So I think our kids are going to approach the game with a lot more confidence this time."

And despite NMMI's height, Western hopes to do well on the boards, noted the coach.

"In spite of our small size we've only been outrebounded a few times this year," Dunaway said. "Even at South Plains, as big as they are (6-9, 6-8, 6-6) we outrebounded them by six boards. South Plains just had an extraordinary shooting night. They shot 58 percent for the game and that's good in anybody's book. I think if we can do as good a job on the boards against the Military as we did against South Plains we'll win the ballgame."

Dunaway is excited about the matchup.

"We're looking forward to playing them. We can't continue to play as well as we've played since the New Mexico Junior College game and keep losing. That (NMJC) was really the only poor game we've played in conference play other than against the Military, and all of that took place in the last few minutes. I think our kids are ready to get after them. We're playing better and better and they know if they just keep in there things are going to turn around for them."

NMMI comes into the contest with a 9-13 season record, while Western Texas is 10-12.

Pittsburgh allowed only 62.4 yards by rushing in 1981, the best mark in the country.

Register Now For Judo Class

Community residents interested in participating in judo are invited to register for classes now beginning at Western Texas College.

Fees will be $35 per person for the non-credit classes, which will run through the spring semester. Classes meet from 6:30-8 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays and are open to youngsters and adults.

Students may register at 6:30 Monday through Thursday in the judo room of the H-PE Building on the east end of the campus.

Aikido Offered On WTC Campus

Registration for aikido will be held Monday and Wednesday nights at Western Texas College, Dr. Shel Hillis, instructor, has announced.

Aikido is an excellent form of self defense for both men and women, according to Dr. Hillis, who holds the second degree Black Belt in aikido as well as the third degree Black Belt in judo. Eddie McDaniel, who will be assisting with aikido instruction, holds the first degree Black Belt in aikido.

Students are to register at 7 p.m. Monday or Wednesday in the exercise room of the H-PE Building at the east end of the campus. Classes are scheduled Monday nights from 7 to 8:30. Students may also work out Wednesday nights.

Fees are $35 per person. No special clothing is required. Persons wishing additional information are invited to contact Dr. Hillis.

Burglary Suspects Are Arrested Here

Snyder police officers arrested three suspects in a month old burglary case around 9:50 p.m. Wednesday.

A 23 year-old man, a 30 year-old man and a 15 year-old woman were arrested in connection with a burglary of the L. B. Wood residence this past Dec. 24. Police recovered a guitar and a bedspread taken in the incident.

Formal charges are expected to be filed against the trio sometime today.

Local police are also investigating a criminal mischeif complaint reported Wednesday night.

Steve Ortiz, an employee of Gill's Fried Chicken, told officers that someone had slashed the tires on his 1979 Chevrolet while he was at work between 5 and 9 p.m. Wednesday. Value of the tires was set at $400.

Snyder police also investigated two minor traffic mishaps Wednesday afternoon.

The first mishap occurred around 1:40 p.m. Wednesday in the 3000 block of College Avenue. Involved in the accident were a 1980 Toyota driven by Dru Ellen Thompson, Box 88, Snyder and a parked 1978 Chevrolet owned by Benny Weaver of 221 34th St.

Only minor damages were reported to both vehicles.

Around 1:50 p.m. police were called to the scene of a minor hit and run accident in the 400 block of 30th St. According to reports, a utility pole owned by Texas Electric Service Company was struck by a vehicle which left the scene of the mishap. This incident was reported to have occurred between 9 p.m. and 11 p.m. Tuesday.

Local police officers also arrested one man on charges of public intoxication Wednesday evening.

Merit Taste Unbeaten!

MERIT low tar/good taste combination continues as proven winner over leading higher tar brands.

One low tar cigarette continues to challenge higher tar smoking—and win.

Latest research offers new evidence confirming MERIT as the proven taste alternative to higher tar smoking.

Higher Tars Meet Taste Match.

In impartial new tests where brand identity was concealed, the overwhelming majority of smokers reported MERIT taste equal to—or better than—leading higher tar brands.

Moreover, when tar levels were revealed, 2 out of 3 chose the MERIT combination of low tar and good taste.

Taste Smokers Turning To MERIT.

In a second part of the same study, smokers confirm that MERIT taste is a major factor in completing their successful switch from higher tar brands.

Confirmed: 9 out of 10 former higher tar smokers report MERIT is an easy switch, that they didn't give up taste in switching, and that MERIT is the best-tasting low tar they've ever tried.

Year after year, in study after study, MERIT remains unbeaten. The proven taste alternative to higher tar smoking—is MERIT.
