Passing Years Make Changes In Hart's 'Oldest Business'

Passing years have brought about many changes and today there is little similarity between Cox Shamrock Service and Auto Parts and the small "filling station" begun a half-century ago by the late T. B. Cox.

Hart's oldest business reaches out today to encompass the third generation as Claude's sons, Steve, Mike and Larry, have grown into the tasks at the family farm and the store.

Bird Cox came to Hart in 1923 and opened his first service station in 1926 when there were only two other businesses in town. Site of that station, begun before the town was even platted, was east of the present location.

Cox married the former Bessie Mae Newman of the Valley View Community in 1929 and gained a bookkeeper as well as helpmate. From the original location, Cox operated a wholesale gas business at the site of the present City Hall and, in 1923, moved to the company's present location. He gave that lot to the city for the site of the city hall and fire station.

In 1940, T.B. and Bessie Mae entered the butane business, the first butane dealer in Castro County. Claude remem-

Mrs. Cynthia Grogan of Lubbock, Miss Darla Underwood of Dimmitt and Mr. and Mrs. Michael Winward were employed as faculty members for 1973-74. Mrs. Grogan will teach elementary music with

'Hart Day' Meet Set

Preparations are beginning for activities of the annual Hart Day Celebration which has been slated for Saturday, Aug. 11. Bob Reed has been named coordinator for the affair.

A planning meeting is slated for 8:30 p.m. Monday, July 16 in the Community Room of Farmers State Bank. Reed urges all organizations and businesses to be represented by a designated person. All other interested persons are urged to attend.

Last year's Hart Day was termed a "big success" but an even better celebration can be had this year if everyone works together to promote the affair, one spokesman said.

Reed stated that the Lions Club would again be sponsoring their annual carnival in connection with the celebration with activities expected to begin Thursday.

Brown Recluse Spider Bites Mrs. Warren Lemons

Hart residents are urged to be watchful for the possibility of finding the sometimes deadly Brown Recluse spider in their homes or about their property.

Mrs. Warren Lemons reports she feels "better each day" as she recuperates from the bite of a Brown Recluse June 20.

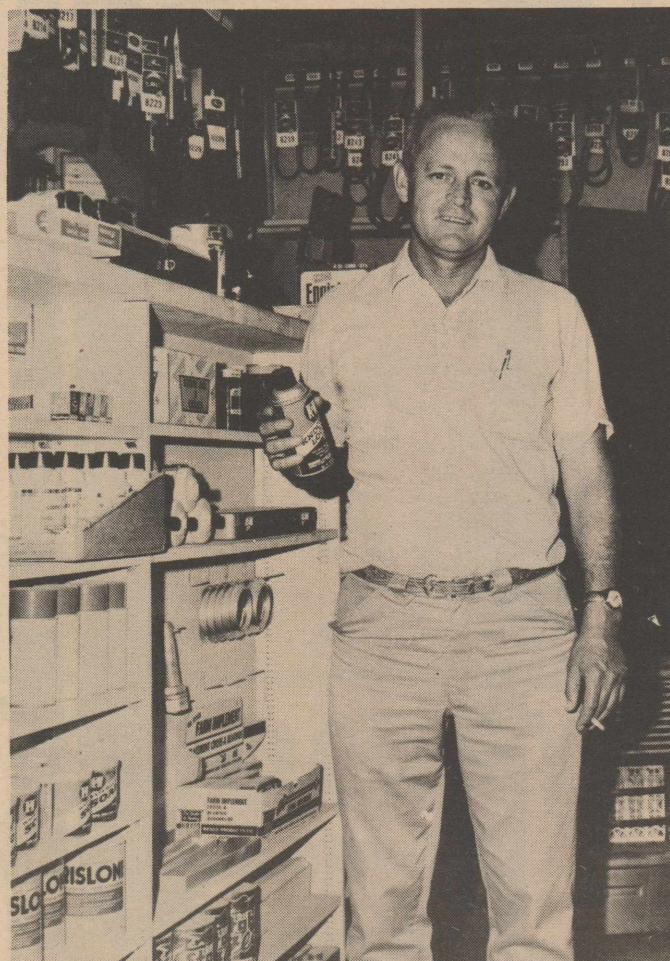

Bitten on the leg, Mrs. Lemons was unaware of the bite until she began to have pain in her legs and back. The area about the bite had begun swelling when she realized she had received a bite.

Mrs. Lemons did not go to a doctor for several days but began taking large doses of vitamins, especially vitamin C, because she had read that advice.

Continued pain with fever and chills forced Mrs. Lemons to see a doctor. Diagnosed as the victim of a Recluse bite, she was given shots to counteract the spider's poison.

The Lemons' had a profes-

Editorials

Put yourself in this position: You are a public official with the ultimate responsibility for assuring that a major metropolitan area in your jurisdiction gets enough electrical power.

This area is currently experiencing "brownouts" because the generating capacity of the existing power plants is insufficient. Since demand is still growing, it seems only a matter of time before there is a massive and total power failure.

Obviously, new generating facilities must be built. But where? Unfortunately, the city also has a severe air pollution problem. And present technology does not permit a 100% cleanup of the stack emissions from a fossil-fueled power plant. Worse still, the "cleanest" fossil fuels -- such as natural gas -- are becoming too scarce for heavy industrial use. And for a variety of reasons, an atomic power plant is not suitable in air quality.

Well, since electrical power can be transported with relative ease, why not put the new power plant away from the city, somewhere where its emissions will be harmlessly dissipated?

That would seem to be the reasonable course of action, but thanks to a June 11 Supreme Court decision, it is not a legal course of act.

The Supreme Court, in a four-four tie, upheld a lower court ruling (known as the "Pratt decision") which forbids any significant degradation of air quality anywhere in the U. S., even if the resulting air quality would still meet the strict standards established by the Environmental Protection Agency for the protection of health and property.

The decision is an interpretation of the Clean Air Act, that Pandora's Box of ill-considered regulations that Congress passed in great haste to demonstrate its fashionable concern for the environment.

Just a big city problem? By no means! Rural areas that want to attract industry to provide jobs and a higher standard of living for their people will now find that they cannot, thanks to this ruling.

Industrialists who want to build new production facilities may find that now they cannot build them in the city OR in the country. That guarantees the continuation of shortages of many products, which, in turn, contributes to inflation. And inflation affects us all, city or country.

Rural areas could hardly be blamed for refusing to accept the pollution problems of their urban neighbors. But that is not what is at issue here. In most cases, the cities have problems primarily because of the concentration of factories, power plants and vehicles in a relatively small area. If these pollution sources were spread over a much larger area, there would be no problem.

So what is involved is not the shift of a problem from the city to the country, but rather, a means of eliminating (or reducing) the problem.

We have made encouraging progress against pollution -- especially air pollution. Much remains to be done. We must continue to reduce pollution just as rapidly as evolving technology brings the cost of abatement within reach. But irresponsible "crash" programs that may deprive millions of heat, light, power and jobs, while stimulating inflation and complicating urban air pollution, are clearly not the answer.

Congress needs to clean up the Clean Air Act -- and the sooner the better. The energy crisis is getting too close for comfort.

Castro County Corn Crop Is 1972 Tops In Texas

Castro County was the top producer of corn in Texas in 1972, according to the most recent crop statistics, Agriculture Commissioner John C. White has announced.

Over 5 million bushels of corn for grain were harvested in Castro County, almost 4 million less than in 1971. The total production value of corn for grain in 1972 was $58,549,000, Commissioner White reported. Other leading West Texas Counties with high yields in corn were Parmer with over 4 million bushel; Mooree, 2,821,000; Lamb 2,711,000, and Sherman, 1,973,000 tons.

Iowa still leads the nation in corn production, Commissioner White stated. "But we are first in the grain sorghum market, and West Texas is the largest producer of grain sorghum."

Castro was seventh in the state in grain sorghum production with 9,592,000 bushels, and second in sugarbeets with 173,000 tons.

Varnished surfaces may be cleaned and polished with 3 tablespoons boiled linseed oil, 1 quart hot water and 1 tablespoon turpentine. Wring a clean cloth out of this mixture; wash the surface and wipe dry. Polish dry with soft clean cloth. Protect neighboring surfaces from the solution.

To clean marble or tile remove acid stains with household ammonia, baking soda or borax. If acid has roughened the surface, rub the spot with pumice stone and water. Polish with a soft cloth.

Scour badly abused aluminum vessels with whiting and soap jelly. Use very fine steel wool on aluminum.

Brighten discolored aluminum pans by boiling one of the following solutions in it until the discoloration disappears:

a) 1 tablespoon vinegar to 1 quart water.

b) 2 teaspoons Cream of Tartar to 1 quart water.

Brass and copper can be cleaned with a paste of 1 pint of neutral soap jelly, 1 cup whiting, 1 teaspoon ammonia. Add whiting and ammonia to soap jelly before it congeals and beat together. After using the paste, always wash articles in hot suds, rinse, and dry thoroughly.

Tarnished copper can also be cleaned with salt dissolved in hot vinegar or with lemon rind.

Antique finish brass can be polished with boiled linseed oil or lemon oil.

Here are four interesting silver polishes.

a) 1 cup boiling water, 1 sheet aluminum foil, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon baking soda. Add salt, soda and aluminum foil to boiling water. Put the silver in the boiling water so that each piece touches the foil or comes in contact with a piece of silver that touches it. Boil 2 to 4 minutes. Wash in hot sudsy water, rinse and dry. (Make enough of the solution so that the silver is completely covered.)

b) Add 1 part ammonia or castor oil to 3 parts whiting to make a paste. Apply with cloth to silver in hot soapy water, rinse and dry.

c) 1 teaspoon ammonia (or denatured alcohol). Add to 1/4 cup soap jelly-whiting mixture. Rub the paste over silver. When tarnish is removed, wash in suds, rinse and dry.

d) 1 cup boiling water, 1 1/2 cups whiting, 1/4 cup soap flakes; heat soap flakes in water until dissolved. Remove from heat and add whiting. Stir until a smooth paste. Use as any other silver polish.

Armed with these recipes and the ones last week you can save your family several dollars monthly by making your own home cleaners. I'd like a report from those who try these recipes. Also, if any of you have good home cleaners, I'd like to have your recipes if you're willing to share it.

Hill Enters Chester White Exhibition

Bill Hill, Chester White breeder from Hart, has entered two boars and three gilts in competition at the second annual National Chester White Summer Spotlight, scheduled for July 12, 13, and 14 at the Indiana State Fairgrounds, Indianapolis.

Competition at this second annual national event promises to be strong, according to Larry L. Rus, executive secretary of Chester White Swine Record sponsor of this swine conference.

A total of 97 top Chester White breeders from 18 states have entered over 370 head of breeding animals and 130 market hogs for this annual show and sale. "We've had tremendous interest in our second annual Summer Spotlight, with exhibitors coming from as far away as Pennsylvania and Idaho," states Rus.

Breeding animal show activities begin at 8:00 a.m. Friday, July 13, with John Larick, a purebred swine breeder from Austin, Minnesota, doing the judging of the six classes of boars and gilts.

Mrs. Lemons said that her doctor said persons who are bitten or suspect they have been bitten should seek a doctor's service immediately, within the hour if possible. The area should also be treated with ice packs until a doctor can be contacted.

Wheat Yields 'Best In Years'

Wheat fields yielded "bumper" turn-outs for area farmers who have just completed gathering the golden grains.

Spokesmen for Farmers Grain reported "more wheat weighed on the company's scales than any other year" they could recall.

Probably 98 percent of the wheat was grown on irrigated land, with most fields averaging 40 bushels or more.

"Even though a bad experience didn't teach us one thing, we can at least be thankful that we recovered from it."

He may dress differently or drive his truck more often than his car, but the American farmer is a businessman. He's both management and labor. He knows no eight-hour days, five-day weeks or overtime pay. And he can't strike for higher wages.

bers that butane tanks just weren't available during World War II but as the war came to an end, his dad bought tanks "from everywhere."

The Coxes hauled their first load of butane, only the second load sold by the refinery at Dumas, in May, 1941. Waiting first in line, T.B. became the second customer because of a dealer who rudely and aggressively crowded into the line's lead.

In those early days, they hauled fuel from the refinery in bob tail trucks, making two trips per day. Along in 1943-44, their fuel was hauled by transports from Plainview and in 1949, they bought their own transport trucks.

Bessie Mae also remembers those busy early days, when she became hauler and T.B. would deliver orders to their customers.

Claude helped his dad at the station, Bessie Mae recalls, when he was still so young that he had to stand on a pop box to be able to check oil for the station's customers. He and his dad became partners in 1954. Following his dad's death in December, 1966, Bessie Mae took over partnership with her son until 1970 and is still "right there" when Claude needs help.

Claude and Irene have four children. Roni and Steve are students at West Texas State University. Roni, who is going to summer school, is presently working with little girls who want to become cheerleaders. Roni was cheerleader at HHS three years; the latter two as head cheerleader. Steve is spending his summer farming for his dad.

Mike and Larry, junior and sophomore at HHS, help out wherever dad needs them.

Claude recalls vividly the gas rationing in the 40's and the quantity sales when gas became available. Customers would bring their barrels to be filled and Claude remembers well the wearying work of the old hand pumps.

"By middle afternoon, I was so tired I wanted to tell them, 'Fill it up yourself,'" he says.

The present building was erected in 1946 and the Coxes took on anhydrous ammonia in 1951, becoming the first fertilizer dealers in Hart.

In the mid 50's, they added auto parts. In 1960, they built the service station across the street west which Claude operated for about five years. It has been leased since that time. In 1962, the business added wholesale gas and diesel to their lines.

Regular hours were unheard of in the business' infancy years. Bessie Mae recalls her husband began work at dawn and worked long past dusk.

"As long as you could see the lights of a car coming in the distance, we'd stay open. And we'd hope if they had a flat, it would be before they reached Hart or while they were near us," she remembers. Cost of fixing flats "the hard way" was a quarter.

Bessie Mae would prepare her husband's dinner and supper and take both meals to the station each day.

She remembers well, too, the one night when T. B. closed up the station and set the case holding the business' receipts on the ground beside a gas pump while he tended some last minute detail. The next morning when they drove up to the station, T. B. first realized it had been left by the pump all night.

In pre-bank days, she recalls, the cash box held an unusual amount because a customer had settled up for his months-old bill.

T. B. help organize Farmers State Bank and served as a member of the board of directors until his death. He was also one of Hart' first city councilmen.

From memories of an era when gas was rationed, Claude faces the uncertainty of other fuel merchants with the current fuel shortage. Locally, he says, it has not been a critical situation.

"So far we've had all we needed. Our biggest problem," he says, "is trucks to get it here."
