Clinton at AARP

SAN ANTONIO — Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton called on the American Association of Retired Persons on Thursday to look past its traditional agenda and support a new national commitment to health care and educational opportunity for children. "The country I want to lead will honor its obligations to people who have worked hard all their lives," the likely Democratic presidential nominee said in a speech at the AARP biennial convention./1B

Perot queries dog Bush

President blames plunge in polls on economy

■ Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater tries to put best face possible on lack of live network news coverage.

By Matt Quinn
Reporter-Telegram Washington bureau

WASHINGTON — President Bush, appearing at a news conference, resisted repeated attempts to draw him into discussing independent Ross Perot, and instead portrayed himself as busy leading the country out of its troubles.

"We're dealing in a funny time here — time warp," the president said as he explained that he would ultimately prevail in his re-election campaign. "We're talking about something big: faith and confidence in the American people."

Bush's formal 40-minute news conference was only the second time in his presidency he has held such a session during the evening hours of prime-time television.

But the three commercial television networks declined to broadcast the session live, leaving Cable News Network as the only television outlet to beam the president's remarks.

Bush began by reading a statement that urged Congress to enact a constitutional amendment that would require a balanced budget and force the federal government "to live within its means."

But the questions soon turned to Texas billionaire Ross Perot, who is on the verge of launching an independent presidential candidacy, and to Bush's own plunge in the public opinion surveys, "these deadly polls," as the president called them.

Said Bush: "I think most people would concede that my problems stem from this sluggish anemic economy. I think you can trace those problems to getting bigger

White House rebuffs Reilly on Rio treaty

■ Administration aides reject efforts to change U.S. position on environmental proposals.

By Keith Schneider
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Declaring that the Bush administration's refusal to sign a pending treaty on protecting animals and plants was the focus of international criticism, the chief American negotiator at the Earth Summit in Rio de Janeiro made a last-minute appeal to the White House late Wednesday night to reverse its position.

But the negotiator, Environmental Protection Agency Administrator William K. Reilly, was firmly rebuffed Thursday by top aides to President Bush, who rejected any effort to change the American position.

This was another in a series of rebukes by the White House to environmental proposals favored by Reilly, who heads the U.S. delegation to the Rio summit, formally called the U.N. Conference on Environment and Development.

In his confidential memorandum sent to the White House, Reilly said the administration's announcement last Friday that it would not sign the treaty "is the Judicial skirmish threatens city's district nominee

By Dan Freedman

WASHINGTON — Time may be running out for a significant but little-understood legacy of the Reagan-Bush era — the conservative remaking of the federal judiciary.

With 22 weeks remaining before Election Day, the Democratic-dominated Senate Judiciary Committee quietly is holding back consideration of controversial Bush administration nominees for federal court judgeships.

Democrats on Capitol Hill are betting that whoever wins on Nov. 10, it won't be George Bush.

KMB wins its third $100,000 award

Staff report

Keep Midland Beautiful on Thursday got its third $100,000 grant from the state for road beautification.

Keep Texas Beautiful awarded the agency the grant, funded by the Texas Department of Transportation. It will be used to improve an area of state highway property.

KMB has won the award each time it has been eligible to do so.

"What's so exciting is, no one's ever won it three times," said Sharla Hotchkiss, executive director.

Ms. Hotchkiss credited the agency's volunteers and "one of the best boards of directors in Midland" for the victory.

"We are really so lucky," she said. "We have such great community support and we have the advantage of getting to work on projects that benefit the whole community. So many people help us from every area of the city."

No project has been chosen yet, although Ms. Hotchkiss said she will meet with highway department officials to discuss possibilities. Past grants have created two new parks — Volunteer Park on Big Spring Street and Achievement Park at Wall and Front streets.

Ms. Hotchkiss said Volunteer Park was "an exciting experiment" because the state's beautification program was new. KMB won the grant for that project in 1986.

To be considered for the award, KMB submitted more than 100 pages of documentation about past projects and community services.

Ms. Hotchkiss said they submit similar packages every year, although communities are only eligible every three years.

Movement grows against 'legaldegook'

By Maria Odum
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Why does a Georgia state court subpoena warn: "Herein fail not on pain of $300"?

Why can't it simply say: "If you do not appear in court, you will be fined $300"?

This example illustrates why the average person finds reading legal documents a nightmarish journey into a foreign land without a translator.

Whether it appears in a judge's opinion, a state statute or a bill of sale, the obscure language known as legalese, or "legaldegook," can run the gamut from the abstract to the absurd, the hazy to the horrendous.

"A lot of poor legal writing is driven by fear — fear of departing from the way things were done before," said Bryan Garner, a Dallas lawyer and author of a style book on legal writing and a dictionary of legal terms. "So we perpetuate preposterous ways of saying things."

There is a growing movement in the legal profession to promote the use of plain English, a movement whose advocates wish to strip legal language of jargon, archaisms and tortuous syntax and to replace them with clearer, simpler wording.

Movement supporters, including many legal organizations, have been conducting seminars, developing new forms and documents, preparing videotapes and writing books and articles in bar journals.

Study: Mainline churches irrelevant for 'boomers'

NEW YORK (AP) — The "lost generation" of baby boomers who left mainline Protestantism in the 1970s and '80s is not coming back, and their churches will exert even less of a hold on their children, according to a major new study.

The researchers who recently completed the study say many in that generation are not turned off by religion, just indifferent to churches that do not stand out from the surrounding culture.

The lack of commitment by hundreds of thousands of young people toward mainline Protestantism has little to do with many of the reasons usually cited — cults, fundamentalist churches, the rebelliousness of the '60s, or liberal social policies within the denomination, the researchers said.

"It's just that the church doesn't do anything for them,"

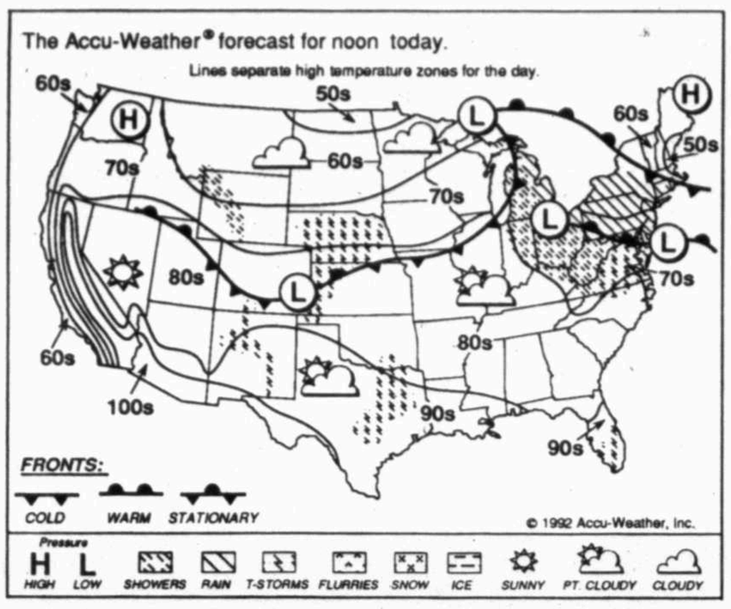
WEATHER SUMMARY



90s, chance of rain on tap

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies, a 20 percent chance of rain, a high in the mid-90s and southerly winds at 10 to 20 mph. Tonight should be partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of rain and lows in the mid-60s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Saturday should be fair with a high in the upper 90s.

After an overnight low of 61, Thursday's high reached 91 compared to the record high for that date of 103 set in 1933. The record low for that date is 54 set in 1970.

STATE

Texas was partly cloudy and warm Thursday as northerly winds kept temperatures from getting too high across much of the state.

High readings ranged from the upper 70s in the north to the upper 90s in the south.

A moist and unstable air mass blanketed West Texas and a weak stationary cold front stretched across the northern Panhandle in advance of an upper level disturbance. Those factors were the focus of thunderstorm development.

The forecast for North Texas was for scattered thunderstorms through Saturday. Otherwise, partly cloudy with warm days and mild nights. Highs today and Saturday were to be in the mid- to upper 80s in the east to lower 90s in the west. Lows were to be in the lower to mid-60s.

West Texas was expected to be partly cloudy today and tonight with scattered thunderstorms in the Panhandle and South Plains. Highs today were to range from the upper 80s in the north to near 100 in the Big Bend. Lows today night were expected from near 60 in the Panhandle to near 70 in the south except lower 50s in the mountains.

Forecasters said South Texas would have partly cloudy skies with warm afternoons and mild at night. A slight chance of afternoon and evening showers and thunderstorms was predicted. Highs were to be from the 90s to near 100 in the west and south. Lows were to be from near 70 in the north to near 80 in the south.

NATION

Rain fell on the mid- and south-Atlantic states Thursday, causing fears of flooding in parts of Virginia. Much of the rest of the nation was sunny, although strong winds kept temperatures cool in parts of the northern Plains.

The weather was particularly warm in the Southwest, Southeast and Florida, where overnight lows were often in the 70s, and in some instances the 80s.

A warm front curving through Tennessee and South Carolina brought heavy thunderstorms to those areas, as well as North Carolina and Virginia.

Showers also were scattered across the Ohio Valley and central and eastern Gulf coast states.

Thunderstorms were particularly strong over the Carolinas and Virginia, with a chance of flooding forecast for Virginia's foothills and Shenandoah Valley by Friday morning. Flooding was also possible in North Carolina's northern mountains, the National Weather Service said.

Nearly an inch and a half of rain fell on Roanoke, Va., during a six-hour period ending at 1 p.m. CDT Thursday. Nearly an inch fell at Asheville, N.C., during the same period, while .87 of an inch was recorded at Wilmington, N.C. Eight-tenths of an inch fell at Greer, S.C.

Dry weather prevailed across the rest of the nation, with sunny skies over much of New England and the area west of the Rocky Mountains.

But strong west to northwest winds kept afternoon temperatures in the 50s and 60s in much of Montana, Minnesota and northern Iowa.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

A story appearing in Thursday's Reporter-Telegram on a string of dress-shop burglaries quoted Vicki Bailey, owner of Julian Gold Inc., saying, "I think this can only hurt the Realtors in Midland. I don't think the public needs to know anything about this."

On Thursday, Ms. Bailey said she meant to say, "I think this can only hurt the retailers in Midland."

Local Fox Broadcasting Co. affiliate KPEJ-TV will be part of the basic service offered Dimension Cable customers beginning June 28. The station inadvertently was left out of the list of network affiliates in the story on cable changes that ran Thursday. As part of the restructuring, KPEJ will move from cable channel 14 to cable channel 5.

REBUFFS: White House rejects negotiator's bid

major subject of press and delegate concern here." The memorandum was made available to The New York Times by an official opposed to Reilly's position.

But hours after Reilly proposed treaty changes in the memorandum and then announced some aspects of the plan at a news conference in Rio on Thursday morning, White House Chief of Staff Samuel K. Skinner and Bush's domestic policy chief, Clayton Yeutter, rejected the idea.

"The modifications were minor and it was communicated to Reilly that this doesn't come close to fitting the bill," said a senior White House official who asked to remain unidentified. "Clayton called him and said. 'No way.' The feeling here is that he was trying to present an option and that's his role. We'll just have to give him more guidance."

Reilly's action and the White House reaction reflect not only the enormous strains that exist in the Bush administration over environmental policy, but also the personal pressure Reilly is under in Rio as the United States is increasingly denounced as having abandoned its role as the world's most environmentally concerned country.

In an interview in Rio on Thursday, Reilly was visibly upset when informed that someone in the administration had leaked his memorandum, which was stamped confidential.

The brief interview ended abruptly when Reilly was shown the memorandum. He said, "I think I've said enough," and walked out of the room.

At home, Reilly has lost almost every major internal battle he has fought in the last 10 months that pits environmental initiatives against economic growth.

Beginning last summer, Reilly fought unsuccessfully to block a proposal by Vice President Dan Quayle that would open half the nation's wetlands to development.

He has been unable to speed new regulations required by the 1990 Clean Air Act that have been delayed by the President's Council on Competitiveness headed by Quayle, and last week he lost another struggle when Bush personally took Quayle's side and allowed companies to increase air pollution without public comment.

In Rio, he is defending policies he does not eagerly support. The treaty to preserve biodiversity, which was the product of intense negotiations in Nairobi last month, is considered one of the two main achievements of the Rio conference.

The State Department announced last Friday that Bush would not sign the treaty because of the administration's concern that it would limit biotechnology development in the United States and could infringe on American patent protection for biological inventions.

It also said the administration was concerned about how money for the plan would be dispersed.

Brazil, however, has been eager for the United States to sign the treaty because of the prestige that would add to the conference.

On Tuesday, representatives of Germany, Canada, Britain and India indicated that their nations would sign the treaty, joining 98 other countries that had already announced their intentions to approve it.

In the memorandum to Yeutter, Reilly said that Brazil had offered to try to "fix" the biodiversity treaty so that the United States would support it.

Reilly said he proposed "relatively small fixes of language, the removal of some small, troublesome clauses that create anxieties about intellectual property rights, technology transfer, concessional terms."

LEGALESE: Many promote use of plain English

(From 1A)

The effort, which is rooted in the consumer-oriented movement of the 1970's to simplify the language of contracts, regulations and insurance policies, has also spread to Canada, England, Australia and other countries.

Legal language that mixes English, Latin and French dates from conquests of England by Rome in 43 A.D. and by the Normans in 1066. Beyond that, Garner said, "Lawyers didn't want their documents written in English because that would mean anyone — even unlearned people — would be able to practice law."

It eventually became so complicated that complaints about it can be found in the writings of Thomas Jefferson and Abraham Lincoln.

Jefferson once complained, for example, about statutes that "from their verbosity, their endless tautologies, their involutions of case within case and parenthesis within parenthesis" are "rendered more perplexed and incomprehensible, not only to common readers, but to the lawyers themselves."

Some of the legal writing quirks found in form books, which are basically collections of model legal documents, can be traced to centuries-old mistakes.

For example, scholars and judges for centuries puzzled over the origin of the abbreviation "ss.," which commonly appears at the top of affidavits. "It is actually the ancient form of paragraph marks that crept into 18th century form books by mistake," said Mr. Garner, who teaches at Southern Methodist University's law school.

He also cited a mistake by a 19th century form book writer who read the term "witnesseth" as the imperative form of the verb rather than the third person singular. "It has been misused for years as well," he said.

Legal scholars say such language is perpetuated mainly because many lawyers catch the legalese bug in law school and cannot seem to shake it.

The scholars offer various reasons, some of them cynical or apologetic and others quite plausible, to explain why men and women of the law cling to writing that other people need a jackhammer to crack.

"It maintains the mysterious hocus-pocus of the law," said Joseph Kimble, who teaches legal writing at Thomas M. Cooley Law School in Lansing, Mich. "Also, there is an overwhelming influence of poor models. Lawyers read appellate court opinions day in and day out, most of which are not well written. And to draft documents, many lawyers often turn to form books, most of which are full of legalese."

To be sure, experts say, lawyers often impregnate their sentences with traditional, pompous wording, consciously echoing previous litigation in hopes of benefiting from a certain clause's interpretation.

"It's almost like a security blanket," said a Georgia Supreme Court Justice, Leah Sears-Collins, who has published several articles and lectures in favor of plain English. "You know that if you use a certain word, there's comfort in that word because it's tried and true and it has been used over and over again."

Also, they say that legal documents are often wordy because lawyers try to account for every possible contingency. Though there is some disagreement on this point, the underlying assumption is that legalese is more precise than plain words.

Another factor often cited is time. It takes more thought — and thus more time — to write in clear, discernable prose than to regurgitate jargon.

SKIRMISH: Judiciary panel quietly holds back

staff aides. And if a Supreme Court justice retires when the court closes for the summer, the Senate would not be likely to confirm a Bush administration replacement, they add.

That's bad news for controversial nominees such as Kenneth Carr of El Paso.

Carr, 50, is backed by Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, for a new judgeship in the district that covers San Antonio and Midland. Mexican-American groups and organized labor are opposing him.

The Garment Workers Center in El Paso, a non-profit organizing group, claims that in representing West Texas garment factory owners, Carr "used his legal skills to help ... corrupt and abusive employers avoid the most basic obligations of law and human decency."

Carr failed to respond to phone calls seeking comment.

Last week, the Judiciary Committee held hearings on four district court nominees — all non-controversial and all women. One, Sonia Sotomayor of New York, is Hispanic.

In placing these four at the head of the line, the committee apparently responded to complaints from liberal groups that few women and minorities are winning positions on the federal bench.

Pending in the committee are 57 Bush nominations. Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph R. Biden, D-Del., denies there has been a slow-down. In a Jan. 26 letter to U.S. district court chief judges concerned about courtroom delays, Biden said he is "committed to moving judicial nominations as expeditiously as is possible."

Biden wrote that the Bush administration is too slow in nominating judges to fill new judgeships created by Congress. While the number of federal judgeships increased 23 percent since 1981 (from 672 to 829), the administration has 51 positions for which it has failed to submit nominees.

Alan Slobodin of the Washington Legal Foundation, a conservative think tank that pays attention to judicial nominations, agreed that the Bush administration has fumbled. "If George Bush is not re-elected, he will have missed an opportunity to make more of an impact on the courts," he said.

CHURCHES: 'Lost generation' is not coming back said Benton Johnson, a sociology professor at the University of Oregon.

But John Mulder, president of Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary, cautioned churches not to write off baby boomers who are still seeking some way of making sense of evil, suffering and injustice.

"It may be that the jury is still out on whether they return to church ... when children come along and when they face life crises with the onset of middle age," Mulder said.

The study was conducted in 1989 and 1990 by Johnson, Dean Hoge, a Presbyterian layman and sociology professor at Catholic University, and Donald Luidens, an associate professor of sociology at Hope College in Holland, Mich.

They interviewed 500 Presbyterians, ages 33 to 42, who were confirmed in Presbyterian churches in Pennsylvania, North Carolina, Michigan, Oregon and California in the 1950s and 1960s.

The researchers said the study, funded by the Lilly Endowment, was limited to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). But they believe the results could apply to other liberal Protestant denominations such as the United Church of Christ, United Methodist Church and Episcopal Church.

Mainline churches have lost millions of members in the past quarter century. The Presbyterian Church has declined from more than 4 million to less than 3 million, and the United Methodist Church has lost more than 2 million to drop to around 9 million members.

In the study, only 29 percent of the people interviewed who were confirmed in the church remained active Presbyterians, and 10 percent joined other mainline churches. Six percent became fundamentalists, and 7 percent joined other churches.

Forty-eight percent of the sample were classified as "unchurched," meaning they were either unaffiliated or attended church fewer than six times a year.

The researchers found the people they studied who left the church still believe the church has a valid role in promoting a "moral code" for society, and would like their children to have some form of religious education.

But the generations before the baby boomers did not provide compelling reasons to keep the faith, the researchers said.

"No outside power forcibly pulled their children away from the faith. No conquering army or hostile missionaries destroyed the tradition. They did it to themselves," the researchers say in a draft of their upcoming book, "Vanishing Boundaries: The Religion of Protestant Baby Boomers."

In a movement traced to the turn of the century, the liberal mainline churches have opened up to the surrounding culture, embracing critical scholarship of the Bible, openness toward other faiths and individual freedom of choice even at the cost of denominational commitment, the researchers said.

"The difference between Presbyterian Church culture and the larger white, upper middle class culture has almost vanished," Johnson said.

For many boomers, religious beliefs are a matter of individual choice because the age group was largely uninfluenced by such factors as World War II and the Cold War, which caused many to seek the comfort of traditional religion.

"It's very much reflective of a kind of relativism: 'This is what I believe, but you can believe what you want,'" Luidens said.

ELVIS: Americans reject his lounge lizard look

(From 1A)

"I keep pinching myself. It's hard to believe it's really happening," said Pat Geiger, who began fighting for a Presley stamp in 1983. Geiger voted for the older Elvis.

The portrait on the 29-cent, first class stamp was picked through a nationwide vote, the first ever to select Postal Service artwork. More than a million Elvis fans chose between the portraits. The winner was announced Thursday during live TV broadcasts on all three morning talk shows.

The vote, conducted by mail April 6-24, ended with the younger Elvis collecting 851,200 votes, three times as many as the mature Presley.

"When you think of Elvis, you don't think of him as some older person. You think of him as a young man," said record producer Sam Phillips, who discovered Presley.

The results were announced at Graceland, Presley's mansion where he died in 1977 at age 42. The estate draws more than 650,000 tourists a year. More than 200 fans gathered for the announcement under a large, white tent.

"Of all the awards and honors he has received ... this would probably be the most special for him," said Priscilla Presley, his former wife.

The stamp will come out Jan. 8, the 58th anniversary of Presley's birth. It will be part of a "Legends of American Music" series that will include seven other music figures yet to be selected. The first Elvis stamps will be single sheets of 40 stamps each.

Elvis fans have lobbied for years for a postage stamp bearing his picture. Critics objected, largely because of his much publicized abuse of prescription drugs.

"And a lot of people just don't like him. Elvis has been accused of all the ills of the world," said Geiger, a fan from North Springfield, Vt. "He had the audacity to put on weight. He had the audacity to die."

The Elvis portraits were commissioned by the Postal Service, which plans to spend $1 million producing and promoting the stamp. The stamp is expected to be a moneymaker since many will be held by collectors and fans.

"Our very rough estimate is we will probably have about a $20 million profit on this stamp," said Edward Horgan Jr., associate postmaster general.

The winning portrait, showing a fresh-faced Presley singing into a '50s-era microphone, was drawn by Mark Stutzman, an artist from Mountain Lake, Md. He said he worked on it for about a week.

"Everybody else was more confident it would win than I was," Stutzman said.

John C. Berkey, an artist in suburban Minneapolis, drew the bejeweled Elvis. He said he expected to lose, but objects to descriptions of his version as the "old" or "fat" Elvis.

BUSH: President acknowledges deep election-year problems with that."

Bush said he had gotten a call from a U.S. senator recently who asked "how I was holding up" under all the criticism. "I said, 'Hey, that goes with the job,' " he said.

"I'll do my best and I think things are going to turn around in that regard," Bush remarked.

Once the public realizes that an economic recovery is under way, Bush said, his political fortunes will improve.

"I think that come fall when we're out there taking our case to the American people with an improved economy behind us, I still feel confident about the outcome of the political election," he said.

But Bush expressed frustration with what he said was the finding of one poll that 70 percent of the public still believes the economy is getting worse.

Bush declined to directly criticize Perot, who is ahead of him and Democrat Bill Clinton in a number of polls. But he said he was "glad" that his spokesman Marlin Fitzwater and other supporters had turned up the rhetorical heat on Perot in recent days.

"I'm not going to do that myself," said Bush, promising to "join the fray" after the Republican National Convention in Houston this August. But he could not resist taking a swipe at Perot for opposing last year's Persian Gulf War.

Asked what he would say to Perot if he ran into him on the campaign trail, Bush said: "Ross, I think I've been a good president. I believe a man of your ability and talent ought to support me. And we've known each other for a long time and in my view it's been favorable."

Fitzwater sought to put the best face on the fact that the three commercial networks had declined to carry Thursday night's broadcast live, saying the White House "didn't expect" such coverage.

But Marvin Kalb, director of the Harvard University's Joan Shornstein Barone Center on Press, Politics and Public Policy, called the decision a "big slap in the face" for the White House.

"Every single one of Reagan's was covered. There was a respect for the power of the office and the man," said Kalb, a former NBC and CBS correspondent. "Now, they do not feel he any longer represents a sure-fire story. That's a significant decision. It is a news story."

Spokesmen for the three networks said that the decisions against broadcasting Bush's news conference were made on the journalistic merits.

NBC News President Michael Gartner said that the White House had failed to "demonstrate that the news value of his press conference outweighs its possible political content."

At one point Thursday night, Bush told an NBC News reporter plaintively, "I need your assistance in getting out the message now tonight loud and clear on what the president said about a balanced budget amendment."

Bush's news conference came at a time when the president was being left behind in the race for favorable news coverage by both Perot and Clinton.

A recent study by the Center for Media and Public Affairs of found that Clinton's coverage on CBS, NBC and ABC has been 59 percent positive since April while Perot's has been 64 percent positive. In contrast, Bush's coverage has been 16 percent positive.

Said Richard Noyes, an analyst at the center: "The only thing that has been newsworthy is that his campaign is falling apart and that he is getting beaten by the protest vote and Perot is beating him in the polls."

Victoria Clarke, spokesman for the Bush-Quayle campaign, said campaign officials are "frustrated at our inability to have more people hear the president's message."

Official: Perot likely to be included in debates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ross Perot is likely to be included in debates this fall with President Bush and Democrat Bill Clinton under standards adopted by a bipartisan commission, an official said Thursday.

"If you assume his level of support is sustained at the level it is now, it's fair to assume he'd meet the standards," said Janet Brown, executive director of the commission on presidential debates.

Brown said the commission will announce specific debate plans next week along with a "dragnet" of indicators designed to measure the strength of independent candidates and determine if they should participate.

Perot, a billionaire Texas business executive, is expected to announce his independent candidacy this summer.

President Bush, speaking at an evening news conference was asked whether he would include Perot in campaign debates this fall, and said, "I'm sure there will be debates and I will be ready to join the fray after the convention."

Brown said commission members will look at polling data, news coverage, state campaign organizations, state ballots and mathematical prospects for victory in determining the general visibility and viability of the candidates.

The four major television networks had proposed co-sponsoring a series of four studio debates in different cities, with no studio audience and their anchors as moderators.

But the co-sponsorship plan dissolved this week in disagreements between the networks and the commission, headed by former Republican national Chairman Frank Fahrenkopf and former Democratic national Chairman Paul Kirk. The commission even accused the networks of putting sports above politics.

The commission wants to hold the debates in public settings, pick its own moderators and have at least one debate on a Sunday night as opposed to the four weeknights suggested by the networks.

The panel also wants all the debates to start at 8 p.m. CDT. The networks had proposed an 7 p.m. start for the vice presidential debate due to "a conflict with a major sporting event," the presidents of CBS, CNN, ABC and NBC said in a June 3 letter to the commission.

The commission retorted by letter Thursday that "once every four years, debates which may decide the election of the president of the United States should take scheduling precedence over 'a major sporting event.' "

The event in question is a football game one of the networks is contractually obligated to carry, according to Lane Venardos, executive producer of special events at CBS.

He called the time issue "a red herring they are using as one of their reasons not to join us in co-sponsoring the debates."

"We don't see this as a standoff or an impasse or a controversy," Brown said of the end of the discussions. But she said co-sponsorship with the networks apparently isn't in the cards and "we're going forward with our plans."

Whether the networks cooperate or go their own way is still an open question.

"We await with interest what they end up proposing. In the meantime we are keeping our options open," said Bill Wheatley, director of political coverage at NBC.

Wheatley said the networks strongly believe the presidential debate format needs to be improved and "we intend to do everything within reason to see that that happens."

The networks also are concerned about whether the commission will be objective in deciding whether to let Perot participate. The standards will be made public next week.

"You have assured us, and we respect your assurances, that the major party affiliations of your board members will not affect your judgment on including a significant independent candidate," the network executives wrote in their June 3 letter.

Energy bill faces battle with opposing senators

By Bill Mintz
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — The objections of several senators are threatening the chances of passing the first major energy bill in more than a decade.

Many observers believe that both the Democratic leadership of Congress and President Bush want to see an energy bill enacted before Congress adjourns for the fall election campaigns.

While the energy bill contains few provisions to encourage production of domestic oil and gas, it was still expected to be one of the few major pieces of legislation enacted in 1992.

But aides say Senate leaders have privately conceded that so many senators object to the bill approved by the House last week that the leadership won't be able to take the legislation straight to a House-Senate conference committee without further action.

The Senate's rules allow a handful of senators — or sometimes only one — to prevent accelerated consideration of many measures. Without unanimous consent, the energy bill may have to go back to the Finance Committee and then the Senate floor, where senators will be able to offer amendments.

Senators are not required to publicly announce their objections, so it is difficult to determine how many have objected to the energy bill.

The Senate approved its version of the bill in February. That measure, S. 2166, was similar to the House bill, H.R. 776, in many respects, but it does not include any tax law changes.

The House bill includes several tax changes, including tax relief for independent oil and gas producers, incentives for the use of alternative fuels and tax breaks for employer-provided mass transit passes.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of the Finance Committee, has indicated his support for tax relief for the independents, but he might face an uphill battle to limit the debate in the Senate to energy taxes.

The U.S. Constitution states that all tax bills must originate in the House, so the House version of the energy bill could provide many senators with an opportunity to try to enact their pet tax law changes.

The tax law provisions aren't the only potential stumbling blocks for the energy bill.

Nevada's senators already have threatened to filibuster the House bill over provisions designed to accelerate development of a high-level nuclear waste facility at Yucca Mountain, said Jim Mulhall, press secretary for Sen. Richard Bryan, D- Nev.

The House bill limits the state's authority to withhold permits for the facility. "It's a states' rights issue," said a spokeswoman for Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev.

In addition, a controversial provision in the House bill that limits the authority of Texas and other producing states to regulate natural gas production could gain momentum if the bill has to return to the Senate floor.

The Texas Railroad Commission and the Oklahoma Legislature have rewritten their systems of regulating gas production to prevent waste and protect producers' property rights.

But some major producers, local gas distribution companies and members of Congress from gas-consuming states have said the new prorationing rules could be used to limit production and drive up prices for consumers.

Over the objections of members from Texas, Oklahoma and other producing states, the House adopted an amendment that would limit states' authority to use estimates of market demand to regulate production.

Regulators and producers have predicted that the amendment by Reps. Ed Markey, D-Mass., and James Scheuer, D-N.Y., would lead to chaos in the natural gas industry.

The chairman of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee, Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., has said he would oppose the Markey-Scheuer amendment in a House-Senate conference.

But 32 senators from natural-gas consuming states already have indicated their concerns about the new state rules.

Study: 10 million workers have literacy problems

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 10 million workers in small businesses have serious problems with reading, writing, mathematics and other basic skills that impair job performance, a study by a private research group said Thursday.

The Southport Institute for Policy Analysis said the 10 million workers represent up to 40 percent of small business workers. Half of America's 5 million small businesses report skill problems that merit programs, but only up to 5 percent have them, said the study.

"Because small firms employ 57 percent of the American workforce, this is clearly a serious national problem that demands national attention," said Institute President Forrest P. Chisman, author of the report.

"Problems with basic skills are a serious barrier to improving the productivity of these firms and the nation's economic competitiveness. But, despite the severity of the problem, no public or private programs currently provide significant help."

Chisman said the report, based on an 18-month study of formal, on-the-job basic skills courses in small and medium-sized firms, is the first comprehensive study of the skills of small business employees. Small businesses are those with fewer than 50 employees; medium-sized firms have 50 to 500 workers.

Although American corporations spend tens of billions of dollars each year on educating and training employees, Chisman said almost all such efforts are at large firms.

Chisman used an assembly line as a hypothetical example of the problems encountered in having workers lacking basic skills.

Many products on a line have a ticket attached describing what has been done and what needs to be done. With limited reading and writing skills, he said, "people do the wrong things or they don't know what to do."

Other companies use pictures instead of numbers on cash register keys. And most retail firms have computers that determine a customer's change.

Bill Dudek of Wm. Dudek Manufacturing Co. in Chicago described a "long period of frustration and even anger over unperformed tasks before recognizing that the culprit was the workers' inability to read and do math well."

Dudek said the firm implemented what was thought to be a "well-planned program for involving employees in the quality improvement process." But the results, he said, were limited at best and, "in some cases, workers seemed to be ignoring written instructions altogether."

Then, Dudek said, it struck him that "the instructions weren't being ignored; the workers didn't understand them."

Chisman said the major barriers to growth in workplace education are that most employers in small firms have a limited understanding of the seriousness of the problem, what they can do about it and where they can get help.

More than a third of students drop out, data shows

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — More than a third of all U.S. students ages 15 to 17 have either dropped out of school or failed at least one grade level, according to data released by the U.S. Census Bureau.

The census data, based on surveys of 60,000 households across the nation and released Thursday, showed that overall dropouts and grade failures are much higher among African-Americans and Hispanics than among whites.

But it also showed that the dropout and grade failure rates are exactly the same for all ethnic groups among children ages 6 to 8, and that the rates accelerate sharply for African-American and Hispanic children in three other age groups studied.

"The data indicate that as you look across the four age groups that the blacks and Hispanics fall back pretty quickly," said Robert Kominski, chief of the Census Bureau's Education Branch.

"I can't say why it occurs," he said. "But a lot of research shows that the children who are most likely to drop out are those who have fallen behind in school."

In contrast to the national trend, however, California and Los Angeles school officials said dropout rates have been declining in the state and the city. And they attributed the improvement to special programs designed to encourage children to stay in school and an emphasis on a more rigorous curriculum.

"We have done away with some of the remedial types of classes and dumbbell classes, and the kids have risen to the challenge," said Susan Lange, spokeswoman for the California Department of Education. "One of the myths about dropouts is that these kids are dumb, when in fact a lot of these kids are bored to death, and they're leaving school because they're not being challenged."

But even with declining rates locally, the dropout rates in the Los Angeles Unified School District and throughout California were higher than the national rate of 4.2 percent per year.

Last year's annual dropout rate in the Los Angeles school district was 14.8 percent, said Joann Zgonc, coordinator of the district's dropout prevention programs. The annual dropout rate in California was about 6 percent, Lange said.

However, in order to see how many students who enter the 10th grade actually graduate high school, educators generally look at a three-year rate. For the nation the dropout rate was roughly 15 percent, Kominski said. The California dropout rate was 18.2 percent.

American defector is schizophrenic, doctor says

EDITOR'S NOTE: Victor Norris Hamilton defected to the Soviet Union in 1962 and his whereabouts were a mystery until this week. After initially being rebuffed by officials, The Associated Press interviewed Hamilton and his doctors on Thursday.

By Leslie Shepherd
Associated Press writer

Victor Hamilton circa 1960

For more than two decades, Victor Norris Hamilton, a Palestinian-born American defector, has lived in Special Psychiatric Hospital No. 5, about 30 miles southwest of Moscow.

The hospital director says Hamilton is a paranoid schizophrenic whose delusions include the belief that he is in constant contact with the Pentagon via a television set.

In a bedside interview with The Associated Press on Thursday, a calm and fit-looking Hamilton, clad in a blue bathrobe and a checkered cap, made that and other bizarre assertions — and provided some real details of his background.

American defectors have generally maintained low profiles in the former Soviet Union and little is known about what happened to most of them. Some were given jobs or pensions; most quickly faded from public view, making Hamilton's discovery remarkable.

Hamilton's family says he defected to the Soviet Union in 1962, three years after being dismissed from the U.S. National Security Agency as a code analyst after showing signs of mental illness. He was transferred to this hospital in 1971 from a Kremlin hospital for high-ranking officials.

Vladimir S. Voronin, director of the hospital, was a staff psychiatrist at the time of Hamilton's arrival. He said the patient arrived with no documents other than his medical history. Voronin said the hospital had no idea Hamilton was an American — even though he spoke fluent English and little Russian.

Hamilton is free to leave if his relatives or the U.S. government claims him, the hospital director said. His wife and daughters in the United States said they plan to seek congressional help to obtain his return.

Hamilton's family thought he was dead until they heard otherwise this week from the Ark Project, a Connecticut-based group that searches for U.S. prisoners of war and soldiers missing in action.

The group found him on the basis of a tip received after Russian television coverage of the search for U.S. POWs in the former Soviet Union. Commonwealth TV on Thursday night showed videotape of Hamilton it took last month.

Hamilton said little about his past on Thursday, and doctors say he has never told them about his defection. Hospital records indicate he is 71; his family says he is 75.

Hamilton said he was born in Jaffa when it was part of Palestine, went to school in Jerusalem and studied social sciences at the American University in Beirut. The Atlanta Journal-Constitution has given a similar account of his birth and education. Hamilton now calls himself Fouzi Hindaly — which the newspaper says is his given name.

He insisted his family, including his wife, Lillie, and their daughters, are dead, but acknowledges he once lived in Union City, Ga., a suburb of Atlanta, where his 73-year-old wife still lives.

Mrs. Hamilton said by telephone Thursday she last saw her husband in 1962 and last heard from him in a brief letter in 1974, so she thought he died — "That was about all I could assume."

"Right now we are ... trying to get some assurance from our government that if he should be allowed to come back ... there would not be any charges placed against him. ... We hope they will be willing to forgive him because it happened so long ago. ... It makes no difference now. And he's 75."

In the interview, Hamilton claimed he was both a prisoner and director-general of intelligence in the hospital, which he said was actually a brothel.

"He has delusions. It shows in everything," Voronin said. "His condition is very serious."

The hospital director said Hamilton was given tranquilizers when he first arrived at the hospital, but now refuses all medications, except vitamins. The ward he lives on with nine other men is kept locked.

Voronin said Hamilton used to take long, solitary walks on the hospital's tree-covered grounds, but now he spends most of his time indoors. There's been one nother change in his routine.

"He used to walk around with a small radio all the time. With the Pentagon talking to him through the television, he's stopped listening to the radio," Voronin said.

Serbian officials demand that U.N. lift the sanctions

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Serbian authorities demanded Thursday that harsh U.N. sanctions be lifted now that a U.N. report has said Croatia bears some of the blame for fighting in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Meanwhile, the president of Montenegro suggested Thursday he was rethinking his republic's alliance with Serbia.

U.N. sanctions announced last Saturday apply to both the republics, which are the only members of the six-member federation remaining in Yugoslavia. Croatia, Slovenia, Macedonia and Bosnia seceded in the past year.

"I leave open the possibility that we have made mistakes," Momir Bulatovic said of Montenegro's decision to remain in Yugoslavia.

"Change is possible," he said in an interview. "The course is going to be corrected generally."

His comments were the first public indications of strains with Serbia since the United Nations slapped on trade, oil, commerce, transportation and sports sanctions.

In Belgrade, about 50 leading Yugoslav sportsmen protested a possible ban of the athletes from the Barcelona Summer Olympics.

The International Olympic Committee has said it will rule on Yugoslavia's participation by June 15.

In Sarajevo, at least a half-dozen mortar shells exploded among buildings near U.N. headquarters on the west side Thursday evening, sending up plumes of smoke and scattering pedestrians. Small arms fire also was heard. Several shells hit the main Marshal Tito street in the afternoon.

U.N mediators were meeting with Muslim and Serb forces to discuss reopening Sarajevo's airport to allow the safe passage of relief supplies into the Bosnian capital.

"We are trying to determine whether there is a sincere desire to reopen the airport," said U.N. negotiator Cedric Thornberry.

Gen. Nedeljko Boskovic, the chief Yugoslav army negotiator with Muslims in Bosnia, wants the airport turned over to the United Nations. But Bosnian Serb leaders say they want it at least partly under their control.

Separate talks on ending the Muslim blockade of an army barracks where 800 soldiers are trapped failed again Thursday, Bosnian Defense Minister Jerko Doko said.

Yugoslavia's presidency said both Muslims and Serbs were to blame for the deadlock, caused by disagreement over who will get the heavy weapons in the barracks when the troops leave.

An estimated 5,700 people have been killed since Feb. 29 when Slavic Muslims and Croats voted for independence. The Serbs, one-third of Bosnia's population, wish to remain allied with Serbia. About two-thirds of Bosnia's territory has been captured by Serbian forces.

Fighting was reported in Tuzla and Tesanj in central Bosnia.

A U.N. convoy that arrived Thursday in Sarajevo after a 30-hour ride from Belgrade dodging bullets and mortars was held up by fighting around Tuzla.

Sister Franka surveys the damage at the "Sigurata" church in Dubrovnik, Croatia. The church was attacked three times in the last six months by the Yugoslav Federal Army.

On the sixth day of U.N. sanctions against Yugoslavia, there was little sign of hardship in Belgrade except for long lines of cars at service stations.

The U.N. report, made public Wednesday, said Serb fighters in Bosnia are no longer under direct control of Belgrade and have launched some of the worst violence in violation of orders to show restraint.

Poland's Parliament to oust government

N.Y. Times News Service

WARSAW, Poland — The Polish Parliament voted overwhelmingly early this morning to dismiss the prime minister and his government after Interior Ministry officials released a list of people it said had collaborated with the communists.

The prime minister, Jan Olszewski, whose five-month tenure was an embattled one, had made a last-minute attempt on Thursday to derail a no-confidence vote by distributing the list to the chairmen of the 29 parties in the lower house of Parliament.

The Polish news agency said the list included the names of as many as 60 of the house's 460 members, as well as Cabinet ministers.

President Lech Walesa, who has made no secret of his contempt for Olszewski, called for the prime minister's dismissal Thursday evening, and the Parliament responded this morning with 273 members voting for dismissal, 119 voting against the motion and 33 abstaining.

Walesa and other politicians were outraged by the list, which set Poland on the path of the former East Germany and Czechoslovakia. Decisions to expose communist informers have deeply troubled both societies. For three years, Poland had largely sought to avoid revenge against former communists.

"This procedure is outside the law," Walesa said in a statement. "It sets the stage for political blackmail, and completely destabilizes the structure of the state. The whole operation is manipulative." He also said the list was "selective."

The issue of what to do with people suspected of collaborating from 1945 to 1990 flared up just as Olszewski's center-right minority government was fighting for its life.

Olszewski's supporters successfully deployed the weapon of anti-communism hours before the Parliament was scheduled to vote to dismiss the government, as well as a vote on Poland's disputed budget. Both measures were postponed as the Parliament debated the list until Walesa called for the government's removal Thursday evening.

Oxford women don't want male students

OXFORD, England (AP) — Somerville College, one of two all-women Oxford colleges and the alma mater of four world leaders, said Thursday it would admit men in 1995 despite student objections.

Somerville students had appealed to University Chancellor Lord Jenkins to overturn a surprise decision by the college's governing body to admit men in the fall of 1993.

In a 6,000-word judgment on the dispute, Lord Jenkins overruled their objections, saying the 113-year-old college has suffered intellectually and financially in recent years because of its single-sex policy.

But he recommended a two-year delay in admitting men, saying this "would mean that with a very few exceptions the present undergraduates would all have gone, and the issue of their expectations, legitimate or otherwise, would have been disposed of."

Leaders of Somerville's 400-member student body vowed to fight the decision. "We have a tradition of producing strong women leaders and that will continue," said Deborah Sherry, a second-year law student from New York.

In his decision, Jenkins said that because Somerville students already had male teachers and were allowed men as overnight guests, admitting men students would hardly come as "an unprecedented shock."

"So far from being run as a nunnery, Somerville has since 1980 allowed its students to have overnight male guests provided they are properly signed in," he said.

The decision would leave St. Hilda's as the last women-only college among the 26 Oxford schools.

Somerville graduates include Margaret Thatcher, who has expressed support for the students' position, and three other former prime ministers, Indira Gandhi of India, Golda Meir of Israel and Sirimavo Bandaranaike of Sri Lanka.

Its star-studded alumni also include Nobel Prize-winning chemist Dorothy Hodgkin, novelist Iris Murdoch and detective writer Dorothy Sayers.

College officials argued that Somerville was losing out on grants because it had no male research fellows, and mixed colleges were attracting some of the brightest young women.

In a statement, Somerville's principal, Catherine Hughes, said college authorities were confident that Somerville's "tradition of excellence ... can be perpetuated in a future life as a college both for men and women."

In a vote after the governing board's February announcement, more than 86 percent of Somerville's 336 undergraduate and 86 graduate students voted to fight the decision to admit men.

Mrs. Thatcher backed them, saying, "I believe that women who want a good academic qualification should be able to choose an all-women college."

Somerville, founded in 1879, was named after Mary Somerville, a scientist and advocate of women's education.

In 1920, Somerville and St. Hilda's became part of Oxford University, which had until then only admitted men. Oxford was founded in the 13th century.

Prosecutor: There may have been 2 'Ivan the Terribles'

JERUSALEM (AP) — John Demjanjuk, convicted four years ago of being the Nazi gas chamber operator "Ivan the Terrible," may have shared the job with another man, an Israeli prosecutor said Thursday.

The statement was an attempt to knock down the defense contention that Demjanjuk, a retired Cleveland auto worker, is a victim of mistaken identity.

Demjanjuk's conviction and death sentence rested on testimony by five Treblinka survivors who identified him as "Ivan."

But in an appeal before the Supreme Court, the defense submitted depositions by guards at the Treblinka death camp that "Ivan the Terrible" was one Ivan Marchenko.

Prosecutor Michael Shaked acknowledged Thursday that the defense may have managed to cast "a tiny doubt" on the verdict, but not enough to overturn it.

In his second day of summing up, Shaked alleged that at Treblinka, where about 850,000 Jews died in 1942-'43, Demjanjuk used the alias Ivan Marchenko.

"We are open today to accept the possibility that there was another Marchenko. We don't feel the weight of the survivors' identification has been reduced," Shaked said.

'We are open today to accept the possibility that there was another Marchenko. We don't feel the weight of the survivors' identification has been reduced.'

— Prosecutor Michael Shaked

The Ukrainian-born Demjanjuk, 72, says he was never at Treblinka, and that he was in German prisoner-of-war camps during the time in question, having been captured in May 1942 while serving in the Soviet army.

Defense attorney Yoram Sheftel, who wants Demjanjuk acquitted on the basis of the guard depositions, discounted Shaked's theory as "phony, stupid and silly."

"All this is only because the prosecutor cannot admit that he dragged the entire legal system of the state of Israel into a horrible and dreadful mistake," he told reporters.

During Thursday's six-hour session, Shaked offered several different lines of argument to the five judges.

His first option was that the court must disregard the depositions by the Treblinka guards because they were interrogated in questionable circumstances and, unlike the survivors, could not be cross-examined by an Israeli court.

The guards testified in Nazi war crimes trials in the Soviet Union in the 1940s through '60s, and were executed.

The most these depositions could raise, "the absolute most, is doubt, never more than that," Shaked said.

If the court decided to give some weight to the depositions, a case could be made for two "Ivan Marchenkos" at Treblinka operating the gas chambers in different periods, Shaked said.

Demjanjuk has a strong connection to the name "Ivan Marchenko," the prosecutor argued.

He cited a deposition by a Polish innkeeper named Dudek, who recalled a visitor introducing himself as Ivan Marchenko, gas chamber operator. Dudek later identified Demjanjuk from a photograph as being the man who had visited him, Shaked said.

Demjanjuk was born Ivan and anglicized his name to John when he came to the United States in 1952. In his 1948 U.S. visa application, he listed his mother's maiden name as Marchenko. The defense says this was because he forgot the name and chose "Marchenko" at random. Sheftel said a marriage certificate showed the real name is Tabachuk.

A third possibility presented by Shaked was that Demjanjuk was a Treblinka guard and, like all the others, participated in atrocities, but did not operate the gas chambers.

Shaked told reporters that if the judges decided to give weight to the guard depositions, he believed they would pick the two-Ivans theory as the "most plausible."

He said outside the courtroom that in two days of final arguments he has managed to recover ground after the guard depositions became known and "everyone was convinced Demjanjuk was innocent, a poor guy."

On Wednesday, Shaked tried to shore up claims that Demjanjuk also served at the Sobibor death camp in Poland and the Flossenburg concentration camp in Germany from March 1943.

He argued that all death camp guards committed atrocities and that proving Demjanjuk was in Sobibor was sufficient for a conviction under Israeli war crimes laws, he said.

Final arguments continue Monday. The court has not indicated when it would issue a ruling.

Haitian Senate approves new prime minister

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — The Senate on Thursday ratified Marc Bazin as Haiti's new prime minister, and he pledged to open negotiations with the international community to lift a punishing trade embargo.

Bazin, a former World Bank official, was designated Tuesday by the provisional government to lead a new government.

The Senate approved Bazin by a 12-1 vote, with the Senate president not voting as is customary. The remaining 13 senators did not show up for the vote.

The 80-member Chamber of Deputies is expected to vote on ratification Tuesday if it can achieve a quorum — a simple majority. A pro-Aristide coalition has pledged to boycott the session.

The United States has indicated Bazin's appointment would not end the hemisphere-wide sanctions, imposed after the army ousted elected President Jean-Bertrand Aristide in September.

Bazin, who trailed far behind Aristide in Haiti's first democratic presidential election, in November 1990, said he would seek a solution that "would be acceptable to all parties."

"I'll talk to Aristide anytime he wants. I wouldn't be here if I were not willing," Bazin told The Associated Press before the Senate vote. But he did not elaborate on whether is would eventually permit Aristide's return.

Aristide's ouster plunged Haiti into crisis. In recent weeks, violence has increased, including army-led repression of pro-Aristide activists.

More than 37,000 Haitians have fled by sea. Under a new U.S. order, the Coast Guard returns all Haitians to their homeland without checking whether they qualify for political asylum.

Ceremony commemorates death of Khomeini

BEHESHT-E-ZAHRA, Iran (AP) — Roars of "Death to America" swelled from the shrine to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini Thursday as hundreds of thousands of Iranians marked the third anniversary of the Islamic revolutionary leader's death.

A special group of about 10,000 mourners pounded their heads and beat their chests in a choreographed display of grief. On cue, the breast-beating stopped, and the crowd roared, "Death to America," and "Death to Israel," familiar refrains of the ayatollah's followers.

Khomeini clamped his brand of revolutionary Islam on Iran in 1979, after the fall of the pro-Western shah, Mohammad Reza Pahlavi. Although his influence is in decline, he remains revered by millions of Iranians, and his social teachings are widely followed, especially by Iran's poor.

But his political disciples, who follow his uncompromising anti-Western radical line, accuse the current government of abandoning Khomeini's policies as a way to curry favor with the West and revive Iran's crippled economy.

About 120,000 people packed the gold-domed shrine inside the Behesht-e-Zahra cemetery, 10 miles south of Tehran, for Thursday's memorial.

Several hundred thousand more jammed the surrounding fields, and buses carrying others backed up for miles on the road from Tehran.

Guards sprayed rose water to cool the mourners, but many, overcome by heat and exhaustion, fainted. First-aid workers, carrying large, aluminum kettles of water, forced their way through the tightly pressed throng to revive people.

About three dozen disabled veterans of the 1980-'88 Iran-Iraq war sat in wheelchairs in a cordoned section of the shrine covered with plush Persian carpets and lit by dozens of glittering chandeliers.

Reza Baradarani whispered that he had come to remember Khomeini "because I was asked by the organization that pays my medical bills."

Young men clung to the metal grill surrounding Khomeini's grave. Guards beat off common mourners who tried to press through to a special section reserved for thousands of foreign guests, who came at the government's expense.

When Khomeini died, 8 million Iranians poured into the streets in frenzied grief. The crowds at the shrine have grown steadily thinner on the anniversaries of his death, with official counts of 5 million in 1990 and more than a million in 1991.

The government promoted the event this year, invoking Khomeini's memory in a bid to re-establish the legitimacy of the Islamic revolution in the eyes of Iranians disillusioned by economic hardship.

President Hashemi Rafsanjani also is anxious to dispel accusations by his radical rivals that he has steered away from the path Khomeini set in 1979.

As under Khomeini's strict Islamic rule, women continue to wear the all-covering black chador, the sexes are segregated and alcohol is banned. Iranians regarded him as an imam, or divine guide, a distinction only seldom accorded in Shiite Islam.

Offices and shops were closed Thursday, the second in a three-day official mourning period. Movie billboards in the capital were draped in black cloth, and posters bearing portraits of Khomeini were everywhere.

Khomeini's successor as Iran's spiritual leader, Ayatollah Ali Khamenei, told mourners at the shrine that Iran has not embarked on a new course.

"The future path of the Iranian nation will remain the path laid by Imam Khomeini — defending the revolution, withstanding superpowers, defending the oppressed, the holy Koran and Islam, and upholding the banner of Islam throughout the world," Khamenei said.

Rafsanjani is trying to attract foreign investment and loans to jump-start the economy. That task has become even more critical in recent weeks, which have been marred by violent anti-government demonstrations in several large cities.

A middle-aged woman, a guide for foreign guests at the shrine, stood in a short early morning rain shower waiting for a taxi.

"I have to get up and go to work on a holiday just so I don't starve," the woman said on condition of anonymity. "What do I care if Khomeini died three years ago?"

Police arrest founders of banned union on Tiananmen anniversary

BEIJING (AP) — Police arrested at least two founders of a now-banned labor union Thursday to prevent them from commemorating the third anniversary of the bloody crackdown on China's democracy movement.

Two other members of the union were missing and believed arrested, Chinese sources said.

The government was determined to prevent any commemoration of the June 3-4, 1989, army attack that ended weeks of mass pro-democracy demonstrations and left hundreds, possibly thousands, dead.

Except for a lone man's protest in Tiananmen Square on Wednesday, the two days passed quietly with the vast central square and college campuses under tight security.

In Hong Kong, tens of thousands of people clutching candles spilled across a soccer field and basketball courts at Victoria Park for speeches and songs Thursday night in rememberance of those killed in the crackdown.

"We are here because our brothers in Beijing don't have the freedom to do this," said Cheung Mankwong, spokesman for the Hong Kong Alliance in Support of Democracy in China. "We are doing this for them."

Mourners in the British colony, which reverts to Chinese control in 1997, laid wreaths around a replica of the Monument to Revolutionary Martyrs in Tiananmen Square, where pro-democracy demonstrations were held in 1989.

Chinese police set up roadblocks for a second night around Beijing University, which was a center of the democracy movement. Foreigners were blocked from going near the school, but students said by telephone that it was quiet.

Friends of the arrested men, whose Beijing Workers Autonomous Federation was founded during the democracy movement and crushed with it, said they had planned to gather quietly in a park Thursday to remember the crackdown.

Police learned of the plan and warned them not to go, the friends said, speaking on condition of anonymity for fear of punishment.

Han Dongfang, sometimes called China's Lech Walesa for his leading role in the union, was detained Wednesday night while walking in Tiananmen Square, the friends said. They said he was brought home Thursday, but dozens of police guarded the home and barred visitors.

Another founder, Zhang Jinli, was taken into custody Tuesday night, and police refused to tell his family why he was being held, the friends said.

Two colleagues, Zhou Guoqing and Qian Yumin, were missing and believed under arrest, they said.

China's Communist leaders were alarmed by the large numbers of workers who joined in the 1989 democracy movement, and generally respond more harshly to dissent among workers than among students because of the potential for strikes and economic disruption.

A lone worker with a personal grievance against the government unfurled a banner in Tiananmen Square on Wednesday but was immediately arrested.

Another man was seen being beaten by police on the square Wednesday afternoon, but it was not known whether he made any protest.

Nine foreign journalists also were briefly detained Wednesday, including a Japanese television cameraman who was punched and kicked by plainclothes police.

The Japanese Embassy sent a note to the Foreign Ministry Thursday expressing regret over the incident. The message raised concern about the cameraman's rights while he was in custody, saying police detained him for two hours without allowing medical treatment for his cut lip.

At a weekly news conference, Foreign Ministry spokesman Wu Jianmin called the beating "an unfortunate incident."

But Wu accused the cameraman, Atsushi Yamagiwa, of starting the altercation by kicking a Chinese. A witness said the cameraman was only filming before he was surrounded by police.

Midland truly suffered a loss Wednesday evening in the death of B.J. "Joe" Pevehouse, who had taken a leading role in supporting the community since 1948.

A geologist by profession, Pevehouse first worked for Bay Petroleum Co. after coming to Midland. He then operated as an independent geologist before joining The Permian Corp. as vice president in charge of production.

In 1960, his entrepreneurial spirit led Pevehouse to form Adobe Oil Co., which he guided to the position of one of the nation's most successful independent oil companies. Adobe Oil eventually became Adobe Oil & Gas Corp. and in 1985 was merged with Madison Resources of New York to become Adobe Resources Corp., of which he served as chairman of the board and director.

Yet, for all the successes he enjoyed in professional life Joe Pevehouse never slighted his obligations to the community of Midland — serving at various times as president and director of the United Way, the Texas Tech University Board of Regents and the President's Council, the Midland College Foundation Board, Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, the Petroleum Club, Midland Country Club and the Confederate Air Force.

Widely recognized for his commitment to the community as well as his professional expertise, Pevehouse had been honored with the Lauro F. Cavazos award given by Texas Tech for outstanding contributions to the university, the Alexis de Tocqueville Award presented by United Way for substantial annual contributions to that organization, a resolution from the Texas Legislature honoring him as a leader in the oil and gas industry, as well as by the Petroleum Club for his work and by the city of Midland as one of its finest citizens and entrepreneurs.

Joe Pevehouse made an indelible mark on the community of Midland both professionally and as a civic leader. He will be missed.

Students must learn that reading is vital

While no one need be surprised by new evidence from the U.S. Education Department that U.S. students are still spending too much time in front of the TV set and too little time in the library, President Bush was right to express his frustration with inadequate scholastic performance.

But even though Bush gets an "A" for straightforwardness, does his administration deserve a passing grade for achievement? Four years after having promised to be the "education president," Bush's stated goal of making U.S. students the leaders in science and math by the year 2000 now seems further away than ever before.

Declining trends in reading are dangerous not only because they reduce economic competitiveness, but because, over time, they threaten to undermine our democratic values. If the United States is to continue being a prosperous, vigorously competitive and free nation with a bright future, then parents, teachers, school administrators, all other interested citizens and the government must unite in a vigorous crusade that not only focuses on teaching students how to read, but on teaching them why it is important to read. In other words, we must begin teaching an ethos of reading.

National energy policy is slow in developing

When President Bush finally signs a national energy plan, bells will chime, confetti will fly and people will weep in the streets.

Well, maybe not, but there will be reason to celebrate nonetheless.

Bush's term as president is almost over and still the nation lacks the energy strategy he's urged all along. Congress, as usual, shares the blame.

But that is the case no longer.

The House of Representatives last week approved an energy plan that includes a needed focus on energy conservation, alternative fuels and renewable energy.

House and Senate negotiators will have to resolve differences between their respective bills, and Bush will have to sign on. When and if he does, Bush will be able to say he's honored one of his key campaign promises. It will have only taken four years.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

Twenty-five years ago, on June 5, 1967, the Six-Day War began in the Middle East. Amid growing fears of an Arab attack, Israel launched an air and ground assault against Egyptian military targets. Syria, Jordan and Iraq responded by firing at Israeli positions; Israel struck back, devastating the Arabs' air forces while suffering only limited losses of its own planes.

On this date:

In 1723, economist Adam Smith was born in Kirkcaldy, Scotland.

In 1783, Joseph and Jacques Montgolfier publicly demonstrated their hot-air balloon in a 10-minute flight over Annonay, France.

In 1940, the Battle of France began during World War II.

Media magnates loyal to the Grove

WASHINGTON — At Bohemian Grove, the annual site of the world's most exclusive frat party, even the fourth estate sometimes gets star-struck.

Anderson

Mingling among the high-level government officials and prominent heads of industry who come together each summer at the Grove is an exclusive coterie of top members of the national media. But even though they are in the business of selling information, don't expect them to ever break the Grove's golden rule: "Do not reproduce or publish scripts, pictures, music or accounts of the Grove."

Some of these media magnates apparently feel more loyalty to the Grove than to their trade. Over the years, at least a dozen stories exposing some of the relationships and rituals of the Grove, written by gumshoe reporters in the employ of Grove members, have been spiked or altered before publication.

The most recent case involves a former bureau chief of People magazine, Dirk Mathison, who got permission from one boss to write a story about the Grove if he could infiltrate last summer's encampment. On three different days, Mathison managed to evade the tight security around the camp and observe some of the happenings. But the third time proved to be unlucky.

Mathison was spotted by a Time-Warner executive, who immediately fingered him and angrily booted him out of the camp. But that wasn't enough. Before he had finished it, Mathison's story was spiked through the efforts of at least one Time-Warner executive who is a longtime, faithful Grove member. Several months later, eyebrows were raised once again when Time-Warner suddenly decided to close down their San Francisco bureau, where Mathison was chief. Certainly the company was cutting other staff as well, but the San Francisco bureau was one of People's most productive. Today, Mathison is out of a job.

All this shows just how far the Grove has strayed from its infant stages. The Bohemian Club was founded in 1872 by a group of San Francisco newspapermen with artistic inclinations who banded together to share their literary efforts. Original members included Mark Twain, Bret Harte, Ambrose Bierce and Jack London. These men took pains to exclude the rich, especially their publishers. The modern-day character of the club did not take shape until the Great Depression, when only the wealthy could afford to keep it going.

Since then, the Grove has become the setting for Old Boy Club handshaking and dealmaking on a prodigious scale. It was in the camaraderie of the Grove that three members — Edward Teller, Ernest Lawrence and Luis Alvarez — talked University of California officials into secretly funding what became the Manhattan Project.

Grove spokesmen have denied repeatedly that the nuclear bomb had its origins at the Grove, but a hiking map written by a Grove historian and recently obtained by our associate Dale Van Atta tells a different story. The map boasts of a club house built in 1903 on the banks of the Russian River. "In 1942, the Club House was the site of the meeting which conceived the Manhattan Project, resulting in the atom bomb."

The Grove was also the backdrop for Richard Nixon's political comeback in 1967, with a well-received "Lakeside Talk." After he became president, Nixon wired the club to opine: "Anyone can be president of the United States, but few have any hope of becoming president of the Bohemian Club."

Lottery is moral fraud against citizens

Texas last week became the 34th state to establish a lottery, and Texans immediately set a record for first-day ticket sales — $22.7 million sold in 14 hours. What a fraud — in the moral, albeit not the legal, sense!

Murchison

Certainly a state Legislature has the power to seduce the citizenry with tantalizing offers of instant wealth. The citizenry enjoy the right to laugh in the state's face and not produce a single dollar bill wherewith to purchase a lottery ticket. But that doesn't mean that government, in defiance of a historic obligation, isn't corrupting the citizens' character.

The state, for purely mercenary motives, is molding and shaping a class of citizens who believe there's indeed such a thing as a free lunch, that the world owes them a living, that luck is a more valuable commodity than hard work.

The state is siphoning into its own coffers, and into the pockets of the tiny number of big lottery winners, money that others might have used to buy food, clothes and shelter. Poor people, the principal targets of all lotteries, are being victimized, swindled and corrupted.

An individual's chances of winning the lottery are not what one would call dazzling. "With nearly a third of a billion tickets in print, the odds of buying any winner with your buck are about 1 in 8," observed one Texas newspaper writer. "A kid applying to Harvard has a better chance than that."

It gets chancier. "A $1,000 ticket, at 1 in 120,000, is eight times as rare as a hole-in-one on the pro golf tour . . . And what about striking it rich, really rich? About as likely as being struck by lightning."

A lottery spokesman blandly explains: "Whether you win or lose, the state wins. The taxpayers win."

What shameless buncombe! In the first place, as a reward for conning the gullible into helping balance the budget, Texas expects at best to rake in $461 million over 15 months, about 2 to 3 percent of total state revenue. For that matter, revenue in 11 of the other 33 states with lotteries has been declining. Seven other lottery states reported no significant increases.

In the second place, how does the state government win when it corrupts its own people? Sociologist Henry Lesieur, of St. John's University in New York, says, "The American dream has been transformed by these (lottery) games. The dream used to be that, if you worked hard, you'd make it. Now the dream is to make it without working at all." Do our legislators fail to see the ominous character of their enterprise — that of converting workers into drones? If they do, they appear not to care. They lack the guts to cut state spending, which, in Texas' case, is twice as large as it was just 10 years ago.

Thus we end up, a few years down the line, with a working, not a shirking, class of citizens; one uninterested in salting money away, paying bills on time, even taking extra bucks and investing them to make them grow. That should do a lot for economic growth.

Lots of us aren't going to buy lottery tickets, no matter how cheerful and enticing the official blandishments. But we get hurt, too. We suffer from the ensuing, and unpreventable, corruption of civic morale and ideals. We suffer from diminished investment and, on an opposite trajectory, ever bigger budget problems, owing to the falloff in work and productivity.

Not least or lightest, we suffer from having to live under "leaders" so careless of their obligations as to think they can make the credulous pay for state government's excesses. You can almost see these elected magnificoes thumbing their noses while our backs are turned, expressing their contempt for poor dumb voters.

In a way, I guess we do deserve a measure of contempt — for electing these louts in the first place.

CHARLEY REESE

There's no painless way to balance budget

Years ago I used to kid my friends at the chamber of commerce in the town where I lived by calling them long distance conservatives.

They wanted the federal government to stop spending so much money — in other places — but they were always trying to get the federal government to spend more money where they were.

Reese

That essentially is the problem with the deficit. Everyone wants a balanced federal budget at somebody else's expense. Unfortunately there is no somebody else.

Politicians may be corrupt or short-sighted or uncaring about the future, but most of them are not fools. What they want to do — get re-elected — they do pretty well. So they have managed to salt practically the entire population either with federal dollars in one form or another or with tax breaks or subsidies.

It's no wonder the basement dwellers in our economic house are bitter. Not only do they get the smallest percentage of the federal dollar, every time the upstairs folks get worried about the deficit, they point to cuts in funds going to those in the basement. That's because those in the basement have the least political clout.

Right now, taking opportunistic advantage of the Los Angeles riots, mayors are clamoring for more federal aid to cities. Many of them are espousing the claim that the Reagan administration cut aid to the states and cities and hence is responsible for their problems.

Not so, according to my $6.95 World Almanac. Federal aid to states and local governments was $91.4 billion in 1980 and $123.5 billion in 1989. That's about a 35 percent increase. You have to watch these politicians at any level of government. When they talk about cuts, they are usually talking about reductions of anticipated increases.

For example, I give you $100 this year. You expect me to give you $150 next year, but I only give you $125. Instead of acknowledging a $25 increase, you complain about a $25 "cut." That's political math. That's why we have state, local and federal expenditures at their historic highest levels while complaints about cuts and tight budgets and inability to meet needs are also at the decibel level of a heavy metal concert.

Should the people be foolish enough to elect Ross Perot president, I expect the decibel level of screeching will be the equivalent of 20 747's and 18 heavy metal bands.

The dirty trick Perot is playing on people is that he means what he says. American voters are not used to that. They are used to politicians who don't mean what they say. American voters are used to not meaning what they themselves say. The conservative wants the government to save money, but not that money from which he benefits. The liberal wants to help the poor, but not with his money.

Should Perot win in the fall, I predict he will be the most popular president since Eisenhower on Inauguration Day and the most unpopular president since Carter about 30 days later. Unless he's fooling me, Perot will mean real cuts, not reductions of anticipated increases, when he talks about balancing the budget.

There is no painless way. Conservatives like Jack Kemp and Newt Gingrich used to claim we could grow out of it, but the second of two recessions on their watch has sort of quieted that talk.

Actually, you can balance the budget by real cuts in expenditures, meaning elimination of a lot of programs, or by real tax increases or by a combination of the two. There's not a politically popular splinter in that plank.

To turn this country around will require mass political suicide by one president and a majority in the House and Senate. I don't see many volunteers lining up.

Perot to give testimony at Senate hearing on MIAs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ross Perot, who has long made accounting for Americans missing in action in Southeast Asia a personal cause, will testify on the subject at a Senate hearing later this month.

Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., chairman of the Senate Select Committee on POW-MIA Affairs, said Friday the unannounced independent presidential candidate will brief Congress on his continuing efforts on behalf of prisoners of war and those missing in action.

Perot has claimed that the Reagan administration asked him to spearhead an investigation into American servicemen missing in Southeast Asia but then ignored his efforts.

President Bush, at a news conference Thursday night, was asked about Perot's role on the POW-MIA issue during the Reagan administration.

"For a while, he was ... being quite helpful, trying to do something about the prisoners," Bush said.

The president refused to comment on a story in Thursday's New York Times that said Perot discussed private business ventures with Vietnam's communist government after a trip to Hanoi in 1987 to locate POWs.

Perot has claimed that the Reagan administration asked him to spearhead an investigation into American servicemen missing in Southeast Asia but then ignored his efforts.

"If he's going to explain this to the Congress, that's good," Bush said.

The hearings will begin on June 24. Perot will testify on June 30.

In a statement, Kerry said the Dallas billionaire would be asked about his trip to Southeast Asia in 1969-1970. The panel will also look into the Reagan administration's efforts to account for missing Americans "including its assignment to Perot and his report."

Other witnesses will include current and former administration officials.

Candidates use talk shows to boost campaign

By Elizabeth Kolbert

■ Analysis

He wore cheap sunglasses. He blew the saxophone. He explained that he really wanted to inhale; he just didn't know how.

With his Secret Service entourage sitting stiffly in the front row, Gov. Bill Clinton chatted with Arsenio Hall on Wednesday night about his mistakes, his faults and his ideas for America's future.

It was not the kind of television performance presidential candidates typically give, but it is not likely to be the last.

In a year when "conventional politicians" travel only in disguise, presidential candidates are rushing as never before to address voters through unconventional forums like late-night interview programs and television call-in shows.

During the New York primary campaign, Clinton and his opponent, Edmund G. Brown Jr., the former governor of California, put in appearances on the Phil Donahue show.

And after Clinton won the California primary, he stayed in the state an extra day to tape Arsenio Hall, then went to Little Rock, Ark., to do King's call-in show via satellite.

Politicians and media analysts agree that the rise of the talk show in political culture reflects broader trends, most significantly the declining influence of the network news shows.

"These types of programs have become much more important as a source of information for people," said Frank Greer, a top adviser to Clinton. "Ten years ago, these programs didn't have the audience or the impact that they have now."

Appearing on the talk-show circuit presents several advantages for candidates. It allows them to speak directly to viewers, and in a relatively informal setting. And it allows them to present their case without having to answer many specific questions.

Paradoxically, though, some analysts argue that the greatest benefit of appearing in unconventional settings is that it can help generate more conventional coverage.

They point out that even while the audience for traditional news programming has declined in recent years, it is still far larger — and far more apt to include likely voters — than are the audiences for most talk shows.

The trick is to say something on Arsenio Hall that will be picked up by the news shows and newspapers.

"The fact that you're writing about it is the reason they're doing it," Darrell West, a professor of political science at Brown University, said.

"When you appear on the conventional news shows, there's a high probability that the people in the audience are voters. With the less conventional shows, the likelihood of voting goes way down. So it's not worth it in and of itself. But the payoff is if Bill Clinton is able generate stories that he's trying new forums, new ideas."

This year is not the first time presidential candidates have made appearances in unorthodox forums; in 1984, for example, Gary Hart appeared on "Saturday Night Live," and several candidates have been guests on "The Tonight Show."

But in 1992, such appearances are becoming so commonplace that some viewers would not be surprised to see President Bush pay a visit to Jay Leno.

"It's not a secret that everyone, the Bush/Quayle campaign included, is looking for more ways to communicate directly with people," Torie Clarke, the Bush campaign's spokeswoman, said. "It's very hard to break through. On the network news, you get a 15-second sound bite and you consider yourself lucky. So we're looking at a whole score of things like that."

Burning is slowing Greenhouse effect, study says

WASHINGTON (AP) — A global shade caused by smoke from burning tropical forests and grasslands is delaying the predicted greenhouse warming of the Earth, perhaps by a few decades, researchers say.

Emissions from the burning of up to five billion tons of plant matter annually act like a cooling parasol for the planet, Joyce E. Penner of Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory in California said Thursday.

But she warned that the effect will not save the Earth from the eventual temperature rises predicted as the result of industrial society dumping too much carbon dioxide into the atmosphere.

"This study is not really comforting," Penner said. The cooling effect caused by the smoke, she said, "is just masking the greenhouse effect. If you stopped the burning you would immediately start to feel the effect of global warming."

In a report to be published Friday in the journal Science, Penner and researchers at the University of Arizona concluded that there is enough smoke from burning biomass to explain why the global temperatures have not risen as rapidly as scientists had forecast under the greenhouse theory.

"The warming that we have observed up to now is quite a bit less than what we expected," said Robert E. Dickinson, a researcher at Arizona's Institute of Atmospheric Physics and a co-author of the study. "A good explanation of that is that the smoke effects have been partially canceling the greenhouse effect up to now."

But "This is not a solution to greenhouse warming," said Dickinson. "It just may have slowed it down by a few decades."

The scientist said that the cooling effects of the smoke is not sufficient to merit modification of treaties now being considered at the Earth Summit in Rio de Janeiro. Some 15,000 delegates from more than 120 nations are meeting in Rio to consider pacts that would reduce the amount of carbon dioxide put into the atmosphere by industrial processes, and make other changes in the way the Earth's resources are used.

Most scientists believe that carbon dioxide and some other gases in the atmosphere cause heat to be trapped about the planet, just as a greenhouse traps heat while allowing the energy of the sun to continue to pour in. If the levels of carbon dioxide go up, more heat will stay with the planet instead of radiating into space, they say, and the result will be global warming.

Not all scientists, however, accept that global warming is inevitable. Some studies have suggested that the increase in levels of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere could be balanced by the more vigorous growth of plants which consume carbon dioxide.

Also, others have suggested that a slightly warming planet would lead to an increase in cloud cover which, in turn, would reflect more sunlight back into space and limit global warming.

Some believe that the evidence suggesting slight warming of the planet is merely the result of normal climatic fluctuation that occurs throughout the long history of the Earth.

Smoke and other aerosols in the atmosphere block sunlight from reaching the planet surface, noted Dickinson.

"Little particles (in the smoke) reflect solar radiation," he said. "In the tropics in the dry season there is smoke all over the place."

Leno's first week ratings top Carson

LOS ANGELES — Premiere week ratings for "The Tonight Show With Jay Leno" were 22 percent higher than the average rating for Johnny Carson's final season, figures released Thursday show.

Leno's debut last week as host of America's favorite late-night talk show earned a 6.6 average rating. The 1991-92 season average for Carson, who retired May 22, was 5.4. Each ratings point represents 921,000 households.

Leno's first-week ratings also were 53 percent higher than those from the same period last year. For the week beginning May 27, 1991, during which Leno was guest host one night, the average rating was a 4.3.

'Friendly fire' toll spurs push for solutions

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Although the smoke from the Persian Gulf war has long since cleared, the accidental deaths from American fire during the conflict are still sending shock waves through the military.

In recent weeks the military has begun teaching tens of thousands of marines and soldiers worldwide new methods for preventing the accidental deaths.

The Pentagon has spent millions of dollars for seven military contractors to build new combat identification devices and to test them in the Texas desert.

And this week, in the first case of U.S. officers' being held accountable for "friendly fire" casualties, three Army officers were accused of negligence and reprimanded in the accidental death of a sergeant who was killed by U.S. tank fire.

These actions are aimed at increasing awareness within the military of the seriousness of the problem: The advanced weaponry used in the gulf war has enabled the Pentagon to increase the range, precision and deadliness of its firepower, but it has also outstripped the ability of U.S. forces to distinguish between friend and foe in difficult combat conditions.

In the gulf war, 35 of the 146 Americans killed in combat died at the hands of their comrades, known as friendly fire. And of the 467 Americans wounded, 72 were injured by their own forces.

Allied fire accounted for less than 2 percent of U.S. casualties in previous conflicts, but the brevity of the gulf war and the low numbers of deaths make comparisons difficult.

The Army's tank school at Fort Knox, Ky., about 20 miles southwest of Louisville, serves as the cradle for top-to-bottom changes in classroom instruction and field training.

Instructors there are tutoring hundreds of young captains and lieutenants, the Army's future tank commanders, as well as senior sergeants, to sharpen battle rehearsals, improve combat communications and hone skills in identifying weapons.

Recently, more than 1,200 copies of a 65-minute videotape on these topics were sent to Army infantry, artillery, aviation, armor and reserve units worldwide.

Shouting over the din of six M-1 tanks firing their .50-caliber machine guns at wooden targets on a training range at the school, Sgt. 1st Class Bill Frye, an instructor who was a tank platoon sergeant in the gulf war, said the program's aim was to make soldiers more aware of the potential risks.

House approves nuclear test ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House on Thursday approved the first post-Cold War ban on U.S. testing of nuclear weapons, a step opposed by the Bush administration, as part of a proposed $274 billion military budget.

By a 237-167 vote, the House adopted a one-year moratorium on nuclear testing provided that the former Soviet republics continue their current unilateral ban.

Lawmakers also approved, 356-54, a measure providing $350 million to help stop the proliferation of nuclear weapons, including $250 million to help the former Soviet republics dismantle their nuclear arsenals.

The proposed test ban was one of several reasons the administration opposes the overall budget package, which is $7 billion less than President Bush has proposed.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said he would recommend a veto based on the total amount, cuts in the Strategic Defense Initiative and a series of burden-sharing amendments passed Wednesday.

House decisions on increasing the defense bills paid by South Korea and NATO allies while sharply decreasing U.S. troop strength in Europe penalize "our men and women in uniform and we won't accept that," Cheney said prior to a meeting with House Republicans.

"There is no good reason to continue testing. Politically, there's every good reason to stop," argued freshman Rep. Mike Kopetski, D-Ore., chief sponsor of the measure.

Former Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev imposed a unilateral one-year moratorium on nuclear testing in October and France followed with its own testing ban earlier this year.

"We should exert leadership by example. This would turn up the pressure on China," Rep. Ron Dellums, D-Calif., said in support of the measure. Last month, China exploded a one-megaton bomb, far exceeding the superpower limits for such tests.

The United States and the Soviet Union have an agreement limiting testing to explosions under 150 kilotons. The House measure was seen as far more stringent than previous efforts.

Republican Jon Kyl of Arizona countered that a moratorium would have no effect on other nations. "We're simply not going to persuade others by not testing," he said.

Published reports last week said the Bush administration was considering plans to scale back testing before the president's meeting with Russian President Boris Yeltsin later this month. The White House said it had no plans to limit testing "at this time."

In the Senate, Majority Leader George Mitchell of Maine said he looked forward to a similarly strong vote when the test moratorium issue comes before that chamber in the coming weeks.

GOP challenger plans elective heart surgery

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vanquished Republican presidential challenger Patrick Buchanan scheduled major elective heart surgery for Friday to replace a valve apparently damaged by complications from an illness decades ago.

His sister and campaign manager, Angela Bay Buchanan, said the conservative columnist expects to be back in fighting form for the Republican National Convention in August.

Buchanan, 53, who has been in generally good health, will have his aortic valve replaced with an artificial valve. A heart murmur from a bout with debilitating rheumatoid arthritis when he was 20 is believed responsible for the damaged valve, Bay Buchanan said.

"It's always a concern but we're extremely hopeful and so are the doctors that everything will be just fine," she said in an interview.

She said Buchanan had known about the condition for the past 10 years and that doctors in April recommended surgery this year after they detected a worsening in his condition.

"He wanted to finish the election cycle. He wanted to finish California," she said. "He was going to have some down time, and this gives him plenty of time to recover and get ready for the Republican convention."

Buchanan, whose strong showing in early primaries rattled President Bush's re-election campaign, wound up without a single primary victory. He vowed to take his largely symbolic challenge all the way to the convention floor in Houston in hopes of influencing the party platform.

Buchanan entered the Washington Hospital Center on Thursday and is expected to remain there for eight days, said campaign spokesman Dan Giroux. He said doctors expect a full recovery.

Bay Buchanan said that her brother did not have chest pains, an irregular heartbeat or any other symptoms of heart disease. Other than the defective aortic valve, his heart is strong, she said.

"As these valves go, they're slightly defective but they remain very strong for many years, but then when they do get worse, they get worse dramatically," she said.

Buchanan has been jogging as recently as this week and doctors "expect him to be up and walking around as soon as Sunday and out of the hospital the following weekend."

In his 1990 autobiography, "Right from the Beginning," Buchanan said he took ill with Reiter's syndrome in 1959 when he was 20 years old, "the most crippling and enduring symptom of which was a severe and recurring rheumatoid arthritis."

Residents build volunteer organization to assist Midland College

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

The Midland College Chaparral Corps is prepared to muster when called upon, according to Joan Baskin, corps member.

Ms. Baskin announced the intention of the newly organized corps of volunteers in a Thursday morning news conference.

"We will augment the college work force where necessary — especially at peak times, promote communication between Midland College employees and the community, and foster understanding and provide citizens an opportunity to volunteer their time and talents to advance Midland College's mission," she said.

Jacobs

Daniel

Baskin

Corps members said they were prepared to do whatever was needed, including checking student forms at registration, offering tour guides to campus visitors, maintaining flower beds and tutoring students.

Stan Jacobs, MC associate dean of instruction and Chaparral Corps coordinator, said the Chaparral Corps will "provide an opportunity for all Midlanders to get involved."

Ms. Baskin noted decreasing state funding is putting community colleges in a bind. "Only 16 percent of the state budget is discretionary. Education gets two-thirds of that. When cuts are made, that 16 percent tends to get the ax."

"With the 'can-do' citizens of Midland, we can take this vital idea and make it work.'
— Joan Baskin

"If cuts have to be made, we don't want the college's excellence to suffer," she said.

MC President David E. Daniel said the college receives only 49 percent of its operating budget from state appropriations, about 31 percent from local taxes, and the remaining 20 percent from student tuitions, fees and other miscellaneous sources.

"Our goal, as a community college, is to become more participatory and collaborative," Daniel said. "The corps has come forward to help us accept the challenge of the future."

Ms. Baskin said, "We managed to build one of the best community theaters in the country, the Centennial Plaza and fund the United Way. We always meet the challenge. With the 'can-do' citizens of Midland, we can take this vital idea and make it work.

"Texans have long recognized that education is the cornerstone of our society."

MC board trustee Steven Kiser said, "In years ahead, we are going to look back on the Chaparral Corps and ask: 'Why didn't we think of this sooner?' "

Chaparral Corps Steering Committee members include Ms. Baskin, Nancy Anguish, Bill Collyns, Joanie Holt, Bill and Camille Leifeste, Perry Pickett, Jack Swallow and Roger Robles.

Courthouse puts building on ice in effort to save money

■ New cooling system will lower energy costs by 20 percent, says Midland County's facility management director.

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

If everything works right, the Midland County Courthouse will be sort of "iced up" this summer.

At least, hot summer days in the courthouse will be chilled down by ice from eight ice-storage tanks that are linked by a 210-ton ice-making chiller.

The water-cooled refrigerative chiller works nights at cheaper power rates and more efficiently than air-cooled refrigerative units that toil and labor under the sun in the heat of the day.

The objective is to cut down on the electric bill while keeping the inside temperature breezy and cool.

And one way to do that is to cool the air at lower energy costs by buying discounted electricity at night to make ice at night for daytime cooling, according to Bill Decker, Midland County's facility management director.

If it works well, Decker said, the Commissioners' Court, and courthouse workers and visitors will be comfortably cooled for fewer tax dollars. Taxpayers may not notice the cost reduction, but the savings are supposed to be there.

The power company, TU Electric, is discounting the charges for night-time usage, Decker said, since supplying power at heat-of-the-day, peak-demand times is taxing on the power company.

Summer-time power surges, often between noon and 8 p.m., may result in "brown-outs" because of the over-demand of available supply.

"As far as I know," Decker said, "this (the courthouse application) is the first commercial application of ice-thermal storage in West Texas. And a lot of people — building managers and property owners — are watching what we are doing to see how successful we are."

Sometime today, more than 2,000 gallons of ethylene glycol, an anti-freeze agent, is to be pumped into the chill-water cooling system. The cooling system resembles a battery of oil-field tanks linked to a miniature gas-processing plant.

One part of the glycol anti-freeze is to be added to three parts of water. By design, coils in the cooling system are to carry the chilled solution throughout the courthouse's cooling system. Blowers push air over the cooling coils and also force cool air into offices, courtrooms, hallways, and other courthouse areas.

The water-glycol solution in the coils also picks up heat and returns it to the chillers for cyclic

Chamber allies gather to tout area's assets

■ Officials from TU Electric, Union Pacific Railroad and the Texas Department of Commerce tour city.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff writer

The Midland Chamber of Commerce rallied its allies this week, stockpiling ammunition in the battle for economic development.

Chamber staffers, board members and local leaders met with officials of TU Electric, Union Pacific Railroad and the Texas Department of Commerce Wednesday and Thursday. The goal was gathering information.

"We wanted them to become more familiar with Midland, to be sure they understand our community and its assets," said Chamber President and CEO Janna King.

Visiting officials included Jack Campbell, director of industrial development for the Department of Commerce.

"I'm impressed with what I've seen. I'm impressed with the citizens that have contributed to the community," Campbell said, after touring the city. "It's certainly nothing like I thought it would be."

Other officials agreed Midland is not what they expected. Some said the city may have an image problem because of misconceptions about its physical appearance or location.

"All you can do is keep plugging away, trying to overcome the desert, desolate perception," said Pat Jameson, industrial consultant for TU Electric in Dallas. "Once you can get a prospect out here, you've jumped a big hurdle."

The guests praised the chamber's development staff.

He urged the chamber to emphasize the assets of the region rather than just the city.

Mayor J.D. Faircloth said Midland and its neighbor Odessa have been cooperating in the development effort.

"Midland and Odessa are deadly serious about working together to create jobs out here," Faircloth said. "We've created some opportunities, and we're working together better now than we ever have."

"The hatchet has been buried," agreed County Judge Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer. "The whole area is realizing we have to pull together."

Campbell said the Department of Commerce is undergoing some organizational changes that should strengthen its work helping communities develop. Although TDOC actively markets only in the aerospace industry now, he said more direct marketing is planned.

At present, one TDOC staffer may represent several regions in development efforts.

Police Department pushes toward accreditation standards

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

The Midland Police Department's three-year push toward accreditation could be completed by the end of the year, according to Lt. Ronnie Wilson.

The department is seeking to meet more than 900 standards set by the Commission on Accreditation for Law Enforcement Agencies, which already has certified nearly 200 police departments nationwide and 11 in Texas.

"This will benefit the department, our employees and the entire community," Wilson said. "It will instill a sense of professionalism within the department. It will also enhance the community's understanding of us."

Additionally, accreditation will establish fair promotional possibilities for officers, as well as fair disciplinary procedures. Measures calling for equal treatment of minorities will also be ensured, although the department already has an active minority recruitment program, Wilson said.

But completing the process could be difficult because of a requirement that all officers be outfitted with bullet-proof vests.

"This is one of our major roadblocks," Wilson said. "Getting everyone one of these vests will cost plenty, and we're having a serious budget problem."

According to Chief of Police Richard Czech, the total cost could reach $75,000. Some pledges have been received, and the department is accepting any donations.

The accreditation process has proven tedious, largely because of the requirement that everything be recorded.

"That means every single thing the department does toward the process has to be reduced to a manual," Wilson said. "But, we are more than half way through with the final draft."

As part of the process, several officers met Thursday to discuss departmental goals and objectives.

"Our department has always held the reputation as one of the finest departments as far as our professionalism and aggressiveness," Wilson said. "Becoming accredited would give us the certification of this and would show the citizens and other organizations that this is indeed a top-notch organization."

The department's commitment to community-policing is closely related to the process.

"Accreditation requires a lot of community involvement. It makes us stay in close contact with the public and request their help when needed," Wilson said.

Clinton courts elderly vote, pledges to do right by older Americans

By Joe Cutbirth
N.Y. Times News Service

SAN ANTONIO — Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton called on the American Association of Retired Persons on Thursday to look past its traditional agenda and support a new national commitment to health care and educational opportunity for children.

"The country I want to lead will honor its obligations to people who have worked hard all their lives," the likely Democratic presidential nominee said in a speech at the AARP biennial convention.

"But I also have come here today to challenge you and all older Americans to honor our obligations to our nation's children because our future depends on their strength, their intelligence, their skills, their citizenship."

The remarks were peppered with polite applause from thousands of AARP members.

Afterward, hundreds of more enthusiastic supporters gathered in a tightly secured area outside the building for more than a half-hour to catch a glimpse of the candidate as he left for Little Rock, Ark.

Clinton, who is scheduled to appear this weekend at the Texas Democratic convention in Houston, appeared upbeat and rested as he shook hands with dozens of well-wishers. However, he did not respond to questions from the crowd or reporters.

Perot's pros face challenges

By Evan Ramstad
Associated Press writer

DALLAS — The first challenge for the new professionals in Ross Perot's budding presidential campaign is not to goof up what the amateurs have done.

Volunteers said they look forward to sharper direction with Republican Ed Rollins and Democrat Hamilton Jordan at the helm. Some worry about losing the grass-roots flavor. But they say the change is a sure sign the not-yet-campaign will soon become one.

"It's like going public after being a mom-and-pop operation," said volunteer Michael McGinty.

The newcomers came aboard paying tribute to the achievements of the volunteers. "The worst mistake any of us can do

Texas breaks record in first-week lottery sales

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas broke Florida's first-week lottery sales record Thursday by selling an estimated 95.8 million $1 scratch-off tickets, State Comptroller John Sharp said.

Florida's record was 95 million tickets, set in January 1988.

The record was broken with 15 hours remaining in the lottery's first sales week, which continues through 6 a.m. Friday. "Lone Star Millions" began at 6 a.m. May 29.

"The credit is due to Texas retailers who have overcome unexpected demand for tickets, and through patience and hard work have launched the lottery at a world-record pace," Sharp said.

Ticket sales have resulted in about $43 million in cash prizes being paid to lottery players, $4 million in income to retailers, and about $38 million in new state revenue, he said.

Instant-win prizes range from $2 to $10,000. Players also have a chance to win $1 million in cash if their ticket has the word "Entry" printed three times. Such tickets should be mailed in for special drawings to be held this summer, said Texas Lottery Director Nora Linares.

Texas also set a first-day lottery sales record, with 23.2 million tickets. That surpassed the 21.4 million tickets sold on the California lottery's opening day in October 1985.

As of midafternoon Thursday, the Lottery reported that a total of 148 people were verified winners of the top instant prize of $10,000.

aware of the targeted industries and knowing what's there," Campbell said.

With a planned increase in staffing, West Texas may get a representative of its own — a boon to development work, he said.

Armando Ruiz, TDOC's financial manager, said the agency can help companies find financial assistance to expand. There are grant programs available now for such innovative development tools as small business incubators, he said.

"We try to be proactive," Ruiz said. "We're always looking at ways to provide more capital."

Meanwhile, in the wake of the Los Angeles riots, the federal government is considering alternatives to strengthen another development tool — the enterprise zone.

Midland's zone, mostly in the south and east parts of the city and including Midland International Airport, has opportunities for property tax or sales tax abatement for industries that qualify.

Chamber board chair Doug Henson said the two-day meeting with the allies had been a learning experience.

"Most beneficial was showing them first-hand what we have here," he said. "They've learned something about our community, and we've learned to put a face with a name when we make contact with them."

The three groups bring the chamber about 50 percent of its contacts for development, Henson said.

"Building our relationships is important," Ms. King said. "We need to raise our awareness of the resources available and the way the network functions."

COURTHOUSE: Cooling system to reduce energy costs cooling.

All the while, fresh air, about 15 percent of the total volume in the courthouse, is pulled into the building by the blowers.

"The glycol mixture will be flowing through the tanks to be cooled off to go back to the building to cool it," Decker said.

Decker estimates the system, if it pans out, will lower courthouse energy costs by about 20 percent. Power to the courthouse costs the county $7,000 to $10,000 per month.

With all the discounts and increased energy efficiency in powering the cooling system and with a more efficient lighting system, Decker is projecting a five-year pay-out on the courthouse's energy-conservation measures.

In a recent "dry run" after the new cooling equipment was tied into the air-conditioning system, the water temperature dropped 36 degrees in six minutes to 47 from 83, Decker said.

The courthouse's cooling system had been shut down for the test.

Meanwhile, the courthouse, long since devoid of ceiling fans and moveable windows to invite breezes, went from cool, to warm, to hot. People, forewarned of the test, sweated.

At work in the courthouse, Midland County Attorney Mark H. Dettman dressed in his running gear — shorts, T-shirt, and running shoes.

"Darn right I was (in shorts)," Dettman said. "That's how I normally dress when it's 95 degrees."

The system's real test, the coolness vs. costs, is yet to come.

But Commissioner Durward Wright is convinced Decker knows what he is doing and is following advice from proven energy-efficiency experts.

"Mr. Decker has been diligently studying all of the aspects of energy efficiency to produce the most reliable and most-cost effective system for the county in the long term," Wright said, "thus saving the taxpayers considerable money."

Church to host youth conference

"Live the Dream!" is the theme for this year's Youth Conference for teen-agers 14-18 years old.

The two-day conference, sponsored by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, is being held today and Saturday at 4805 Gateway.

Scheduled activities include workshops, a service project at the three Midland senior citizens centers, YMCA activities, games, a cantata, a testimony meeting and dances both evenings.

Workshops will be presented by Newell Rigtrup and Bob Stanton, both of Midland, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Pennell of Adrian, Steve Vore of Odessa and Jeffrey Bushman of Joseph City, Ariz.

Parents and visitors are invited to the cantata, "From Cumorah's Hill," to be performed from 4 to 5 p.m. Saturday. Soloists will be Stephanie Bushman, Paula Gray, Susie Griffin, Brandon, Lemmon and Clifton Linde.

All youth attending the conference will be participating in the cantata. About 180 are expected from the 14 congregations in West Texas, which includes Alpine.

EPA, Mexico launch crackdown on border environment

WASHINGTON (AP) — State and federal officials have launched their first crackdown against suspected polluters under a new plan crafted to protect the environment along the U.S.-Mexico border.

Seventeen state and federal actions were conducted this week and late last month on the U.S. side of the 2,000-mile border, said Scott Fulton, the Environmental Protection Agency's deputy assistant administrator for enforcement.

At the same time, Mexican officials were conducting a similar crackdown, temporarily shutting down eight facilities for non-compliance with environmental laws.

"We are working to send a message to polluters on both sides of the border that environmental degradation is not going to be tolerated and that we plan to work together to address environmental lawlessness," Fulton said Thursday.

The U.S. actions, coordinated by the EPA with assistance from the Customs Service and border state agencies, involved violations of federal law, including improper shipments of hazardous waste or toxic substances, Fulton said.

The EPA is seeking more than $2 million in fines against the possible violators, he said.

Two criminal indictments and 15 civil actions resulted from the enforcement actions in Texas, California, Arizona and New Mexico, the EPA said.

The criminal indictments involve the illegal exportation of hazardous waste from California to Mexico.

The civil actions are for violations of federal air, toxic substance, community right-to-know or waste laws. Ten civil cases were brought by the EPA, while four were filed by California and one by Arizona.

Four of the EPA cases involved Texas companies, all in El Paso. They are: Swift-Eckrich Co., Consumer Ice Co., Adobe Industries and El Paso Wire Inc.

No horsing around: Second annual Mule Day is Saturday

Staff report

Mules and donkeys are pulling into Midland this Saturday.

They will be coming from West Texas and New Mexico for the second annual Midland County Mule Day, which is sponsored by the Dusty Trail Donkey & Mule Club.

"It's kind of a rodeo," said Midland mule-man Marty Golden. "There will be a whole slew of mules" at the Midland County Rodeo Area near the Midland County Exhibit Building east of town.

Mule Day, which starts at noon, will feature a dozen events, including those for grownups and children and their mounts.

Events include steer stopping, steer roping, goat roping, and the mule race, the straight-away barrel race, the rescue race, the bloomers race, the tunnel race, the balloon pop, the egg-in-spoon ride, trail class, and run saddle, ride and lead.

Golden, who considers mules to be smart, said that "those mules kind of get attached to you."

A mule, he said, is a one-person critter.

Mule and donkey people and others interested in participating in or attending the Mule Day may telephone Golden at 687-4626 in Midland or Clayton Moore at 381-6590 in Odessa.

There is no spectators' admission fee to the entertainment.

However, there are entry fees. Fees for the steer stopping and steer roping events are $10 per mule-rider. The entry fee for other events is $5 each.

The pay back is 50 percent, Golden said.

Prizes include a belt buckle to the rider of the high-point mule, a crupper to the rider of the runner-up high-point mule and ribbons to others.

(From 1B)

One middle-aged man pushed his way to the front of the crowd holding a Ross Perot bumper sticker high in the air. Clinton either did not see it or ignored it and extended a hand in the man's direction.

The speech, which lasted about a half-hour, made no mention of Perot and contained only one reference to President Bush.

"Mr. Bush says that when it comes to investing in America we have more will than wallet," Clinton said, "but I say that now that we have won the Cold War, we have got to find the will to invest in our people, in our jobs, in our education and in our work force."

Clinton received his loudest applause when he said that America must reform its welfare system and adopt a Domestic GI bill and American Peace Corps that would provide young people from low-income families with a college education and job training they could pay back by working in their communities.

"We must not neglect our children and let their decline be the legacy of our generation," he said. "They are the national security issue of 1992."

Clinton called social security "a covenant between generations" and pledged to honor that commitment.

"I'm going to be a president who is going to do right by older Americans because you have done right by America," he said.

Clinton pledged to send Congress a national health care plan in the first year of his administration that would provide comprehensive benefits that include a wider choice of options in long-term care for the elderly and disabled. The cost would vary depending on a person's ability to pay.

He also pledged to support increased research for women's health problems such as breast cancer, ovarian cancer and osteoperosis.

Clinton said that he would work to eliminate tax breaks for drug companies that raise prices for prescriptions faster than the rate of inflation.

"When you go to the doctor or the drug store or the hospital, your next stop shouldn't be the poor house," he said.

PEROT: Volunteers welcome professional organization

(From 1B)

Jimmy Carter's 1976 White House race.

Rollins was Ronald Reagan's 1984 campaign manager.

Perot's undeclared candidacy has been powered by a volunteer drive to get him on the ballot in all 50 states and enthusiasm among dissatisfied voters, hunting for an alternative to the major party contenders.

From nowhere in late February, Perot's popularity has topped that of President Bush and Democrat Bill Clinton in Texas, California and Ohio polls.

And yet the campaign has had a folksy tone with volunteers being tapped to assist the paid issues researchers and sometimes even sitting in on strategy sessions.

"Most of the people who are involved in this are people who have just come out of the woodwork and maybe it will bother them that the big boys are getting into it," said Joan Alspaw, an Annapolis, Md., volunteer. "But then again, they aren't all bad. ... It needs organization for it to work."

"We can't stay grassroots forever," said Stephen Vigil, an Albuquerque, N.M., volunteer leader. "The majority of the people who are in it realize it's real good as a grassroots (movement), but even the children you raise are going to go out and grow up."

Rollins and Jordan told a news conference Wednesday they don't want to weaken the momentum Perot's supporters have built.

"I'm not coming in with a plan to make this more or less conventional," Jordan said.

"I think our great fear is now that the professionals are on, Mr. Perot starts to drop in the polls, they're going to throw us the hell out of here and give it back to the volunteers," Rollins said.

Both said changing the grassroots movement into a campaign is still chiefly the responsibility of Perot, his longtime attorney Tom Luce and closest associate Mort Meyerson.

Luce, a Texas Republican gubernatorial candidate in 1990, will continue as chairman of the effort and Meyerson will be a top adviser.

Meyerson said the leaders know the campaign's power lies not at headquarters but "out in the states."

"This is basically a bottom-up movement, not a top-down movement," he said.

Each of the six ballot petition rallies Perot has attended, including one today in Las Vegas, was organized by volunteers in the states. Perot's professionals in Dallas have handled only the satellite arrangements for the six-state rally that he led last week from Orlando, Fla.

Officials to review rate increases in workers' comp

AUSTIN (AP) — State insurance officials were criticized by lawmakers Thursday for accepting maximum increases in workers' compensation insurance rates despite evidence that shows claims are going down.

Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, chairman of a legislative committee that oversees the workers' comp system, criticized State Board of Insurance officials for not stopping increases that will give most workers' comp insurers a 15 percent rate hike.

House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, who requested the committee meet, said increased rates have hurt business and left the public with the feeling that problems with workers' comp "haven't been solved."

Insurance regulators said they would review those hikes.

"These filings can be approved or disapproved at any time," said Insurance Commissioner Georgia Flint. She also recommended the insurance companies reconsider their rate requests.

"I can assure the committee that with the data now available to us ... they will be revisited," said Associate Commissioner A.W. "Woody" Pogue. "I can assure you that I will follow up."

The number of job related injuries, benefits, medical costs and attorney involvement in workers' comp cases have all decreased since a workers' comp reform law took effect last year, according to the Texas Workers' Compensation Commission.

These reductions have resulted in a decrease in the payouts by insurance companies, yet most insurers have applied for rate increases.

Texas Democrats seek elector loyalty

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Democratic officials, mindful of the upstart candidacy of Dallas billionaire Ross Perot, said Thursday they want their presidential electors to sign loyalty oaths to the party.

The 32 Democrats who would cast Electoral College votes for president if Bill Clinton carries Texas in November should sign the oaths or not be chosen, said party Chairman Bob Slagle.

"I don't need to tell you how important it is that our presidential electors be 100 percent party loyalists this year. ... It is not just an honorary appointment," Slagle told the State Democratic Executive Committee.

"If they don't sign them, then they're not going to be electors if I have my way," Slagle said on the eve of the party's state convention, where the electors will be chosen.

"This is not fun and games. We intend to win the presidency of the United States ... and I expect Texas electors — from the Democratic Party side at least — will do the right thing in the right way," he said.

The Electoral College vote follows the November general election. A state's electors are chosen based on which candidate wins the popular vote, but there is no legal requirement that electors cast ballots for their designated candidate.

With Perot adding a wild card element this year, the usually routine Electoral College vote could determine whether a president is elected or whether the decision is thrown to the U.S. House. An elector's party loyalty could be crucial in such a case.

Slagle declined to attribute the loyalty oath plan to Perot, saying he expects Democratic electors would cast their votes for the Democratic candidate.

However, he said, "There's a very messy political situation out there. And there is no point in worrying about locking the barn after the horse has already gone away.

"I'm sure that the electors would all be persons of honor who would do the right thing.

"But since the Constitution of the United States is written like it is, and since you have no authority over them after you elect them, I think it is a proper and fair thing," Slagle said. "And when I have their oaths in hand, I certainly would not worry about it at all."

He said that while the loyalty oaths might not be legally binding, "They would be morally binding."

He said Clinton, who will speak to state convention delegates tonight, hadn't asked him to push for the pledge.

Slagle said he didn't recall that Texas Democratic electors ever have been asked to sign such an oath before. He said he knew of no past defectors.

Besides choosing the 32 electors, the convention will name the 214 Texas delegates to the Democratic National Convention being held in New York next month.

Of the 214, 127 were awarded to candidates based on the March 10 primary election results. Clinton won 94, former Massachusetts Sen. Paul Tsongas received 31 and former California Gov. Jerry Brown got two.

Another 69 will be chosen by the state convention. Clinton's campaign hopes to claim most of them, said Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, Clinton's state chairman.

"There's a real tradition for uncommitted delegates in Texas, especially in the rural areas. But we've been working hard to make sure we get as many as possible," Mauro said.

The final 18 Texans will be so-called super delegates, including the governor, former U.S. House Speaker Jim Wright and members of the Democratic National Committee.

FAMILY MATTERS

Sober relationships sometimes need help

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: My husband and I are both recovering alcoholics. I have been sober for almost two years and he has been sober for over a year. We are both very thankful for our sobriety, but our marriage still has problems. I guess I expected that once the drinking stopped, everything would get a lot better. We have both talked about this and we are both very disappointed that we still fight all the time.

May

Our arguments are differnt now than they used to be, but we still have them. Sometimes we argue over really dumb things and it ruins the entire day (or two) for both of us. We are not stupid people. We are both college graduates and have responsible jobs, but we still can't seem to work this deal out.

Do you have any ideas or things that we could try doing that might help us? We both would like to enjoy our marriage now that we are both sober, but it's really hard to right now. DISAPPOINTED

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: First of all, congratulations on your sobriety. I don't believe any real work can be done on a relationship if heavy drinking is involved.

I have several suggestions you might consider on improving your relationship.

First, each of you review your families of origin. How did your parents resolve disagreements? Did they use such negative tools as character assassination, verbal abuse, avoidance, blame, built, refusing to change, mind reading, physical abuse, etc.? Often, the way our parents resolved problems tends to be the way we resolve problems.

Each of you consider writing about how your parents resolved problems, then discussing your writings with each other. How many of those patterns are active in your relationship? Once you have identified those patterns, develop a plan to change them. For example: "I will no longer lay guilt trips on you when we argue. I will try to focus on resolving the problem."

Many couples have never set the "rules for fighting" in their relationships. Even a boxing match has rules. According to Emily Marlin in "Relationships in Recovery," some of these rules include:

■ No physical violence allowed. Physical abuse in any form always destroys the relationship.

■ Try to keep your voice down. Often when you start yelling, what you are saying gets lost in how you are saying it.

■ Say what you feel when you feel it. This is often hard if you grew up in a dysfunctional family because "numbing" was a common survival technique.

■ Don't say if it you don't mean it. Choose your words as carefully as you can. It's hard to take words back.

■ Don't hit below the belt. Avoid your partner's vulnerable spots. They have nothing to do with resolving the problem.

■ Don't blame, attack or criticize your partner. Concentrate on making "I" statements.

■ Stick to the here and now. Don't bring up old issues, third parties or other extraneous material for support.

■ Be specific. Give specfic examples rather than using terms like "you always" and "you never."

■ Give each other equal time. This means that both of you speak and listen.

■ Don't interrupt when your partner is speaking. Show respect and wait yor turn.

■ Listen without becoming defensive. Try not to launch a counterattack if your husband violates the rules. Point out the violation and encourage him to modify his appraoch.

■ Make an agreement to end fights peacefully. This may mean agreeing that it is OK to agree to disagree. You can always reschedule the discussion for another time.

Another rule I encourage couples to include is the "time out" rule: if at any time in the argument one experiences a problem with the other (say, one is getting too angry), either may call a time out. The couple will stop the argument at that point but agree to start it again at a set time (30 minutes or an hour). Rather than being an avoidance strategy, this is like the bell in a prize fight — it gives each time to go to the corner and cool off. Use the time to reflect on the fight and consider possible solutions.

If you and your husband can agree and then implement your own rules for fighting, I think you will find your relationship improving. Conflict resolution is a difficult subject but it is very amenable to structure and practice.

Many women break 'diet habit'

By Lois Kaplan
N.Y. Times News Service

"Don't diet!"

Chernik, 22, almost dieted to death. She survived anorexia, bulimia and "starvation psychosis," a disorder that causes mood swings and prevents concentration. She weighed 99 pounds at her graduation a year ago from Vermont's Middlebury College. She is 5-foot-9.

Now she weighs 137, eats whatever she wants and loves her body. She calls herself a member of the anti-diet movement, which is gaining new followers and clout as women rebel against society's message that not skinny equals not desirable.

"Women are taught that eating is something to be ashamed of," said Chernik, whose mother, Sylvia Harlen, lives in Palm Beach, Fla. "You're in the minority if you don't have some kind of eating disorder."

Women all over the United States are rebelling against what they call a media campaign to undo their bodies. They say they're sick of being pressured to look like 20-year-old magazine models and to transform their looks with crash diets that usually don't work.

Talk-show hostess Oprah Winfrey, who lost 67 pounds on a liquid diet in 1989 and inspired thousands to try the same technique, is now seen as a symbol of diet failure. She gained back most of the weight and admitted she would always have a weight problem until she found its underlying cause.

RESEARCH RELEASED in April from the National Institutes of Health shows crash diets may be detrimental to women's health. Supported by such research and government investigations into the false advertising claims of some diet companies, many women are rejecting society's obsession with their figures and joining the anti-diet movement.

The movement calls for women to quit rigid weight-loss regimens, eat according to their bodies' natural appetites and be comfortable with their sizes and figures.

The Women's Therapy Centre Institute in New York had a "Gala Benefit to Honor and Reclaim Women's Bodies and Appetites" on May 16. Speakers, including feminist Gloria Steinem, urged women to take back their bodies from the "diet/beauty industry."

'Women are taught that eating is something to be ashamed of. You're in the minority if you don't have some kind of eating disorder.'

anti-dieter

In Dayton, Ohio, psychotherapist Martha Zinger helps her patients trash their scales in public ceremonies. Twenty-five women have destroyed their scales at each of her events in the past two years.

"The scale measures their self-esteem," Zinger said. "They judge themselves and others by the pound."

Zinger sees America's emphasis on weight loss as a feminist issue, similar to the old Chinese practice of foot binding to ensure petite feet. She says advertisers, who are mostly men, tell women that they need to get rid of cellulite, have flat stomachs and model their figures on Cindy Crawford's.

These rigid images also impose psychological problems, Zinger said.

"It reduces your problems to just one problem — your weight," Zinger said. "We're at the point where it's not cool not to be on a diet. I don't want people to be fat. But the standard of what is thin and healthy is crazy."

MEDIA MESSAGES about physical desirability are ingrained in women from youth, said Adrienne Ressler, director of professional relations at the Renfrew Center, an institute in Coconut Creek, Fla., for women with eating disorders and histories of sexual abuse.

"We have to deprogram people," Ressler said. "People are realizing that the media messages manipulate women. They distract women into pursuing a biological impossibility."

But some women say the anti-diet trend should bite the dust.

"I don't subscribe to the theory," said Cindy Sanders, manager of Nutri/System diet program in West Palm Beach, Fla. "We shouldn't all have to look like 18-year-old models. But it's not OK to be 100 pounds overweight, either."

Jody Julien heads a weight-loss support group at her church, Bethany Christian Church in West Palm Beach. She said the anti-diet movement is probably filled with women who failed at dieting.

"Since they failed so many times, they say they're opposed to dieting," Julien said. "People involved in that don't believe they can be successful."

The anti-diet movement is enticing to many women, but the media messages are so imbedded that they still struggle with their weights.

"I would love to reach a place where I could accept myself," said Lori Eisenberg, a 5-foot-1 social worker from Boca Raton. "The pressure in our society to be thin is enormous and pervasive. I still want to get my weight way down."

Eisenberg's weight has yo-yoed between 130 and 170 for the past 10 years. Her family and friends urge her to keep trying to lose more.

"The ridicule is rampant," said Eisenberg, 30. "There's no question life would be easier thinner."

REBECCA ROBBINS admits that she has dieted unsuccessfully. And she vows she will never diet again.

Robbins, a 21-year-old Deerfield Beach, Fla., resident, is 5 feet tall and weighs 138 pounds. She has tried numerous weight-loss programs and health spas, loses a few pounds, and always gains it back.

"My whole life, I was told I needed to be bone-thin to have a man," said Robbins, a women's studies major at the University of Miami. "I equated being thin with being loved and finding a boyfriend."

Robbins read a book that transformed her perception of dieting — and her self-image. In "Breaking Free from Compulsive Eating" by Geneen Roth (NAL, 1986), Robbins said she learned she needs to look at her underlying problems instead of focusing on food.

"Most women don't like themselves because of the way we have been told we should look by the media," Robbins said. "I am now totally against dieting."

Lois Leissing also opposes dieting, but she doesn't plan to destroy her scale.

"I'm not that liberated," said Leissing, a 34-year-old registered nurse from West Palm Beach. "But I will never go on a diet again."

LEISSING, WHO said she is more than 90 pounds overweight, has tried many of the widely advertised diets. After failing to lose the targeted weight, she joined the Sacramento-based National Association to Advance Fat Acceptance, which helped her accept her plump self.

"I am at 98 percent peace with myself and the way I look," Leissing said. "I will always weigh three numbers. I can accept those numbers, or let them kill me."

DEAR ABBY

Grandparents' vigilance can prevent poisonings

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Your response to the poison-wary mom from Pesotum motivated me to provide the most recent poisoning statistics compiled by the American Association of Poison Control Centers. In 1991, there were 44 deaths of children under 6 years of age. However, more than 1.8 million poisonings were reported, including nearly 1.1 million accidental poisonings in children under 5 years of age.

Van Buren

Of course, these numbers represent only those poisonings that were reported to poison control centers participating in this surveillance system. Many additional unreported poisonings actually occurred.

A recent study showed that more than a third of pediatric poisonings from toxic prescription drugs involved the ingestion of a grandparent's medication. I cannot imagine any grandparent wanting to be responsible for a life-threatening illness in a grandchild. Imagine your grandchild, comatose in an intensive care unit, with a tube in the stomach, IVs in the arm and a respirator hissing in the background. Yet, grandparents are regularly implicated in childhood poisonings.

Perhaps it would help to focus attention on those household products that are extraordinarily dangerous, and limit our expectations of grandparents to keeping these extreme hazards out of the child's reach. For example, iron supplements caused 11 needless deaths in toddlers in 1991. Other causes of pediatric poisoning deaths were prescription medications, acid toilet bowl cleaners, alkaline cleaning substances (such as drain cleaners), gasoline, kerosene, lamp oil, fabric protector, charcoal lighter fluid, gum bluing and oil of wintergreen. Pesticides, windshield washing solutions and antifreeze also merit special vigilance.

Grandparents can make a difference! — TOBY LITOVITZ, M.D., PRESIDENT, AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF POISON CONTROL CENTERS, WASHINGTON, D.C.

DEAR DR. LITOVITZ: Thank you for your attention-getting letter, and for informing me of the correct 1989 statistics from the American Association of Poison Control Centers — 1,581,540 poison exposures reported to your association. Approximately 935,000 of those were accidental poisonings in children under 5 years of age, and 1,072,292 were accidental poisonings in children under the age of 18. Of special interest was the comment, "Extrapolating from reported cases to actual poisonings allows us to estimate that 2.75 million children under 5 years, and 3.16 million children under 18, were actually poisoned accidentally in 1989."

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column, you asked readers to send in their pet peeves with respect to the misuse of words. Mine is the frequent statement, especially by news media persons who say "a million and a half dollars" when they mean "one and a half million dollars."

Abby, there is a $499,999.50 difference between those two. A million and a half dollars can only mean $1 million and 50 cents. The "half" takes on the dimensions of the word following it, not that preceding it.

Why should anyone care? Perhaps because if we don't care, the younger generation will think it doesn't matter — besides, who needs mathematics anyway?

The other evening, a national news person said that the S&L scandal may ultimately cost "a trillion and a half dollars." Should I send them 50 cents and make it an even trillion?

Thanks for letting me vent my spleen. This is better for me than yelling at the TV set. — JOHN F. CHRISTMAN, EMERITUS PROFESSOR, LOYOLA UNIVERSITY

Want to spend less money? Heloise has hints for that too

By Susan Phinney
Hearst News Service

The queen of spots and smells has a new crusade for the 1990s: money-saving tips.

Heloise, the syndicated columnist whose advice appears in about 500 newspapers in 20 countries, is known for telling fans how to get stains out of everything from clothes to carpets and smells out of sneakers and cars.

Stains and odors still concern people, Heloise says, but they're really interested in saving money. She says her mail is telling her that saving money is all-important in this decade.

"We've gone from let's replace it to how can we fix it and can we make do?"

She said she's been discovered by yuppies who are learning that stained shirts can be salvaged instead of replaced, that coupons save money, and that whole chickens are cheaper than parts.

"Yuppies are doing more laundry. They're not having everything dry cleaned. They're learning how to iron and how to handwash silks. These are people in their 40s discovering things we've been preaching for 30 years," Heloise said as she raced through Seattle last week.

Heloise, 41, is promoting her new book, "Heloise from A to Z" (Perigee Books, $10.95). "It's a yuppie handbook of sorts, in dictionary form to make it easy for yuppies to read," she chuckled.

SHE POINTED out that yuppies and others aren't replacing expensive flooring or carpeting, they're fixing it. They're learning how to save money at grocery stores and they're shopping at discount stores and warehouses. They're buying in bulk. They're recycling and conserving.

Taking note of the Seattle headlines, she said water conservation became a habit in her hometown of San Antonio, two years ago when the area faced a shortage.

"Start with one thing a day," she advised, "like shutting off water while brushing teeth. It's just habits that need changing -shorter showers, or two inches of water in the tub, fewer flushes.

"Don't panic. We do have wasteful habits. We've always taken water for granted. But you'll learn to adapt," she soothed.

Adaptation could be one of Heloise's many names. Ponce Kiah Marchelle Heloise Cruse Evans was a military brat who grew up in Hawaii and Texas. Her mother, the original Heloise, started the now-famous column in 1959, and her namesake was a summer helper during teen and college years.

After graduating from Southwestern Texas State University with a degree in mathematics and a teaching certificate, Heloise II had already signed a teaching contract when she changed her mind and went to work with her mother.

"I'm glad I did. Mother was still writing to housewives, calling them her 'chickabidees' and 'honeybuns' and telling them their husbands could change the light bulbs when they got home from work. Can you imagine anyone doing that today?"

THE YOUNGER Heloise was single, so she started writing about single lifestyles and issues. When her mother died in 1977, Heloise took over, dropping the cute names and chatty format for fast — but still folksy — advice.

And over the years, she's become very tuned in to what's important to readers. "If I printed what I thought was important, I'd have no readers," she said.

When she first began getting letters about people wanting to get the pine smell out of their pine breadboxes, she was perplexed. "Did people still use breadboxes?"

Thousands of letters later, she knows they do. She also discovered there's no way to get rid of that pine scent. So she recommended using those pine breadboxes for mail, or something else.

She said she and her staff giggle a lot.

"People think what they're doing is normal. Well, it's not always normal and it's not always printable. It could be a safety hazard, or a health hazard."

Heloise is still laughing over the letter asking how to get bull semen out of a windbreaker.

The staff thought it was a joke. So they checked the postmark. It was from farm country. Then they checked with bull experts and learned that bull semen isn't necessarily delivered in a neat package; bystanders could indeed be spattered.

Ultimately, Heloise decided not to publish the letter, so her staff never came up with an actual solution, aside from standing farther from the bull.

Another writer suggested using a cold remedy on burns. The physician Heloise consulted said it was a bad idea. The writer hadn't included a return address and Heloise couldn't respond.

THEN THERE are letters that get tossed into what she calls the "S" file, the truly weird letters.

One favorite was from a woman who said she used to pray while seated on the commode. Now she prays when she dusts, and uses commode time to shred newspapers for her cat's box.

Study shows older smokers more likely to quit if heavy users

NEW YORK (AP) — People 45 or older were more likely to have stopped smoking if they smoked heavily than if they used fewer cigarettes a day, a study found.

The result "challenges one of the most common findings in studies of smoking cessation, namely, that heavier smokers are less successful than lighter smokers in quitting," researchers said.

They suggested that with advancing age, heavier smokers are more likely to experience tobacco-related health problems such as breathing difficulties, "which makes the health risks of smoking more apparent."

"Older, heavier smokers may respond to the increasing risk by quitting if they can, or if they cannot quit, by cutting down," researchers wrote.

That might turn heavy smokers into lighter smokers who are more strongly addicted to tobacco than other lighter smokers are, they said. So this could make the overall group of lighter smokers resist quitting more than usual, the researchers said.

The work is reported in the Feb. 1 issue of the American Journal of Epidemiology by researchers from the Addiction Research Foundation in Toronto, Ontario, Canada, the University of Toronto and Pennsylvania State University.

The study was based on 4,383 Americans who said they had made at least one serious attempt to stop smoking within the preceding 10 years. About 35 percent of this group was 45 or older. The overall group included 1,995 successful quitters, those who had remained tobacco-free for at least a year.

For ages 45 to 64, the successful quit rate was about 47 percent for those who smoked fewer than 25 cigarettes a day, and 54 percent for those who smoked more. For ages 65 and above, the rates were about 63 percent for the lighter smokers and 75 percent for the heavier smokers.

Repellent natural

BOUND BROOK, N.J. (AP) — Environmentally concerned homeowners can keep their lawn grass free of bugs and insects with the aid of endophytes, a natural repellent, which are a form of benevolent fungus, said Jon Loft, president of Lofts Seed Inc., which offers several grass seed varieties enhanced by endophytes. The fungus gradually grows into the seedling and is effective against surface-feeding insects such as aphids and chinch bugs.

Despair familiar to caregivers

By Christine Donnelly

With Alzheimer's disease, no day is predictable.

About 4 million Americans have the disease, and more than 70 percent of them are cared for at home, according to the Alzheimer's Association, a national nonprofit group.

"Only when people break down do you really glimpse the true despair that all caregivers face," said Jean Marks, associate executive director of the association's New York chapter.

The degenerative brain disorder may begin subtly, causing memory lapses, impaired judgment and disorientation. As it makes its fatal progression — sometimes over two decades — victims slide inexorably into dementia and leave this world as they entered it — utterly helpless.

THE CAUSE is unknown. There is no cure. Most patients — whether in nursing homes, day care centers or at home — get supervision rather than medical treatment, and that's rarely covered by insurance.

The recession only makes things worse. "It's a myth that most people quit their jobs to take care of family members at home," said Marks. "On the contrary, a daughter or daughter-in-law who had been staying home with the kids often is forced to get a job" to feed, clothe and care for the extra person.

Besides the financial and emotional burden of watching the dynamic mother she loved deteriorate, Susan Merrick had to cope with an abusive husband.

"I got to the point more than once where I thought about killing myself and I knew I would have to take her with me," said Merrick, who lives in Beaverton, Ore.

The thought of her three children always stopped her.

Merrick's mother, Gladys Steves, died last May at age 75. She'd had Alzheimer's since 1978 and ran out of money before she died, Merrick said.

"It's such a demeaning, isolating disease," said Merrick, 37, who is now divorced and planning to attend law school this fall.

"No one wants to be around someone who's losing their mind. On holidays, my own in-laws said 'Don't bring her.'"

AWARENESS OF the disease has risen dramatically in the past few years. But Merrick and other caregivers said they and their stricken loved ones were still so misunderstood that they would share the most intimate details of their lives to help build support for Alzheimer's funding and research.

Sen. John D. Rockefeller IV, D-W.Va., whose mother has Alzheimer's, co-sponsored a bill in April that would provide long-term care insurance for disabled people of all ages at a cost of $45 billion. It would pay for some nursing home and respite care and would protect the life savings of patients.

But Alzheimer's does not strike only the elderly. Andre Rivera was 53 when he was diagnosed in 1984. His wife, Kitty, already was caring for her 92-year-old father-in-law, who was confined to a wheelchair.

Mrs. Rivera, 57, of Denville, N.J., sold their electronics business and cared for her husband at home for eight years. He's been in a nursing home for the last three years.

"My life got so small. We were living in one back room because he was afraid of the house, he didn't recognize anything.

"He had no sense of reality. Watching police shows on TV, he would duck the bullets."

"I hollered 'help' a long time ago," he said. "I'm no martyr."

Now his support network extends far beyond his three daughters and their husbands.

Because of his own infirmities and his limited income, the government pays an aide to help care for Mrs. Walsh at home for 10 hours a day.

Walsh concedes the funding is unusual; the national Alzheimer's Association says only 2 percent of caregivers receive such services.

"In the beginning, it seemed like we were in this all alone; it's so easy to let the red tape frustrate you," he said. "But you can't give up."

Walsh, who has a pacemaker and an artificial hip, knows his wife might outlive him. He's confident that his vow never to put her in a nursing home will be carried on by their children.

"This disease has got my beloved Margaret licked, but it's not going to lick my family."

TODAY, RIVERA, 62, cannot talk or feed himself. He wears a helmet because he walks into walls. He's incontinent. "How do you describe heartbreak? The watching and knowing it's only going to get worse," she said.

He's also unaware of the pain he causes her with detailed descriptions of past lovers. "He'd be mortified if he had any idea what he was saying, so I'm glad he doesn't," she said.

Mrs. Misrach, 55, a medical secretary in Portland, Ore., took care of him from 1987 until last January. She looked for a nursing home after he set a fire in the house. Now Misrach, 61, is in a special Alzheimer's wing.

A nursing home costs an average of $30,000 a year, while at-home care adds up to about $18,000.

Determination necessary trait for caregivers

He worries more about his wife, Margaret, 67, who's had Alzheimer's disease for 11 years. She lies upstairs in bed, as helpless as a baby. There's no flicker of recognition for her husband of 36 years, but that hasn't shaken the vow he made when she was first afflicted.

"I promised myself that she would always be at home and be an important part of this family, with love and dignity," he said.

Over the last decade, Walsh, who left his job at a telephone manufacturer in 1982, has mastered the system to get the best care for his wife. He joined support groups, subscribed to medical journals and hounded the government for financial aid.

IT'S YOUR LIFE

Caregivers may experience negative feelings

By Steve Edwards

QUESTION: Why are feelings of resentment, frustration and consequently of guilt common for the adult child in a caregiver role?

Edwards

ANSWER: There are several factors involved that lead to these feelings on the adult child's part.

First, the adult child must deal with restrictions on their privacy and personal freedom, often resulting in an overwhelming sense of confinement. This may happen at a time when other family obligations were finally relieved.

Second, adult children often have little basis to judge where to "draw the line" in time and energy devoted to caring for a parent. It is not uncommon for the adult child to struggle with the question of responsibility to parent, family and self. The adult child's feeling of resentment and guilt may lead to obscuring needs of both themselves and the parent. The common result is called "role reversal," where the child becomes parent to their own parent; often re-enacting the earlier relationship in reverse. This is destructive because it suggests that the parent has returned to infancy and childishness. Parents may need some of the caretaking procedures of a child, but they are not the same as a child. They may have years of experience behind them plus humiliation included. The scenario is destructive to the child as well, in that he/she is denying that the parent is still the parent psychologically.

QUESTION: Do people stop learning as they age?

ANSWER: No! In fact, older people can and do learn. The capacity to learn new things and relearn the old is not necessarily diminished by old age. Learning patterns may change from youth and the speed of learning may slow down, but the ability to learn appears to be culturally determined, not restricted by years.

QUESTION: Is boredom a major problem in retirement?

ANSWER: Many people fear retirement because they have no idea as to what they will do with 40 extra hours a week. An active mind and body will reduce these fears and contribute to a healthy attitude. The important factor to remember is that opportunities for development of ideas and needs can be satisfied in retirement.

Attitude, more than boredom, is a key factor in retirement. Your attitude is based on the way you look at life. If you look at it with excitement and inquisitiveness, then your attitude has made the investment in yourself grow tenfold. Many people tend to think of age as synonymous with wrinkles, hardening of the arteries, boredom and unhappiness. What a delusion. A number of persons never learn what true beauty is until they reach retirement. Rather than being bored, your retirement can offer your tremendous opportunities, new ways of doing some of the same old things you did in the past, plus new excitements and adventures. You choose whether you make the most of them.

Kerrville's 21st annual folk music festival turns into family reunion

By Greg Perlinski
Associated Press writer

KERRVILLE — The folks have returned to Quiet Valley Ranch.

For the 21st year, Kerrville is hosting an event as much family reunion as it is a music festival.

And eight days of pre-festival rain didn't dampen the familial spirit. As the sun came out briefly at the opening concert at Rod Kennedy's 1992 Kerrville Folk Festival, hello hugs were plentiful among staff and visitors.

Central to the festival family are the 350 staff members who travel from as far away as New York and California to volunteer their time to 25,000 guests who roam the ranch as daytrippers or campers during the 18-day festival.

No pay, but all the good music they can listen to.

Vern Crawford, a bread and toy maker who traveled from Illinois, has been a staff member for 18 years.

"This is fairly the greatest music festival in the country," Crawford said, peering out from behind his salt and pepper beard that travels from chin to chest. "It's the best," he said with a grin.

But there is a serious side to Crawford's presence at the festival. Dressed in a red staff T-shirt with a radio strapped to his side and plugged into his ear, Crawford works security at the main gate.

"We're out here visible enough so if any one is having a problem they can find us. We're really hospitality; our first name is hospitality."

Backstage is another longtime Quiet Valley staff member, Mack Partain, who has been the festival's stage manager for 21 years.

Partain, who is assisted by Brian Urban, a 14-year veteran, travels from Austin each year to attend the festival.

"This is my vacation," Partain said. "I'm down here every year to work myself to death for three weeks."

Like so many other "Kerrverts," Partain became associated with the festival as a guest and through his involvement with the folk music scene in Dallas.

"I came down to the first festival (in 1972) from Dallas, and the guy who was supposed to manage the stage didn't show up. At the last minute I just jumped in and helped, and I've been doing it ever since."

Another familiar face belongs to Lee Green, who met and later married his wife, Cheryl, at the summer festival. Green is a troubleshooter and does what is needed in his colorful style and appearance.

Kennedy says most people come to him through recommendation from current staff members. Some are professionals, others walk in off the streets and others are home grown.

"A couple dozen are second generation, children of staff members. They came here as little tykes and grew up with us.

"The staff is kind of like family. They're all treated the same," Kennedy said.

But amid the good feeling among Kennedy's people, there have been times when some people have been asked not to return to the ranch.

"We've removed a half-dozen from the staff because they couldn't maintain their dignity," Kennedy said. "Once some guy stole a car somewhere. The sheriff's department came out, but the guy already was gone. We never did hear what happened."

This weekend, the final three days of this year's festival, Kennedy will mark yet another notch on his entrepreneurial belt.

He may pause for a moment to savor another successful festival, but it won't be long before he starts preparations for 1993.

New folks take the Quiet Valley stage alongside veterans, returning in homage to the ranch where they got their start. Kennedy pals Peter Yarrow and David Amram are annual performers.

In the past few years, folk legends Willis Alan Ramsey and Shawn Philips made comeback appearances at the Kerrville Folk Festival after long absences from performing.

Among the performers in this final weekend are the Austin Lounge Lizards, Shake Russell, Killbilly and Butch Hancock tonight.

On Saturday, Tish Hinojosa and Eliza Gilkyson will take the stage along with David Garza, David Broza, Chuck Pyle, Tom Paxton and Bootfare from England.

Timbuk 3 will highlight Sunday's closing concert. Other performers include Larry Long, Steve Seskin, Country Gazette, Tom Bail & Kenny Sultan, Dana Cooper and the Paul Glasse Sextet.

Houston Zoo's snow leopard gives birth to 3 cubs

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Zoo has some new residents — three spotted balls of fluff with long tails.

A 6-year-old reclusive snow leopard named Honey gave birth last Saturday to the three gray cubs, all in good health. The cubs represent 10 percent of the 30 snow leopards expected to be born in captivity worldwide this year.

The sex of the 5-inch-long cubs isn't known because zoo personnel have decided not to touch them until they're about 6 weeks old. They will be named at that time.

Curator David Ruhter said snow leopards become disturbed easily. Cat keeper Carl Hardin is the only person allowed near the isolated den inside the zoo's compound.

Two years ago, Honey accidentally killed the sole cub from her first litter by puncturing its lung with her tooth. Ruhter thinks she was trying to move the cub to protect it from people nearby.

Other zoo keepers can watch the feline family via a video monitor, and the public also will be able to look at the monitor beginning Saturday.

Zoo visitors will be able to view the cubs directly in late July.

The cubs most likely will remain in Houston until they are 2 or 3. At breeding age, they will be sent to another zoo as part of an organized, worldwide breeding program for the endangered species.

Handyman faces jail for trashy yard

AUSTIN (AP) — A 61-year-old handyman's new job is to clean up his yard within seven days — or face six months in jail for violating a 1988 court order.

State District Judge Mary Pearl Williams on Wednesday sentenced Raymond Blanchette to the jail term plus a $500 fine for failing to remove tons of trash from his yard in northeast Austin.

The judge suspended Blanchette's sentence for seven days to give him one more chance to comply. She also ordered that if the handyman is jailed, he will be freed as soon as his yard has been cleaned.

'Clean what up? They didn't say. If they gave me specific instructions to comply, OK.'

— Raymond Blanchette

"As soon as you comply, the keys to the jail are in your pocket, and you can walk right out," Williams said during the sentencing.

The Vietnam War veteran, who repairs cars and appliances for others at no cost, said he wasn't sure whether he would comply with the order.

"Clean what up? They didn't say. If they gave me specific instructions to comply, OK. But I have rights," Blanchette said.

Blanchette already has done time for his yard. In 1988 and again in 1989, he served a total of nine months in jail for violating court orders.

Doctor warns obese teens to slim down

DALLAS (AP) — Overweight teen-agers can avoid permanent hardening of their blood vessels by slimming down, a heart researcher says.

The blood vessels of some obese teens change from flexible tubes that can easily expand to carry more blood when it's needed into relatively inflexible pipes with thicker walls and less capacity, according to a study reported in the June issue of Hypertension, published by the American Heart Association.

"I believe these obese adolescents are at risk for developing hypertension (high blood pressure) and other significant problems later on in their lives," said Dr. Albert P. Rocchini of the University of Minnesota.

However, the process is reversible if steps are taken soon enough, he said.

"We found the blood vessel changes can be reversed by weight loss, at least during adolescence," Rocchini said. "Our findings provide even more reasons to help these kids lose weight during adolescence, rather than waiting until the changes can become permanent."

In research done at the University of Michigan, Rocchini studied 95 obese adolescents, ages 10 to 17, and 40 adolescents who were not obese. Doctors measured changes in blood flow in the forearms of obese subjects who underwent a 20-week weight-loss program.

Dallas pair develops gay yellow pages

DALLAS (AP) — Two Dallas residents have developed a gay and lesbian yellow-page directory to help the city's homosexual community identify businesses that are "gay-friendly."

Dan Edwards and Kay Christian's Dallas Lambda Pages are expected to be on the market in two weeks. About 50,000 copies, consisting of about 55 pages, will be published.

"If I have a plumber into my house, it's obvious that I have a gay lifestyle," Edwards said. "There's a photograph of my lover on the wall. I don't want to have to pull that off the wall. ... so I'd rather hire a plumber who is gay or gay-friendly."

Although their publication will be the first of its kind in Dallas, similar directories are published in San Francisco, New York, Los Angeles, Chicago and Houston.

Lambda, the 11th letter of the Greek alphabet, is the international symbol for gays and lesbians, the pair said.

The directory will include ads taken out by 150 professionals and business owners in the Dallas area.

"We have everything from exterminators to physicians," Ms. Christian said.

The directory will include a disclaimer that says advertisers in Lambda are not necessarily gay or lesbian.

Meat goats alternative enterprise

Meat goats provide an attractive alternative and complementary enterprise to the ranching economy. Ranchers, large and small, have successfully implemented goat enterprises on their properties.

Kiker

Goats can use roughages — such as brush — that cattle do not use. Properly managed, they do not compete with cattle or white-tailed deer. Three kid crops every two years provide extra income to the ranch business.

Consumers are also demanding a lean supply of meat. Although small amounts (less than 1.5 pounds per person) of mutton and goat meat are consumed in the United States, "chevron" provides a source of protein for many parts of the world. Goat is usually consumed as baked or barbecued "cabrito" (very young goat) in the Southwest. Other parts of the country prefer "chevron" (meat from a more mature goat). Americans of certain ethnic origins do enjoy eating goat meat and will demonstrate a willingness to pay relative high prices for the privilege.

There are presently 350,000 meat goats in Texas, and according to the Texas Agricultural Statistics Service, the numbers have increased significantly in the past year. This greater interest has resulted in more requests for production and marketing information. The Texas Agricultural Extension Service launched a South Texas Spanish Goat Initiative in 1989 to address these educational needs.

The Extension Service, with support from the Soil Conservation Service, Texas Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Diversification Program, and private foundations, has collected information from demonstrations and ranchers to transfer to interested persons. Research also has been conducted by scientists with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station and Texas A&I University.

Several bulletins have been published and are available upon request. Three conferences and four field days have been held to provide information to interested persons. A marketing study is under way.

A major conference will be held in Laredo on July 8-10 to summarize current knowledge on goat production and marketing. This international meeting will discuss meat goats in the United States, Mexico, South America and Africa. Marketing pathways will be addressed by Frank Pinkerton, goat extension specialist with the E. "Kika" de la Garza Goat Research Institute at Langston University in Oklahoma.

Concurrent sessions will discuss management practices to meet nutritional and health requirements of meat goats. Breeding practices and production systems to maximize kid crops will be discussed. Another session will discuss grazing considerations as they impact rangeland vegetation (including brush management) and goat nutrition and diets. Predator avoidance strategies will be discussed in a breakout session as will other options in the goat business. This includes cashmere, mohair and dairy options.

Experts from several countries are scheduled to speak at this conference. Presentations will be simultaneously translated from Spanish to English and vice-versa.

A major objective of the conference is to discuss the formation of a meat goat marketing cooperative or association. Personnel from the Texas Department of Agriculture will present information on this proposal.

The conference is open to anyone interested in the meat goat industry potential in production or marketing.

The conference is scheduled to be held at the La Posada Hotel in Laredo. For more information and registration materials call George Gonzales, county extension agent in Laredo, at (512) 721-2626.

Information may also be requested from Wayne Hanselka, extension range specialist, or Joe Paschal, extension livestock specialist in Corpus Christi. Telephone (512) 265-9203 or fax (512) 265-9434.

Little League founder dies

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — Carl Stotz, who founded Little League baseball a half century ago, died Thursday. He was 82.

Stotz died at Williamsport Hospital after being admitted last week for coronary problems.

"It's the end of an era," said Steve Keener, a spokesman for Little League Baseball Inc. "But that the program affects millions of children is certainly a nice thing to be remembered for."

Stotz founded Little League in Williamsport in 1939, and the organization has since expanded internationally. The first Little League World Series game was played in Williamsport in 1947.

Astro fans angry

HOUSTON (AP) — Baseball Commissioner Fay Vincent was shaken by the angry response he received from fans upset because he said Houston should be more supportive of efforts to sell the Astros, national talk show host Larry King said.

Vincent

Vincent was on King's radio show late Tuesday night, a day after he told Houston reporters that the media and fans should be more supportive of the Astros to help facilitate a sale of the team by owner John McMullen.

The phone-in portion of Vincent's hour-long appearance was dominated with rancorous calls from Houston.

"He was visibly shaken," said King, who considers Vincent a "good friend."

"At one point, he looked at me, and the aide who came with him, as if to say, 'This is unbelievable!'" King told The Houston Post in a telephone interview Wednesday.

"People seemed to be saying, 'We hate you (McMullen) so much we'll lose baseball rather than have you make an extra dollar selling this team,' " King said. "I think Fay was shocked by all their emotion and anger."

Two thumbs down

The reviews are in, but not exactly sparkling for Portland

By Jesse Barkin
N.Y. Times News Service

CHICAGO — Portland Trail Blazers coach Rick Adelman took in a movie after Wednesday night's 33-point loss to the Chicago Bulls in Game 1 of the NBA final.

It was a tale of terror, a horror story to be sure. It starred Michael Jordan as the monster who ate Portland. And it was so engrossing that Adelman felt he had to watch it over and over again.

"I had the good fortune of looking at it last night and again this morning with my staff, then again with the team. So I had a triple feature," Adelman said. "It was kind of like a Clint Eastwood movie, except it wasn't 'The Good, the Bad and the Ugly.' It was the bad, the bad and the real ugly."

The Blazers want desperately to forget about Wednesday night and focus on what they need to do in tonight's Game 2 at Chicago Stadium. They know if they get out of town with a win, not only will the pain of Game 1 be erased, so will Chicago's homecourt advantage.

On the other side of the coin, the Bulls have been in this situation before. They blew out Cleveland in Game 1 of the Eastern Conference final, only to lose to the Cavaliers in Game 2 at the Stadium.

"After last night's game we talked about learning a lesson from the series we had with New York and Cleveland, and about losing the homecourt advantage," Bulls coach Phil Jackson said. "I would say Portland's approach to Game 2 would just be to put last night's game behind you, stepping up the team's overall intensity, especially on defense."

But was Game 1 a fluke blowout — a situation where Jordan, already the best player in the game, elevated his game to an unfathomable, untouchable new level — or was it truly indicative of the relative strengths of the two teams?

"I know Phil says we overmatch them at every position," Adelman said, "but I have to doubt that after last night. I believed him until last night. They're so quick and so athletic. I don't think there's a team in the league with people like Jordan and (Horace) Grant and (Scottie) Pippen, who are quicker at their positions.

"It's not something we can't overcome, it's just something we have to realize."

Clearly, it was a lot more than Jordan's 35 first-half points and six three-pointers that led to the 104-68 lead Chicago took into the fourth quarter. Daring Jordan too shoot and failing to get a hand in his face on his jumpers was a mistake Clyde Drexler probably won't make again, but it was only part of the story.

The Blazers, the best rebounding team in the league, allowed Chicago 16 offensive boards, including a whopping 11 in the

Seles, Graf to meet in finals

By Stephen Wilson
AP Sports Writer

■ Men's Semifinals, 9 a.m., CBS (Cable Ch. 8), noon, ESPN.

PARIS — Steffi Graf lost the first set 6-0. Monica Seles trailed 4-2 in the third. Yet both recovered in time to reach the French Open final.

Seles, the defending champion and top seed, played a brilliant final four games Thursday to overcome Gabriela Sabatini 6-3, 4-6, 6-4. In a breathtaking display, Seles hit seven consecutive clean winners at one stage to erase Sabatini's lead.

Sabatini didn't know what hit her.

"When I was up 4-2, I thought I had a chance to the win the match," she said. "Suddenly, she started hitting very hard. I don't know where she got the power. I was just defending myself. There wasn't much I could do."

Graf, who lost to Arantxa Sanchez Vicario 6-0, 6-2 in the semifinals last year, appeared headed for the same fate before raising her game and coming back to beat the Spaniard 0-6, 6-2, 6-2.

"The most important thing is that I kept myself going," said Graf, the No. 2 seed. "I just pushed myself. In the second set, I just pumped myself up and it kind of worked."

Seles, who lost to Sabatini in the finals of the Italian Open last month, seemed to have reasserted her dominance when she won the first set convincingly in 37 minutes.

But with the capacity crowd chanting "Gaby! Gaby!," Sabatini came back strongly in the second set, hitting high-percentage looping topspin shots and making few errors.

Sabatini pumped her fists and shouted "Vamos" while saving three break points to hold serve for 4-3 after being down 0-40. She broke for the set at 5-4, rifling a backhand pass down the line to reach 15-40 and forcing Seles into an error on the next point.

Sabatini kept the momentum going into the final set.

CWS

OMAHA, Neb. — Steve Rodriguez's seventh-inning grand slam gave the seventh-seeded Pepperdine Waves a 5-4 victory over Texas on Thursday night and a berth in the College World Series championship game.

"He threw me a pitch I was looking for and I hit it out," Rodriguez said of Texas pitcher Brooks Kieschnick. "He was tired. His fastball had lost some of its velocity."

Kieschnick (11-3) earlier in the day was named player of the year by the American Baseball Coaches Association. Longhorn coach Cliff Gustafson said the sophomore right-hander was the Longhorn he had to go with in that situation.

"There is no one I'd rather have on the mound than Brooks," Gustafson said. "He ran out of gas. I never thought of taking him out. Rodriguez was not expected to hit one out."

"I proved him wrong," Rodriguez said.

Pepperdine (47-11-1), in its first title game in two CWS appearances, will play the winner of Friday night's game between top-ranked Miami and Cal State Fullerton. The winners meet Saturday.

Texas (49-16) finishes fourth, the 15th time in his record 16 CWS appearances that Gustafson's teams finished that high.

Pepperdine set a CWS record with 24 consecutive scoreless innings, breaking the mark of 22 set by Florida State in 1970. The streak ended when Paxton Hickman lined a three-run homer to right off Waves relief ace Steve Montogomery for a 3-1 lead.

Montogomery (10-2) had come on after starter Steve Duda hit pinch-hitter Doug Pettit and gave up only his second hit of the game, both singles by Tim Harkrider, with one out in the seventh. Hickman's second homer of the series and third of the season also snapped Pepperdine's string of scoreless postseason innings at

Big Spring headed to state tournament

By Bill Price
Staff writer

Improbable? Certainly.

Impossible? Don't tell it to the Big Spring Steers.

Big Spring held off a last-inning rally by Lamesa to hang on for a 6-5 win in the Class 4A Region I baseball final Thursday at Angels Stadium.

The Steer win sends Big Spring, which had never won in the postseason before this year, to the state tournament next week in Austin. Not bad for a team that started the season 1-7 and is just now over the .500 mark with a 15-14-1 record.

But if it weren't for the arm of Steer center fielder Abel Hilario, this game might still be in progress.

With two outs, the bases loaded and Big Spring ahead 6-4 in the bottom of the seventh, Lamesa's Jimmy Rodriguez hit the ball to short center, driving in the Golden Tornadoes' fifth run in the form of Michael Garcia and sending Michael Lucio to the plate from second base for the apparent tying run.

Hilario had the arm to make the play work for the Steers, though, as he picked it up and fired it home, where Lucio was tagged out to end the game.

"I knew I could get it there and I put everything I had into it. I was due for one. The last time I did that was against Lamesa in the Snyder tournament," Hilario said.

"I just wanted Abel to have the chance to field the ball and throw it. I knew he could throw a strike if he had the chance," said Steer coach Bobby Doe.

Hilario's game-saving throw was just the last in a succession of events that must leave the Tors shaking their heads in wonder.

Lamesa (23-7) out-hit Big Spring 13-5, and carried a 4-0 lead into the fifth inning. Lucio was cruising on the mound, having allowed one hit through the first four frames. Then disaster hit.

Lucio, a lanky lefthander who entered the game with a 10-1 record, started the fifth by walking Jon Downey, giving up a bloop single to Mike Ross and walking John Kennedy to load the bases with no outs. That's when Tor coach Tony Griego yanked him in favor of Wesley Diaz.

Chaps sign 'Stang

Midland College completed a West Texas coup Thursday when it announced the signing of Class 4A state medalist Chad Campbell, of Andrews.

With the National Junior College Athletic Association cutting back international signings to 25-percent of the total scholarships offered in each sport, MC went after — and got — virtually every player it hoped to sign.

Campbell was first medalist at this year's Midland Invitational tournament, with rounds of 70 and 72 at Green Tree and Ranchland Hills Country Clubs.

He also set a school record with a 70.7 scoring average in District 3-4A play this season, and a 72 in his four years at Andrews.

Other Midland College signings for the 1992-93 season include Shawn Savage, of Plainview; Greg Johnson, of Amarillo High; Judd Burkett, of Amarillo Tascosa; Jason Brooks, of Georgetown, and Class 2A regional medalist Bryan Baize, of Olton.

Baker's drive measured in at 309 yards, two feet, three inches.

Runner-up was Paul Neatherlin, whose shot was taped at 306 yards, six inches.

Both Baker and Neatherlin will travel to Houston's Meyer Park Golf Center for the district event, August 29.

Alternates in the event were Don Bucklin (297 yards, four inches) and James Brimer (285 yards).

The national long drive contest will be held at Boca Raton, Fla. Dates have yet to be announced.

Massey, Wootan sign

Greenwood senior Robin Wootan has signed a letter of intent to play basketball for the McMurry University Lady Indians.

Wootan, a 6-0 post/forward played for her father at both Greenwood and Sands high schools.

Sul Ross State also announced the signing of Midland Lee senior Brian Massey, a 6-8 post.

"Brian impressed me with his hustle and ability to run the court," Lobos head coach Roger Grant said. "He has the potential to be an oustanding rebounder and defensive player."

Fourteen netters win

The Big Tootsie "Everybody Wins" tennis tournament awarded trophies to 14 competitors last weekend at Midland Lee High School and Midland College.

Kimberley Rankin took first place honors in the 'A' division, while Hope Murray and John Kleckner placed second and third.

In the 'B' division, first through sixth places were won by Abbey Coatney, Marisa Lanham, Jenna Kelly, Candice Fulgham, Travis Kleckner and April Johnston.

In the 'C' division, first through fifth place winners were Amy Betancourt, Bonnie McMillan, Kim Pearson, Lindsay Hanlon and Erin Kelly.

STEERS: Big Spring overcomes tough start

(From 1C)

Michael Garcia fielded the ball and tossed it home for the force out. That brought up Brandon Rogers with the bases still full and two outs.

Rogers hit a high hopper up the middle the somehow stayed out of the glove of both Lamesa second baseman Jason Moreno and shortstop Marty Martinez. The base hit drove in two runs.

"I was trying to get my cuts and to be productive, and finally came through. After the first time through the order, Coach told us to take a couple of pitches and make him throw strikes," Rogers said.

Rogers' hit brought up Todd Parish with runners on second and third. His ground ball to short was booted by Marty Martinez, allowing both runners to score to tie the game at 4-4.

Parish again had a chance to be a hero in the top of the seventh with the score still 4-4. His two-out bouncer went over third base to drive home the game-winning runs.

"I kind of hit down on it and I didn't know if it would go that far or not. He (Diaz) threw a curveball and I just hit down on it," Parish said.

So now it's on to Austin and the Final Four, where the Steers take on an as of yet undetermined opponent next Thursday. After the dismal start to the season and second-place finish to Sweetwater in District 3-4A, the trip can only be icing on the cake.

"We had a tough schedule early in the year. I just told the kids to improve every outing, and that's what they did. No matter what, we'll have some big shoes to fill next year," Doe said.

"After the first few games it never entered my mind that we would go to Austin. Thank God. I think it was more everybody's prayers for us than our playing well," Rogers said. "We will just go down there, play as well as we can and see where we go from there."

Estonia's Kaljurand heats up NCAA track event

Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas — Brigham Young's Anu Kaljurand, who will be the only woman on the Estonian Olympic track and field team, won the NCAA heptathlon championship Thursday with the second-highest score in the meet's history.

Kaljurand, 23, a junior from Tallinn, finished the two-day, seven-event competition in the University of Texas' hot and humid Memorial Stadium with 6,142 points.

Only 1988 Olympic gold medalist Jackie Joyner-Kersee of UCLA, who compiled 6,365 points in 1983, has amassed more points than Kaljurand in the collegiate championships.

Kaljurand also became the third-best collegiate performer of all time. Joyner-Kersee is the leader with 6,718 points in 1985 and Marlene Harmon of Cal State-Northridge is second with 6,215 in 1983.

The heptathlon was the only final Thursday, when the program also included preliminaries, qualifying and semifinals in 17 events. Fourteen finals will be held Friday and 24 on Saturday, the final day of the meet.

Kaljurand is elated about competing at Barcelona, where she will be joined by six members of the men's team — the first time Estonia will be represented in the Olympics since 1936.

"This is a feeling I haven't had," she said. "It's so wonderful. I didn't dare to dream about it.

"Now, it feels great. It will be something when I can represent my country and see my flag."

Kaljurand, the first Baltic athlete to win an NCAA title, suffered a broken left foot while finishing second in the long jump at the 1986 World Junior Championships in Athens. After finishing second again in the same event in the 1988 world juniors at Sudbury, Ontario, she re-injured the foot.

"They (Soviet sports officials) said they were not interested in me any more," she said.

That year, Kaljurand finished fourth in the NCAA heptathlon. She improved to second last year, behind Sharon Jaklofsky of Louisiana State.

Kaljurand's pivotal event was the javelin, the next-to-last event in the competition. She vaulted from third to first with a throw of 173 feet, 2 inches, the best of her career.

"Overall, everything was decent," Kaljurand said of her performance, "but the javelin was great."

While Kaljurand's performance was impressive, so was the 56-2½-foot triple jump by Arkansas' Brian Wellman, the defending champion.

Wellman's jump, the best by a collegian this year, led a three-man Arkansas advance into Saturday's final. Joining him were Gary Johnson (53-4½) and NCAA indoor champion Erick Walder (52-10).

Walder, Wellman and Johnson finished 1-3-4, respectively, in leading Arkansas to its ninth consecutive indoor title in March at Indianapolis.

It was only the sixth jump of the outdoor season for Wellman, a senior, who has been bothered by a spinal injury since before the indoor championships.

He said he didn't take any warmups at the indoor meet because of the pain, "but jumped (in the meet) because we needed the points."

"He's fired up for this meet — it's his last (for Arkansas)," coach John McDonnell said.

"I hope he's got another 56 in him Saturday."

Braves sign Carey Paige

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Braves on Thursday signed three of their selections in Monday's free agent draft, including the No. 3 pick, right-handed pitcher Carey Paige of Abilene, Texas.

Paige, 18, a 6-foot-3, 175-pounder from Cooper High School, will report to West Palm Beach of the Gulf Coast League.

Also signed were No. 7 choice Ken Warner, 17, a second baseman from St. Helena High School in Greensburg, La.; and No. 10 selection right-handed pitcher John Clonz, 21, of Virginia Tech.

Warner was assigned to West Palm Beach. Clonz will start at Pulaski of the Appalachian League.

CWS: Texas finishes fourth in nation

(From 1C)

2-3, dating to a regional semifinal against Hawaii.

"You always go back and say 'I should have done this,'" Wave coach Andy Lopez said of his decision to pull Duda. "But only for a moment. I'm confident in Steve Montgomery."

The Longhorns added a fourth run when Calvin Murray singled, stole second and went to third when the throw bounced into center field. He scored on a wild pitch. Montgomery closed the door thereafter.

Down 4-1, Pepperdine rallied with singles by Mark Wasikowski, Scott Vollmer and Eric Ekdahl, his first hit in 11 CWS at-bats, to load the bases for Rodriguez, who then muscled his second homer of the series.

Vollmer had singled home Wasikowski after his double in the second for the only run of the game through six innings.

Words fly at NCAA golf

Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — Two golfers at the NCAA championships were assessed two-stroke penalties on Thursday for violating the tournament's misconduct rule.

Georgia Tech's Jimmy Johnston and Stanford's Notah Begay were penalized, the latter for comments he said he made to himself while reading his scorecard in the scorer's tent.

Begay, who bogeyed Nos. 17 and 18 to finish at 1-over-par 73, said he was mumbling to himself when official Jim Stahl, who overheard the comments, warned the sophomore he could be assessed a penalty.

"He kept egging me on," Begay said. "He asked me who I was talking to and I told him I was talking to myself. I told him I didn't want to argue and he told me he wasn't going to give me a penalty."

Begay said he walked away, joined several teammates and then related what had transpired in the scorer's tent.

"The official heard me talking and really got mad," Begay said.

Begay conceded he had used a sarcastic tone in his conversation with Stahl inside the tent.

"I told him, 'Thank you for being so considerate, sir,'" Begay said. "I wasn't in the best mental state and I guess he wasn't having a great day either."

Begay said his playing partners didn't consider his actions a violation.

"The rule says it's supposed to be a public display of anger. Both of the guys in my group understood I was talking to myself."

Georgia Tech appealed the penalty on Johnston but was turned down.

Mark Simpson, the chairman of the NCAA men's golf committee, said in both cases the players had violated the misconduct rule.

Three tied for lead at LPGA McDonald's

Associated Press

WILMINGTON, Del. — Veterans Nancy Lopez and Ayako Okamoto, and unheralded Katie Peterson-Parker shot 4-under-par 67s on Thursday to take the first-round lead at the McDonald's Classic.

Lopez, a 16-year pro and a member of the LPGA Hall of Fame, shot 34-33 over the 6,389-yard, par-71 DuPont Country Club.

Okamoto, in her 12th year on the tour, shot a 33-34, with five birdies and a bogey. Parker, a struggling second-year pro not even listed among the top-100 money winners, shot 32-35 with four birdies.

Deb Richard, who was third last week at East Lansing, Mich., and Tina Barrett, who has won one tournament in four years, were one stroke back.

Rain plays havoc at PGA Memorial

Associated Press

DUBLIN, Ohio — A chilly, misty rain blunted the teeth of Jack Nicklaus' Muirfield Village Golf Club course and turned the first round of the Memorial tournament into an exercise of patience and putting.

"The rain made the golf course play easier — longer but easier," Nolan Henke said Thursday after a 7-under-par 65 gave him a 2-shot lead, a bit of a shock and no idea at all where it may lead.

"I played two practice rounds and did not make a birdie in 36 holes. I could not make a putt from 4 feet. Literally.

"Today they went in for some reason. I guess the rain helped. It slowed the greens so my power jabs only went four feet by the hole instead of six or seven," Henke said.

Mark Brooks, alone in second with a 67, also pointed to the softer, rain-slowed greens as the reason for some generally low scores.

"The rain takes quite a bit of the bite out of the greens," Brooks said. "You still have to be careful, but they're not near what they can be.

"In the rain, it's a patience game," he said. "You have your rain suit. You have your umbrella. You try to keep your clubs dry. And you stay patient and go about your business. It's not that bad out there.

"But if you're not playing well, those things can start wearing on you and you go from bad to worse," Brooks said.

U.S. Amateur champion Mitch Voges could testify to that.

He went from bad to worse to an 87 — by eight shots the high score of the day.

"Humiliation is a probably pretty good word," he said.

Houston waxes Giants in Candlestick

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — The first nine Houston batters reached base safely and the Astros scored eight runs in the first inning Thursday night en route to a 12-6 victory against San Francisco.

Winner Jimmy Jones (3-0) gave up six hits and four runs in eight innings. Ken Caminiti led the offense with four hits, two RBIs and two runs scored.

Loser Gil Heredia (2-1) faced seven batters and did not record an out, giving up five singles and two walks. His ERA went from 2.08 to 6.92 by allowing seven earned runs.

Craig Biggio and Steve Finley singled to start the first, and Jeff Bagwell walked to load the bases. Eric Anthony forced in the first run with a walk, and Caminiti followed with a run-scoring single. Luis Gonzalesz then drove in two runs with a single to put the Astros ahead 4-0.

After Rafael Ramirez hit an RBI single for a 5-0 lead, Kelly Downs relieved Heredia. He walked Ed Taubensee to load the bases and then walked Jones to force in a run. Biggio grounded out to score another run and Taubensee, who took third, scored on a wild pitch to make it 8-0.

The Astros fell one batter short of tying a 23-year team record of 10 straight batters reaching base, set on July 11, 1969 against Cincinnati.

Will Clark's RBI single and Cory Snyder's sacrifice fly scored two runs in the bottom of the first. But Jones allowed only two more hits until the eighth, when Willie McGee doubled and Clark homered.

Gonzalez and Ramirez each had three RBIs for Houston.

Pirates 7, Mets 2

PITTSBURGH — Barry Bonds celebrated Bobby Bonilla's return to Pittsburgh with a homer, double and three runs scored and the Pirates rode Doug Drabek's pitching to a victory against the New York Mets.

Jose Lind had a two-run single in the second following a rain delay of 2:03 as the Pirates won for the fifth time in seven games to maintain their National League East lead. The Mets fell two games back.

Doug Drabek (4-4), winless in May, allowed six hits in 7 1-3 innings to win for the first time in eight starts and outduel slumping Dwight Gooden (4-6), who lasted 5 1-3 innings.

Gooden, 11-8 lifetime against the Pirates, gave up five runs and six hits and hurt himself with a run-scoring two-base throwing error in the fifth.

Bonilla went 0 for 4 and never hit the ball out of the infield in his first game back in Three Rivers Stadium since signing a $29.5 million contract with his hometown Mets. Bonilla was a four-time all-star in his six seasons in Pittsburgh.

Bonilla drew mostly boos and a smattering of cheers in his four at-bats and was booed every time his name was announced. Pirates organist Vince Lascheid played "Take the Money and Run" when he batted and one stadium banner read, "Bobby Booonilla, Do You Like N.Y. Monilla?"

Mariners 10, Indians 3

CLEVELAND — Kevin Mitchell hit two home runs, including his first career grand slam, and rookie Dave Fleming won his eighth straight decision as the Seattle Mariners overpowered the Cleveland Indians.

Ken Griffey Jr. also homered twice for the Mariners, who ended their three-game losing streak and Cleveland's three-game winning streak. Mitchell had five RBIs to equal his career high and Griffey had four as the Mariners hammered Denis Boucher (1-1).

Fleming (8-1) moved into a tie with Boston's Roger Clemens and Texas' Kevin Brown for the American League lead in wins. The left-hander is off to the best start in team history and is one away from Scott Bankhead's 1989 team record of nine consecutive victories.

Fleming allowed one run and three hits in seven innings, walking none and striking out three. He retired 15 straight hitters from the second inning to the sixth.

Boucher yielded seven runs and six hits in 1 2-3 innings.

Tigers 6, Yankees 2

NEW YORK — Mickey Tettleton and Lou Whitaker continued the home run barage off New York's Scott Sanderson as the Detroit Tigers beat the Yankees.

Tettleton hit a two-run first-inning homer and Whitaker, who had three hits and two RBIs, added a solo shot in the third. They brought the total of homers off Sanderson (4-3) to 16 in 12 games.

Frank Tanana (4-4) went the first five innings, allowing five hits, including Mel Hall's seventh homer.

FRANCE: Finalists struggled before winning

(From 1C)

When she pounced on a second serve and hit an inside-out forehand winner to break Seles at love for a 4-2 lead, Sabatini thought the match was hers.

"After I won that game, I was so pumped and eager to win the match there," Sabatini said.

Seles said she was feeling tired physically and mentally, but forced herself to put up a fight.

"At 4-2, I didn't look at the score," she recalled. "I just said, 'Here it goes, give it everything you have, just go for it.'"

Did she ever.

A forehand winner and an overhead gave Seles a service break for 4-3. Then she held at love for 4-4, hitting two backhand cross-court winners, a forehand putaway and an overhead.

Seles opened the next game with another winner — a backhand — and went on to break at 15 for a 5-4 lead. In those three games, she lost just two points.

For the match, Seles was credited with 40 winners. Yet she downplayed her performance in the final games.

"I really don't think I was playing that great tennis in the last four games," she said. "I just felt I was going a little bit more for my shots and they started going in a little bit more."

But Sabatini said Seles' turnaround proved her superiority.

"That is why she is so tough," she said. "Mentally she is very strong. That is why she is No. 1."

Graf, the former No. 1, looked anything close to that as she lost the first set to Sanchez-Vicario without winning a game. The 0-6 score, along with last year's first set, are the only times since 1984 that Graf has been shut out in a set.

Graf, who looked tentative and made numerous unforced forehand errors, said she never thought about last year's debacle.

"I didn't feel as bad as last year for some reason," she said. "I just wasn't concentrating. I just needed a few better points to get in. I really didn't find the right rhythm at all. There were times when I was trying too hard. Then I said, 'OK, calm down.'"

Graf said she regained some confidence by forcing three break points and five deuces in the last game of the set.

"I told myself that I am a much better player than that," she said. "I just said, 'OK, just work for it, just do whatever you can, just get the ball in play.'"

Cutting down on errors and moving Sanchez Vicario around the court, Graf raced to a 4-0 lead en route to winning the second set handily.

In the third set, Sanchez Vicario was up 2-0 and had a break point for a chance to lead 3-0. But Graf served an ace and held. "That was probaby the most important game of the whole match," Graf said.

Another key came in the sixth game, when Graf broke for a 4-2 lead. Sanchez Vicario had three game points and saved three break points before Graf finally ended the game with a running forehand topspin lob.

Graf held at love for 5-2, then broke for the match as Sanchez Vicario double-faulted to 30-40 and sailed a backhand long on the next point.

"The way I kept fighting for it, I think it showed I still am very eager and that I can calm down when it is important," Graf said. "Today I really enjoyed it out there. Despite the first set, I think I showed a lot of emotions and I showed that I enjoyed it."

Graf said her win is a product of her new and improved attitude.

"I do enjoy it a lot more than last year at this stage," she said. "I am in a lot better shape. And outside of the court, I am just very calm. I don't really have any ups and downs."

In the only men's match of the day, Petr Korda beat Russia's Andrei Cherkasov 6-4, 6-7 (7-3), 6-2, 6-4 to set up a semifinal encounter against French favorite Henri Leconte. Jim Courier and Andre Agassi meet in the other men's semi on Friday.

Korda advanced without meeting another seeded player and has never played a singles match before on center court here.

"I hope they let me practice, maybe once, to be alone on the court," he said.

Leconte, ranked 200th in the world, entered the tournament as a wild card and wasn't even sure he was in playing shape.

DREXLER: 'We fell apart'

first half. They had 21 turnovers and shot 44 percent from the field. And when the Bulls — who trailed 25-17 early — finally got going offensively in the second quarter, the Blazers lost their poise.

"We fell apart, we seemed to panic," said Drexler, who had just 16 points on 5-for-14 shooting. "Players were moving a little too fast, and they were maybe a little too pumped up, and as a leader your job is to try and calm them down. At the same time, I was guarding Michael and my hands were pretty full already."

The Blazers also found themselves in early foul trouble, which hampered their efforts to play an aggressive, physical game against the Bulls. Power forward Buck Williams and center Kevin Duckworth were on the bench with two fouls each before the game was four minutes old, which all-but eliminated their inside presence defensively.

"No matter what you say, when you lose Buck Williams and Kevin Duckworth in the first three minutes it changed dramatically what we wanted to do."

Angels win 2nd in row over San Antonio, 6-3

Staff report

SAN ANTONIO — Midland won its second straight game over the San Antonio Missions here Thursday, as the Angels rode a four-run fifth inning to a 6-3 victory.

The Angels have now won two of the first three games in the six-game series on the strength of starting pitching. After Dave Adams tossed a complete-game shutout Wednesday, Phil Leftwich (2-2) threw seven shutout innings for the win Thursday.

While Leftwich was shutting down the Mission attack, the Angel offense got on the boards with a run in the fourth inning then erupted in the fifth.

Designated hitter Jeff Kipila hit a bases-loaded single to right field in that innings, driving in Jim Edmonds and Bobby Jones, then watched Chris Morrow overrun his ball, allowing J.R. Phillips to score from first and Kipila to take third.

Midland's fourth run came when pitcher Jody Treadwell balked Kipila home. Phillips hit a solo home run in the sixth inning to end Midland's scoring.

NOTE — Angel shortstop Rod Correia committed two errors in the game, ended a streak of 54⅔ innings of errorless defensive play.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, JUNE 5, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Self-analysis will help you discover your true strengths and polish your professional image. Fortitude and faith give you the edge over a competitor next September. Travel in late fall. A desire for greater personal freedom becomes stronger in December. Tune in to your newly found psychic reserves and career success will follow. A lively romance adds to your happiness in early 1993.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: TV commentator Bill Moyers, actor Robert Lansing, director Tony Richardson, actor Chad Allen.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your way with words makes you a big winner today. Good news is in the air — circulate to catch wind of it. Have more patience with yourself and all those around you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The more you produce, the greater your reward. Joint resources grow. Unusually creative ideas have an excellent chance of being accepted by those at the top.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Accepting the customs of your community will greatly simplify your life. Those who are diplomatic can get along with anybody. Large social gatherings are more fun than small ones.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The more ambitious and industrious among you may be closer to success than they realize. Move about in the most influential circles open to you. Cultivating a powerful acquaintance pays off.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): When making decisions, deal with facts not fantasies. Wishful thinking could prove expensive. Avoid making new financial commitments or taking unnecessary trips.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Study is your key to success today. Think and plan ahead. Otherwise, important details could be overlooked. Check on a loved one's financial needs. A second income could come from a hobby.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Conscientious job effort pays off now. A bonus, raise or promotion is featured. Trips and phone calls bring easy pickings. Romance will seek you out tonight. Be cautious.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Modify your stance on a practical matter. The competition to reach the very top is fierce. Public recognition could come for something you did long ago. Add entries to your social calendar.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Continue with your preparations so that nothing will be lacking when you are ready to swing into action. Try not to show resentment toward someone who was initially skeptical.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Unexpected complications could arise today. Keep a meeting orderly and watch what you say. Otherwise, you could have quite a fight on your hands. Leveling with your romantic partner is easier now.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Continue to refine a collective enterprise. Work on a financial angle that has exciting possibilities. Spending a night on the town with your mate could revitalize your relationship.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You know what you want. Friends who wish to put in their two cents' worth should be discouraged in your usual tactful way. Find an adviser you can trust.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are good-natured, intelligent and fun to be around. Restless energy keeps these youngsters constantly on the go. They like to be in the thick of things and are usually surrounded by admiring pals. Books and travel are favorite escapes from the routine of everyday life. Strong role models will help these Gemini children develop their talents fully. They often decide to follow in the career paths of a relative or family friend they respect.

You should not judge a book by its cover, but you can certainly gauge a bridge player's talent by the way certain hands are tackled. Here's what we mean.

North-South reach an excellent heart slam via the auction shown. Note East's preemptive raise to four spades on a hand that was not only trickless in high cards, but whose spade length detracted from partner's trick-taking ability. Not vulnerable, a six-spade sacrifice would be profitable.

If declarer wins the ace of spades, draws trumps, cashes the king of diamonds and takes a diamond finesse, the defenders will prevail. When diamonds fail to break and the club finesse does not succeed, declarer has only 11 tricks. You can conclude declarer is at best an average player.

Now suppose that after drawing trumps declarer ruffs a spade, cashes the ace and king of diamonds and leads a diamond toward the jack. Chances of making the contract have improved considerably. Declarer not only gets home whenever diamonds are 3-3 or West holds the queen, but also when East holds a doubleton queen of diamonds. A good, solid player.

Now let's push the level of play a notch higher. If declarer draws trumps, cashes the king and ace of diamonds, then leads the jack of spades and discards a diamond from hand, you know an expert is at the helm. West is endplayed. A spade return yields a ruff-sluff, a club return is into declarer's tenace, and any diamond lead guarantees a third trick in the suit for a club discard providing declarer simply puts the jack on a low card. Try it.

Taylor

The soap opera "is my favorite show. I've appeared on it twice, and I love the characters, the intrigue, the storylines," Taylor says in the June issue of "New Choices" magazine.

The magazine polled celebrities on their favorite daytime tube viewing, and the results were somewhat surprising. Burt Reynolds loves "Sesame Street." George Burns "gets a kick" out of "Geraldo."

"Geraldo does his thing for shock value, but I love it," Burns says. "I laugh at all the different oddities of life he parades on his show. When I was young ... you didn't tell the world about your dirty laundry."

LOS ANGELES — Harrison Ford sank his footprints and handprints into the forecourt of the Hollywood Mann Chinese Theater just before the premiere of his movie, "Patriot Games."

Ford's square will be located near the concrete squares for producers George Lucas and Steven Spielberg, who made the "Indiana Jones" trilogy in which he starred.

"Patriot Games," an action-thriller adapted from Tom Clancy's best-selling suspense novel, had its premiere screening Wednesday night.

A Denver songwriter sued the moonwalking entertainer Wednesday, saying she wrote and recorded the song "Dangerous" long before he released his album. It was the second lawsuit filed against Jackson over the album.

The Cleveland Orchestra sued him in April for allegedly using its recording of a Beethoven symphony on "Dangerous" without permission.

Crystal Cartier's federal lawsuit seeks $40 million on the grounds that Jackson violated copyright and trademark laws.

The lawsuit says Ms. Cartier wrote a song called "Dangerous" sometime during the winter of 1985. In October 1990, she produced and recorded it. Ms. Cartier says "Dangerous" was included in her album, "Love Story: Act One."

Jackson's album, released last fall, also includes the song, "Dangerous," for which he takes credit.

The defendants named in Ms. Cartier's lawsuit are Jackson, MJJ Productions of Los Angeles, Sony Music Entertainment and Epic Records.

People answering telephones at the offices of Jackson's attorney, Bert Fields, and his personal manager, Sandy Gallin, said they were not available for comment.

DALLAS — Now that the formal ceremonies are complete, Paul Simon and Edie Brickell are ready to get serious about family life.

"They plan to start a family right away," said Ms. Brickell's mother, whose name is Larry Linden and who may deserve some sort of Mother-in-Law Prize for her candor.

Ms. Linden, who lives in Dallas, didn't attend the wedding Saturday at Simon's home in Montauk, N.Y., but says she knew about it and spent the past several days trying to keep the nuptials quiet.

But by Wednesday, the couple decided to go public.

"They exchanged simple gold bands — no big diamonds or anything," Ms. Linden said.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Two members of the Kentucky HeadHunters are leaving the award-winning country band.

Lead singer Ricky Lee Phelps and his brother Doug, a bass player, will pursue other music careers. Their replacements in the five-member group will be announced in the next few days.

"It's bad they won't be with us anymore," Richard Young, a guitarist who will remain with the band, said Wednesday. "I'm glad we're going on. We'll miss Doug and Ricky. A lot of laughs went down, and I tried everything I could to get them to stay."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Country singer Jett Williams has sold the rights to her autobiography for development into a made-for-TV movie, her agent says.

NBC Productions bought rights to "Ain't Nothin' as Sweet as My Baby," according to an announcement Wednesday by Buddy Lee Attractions Inc., her booking agent.

The price was not disclosed. The book was published in 1990 by Harcourt Brace Jovanovich.

Since 1987, Williams has been in state courts in Alabama and federal courts in New York trying to prove she is the illegitimate daughter of country singer Hank Williams Sr.

State courts in Alabama have ruled she is his daughter. She is still trying to win a share of her father's copyright royalties and his estate.

Jett Williams performs with the Drifting Cowboys Band, which includes two of the original band members of Hank Williams Sr.'s band.

Prices steady

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in July, which rose 32 cents on Wednesday, added another 5 cents to settle at $22.48 per barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange, a new high for the year. Oil's previous closing high price for the year was set Wednesday.

Analysts said dealing was dull and prices held to a narrow range throughout the session.

Amtrak delay

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Amtrak announced Thursday it would delay the start of its Miami-Los Angeles service from October until April to allow for extensive track and signal modifications on the eastern leg.

Amtrak had hoped to begin the service this fall, but CSX Transportation, which owns the tracks, said it will take nine months to complete the modifications to allow the passenger trains to operate at acceptable speeds.

"If this train is to be a success, we must be in a position to provide our passengers with a quality service from its inception," said Amtrak President W. Graham Claytor Jr.

The Sunset Limited is now scheduled to begin operating three days a week April 4, 1993. Linking cities from Los Angeles to Miami, Amtrak said the train would be its first regularly scheduled transcontinental train.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK — The dollar settled mixed on world currency markets Thursday as traders awaited the release of May unemployment data.

In Tokyo, the dollar rose to a closing 127.70 Japanese yen from 126.90 yen at Wednesday's close.

In London, the British pound rose to $1.8255 from $1.8180 late Wednesday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Wednesday: 1.5980 German marks, down from 1.6040; 1.4625 Swiss francs, down from 1.4700; 5.3800 French francs, down from 5.4025; 1,208.00 Italian lire, down from 1,213.00, and 1.19605 Canadian dollars, down from 1.20065.

Union mounts 'electronic picket line'

■ CWA to try pressuring AT&T by getting customers to shift long-distance business.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Communications Workers of America said Thursday it will try to pressure the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. by getting customers to shift long distance business to other carriers. But the union said it will not strike this weekend in its contract dispute with the company.

CWA officials said the union might strike later but would, for now, rely on an "electronic picket line" of trying to cost AT&T business.

The union's contract expired Sunday. It is negotiating jointly with the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers on behalf of more than 125,000 employees.

An aide to IBEW president John Barry, asked whether the union agreed with the new bargaining strategy, said, "We haven't yet decided the issue." The aide declined to give his name.

Negotiations between the two unions and the company were continuing. The unions originally sought a 13 percent pay raise over three years. William Ketchum, company vice president for labor relations, said AT&T's latest offer was 9.75 percent.

The union said the biggest issue was saving workers' jobs from being eliminated by technology.

CWA President Morton Bahr predicted the "electronic picket line" would cost the company $3 million to $5 million a week.

Bahr said the union had received tens of thousands of proxies from its members authorizing a switch to other long distance carriers. He said similar authorizations would be sought from members of other unions.

Ketchum described the union strategy as "nonsense," saying most of AT&T's long distance competitors are non-union.

"I find it very hard to understand why a company that has 128,000 union members has its unions recommending removing long distance traffic to predominantly non-union companies," the AT&T vice president said.

The long-distance and telecommunications manufacturing company has about 317,000 employees worldwide, but the contract affects only domestic operations.

Jobless claims rise 4,000 in week, government says

■ Analysts dismiss small advance as insignificant.

Assoc ated Press

WASHINGTON — The number of Americans filing new claims for unemployment benefits edged up by 4,000 during the week ending May 23, the government said Thursday.

Analysts, however, dismissed the small advance as insignificant and noted that the four-week average for jobless claims continued to improve, falling to the second lowest level of the past 18 months.

The Labor Department said the weekly gain pushed initial claims for unemployment benefits to 407,000. That marked an increase from 403,000 the previous week, the lowest weekly figures in seven months.

But even with the advance, the four-week average for claims declined to 410,750, the second-best showing since October 1990.

Because week-to-week changes in jobless claims can be so volatile, economists prefer to focus on the four-week moving average.

They noted that the average claims level has now dropped significantly from the 450,000 mark where it had been stuck for the first three months of the year.

Robert Dederick, chief economist of the Northern Trust Co. of Chicago, said that the slow improvement in jobless claims was consistent with the view that the economy is launched on a sustainable, but modest recovery.

The government will report on Friday on the unemployment rate for May and Dederick said he was looking for it to remain at the 7.2 percent level and stay above 7 percent for most of the rest of the year.

He said that while the economy is growing again, the pace is not fast enough to make any significant in-roads in the jobless level.

"This isn't an old-fashioned, vigorous recovery, but rather a tepid one," Dederick said.

For the week of May 23, the state with the biggest increase in jobless claims was Oregon, an increase of 3,156 that was blamed on computer problems that delayed the processing of claims from the previous week.

Claims also rose by large amounts in Michigan, up 1,865, a gain blamed on further layoffs in the auto industry; Mississippi, up 1,783, and Texas, up 1,383.

The state with the biggest decline in claims was California, where claims dropped by 4,375 with the improvement attributed to fewer layoffs in the electronics and aerospace industries.

The decrease in California claims came despite the fact that there were 850 new claims attributed to the riots in Los Angeles.

Claims also fell by large amounts in North Carolina, down 2,702 because of fewer layoffs in the textile industry; Virginia, down 1,723, and New York, which posted an improvement of 1,209.

The national claims figures are adjusted for normal seasonal variations but the individual state figures are not.

Business, industry plan modest capital improvements this year

WASHINGTON (AP) — American businesses plan a modest 4.7 percent increase in plant and equipment spending this year, reversing last year's rare decline, the government said Thursday.

But analysts noted non-manufacturing companies accounted for virtually all of the planned increase, indicating slow production and employment growth in the industrial sector.

The projected increase also would fall far short of the 16.4 percent pace in 1984, the second year after the 1981-'82 recession.

Many economists believe the recent recession ended last spring, although the economy slowed again late last year. They contend the recovery will be less than half as robust as the average rebound since World War II.

In its report Thursday, the Commerce Department reported that a survey of about 8,000 companies in April and May suggested businesses planned $553.9 billion in capital investments this year.

But manufacturing firms projected spending of just $179.2 billion this year, down 2.4 percent for the second straight annual decline. Industrial investments dropped 4.7 percent in 1991.

"It suggests, on the surface, that we're not going to see lot of capital spending" by manufacturers, said Gilbert Benz, an economist with the Swiss Bank Corp. in New York. "Thus, production and employment will be soft for the next three to six months."

Evelina Tainer of Prime Economic Consulting in Chicago concurred: "It suggests manufacturers are a little leery of increasing capital spending, given the weakness of the last couple of years. It suggests only modest employment gains in that sector."

Cyrix unveils desktop-computer chip

DALLAS (AP) — Cyrix Corp. on Thursday introduced a 486 microprocessor for desktop computers, entering its largest and most competitive market yet.

Three months ago, the upstart chipmaker in Richardson introduced its first microprocessor, the "brain" of a personal computer. That chip was aimed at notebook computers and prompted a patent infringement lawsuit from Intel Corp., the nation's largest maker of microprocessors.

While the notebook market is the fastest-growing in the computer industry, the desktop market is three times as large, analysts say.

Cyrix executives say the company has priced its new chips, called the Cx486DLC, at the difference between Intel's 486 microprocessors that run at 25 million cycles per second, or megahertz, and the more popular, faster 33 megahertz.

The new Cyrix chip at 33 megahertz, coupled with a special math chip, will be sold to computer manufacturers for $119, less than half the Intel price. Cyrix will charge for the 33 megahertz chip about what Intel charges for its 486 chip that runs at 25 megahertz.

"What we saw was an opportunity to bring some value to the PC manufacturers in the desktop arena," said Jerry Rogers, chief executive of privately-held Cyrix.

Several PC clone manufacturers, including CompuAdd, Tandon and Zeos, have started using Cyrix microprocessors.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Capital gains distribution irregular from fund

By Bill Doyle

Q: I have been invested in a mutual fund for 11 years. Although income dividends are paid quarterly, I have not received capital gains distributions for the last two years.

Is there reason to be concerned about this?

Doyle

Capital gains distributions result from the net profit a mutual fund realizes by selling securities it held in its investment portfolio at higher prices than it paid for those securities.

Of course, when a fund realizes a net loss in its portfolio transactions, it has no capital gains to distribute to is shareholders.

Also, there are times when selling portfolio securities – even at a profit – would be a mistake. The fund's managers might look at the stocks and other securities held by the fund, decide they all look mighty good and should be kept.

When a fund sells stocks and other securities from its investment portfolio, it has to invest the proceeds from the sale elsewhere. Management might decide there is no better investment available than the securities the fund already owns.

Then, there is the tax angle. By realizing capital gains and distributing that money to shareholders, a fund forces shareholders to pay tax.

The income dividends you receive regularly are a different story. That money comes from the dividends and interest the fund collects from its portfolio securities. After deducting its operating expenses, the fund passes the rest along to shareholders as income dividends.

Q: My mutual fund pays income dividends of approximately 20 percent. Isn't that good?

A: It would be fabulous, if it were true. But it can't be; no mutual fund pays that much.

I suspect you are calculating your dividends as a percentage of the price you paid for the fund shares. That's yield on original investment, and it can be sky-high if you purchased the shares some years ago and dividend payments have increased.

The correct way to do it is to divide the dividends paid over a year's time by the fund's net asset value. That tells you the fund's current yield.

Let's say you paid $10 per share, the current per-share value is $40 and during the past 12 months the fund paid dividends totaling $2 per share.

The yield on original investment works out to 20 percent, but the current yield is 5 percent.

Q: A mutual fund salesman claims a fund he represents has a 10 percent current yield and great prospects for growth in share value.

Because 10 percent seemed high, I asked for details. I found out that he had added the capital gains distribution the fund paid in January to the income dividends paid during the past 12 months to arrive at that figure.

Is that an acceptable way of calculating yield?

A: No! No! A thousand times no! Only income dividends should be used to figure percentage yield.

The Securities and Exchange Commission has cracked down on a number of mutual funds for including capital gains distributions in yield figures. It's a safe bet that 10 percent yield number does not appear in the fund's prospectus and other sales literature.

Because that salesman fudged the yield numbers, I'm sure you will be cautious in accepting his other claims at face value. Read the fund's literature carefully and compare the detailed results there to the salesman's boasts.
