Search extended for Leland's plane

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Rescuers extended their search today across the border into Sudan in the hopes of finding Texas Rep. Mickey Leland and 13 others who disappeared two days ago while flying to a refugee camp in southwestern Ethiopia.

Ethiopian authorities reported today that a plane had been heard flying Monday near Mizan Teferi, 50 miles south of the Fugnido refugee camp, where Leland and his entourage were headed.

The twin-engine plane carrying Leland, 44, and the others vanished during bad weather near Ethiopian-Sudanese border, 480 miles southwest of Addis Ababa.

Leland, a Democratic from Houston and the chairman of the House Select Committee on Hunger, was in Ethiopia on a return visit because of his keen interest in Africa's refugee problem.

The Twin Otter, a plane commonly used for bush flying in Africa, also carried three members of Leland's staff, a friend of the politician, four Americans from the U.S. Embassy and from the U.S. Agency for International Development, and five Ethiopians — three government officials, the pilot and co-pilot.

Up to 10 small planes were being used in the search today, directed by Ethiopia's Civil Aviation Authority.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said an Air Force medical evacuation plane left Germany this morning en route to Addis Ababa in case it was needed.

The weather today was markedly better than Tuesday, when heavy clouds and poor visibility hampered planes coursing the cold plateau in Ethiopia, said John Guerra, political officer at the U.S. Embassy in Addis Ababa.

Rescuers continue to focus on a region called Dembidola, about 75 miles north of Fugnido where Ethiopian authorities said a small plane reportedly was heard circling Monday, according to U.S. Embassy officials. The Dembidola region borders Mizan Teferi.

Earlier, embassy officials said they were told the plane actually had been sighted near Dembidola, but today acknowledged they had been misinformed.

Dembidola is in an accessible region of foothills between mountairs that rise up to 12,000 feet and swampy plateaus stretching to the Sudanese border. Communications with Dembidolo and Mizan Teferi, as with most areas outside the capital, are bad to nonexistent.

It's Americans' Night Out

'Taking bite out of crime'

McGruff, the crime prevention spokesdog, kicks off the Tall City's version of National Night Out activities at a noon rally Tuesday at Centennial Plaza.

Rallies, block parties held demonstrating against crime

Associated Press

Americans across the country turned on porch lights and held candlelight marches and block parties in a neighborly show of unity against crime in the sixth annual National Night Out.

"We're trying to send a message to criminals that we're taking the streets back," said police Lt. Don Wactor in Orange, N.J., where police and residents held a rally Tuesday in front of a building plagued by drug dealers.

People from two communities in Minnesota formed a human chain across a bridge to symbolize two neighborhoods uniting to fight crime.

"Most people want to be neighborly, but they need some excuse, some catalyst," said Matt Peskin, coordinator of the program for the National Association of Town Watch Inc. "It gives them something to do besides sitting on their porch."

Peskin, who lives outside Philadelphia in Wynnewood, said more organized events were held this year than last. By night's end, he expected 20.5 million Americans in more than 7,600 communities to participate, an increase of more than 2 million over last year's estimate.

Sponsors arranged to have the U.S. Air Force's Defense Meteorological Satellite photograph the country to show the glow of porch lights.

The Strategic Air Command plans to give sponsors a composite picture of the event created by one pass of the satellite over the eastern United States at 9:30 p.m. and a photograph of the western half a few hours later.

Police officers said they hoped the evening would involve residents in crime prevention by getting them to know their neighbors and to report crime when they see it.

"People can be our eyes and ears in the community, and they need to be," Pittsburgh Public Safety Director Glenn Cannon said. "Nobody has to tolerate illegal drugs in their community and no one has to tolerate violent crime."

FBI Director Williams Sessions turned on a giant light bulb in Washington, D.C., to kick off the event, which he called a "symbol of solidarity and determination."

In Rochester, N.Y., a "dunk-the-criminal booth" allowed residents to take out their frustrations on a man dressed as a criminal.

In Cincinnati, residents met in the streets to discuss crime.

"Most of streets have cul-de-sacs which make good meeting places. Everybody brings a lawn chair and soft drinks," said Evie Landigran, who organized the effort for the neighborhood of Paddock Hills.

Neighborhood watch groups in Hartford and other Connecticut cities celebrated with block parties and barbecues that featured police officers as guests of honor.

In the New York City, Bronx Borough President Fernando Ferrer held a candlelight march with residents active in local anti-drug campaigns.

Midlanders turn out for local Night Out

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Midland lived up to its "neighborly" reputation Tuesday evening as residents turned on porch lights and held block parties during the Tall City's own version of the sixth annual National Night Out.

Participating in dinners, barbecues, ice cream socials and flashlight walks, Midlanders took part in the Night Out events to promote crime prevention efforts in general and neighborhood watch groups in particluar.

Organizers of the national event had expected 20.5 million Americans in more than 7,600 communities to participate, an increase of more than 2 million over last year's estimate.

"We had a real good turn out," said Midland Police Department spokesman Cpl. Jim White of the local effort that began with a noon kickoff Tuesday at Centennial Plaza.

White said more than 16 local neighborhoods had organized parties attended by law enforcement officers, with many more neighborhoods also having less formal evening get-togethers.

Police officers said they hoped the evening would involve residents in crime prevention by getting them to know their neighbors and to report crime when they see it.

The Emerson Avenue bunch, which numbered about 30 strong, dished out homemade ice cream to special guests, including Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter, Crime Prevention Commission President Nick Taylor and McGruff the Crime Dog.

Higgins' wife is assuming he is dead

WASHINGTON (AP) — The wife of Marine Lt. Col. William Higgins says she is praying for President Bush's efforts to "save the living" U.S. hostages in Lebanon as she acknowledges her husband almost certainly is dead.

Robin Higgins, wearing her Marine Corps uniform and speaking in a calm and steady voice, acknowledged for the first time Tuesday it is a "virtual certainty" her husband is dead.

"Now is not the time for anger and bitterness, for recrimination and blame. Now is the time for calm reflection...Now is the time to tell Rich Higgins that we love him and we miss him," she said.

Meanwhile, the Boston Globe today quoted Bush as saying he isn't optimistic the eight remaining U.S. hostages will soon go free, but plans to continue exploring contacts to obtain their release.

"I have no problem with that...if I can talk to somebody and get the release of an American hostage and do it without, in my view or in the view of the experts, putting others at risk" of being taken hostage, Bush told the paper. "I have no reason to say that I can see in the short run a total resolution of the American hostage problem. I wish I could."

Higgins was the commander of a U.N. peacekeeping force in southern Lebanon when he was abducted on Feb. 17, 1988.

His Shiite Moslem kidnappers released a 30-second videotape a week ago that purported to show him dangling by a rope, bound and gagged. The terrorists said the U.S. officer was hanged in retaliation for Israel's kidnapping of Sheik Abdul Karim Obeid, a Moslem cleric.

Council considering compromise tax rate

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Conscious of the reality that other entities' ad valorem 1990 tax increases may pack hefty increases, City Council decided Tuesday to refrain from adoption of a tax rate that some officials believe was in order.

But even with the proposed — and much smaller — 1990 city of Midland tax increase, a taxpayer who owns a $100,000 home probably will see a $74 increase on his or her bill next year.

According to the Midland County Appraisal District, the city's tax base dropped 8.26 percent or about $235 million during the last year.

"It caught us by surprise," at-large councilman John Castro said Tuesday night. Council had projected a drop roughly half that size.

Over the past four years, the city's tax base has declined nearly $1 billion.

Council Tuesday decided to adopt a 1990 tax rate that is no more than 3 percent above its effective tax rate or the amount needed to levy the same revenue as was in 1989.

The city's projected 1989-90 effective tax rate is actually 11.6 percent higher than last year's actual tax rate.

A suggested 1990 increase of 2.99 percent over the effective rate means an actual tax hike of about 14.6 percent.

The 1989 tax rate was 50.65-cents per $100 of valuation. The 1990 effective tax rate amounts to 56.53-cent per $100 valuation.

A taxpayer would pay about 58-cents per $100 of valuation with the 2.99 percent increase over the suggested 1990 effective rate.

Woman's murmurs startle funeral home director

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio (AP) — An 87-year-old woman who regained consciousness as she was about to be embalmed showed no signs of life before she was taken to the funeral home, a boarding home operator said.

"The lady died away for a while and later came back to," said Robbie Caldwell. "The lady was laying there. She had no pulse, no blood pressure, nothing. She was just gone."

Ms. Caldwell did not say whether Carrie Stringfellow was pronounced dead by a physician before she was taken to the funeral home on Saturday, and she refused to answer additional questions.

Ms. Stringfellow, whose murmuring startled a mortician preparing to embalm her, was listed in fair condition Tuesday at Mercy Medical Center. She was taken to the hospital after she was found to be alive.

"She has no recall of what happened to her Saturday evening," Ernest Henson, vice president of medical services at the hospital, said at a news conference. "It's kind of like a black period."

He said her memory otherwise seems to be unaffected and that she appears to be "cheerful and happy." He said Ms. Stringfellow, who is blind, may be released from the hospital as early as Friday and plans to live with a niece.

Hospital officials turned down reporters' requests to interview Ms. Stringfellow.

"To me, it's a horrendous ordeal she's been through," said Henson.

The incident is under investigation by the Ohio Department of Health, according to Dr. Beth Klitch, chief of the department's bureau of medical services.

Ms. Klitch said the state could seek a court injunction to end operation of the boarding home, ask Clark County to remove residents and pursue criminal charges.

She said the department cited the home last April for several structural deficiencies, such as unsafe handrails. She indicated that some of the problems have been corrected.

Henson said he has talked with about five physicians who have cared for Ms. Stringfellow in the past and none said they were contacted Saturday evening about the apparent death.

Dennis L. Porter, director of the Dennis L. Porter Funeral Home, said he was called by the home Saturday about 8:30 p.m. and asked to pick up a body. When he arrived, Ms. Stringfellow was slumped in a chair.

"She actually appeared to be dead," he said.

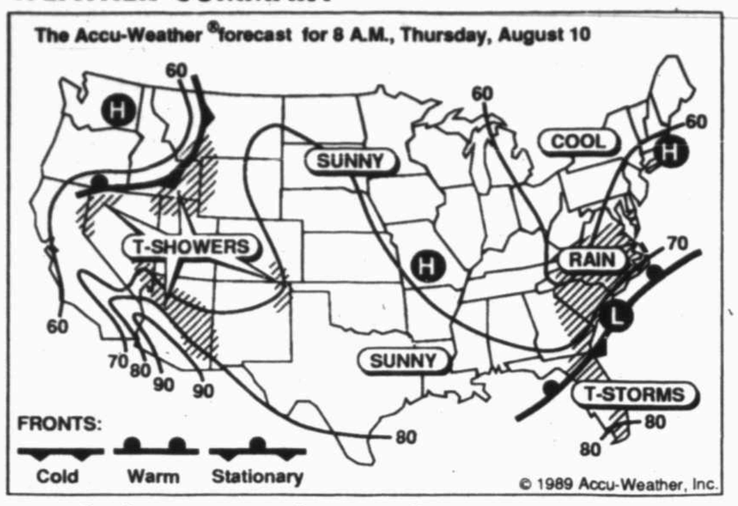

Porter said the woman was placed in a pouch, which was zipped and then placed on a cot. The cot was loaded into Porter's vehicle, and he drove back to the funeral home, arriving about 8:45 p.m.

Porter said he unzipped the pouch and prepared to move the woman to the embalming table when "she uttered a sound."

It was "a very eerie feeling," he said. "I was amazed."

WEATHER SUMMARY

Mild weather forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Clear skies and mild temperatures are in the forecast for tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low will be in the middle 60s and winds will be from the south at 5-15 mph.

Thursday will be partly cloudy with the high in the lowers 90s and winds continuing from the south at 10-20 mph.

Tuesday's high of 83 was 21 degrees cooler than the record high of 104 set for that date in 1956. The overnight low of 56 set a new record low temperature for this date and was six degrees cooler than the previous record of 62 set for this date in 1976.

STATE

More thunderstorms were expected across Texas today in the wake of a cold front that swept across the state, lowering temperatures to record levels.

Scattered thunderstorms were reported over the coastal bend and south to the lower Rio Grande Valley.

The skies were generally fair to partly cloudy statewide. However, parts of the middle and lower coastal plains and Rio Grande plains were under cloudy skies.

Light to nearly calm winds prevailed in North Texas, the hill country and far West Texas. Southeast to south winds breezed the High Plains and Permian Basin. The rest of the state had mainly east to northeast winds. Wind speeds were mostly under 10 mph.

Previous record cool temperatures for the date were a low of 69 degrees in 1957 and a high of 83 degrees in 1914, meteorologist Brad Fujii said.

The normal temperature range for Aug. 8 is 75 to 98 degrees, said Fujii.

It was a far cry from the same day a year earlier when most people who did not have to be outdoors sought refuge in front of air conditioners. The high was a record 107 for the date, 25 degrees higher than this year's Aug. 8 maximum.

"This is much more like early May, when the average temperatures are 80 and 60," Fujii said. "We've had an unusual cold front because it's uncommon for one to move this far south in the summertime."

The cool front that swept into the area on the heels of a thunderstorm Sunday afternoon was expected to begin moving out today, but before doing so it was expected to drop morning temperatures to the upper 50s, below the record low of 62 degrees for the date, set in 1908.

Temperatures are expected to return to the low to mid-90s by Thursday afternoon and continue through at least Saturday.

NATION

A brisk batch of cool air swept across the eastern half of the nation today, breaking record low temperatures from New England to Texas.

In Las Vegas, fierce winds registering at 99 mph overturned private airplanes at McCarran International Airport, and an accompanying storm caused power outages and minor flooding late Tuesday.

The cool air was ushered in by a large high pressure system, dropping early morning temperatures into the 50s and 60s across the eastern half of the nation, and into the 40s over the northern and central Appalachians.

Record low temperatures were set in Chattanooga, Tenn., with a reading of 57 degrees; in Hartford, Conn., with a reading of 50 degress; in Houston with 66 degrees; in Mobile, Ala., with 63 degrees; in San Angelo, Texas, with 60 degrees; and in Youngstown, Ohio, with 44 degrees.

Florida was hit by scattered showers this morning, with thunderstorms over the coastal waters of the south Atlantic and Gulf Coast states.

Earlier Tuesday evening, a thunderstorm in northeast Florida, near the Putnam and Volusia County line, produced 1-inch hail and wind gusts over 60 miles an hour. Lightning set a house on fire in Putnam County.

The severe thunderstorm struck Las Vegas with wind gusts to 99 miles an hour Tuesday night, turning over 80 airplanes at the Sky Harbor and McCarran airports. No injuries were reported.

Today's forecast called for scattered showers and thunderstorms from the Carolinas to Florida and the eastern half of the Gulf Coast; showers and thunderstorms in the afternoon and evening across the intermountain region and the northern and central Rockies, and most numerous over the Great Basin area.

TAX

So now, it's back to the financial drawing boards for Council members.

The city's original budget proposal — hammered out several weeks ago — were based on a tax increase just shy of 8 percent above the 1990 effective tax rate.

Contrary to the initial budget proposal, District 1 Councilman Bill Williams was passionate in his demand Tuesday that a balanced budget be achieved in 1990 without a dip into the $10 million general fund surplus.

"I want real cuts and not in surplus dollars," Williams stressed, though a compromise appeared to be in the works between him and Mayor Carroll Thomas who thinks surplus funds should be used in "hard times."

The adoption Tuesday of a 2.99 percent increase-ceiling now requires Council to rethink its budget and cut or extrapolate from another source at least $600,000, according to calculations made by Councilman J.D. Faircloth.

District 2 Councilman Jose Cuevas Jr. wanted to forge ahead with the larger tax increase and Williams maintained he'd go with the majority as long as he got his balanced budget.

Williams admonished council members "who don't have the courage to take the heat" and raise taxes.

"The taxpayers of this community have a real challenge in the coming year. If they don't want a tax increase, then they're telling us they want a cut in services," Williams said.

City Manager Fred Poe warned council members favoring the smaller increase that "you're going to continue to be haunted...because you're going to be working off smaller numbers...and continue to play a catch-up game."

"It's time to pay the piper," Cuevas said. "Let's bite the bullet, increase the rates and get on with progress. Why prolong the agony?"

Council agreed a larger tax hike will likely be in store for citizens in 1991.

But Thomas, at-large councilman Faircloth and Castro expressed opposition to a larger tax increase this year.

"The citizens of Midland are going to receive a substantial shock in excess of a 10-12 percent increase on their tax bill" which is exclusive of the city, Faircloth pointed out.

"I think we should try to smooth things out for the taxpayers," the mayor said, supporting smaller increases spread out over more years.

Added Castro later Tuesday night: "When people get their statements, we get all the punishment and blame."

According to calculations, the city would have to cut its projected 1990 expenses by $2.5 million if it chose against adopting even its effective tax rate.

Revenue enhancement suggestions were not easily found Tuesday afternoon.

Even with a tax hike near 8 percent, street, municipal building and other maintenance services were to have been cut nearly $450,000, projections showed.

The earlier proposal also included a $1.37 million transfer from the general fund surplus to finance general fund a $900,000 capital projects package and balance the remainder of the earlier-proposed budget.

Council Tuesday suggested that a 3 percent franchise fee be taken out of the city's water/sewer and sanitation revenues that are derived from the taxpayer who uses the services.

Other franchise taxes are levied against non-city-owned utilities.

The move could negate the needed $600,000 in budget cuts because of the lower tax rate, but still doesn't appease Williams' request that the city not implement surplus funds in its 1990 budget.

So, additional cuts or revenue enhancement of several hundreds of thousands of dollars are needed.

Thomas suggested implementing the general fund's annual earned interest — about $1 million — into the budget, but found it already was. So the mayor then posed shelving a portion of the $900,000 capital projects package until a later date.

Faircloth was vehemently opposed — and lobbied against — a 2 percent pay raise and vacation buy-back plan for the city's estimated 900 employees.

The two combined will cost the city more nearly $600,000 next year.

"That just boggles my imagination that you are going to tell taxpayers we're raising taxes and giving employees a raise. It just doesn't make sense to me," he noted throughout the day's lengthy discussion.

City employees haven't had a raise since 1985, though a paycut they took three years ago was reinstated last year in a move that Faircloth considered a pay raise.

But Thomas, City Attorney David Reagan and other councilmen opposed reneging on the pay increase.

"Our employees are our capital investments," Thomas said.

"But this is a tough business guys," Faircloth countered.

"You can't be too tough, J.D. You don't have the courage to take a tax increase," Williams replied. "J.D., let me put you out of your misery.

"Are there four people here to support the raises?" Williams asked informally of his peers.

Every council member raised his hand but Faircloth.

"Quit worring about it, J.D.," Williams said as Council — including Faircloth — burst into laughter.

"Hey! What else can we get out of the way like that?" at-large councilman Castro then quipped.

It is not known now which services or capital projects may fall by the wayside during the second round of budget hearings.

Faircloth said he didn't think plans to construct a new $400,000 Animal Control shelter would be axed because maintenance on the dilapidated and dangerous building runs at least $60,000 annually.

"We've done a good job on holding the line on taxes," Faircloth said Tuesday night. "I don't think Midland wants a cut in services.

"You just can't abandon them."

Council will continue budget workshops this month.

FBI Director William Sessions appears surprised by the cartoon crime fighter Spiderman during a news conference Tuesday kicking off National Night Out Against Crime.

CRIME

In a seedy thoroughfare in lower Manhattan, residents held a karate demonstration and an after-dark dance contest featuring the latest rap sounds.

Residents in Kansas City walked through their neighborhoods with candles and flashlights. "I want to do anything that can drive drugs out of our communities," said Florence Purvey.

National Night Out, created by Peskin, presents an award each year to the city that saw the largest decrease in crime. Last year, Houston won the cup when major crime decreased 48 percent on the night of the event.

NIGHT

"We had a lot of participation and I feel like it went over really well," said the sheriff, observing that the crime issue is very much on the minds of Midlanders.

The Night Out events, concentrated in central, west and northwest Midland, were large enough to be visible to persons who might not have joined in this year, Painter said.

The sheriff added that at least seven rural neighborhoods also had block parties attended by his county lawmen.

Sgt. Lalo Camarillo, who heads the Midland police crime prevention unit, had a block party in his own neighborhood along Roosevelt Avenue that included a program on crime prevention.

Immediately following the program, neighbors walked through the street with flashlights.

In Trinity Meadows on Midland's northwest side, between 30-35 neighbors gathered at the corner of Skyline and Woodhaven Drives for a block party.

Another block party, attended by another 35 Midlanders, was held on Reading Avenue.

The Night Out activities gave residents of Bristol Court an opportunity to plan ahead for December's Christmas lighting activities.

Frankie Hale, one of the organizers of Night Out activities in Midland, said all of the neighbors join in decorating the cul-de-sac each Christmas and Tuesday's event gave them a reason to get organized.

State Department officials rejected any suggestion tying the fate of the eight American hostages to billions of dollars of Iranian assets frozen in this country nearly a decade ago.

"The questions of the assets have no connection or linkage whatsoever with the hostage issue," spokesman Richard Boucher told reporters.

A report in the English-language Tehran Times quoted a source saying Iran would definitely intercede to gain the release of the hostages if Washington gave assurances it would release frozen Iranian assets.

While Mrs. Higgins issued her call for reflection, Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams noted that U.S. warships remain on patrol in the Mideast region, pointing out that 26 U.S. vessels are in the Mediterranean while 21 are stationed in the Indian Ocean.

While Williams termed the movements "routine operations," other Pentagon officials have said the warships — including two aircraft carriers — are conducting "show-the-flag" maneuvers in readiness for any possible military strike ordered by the president in the ongoing hostage crisis.

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole also said Tuesday that if terrorists execute another hostage, Joseph Cicippio, "All bets are off...Then you would see a military response."

Dole, speaking in Kansas City, Kan., said Bush was "using every channel" in an effort to free other hostages.

"I really believe there is some optimism," Dole said. "I've talked to the president about this a number of times."

Mrs. Higgins, a Marine major, is on leave from her job as a Pentagon public affairs officer.

In her statement, she made no mention of the grisly videotape released by her husband's kidnappers.

The FBI says it has concluded "within a reasonable degree of medical certainty" that the person depicted in the videotape was Higgins, but it released no information about the time or cause of death.

The bureau's analysis suggests Higgins was killed in some other manner before the videotape was made, according to an administration official who declined to be named publicly.

Mrs. Higgins, her hands shaking slightly as she read from her prepared text, said she had been "advised...of the virtual certainty that my husband...is dead" by the Marine commandant, Gen. Alfred Gray. She also noted she had received calls from Bush.

"I am also mindful of the fact that our president has agonized in a very profound and personal manner over my husband's fate," she said. "He has my prayers and my support as he tries to save the living and end the suffering."

In her statement, Mrs. Higgins lauded her husband as a man of tolerance and dignity who served as a U.N. peacekeeper because of "a profound sense of duty."

MAST

In 1925, the family moved to Lubbock where his father was among the first faculty members at Texas Tech University.

Mast graduated from Texas Tech, then attended Johns Hopkins medical school, receiving his medical degree in 1935. He returned to Lubbock and began his practice.

At the outbreak of World War II, he volunteered for service in the U.S. Navy in 1942 and saw duty as a member of the Surgical Unit of the 7th Amphibious Force.

He was present at Tacloban in the Philippines when Gen. Douglas MacArthur waded through the surf and announced "I have returned."

Mast's war decorations included the Purple Heart, the Philippine Liberation Campaign Ribbon with two Bronze Stars and a citation from Adm. Kinkaid. He was discharged in March 1946.

He returned to Lubbock where he practiced medicine until 1950, when he moved to Midland to become associated with his two brothers, Drs. John Mast and Clarence Mast at the Mast Clinic. He practiced until his retirement in 1976.

Mast was active in community service through the Midland Downtown Rotary Club and serving on the Midland Chamber of Commerce's planning effort Objectives for Midland in the '70s. He was a past Eagle Scout.

He served on the Board of Trustees of the Midland Memorial Hospital from 1956 to 1960 and from 1971 to 1975; on the Board of Directors from 1979 to 1982; and on the Board of Governors from 1984 until his death. He also was active in the planning of the Allison Cancer Center.

He was an elder of the First Presbyterian Church and a founding member of the Midland YMCA.

Pallbearers will be Dr. Charles R. Gaines, Dr. Gregory W. Bartha, Thomas P. Ingram, Dr. Durwood N. Clader, Dr. Ed Mickle and Dr. Arnold H. Meckley.

Honorary pallbearers will be Max Davis, Dr. Robert Johnston, William Pennebaker, Clem George and Mrs. Francis Wylie.

Survivors include: his wife, Jessie Elizabeth Crews Mast of Midland; two sons, Tom Mast of Austin and Hank Mast of San Antonio; two daughters, Martha Watts of Brooklyn, N.Y., and Mary Toubin of Austin; two brothers, Dr. John Mast of Midland and Dr. Clarence Mast of Amarillo; one sister, Jane Cox of Lamesa; seven grandchildren and 14 nieces and nephews.

Memorials should be directed to Hospice of Midland Inc., PO Box 2621, Midland, TX, 79702 or to Midland Memorial Hopsital.

'Lone Star State' favorite for new license plates

AUSTIN (AP) — The "Lone Star State" was the overwhelming favorite slogan for new Texas license plates in an Austin American-Statesman poll, but many readers submitted their own ideas, ranging from political commentary to off-the-wall statements.

Of the 7,636 ballots submitted, 6,515 chose "Lone Star State," 387 said keep the plates the way they are — slogan-less.

Only 121, less than 2 percent, chose "The Friendship State," which was selected by the Texas Highway Commission and has ignited the license plate flap.

"Lone Star State" advocate Dan Wallace of Austin wrote, "You should have had a second category in your poll. The members of the Texas Highway Commission should be 1) shot 2) hung 3) exiled."

"Texas has always been known as the 'Lone Star State,' and I'm proud of it," wrote Frances Hilliker of Liberty Hill.

Ballots poured into the newspaper singly and in bulging envelopes sent by entire offices full of people and apparently entire small towns.

LELAND

U.S. Embassy spokesman James Haley said the search had been extended slightly across the Sudanese border on the theory Leland's plane had the fuel capacity to go that far and may have crossed the border to avoid bad weather.

On Tuesday, Robert Houdek, charge d'affairs at the U.S. Embassy in Addis Ababa, said the lack of radio or telecommunications "could provide a benign explanation for why we haven't heard anything."

Police, security officials and local peasants' associations have been enlisted in ground searches along the flight path, said Houdek.

Haley said a U.S. Air Force C-141 medical evacuation aircraft was expected to arrive later today from West Germany for assistance.

President Bush telephoned Leland's wife, Alison, in Houston on Tuesday and promised his administration will do "all we can to learn" the fate of the plane.

"She's strong, has a lot of hope, and we all pray that he's safe," Bush told a meeting of the National Urban League in Washington, where delegates observed a moment of silent prayer for Leland's survival.

FUNERAL

Porter, 64, said there is no requirement that a death certificate be signed before a body is transported to a funeral home. He said he often fills out death certificates himself and then has them signed by physicians.

Webster Junk, an inspector for the State Board of Embalmers and Funeral Directors, the state agency that licenses funeral homes, said a funeral director must know that a coroner or licensed physician will sign a death certificate before a body can be transported to a funeral home.

He also said the family of the deceased must give permission before the body can be embalmed. Porter said Ms. Stringfellow's family had given permission.

Light rainfall cooling off Northwestern forest fires

Associated Press

Light rain and cooler weather slowed dozens of blazes in the Northwest and fire control officials said they were in position to handle any new burst of lightning strikes.

Firefighters reported progress in Idaho, Washington, Oregon, Utah and California.

"The temperatures have been lowering, the humidity has been coming up," said spokeswoman Rebecca Burkhead of the Boise Interagency Fire Center, the nation's wildfire command post. "That's really given us a handle on a lot of the fires."

More than 220,000 acres have been charred in a bout of mostly lightning-caused fires that began July 26. Manpower throughout the West still stood at 23,000. Some 160,000 acres were still aflame Tuesday.

"We have contained a lot of fires," Fire Center spokesman Ken Showalter said. "As fires are contained now, we're getting in a better position with our resources should we have another lightning bust."

Western and central Idaho were still the hardest hit, with 15 major forest fires burning out of control over 104,000 acres.

The Fire Center kept its red flag warning of threats of dry lightning and gusty wind, but about 9,200 firefighters in Idaho, including hundreds of military troops, cut fire lines while the rain fell.

About one-third of an inch of rain was reported Tuesday at Lowman, a small mountain community 70 miles north of Boise virtually leveled by fire 10 days earlier. Several dozen residents were allowed to return home.

Bob and Margie Carr's house was spared but everything around it burned.

"The quietness and the peacefulness will come back, but the scenery is gone," said Carr. "It hurts to see this happen, but it's happened and you can't do a thing about it."

Progress was reported 30 miles to the north, where 2,400 firefighters, including 600 soldiers from Colorado, battled the 18,400-acre Warm Lake fire complex.

With higher humidity clearing the air of dense smoke, Army Blackhawk helicopters supplemented Forest Service airpower on fires still threatening the small town of Warren, about 120 miles north of Boise.

Resource losses in Idaho are estimated at more than $75 million since a July 26 lightning storm scored the state's backcountry with 40,000 strikes, which sparked hundreds of wildfires.

The 10,000-acre Emmett Mountain Complex and the 7,000-acre Summit fire in the Hells Canyon National Recreation Area, on the border with Oregon, should be contained by Thursday, said Thom Corcoran of the Northwest Interagency Coordinating Center in Portland, Ore.

About 3,500 lightning strikes across Oregon started several fires in the Siskiyou National Forest and a Bureau of Land Management district in the southwest corner of the state, but rain limited their size.

Tribunal working behind scenes to resolve Iranian asset dispute

WASHINGTON (AP) — International judges are working quietly to resolve disputes between the United States and Iran over billions of dollars of frozen assets, despite bitter differences between the two nations.

The members of the Iran-U.S. Claims Tribunal in The Hague, Netherlands, have remained isolated from day-to-day politics. On Tuesday, the State Department rejected a suggestion that American hostages in Lebanon could be released if the United States agreed to release frozen Iranian assets.

The English-language Tehran Times quoted a source saying Iran would intercede to gain the release of the American hostages if Washington gave assurances it would release frozen Iranian assets.

Eight American hostages are believed held by pro-Iranian Shiite Moslems in Lebanon.

"The questions of the assets have no connection ... whatsoever with the hostage issue," said State Department spokesman Richard Boucher. "This is a legal process. It's a very technical process. And it's the business of the tribunal to work through the claims and the cases before them and to work them out."

Man says 'voice' urged Bush killing

DETROIT (AP) — A robbery suspect claiming to hear voices told authorities he stalked President Bush around the country and nearly made an attempt on Bush's life four months ago but couldn't get close enough to shoot, police said.

John Spencer Daughetee, 34, told Oakland, Calif., police and FBI agents about the attempt after he was arrested during a bank robbery Friday, police said. Daughetee was being held in Oakland without bail on bank robbery charges.

Police and Secret Service agents said Daughetee has no apparent motive for stalking Bush.

"He admitted that at some point he started hearing voices and that he has been following the president around the U.S. in an effort to get close enough to kill him," Sgt. Sam Maddux, a robbery investigator with the Oakland Police Department said Tuesday.

Authorities said Daughetee has a history of psychological problems and was investigated several years ago in Indiana after making threats against then-President Reagan.

Maddux said Daughetee, believed to be from Flora, Ind., said during interviews with authorities that he was in a crowd of about 4,000 people that attended Bush's speech in the Detroit enclave of Hamtramck on April 17.

3 killed, 5 missing in rooming house fire

LYNN, Mass. (AP) — Investigators today searched for five missing people and the cause of a blaze that killed at least three people at a rooming house whose landlord had been charged with failing to install an adequate sprinkler system.

"It's going to be a long and tedious job," said Deputy Fire Chief William Conway. "The building's not very stable and we're going to be taking it apart brick by brick."

Authorities said building violations contributed to the still uncertain number of deaths and several injuries suffered among dozens of tenants who lowered themselves to safety on ropes after the fire broke out early Tuesday.

Trooper Dennis Galvin of the state fire marshal's office began inspecting the Ben Crest Plaza today and said he hoped to learn where the blaze began and whether the alarm system was working. "We're just getting our feet wet," he said.

The city previously had filed a criminal complaint against the building's owner for failing to install a proper sprinkler-alarm system. An attorney for the landlord said the sprinkler installation was to have begun next week.

Benjamin Amero, 50, jumped to his death while trying to escape the fire shortly after it broke out about 12:30 a.m. Two other unidentified victims were recovered from the building's rubble.

State Fire Marshal Joseph O'Keefe said an adequate sprinkler-alarm system would have doused the hallways and alerted the fire department. Instead, he said, the system was substandard and residents, who claimed the building's fire alarm didn't sound, were left scrambling to safety.

"It went up like this," said tenant Dwayne Rogers, 25, striking a match and shaking his head while watching it burn. "Just like that, the whole building."

Leo McDonnell, 46, whose life was saved when Rogers awoke him, made it to safety by clambering to an adjacent roof.

Others weren't so lucky.

"I saw one guy start out the window, and then the smoke blocked the view," McDonnell said. "And then when the smoke cleared, he was gone. I don't know if he fell or went back in."

Survivors said the screams of their neighbors pierced the night.

"It wasn't screams of help," said Bobby Barrett, 19. "It was more like screams of burning."

The fire marshal and Lynn police disagreed on the number of guests on the night of the blaze, but early reports put the number at 37. By late in the day, officials said, five people were still unaccounted for.

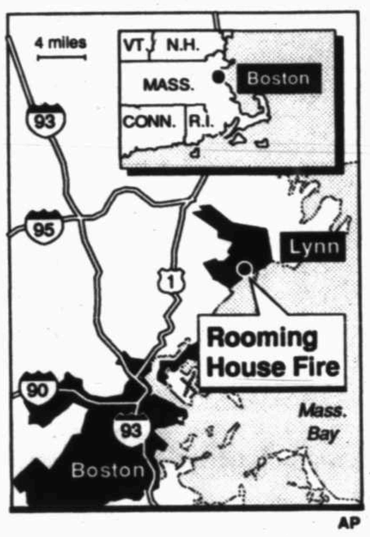

Extensive structural damage raised safety concerns and hampered Tuesday's investigation, said Galvin.

Capt. John Decareau, head of Lynn's arson squad, said it was too soon to determine the fire's cause.

AP

Conway said city law allows climbing ropes in lieu of external fire escapes. But tenants and rescue workers claimed many of the ropes didn't reach the ground, so they were either left dangling or forced to jump to an adjacent building.

"We saw a couple of people that couldn't reach the roof, and they got torched," said Rogers, who tried to wake other tenants before escaping to an adjacent roof.

Al DiVirgilio, mayor of this city of 80,000 on the seacoast five miles north of Boston, said two criminal complaints were pending against the rooming house's owner.

One involved the owner's failure to install a sprinkler system required under a 2-year-old city ordinance adopted after a 1984 rooming house fire that killed 15 people, the mayor said.

Leo Allard, the Ben Crest's owner, has been battling the ordinance in court and refused to comment Tuesday.

The Space Shuttle Columbia lifts from the launch pad Tuesday at Kennedy Space Center, Fla., carrying five astronauts and a military payload. A bird flies in the foreground.

Secrecy of military-based shuttle mission 'relative'

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The Soviets were listening and journalists had reported for weeks on Columbia's payload, so why did military and NASA officials go to the trouble of keeping the launch time and other details secret?

"By being inexact about the launch time, it complicates their ability to track," Lt. Col. Ron Rand, Air Force spokesman, said of the Soviets. "They may or may not listen in, but we're going to do everything we can to keep the payload anonymous."

But scientists who attended Tuesday's launch of the Defense Department's fourth shuttle mission said the military shroud won't stop the Soviets from finding out all about the reconnaissance satellite Columbia and its five astronauts are believed to be launching.

"There's no reason I can think of for the secrecy," said John Pike, a space analyst with the Federation of American Scientists. "In principle, they could run this countdown like they run every countdown — maybe this way it's more fun for them."

The Soviets will shoot pictures of the satellite even before the device begins functioning, said Pike. Soviet cameras attached to a telescope can give a resolution as small as one foot.

"If they launch the satellite this morning, the Soviets will certainly know what it looks like by tonight," he said Tuesday.

NASA lifted its news blackout only briefly, announcing the launch time nine minutes before blastoff and reporting a trouble-free ascent into orbit shortly afterward.

Nevertheless, a Soviet trawler bristling with antennas monitored the launch from less than 50 miles off Cape Canaveral. Reporters — and probably the Soviets — listened in on National Aeronautics and Space Administration's internal communications channel to follow the countdown.

The Soviet trawler and anyone else with a radar system could track Columbia as soon as it left the launch pad, but NASA refused to tell reporters where the solid rocket boosters fell, saying that could help determine the shuttle's trajectory.

The military clampdown on the mission wasn't airtight, though.

The shuttle crew, which always boards about 2½ hours before the scheduled launch time, was trucked out to the pad in the early morning illuminated by a spotlight and accompanied by a helicopter escort as well-wishers waved and camera crews filmed.

Inside the Kennedy Space Center media room, space experts generally agreed the 20,600-pound satellite would spy on the Soviet Union with highly sensitive camera lenses and infrared sensors from 300 miles up.

Sunday return date revealed

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Columbia's astronauts, reported "doing well," went about their clandestine business high above Earth today, unseen and unheard by all but ground controllers. NASA announced they will come home Sunday.

The public space-to-ground radio link was silent as the five men began their second day of secret orbital operations, reportedly monitoring experiments and evaluating man's role as a military observer in space.

Mission Control in Houston broke the silence today to report that Columbia would return to Earth on Sunday, landing sometime between 9 a.m. and noon EDT. Touchdown will be on a Mojave Desert runway at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

The announcement added that "the crew is doing well and the Columbia continues to perform satisfactorily."

The next planned announcement, if there are no problems, will come Saturday, giving the exact landing time.

NASA's only previous in-flight report was Tuesday, two hours after Columbia blazed into orbit from Cape Canaveral on its first flight in 3½ years. It said the five astronauts were ready for orbit operations, an indication the payload doors were open and they were preparing for deployment of a spy satellite.

This is the fourth time in 30 shuttle flights that the Defense Department has taken control, imposing a news blackout on what is happening.

NATION IN BRIEF

Waste again washing onto American beaches

WASHINGTON (AP) — Beach-goers ready to frolic in U.S. coastal waters should be prepared to encounter contamination from toxic chemicals, sewage discharge and medical waste, a private environmental group said today.

"Few regions of the country have escaped the effects of coastal pollution," the Washington-based Natural Resources Defense Council said in a report released today.

The report, which examined a variety of ocean pollutants, suggested the trend toward growing coastal contamination can be reversed over the next decade, but only through strict pollution control measures and curbs in development along coastal areas.

Lobbyist facing charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — Craig Spence, a flamboyant lobbyist who has been a headline figure in the federal investigation of a Washington call-boy ring, is facing cocaine and gun possession charges in New York City, it was reported today.

Spence, 48, was arrested July 31 along with a male prostitute at a Manhattan hotel, The Washington Times and The Washington Post reported.

The Times said that in an eight-hour interview Monday, Spence disclosed that he discovered "about three years ago" that he had contracted AIDS and was threatening to commit suicide rather than die of the disease.

"I had the world at my house," Spence said of parties where he played host to some prominent Washingtonians, "and now they don't know who I am."

Meese friend convicted

NEW YORK (AP) — A friend of ex-U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese III's said he was guilty only of "being in the wrong place and the wrong time" after his conviction on fraud and racketeering charges in the Wedtech case.

E. Robert Wallach, a San Francisco lawyer, was convicted Tuesday of illegally receiving $425,000 from Wedtech to influence Meese and other government officials in the company's bid for government contracts.

A jury acquitted Wallach, 55, of a second racketeering conspiracy charge stemming from another $100,000 he was accused of taking from the company.

PTL aide pleads guilty

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The former top aide to PTL founder Jim Bakker pleaded guilty to fraud and conspiracy and agreed to testify against the evangelist, but Bakker's attorney said the deal was suspect because the aide had sold his soul.

Richard Dortch, former executive vice president of PTL, pleaded guilty to one count of mail fraud, one of wire fraud by telephone, one of wire fraud by television and one of conspiracy, according to one of his attorneys, Mark Calloway.

U.S. District Judge Robert Potter on Tuesday also refused to delay Bakker's trial, turning down complaints from defense attorneys' about pretrial publicity.

HUD can't locate files

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Housing and Urban Development says it can't locate the files of a former housing official whose conduct is under scrutiny in the influence-peddling probe, but the former official says he doesn't have them.

"I don't even know where they are kept, much less take them with me," Thomas T. Demery said Tuesday, adding that he took no files when he left HUD last year. "I don't have them."

James Lafferty, deputy assistant secretary for public affairs at HUD, said, "He may have taken them with him — we don't have them here." However, he said the department has no evidence that Demery took the files.

"They could be someplace that we don't now know about but they are not in the typical places that you would look for them," Lafferty said.

Bush action putting terrorists on run

President Bush has made a number of obviously good decisions on how to proceed in the current hostage crisis and feasibly may have worked the captors into a position of declining support in the world community.

Bush's exhibited concern for the hostages, his tough stance on negotiating with the terrorists and his threatened use of military force against terrorist strongholds if more hostages are slain appear to have turned the tables in the hostage situation.

The terrorists would delight in getting Bush to negotiate for return of the hostages. That way they could always be assured of asserting their insane influence on the U.S. government. But Bush has held to the U.S. policy which states that the United States will not negotiate with the captors of hostages. In fact, in the early days of this crisis shortly after the terrorists had released a tape showing the hanged body of Marine Lt. Col. William R. Higgins, it seemed that Bush actually might call for a military strike in retaliation for the murder.

But days later, Bush's attitude and approach seemed to change and he sent a carrier task force to a point off the Lebanese coast. Then, through intermediaries in Algeria, Bush asked Iran to warn the Hezbollah that if they killed more hostages he would strike at its strongholds in southern Lebanon.

That notification appeared to shake up the terrorists and they went as far as to cancel a death threat against hostage Joseph Cicippio. But the hostages are still being held and the captors are still demanding the release of Moslem cleric Sheik Abdul Karim Obeid. In fact, on Sunday the kidnappers offered to release Cicippio if Israel freed Obeid and 450 Arab prisoners, and allowed 55 Palestinian deportees to return home.

Meanwhile, Israel contends there will be no swap unless three Israeli ssrvicemen being held are a part of the agreement.

It's a delicate situation, requiring just the right amount of toughness and diplomacy. Of course, the fact that the United Nations got involved and sent an official to assess the situation, and that several other nations also have become involved — including the Soviet Union, Algeria and Iran — should tell the terrorists that their actions are being watched closely not only by the United States, but much of the world community.

Several nations, including Great Britain and the Soviet Union, already have condemned the terrorists for killing Higgins.

Orchestrating world outrage against the terrorists is the bottom line to cutting their ability to carry out their acts of hatred.

Once Bush can build a consensus among the nations of the world that this type of violence must be stopped, the terrorists will lose their bases of operation. At that point, the terrorists will start to resemble the true outlaws of society that they are.

Stray voltage killing U.S. dairy cows

WASHINGTON — America's dairy cows are being shocked to death by electrical power surges in automatic milking machines. Thousands of cows have been slowly zapped to their eternal reward while farmers have tried in vain to get help from the federal government.

Jack Anderson

Stray voltage is to a dairy farmer what drought is to a grain farmer. But while dead corn and wheat can bring Congress or the Agriculture Department to the rescue, dead cows have been curiously ignored.

The excess voltage enters electric milking machinery that is hooked to the cows' udders. Though the charge isn't enough to kill the cow, she emerges from the experience a sadder but wiser bovine.

Once shocked, cows balk at the milking machines and even refuse to breed. Cows have been similarly shocked from the floors of their barns and from watering troughs. Farmers tell us that their cows drink the urine of other cows rather than venture near the water trough. The farmers say constant exposure to stray voltage weakens the cows' immune systems and they die of various diseases. During their slow death, the cows withhold their milk.

Dairy farmers must force their reluctant cows to be milked, at least until the cows die, so the farmers can stay in business. A few farmers blame stray voltage for putting them out of business. Some have successfully sued utility companies and the milk-machine installers for losses due to stray voltage. Many of the cases are quietly settled out of court and that keeps the controversy from gaining national attention.

But farmers now want their issue on the table. In Wisconsin, they have been fired up by a court decision awarding $1.1 million to Wallace Daggett of Random Lakes, Wis. Daggett sued the Wisconsin Electric Power Co., claiming stray voltage had cost him 600 cows over a 10-year period. Daggett now gets calls every day from farmers who want to know what to do about stray voltage.

One of those calls came from Robby Webb of Powderly, Texas, who claims to have lost more than 400 cows to stray voltage. Webb told our reporter Tim Warner that his creditors are breathing down his neck and he is awaiting the outcome of his lawsuit against a milk-machine installer.

While waiting for his day in court, Webb has appealed to his elected representatives in Washington, D.C., for an emergency Farmers' Home Administration loan. He gets sympathy, but no action from Reps. Jim Chapman and Charles Stenholm, both Texas Democrats. Maybe their real sympathies are elsewhere. Chapman annually collects $2,000 in honoraria from the Northeast Texas Electrical Cooperative. Stenholm was on the receiving end of $2,000 in honoraria from the National Rural Electric Cooperative and $6,000 from the American Milk Producers Inc. in the last five years. Both congressmen say the money did not buy their influence on this issue.

Stenholm, chairman of the House Livestock, Dairy and Poultry Subcommittee, said he would be more than willing to consider legislation on stray voltage, but that no solution for it has been found.

Researchers who have studied it for 10 years disagree and say there are ways to eliminate the effects of stray voltage. The electric utilities say they are working on it, and deny that they have tried to keep the controversy locked behind the barn door.

Rep. Arlan Stangeland, R-Minn., floated a bill last year to fund $50,000 in research, but the bill died quickly in Stenholm's committee.

The Agriculture Department has devoted some time and money to research — most of it geared to helping utility companies and milk-machine installers. Little of the information filters down to the farmers. The USDA has promised to publish a brochure for dairy farmers by early 1990.

A PENNY SAVED — Since 1950, the average American household has put away only 8 percent of its income in savings. Compare that to Japan where people save 17 percent of their income. That ability to save can help balance an economy, but American consumers are just that, consumers. The Japanese spend less than they make. Americans spend more than they make before they make it. Our deficit mentality starts at home and goes all the way up to the White House. Economists claim that stabilizing the economy can start at the grassroots level with each American consciously spending less than he or she earns.

MINI-EDITORIAL — It took longer than it should have, but Americans are catching on to the fact that "recreational drug" is an oxymoron. A study for the National Institute on Drug Abuse says that casual use of marijuana and cocaine is down dramatically in the last four years. Unfortunately, the number of cocaine addicts is skyrocketing. Cocaine isn't the rich person's recreation anymore. Thanks to cheap crack, it has become the poor person's monkey.

Once is just enough!

In the Reporter-Telegram edition of June 18, on page 5F, was an article by Wendy E. Lane about John Erickson, author of the 12-book "Hank the Cowdog" series. It made interesting reading.

However, not so interesting that the identical article and picture be repeated six weeks later in the Monday, July 31 edition, page 6B.

EDITOR'S NOTE: When this sort of thing happens in newspapers there can be various reasons. In this case, it was because The Associated Press sent the feature over the state news wire twice and the copy editor who handled the story the second time was on vacation when the first transmission came about a month earlier and was thus unaware the story had been published. There are other causes for print duplications, also, but considering the number of individual stories published, such events are extremely rare.

'911' ringing up cash!

Each month as I see my phone bill, I notice $1.70 for the "911 service fee."

If there are 100,000 phone bills in Midland County and another 100,000 phone bills in Odessa, there would be $340,000 collected.

Can you explain to me the need to have that much cash to service the 911 number, per month?

That would calculate $4,080,000 per year. And that is a jag of jack.

Texas signs a 'mess'

On my recent visit to Midland-Odessa, I was surprised to see the offensive road signs warning motorists not to mess with Texas.

As a former resident of that great state, I can testify to its citizens' courtesy, friendliness and hospitality. I found the signs "Don't Mess with Texas" threatening and belligerent. They certainly don't reflect the admirable qualities of Texas people.

Presidents less patriotic?

Are our presidents less patriotic than the average citizen?

Ronald Reagan went to the Bitburg cemetery which, in effect, paid homage to the many SS members buried there.

George Bush went to the funeral of the Emperor of Japan, thereby paying homage to another war criminal.

None of us citizens would honor any war criminal as these two presidents have done.

What makes them so less patriotic than we are?

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Aug. 9, the 221st day of 1989. There are 144 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Twenty years ago, on Aug. 9, 1969, actress Sharon Tate, hair stylist Jay Sebring, coffee heiress Abigail Folger, movie director Voityck Frykowski and high school graduate Steven Parent were found brutally murdered in the Los Angeles home Tate shared with her husband, movie director Roman Polanski. Cult leader Charles Manson and a group of his young disciples were later convicted of the murders.

On this date:

In 1842, a border dispute between the United States and Canada was resolved with the signing of the Webster-Ashburton Treaty.

In 1854, Henry David Thoreau published "Walden," in which he described his experiences while living in a small cabin near Walden Pond in Massachusetts.

Dealing with terrorists might help situation

Facing another of the hostage crises that mortally wounded his two predecessors, President Bush avoided some of their mistakes and perhaps even made progress toward freeing American kidnap victims.

Tom Wicker

That's not likely to happen overnight, if at all. No agreement, moreover, that puts a stop to hostage-taking in the Middle East will be reached in peripheral negotiations.

Until real steps are taken toward settlement of Arab-Israeli issues, the Palestinian intifada and the 14-year civil war in Lebanon — as well as a cooling of the internal struggles in Iran — taking hostages will remain an ugly tactic in this chaotic region.

Bush moved in three directions, however, that seem to me realistic and helpful, even if they are only the end of the beginning, rather than the beginning of the end.

First, his statement appearing to condemn Israel for its seizure of Sheik Abdul Karim Obeid, along with the kidnappings by Iranian and other terrorist groups, was properly evenhanded. However much it upset American Jews, however much they may feel that Israel acted from higher motives than the terrorists and should not be equated with them, it has to be remembered that Bush was trying to make a point not so much about Israel as the Hezbollah and other hostage-taking organizations.

He was sending them the message that the United States does see at least two sides to the Middle Eastern situation, that it does not merely support Israel right or wrong, but that it wants to reach agreements serving the interests of all sides. That was the point, earlier, of Secretary of State James Baker's "evenhanded" speech that also upset Israeli and American Jews. That's one of the points of U.S. talks with representatives of the PLO.

As long as those opposed to Israel believe that the United States is an unswerving supporter of any and everything Israel wants, U.S. efforts to reach an accommodation that would recognize Israel's existence and preserve its security will be fruitless, and so, probably, will American efforts for the release of hostages.

Second, Bush did not pop off with warlike threats that he has no means of making good. His aides did leak word — after Joseph J. Cicippio's captors spared him — that the president had been prepared to authorize a military strike. Maybe he was, and letting such a possibility hang in the air may be cautionary, but it's doubtful that fear of retaliation saved Cicippio's life.

As Noel Koch, a former Pentagon planner made clear in a notable article on the editorial page of Sunday's New York Times, and as terrorists know, the president has virtually no means of hitting them, save indiscriminate air strikes, which probably would be counterproductive. The last time the United States tried that, against terrorist bases in Lebanon, was the fiasco of December 1983 that cost the United States two aircraft and had little effect on terrorism.

Bush lacks good intelligence in the Middle East, as to who and where the terrorists are. Even if he knew, this country has properly made individual political assassinations illegal, and its armed forces are not equipped, prepared or eager for counterterrorism activities. As Koch pointed out, any military action Bush orders might ease domestic political pressures, but it would have little real effect on the kidnappers.

Third, the president welcomed an elusive statement by President Rafsanjani of Iran that the hostage problem was "solvable." Bush's reaction suggests — though he certainly did not say — that he is willing to back away from the old, sterile, ritualistic U.S. insistence that it can never under any circumstances "deal with terrorists."

The Iranian president may have been talking only for effect and nothing may come of his apparent offer. But if Bush is willing to talk about the problem with those who may have some control over it — and it's not at all clear that Rafsanjani or any Iranian official has such control — a sensible avenue of negotiation may yet be opened.

If so, Bush will deserve no outraged complaints about "rewarding terrorists" or "paying ransom." Neither need necessarily be involved in discussions with people who might be able to effect the release of hostages — whose lives surely should be weighed heavily against any abstract and so far ineffective "principle." If something that might be construed as "reward" or "ransom" is required, it can be considered at the time and in the circumstances involved.

Force is not a useful choice. "Dealing with terrorists" may be. Bush needs at least the leeway to find out.

Tumbling of real estate market horror story

In the past the vacation conversation around the guacamole dip bowl had to do with the killing everyone could make selling their second home. Prices have skyrocketed in the last few years, and houses we had bought 15 years ago for $30,000 were now selling for $2 million. Most of us credited the surge in our paper profits to our ability to know when to buy and how long to hold on. It was a talent that only a few of us, like Donald Trump and Harry Helmsley, seemed to have. As Donald Rappaport, our local tycoon, used to say, "The secret of investing is to buy low and sell high." Wisdom like this made us all listen when Rappaport spoke.

Art Buchwald

But this year it's different. The real estate market is not only flat, it has tumbled and is now in the basement. Homes that originally were built for $64,000 are now selling for a measly $350,000. There are horror stories everywhere. Guggenheim built a lean-to on the pond in 1970 for $14,000, and when he put it on the market this year all he was offered was $150,000. This took place at the very moment that President Bush denied there was a recession.

You can imagine the nervousness around the guacamole dip bowl about how much our homes are now worth.

Payette said, "I can't believe that while I'm standing here the price of my $75,000 New Bedford ranch house has sunk from $750,000 to a half-million. What did I do wrong?"

Hawk the lawyer said, "You didn't do anything wrong. Your real estate is still worth as much as it was last year. The only trouble is nobody wants to buy it anymore. People are just sitting on their hands waiting for you to get desperate."

Rappaport was ready to speak, and we, of course, deferred to him. "We are in a period of nervousness and doubt. The reason the prices on our homes have slid so badly is that Tokyo still hasn't made up its mind about the dollar, while Gorbachev has. I'm convinced as soon as the Swiss dwarfs do something, we will see a boom in vacation houses which will blow the Bank of England's mind. Of course, it will depend on whether Gov. Dukakis ever figures out what's up and what's down in his budget."

As usual Rappaport was making a lot of sense.

"Are you suggesting we hold on to our homes until we see how the Common Market is going to work?"

"That goes without saying. We must look fore and aft to interpret the violent swings of the real estate fluctuation; west to South Korea and east to Hungary. By watching their real estate prices we can get some idea of what to expect with our homes on Cape Cod."

The group around the guacamole dip bowl had to admit that we had never dreamed that someday we would all lose our shirts in the market. "What happened to the American dream?" Wallace wanted to know as he stuffed his mouth full of potato chips.

Durr said, "It's the crooks in Washington helping the savings and loan crooks that put us in this position. We homeowners are nothing more than pawns of bankers who live in overpriced homes in Southampton."

Then Hawk raised a very interesting question. "If the price went up tomorrow on your homes, would any of you sell?"

"Are you crazy?" replied Durr. "Where would we live?"

"If the price went down even further, would anyone sell?"

It was so quiet you could hear Rappaport's whale pants flapping in the breeze.

"So why do we care if our houses go up or down?"

"Because," said Ware, "when you are on vacation it's very comforting to talk about money."

Divorcing couple testifies in battle over embryos

MARYVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A woman battling for control of seven microscopic embryos said that keeping them frozen would be tantamount to "killing them," but her husband said bringing them to life would be a mistake.

The couple, Junior Lewis Davis and Mary Sue Davis, drew a portrait of themselves Tuesday as a couple who tried desperately for nine years to have a child.

Their marriage has collapsed into a battle for custody — or ownership — of seven frozen "pre-embryos" that have been in cryogenic storage since December.

Davis, 30, sued for divorce in February, and wants the embryos to remain in storage until the couple decide together what to do with them.

"I oppose the use of the pre-embryos by Mary or any donor because I do not wish to be raped of my reproductive rights," he said.

Mrs. Davis says she has the right to have the embryos implanted in her womb regardless of her husband's feelings.

"I don't feel it abuses his rights," she testified. "He consented to be a father and I'm willing to let him."

Mrs. Davis said she objects strongly to leaving the embryos in cold storage, where according to some testimony they could not last for more than two years.

"I believe that would be killing them," she said. "I am the mother of these embryos. They are the beginning of life. They are more than just cells that mean nothing."

Davis acknowledged his wife has gone through physical and emotional trauma during their six attempts at conception in the in vitro program, which they entered in 1985.

"But I can't see where that's enough to bring a child into this world where the child will have more pain than it cost us to achieve it," he said.

"I don't want my child in a single-parent home," Davis told W. Dale Young, the Blount County Circuit Court judge hearing the case. "I was raised in a broken home and I don't want that for my child."

Both Junior and Mary Sue Davis, 28, come from families of six children.

Mrs. Davis' attorney, Jay Christenberry, contends the embryos should be considered "pre-born children" and allowed to come to term in Mrs. Davis' body.

Charles Clifford, attorney for Davis, said there have been tremendous advances in helping infertile women such as Mrs. Davis. He contends that because she could reasonably expect to become pregnant with another man after her divorce, it is unnecessary to use these particular seven embryos.

Under his questioning, zoologist Alex Shivers said the success rate of in vitro programs "will definitely go up" in coming years. Testimony Monday indicated the national average for successful implantations is 18 percent.

The Davises said they met in West Germany while in the Army and married nine years ago. Mrs. Davis suffered five tubal pregnancies, one of which she said nearly killed her.

The couple tried adoption, only to be told they had little chance of becoming parents that way.

The trial, which began Monday, recessed until Thursday.

Drugs 'not just black problem,' group told

WASHINGTON (AP) — Drug abuse is not merely a "black problem" but a national dilemma that will require major resources to solve, say leaders attending the national Urban League convention.

"We can't talk about the future we want to see for urban America without talking about the No. 1 threat in our inner cities today: illegal drugs," President Bush told the league Tuesday, as the drug issue received heavy attention from the largely black organization.

Urban League President John E. Jacob, in an interview Tuesday, said, "We believe the federal government ought to ... mobilize this nation to a realization that this is not a black problem but a national problem that will require national resources."

But Jacob and others attending the meeting called for efforts to protect the innocent during crackdowns in housing projects.

The league today concludes its four-day convention.

Lottie V. Jones, president of the National Council on Alcoholism and Other Dependencies, on Tuesday showed off the puppets her Detroit-based group uses to teach families the dangers of drug abuse.

Ronald Pogue, senior vice president of CompDrugs Inc. of Columbus, Ohio, told the drug forum: "What sells in this country right now is the notion that the drug problem is primarily a minority problem.

"It is much easier for this country to buy into the notion that it is a minority problem because then there is no compelling urge to do anything about it," Pogue said.

However, Jacob contended the drug issue has not been swept under the rug.

"I think that the whole issue of dealing with drugs is intimidating," he said. "It has required that our community become consciously more aggressive in attacking that problem, because it is not an easy problem to attack, nor is it a safe one to become involved with.

"Now we are talking about our community developing relationships with the police and authorities that will ultimately lead to people getting locked up," Jacob said. "That is contrary to the gentle nature of African-Americans toward each other and is really inconsistent with the value system that we have had about the extended family concept."

Now, Jacob said, blacks are seeing that "the entire family must be more important than those persons who would violate the trust of the family."

Secretary of Housing and Urban Development Jack Kemp brought up the subject of fairness, telling delegates Tuesday, "We are going to be tough on drugs, but we are going to be tough for due process, too."

Jacob, asked if due process protections were a major concern for the black community, said, "I think it is a major concern that people do not be penalized because of someone in their families that might be using drugs that they had no control over.

"We don't want to create a climate in which people just run roughshod through the (housing) projects eliminating people because they just look like they use drugs," he said.

'Rhetoric right,' but results awaited

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush's "rhetoric is right" on civil rights, say National Urban League leaders, but they plan to wait a year to see how it turns out in practice.

"I am willing to concede that the first six to eight months is the rhetoric period" in judging a new administration, Urban League President John E. Jacob said after Bush's address Tuesday.

"We will use the next 12 months to determine how well he does in carrying that out. His rhetoric is right. He is saying the right things. Now we have to find out whether he is willing to do the right things," Jacob said.

Joseph E. Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, was scheduled to address the concluding session of the conference today.

Bush, the first president to address an Urban League conference since President Carter in 1979, received generous applause as he pledged that his administration "will not tolerate discrimination, bigotry or bias of any kind."

But Joan N. Tokley, president of the Tampa, Fla., Urban League, said, "I would have felt a lot more comfortable if the president had addressed the recent rulings of the Supreme Court, especially those that deal with affirmative action."

Little dissent directed toward CDBG funds

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Midland City Council received few major complaints Tuesday night at the last of two public hearings regarding the allocation of federal neighborhood improvement funds.

Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) funds are granted to cities by the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

In 1990, the city of Midland will distribute $789,000 to six municipal projects and two in-house accounts.

HUD requires that the funds be spent in or assist residents of a "target area" which in Midland comprises the east, south and southwest quadrants of the city.

Twenty-six requests totaling nearly $2.5 million were submitted. Four were ruled ineligible under HUD guidelines.

Helen Johnson, executive director of Citywide Community Services, asked the council to at least fund a portion of her $21,000 request.

"We're not choosy about the amount. Our other funding sources are questioning why we can't get some funding from the city," Ms. Johnson said.

Citywide provides a host of maintenance services to senior citizens in Midland.

The only time Citywide received a CDBG grant was in 1986 when it received $3,000 for office supplies, Ms. Johnson said.

Vanessa Tatum, a Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs (MBCE) representative, asked the council to submit a written statement in explanation of why her group's $50,000 request was denied.

Mayor Carroll Thomas told Ms. Tatum that the city doesn't do that as a matter of policy because of the volume of requests that are turned down annually.

"We're making a formal request," she replied.

City of Midland Assistant Director of Planning David Thurbon said this morning his staff won't write the letter, so it will be up to a council member.

A planning department evaluation of the MBCE request found it wasn't in total compliance with HUD requirements.

Two women asked that streets in their neighborhood be paved.

District 2 Councilman Jose Cuevas Jr., a representative from the target area, assured the women "we're going to address your street either this year or next year."

Feedback Tuesday night wasn't altogether negative.

One woman representing the Hollowell Senior Citizen Center simply told the council she appreciated the fact members will allocate $53,000 to the organization next year.

Nearly one-half of the 1990 $789,000 grant will help fund projects associated with the Lamesa Road renovation project which ultimately will create a five-lane highway between U.S. Interstate 20 and Loop 250.

"We're committed to it. We're going to see it through," Thomas told the crowd of about 30 after the hearing.

Another $127,790 was allocated to administering the program and a cost overrun account.

Other projects to be funded include:

- Homeowner Housing Rehabilitation Program, $75,000;
- Revolving Loan Fund (Midland Economic Development Co.), $22,070;
- Neighborhood street paving program in the target area, $100,000;
- Mowing weedy lots in target area, $15,000.

Thurbon said there is not another forum for public discussion. The city must submit its grant requests to HUD by Aug. 31.

His department will write applicants letters thanking them for applying.

MISD donation keeps anti-drug program alive

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

Midland school trustees paved the way Tuesday for an anti-drug program's survival by injecting another $10,000, allowing the project to get off the ground for the 1989-90 school year.

Midland Police Department Chief Richard Czech, who will have four officers — including an alternate — involved in the Drug Abuse Resistance Education program, made a plea for the funding before school board members meeting Tuesday evening.

The department needed at least another $10,000 to ensure a successful drug and alcohol awareness program for Midland Independent School District's sixth-graders, Czech said.

This year, three MPD officers will spend time with each MISD sixth-grade class as part of the nationally recognized DARE program, developed by the U.S. Department of Justice for use in Los Angeles schools.

Czech said the MPD needed at least $110,000 to make DARE survive and could use up to $120,000.

MISD trustees earlier this summer approved donating $20,000 to the program, while the city gave $30,000 and $10,000 was received through private donations. The state awarded the program a $32,000 grant.

Czech said private donations expected this week should put DARE over the top of its minimum funding needed to operate.

In addition to warning against the dangers of drugs and alcohol, DARE will teach pupils methods to enhance self-esteem and motivate them to employ analytical and decision-making skills, Czech said.

"I think the program is going to be successful enough to want us to keep it going," Czech said. "I've received a tremendous amount of support for the program."

After trustees unanimously approved the additional funding, Czech said, "You're not going to be sorry. People will want it back next year."

Trustees warmly accepted the proposal.

"I think kids are going to benefit from it," trustee Jim Builta said. "I think MISD is going to benefit from it."

Larry Rusk said, "I know we're in hard times, but I think this is a commitment to our children."

Superintendent Joe Baressi, however, expressed caution toward extra expenditures during tough economic times. Baressi asked trustees to consider waiting until the 1990-91 school year to kick in additional money to DARE.

Czech said he hopes that in future years DARE can be expanded to other grades.

In other action, school board members set Aug. 17 as the date for a public hearing over a proposed tax hike.

MISD administratrators are proposing to raise the total tax rate from 90.5 cents per $100 valuation to $1.038, the maximum the district can go without risking a rollback election.

The hike reflects a 6.95 percent increase in total tax revenues, with an 8 percent rate increase over the effective operating rate which would equal last year's tax levy. About 0.48 cents of the proposed hike is for debt service.

The total tax increase would mean that an owner would see taxes on $50,000 house go from $452.5 to $519, not including exemptions.

Trustee Adela Marmolejo had the only dissenting vote regarding the proposal.

"I don't want it to happen," Ms. Marmolejo said. "A lot of people are still unemployed and I feel this is going to put even more pressure on them.

"We should have started working on this (proposal) earlier."

She said she rather would have seen items cut from MISD's budget rather than put the financial burden on taxpayers.

MISD is facing an additional $7.4 million in costs this year, including across-the-board raises and a bigger staff among the bulk of the additional costs.

The tax proposal hearing will be held at 7 p.m. in the Board Room of the MISD Administration Building, 702 N. N St. A public meeting to set the tax rate is scheduled for Aug. 22 at 4 p.m. at the same location.

Leland known for spearheading hunger aid

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Since first being elected to Congress in 1978, Rep. Mickey Leland has distinguished himself as a black leader, a team player in the powerful Texas delegation, and a crusader against hunger worldwide.

The Texas Democrat along with eight other Americans and five Ethiopians is missing on a flight that left the Ethiopian capital of Addis Abba on Monday morning bound for a refugee camp on the border with Sudan.

Leland, 44, has maintained a high profile in recent years as chairman of a congressional Select Committee on Hunger, which he helped to create five years ago.

He has spearheaded legislation that has provided $800 million in federal aid to sub-Saharan nations stricken by drought and famine.

In dealing with the problem of hunger in Ethiopia, Leland initially appeared reluctant to criticize the Marxist government there, but he later denounced the country's regime for failing to lend adequate help in getting food supplies to starving people.

Later, he also sought compensation for U.S. firms whose assets were nationalized after the Ethiopian revolution. It was a move that surprised some observers.

When he served in the Texas House of Representatives from 1973 to 1978, Leland often strode onto the floor in an African costume to underscore his militancy on racial issues.

Of late, clad in three-piece Giorgio Armani suits, Leland has been much more of a participant in the political establishment.

Acknowledging his commitment to the Texas Democratic delegation, Leland has said: "I believe it is important, when an issue affects Texas, that we all stand together, whether it is on an appropriation or on a piece of legislation that would affect the state adversely."

Leland served as chairman of the Congressional Black Caucus from 1984 until 1986 after black Texas Democrats dumped him from the state Democratic Executive Committee for supporting presidential candidate Walter F. Mondale instead of black preacher Jesse Jackson.

Last year, however, Leland campaigned for Jackson in his unsuccessful bid against Massachusetts Gov. Michael S. Dukakis for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Wednesday, during a demonstration for janitorial workers here, Jackson led a prayer for Leland and the others missing in Ethiopia.

Describing his sense of purpose and politics, Leland has said: "My purpose...is to help the downtrodden, the poor and the deprived." To do that, Leland said, he has had to make allies with those who "control the resources" in Texas and in Washington.

"It has been necessary for me to relate to all the people, whether they work in Houston and go home to the suburbs or live in Houston," he said. "Over the years, I have been able to ameliorate their fears. They found I am not going to plant bombs."

Illustrating his popularity at home, where he represents a downtown Houston district that is one-third black, one-third Hispanic, and one-third white and "other," is the fact that he has never been seriously challenged since he was first elected to Congress.

In his first term in the U.S. House, Leland was aided by then-majority leader Jim Wright and other influential Texans and won a seat on the Energy and Commerce Committee, a most-sought-after panel.

Leland has used his position on the committee — he is now the 10th-ranking among 26 Democrats on the panel — to defend Texas oil and gas interests.

He also serves on Telecommunications and Health subcommittees, where he has urged more visibility for blacks on television programs and "lifeline" telephone rates for senior citizens.

Leland is married to Alison Walton, a lawyer. They have one child, a son, Jarret David. Leland was born in Lubbock, Texas.

Fort Worth pastor wants equal recognition in governor's race

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

One supporter of a controversial Republican gubernatorial candidate is concerned the media isn't taking the man's race seriously.

The Rev. W.N. Otwell, pastor of the Fundamentalist Church at Fort Worth, announced his candidacy for the 1990 Republican gubernatorial primary in April 1987.

One of his supporters, Steve King of Fort Worth, was in Midland Tuesday to underscore the fact it was Otwell — not Midland businessman Clayton Williams — to announce his Republican candidacy first.

Williams announced his candidacy in June of this year.

Otwell has gained notoriety recently for butting heads with the same government he wishes to oversee.

The 51-year-old minister faces jail time and a $43,000 fine for refusing to license his soup kitchen for the homeless which feeds more than 300 weekly.

He refused to appear in a Fort Worth court July 19 and the city responded with the threat of an arrest warrant, news organizations have reported.

The permit costs $25.

"He holds up the Bible and so do I and that's our permit," King said in Midland Tuesday. "The constitution guarantees separation of church and state."

In 1986, Otwell's Community Baptist Church was forced to close after he refused to license a boys home he ran there.

King claims the 43 health department citations and jail threat are a "smokescreen" erected by the city of Fort Worth to cover the fact it doesn't take care of its homeless.

While the minister feels the city's ordinance interferes with the constitutionally mandated separation of church and state, his campaign bumper stickers proclaim, "Back to God and good government."

The letter "T" in Otwell's name is fashioned into a Christian cross on the sticker.

King, a pilot for an express mail delivery service, believes, however, "you can't really separate the church and state."

He and other Otwell supporters don't want the Congress interfering or prohibiting with the free practice of religion, King explained.

Otwell also was arrested with members of the "Operation Rescue" group for picketing an Atlanta abortion clinic last summer and remained jailed for two weeks in a gymnasium, King said.

The minister has practiced for 26 years in Arkansas, East Texas and Fort Worth. He is married and has three children and nine grandchildren.

His platform in the 1990 Republican gubernatorial primary includes a "change from the status quo type of government we've had," King said.

Followers of Otwell include "the minorities, the poor, taxpayers and hard-line Bible-believers in the 'pro-life' community," King said.

In addition to Otwell and Williams, other 1990 gubernatorial candidates include former Secretary of State Jack Rains, a Republican, and State Treasurer Ann Richards, a Democrat.

Other potential candidates include Texas Railroad Commissioner Kent Hance, oilman T. Boone Pickens, both Republicans, and Jim Mattox and former Gov. Mark White, both Democrats.

Hance details plans for gubernatorial race

AUSTIN (AP) — Kent Hance advocated tough penalties for drug dealers and local control of education, saying his proposals and government experience will assure him the Republican nomination for governor.

The Railroad Commission chairman plans to enter the race Tuesday with announcements in Austin, San Antonio, Houston, Dallas and Lubbock, said Mark Sanders, campaign press secretary. Hance then will embark on a two-week tour of 29 other cities.

In a Monday interview with The Dallas Morning News, Hance said he would support the death penalty for drug dealers and a constitutional amendment denying bond for pushers. He advocated mandatory jail time for all users of illegal drugs.

In education, Hance said he would stress local control of the system, with more input by teachers and parents.

He proposed that the state education commissioner be elected, rather than appointed by the State Board of Education, saying the change would make the commissioner more accountable to Texans.

Hance also vowed to work for tax breaks for businesses.

In his quest for nomination, Hance said he will spend $3 million and his campaign theme will be a "New Vision for Texas."

He will become the third GOP candidate to enter the race to succeed Gov. Bill Clements, a Republican.

Former Secretary of State Jack Rains of Houston and Midland businessman Clayton Williams already have announced. Corporate takeover artist T. Boone Pickens of Amarillo has said he will decide by Tuesday whether to enter the race.

Among the Democrats, state Treasurer Ann Richards has announced her bid for governor. Attorney General Jim Mattox is expected to challenge her in the Democratic primary.

Hance touted surveys that show him the front-runner in the race for the GOP nomination.

His campaign released partial results of a survey by its pollster, Lance Tarrance, that indicated Hance was 20 points ahead in the GOP field.

The poll of 500 GOP voters was conducted July 31 through Aug. 2. It has a margin of error of plus or minus 4.5 percentage points.

Some of Hance's detractors have said he is ahead in the early surveys because he has more name identification than the other Republican hopefuls.

This will be Hance's fourth statewide race since 1984. He ran unsuccessfully for the U.S. Senate as a Democrat that year, then became a Republican in 1985.

In 1986, Hance, a former state senator and congressman from Lubbock, ran unsuccessfully for the GOP nomination for governor.

He was appointed to the Railroad Commission in 1987 by Clements and became the first Republican elected to the regulatory panel in 1988.

Michael Douglas buying ranch from Mosbacher

HOUSTON (AP) — Actor Michael Douglas and local businessman Neil C. Morgan plan to buy a large, wooded ranch in Colorado from a group headed by U.S. Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher, Morgan said.

The 7,000-acre ranch will be developed into site for multimillion-dollar homes, Morgan said Tuesday.

"We haven't completed all of our planning, but it's going to be very secluded home sites," Morgan said. The acreage could be divided into as few as 35 estate sites ranging in size from 40 acres to 400 acres, he said.

The sale is expected to close later this month, said Morgan, who declined to disclose the exact sale price, which was estimated at $20 million.

The ranch's name will remain the same after the sale — the Wildcat Ranch.

The sellers include Mosbacher, Houston businesswoman Josephine Abercrombie and James A. Elkins Jr., former chairman of First City Bancorp. of Texas, Morgan said.

Wildcat Ranch, adjacent to the Snowmass ski area, covers two valleys cradled in the mountainous region surrounding the famous Aspen resort. The ranch is near the White River National Forest and seven miles from the town of Aspen.

Construction on the project may have to wait until next spring because of the harsh winters and the lengthy approval process required by government entities in Colorado.

Man gets 10 years probation after being convicted of murder

DALLAS (AP) — A 23-year-old man was convicted of murder in the Jan. 17 shooting deaths of two brothers during a quarrel over his dog running loose, but the jury granted him a 10-year probated sentence.

Roy Wayne Traylor could have received two life sentences for the Jan. 17 shooting deaths of Jose Sandoval, 27, and Alonzo Sandoval, 26.

Traylor also was convicted of aggravated assault in the shooting of a third brother, Alfredo Sandoval, 17, who was shot in the hip when an argument outside the Sandoval residence ended in gunfire.

The verdict means freedom for Traylor, a clerk in a feed store, who had been in jail since surrendering to police the day after the shootings.

In finding Traylor guilty in the shootings, the jury rejected his claim of self-defense, but was swayed to grant probation after a parade of his relatives and supporters begged that he not be sent to prison.

Early in the trial, Alfredo Sandoval said his older brothers were prepared for a fistfight but did not expect gunfire when they confronted Traylor the afternoon of Jan. 17 to demand that he keep his dogs restrained.

Residents puzzled why courthouse in middle of street

By PAUL McKAY

ANDERSON, Texas (AP) — The tourists and history buffs who marvel at the charm of Grimes County's nearly century-old courthouse inevitably ask two questions.

Why is it in the middle of the street?

Why is the courthouse and county seat in Anderson, an unincorporated hamlet of 400 residents, and not in nearby Navasota, the largest town in the county with 7,000 people?

Even Marcus Mallard, a 54-year-old commissioner and local historian, cannot explain why the building is encircled by Main Street, with no traditional town square.

"I have no earthly idea," he shrugs. But as for the second question, Mallard notes that Navasota did not exist in 1846, when the first of Anderson's five courthouses was established, and Anderson has remained the county seat despite at least two ill-fated movements to have it re-established in Navasota.

Nowadays, a third question is on the mind of locals. Has the termite-infested building outlived its usefulness? There are those who favor building a new courthouse and either razing the current one or turning it over to a historical group.

Anderson was a thriving town of 3,000 people in 1894, when the present courthouse was built on the rubble of two forerunners that burned.

The tall red-brick structure, trimmed with native stone, was built to last and, apparently, to attract attention. A two-tier exterior stairway forms an arch over the front entrance, and a cupola tops off the building. The courthouse has withstood the winds of time to remain Grimes County's most intriguing, albeit quirky, landmark.

"There is not another one like it anywhere in the country that I've been able to find, and I've looked," Mallard says. "It's something to be proud of."

But pride, says Commissioner Jack Carrell, doesn't pay the building's ever-spiraling maintenance costs.

Carrell has suggested that the building either be razed or relinquished to a historical organization to make room for what he says is a badly needed modern structure that could replace not only the courthouse, but other outdated county facilities as well.

The issue came to a head last month after the county forked over $10,000 of local money, on top of $5,000 in state grant funds, to remedy courthouse damage wrought by termites. The insects destroyed much of the woodwork around doorways and windows and ate whole boxes and drawers of records stored in the county clerk's vault.

Most of the destroyed records were of more historical significance than vital importance, county officials say.

But Carrell says the invasion of the termites is but one indication that the historic courthouse is more trouble than it's worth.

"It's a beautiful building and I wouldn't want to see it destroyed, but we haven't seen the end of the costs yet," says Carrell, 50, of Singleton. "I don't want to waste taxpayers' money to upgrade something that's not efficient.

"I'd guess that hallways and stairs take up probably 15 to 20 percent of the space in the building. People who are elderly or handicapped can't go to a trial because the courtroom is upstairs. There's no access for them to get up there, and it would cost a large amount of money to put in an elevator.

"I'd like to see somebody — some historical organization — take it over and take the bills with it."

With that, Carrell leaves open the question of whether the building should be destroyed.

"If nobody wants it, what else are we going to do with it?" he asks.

It's a moot question, says Mallard, who notes that the building is a historic landmark protected from demolition under state laws. And the local historical commission, he says, is not able financially to assume responsibility for it, even if it legally can — which he doubts.

Bob Whitten, publisher of the Navasota Examiner, says he doubts there's a groundswell of support for demolishing the building anyway.

"If anything, there's a big groundswell of support to keep it from being razed," says Whitten. "A lot of people were terribly upset when they heard what (Carrell) had said."

Yet Whitten himself concedes that Carrell has raised legitimate points that merit discussion.

"An elevator would cost a lot of money, and I don't see where you could put one in that building. So he's right about that," Whitten says. "But the county could spend $100,000 or $200,000 to renovate the courthouse, and that would be a lot more desirable than spending the millions that would easily be spent for a new building.

"A Texas A&M architect has looked at it and said the building is structurally sound. The taxpayers of Grimes County can't afford, and would not pass, a multimillion dollar bond issue for a new courthouse." Mallard, in his first term as commissioner from Navasota, says that while the building has been treated for termites and undergone repairs over the years, the jobs haven't been done properly.

"Our courthouse has had money thrown at it for years, but...if it'd been kept up like it needs to be, there wouldn't be any need for all the work it needs now."

County Judge Lovett Boggess, who opposes destruction of the building, concedes there "hasn't been a large amount" spent to maintain it.

While officials are debating the financial dilemma, the grass-roots sentiment for keeping the present courthouse intact is widespread and solid, Whitten believes.

"We learned a hard lesson in the mid '50s when we tore down city hall in Navasota," says Whitten, 71. Whitten says he regrets that he was among the citizens who wanted the old building destroyed in the name of progress.

Marcus Mallard, Grimes County commissioner and historian, shows what is left of documents in the historic county courthouse at Anderson after termites did their damage. The courthouse has withstood the winds of times to remain Grimes County's most puzzling landmark.

Gainesville circus once citywide effort

By ELAINE SCHAD

GAINESVILLE, Texas (AP) — When J.R. Reuther and his wife, Ruth, first came to make this North Texas city their home and establish his optometry business three decades ago, they quickly received visitors.

"I was told if I was going to make Gainesville my home, I'd have to get into the circus," he said.

Reuther, who now lives in Wichita Falls, was among some 100 people who gathered recently for a reunion of the famed Gainesville Community Circus.

"I was Dr. Who Done It," remembers Reuther, 82, who started as a photographer for the circus, then advanced to producing the center ring magic acts. "I'd show them that my top hat was empty, and then proceed to bring out everything but the kitchen sink," he said.

The circus, made up entirely of some 200 Gainesville residents, ran 25 seasons from 1929 to 1958, interrupted only by World War II. The circus began as a way of raising money for the town's Little Theatre, but was such a success that townspeople decided to make it a long-term nonprofit project.

"There wasn't a business in town that didn't have an owner or employee involved in the circus," said Frankie Schmitz, 75, who was the last president of the circus and was a performing clown for 10 years. "It was rewarding to me that everyone pulled together in one common cause."

At one time, the Gainesville Community Circus was the third-largest three-ring circus in the world, behind only the Ringling Brothers and the European. The performers were bankers, car dealers and ministers — virtually every occupation. It was the only circus of its kind made up totally of community performers, who received only two gallons of gas, a small allowance, and had to make their own costumes.

"Children didn't get into any kind of trouble because they had to practice every night," remembered Joy Woods, a former aerialist and trapeze artist, who joined the circus when she was in grade school. "There were some kids in it who were 3 years old," she said. "If you couldn't perform, you did other things like make costumes."

Mrs. Woods, who said she never did fewer than six acts in a show, was typical in that her entire family was in the circus. Her mother, a nurse, was also a horsewoman and sewed the costumes. Her father was a clown and sometime ringmaster. Her brother rode upside down on a unicycle, holding up Woods while she did a trapeze act.

The advent of television, air conditioning and a devastating fire all contributed to the demise of the big top in Gainesville by 1958, said Schmitz. The fire, on Nov. 30, 1954, destroyed the building where all the circus equipment was housed during the winter months. The group struggled on for a few more years before deciding to call it quits in 1958.

With some 75 former performers still living in the Gainesville area, the group hopes to establish a museum so the circus will not fade into the memories of those who were a part of it. "It was such an intricate part of our past," said Mrs. Woods. "We were really a family."

Jury suspects Wright books bought instead of paying fees

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal grand jury wants to examine documents from at least three groups that bought hundreds of copies of a book by former House Speaker Jim Wright instead of paying him a speaking fee, the groups say.

The Justice Department refused Tuesday to discuss the grand jury probe. But lawyers for Southwest Texas State University and the National Realtors Association confirmed they received subpoenas requesting documents related to the book.

A spokesman for Ocean Spray, a cranberry and citrus growers cooperative in Massachusetts, said the grand jury also was seeking documents from his group. Company spokesman John Lawlor wouldn't discuss details of the subpoena, but he did say the group bought $2,000 worth of Wright's book for Wright's use.

Wright resigned this summer after the House ethics committee accused him of trying to evade House limits on outside income through bulk sales of "Reflections of a Public Man." He earned royalties of 55 percent on the book's sales.

The House limits members' earnings from speaking engagements to 30 percent of the congressional salary, but royalties are exempt.

Wright spokesman Larry Shannon said the investigation appeared to be "very routine."

Justice Department spokesman David Runkel said the agency's inquiry is continuing.

"I can't comment on any aspect of the investigation, except I will confirm that it is ongoing," he said.

Lawlor said Wright spoke to Ocean Spray growers and management employees in November 1985. He said Wright's staff suggested that instead of giving the House speaker an honorarium, the cooperative could use the money to buy the books.

Fireman dies fighting blaze

WILMER, Texas (AP) — A volunteer firefighter who helped start the Dallas County Fire and Rescue Team died Tuesday while fighting a house fire in Wilmer, officials said.

Fire Marshal Jim Badgett said Michael Glenn McAdams of Mesquite had complained of chest pains after coming out of the house.

Badgett said he did not know if McAdams entered the house to fight the fire or search for possible victims.

Officials at Midway Park Medical Center in Lancaster pronounced McAdams, 45, dead at 6:30 p.m.

McAdams, a machine shop purchasing agent, was the training officer for the Dallas County Fire and Rescue Team when it began in 1983.

The group has 20 active volunteers and 10 reserves who fight fires in unincorporated areas in Dallas County.

Environmentalists demonstrate outside the Commerce Building in Washington Tuesday against Secretary Robert Mosbacher's decision allowing shrimpers to abandon devices that protect endangered sea turtles.

Despite regulations, sea turtles will die, wildlife group says

By JENNIFER DIXON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Endangered sea turtles will still die in shrimp nets despite new Commerce Department regulations and a federal judge should require shrimpers to use turtle-excluding devices, a wildlife group says.

It's not enough to require shrimpers to raise their nets every hour and 45 minutes so entrapped turtles won't drown, the National Wildlife Federation said in a petition to U.S. District Judge Thomas Hogan.

Citing a recent scientific study, the federation contended that the "severely endangered" Kemp's Ridley sea turtle cannot withstand the trawl times.

The group on Tuesday asked Hogan to force the Commerce Department to require Gulf Coast shrimpers to equip their nets with TEDs. Hogan is overseeing the federation's legal attack on Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher for not requiring the excluding devices.

A new federal law requires shrimpers to attach big boxes with hinged sides to their nets so that turtles can swim through — unless the secretary of commerce has good reason to require other protective measures.

Mosbacher decided July 24 to suspend requirements for excluder devices after Texas and Louisiana shrimpers protested by blockading Gulf Coast shipping channels. The shrimpers argue that the devices reduce their catch by as much as a third.

Last week, Hogan ordered Mosbacher to adopt regulations of some sort to protect sea turtles from drowning in shrimpers' nets. Mosbacher announced the 105-minute trawling regulation on Monday, the deadline the judge had set.

The federation said Mosbacher has data from National Marine Fisheries Service scientists showing that a 105-minute tow will kill four times as many turtles as the secretary has said it will.

7 indicted on federal drug charges

WACO (AP) — A federal grand jury indicted seven people on drug manufacturing charges stemming from a May raid at a Hamilton County rendering plant, but the indictment made no mention of two bodies found at the abandoned site.

Among those indicted Tuesday on charges of conspiracy to manufacture methamphetamine were Wendell Shackleford, 38; Eric Dwain Shackleford, 41; Mi Linda Shackleford, 40; John Lester Smith, 39; Melody Ann Soord, 26; and Glenn Harris, 54.

All of the defendants were being held without bond in the McLennan County Jail, except Wendell Shackleford, who remained at large late Tuesday, the Waco Tribune-Herald reported.

Each defendant faces a possible maximum punishment of life in prison and a $4 million fine on the conspiracy charge.

Officials Friday found the cremated remains of a man in a barrel at the plant, where officials say methamphetamines were concocted for illegal sale and distribution.

Two freight trains collide early Tuesday morning near South Waco, killing one person and injuring five others.

Railroad officials investigating train accident that killed engineer

WACO (AP) — Railroad officials were still looking into the cause of a train crash in a Waco industrial park that killed a 37-year-old train engineer and injured five other people.

Waco firefighters worked for almost an hour Tuesday morning to put out the fire, said Assistant Fire Chief R.G. Wilson.

Union Pacific officials say a southbound grain train with five engines and 99 cars collided shortly after 6 a.m. Tuesday with a northbound switch engine carrying 20 to 30 cars. The accident took place on a track behind Central Texas Corrugated Inc. in the Texas Central Industrial District.

A system called "track-in-time authority" is supposed to prevent trains traveling in opposite directions from colliding, a Union Pacific official said.

"It would be like giving you permission to drive from Third Street to Eighth Street between 8 o'clock and 8:05," said spokesman Alex Tice. "At 8:05, you would get off the street or call dispatchers and ask for more time. Orders given by dispatchers are verbally repeated by engineers. The system works most of the time. This time, despite the safeguards, something went wrong. It's up to us to find out why."

After the collision, the lead engine on the southbound train jumped the track, crushed a boxcar and stopped just short of a ditch that runs west of the railroad tracks. The back of the engine sat 10 feet off the ground on a cushion of mangled iron and steel.

Engineer Frank Lewis, 37, of Fort Worth was thrown from the southbound engine after the collision. A railroad employee riding on the northbound train found Lewis on fire, Waco police reported.

Justice of the Peace Alan Mayfield declared Lewis dead at the scene.

Four other employees were treated and released.

Officer could have stopped rape, women's groups say

DALLAS (AP) — A Groesbeck police officer could have stopped the rape of a suspected prostitute in Dallas without blowing his cover in a drug investigation, representatives of two women's organizations say.

"It doesn't take a police badge to stop a rape," said Karen Ashmore, president of the Dallas Chapter of the National Organization for Women, which has called for the firing of Officer Tomas Echartea.

"I certainly would not be comfortable with a police officer watching over my security and welfare who let a rape happen," Ms. Ashmore said. "That's a slap in the face" to women, she said.

She said the organization will formally ask Groesbeck Police Chief Chuck Walker to fire Echartea.

Walker, who has defended Echartea's non-action, did not return phone calls Tuesday to The Associated Press.

Wanda White, a counselor at the Rape Crisis Center in Dallas, said Echartea's failure to do something was "a crime in itself."

"If a crime is being committed, somebody should do something about it...That's a decision all of us have to make," Ms. White said.

> "It doesn't take a police badge to stop a rape."
> — Karen Ashmore, Dallas NOW Chapter

According to newspaper reports, Echartea was working on an undercover drug investigation for University Park police and pretended to be sick to avoid participating in the attack in June.

"You don't want to ruin your credibility (with the suspects)," he told The Dallas Morning News. "If it had been a life-threatening situation, I'd have blown my cover. I'd have had to. You just can't let someone be killed."

Dallas police said they will begin a criminal investigation and try to find the woman and ask if she wants to press charges.

Detectives will also ask Echartea for a full account of what happened, Dallas Deputy Chief Ray Hawkins said.

"I think he had some obligation as one human being to another to help her as best he could," Hawkins said. "All women, even prostitutes, have a right not to be raped."

Echartea reportedly said the incident occurred in Dallas while he was working on a 2-month investigation that resulted in the arrests of four University Park employees on charges of selling drugs.

Groesbeck Chief Walker said Echartea couldn't have intervened without risking his life and the investigation, the Dallas newspaper reported.

"He can't put himself in a life-threatening situation," Walker said. "If it were a life-threatening situation, his cover would have been immaterial then."

Dallas County District Attorney John Vance said he did not know whether state law requires Texas peace officers to intervene in felonies they observe, the newspaper reported.

Echartea first recounted the incident publicly in an interview with the Waco Tribune-Herald.

STATE IN BRIEF

Potential BC buyer detained in Sri Lanka

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — The attorney for a Sri Lanka-born woman who has been trying to buy bankrupt Bishop College of Dallas said he is concerned for the safety of his client, who is being detained here while authorities investigate fraud allegations.

Panditha Sujatha Nadarajah said six gem dealers are wrongly accusing her of defrauding them of $4.2 million and that she is being held hostage in a hotel.

"I don't want anything to happen to her," said A.W. Clem of Paris, Texas. "If she's in some danger, I want to know. I haven't been able to communicate with her."

Authorities confiscated Mrs. Nadarajah's U.S. passport and ordered her to remain in Sri Lanka while they investigate, said a spokesman for Colombo police's fraud bureau on Tuesday.

Mrs. Nadarajah, 48, denied the accusations. In an interview, she said she is the "victim of a big conspiracy" and is a "legal hostage" in a Colombo hotel. She did not elaborate.

The police spokesman said Mrs. Nadarajah previously was arrested for failing to pay a $4,500 bill at a Colombo hotel and for giving a bank a check that bounced. He said the hotel bill later was paid in installments.

UT gives up bird war

AUSTIN (AP) — In the battle between the University of Texas and grackles, grackles can cackle.

About five years ago, UT at Austin, faced with an onslaught of gasping grackles, declared war on the black-winged invaders.

The troops fired pyrotechnic guns, cranked up loudspeakers that screeched the sounds of grackles in distress, dangled rubber snakes, set up owl look-alikes, and slapped wooden clappers.

But the grackles remained. "We've tried just about everything," said Howard Wilson, director of UT's physical plant division, "and nothing seemed to work."

So, now, there is nothing left to do but mop up the mess.

Every morning, shortly after grackle check-out time, as the noisemakers wing their way into the countryside, maintenance crews move in with push-brooms and long hoses, gushing water.

And each evening, near dusk, the flocks of grackles return to their roosts in the 4,000 trees that dot the campus, and they do what grackles seem to do best: screech uproariously and poop on passers-by.

Background not checked

ARLINGTON (AP) — HUD never checked the background of an Arlington woman, now accused of embezzling $2.5 million, before awarding her a contract for a company she was not licensed with and didn't work for, officials said.

Reba Louise Lovell represented herself as president and manager of Commerce Title Co. when she signed a contract with the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, according to a federal lawsuit.

But state records show Ms. Lovell was not president and was not licensed as a closing agent for the company, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported.

Len Wheeler, senior vice president of United Title Co., formerly Commerce Title, said Ms. Lovell never worked for the company. "We never wrote that woman a check," she said.

What You Don't Know Can Hurt You.

But not if you take a few minutes to learn about electrical safety around your home or business.

Here are a few safety tips worth remembering.

Overhead.

Never fly a kite, or raise an antenna or place a ladder where it can come in contact with a power line. Touching power lines with any object can result in serious injury or even death. Stay clear of all overhead power lines.

Underground.

Know before you dig. Some neighborhoods have underground power lines. If you don't know whether you have underground power lines, or if you need to know their location, call TU Electric.

Out and around.

Pad mounted transformers, large metal boxes that are ususally green or cream colored, are safe when they are closed and locked. However, if one is opened or damaged, it can be deadly. Call TU Electric immediately to report the situation and warn others to stay away until the repairman arrives.

Be safe around electricity.

Being aware of the location of power lines can save your life or the life of a loved one. So take time now, before you start your next fix-up project, to learn the location of power lines near your home or business. Because what you know about power lines can make the difference between being safe or being sorry.

DON'T LET A POWER LINE BE THE END OF THE LINE.

Israeli soldiers killed in car bomb detonated by Hezbollah

TYRE, Lebanon (AP) — A bomb-laden truck driven by a Shiite Moslem clergyman today exploded near an Israeli military convoy and wounded five Israeli soldiers, Israel's army and the pro-Iranian Hezbollah said.

A Hezbollah leader said the attacker was a "comrade" of Sheid Abdul Karim Obeid, a Shiite Moslem clergyman held by Israel. The Hezbollah spokesman, Sheik Sobhi Tofeili, did not say if the attack was in retaliation for the abduction.

The pickup truck blew up in Israel's self-proclaimed security zone in south Lebanon as a joint Israeli-South Lebanon Army convoy was passing by.

Israeli's army said five Israeli soldiers and one of the allied Lebanese militiamen were wounded. It said two people in the truck were killed.

Tofeili said there was only one attacker and identified him as Sheik Asaad Birro, a Shiite clergyman.

Hezbollah also released a statement saying, "The Mujahid (holy warrior) detonated the car he was driving as an enemy military convoy drove past."

Israel radio said the blast left a crater six feet deep and overturned an army vehicle. The radio said the pickup was carrying 110 pounds of explosives.

Hezbollah, or Party of God, said the "martyrdom operation" was carried out at the entrance to the Christian village of Qleiaa, five miles north of Israel's border, at 9:45 a.m.

Hezbollah, believed to be the umbrella for factions holding most of the 16 Western hostages in Lebanon, said in the statement that the attack was carried out to "declare our loyalty to the course of Imam Khomeini and his successor Ayatollah Khamenei" of Iran.

In Beirut, Hezbollah released a second statement today saying that efforts to free Western hostages in Lebanon suffered "their greatest setback" as a result of Israel's abduction of Obeid on July 28 from his home in south Lebanon.

"It is clear that things have backfired adversely on the enemy after this foolish crime. It has become impossible to release the Israeli POWs and all ways for a possible swap have been blocked," the statement said.

Israel says Obeid, an ally of Iran, was involved in the abduction of U.S. Marine Lt. Col. William R. Higgins near this southern port on Feb. 17, 1988.

Higgins' kidnappers, the Organization of the Oppressed on Earth, said July 31 that Higgins was hanged in retaliation for Obeid's abduction. Some reports have said he was killed months earlier, and his body has yet to be recovered.

The Revolutionary Justice Organization, another underground pro-Iranian faction, offered Sunday to release U.S. hostage Joseph Cicippio if Israel released Obeid and 450 Arab prisoners and allowed 55 Palestinian deportees to return to the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Israel carved out the security zone in south Lebanon, a 6-to-10-mile-wide strip, after withdrawing most of its troops from Lebanon in 1985.

Israeli army officials said the casualties could have been higher if the convoy had not been keeping large distances between each vehicle in the convoy of Israeli soldiers and South Lebanon Army forces.

The last suicide car bomb attack was Oct. 19, 1988, when eight Israeli soldiers were killed and seven wounded 300 yards from the border. Shiite Moslem radicals in Beirut also claimed responsibility for that explosion.

In March 1985, a car bomb attacker drove into a convoy of Israeli vehicles, killing 12 Israelis and wounding 14. The attack was claimed by the pro-Syrian Lebanese Syrian Socialist Nationalist Party.

Prior to today's attack, the army said there were 43 car bomb attacks and attempts along the border since October 1982.

Bomb on bus kills at least 12 passengers

CHANDIGARH, India (AP) — A powerful bomb hidden in a plastic lunch box exploded today on a New Delhi-bound bus, killing 12 people and injuring 35 others, police said.

There were no immediate claims of responsibility for the bombing, which occurred in Haryana state near Karnal.

A Chandigarh police spokesman, Inspector Inder Mohan, said the dead included two children. Sixteen of the injured were in serious condition, he said.

The bomb exploded about 1 p.m. while the bus was passing the Karna Lake tourist resort outside Karnal, 75 miles north of New Delhi, Mohan said.

The bus, operated by state-run Haryana Roadways, started its journey at the resort hill town of Kasauli in Himachal Pradesh state and stopped at Ambala, on the Punjab-Haryana border.

It was not immediately known how many people were on the bus.

In June 1988, Sikh extremists planted a bomb that killed 18 people on a bus near the Haryana town of Kurukshetra.

Sikh militants have waged a deadly campaign since 1982 for a separate state in Punjab and periodically launch attacks in neighboring states and New Delhi.

At least 1,116 people have been killed by Sikh radicals in Punjab so far this year, according to police reports.

Sikh gunmen killed six people Tuesday night in Jammu.

Sociologist studying 'what's in a name'

BOSTON (AP) — A Harvard sociology professor wants to know why names suddenly rise in popularity, why there's a slew of Sarahs or a clutch of Calvins in the same year.

Stanley Lieberson, who has begun a scientific study of name fads, says he first got interested in the phenomenon after choosing what he thought was an uncommon name, Rebecca, for his eldest daughter in 1961.

"In nursery school and kindergarten and through the years of grade school and onward there were always a bunch of Beckies that she knew," the professor said recently. "Somehow there was something out there in the society that led parents, without talking to each other, to reach a conclusion."

In a search for possible social cues to parents, Lieberson began compiling health department lists of all babies born in California from 1905 to 1984. He also has data on upstate New York from 1973 to 1985, Wisconsin from 1979 to 1986, and various lists from other countries.

Lieberson got the data by writing to various agencies and taking whatever records were available on computer tape.

Now he'll track the rise and fall of popular names. He also will check them against the historical backdrop — World War I or the Great Depression, for example — to see if parents tend to name their children after newsmakers.

If that's true, for example, there might have been a crop of boys named Douglas when World War II hero Gen. Douglas MacArthur loomed large on front pages.

Early findings suggest that male and female forms of a name, such as Michael and Michelle, often become popular at the same time.

Parents tend to be more creative naming girls and give boys conservative monikers, he said.

An exception is the name Gary, which was popular, Lieberson notes, at a time when film star Gary Cooper swapped his real name, Frank, for that of an Indiana steel town.

In California from 1932 to 1952, Gary increased from only 81 instances to the ninth most popular boy's name in the state. But in 1984, Gary was absent from the list of the top 100 names.

As families become more loose-knit, parents who normally would name children after uncles and aunts may be looking to screen and sports celebrities for inspiration, the professor theorizes.

For instance, he says the recent popularity of the name Ashley might have been inspired by the spread of Laura Ashley women's clothes stores — or by Ashley Abbott, a character on the soap opera "The Young and the Restless."

Late shah's brother imprisoned for 'family reason'

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Yamid Reza Pahlavi, a younger brother of the late Shah of Iran, grinned a toothless smile in the cell he shares with 23 other convicts in notorious Evin prison and said, "Things could be worse."

Pahlavi

Speaking in broken English to a group of foreign reporters on a conducted tour of the prison in north Tehran, he said he was serving a 10-year sentence "for a family reason," but refused to be more specific.

He said he had seven more years to serve.

Pahlavi, wearing a white T-shirt and gray pajama trousers, lay sprawled on blankets spread on the cell floor. There were no beds or any other furniture.

Prison officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the prisoner had been disowned as a drug addict by Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi before the February 1979 Islamic revolution toppled the monarchy.

The shah fled Iran a month earlier with other family members. He underwent medical treatment for cancer in the United States, then went to Panama and on to Egypt where he died in July 1980.

The officials said Yamid Reza Pahlavi was arrested as a vagrant and imprisoned three years ago.

"We are well-treated here," Pahlavi, 58, said, adding that he was kept busy "gardening and looking after roses."

Inmates in his cell included a former general and senior officials of the shah's regime who refused to give their names.

Meeting the shah's brother was the highlight of recently conducted tour arranged by the Ministry of Islamic Guidance.

In a bizarre incident, a Danish reporter was attacked by a prison guard while the group was inspecting a block of empty cells.

"I was walking down a corridor when suddenly this man started shouting in Farsi and then pushed me into a cell and started beating me up," said Kurt Lyndorff, a correspondent for the Danish newspaper Jylands Posten.

Later, the guard, a bearded, middle-age man who refused to give his name, started shouting that all the reporters on the tour were CIA and KGB agents.

The guard later apologized and said he pushed Lyndorff into a cell because the reporter had refused to identify himself as part of the group.

The mostly Western journalists were among a limited number allowed into Iran for the July 28 presidential elections.

The reporters were shown one of a dozen empty blocks of cells in the sprawling jail that held thousands of political prisoners in the Islamic revolution's early days.

Prison officials said the block was vacated after an amnesty declared in February during celebrations of the revolution's 10th anniversary.

Hundreds of "enemies of the revolution" reportedly were executed in the prison, set on a steep mountain slope in fashionable north Tehran, across a narrow wooded valley from a leading hotel, the Grand Azadi.

The reporters were shown another block containing 12 large cells, about 12 by 9 yards, each with 24 inmates. Each had a television set but no furniture. The prisoners sprawled on blankets, reading newspapers.

Officials escorting the journalists refused to say how many prisoners were in the jail. Interior Minister Ali Akbar Mohtashemi said earlier at a news conference that the only political prisoners left in Evin were those serving life sentences for capital crimes.

Mohtashemi said most prisoners now were drug addicts or narcotics peddlers jailed during an anti-drug crackdown launched by the government in January.

The reporters also were shown the prison workshop, where inmates were making military uniforms and shoes.

The Guidance Ministry provided interpreters so reporters could converse with the prisoners. A few inmates spoke English.

All those interviewed said they were jailed for political offenses.

One prisoner who gave his name as Mohammed Aragi said he was a member of Iran's outlawed Tudeh Communist party.

He said a revolutionary court sentenced him to death on charges of spying for the Soviet Union, but his sentence was commuted to life imprisonment under another amnesty declared by the late revolutionary patriarch, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Aragi, 56, said he also spent time in jail during the shah's time for belonging to Tudeh.

Prison officials ... said (Yamid Reza Pahlavi) had been disowned as a drug addict by Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi before the February 1979 Islamic revolution toppled the monarchy. He was arrested as a vagrant and imprisoned three years ago.

Man receives wallet from across the sea

LAWRENCEVILLE, Ga. (AP) — Rick Sargent didn't expect to see his wallet or his credit cards again after they fell into Lake Geneva during a recent trip to Switzerland, but a Swiss diver retrieved them and mailed them home.

"I think if someone lost their wallet in Lake Lanier, somebody would probably take the money and just throw the wallet away," said Sargent, band leader at Chamblee High School.

He was in Switzerland with the DeKalb College Jazz Band for the international Montreux Jazz Festival when his wallet, containing $169 and credit cards, slipped out of his pocket and into the lake.

He returned to Lawrenceville July 22 and last week received his wallet and its contents in the mail with a letter from Georges Delacombaz of the Montreux Scuba Diving Club, who found them. The letter said the diver plans to visit the United States and suggested "maybe we could meet somewhere for a beer."

"I was really amazed that, number one, somebody found my wallet, and that, number two, they'd go to that much trouble to return it," said Sargent.

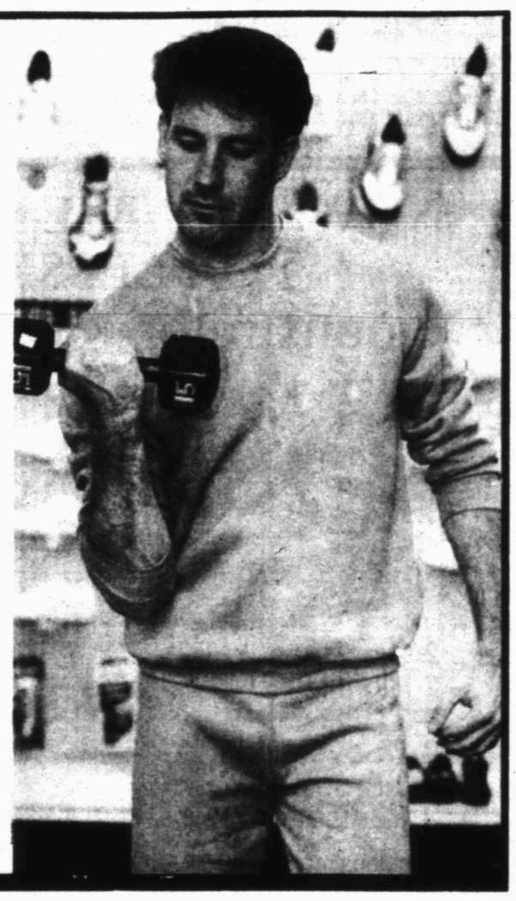

Sargent said he will write Delacombaz and include a reward.

Midland Angels shortstop Gary DiSarcina can't believe it, but El Paso baserunner Ramon Sambo is safe at second during the first game of Tuesday's doubleheader.

Diablos sweep slumping Angels

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

El Paso swept a doubleheader against the Midland Angels Tuesday at Angels Stadium and left town with a one game lead in the Texas League West.

With Wichita's Wranglers opening a five-game series here tonight, that was the last thing Manager Max Oliveras wanted.

Now with contenders Midland and Wichita going head to head, the Diablos can make hay and widen their lead against tailend San Antonio. At least, it's a distinct possibility.

With the sweep, El Paso took the series 4-1 and left the Angels reeling, again. After the Wichita series, they face the unpleasant necessity of playing both the Wranglers and Diablos on the road.

TIM WATKINS, 9-4, won the opener with a four-hitter, 2-1, as the Angels wasted a five-hitter by Scott Lewis, 10-11, perhaps one of the best efforts turned in by the University of Nevada-Las Vegas ex all season.

In the nightcap, El Paso overcame 3-0 and 5-3 Midland leads for a 7-5 victory with Andre David doing the bludgeon job on the Halos.

Lewis, who fanned six and walked only one, struck out the side in the first, but Ramon Sambo's lead off double and a two-out double by Tim McIntosh gave the Diablos a 1-0 lead.

Sandy Guerrero homered over the right field fence, No. 11, to make it 2-0 in the second. After that it was all pitching.

SHON Ashley singled after Guerrero's homer, but Greg Edge grounded into a double play. D.L. Smith followed with a single only to be erased trying to steal second.

Lewis faced the minimum 15 batters over the final five innings. Unfortunately, the Angels were virtually helpless against Watkins.

Chris Cron and Dan Grunhard opened the second with singles, but a 6-4-3 double play killed this threat.

The Angels scored in the sixth when Chris Graves tripled and scored on Ruben Amaro's sac fly. Then, Bob Rose opened the seventh with a single to right, but again a double play, 4-6-3, came to Watkins' rescue.

MIKE BUTCHER took a 3-0 lead into the fifth as the Angels fought for a split which would have enabled them to reclaim sole possession of first.

Tim Torricelli led off with a single and after Sambo's line out to left and a walk to Rafel Skeete, Miguel Alicea relieved and failed to retire any of the three batters he faced.

David doubled for one run. Jesus Alfaro got in his usual licks on the Angels with a two-run double to tie it. When Guerrero singled, Tim Burcham came in to get the side out.

Sargent takes charge at fullback

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — The "Baylor Connection" lives on in the Dallas Cowboys' training camp.

Fullback Broderick Sargent, who played for Baylor alongside current Cowboys Robert Williams and Ron Francis, is listed as the No. 1 fullback going into Sunday's NFL exhibition opener against the San Diego Chargers.

Last season, Williams was one of the Cowboys' most pleasant surprises in an otherwise dreary, 3-13 year.

"At one point, Sargent had dropped one pass the entire training camp," Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson said. "He's had the best stats of anyone as far as catching the ball.

"He's blocked well, caught it well, and he's a power runner. Right now he's the frontrunner."

Sargent, who played high school football at Waxahachie, just 35 miles south of Dallas, took advantage of a mediocre start by incumbent fullback Timmy Newsome and second-round draft pick Daryl Johnston.

The coaching staff may have elevated Sargent to the first team as a means of motivating Newsome and Johnston, but Sargent wants to keep the job.

"I've worked very hard," Sargent said. "I knew they needed help there when I came in. But I was just hoping to make the team. Now, who knows?"

Sargent played for the St. Louis Cardinals in 1986 and 1987, then was cut before last season. He signed with Dallas as a free agent and spent the offseason working on conditioning.

The Cowboys' two other Baylor products have been friends since they met at a high school track meet.

In college, Williams backed up Francis at running back before Francis went on to become the Southwest Conference defensive player of the year in 1985.

This summer, they're roommates and friendly rivals for the starting job at right cornerback, where Williams currently holds the edge.

"It's just good competition," Williams said. "No hard feelings. We'll keep being friends, no matter what happens. And whoever starts, the other one is going to play a lot on the nickel defense."

Francis entered training camp last season with a lock on the job but dislocated a shoulder during an intrasquad game. Williams capitalized on his friend's misfortune and started all but two games at right corner last season.

Francis echoes Williams' feelings on their situation.

"We both realize it's a job, and we just happened to be competing for the same spot," Francis said. "There's no animosity. Actually I think it's better to be competing against a friend. We can help each other without worrying."

Williams has taken a roundabout route to a starting job with Dallas. Originally signed by the Washington Redskins in 1986 as a free agent wide receiver, he was released by the Redskins in camp and signed with the Cowboys as a cornerback project in the spring of 1987.

Dallas also released Williams before the 1987 season, and he planned to take a job as a substitute teacher in the Dallas suburb of Garland. However, the Cowboys re-signed Williams during the players' strike.

Francis arrived in Dallas with considerably more fanfare as the Cowboys' No. 2 pick in the 1987 draft. He became the first Cowboys rookie in six seasons to open the season as a starter.

Seale tries to fight off food, pounds

SAN MARCOS (AP) — Eugene Seale must enjoy working himself out of Houston Oilers coach Jerry Glanville's doghouse because that's where Seale has started the last two seasons.

Seale, a popular special teams player starting his third season, evoked Glanville's ire last season for failing to come to the Oilers' Operation Headstart, a voluntary preseason workout program.

Seale made it to Headstart this season but he later showed up for training camp 40 pounds overweight.

"I'm still hustling, I'm still on the team and I'm still contributing," Seale said in defense of his 270-pound-plus bulk. "I did come to the off-season program whereas last year I didn't."

Seale brought too much of himself to Operation Headstart this year. Glanville wants Seale to play at about 240 pounds. The extra pounds are costing Seale dollars.

"We got him on a special diet and we caught him eating in his car," Glanville said. "He just loves food, he loves potato chips."

Seale, a tough performer for the Oilers' "Hit the Beach" special teams, is a former replacement player who came to camp this year expecting to compete for a starting position.

"That was 40 pounds ago," Glanville said. "We all have pluses and minuses. I still hope he brings those pluses, all those good things he did for the football team."

Seale overcame a slow start last season to become one of the most feared members of the special teams. He led the special teams with 19 tackles and blocked two punts. The Oilers blocked five punts, tying an NFL season record.

Seale was the only member of the special teams to receive two army helmets as rewards for the hardest hit in a winning cause. Special teams coach Richard Smith came up with the helmet idea because he wanted his play-

Norman hopes for best at PGA Championship

HAWTHORN WOODS, Ill. (AP) — Greg Norman carries a sense of accomplishment, rather than disappointment, into the 71st PGA National Championship.

"I'm very proud of what I did. In the last round of the British Open, I fought my way back into it," Norman said. "Not many guys can fight their way back after being seven shots behind like I did."

"I'm disappointed with the outcome, of course, but I'm proud of what I did," Norman said.

Norman was seven shots off the lead going into the final round of the British Open, but birdied the first six holes on the way to a 64 that forced a playoff with eventual champion Mark Calcavecchia and Wayne Grady.

McDonald throwing big bucks away, and for what?

Grimes

In some ways, Ben McDonald may be an intelligent young man. But he's handling his negotiations with the Baltimore Orioles all wrong.

The Orioles' most recent offer to McDonald stands at a $255,000 signing bonus and a minor league contract at $850 per month. But McDonald seeks something along the lines of the three-year, $1.06 million deal that Bo Jackson secured from the Kansas City Royals three years ago

Sure, McDonald was the top pick in June's free agent draft. And sure, athletes like Patrick Ewing and Troy Aikman commanded multi-million contracts coming out of college.

But who is Jerry Jones kidding when he gives Aikman that much money? The guy hasn't thrown a pass in the pros yet.

I say let these guys show what they can do in the pros before giving them the big money. Sports history is chock-full of big bonus players who stumbled through careers that didn't warrant the initial investment.

If they were cars, you could call them lemons. Who can remember the great playing record compiled by Jeff Torborg, for whom the Los Angeles Dodgers parted with $100,000 of their money in 1963? Before the Bums gave up on him in 1970, the former Rutgers Unviersity standout had compiled a .214 batting average with seven home runs in 860 at-bats — not the stuff from which Hall of Famers are made.

Then there's the immortal Carl Means Taylor. You have to wonder if the Pittsburgh Pirates gave him that 50 grand bonus in 1962 because he was Boog Powell's stepbrother. Whatever the case, he played two years with the Pirates after six years in the minor leagues, then bounced around the bigs for a while longer before bowing out.

On a lesser scale, there was Ron Stone. This highly-regarded outfielder got 25 grand from the Baltimore Orioles in 1962, but never played a game with the Birds, though he later saw action with the Kansas City Athletics and Philadelphia Phillies.

So young Ben wants all this money. Let him prove himself first.

So what if he's a first-round pick. That just means that he may have more physical ability than some of his comtemporaries.

Scouts goof, though. Remember Joe Kerrigan, who pitched for the Expos and Orioles in the late 1970s and early 1980s? Well, 'ol Joe (8-12 lifetime) was the 10th player picked in the January, 1974 free-agent draft.

Compare him with Kent Tekulve, who was signed as an undrafted free agent by the Pittsburgh Pirates in 1969, but went on to set the National League record for appearances before his recent retirement.

Or how about Dan Quisenberry? The St. Louis Cardinals reliever was one of the great firemen of the 1980s, but he was not selected in the free-agent draft.

More often than not, though, scouts are on the button with their projections. For example, Reggie Jackson was the eighth player picked in the 1965 draft.

Mike Schmidt was a second-round pick in 1971.

Dale Murphy was the fifth player picked in 1974.

So these scouts aren't usually that dumb. But Ben McDonald still needs to prove himself.

WORST BASEBALL BOOK of the year: Out of the Blue by Cy Young Award winner Orel Hershiser. I understand what the purpose of the book is, but it seems so hastily thrown together in order to make a buck before the Los Angeles Dodger pitcher might have to undergo rotator cuff surgery — or get run over by a train — or something...

BEST BASEBALL BOOK: I have a feeling it's Summer of '49 by former Vietnam War correspondent David Halberstam, but I haven't read it yet. Halberstam's book is purportedly about the 1949 pennant race between the New York Yankees and Boston Red Sox, probably from the perspective of a Yankee fan, since Halberstam grew up in New York.

MOST EAGERLY AWAITED BOOK: Any book on Pete Rose after his gambling mess gets straightened out one way or another, preferably an autobiography.

One more thing: If Rose is so innocent, why do he and his attorneys see the need for taking legal action to save his job?

Rose lawyers make request

CINCINNATI (AP) — Lawyers for Pete Rose have asked a federal appeals court to send his lawsuit against baseball Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti back into Ohio state court, where Rose has already won a favorable ruling.

Rose's lawyers asked on Tuesday that the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reverse a July 31 decision by U.S. District Judge John Holschuh of Columbus, Ohio, who ruled that Rose's lawsuit should remain before Holschuh in federal court. Rose, the Cincinnati Reds manager, is challenging Giamatti's authority to conduct a hearing and discipline Rose on allegations that he gambled on baseball games, including those involving the Reds.

Under baseball's rules, Rose could be suspended for a year if he is found to have bet on baseball. He could be suspended for life if it is determined he bet on games involving the Reds.

Lawyers for Rose and Giamatti asked the appellate court on Tuesday to speed up its handling of Rose's appeal, rather than let it languish for weeks or months as with some other federal appeals cases. The court did not immediately act on the request.

Rose, in a separate issue, asked Holschuh on Monday to issue an order preventing Giamatti from conducting an Aug. 17 disciplinary hearing for Rose in New York City. Giamatti wants to investigate Rose's admissions, reported in an interview with The Washington Post published July 30, that he has bet on football with illegal bookmakers.

Holschuh has issued an order that protects Rose through Aug. 14 from disciplinary action by Giamatti. Rose's lawyers want Holschuh to extend that order for the duration of the court appeal. Holschuh has not ruled.

On June 25, Hamilton County Common Pleas Judge Norbert Nadel in Cincinnati upheld Rose's argument that Giamatti had expressed bias in the case and appeared to have prejudged Rose. Giamatti had signed a letter to a federal judge asking leniency in sentencing for Ronald Peters, a former Franklin, Ohio, restaurateur who was a principal Rose accuser and said he had handled bets for Rose. Rose's lawyers argued that Giamatti's letter indicated the commissioner was biased against Rose, a claim the commissioner says is untrue.

Nadel granted Rose a temporary restraining order preventing Giamatti from conducting a hearing, or from disciplining Rose. Baseball's lawyers then got the case transferred into federal court over the objections of Rose's lawyers, who say it belongs in state court.

Federal courts have previously upheld the commissioner's governing powers in baseball against challenges by team owners Ted Turner and Charles Finley.

In the appeal filed Tuesday, Rose's lawyers argued it is critical that Rose be protected from possible punishment while judges decide whether his lawsuit belongs in federal or state court.

"A decision by the federal court that denied such relief after the state court granted it, resulting in Rose's prompt expulsion from baseball by the commissioner, would be a tragedy if it was later determined that the federal court lacked subject matter jurisdiction," the defense argued in documents filed by Rose lawyer Robert G. Stachler of Cincinnati.

Astros' power surge heats up Western pennant race

Associated Press

A power surge by the Houston Astros is putting a charge into the National League West race.

The Astros hit four homers, each with at least one runner on base, and beat the San Diego Padres 12-3 Tuesday night. The victory, combined with Cincinnati's 10-4 romp at San Francisco, cut the Giants' lead over Houston to one game.

"It's a nice sight, especially with men on base," Houston manager Art Howe said of the Astros' second four-homer game in 10 days. "We made the most of those tonight, that's for sure."

Davis had a two-run homer in the first and a three-run shot in the fourth, both off Padres starter Don Schulze, 2-1. Ken Caminiti added a three-run homer and Craig Biggio a two-run shot as Jim Clancy rebounded from last week's disaster against Cincinnati with a seven-hitter.

Davis now has 27 homers, including three in two games, and his five RBIs matched a career high. He has hit four of his five homers against San Diego this season at Jack Murphy Stadium.

"I see the ball good here," Davis said. "I'm not doing anything differently. The ball travels well here. You don't have to hit it well to get it out."

Clancy, 6-9, snapped a personal five-game losing streak and pitched his first complete game since Aug. 29, 1988, a 6-1 win at Milwaukee while he was with Toronto.

"Things were working pretty well. I was hitting the corners," said Clancy, whose last previous victory was June 16. "And I was happy to see 12 runs. I needed to go out there and get people out."

National

Reds 10, Giants 4

Cincinnati matched Houston's four-homer total in halving first-place San Francisco's lead.

Scotti Madison, Eric Davis, Mariano Duncan and Luis Quinones homered in support of Reds starter Tom Browning, 10-10, who won his fourth consecutive decision and pitched his fifth complete game of the season. He allowed eight hits, struck out five and walked one.

Rookie left-hander Russ Swan, 0-2, making his second major-league start, allowed three home runs in 1 2-3 innings, including consecutive homers by Duncan and Quinones as Cincinnati built a 5-0 lead in the second inning.

Cubs 4, Expos 2

Chicago kept sole possession of first place by handing Montreal its sixth consecutive loss and Dennis Martinez his first defeat in 12 decisions since April 21.

Mark Grace broke a 2-2 tie with a seventh-inning homer, giving the Cubs a two-game lead over the Expos in the East.

Martinez, 12-2, gave up only four hits, but three of them were homers. Grace hit his 10th of the season and seventh since the All-Star break, while Jerome Walton and Ryne Sandberg also homered for Chicago.

Martinez's stretch of 18 scoreless innings ended on his second pitch of the game when Walton hit his fifth homer into the bleachers in left-center. It extended Walton's hitting streak to 19 games, second-longest in the NL this year behind the 23-game streak by Jose Oquendo of St. Louis.

Mets 9, Phillies 0

New York blanked Philadelphia as David Cone pitched a six-hitter for his first shutout of the season and Darryl Strawberry capped a six-run seventh inning with a three-run homer.

Cone, 9-5, who won his sixth straight decision, struck out five and walked one in pitching his fifth complete game. It was his first shutout since Sept. 10, 1988 when he blanked Montreal 6-0.

Pirates 7, Cardinals 3

Bob Walk improved his record to 3-0 against St. Louis this season and helped Pittsburgh break out of a hitting slump with an RBI double and a triple.

Walk, 9-7, allowed seven hits in eight innings and went 2-for-3 at the plate, raising his average to .240.

He took a four-hitter into the eighth, but two singles and a three-run homer by Pedro Guerrero spoiled the shutout bid.

Dodgers 10, Braves 2

Los Angeles routed Atlanta with a grand slam by Mike Scioscia, a three-run homer by Franklin Stubbs, two RBI singles by Eddie Murray and Orel Hershiser's seven-hitter.

Hershiser, 14-8, struck out two and walked three in his seventh complete game.

Teams come up short in spots

Associated Press

Because of injuries, key holdouts and the new 80-man roster limit, NFL teams are having a tough time these days finding enough bodies for their training camps.

Such a dilemma confronted the Los Angeles Rams on Tuesday when they were down to just one healthy player at tight end, free agent rookie Gary Knudson.

"With the new 80-man roster, these things can happen," Coach John Robinson said. "The other day we had to practice without a tight end."

Among the Rams' tight ends, Pete Holohan is out for two weeks with a knee injury, rookies Vernon Kirk and Richard Ashe both have troublesome ankles, and Damone Johnson is holding out.

On defense the Rams are without linebacker-lineman Fred Strickland, who underwent knee surgery on Tuesday, and first-round draft pick Bill Hawkins of Miami, Fla., who is a holdout.

Strickland is expected to return in time for the season opener Sept. 10 at Atlanta. Robinson can only hope that Hawkins ends his holdout in time to be ready for the start of the season.

"We figured Hawkins and Strickland would be our two inside rushers on passing downs," Robinson said. "Now one's in the hospital and the other one's in Miami, so we're staggering a little bit.

"But you have to go on. We have to work around it for now. You end up practicing with only 60 or 65 healthy players, but that's the way things are now."

The Green Bay Packers, Miami Dolphins, Cleveland Browns and Los Angeles Raiders also got bad news recently when some key players were incapacitated due to injury.

Green Bay Packers

Offensive lineman Dave Croston faces possible surgery on his right shoulder.

Croston, who spent his rookie season of 1987 on the injured reserve list with an elbow problem, had been projected as a starter at either guard or tackle, a position depleted by holdouts.

Croston took last week off because of a problem with his right shoulder, but has still not recovered.

Miami Dolphins

Dolphins outside linebacker Eric Kumerow, hampered by injuries in his rookie season last year, underwent arthroscopic surgery on his left knee Tuesday and will be sidelined four to six weeks, Coach Don Shula said.

Kumerow, the Dolphins' first-round draft choice in 1988, hurt his knee while the team was practicing against the Atlanta Falcons last Friday.

New 'Goose' shuts out Rangers

Associated Press

Rich Gossage has been released for less than a week and already his nickname has been claimed.

"The nickname helps," Mauro "Goose" Gozzo said Tuesday night after leading Toronto over Texas 7-0 in his big-league debut. "I never really know when they're booing me or calling out my name. I guess it's always helped the fans get on my side, wherever I've pitched."

Gozzo allowed three hits over eight innings as the Blue Jays climbed over .500 for the first time since Opening Day. He walked four and struck out three.

"We finally got some runs to work with," Blue Jays manager Cito Gaston said. "We've been getting outstanding starting pitching to keep us in a lot of games. It's nice to see the bats pick up some of the slack."

Nelson Liriano drove in a career-high four runs for the Blue Jays, 57-56, who had reached .500 eight times only to lose the following game.

Bobby Witt, 9-10, gave up six runs and five hits in 4 2-3 innings as the Rangers lost their fourth straight.

Fred McGriff hit his American League-leading 30th home run to give Toronto the lead in the second.

Athletics 3, White Sox 2

Shortstop Ozzie Guillen's 10th-inning error allowed the go-ahead run to score at Comiskey Park.

Don Pall, 4-3, walked Stan Javier, Walt Weiss sacrificed and Mark McGwire hit an infield single to shortstop that snapped an 0-for-21 slump. Guillen's throw bounced into the first-base dugout as Javier scored.

Rick Honeycutt, 2-1, pitched 1 1-3 scoreless innings and Dennis Eckersley got two outs for his 22nd save.

Mariners 6, Angels 4

Jeffrey Leonard hit a three-run homer that tied the score 4-4 in the sixth inning at Anaheim Stadium and hit a go-ahead home run in the 10th.

Leonard hit his 18th home run of the season with one out in the 10th off Greg Minton, 1-3. Darnell Coles followed with his ninth home run of the year.

Jerry Reed, 4-6, pitched one hitless inning and Mike Schooler pitched the 10th for his 22nd save.

Orioles 6, Twins 1

Dave Johnson scattered eight hits at Memorial Stadium in his second major-league start. Mike Devereaux drove in three runs for the Orioles with an RBI double in the third and a two-run triple in the seventh.

Johnson, 1-1, struck out three and walked four. He is the 10th starter the Orioles have used.

Rick Aguilera lost his second start for the Twins since being acquired from the New York Mets last week in the Frank Viola trade. He gave up three runs, one earned, and five hits in six innings.

FISHING BEAT

Armstrong sweats out bass win

By BUD BAKER

For Earl Armstrong, July 8 turned into a nerve-wracking day. Fishing in the fourth annual West Texas Bass Classic at Lake Spence, the Midlander weighed in a 6.73 pound bass at 7:09 a.m., then had to sweat it out the rest of the day to see if it would remain the biggest bass weighed in.

It did, and Armstrong claimed the $10,000 first place check.

Obviously humbled by the experience, Armstrong said, "It was pure luck. The bass busted a shad on top of the water near me. I just happened to have a my worm reeled in, and instantly cast to where the fish had surfaced and it bit."

Armstrong said he made the catch on a salt and pepper, with charteuse tail Lucky Strike worm, in about six feet of water near the mouth of Smokey Draw on Spence's north shore.

In the seconds after hooking the fish, Armstrong said that he did everything wrong, including throwing down his rod and hand-lining the fish to the boat. Somehow he landed the fish, and had the rest of the day to develop a case of nerves.

Armstrong, who works for the City of Midland in the Water and Sewer Department, said he has been fishing in tournaments for about eight years. His fishing accomplishments include a club chamapionship in the High Sky Bass Club in 1987. His biggest previous tournament paycheck was $500.

When asked what he planned to do with the $10,000, Armstrong said he was going to take a vacation and take his wife, "Wherever she wants to go."

The remainer of the money, he said, would be set aside for his three children to eventually attend college.

Second place also was claimed by a Midlander, John Wurster, who weighed in a 6.20 pounder to win $1,000.

RED and Harvey Pinkerton of Snyder put on the West Texas Bass Classic at Spence every year in July. The entry fee is $50. This year's tournament drew 337 contestants. It is a one-fish tournament. The biggest fish weighed in is the guaranteed $10,000 grand prize. The number of places paid depends on the number of entrants. This year, the tournament paid 15 places. The tournament also pays a $50 "Early Bird" prize to the first 25 anglers who bring in a fish.

Padres promote Benes

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The San Diego Padres called up right-handed pitcher Andy Benes, the number one pick overall in the 1988 draft, from Class AAA Las Vegas Tuesday night, following a 12-3 loss to the Houston Astros.

Benes was 2-1 with an 8.10 ERA in his five starts since being promoted from Class AA Wichita of the Texas League. The Padres also called up relief pitcher Dan Murphy, who was 6-0 with a 4.20 ERA at Las Vegas.

Midland reclaimed the lead in the fifth as Reed Peters doubled, sending starter Aris Tirado to the showers; Bob Rose greeted James Austin with a go ahead single and Chris Cron doubled in the insurance run. But you know how insurance can be, sometimes.

El Paso responded in the sixth with four runs as Midland helped immensely with two costly errors and David swatted the two-run double that made it 7-5.

Lefthander Ed Puig, meanwhile, pitched the final two innings to pick up his first win of the season to go with 22 saves.

MIDLAND jumped to an early lead when Ruben Amaro and Rose tripled in the first and Cron's sacrifice fly brought in Rose.

ers to have the mentality of a military attack group.

Seale earned one of his helmets in a 41-17 victory over Washington when he literally knocked out Redskins return specialist Derrick Shepard on a kickoff return.

Seale is in the final year of his contract and wants to have an outstanding season to use as a bargaining chip. But first there is the battle of the weight, a subject Seale already is tired of discussing.

"I'm a step slow and everybody wants to say it's the weight," Seale said. "I'm going to say I didn't work out the way I was supposed to in the offseason."

Why?

"I deserved something after the season was over, what do you think?" Seale said.

Are you tired of talking about your weight?

"Yeah, can't you tell?"

Seale enjoys talking more about the possibility of earning a starting spot. He was an inside linebacker in some alignments last season. But even he can't stop talking about his weight.

"I'm fired up about it but my major concern is to get this weight off," Seale said. "Once I do that, then I can take care of business."

Glanville hopes business is a sufficient motivator for Seale get the weight off.

"He does love money," Glanville said, "but he may love potato chips more than money."

PGA—

It is the memory of that 64 that Norman will take into the PGA, the last of the year's Big Four golf events.

"That's the last thing I did," said Norman, who hasn't played since the British Open.

"I've still got all those great things, all those things from the 64, in my system," Norman said Tuesday after a practice round for the event that begins Thursday on the Kemper Lakes Golf Club in the northern suburbs of Chicago.

Norman, who has an unfortunate habit of losing golf's major titles in dramatic fashion, said he was very optimistic about his chances in this one.

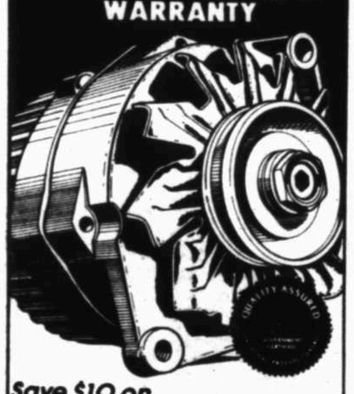

"I like the golf course. The golf course sets up well for me," he said. "I'm playing extremely well. I'm putting well. My confidence is good. I feel very relaxed. I'm looking forward to the week."

He said the disappointment of the British Open playoff loss did not compare with some of his earlier frustrations, such as a playoff loss to Fuzzy Zoeller in the 1984 U.S. Open, Larry Mize's playoff pitch-in to win the 1987 Masters, Bob Tway's 72nd hole birdie-from-a-bunker in the 1986 PGA, Norman's last-hole bogey that ended his bid in the 1986 Masters.

U.S. carrier patroling off coast of Iran

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — The aircraft carrier USS America was reported today to have resumed patrol off the coast of Iran, putting another powerful military force at President Bush's disposal in the Lebanon hostage crisis.

The nine-ship battle group was in Singapore, nearly 4,000 miles away, when the crisis arose July 31 with the reported hanging of U.S. Marine Lt. Col. William R. Higgins by his Lebanese Shiite captors and a death threat against a second American hostage.

The America cut short its port visit by four days to return to its assigned duty station in the north Arabian Sea, a voyage requiring nearly a week.

U.S. officials refused, as a matter of policy, to discuss ship movements, but Defense Secretary Dick Cheney told reporters in Washington that the carrier was headed for the "north end of the Indian Ocean."

A convoy located in the Arabian Sea, or further south in the Indian Ocean, could steam north through the Gulf of Oman and enter the Persian Gulf.

A Pentagon spokesman said on Tuesday that the America was "conducting routine operations" in the Indian Ocean but would not say where. Other sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said it was resuming normal duties in the north Arabian Sea.

The battle group was deployed in June to the Navy's Joint Task Force Middle East, the only U.S. surface fleet operating within striking distance of Iran. The force also includes 10 ships in the Persian Gulf.

The 79,000-ton America's port call at Singapore had been scheduled well in advance, and a military source called it "just the breaks" that the hostage crisis arose during its absence.

U.S. warships in the gulf region have operated at reduced alert status and spent more time in port since Iraq and Iran agreed last year to a cease-fire in their eight-year war.

Administration sources in Washington have been quoted as saying Bush had opted for a military reprisal if any more hostages were killed.

Panamanians held for entering U.S. area

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — U.S. soldiers detained 29 Panamanians who entered a restricted military area Tuesday and released them after confiscating their weapons, a spokeswoman for the U.S. Southern Command reported.

She said among those briefly detained were 10 officers and troopers of the Panamanian Defense Forces, including Maj. Manuel Sieiro. He is a brother in-law of Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega who is commander of the Defense Force and controls the government.

The spokeswoman, Mercedes Morris, said five Panamanian journalists were among the civilians in the group.

She said in a telephone interview the Panamanians were detained because "they ventured without authorization into a military zone" reserved exclusively for American forces.

Ms. Morris said about 40 U.S. Marines were conducting "a reconnaissance exercise on roads" leading to the Panama Canal when the Panamanians entered the area in 15 vehicles.

A number of submachine guns, rifles and pistols were confiscated and will be returned to the Defense Forces through a U.S.-Panamanian coordinating commission in charge of handling problems related to the security and defense of the canal, Ms. Morris said.

Woman has abortion, defying court's injunction

OTTAWA (AP) — A Quebec woman defied a court order obtained by her former boyfriend and had an abortion, but the Supreme Court voted unanimously to lift the restriction anyway.

The case of Chantal Daigle, 21, was the latest and most dramatic in a series this summer that brought attention to Canada's lack of a federal abortion law.

In ruling Tuesday, the Supreme Court said it would give its reasons later for lifting the injunction obtained July 7 by Ms. Daigle's ex-boyfriend, 25-year-old Jean-Guy Tremblay. Tremblay, a former nightclub bouncer, and Ms. Daigle briefly lived together in Montreal before breaking up.

The court's nine justices had returned from vacation for an emergency session in Ottawa Tuesday believing that Ms. Daigle was entering the 23rd week of pregnancy and could not wait much longer for the case to be resolved.

Her lawyer, Daniel Bedard, who evidently had been unaware that Ms. Daigle went ahead with the abortion, told the court about it in the middle of the session.

"The attorney general of Quebec informed me they suspected my client of having proceeded to have an abortion," Bedard said. "I have checked this and it is true."

Bedard did not say when or where his client had the abortion.

He apologized to the court but asked for the case to be heard because Ms. Daigle, a secretary, still could face contempt charges that carry a two-year prison term and $42,500 fine.

Tremblay also heard the news in court and told reporters: "She just killed my child. I don't know when — today or last week."

A spokesman for Quebec Justice Minister Gil Remillard said police called his office Tuesday with details of the abortion from an informer.

Remillard said there were "good reasons to believe that Madame Daigle had an abortion a week ago," but he declined to say where.

"I don't think it's opportune to talk about that," he said.

Most doctors in Quebec will not perform abortions after the 20th week. Abortions are peformed in some parts of the United States until the 24th week and she hinted after an appeals court upheld the injunction on July 26 that she might cross the border for the procedure.

She said later, however, that she would abide by the Supreme Court's ruling.

In fighting the injunction, she said Tremblay had abused her, and one time threw her to the ground and told her he would "control and subdue" her.

One of her lawyers, Robert Decary, said the question of whether she still would be subject to contempt of court charges will not be answered until the Supreme Court gives its reasons for overturning the injunction.

About 350 anti-abortion demonstrators maintained a vigil outside the Supreme Court during the hearing.

"I am pretty appalled by the whole thing — that she went out and killed her baby," said Jim Hughes, president of the Campaign Life Coalition.

Judy Rebick, spokeswoman for the National Action Committee on the Status of Women, which supports the right to abortion, said: "Chantal has been through the most incredible pressure. She clearly wanted to obey the law.

"But I can't imagine what it must have been like to know that the clock was ticking in terms of the deadline on that abortion."

Clayton Ruby, a Toronto lawyer, said the ruling has likely put an end to the use of injunctions to prevent women from getting abortions in Quebec and perhaps other parts of Canada.

"No more injunctions in Quebec from vindictive boyfriends," said Ruby, represents the Canadian Abortion Rights Action League.

Canada has been without an abortion law since the Supreme Court ruled in January 1988 that the existing law's stringent requirements for approval of an abortion infringed on a woman's rights. The House of Commons failed to approve any of six proposed laws in July 1988.

The outcome was that abortion was left a matter between a woman and her doctor.

Last month, however, that premise was challenged by three provincial court cases, including Ms. Daigles.

The Ontario Supreme Court threw out an injunction obtained by a man claiming a father's right, and the woman went ahead with the abortion. In Manitoba, a woman went ahead with the procedure after her former boyfriend failed to obtain an injunction.

Prime Minister Brian Mulroney has said Parliament will tackle the abortion issue this fall when it returns from its recess but will not be rushed into a decision.

The federal government argued before the Supreme Court that abortion is "within the exclusive legislative authority of the Parliament of Canada" and should not be a matter for provincial courts to decide.

The court ruling came in response to Quebec's Court of Appeal, which voted 3-2 to uphold an injunction issued by Quebec Superior Court.

The appeals court based its decision on the province's Charter of Human Rights. Justice Yves Bernier wrote in the majority position that "the child that has been conceived but not born is a reality that must be taken into account."

WORLD IN BRIEF

6 bodies recovered from plane wreckage

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AP) — Search teams on Wednesday recovered six bodies from the wreckage of a sightseeing plane that crashed in the Southern Alps with nine American and Canadian tourists aboard, police reported.

They said there were no survivors.

A New Zealander was piloting the twin-engine Britten Norman Islander that went down Tuesday near Mount Aspiring on South Island.

A police spokesman in Dunedin said the bodies had not been identified and he gave no indication when identities of the victims would be released.

An uncomfired report said the Americans were from Wisconsin.

New Zealand Press Association said the bodies were taken by a helicopter from the crash site to a mountain base camp and would be transferred to Glenorchy.

Two rescue dogs were used to help a team of 27 police and rescue personnel locate the bodies, according to the press agency.

It said the wreckage was scattered at an elevation of about 4,000 feet on the mountainside and the dogs were brought because some of the bodies were buried under snow.

Police said when the plane crashed it triggered a small avalanche.

Chinese criminals executed

HONG KONG (AP) — Eighteen criminals were executed in the southern Chinese city of Canton today, including a man from the nearby Portuguese enclave of Macao, a pro-Beijing newspaper reported.

The crimes committed by the condemned men included robbery, murder and rape, the Chinese-language New Evening Post reported from Canton. It appeared the cases were not connected with the pro-democracy protests that erupted across China beginning in April.

Macao's Liang Mingyuan, 40, was executed for masterminding a plan to steal gold from sellers involved in the Canton black market two years ago, the report said.

Also executed were two officers of the armed police accused of smuggling and five roaming bandits accused of robbery.

China releases no figures on capital punishment, but more than 10,000 criminals are believed to have been executed since 1983, when an anti-crime drive was initiated.

Murder, rape and multiple thefts are among the most common crimes in China leading to execution, normally carried out by a bullet to the back of the head.

Panamanian crew arrested

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A navy cutter has intercepted a Panamanian freighter of the Baja California peninsula, arrested about a dozen crewmen on board and seized one metric ton of cocaine, the Attorney General's Office said Tuesday.

Fernando Arias, a spokesman for the Attorney General's Office, said he believed the crew members were Colombian nationals and the cocaine packed in 20-pound bags was being smuggled to the United States.

Arias told the government news agency Notimex the freighter was intercepted about 50 miles south of Cabo San Lucas, at the tip of the Baja California peninsula.

He said the had no other immediate information, but promised more details will be made public on Wednesday.

The Attorney General's Office is in charge of coordinating Mexico's campaign against drug trafficking.

Man proposes in paper

FREDRIKSTAD, Norway (AP) — Egil Syversen proposed marriage to Tonje Kolle, using the entire front page of the local newspaper to do it.

Syversen, a city official, was asked in an interview by the newspaper Demokraten when he last surprised his girlfriend.

"I'll do it right now by asking her to marry me," replied 44-year-old Syversen. "Will you marry me, Tonje?"

The newspaper helped Syversen pop the question on Friday by filling its front page with his picture and the headline, "Tonje, Should We Get Married?" Syversen said in a telephone interview that he knew his spur of the moment proposal would be printed, but "that front-page headline left me speechless."

Surprised but not speechless, Ms. Kolle said yes, in the Monday edition of a competing newspaper.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 10, 1989

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Pay attention to the real estate market and make overdue property improvements. Postpone a tough personal decision until the dust settles in October. Use the interim to gather more facts. Be sure you know what you are doing before increasing your investments. Do not ignore your instincts or you could go down in flames. Defend your beliefs.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Jack Haley Sr., singer Eddie Fisher, actress Rosanna Arquette, infielder Tom Brookens, sausage king Jimmy Dean, President Herbert Hoover, country comic Junior Samples.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An underlying seriousness helps you see someone in a new light. Travel is best postponed until later in the week. Concentrate on completing routine tasks today. Financial progress is slow but steady.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Big, noisy social events are not your cup of tea, but you could profit by showing up. Romance enjoys highly favorable influences. Dress to impress; wear something simple but elegant. Relax at home tonight.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Think like Donald Trump or Malcolm Forbes and you could become a big money-maker too. Improving your status at work is the key to success today. You prize your privacy.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Give yourself a small reward. You deserve something nice for your hard work. Although this is not an easy time to attract partners or cash, you will cope. Persevere even when feeling discouraged.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): It is better to go through, rather than around, obstacles today. A phone call brings good news. Eliminate the non-essentials that slow you down. Postpone social encounters and shopping trips that can wait.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The spotlight is on friendships and social relationships. It is time to put your own needs first for a change. Cultivate untapped resources. A change of residence is a definite possibility.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): If you know what you want, chances are good you will get it. Receiving affection from your family means more than ever now. Wield your authority judiciously. Avoid issuing ultimatums.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Show respect for partner's feelings. Take loved one's concerns seriously. You are on a roll these days. Seize an opportunity to earn extra cash. You will never regret saving for a rainy day.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You and your partner may expect too much from each other; bring things back to earth. Only self-discipline will give you the figure you want. Steer clear of junk food; exercise more.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): No one likes a wet blanket. Learn to express your concerns without sounding like a drag. Slow your pace a bit and savor the good things in life, especially your personal relationships. Romance deepens.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): There are fewer things to tie you down now. Rejoice in your new freedom! Be careful not to confuse physical attraction with lasting love. Mental rapport is essential for a fulfilling alliance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You have to like yourself before you can really love someone else. Replace bad habits with good ones. Ignoring medical advice is foolhardy. Do everything you can to protect your health.

Opening lead: King of ♣

Some things are just too much to be accomplished on your own. That's the time to enlist outside assistance.

When one hand has all the power, entry considerations usually require more than 26 high-card points in the combined hands to make three no trump. South's sequence showed a balanced 23-24 points in his methods, and North wisely judged his 2 points insufficient for a raise to game.

West led the king of clubs, and declarer adopted a reasonable line of play. After holding up the ace of clubs until the third round, South cashed the ace-king of spades and, when both defenders followed, overtook the eight with the queen to take the heart finesse. That lost, and after cashing the good clubs West exited with a heart.

Declarer, forced to discard a low heart and diamond on the clubs, won the ace perforce, then crossed to the table with the seven of spades for the diamond finesse. Unfortunately that, too, lost—down one.

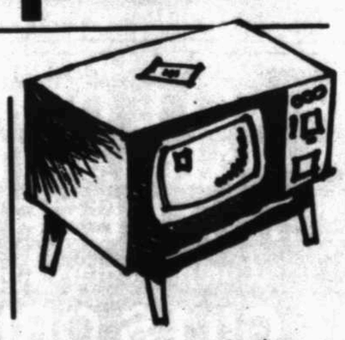

While South adopted a line which stood a 3-to-1 chance of landing the contract, there was a still better one available. Declarer should have won the second round of clubs and, after cashing only three rounds of spades, thrown West in with a club.

That defender can take as many club tricks as he pleases, but then is snared in an endplay. Since the spades have been stripped from the defenders' hands, West must exit with a red suit. Whichever he chooses is into one of declarer's major tenaces and yields the eighth trick. Declarer can then cross to dummy with a spade to finesse in the other for an overtrick.

Breathed going 'Overboard' on new boating humor column

DENVER (AP) — Berke Breathed, whose pen illustrated the comic strip "Bloom County," plans to go a little overboard as a contributing editor at Boating magazine.

John Owens, editor in chief of Boating, said Tuesday that Breathed, an avid boater who has homes in Evergreen and Florida, will write a monthly humor column.

Breathed, who owns four boats, said his column, titled "Overboard," will reflect his consuming interest in the sport.

"Boating looks at equipment in the way I want to look at equipment — what's coming out, and why we silly boaters think that a new-style helm station is exciting," Breathed said.

The last "Bloom County" comic strip appeared in papers last weekend. Breathed, who won a Pulitzer Prize for cartooning in 1987, plans to begin work on a new strip called "Outland" that will begin Sept. 3. "Outland" features a black ghetto child who was a "Bloom County" regular.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — CBS is firmly behind the "The Pat Sajak Show" as the late-night talkfest struggles against reigning king Johnny Carson and his "Tonight Show," the show's producer said.

Sajak

"CBS has just told me, 'Do what it takes to make it work, and we'll stick by you,'" Paul Gilbert said in a recent interview.

The show, featuring Sajak of "Wheel of Fortune" fame, debuted with good ratings seven months ago but has since dropped to third place.

Gilbert said the show has been revamped. The blue couch is gone, replaced by a beige one. Only four guests will now appear nightly, instead of five, a change Gilbert said was made "to allow Pat time to sink his teeth into an interview."

Most significantly, Sajak's monologue will run in the middle of the show or not at all. "We figure it doesn't make sense to compete against Carson with his act," Gilbert said.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — The 22-year-old adopted son of country music singer Freddy Fender died Tuesday of injuries suffered in a traffic accident, authorities said.

William L. Nance of Kimberling City died at St. John's Regional Medical Center a few hours after the accident Monday night, officials said.

Three other people were seriously injured, including another of Fender's sons, Danny Huerta, 23, officials said.

The Highway Patrol said the car driven by Nance collided with a vehicle driven by Shirley Diimig, 58, of Reeds Spring. The accident occurred a quarter-mile west of Kimberling City.

Ms. Diimig and Nance's brother-in-law, who was visiting from out of town, were hospitalized at St. John's, officials said. The relative's name was not known.

Fender operates a country music theater in Branson. He had just returned from Texas after the funeral of his mother, Margaret Huerta, who died of a heart attack Aug. 1, said Sandra Lemons, assistant general manager of Freddy Fender's Theater.

MAYAGUEZ, Puerto Rico (AP) — The New Zealand capital of Wellington and the French city of Lyons announced record bids Tuesday to stage the 1990 World Chess Championship final.

The host for the 10-week contest will be decided Wednesday by a vote of the 89 delegates to the International Chess Federation's annual meeting being held in this city on Puerto Rico's western coast.

In a potentially explosive move the federation decided Tuesday to choose the venue for the final without consulting the players.

Wellington offered prize money of 3 million Swiss francs, about $1.8 million, plus $37,000 for the federation's fund to promote the game in developing countries.

Lyons offered the same prize fund and a trophy encrusted with diamonds and gold valued at $93,000, for the winner.

According to International Chess Federation rules, up to 20 percent of the total world championship prizes will go to its fund for developing nations.

CULVER CITY, Calif. (AP) — Reggae singer Ziggy Marley says if his audiences notice he's smiling a great deal, it's because he loves the music he makes.

"I feel good. I feel like everything is goin' alright and I love our music," said Marley, 20, at a news conference Tuesday.

Marley and his band, The Melodymakers, began a world tour and showed reporters their new video for the single "Look Who's Dancing," from the album "One Bright Day"

Brother Stephen Marley and sisters Sharon Marley Prendergast and Cedella Marley also perform in The Melodymakers. The four are the children of the late reggae great, Bob Marley.

Ziggy Marley said his father once told him: "On your way up please take me up. On your way down don't let me down."

Reggae music is based on themes of peace and unity, Marley said.

Marley and The Melodymakers will tour the United States, then Europe, Africa and Japan. Marley and the band won a Grammy for best reggae recording last year and an NAACP Image award.

Koch

NEW YORK (AP) — Running New York City isn't child's play, but sometimes it makes Mayor Edward Koch wish he was a kid again.

Koch, better known for his brash, outspoken style, revealed a yearning for the simpler life of a child Tuesday during a tour of a new day-care center at police headquarters in lower Manhattan.

"It's marvelous," the mayor said as he was shown the playroom and a second room where the 35 children in the program take a nap after lunch.

"Sometime about 3 o'clock in the afternoon I feel like I want to come over and be loved," Koch told Police Commissioner Benjamin Ward, who led the tour.

"Come over between one and two o'clock," Ward replied.

LARAMIE, Wyo. (AP) — Max Weinberg, the drummer with Bruce Springsteen's E Street Band, plans to tell college freshmen about how he found success working in a rock 'n' roll band.

Weinberg will be the featured speaker at the University of Wyoming's fourth annual President's Welcome Assembly for Freshmen on Aug. 28.

His speech, "Growing Up on E Street," will cover motivation, goal-setting, overcoming career obstacles and achieving success, said university officials.

Texas leaders call for stable oil price

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Texas Gov. Bill Clements and Texas Railroad Commission Chairman Kent Hance, and other oilpatch elected officials, said Tuesday the suffering energy industry needs price stability for economic and national security reasons.

A swelling tide of imported oil, coupled with a crude oil price bust, has left the domestic petroleum industry in a crisis and is erasing conservation gains of the past two decades, witnesses said at the first of four regional hearings on national energy policy sponsored by the U.S. Department of Energy.

Deputy Energy Secretary Henson Moore pledged the hearings will help develop a "legitimate cross-section" of opinions from energy producers, consumers and policymakers.

"It will not be a document which simply sits upon a shelf at the Library of Congress," Moore said.

Energy Department officials heard testimony from more than three dozen witnesses during the daylong session at an underground auditorium of Tulsa Central Library.

In addition to Clements and Hance, those testifying were Gov. Henry Bellmon of Oklahoma, along with U.S. Sens. David Boren, D-Okla., and Don Nickles, R-Okla.; U.S. Reps. Mike Synar, D-Okla., Jim Inhofe, R-Okla., and Richard Baker, R-La.

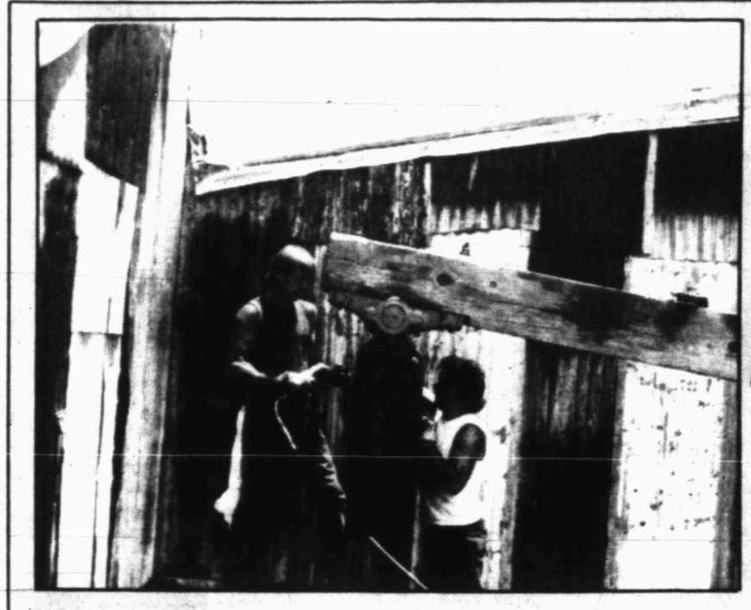

Clements said while demand for petroleum is increasing, domestic production has declined since 1985 from nearly 9 million barrels a day to about 7.7 million barrels a day.

"As a result, there has been an alarming increase in total oil imports into the U.S.," he said.

Clements said oil imports now average 7.8 million barrels a day, a level 65 percent higher than in 1985.

The domestic industry needs stabilized oil prices, additional funding for research and tax incentives from the federal government, he said.

Workmen for Leamco Service Co. overhaul bearings on the Santa Rita No.2 at Permian Basin Petroleum Museum. Leamco is one of several companies that donates time to keeping the historical rig in working condition. The rig was donated to the museum by Marathon Oil Co. in 1974 and moved from Texon to its present location by Shorty Hall Rig Co. The Santa Rita No. 1 opened the first Permian Basin oil boom.

El Paso gas seeks more capacity

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — New Mexico natural gas producers would be able to sell more of their product under a proposed pipeline expansion by El Paso Natural Gas Co., a utility spokesman said.

The producers would be allowed to transport more natural gas westward to meet expected demand in California, John McFall said.

The utility asked the Federal Energy Regulatory commission last week for an optional expedited certificate so it could begin the expansion, he said.

The company wants to add up to 600 million cubic feet per day to its current capacity of about 3.9 billion cubic feet per day.

The expansion would increase El Paso's delivery capability to California from 2.9 billion to 3.5 billion cubic feet per day.

The type of certificate El Paso requested requires the company to assume more financial risk in the project, but usually can be obtained faster, McFall said.

The $201 million project would include a process called looping, which is lengths of pipeline that tie into the main line and run parallel to it.

About 240 miles of new pipeline would be looped with existing pipeline.

Several miles of the loops would be added in sections of New Mexico and Arizona, including a section between the San Juan Basin and Window Rock, Ariz. Loops also would be added in Colorado.

Compression also would be increased along the line, which would enable more gas to move, McFall said.

The primary market to be served by the expansion would be the enhanced oil recovery fields in central California. The gas would be used partly to replace crude oil in boilers that produce steam for injection into oil-bearing formations.

The steam injection process enhances heavy crude production.

Video ads may face tough go

From Staff and Wire Reports

The production of video commercials on video cassettes and the fate of a local firm may be facing an uphill battle as a result of recent lawsuits and surveys.

A recent survey indicates consumers may have had it with commercials on the videocassettes they rent, even as more car and soft-drink spots are being spliced onto movie tapes.

Sixty-six percent of VCR owners said they fast-forward through commercials at the beginning of rented movies, according to a Nielsen Media Research study released Tuesday at the eighth annual Video Software Dealers Association convention.

The study further found that more than 60 percent of those surveyed said they zip through coming attractions.

However, Jim Mathis, vice-president of Midland-based Video Air Time, a company that places local commercials on video tapes for stores, disputes the claim.

Mathis says that viewer response is initially very low when it comes to commericals on rented videocassettes but that the approval rating climbs into the high 90 percentile after about two weeks.

But despite the renters' approval or disapproval, the commercials won't be going away anytime soon.

MCA Home Videos' upcoming release of "The Land Before Time" will carry a Pizza Hut pitch.

"Rain Man" features a Buick plug, "A Fish Called Wanda" hypes Schweppes and "Young Guns" hawks Nestle.

And a number of promoters have created a ruckus at this year's convention by offering to open prerecorded cassettes and attach commercials for local merchants.

Video Air Time puts spots for florists, bowling alleys, attorneys and department stores on any cassette where there's room.

"We're offering the video store owner an additional source of revenue," said Terry Mathis, Video Air Time's vice president for franchising. "The video store owns the cassette. And if we don't make an unauthorized infringement of the copyrighted material, we have violated no law."

Video Air Time charges about $20 per commercial per cassette, of which the store owner receives about $1 a tape.

Paramount Pictures has filed a $1 million lawsuit against St. Louis-based Video Broadcasting Systems, alleging that the company has placed commercials on "Beverly Hills Cop II," "Raiders of the Lost Ark," and "Eddie Murphy Raw" in some markets.

Paramount argues that low-budget local commercials damage the studio's image. Paramount was the first studio to place a commercial on a major studio release, adding a Diet Pepsi pitch to "Top Gun" in 1986.

Like that slick spot, many commercials on major studio releases are well-produced, often superior to spots for the same product running on television.

More than 6,000 attend Hispanic menudo event

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

Last month's Mex-Tex Menudo Cook-off was a rousing success, members of the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce learned at Tuesday's monthly meeting.

Elvia Hernandez, MHCC executive director, reported that over 6,000 people attended the two-day affair, and that the Midland County Exhibit Building has already been reserved for the 1990 cook-off July 14-15. "The last day, people were already reserving booths for next year," she observed. The cook-off raises funds for the MHCC general fund.

Special guests at Tuesday's meeting were Lee and Midland High students who recently returned from the Lorenzo De Zavala Legislative Session — a program for Hispanic high school students that teaches them about government by letting them run a mock government. All the students agreed that the session taught them a lot about themselves, each other and how the government operates.

Hernandez also reported to the members that Midland would host the quarterly meeting of the Texas Association of Mexican-American Chambers of Commerce Oct. 6-7 at the Midland Center and at the Midland Hilton. Between 50 and 60 board members and officers from TAMACC's 23 member chambers are expected, plus visitors.

The quarterly meeting will coincide with the chamber's annual anni-

Texas regulators ready to turn thrifts to feds

By DEE GILL
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — As a federal thrift bailout approaches, Texas regulators are preparing to relinquish their control over the state's ailing savings and loans institutions..

The Texas Savings and Loan Department, the agency that traditionally handled problems at state-chartered thrifts, will lay off half of its staff at the end of the month, according to Commissioner James L. Pledger.

The staff reductions will reflect the agency's reduced role in problem-thrift regulation under the federal bailout bill, which will be signed into law Wednesday, and the expected reduction in the number of state-chartered thrifts after the federal program gets under way.

Although early recommenda tions on solving the Texas thrift crisis called for beefing up the state department, the final federal version doesn't directly involve state regulators. Under the new law, the Texas department will likely become more involved in monitoring normal thrifts and less involved in working with failing ones, Pledger said.

Stocks climb to post-crash high

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices climbed again Tuesday to another post-crash high as the Dow Jones industrial average finished just under the 2,700 mark in active trading.

The widely watched Dow average of 30 industrials rose 4.18 points to 2,699.17, just 23.25 points short of the record closing high of 2,722.42 it reached on Aug. 25, 1987.

The slight increase followed a 41-point surge Monday.

After rising well above 2,700, the Dow average retreated broadly in an afternoon selloff analysts termed a normal and measured reaction to the runup a day earlier. The market regained some ground in the last 30 minutes of trading.

"I think it was healthy we held yesterday's gains without a backoff, particularly when you're near a psychological level," said Edward P. Nicoski, a technical analyst with Piper, Jaffray & Hopwood Inc. in Minneapolis.

"There's been no panic selling even though we've been near this level," he said.

The Dow average's flirtation with the 2,700 level has resurrected fears from two years ago, when the market's historic highs reached in August were shattered two months later in the worst crash in history. The Black Monday panic of Oct. 19, 1987 has made many investors cautious.

Oil futures rise in light trading

From Staff Reports

At mid-morning oil futures prices rested at $18.15 per barrel, up 3 cents from Tuesday's close of $18.12.

On Tuesday, oil futures prices rose in light trading, pushed up by buyers hoping for a drop in oil inventories.

The American Petroleum Institute's weekly statistics on oil stocks were due out after the close of trading.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, West Texas Intermediate crude for delivery in Septemer rose 21 cents to close at $18.12. WTI, the benchmark grade of light U.S. crude, fell 12 cents on Monday in another quiet session.

Contracts for delivery later in the year also showed gains but closed below $18 a barrel.

Among refined products traded on the exchange, unleaded gasoline for September rose 0.69 cent to finish at 50.44 a gallon, while September heating oil gained 0.12 cent to a settlement price of 48.56 cents a gallon.

Except for a few upward blips, crude prices have been falling since late July. The September contract has lost 42 cents since July 25, when it traded at $18.54.

Analysts said the latest gains came on expectations that last week's hurricane in the Gulf of Mexico would reduce some of the inventories that have been building lately. Sluggish demand and excess production by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries have increased the supplies of crude and gasoline in storage.

"People were buying ahead of the APIs," said John Hill, energy broker for Merrill Lynch Energy Futures. "Because of the hurricane last week people think there will be a drawdown in inventories."

Despite the advance, some traders said the underlying weakness in the market remains and prices could fall further.

Dollar steadies in quiet trading

LONDON (AP) — The dollar held steady in quiet morning trading in Europe, with little news in the market to influence its movements.

Gold prices were lower.

Traders said they didn't expect any news to move the market until Friday's release of the U.S. producer price index and retail sales figures for July.

Market activity was very quiet, they said, with intermittent interest in the dollar and more sustained activity on cross currency rates.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell 0.40 yen to a closing 138.85 yen. Later, in London, it rose to 138.95 yen. In London, the dollar rose against the British pound. It cost $1.6230 to buy one pound, cheaper for buyers than $1.6250 late Tuesday.

Gold opened in London at $365 a troy ounce, down from $365.45 late Tuesday. At midmorning, the city's main bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $365.15.

In Zurich the bid price was $365.20, down from $365.85 late Tuesday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell $1.40 to close at $365.88.

Silver was quoted at $5.16 an ounce, unchanged from Tuesday.

Barker's Gifts opens in Imperial

By MELLA McEWEN

Just opened at 17 Imperial Shopping Center, next to Kick's Bakery, is BARKER'S GIFTS.

A zig-zag divider down the center of the store and along the walls divides the store into areas that contain items ranging from children's toys to paints and ribbons for decorating T shirts, denim jackets or baskets to greeting cards to gift items to home decorator pieces.

Owned by Midland native Sue Johnson, the store is patterned after Arnold's in Dallas, where she worked for nearly 20 years. She says it's nice to be back home with her family and seeing old friends.

Barker's will also offer free demonstrations on such subjects as painting denim jackets and decorating baskets, and employees are always available to help customers with their projects.

Hours are from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m Monday through Saturday.

ROSA'S CAFE & TORTILLA FACTORY has opened its second Midland location at 903 Andrews Highway.

The Odessa-based chain purchased the former Wendy's building and renovated it, adding a dining room and patio. The building is an example of Rosa's new design and colors.

Manager Adolfo Dominguez says business has been great since the opening last Thursday evening. The new restaurant can hold 200 to 250 people and has created about 45 new jobs.

Dominguez adds that his store will soon be offering frozen yogurt and ice cream and, once it receives its liquor license, frozen margaritas.

PAGES AND PRINTS, Plaza Shopping Center, is expanding into the former Steven's Imports location next door.

Owner Patteann Daniels-Beverly says the space will be used to expand the children's department — ranging from books to educational toys, some children's fashions and baby gift items.

"We've realized during the four-and-a-half years we've been open that, while children's books aren't the largest in amount of sales dollars, they are by far the largest in terms of volume," she says, explaining the reason for the expansion.

The expansion will add 900 feet to the store, which is currently 1600 square feet, and Beverly says the project should be completed by the first of September.

The store — which has a number of couches and chairs for patrons to use while looking through books — is staying open until 10 p.m. Friday nights and offering live music.

MAMA BEAR'S COTTAGE, 1906 Illinois, is under new ownership.

The Greenhouse Apartments, 3212 Wadley, are now THE TRELLIS apartments.

Manager Janet Chase explains that the name change is another phase in the complex's renovations, which began in late 1988. "We've changed everything — new paint outside and inside, new appliances, new carpets in the units; we've built a fence around the parameter, which it never had before; we've redone the parking lot, even put on a new roof."

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Chicago board's guilty pleas heard

CHICAGO (AP) — A federal judge heard the first in an expected parade of guilty pleas when two brothers became the first traders arraigned on charges stemming from a federal probe of fraudulent trading at the world's largest futures exchanges.

Brian Sledz, 29, and James Sledz, 24, pleaded guilty Tuesday to one count each of violating the Commodities Exchange Act. The elder brother also pleaded guilty to one count of wire fraud, and the younger to one count of mail fraud.

The brothers are among 46 traders indicted Aug. 2 in the FBI probe of the Merc and the Chicago Board of Trade. Published reports have said as many as 30 defendants are expected to plead guilty and cooperate with authorities.

Frederick Wang resigns as president

BOSTON (AP) — Frederick Wang resigned as president of Wang Laboratories Inc., the company founded by his Chinese immigrant father, and the stock of the troubled computer maker jumped 20 percent.

Analysts said Wang's resignation on Tuesday signaled the company's intention to get serious about its problems, which include a recently announced $375 million quarterly loss.

T-bill yields fall to 18-month low

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yields on three-year Treasury notes fell to the lowest level in 18 months as the government began a series of huge debt auctions intended to raise $44.5 billion this week.

The Treasury sold $10 billion in three-year notes at an average yield of 7.93 percent Tuesday, down from 9.12 percent at the last auction on May 9 and the lowest rate since averaging 7.42 percent on Feb. 2, 1988.

Consumer debt up nearly $3 billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans took out $2.99 billion more in consumer debt than they retired in June, the government reported, as the pace of borrowing slowed in part because of declining auto sales.

The Federal Reserve Board said Tuesday that consumer credit in June rose at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 5.1 percent, down from May's revised 7.3 percent rate. The May increase was revised from $3.6 billion to $4.2 billion.

Six percent of Midway Airlines purchased

CHICAGO (AP) — Ampco-Pittsburgh Corp., a low-profile metal manufacturer, announced Tuesday it has acquired a 6.6 percent interest in Midway Airlines Inc. and may attempt to take control of the mid-sized airline.

But Midway "has no interest in being acquired" and has not had discussions with Ampco-Pittsburgh, David R. Hinson, the airline's chairman and chief executive, said Tuesday.

Eastern pilots continue strike

NEW YORK (AP) — Eastern Airlines pilots are supporting a continuation of their 5-month-old strike, union officials said.

Air Line Pilots Association members meeting in Newark, N.J., voted 203-15 Tuesday in favor of sustaining the strike, union officials said. Late Monday, Eastern pilots in Atlanta voted 493-121 not to return to work.

Norden Systems taken off market

NORWALK, Conn. (AP) — A year in corporate limbo ended for Norden Systems Inc. with the announcement that the subsidiary of United Technologies Corp. is no longer for sale.

The Norwalk-based manufacturer of radar systems and other electronic military equipment was put up for sale in April 1988.

Hoylake releases details of BAT purchase

Hoylake said it values its stock-and-debt offer for BAT at the equivalent of $14.14 a share, but the stock closed at the equivalent of $13.65 a share Tuesday on London's Stock Exchange, up 5 cents.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Avoiding income tax on cash gifts to children

By BILL DOYLE

Q. We will soon be grandparents for the first time. My mother, the baby's great-grandmother, wants to make a $3,000 gift to be used for the child's schooling. My mother is in good health, but she is 86 and probably will not live to see the child benefit from the gift. However, my son will see that it is used as intended.

To minimize tax and maximize interest, how should this money be invested?

Doyle

A. This is a natural for a gift to minors act transaction. Your mother can invest the money in an adult's name, as custodian for the child's name, under the gift to minors act of the state in which the family lives.

No gift tax will be due and, because the amount involved is less than $10,000, it won't even be necessary to file a federal gift tax return.

Tell your mother to name someone else as custodian of the gift to minors account. The child's father or mother would be a good pick. If she names herself custodian and dies before the child becomes an adult, the taxing authorities might contend the account is part of your mother's estate and subject to estate and/or inheritance tax. The IRS has made that claim a number of times but has usually lost out in court. Nonetheless, it's wise to avoid that problem.

The money can be invested virtually any place. Under present federal law, there will be no income tax as long as the interest or dividends earned is $500 a year or less. The next $500 will be taxable at the child's rate. Income above that will be taxable at the parents' rate until the child turns 14, when it becomes taxable at the child's rate.

Yes, it's complicated. And, because Congress keeps fiddling with the Internal Revenue Code, there undoubtedly will be more changes in the years ahead.

Where to invest? My recommendation is a no-load mutual fund holding stocks as investments, with an objective of increasing in share value — and a track record of accomplishing that objective. No-load, of course, in order to avoid commission charges as high as $255.

Q. My wife and I wish to put money away for our young grandson's college costs. A friend mentioned a new type of U.S. Savings Bonds, which will pay tax-free interest when used for education purposes. How and when can we buy them?

A. You can't, unless the child is your legal dependent. That provision in the very complex rule covering those bonds means they will be available only to parents — not grandparents and other relatives.

The interest on EE bonds bought after Dec. 31, 1989, will be free from federal income tax if purchased by parents and later redeemed to pay tuition and other expenses at colleges, universities and certain technical schools.

The parents must be at least 24 years old when the bonds are purchased and must use the proceeds from the bond redemptions to pay educational expenses incurred the same year.

Bond interest will be completely tax free only if the family has modified adjusted gross income no higher than $60,000 and files a joint income tax return. That number will be $40,000 for single filers. The tax-free break phases out for parents with higher income and disappears at $90,000 for joint filers and $55,000 for single filers.

Q. What is to prevent me from giving money to my son next year, so that he can buy Series EE bonds and use the money to pay for my granddaughter's education — thereby making the bond interest tax free?

A. Nothing I can imagine, unless the IRS comes up with new rules. The final regulations on tax-free EE education-purpose bonds have not yet been published. But I suspect a lot of grandparents will be doing just what you have in mind.

The disapproval rate reflected in the new Nielsen study comes as a major reversal from a Nielsen study released in April. That survey showed that 95 percent of households renting the "A Fish Called Wanda" video watched the Schweppes commercial.

Some home video executives have predicted that more than half of all video releases will contain commercials in the near future.

Besides its findings on fast-forwarding commercials, the new Nielsen study showed that although video rental volume continues to grow, customers are looking for other ways to spend time, including other leisure activities, business or education, or regular television.

The Nielsen inquiry also found that renters by a wide majority don't want to pay higher rental fees for newer films.

TEXAS

In the past, the state department has spent much of its manpower on working with institutions that were in serious trouble but had not yet been declared insolvent, Pledger said.

"The department had taken a fairly significant role (in running troubled thrifts) because the funds weren't there to close the insolvent ones," Pledger said.

But the thrift bill gives federal regulators about $160 billion to close or merge the most seriously troubled thrifts. Of the approximately 100 Texas thrifts in that category, most fall under the Texas department's jurisdiction as state-chartered institutions.

Pledger said the number of state-chartered thrifts – which pay most of the bills at the department through fees – has been dropping for the past two years. In January 1988, there were 211 state-chartered thrifts in Texas. Today, there are 138. Merging or closing the troubled ones will reduce the number – and thus the income for the department – even more.

Pledger said they will lay off 20 of the department's 34 examiners and seven of the department's 20 non-examining staff, he said.

OIL

"An era of strong U.S. energy security is, in my judgment, unnecessarily drawing to a close, to be replaced by a period in which the nation's vulnerability will be obvious to all," Clements said.

He recommended that an oil price floor of about $20 a barrel be established through import quotas, a variable tariff or subsidies for domestic producers.

"The next five years will be critical to the domestic producing community. This industry is in a depression now, and a $20 floor for that period would assure survival," he said.

Hance said, "The solution for economic stability is a stable price, and a stable price cannot be achieved until the United States government makes the decision to be involved in stabilizing oil prices and preventing waste of our natural resources.

"At the present time, the United States seems to be fiddling while Rome burns. If this trend continues, we face economic disaster within the next 10 years. Sudden swings in the price of oil have a devastating effect on the economy," he said.

Bellmon called incentives for domestic energy production "insurance premiums, providing the nation with a vitally needed hedge against risks to our national security.

"America cannot afford to have its energy policy shaped by drawing lines between consumers and producers, regions of the country or types of energy" or the country could face "perilous consequences" in the future, Bellmon said.

Boren called the country's increasing dependence on imported oil "a ticking time bomb."

LIFESTYLE/Food

Pittsburgh restaurants eclectic, exotic

By LOREEN ARBUS and NORM CHANDLER FOX
Copley News Service

We have heard it said that Chicago is a city of many diverse neighborhoods, but having just returned from Pittsburgh, we must give that title to this sprawling western Pennsylvania metropolis.

Before arriving in Pittsburgh, we knew about the 1985 survey that called it the most livable city in the United States. The city that used to exist in clouds of black smoke belched from the coal-fired steel mills has cleaned up its act.

We love the Golden Triangle downtown area, formed where the Monongahela and Allegheny rivers join to form the Ohio River. What we didn't anticipate were the 70 or so distinct neighborhoods that spill across hills and rivers to compose the delicious diversity of metropolitan Pittsburgh.

What a delight to discover more than 200 bridges and tunnels that connect and cross over the rivers, valleys and hills of this wonderfully eccentric geographical terrain.

Super art galleries, museums, and lots of attractive tree-lined streets, made for window-shopping and people-watching, are big pluses for us. The city is extremely cultural with many stage performances and wonderful concert halls. The Pittsburgh Symphony is world-class as are the Steelers and, sometimes, the Pirates. The people of Pittsburgh are exceptional, particularly when you explore neighborhoods such as Mount Washington, Station Square, Squirrel Hill, Shadyside and Bloomfield.

There are some terrific old and new restaurants — all of which are friendly, welcoming. You'll be bowled over by the portions and the equitable prices. The following are some of our current favorites:

■ BORN FREE — (412) 362-1645

Located in Shadyside, this tiny restaurant specializes in African food, and though we've never had the pleasure of visiting the Dark Continent, we were able to sample dishes from Nigeria, Gabon, Tanzania and Kenya.

The fish served with bananas and bacon was a delight as was the lamb in peanut sauce and the sweet coconut shrimp. Leave room for the delicate desserts made of nuts and fruit.

■ ANGEL'S CORNER — (412) 682-1879

In the neighborhood called Oakland, you will dine in a church where you can worship a number of culinary finds. The waitresses wear angel wings, but the food is serious.

There is excellent deviled crab (no pun intended), and the grilled whitefish was done perfectly. The wine list is excellent at not too heavenly prices.

■ CLIFFSIDE — (412) 431-6996

Residents of Pittsburgh are in love with breathtaking views of the three rivers, the steep hills and the brightly lit skyscrapers in the Golden Triangle. This place is located 1,200 feet above the city on Mount Washington, and it's fun to take the Duquesne Incline (an old-fashioned cable car) to get there.

We've always believed in the axiom that great views equal mediocre food, but this may be the exception. You won't miss if you order the Maine lobster, steamed crab or any grilled fish.

■ MAX'S ALLEGHENY TAVERN — (412) 231-1899

It may be the oldest restaurant and bar in the city, and the interior exudes a wonderful patina of age and good times. While the setting is very old Pittsburgh, the cuisine is hearty German.

We like the venison in a currant sauce, the sweet-and-sour sauerbraten with red cabbage, cold cherry soup, and platters of assorted homemade wursts. If you're into unallayed revelry, drop in after the Steelers have won a game and the Iron City beer never seems to stop flowing.

■ LE VIEUX SAIGON — (412) 621-7733

It's nice to find an up-market Vietnamese restaurant where the atmosphere is cheerful and the service is deft.

The beef dishes are very good here, particularly the beef cooked in lemon grass. We also recommend the Vietnamese hot pot where you can cook squid, chicken and vegetables at the table in a rich broth redolent of exotic spices. Also try the crab claws coated with sugarcane.

■ THE GRAND CONCOURSE — (412) 261-1717

The recently renovated 80-year-old Pittsburgh & Lake Erie Railroad Station now houses a complex of smart shops and restaurants. The best of the eateries is this grand spot, which utilizes a marble stairway, a vaulted stained-glass ceiling and other turn-of-the-century accoutrements.

They serve some nice grilled items like the chicken, swordfish and wonderful lamp chops. In such a opulent setting, you don't need gourmet fare, but the food is quite good despite the ambience.

■ LA NORMANDE — (412) 621-0744

Here is the high-ticket, let's-go-to-celebrate spot, considered the best French restaurant in western Pennsylvania. The decor is very subdued, and the waiters speak in reverential hushed voices. The wine list is outstanding with a few Bordeaux at relatively bargin prices, but be prepared to pay a lot for your evening in this classy place.

We had wonderful truffle soup, duck breast in a green peppercorn sauce, and seared foie gras served with apples.

The food reviews of Loreen Arbus and Norm Chandler Fox appear in Los Angeles Magazine.

Watermelon cookies a summer treat

Associated Press

Watermelon cookies are a sweet summer treat from the kitchen, not garden.

WATERMELON COOKIES

2 cups all-purpose flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
6 tablespoons margarine or butter
⅓ cup shortening
¾ cup sugar
1 egg
1 tablespoon orange juice or milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
Several drops red food coloring
⅓ cup miniature semisweet chocolate pieces
1 egg white
1 tablespoon water
Green colored sugar

Stir together flour, baking powder and salt. In large mixer bowl beat margarine and shortening with electric mixer on medium speed 30 seconds. Add ¾ cup sugar; beat until fluffy. Add egg, orange juice, vanilla and food coloring; beat well on medium speed. Add flour mixture, beating on low speed until combined. Cover; chill 3 hours or until easy to handle.

On a floured surface roll half dough ¼-inch thick. Cut with a 3-inch round cookie cutter (dip cutter into flour between cuts). Cut cookies in half; place on ungreased cookie sheet. Press a few chocolate pieces into each. Repeat with remaining dough. Bake at 375 degrees 8 to 10 minutes. Do not brown. Remove; cool on wire rack.

In small shallow bowl stir together egg white and water; brush edge of each cookie with egg white mixture. Sprinkle sugar on edges. Dry on racks.

Crisp spinach salad quick to make, easy on cook

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

Popeye, the spinach-craving strongman sailor of the comic page, would love this side-dish salad because it's full of his favorite food. It's easy on the cook in the galley, too, with just three ingredients plus the zippy dressing.

COTTAGE CHEESE AND SPINACH SALAD

7 cups torn fresh spinach (10 ounces)
1½ cups cream-style cottage cheese
½ cup chopped walnuts
Creamy Dressing or bottled creamy dressing

Place spinach in a large salad bowl. Spoon cottage cheese on top of spinach in a ring. Sprinkle with walnuts. Pour on dressing; toss lightly until spinach is coated. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Creamy Dressing

½ cup dairy sour cream
2 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon prepared horseradish
½ teaspoon dry mustard
¼ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons herb-flavored vinegar

In small mixing bowl stir together sour cream, sugar, horseradish, dry mustard and salt. Using a wire whisk, gradually blend in vinegar. Cover and chill until serving time.

Lobster served with sauce, salad

By PIERRE FRANEY
New York Times News Service

Lobster is so delicate and expensive that I handle it as little as possible in cooking.

Fresh lobster, simply steamed or broiled, is sublime with melted butter or a light herb sauce.

Be sure to select a lobster that is healthy. Avoid those that look listless in the holding tank, which may mean they have been out of their natural habitat for too long.

Always season the water well. If you do not have fresh sea water, which is best, salt some cold tap water and add peppercorns, bay leaf and thyme.

The rule of thumb for steaming lobsters is about 10 minutes for a one-pound lobster, starting the clock when the water returns to a boil after you have added the lobster.

In the recipe below I remove the 1½-pound lobsters after 12 minutes, since they continue to cook after they are removed from the water.

A quick sauce can be made by blending egg yolk and mustard with white-wine vinegar, olive oil and lemon juice.

COLD LOBSTER WITH GARLIC AND BASIL MAYONNAISE

FOR THE LOBSTERS:
4 live lobsters, about 1½ pounds each
Salt to taste
8 black peppercorns
¼ teaspoon red-pepper flakes
1 bay leaf
4 sprigs fresh thyme or 1 teaspoon dried

FOR THE MAYONNAISE:
1 large egg yolk
1 tablespoon Dijon-style mustard
1 tablespoon white-wine vinegar
Salt and freshly ground white pepper to taste
1 cup virgin olive oil or vegetable oil
1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice
1 teaspoon finely chopped garlic
4 tablespoons basil leaves, cut into thin strips

To cook lobsters, pour about 2 inches of water in large kettle or steamer. Add salt, peppercorns, red-pepper flakes, bay leaf and thyme. Bring water to boil. Place lobsters in kettle and cover tightly. Return to boil and cook over high heat about 12 minutes. Remove lobsters and cool.

To make mayonnaise, combine egg yolk, mustard, vinegar, salt and pepper in mixing bowl. Mix with wire whisk.

Add oil in thin stream while beating vigorously with wire whisk. When mixture is thick and smooth, stir in remaining ingredients and blend well. Cover until ready to serve.

Before serving, split lobsters in half lengthwise and crack claws. Remove and discard small sacs near the eyes. Remove intestines through middle of tail. Serve at room temperature with mayonnaise.

POTATO SALAD WITH GREEN SUGAR SNAP PEAS

½ pound sugar snap peas (if not available, snow peas can be used)
Salt to taste
¾ pound small red new waxy potatoes
2 tablespoons white-wine vinegar
4 tablespoons peanut or vegetable oil
3 tablespoons finely chopped shallots or scallions
½ teaspoon finely chopped garlic
4 tablespoons finely chopped chervil or parsley or both combined
Freshly ground pepper to taste

Trim off ends of snap peas and remove strings. In saucepan, add snap peas and cover with water. Add salt; bring to boil and cook for 3 to 4 minutes until crisp and tender. Drain.

Place potatoes in saucepan. Add water to cover and salt. Bring to boil, simmer for 20 minutes or until potatoes are tender. Do not overcook. Drain. Make salad while potatoes are still warm.

Peel potatoes; cut into ¼-inch slices. Leave skins on if desired. Place slices in bowl and add snap peas. Add vinegar, oil, shallots, garlic, chervil, salt and pepper. Toss and blend well. Serve immediately.

DEAR ABBY

Bride upset by guests who rewrite invitation

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I'm planning my wedding and have encountered a problem that seems to be common among recent brides.

My parents, who have limited funds, are paying for my wedding, so we sent invitations to those we wanted, and we included a response card.

To our surprise, many of the response cards came back with "and friend" written in — also, some of the couples had added "and children."

It was very awkward having to telephone these people to tell them we couldn't accommodate their "friend" or children. And can you believe that some people were angry?

I suppose because the response card leaves a blank for them to fill in the number of people, some folks feel they are entitled to invite whomever else they want.

Abby, please make this clear in your column. Brides everywhere will appreciate it. — ONE OF THEM

DEAR ONE: I am in favor of doing away with response cards with "blanks" to fill in to indicate how many will attend. Too many people believe the blank is an invitation to invite as many people as they wish.

The number of guests invited can be found on the envelope of the invitation: If it is addressed to Mr. and Mrs. John Jones, only those two will be expected. And an invitation addressed to Mary Smith means only Mary is expected.

Readers, please pay attention. A battalion of brides is getting nervous indigestion from response cards filled in with the names of friends and relatives.

DEAR ABBY: My 6-year-old niece (I'll call her Nancy) caused a scene in the grocery store. She hit her grandmother on the back as they stood in the checkout line. Grandma had bought Nancy a treat that she had wanted to be put into her own shopping bag, but Grandma put the treat in her own purse instead, so Nancy hit her and said, "I wanted it in my own bag, I said!"

She was marched out of the store and given a slight slap and a stern talking-to for her actions. My niece agreed that she would never do it again and was given her treat.

My question is: Should this scene be banished from conversation in front of other family members? The child's grandmother, who happens to be my mother, thinks that since Nancy doesn't want anyone to know (probably from embarrassment and guilt), no one should mention it.

I believe that since when one grows older, one's crimes are printed along with one's name in the newspaper, children should learn early in life that unacceptable behavior should not be hidden. I also believe that a little ostracism is very effective punishment. My mother disagrees and insisted that I ask for your opinion. — NAME WITHHELD ON REQUEST

DEAR NAME WITHHELD: Your niece's "crime" was more an impulsive reaction than a serious offense. I agree with your mother. I see no reason to humiliate Nancy further by mentioning the incident to the family. The child was punished and seems to have learned her lesson, so it's best forgotten.

Don't put off writing thank-you notes, letters of sympathy, etc. because you don't know what to say. Get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send a check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Some lunchboxes carry food, others carry big price tags

By AMY BELLEW
New York Times News Service

ATLANTA — In third grade, carrying one was cool. In seventh grade, only a brown bag cut it. So at 26, what kind of office reception does a "Lost in Space" model get?

"Everyone was tripping out," said car-loan officer Roger Beck, recalling the first time he took his vintage 1967 dome-model lunchbox to work. "They thought it was neat. Most of them remember the show."

Old lunchboxes are Beck's bag. During the past three years, he has collected 320 different ones, 640 including duplicates.

Lunchbox heroes line the shelves of a display room in his Woodstock home like an anniversary episode of "Hollywood Squares." Disney characters and the ever-evolving Barbie are old standards. Western and space adventurers marked the 1950s and early '60s (remember "Tom Corbett, Space Cadet"?). The '60s brought sitcoms ("The Munsters") and psychedelia (The Beatles Yellow Submarine). Disco fever hit the lunchrooms in the '70s with Bee Gees Maurice, Robin and Barry Gibb each earning a box.

"Somewhere between the baby bottle and the brown bag, you were what you carried," said Scott Bruce, author of "Lunchbox — The '50s and '60s" and "The Official Price Guide to Lunchbox Collectibles." Collecting them is "collecting your childhood. . . . It takes the sting out of getting old."

Lunchboxes have appreciated more than 100 percent a year in the past three years, Bruce said.

Until the price guide came out, Beck didn't think much about the value of his collection (somewhere between $7,000 and $8,000). But now he can't find a box for much less than $30.

"I had a lady at a flea market who sold them to me for $5 every month for the last three years," he says. The antiques dealer has since picked up a price guide, and the last box Beck wanted had a $60 tag.

Renewed interest in old characters inflates the prices. "You can't touch a Batman lunchbox for less than $50," said Lance Dobson, a dealer at the Atlanta Flea Market and Antique Center.

Metal lunchboxes began to be phased out in 1972 after a lawsuit in Florida when "a kid got whacked on the head," Bruce said. The last full-metal box was the 1987 Rambo.

So what would a man with a first-edition Hopalong Cassidy as well as a snarling Stallone want next?

"I'd like to get a Soupy Sales," Beck said.

Microwave meal made in minutes

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

Savory cheese-and-beer sauced meatballs in just 15 minutes? Yes, it's possible when you cook both meatballs and sauce in your microwave. For fast shaping and for uniform meatballs, important for even cooking in the microwave, pat the meat mixture to a 6-inch square on waxed paper. Cut into 1-inch squares and shape into balls. Look for the tiny dumplings called spaetzle in the freezer case of your supermarket.

BEER-SAUCED MEATBALLS

1 10¾-ounce can condensed Cheddar cheese soup
1 cup soft bread crumbs (1½ slices)
¼ teaspoon salt
1 pound ground beef
1 medium onion, thinly sliced and separated into rings
½ cup beer
½ teaspoon dried oregano, crushed
Dash pepper
Hot cooked spaetzle, noodles or rice

In a small bowl combine egg and ¼ cup of soup. Stir in bread crumbs and salt. Add ground beef. Mix well. Shape into 36 meatballs. Set aside.

Place onion rings in a 12x7½x2-inch microwave-safe baking dish. Cover with waxed paper. Cook on 100 percent power (high) 2 to 3 minutes or until onion is just tender. Arrange meatballs over onion. Cook, covered, on high 8 to 10 minutes or until no pink remains, rearranging twice. Drain.

Combine remaining soup, beer, oregano and pepper. Pour soup mixture over meatballs. Cook, covered, on high 5 to 8 minutes or until heated through, stirring twice. Serve over hot cooked spaetzle, noodles or rice. Makes 6 servings.

BUICK LeSABRE. THE MOST TROUBLE FREE CAR BUILT IN AMERICA.

Until now, this kind of quality was known to only an elite group, Le Sabre owners.

Great selections of New fully loaded LeSabres in stock now!

Prices starting at $15,295
(List $18,341, Stock#9228)

The latest J.D. Power and Associates Initial Quality Survey* states something Buick LeSabre owners can be proud to know and something all new-car buyers should know. The fact that Buick LeSabre is the most trouble free full-size car sold in America. Import or domestic.

The Initial Quality Survey, which measures things gone wrong with new vehicles during the first 90 days of ownership, marks an improvement in Buick quality for the third year in a row. And today, the Buick nameplate ranks as the most trouble free American brand. Higher than Lincoln. Higher than other prestige cars costing thousands more.

To our way of thinking, it all means that if you're looking for quality, you should just look down the Great American Road for the Buick tri-shield. The new symbol for quality. The sign of your Buick dealer.
