Texas Election Committee Certifies Victory Of McCloskey

BOARD REFUSES TO PASS ON VOTE PROTEST

Indicted Bexar County Official Declared Victor In Race

WURZBACH CONTESTS

Memorandum Attached To Certificate Tells Of G. O. P. Claim

AUSTIN, Jan. 4. (AP)—The state election board decided shortly after 4 p. m. today to issue a certificate of election to Bexar county judge, Augustus McCloskey, Democratic candidate for congress from the 14th Texas district, who is under indictment charging alteration of Bexar county returns. The certificate will be accompanied by a memorandum noting the protest filed by Republican Congressman Harry M. Wurzbach, incumbent, but declaring the board without legal authority to do other than certify returns sent here, giving McCloskey a slight majority.

Quote Figures

"The official returns filed with the secretary of state show on their face," the certificate said, "that Augustus McCloskey received 27,817 votes and Harry M. Wurzbach received 27,190 votes and therefore by the official returns filed with the secretary of state, Augustus McCloskey received a majority of all votes cast for said office and was duly elected from the face of said returns."

Wurzbach, only Republican congressman from Texas, claimed in his protest that a correct count of the Bexar county returns would have given him victory of re-election. His protest was one of several moves in a lengthy fight starting at San Antonio over the election results. The Bexar county election was investigated by a house committee from congress some weeks ago and data taken back to Washington.

McCloskey shortly afterward was indicted on charges of altering returns in connection with the congressional race. His commissioners court prepared the official canvass certificate which was filed with the secretary of state.

Contest Also Certified

"I further certify," the certificate by Governor Moody said, "that there has been filed with the state canvassing board, composed of the secretary of state, the governor, and attorney general, a contest of said returns alleging the same to be fraudulent and a protest against the canvassing of said returns and the issuing of a certificate of election to the said McCloskey, but said board determined that under the constitution and laws of the United States and of the state of Texas, they had no jurisdiction to consider or determine said contest."

Wayne Davis of San Antonio, counsel for McCloskey, came here today in an effort to get the certificate issued, holding conferences with individual members of the board. Attorney General Claude Pollard said he believed it should be issued. A board meeting finally was called to pass on the matter.

Flu Epidemic Claims Many Lives In Area

Double Services Today for School Girl Companions; Bryant Takes Survey of County Schools

While Dr. H. D. Fillmore, city physician, and Dr. J. W. Cantwell, superintendent of city schools, expressed the hope that the epidemic has passed its climax and is on the decline, influenza continued to claim many new victims and to take a heavy toll in sickness and in death in Wichita Falls and Northwest Texas.

Local hospitals reported an unusual number of cases and crowded conditions. New patients are being continually received, not only from the city, but from all the Wichita Falls territory, reports said. With freezing weather and snow forecast on the heels of the damp, foggy conditions Friday, fresh warnings were issued against any sort of exposure.

20 Cases Smallpox

Burl Bryant, superintendent of county schools, Friday took an inventory of conditions over the county, where three schools are already closed and a fourth is expecting to have to suspend classes. Clara, Fairview and Burkburnett schools have held no classes this week. K. H. Clough, head of the school at Valley View, reported conditions growing worse and expressed the opinion that closing would be necessary. About one-third of the students are out and one teacher is unable to meet her classes, he said.

Smallpox is claiming an increasing number of victims, he added, 20 cases having been reported to the school authorities.

The principal of the school at Frieberg was considering a temporary closing Friday when one-third of the student body was absent from classes. One of the Frieberg teachers is also ill, he reported.

Out of the 55 students at Pleasant Valley, 16 were absent Friday, but the teachers were not sure that influenza explained the entire number. The City View school reported only a few cases. At Weeth school house a large number of students are ill. Conditions are somewhat improved at Prairie Cottage, although many cases of influenza are still reported.

Some Improvement

At Electra and Iowa Park, about one-seventh of the school enrollment has been absent during the week, superintendents said. Two teachers are ill at Electra, and one at Iowa Park. The situation in both towns is considered improved.

It was impossible for Mr. Bryant to get in touch with all the communities in the county Friday, many schools being without telephone connection.

He said Friday afternoon that he would dislike to see all the schools in the county closed, and that he

TEX RICKARD NEAR DEATH

Famous Promoter Takes Turn for Worse

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 4. (AP)—Tex Rickard, president of Madison Square garden, lies near death at Allison hospital, Miami Beach tonight. The famous promoter, who underwent an operation Tuesday evening for appendicitis, suddenly took a decided turn for the worse at midnight and physicians were working to save his life.

At 12:45 a. m. Mr. Rickard gradually was growing weaker, after a second operation had been performed late tonight. The statement was made at the hospital by authority of Dr. H. E. Adkins, in charge of the case.

Dr. Adkins performed the first operation on Rickard Tuesday night removing the appendix.

Jack Dempsey at midnight had not been admitted to see Rickard, physicians forbidding anyone to enter the sick room after the promoter's turn for the worse.

Denver Society Girl Divorces Second Mate

CHICAGO, Jan. 4 (US)—A Denver society girl today divorced her second "cruel" husband within a nine-month period—and she wasn't even here.

The girl, Mrs. Constance Robertson Foster Richards, daughter of a Denver attorney, last spring divorced Lucius F. Foster, young paper manufacturer on charges of cruelty. Within a few weeks she married O. W. Clarke Richards.

Today Judge William Gemmill read through a deposition made by Mrs. Richards in Denver and expressed satisfaction that Richards had been cruel and she was entitled to a divorce and the use of her first husband's name.

Borah Rests Case Of Kellogg Treaty

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4 (UP)—Senator William E. Borah, veteran Idaho Republican, now chairman of the foreign relations committee, rested his case for the Kellogg peace treaty late today in the senate.

He sank wearily into his seat after turning the last page of a voluminous manuscript and answering the last of the questions with which he had been bombarded since starting his speech early yesterday.

The multi-lateral treaty now before the senate, he said in conclusion, is "an important step in the cause of peace but only the start of what we will have to do."

Senator Reed, Missouri Democrat, who will lead opposition to the treaty, was apparently ready to start his speech this afternoon but requested an adjournment and probably will start tomorrow.

The Western Union dispatcher at Quitaque reported that the norther struck there at 9:30 o'clock, with the temperature dropping fast from a reading of 30 degrees. Her right side was partially paralyzed.

The intensity of today's rain was said to be unprecedented in Victoria's history. Five and one-half inches fell within a few hours, and tonight the business district was a small sea. Sidewalks were under water and in many instances basements were flooded.

The Associated Press predicted low temperatures over the area for Saturday and Sunday.

Rainfall ranging between one-eighth and two inches in southern Oklahoma and west of Dalhart was reported also to have prevailed over northwest Texas and the Wichita Falls area Friday by dispatchers at the local railway offices. Snow also was reported in southern Oklahoma and west of Dalhart.

The rain which fell over the Wichita area yesterday will aid the grain crops considerably in the opinion of G. C. McGown, county agricultural agent. The rain will settle the dirt around the roots of the barley, oat, and wheat crops and lessen the danger of winter killing, Mr. McGown said.

West Texas Oil Plea Given Moody As He Drafts Legislative Message

AUSTIN, Jan. 4. (AP)—A resolution adopted by West Texas land owners at a meeting at Midland last Monday, asking legislation to remedy the situation created by frequent state suits on alleged "vacant" land and disturbance of land titles, was presented today to Governor Moody, who is preparing his message to the incoming legislature.

The resolution was brought here by H. J. Adair, manager of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce Oil and Gas bureau, which sponsored the Midland meeting, J. E. Williams of Pampa, Will O'Brien of Amarillo, Jax Cowden of San Angelo, and Homer D. Wade of Stamford, manager of the West Texas chamber.

Support of the Texas university regents' efforts to get the 1925 land lease law amended so leasing of university lands will be under control of the regents, also is contained in the resolution.

AUSTIN, Jan. 4. (AP)—Busy with a prison conference, an election board meeting and other matters, Governor Moody had not had a chance tonight to complete his message to the legislature, which meets Tuesday noon for a two months' round of law making.

Meantime, capitol halls teemed with legislators and lobbyists, on the ground early for the biennial regular session.

The governor has not indicated yet, and may not until Tuesday, what his message will stress, but highway legislation, West Texas land rights and leasing and state

QUESTION MARK MAY TOUR U. S.

Non-Stop Flight Around Country Planned

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4. (US)—The war department is planning the most remarkable flight in aviation history for the "Question Mark" the plane which was still in the air tonight after breaking all endurance records flying over southern California.

As soon as possible after her present achievement, she is to be launched on a new conquest of endurance which will take her completely around the United States.

As the flight is now projected, the "Question Mark" would take off from Washington or New York, and begin a circuit of the United States, or of the larger cities. At given points refueling planes would be waiting to go up and refuel her as she passed.

PLANE ENDS FOURTH DAY OF TEST FLIGHT

METROPOLITAN AIRPORT, Los Angeles, Jan. 4. (AP)—Continuing its record-smashing endurance flight, the army monoplane Question Mark spent its fourth day in the air with no end to the epoch making cruise in sight.

As the big plane, with its crew of five, neared the eightieth hour aloft this afternoon, it was flying as jauntily as when it took off here at 7:26 a. m. New Year's day.

The three motors on their fourth day carried the ship along in what has developed into a test of endurance between man and machine.

Undaunted by the fatigue of the longest flight any one ever took in a heavier-than-air craft, Major Carl Spatz, commander, and his mates, gave no indication of being bested and signified intention of landing only when the motors wore out.

Philadelphia Racketeer Dies in Gang War Flare

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 3 (AP)—A man claimed to be a gangster was slain tonight and a bystander wounded in a sudden flareup in the South Philadelphia battle zone. Celia walked past a parked car tonight from which a shot was fired. He tottered and his clutching hands seized Dominick Maurone, a pedestrian. There was a second shot and both men fell to the sidewalk, while the car dashed away.

$25,000 Loss In Cotton Oil Mill Blaze at Hobart

HOBART, Okla., Jan. 4. (UP)—Firemen continued until today to fight the largest fire here in 11 years, using a new pumper type of fire truck which was called to action during its first official test.

The Hobart Cotton Oil Mill company was in ruins today with an estimated loss of more than $25,000 as a result of the fire. When the fire began, the old fire fighting equipment was used until arrival of the new from a lake two miles away, scene of the official test.

Making a roaring furnace out of the mill, the fire spread to an adjoining mill before firemen, working all night, were able to extinguish it.

Two residence fires causing a $2,000 loss also marked the day here. The last previous fire had been on Oct. 15.

ADA LE BOUEF AND DR. DREHER GIVEN DELAY

Convicted Couple Escape Death As Court Heads Wrangle

SHERIFF IN DOUBT

Presiding Justice Orders Stay as Associates Call for Rope

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 4. (AP)—Whether the hanging of Mrs. Ada Bonner Le Bouef and Dr. Thomas E. Dreher will take place as scheduled tomorrow at Franklin became clouded in legal uncertainty tonight when Chief Justice Charles A. O'Niell of the Louisiana supreme court granted a stay of execution and four justices of the supreme court ruled that the hanging should be carried out.

Court Divided

The four justices, constituting a majority of the court, ordered the clerk of the court to inform Sheriff Charles Pecot of St. Mary parish to proceed with the hanging. The chief justice, however, held that the state constitution empowered him to grant a stay of execution.

Chief Justice O'Niell declared he had power to issue the writ over the majority while the four dissenting members, Justices Overton, Brunot, Rogers and Land, held that as a majority their decision was final.

Sheriff Pecot said tonight at Franklin that he would not act "until the supreme court gets through unwinding itself."

"The way I feel now I will not proceed with the execution tomorrow," the sheriff said.

Orders Conflict

Sheriff Pecot said Justice Brunot talked with him over the telephone and told him of what the four justices had done and that later Chief Justice O'Niell "took the telephone and told me he had signed a writ staying the executions and for me not to hang them."

Judge James D. Simon, the trial judge, who refused today at a hearing at Franklin to appoint a lunacy commission to determine the present sanity of the slayers, was ordered to appear before the supreme court to show cause why he should not appoint the commission.

COURT ENDS HECTIC SANITY HEARING

FRANKLIN, La., Jan. 4. (UP)—Judge James D. Simon ruled today that Mrs. Ada B. Le Bouef and Dr. Thomas Dreher were sane.

Previously he had denied their application for appointments of a sanity commission. They are condemned to hang tomorrow for murder.

In denying the request of defense counsel for a lunacy commission, Judge Simons had said he would hear any evidence touching on the matter of sanity. He gave no reason for denying the petition.

Judge Simon's ruling came at the end of a hectic court day, and meant simply that unless the defense counsel are successful in their application for a writ of mandamus, nothing remains but to proceed with execution of the condemned pair.

The appeal would be made to Justice Charles O'Neil of the state supreme court, and was expected to be made tonight or the first thing tomorrow morning at New Orleans. If successful, it automatically would stay the execution, but before the appeal can be made to Justice O'Neil, the decision of Judge Simon, in writing, must be presented to him.

Mrs. Le Boeuf, now ill, was borne into the courtroom on a stretcher, while Doctor Dreher, under heavy guard, was conducted to a chair at defense table. The condemned pair frequently exchanged glances of recognition, but did not testify. Several physicians told of Doctor Dreher's alleged loss of memory since the extraction of an eye five years ago, and expressed the belief Mrs. Le Boeuf never had fully realized the enormity of her predicament until recently.

Despite the medical testimony, Judge Simon refused the plea for

High School Students Giggle As Grisly Relics in Slaying Are Shown

ELKHART, Ind., Jan. 4 (UP)—As the prosecution in the trial of Harvey L. Smith, former circus barker and private detective, charged with murder, presented 14 gruesome exhibits before the jury, a class of high school girls and boys giggled in their seats among the spectators today.

The exhibits, a skull and other bones, were taken from the limestone grave where, the state alleges, the body of Mrs. Genevieve Stults, beauty culturists, was buried several months ago. The bones, still bearing the stains of lime, were found last October.

The high school students, who were brought to the courtroom as a part of their lesson in civics, took childish delight in the serious proceedings on which the life of Smith depends.

Smith, the state contends, was hired by Mrs. Janie Reyher for $50 to "get Mrs. Stults out of town." Mrs. Stults, it was alleged, had alienated the affections of Mrs. Reyhens husband. The beauty culturist had been missing for six months when the limestone grave was discovered a few miles from Elkhart.

Ten Weeks Drive to Make Sahara Out of Washington Starts Sunday

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4. (AP)—A 10 weeks' campaign to "make Washington an example and encouragement to the cities of the nation" in the cause of prohibition will be launched Sunday by the National United Committee for Law Enforcement, composed of executive heads of 14 national organizations.

Announcement of the campaign, described as "nothing spectacular, but a determined effort to arouse the people of Washington to a realization of existing conditions," came co-incidentally with congressional moves for investigation of the entire prohibition situation.

Senator Edge, Republican, New Jersey, wet, introduced today an amendment to a resolution offered yesterday by Senator Jones, Republican, Washington, for a congressional investigation of the matter. The Edge amendment would have the prohibition situation studied by a citizens' commission appointed by Herbert Hoover after his inauguration. The campaign will open with a mass meeting Sunday at the First Congregational church.

Former Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania, who issued a demand that President Coolidge ask the commissioners of the District of Columbia to submit a list of speakeasies and close them on penalty of losing their jobs, will address a second mass meeting the following Sunday.

appointment of a lunacy commission, and threw the whole matter, apparently, up to members of the supreme court.

Aged Mother Testifies

Probably the most heart touching scene of the day was the appearance of Mrs. Virginia Bonner, the aged mother of Mrs. Le Boeuf. Wearing faded garments and her eyes indicating worry and loss of sleep she made her way into the crowded court room and paused by the side of the cot of her daughter who had been brought in a moment earlier. Quietness prevailed in that little court room and a tenseness the like of which it had never witnessed before. The aged woman was then escorted to the witness stand where she testified that Charles Bonner, the father of Mrs. Le Bouef, had suffered from epilepsy and had died from an epileptic fit. "I hate to say it but Ada acted foolishly too," she said. "I sent her to school but she never was able to learn much," and continuing with a trembling voice, "she was timid and unlike other children, and I do not now consider her of sound mind." Climaxing her testimony with these words, "I know what I say is true, so help me God," she left the stand. Returning to the cot of her condemned daughter, Mrs. Le Bouef partly rose from her reclining position and kissed the mother that had testified in her defense.

Walter Bonner, a brother of Mrs LeBouef, corroborated the testimony of his mother by saying that doctors wanted to send his father to an asylum a few months before his death.

Dreher Breaks Down

Dr. Dreher was brought into the court room supported by two deputy sheriffs. He broke down and cried as he heard sentence of death pronounced for him and his alleged sweetheart for the murder of James LeBouef, and James Beadle, trapper, also implicated in the death plot and given life imprisonment in the Louisiana state prison.

Before the couple was taken into the court room today Dr. C. V. Unsworth of New Orleans made an examination. He found them in a highly nervous state.

If Mrs. Le Bouef is hanged, it will be the first time in the history of Louisiana that a white woman has paid the extreme penalty for a crime.

ROBISON DRAFTS INJUNCTION REPLY

AUSTIN, Jan. 4. (AP)—J. T. Robison, land commissioner, today completed the first draft of his answer to the injunction suit brought by the state, joined by the Texas university board of regents, restraining him from selling university land oil leases.

He said it would be in condition for filing in district court, where the action was brought not later than Monday.

Lloyd E. Price of Fort Worth failed to apply to the supreme court for a mandamus to force the land commissioner to accept the high bids and issue leases on the land. He said yesterday he would file the application on behalf of clients bidding for the leases.

Robison expressed belief today that it would be difficult to obtain a mandamus in the supreme court because of the uncertainty of determining high bidders, since the injunction restrained him from opening all of the bids.

He gave it as his opinion that bidders would not await outcome of the hearing on the injunction After he has filed his answer the attorney general's department who brought the suit, will be allowed 10 days to prepare for the hearing

AUSTIN, Jan. 4. (AP)—University oil land royalties amounted to $127,963 for December, Land Commissioner Robison said today. The grand total of royalties is $9,807,567.

OVER-DEMAND FOR BILARY ANTISEPTIC IN 'FLU' DISTRICTS

Production of New Solvent of Cholesterin Curtailed—Druggists' Demands Almost Deplete Reserve Stocks—Orgatone Five-Grain Tablets Almost Off the Market—People Asked to Help

Many people appreciating the coming shortage, have been buying in advance of their actual needs, which now means there are thousands of persons who might be benfited but who are unable to buy the tablets because the druggists are practically sold out.

Such Insistent Demand for the New Orgatone Five-Grain Tablets Are Pouring into the Orgatone Laboratories, for this Splendid Bilary Antiseptic, That It Is Very Doubtful That They Will Be Able to Fill All Orders, Unless They Follow a Proposed Plan to Limit Shipments in Size. In Fact, It Is Seriously Considered That in the Very Near Future Druggists Will Be Requested Not to Sell Orgatone Tablets to Anyone Who Has Not an Immediate Use For Them.

This is becoming a serious proposition. The people in danger of influenza and grippe are the ones who should be able to buy Orgatone five-grain tablets. The manufacturers are doing their part, but are unable to cope with the demand on account of the shortage of the high class chemicals and materials that go into the tablets. Won't you do your share, and if you have a bottle of these tablets, and your neighbor who has symptoms of the "flu" caused from run-down condition and cannot secure them from his or her druggist, divide with them so they, too, may get the benefit of this wonderful intestinal and bilary antiseptic?

It is persons who are suffering from lowered vitality, who are weak and run-down and who have not strength enough to throw it off are the immediate victims. Persons who have improper digestion, who are suffering from constipation and catarrhal troubles of the mucuous membrane are especially susceptible.

If you are suffering from any of these symptoms, nothing on earth will clean the intestinal tract like Orgatone five-grain tablets, which produce a healthy flow of bile and are true cholagogue and a bilary disinfectant, because they directly stimulate the hepatic cells, producing an abundant flow of limpid bile. It is also important that every day rules of hygiene be observed; That is, great care should be taken in diet, and it is recognized as an extra precaution to "get plenty of our door exercise and air and boil your drinking water."

The following druggists still have a supply of these tablets on hand: Allison's Drug Store, 716 Indiana Ave., Wichita Falls, Texas, where a special Orgatone nurse is meeting the public daily.—Adv.

GERMAN PRESS HITS GILBERT

Favorable Economic Report Is Resented

By WILLIAM HILLMAN

BERLIN, Jan. 4. (US)—Reparations Agent Gilbert's optimistic report on Germany's economic condition is intended to create sentiment in the United States favorable to the "capitalization of the finally fixed German war debt."

So declares a London dispatch to the Berliner Tageblatt which quotes its source of information as "American circles in the British capital."

The dispatch is considered in American circles here as the most subtle attack made thus far on the Gilbert report, since it is known here that any suggestion that America is being "talked into" taking reparations bonds or having them "dumped" on her, is certain to arouse the hostility of the American people. And it is no secret that Gilbert has been smarting for the last few months over reports that he was trying to help "dump" reparations bonds on the United States.

The newspaper attack on Gilbert continued today and the publication in Washington of the year end economic report of the American commercial attache in Berlin, in which business depression in Germany is indicated, was seized upon with glee by the entire press.

The American attache refutes Gilbert, and "there are other experts besides Gilbert" were some of the headlines.

Doctor Arrives To Aid Flu Study

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4. (AP)—Preparations for a nationwide study of the influenza epidemic were broadened today with the arrival of Dr. M. D. Veldee of the public health service, formerly in charge of typhoid investigations in Cincinnati.

Dr. Veldee was called here by Surgeon General Cumming. He conferred with officials and began preliminary studies of telegraphic reports on conditions over the country.

Complete reports from 42 states, the District of Columbia and New York City today showed a total of 162,288 new cases actually reported during the week ending Dec. 29, compared with 252,016 new cases in about the same territory during the preceding week. Officials believed this decrease in the complete reports bore out their prediction that the crest of the influenza wave had passed over western and midwestern states during the holidays.

Taxes Erroneously Collected Since 1917 Computed

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4. (AP)—Since 1917 the government has refunded $975,012,836 of taxes illegally or erroneously collected.

In the same time $4,061,789,209 has been collected as additional or back taxes, as well as those assessed in the ordinary course of events.

These computations were included today in the report submitted to the house by its appropriations committee with the first deficiency bill, which said that the total refunded was approximately 2.5 per cent of the $38,715,757,827 of the internal revenue receipts for the period.

The bill itself sought to provide $84,128,510 to meet emergency expenses for the current fiscal year, including $75,000,000 for tax refunds.

The total is $66,705 less than that recommended by the budget.

A total of $5,000,000 would be used for carrying on the government's contract air mail service; $1,050,000 would go toward construction of new barracks at the Pacific branch of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer soldiers at Santa Monica, Calif.; $45,000 for the inauguration of President-elect Hoover, and $30,000 for aiding Indian influenza victims of the Southwest.

Male Godiva Wins Hectic Taxi Race Across Big City

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 4. (UP)—A naked man in a taxicab enacting a masculine sequel to Lady Godiva's horseback ride, startled downtown crowds today and provoked a frenzied five-mile police chase.

From Indiana Christian hospital, where he was under treatment for nervous disorders, the hero of the piece, jumped to the ground from his first floor window, clad only in a sheet. He abandoned even the sheet in his dash through the chilly morning and commandeered a taxicab with such vehemence that the driver didn't argue.

First word came to police headquarters from the hospital.

Shortly thereafter came a call from downtown. A naked man had been racing down the street.

Girls, scampering to their typewriters, took one fleeting look and pulled coat collars over their faces, men saw and gasped.

Police dispatched a motor squad to the hospital. Then another gave chase. More telephone calls reported the swift progress eastward across the city of a taxicab with its strange passenger.

Police barked directions to an east side substation for another motor team to block the taxicab's course. Still another carload of bluecoats ran from police station to give pursuit.

But the taxi, with its shivering passenger, reached its destination ahead of pursuers. The fugitive dashed from the cab into a residence where relatives refused to surrender him to police for return to the hospital.

Caretaker of Estate Found Shot to Death

LAPORTE, Texas, Jan. 4. (AP)—The body of Henry T. Parker, 72, caretaker at a Bayshore estate near here, was found in a lonely house on the outskirts of town today, the head beaten in and a bullet wound near the ear.

Officers advanced no theory as to the motive for the slaying.

Would You Know One If You Saw It?

If you ever came face to face with a germ, would you recognize it? Of course it is not likely that you ever will see a germ, unless you own a tremendously powerful microscope, for you would have to magnify one over a thousand times to make it as big as a pin head. But you should recognize the fact that these tiny germs can get into your blood streams through the smallest cut, and give you typhoid fever, tuberculosis, lockjaw, blood poisoning, and many more dangerous and perhaps fatal diseases. There is one sure safeguard against these dangers — washing every cut, no matter how small, thoroughly with Liquid Borosone, the safe antiseptic. You can get Liquid Borosone at Miller Drug Store.—Adv.

CAMERAS MAY SNAP COLORS

French Photographer Shows Latest Experiment

By GEORGE W. HINMAN, JR.

PARIS, Jan. 4. (US)—Photography in colors as readily as the ordinary snapshot in black-and-white is the prospect held out to amateur camera enthusiasts today by M. Fabry, director general of the optical institute of the Academy of Sciences.

M. Fabry presented before the members of the academy a camera of three lenses operating simultaneously so as to record three images of the subject of the picture. The images are taken through three screens of red, blue and yellow respectively.

Development of the three films showed that each registered the subject differently. A scarlet gown, for example, failed to appear at all on two of the negatives, whereas it was shown in complete detail by the third.

By dipping the different negatives in solutions of corresponding colors and registering the prints on the same bit of white paper, there is reproduced a faithful picture in colors of the original subject. There is all the accuracy of photographic reproduction, together with the finest color-shading.

Holders of the patents on the new process are keeping secret the formula for the special color bath to which each negative is submitted before the printing, but they promise to make the results of the process soon available to amateur photographers.

CHIC CHERIE — Latest Fashions

Cherie and Dina are going down where the weather's a little warmer—that's where the South begins. Dina has turned her back to the audience and you can see her coat at the left. It's a green tweed coat with a collar of krimmer—fitted to the waistline and flared from there to the hem. Emily, next, is wearing a coat of oxford cheviot, also trimmed with krimmer. Sue, who is next, wears a coat of golden brown thick woolen fabric that looks rather like fur. Cherie's coat is a bluish tweed with a diagonal weave and a long collar of light beige caracul. One of these coats that flares loosely and widely from the shoulder.

Emily and Sue are promising to be down next week and the train is about to pull out. It's one minute late and in that minute we can tell you that Cherie's hat is of blue felt and grey tricot with pointed flaps on one side and rounded flaps on the other; that Dina's hat is of mottled green and gray felt with a scalloped triple brim; that Emily's hat is a new version of what Napoleon wore, of black soleil with two pearl ornaments; that Sue's hat is of brown felt with a drooping brim lined with beige felt; and that next week we shall tell you about South fashions which, as everyone knows, are forecasts for spring.

O' These Women

By LEOLA ALLARD

NEW YORK, Jan. 4 (US)—If you have in the rush of holiday buying, neglected to make your resolutions, ladies, perhaps a suggestion would be in order.

Why not resolve to be a bigger and better woman?

No more diet of hard boiled eggs and raw tomatoes. Just the cushiony kind of girl that children like to nestle their heads upon, and that men can go to work without worrying about.

Girls want to marry. At least most of them want to land the fellow and tag him. The men strut with the slim ones, but in these days men are honing for the old type that doesn't take as much as they can squeeze out, and give as little as possible, if anything. Thanks to the newspapers, they have been educated, thoroughly, and their cry is bigger and better women.

There are few men, of the right kind, who don't both like and want children. When they don't, usually it is because they know they haven't the kind of wife to care for them properly and be happy at home with them.

Women who must, at any cost, stay slim and look smart in her clothes, can't take chances having babies. When they do have them the only responsicility they care to shoulder is that of kissing them good night.

I know a young married woman in New York, wife of a prominent artist. He is much in the public eye at present. She wanted a baby. He didn't. When he heard what she considered glad tidings he scolded fiercely, and went to Florida for a vacation—without her.

A nice fellow.

She refused to be downcast. Being smart, she probably figured that a child couldn't be much more trouble or much less comfort than the kind of husband she picked.

In due time the child arrived. Now the man, seeing a resemblance to the features he loves so well, and sees so often, in his mirror, has become what might be called either reconciled or human. He likes the baby. Even boasts about it. He is home more, is happier, and doing better work than he ever did.

The wife made up her mind a baby was what he needed, and what she wanted and—here it is!

Men have to be shown what they want, rather than told what they need. They take it better.

A woman took her husband to an orphanage to look at a baby she had chosen to adopt. He fumbled a bit with his cane, and looked embarrassed, and wouldn't touch the child. When the nun lifted the baby (that was pre-arranged) and placed it in his arm, the baby (this was not pre-arranged) looked up at him and laughed a toothless and thoroughly amusing, delightful, winning laugh. Then she stuck her finger in his eye.

He wouldn't even put the baby down long enough to have the package properly wrapped. The sisters threw a blanket over the child and he crawled into his limousine out front. He forgot his cane and his wife carried his hat.

Another smart woman!

There may be better ways of cementing a home happiness, but God evidently didn't think so, and as usual He was right.

Undereating leads to tuberculosis and other diseases

IN THE mothers and young girls of this country could have heard the addresses before the Annual Philadelphia Tuberculosis Conference, something would be done and done quickly to stamp out the dangerous under-dieting by young girls.

The addresses of this meeting were made public through the Philadelphia Public Ledger. "The most difficult problem facing us in combating tuberculosis among high-school girls, and particularly among the young women of today, is the vicious habits they practice to retain or acquire a slim and graceful figure."

"We don't seem to be able to save them," says . . . "the problem of nutrition is the one we have to face in our examination of girls of this age. It is at this age that girls are most susceptible to tuberculosis and other diseases."

Parents must put an end to the dangerous dieting of young people. Thousands of older women have been seriously and permanently injured by extreme dieting to reduce weight. It is even more serious for growing girls to starve themselves.

Dorothy Dix Articles Daily--Advice To Women

Men Do the Picking, and if Their Mate Is Stupid It's Their Fault

Why the Sensible American Husband Is to Blame If He Has a Silly Wife—Must a Wife Stay at Home With the Baby Every Day?—The Selfish Mother Who Would Break Up Her Son's Home.

Dear Miss Dix—In my family there are four middle-aged, whining, peevish, discontented, neurotic women who make their husbands' lives a burden to them. These husbands are all typical American husbands, who have given their wives everything they could desire and relieved them of all responsibility.

These women have never had to work, and apparently it has never occurred to them that they might improve their minds. All they do is run around to clubs and go to foolish little parties with women just like themselves. They make no effort to be companions to their husbands or even to be good housekeepers, and yet they complain about being neglected because their husbands give them a liberal allowance and then don't bother with them any more.

Each one of these men is terribly disappointed, yet for the sake of their children they endure their marriages. They deserve smart, intelligent wives. Maybe some day they will find them.

—A DISGUSTED RELATIVE.

Answer: I certainly do agree with you that a clever, intelligent man deserves a clever, intelligent wife, but how come he hasn't got one? Don't forget that men do the picking, and so long as they pass a smart, well-educated, broad-minded girl for a silly little flapper just because one girl has a saleratus-biscuit complexion and the other has the sort of skin you love to touch, why, your sympathy for the men who are united to fools instead of sensible women is bound to be a little diluted with the thought that it serves them right.

If the time ever comes when men select their wives by the inside furnishing of their heads instead of the outside ornaments, marriage will be a real companionship instead of an endurance test.

Without doubt the American husband is the best, the kindest, the most generous and the most unselfish husband in the world. He is the shining example that the women of every other country hold up to their husbands, but the trouble is he is too good for his own good and his wife's good, and out of his very effort to be kind to his wife he unintentionally works a great and terrible unkindness upon her.

His goodness becomes a boomerang that flies back and annihilates the home, because in babying his wife he literally makes a baby of her. He keeps her in a state of perpetual childhood. He makes a moron of her and prevents her from growing up into the full stature of a real wife.

The American man thinks he is being an ideal husband when he provides his wife with so many servants that she never has any work to do. He even relieves her of the care of her own children when possible. He thinks he is being good to her when he gives her all the money she can spend and when he takes away from her all responsibility, and he pats himself on the back and feels that he should be awarded a gold medal as a model husband when he exacts nothing whatever from her—not even to keep a clean house or to sew on his buttons.

There are plenty of men who think that they are saving their wives when they never tell them of any of their business troubles or any of their worries and when they make all of the sacrifices when the money doesn't go around and somebody has to do without things.

Then these same husbands feel ill-used later on because their wives have not kept step with them, but have stayed silly, vapid baby dolls that they get tired of playing with when they have outgrown their boyish toys, and at middle age want wives who are their mental and spiritual equals.

Of course, there are some women who are female Peter Pans who will never grow up, because they are merely high-grade imbeciles who are incapable of ever learning anything; but the great majority of brides could be developed into real women if their husbands would take the trouble to do it. They would study and read if their husbands demanded it of them. They would keep up with their husbands if their husbands kept hurrying them up.

I knew of a case of this sort in which a brilliant young lawyer observed that his wife was giving symptoms of slumping after the first baby. He said to her: "I am warning you. I am going on. I'm climbing, and if you don't climb with me you are going to be left behind, and you need not expect me to be faithful to a wife who has been too lazy and shiftless to try to keep up with me."

It is the duty of every husband to try to develop his wife and to see that she has plenty of work to do, because that keeps her out of mischief. It prevents her from getting morbid and it gives her self-respect.

We are always talking about the influence of a wife over a husband, but, believe me, the influence of a husband over a wife is a thousandfold greater than hers over him, and he is largely responsible for what she is at middle age.

—DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—Do you think I am a neglected, heartless woman, not deserving the name of mother, because I feel that I am entitled to go to a movie once a week and leave my baby in competent hands? My husband says I can't go without taking the child, who is only five months old, and that spoils it for me and is bad for the child. This is the only recreation I have or want, and I feel I am entitled to it.

—MRS. A. R.

Answer: You certainly are, and your husband is foolish as well as unjust in opposing your having such a simple pleasure.

If he were wiser he would urge you to go to the movies or to call on a neighbor at least twice a week, because that would make you so much pleasanter and easier to live with and so much more interesting as a companion, because it would break the strain on your nerves and let them relax and give you something new and fresh to talk about.

The reason that most peevish women are peevish is because they are worn out with the monotony of their daily lives. They go round and round in a treadmill, with nothing to break it. They have no new, fresh interests, and so they become morbid. They get to harping on the same string. They lose their sense of proportion and trifles loom as big as mountains to them.

All this is changed if a little variety and amusement are introduced into their lives. A woman sings at her work instead of grouching over it if she is thinking about some thrilling and romantic picture she saw last night and is seeing herself as the beautiful heroine dressed in sables instead of the bungalow apron she is wearing.

I regard movies as a godsend to the domestic woman. They have saved many a one from the insane asylum of the divorce court.

—DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Dorothy Dix—I am married to a dear woman whom I love very much and who is good, kind and considerate to me, but my mother hates my wife because she did not want me to marry. She wanted me to stay with her. She has tried to make me leave my wife and says that if I will come to her she will take care of my baby and that I can live with her and have all my money to spend on myself.

My mother writes letters to my employers injuring my wife's position, as she is working, too. My mother is well off, but she goes to bed and has a spell of sickness when she is crossed. What shall I do? Stick to my wife or go to my mother?

—MINOR.

Answer: If you have any manhood in you, stick to your wife. Your mother is a wicked woman to try to break up your home and separate you from a good wife who is doing her duty.

Don't bother about your mother's illness. Lots of women throw a fit to get their own way, but their spells are never fatal.

—DOROTHY DIX.

Virtue is more than the negation of vice.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

By GRANT DIXON
(Copyright, 1928, by Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Just as he and she stepped foot outside their apartment house at Sheridan square it began thundering for a good shower. They were dining out, with the theater afterward, and she was in a pretty frock.

"I won't go back and change now," she said, "and I won't carry an umbrella."

"And I won't spend money for a taxicab," he said, "even if we could find one." They stood silent a moment, both thinking hard. She broke the deadlock happily.

"I'll tell you how we'll do it, without getting a drop of rain on us," she said. "We'll get into the subway here, ride up to Times square, shuttle across to Grand Central, and have dinner there. There are a dozen nice little places to eat. Then we'll shuttle back over to Times square, take the exit that lets us out on the west side of Forty-Second street and Seventh avenue, and step right into the theater, and we'll have been underground and out of the wet until we sit down for the show."

And they did. It worked nicely.

The visitor who waited in the New York office that overlooked the bay occupied himself for some time in contemplation of the brightness of the day and the lively activity upon the waters.

Tugs chugged up and down stream, ferries plodded patiently like beasts of burden. An ocean liner steamed majestically down the North river. Gulls careened in the sky. The visitor found it all vastly entertaining.

"I guess you find your window view very attractive," he remarked to the stenographer, who was busily tapping keys.

"Oh, yes, we enjoy it a lot," she replied.

"What's that little crowd gathered for down there?" he asked, pointing to a large group that stood on the Battery walk and gazed out in the direction of an anchored tugboat.

She looked. "Maybe they found another body," she said. "Last week they found one in the water over there (pointing) and another one was picked up down there."

"Oh," said the visitor.

There have been enough stories about taxicab drivers refusing tips under certain conditions, but this is the first on record of one of the ilk refusing a second tip for the same trip.

An army officer arriving in New York with his wife and taking a taxi for a hotel about 40 cents away handed the driver a dollar bill.

The fare had looked at the clock, but, without looking at his change, he proffered the driver 15 cents.

"Never mind," the driver said, "I've already taken out my tip. We're all doing that now.

The bewildered but very timid army officer, who after all had had little experience with taxicab drivers on the battlefields of France, accepted the return of what would have been tip number two and murmured gratefully that "that's certainly nice of you."

A $4,000 Bribe? No!

DESPITE the prevalent talk about graft and bribery, there are still plenty of honest, conscientious men in our law enforcement departments.

In New York the other day a patrolman came upon two men unloading a mysterious-looking truck into the cellar of an apartment house. Suspicious, he went over to investigate. One of the men came forward and offered him $4,000—a good deal more than the patrolman's entire yearly salary—to "take a walk around the corner for five minutes."

This policeman refused to do it—although it could have been done without any fear of detection, and although the bribe offered was immense. Instead he went ahead with his investigation, found the truck loaded with whisky and arrested the men involved.

It's comforting to read of such things, in this day when corruption is almost taken for granted. All of us owe a little debt to that upright officer. He has helped us to sustain our faith.

Lincoln's Blue Blood

FAR from being the offspring of humble and downtrodden ancestors, Abraham Lincoln was a direct descendant of one of the first families of Virginia—the famous Lees, no less—according to Dr. William E. Barton, famous authority on Lincoln, in an article in the January issue of Good Housekeeping.

Nancy Hanks, Lincoln's mother, was a great great granddaughter of Col. Richard Lee, who came to Virginia from England in 1642, says Dr. Barton. This Colonel Lee, incidentally, was an ancestor of Gen. Robert E. Lee of the Southern Confederacy, so that—if Dr. Barton's researches are correct—Lincoln and Lee, opponents in the greatest struggle the new world ever saw, were blood relations.

All of this is highly interesting. It will be particularly comforting to the great race of snobs. Those folk who believe, in spite of modern psychology, that "blood will tell," will be vastly relieved. Every spark of greatness that Lincoln ever exhibited will hereafter be accredited, by them, to the fact that the blood of the Lees flowed in his veins. The story of Lincoln, which is by all odds the most moving story America has yet produced, thus gets a regular musical comedy happy ending.

Not that Dr. Barton isn't to be commended for his researches. Every scrap of knowledge that we can get about Lincoln is valuable, and if he really was descended from the famous Lee family, it is well to know it. But it is distressing to think of the reinforcement this will be to those people who cling to the ancient belief that birth and ancestry are important.

The present age, for all its current pessimism, probably will be recognized eventually as the beginning of a great new age of hope. Scientists are learning more about the human race, and are beginning to see that men are, after all, born equal; that one's ancestry, either immediate or remote, makes little or no difference. The son of a burglar does not carry in his blood the seeds of crime, any more than the son of a minister is endowed at birth with an inborn propensity to holiness. In the cradle we are all equal. The very great obstacles to equality that remain—differences in environment, wealth and early training—can be removed if we set ourselves to it.

No more hopeful discovery than this was ever made.

Yet, in the face of all this, there are people who will be somehow relieved to learn that Abraham Lincoln did not spring from nameless ancestors. He came from the Lees—ah, that explains him.

Well, they don't matter greatly, after all. The fact is interesting to be sure; but it is not very important. The main thing is what Lincoln was and did, and not the identity of his maternal grandfather three times removed.

A Summer White House

THIS CONGRESS—or the next one, if this one is too busy—would do well to give serious consideration to President Coolidge's suggestion that the country establish a summer white house.

In the old days, Americans didn't like to set their president up too luxuriously. It smacked of royalty. But we have reached a more sensible viewpoint now, and the logic of President Coolidge's suggestion is unmistakable.

Our president has a wearing job. The least we can do is help him conserve his strength by providing him with a haven of escape in the hot months. A summer white house in the hills, where the air would be cooler and the nation's work could be done under less trying conditions, would be a boon to an over-worked, tired chief executive.

The VICARION by Gardner Hunting

The Astounding Story of an Invention Greater Than the Movies

Copyright by Gardner Hunting. Serialized by Ledger Syndicate.

In the year 1935 there gathers in the studio of Radley Brainard a group consisting of his sweetheart, Phyllis Norman, her father, mother and brother, John; John's sweetheart, Carol Gould, and Radley's Aunt Relief. By means of an invention which he has just perfected Radley projects onto a gauze curtain the beginning of a murder which occurred two years previously, with the "actors" seemingly real persons speaking with their natural voices. Radley's guests are incredulous at what they have seen and he then shows them a famous dinner given for a movie actress who was drowned a week before. While Brainard is explaining his invention, there is a commotion in the hall; the Japanese valet opens the door and a gaunt, bearded and ragged man staggers into the room. He does not know who he is, but calls Phyllis by name.

Almost immediately there "dissolved in' what looked like a mirrored reflection of the studio itself.

But his hand did grasp the arm of the figure in the doorway, and his voice trailed off to nothing as he felt the contact. And abruptly the other flung out his own hand and caught at the young man's neck. Brainard leaped back to escape what seemed attack. But the creature clung and dragged behind him. When Brainard stopped, the other man sank limp and slid to the floor with a gasp.

"He's human, all right!" said John, stepping to Radley's assistance. He stooped and picked up the thin figure. "I think Dad's got it right; he looks like a man at the last gasp for food and drink."

He carried the now helpless form across to the chairs and propped it up in one.

"Ushigi, bring the decanter off the sideboard," said Brainard. He came and bent over the man in the chair, whose head John still supported.

"All right, old chap," he said; "you're among friends."

The old Radley again! Even in the excitement of the moment Phyllis was sensitive to his tones. There had always been a special flavor for her in Radley's kindness. He was sympathy itself—when he was sympathy at all.

But the man in the chair was recovering a little. He turned his head again, and again he looked up into Phyllis' eyes.

"It's you!" he said, just above his panting breath.

"He's off his head, of course," said John, glancing up at her. "But who wouldn't be? Look at his hands."

Phyllis looked. The hand nearest her was long and claw-like, fleshless almost, trembling. Abruptly it turnd over and opened its palm appealingly.

"Help me!" he pleaded. "Tell me it isn't true! I don't know where—maybe I'm dead! Am I dead? I never saw——"

Weakness stopped him. His lips went on forming words dryly, but inaudibly.

Ushigi came running with the decanter of liquor. Brainard took it and tipped it up to the whispering lips. They stilled at the touch of the glass. Then the man drank, a sip, and another. They watched The stimulant took hold with amazing suddenness. He stirred his head and looked again at Phyllis. His eyes widened and his gaze seemed to concentrate.

"But," he began, his voice returning, "you are not a—a day older! Have I been sick? Haven't I been away?"

Suddenly he struggled up out of John's hands, his thin elbows rapping the arms of the chair painfully. He stared about the white room.

"But this—where am I?" he sobbed.

"He seemed to want you to talk to him, Phyllis," said Mr. Norman.

Phyllis bent over him. But he turned and stared again at her with eyes that arrested her speech, eyes in which the depths were—vacant! "Phyllis?" he repeated, wonderingly. And then again. "Phyllis?"

And he fell back unconscious.

The coming of the stranger effectually broke into the discussion of other marvels of that night, for the time being. Brainard sent for a doctor from the floor below in the apartment building in which he lived. The physician's arrival put an end to intimate talk of any kind. Phyllis went home in the car with her mother and father, dropping Aunt Relief Brainard at her place of residence. John took Carol Gould to her home, after he had brought down word to them that Dr. Carmichael said the apparition in the studio was indeed a man, who was simply suffering from some form of amnesia, possibly due to lack of nourishment.

Phyllis slept. The stimulus of extraordinary excitement reached the narcotic stage and she lay through that night as if drugged. In daylight the events of the evening before seemed as unreal as dispersed shadows. Her mother shook her head to questionings. Her father, though he had no occupation to call him out, was away all day. The girl's attempt to think of the things that had so deeply affected her left her curiously unmoved, in an apathy of nerve weariness. Half consciously she was waiting for Radley to call her up, or come. It seemed incumbent upon him.

It was late afternoon when she heard from him.

A maid called her to the phone, and she heard his voice. It was vibrant with interest in what he had to say; but what he had to say was not personal to Phyllis.

"He keeps asking for you, Phyl," was what Brainard told her without preliminary.

"Who?" she asked, confused by her disappointment.

"Who!" he echoed. "Why, the chap who drifted in on us here last night. He's a complete mystery. I haven't been able to hear of him outside and he can't tell me anything more than he could in the first place. Come over, won't you, and see if he will talk to you?"

He did not inquire as to her welfare after her obviously upsetting evening. He was interested only in the mystery of his guest. But that mystery touched Phyllis again now despite her grievance, as she realized that he had lived a day of activities while she drowsed.

"Your mother needn't come unless she likes," said Radley quickly, as she hesitated. "Aunt Relief is here—and Carol and John."

Phyllis told him she would come. She wondered how long the others had been there—and how long it might have been before Radley would have called for her if the stranger had not so mysteriously asked for her. But the stranger's odd partiality piqued her interest, weakened her to some further realization that the facts of last night had lost nothing because she had been for a few hours indifferent to them.

Her mother was ready enough to accompany her. They left word for her father, who was still out, and called the car. When they reached Radley's studio-apartment they found an absorbed group gathered in the living room there. Surrounded by the four whom Phyllis was prepared to find, with Ushigi fluttering about as if trying to escape but fascinated, the gaunt specter who had dropped from nowhere into their midst now sat propped among pillows, shaved and scissored as to beard and hair, with faint color in the skin over his cheekbones, with a light of anxiety in his eyes that spoke of partial sanity at least—sanity enough to recognize his extraordinary position—certainly a man of human materials, of human impulses, of human susceptibilities.

Why had they thought he might be anything else? Phyllis went in and stood before him. His eyes suddenly lighted up as they fastened on her face.

"Oh!" he said, as if he had waited for her and found her presence something to cling to.

Phyllis glanced around at the others. Radley had not left the room to receive them. Ushigi had ushered them in, and Brainard had waved them to join the group. John, eager eyed, his handsome young face flushed boyishly; Carol, her usually elaborate unconcern about life in general momentarily mislaid; Miss Brainard, her sharp features full of keen-relish for the situation; Mrs. Norman, wearing her usual sweet poise, as if she had effectually quieted the flutter that had disturbed her last night; Radley himself, intent, but with a baffling manner of withdrawal into himself, only critically concerned with her coming, apparently for its effect on the object of his study; all looked to her for something—some response to the plain fact of her own influence on this being who also looked so appealingly to her.

Impelled by pity for the groping quality in his gaze, she sat down in the chair that John placed for her, and smiled at the stranger's wan face.

"Do you know me?" he asked.

Surprisingly, he laughed briefly. "Don't be so sorry for me," he said. "I have a sense of humor, too."

She stared at him.

"Don't you think there's anything funny about a man's waking up after a period of blankness to find himself with a beard like a grandfather's, to find that he's lost his flesh, lost his memory, lost his whereabouts, lost his identity, and lost his clothes—and yet——"

He laughed again, but with plain effort.

"Tell Miss Norman what you just told us," said Brainard, restive at delay in the proceedings.

"Norman?" repeated the man, scanning Phyllis' face. Then he shook his head. "That's what puzzles me."

"You think you know me as Phyllis," said Phyllis herself.

"Yes!" His eyes widened again. "But they tell me this is the year nineteen—— Ha! Its impossible! I'm no Rip Van Winkle, am I? I came here—I came here——" He stopped.

"He seems almost to remember at moments," said John softly in Phyllis' ear.

"I've Lost Eight Years"

The man looked up quickly. "I do almost remember!" he said, smiling more easily again. "The doctor said I was a victim of amnesia. Amnesia is it, when a man forgets part of his life, and inconsistently remembers——"

He paused abruptly again and stared at Phyllis. Then he shook his head.

"Nineteen thirty-five!" he murmured. "Do you know—I've lost eight years somewhere! You don't see them lying about?"

This last was pleasantry, clearly. Phyllis laughed.

"Thank you for that," he said, evidently grateful for cheerfulness. "I can tell you more than you think I am if you won't all look at me as if you think I'm insane. I don't believe I am. You tell me I'm in Mr. Brainard's studio, in Santa Monica, Calif. It should be Santa Monica—but I didn't recognize it when—when I woke up."

"He says he came to California on his vacation in 1927!" exclaimed Miss Brainard happily.

"He doesn't know where he's from," supplied Carol.

"I know I'm from somewhere in the—the East," said the man thoughtfully.

"Do you know your name?" asked Phyllis gently.

He shook his head, his eyes clinging to her face. Then he smiled again. "Might as well call me Rip!" he replied.

"All right, Rip," responded Phyllis, sensing his longing for the lighter vein. "But where do you think you have been all the time since you came? You have a theory, of course."

He nodded. "I know," he said. "But I haven't told anybody else yet, because I wanted to get this insanity theory out of their heads. Will you promise to believe me if I tell you?"

"Yes," said Phyllis.

"In a sea cave!" said the other. "What?" queried Brainard very sharply.

"I went in bathing on the Santa Monica beach on a Saturday morning in 1927—August! I explored a cave, and I think—that the cave caved in on me. I'm not sure. I can't remember—except that in my recollection—or what seems to be my recollection, I have fixed fast a terrible sensation of smothering in sand. I may be the victim of all manner of hypnotic suggestions!"

"But you can't tell where you were when you came back to consciousness," commented Brainard skeptically.

"Yes, I was on the sand of the beach, just lying in the sand. You know that the tatters I had on when I came in here were the remnants of a bathing suit. I found myself lying there in the darkness of night in these shreds of clothing, the sand piled up all around me, my limbs partly buried in it, and myself in the condition ——" He broke off suddenly, as realization got the better of his effort to be calm. He sat up wildly. "Can you think what this means to me? Where—where is the time to which I have been robbed? Where is my home? Where is my calling? Where are my friends? Where is the man who was in this body, when it was strong and firm-fleshed, and young?"

He beat at his thin arms with his frail hands; then sank back and covered his face and moaned.

In the silence Miss Brainard glanced at Phyllis and touched her forehead with her finger in time-worn gesture, nodding.

The man opened his eyes, quite self-controlled again. "I don't see—It's amazing that I should be alive at all!" he said, and laughed again.

"Why so?" asked Radley easily, taking out a cigarette. "You easterners never did appreciate our climate."

The other started. "What?" he said, turning to Brainard. Then he smiled. "Now I know I'm in California!" Radley laughed, a more natural laugh than Phyllis had heard from him for weeks. But at the end his eyes went furtively sidelong toward the man in the pillowed chair.

"Well," he commented presently, "if your calendar was right when you started on your vacation it's a long time between baths for you."

"And no wonder I need a haircut!" answered the stranger. "Nineteen thirty-five! That has a queer sound to a man who still has two installments to pay on his 1926 income tax!"

"Do you know," asked Carol suddenly, "that Santa Monica is part of Hollywood now?"

"Hollywood!" echoed the man. "Why, Hollywood is 20 miles away!"

Complete Illusions

"It was," said Carol. "But it's grown—in eight years. Why, of course you've never seen the Complete Illusions studio!"

"Never heard of it, until this morning."

"Well, it occupies most of the space between here and the Hollywood you used to know."

"Carol!" protested Mrs. Norman. "Well, my story's as true as Rip's is!"

"Then all Rip can say," returned the individual so denominated, "is that you must have lived just as fast as you were reputed to in Hollywood!"

"And that makes me know you come from the East!" cried Carol.

"But—what is this—Complete Illusions? It sound familiar, but—unfamiliar."

"It's the motion picture monopoly that has smashed all the lesser ones, or combined them," said Brainard, quietly watching the other's responses to information. "Do you remember the first stereoscopic pictures that were made—and the attempts to synchronize pictures and records of spoken dialogue—and music? Those experiments must have been in progress when you—went to sleep."

"Yes—I remember."

"Well, Complete Illusions Incorporated owns practically all the patents and all the machinery that has brought about the perfection of combination."

But the stranger did not seem unduly impressed. "You make me feel like something prehistoric, stuffed and mounted in a museum," he said smiling.

"How did you happen to choose to come here?" asked Radley abruptly.

"You asked me that once before."

"Yes, and you told me you didn't choose. You won't mind, will you, if I tell you that is something that puzzles me most?"

The man shook his head; then he looked at Phyllis again. "It puzzles me, too," he said. "This place of all places."

Questions

The girl suddenly quailed before his gaze. What was that strange look in his eyes? What was this creature of mystery who could not account for his human origin—and who yet fastened upon her as to an anchor? The studio scenes of the previous night swarm before her eyes. Had he stepped out from one of those vivid materializations of the past? Why, indeed, had he come here, of all places? Why did he single her out from the rest? If his story were true, and if—if the flesh and bone of him were indeed —— But speculation refused the leap to which the alternative put it!

"Phyllis!" said Brainard sharply

She looked up at him with blurred eyes. He had never spoken so to her before; the tone recalled her to the only consideration that could have drawn her sharply back to herself.

But Brainard did not await response from her. He got up from his chair and crossed the room.

"I want you all to come into the studio," he said. "I think I have something by now to show you, something that will throw light on this mystery."

Carol leaped up instantly. "Oh, great, Radley! You're going to show us those pictures again—or some other that Rip might have stepped out of!"

The echo of Phyllis' own thought brought a semblance of credibility to the suggestion again. She had no choice but to take any possible step toward solution of such mysteries. She rose with her mother to follow the others.

"Come on, Mr. Van Winkle," said John, reaching to assist the otherwise nameless one. And the man's own ready acceptance of this christening curiously associated him with the name for Phyllis. Little effort was required now to accept such a minor absurdity.

But Carol was at her elbow. "Rad's putting something over on us, Phyl," said the younger girl. "Don't be upset. This thing is framed."

They went into the studio together. It was at the far side of the apartment; they passed through Radley's living quarters to reach it. As they went through the hall, Ushigi was admitting someone at the door. It was Mr. Norman. Radley hailed him to follow them.

The white room was as it had been last night. Its more subdued light illuminated it. As Phyllis went toward the chairs, it seemed that the events of the evening previous had been interrupted. Here was the same group—except for the presence of Van Winkle! As she took a chair beside her mother, John brought the man and seated him at her other hand.

"You don't mind, do you?" asked the Van Winkle.

She noticed now that he was wearing a lounging robe she had given Radley. The trifling detail was something for common sense to seize upon. She began to think she understood how this poor creature must be snatching at details of the familiar, if—if he were not a mere co-conspirator with Radley.

Her father spoke to her in passing but she scarcely heard him. Radley was impatient again, and they were barely seated when he snapped off the lights.

"I don't know what I've got," he told them, "but I've got something that will explain itself, in any event."

The red light blazed behind the curtain. Almost immediately there dissolved in, as the motion-picture phrase once had it, what looked like a mirrored reflection of the studio itself. All the little group, Mother, Father, Carol, John, Aunt Relief, Phyllis herself—Radley! Mirrored! Just as they—But where was the man Van Winkle?

And then she grasped the fact; it was last night's group at which she looked! Not as they sat here together now! But she had no time to marvel or to study. For Radley was talking not here in the dark end of the studio where he had stood a moment ago, but there in the light, mirrored reflection! Talking! His voice as clear and quiet as usual.

"No, not ghosts exactly," he was saying. "Ghosts are supposed to be departed spirits, aren't they?—out of the flesh.

"I think you will all admit that the people you have seen tonight have been very distinctly still in the flesh."

The Scene Repeats

Phyllis instantly recognized the words—perfect reproduction of what he had said to them last night. But the living scene before her paralyzed her thinking faculties. She saw herself look at Carol Carol was shivering. She saw herself suddenly get up from her chair. "Radley," her own voice said, from out of that unbelievable mirror of herself. "I think we've all been more frightened than we'd like to admit. I assure you I didn't admit it voluntarily. Now explain. What is it we've seen?"

"It's something that's thrown on a curtain by a light!" Carol asserted, and Phyllis saw the replica of herself there in the light turn and observe the other girl.

A sensation unimagined, without parallel in experience, seized her. She was living again in the events of the evening before. She was herself participating. But she was at the same time a spectator! Was she then two beings? Was this an astral self here, flung aside by her physical body which went on living in a physical life there—there, where the light played in her own frightened eyes and blood came and went in her drawn face?

It was too much. She lost the sequence of events transpiring about her, either here or there, while she watched only the movements, heard only the words, saw the outer evidence of the emotions, in that other self of her, which had been herself last night. She lost all sense of time, ignorant even of the fact itself and only aware of it afterward. Many times she had seen moving portraits of her own face and figure in pictures Radley had made experimentally on film. But the consciousness of self revealed in them was trifling to this. There was Phyllis Norman—there, there! Not here in this chair, not here, with numbed hands locked, with feet dead to their contact with the floor, with body nervelessly rigid and unconscious of a chair's support, as if isolated from all substantial things! There was Phyllis Norman's body! Here was her stricken mind!

But interruption broke in—at once here and in that other life of past hours that was so much more real. The door of that lighted studio was flung open; Ushigi rushed in. "Look! See Quick!" he cried, pointing back at the dark doorway. A chair crashed upon the floor. Radley's angry voice: "What the devil do you think you've let in out of the night?" Frightened women—men hesitating to approach an empty doorway! And then—there there in that other lighted room, the apparition of the man in the rotted rags of a garment, with matted beard and hair, gray of flesh, wavering, staggering! And Radley's challenging voice—the ghostly answer! A wild clutch, a crumpling figure dragging, fastened to——

No—it could not be! Staged! "Framed!" That was it! The alternative was inconceivable. Phyllis flung out a hand in the darkness at her side. Was he there—this being that—— Of course! Her hand found the rough fabric of the coat she knew so well—and an arm within it stirred at her touch!

"It is a trick!" she cried. "Radley!"

She knew now. Some marvel of mechanics mastered by the young student of science was the explanation of it all! That and some hoax agreed upon with the Van Winkle! That mirrored studio scene was after all but a machine-recorded thing. Last night's events and this day's sequel were but a show to fix first impressions.

But the scene beyond the curtain had vanished. Light had sprung up in the white room. Radley was speaking in answer to her cry. Before her, under clutching hand, sat the man whom they had so lightly dubbed Van Winkle. She was still clutching his arm. And he sat there blinking, dazed, acting no conspirator's part, plainly lost in the thing that he had witnessed, astounded, with a genuineness that no human being could feign!

His eyes widened at her.

"Phyllis!" he said.

MOTHER OF HIT WRITER DIES

'Mother Machree' to Be Played at Rites

By JACK POWERS

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Jan. 4. (UP)—The mother who inspired the song which in late years was to thrill millions of mothers wherever it was played or sung, will be buried here Saturday beside the grave of her son, who wrote it almost 20 years ago.

The mother is Mrs. Mannie Ball, 72, who died today at Beechurst, Long Island, and the song in which this mother was immortalized is "Mother Machree"—the work of Ernest R. Ball, Cleveland boy who died in May, 1927.

Played at Funeral

To the tune of "Mother Machree" strummed by a string quartet, Ball was laid to rest in Lakeview cemetery, and on Saturday the body of the composer's mother will be carried to its resting place to the same tune, which the mother had hummed through the closing years of her life.

It was just a year before Ball died that he appeared in a downtown theater here. His mother occupied a box and listened as the son sang the song to her from across the footlights.

Miss Ruth Ball, grand-daughter of "Mother Machree," tonight was authority for the statement that the aged woman, since the death of her son found solace in the strains of the song. According to Miss Ball, the death of the composer took from the grand-mother the greatest thing in life, and she had often remarked she had little else to live for.

Buried by Son

Miss Ball said the song "Mother Machree" was first used in one of Chauncy Olcotts shows, but she was unable to say which one. Her father, at the time the song was written, was 27 years old and was living in New York, where his mother also resided. The composer traveled much, but the subject of his song remained most of the time in the East, except for visits here. Their deaths occurred within 20 months to the day of each other.

Mrs. Ball's body will arrive in Cleveland early Saturday and after short services will be placed in the grave alongside that of the son.

Trio Captured After Failing in Robbery

GUNNISON, Utah, Jan. 4. (AP)—Three bandits who attempted to rob the Gunnison Valley bank here today, failed to open the safe and were captured after a chase in which one of them, John Briant, was shot.

The two others, who gave the names of Anderson and Bauer, were found in a haystack, where they had hidden. In disarming Briant, a member of the posse caught the trigger of his pistol and the charge entered Briant's stomach. His wound is serious.

SEALY SOLON DRAWS BILLS

Tillotson's Plan to Oppose State Road Bonds

AUSTIN, Jan. 4. (AP)—Representative Leonard Tillotson of Sealy, a "minority" member of Governor Moody's highway advisory committee, which adopted a state bond issue plan, announced here that he will introduce bills covering an extended program of highway legislation in the 41st legislature, meeting Tuesday.

He expressed belief that the "proposal for a big state bond issue for highway building has been losing ground steadily and generally over the state since the adjournment of the advisory committee."

State Road Fund

He said he will introduce the following bills:

To establish a highway policy by declaring that the state shall build and maintain all designated state highways from an independent and adequate state fund, derived from sources of revenue calculated to distribute equitably. Costs of construction and mintenance, and that any contributions to state highway construction by counties or districts to be made as supplementing a distinct program.

An amendment to the state gasoline tax act, now providing for 2 cents a gallon, increasing the tax to 4 cents.

To provide for a change in the distribution of registration fees, so the counties will retain all fees collected from motor vehicles, other than those engaged in common carrier service, up to the first $50,000, and retain 75 per cent of the remainder of the fees derived from the same class of vehicles, with the proviso that no county shall receive in excess of $300,000 from making them common carriers under control of the railroad commission.

Motor Tax

To provide a gross receipts tax on motor vehicles engaged in common carrier service.

To provide a driver's license.

A bill amending present laws regulating truck operation on public roads and highways.

Amending traffic regulation to secure a more adequate traffic code for the state with provision for enforcement patrols.

To extend to February the time for license fee payments.

PAIR ARRESTED IN HIJACKING

Two Women Also Held; Men Give Statements

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 4. (AP)—Two men were held here tonight on robbery charges in the hijacking of a filling station manager Wednesday night and their two young women companions were questioned by officers.

B. F. Smith and Charles L. Reed are under complaints. The women were held after one of them allegedly confessed robbing a sleeping man in Richmond, Texas, of $7.25.

According to statements signed before the sheriff the men were connected with the robbery of four men in Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 26, when $7 was obtained.

From there they said they went to Birmingham, Ala., where a filling station was robbed. In Jackson, Miss., another filling station is said to have been robbed.

The sheriff said the automobile in which the four were traveling has been identified as having been stolen from a man named Johnson, in Marietta, Ga.

Soft-Spoken Plea for Bond Avails Nothing

DALLAS, Jan. 4. (AP)—A soft-spoken request that he be granted a reasonable bond so he "could get out and go to work" was made by J. W. Meyers, charged with robbery with firearms, when he appeared in justice court today.

Meyers, said to be the son of a retired Protestant minister, was overpowered by a throng of holiday shoppers after he was alleged to have forced several persons in the cashier's office of a Grant store to lie on the floor while he scooped $2,470 in a satchel.

The justice of the peace remanded Meyers to jail without bond.

Last Rider of Pony Express on His Horse Again

SNYDER, Texas, Jan. 4. (UP)—A rider of "the last pony express" left here today on his route from Artesia, N. M., to Scranton, Penn., a trip which is to be completed by July 1.

D. L. Bullan, known to rodeo followers as "Bull Montana," started from his New Mexico home Christmas day on a transcontinental trip which he plans to make without money or slicker. The trip is to be 2,700 miles.

The horse being used on the "express" was captured from a wild drove of mustangs on a New Mexico ranch and was shod for the first time Tuesday. At Sweetwater, the route will be over the "Broadway of America," to Washington, D. C.

Rheumatic Pains Yield to Capudine

Those who suffer from rheumatism will find that Capudine will greatly assist in the treatment by relieving the pain and reducing the fever and inflammation. Rheumatism is a serious disease and should have the attention of a good physician, but the patient should be made comfortable as suffering retards recovery. For this purpose nothing better than Capudine. Being liquid, it acts almost instantly—much quicker than tablets and powders.

Capudine does not upset the stomach, and is more effective in relieving pain and high nerve strain. Millions have found grateful relief from its use during the past 30 years. At all drug stores—30c and 60c sizes. — Adv.

MATTY BELL NAMED ATHLETIC DIRECTOR AT TEXAS A. AND M.

HE'LL ALSO BE GRIDIRON HEAD

New Cadet Mentor, Only 29, Has Successful Career

COLLEGE STATION, Texas, Jan. 4 (AP)—The veteran D. X. Bible, who resigned as head coach of Texas A. and M. college after 11 years to take a similar post at the University of Nebraska, will be succeeded by Madison Bell, since 1923 football and basketball coach at Texas Christian university.

Bell's appointment was announced today by the Aggie athletic council.

Dean Charles E. Friley, chairman, said the Aggies' new athletic director would come to the school as professor and head of the department of physical education and head football coach. The post carries faculty membership and contemplates permanency of office. No salary agreement was disclosed.

May Direct Spring Work

While Bell will not take up residence on the campus until September, he expects to obtain leave of absence from T. C. U. in order to conduct spring football training at A. and M. Bible has indicated he would be at A. and M. during the spring to assist the new coach in installing his system.

President T. O. Walton of A. and M. expressed himself as pleased that the new athletic director had been obtained. "We believe he will fit in admirably with the organization at this school and will receive the hearty support of the faculty, students and ex-students," he said.

Bible declared Bell's employment meant the "work of the department of physical education was placed in safe hands."

Matty Is Only 29

Bell, while only 29, has had considerable coaching experience.

After graduating from Centre college, where he starred in football and basketball, the new Farmer coach went to the Haskell Indians in 1920-21 and coached the two sports. The following year found him at Carroll college, Waukesha, Wis., and in 1923 he went to Texas Christian university at Fort Worth, a town in which he played grammar and high school football as a teammate of Bo McMillin, Kansas State Agricultural college coach.

His teams have always had success against A. and M.

Bell's loss to the Horned Frogs leaves the coaching situation "wide open." Bell's assistant, Line Coach Ed Kubale, recently became head coach of Centre college.

Baer Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—We inhaled the fragrant statistics of the California-Georgia Tech football game over the radio.

And we were thrilled by the accurate descriptions of the intercollegiate jaspers as they pulled and tugged on the field of fractured glory.

But, most of all, we were pulverized by the announcer's verbal book-keeping of Roy Riegel's non-negotiable touchdown.

From what we fail to understand about the proceedings, Roy picked up a gentle fumble and galloped the wrong way.

As the announcer, unrolled the ledger of Roy's reversed pilgrimage, we did not know whether our ears deceived us or whether our adenoids were defective.

Roy is not to blame entirely for they tell us that his teammates gave him interference as he dashed rapidly on his retrograde parade.

Furthermore, no football player is responsible for what he does after he leaves the huddle.

As he picked up the young fumble, he was heard to remark, "I do not know where the west begins. But I can show you where the East forgets to stop."

Then he proceeded to become the valedictorian of the 1929 graduating class of backward students.

Just when Roy might have hung up a record by scoring a touchdown for the visitors he was tackled on the one-yard line by a jealous team-mate.

The tackler's name was Lom, another California player, who said:

"When Roy tried to score a touchdown for Georgia, he was carrying both the ball and California hospitality too far."

On the next play, Lom was tossed for a safety and Georgia won the game. But Riegels proved his gameness by coming back in the second half and blocking a kick.

Fortunately, after blocking the kick, he did not get hold of the ball.

After the game, the California coach called his men together in a post-graduate huddle and remarked:

"After this, we will play all our games on a one-way street."

Roy went Democratic too late in affect the November election results. We feel sorry for him, but it is the coach's own fault for not having a couple of traffic cops on the sidelines.

U. S. Still Mecca of Foreign Boxers

The big family of boxers harbored by Uncle Sam is a League of Nations in itself. They are here to lend their talents to the golden game and to accept good pay.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4. (AP)—Of all the foreign invaders here to help themselves to American prosperity, the boxers still seem to fare best.

The lull in the heavyweight division has shelved the big purse projects for the time being, but several glove throwers from other lands are cashing in handsomely on the general run of fistic affairs.

Outstanding among those now here availing themselves of the financial rewards in this land of opportunity are Andre Houtis of France, the featherweight champion; Rene De Vos of Belgium, middleweight challenger, and three heavyweights, Paulino Uzcudun of Spain, Con O'Kelley of Ireland, and Max Schmelling of Germany.

Here's Good News For the Duffers

Larger and Lighter Golf Ball in Prospect

NEW YORK, Jan. 4 (UP)—A larger and a lighter golf ball is due in 1929.

It will not fly quite as far as its immediate predecessor, but it will sit up more prominently on the turf and thus compensate the duffer for any loss of distance.

Officials of the United States Golf association have long favored a change, and golfers gathered here for the annual meeting this week are agreed that nothing now can prevent world-wide adoption of a ball 1.68 inches in size and 1.55 ounces in weight. The present standard is 1.62 inches and ounces.

Since British and American precedent is followed wherever golf is played, and since golf authorities of Great Britain and the United States are in accord on the new ball, the change will be effective throughout the world. It will not become official in this country until passed upon by the executive committee to be elected Saturday.

Members of Committee

The members of this committee which will have the final responsibility for adoption of the lighter and larger ball are to be Bobby Jones, Harrison R. (Jimmy) Johnston, Findlay S. Douglas, H. H. Ramsey, Roger D. Lapham, Prescott S. Bush, Charles H. Sabin, Herbert Jacques, Rodman E. Griscom, Harry Potter, Ganson Depew, Robert M. Cutting and Cornelius Lee. They were nominated some time ago.

Golf ball manufacturers, newly organized into an association, are prepared to produce the new ball practically at once.

What the average golfer wants to know is:

"How will the new ball effect my game? Can I hit it as far as the one at present in use?"

The answer is that the average golfer has little to worry about, but think of the beautiful alibi he will have when his shot to the green drops short into the sandy maw of a trap.

A Sweet Alibi

The new ball probably will make no difference in the duffer's game, but it will be a sweet excuse for the locker room.

The purpose of the change, favored by Bobby Jones and other officials of the U. S. G. A., was to shorten the game of the experts and bring back the brassie and the No. 1 iron. Naturally, being somewhat larger and lighter, the new ball will not fly quite as far with the same impetus, although Finlay, one of the longest hitters in the game, recently tried it out and claimed to have noticed no difference.

Being larger in diameter and circumference, the new ball will sit up on the fairway, giving the duffer something better to shoot at. Some golfers would just as soon the ball was as big as an orange when they start to swipe at it.

NEW BALL WILL HELP GOLF, STRACHAN SAYS

Bill Strachan, professional of the Wichita Falls Golf and Country club, and one of the foremost experts of the links sport in Texas, thinks that the proposed new golf ball will be a boon to the game. Strachan says that expert player and duffer alike will profit by the new ball, which is to be larger and lighter than the present gutta percha.

"The golf ball that probably will be adopted by the U. S. G. A. will make the game more scientific," Strachan said. "It will decrease the distance of drives, and will bring about more adeptness in the use of irons." That means nothing to you or I, who shoots an average game and rejoices in bettering 90.

"But," adds Bill, "the new ball will aid the duffer. It will be easier to hit."

A decrease in the distance of courses is foreseen by Strachan as one of the most important results in the probable adoption of the new ball.

DAILY DOPE

By LARRY DAILEY

SUCCESS IS presaged for an old and a new league providing sports entertainment the next two months for Wichita Falls. I am referring to the City Bowling loop and the Commercial Basket Ball circuit.

The spinners of the maple started competition in their league this week. Scores were surprisingly high, considering that it was first games and that the sport was introduced successfully here only a month or so ago. With the league a handicap affair, close competition is assured and as the bowling grows better the pin loop is going to increase in interest.

◇ ◇ ◇

THE CAGE wheel is starting its season with indications pointing to another keenly-fought race, such as marked play last winter. The three clubs representing business institutions and the junior college and high school fives will provide lots of fast basket ball for devotees of the court sport.

An interesting angle will be the play of the academic quintets against each other and the remaining three teams. The preps and collegians have more opportunity to practice; thus they probably are in better condition than the other players. But the business house athletes are more experienced, older and probably larger men than the students.

◇ ◇ ◇

POST-SEASON football should be abolished. I take that somewhat iconoclastic stand, for a sports writer, for several reasons, and the New Year's day game at Dallas and Pasadena will support my contention that such affairs do the game no good, and are, to the contrary, against the spirit of collegiate football.

A main argument against post-season football is that it is too much football for the participants. After a gridder goes through eight or nine hard games in the regular season, he has received such a battering that a rest is necessary for his bodily welfare. Too, these post-season games give the alarmists opportunity to reopen their cry that football is over-emphasized; that the athletes should not be concerned with the game from September into late December.

Aside from that, the post-season games do not serve their professed purpose—that of deciding championships. There are too many great football teams for one game or two games to settle the matter of a national title, though it is no question but that Georgia Tech ranks as the foremost team in the country.

That New Year's day game at Pasadena was a comedy of errors—mechanical and mental. Roy Riegels' disastrous run was only one of a series of blunders. It was an atrocious exhibition of football as played by two foremost elevens.

The reason—too much football.

◇ ◇ ◇

THE DALLAS affair, between picked teams of the Southwest and Big Six conferences, was another illustration of a post-season game that could well have not been played. Such games, contrary to a somewhat prevailing opinion, do not offer basis of comparison between rival conferences. Beavers and Hume, greatest backs, and Petty, foremost end of the Southwest loop did not play in the Dallas game, for example.

Post-season games between collegiate teams have some incentive at least. But remove the color of contention between two institutions alone engaged in play, and you have the best part of football missing.

Flying Finn Applies For A. A. U. Permit

NEW YORK, Jan. 4. (AP)—Paavo Nurmi applied to the Amateur Athletic union today for a registration card, permitting him to compete in this country, but he will be asked to appear at an official hearing before it is issued.

In thus proclaiming his intention to start his return American invasion as an amateur, neither Paavo nor his adviser, Hugo Quist, specified where or when the famous Finnish runner will make his competitive start.

Nurmi will be interrogated as to his intentions by the registration committee of the Metropolitan A. A. U., to which his application was referred by Daniel J. Ferris, national secretary.

Roy Riegels' Dash Caught by Camera

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 4. (US)—Roy Riegels, the California captain-elect, who introduced the new kind of reverse play into the New Year's day comical contest with Georgia Tech, not only must stand on his own feet, for the play, but must pivot and sidestep.

Release of a newsreel, with a remarkable pictorial representation of the entire episode of a man running more than 60 yards toward his own goal line, today established conclusively, that Riegels' reverse was, throughout, his own idea.

When he recovered Thomason's fumble, almost on Georgia Tech's 30-yard line, the motion pictures disclose, Riegels started in the proper direction, and two Californians began to block off Tech chargers. None, however, was near enough to Riegels to lay a hand on him, and suddenly he whirled completely around, and started the mad dash in the wrong direction.

Thus passed into football history, the strangest run that has been made in the collegiate game in many a year.

And thus passed into the same history, the name of Roy Giegels, "the man who ran the wrong way."

HOCKEY STAR SOLD

DULUTH, Minn., Jan. 4. (AP)—Sale of Wade Johnson, defense and center man of the Duluth Hockey team of the American Hockey association to the Tulsa Oilers and the return to Duluth of Burr Williams, youthful defense star, was announced here today by Gus Olson, manager.

Jack's Right to Claim Title Asserted

Muldoon Favors Dempsey's Recognition

NEW YORK, Jan. 4. (US)—Jack Dempsey should be declared heavyweight champion of the world, William Muldoon, member of the New York Boxing commission and one of the most influential boxing men in the country, declared today at the conclusion of the commission's meeting. He pointed out that, if properly trained, Dempsey should be able to make one of his best fights, despite his 34 years, and that no man now in the game figures to have a chance to beat him.

"With Tunney out of the way, there is no doubt in my mind that Dempsey should be recognized as heavyweight champion," Muldoon said. "His record while he was champion showed him to be a great fighter and his record since then has proved that he still can fight. He twice went the limit with Gene Tunney and almost won by a knockout in the second fight. He has defeated Sharkey and the latter, in my opinion, is as good as any man actively fighting today.

"As a matter of fact, I consider the Sharkey who fought the first two rounds against Dempsey to have been the best heavyweight we moderns have seen. Yet he found he couldn't beat Dmpsey and finally lost in the seventh round.

"Dempsey is 34 years old but he should be capable of one of his best fights, if properly trained. He always has been trained wrong but it wasn't until the years began to make a difference to him that unwise training had its effect. What he should do is live as he is living now and engage in a brief training session for speed and conservation of energy, for he doesn't dissipate and his body needs no spartan punishment."

Muldoon's outburst had no official connection with the boxing commission meeting. The only decision of importance reached during the session was the reinstatement of Joe Dundee, world's welterweight champion. Dundee has been "on the ground" since his failure to enter the ring with Ace Hudkins in Los Angeles more than a year ago.

Golden's 215 Wins La Jolla Open Golf

LA JOLLE, Calif., Jan. 3. (AP)—Johnny Golden, stocky professional of Paterson, N. J., won the $2,500 La Jolla open golf tournament here today with a brilliant card of 70-73-72—215, just two strokes over par for the 54 holes.

Golden mastered the tricky course with iron nerved shooting.

On his morning round he used seven strokes to hole out in the par four tenth hole, but on the succeeding eight holes he played under par golf to turn in a 73.

The Paterson pro, whose victory gained for him cash totaling $750 led the field by two strokes. Horton Smith, Joplin, Mo., came in two strokes behind the raven haired leader, but he had to shoot a 69, two strokes under par to do it. Smith finished the 54 holes with individual cards of 75-73-69—217, which aggregate to give him second place money of $450.

BOSTON, Jan. 4. (AP)—Gus Sonnenberg, Dartmouth football star, won the heavyweight wrestling championship of the world from Ed "Strangler" Lewis here tonight, when the latter was disqualified after refusing to return to the ring after being butted out seven times.

SALMON – SPELL BOUT DISPUTED

Athletes Disagree on Result Of Bowling Match

By LARRY DAILEY
Record News Sports Editor

The much-mooted bowling match of Wichita Falls has been held. After a controversy that raged several days between the principals and among sportsmen and in the columns of this newspaper, K. C. Spell and Arthur Salmon met yesterday at the Spudder alleys to settle the issue.

And the result is disputed.

They were to bowl five games, two out of three. Spell won the odd game. But there was no referee, and Salmon charged his adversary with committing palpable fouls. Arthur demanded a return match, with a referee. Spell, flushed with victory, finally agreed.

Argue Over Referee

Then the athletes wrangled over the choice of referee. They finally agreed upon a "third man," who is a patron of K. C.'s barber shop, and Arthur's cafe. It was obvious to both that this man would favor neither.

Five games again were rolled, with each winning two, and the fifth was tied. Spell claimed victory, because he had won three games in the first match. Salmon asserted the first match didn't count, and that the tie stands.

What Athletes Said

"I won," said the jubilant Spell. "Incidentally, I recall that Mr. Salmon wheeled me around the block in a wheelbarrow after the Tunney-Dempsey fight at Chicago. I merely mention that to refute Mr. Salmon's letter to you that he has bested me in arguments."

Salmon was not downcast as a result of the match. "It was a tie," the big con carne man said. "I was dissatisfied with the first five games. It was like Tunney's long count. That threw me off my stride. But I came back. I challenge Mr. Spell to a return match."

Here are the scores of yesterday's grudge bout:

SPELL	SALMON
First Match

Health And Diet Advice

The Preparation for Motherhood.

Women are now taking many positions in industry, science and government that were formerly held exclusively by men. However, woman possesses another attribute and precious responsibility, which man has not, for the privilege of motherhood, bestowed upon her by nature, gives woman a wonderful opportunity of shaping the destiny and character of our future race.

You are undoubtedly familiar with some of the methods used by athletes in training for contests, and in much the same manner should the prospective mother prepare herself for bringing a new life into the world, if she expects this new life to be superior to the ordinary "also rans." The weakness or the strength of the mother is to a large extent transmitted to the child and the preparation for the birth of the child should begin even before conception. The food which is given the baby before its birth, and the physical body from which it is to inherit, I consider far more important than the attempt, after birth, to correct deformity and imperfections which were really caused by parental neglect.

No matter what your short-comings may have been, if you can constantly picture in your own mind a new life, beautiful in all that life holds dear, that beauty of your desire will certainly mirror itself in the clean, happy, intelligent look from those baby eyes. You will never be closer to Divinity than when you are creating a new life, and only a sincere desire, coming from your deepest heart longings, will make it possible for you to realize in all its fullness this function of perfect motherhood.

The food that the prospective mother eats is of great importance, because she must supply the elements from which the growing fetus can secure the material required for its bones, muscles and nerves. However, it is necessary that you disillusion your mind of the belief that an expectant mother must eat for two. Even from the ordinary supply of food she will have more than sufficient to nourish herself and also to provide ample material for her baby.

The foods most needed are the blood and nerve building foods such as the succulent, non-starchy vegetables both cooked and raw. Next in importance is a moderate quantity of protein elements found in lean meats, eggs, cheese, nuts, fish, etc. When her diet is lacking in calcium, chlorine or other mineral elements, the prospective mother's own tissues may be drawn upon to supply them. It is a well known fact that the teeth of many women are more subject to decay during and following pregnancy than at any other time and that there is a distinct tendency toward tuberculosis and other deficiency diseases. This is never true if the diet is properly balanced. If the prospective mother's diet is deficient in minerals, the baby's teeth do not form properly and will decay early in childhood. A well balanced diet is the best insurance against bowlegs, rickets and under-development of the baby.

I have prepared a special article called the "Motherhood Series," which I will be very pleased to send, without charge, to any of my readers who are interested, provided they will write to me in care of this newspaper and enclose a large self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Dr. McCoy will gladly answer personal questions on health and diet addressed to him in care of The Record News. Enclose large self-addressed, stamped envelope for reply.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Anemia

Question—M. V. G. writes: "A member of my family is suffering from anemia. She complains that her limbs from the knees down feel just like wood. Is this a usual symptom? What will relieve this condition?"

Answer—You did not say whether the trouble is primary or secondary anemia, but the symptoms you describe are more like those of primary of pernicious anemia. This is too serious a condition to be prescribed for in this column, but I will be glad to send special information on the subject of primary anemia if you will only send me your full name and address.

Buttermilk

Question—Thanks asks: "Should buttermilk be taken with meals, or should it be taken as a meal in itself?"

Answer—Buttermilk should not be taken with the ordinary meal, but should be used by itself or in combination with any one of these fruits: Figs, dates, raisins or prunes.

FRANK E. NICHOLSON

By GEORGE MANFREDI

George Manfredi was the star pitcher for the New York university varsity until he took a trip with the New York Yankees last season. Then the old alma mater gave George the gate, so the Yankees kept him, giving him, however, only a part of their gate. Now George is one of the team's star apple tossers.

GEO. MANFREDI

"There's no story," he told me, "any better than the one about the man who owned a house which was rumored to be haunted. To prove the rumor wrong he decided to hire some one to stay there all night. He engaged an elderly darkey.

"The following day the man was up early and went around to see how the negro had fared. But the darkey was not to be found. On the lawn he discovered the remains of a window, sash and shutters completely wrecked, but of the colored man there was no sign.

"A few days later the real estate man came across his colored watchman tramping along a country road three miles away.

"'Hey, Mose,' he cried, 'where in the devil have you been?'

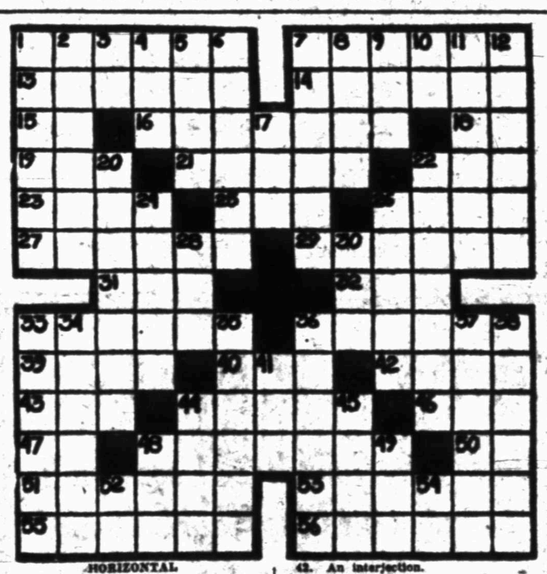

"'Boss,' replied the negro, 'I'se been comin' back!'"

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Jan. 4. (AP)—Renewal of liquidation on the cotton market and some southern selling promoted by relatively easy Liverpool cables and reports of a less active trade demand, today followed yesterday's advances. March contracts declined to 19.78 in the late trading or 27 points net lower, and closed at 19.83, with the general market closing steady at net declines of 19 to 24 points.

The opening was steady at unchanged prices to a decline of 9 points with the more active months showing net losses of about 5 to 6 points during the first few minutes under realizing and in sympathy with the failure of Liverpool to fully meet yesterday's local advance. These initial offerings were rather readily absorbed by the demand brought in by the firmer ruling of yesterday's market, and reports that if cotton held steady a considerable business was expected in cotton goods.

Prices recovered to a shade over yesterday's closing quotations during the early trading, but the trade buying which had been one of the features yesterday, was much less active and the market eased again during the middle of the day under renewed liquidation.

Reports of a slightly easier basis in the Southwest may have contributed to the selling, but there were also reports of a steadier basis in the East. According to some local brokers the movement was more of an adjustment of the technical position than a response to any particular feature in the day's news. January declined to 19.75, while May sold off to 19.84 and July to 19.48, making net declines of 22 to 27 points. The close was a few points up from the lowest for covering. There was not much change in the differences between the old and new style October contracts, the latter being 13 points under the old October at the close. The government report on cotton and staple of cotton ginned up to Dec. 1 came in for considerable comment but was not generally referred to as an immediate market factor. The week-end figures were considered about a stand-off.

Port receipts today, 41,862. U. S. port stocks 2,333,824. Exports today 64,120 making 4,938,506 so far this season.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 4. (AP)—The cotton market developed a reactionary tendency today and lost more than half of yesterday's sharp gain. The main depressing influences were bearish weekly statistics and liquidation by recent buyers. March contracts declined gradually to 19.13, or 30 points net down but rallied a few points in the final trading and closed at 19.20, or 24 points lower for the day. The general market closed steady at net declines of 20 to 24 points.

Liverpool cables were 3 to 5 points lower than due and first trades here followed lower at 3 to 9 points on sympathy. The execution of some overnight buying orders caused the market to rally practically to Wednesday's closing levels but the initial demand was not aggressive and soon gave way under offerings promoted by fears of bearish weekly statistics and by noon when these fears were realized January traded off to 19.25, March 19.27 and May 19.31, or 14 to 16 points below the previous close.

Although the market met some support on trade buying as the decline offerings persisted, recent buyers, evidently disappointed at the trend of values, liquidated rather freely. The lows of the day were made in late trading when January sold at 19.11, March 19.13 and May to 19.19, or 17 to 20 points below yesterday's close.

Towards the end there was some covering by shorts and the market rallied slightly, January closing at 19.15 and May 19.25, or 4 to 6 points above the lows.

Heavy Demand for Copper And Rail Shares Features Trading

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Jan. 4 (US)—Heavy demand for railroad and copper shares and continued weakness in automobile stocks featured today's market, which closed highly irregular. Heavy selling developed in the entire list at the outset, induced by unexpectedly large expansion disclosed in brokers' loans. The early liquidation brought about declines of from fractions to a few points but was quickly overcome. In the last hour renewed selling took place in various sections of the list, but the rails and coppers maintained most of their gain.

Railroad stocks were bought in the most enthusiastic fashion in months as information came from Washington that large-scale mergers were nearing consummation. The interestate commerce commission, stumbling block of all railroad merger ambitions thus far, was reported to have ratified certain arrangements presented informally by the Van Sweringens and other eastern railroad powers. With few exceptions the entire railroad list moved ahead with notable advances in New Haven and other eastern issues. While many friends of the railroad stocks are awaiting definite indication of Mr. Hoover's attitude toward the consolidation plans, others express the opinion that this program will be carried out rapidly commencing this year. New Haven had the most extended advance. It was helped by estimates that its "real" earnings for 1928, inclusive of equities in such subsidiaries as the Boston & Maine, will run better than $9 and may run close to $10 a share. It's strategic position in the east, coupled with its comparatively high asset value, were also stressed.

Specialties Advance

Several specialties continued in active demand, American Radiator attaining a price over $200 for the first time. This company is engaged in a most ambitious expansion program which may eventually bring it under Morgan domination. Anaconda Copper also reached a new high as the same persistent buying, based on optimism over the outlook for the industry, continued. Kennecott and other coppers benefitted from this same optimism. American Can added to its value on expectation that increases in can prices will shortly be announced. This will materially enlarge the earnings of both American Can and Continental Can. Steel stocks failed to join the upward procession. U. S. Steel was particularly disappointing, selling off despite disclosure that the government is seeking a compromise on the corporation's suit for back taxes. The Steel corporation is understood to have been offered $26,000,000 in settlement for its demands.

Pullman company was in demand, buying being inspired by knowledge that Arthur Cutten, famous Chicago operator, has acquired a substational block of the stock. He is known to have expressed great optimism over this company's prospects. American Safety Razor reflected the buying of an important group. The company has just closed important sales contracts with two of the largest cigar store chains. These chain organizations have also acquired a stock interest in the razor concern. American Safety Razor will probably inaugurate a regular $5 dividend basis on its stock this year.

Radio Closes Down

Radio closed the day with a small loss. The official announcement of its merger with Victor Talking Machine came after the market closed and details were about as anticipated. A five-for-one split-up of Radio corporation's common stock and subsequent exchange into Victor is proposed on the following basis: One share of new Radio common plus one share of newly-created $5 Radio "B" preferred, together with $5 in cash for each share of Victor common. Profit-taking, in anticipation of the announcement, was evident in Radio, while Victor advanced sharply. Container corporation shares were up fractionally on reports its earnings are running 10 per cent ahead of last year. Gold Dust new advanced several points on its favorable outlook.

American Car and Foundry was slightly lower, but an important addition to its executive ranks is imminent. The equipment industry for the first time in years is experiencing a lively demand for its products. Public Service of New Jersey and Columbia Gas furnished leadership to a strong utility market, which was stimulated by knowledge of far-reaching developments which will eventually create perhaps a single operating unit in the entire northeastern section of the United States. International Nickel new shares after running to a new high price met considerable realizing sales by people close to its situation.

Foreign exchanges were helped by further easing of local money rates. Call funds were obtainable at 6 per cent after a renewal of 8 per cent had been established. The acceptance market adjusted itself to the higher federal reserve buying rate and quotations were marked up ¼ per cent. Commodities were lower.

COTTONSEED OIL

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 4. (AP)—The market for cottonseed oil futures ruled easier today in sympathy with the decline in cotton and trading was very light. Prime summer yellow oil closed unchanged at 9.00 and prime crude at 5.12½ to 5.37½. Futures closed easy: Jan. 9.00; March 9.21; May 9.38; July 9.25; Sept. 9.06.

COTTON GOODS

NEW YORK, Jan. 4. (AP)—Gray cotton goods were quiet today. The demand for printed specialties is increasing. Blankets are selling moderately for fall. More business was offered on sheets and pillow cases. Silk statistics for December show mill deliveries of 45,026 bales and imports of 44,128 bales. More interest is reported in silk fabrics, chiefly new printed lines. Heavyweight burlaps were easier, lightweights firm.

MIDWESTERN REVIEW

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 4. (AP)—(U.S.D.A.)—Hogs were more active at most points around the eleven-market circuit with prices strong to 15 cents higher than Thursday's average. St. Louis, which was relatively high yesterday, reported a decline of 10 to 15 cents. Today's extreme top of $9.05 was paid at St. Louis. Total offerings were around 113,000 as compared with 116,777 a week ago and 137,086 on the corresponding day last year.

In the sheep department fat lambs were unevenly steady to 25 cents higher, the most upturn being registered at Omaha. Aged stock ruled firm with additional strength developing at a few centers. Chicago had a fat lamb top of $16.40 and the best offered at Omaha realized $15.65. The supply approximated 31,950, a decrease of 7,000 from last Friday, but about the same as a year ago.

Killing classes of cattle were little changed with the exception of further strength at some markets on light weight heifers and moderate decline at Chicago on slaughter cows. Weight this week has been an important factor in both the fat steer and fed heifer trade. Yearlings demanded a good premium over matured steers, while the differential between heifers scaling under 700 pounds and the weightier kinds was marked. A rapid advance of vealers was checked, most points reporting sharply lower prices. Stocker and feeder steers have been in limited supply all week with the quota of thin stockers especially light. Aggregate receipts were estimated at 13,000 against 10,694 a week ago and 18,706 a year ago.

TEXAS LIVESTOCK

FORT WORTH, Jan. 4. (AP)—Except for steers, all classes of cattle today sold to a fair demand at steady values. The supply was seasonable.

The receipts included about half a dozen cars of slaughter steers with trading slow and no early sales and values tending lower. Those offered carried fair flesh and most of them had good quality.

Bulls sold to a good demand at fully steady values. Four cars sold at $7.25; a few of the better kind at $7.50 to $8.00 and the common light bulls around $6.25.

Slaughter yearlings and heifers about steady. Early sales included some common kind of fair flesh that sold at $8.50 to $9.00 and packages of the better kind up to $11.50.

Buyers were willing to take canners and cutters at steady values, but the supply was light. The bulk of the sales at $4.50 to $5.50. Except for four cars of cows that sold at $6.15 and $8.25, trade was limited mostly to the kind to sell around and all under $7.00 level. Values on all classes of cows held about steady.

The supply of slaughter calves light, but those that arrived found buyers to take them at values in line with recent advances. Two cars sold at $11.00 and two at $11.25—both lots on packer account. Very few stocker calves included in the receipts. The bulk of the cull calves sold around $5.50.

Sheep considered steady with not enough on hand to make a market.

Hog values considered mostly 10 cents higher than yesterday's average for the rail hogs to packers. The best rail hogs today stopped at $8.85 and those in the truck section at Thursday's top, or $8.40. Bulk of the 175-250 pound butchers sold at $8.20 to $8.85. CHICAGO GRAIN REVIEW

CHICAGO, Jan. 4. (AP)—Enlarged estimates of Canadian wheat production broke values down today to the season's lowest level.

The Canadian Northwest Grain Dealers' association reported the 1928 wheat yield of Canadian prairie provinces as 61,000,000 bushels more than was announced in latest figures by the Canadian government.

Closing quotations on wheat were heavy, 1⅜c to 1⅝c net lower, with corn a shade to ¼c@¾c off, oats ⅛c to ¼ c down, and provisions varying from 22c decline to a rise of 8c.

In view of a trade report from the grain dealers' association indicating the wheat output in Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan had reached 561,000,000 bushels and that the current official estimate was a radical understatement, wheat prices here made a rapid descent.

Accelerating the break in Chicago wheat were standing orders to let go of future delivery holdings at various fixed limits, and thus put a stop to losses.

Corn and oats displayed relative firmness but averaged lower on account of sympathy with wheat. Some corn export business was in evidence.

Country offerings of corn showed an increase.

Provisions inclined downward, influenced by announcement of an increase in western stocks both of lard and meats.

BABY CHICKEN SEASON OPENS

Johnson Makes First Shipment of 9,000

Baby chick shipping season for 1929 was inaugurated at the Johnson poultry ranch this week with the shipment of more than 9,000 one-day old White Leghorn chicks to points all over the South, according to information given by M. Johnson, owner.

Large numbers of chicks will be taken almost daily from the incubators during the next few months, it was said, in order to fill the orders for more than 250,000 baby chicks which have been placed with the local Johnson chicken farm.

A small number from each hatch will be retained and fed, to be marketed during the spring as fryers. More than 30,000 fryers weighing from 1 to 2 pounds were sold last spring from the Johnson flocks, it was said.

There are approximately 11,000 hens at the ranch now, Mr. Johnson stated, with a daily egg production of about 8,000, which he declared unusually good for this season. The entire output of eggs, except a small number of culls, is being put back into incubators.

Cotton lost on Friday the 25 points gained on Thursday, reverting to a price of 17.80 per pound offered by local buyers on middling basis.

CAPITOL RAIDED

Dry Sleuths Scent Cargo Of Beer in Wisconsin State House

MADISON, Wis., Jan. 4. (US)—The state capitol was searched today by federal prohibition agents who sought a truckload of beer.

But, no beer was found.

The agents said a truckload of beer was reported delivered to the capitol for some celebration. C. B. Ballard, superintendent of public property, and a life-long dry, denied allotment of storage space for the beer and led the search.

5,000 Indians Threaten Mutiny

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador, Jan. 4. (UP)—Five thousand Indians threatened the city of Riobama today in mutiny against the government, according to reports received here.

In one skirmish with government troops, one was killed and another wounded, dispatches said, and the mutiny was described as serious.

A number of Americans live in Bella Vista, a new suburb of Riobama.

The Indians were reported to be planning to attack and pillage the city.

The government has ordered them to disperse.

The uprising was said to have been the result of friction with army officers who have been doing topographical work in the region surrounding the city.

MINE SWEEPERS COLLIDE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4. (UP)—A collision between two navy mine sweepers occurred 60 miles from Oahu, Hawaii, today but both ships, the Whippoorwill and Tanager, were able to put into Pearl harbor unaided, the navy department was advised by radio.

PAIR OF FREAK SUNS STUDIED

Scientist Reports Findings To Learned Society

NEW YORK, Jan. 4. (US)—Astronomers in attendance here at the science convention received a report made to the Astronomical society of the Pacific concerning two colossal "dumb-bell" suns studied by Dr. Alfred H. Joy of Mount Wilson observatory, California.

These giant suns, which are 4,800 trillion miles distant from the earth, were revolving around each other 800 years ago like a tumbling dumb-bell, and may be revolving that way still, although that is something no one can discover for another 800 years.

The peculiar motions of the pair of suns studied, Doctor Joy said, occurred before the Normans landed for the conquest of England, or more than three centuries before Christopher Columbus was born. Everything that has happened to the two suns in the intervening centuries is in "cold storage" in space, on its way to us to be observed by astronomers of future generations.

In spite of their enormous distance and though the combined light of the two stars is too faint to make them visible to us at all except through the most powerful telescopes, modern astronomy has been able, Doctor Joy reported, to weigh and measure the two suns.

It has also been possible to determine how fast they revolve about each other and to calculate how far they are apart. One of them is more than five times the size of our sun but is relatively lighter, weighing not quite twice as much. The other is heavier, about three times our sun's size and nearly six times its weight.

The two suns are only about 9,000,000 miles apart, about one-tenth of the distance between our sun and the earth. They revolve about each other at speeds of 90 miles a second, or greater, so that a complete revolution happens in three days and nine hours of our time.

C.-C. BUDGET NEARS GOAL

Banquet Guests at Main Table Named

Chamber of commerce officials Friday reported a gratifying response to the request for contributions to the 1929 budget up to Thursday night, expressing the hope, on the basis of returns thus far received, that they may announce at the annual banquet next Friday night that the entire budget is to be financed without a campaign.

The budget for the year just passed was raised without a general solicitation, and the same plan was adopted for financing the work of the organization in 1929. Letters putting up the proposition to the members and asking that contributions be turned in without call have been out only five days, it was said, and the large number of returns received thus far indicated that a campaign of soliciting will probably be unnecessary, chamber of commerce officials stated.

It was stated that more than half the tickets available for the main dining room for the annual banquet next Friday night already have been sold. Officials of the organization expressed the hope that members wil lmake their reservations at the earliest possible date, in order to facilitate the making of final arrangements for service, seating, etc.

The following have been named to sit at the president's table at the annual dinner occasion.

Charles I. Frances, president, and Past Presidents R. E. Huff, N. H. Martin, T. B. Noble, G. Clint Wood, Walter D. Cline, A. H. Britain, J. T. Harrell, J. C. Mytinger and C. E. McCutchen.

Board of directors: Orville Bullington, Dr. Q. B. Lee, C. H. Clark, J. J. Perkins, Burton Stayton, C. E. Basham, Jack Barnard, R. O. Harvey, J. Alvin Gardner, Lamar Fain, Harry Hines and Arthur C. Rayzor.

Speakers: Frank Kell, Josh Lee, Miss Dorothy Greathouse, Rev. Patrick Henry.

Committee chairmen: W. B. Hamilton, J. S. Bridwell, R. E. Penick, Raymond Myers, W. S. Curlee, Luther Hoffman, chairman business council, and Paul Putty, vice chairman business council.

Guests: J. A. Kemp, George D. Fairtrace, J. W. Akin, A. W. King, Roy E. Carter, Oral Jones, J. H. Patton, J. W. Hunt, John P. Marrs, M. A. Bundy, Louis Kuntz, Iowa Park; F. R. Knauth, Burkburnett; Henry Haynes, Electra; W. B. Chauncey, Dr. J. W. Cantwell.

Chest Members Allotted Funds

Member organizations of the Wichita Falls Community chest were allotted one-twelfth of their total annual budget at the first 1929 meeting of the finance board of the chest in the City National Bank building instead of 10-15 per cent of the year's total as has been the custom in past years.

This announcement was made following the meeting with the explanation that it was done as a guarantee that each of the member organizations will keep within their budget each month of the year.

Organizations having special appeals for funds at this time will be heard at the meeting of the main budget committee of the chest which will be held Jan. 25.

The annual report of the executive secretary for the past year was presented by Miss Myrle Neely. Those attending the meeting, in addition to Miss Neely, were C. E. Basham, W. E. McBroom, Jacob B. Price and A. E. Kelly.

Tellegen "Swears Off" Married Life

Wichita Maids Get Star's Photographs

By The Record News Critic

"Listen! I've been married three times, to three different women. But as long as I live, I swear I'll never be found in that state again!"

Thus did Lou Tellegen, popular stage lover who headlined this week's bill at the Majestic, emphatically answer the query as to the identity of his present partner in matrimony.

Tellegen is the consummate actor of former years, and has retained the trim attractiveness of figure which his admirers connect with his name. The family from which he comes is the European equivalent of the Barrymore family in the United States. His sister, Caroline, is now one of the greatest histrionic artists of western Europe.

Two or more favored ladies in this city received autographed photographs of Lou Tellegen during his Majestic engagement here, pictures bearing not merely his name, but personal notes dedicated to the recipients.

Gift of Church Site Paves Way For New Sibley-Taylor Building

Gift of a site at the corner of Twenty-third and Grace streets, presented by Mr. and Mrs. Ed Wilson, has paved the way for the construction of a new building for the Sibley-Taylor Methodist church, south, Rev. Ben Bell, pastor, announced Friday. When the congregation moves into the new building the church is to be re-christened the Wilson Memorial Methodist church, he added.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson, pioneer residents of Wichita Falls and leaders in the Southern Methodist church for many years, were among the first members of the Sibley-Taylor church when it was organized in August, 1927. Mr. Wilson's name has been prominent on the church rolls since he first became a steward of the First Methodist church 40 years ago.

The Sibley-Taylor church has grown from a membership of 40 to an enrollment of 130 in the 18 months of its organization. Rev. Mr. Bell has been its pastor since the beginning. He announced Friday that organization to obtain money for the church building will be completed soon. Appointment of a building and a finance committee will be made within the next few weeks. He hopes to see the building completed and dedicated before the year is out.

Martin Seeks Release of City In $65,000 Water District Suit

Two new questions were raised by Thelbert Martin, city attorney, in the hearing Friday on the suit of Mrs. D. M. McGrath against the city and the Wichita County Improvement district No. 1, seeking $65,000 alleged damages to farm land and an injunction against further excessive use of irrigation ditches running west of the city.

Mr. Martin, arguing before all three districts judges sitting "in banc", contended that the city is improperly joined in the action, and that the plaintiffs must choose between their two remedies, instead of asking for both damages and an injunction.

Judge W. W. Cook, Judge Allan D. Montgomery, and Judge P. A. Martin spent all day Friday hearing argument on the defendant's original exception, which asserts that the action is barred by the statute of limitations. The argument were completed at 4:30 Friday afternoon and Judge Martin, in whose court the hearing was held, announced that the three would go into conference early next week and announce the decision. The ruling will apply only to the specific question of the limitations plea.

The case is set for hearing on its merits before Judge Martin on Jan. 21. Arguments on the other questions raised Friday will have to be completed and rulings given before that time, E. W. Napier, attorney for the plantiff, declared after the hearing Friday.
