Championship bound: Bulldogs prepare to end season where they began

ROUND ROCK — Back when the high school sports season was still focused on basketball — and for that matter when high school was still in session — the Midland High baseball team was here to open its regular season at a tournament at the beautiful Dell Diamond.

Now that it's almost summer and school is out, the MHS baseball team is still playing, back where it all started in February. Only this time, Midland High is playing for a Class 5A state championship today at noon against Austin High at Dell. MHS defeated Klein 8-6 in Friday's semifinal game to reach the championship.

As far as the Bulldogs are concerned, it's a poetic ending.

"I've been dreaming about it since I was little," said sophomore Daniel Stovall, one of the younger Bulldogs who hit a key three-run home run in the victory over Klein. "I know we came here at the beginning of the season so we might as well end it here."

The only catch to that is that Midland High ended that first trip to Dell by losing to Round Rock 5-4. Concluding this trip to Dell with a loss will mean not bringing home Midland High's first state championship in baseball since 1973.

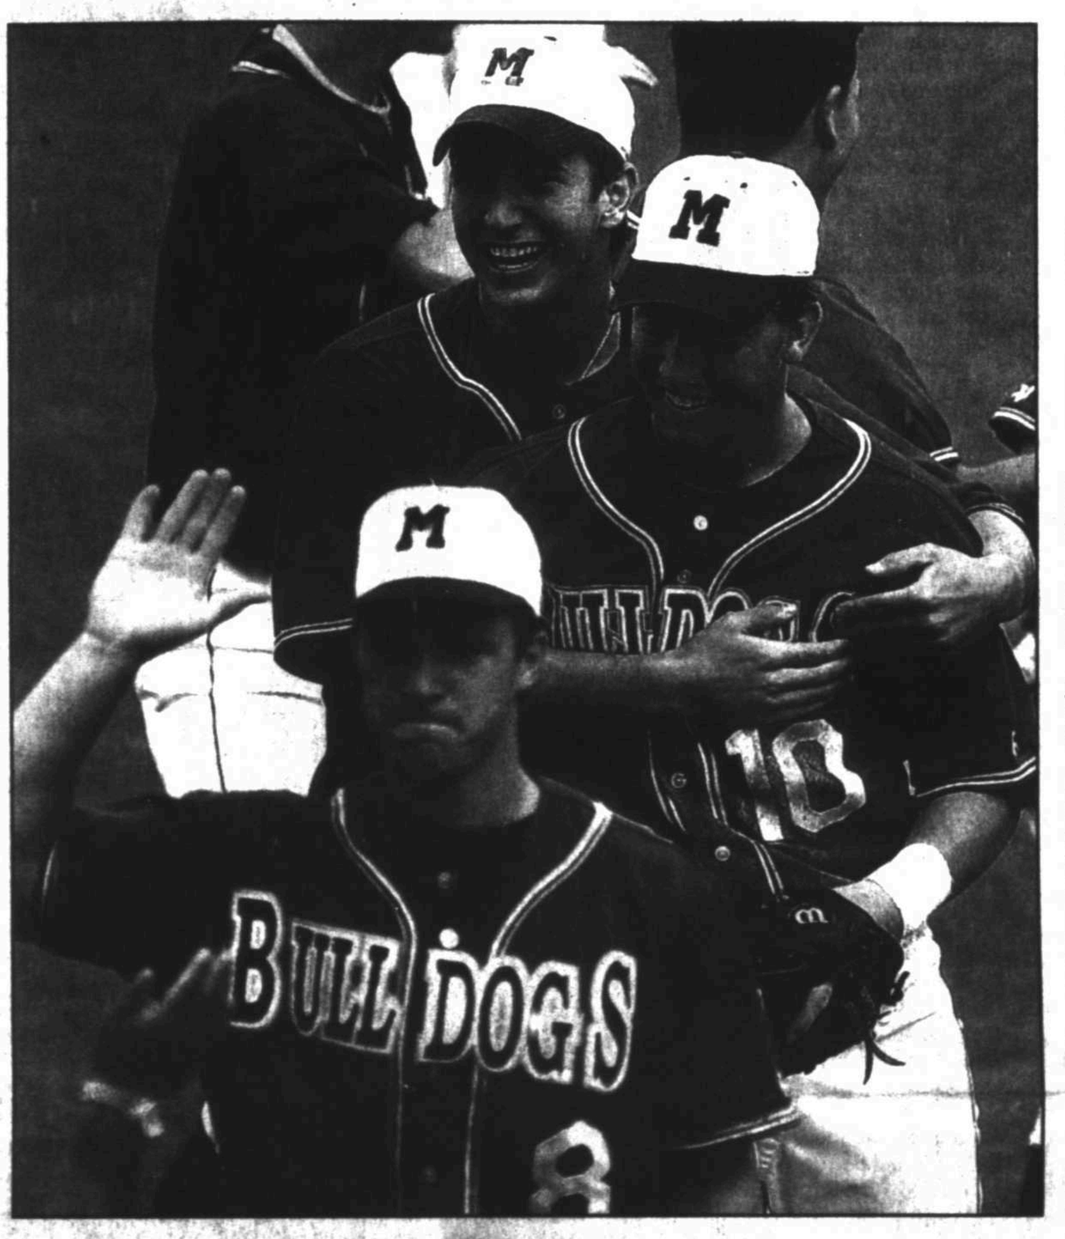

But bringing home a state title is something the Bulldogs have felt has been in reach since before this season even began. That's part of why Midland High scheduled the first trip to Dell — to get a first glance of where they would be playing in the state tournament.

That self-confidence has paid off in spades.

"I expected to be playing (in the championship game)," said senior catcher Madison Edwards, a 25th round choice of the New York Yankees in the Major League Baseball amateur draft who had three hits and drove in two runs against Klein. "We didn't expect anything less."

Shortstop Jayson Nix who was drafted in the first round by the Colorado Rockies, knows as well as anybody about the hunger it takes to win a state title. Nix is in his third year on the varsity and played two years with his old-

Judges pick Schumacher as Midland's next auditor

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The Midland Judicial District's state judges met late Friday afternoon and announced their appointment of Julie Schumacher as Midland County's seventh county auditor since the first in the 1950s.

Ms. Schumacher's appointment came two days after the judges on June 6 unanimously voted not to reappoint County Auditor Carole Wayland to another two-year term in her $52,416-salaried job.

By Texas law, the district judges are charged to make the biennial appointment of the auditor who, in an independent role, monitors the flow of county funds, pays bills after checking their conformity to state laws and county policies, and conducts audits of the county's various departments and accounts.

Ms. Schumacher, who is a certified public accountant, currently is the assistant controller of Basin Energy Services, according a statement released by Judges Willie DuBose, George "Jody" Gilles, John Hyde and Dean Rucker.

She is a graduate of Midland's Robert E. Lee High School and holds the bachelor of business administration degree in accountancy from the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Ms. Schumacher is to take over as county auditor on Monday, June 25,

"I would wish her well," Ms. Wayland said of her successor. "But, realizing that there are two auditors in the past six years that have been ousted, it's a tough row to hoe."

Ms. Wayland's reference was to James "Jim" Ross, a CPA who was county auditor for two years until mid-December 1994, and to herself. She had been Ross' first assistant.

In April 1995, the judges appointed Ms. Wayland county auditor and reappointed her twice since then.

In announcing their decision not to reappoint Ms. Wayland, the judges said "while the position of county auditor is not a popularity contest, effective communications must exist among all officials for the sake of efficient governance.

"Ultimately, the decision was not based on popularity or political patronage, but on performance," the judges said. "The current barrier between the auditor's office and department officials is insurmountable."

In a March 29 public hearing attended by a score or more of elected and appointed officials except Ms. Wayland, sev-

Summer school teachers lose jobs after enrollment mix-up

By Hillary S. Condon
Staff Writer

It was a rough first week of summer school for more than 20 elementary school teachers, as many found themselves in, out and in again with their jobs due to administrative miscalculations one week before the beginning of summer school classes.

Midland Independent School District administrators contacted 21 elementary summer school teachers Tuesday to inform them their services were no longer needed, then later this week at least two teachers were asked to return and teach summer school at different assignments.

While MISD officials said the district usually has an overabundance of summer school students, teachers said this year's predicted numbers were skewed after administrators used educated guesses to deter-

Sales tax talk tops Chamber meeting

By Stewart Doreen
Staff Writer

As much as Midland Chamber of Commerce officials wanted to talk about what could be accomplished as the Chamber tries to follow up on Midland's Cingular success, they kept hitting a "taxing" road block.

An economic development (E.D.) sales tax — despite not being listed on the itinerary for the retreat's first day — became a hot topic as the Chamber and invited representatives from Midland's business community analyzed another year with limited economic development funds and little chance of duplicating one of the cities' most remarkable E.D. accomplishments in decades — the recruitment of Cingular Wireless.

"I think there was surprising

Underage Bush daughter pleads no contest to drinking charge

By Natalie Gott
Associated Press

AUSTIN — Barbara Bush, one of President Bush's 19-year-old twin daughters has pleaded no contest to a charge of minor in possession of alcohol. The other, Jenna Bush, has pleaded innocent to a charge of misrepresenting her age while trying to buy a margarita with someone else's identification, according to court documents.

Barbara Bush's plea comes more than a week after the women were cited by police after they visited a Mexican restaurant in Austin.

According to a police report obtained by the Austin American-Statesman, the Bush daughters and a 20-year-old girlfriend, Jesse Day-Wickham, handed over driver's licenses to a waitress who had asked for

Dewhurst will come to Midland

Staff Writer

Land Commissioner David Dewhurst (R-Houston) will come to Midland next week to launch his campaign for lieutenant governor.

Dewhurst's announcement will take place at 10 a.m. at Republican Headquarters at 407 E. Illinois St.

According to the Dewhurst campaign, Midland will be part of a three-day, multiple city tour of Texas. Other stops include Houston, Austin and San Antonio on Wednesday, Dallas and Fort Worth on Thursday, and Midland, Lubbock and Amarillo on Friday.

It could be the second trip to Midland by an influential state official during the week. Midland County Republican Party Chairman Sue Brannon said Gov. Rick Perry may come to Midland on Tuesday. According to Brannon, Perry's visit would take place at the Midland Center.

"Midland is big time politics," Brannon said. "We have the workers here. We have the people who give the money. The candidates are all very anxious to come and have the support of Midland people for that reason.

Prison prepares for first federal execution in 38 years

■ Related story/12A

By Rex W. Huppke
Associated Press

TERRE HAUTE, Ind — Timothy McVeigh awaited transfer Friday to the windowless brick building where he will be put to death — a journey that will be his last chance to see the sky and breathe fresh air.

The 33-year-old McVeigh abandoned all efforts Thursday to stave off execution for the Oklahoma City bombing after back-to-back defeats in court.

He is set to die by chemical injection at 8 a.m. EDT Monday in the first execution carried out by the federal government since 1963. Prison officials said the chemicals that will be used for the execution have already arrived.

McVeigh is expected to be moved from his cell to the death house no later than Sunday morning, 24 hours before the execution. Prison officials would not say exactly when he would be moved, citing security concerns.

McVeigh has already instructed prison officials on what he wants done with his body, his money and any belongings. Prison officials and McVeigh's lawyers would not say what will happen to the body other than that it will be turned over to a representative of the family.

Before his original execution date a month ago, McVeigh had given away most of his belongings to fellow death row inmates, including a picture of himself inscribed with the words: "My head has been bloodied, but it remains unbowed."

A final meal of his choosing will be served at noon on Sunday. U.S. Bureau of Prisons spokesman Dan Dunne said McVeigh has not yet selected his meal.

He'll also be allowed to eat standard prison fare Sunday evening and the morning of the execution, if he chooses.

One complication surfaced Friday, when a federal judge in Pittsburgh ordered the execution videotaped for a case alleging the death penalty violates the ban on cruel and unusual punishment. But an appeals judge delayed the order Friday and a panel of judges later overturned it, blocking the videotaping.

Also, one of the people McVeigh selected to witness his execution, author Gore Vidal, announced that he would not be coming to Terre Haute. Vidal is writing a story about McVeigh for Vanity Fair magazine.

The magazine released a statement Friday saying that Vidal is unable to make the trip from his home in Italy because he didn't have enough advance notice.

Jim Cross, special assistant at the federal prison, said McVeigh had to submit his list of witnesses 30 days before the execution. He said it will be up to the warden whether McVeigh is allowed to substitute another witness.

McVeigh was convicted of murder and condemned for the April 19, 1995, bombing of the Oklahoma City federal building that killed 168 people in the deadliest act of terrorism on U.S. soil.

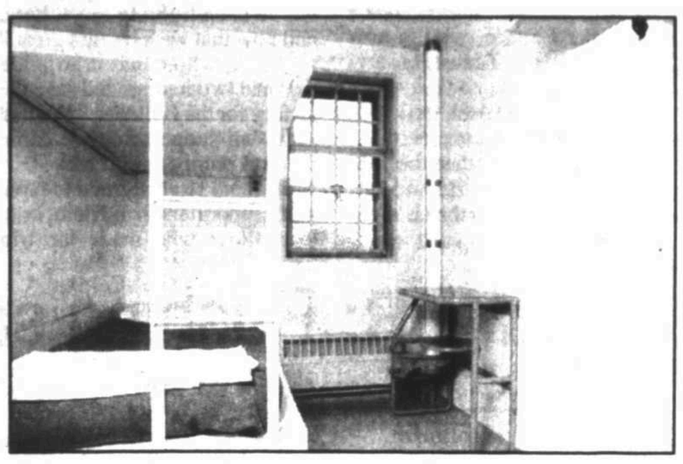

In Oklahoma City, about 300 survivors and bombing victims' relatives will watch the execution on a secure, closed-circuit TV broadcast.

"I've heard some people kind of plan to celebrate, and that's up to every individual," said Tom Kight, who lost a stepdaughter in the bombing. "I certainly plan no celebration."

For security reasons, government offices in and around Terre Haute will be closed on Monday, and the start of summer school was postponed for a day.

McVeigh has been housed in the federal death row Special Confinement Unit — known as "Dog" unit because it was once the "D" wing of the prison — since July 1999, when he and the 19 other men facing federal death sentences were moved to Terre Haute.

For the transfer to the death house, McVeigh will be shackled at the arms and legs and swiftly moved past the cells of several of the death row inmates he has come to know. He will step outside briefly, then enter a prison van where his view through the windows will be obscured by heavy metal grilles. He will not be visible to any of the 1,300 other prisoners.

This undated handout photo from the Federal Bureau of Prisons, shows an inmate cell in the special confinement unit of the U.S. Penitentiary in Terre Haute, Ind. Oklahoma City bomber Timothy McVeigh, scheduled to be executed Monday, will spend time in the confinement unit prior to execution.

AP Photo

This carefully choreographed transfer, in which McVeigh will travel only about 500 yards, has been planned since 1993, practiced repeatedly so everyone knows where to be from the moment McVeigh leaves his cell until guards close the door on his 9-by-14-foot holding cell in the death house.

"There's a team of people who've been formulated for the purpose of this execution," Dunne said. "They've been trained here, we've done mock exercises and we're training this week, just to ensure that everything is done in a coordinated manner."

Vaccinations not enough in whooping cough outbreak

By Hillary S. Condon
Staff Writer

The Midland Health Department is now encouraging parents of students at the Midland Academy Charter School to obtain preventative antibiotics that guard against an outbreak of whooping cough.

The number of students and other contacts who are suspected or confirmed to have pertussis, or whooping cough, has now reached 54. The number of MACS students, as well as their friends and family members who have been treated is now in the hundreds.

"We've probably treated close to 300 people," said Sheila McCright, a nursing supervisor for Midland Health and Senior Services. "We want to stop all potential cases in children and adults in order to prevent the disease in infants. That's when it's the most dangerous."

Health care providers and organizations recommend that infants be vaccinated with the DTaP vaccine (for diphtheria, tetanus and pertussis) at two months, four months, six months and 12-15 months. Another booster is administered to older children from four to six years old.

But now, that may not be enough.

Health Department officials say children of all ages who have been vaccinated are at risk as well. Older children are at risk because the vaccine starts to wear off in adolescence and even with younger children because even if the vaccine is fresh, it is only 85 percent effective.

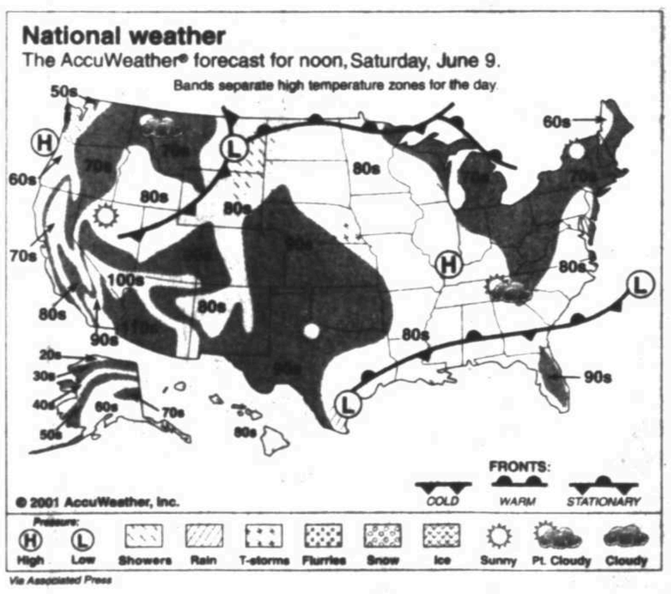

'We want to stop all potential cases in children and adults in order to prevent the disease in infants. That's when it's the most dangerous.'
— Sheila McCright, nursing supervisor

The Health Department recommends all parents of children at MACS, regardless of symptoms or possible contact, to obtain a preventative antibiotic called erythromicin for all family members and contacts — especially if there are younger children at home.

Erythromicin is available in pill form for free at Midland Health and Senior Services as well as from doctors. The dosage depends on the weight of the patient, but must be taken four times a day for 14 days to be effective. The drug targets bacteria like pertussis, so it is safe to take if the disease is not actually present. However, it often causes stomach irritation, so other options are available for patients with sensitive stomachs.

WIN: Stovall dreams about winning title er brother Laynce, who is now playing for the Texas Rangers organization.

Despite strong talent, those two previous MHS teams couldn't advance any further than the third round of the playoffs, and this year's team has used that as motivation.

"Since I was a sophomore, we've been fighting to get here, and now that we have, it's great," said Nix, who came in to pitch the final two innings and save the victory for the Bulldogs. "We had great fan support and we came out real pumped up."

Midland High seemed to have more supporters than Klein, or at least those who made the trip were more vocal. As players talked to the media after the game, they struggled be heard over their enthusiastic fans.

Chances are, a good deal of those fans weren't around when Midland High's season began here, but they are here now when it really counts, at the end. And the Bulldogs want to reward them with a title.

"That's what any team shoots for from the beginning," said three-year starter senior Matt Bose, who was the winning pitcher against Klein. "It's kind of ironic that we started the season here and we could win the title here."

SUMMER: Rushing says students come first

mine student enrollment — rather than test scores.

"The Terra Nova scores didn't come back until after school was out, so teachers had to guess — and teachers guessed high," said Shelly Reep, a teacher at Bonham Elementary and former president of the Classroom Teachers Association of Midland. "When the TAAS (Texas Assessment of Academic Skills) scores came back, we found that a lot of kids didn't qualify."

Ms Reep said elementary summer school budgets are funded by grants, so the numbers of anticipated students had to be turned in before the test scores were. That's when the overestimation took place.

In Ms. Reep's case, she had one student qualify for summer school, but she had estimated 12 other students would need to attend summer school based on their classroom performances. Because of the discrepancy between actual and estimated students, 21 teachers were told Tuesday that they would not be needed.

"Teachers had to call parents and tell them their kids didn't qualify," she said. "Then, when so few kids actually enrolled, they let half of the staff go at Bonham."

Since Tuesday, several teachers have complained about the way the district handled the miscalculation and some have been rehired and placed back into different elementary school/summer school assignments.

School officials said the number of students in summer school classes this year is about average. Rushing said there are usually between 1,100 and 1,400 students.

This year, according to summer school principal Robbie King, there are 1,216. According to MISD Director of Elementary Education Dorsey Rushing the number of elementary level classes that didn't "make" this summer — 21 in all — is a little high, but not unusual.

"We usually have between 12 and 15 classes each summer that don't make," Rushing said.

Rushing said the prediction numbers were accurate, but the numbers of students who actually showed up were smaller because parents simply decided to keep their kids at home.

"We can't compel them to come," he said. "There were a lot more referrals, but it's up to the parents to allow their children to attend. After school started, we made every effort to call all of the parents whose students didn't show up. But by Tuesday, we knew a lot of classes wouldn't make."

"A lot of teachers made arrangements to work, then they're caught at the last minute. It might be legal, but it's probably not ethical," said MISD teacher Steve Buck. "Teachers need those finances. They even need to have the money towards their retirement. It really helps give teachers a boost if they are in their last three years ... they take the salary from your last three years and give you 60 percent of that for your retirement check. If you're counting on it, you're losing more and more."

MISD officials said the option to work during the summer is not guaranteed for any member of the faculty or staff, and all summer teaching jobs are entirely contingent upon student enrollment.

"The original posting that came out of our office says that positions open for summer school are contingent upon actual student enrollment," Rushing said. "All teachers apply based on that.

"I understand they are disappointed," Rushing continued. "But the students have to come first. We're here for the students, not for the teachers."

Superintendent Robert Nicks said the school district has to consider money as well as employee satisfaction, and the fiscal responsibilities sometimes outweigh teacher expectations.

"I wish I could allow those teachers to stay and teach smaller classes, but it's just not fiscally possible," he said. "There is no guarantee of anything during the summer."

RETREAT: Chamber conducts 'business as usual'

support for a possible E.D. sales tax," said Bobby Norman, chair-elect for the Chamber of Commerce. "It is frustrating when you see that panel which shows the competition (and what it is spending on economic development)."

Midland's spending on E.D. — just more than $250,000 — pales in comparison to the $9 million-plus Amarillo spends annually to attract businesses to its city. Abilene brings in $6 million a year and Odessa around $3 million. Even Big Spring dedicates more money toward economic development each year than Midland.

According to state laws, cities can spend up to one percent of their annual budget on economic development. This allows those communities without an E.D. sales tax to compete. Midland took advantage of this law, taking money out of the city's water and sewer funds. The problem is the city spent its allocation for the next three to four years.

"The community is aware of the competitive disadvantage we are operating under right now," Midland Mayor Mike Canon said. "I hope there will be an effort generated from the community to do something about that."

Economic development was a big part of Canon's campaign, leading up to his decisive victory in May 5's mayoral election. However, he, like most candidates in that race and many city leaders, has stated the next effort to get the E.D. sales tax on the ballot would have to start with a "grass roots effort."

The earliest an economic development sales tax, which voters turned down twice in the 1990s, could get on the ballot would be November.

"I wouldn't mind seeing that," Canon said. "I think that would be something the community would be ready to look at. I am not so sure the two times it was voted down before that was an indication from the community that it did not want the sales tax, but it might have been from this community, as conservative as it is, that it was not ready for that particular device.

"It may be now."

At the retreat, though, the Chamber continued its business-as-usual approach — because it had to.

This past year, the Midland Assessment and Action Plan report was released by Austin's AngelouEconomics at a price of $120,000 (half privately financed). The MAAP report made specific recommendations from a traditional economic development standpoint.

It was decided at the retreat that the Economic Development Council would be responsible for raising the tens of thousands of dollars needed to implement certain MAAP suggestions.

"We will continue to work in that direction whether or not we have a sales tax," Norman said. "It is an answer which would provide the most funding, but it is not the only answer. It appears today to be the best answer, but since we don't an E.D. sales tax, we will continue to work on funding these programs.

"We will continue to work for what we think is best for the region, and then if we are fortunate enough to have significant funding at some point then — through an E.D. sales tax or any other method — then we will be in a position hopefully to expand our experience and go out and recruit. Today we can't be in that game."

The second day of the retreat will take place next Friday. Among the items on the agenda include marketing and branding and more of an emphasis on the Chamber's Visitor Industry.

eral elected county officials lodged complaints against Ms. Wayland. They ranged from alleged lack of timely and routine audits to lapses in communications.

Ms. Wayland had opted not gainsay or rebut their allegations but did note: "The auditor's position isn't about popularity, and it's not supposed to be about politics."

On Friday, Ms. Wayland said "I can stand very tall on my accomplishments." Ms. Wayland said she "would hope that" Ms. Schumacher's appointment "will not be detrimental to her career.

"She is a fellow CPA. Certainly, I do wish her success. And I feel very strong about the role that this office plays in county government," Ms. Wayland said. "I hope that she can somehow continue on with some of the things that we have done to try to improve financial controls and reporting throughout the county."

The Midland County Auditor's Offices are on the 12th floor of the historic Petroleum Building just north of the Midland County Courthouse.

VISIT: Midland included in three-day tour

"I have contacted more than 50 people who will be present at this press conference David Dewhurst is going to give," Brannon added. "Everybody is thrilled to death to be contacted."

Former Texas Supreme Court Justice Greg Abbott and Sen. David Sable of Waco, both Republicans, announced their candidacy on Wednesday after acting Lieutenant Gov. Bill Ratliff dropped out of the race.

Former Texas Comptroller John Sharp announced Thursday he will run in the 2002 lieutenant governor's race, becoming the first Democrat and the third person this week to announce his candidacy.

As the presiding officer in the Senate, in a state with a weak governor, the lieutenant governor arguably is the most powerful post in Texas government with the authority to control the flow of legislation and name committee members.

According to Brannon, Dewhurst is the man for Midland.

"David Dewhurst has always been fond of Midland and Midland people," Brannon said. "He comes every November to install our Republican women officers. Every time we invite him, he is here and we are thrilled to have him."

identification.

The report gave this account: After receiving tips that one of the women was Jenna Bush, the restaurant manager was asked to double-check the IDs and subsequently told Jenna she would not be served. The waitress brought alcohol to Barbara Bush, Day-Wickham and an unidentified man with them.

When other customers later told the manager of the bar that the women were Jenna and Barbara Bush, the manager called 911, according to the police report.

By the time the first officer was dispatched at 10:34 p.m., "the tequila shots were all gone and . . . each of the three margaritas were at least partially consumed," the waitress told police, according to the report.

As the twins started to leave the bar, police stopped them and asked Jenna Bush for the identification she used when she attempted to order her drink. She handed it over and started crying, the report said.

After conferring with their supervisor who was off-duty, police on the scene decided not to immediately issue tickets. Two days later, the Bush sisters and Day-Wickham met police at their lawyers' office, where they signed the citations.

The Austin Police Department refused to confirm or deny the story and would not turn over the police report because the investigation is ongoing, said spokeswoman Toni Chovanetz.

NATION IN BRIEF

■ Extension on Reagan papers

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration has delayed for a second time the release of 68,000 pages of presidential records from the 1980s that offer a glimpse into who and what influenced policy in the Reagan White House.

The previously restricted papers were slated for public release in January — 12 years after Reagan left office. But the White House counsel's office delayed the release until June 21 so Justice Department lawyers could review the papers. Now, the White House has told the National Archives that it needs more time.

"The review is ongoing," White House spokeswoman Anne Womack said Friday. "There's thousands and thousands of documents and in order to be thorough and accurate, we have requested an extension until Aug. 31."

The Reagan records, kept at the Ronald Reagan Presidential Library in Simi Valley, Calif., are the first slated for release under a presidential records law passed in 1978, following the Watergate scandal.

■ Comair returns to negotiations

WASHINGTON — Comair and its striking pilots agreed Friday to return to the bargaining table in hopes of resolving a 2-month-old strike that has shut down the nation's second-largest regional airline.

The agreement to resume negotiations was announced after airline officials and leaders of Comair's Air Line Pilots Association met with Transportation Secretary Norman Mineta. Union officials were in Mineta's office for 3 1/2 hours, and Comair executives joined an hour into the meeting.

Negotiations will resume Tuesday, with federal mediators, and both sides agreed to try to reach an accord within 72 hours.

"The parties have given me their firm assurance that they will leave no stone unturned to reach an equitable agreement," Mineta said.

Union officials would not comment as they left the meeting. Comair executives also would not discuss the meeting.

Comair President Randy Rademacher said, "I am not going to talk about any of this."

■ Bush to nominate banker to Fed

WASHINGTON — President Bush will nominate Susan Bies, a top official with a Tennessee bank, as a member of the Federal Reserve Board, the White House announced Friday.

If confirmed by the Senate, Bies, 54, would be the only woman on the seven-member board of governors and the only Fed member with direct experience in commercial banking.

Since 1980, Bies has worked for Memphis-headquartered First Tennessee National Corp., a large regional bank holding company with 200 branches in Tennessee, Mississippi and Arkansas. She currently serves the bank as executive vice president in charge of risk management.

Bies, who holds a doctorate in economics from Northwestern University, worked as bank economist at the Fed's St. Louis regional bank from 1970 to 1972. She also taught economics at Rhodes College in Memphis and Wayne State University in Detroit before joining First Tennessee.

Private economists viewed the choice of Bies as a mainstream selection that gave no hint that the Bush administration planned to push monetary policy in any particular direction.

While the normal term for a Fed board member is 14 years, Bush will have the chance to fill five of the seven positions in the first year of his presidency.

Gov. Bush says he will run for re-election

By Ken Thomas
Associated Press

MIAMI — Gov. Jeb Bush said Friday he will run for re-election in 2002, setting up what could be the most closely watched gubernatorial contest of the season — especially if Janet Reno gets into the race.

"I believe that we have unfinished business," President Bush's younger brother said.

He was widely expected to seek a second term.

Several Democrats are considering seeking the nomination to challenge the 48-year-old governor, who faced criticism last year because of the topsy-turvy Florida ballot dispute that vaulted his brother into the White House. Some Democrats accused the governor of working behind the scenes to install his brother.

The list of potential Democratic challengers includes Reno, the former attorney general and Miami native; Pete Peterson, ambassador to Vietnam; and Bill McBride, an attorney with Florida's biggest law firm.

"You've got a great field of candidates who have a tremendous amount of credibility. They wouldn't be in these waters if they didn't smell blood," said state Democratic Party chairman Bob Poe.

Bush was elected overwhelmingly in 1998. He is trying to become Florida's first Republican governor since Reconstruction to win a second term.

"It's the No. 1 race nationally, even more so than the governorships of New York and California," said Larry Sabato, a University of Virginia political scientist. "Everybody is watching because everybody knows who he is. Everybody has a searing recollection of the Florida recount in 2000."

Bush, speaking to reporters after visiting an elementary school, said the 2000 presidential election would have no bearing on his campaign. Two protesters held signs nearby and yelled, "Don't steal this election!"

"I'm going to stay focused on Florida," Bush said.

A poll taken by The Miami Herald in late May, after Reno said she was considering a bid for governor, found Bush ahead by 49 percent to 43 percent. The telephone poll of 600 likely voters had a margin of error of plus or minus 4 percentage points.

Reno, who lives in Miami, has kept supporters guessing as she ponders a race for governor. Reached in Albuquerque, N.M., on Friday, Reno declined comment on Bush's announcement. She has said she will make her decision shortly.

President Bush dropped a hint on his brother's plans earlier in the week during a trip to Florida. At an event in Tampa, the president referred to Jeb Bush as the "current governor and the future governor."

Later in Tallahassee, the president said his brother urged him to seek re-election. "He did. He's been doing that for a while though," he said. "Everybody — my wife — everybody's been encouraging me to run."

Gov. Bush said he would work to protect the environment, provide social services "in a compassionate way," give tax relief to small businesses and continue an overhaul of the school system. Under Bush, Florida has created a program under which students at the state's worst schools are issued vouchers to attend private school at taxpayer expense.

"There's a window of opportunity in our state to really change the things that need to be changed," Bush said.

Last month, the governor condemned Internet rumors that he had an extramarital affair with an agency head, calling the gossip an "outright lie."

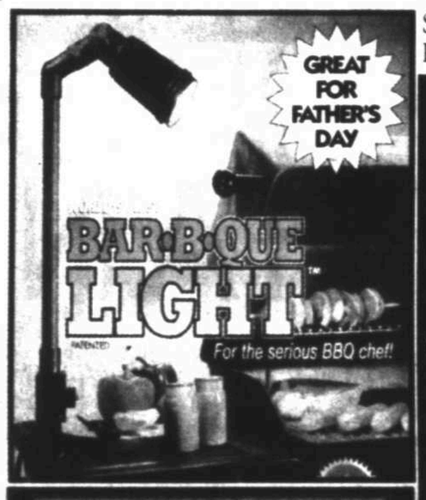

On Friday, he said of his decision to seek re-election: "After the legislative session I had a chance to spend some time with my family and with my wife, who has been completely supportive of this."

Allergies may force peanut butter prohibition

RYE BROOK, N.Y. (AP) — The stickiest problem at Ridge Street Elementary School this year wasn't discipline in the classroom. It was peanut butter in the lunchroom.

In a situation repeated in schools across the nation, families debated the right to safeguard a profoundly allergic child versus the right to eat a sandwich made with the all-American spread.

"We were obligated, legally and ethically, to be responsive to this child's needs," Principal Roberta Kirshbaum said. "I would say 95 percent of our population became educated and supportive and the other 5 percent found it just didn't fit with them."

The discussion at Ridge Street started when a 5-year-old girl, so allergic she could die if she licked peanut butter from a fingertip, entered kindergarten. Her parents alerted school officials in advance.

"I approached them with my daughter's medical history, and knowing what needed to be done to make her safe," said the mother, who asked not to be identified to protect her daughter's privacy. The girl couldn't come into contact with peanut butter or anything with peanut oil.

So the school stopped selling peanut butter sandwiches and other peanut products, set up a "peanut-free table" covered with medical-exam paper in the lunchroom, and urged parents not to pack peanut-based lunches and snacks. If kindergartners came in with peanut lunches, they were sent to a separate room to eat.

Several parents objected, saying that their kids were being pressured into giving up peanut butter entirely and that they hadn't had time to prepare.

Caryn Furst said her daughter has a metabolic disorder, needs protein at every meal and would eat only peanut butter and jelly sandwiches.

"She had to have it," Furst said. "A lot of parents are trying to be sensitive, but if you've got a child who wants peanut butter — that's it."

Ultimately, all sides came to terms. "We did a lot of education," Kirshbaum said, "and we tried to compromise to the extent that nobody got hurt."

Three million Americans are allergic to peanuts and tree nuts, and about 75 die each year from reactions that lead to anaphylactic shock. Thousands of kids now carry EpiPens — emergency doses of epinephrine in a spring-loaded injector — or store them with the school nurse.

The importance of protecting allergic children was vividly demonstrated last month in Spokane, Wash., when a 9-year-old boy, known to be allergic, died after being given a peanut butter cookie during a field trip.

Some other foods can kill, but nuts seem to be a prime danger. And it is peanut butter, long a favorite with kids and the adults who pack their lunches, that has put schools in the middle.

"It's the all-American sandwich," said Carla Blaha of Ossining, who founded a support group for parents after her son was diagnosed. "You tell people, 'This can kill my son' and still it doesn't click that actually something like peanut butter can kill someone."

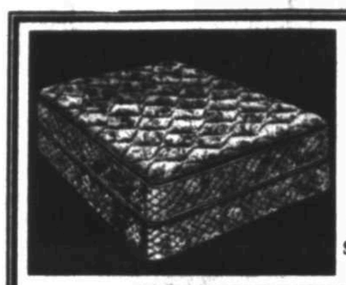

Some schools have declared themselves "peanut-free," though most are coming up with a more moderate policy.

Schools that haven't had a dangerously allergic pupil can expect one soon.

"I think every school at some time will be affected," said Joseph Rowe, principal of Stedwick Elementary School in Gaithersburg, Md., who was confronted two years ago with a severely allergic first-grader.

Peanut allergies among schoolchildren were "barely on the radar" a decade ago, said Dr. Robert Goldman, a New York allergist and immunologist who specializes in pediatric cases.

"Now I'm seeing a tremendous number of cases," he said. "It seems like the incidence is really increasing. As to why, I don't think anyone in the world could tell you for sure."

Peace pact threatened in Northern Ireland vote

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Protestant and Catholic hard-liners scored unprecedented gains Friday in Northern Ireland's elections to the British Parliament, reflecting shifts in power that could threaten the province's 1998 peace accord.

A steep Protestant swing toward the uncompromising Democratic Unionist Party in Thursday's vote spelled trouble for efforts to keep a year-old Catholic-Protestant government running.

The power-sharing coalition joins the territory's four biggest parties, two Irish Catholic and two Protestant. The contest for Northern Ireland's 18 seats in Parliament demonstrated the tussle for dominance within each of the camps.

David Trimble's Ulster Unionist party was trying to fend off the Democratic Unionists, who oppose Trimble's compromise policies.

The Democratic Unionists won a record five seats and came close to winning others. Their leader, the Rev. Ian Paisley, vowed to force an end to a power-sharing experiment that includes the Sinn Fein party, which is allied with the Irish Republican Army.

His party cut deep into the traditional lead of the major Protestant party, the Ulster Unionists.

"David Trimble has destroyed this country with his drip-feed of concessions to the IRA," Paisley declared in his own North Antrim constituency.

Sinn Fein scored its own historic gains among the province's Catholic community. It won four seats, double its previous record.

A loss by Jim Cooper left Ulster Unionists with six seats, down from 10. Trimble, who has repeatedly survived threats to his leadership as he steered Protestants through a series of compromises with Sinn Fein, held his own parliamentary seat, but suffered sustained verbal abuse from a hostile Protestant mob at the counting center.

"We are not quitters," Trimble shouted above a din of heckling. "We will keep at this job until it is done."

In another development, Sinn Fein outpolled for the first time the province's traditional No. 1 Catholic party, the moderate Social Democratic and Labor Party, which retained its three seats. Sinn Fein received 21.7 percent of votes, the SDLP 21 percent.

Ulster Unionists did wrest back two seats previously held by Protestant hard-liners. But, emphasizing the split within his party ranks, one of Trimble's candidates spent his victory speech denouncing parts of the 1998 accord.

Elsewhere, Democratic Unionists ascended to previously unseen levels and jubilantly predicted Trimble's political demise.

One Ulster Unionist fared exceptionally well: hard-liner Jeffrey Donaldson, long considered Trimble's most likely successor as Ulster Unionist leader. He saw his vote rise slightly to nearly 26,000 in Lagan Valley.

Sinn Fein leader Gerry Adams registered a crushing 20,000-vote majority in his West Belfast constituency. The party's other incumbent, former IRA commander Martin McGuinness, scored another easy victory in his Mid-Ulster district.

Sinn Fein's surging vote demoralized the Social Democratic and Labor Party, which has traditionally won most Catholic votes with a trenchant anti-IRA stand.

The changing electoral tide proved most striking in West Tyrone, a hotly contested rural district along Northern Ireland's border with the Republic of Ireland. There Sinn Fein vice president Pat Doherty beat the SDLP's Brid Rodgers by nearly 6,000 votes.

SDLP leader John Hume, who shared the 1998 Nobel Peace Prize with Trimble, easily defended his seat in Northern Ireland's second-largest city, Londonderry.

Hume's deputy Seamus Mallon, who also holds the No. 2 post in the Northern Ireland administration, beat Sinn Fein by just 3,000 votes.

Elected Sinn Fein members planned to continue to boycott debates and votes in Parliament in London because they would be required to give an oath of allegiance to Queen Elizabeth II.

School children weep as they sit on the ground after fleeing from their classrooms at Ikeda Elementary School where a knife-wielding attacker killed eight children earlier in Ikeda, western Japan, Frida. The man walked into the school and wordlessly began slashing at students, making his way through four classrooms, killing eight children and injuring 15 others before teachers managed to grab him and take his knife away.

Knife-wielding attacker kills eight at Japanese elementary school

By Kenji Hall
Associated Press

IKEDA, Japan — In 15 minutes of horror, a man brandishing a kitchen knife walked into an elementary school Friday and wordlessly began slashing at students, killing eight young children.

Takuma

The attack, during which the man made his way through four classrooms before being subdued by a teacher and a vice principal, was the worst mass killing in Japan since a deadly nerve gas attack on Tokyo's subways six years ago.

Fifteen people — 13 children and two teachers — were wounded, and eight remained in serious condition Saturday. The suspect, a 37-year-old unemployed man with what police said was a history of mental problems, was taken into custody at the scene.

An unidentified schoolgirl, talking to Japanese reporters, said that during the attack one student somehow managed to get onto the school's public address system.

"There was a shriek," the girl said. "Then I heard a cry for help."

A group of bloodied children fled to a grocery store across the street in the mostly residential suburb of Ikeda, outside Japan's second-largest city of Osaka, 255 miles west of Tokyo.

"I saw one of them, a boy, with blood all over his body," cashier Ikiyo Iriye said. "He had been stabbed in the back."

The dead children — seven girls and one boy — were first and second grader, ranging in age from 6 to 8.

On Saturday, National broadcaster NHK television reported that it appeared from the location of stab wounds to the back that some of the children were chased down as they fled and that interrogation would focus on the motive for the attack.

An Osaka prefectural (state) police spokesman could not confirm the contents of the report. However, police did say they were intensifying their investigation.

Japan has long enjoyed a crime rate much lower than that of other developed nations, but that is changing. The Japanese are asking themselves why, and wondering what can be done about it. Violent crime is on the rise, and strict gun laws mean most of the attacks are committed with knives.

Friday's slashing was the deadliest mass assault in Japan since a doomsday cult released sarin gas on the Tokyo subways in 1995, killing 12 people and sickening thousands.

The attack came as children were anticipating a day off Saturday for the annual local iris festival. The festival was canceled and classes were suspended indefinitely.

Police identified the attacker as Mamoru Takuma and said he used a kitchen knife with a six-inch blade. After his arrest, he was taken to a hospital with what were reportedly self-inflicted wounds, then turned over to police, a blue hood hiding his head, blood splattered across his legs.

Early results confirm victory for Iran's reformist president

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Reformist President Mohammad Khatami headed for an election landslide Saturday, showing powerful support for his drive to bring more freedoms to the Islamic nation, according to early voting results.

Final results in Friday's balloting from at least six areas and one province showed Khatami with vote tallies ranging from 75 percent and 95 percent, according to the government-run Islamic Republic News Agency.

The widely expected result gives Khatami a mandate to push forward with his challenge to the controls of Iran's conservative clerics and their tight grip on power.

The results reported by IRNA came from the final count in towns and cities in southeastern and northeastern Iran. The agency also said Khatami received between 93 percent and 88 percent of the vote from Iranians voting abroad.

Illam Province in western Iran gave Khatami 80 percent of the vote, according to officials at the Interior Ministry who spoke on condition of anonymity.

They added Qasr-e-Shirin, a town on the Iraqi border, went nearly 90 percent for Khatami.

Khatami faced nine challengers who ranged from hard-liners to those seeking to fight corruption and improve the economy.

In 1997, Khatami received nearly 70 percent of the vote over a conservative opponent.

Ahmad Tavakoli was a distant second — with tallies ranging from 2 percent to 18 percent in the six areas and one province, according to the IRNA early figures. Tavakoli, an economist, had campaigned on pledges to improve the economy.

Interior Ministry sources predicted that turnout from Friday's election would surpass 70 percent — or 30 million of the 42.1 million Iranians who have reached the voting age of 16.

Now, the real test begins for Khatami.

Two potent forces — Khatami's popular movement and the nation's Islamic overseers — offer visions that seem difficult to reconcile and strike at the heart of how the country should be managed.

Khatami sees an "Islamic democracy" with room for some Western-inspired rights, fewer social restrictions and better contacts with the West. Conservatives have reacted harshly against changes they fear could erode their enormous influence over nearly every aspect of life.

After voting on Friday, Khatami said his goal is to merge "independence, freedom and progress" with Iran's "Islamic identity."

But huge questions hang over an expected second, and final, four-year term for Khatami. Among them — how far and fast can he integrate concepts of openness in a nation built upon the uncompromising values of an Islamic revolution 22 years ago?

For reformists, the backdrop of the election was deeply symbolic and worrisome. Prominent activists and journalists languish in jail and dozens of publications remain banned.

"It's all about power and where it comes from — clerics or the people," said a political analyst, Mohammad Hadi Semati.

From sweltering Tehran neighborhoods to isolated mountain hamlets, more than 45,000 polling stations were set up. Helicopters carried ballot boxes to the most remote villages. Guards were given voting material for jailed dissidents and other prisoners, the Interior Ministry said.

Voting tents were erected in desert outposts or in cemeteries for those taking part in the Friday ritual of visiting family graves.

The most senior dissident cleric, Grand Ayatollah Hussein Ali Montazeri, voted from his house arrest quarters in the holy city of Qom, the nation's center of Islamic study.

"Democracy and freedom have not been implemented," Montazeri wrote in a communique sent to The Associated Press.

At polling stations, the system was the same around the country. Men and women waited in separate lines to slip paper ballots into white boxes after writing the name of Khatami or one of his nine challengers.

Also at stake were 16 parliament seats and two seats on the panel that elects the supreme leader.

Voting was extended three times to handle the crowds. Polls closed at midnight in Tehran — five hours past the scheduled closing — and at 11 p.m. (2:30 p.m. EDT) in the rest of the country.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said the large turnout "seems to indicate that there's a great desire for freedom, for openness, for the rule of law, for the better lives for the Iranian people and their children."

In Iran, the president holds limited powers. The final say on all state matters rests with Ayatollah Ali Khamenei and his handpicked group of theocrats, whose control extends to institutions such as the judiciary and security forces.

Macedonian prime minister backs off war plans but vows to crush rebels

KUMANOVO, Macedonia (AP) — Macedonia's prime minister backed off Friday on plans to declare a state of war, but vowed to crush the ethnic Albanian rebels in the north.

Fighting moved to within three miles north of the capital, Skopje, when mortars hit the majority Slav village of Cresevo. No one was injured in the attack, which came from rebel positions, local A1 Television reported.

Prime Minister Ljubco Georgievski bowed to pressure from international officials, who feared a declaration of war would deepen the crisis by radicalizing the ethnic Albanian minority. Still, he said the rebels must be quashed.

"Macedonia must mercilessly confront the terrorists. Any delay would only mean deepening and a spreading of fighting," Georgievski said on state television. "Without destroying them first, it is not possible to start a political dialogue" with ethnic Albanian representatives.

His comments came before European Union security chief Javier Solana arrived to press anew for a negotiated solution to the fighting.

Macedonia's army moved to quash resistance in the rebel-held villages, 20 miles northeast of Skopje, targeting the militants with heavy artillery.

Fighting has been going on since February, when militants from the ethnic Albanian community took up arms, saying they were battling for more rights. The government says they are terrorists bent on carving out an ethnic Albanian mini-state united to Kosovo, the ethnic-Abanian-dominated region of Yugoslavia.

Scores of civilians evacuated Aracinovo, an ethnic Albanian-populated suburb near Skopje, apparently anticipating the spread of fighting. Police say militants were spotted in the village.

About 1,500 people from the village crossed the border into Kosovo, said Astrid van Genderen Stort, a spokeswoman for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees.

"Few people are left in Aracinovo," said Kenan Qaili, 42, one of the refugees. "More are coming this way."

While tensions rose, Macedonia's president, Boris Trajkovski, told parliament that the military defeat of the rebels was critical before a lasting peace could be reached.

"When a country faces an existential threat, passions are understandable but political leaders must be aware of their huge, historic responsibility," Trajkovski said. "The entire Republic of Macedonia is at stake."

He also made passing reference to a peace plan, which sources say envisages an amnesty for fighters that have not committed serious crimes, the deployment of international monitors and an intensified political dialogue.

Solana praised the speech after emerging from meetings with Slav leaders late Friday, and said he supported it totally — including the military aspects of the president's remarks.

An inmate looks through a fence at a "strict regime" prison colony in the Russian village of Udarniy, Tuesday. Although the inmates are not confined to cells as in many Western prisons, they say tedium and loneliness fill their days.

Foreigners endure tedium, poor food in Russian prisons

LEPLEI, Russia (AP) — After the last gate slams shut behind a new arrival at the foreigners' prison colony, the first sight likely to catch his eye is a sign reading, "We're waiting for you."

This is supposed to be comforting — the sign also shows a smiling woman and a baby waving. But the initial baleful interpretation is the one that rings true.

The colony, where John Tobin, an American Fulbright scholar recently convicted on drug charges, is to serve a year, puts inmates through a grueling stretch of dull days in shabby buildings, poor food, malodorous toilets, bone-wracking winters and mosquito-clouded summers.

A rare visit to the Leplei prison colony, in a heavily forested region 450 miles east of Moscow, gave a glimpse into the daily routine of its approximately 400 inmates, housed in dormitories line with narrow beds.

They arise at 7 a.m. and make their beds according to strict guidelines posted on the walls. They dress in coarse prison garb and head across to a rundown refectory, its walls painted with pictures of foods the inmates are unlikely to see during their stay.

What they're almost sure to see, at any meal, is kasha — buckwheat cooked mush. Sometimes it's the only dish, sometimes it comes with bread and soup and occasionally with something else.

"There's very few vegetables," said 43-year-old Hagop Yapudzhian, an Armenian-born U.S. citizen serving a sentence for breaking and entering. "I feel very much weaker since coming here.

After eating, some inmates go to work at sewing machines putting together army uniforms or insulated coats. An eight-hour day earns them about 25 cents.

Those who don't work have some freedom to wander the grounds — about 300 paces long in one direction, 200 in the other — which are surrounded by a chain-link fence, barbed wire and a tall white wooden fence with slats sharpened to a point.

The freedom of movement is a point corrections officials repeatedly emphasize.

"It's a colony, not a jail," colony system spokesman Col. Gennady Votrin said proudly, reflecting the viewpoint of the prison administration that life at Leplei — formally called ZhKh-385/22 — is a sort of miniature version of life in the village on the other side of the wall.

There are some similarities between the two — lassitude and tedium pervade the colony and the village, and residents of both flick themselves endlessly with whisks to drive swirling clouds of mosquitos away from their faces.

"We sit and think, we kill time," said inmate Imad Khalifa, a Jordanian serving an eight-year sentence for heroin dealing.

Unlike prisons with their iron clangor and menacing shouts, the Leplei colony is almost eerily quiet — at least when reporters are around. The inmates touch their hats when officials walk by and stand with hands behind their backs when talking to them.

Russian defense chief says missile threat to U.S. not real

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The heart of President Bush's case for building a missile defense — that the United States is threatened by long-range missiles — is "entirely hypothetical," Russia's defense chief said Friday. There are plenty of other threats, he said.

The comments by Defense Minister Sergei Ivanov indicated that while Moscow is willing to discuss the issue, it remains opposed to lifting legal restraints on defenses against long-range attack.

Missile defense is expected to be one of the main focuses of Bush's trip to Europe next week, including a meeting June 13 in Brussels of presidents and prime ministers from all 19 NATO countries as well as Bush's first face-to-face meeting with Russian President Vladimir Putin on June 16.

In Iowa on Friday, Bush said he wants to persuade Russia as well as missile defense critics in Congress that "it's time to think differently about defense."

"Russia is no longer our enemy, and therefore we shouldn't be locked into a Cold War mentality that says we keep the peace by blowing each other up. In my attitude, that's old, that's tired, that's stale.

"Our United States and our allies ought to develop the capacity to address the true threats of the 21st century. The true threats are biological and informational warfare. The true threats are the fact that some rogue nations who can't stand America, our allies or our freedoms or our successes will try to point a missile at us, and we must have the capacity to shoot that missile down."

Laying groundwork for the Bush-Putin session, Ivanov and Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld met Friday at NATO headquarters for 1 1/2 hours. They agreed both their countries face serious new threats, but they disagreed on how best to defend against them.

"How to parry these threats or how to approach them in the future ... we don't have absolutely identical views," Ivanov said through an interpreter. "There is nothing terrible, nothing tragic, about that."

In remarks to reporters before the meeting, Ivanov was more blunt. He said religious extremism, terrorism and drug trafficking are the chief threats of today, while adding that in the longer term Russia would take "very, very seriously" the threat of medium-range ballistic missiles from "unstable regimes" — an apparent reference to countries like North Korea or Iraq.

As for the threat of attack by intercontinental ballistic missiles — those capable of reaching U.S. territory — "that is nowadays an entirely hypothetical problem," Ivanov said. "There is no chance of it coming back onto the agenda for a long while."

In a view shared by some NATO countries, Russia argues that missile defenses could trigger a new arms race. Russia also fears that a limited defensive system as envisioned by Bush could be expanded later to a point where it might neutralize or undercut the deterrent effect of Russia's nuclear arsenal.

In Washington on Friday, Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., said he cannot see the logic of going forward with missile defense before proving it works.

"We're not opposed to research, but to commit that level of revenue to a concept that may or may not prove to be practical or even doable is something that I'm mystified by," Daschle said.

The Bush administration is considering a system that might be rushed into rudimentary operation as early as 2004, possibly relying on weapons aboard ships or planes as well as on land.

Asked in Brussels whether Rumsfeld had made progress toward persuading Russia to amend or abandon the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty, which expressly forbids an anti-missile system designed to defend the whole United States, Ivanov said, "Maybe Secretary Rumsfeld will correct me, but I did not get the impression that he was trying to convince me to tear up the 1972 ABM treaty."

In response, Rumsfeld said his goal was to put in place a means of creating a "framework that will make sense for the 21st century." He was not more specific, but he and Bush have said before that they want to establish a new, broader basis for U.S.-Russian relations, including agreement to permit missile defenses and make further cuts in offensive nuclear arms.

WORLD IN BRIEF

■ Four elephants electrocuted

IDUKKI, India — Electricity department officials surveying power lines in southern India said Friday that four wild elephants — including one baby — were electrocuted.

The elephants' bodies were found Thursday in the Chorakakki forest in Kerala state's Idukki district.

Officials with the Kerala State Electricity Board said the elephants, three females and a baby, may have died after touching a low power line.

The bodies of two of the elephants and the baby were lying together in one place, an official said on condition of anonymity. The third adult was lying a few paces away. Bushes and plants in the area were charred.

Four elephants were electrocuted in 1997 in the same forest area.

■ Royal massacre probe opens

KATMANDU, Nepal — Two investigations began Friday in Nepal's royal massacre case: the official probe into who killed the king, queen and their relatives, and a military inquiry against an eyewitness who went public without permission.

Public discontent was evident, with some angry, bewildered Nepalese staging demonstrations one week after the murders of King Birendra, Queen Aiswarya and most of the royal family.

A military doctor who survived the shooting spree said Crown Prince Dipendra carried out the massacre and then fatally shot himself, but investigators said they will have to weigh all evidence before identifying a killer.

They began the three-day investigation into the slayings by looking at fingerprints and spent bullets from the scene of the shooting.

A communist leader told 4,000 people at a rally in the suburbs of Katmandu that Dipendra was not responsible for the killings and that a "huge conspiracy" was behind the massacre.

■ Florida man gets 20 years

CHRISTIANSTED, U.S. Virgin Islands — A Florida man has been sentenced to 20 years in prison for killing his live-in girlfriend and burying her body in the couple's backyard.

Judge Maria Cabret on Thursday sentenced Marvin Dominguez, 26, in a U.S. Virgin Islands Territorial Court for the 1999 murder of 31-year-old Ann Patricia Haumacher of Spring Lake Heights, N.J.

Richard Daley, who represented Dominguez at the sentencing hearing, pleaded for leniency, arguing Haumacher's death occurred during an argument and was not premeditated.

Dominguez pleaded guilty to second-degree murder in February.

Haumacher's partially decomposed body was exhumed from a shallow grave in the couple's backyard in Frederiksted on the island of St. Croix. Dominguez said he fatally hit Haumacher during an argument and stuffed her body in a garbage bag before burying her.

■ Irish voters ban death penalty

DUBLIN, Ireland — Irish voters approved a constitutional ban on the death penalty by a wide margin but with a low turnout, official results showed Friday.

In Thursday's referendum, 62.08 percent of voters backed adding the ban to the republic's 64-year-old constitution, while 37.92 percent were opposed.

Just under one million votes were cast, out of 2.86 million eligible voters.

The widely expected decision was backed by the major political parties and by church leaders in this predominantly Roman Catholic country.

The death penalty is an emotive issue in Ireland, where the names of 15 nationalist leaders executed by the British in 1916 adorn hundreds of streets, schools and buildings.

Nobody has been executed by the Irish state since 1954, and capital punishment was outlawed in 1990. But the constitution still contains four outdated references to the death penalty.

Governors to study drug trafficking as health issue

By Julie Watson
Associated Press

TAMPICO, Mexico — U.S. and Mexican border governors agreed Friday to study drug trafficking as a health issue and not just a crime, a step hailed by the New Mexico governor who favors legalizing marijuana and ending the war on drugs.

On the last day of the 19th annual Border Governors Conference in the Gulf of Mexico port of Tampico, officials announced they would form a commission of scholars from the 10 U.S. and Mexican states along the border to study the idea of addressing drug smuggling from a public health perspective. Mexican governors proposed the idea, which was praised by New Mexico Gov. Gary E. Johnson.

The conference includes California, Arizona, New Mexico and Texas in the United States and Baja California, Chihuahua, Coahuila, Nuevo Leon, Sonora and Tamaulipas in Mexico. California Gov. Gray Davis dropped out at the last moment to deal with his state's energy crisis.

Johnson, a two-term Republican, has become one of the United States' leading proponents of the legalization of drugs including marijuana, cocaine and heroin. A former drug user himself, he believes drug use is a health problem, not a crime, and is pushing for state legislation to that effect.

He believes ending the prohibition on drugs would reduce violence, corruption and many other problems in the border region.

"I couldn't be more excited about what transpired here," Johnson said Friday of the joint commission. "I happen to believe that this is the reason why we have a militarized border and this whole concept or belief that everyone who comes across the border is a drug trafficker — that's the perception in the United States."

But while Mexican governors agreed to study the issue, Johnson acknowledged that they are far from agreeing to push for drugs to be legalized in their states. Nuevo Leon Gov. Fernando Canales and Baja California Gov. Alejandro Gonzalez said the world is not ready to legalize drugs.

New Mexico Gov. Gary E. Johnson, a two-term Republican, has become one of the United States' leading proponents of the legalization of drugs including marijuana, cocaine and heroin.

"I think the consensus was to give more attention to the health problems caused by drug trafficking," Gonzalez said. "But to be able to consider legalizing some of these drugs, such as marijuana, one country or one region can't do it when it is a problem of many countries."

Chihuahua Gov. Patricio Martinez said he would support legalization of certain drugs to dilute the power of criminal groups that benefit from the black market.

"This should be studied, analyzed and looked at to see what the people want and what are the effects from a different perspective that considers not only their prohibition but also in given time their approval for medicinal purposes or for rehabilitation or for other reasons," Martinez said. "We need to study all aspects of drug use, especially marijuana."

In other matters, governors from both countries sought to spur growth of the huge cross-border economy and to solve such problems as immigration, water rights, energy needs and pollution.

The May 23 deaths of 14 immigrants abandoned in the Arizona desert left governments on both sides grappling with how to make such illegal border crossings safer without promoting them, but no concrete solutions were reached in this area.

Jose Gonzales sits on a table as floodwaters continue to rise around him Thursday in south Houston. Gonzales, who recently underwent surgery, was waiting to be rescued. The remnants of what was Tropical Storm Allison continued to deluge already saturated parts of the Houston.

Allison remnants continue to douse Texas, Louisiana

HOUSTON (AP) — Lingering leftovers of Tropical Storm Allison continued to soak waterlogged Texas and Louisiana as the system practically spun in place Friday.

Brazoria and Fort Bend counties were under flash flood warnings again Friday night as storms continued to dump rain in the Houston area, southwest of the city and along Interstate 10.

The National Weather Service's Houston-Galveston office said wind-driven rain pummeled Sugar Land and Pearland to Needville and West Columbia, and likely would leave 2 to 3 inches of rain by late Friday.

The weather service said creeks, bayous and feeder roads could flood quickly in the storms.

"We're so saturated right now, the only place to go is up," said Frank Gutierrez, operations manager for the Harris County Office of Emergency Management.

Rain bands from the low-pressure center that once was the eye of Allison drenched a line from Brazoria County up through East Texas early Friday, dumping 3 to 7 inches in some areas as it moved into Louisiana and Mississippi.

Intense storm clusters began to reform in Texas Friday afternoon, with one dousing parts of Montgomery and Walker counties with more than six inches of rain, with further showers expected.

Meanwhile, the center of the storm drift toward the southwest around Brenham, socking parts of Central Texas with 1 to 2 inches of rain.

The Austin and San Antonio areas were expected to get wet over the weekend, and all of southeast Texas remained under a flash flood watch because of the weather system that has plagued the region since Tuesday.

According to the Southwestern Insurance Information Service, private insurers were bracing to pay more than $65 million in damage claims across southeast Texas. The figure did not count damage to hundreds of flooded homes, which must be covered by separate federal flood insurance.

Police: Man who killed 3-month-old wanted paternity test

By Betsy Blaney
Associated Press

LUBBOCK — Samuel Torres Sr., the man police say shot and killed a 3-month-old boy and critically wounded his daughter and stepdaughter, wanted a paternity test to determine who fathered the infant, court records show.

The infant, Samuel Torres Jr., was shot twice in the head with a medium-caliber weapon Thursday night, police said. He was pronounced dead at Covenant Children's Hospital.

Anaisabel Torres, 10, and Samantha Perez, 11, remained in critical condition Friday at Covenant and University Medical Center, respectively, police and a hospital spokeswoman said.

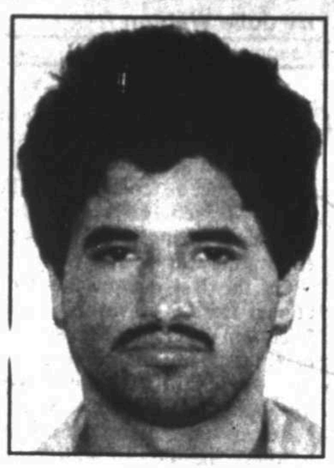

A Lubbock County judge had told the infant's mother, Maria Trujillo, on May 31 that she had 30 days to have the paternity test performed, court records show.

It was unclear Friday if the test was done but Trujillo told investigators Thursday evening that Stanley Perez Jr., her 33-year-old boyfriend and former common-law husband, was the child's father, according to police reports.

Torres, 33, took his own life Thursday after shooting the three children inside the family's home.

Torres had been harassing Trujillo for some time, the 29-year-old mother told police. When Trujillo filed for divorce May 1, she sought and obtained a restraining order against Torres, court records show. Trujillo told police Thursday that she had been staying with Perez, who is also Samantha's father, according to a police report.

Perez and Trujillo had a common law marriage in the late 1980s, according to the online edition of the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal.

Torres

Anaisabel Torres

A judge ordered the paternity test during discussions about Torres' child support. The judge set the payment at $155 a month for Anaisabel.

Torres worked at Commercial Metals, a scrap metal recycling company just outside Lubbock, where, according to court records, he made minimum wage.

"He was a good and trusted employee," said Dennis McCollum, Torres' supervisor.

Police said the shooting occurred a short time after Torres hid in Trujillo's van while she was visiting Perez at his apartment, about six blocks from her home. Torres jumped from the rear of the van and surprised Trujillo as she began driving away.

The two struggled and Trujillo escaped from the van while it was moving. She and Perez called police and were telling an officer about the abduction when a call came over his police radio that shots had been fired at a nearby residence.

Trujillo told the officer the address matched her home. About that time, Anaisabel, bleeding from two gunshot wounds, called Trujillo on her cell phone after running to a neighbor's house with the family's phone.

She told her mother that Torres had shot all three children and then himself. Anaisabel also called 911, said the neighbor, who asked not to be identified.

After lobbing in a percussion grenade, police made their way into the home, where they found Torres, the baby and Samantha on the floor of the living room. All had been shot in the head and the gun lay near Torres' body, police said.

Friday, numerous dried blood splatters marked Anaisabel's path to the neighbor's house.

The neighbor said Anaisabel was hysterical and bleeding from gunshot wounds to the back of her shoulder and just behind one of her ears when she came inside.

From the death house, eyes reveal the emotion

EDITOR'S NOTE — Houston correspondent Mike Graczyk, who has been covering executions for The Associated Press since 1983, has now witnessed more than 200 by lethal injection. Here he describes what Timothy McVeigh will be facing Monday.

By Michael Graczyk
Associated Press

HUNTSVILLE — The killer strapped to the gurney looked through the glass at the strangers standing shoulder to shoulder, staring and tight-lipped.

"I am so sorry for what y'all had to go through," he sobbed, choking on the words. "You had some lovely girls and I am sorry."

Hernandez

For the first time since her young daughters were killed more than a decade earlier, Linda Purnhagen heard a man she vilified admit his role in their deaths.

"I looked straight back at him," she would say later. "He looked really sad, scared. I could see it was a scary thing for him."

The killer, Dennis Dowthitt, turned away. His body quivered and he fell limp, succumbing to the deadly drugs pumping through needles inserted into his arms.

On Monday, Timothy McVeigh will face other Linda Purnhagens — people living with the sorrow of having lost husbands, wives, children, loved ones in the Oklahoma City bombing.

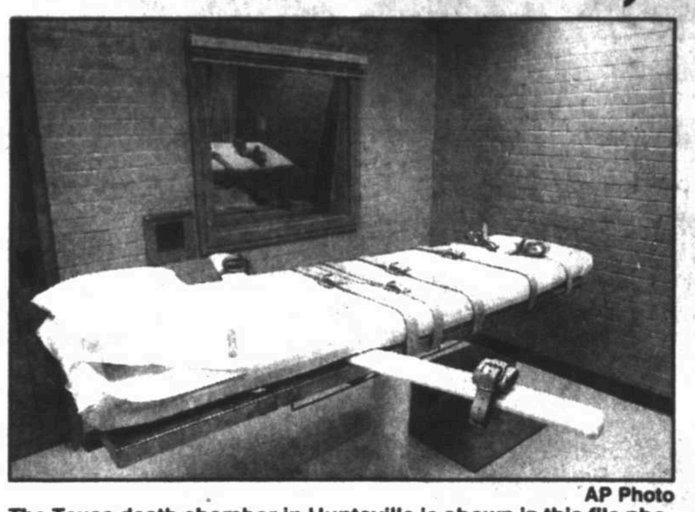

Whether McVeigh goes with remorse like Dowthitt, or defiance like other prisoners, his execution will be carried out by federal officials who haven't put a killer to death in nearly 40 years.

In February, they visited Huntsville to attend the punishment of Adolph Hernandez and carefully note how the nation's busiest execution chamber carries out the business of death.

It is not always silent. It is not always merely going "to sleep" like Dowthitt.

Ultimately, however, the Texas experience has shown the condemned person's eyes can reveal his final thoughts.

For McVeigh, that means his eyes may disclose whether he views himself as a frightened victim, a heartless killer or a martyr in a personal war against the government, which is using the Texas blueprint to kill him.

The Texas death chamber in Huntsville is shown in this file photo. Convicted killer David Dowthitt was one of several convicts executed by lethal injection in this chamber.

"IT'S TIME TO GO TO THE NEXT ROOM," the Texas warden gently but firmly tells the condemned prisoner as the clock reaches the hour the death warrant prescribes for the lethal injection.

The prisoner moves the final 12 feet from a tiny holding cell through a door to the death chamber, where aqua-painted brick walls and a gray tile floor are illuminated by a single fluorescent light fixture. Inside, a mattress-like pad tops the steel pedestal gurney bordered by leather straps and clear plastic tubes ending with two needles — one for each arm.

Assuming the courts have resolved any 11th-hour appeals, the warden's instruction culminates a routine that began about six hours earlier when the inmate arrived from death row.

He was fingerprinted, searched and asked several questions: Are any appeals working through the courts? Do you want the last meal you requested? Are you expecting your lawyer or spiritual adviser? How do you want your body disposed of?

Prison officials already know the answers, but the exchange offers a hint of the condemned inmate's demeanor.

Most are cooperative.

Gary Graham was not.

Graham's claims of innocence and an unfair trial became an issue in the presidential campaign of then-Gov. George W. Bush. Corrections officers, working as an "extraction team," hit him with pepper spray, burning his eyes and lowering his defenses.

Less than a minute later, a tie-down team secured him to the gurney. Immobilized, Graham seethed and waited to unleash a diatribe as witnesses filed into the two closet-sized viewing rooms.

Arms extended, the scene is not unlike a crucifixion, with the criminal prone rather than erect.

Belts secure the inmate's wrists, ankles and legs. A diagonal belt runs across the chest, another at the waist. A belligerent prisoner is further restrained with wide strips of Velcro-like fasteners, including one that holds his head to the gurney.

Then only the eyes can move.

Within three minutes, a needle is inserted in each arm at the elbow, the IV carrying a saline solution. A suitable vein is not a certainty; technicians sometimes switch to another vein at the top of the hand, inside the leg or in the neck.

The procedure complete, the officers depart, leaving the inmate with the warden standing near his head, a chaplain near his feet.

Up to five relatives of the murder victim and a similar number of witnesses selected by the inmate are escorted into separate viewing areas. When the steel doors clang shut behind them, a door at the front of the chamber opens and a prison administrator appears.

"Warden, you may proceed," the official says.

The warden bends slightly toward the inmate.

"Do you have a final statement?"

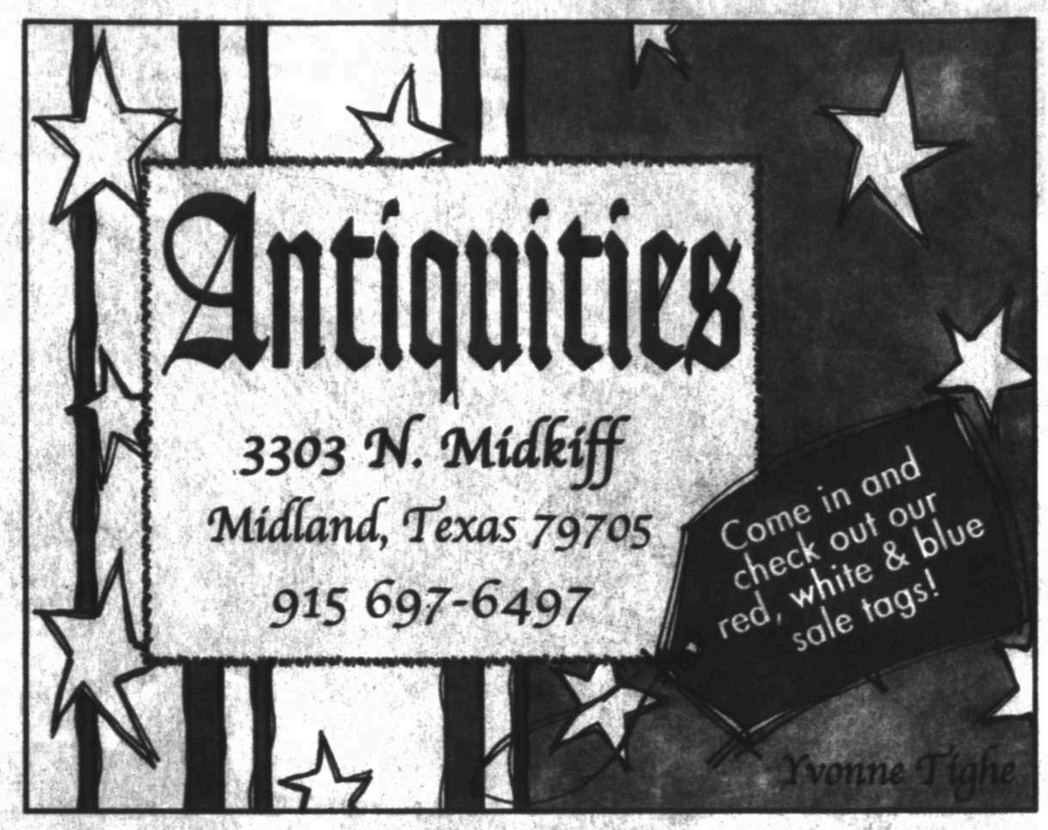

As a microphone dangles overhead, sometimes the prisoner — like Dowthitt — looks at the victim's witnesses, seeking forgiveness. Sometimes he proclaims his innocence. Sometimes he turns his attention to the people he knows.

He may pray or sing.

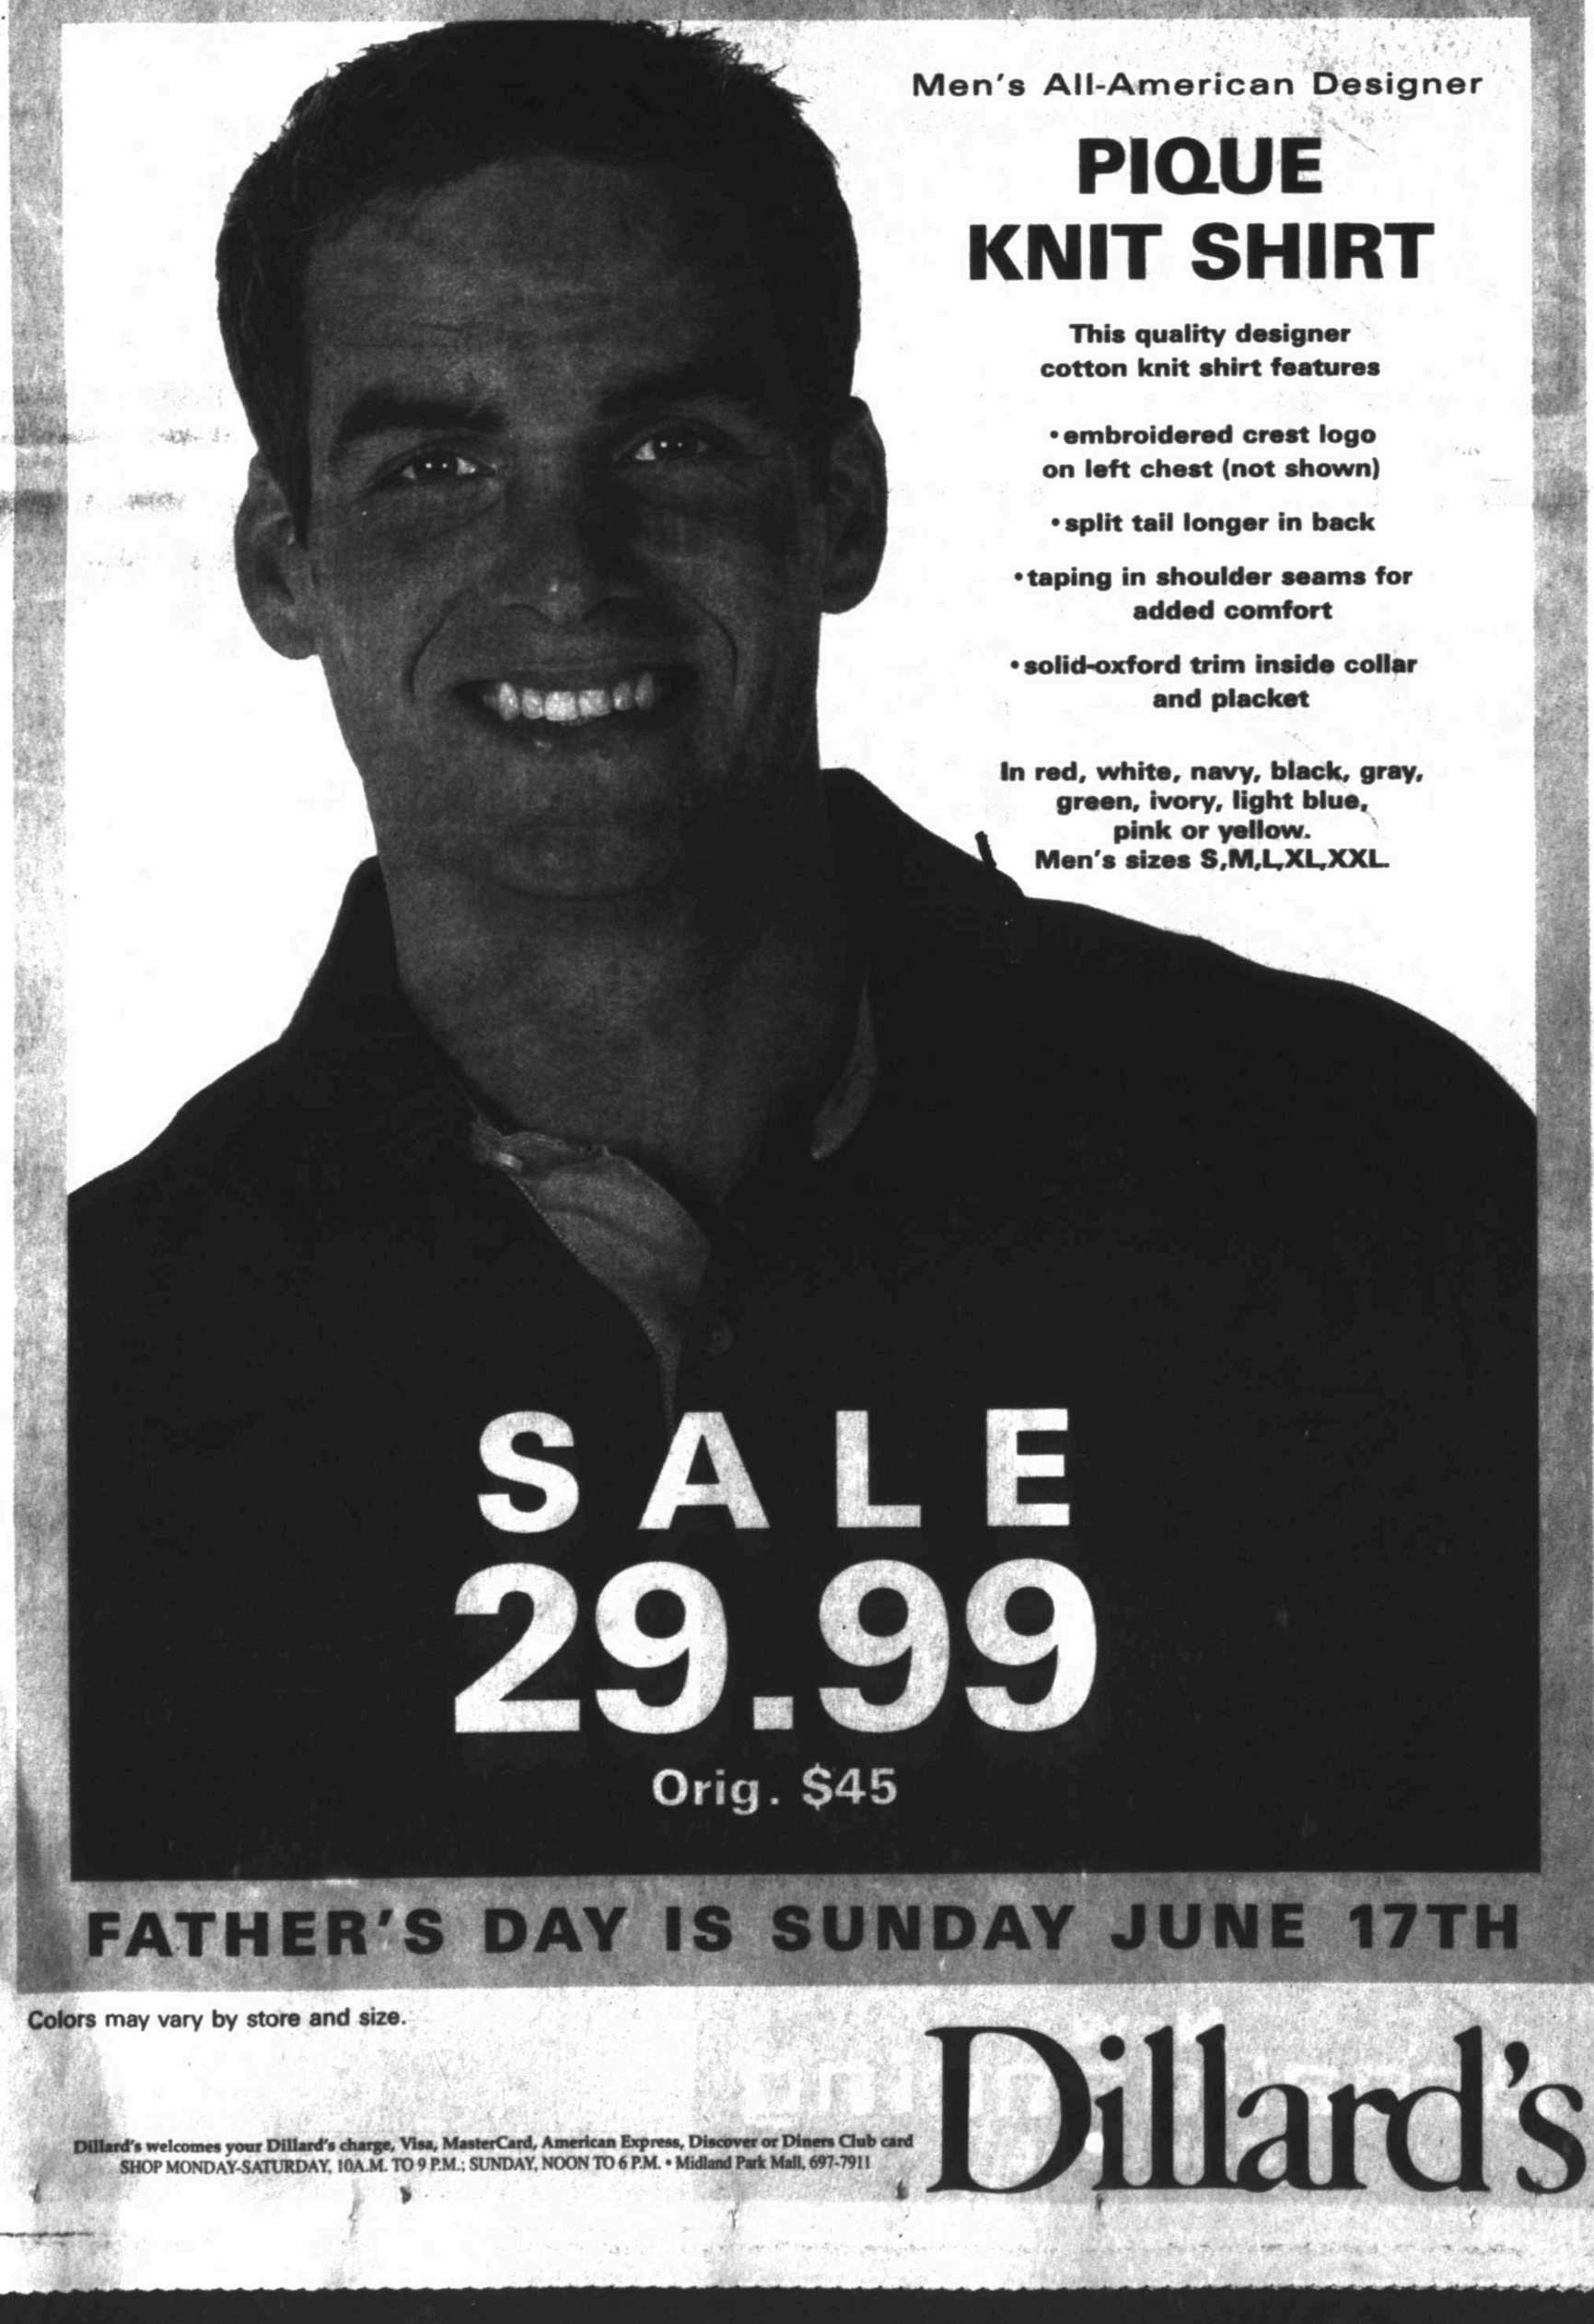

Jonathan Nobles reached the words "mother and child" in the Christmas hymn "Silent Night" before gasping as the drugs cut him off.

The inmate may say something memorized or spontaneous, funny or vulgar, express love and sorrow and apologies. He may search for words that are difficult to find or fire them out in staccato fashion.

"This is what happens to a black man — genocide in America!" Graham shouted.

Because you're glad he's your dad!

Bulldogs turn gray skies purple

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Midland High senior Jayson Nix throws a pitch during a tough relief assignment during the Bulldogs' 8-6 win over Klein in the Class 5A semifinals Friday in Round Rock. Nix came on with the bases loaded and nobody out and gave up only a sacrifice fly.

■ Midland High gets past Klein with victory in state semifinals, moves into championship game against Austin High.

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

ROUND ROCK —At the otherwise picturesque Dell Diamond Friday, it wasn't the greatest day to enjoy a baseball game, considering the 94 minutes in rain delays and gloomy skies which plagued Midland High's Class 5A state semifinal game against Klein.

But as far as the Bulldogs were concerned, it was a beautiful day.

Midland High, making its first trip to the state tournament since winning the title in 1973, has a chance to recapture it today after beating Klein 8-6 in the first semifinal. The Bulldogs (33-7) will play Austin High in today's state championship game at noon. The game can be heard on KMND (1510 AM) or KRIL (1410 AM) radio.

If the Bulldogs haven't yet earned respect from the state's baseball intellegencia, people quite simply aren't paying attention.

"They (Klein) kind of dissed us last night," said MHS coach Barry Russell of the foe his team vanquished. "We were watching Fox Sports News and we heard the Klein kids saying they were looking forward to playing Elkins in the championship. That's a slap at our kids. They're a bunch of good ball players."

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Susan Duffey and other Midland High fans wave their flags in celebration of one of the Bulldogs' runs.

As it turns out, neither Elkins nor Klein will be playing for the title. It will instead be the two older "city" schools, Austin (which beat Elkins 6-5) and Midland, and not the nouveaux suburban schools from the Houston area.

Midland High did exactly what it has been doing throughout the postseason to reach today's title game, getting solid pitching, excellent defense (no errors against Klein) and extremely timely hitting. It's a formula which puts MHS one win away from a state championship.

It was a big fifth inning which decided the game for the Bulldogs, as they came back from a 4-3 deficit with five runs in the bottom of the fifth, which was capped with a three-run home run by sophomore Daniel Stovall off Klein ace Brian Hurley.

Lakers get even with 76ers

By Chris Sheridan
AP Basketball Writer

LOS ANGELES — Shaquille O'Neal was at his best, Kobe Bryant returned to form and the Los Angeles Lakers built a big enough lead to hold off the no-quit Philadelphia 76ers.

O'Neal had 28 points, 20 rebounds, nine assists and tied the NBA Finals record for blocks with eight as the Lakers evened the series at one game apiece with a 98-89 victory Friday night.

Bryant had 31 points, eight rebounds and six assists — as well as an earful of trash talk from Allen Iverson in the final seconds.

The series grew more testy and confrontational in a game the Lakers controlled most of the way. But after O'Neal picked up his fifth foul with 6:38 remaining, Philadelphia used a 13-3 run to close within three points with 2:22 left.

O'Neal then got his ninth assist on a 3-pointer by Derek Fisher, and Bryant fed Robert Horry for a basket from close in that gave the Lakers a 94-86 lead with 1:19 left. O'Neal's jump hook with 28 seconds left gave Los Angeles an eight-point lead that all but sealed the victory.

The series resumes Sunday night in Philadelphia, where Iverson will try to make a bigger contribution. He was held to 23 points, primarily because of Fisher's defense, and missed all four of his free throw attempts.

O'Neal tied the finals record for blocks held by Bill Walton, Hakeem Olajuwon and Patrick Ewing.

"They are playing at a high level. In Philly, they will be playing at a higher level," said O'Neal, who seemed to be leading the Lakers to a romp before picking up his third, fourth and fifth fouls in the first 5 1/2 minutes of the fourth quarter.

The Lakers made only two baskets over the next five minutes, 3-pointers by Brian Shaw and Fisher that kept the 76ers from catching up.

Iverson left the game with 19 seconds left and spent the rest of the time yelling at the Lakers, who were again heavy favorites despite their loss in the opener.

Bryant bounced back from his 7-for-22 shooting performance in Game 1, going 11-for-23 from the field and 8-for-8 from the line. Fisher, who was scoreless in the opener, added 14.

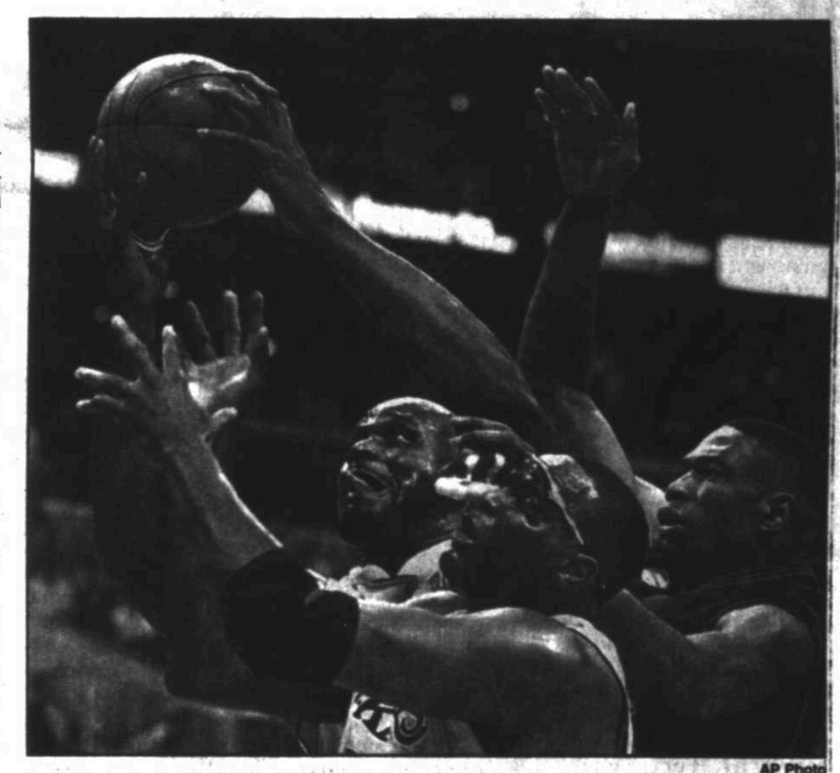

Dikembe Mutombo had 16, Aaron McKie 14, Todd MacCulloch 13 and Eric Snow 12 for the 76ers, whose balanced scoring was a surprise.

The primary reason for it was their inability to get the ball to Iverson as much as they wanted because of Fisher's tight defense.

Iverson missed his first four shots before hitting a fast-break reverse layup and then tossing a behind-the-back pass to Jumaine Jones for a 3-pointer and a 13-10 lead.

Mutombo and Tyrone Hill picked up their second fouls in the ninth minute of the first quarter and sat out until midway through the second. But the Sixers didn't let the Lakers take advantage and actually outscored them by seven points before the two starters returned with 6 1/2 minutes left

Kuerten takes aim at 3rd French title

By Steven Wine
AP Sports Writer

PARIS — One point from elimination six days ago, Gustavo Kuerten is now one win from his third French Open title.

The gangly Brazilian nicknamed Guga earned a berth in the final by beating Spaniard Juan Carlos Ferrero 6-4, 6-4, 6-3 Friday.

Kuerten won the championship at Roland Garros in 1997 and again last year. On Sunday against Spaniard Alex Corretja, Kuerten will try to become the sixth man to win three French titles and the first since Mats Wilander earned his third title in 1988.

"I really never expected this to happen to me," said Kuerten, 24. "I don't try to compare myself with other guys. Not even in my best dreams was I able to win three times here."

This year, Kuerten admits, he has been lucky. He was one point from a straight-set defeat in the fourth round against American qualifier Michael Russell, an upset that would have ranked with the greatest in Grand Slam history.

But Kuerten survived a harrowing 26-stroke match point, with one

Alou's home run gives Astros win over Texas in 11

By Jaime Aron

ARLINGTON — Moises Alou was willing to play designated hitter only because his left leg was hurting. On his game-winning hit, he was able to take his time rounding the bases.

Alou's leadoff homer in the 11th inning gave the Houston Astros a 5-4 victory over the Texas Rangers on Friday night in a Lone Star showdown 30 years in the making. It was the first time the Interstate 45 neighbors played a game that counted.

Lone Star Series
Houston	5
Texas	4
11 Innings

Alou wanted to be a part of it even though he hurt his left quadriceps Wednesday against Colorado. While sitting out Thursday's game against the Rockies, someone in the dugout mentioned that he could DH against the Rangers.

"The only reason I wanted to do it was because of my pulled muscle," Alou said.

Alou started slowly, flying out to left, then striking out with runners on second and third. He blamed that on adjusting to the hitting backdrop at The Ballpark, not on the lack of activity that comes with sitting in the dugout while his team is on defense.

Once comfortable at the plate, Alou singled in the sixth and eighth, then hit his eighth homer.

"For a guy who doesn't like to DH, he did a pretty good job," Astros manager Larry Dierker said.

The All-Texas series was the only regional rivalry interleague play failed to produce in its first four years. The lack of rotation among interleague opponents was altered this year to create the Astros-Rangers matchup.

The lead changed hands several times, with Houston tying it

WPHL announces details of new league

Staff Report

At its annual Spring Conference, the Western Professional Hockey League celebrated its past and looked to a future that will see the WPHL join forces with the Central Hockey League to form a new entity and move into a new era in minor league hockey.

After five seasons of operation, the WPHL reached a joint operating agreement with the CHL on May 30. The new league, which will carry the Central Hockey League name, will begin play in October. The Odessa Jackalopes will be a member of the CHL.

Much of the WPHL's Spring Conference, held in Phoenix, Ariz., dealt with the nuts and bolts of combining the two leagues. Among the topics addressed were alignment, scheduling, rules and salary cap.

The "new" CHL announced Friday that the number of teams that will become CHL members will be determined and finalized by June 15. The WPHL ended the 2000-2001 season with 13 franchises and the CHL with 11.

Former WPHL members Lake Charles and Monroe are not expected to operate during the coming season. It's also expected that existing CHL franchises in Fayetteville, N.C.; Huntsville, Ala.; Macon, Ga.; and Topeka, Kan., will not join the new entity.

Additional reports suggest that Kansas City, Mo., and Little Rock, Ark., are possibilities to join the new CHL.

The CHL will consist of two conferences, each including two divisions. The Western Conference will have the Western Division and the Midwest Division while the Eastern Conference will possess the Eastern and Mideast divisions.

Teams will play a 64-game schedule,

before halftime.

O'Neal had 17 points and 13 rebounds, and Bryant had 16, giving Los Angeles a 49-47 halftime lead.

The Lakers played from ahead for most of the third quarter as O'Neal had five of his blocks, the last of which led to a fast-break layup by Bryant for a 72-65 lead. Fisher then came up with consecutive steals, turning one of them into an impressive dunk over Iverson for a nine-point lead.

Fisher made a 3-pointer with 20 seconds left to give the Lakers a 10-point lead, 77-67.

Iverson finally attempted his first free throws with 10:31 left in the fourth quarter but missed both, and Bryant made a wide-open 3-pointer for an 82-70 lead with about nine minutes left.

The Lakers answered a 3-pointer by Iverson with an alley-oop dunk by O'Neal off a pass from Bryant, and their lead grew to 13 by the time O'Neal picked up his fifth foul with 6:38 left.

The 76ers went to the foul line seven times before O'Neal returned with 5:22 left, but Raja Bell missed three of those attempts. McKie scored off a steal by Snow to make it 86-80 before Shaw gave the Lakers some breathing room by sinking a 3-pointer from the left corner with the Staples Center crowd falling almost completely silent as the ball was in the air.

The 76ers scored the next four points but Iverson missed two more foul shots with 3:04 left and a chance to cut the deficit to three. O'Neal missed at the other end and Mutombo put in a short bank shot with 2:22 left to make it 89-86, but O'Neal earned his ninth assist on Fisher's 3-pointer, giving Los Angeles a six-point lead with 2:07 left.

Notes: Lakers forward Rick Fox, who refused to cut his hair during this team's 19-game winning streak, trimmed about an inch. ... Brown used 11 of his available players by the fourth minute of the second quarter. ... O'Neal also drew a technical foul from referee Steve Javie between the third and fourth quarters.

Nebraska starts off CWS well

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Cal State Fullerton's experience silenced Nebraska's vocal and partisan fans at the College World Series.

Cal State Fullerton took a one-run lead in the fifth inning and made it stand up, beating Nebraska 5-4 in the CWS on Friday night.

The Titans won the opener of their 11th series and second in three years. Nebraska lost its series debut.

"The biggest thing for us was to make sure the crowd didn't get to us. Emotionally for us we were able to do that," said David Bacani, whose leadoff homer in the fifth inning supplied the eventual game winning run.

Aaron Rifkin hit a two-run homer for the Titans (47-16), who were outhit 8-7.

The Titans will play Stanford, a 13-11 winner over Tulane earlier Friday, on Sunday night. The Huskers and Green Wave will play Sunday afternoon in a game that will knock out one of the CWS newcomers.

Three Fullerton pitchers struck out 14 Cornhuskers. Jon Smith (11-2) lasted only until the sixth inning but got the win after allowing four runs on seven hits and striking out seven.

HOCKEY: Some rules will change

playing 32 home games and 32 road games. Scheduling will emphasize play within the division and in the conference. Interconference play is likely, but will be somewhat limited based on geography. For example, the Jackalopes will primarily play the CHL West and Midwest divisions. The Jacks most likely will face the Mideast, but not the East.

The playoffs will begin with conference playoffs and end with the Eastern Conference champion meeting the Western Conference champion for the CHL title.

The CHL finals will be a best-of-seven series while preceding rounds will be a best-of-five. The number of teams involved in the playoffs will be determined after the number of overall franchises is finalized on June 15.

Rosters will include up to 18 players. The 18 players must fit within a weekly salary cap of $8,500.

Each club may have a maximum of four veteran status players and one veteran status goaltender. The existing CHL veteran rule qualifies players with 211 or more professional games as a veteran. Officials on Friday indicated the number of games necessary to qualify as a veteran would be at least 211, and if the number were changed, it would be raised.

Each club must have a minimum of three rookie status players. Those are players with 25 or fewer professional games.

The red line is back in play in the CHL. The WPHL had allowed two-line passes, but the new CHL will not.

The CHL will feature a hybrid of the NHL overtime format and the format previously used by the WPHL.

When a game is tied at the end of regulation the teams will go to a five-minute sudden death overtime in a 4-on-4 format. If the game remains tied, the teams go to a three-skater shootout. If the game remains tied at that point, the shootout becomes sudden death.

Coach of the Year: Jackalopes head coach Don McKee was recognized as the WPHL Coach of the Year at the WPHL Awards Banquet. McKee guided the Jacks to a club record 40 wins (40-22-9), capturing the franchise's first ever Western Division regular season championship.

Voice of the Year: Bob Hards, the radio voice of the Jacks, was named as WPHL Broadcaster of the Year at the banquet. Hards has been the Jackalopes' play-by-play announcer since the inception of the franchise and is also in his 10th season as the radio voice of the Midland RockHounds.

UIL State Baseball Finals

Class 4A
Fort Worth Western Hills 12, Carthage 7

AUSTIN — Fort Worth Western Hills used an eight-run surge in the top of the fifth inning to cap a 12-7 comeback win over Carthage in the Class 4A UIL state baseball championship game Friday night.

Western Hills (33-5) sent nine men to the plate before Carthage got its first out in the inning. Thirteen batted in all.

Class 3A
La Grange 4, Forney 3

La Grange took advantage of a Forney error to score the go-ahead run in the top of the sixth inning.

With the score tied at three and two outs in the top of the sixth, La Grange's Seth Anderle scored on Forney second baseman T.J. Gilmer's throwing error, and the Leopards took a 4-3 lead.

La Grange (30-1) freshman Homer Bailey (13-1) came on to pitch with one out in the fifth inning. He recorded eight straight outs, throwing 23 of 29 pitches for strikes to pick up the win.

Class 2A
Weimar 6, Elysian Fields 5

Weimar rallied for four runs in the bottom of the fifth inning and pitcher Don Levinski got six consecutive Elysian Fields batters out.

Weimar (26-5) came back from a 5-2 deficit with its rally in the fifth, as Levinski, Casey Berger and Jonathan Hadash had consecutive RBIs to tie the game, 5-5.

Class A
Bremond 4, Brock 2

Bremond's Robert Antis pitched six strong innings and Blake Burnett hit an inside-the-park home run to win over Brock.

Antis (8-0) allowed three hits, no earned runs, and struck out four batters.

MHS: 'Dogs take on Austin

(From 1B)

"Coach Russell told me hips and hands and I just wanted to make contact," said Stovall, who has made contact more often than any other MHS hitter in the postseason with four homers. "I didn't have any idea how far I'd hit it so I ran as hard as I could until the umpire signaled home run."

Stovall's blast gave the Bulldogs an 8-4 lead and proved to be crucial. In the top of the sixth, Klein (30-8) put the first four runners on base against MHS starter Matt Bose and brought home a run, signaling Bose's exit from the game.

That brought on Jayson Nix, who has become Midland High's stopper in the postseason, and never had he been called on to put out such a potentially big fire.

"I should have pulled him out before I did," said Russell of Bose. "But I figured Jayson could get ready quickly and he was pumped to throw."

Nix showed why Russell and just about everybody else has confidence in him. He struck out two batters and in between allowed a sacrifice fly, which resulted in the final run of Klein's season.

There were some uneasy moments in the seventh, as Nix allowed singles to Hurley and Matt Groth, but with two outs, Jake Ashmore hit a fielder's choice grounder to third where Bose stepped on the bag to end the game.

"The only way I know to play the game is one pitch at a time," said Nix, who was drafted as a shortstop by the Colorado Rockies in Tuesday's Major League Baseball amateur draft. "I've been (on in relief) this year and the one thing I need to do is throw strikes and let the defense make plays."

How good the quality of play would be might have been a valid question prior to the game since rain delayed the start of the contest by an hour and 26 minutes and caused a much briefer delay in the top of the fourth.

Midland High broke through with three runs in the third before the rains came a second time. With one out, Jason South singled, and on the next pitch, Brian Hurley hit Nix to put two runners on. James Smith then singled inside the third base line to bring home the game's first run.

Each of the next two batters also brought home runs, as Bose hit a sacridice fly to center and Madison Edwards singled up the middle to make it 3-0.

Almost as soon as the inning ended, the rains returned. Bose hit Dan Krenz with a pitch, walked Josh Barfield and gave a single to Brad Cherry to load the bases before the umpires halted it due to rain.

"I was more worried in the fourth when they had the bases loaded," said Russell. "Matt said he had a hard time holding the ball."

Eight minutes later play resumed, and Bose gave up a two-run single to Hurley and a sacrifice fly to Jake Oprea that tied the game. In the next inning, Cherry drove home a run with a single to give Klein a 4-3 lead.

But that was just a cue for Midland High to step forward. Bose tied the game by driving home Nix with a double, then scored on a single by Edwards to give MHS the lead for good at 5-4. After Hurley walked James Gripp on four pitches, Stovall launched a bomb over the rightfield wall which gave the Bulldogs a sizable cushion.

Stovall, who didn't homer during the regular season, has driven in 15 runs in the postseason.

"I've just been a lot more relaxed," said Stovall. "I feel pretty good every time I come up. It seems like James Gripp gets on every time I come up."

Perhaps feeling the effects of the weather, Bose couldn't close out the win on his own, but still did enough to win.

"It threw me off a lot," said Bose of the strange weather. "I should have taken a lot more time between pitches. I still felt strong but Jayson had to come in there and bail me out again."

It could be up to Nix to win today's game as a starter, but Russell hasn't committed to anyone yet. Still, it's a problem which Klein wishes it could worry about today.

"I know they (the Bulldogs) swung the bat real well but you don't know how good a team is until you see them," said Klein coach Barry Smith. "You take away one or two pitches and this could be a different ball game."

In the second semifinal, Austin High scored all of its runs in the top of the third inning off Elkins ace Wardell Starling. Matt Goebel, who pitched two complete game victories in last week's Region IV finals against Austin Bowie, pitched another complete game victory as Austin High (29-8-2) survived an error by rightfielder Taylor Collins on a routine fly ball which would have marked the game's final out. Elkins scored four runs in the bottom of the seventh but came up short.

Baffert's Point Given will go off as Belmont favorite

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Bob Baffert thinks Point Given will get better with age. By then, the trainer's nerves could be shot.

"Anybody can train Point Given," Baffert said of the Preakness winner and Belmont Stakes favorite. "Not if you have a heart condition, though."

The strapping chestnut colt, who will oppose eight other 3-year-olds, including Kentucky Derby winner Monarchos, on Saturday, can quicken the heart in the afternoon. He can cause heartburn in the morning.

He's gotten loose a couple of times at Santa Anita. He reared and unseated exercise rider Pepe Aragon the morning of his disappointing fifth-place finish in the Kentucky Derby. He reared several times, but did not unseat Aragon, while on the way to the track the day before his Preakness win.

Before Point Given got his first look at the Belmont Park track Thursday morning, he reared in the barn, but Aragon managed to dismount before it happened. The colt then behaved himself on the way to the track for a gallop and on the way back to the barn, and he was a model of deportment for his final gallop Friday.

"He needs very high maintenance," Baffert said. "'He's accident-prone because of his antics."

Point Given has escaped serious injury, but he did cut his head while playing in his stall last week at Churchill Downs. He returned to that track after the Preakness to prepare for the Belmont.

"This horse has aged me 10 years," the 48-year-old, white-haired Baffert said. "He's a fun-loving horse, a big kid. He never gives you a chance to take a breath. He keeps you on your toes. When he's getting ready to run, that's when he does that stuff. He's just having fun, but it's hard on us."

Knowing what Point Given had done and what he has the potential to do, however, make the nervous mornings easier to take.

The fifth-place finish as the favorite in the Kentucky Derby is the only time the son of Thunder Gulch, the 1995 Derby and Belmont winner, has finished worse than second in 10 starts. Last year, he won a maiden race, the Kentucky Juvenile Cup and the Grade I Hollywood Futurity, and was second in a maiden race and the Grade I Champagne and Breeders' Cup Juvenile. This year, in two starts before the Derby, he won the San Felipe and the Grade I Santa Anita Derby.

Baffert said Point Given, ridden by Gary Stevens, was too close to a lightning pace in the Derby.

"In the Preakness, he let the horse decide his own pace, get into his stride," Baffert said. "I think he'll do the same thing in the Belmont."

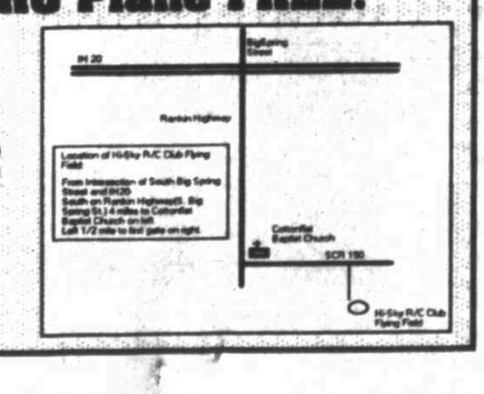

This will be Baffert's fifth Belmont, and in two of them he watched Silver Charm (1997) and Real Quiet (1998) finish second in bids to become the 12th Triple Crown winner and the first since Affirmed in 1978.

Should Point Given win, he would be the first Preakness winner to win the Belmont since Tabasco Cat in 1994.

A victory by Monarchos would make him the first Kentucky Derby winner to win the Belmont since Thunder Gulch in 1995.

Astros gain LL City finals

At Windlands Park on Thursday, the Northern Astros gained a berth in the finals of the Joe Mowles Memorial City National League Tournament with an 8-6 win over the Northern Rockies.

The Astros will move to the finals at 6 p.m. on Monday at Windlands Park.

Robert Brosig got the win for the Astros while Brandon Williamson had a double for the winners. The Rockies, who still have a chance to play on Monday, got doubles from Zack Pitts, Jarred Groner and Sawyer McMillian.

Also on Thursday, the Northern Mets remained alive with a 6-1 win over the Tower Cubs, who were eliminated. Carson Smith struck out 16 Cubs to get the win. Garrett Smith of the Mets and Andruw Bustamonte of the Cubs homered in the game. The Cubs' James Lynch tripled while the Mets' Landon Patterson had a double.

The Mid City Astros also eliminated the Northern Braves by a 6-2 margin. Spencer Sell had a big game for the Astros by picking up the pitching victory and he also had a double.

The Northern Mets and the Mid City Astros played on Friday night, but results of that game were not available at press time. That winner will play the Northern Rockies today at 10 a.m. for the right to meet the Northern Astros in Monday's tournament finale.

On Monday, if the Northern Astros win, the tournament is over. Should they fall, a second game will follow at 8 p.m. to determine the championship. In other words, the Northern Astros will have to lose two games on Monday to lose the title.

'Hounds come home on roll after sweeping 4 in Wichita

Staff Report

WICHITA, Kan. — A sweep of the Wichita Wranglers has turned Midland's longest Texas League road trip of the year into a pretty good trek.

Midland defeated the Wranglers by a 3-2 margin Friday night to end a 16-game road trip, one which the RockHounds ended by winning the last six to produce a 10-6 record on the trip.

So, the 'Hounds return to Christensen at 7 p.m. today to face the Tulsa Drillers after the long absence. By the time the All-Star break rolls around next week, Midland will have played 24 days without a break.

The RockHounds won its fourth game in a row over Wichita on Friday for a clean sweep. The win came in the fifth inning with two runs.

Jay Pecci doubled in the fifth and scored on a Brian Luderer single. Later, Josh Hochgesang hit a sacrifice fly to produce what would be the winning run.

Midland led 1-0 with a run in the second, but Wichita scored two runs in the bottom of the second and held the 2-1 lead until Midland broke it up in the fifth.

Mario Ramos, now 7-1 on the year, got the win while Texas League All-Star reliever Tyler Yates came on to record his 10th save of the season. Ramos is now tied with Justin Lehr for the team lead in wins.

Tonight's game with the Drillers is at the regular Christensen Stadium starting time of 7 p.m., but Sunday's game has a different starting time. Through May, all Sunday games were at 2 p.m., but all Sunday games for the rest of the season start at 6 p.m.

SERIES: Astros win

(From 1B)

in the seventh. Each team used five pitchers, and Alou's homer off Tim Crabtree (0-4) was the only run off a reliever in 10 combined innings.

"It was a really hard-fought game," Dierker said. "It was a war."

Octavio Dotel (3-4) made things interesting by allowing a hit and a walk with two outs in the bottom of the 11th, but Mike Jackson got his second save in five tries. Both saves have come in the last two games; closer Billy Wagner is on the disabled list.

"I'm just holding things down until he gets back," said Jackson, who before Thursday hadn't saved a game since September 1999.

Texas has lost five in a row and seven of eight. The Rangers' 20 wins after 59 games ties the worst start in franchise history — even though their 92 homers are 12 more than their previous high at this point in the season. Texas is 19 games under .500 for the first time this season.

"It was a well-played game, a good game. We just didn't win it," Rangers manager Jerry Narron said.

During pregame ceremonies, a giant Texas flag was draped across the outfield and hundreds of yellow balloons were released in tribute to "The Yellow Rose of Texas." U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison threw out the first pitch.

A crowd of 47,120 at The Ballpark was sprinkled with Astros fans, some wearing rainbow jerseys and many rooting for the visitors.

Houston reliever Nelson Cruz came close to spicing things up by drilling Alex Rodriguez with a fastball in the seventh inning. Rodriguez screamed as he ran to first and fans booed loudly.

While it might have been retaliation for two Astros who were hit by pitches, the game was tied, the count was full — with two outs — and it brought up cleanup hitter Rafael Palmeiro.

Rodriguez was 2-for-2 with an RBI and a walk at the time.

FRENCH: Corretja will face Kuerten in tournament final of his shots landing on a line, and he then rallied for the victory.

(From 1B)

"I was blessed that day," he said. "I feel myself with nothing to lose anymore. I shouldn't have won that match."

From that close call, the top-seeded Kuerten has gradually found his footing on his favorite surface, and he was in top form against the fourth-seeded Ferrero.

The speedy young Spaniard came into the match with four titles this year and a 27-2 clay-court record, the best in tennis. But he was no match for Kuerten, whose experience on the big stage helped him win most of the key points.

Ferrero had eight break-point chances in the final set but failed to convert any, and finished the match 2-for-16.

"Today was pretty much close for my perfection," Kuerten said in his broken English, which is often accompanied by a smile. "I feel like playing my best tennis. I cannot wish to play better than this."

When Ferrero sent a service return into the doubles alley on match point, Kuerten reacted with a gleeful hop-skip behind the baseline, fist raised. His coach since 1989, Larri Passos, applauded and pointed to his right arm.

Why the gesture?

"Because he had to practice with me two days, and he couldn't move his arm anymore," Kuerten explained.

Kuerten is ranked No. 1 largely because he has won 43 of his past 46 matches on clay, and he's not likely to soon shake the label of clay-court specialist because he expects to skip Wimbledon later this month. He has complained about the seeding system there and said he simply needs a rest.

"To maybe stop only three or four days and start to practice on grass again to play in Wimbledon maybe is going to be too much for myself," he said.

In the second semifinal, the 13th-seeded Corretja disappointed the crowd by beating No. 10 Sebastien Grosjean of France 7-6 (2), 6-4, 6-4. Corretja's only other Grand Slam final was at Roland Garros in 1998, when he lost to Carlos Moya.

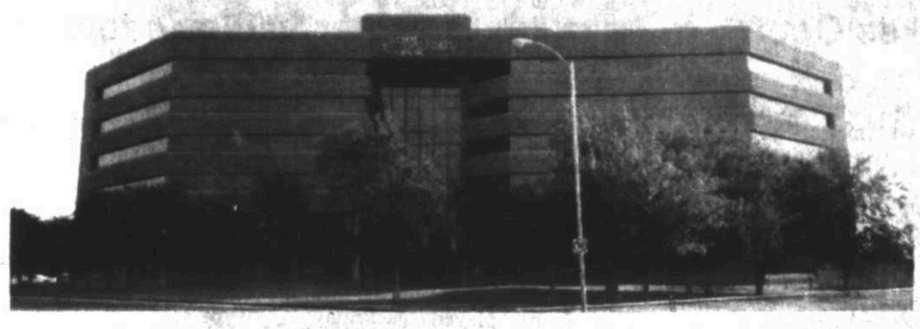

"I haven't dropped a set since the first day, so that means I'm playing better than I even imagined when I came here," Corretja said.

Grosjean, who upset Andre Agassi in the quarterfinals, was unable to muster similar magic against Corretja.

"I don't have too many regrets," Grosjean said. "I played somebody stronger than me from the baseline. He played a great game."

Jennifer Capriati will be a heavy favorite Saturday in her first French final against Kim Clijsters, Belgium's first Grand Slam finalist.

Methodist church adopts college nursing student

By Michele Kennerly
MRT Correspondent

Some classes adopt manatees, some highways, but the Homer Fort Class at First United Methodist Church adopts nursing students.

Every year this Sunday school class adopts one Midland College nursing student who is in need of financial aid and pays for his or her tuition and fees. This year they chose Dolly Hinshaw as their Nursing Scholarship Fund recipient.

Ms. Hinshaw recently moved to Midland from San Angelo in pursuit of her goal of completing the Licensed Vocational Nursing program.

"Before classes started, the college told me I was one hour shy of having the number of hours required to be eligible for financial aid," Ms. Hinshaw said. "It was then I began praying and praying, 'Lord, how am I going to do this?'"

Upon speaking with Susan Jones, head of the vocational nursing program at Midland College, Ms. Hinshaw learned of several local groups offering financial aid.

School officials interviewed students with financial need and selected those with the greatest need. They passed Ms. Hinshaw's name to the class, which agreed to help.

"This fund, begun in 1981, was originally called the Silva Dillard Scholarship Fund," said Vera Wecker, a member of the class. "Silva was one of our members. As she battled cancer, she searched for a cure. Shortly after she passed on, her husband started the fund with a $500 donation. That's why the fund is for nursing students."

Son takes over pastorship where father left off

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

August will mark the 10th anniversary of Harvest Time Church that began with seven members. Four of those were the Benson family: the pastor, Mike Benson, his wife Dawn and two children.

Now with an average Sunday attendance of 200, a membership of 300 and a $750,000 church plant that includes facilities for more than 100 teen-agers, the congregation of Harvest Time is already making plans for a big reunion celebration.

The path has been neither straight nor easy, said Chad Benson, who was asked by the congregation to assume the pastorate after his father left last October.

Yet, he said God has been with them at every turn.

"My dad got the call in the middle of the night, to come here from Oklahoma in July 1991 when I was 15," Benson explained. "It was so strong and so unmistakable that he even knew the name of the church. And I felt called to the ministry at the same time. The whole family was in agreement that we were meant to come here."

They started with a small building off Midkiff Road, on Midland's southern edge, where they took their message to the neighborhood. By 1993, their numbers were approaching 200. As their congregation began to outgrow their tiny building, they found land along Highway 191 and, with few resources, began to build a church.

"We had to do the work ourselves," said Benson. "My dad had some construction experience, so he acted as contractor, and our members brought their tools and pitched in to help."

They were about a month away from completion, already making plans for the move, when the fire department called the Benson house late one Saturday night in 1994, to say that their new church was burning.

Benson said he was a senior in high school at the time and that he had awakened and started getting ready for church when his father and mother told him and his sister the news.

"We drove out to take a look, and it was just burnt to the ground. Some of our members had heard the news on TV and they were also out there. Then we had to go to church and my dad announced it to the members who hadn't heard.

"It was arson. They never found out who did it, nor why," he said. "But we had an incredible service that day, and then we just came together and started again. God takes misfortunes like that and turns them around for good.

"We built a bigger building than we had built in the first place, and we were able to pay as we went.

"Now we have an 18,000-square-foot facility that is totally debt-free, and we have a membership about 300. God has really blessed us."

Benson said last fall his father had felt the call to go on the road as an evangelist, and had announced his plans to the congregation in order for them to conduct a search for a new pastor. They didn't have far to look. The younger Benson had worked with his father during his high school years, then attended Southwestern Assemblies of God University at Waxahachie before returning to Harvest Time in 1996. He had served as youth pastor for five years, and had built the youth program from about 20 kids to more than 100.

Benson said he had been considering a possible move to another church.

"I had already interviewed with a church that needed a youth pastor and I was planning to go," he said. "But there were several members here who wanted to invite me to serve as pastor, and I felt more and more led to stay here.

"Then we had a formal interview with the advisory committee and they asked me to be the pastor."

Benson's parents are now on an evangelistic tour that is supported by Harvest Time. They still make Midland/Odessa their home and return occasionally to preach.

Harvest Time has regular Sunday morning and evening services, and on Wednesday nights it has Bible classes for adults, gatherings for teen-agers in the snack bar and video game rooms and activities for pre-teens.

Two Midland churches swap buildings to fulfill needs of congregations

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

The church of God may be eternal, but its face and form are ever changing.

Christians mature and multiply, move in and out of neighborhoods, change their opinions and their passions, and oftentimes the houses they built to worship in no longer suit their needs.

Church members can also change their views and visions, and when they do, the church must find a way to accommodate those changes or die.

Danny and Andrea Rhoden

Two Midland congregations dealt with their changes by trading places.

On Sunday morning, the congregation of Victory Family Christian Center, formerly located at 5200 W. Illinois Ave., will gather to worship at 1101 S. Main St., former home of Calvary Baptist. Calvary Baptist will be changing not only its location, but its name as well. Its congregation will be meeting at 5200 W. Illinois as Hillcrest Baptist Church.

When Calvary Baptist constructed its two-story, 32,000-square-foot church at the corner of South Main Street and Dakota Avenue 60 years ago, its congregation for the most part lived within walking distance.

Calvary member Vicki Miller said in an interview last year that she could remember when there were more than 1,500 children registered in vacation Bible school, and at times the crowd at Sunday worship would overflow to the balcony.

But with demographic shifts and transfers, oil busts and the growth of Midland westward and northward, Calvary's membership dwindled over the years to a present membership of about 30.

The children who once crowded the Sunday school rooms are now grandparents living in the western part of town. And with the diminishing congregation, funds for upkeep of the church plant have become increasingly hard to come by.

"We had to face the fact that it was time for a change," said Esther Dickens, wife of the Rev. W.M. (Dick) Dickens. "When my husband first went to Calvary, they had already decided that they had to make a change to stay together."

The Dickens, both licensed Realtors, had talent and experience the Calvary congregation sorely needed.

"We decided to put the building on the market, and see what we could do," said Ms. Dickens.

Meanwhile, there was Victory Family Christian Center, a 10-year-old church with a burning interest in Midland's south side.

The Rev. Danny Rhoden, pastor at Victory, said the church had already begun sending teams of young people into the heart of the city to evangelize. He and his wife, Andrea, had moved to Midland last summer at the request of then-pastor, Rev. Bob Miller.

"We were in the evangelistic field and when Brother Bob called us, we came just to work with him for a while," Rhoden explained. "We started Evangelistic Team USA, which goes into the city every week with youth and shares Jesus Christ with people, and we had started some other discipleship training programs in the church, and all of a sudden we saw ourselves as pastors.

"Brother Bob had been teaching people leadership for the past 10 years. They were the Moses church, brought out of the world, learning the five-fold ministry: apostle, prophet, evangelist, pastor, teacher.

"He had taken great pains to show them that everybody is a leader in one way or another," Rhoden said.

"Then one day, he and I were visiting and he said, 'Brother Danny, it's time for Joshua to take the people on over.' His vision had been to equip people here within the walls. My vision has always been to go outside the walls."

Rhoden said with a congregation of approximately 100, Victory had ample space inside their plant on Illinois — the church is about 10,000 square feet in area — and at first they had no thoughts of moving.

"We were just looking for some toys and swings for our children's playground," he said. "We were in a staff meeting, and we were talking about buying some toys, and one of our members, Kay Kuykendall, said, 'You know, I saw a for-sale sign on the church I grew up in, and they might have some toys for sale.' So I said, 'Let's check it out.'

"We went over there, and we found out that they were looking for a smaller church. By the end of the day, instead of looking for toys, we were looking for a way to make a trade."

Rhoden said what attracted his congregation to the Calvary plant was its possibilities for the kind of evangelism that Victory already has in progress.

LESLIE WILLIAMS

God's mystery means accepting some things don't make sense

Lately, I've felt as if I've fallen down Alice's rabbit hole on several occasions.

For example, on our trip, the tour had stopped at Winston Churchill's grave and on the way back to the bus two of us were in search of a ladies' room. We popped in a pub across the street and asked a gentleman, "Where is the ladies' room?"

Williams

He replied, "They serve food here all day."

Puzzled, we looked at each other, then thanked him, deciding we'd be better off finding the ladies' room on our own.

In another example, about a month ago, I was ordering a sandwich at a fast food place. The manager was chewing out the cashier, a cute young girl, obviously chagrined. The manager said, "Always remember, 'with mayonnaise' means 'no vegetables.'"

Again, I thought, "Have I missed something here?" The cashier seemed to understand perfectly.

Lately, it seems, I understand less and less at all levels of life — from the superficial to the sublime. From these silly miscommunications to the unexplainable tragedies in life, such as an untimely death, I am left confused. I like to connect the dots and find a picture, a vision that makes sense, reasoning that I can wrap my understanding around to keep me warm.

God's mystery means accepting that some things don't make sense. Faith means trusting this lack of knowledge is OK — that there is a master plan, even when it feels as if the boss has gone on an extended lunch break and there is nobody in charge.

One day it will all be explained. We will know the mysteries to our satisfaction, and we will understand the relationship between mayonnaise and vegetables, between life and death and eternal life.

On a personal note, I have received a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities to study English Reformation texts at Ohio State University. I will be taking a leave of absence from the column for the next two months. I hope everyone has a wonderful summer!

ADOPT: Student amazed at pride, affection from group

(From 1C)

"Some of the neediest students are in our Licensed Vocational Nursing program," said Ms. Jones. "They are in class or training 32 hours per week and it's hard for them to hold a job at the same time. Any scholarships or other aid made available to students in our program is essential and extremely appreciated."

"We've had several good recipients, but Dolly has been one of the better ones," said Ms. Wecker. "Even at the beginning of the process she came and spoke to our class to show her appreciation."

"The scholarships are based on need first and foremost because the scholarships are given at a time in the year when it's almost impossible to award them based on GPA," said Ms. Jones. "However, Dolly ended up with one of the highest GPAs in her class."

Ms. Hinshaw maintained a 4.0 GPA, made the President's List for having all A's, and was elected president of the Student Nursing Association.

Ms. Hinshaw is amazed at the amount of pride and affection the group has for her.

"Some people just give money and go on with their lives, but they sent me a Christmas card, checked up on me, and many of them came to the pinning ceremony," said Ms. Hinshaw, now employed with the Metabolic Research Center in Midland. "The Lord answered my prayers through them."

SWAP: Congregations plan to have joint worship service

(From 1C)

"They have a great gymnasium, and a great two-story educational wing that will be perfect for us.

"On Saturdays, we can have a blowout, and open the gym and serve hot dogs and have different events going on there.

"We have some people who will do free haircuts, and we have a puppet ministry that we'll be setting up outside.

"Eventually, we hope to start a school there."

Rhoden and Ms. Dickens both said the response from their respective congregations had been overwhelmingly positive.

"I don't think there was a single member who was not in favor of the change," said Ms. Dickens. "So many of them are already living over in that neighborhood, and we're looking forward to serving the people of the west side and growing in new ways."

An unforeseen result of the swap was the friendships that have arisen among the members of the two congregations.

"We've just been amazed at how close we've grown," Ms. Dickens said.

Even the move was facilitated by the kindness of a former member of Calvary, Don Thomson, owner of Thomson Van Lines.

"We had a call from this man who said he would furnish us a trailer to move us," said Rhoden, "I expected to see one of those tall things and I was wondering how we'd get our (furniture) lifted up and into it, but here comes a regular moving van, loaded with padded blankets and ramps.

"It was just a wonderful act of charity."

The two congregations plan to get together once they're settled in, and have a joint worship service and barbecue, with both pastors preaching, and plenty of cooks to prepare the food.

BOOK REVIEW: 'THE LAST LETTERS OF THOMAS MORE'

"The Last Letters of Thomas More"
Edited by Alvaro de Silva
Eerdmans, $20

Reviewed by Alan Cochrum
N.Y. Times News Service

Make no mistake: "The Last Letters of Thomas More" is tough sledding. The reward, however, is an unfiltered, firsthand glimpse of history.

In 1534, the author of "Utopia" found himself imprisoned for rejecting an oath to King Henry VIII as supreme head of the English church. In July 1535, he was beheaded.

Integrity of conscience is the key to "The Last Letters of Thomas More." "I never withdrew any man from it, nor never advised any to refuse it ... but leave every man to his own conscience," the former English chancellor says of the oath. "And methinketh in good faith that so were it good reason that every man should leave me to mine."

Editor Alvaro de Silva provides a lengthy introduction to the letters, as well as a glossary and clarifying comments. More's 16th-century English can be hard slogging for 21st-century readers, but the book provides a portrait of courage as well.

Daughter of mob boss makes debut as New York Post columnist

NEW YORK — Here's a columnist you can't refuse: Victoria Gotti.

The daughter of imprisoned mob boss John Gotti makes her debut as a columnist this Sunday in the New York Post, where she will write a weekly piece, Post Editor-in-Chief Col Allan said.

Allan pursued Victoria Gotti for the paper, where she will write stories about the city and its residents.

Gotti, 36, is the author of three best-selling romance-mystery novels; the most recent was last year's "Superstar." She split last year with her husband of 16 years, Carmine Agnello, who goes on trial in September on federal racketeering charges.

Gotti's new employer had one of the most unforgettable newspaper headlines involving her father. In 1986, John Gotti was acquitted of an assault charge when the alleged victim — after discovering Gotti headed the Gambino crime family — suffered a sudden case of amnesia.

"I FORGOTT!," the Post headline announced.

LOS ANGELES — The wife of "Kung Fu" television series star David Carradine has filed for divorce, citing irreconcilable differences.

Marina Dawn Benjamin Carradine filed a Superior Court petition without an attorney on Wednesday. She's seeking spousal support and asking to drop Carradine from her name. The couple wed on a studio backlot in February 1998.

The petition says the two separated May 10. They have no children.

It was the fourth marriage for the 63-year-old Carradine, son of the late actor John Carradine and brother of actors Robert and Keith Carradine.

"Kung Fu" ran from 1972-75 and attracted a wide cult following. David Carradine played a Shaolin priest hero, Kwai Chang Caine, the son of Chinese and American parents who was orphaned and raised by monks. As a youngster, he fled to the United States to escape a murder charge in China.

The mystical Western was revived as a movie in 1986, and updated in the syndicated series "Kung Fu: The Legend Continues," which debuted in 1993.

LOS ANGELES — Marilu Henner and her husband, director Robert Lieberman, are divorcing after more than a decade of marriage.

Each filed a divorce petition in Superior Court on Thursday, citing irreconcilable differences. They married in June 1990 and have two young sons.

Lieberman, who directed several films, including "Fire in the Sky," TV movies and the short-lived series, "Medicine Ball," seeks joint custody of Nicholas, 7, and Joseph, 5. He also wants spousal support.

Henner is asking for full custody of the boys with visitation granted to Lieberman. She also seeks spousal support, according to her attorney, Sorrell Trope.

The 49-year-old Henner played cabbie Elaine Nardo in all 112 episodes of the series "Taxi," a quirky sitcom which ran from 1978-83. She also starred opposite Burt Reynolds in the TV series "Evening Shade."

Her first book, "Marilu Henner's Total Health Makeover," was a best seller. She followed it with "The 30-Day Total Health Makeover." She also played murderess Roxie Hart in the Broadway dance-musical "Chicago," from 1997-98.

ARLINGTON, Va. — Kirsten Dunst felt a little shy about doing a nude scene in the upcoming movie "crazy/beautiful."

Playing a girl from a wealthy family, the 19-year-old actress was to walk naked through the house to get a condom, then have a sex scene with a poor Hispanic schoolmate, played by Jay Hernandez.

"Kirsten felt a little uncomfortable about too much attention on the nudity in her first sexual movie," director John Stockwell told USA Today in Friday's editions.

Stockwell cut the walk through the house and made sure that only Dunst's skin is visible but nothing graphic. He showed her all the footage in a monitor during the shoot and allowed her and her mother, Inez, to watch the editing of the scene to make sure Dunst approved.

Much of the scene was cut anyway to make sure the Disney film has a PG-13 rating instead of an R rating when it opens June 29. Stockwell had to trim the two-minute scene in half.

NEW YORK — Rob Lowe has no qualms about gushing over his role as the president's idealistic speechwriter on the NBC drama "The West Wing."

"I am so impassioned when I play him," Lowe said Thursday during an interview on ABC's "Good Morning America."

"It's not very cool to wear your emotions on your sleeve like that, particularly about your country, and about what's right and what's wrong. I mean, we live in a very jaded, cynical time. And, you know, I play a guy who has none of that. Proudly."

But the 37-year-old actor was nervous about doing a love scene with longtime friend Gwyneth Paltrow in the movie "A View From the Top," scheduled for release next year.

"I hadn't done a sex scene in like 10 years or something. Not particularly by design. It just hadn't come up," Lowe said.

"I was very nervous to even talk about it, you know, because it's, you know, it's Gwyneth, and I've known her since she was really little. And she's a really dear friend. And like, she and my wife are best pals. And I know the family."

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, June 9, 2001:

A slow start gains momentum with work and dedication. Finalize your goals this month. Expect to see positive results four months from now. Make time this summer for a loved one, or you could find yourself alone in the fall. Your partner appreciates your efforts toward accomplishment, but he still needs and wants a little attention. If possible, surprise that special person with a treat at the end of the year. A weekend getaway would be nice. Communication among family members should improve in just a few weeks. Plans that have been talked about can begin to move forward then. CAPRICORN can help keep you on-track and organized.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ Look for opportunities to learn by enrolling in a formal course of study or listening to someone who knows more than you do. Imagine that! What might seem like a burden at first can be turned into an opportunity. Take advantage of help from someone close to you. Tonight: Everything works out after some delay.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★ You'll have to give a little for relationships to thrive. "Because I've always done it this way" does not mean it should continue. Your significant other needs a voice in expenditures. Considering another's opinion makes for productive communication. Tonight: Weigh the alternatives.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★ Shopping is not a good idea if you are in an impractical mood. You could talk yourself into a purchase that you later regret. Clever advertising works against you when you are on a tight budget. Check out libraries and garage sales for special finds. Tonight: Enjoy what comforts you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★ A philosophical viewpoint relieves early anxiety. Relish the time you can spend outdoors — especially gardening — which can relieve tensions and put things in perspective. Tonight: Look for a good deal.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★ You could find yourself at odds with the opposite sex if you insist on your opinion. Showing off your intelligence will get you nowhere and might put a damper on a possible turning point with a person you want to impress. Pay attention to clues. Tonight; Moonlight and stars beckon.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ Be alert for practical solutions. You might have to resurrect a previous idea. Avoid mental exhaustion by shortening your work hours. If what you are doing hits a snag, switch gears. Try it a different way. Tonight: Read something motivational.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★ Approaching someone too soon with your proposal can deny acceptance. Wait for a better time. Don't let missing out on an invitation disturb you. You probably didn't want to go anyway. There will be times ahead when you feel more like socializing. Tonight: Get comfy with a pillow and a good book.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★ A morning spent focused on mental work can keep you away from others. Frustrating as that might be, devotion to your responsibilities clears the way for being available for the unexpected later on. Be ready to kick up your heels just a little. Tonight: An old friend could appear.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ Think again about the ways you can advance. You might need to reassure yourself that you have the resources to succeed. Giving a matter some thought can result in a welcome solution. Doubt diminishes later in the day. Tonight: Deal with an annoyance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ Keep your eyes open for a new idea. Look to technology to provide a product or service that you need. If you have to stretch the budget too tightly, it might be better to do more research. There could be a simpler way to accomplish what you want. Tonight: An "a-ha" moment!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★ You really want to do something different now, but you might be concerned that others will think you're bizarre. Take a breath before you act and think things through. Find someone who shares your interests. Tonight: Achievement!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ If moving ahead quickly doesn't seem to happen now, go back to the drawing board or try a different activity. Eventually, inspiration saves the day, but it might not be until you wake tomorrow morning that you have the answers. Tonight: Do something different.

Mazda Miata stokes more fire power with new special editions

By Bob Plunkett

MAPLE VALLEY, Wash. – This trip is too cool: A pair of two-seat Miata roadsters, each with its top dropped and the engine stoking more fire power in updated editions of 2001, chases one another over a narrow blacktop strip laced through fir-covered hills southeast of Seattle.

We're running the route as a single unit, the round prow of a trailing Miata hanging only a meter off the back bumper of our leading Miata.

Each driver plays the six-speed stick with one hand and steers a fat and sporty steering wheel with the other, using the right foot to accelerate and the left one to decelerate in racer style as the cars cut clean and quick lines across apexes of so many curves.

These pint-size roadsters, riding on chassis measurably stiffer in the new editions, rely on independent double-wishbone suspension systems mounted with larger 16-inch wheels and performance tires to hug every contour of the twisty course.

Perfect weight balance – engine up front and power directed to rear wheels with precisely half the vehicle's load resting on the front wheels and the other half on the rear ones – sets up that Miata magic of predictable vehicle control for the driver.

No other car comes close to matching the precision of Miata's pavement dance, but no other car – even powerful mega-bucks sportsters – feels this fun to drive.

And the new editions kindle more fire in the belly.

They're noticeably quicker, as the revamped dual-cam 1.8-liter and four-cylinder Miata engine expands in strength with a power gain made possible through the addition of new variable valve timing on the intake cam plus an increase in the plant's compression ratio (rising from 9.5:1 to 10.0:1).

Output now extends to 142 hp at 7000 rpm with torque spiked to 125 lb-ft at 5000 rpm.

Two trim versions appear this year, the base Miata and an upscale Miata LS that adds a High Performance suspension package with 16-inch tires and an optional six-speed manual transmission.

Further, a Miata Special Edition emerges in the spring wearing classic British Racing Green paint and exclusive equipment, such as a Nardi wood steering wheel and shifter knob, chrome-plated aluminum fuel door and polished aluminum wheels.

Despite the power boost for 2001 issues, Miata has not strayed far from the original concept, which first appeared in the creative mind of Tom Matano, a California-based Mazda designer, 15 years ago.

It promised the appeal of a 1960s British roadster but bulletproof durability of a contemporary Japanese machine.

The first production version of Miata arrived as a 1990 model and became an instant hit, then scored time after time on every critic's "Ten Best" list of cars.

Despite subtle changes in subsequent models, Miata remained essentially the same car through nine years: A pure two-person open-top roadster rigged with a small engine but ideal weight balance, plus the shortest stick shifter in the industry.

Then for the 1999 issues Matano led Mazda's California design team in devising a second generational expression of Miata that was more sleekly styled and more powerful.

The 2001 Miata evolves further with subtle improvements that hone styling and enhance performance.

Exterior modifications make Miata look more aggressive. The face sports a bold five-point grille and new larger headlamps with multi-surface reflectors and projector beam lamps, while at the tail two combo lamp clusters show shapes similar to the front lights.

Larger 15-inch alloy wheels become the standard for Miata now, with the optional 16-inch alloy wheels and performance suspension package available for Miata LS.

In the cockpit, materials move upscale in look and feel, with new high-back bucket seats in place and new analog gauges in the instrument cluster flashing vivid white faces ringed in beads of chrome.

The LS version adds additional hints of chrome to trim elements plus a leather-wrapped Nardi steering wheel.

A second air bag tucks into the dashboard above the passenger-side glove box and connects to a key-operated de-activation switch.

Behind the twin seats a high deck shows a storage net and stiff lateral brace, where a flip-up windbreak flap can be used with the top down to spoil air flowing over the windshield and backing into the cockpit.

Miata's manual folding convertible top, easiest to operate among all drop-tops, has a glass rear window with built-in defogging heat element. The driver can unlock this top and flip it down in seconds while stopped in traffic.

Other changes improved the roadster's dynamics, such as larger disc brakes. And Miata LS has optional ABS control with Electronic Brake Distribution, while the optional Suspension Package installs a strut tower brace, Torsen limited-slip differential and Bilstein shocks.

Base Miata stocks power steering, power windows and power mirrors, air conditioning, foglamps and an audio system with CD deck. Mia-ta LS adds tan leather seat surfaces, a tan top, cruise control, power door locks, the 16-inch wheels and limited-slip differential, remote entry system and a 200-watt Bose audio kit with four speakers.

Jack Sherman Mazda wins Mazda "Big Apple" Contest

Jack Sherman Mazda was the district winner in the Gulf Region's Mazda "Big Apple" contest. Steve Spain, sales manager for Jack Sherman Mazda, will be the celebrated recipient of a trip for two to New York City along with the other 27 leading Gulf Region Sales Managers and 3 General Managers. The trip is scheduled for July.

To receive this honor, Mazda dealers needed to achieve a set sales objective for cars and trucks sold during March and April. With only one winner in each district, they surpassed 11 other dealers with the highest attainment of that objective. In fact, Jack Sherman Mazda outsold the Dallas, Ft. Worth, Houston, and San Antonio markets to become the #1 rated Miata dealership in the Region during March.

A full agenda for the celebration includes a dinner cruise in New York Harbor, a helicopter tour of the city with lunch on the 106th floor of the World Trade Center, Broadway tickets to "The Lion King," and a closing party with several actors at a world-famous restaurant after the play.

Spain, a devoted Miata aficionado, is the owner of his fourth Miata since 1992. He is a co-founder and active member of the Tumbleweed Miata Club of West Texas and SE New Mexico, which now has over 50 Miata roadsters and close to 90 members involved. One of only five Miata clubs in Texas, they have developed their own website http://communities.msn.com/TumbleweedMiataClub and schedule regular rallies and events each month. Jack Sherman Mazda is the official dealer sponsor for Tumbleweed and has received national recognition for their support of Miata owners. Steve Spain is also a member of the Leadership Council for the national Miata Owners Club. Jack Sherman Mazda would like to thank all of their customers for the support they gave them during the contest.
