

Carter Promises Fight To Ratify SALT II

WASHINGTON (AP) - In a test of how best to deal with the Soviet Union and diminish the threat of nuclear war, the Senate is scrutinizing the SALT II treaty after hearing a solemn pledge from President Carter to carry his fight for ratification "to every American who will listen."

Carter's appeal to a joint session of Congress Monday night did nothing to diminish demands from critics for substantial changes in the treaty, which was negotiated over a seven-year period. "I think the treaty has no chance of being passed without amendment," said Senate Republican Leader Howard H. Baker of Tennessee.

The harshest reaction came from Sen.

Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., who called the president "foolish."

"I think he's been foolish," said Jackson, a hard-line opponent of SALT.

Strong support for the treaty came from Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., a frequent Carter critic on domestic issues.

"History will judge the Senate harshly if we fail to fulfill the promise now at hand," said Kennedy.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee is working out a detailed schedule of hearings on the treaty. The panel plans to open its public examination of the agreement July 9, with Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Defense Secretary Harold Brown presenting the administration's case.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, chairman of the committee, said he thought Carter "made a strong impact on the country." But Church added he thought it was impossible to gauge the reaction of the Senate at this early stage in the debate.

"What this country needs is an intelligent and rational and informed debate and I hope that the Senate will rise to that responsibility," Church said.

Carter made it clear, in a speech obviously aimed at a national television audience as well as Congress, that he believes the best argument for SALT is to consider the world without it.

Truckers Blockade Suppliers

By The Associated Press

Gasoline remained in storage tanks in Cincinnati, New Jersey and Rhode Island and wasn't delivered to Skelly service stations in 16 Midwest states as independent truckers turned their anger on the nation's fuel suppliers.

The blockades came as four states - Maryland, New Jersey, New York and Virginia - and the District of Columbia - prepared for even-odd gasoline rationing to deal with already short fuel supplies.

Shipments to some Minnesota towns were virtually cut off - four of seven gas stations in St. Peter said they were out of gas for June - and the chairman of the House Transportation Committee urged Gov. Al Quie to declare a state of emergency.

And in Oklahoma, judges ordered truckers to stop blockading an Oklahoma City truck stop and a Sun Oil refinery in Tulsa.

While the truckers tightened their squeeze on terminals, their leaders met in Washington with government officials to air owner-operator grievances: rising fuel prices, the 55 mph speed limit and varied state limits on the size of their loads.

"We're going to do what we can to accommodate the concerns that you have," presidential domestic-policy adviser Stuart Eizenstat told representatives of the drivers coalition.

But the truckers said they were not satisfied, and spokesman William J. Hill urged the nation's 100,000 owner-operators to take "an extended vacation" beginning at midnight Wednesday.

Man Injured On Motorcycle

Jay West, 25, of 141 Pecan, was seriously injured Saturday night after the motorcycle he was riding collided with a barbed wire fence approximately six miles north of Dawn.

West, who was listed in stable condition at Deaf Smith General Hospital today, received neck injuries, in the accident, which apparently occurred as he was riding across a field.

Companions of West, after discovering the accident, were bringing him to Deaf Smith General in a pickup when they were met by a Department of Public Safety unit, according to reports. The DPS unit contacted an ambulance, which transported the injured man to the hospital.

Deaf Smith County Sheriff's Office deputies met Potter County law-enforcement officers in Canyon to pick up a tracheotomy tube needed for West's treatment, according to hospital officials.

SW Bell To Sponsor Fun Breakfast Thursday

Games, cash drawings and community announcements will highlight the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Fun Breakfast at 6:30 a.m. Thursday in the Community Center.

Southwest Bell Telephone Co. will sponsor the breakfast, which will have the bell theme of "Be Choosey." The telephone company, in drawings, will award three Warren Hunter prints with handmade frames and four telephone truck "piggy banks."

Bell also will set up a display at the breakfast, according to manager David Ortiz.

Drawings will be held for $25 and $75, and $150 will be awarded in a special drawing for chamber members. To win, the chamber member must be present at the breakfast.

Hospital Reports Mild Loss In Administrator's Statement

By PAUL SIMS
Managing Editor

Deaf Smith General Hospital lost $14,367 in May, a month historically known for low patient totals. An unconcerned administrator Jim Bullard reported to Deaf Smith County Hospital District directors this morning.

In other business during today's regular monthly meeting, the board installed Assistant District Attorney Jerry Smith as a director, approved the hospital auxiliary bylaws for another year, adopted two medical staff bylaws changes and a patient "bill of rights," approved Dr. Bill Patton's hospital privileges and wrote off $88,408 in indigent accounts.

Bullard, in presenting the monthly operating report, said the hospital had $14,367 in expenses over-revenue, but that figure compares with a $75,000 loss in May last year.

There were 228 patients admitted last month, compared to 179 in May, 1978. To date this year, there have been 1,824 patients admitted to Deaf Smith General, compared to 1,557 last year for the same period.

The average daily census in May was 30.3 compared to 25.8 for the same month a year ago. Last month's average is below the year-to-date figure of 34.5 patients.

The hospital received $161,421 in total operating revenue last month, while paying out $171,162 in expenses.

County Clerk B.F. Cain swore in Smith, who replaces Kathryn Acton on the board. Ms. Acton, who was elected to the board last year, resigned in May because she is moving from Hereford.

USDA Lowers Sugar Supports

WASHINGTON (AP) - Federal price supports for U.S. raw sugar are being dropped by 1.73 cents a pound to 13 cents a pound in an attempt to move more of it into consumer channels and less into government storage.

The action, announced Monday by Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland, is expected to have little effect on retail sugar prices, now about 25 cents a pound.

Import duties are intended to force refiners to pay about 15 cents a pound for raw foreign sugar, which makes up about 45 percent of the supply that ultimately reaches consumers.

Actual U.S. market prices this year have ranged between 14.1 cents and 15.53 cents a pound.

The Agriculture Department supports sugar prices by lending growers and processors money at the set rate, with the crop as collateral.

Because market prices have been lower than those rates after interest and storage costs are added, processors have been forfeiting the loans, as the law allows - turning the sugar over to the government to sell if the market improves.

Bergland said that forfeited sugar owned by his department's Commodity Credit Corporation from the 1977 and 1978 crops will be offered for sale over the next 15 months, beginning July 1.

Support rates for the 1978 crop average 14.7 cents a pound; the minimum required by a 1977 law that has expired. No supports were offered between 1974 and 1977.

City To Appeal SPS Collections

By PAUL SIMS
Managing Editor

Hereford city commissioners Monday voted to appeal a Texas Public Utility Commission ruling which allows Southwestern Public Service Co. to bill customers for $25 million alleged to be unrecovered fuel costs.

By its action, the city commission becomes the first municipal entity to rule on the matter. City Manager Dudley Bayne, who for the past year has headed a steering committee comprised of Panhandle-city officials to look into a 1978 rate increase request by the electric company, said the cost of latest bout with the electric company will be between $5,000 and $10,000.

If the cost, which will include only attorney expenses, is $7,000, Hereford's share will be $319, provided that all other Panhandle cities join in the appeal.

Mayor Bartley Dowell said Monday night that Amarillo officials did not appear interested in disputing the PUC ruling, so Hereford's share may double. Amarillo represents approximately one-half of all Panhandle electric meters.

Hereford will take its case to district court in Travis County no matter what other Panhandle cities do, however. "I don't care if anybody else goes, we're going to court," Commissioner Emory Brownlow said while making a motion in favor of Bayne's recommendation.

"Let's make them (SPS officials) prove that they've got it ($25 million) coming," Brownlow said.

SPS, which was granted a $15.6 million rate increase last month (on May 15) after requesting $21.6 million a year earlier, began estimating fuel cost on a month-to-month basis last Nov. 1.

Previously, SPS utilized a two-month lag in billing customers for the cost of fuel - a monthly bill's fuel-cost adjustment represented what SPS paid for fuel two months earlier.

However, a PUC staff report last October said that the electric company must estimate its fuel costs each month, then bill customers at the same time. SPS then began to try to collect $25 million which it said was lost in the elimination of the two-month lag.

"It's money we would have normally billed for our fuel cost last September and October. We were carrying it as unbilled revenue," Hereford SPS manager Jake Webb told the commission.

Bayne disagreed. "We think they're saying that they don't want any more accounts receivable on the books. We feel they have done this without authorization from anyone," he said.

Attorney Don Butler of Austin who represented Panhandle cities in their fight against the rate increase stated in a letter to area municipalities that the PUC also failed to adjust the $25 million surcharge by the amount of the electric company's "overcollection of fuel costs" in 1976, a test year.

"In this regard, the evidence indicates the company's fuel revenue for the test

Q.-How many farmers in Deaf Smith County are receiving subsidies for land, and how much is paid in total?

A.-There is no subsidy paid on land, as such, according to the Deaf Smith County ASCS office. Support prices are provided on commodities, to make up the difference between current market prices and the target prices for commodities established by Congress and the Administration. This is a manner of providing "cheap" food for the American public, although both current market prices and target prices are, in most instances, far below the cost of production encountered by farmers in growing these commodities.

A set-aside program is provided for in current farm policy, in order to idle acreage to cut down on overproduction of feedgrains and other commodities. Farmers receive payments on set-aside land, but only if they follow conservation practices to keep the land in good shape, and free of undesirable weeds, growth. ASCS officials here point out that statistics on payments to farmers and other information will be published for the 1978 production year in approximately three weeks, and this information will be available at the local ASCS office.

The Branding Iron Mandina - Cobbling for the Last 50 Years

By TOMMY WEAVER
Brand Staff Writer

"I cut my teeth on a piece of leather," claims Joe Mandina, owner of The Cobbler, a new and unique boot and shoe repair shop located at 137 N. Miles.

"Mandina, you see, has cobbled for the last 50 years, acquiring an adeptness for the unusual art.

Mandina began working with boots and shoes at the age of 6, his father owned the Cinderella boot and shoe repair shop in Orange, Texas and the young Mandina would work in their every day after school.

Mandina made his first pair of boots before he ever left grade school. "My father taught me how to operate and use all of the tools, I walked in one day and he told me that it was time I made a pair of boots from scratch, and I did it all by myself."

Mandina was born and raised in orange, near the Texas-Louisiana border.

His father came to Texas from Italy in 1920. Mandina's grandfather made boots for the family in Italy, then his father picked up the trade, and Mandina in turn learned from his father. In fact, he still works with the antique tools of his father.

The art of boot-making is not a dying trade, according to Mandina. When I first started making boots we were lucky to get $25 for a pair, now people pay $80 or $90 for a good pair of boots. People get boots and shoes fixed more often with prices that high."

Mandina, whose wife helps him run the business, then went on to explain what he generally does when he resoles a pair of shoes or boots.

"When I fix a pair of boots or shoes I do it my way. First I have to remove the sole, and then I take out the cork filler. I'll replace it with a felt filler because they don't gum together like the cork does, this makes it a little more comfortable."

"Then when I replace the sole I'll either put on the prime oak leather sole, which is pretty tough, or I'll replace it with the nylon sole. Depending on what the customer prefers."

"To stick it back on I'll use the flax thread instead of the plastic thread. The flax is tougher and will wear longer than the plastic. That's generally how I resole a shoe or boot, but different demands require different repair. I would rather work on a pair of cowboy boots than

Soviet President Maintained Position

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — President Leonid Brezhnev and his aides presented "no change in any aspect of their position on anything" during the Vienna summit meeting with President Carter, says a U.S. official who was there.

"Never this week was there any evidence of a real dialogue, a real give and take, with the one exception of the Backfire bomber," said the official, who declined to be identified by name.

The American source, in a conversation Monday following the conclusion of the summit, reported these observations and conclusions:

Brezhnev, despite his failing health, was clearly in charge of the Soviet delegation although there were moments when he grew tired and dozed off. His physical condition deteriorated from alertness on Saturday, the first day of meetings, to haziness on Sunday.

On Sunday, his speech became so slurred that even his personal interpreter had trouble understanding him.

"During the meetings, particularly on Sunday, he gave evidence of closing his eyes and dozing." The others in the room "just tried to ignore him."

Cattle Feeders

Should 'Break Even'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cattle feeders, who have seen some of the best profit margins in years the last few months, will be operating closer to the break-even point by this fall, according to the Agriculture Department.

But solid predictions are difficult. Summer grass, excellent in some areas because of the wet spring, will be a big factor in the supply of light-weight cattle and their prices — for feedlots in September and October.

So will prospects for this year's corn crop, which the department will predict in its first production estimate on July 11 and in succeeding months through harvest.

A mid-year inventory report on the nation's cattle population scheduled for July 25 will provide a good idea on how rapidly the long-awaited rebuilding cycle among cow herd operators is taking place.

A new USDA "livestock and meat situation" report issued Monday said "the latest cattle cycle has apparently bottomed" and high prices for feeder cattle and "very favorable grazing conditions this year are encouraging herd expansion."

Odd-Even Sales

Planned in Texas

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says he will order an odd-even day gasoline sales program for three of the most populous counties in Texas in an effort to relieve the crunch in the fuel-starved cities of Houston, Dallas and Fort Worth.

"We will institute this program in those three counties, but the rest of the state had better understand it will get worse before it gets better," Clements said Monday night on a television talk show carried by many of the public television stations in Texas.

The governor termed the situation "critical" in Tarrant, Dallas and Harris counties where long lines snake away from gas pumps open only briefly or closed entirely on weekends.

Clements said earlier that voluntary conservation had not cut gasoline consumption enough.

"Between Harris County and the metropolitan area of Dallas and Tarrant counties are 38 percent of all vehicles in Texas," Clements said.

He said gasoline supplies will be allocated to approximately match the number of cars in the three counties.

Court Ruling Won't Stop Laetrile Use

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal ban on Laetrile — upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court — will not stop use of the controversial drug, says the assistant director of the M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute.

People who see value in the drug will keep using it, said Dr. Albert Gunn, who also holds a law degree.

"They'll go underground or go abroad," said Gunn.

The high court ruled Monday a federal ban on the sale of any drug not proved to be "safe and effective" makes no exception for drugs used by the terminally ill. The ruling effectively prohibits interstate transportation of Laetrile without federal Food and Drug Administration approval.

"I wonder how much the authorities will do in cracking down," Gunn said. "It strikes me as a fruitless effort."

After the FDA banned the general sale of Laetrile in 1977, Doctors and patients, who believed the apricot seed derivative could cure cancer, persuaded 17 states — including Texas — to allow its use.

Later in 1977, a federal judge in Denver ruled cancer victims had a right to determine their treatment, including use of the drug.

The letter also said the PUC has failed to reduce the surcharge by the amount of excess profits realized through transactions between SPS and its wholly-owned subsidiary, TUCO Inc.

When SPS sold TUCO to Cabot Corp., the PUC failed to reopen the rate-hike case to consider the effect of that sale, Butler also charged.

Commissioners, in the only other business Monday, tabled action on a request from the county juvenile office to establish an ordinance against the sniffing of intoxicants, such as glue and paint.

Bayne and City Attorney Earnest Langley said that other cities have adopted ordinances which restrict the sale of glue to minors but the proposal would be unfeasible in Hereford.

"How could you punish the guy selling the glue? He didn't know what the kid was going to use it for," Bayne said.

Presently, there is no city ordinance in Hereford prohibiting glue-sniffing. However, it is against the law to become intoxicated through the use of any substance.

We decided on Hereford because the people are friendly and the town is just real nice in itself. That's the main reason we're in Hereford," he said.

During World War II Mandina made orthopedic shoes and braces for returning veterans. While in Orange, he served as Disabled Veterans' district commander.

Mandina's hobby is pipe collecting — he has about 100 different pipes, and says he uses them all. He says he started collecting them by accident.

"I started smoking a pipe, and would buy two or three a year. I never throw them away, if they break I just throw them in a drawer and use them for spare parts ... and over the years people have brought me pipes from all over the world."

market for the 1979 crop," Bergland said.

Bergland said a loan level of 13 cents a pound will help CCC sell 200,000 tons of sugar it acquired from the 1977 crop. Loans on up to 2.2 million tons more from 1978 are still outstanding.

Bergland said the sugar owned outright by CCC will be offered for sale at not less than 105 percent of the national average loan rate, plus "reasonable carrying charges."

Sugar appears to be on the verge of "going out of condition" or spoiling will be sold at the market price, he said.

Bergland said the sale of government sugar will be done on "an orderly basis, with minimum disruption to the market."

He said the goal is to sell the sugar "at a price compatible with our market price objective" of 15 cents a pound.

The department also will pay the transportation expense to move 1978-crop sugar to other storage areas so room will be available for this year's production, Bergland said.

sense," said the president. "SALT II does not end the arms competition, but it does make the competition safer and more predictable, with clear rules and verifiable limits where otherwise there would be no rules and there would be no limits."

Without the treaty, Carter said: The Soviets could build 1,000 new missiles, double the number of warheads on existing missiles, triple the production rate of the Backfire bomber, increase the Backfire's range, encode all data from missile tests, and hide all their launchers.

The treaty limits each nation to deployment of 2,250 launchers for intercontinental weapons, a reduction from the 2,400 allowed under SALT I. The agreement also limits to 1,200 the number of ballistic missiles that can be armed with multiple warheads.

Carter pledged that the defense and foreign policy officials of his administration would testify before the Senate "in detail and in public" and added that "this treaty will withstand the most severe scrutiny."

The president also pledged: "I will explain it throughout our nation to every American who will listen."

Both supporters and critics are drafting new language to address troubling issues raised during the long history of negotiations.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., filed an amendment even before Carter and Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev signed the treaty Monday in Vienna, Austria. Goldwater's change would count the Soviet Backfire bomber among the weapons limited by the pact.

The Soviets have made it clear they would reject the treaty rather than include the Backfire, which they claim is a medium-range plane.

Other amendments in preparation would require the Soviets to destroy their giant missiles or allow the United States to deploy strategic weapons of equal size.

During their Vienna summit, both Carter and Brezhnev indicated that changes on major issues such as the Backfire and heavy missiles could kill the treaty.

But supporters also are working on new treaty language in the form of unilateral statements clarifying the United States' position on various issues. Supporters hope to remove potential ambiguities with new language that would not require additional negotiations.

A two-thirds vote — 67 senators if all 100 are recorded — is required for Senate approval of the treaty. But the treaty can be amended by a simple majority vote.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., the majority whip and a highly regarded vote-counter, said Monday he now finds up to 58 votes in favor, a maximum of 30 opposed and 12 undecided.

In addition to the Foreign Relations Committee, the Senate Armed Services and Intelligence committees plan to examine the treaty and make their views known.

As now planned, the hearing process would end in September, with floor debate beginning in October. Cranston predicts the floor debate — some of it in closed session to discuss highly classified material on techniques of verification — should last about six weeks.

If that schedule slips appreciably, the debate could spill over into the presidential election year of 1980.

Brezhnev

Nears Limits

Of Capability

NEW YORK (AP) — Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev will be able to work for only about 18 months more before cerebral arteriosclerosis impairs his memory and concentration, Newsweek magazine says.

"Brezhnev has a year or a year and half left, at most not of life, but of ability to work and make decisions," says a "knowledgeable Soviet source" quoted this week's issue of Newsweek.

The magazine says the Soviet leader suffered a stroke about four years ago, causing partial paralysis and contributing to slurred speech and a limp.

Arteriosclerosis is an aging disease that narrows the blood vessels in the brain, impairing mental capacity for work.

Farmers Will Meet On Alcohol Plant

South Plains farmers will meet at the Muleshoe Community Center Thursday at 8 p.m. to determine farmer support for the organization of a farmer-owned ethanol alcohol production plant to be located somewhere in the South Plains.

The meeting stems from increased interest in gasoline, a blend of gasoline and alcohol which extends the gasoline supply and provides better mileage.

According to Jimmy Wheatley, a farmer from the Springlake-Earth area who helped to organize the meeting, featured speaker will be Clayton Litchfield of Grain Products International, headquartered in North Dakota.

Litchfield's company includes five individuals who have developed packages for farmer-owned alcohol plants, and who have developed plans for 10-50 million gallon alcohol plants, while securing investments of some $450 million.

According to Wheatley, the meeting will determine if there is sufficient farmer support to build such a plant, to utilize wheat, grain sorghum, and corn in the production of alcohol.

"This could prove an excellent manner in which to get rid of surplus grain, possibly at a higher price than is presently available," stated Wheatley.

Field Day Is Thursday

Kershen Triticale Co. of Canyon will conduct its annual triticate field day at the Bernard Hartman farm eight miles west of Canyon Thursday, with tours at 10 a.m. and 1 p.m.

The firm is headed up by Ron Kershen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Kershen of Hereford. Special emphasis will be placed in triticate blends as grazers, and area farmers will be able to observe various triticate varieties.

At Wit's End

BY ERMA BOMBECK

You're looking at a real "decorator book" junkie. Years ago I decided it was more fun to read about a house than to clean it. Besides, it got me out of a lot of sticky situations. Every time someone came in and saw a diaper pail in the living room, a ladder in the hallway with a roaster on top of it, or the contents of a closet in the middle of the floor, I'd look up from my reading, shrug and say, "It's going slow, but it'll be worth it."

There isn't a magazine in the house that has not had a razor blade taken to it. But somehow the ideas never really worked for me, and I finally figured out why. Their decorating styles are just too innovative for me. For example, I've never been able to adopt EARLY GROPING in my house. These are the rooms you see without a single light in them. There's a conversation pit where people's faces are illuminated in the fire and the candles, but no light. I cannot imagine walking across the floor without tripping over a lampcord and three extensions.

I'm too late for CONTEMPORARY CELIBACY. These are the austere, white-walled, white-carpeted, childless homes that are a cross between a space center and a recovery room. No fingerprints, no light switches, no basketballs in the entranceway, and no sweat socks on the countertop.

JUNGLE AMBIANCE never worked for me. I once counted 87 plants in a single living room -- all in full bloom! Do you have any idea what the odds are for 87 plants to be in full bloom at the same time? (One was bearing bananas.) I have two African violets on the window sill in the kitchen. They won't die and they won't bloom and I'm stuck with them until plantahasia becomes legal.

PERCALE PERSUASION. It's a mystery how sheets on everyone else's windows and walls can look like imported brocade, but on mine they look like someone just slept on 'em.

The other day a dryer repairman presented me with his bill. I put down my decorator magazine to write him a check.

"I know what you're going through," he said. "When we moved into our house we nearly went crazy trying to get things finished."

I didn't have the heart to tell him we've lived here for eight years.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The letter from that creep who works in the hospital emergency room really got to me. He said, "Screw people who attempt suicide are nuts - they louse up the environment. If they want to die - good riddance."

My father committed suicide when I was two years old. I'm now 25. I never really knew my dad but those who did know him say he was a highly respected, beloved member of the community. When his business failed he took his life, hoping the insurance would pay his debts and help my mother raise us.

I'm convinced that anyone who attempts suicide is deeply depressed and therefore not rational. Everything should be done to save them. -- A Son

DEAR SON: Many people wrote to express views similar to yours. Here's another:

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Ten years ago, when I was 26, I tried to kill myself by mainlining a load of speed. I had a terrible case of the shingles, the bottom had fallen out of my love life, I lost my job, owed money to everyone and figured death was the best way out. I will never be able to repay the doctors who worked for twelve hours straight and pulled me through.

Today, I have three beautiful children and a husband who loves me very much. People who work in emergency rooms should be compassionate and caring. They are there to save people who have temporarily lost their way. Thank God the heartless man who wrote that shocking letter wasn't on duty the night I was brought in. Sign me -- Grateful

DEAR GRATEFUL: Read on: DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 21 years old. Last year I tried to kill myself by gulping down everything in the medicine cabinet. I almost succeeded but not quite. The rescue squad saved my life.

I want to help people when I grow up and that's why I am going to be a social worker. Anyone who thinks people who attempt suicide are not worth bothering with shouldn't be allowed to work in a hospital. He belongs in a slaughterhouse. -- Levittown Survivor

DEAR LEVITTOWN: There's more:

DEAR ANN: When I was 15, I was very confused. I couldn't get along with anyone at home. The teachers said I was a nuisance in class and I'm sure they were right. I was a troublemaker and lied a lot. Of course I was on drugs (started with pot and graduated to everything I could get my hands on). One night I tried to stick a knife into my gut. My sister drove me to the hospital and my life was saved. Now, six years later, I'm like a different person. I have set goals for myself and am working hard to be a better person. Thank God I had a second chance! -- Horseshoe Helen

DEAR HELEN: Here's another:

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm 16 years old and tried to kill myself three weeks ago by jumping in front of a car. I didn't really want to die. I just wanted someone to pay attention to me. God was with me. The car stopped in time and my only injury was a broken shoulder and some cuts and bruises.

My attempt at suicide was a cry for help. Nobody would listen when I said I was going crazy. I had to show them. Some "screw" people aren't looking for death. Ann. They are looking for love. -- Found It In Indiana

Plate Collecting Reaches New Height of Popularity

Many Americans, it seems, like their chicken in a bucket and their art on a plate.

And just as gourmets don't like the idea of chicken in a bucket, some art critics are upset by the collector plate and its new popularity. The plates, they say, are something more than a plate, but less than real art.

Still, 3.9 million Americans are now buying, trading and hanging plates which are made expressly for collectors. And dozens of firms, including Wedgwood, Royal Doulton, Royal Copenhagen, Gorham and Lenox, are producing the plates, often in numbered, limited series.

The plates feature everything from scenes of Americans by the late Norman Rockwell to birds, book characters and religious figures. Some series reproduce popular art, while others feature original works commissioned and executed as plate art.

Plate collecting is so popular, there is a whole plate culture: Plate collectors can subscribe to plate magazines and periodicals, attend plate-club meetings, and watch the Bradford Exchange -- a kind of stock exchange that charts the ups and downs of plate trading prices.

Plate collectors even have their own fair, and this year the third annual National Plate Collectors Fair, sponsored by the Collector Plate-makers Guild, was expected to attract 15,000 visitors in Chicago because, according to Guild President, Emil S. Polk, "The Midwest is becoming the geographic center of the American plate-collecting world."

All of this plate activity is fairly recent, dating from the mid-1960s, when plates first became a mass-market item here. Until that time, only specialized plates for Christmas, Mother's Day or other holidays had been available in large quantities.

Most of these plates were Scandinavian or German, and other European firms entered the U.S. market only after a French-produced collector plate, featuring birds on etched crystal, proved phenomenally successful.

After a series of recessions in the late 1960s, more and more Americans began to look at plates as an affordable investment. U.S. platemakers saw that interest as an opportunity, and they, too, came into the market in numbers.

Today, platemakers are cautious about portraying their products as an investment, stressing instead that plates should be selected and purchased for their aesthetic appeal.

"I tell people to buy what they like, and if their plates gain in value, that's just gilding the lily. The rising price just confirms your own good taste," Polk says.

Buy what you like, Polk advises new collectors, and buy from a good manufacturer because reputable, known firms, "commission good artists and produce quality plates."

Collectors and platemakers are proud of their plates, and sensitive about criticism. Indeed, much of their literature is aimed at defending the hobby. Conceding that plates may be, in the words of one critic, "canvases for the masses," a platemakers' press release counters with "why shouldn't the masses have them?"

And while those in the business have pinpointed their market -- most plate collectors are over age 35, and 74 percent are female -- the press release points out that, "There is nothing effeminate about plate collecting."

To buttress that statement, the release cites plate artists such as LeRoy Neiman, and points out that his work appears in "such macho magazines as Playboy."

But, as Polk says, plate art has "an enormous appeal for the average person," because, as he explains, the art is easy to understand, and the art form isn't intimidating.

"After all," he explains, "plates are familiar objects to everyone -- we've been eating off them for years."

Solve Puckered Seam, Skipped Stitch Problems

COLLEGE STATION — Solve common sewing problems such as puckered seams or skipped stitches with minor machine adjustments.

Or, simply check for correct threading and needle size or condition, advises Beverly Rhoades, a clothing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

PUCKERED SEAMS
Puckered seams may result from too tight thread tension, a damaged needle, too heavy pressure on the presser foot, improper threading, or too heavy thread for fabric, the specialist explains.

SKIPPED STITCHES
Skipped stitches may occur from a damaged needle, needle inserted incorrectly, or the wrong type needle for the fabric. Other causes include incorrect presser foot pressure, incorrect threading or too heavy thread for needle and fabric.

Avoid these problems by checking several items first, Miss Rhoades recommends.

THREADING
Before sewing, be sure the machine is threaded correctly--both the machine head and the bobbin.

Also, make sure the thread is not crossed and flows easily through tension discs.

NEEDLE
Check the condition and size of the needle. Coordinate size with weight of fabric.

Use a size 9 (65) needle for a very fine, delicate fabric, a size 11 (75) for lightweight, a size 14 (90) for medium weight a size 16 (100) for medium heavy, and a size 18 (110) for heavy fabrics.

In general, use sharps for woven fabrics and ballpoints for knits.

Or, use a universal needle--the correct size--for either.

For leather or vinyl, use a wedge needle.

Be sure the needle is smooth--free of burrs--and is not bent. Change needles often--synthetic fabrics dull needles quickly.

Coordinate thread size with fabric weight.

Use thread designed for light weight fabrics (size 80-150), regular size (40-60) for medium and medium heavy fabrics, and heavy duty (size 20-40) for heavy fabrics.

Also, use the same type thread in the bobbin used in the needle.

TENSION
Check thread tension by stitching through a double layer sample of the fabric.

For balanced tension and a smooth seam, the thread should lock between the layers of the fabric.

If the stitch locks on the top side, loosen the top tension.

If the stitch locks on the bottom side, increase the top tension.

BOBBIN
If the seam still puckers, the bobbin tension may be too tight. To correct, loosen the bobbin tension and adjust the top tension accordingly.

PRESSER FOOT
Different fabrics require different amounts of pressure on the presser foot.

In general, soft, sheer fabrics require light pressure while heavy, dense fabrics require heavy pressure. Other fabrics fall in between.

If your machine does not have self-adjusting pressure, adjust the pressure dial or screw until you have a smooth seam with even stitches.

To increase either tension or pressure, turn the dial or screw clockwise or to a greater number.

To decrease, turn counter clockwise or to a smaller number.

Do not be afraid to adjust the tension and pressure. The dials or screws were put on the machine specifically for that purpose.

They may need readjusting each time you change fabric type or weight.

Doctor-Patient Form Ideal Partnership

COLLEGE STATION — A doctor-patient relationship ideally forms a "partnership," says Carla Shearer, a health education specialist.

It works this way: the doctor completely understands what is wrong with the patient, and the patient completely understands the treatment, Mrs. Shearer says.

The specialist is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

TWO-WAY RESPONSIBILITIES

Both the doctor and the patient have responsibilities, Ms. Shearer explains.

A doctor's responsibility to the patient is to provide technical information the patient lacks.

A patient's responsibility to the doctor is to provide information about the health problem--to enable the doctor to make a diagnosis and decide on an appropriate treatment.

PATIENT'S 'HOMEWORK'

Before an appointment with the doctor, it is helpful for the patient to write down information about the present illness, Ms. Shearer suggests.

Also, make notes about any past illnesses which might relate to it.

List questions for the doctor, too.

TALK TO THE DOCTOR
At the doctor's office, use the list to make sure the doctor has all of the necessary information.

Also use the list to make sure all the questions are answered.

Do not worry about referring to a paper while talking to the doctor--it shows that the patient thinks the problem important enough to require full preparation.

UNDERSTAND MEDICATION
Finally, it is vital that the patient be fully informed about any medicines that the doctor prescribes.

Ask the doctor these questions about any medicine he prescribes:

1) At what times should the drug be taken -- such as before or after meals?

2) What should be done if the dosage time is missed?

3) How long should the drug be taken?

4) Are there any activities or food or drink to avoid while taking the medicine?

5) What are the possible side effects of the medication?

6) How long should the symptoms persist after starting the medication?

7) What are the drug's benefits and risks?

8) Should the patient avoid any other drugs--prescription or non-prescription--while taking this drug? If so, what are they?

ANSWERS PREVENT PROBLEMS

Having answers to the above questions will help lessen the chances of taking the drug the wrong way.

It also prevents having to call the doctor back for more information.

EFFECTIVE 4-H LEADERSHIP

An effective 4-H leader is an adult or teen leader who makes it possible for 4-H'ers to get together as a group to learn and do things that would not be possible for them to do alone.

The good 4-H leader offers security, suggestions and support. He or she doesn't dictate, determine and direct all activities of the group. Individual members must be the doers and learners.

4-H teaches "learning by doing" so leaders should remember that mistakes are learning experiences for 4-H'ers.

The 4-H "leader" is really a "helper" and "leadership" is "helpship." As 4-H'ers grow and develop, they too can become helpers as outward expressions of their caring and sharing for others. The time that a leader gives to 4-H members can make the world a better place to live and will be multiplied many times over through each 4-H'er who helps others.

As a 4-H volunteer leader you will help coordinate 4-H project activities for a small group of 4-H'ers.

The first and most important step is to get your group together so that members can plan what they would like to do in the project. You can help them to do this by calling the meeting and providing a place to meet. Younger 4-H'ers will need more guidance for their planning, but regardless of the age group, it's important for 4-H'ers to make their plans themselves.

After a general plan for the project is developed, you and the group should decide what will be needed and what other leaders will be needed to help you and your group. 4-H parents and other adults will be willing to help if you can request specific help. Some kinds of assistance you may need are refreshments, meeting places, transportation, speakers and tour leaders.

Although planning takes a little time, it will make the rest of the project much easier and more productive.

Involvement is the key to happy 4-H'ers. Let 4-H'ers themselves do everything they possibly can to develop their plans and carry out their projects.

Every meeting should be fun as well as educational. Parties, picnics, refreshments and other activities keep 4-H'ers enthusiastic and active. Often these can be combined with educational activities with just a little creative planning.

The 4-H program offers limitless possibilities because it involves so many different projects. It's exciting to think of the important effect you as a 4-H leader can have on 4-H boys and girls by helping them to develop into good citizens.

Astros Win Marathon Game Over Mets, 3-2

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Astros have been on a roller coaster ride in the past two days and haven't even visited an amusement park.

They lost to the Montreal Expos 10-3 on Sunday and came back Monday night in the Astrodome to beat the New York Mets 3-2 in 18 innings on Craig Reynolds' game-winning hit.

"I figured we'd win tonight because we always keep coming back," said Astros' third baseman Enos Cabell, whose confidence was shared by only a handful of the 14,076 fans who were present at the start of the five-hour marathon.

"St. Louis killed us earlier this year but we came right back and won the next game. That's the mark of this team."

The mark of the Houston team Monday night was a pitching staff that pitched 17 shutout innings after the Mets opened the game with a 2-0 lead of starter Rich Williams.

The game winner came in the bottom of the 18th when pinch-hitter Reggie Baldwin led off with a single and Julie Gonzalez came on to pitch-out. Terry Puhl then walked and the runners advanced to second and third base on a passed ball.

Shortstop Craig Reynolds then blasted a single down the first base line to score Gonzalez with the winning run to end the endurance contest.

The Mets got three straight hits to start the game and took the 2-0 lead on a double by Frank Taveras and run scoring single by Lee Mazzilli.

The Astros, who remained 1 1/2 games atop the National League Western Division standings, got one run back in the first inning when Terry Puhl led off with a single off Dock Ellis and scored on Cesar Cedeno's grounder.

Houston tied it in the fifth.

Redbirds Drop Two Games In Two Days

Team fortunes for the Hereford American Legion team continued to be on the dismal side as the Redbirds dropped two games Sunday and Monday to bring their record to 2-4 for the season.

Individual Redbirds though climbed into the district spotlight in the categories of hitting and pitching. The team has five players batting over the .300 mark with first baseman Steve Barrels leading the team with a .400 average. Don Weemes is second with a .375, followed by Ronald Plummer at .350 and the Hill brothers, Norman and Chris at .300.

Chris Hill is also second in the district in strikeouts as he has whiffed 30 batters after five games.

In the game Sunday against Tascosa, Hereford took an early 2-0 lead after the first inning, but the Rebels came back in the third to score three times to take the lead enroute to a 10-4 win.

Jeff Haezings took the loss for the Redbirds with Kevin Thompson getting the win.

Weemes and Plummer provided the Redbirds' only extra-base hits as both stroked doubles in the contest.

Last night's game had the Redbirds playing the league leading Berger team with Berger coming out on top 6-4. Again in this game Hereford managed to rally first but could not hold the lead as they

"I played the entire fusco in Montreal," said Howe, referring to the 10-3 loss. "It was great to come through and win tonight. It was a tribute to our pitching staff."

Tom Hausman, the last of four New York pitchers, hurled seven innings of outstanding relief for the starters and deserved a better fate than his second loss of the season.

Rookie Ben Ruberge, 1-1, got his first major league victory with three innings of relief. The lanky right-hander retired the side in the 17th inning and got himself out of jams in the 2nd and 18th innings.

Next action for the team will be tomorrow night as the Redbirds play their first home contest of the season in a rematch against Amarillo High.

The Sandies won the initial contest 12-3. Game time is 7:30 at the high school field.

THE HOT DOG VENDOR

There was a man who lived by the side of the road and sold hot dogs.

He sold very good hot dogs.

He put up signs along the highway and advertised in the newspaper telling how good they were.

He stood on the side of the road and cried:

"Buy a hot dog, Mister?"

And people bought.

He increased his meat and bun orders.

He bought a bigger stove to take care of his trade.

He finally got his son home from college to help him out.

But then something happened.

His son said, "Father, haven't you been listening to the radio and watching TV?"

There's a big depression.

The foreign situation is terrible.

The domestic situation is worse.

Whereupon the father thought,

"Well, my son's been to college, he listens to the radio and watches TV and he ought to know."

So the father cut down on his meat and bun orders, took down his signs and cancelled his newspaper ads and no longer bothered to stand out on the highway to sell his hot dogs.

And his hot dog sales fell almost overnight.

"You're right, son," the father said to the boy.

"We certainly are in the middle of a great depression."

Takes Over Team Tonight

Martin Returns As Yankee Manager

NEW YORK (AP) - Vowing that things won't be much different than in the past, Billy Martin has returned to manage the New York Yankees.

But one thing that may be very different is Martin's previously stormy relationship with slugging outfielder Reggie Jackson.

"Everyone knows we need Reggie to win," Martin said Monday after the world champions ended three days of speculation, acknowledgements and denials by announcing that Martin would take over the club tonight against the Toronto Blue Jays. He replaces Bob Lemon, the man who took over last July when Martin tearfully resigned the position.

"I don't think Reggie will be a problem. He's awfully important to the team. He knows it and I know it. When he is ready to go," Jackson has been sidelined for two weeks with a muscle tear. "He'll be the designated hitter. Then he'll move into right field, but not until he's completely healthy."

Throughout their 1½ years together with the Yankees, Martin and Jackson had been at odds. The two nearly came to blows on national television in Boston in 1977 as Martin lifted Jackson from a game when he felt the outfielder didn't hustle after a fly ball. Jackson also was suspended for five games for disobeying the manager's orders to swing away and bunting instead near the end of Martin's tenure last season.

Yankee owner George Steinbrenner apparently wants no such incidents this time and made that clear to Martin. Steinbrenner told Tom McEwen, sports editor of the Tampa (Fla.) Tribune, that Martin had agreed to tell Jackson:

"The Yankees can't win without him, that he is needed if we are to win another championship."

Jackson was mum on Martin's return, but Matt Merola, Jackson's agent, said he felt "under the right circumstance, they can get along."

And Martin wasn't worried about his relationship with

Jackson, either, saying he doubted reports that Jackson once accused Martin of "hating him."

"Reggie likes me. I think," he said. "I like Reggie. He'll play hard for me. I don't hate anybody. I'm a Christian man. I might get mad at some people

... I have no hate in my heart."

Martin, 51, originally was scheduled to reassume his duties as field boss of the Yankees next season. With the defending champions skidding to fourth place in the American League East, however, Steinbrenner decided to bring the fiery manager back now.

"All along, George has said, 'Billy will be back,'" a relaxed Martin said Monday night, "and he kept his word."

"I was getting tired and fed up with people asking if I'd really be back with the Yanks. George and I met two weeks ago, to iron out things for 1980 and he did everything he told me he'd do in that meeting. Except sooner."

Lemon had the club at 34-31, eight games behind first-place Baltimore in the AL East. While cleaning out his desk at Yankee Stadium, he vowed to "help Billy in any way."

"I hope this turns the club around like last year," Lemon said, alluding to the Yankees' miracle run that brought them from 10½ games behind Boston when he took over to the world championship. "Nothing surprises me in baseball, and what happened last winter (the death of his 26-year-old son Jerry in an auto wreck) put things into a better perspective for me."

"I found there were a lot more important things in life than baseball. George told me he felt a change would benefit the club and he pointed out to me that we were going to do it anyway in 1980."

"Steinbrenner has his opinion, he's the owner and that's his prerogative. A lot of things happened to us this year, but I'm not going to use any of them as an alibi."

Martin, who admitted he's "only seen the Yanks once this year, on TV," takes over a roster minus injured relief ace Rich Gossage and with Jackson and Guidry also hurt and on a day-to-day basis.

"I don't think any manager likes to take over in the middle of the season," he said. "It's not easy to jump in there."

"But I'm not worried. Like they say, it's a matter of time until a manager get hired and fired."

In less than a year, Martin has been both, neither time on schedule.

Can Billy And Reggie Get Along?

By HAL BOCK
Ap Sports Writer

Presenting ... drum roll, please, maestro ... the past and, it turns out, present manager of the New York Yankees, Billy Martin.

Surprise, surprise. George Steinbrenner wasn't kidding, after all. He said Billy was coming back and, lo and behold, here's Billy, just as the boss said he would be. So why, Steinbrenner must wonder, is everybody so surprised.

Well, there were, you must admit, a few doubting Thomases around. They were skeptics who believed that the Old-timers' Day spectacular last summer was nothing more than a facade, written, produced and directed by Steinbrenner with a Cecil B. DeMille flair to prevent 50,000 unhappy fans from doing permanent damage to Yankee Stadium.

Steinbrenner turned the boos to cheers with his startling announcement that Martin, who only five days before had resigned and seemed on the verge of a nervous breakdown, would be back as manager in 1980. The announcement came as a complete shock and left more than a few players with their mouths hanging open.

But in the days and months after that bombshell, it seemed Martin would never return. Given enough rope, he would hang himself and free Steinbrenner from his publicly stated commitment. And Billy had plenty of rope.

First, he hosted a little get together of New York writers and dropped a low level explosive on his longtime adversary, slugger Reggie Jackson. It was the return of Jackson after a Martin-imposed suspension, you will recall, that triggered Billy's famous crack about Reggie and George.

"They deserve each other," the manager said at the time. "One's a born liar and the other's convicted."

An employee does not joke about Steinbrenner's Water-gate-era conviction for illegal campaign contributions unless he is seeking work elsewhere. Martin was smart enough to realize that and recanted that crack with his writer friends. Or, at least he recanted half of it.

"I didn't mean it about George and I probably said it in jest," announced Billy. "But I did mean it about the other guy."

The other guy, of course, was Jackson.

Manager Bob Lemon is a comfortable, low-key guy, just what the team needed to recover from its first go-round with the fiery Martin. But Steinbrenner's prescription for instant recovery from the Yankees' current doldrums was someone who could light a fire under his team.

So Billy's back in town and the roar should rock Yankee Stadium when he comes out tonight to present the lineup card for the game against Toronto.

You'll have to forgive Reggie Jackson if he doesn't join in the cheering, though. Forgive him and understand why.

Nissalke Will Not Guarantee Winning

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - The new Utah Jazz coach, Tom Nissalke, makes no promises about improving the team's record, worst in the National Basketball Association at 26-54 last season in New Orleans' Superdome.

"I'll do the best I can. I'm not going to make any predictions," the former Houston Rockets coach told the news conference Monday at which his selection was announced.

Nissalke, 44, led the Rockets to a 47-35 record last season and an Eastern Conference playoff berth. He returns to Utah where he coached the Utah Stars of the now-defunct American Basketball Association before the franchise folded in December 1975.

He said his multi-year contract was "the best and fairest I've ever had."

Too High

Baptists Hang On To Win, 16-14

Avenue Baptist retained sole possession of second place with a 16-14 win over the Nazarene Church last night in the second game of league play of the church softball league.

In the other game, First Methodist whalpooned First Christian 11-16 in a time limit shortened contest of six innings.

First Nazarene took the lead in the game after two innings, scoring one run in the initial frame and then pushing eight runs across the plate in the second inning to lead 8-2.

Avenue Baptist came back in the third round to tie the score at 8-8, and then went ahead for good 14-12, after scoring six runs in the fourth frame.

As the time limit of one hour closed in on the Nazarene team, a last ditch effort, keyed by a single by Dave Scott and a base on balls issued to Terry Huffaker, gave hope for a comeback, but defensive efforts on the part of the baptists stopped the rally with only two runs to preserve the win at 16-14.

In the first game of the night, first Methodist took an early 7-4 lead and never relinquished the upper hand as they coasted to their second win of the season over the First Christian II team. The game was close at 13-8 until the fifth frame when First Methodist scored seven runs then followed with 11 more in the sixth to put the contest out of reach.

Tuesday's games have St. Anthony's with a 1-3 record facing First Presbyterian, 2-1, in the first contest and San Jose, 1-3, going against Community Church, 1-2, in the nightcap.

Ryan Blanks Texas

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) - It wasn't a question of how well Nolan Ryan would pitch for California against the Texas Rangers, but whether he would pitch at all.

During warmups, Ryan decided the troublesome tightness in his right calf wasn't bad enough to keep him out of action. The Angel right-hander went out and threw the 15th two-hitter of his career as in California's 5-0 victory over the Rangers, and Ryan came within five outs of baseball immortality.

Ryan and Sandy Koufax are the only pitchers to hurl four no-hitters, and for the second time this season the Angel fireballer kept opponents hitless through 7½ innings.

"My leg tightness was there and I was conscious of it," said Ryan, who missed a pitching turn early this month because of the torn calf muscle.

"I knew I couldn't drive on it, cover first base or break off the mound," said Ryan, now 9-3 this season. Despite the handicap, he struck out 10 and walked two in his eighth complete game of the season.

Simple Method Extends Storage of Broilers in Home Refrigerator

By Robert L. Haney
TAES Science Writer

How broilers are handled after purchase can either shorten or extend their shelf life in the home refrigerator.

That's one finding of study of the effects of four methods of handling and storing broiler carcasses in household refrigerators, with the results measured by bacterial growth on the carcasses.

Thirty-two broiler carcasses were bought from a local retail food chain and immediately taken to the Poultry Products Laboratories at Texas A&M University for treatment.

The broilers had been processed 2 days prior to retail purchase and transported to the retail outlet through normal market channels in ice-pack form.

At the laboratory, scientists with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station divided the carcasses into the following four treatment groups: 1) the carcasses were left in the unopened retail packages and stored at 39° F; 2) the retail package was opened to permit air circulation during storage and then refrigerated at 39° F; 3) the carcasses were removed from the retail package, repacked in CRY-O-VAC bags, the air removed from the bags, resealed and the carcasses then stored at 39° F; 4) carcasses were removed from retail package, washed in cold running tap water for 60 seconds, repacked in CRY-O-VAC bags, air removed from the bags, resealed, and stored at 39° F.

Initially, and after 1, 5, and 8 days of storage, two carcasses from each of the four treatments were removed and checked for bacterial growth.

Washing the broilers before repackaging produced a significant reduction in both initial bacterial levels and bacterial growth during storage.

Shelf life was significantly extended by washing before repackaging, but there were no significant differences detected among the three other treatments.

However, Experiment Station scientists found that the number of coliform bacteria obtained from the carcasses in this experiment were all relatively low initially. This indicates that the sanitation programs of the processing and distribution systems were effective.

However, coliform bacteria on carcasses which had been repackaged were significantly higher in numbers than those from the carcasses in the intact retail packages and from the carcasses which had been washed before repackaging.

These results suggest that the handling associated with repackaging results in an increase in the bacterial content of the broilers.

The number of mold and yeast on the carcasses was significantly reduced by the washing and repackaging.

Initially, mold and yeast counts were equally divided, but as the days of storage increased the fungal populations tended to become mostly yeast with only a small number of mold present.

In almost all analyses, the carcasses which had been washed and subsequently repackaged had lower bacterial numbers than the three other treatments and, therefore, had a slightly increased shelf life.

It also appears that the initial handling associated with repackaging may actually produce an increase in bacterial numbers and, therefore, a slight reduction in shelf life.

According to Dr. F. A. Gardner, Experiment Station poultry scientist doing this research, if the retail store has broilers that have been processed with good sanitation procedures and they've been well handled in transit, shelf life will be extended by washing broilers in cold water and repackaging them in fresh new bags.

Gardner adds that for extended storage of broilers, retail bags should be removed, broilers washed, repackaged in new air-tight bags and placed in freezing compartment.

POLLY'S POINTERS

Polly Cramer

Can spread be washed?

POLLY'S PROBLEM

DEAR POLLY - My crocheted bedspread is about 40 years old and has been packed away for about 20 of those years. It has brown spots on it that I would like to remove and I would like to know if you recommend washing the spread. - GERTRUDE

DEAR GERTRUDE - I presume your spread is white. Bedspreads are usually crocheted with sturdy cotton thread so will take to the use of bleach for removing spots. I have one that is as old as yours and have washed it many times using regular laundry detergent. If bleach does not remove the spots, try color remover but carefully follow the directions on the box. Should you have access to some certain stretchers the spread could be put on the stretchers to dry. - POLLY

DEAR POLLY - I keep an old cotton glove in the box with my clothespins. When I use my clotheslines for drying, I put on the glove and rub over them to remove any dirt or dust. - GAIL

DEAR POLLY - Just after moving I could not find the wall pencil sharpener but thought of using my vegetable peeler. It did an excellent job, really much better than a knife. So far this has not dulled the peeler and if it does I will keep the old one for sharpening pencils and buy a new one for vegetables. - BARBARA

DEAR POLLY - In the mail I received an ad for clothing with samples of the double knit fabric used to make them. I used one of them as a book mark and find it does not fall out of the book as easily as a paper one. - IDA

DEAR POLLY - I have eight hanging plants that do not have saucers and I water them in the kitchen sink. Often they would not drain enough before I rehung them and would drip on the curtains and window sills. So now I put them in the dish drainer and can see when the water is completely drained off. When I hang them there are no more spills. - MRS. E.P.H.

DEAR POLLY - I would like to share my recipe for making almond paste with Ellen and any other interested readers. Grind one and a half cups of whole blanched almonds (a portion at a time) in the electric blender or food chopper using the fine blade. Combine with one and a half cups sifted powdered sugar, one egg white, one teaspoon almond extract and one-fourth teaspoon salt. Work into a stiff paste and refrigerate in an airtight container or disposable plastic bag. This makes one and a third cups of almond paste. - MRS. H.H.C.

DEAR POLLY - My Pet Peeve is with those people who send "Get Well" or "Sympathy" cards and sign only the first name. Recently I received three such cards all signed "Bea" in different handwriting, mailed from different places even though I know three Beas living here. So I have no idea which ones remembered me. - ELLA

DEAR POLLY - My sweater had a few drops of wax on the front that I had not been able to remove but yesterday while ironing I placed a blotter over the wax and ironed over it. It absorbed the wax. - MRS. M.F.G.

DEAR POLLY - I have successfully eliminated mold by using liquid bleach either full strength or with water and suds. The mold has never come back. - DORIS

DEAR POLLY - I am a collector of cancelled stamps and wish to remind the readers, in the interest of other such collectors, to always put a stamp on a letter at least one-fourth inch in from the two edges so it will not be damaged when the letter is opened. - CAROL

DEAR POLLY - Take a piece of that paper we use in our dryers to combat static electricity and rub over your hair. You'll find it helps keep the hair in place and not flying at you when you are trying to comb it. - I.B.H.

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

A gouty topic

DEAR DR. LAMB - I've heard about gout all my life and what causes it, but I've never heard what the symptoms of gout are and what to look for. Does it cause sores or bleeding? I would like some information on how it affects people.

DEAR READER - Gout is caused by an overproduction of uric acid. This forms a salt and crystals of uric acid salt can settle in your joints. The classic symptom is the hot, red, painful, swollen great toe. You can have an inflammatory reaction with swelling in other joints besides the big toe.

Some people have high blood uric acid levels yet do not develop gout. This is particularly true in women although women also can develop painful, inflamed gouty joints the same as men.

The long term slow deposit of uric acid salts in and around the joint areas can cause joint deformity and gouty arthritis.

Other than the arthritic changes of either the acute inflammatory or the chronic deforming type, there are very few symptoms that you would identify specifically as gout. The rest of its side effects are caused by associated disease of other organs, particularly heart disease and kidney disease.

To give you a better concept of gout, I am sending you The Health Letter number 23, Gout, Uric Acid. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I enjoy the lovely big persimmons that we have and eat one a day. I was told by a friend that doctors say they cause stones and fiber balls. I'm 70 and do have pockets in the intestines. I have not noticed any problem. Is this dangerous?

DEAR READER - As a matter of fact, it is. Persimmons are one of certain food or plant substances that can cause bezoars. You can also get bezoars from hair.

What is a bezoar? Well, it's an insoluble aggregation of material that hasn't been completely digested. They've been known for centuries. In fact, the word comes from Arabic.

In antiquity these were observed in the Orient in the stomachs of goats and gazelles and were thought to have great medical value. It was claimed that they would cure such ailments as old age, snake bites and even remove evil spirits. A golden framed bezoar was among Queen Elizabeth's crown jewels in 1622.

When they form in the stomach they can cause ulceration, and as they pass into the intestine, they can cause obstruction. The literature on the entire subject is voluminous, but in reference to persimmons, there is a material in the unripened fruit or under the skin of the ripe fruit that coagulates with acid in the stomach. It is this coagulated mass that forms the bezoar. And, apparently, drinking copious amounts of water immediately after eating it actually makes the situation worse.

The obvious solution is not to use persimmons, but if you persist in eating them, there are certain precautions you should take. The first is to never eat any of the persimmons unless they are fully and completely ripe. And the second is to remove the skin and do not eat it or the pulp directly attached to the skin. And I'm not going to guarantee that will mean that you will not develop a bezoar.

Mother Loses Court Bid to Gain Custody of 8-Year-Old Daughter

WASHINGTON (AP) — A South Dakota woman who has waged a long legal fight to win custody of her daughter from her grandparents lost her bid for Supreme Court review Monday.

The justices let stand a ruling by the Texas Court of Civil Appeals granting custody of 8-year-old Tiffany Lynette Butts to her paternal grandparents, Bernard and Ila Butts of Kermit, Texas.

Bernadine Rose Brokenleg, the child's mother, argued in her appeal to the justices that the Texas court was wrong when it stripped her of parental custody even though it found that she was a fit parent.

Lawyers for Ms. Brokenleg, who is a full-blooded Sioux Indian, told the court that last year, 14 Congress passed a new law that would prevent state courts from taking jurisdiction in child custody cases of this nature.

The marriage between Bernard Butts Jr. and Ms. Brokenleg was annulled when Tiffany, the couple's only child, was 18 months old.

The mother and daughter thereafter moved from California to the Rosebud Sioux Indian Reservation in South Dakota.

In July 1973, Bernard and Ila Butts visited the reservation and received Ms. Brokenleg's permission to take Tiffany with them on a vacation.

As reflected in the Texas appeals court's opinion, "There is a dispute ... as to whether or not the grandparents were going to keep Tiffany after the vacation or whether she was to be returned to her mother on the reservation."

The Butts couple never returned Tiffany to her mother, and she has lived at their Kermit home ever since.

Tiffany's grandparents in 1975 asked a Winkler County, Texas, court to award them permanent legal custody of the child. That court did so, terminating all parental rights of Bernard Butts Jr. and Ms.

Brokenleg.

On the mother's appeal, the Texas appeals court ruled that she had not been proved to be an unfit parent and therefore could not be stripped of her parental right.

But the court affirmed the trial court's ruling that custody should remain with the grandparents.

"The child has physical features of a non-Indian nature and her return to an environment consisting of primarily Indian people would subject her to being reared under unnatural conditions that would be detrimental and endanger her emotional well-being," county judge Ken Spencer had ruled.

Such ruling deprived Ms. Brokenleg of her constitutional rights to equal treatment, her lawyers argued.

Freak Summit Snowstorm Blamed In Chain Crash

TRUCKEE, Calif. (AP) — Eleven vehicles including a "gamblers special" bus from Oakland crashed in chain reaction accidents in a freak snow storm near Donner Summit, sending 49 persons to the hospital.

The accident started about 11:30 a.m. Sunday when a Volkswagen overturned in the middle of the eastbound lanes of Interstate 80 just east of the 7,227-foot altitude summit. It ended when two motorcycles and a car collided in the westbound lanes.

Of the 49 taken by ambulances and the California Highway Patrol helicopter and patrol cars to Truckee Tahoe Forest Hospital, 11 were admitted with serious injuries and 38 were treated and released. Nursing supervisor Margaret Caldwell said none was in critical condition.

California Highway Patrol

Sgt. Richard Cunningham said the "sort of chain reaction" happened on a downgrade and curve during light intermittent snow.

A Volkswagen driven by Richard Reynolds, 23, of Reno, Nev., overturned when Reynolds apparently over-corrected the steering after sliding in the slush. The Volkswagen came to rest in the center lane, but Reynolds wasn't hurt seriously enough to go to the hospital.

The eastbound lanes are separated from the westbound lanes, which are at 12 feet higher altitude.

Two cars were stopped or stopping against the embankment on the left to give Reynolds aid. Cunningham said the bus rounded the curve, pulled left to avoid the Volkswagen, hit the two other cars, ran into the embankment and rolled over, blocking all three lanes.

Then came six other cars smashing into each other while trying to stop. Traffic was quickly diverted at Soda Springs to the old Donner Summit highway.

Cunningham said traffic became congested in the westbound lanes because motorists "were stopping and slowing down just to gawk," and that's where the other car and two motorcycles wrecked, sending four persons to the hospital.

The 40-foot coach, the largest of its kind made, was owned by Reno-based California Nevada Golden Tours and chartered by Richard Lee Tours of Oakland, the CHP said. It had 44 passengers and the driver aboard, said James E. Wood of Reno, chairman of the board of Golden Tours.

Baptist Leader Uninjured In Worship Disturbance

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Hundreds of stunned worshippers watched as a bearded man screamed "I need help" rushed the Rev. Dr. Adrian Rogers while the new leader of the Southern Baptist Convention delivered a sermon.

Rogers, who remained calm, was not injured in the disturbance, part of which was televised live during the Sunday broadcast of Bellvue Baptist Church services.

Rogers, 48, talked to the young man as deacons held him down on the stage, and embraced the intruder before he was dragged away.

The minister could not be reached for comment.

Choir member Samuel Garland, 52, was one of those who rushed to block the man from Rogers.

"I was going to grab and hold him, but he hit me with the first right smack in the pose and in a reflex action, I hit him on the jaw and knocked him flat, then several of us subdued him," Garland said. "He was growling like an animal and it looked like he was trying to imitate a werewolf."

The Rev. Elmer Bailey, an associate pastor, said the man was not shouting disapproval of the church's preaching or teaching. "What he was shouting for was help, but if anybody tried to help, he would beat them back," Bailey said.

Police identified the man as William E. "Mickey" Cotton, 21. He was charged with aggravated assault and disturbing a religious assembly — both felony violations.

Rogers was elected president of the 13.2 million-member Southern Baptist Convention, the world's largest Protestant religious organization, last week in Houston.

"His election was seen as a victory for the conservative element of the convention. Church members did not believe the Sunday incident was connected to Rogers' philosophy."
