Jobless rate decreases to 10 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's civilian unemployment rate fell another notch to 10.0 percent in June, continuing its gradual descent from the post-Depression peak of December, the government reported today. Still, more than 11 million people remained on the roster of the jobless.

Although the decline was a minuscule 0.1 percentage point — a fraction considered statistically insignificant by many analysts — it came as competition for available work intensified. The Labor Department said that nearly 1.2 million people resumed the search for work last month.

The overall unemployment rate, combining the civilian labor force with the constant, roughly 1.67 million-member U.S.-stationed military force, declined from 10.0 in May to 9.8 percent in June, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said.

Many private and government analysts have for months voiced fears that any sudden surge in the number of job-seekers would flood the labor market with applicants for work before businesses were willing to resume large-scale hiring, thus pushing the unemployment rate back up again.

But that did not happen in June. In fact, a separate survey of business payrolls, which is not used in the unemployment rate computation, showed that 350,000 jobs were created last month as the economy continued to rebound from the prolonged recession, which sent joblessness to 10.8 percent in December.

Since then, the rate has dropped 0.8 percentage point, and more than 1,100,000 jobs have been created, replacing about half those lost during the recession.

Total civilian unemployment in June stood at 11,146,000, some 46,000 fewer than in May and well below the 12 million of December.

June's 10.0 percent civilian unemployment rate was the lowest since joblessness stood at 9.9 percent last August.

In another sign of the improving labor market, the bureau's report showed that the ranks of "discouraged workers" has shrunk by 140,000 since the first of 1983, although blacks and women continue to make up a high proportion of the 1.7 million Americans who remain classified as discouraged because they have abandoned the search for work.

The grand total of Americans who had jobs in the civilian economy in June eclipsed the 100 million mark — rising from 99,557,000 to 100,786,000, an increase of about 1.2 million.

But that was offset in large part by a seasonally adjusted 1.2 million increase in the number of people seeking work, which was "substantially more than expected" and was the largest May-to-June gain ever, the report said.

Besides the re-entry into the labor force by many previously "discouraged workers," there was a huge influx of high school and college graduates.

In raw figures, those not adjusted for seasonal variations, the number of job seekers swelled by 3.1 million. Because school closings are a normal occurrence, the government adjusts the employment figures each June to reflect that predictable development so that the normal labor force expansion due to graduation will not distort the actual health of the job market.

Without the adjustment process, the civilian unemployment rate would have risen to 10.2 percent in June.

The unemployment rate is based on the Census Bureau's Current Population Survey of some 50,000 randomly selected U.S. households. Government surveyors ask respondents to say how many people in the household are working, are unemployed, are out of work and not seeking a job, and so forth, and to give the reasons.

Within the various population groups, unemployment among teenagers spurted from 23.0 percent in May to 23.6 percent in June, due mainly to the large-scale entry of graduates into the labor market.

Ambassador to Mexico speaks out

MEXICO CITY (AP) — U.S. Ambassador John Gavin is abandoning his low profile and becoming increasingly outspoken on the delicate relations between two countries that share a common border and a complicated past.

John Gavin

Gavin says he is fighting "merchants of disinformation" who play on Mexican fears about U.S. influence here.

And he has taken the heat for his forthright defense of the United States, often resented in Mexico for its military conquests a century ago and its economic dominance now.

Gavin, chosen by President Reagan two years ago to head the largest U.S. foreign mission, adopted a low public profile at the start of his tenure here. Lately he has taken the offensive to answer criticisms directly.

"Doing nothing accepts the charges as fact," Gavin said in an interview with The Associated Press. "We owe it to our country and to the Mexicans to tell the truth."

The U.S. Embassy was accused of interfering in Mexico's domestic affairs when Gavin's deputy, George High, met with government and opposition politicians in the northwestern city of Hermosillo in May.

In another instance, Mexicans reacted to U.S. news reports about economic problems and social discontent by charging they are part of a U.S. government "conspiracy to undermine Mexico's social tranquility."

More recently, Gavin says, a political officer at the embassy was accused of being a CIA spy. One leftist group called on the government here to expel Gavin from the country. The allegations were played up in the news media, then dropped.

He calls all the charges "absurd fantasies."

In a series of speeches, Gavin has lashed out at "certain sectors" in Mexico he says are attempting to spread misinformation.

"When called on we have helped Mexico in every way we could," Gavin said in a speech at the Los Angeles World Affairs Council in May.

"But to an alarming and puzzling degree, the attitudes of some Mexicans seem to be conditioned by old hostilities and by new fantasies,"

Gavin said. "Enemies of our friendship have been sniping at us, often by inventing stories which, despite their obvious absurdity, too often are believed by the gullible."

His object in speaking out, he says, is "not so much to convince the merchants of disinformation but to give reasonable and thinking people in this society valid and correct information from which they might judge and draw their own conclusions."

In the interview, the ambassador made it clear he felt leftist groups were responsible for circulating misinformation about the United States.

The attacks "are generated from a certain sector that I don't think responds to the true feelings of Mexicans as a whole — working from an ideology that is imported," Gavin said.

Asteroid roars by Earth at 80,000 miles an hour

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Like some cosmic video game, a just-discovered asteroid — a space rock half a mile across — roared close by the Earth this week at 80,000 mph, scientists say.

Although "close" on this occasion means nearly six million miles away, asteroids have been crashing into the earth's landscape for billions of years and more collisions are all but inevitable — at least in the next million years or so, said Eleanor F.

Helin of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

On the other hand, she said Thursday, the solar system's several thousand asteroids, which apparently are remnants of a potential planet that never quite got together, contain a wealth of metals, minerals and oxygen that could be mined, processed and used for construction projects far out in space.

"I certainly don't want anything sensational read into this," she said,

"but about every million years we are going to have three or four impacts...by kilometer-size objects."

A kilometer is six-tenths of a mile and researchers have estimated the crash would be about like exploding 25,000 hydrogen bombs in one place.

Arizona's Great Meteor Crater, a hole 570 feet deep and 4,150 feet across, was carved by such an impact about 25,000 years ago. A popular theory suggests a giant asteroid crash and its effects on the environment may have wiped out the dinosaurs 60 million years ago.

Scientists have discussed various schemes for dealing with an Earth-bound asteroid, usually with missiles and nuclear weapons, Ms. Helin said.

"The idea is they would nudge the asteroid ever so slightly to change its course and this would presumably prevent a collision," she said. "The kicker is that one would have to discover this asteroid (a year before it arrives) and recognize its orbit very precisely before one could prevent a collision."

Several centers around the world are systematically scouring the heavens for "Earth-grazing" asteroids. The program started by Ms. Helin and the U.S. Geological Survey's Eugene Shoemaker at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration lab is probably the longest running and most successful.

Since 1973, she and her colleagues have used observations at the California Institute of Technology's Palomar Observatory near San Diego to discover dozens of asteroids, including 12 to 14 which pass near Earth.

She said about 55 asteroids are known to have orbits that periodically cross the Earth's orbit, although the odds are greatly against both bodies being at the same point at the same time.

Cost structure is albatross around American's neck

Teresa Cookson of Travel Time operates an American Airlines Sabre computer, which lists most airlines' flights.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the final article in a six-part series detailing commercial airlines — what they can do, how consumers should use them, how a travel agent can help, and more.

By JIM PRESNELL
Business-Energy Writer

"We're trying desperately to keep our service levels high," American Airlines' general manager Jack McAdams said, "at a time when we must increase our productivity and lower our expenses."

Restricted fares on American — an airline that is 46 years old — are now as cheap as unrestricted fares on Southwest or Muse, airlines with much lower per-ticket and per-passenger costs. The fare will be cheap if arrangements are made well ahead of time and the ticket bought and paid for.

Muse Air raised its fare to Dallas and a premonition of airline-industry watchers is that a major industry-wide fare hike is in its way.

But cheap flights of any kind will hurt American — which has heavy employee-seniority expenses as well as high service costs and astronomical fuel bills.

Even so, this airline has a policy of meeting prices paid on competitors' flights, regardless of the type of airline the competition is with.

SuperSaver fares on American, as well as discounted pre-paid and other types of restricted tickets, make the airline relatively inexpensive to fly (with some preplanning) and American is simply trying to reduce costs in certain ways in order to better afford pricing competition from major- and minor-league airlines.

It recently arranged to purchase 20 Douglas DC-9 Super 80s and 15 Boeing 787s — both new-generation planes that will help American cut fuel expenses and reduce crews from three (on 727s) to two in the cockpit.

Some of the 727 jets American flies are 12 to 15 years old, older than competing airline Southwest itself. American's old jets are much less fuel-efficient than the new generation of General Electric, Pratt & Whitney, and Rolls Royce-powered Douglas and Boeing jets.

WEATHER SUMMARY

The Forecast For 8 p.m. EDT Saturday, July 9
High Temperatures

National Weather Service
NOAA, U.S. Dept. of Commerce

The National Weather Service forecasts showers for Saturday for Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, Arizona, Wisconsin, Michigan and parts of Florida.

Middle 90s forecast for Basin

Sunny skies and summertime heat should steam down on the Permian Basin this weekend. According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, skies will remain fair tonight and Saturday. Temperatures will drop only into the lower 70s tonight and are expected to climb into the middle 90s Saturday. Tonight's southeasterly winds at 5-10 mph will increase slightly to 5-15 mph Saturday. Thursday's high of 93 missed 1964's blistering high of 103 by 10 degrees. The overnight low of 71 was 15 degrees warmer than the record low of 56, set in 1952.

Odessa man dies in accident

Carl Arnold Chambers Jr. of Odessa was killed about 8:30 p.m. Thursday when his car went out of control on the Andrews Highway and overturned. Police reported that Chambers, 26, was trapped in the 1970 two-door sedan after it flipped and rolled over onto a concrete-brick fence at 4509 Andrews Highway. Midland firemen worked 20 to 30 minutes to free the body from the car with their Jaws of Life tool. Top of the car was crushed, police reported.

Asteroid roars by Earth at speed of 80,000 mph

The rock that zipped past Earth on Thursday, asteroid 1983LC, was one of three Ms. Helin, R. Scott Dunbar and Caltech's Steve Swanson found on time-exposure photographs taken at Palomar on the night of June 12-13. Asteroid 1983LC will be passing this way again in October after looping around the sun, she said. Then its elongated orbit takes it out near Jupiter before it crosses Earth's orbit again in about 2 1/2 years. These near-Earth asteroids seem to be mavericks that are kicked out of the asteroid belt, a loose band of thousands of asteroids that range in size from boulders to mini-planets 600 miles across. The belt orbits the sun between Mars and Jupiter. Ms. Helin said that when the solar system was born 4 1/2 billion years ago, a few large asteroids may have been "seeds that would have been there to collect into a (tenth) planet, but they didn't make it." Repeated collisions broke some into pieces that in turn were battered into the current collection of rocks. Such collisions may also have bounced some into skewed orbits that encounter Earth. As part of the original stuff of the solar system, she said, the asteroids are scientifically intriguing. She said "asteroid people...do discuss the possibility of (a space mission) to rendezvous with asteroids or to take samples from the surface and bring them back to Earth." Though technologically feasible right now, she said, "the earliest this is possible is after 1990" and that would require a government commitment that has not been made.

Campaign employee denies network of spies

WASHINGTON (AP) — The man said to have recruited former CIA operatives for the 1980 Reagan campaign says that he knew of no network organized to obtain inside information from the Carter camp. Denying a report published by The New York Times, Stefan A. Halper, 38, who served as director of policy coordination for the Reagan campaign, said Thursday, "That is totally untrue."

However, Halper's nominal boss in the Reagan campaign, Robert Garrick, a retired reserve admiral who was in charge of plans and policy, has acknowledged that he set up a separate group of "friends who lived near big air bases" to monitor military movements that might disclose whether President Carter was making another effort to free U.S. hostages then held in Iran. Halper had previously worked for Reagan's primary Republican opponent and eventual running mate, George Bush, and did not get along with Garrick. The hostility between them was so great, that neither man knew much of what the other was doing, Halper said. As the swirl of charges and countercharges, FBI and congressional investigations into possible spying by the Reagan campaign has grown over the past two weeks, increasing attention has been paid to whether Reagan's aides organized an effort to obtain classified information from the Carter White House, possibly in violation of law.

But in these cases, Garrick denies receiving any inside information and Halper says the network credited to him never existed. On Thursday, the Times quoted unnamed sources as saying Halper organized ex-CIA officials to obtain inside foreign policy information. One source was quoted as saying, "There was some CIA stuff coming from Halper and some agency guys were hired." Halper acknowledged that some former agency officials, who had been pleased with Bush's former tenure as head of that agency, worked informally on Bush's behalf. But he said, "There was no network of ex-intelligence officers undertaking any effort to penetrate the Carter camp. There was no organized effort of any kind to penetrate Carter's camp."

Asked if he had ever seen any material from inside the Carter administration, Halper said, "I have a good memory and if I had seen anything from the White House, the CIA, the National Security Council or the State Department, I would remember that and I don't." Halper said his group prepared a daily summary of news reports for top campaign aides and Reagan and Bush, descriptions of politics and local issues in areas that Reagan was visiting and quick analyses of "veering issues like truck deregulation or the Iranian assets in U.S. banks." Halper said his staff consulted think tanks and such senior former foreign policy figures as Brent Scowcroft, who was former President Gerald R. Ford's national security adviser.

Garrick, in a recent interview, said he tried to monitor the movement of military aircraft to be prepared for a so-called "October surprise" by Carter just before the November elections. Reagan's campaign aides made no secret of their expectation that Carter would make some dramatic effort to bring the hostages home before the election. Specifically, Garrick said he had friends watch for large transport planes — that could be carrying supplies to swap for the hostages — leaving Norton Air Force Base in California and McGuire Air Force Base in New Jersey en route to Iran.

He also had friends watching hospital planes stationed in West Germany. But the surprise never developed and the hostages were not released until the day Carter left office.

Cost structure hurting American Airlines

American is hurting, McAdams said, and the company's cost structure is like an albatross: very heavy. McAdams, its manager in Midland, said that "More major air carriers are going to go the way of Braniff (bankruptcy) if they (airlines) do not effectively reduce costs."

McAdams said American is second only to Southwest in the number of passengers it deals with in Midland. American carries from 11,000 to 13,000 passengers each month, in this market, and is the second-largest U.S. airline besides United. Profits for American routes out of Midland and Odessa would be very good under normal conditions — it's a short hop to Dallas to connect with any American flight. But discounted fares and lots of air travelers picking up on cheap flights, combined with American's desire to meet the competition's fares, has forced it to lose money.

McAdams said American lost money in the first quarter of this year, but made money in the most recent month. It has a 94 percent dependability on its departing flights from here, a usual 45-50 minute wait for its connections in Dallas, and 11 to 30 percent no-shows on each flight. "Passengers prefer seat assignment" to having to fight for space aboard Southwest jets, McAdams said as a Southwest 737 made one of the "10 minute turnarounds" for which that airline is famous. The jet simply gets fueled, deplanes and loads passengers, routes baggage, and goes.

"Southwest doesn't have frills," said McAdams. He explained that American Airlines now has connecting boarding passes in Dallas so the flight to an ultimate destination on the airline will carry a reserved-seat designation on American's computers. American provides service: Meals on many flights, with the possibility of special meals for certain people; assigned seating by section and window position; boarding passes from travel agents or counter; ability to carry an unaccompanied child past the first destination and onto connecting flights.

In meeting the demands of consumers, American relies on early bookings for travel planned well in advance. This helps it preplan its flights, manpower, catering, and other resources. "There are many deeply discounted fares on the larger carriers," McAdams said, "but this is as low as airfares will ever be."

American has been "devastated by the fare wars" according to McAdams, when new and relatively new airlines like Southwest and Muse have come into Texas markets with lower passenger costs and (because of deregulation) cut fares wildly and manage to make money on a per-seat basis.

"Our cost structure is significantly higher than theirs," McAdams said. "Like computers, the new jets are state-of-the-art, much more advanced than their predecessors." McAdams stated, "We are keeping services high. But to deal with costs, we have to restructure pay scales, introduce union groups to part-time employment, and fully cross-utilize employees for performing more tasks during their daily work schedule," in addition to buying new jets that are cheaper to operate.

Millionaire's ex-lover murdered by boyfriend

Vicki Morgan

The svelte beauty with the tawny eyes and high cheekbones was swept in September 1970 from Sunset Boulevard into the privileged life of Bloomingdale, friend and unofficial adviser to Ronald Reagan. She said the department store magnate and Diners Club financier kept her for 12 years as his mistress, confidante and kinky-sex partner.

Miss Morgan died Thursday at age 30, unemployed, a year after her headline-making "palmistry" lawsuit. Her fortunes dwindled with Bloomingdale's death from cancer last August and court rulings against her claims. She was killed the day she planned to move to a place where the rent was cheaper. Her boyfriend confessed to the murder and said he and Miss Morgan had an argument about money, police said.

Miss Morgan said she received $18,000 a month from Bloomingdale, a man 36 years her senior, before the payments were cut off in June 1982 at the request of his wife, Betsy.

Miss Morgan's subsequent $10 million lawsuit, seeking $5 million for breach of an oral contract for lifetime support and $5 million from his wife for allegedly interfering with the contract, made headlines noticed even in the White House.

"God, what a way to go," said attorney Marvin Mitchelson, after learning of the death of Miss Morgan, who had a 14-year-old son.

Mitchelson, whose first "palmistry" lawsuit obtained communal property rights for live-in lovers, had helped her file the suit against the Bloomingdales a year ago today. Miss Morgan later dropped him from the case.

Police found her nightgown-dressed body in her bed at a rented Studio City condominium. Her live-in boyfriend, Marvin Pancoast, 33, walked into a police station and said, "I just killed someone," according to Police Lt. Dan Cooke. Pancoast was booked for investigation of murder, the officer said.

"He waited for her to go to sleep and beat her to death," Cooke said.

Miss Morgan "had been struck multiple times with a baseball bat in the head," Cooke said. Pancoast told investigators he fought with Miss Morgan on Wednesday night, "basically about finances," Cooke said. "Both were unemployed."

Last September, Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Christian Markey rejected most of Miss Morgan's lawsuit in a ruling upheld by the state Supreme Court.

The cash she recently raised by selling her Mercedes-Benz was dwindling. And the owner of her three-bedroom condo, Robert Epstein, said she asked to be released from a $1,000-a-month lease so she could move in Thursday with friends in Beverly Hills.

Movers she hired mentioned less elegant destinations: Burbank or North Hollywood. And Pancoast told police they were evicted.

Unemployment rate drops to 10 percent

There was a substantial over-the-month decline in the jobless rate for adult men, who had been hard hit by the effects of the recession on heavy manufacturing, as their unemployment rate dropped 0.6 percentage point to 9.0 percent, the lowest since August.

Among other population groups, these were the jobless rates in June: —Adult women, 8.6 percent, up from 8.5. —Whites, 8.6, down from 8.9. —Blacks, 20.6, unchanged.

—Hispanics, 14.0, up from 13.8.

In one sour note, the average duration of unemployment continued to rise last month, reaching 22 weeks, up from 20.4 weeks. And the number of people who have been jobless for 27 weeks or more grew by 165,000, to nearly 3 million, comprising 26 percent of all people out of work.

The report said that "job gains were widespread in both the goods- and service-producing industries. In testimony prepared for the congressional Joint Economic Committee, Janet L. Norwood, commissioner of labor statistics, said the labor market "continued to show signs of strong recovery in June."

But Ms. Norwood noted that "no improvement has occurred in the job situation of black workers during this period."

Last week, amid a new round of signs that the business turnaround is picking up steam, the administration revised downward slightly its forecast for average unemployment in the fourth quarter, from 9.7 percent to 9.6 percent.

At the same time, President Reagan declared that the economy "is beginning to sparkle again."

The administration revised its economic forecast, predicting that the gross national product (GNP) would expand by 5.5 percent — rather than 4.7 percent — from the fourth quarter of 1982 to the fourth quarter of this year.

In addition, a survey released earlier this week said consumers, sensing improvement in the economy, are showing new interest in buying houses, cars and appliances. Economists have said that such big-ticket spending would improve hiring prospects immensely.

Ambassador to Mexico abandons low profile

In diplomatic circles, the U.S. ambassador is known to have good access to Mexican government leaders. His contacts in the Reagan administration and his qualifications for the job are rarely questioned.

Gavin, 52, is a graduate of Stanford University where he did senior honors work in the economic history of Latin America. He is fluent in Spanish. His mother was born in Mexico's northwestern Sonora state. He shares a conservative Republican philosophy with Reagan and, like the president, spent years working as an actor in Hollywood. Both men also served stints in the leadership of the Screen Actors Guild.

But Gavin says he does not want to enter politics.

"I don't think I'm cut out for elective office," he said in the interview. "After this, unless the president asks me to do something else, I assume I'll go back to what I was doing before."

"Campaigning is something you have to have a special desire to do. I wouldn't have wanted to run for this office," he said, adding after a pause and a smile, "I think." Gavin said his key ability as ambassador has been to mix embassy management with hard work, including behind the scenes diplomacy. "A lot of people get the impression that being ambassador is a social activity," he said. "It's a tedious, stimulating, sometimes debilitating job. They say I generate more work around here than some of my predecessors."

But, he adds, "a good manager makes good use of his people. One executive can't do it alone."

Playground mishaps injure 118,000 yearly

About 118,000 children in the United States are admitted to emergency rooms each year because of playground-equipment accidents. About 77 percent of such injuries are sustained in falls.

Oilman fights big oil, banks, large law firms

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Multimillionaire Clinton Manges compared himself to David taking on Goliath as he talked in a copyright interview with the Laredo News about his battles with major oil companies, banks and large law firms.

Clinton Manges

"In fact, I feel smaller than David," Manges said during a discussion of his lawsuit with Seattle First National Bank and Mobil Oil Co.

Seattle First National Bank filed a $100 million lawsuit against the South Texas oilman and rancher claiming Manges had defaulted on loans totaling $40 million. Manges countered with his own suit against the bank.

Manges claimed he has been paying the loan to the bank.

"However, I don't know how much I still owe them as the Seattle First National Bank has never furnished me with an accounting," he said.

"As far as $40 million goes, I could handle it," said Manges.

"That bank arranged to have my holdings appraised," Manges said. "I understand they found the appraisal showed my holdings to be worth between $500 million and $1 billion."

Manges also said the bank took $400,000 from his account.

"This was an unauthorized amount taken from my personal account," he said.

"And I'm still paying them several thousand dollars every month from money earned from oil revenues," Manges said.

Seattle First National Bank says in its suit that Manges has made few, if any, payments on the interest and has failed to pay on the principal of more than $40 million.

"It's my opinion," said Manges, "that Mobil Oil attorneys have been in contact with the Seattle bank because of my lawsuit against Mobil Oil."

Parties don't want to 'lose without women'

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Republicans and Democrats alike are working hard to make the slogan "Win with women" apply to their campaign efforts for the 1980s.

Feminists of both parties are gathered for the annual convention of the National Women's Political Caucus, which opens here today, to work on making the women's vote a permanent bloc on the American political scene.

Texas Gov. Mark White and Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire will be on hand to open the convention in morning ceremonies alongside the San Antonio River.

Of course, the two parties tend to see the caucus "Win with women" slogan in different ways.

Five of the six Democratic presidential candidates will be here for questioning by caucus members on Sunday. Each hopes to capitalize on the gender gap that has given Democrats the edge over the GOP among women since the 1980 elections.

"The Democrats dare not take women for granted," said caucus chief Kathy Wilson, herself a Republican.

And each of the presidential hopefuls will be making a list of activist women at the convention who can work for them in the nomination battle.

But Republican Party co-chairman Betty Heitman gave a different view of women and the parties at pre-convention luncheon Thursday. She defended Ronald Reagan's policies and said the GOP, not the Democrats, were the party of equal rights.

"As far as I am concerned, Democrats are the Johnny-come-lately's to women's rights," she told about 30

GOP caucus members, pointing out the Republican's early support for an Equal Rights Amendment.

But the GOP caucus members said they were frustrated by Reagan's policies and by the party's decision in its 1980 platform to drop its support for the ERA and to oppose abortion.

Mrs. Heitman, who will stay for the entire convention — what one GOP caucus leader said was a brave act — said Democrats have taken women for granted.

"We don't believe, like the Democrats do, that women are a homogeneous group."

The caucus itself has 77,000 members, with about 35 percent calling themselves Republicans. The caucus is generally considered the "practical politician" wing of the women's movement, providing women candidates, Democratic and Republican, with the services of a political party — recruitment, training and money.

But the caucus is a feminists' group that has been strongly critical of Reagan administration policies and its record of appointments of women to top jobs.

Most of the convention will be devoted to workshops and seminars on the nuts and bolts of politics and government — for example, record keeping for political action committees, feminism in the arms race and how to raise money for women's groups.

The convention will draw most of its attention with its Sunday session featuring former Vice President Walter Mondale, Sens. John Glenn of Ohio, Gary Hart of Colorado, Alan Cranston of California and Ernest Hollings of South Carolina.

Trial's testimony centers around alleged threats

ODESSA (AP) — After two employees quit his company and went to work for a rival firm, John D. Skelton was so enraged he sought to have drugs planted on them and inquired about having them killed, the jury in Skelton's capital murder trial was told.

Skelton, 53, was convicted Wednesday of killing one of the men, Joe Lee Neal, 46, in April 1982 by rigging dynamite to his pickup truck, which exploded when Neal turned the ignition.

In a day of testimony Thursday in the punishment phase of the trial, the jury listened to the other employee, Bob Fowler, and two other business associates tell of threats they heard Skelton make against Fowler and Neal.

Both sides rested their cases

Thursday afternoon, and State District Judge I.L. McKim told the jury to return to court at 9 a.m. today to hear final arguments from the prosecution and defense. The jury's options on the sentence were life in prison or death by lethal injection.

Roy Dees, who said he did business with Skelton, testified Thursday that he heard Skelton ask someone to plant drugs on the two men after they quit Skelton's oil field service firm and went to work for a rival steam cleaning operation in Odessa.

But later, on Sept. 1, 1981, Dees said, "he wanted to know if I knew anyone that could take their lives. If I could get someone to do this," Skelton would forget about a $30,000 debt, Dees said.

White won't call session until committee reports

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White wants a blue-ribbon committee on Texas schools to suggest ways to finance the recommendations they make before he calls any special legislative session.

"I can't call it (a special session) until they are ready to go," White told a Capitol news conference Thursday.

"As soon as they are, I will not hesitate to call a special session. I kind of like special sessions."

"We need not only to have the report back but we need to have the support for the report. That will be another task we will be working on."

White said he hoped the special study committee would consider teacher salary raises first.

"As quickly as they (the committee) can come to a report on salary needs for teachers and as soon as we can get some concurrence on financing of those salary needs, I think we will be able to call a special session," he said.

Following the refusal of legislators to act on proposed teacher pay raises in the regular legislative session that ended May 30, a Select Committee on Public Education was appointed by White, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Speaker Gib Lewis to study public schools in Texas.

Infant awaiting transplant worsens

ABILENE (AP) — Doctors at the University of Minnesota Hospitals say a 10-month-old West Texas infant awaiting a liver transplant has taken a turn for the worst as a desperate search for a donor organ continues.

Ashley Bailey, who suffers from an incurable disease that hardens the liver, was listed in satisfactory condition, but doctors believe her death is imminent if a donor organ is not found immediately.

"As her condition is now, I fear, without a liver, she'll die," said Dr. Nancy Ascher, head of the hospital's liver transplant team. "She was making great strides toward improving and gaining weight. Then she started having fever, the source of which we haven't found, and began losing weight."

Ashley, the daughter of Annette Bailey Gossett and Greg Gossett of Clyde, was transferred to Minneapolis May 2 from Cook's Children's Hospital in Fort Worth.

The family was summoned to the hospital Thursday, said Ashley's grandfather, Leo Bailey. U.S. Rep. Charles Stenholm said Thursday that his staff was trying to arrange some type of nationwide plea for a donor.

"We're hoping if there's a donor available out there, we'll get it by the media blitz that's going on now," he said. "If we don't get a liver, Ashley's days are numbered."

Middle 90s forecast for Basin

Sunny skies and summertime heat should steam down on the Permian Basin this weekend. According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, skies will remain fair tonight and Saturday. Temperatures will drop only into the lower 70s tonight and are expected to climb into the middle 90s Saturday. Tonight's southeasterly winds at 5-10 mph will increase slightly to 5-15 mph Saturday. Thursday's high of 93 missed 1964's blistering high of 103 by 10 degrees. The overnight low of 71 was 15 degrees warmer than the record low of 56, set in 1952.

Sunday Through Tuesday: West Texas: Mostly sunny and hot afternoons with fair and mid nights into early next week. Isolated late afternoon and evening thunderstorms Sunday and Monday. Highs lower 90s Panhandle to near 100. Big Bend valleys. Lows upper 60s Panhandle to upper 70s Big Bend.

Odessa man dies in accident

Carl Arnold Chambers Jr. of Odessa was killed about 8:30 p.m. Thursday when his car went out of control on the Andrews Highway and overturned. Police reported that Chambers, 26, was trapped in the 1970 two-door sedan after it flipped and rolled over onto a concrete-brick fence at 4509 Andrews Highway. Midland firemen worked 20 to 30 minutes to free the body from the car with their Jaws of Life tool. Top of the car was crushed, police reported.

Asteroid roars by Earth at speed of 80,000 mph

The rock that zipped past Earth on Thursday, asteroid 1983LC, was one of three Ms. Helin, R. Scott Dunbar and Caltech's Steve Swanson found on time-exposure photographs taken at Palomar on the night of June 12-13. Asteroid 1983LC will be passing this way again in October after looping around the sun, she said. Then its elongated orbit takes it out near Jupiter before it crosses Earth's orbit again in about 2 1/2 years. These near-Earth asteroids seem to be mavericks that are kicked out of the asteroid belt, a loose band of thousands of asteroids that range in size from boulders to mini-planets 600 miles across. The belt orbits the sun between Mars and Jupiter. Ms. Helin said that when the solar system was born 4 1/2 billion years ago, a few large asteroids may have been "seeds that would have been there to collect into a (tenth) planet, but they didn't make it." Repeated collisions broke some into pieces that in turn were battered into the current collection of rocks. Such collisions may also have bounced some into skewed orbits that encounter Earth. As part of the original stuff of the solar system, she said, the asteroids are scientifically intriguing. She said "asteroid people...do discuss the possibility of (a space mission) to rendezvous with asteroids or to take samples from the surface and bring them back to Earth." Though technologically feasible right now, she said, "the earliest this is possible is after 1990" and that would require a government commitment that has not been made.

Campaign employee denies network of spies

WASHINGTON (AP) — The man said to have recruited former CIA operatives for the 1980 Reagan campaign says that he knew of no network organized to obtain inside information from the Carter camp. Denying a report published by The New York Times, Stefan A. Halper, 38, who served as director of policy coordination for the Reagan campaign, said Thursday, "That is totally untrue." However, Halper's nominal boss in the Reagan campaign, Robert Garrick, a retired reserve admiral who was in charge of plans and policy, has acknowledged that he set up a separate group of "friends who lived near big air bases" to monitor military movements that might disclose whether President Carter was making another effort to free U.S. hostages then held in Iran. Halper had previously worked for Reagan's primary Republican opponent and eventual running mate, George Bush, and did not get along with Garrick. The hostility between them was so great, that neither man knew much of what the other was doing, Halper said. As the swirl of charges and countercharges, FBI and congressional investigations into possible spying by the Reagan campaign has grown over the past two weeks, increasing attention has been paid to whether Reagan's aides organized an effort to obtain classified information from the Carter White House, possibly in violation of law. But in these cases, Garrick denies receiving any inside information and Halper says the network credited to him never existed. On Thursday, the Times quoted unnamed sources as saying Halper organized ex-CIA officials to obtain inside foreign policy information. One source was quoted as saying, "There was some CIA stuff coming from Halper and some agency guys were hired." Halper acknowledged that some former agency officials, who had been pleased with Bush's former tenure as head of that agency, worked informally on Bush's behalf. But he said, "There was no network of ex-intelligence officers undertaking any effort to penetrate the Carter camp. There was no organized effort of any kind to penetrate Carter's camp." Asked if he had ever seen any material from inside the Carter administration, Halper said, "I have a good memory and if I had seen anything from the White House, the CIA, the National Security Council or the State Department, I would remember that and I don't." Halper said his group prepared a daily summary of news reports for top campaign aides and Reagan and Bush, descriptions of politics and local issues in areas that Reagan was visiting and quick analyses of "vexing issues like truck deregulation or the Iranian assets in U.S. banks." Halper said his staff consulted think tanks and such senior former foreign policy figures as Brent Scowcroft, who was former President Gerald R. Ford's national security adviser. Garrick, in a recent interview, said he tried to monitor the movement of military aircraft to be prepared for a so-called "October surprise" by Carter just before the November elections. Reagan's campaign aides made no secret of their expectation that Carter would make some dramatic effort to bring the hostages home before the election. Specifically, Garrick said he had friends watch for large transport planes — that could be carrying supplies to swap for the hostages — leaving Norton Air Force Base in California and McGuire Air Force Base in New Jersey en route to Iran. He also had friends watching hospital planes stationed in West Germany. But the surprise never developed and the hostages were not released until the day Carter left office.

Cost structure hurting American Airlines

(Continued from Page 1A) American is hurting, McAdams said, and the company's cost structure is like an albatross: very heavy. McAdams, its manager in Midland, said that "More major air carriers are going to go the way of Braniff (bankruptcy) if they (airlines) do not effectively reduce costs." McAdams said American is second only to Southwest in the number of passengers it deals with in Midland. American carries from 11,000 to 13,000 passengers each month, in this market, and is the second-largest U.S. airline besides United. Profits for American routes out of Midland and Odessa would be very good under normal conditions — it's a short hop to Dallas to connect with any American flight. But discounted fares and lots of air travelers picking up on cheap flights, combined with American's desire to meet the competition's fares, has forced it to lose money. McAdams said American lost money in the first quarter of this year, but made money in the most recent month. It has a 94 percent dependability on its departing flights from here, a usual 45-50 minute wait for its connections in Dallas, and 11 to 30 percent no-shows on each flight. "Passengers prefer seat assignment" to having to fight for space aboard Southwest jets, McAdams said as a Southwest 737 made one of the "10 minute turnarounds" for which that airline is famous. The jet simply gets fueled, deplanes and loads passengers, routes baggage, and goes. "Southwest doesn't have frills," said McAdams. He explained that American provides service: Meals on many flights, with the possibility of special meals for certain people; assigned seating by section and window position; boarding passes from travel agents or counter; ability to carry an unaccompanied child past the first destination and onto connecting flights. In meeting the demands of consumers, American relies on early bookings for travel planned well in advance. This helps it preplan its flights, manpower, catering, and other resources. "There are many deeply discounted fares on the larger carriers," McAdams said, "but this is as low as airlines will ever be." American has been "devastated by the fare wars" according to McAdams, when new and relatively new airlines like Southwest and Muse have come into Texas markets with lower passenger costs and (because of deregulation) cut fares wildly and manage to make money on a per-seat basis. "Our cost structure is significantly higher than theirs," McAdams said. "Like computers, the new jets are state-of-the-art, much more advanced than their predecessors." McAdams stated, "We are keeping services high. But to deal with costs, we have to restructure pay scales, introduce union groups to part-time employment, and fully cross-utilize employees for performing more tasks during their daily work schedule," in addition to buying new jets that are cheaper to operate.

Millionaire's ex-lover murdered by boyfriend

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Vicki Morgan, the high-school dropout who tried to win a fortune as the former lover of millionaire Alfred Bloomingdale, died after a quarrel about money, her lovely model's features shattered by a baseball bat. The svelte beauty with the translucent eyes and high cheekbones was swept in September 1970 from Sunset Boulevard into the privileged life of Bloomingdale, friend and unofficial adviser to Ronald Reagan. She said the department store magnate and Diners Club financier kept her for 12 years as his mistress, confidante and kinky-sex partner. Miss Morgan died Thursday at age 30, unemployed, a year after her headline-making "palimony" lawsuit. Her fortunes dwindled with Bloomingdale's death from cancer last August and court rulings against her claims. She was killed the day she planned to move to a place where the rent was cheaper. Her boyfriend confessed to the murder and said he and Miss Morgan had an argument about money, police said. Miss Morgan said she received $18,000 a month from Bloomingdale, a man 36 years her senior, before the payments were cut off in June 1982 at the request of his wife, Betsy. Miss Morgan's subsequent $10 million lawsuit, seeking $5 million for breach of an oral contract for lifetime support and $5 million from his wife for allegedly interfering with the contract, made headlines noticed even in the White House. "God, what a way to go," said attorney Marvin Mitchelson, after learning of the death of Miss Morgan, who had a 14-year-old son. Mitchelson, whose first "palimony" lawsuit obtained communal property rights for live-in lovers, had helped her file the suit against the Bloomingdales a year ago today. Miss Morgan later dropped him from the case. Police found her nightgown-dressed body in her bed at a rented Studio City condominium. Her live-in boyfriend, Marvin Pancoast, 33, walked into a police station and said, "I just killed someone," according to Police Lt. Dan Cooke. Pancoast was booked for investigation of murder, the officer said. "He waited for her to go to sleep and beat her to death," Cooke said. Miss Morgan "had been struck multiple times with a baseball bat in the head," Cooke said. Pancoast told investigators he fought with Miss Morgan on Wednesday night, "basically about finances," Cooke said. "Both were unemployed." Last September, Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Christian Markey rejected most of Miss Morgan's lawsuit in a ruling upheld by the state Supreme Court. The cash she recently raised by selling her Mercedes-Benz was dwindling. And the owner of her three-bedroom condo, Robert Epstein, said she asked to be released from a $1,000-a-month lease so she could move in Thursday with friends in Beverly Hills. Movers she hired mentioned less elegant destinations: Burbank or North Hollywood. And Pancoast told police they were evicted.

Vicki Morgan said she received $18,000 a month from Bloomingdale, a man 36 years her senior, before the payments were cut off in June 1982 at the request of his wife, Betsy.

Unemployment rate drops to 10 percent

(Continued from Page 1A) —Hispanics, 14.0, up from 13.8. In one sour note, the average duration of unemployment continued to rise last month, reaching 22 weeks, up from 20.4 weeks. And the number of people who have been jobless for 27 weeks or more grew by 165,000, to nearly 3 million, comprising 26 percent of all people out of work. The report said that "job gains were widespread in both the goods- and service-producing industries. In testimony prepared for the congressional Joint Economic Committee, Janet L. Norwood, commissioner of labor statistics, said the labor market "continued to show signs of strong recovery in June." But Ms. Norwood noted that "no improvement has occurred in the job situation of black workers during this period." Last week, amid a new round of signs that the business turnaround is picking up steam, the administration revised downward slightly its forecast for average unemployment in the fourth quarter, from 9.7 percent to 9.6 percent. At the same time, President Reagan declared that the economy "is beginning to sparkle again." The administration revised its economic forecast, predicting that the gross national product (GNP) would expand by 5.5 percent — rather than 4.7 percent — from the fourth quarter of 1982 to the fourth quarter of this year. In addition, a survey released earlier this week said consumers, sensing improvement in the economy, are showing new interest in buying houses, cars and appliances. Economists have said that such big-ticket spending would improve hiring prospects immensely.

Ambassador to Mexico abandons low profile

(Continued from Page 1A) In diplomatic circles, the U.S. ambassador is known to have good access to Mexican government leaders. His contacts in the Reagan administration and his qualifications for the job are rarely questioned. Gavin, 52, is a graduate of Stanford University, where he did senior honors work in the economic history of Latin America. He is fluent in Spanish. His mother was born in Mexico's northwestern Sonora state. He shares a conservative Republican philosophy with Reagan and, like the president, spent years working as an actor in Hollywood. Both men also served stints in the leadership of the Screen Actors Guild. But Gavin says he does not want to enter politics. "I don't think I'm cut out for elective office," he said in the interview. "After this, unless the president asks me to do something else, I assume I'll go back to what I was doing before." "Campaigning is something you have to have a special desire to do. I wouldn't have wanted to run for this office," he said, adding after a pause and a smile, "I think." Gavin said his key ability as ambassador has been to mix embassy management with hard work, including behind the scenes diplomacy. "A lot of people get the impression that being ambassador is a social activity," he said. "It's a tedious, stimulating, sometimes debilitating job. They say I generate more work around here than some of my predecessors." But, he adds, "a good manager makes good use of his people. One executive can't do it alone."

Oilman fights big oil, banks, large law firms

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Multimillionaire Clinton Manges compared himself to David taking on Goliath as he talked in a copyright interview with the Laredo News about his battles with major oil companies, banks and large law firms.

Clinton Manges

"In fact, I feel smaller than David," Manges said during a discussion of his lawsuit with Seattle First National Bank and Mobil Oil Co.

Seattle First National Bank filed a $100 million lawsuit against the South Texas oilman and rancher claiming Manges had defaulted on loans totaling $40 million. Manges countered with his own suit against the bank.

Manges claimed he has been paying the loan to the bank.

"However, I don't know how much I still owe them as the Seattle First National Bank has never furnished me with an accounting," he said.

"As far as $40 million goes, I could handle it," said Manges.

"That bank arranged to have my holdings appraised," Manges said. "I understand they found the appraisal showed my holdings to be worth between $500 million and $1 billion."

Manges also said the bank took $400,000 from his account.

"This was an unauthorized amount taken from my personal account," he said.

"And I'm still paying them several thousand dollars every month from money earned from oil revenues," Manges said.

Seattle First National Bank says in its suit that Manges has made few, if any, payments on the interest and has failed to pay on the principal of more than $40 million.

"It's my opinion," said Manges, "that Mobil Oil attorneys have been in contact with the Seattle bank because of my lawsuit against Mobil Oil."

Parties don't want to 'lose without women'

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Republicans and Democrats alike are working hard to make the slogan "Win with women" apply to their campaign efforts for the 1980s.

Feminists of both parties are gathered for the annual convention of the National Women's Political Caucus, which opens here today, to work on making the women's vote a permanent bloc on the American political scene.

Texas Gov. Mark White and Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire will be on hand to open the convention in morning ceremonies alongside the San Antonio River.

Of course, the two parties tend to see the caucus' "Win with women" slogan in different ways.

Five of the six Democratic presidential candidates will be here for questioning by caucus members on Sunday. Each hopes to capitalize on the gender gap that has given Democrats the edge over the GOP among women since the 1980 elections.

"The Democrats dare not take women for granted," said caucus chief Kathy Wilson, herself a Republican.

And each of the presidential hopefuls will be making a list of activist women at the convention who can work for them in the nomination battle.

But Republican Party co-chairman Betty Heitman gave a different view of women and the parties at pre-convention luncheon Thursday. She defended Ronald Reagan's policies and said the GOP, not the Democrats, were the party of equal rights.

"As far as I am concerned, Democrats are the Johnny-come-lately's to women's rights," she told about 30

GOP caucus members, pointing out the Republican's early support for an Equal Rights Amendment.

But the GOP caucus members said they were frustrated by Reagan's policies and by the party's decision in its 1980 platform to drop its support for the ERA and to oppose abortion.

Mrs. Heitman, who will stay for the entire convention — what one GOP caucus leader said was a brave act — said Democrats have taken women for granted.

"We don't believe, like the Democrats do, that women are a homogeneous group."

The caucus itself has 77,000 members, with about 35 percent calling themselves Republicans. The caucus is generally considered the "practical politician" wing of the women's movement, providing women candidates, Democratic and Republican, with the services of a political party — recruitment, training and money.

But the caucus is a feminists' group that has been strongly critical of Reagan administration policies and its record of appointments of women to top jobs.

Most of the convention will be devoted to workshops and seminars on the nuts and bolts of politics and government — for example, record keeping for political action committees, feminism in the arms race and how to raise money for women's groups.

The convention will draw most of its attention with its Sunday session featuring former Vice President Walter Mondale, Sens. John Glenn of Ohio, Gary Hart of Colorado, Alan Cranston of California and Ernest Hollings of South Carolina.

Trial's testimony centers around alleged threats

ODESSA (AP) — After two employees quit his company and went to work for a rival firm, John D. Skelton was so enraged he sought to have drugs planted on them and inquired about having them killed, the jury in Skelton's capital murder trial was told.

Skelton, 53, was convicted Wednesday of killing one of the men, Joe Lee Neal, 46, in April 1982 by rigging dynamite to his pickup truck, which exploded when Neal turned the ignition.

In a day of testimony Thursday in the punishment phase of the trial, the jury listened to the other employee, Bob Fowler, and two other business associates tell of threats they heard Skelton make against Fowler and Neal.

Both sides rested their cases

Thursday afternoon, and State District Judge I.L. McKim told the jury to return to court at 9 a.m. today to hear final arguments from the prosecution and defense. The jury's options on the sentence were life in prison or death by lethal injection.

Roy Dees, who said he did business with Skelton, testified Thursday that he heard Skelton ask someone to plant drugs on the two men after they quit Skelton's oil field service firm and went to work for a rival steam cleaning operation in Odessa.

But later, on Sept. 1, 1981, Dees said, "he wanted to know if I knew anyone that could take their lives. If I could get someone to do this," Skelton would forget about a $30,000 debt, Dees said.

White won't call session until committee reports

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White wants a blue-ribbon committee on Texas schools to suggest ways to finance the recommendations they make before he calls any special legislative session.

"I can't call it (a special session) until they are ready to go," White told a Capitol news conference Thursday.

"As soon as they are, I will not hesitate to call a special session. I kind of like special sessions."

"We need not only to have the report back but we need to have the support for the report. That will be another task we will be working on."

White said he hoped the special

study committee would consider teacher salary raises first.

"As quickly as they (the committee) can come to a report on salary needs for teachers and as soon as we can get some concurrence on financing of those salary needs, I think we will be able to call a special session," he said.

Following the refusal of legislators to act on proposed teacher pay raises in the regular legislative session that ended May 30, a Select Committee on Public Education was appointed by White, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Speaker Gib Lewis to study public schools in Texas.

Infant awaiting transplant worsens

ABILENE (AP) — Doctors at the University of Minnesota Hospitals say a 10-month-old West Texas infant awaiting a liver transplant has taken a turn for the worst as a desperate search for a donor organ continues.

Ashley Bailey, who suffers from an incurable disease that hardens the liver, was listed in satisfactory condition, but doctors believe her death is imminent if a donor organ is not found immediately.

"As her condition is now, I fear, without a liver, she'll die," said Dr. Nancy Ascher, head of the hospital's liver transplant team. "She was making great strides toward improving and gaining weight. Then she started having fever, the source of which we haven't found, and began losing weight."

Ashley, the daughter of Annette Bailey Gossett and Greg Gossett of Clyde, was transferred to Minneapolis May 2 from Cook's Children's Hospital in Fort Worth.

The family was summoned to the hospital Thursday, said Ashley's grandfather, Leo Bailey. U.S. Rep. Charles Stenholm said Thursday that his staff was trying to arrange some type of nationwide plea for a donor.

"We're hoping if there's a donor available out there, we'll get it by the media blitz that's going on now," he said. "If we don't get a liver, Ashley's days are numbered."

Female miners file $26 million suit against Standard Oil of Ohio

MOUNT VERNON, Ill. (AP) — Four female coal miners have filed a $26 million lawsuit against their employer, saying that men peered through peepholes in the walls of a company washhouse while the women showered and changed clothes.

The suit was filed Thursday in federal court at East St. Louis against Standard Oil of Ohio, owners of Old Ben Coal Co.'s mine No. 26 near Sesser, where the women worked.

Among other things, the lawsuit alleges invasion of privacy, sexual harassment and intentional infliction of mental distress.

"When I started in the mine, they said all I had to do was prove myself. I did and it didn't help," miner Carolyn Sue Houghland said at a news conference after the lawsuit was filed.

"This is awful and I won't let anybody make my job dirty," she said, bursting into tears.

The women said they discovered a series of peepholes drilled into the walls at the washhouse between the summer of 1981 and August 1982.

"We don't know who was on the other side of the peepholes. The women had no idea how many men were watching them," said Linda Krueger MacLachlan, attorney for the women.

The women complained in the suit that management personnel at the mine were aware of the peepholes for many months before the women learned of them. The lawsuit also said pornographic pictures and lewd messages were left in their belongings, an unknowing salesman was directed into their washhouse and demeaning sexual graffiti adorned the walls in the mine.

Randy Walthus, a spokesman for Sohio in Cleveland, said, "We've not had any specifics on the lawsuit and we've not yet been served (with a copy). When we are, we'll study it, of course."

One plaintiff, Barbara Jane Albon, a belt shoveler at the mine near Sesser, said her experiences at the washhouse led to nightmares.

"At first I cried a lot, and over the past year, I just haven't had any tears left," she said.

Peggy Kondoudis, who was laid off, said she came to hate her job after realizing the holes were being drilled into the walls.

Killing of Bill E. Goat defended

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Destroying Bill E. Goat, a Marine Corps mascot in Lebanon who was being promoted to the same role in the Army-Navy football game, was a "cavalier act," says a game official.

But federal Agricultural Department officials defended killing the goat when it was returned to New York, saying it might have had hoof-and-mouth disease.

Gen. Billy became a celebrity in Beirut last year after the 22nd Amphibious Unit adopted him. The goat was to become mascot of the Nov. 25 Army-Navy football game in Pasadena, Calif., but was put to sleep instead. "That was a cavalier act and reflected absolutely no compassion or understanding," Rolfe Arnheim, executive director of the Army-Navy '83 Foundation, said Thursday.

Student 'disregards' law

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — A Stanford University graduate student showed "deliberate disregard of the law" while studying in China, says a review panel which agreed with his February dismissal.

Steven W. Mosher, 34, had angered Chinese officials by publishing an article and photographs in Taiwan about what he said was forced abortion and infanticide in rural China.

Mosher accused Stanford of bowing to pressure from China, but a grievance committee of three outside scholars agreed Thursday with the decision to terminate his doctoral candidacy in anthropology.

Its report said Mosher revealed "a pattern of dealings that involved deliberate disregard" of Chinese law and "a manipulative approach toward the people with whom he was living and working."

'Contamination no problem'

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — A state official said dioxin contamination at a Kansas City chemical company doesn't pose a public health hazard, though it is up to 140 times higher than federal safety standards.

One sample from the Thompson-Hayward Chemical Co. plant showed dioxin levels of 140 parts per million. State health director Jim Aiken said Thursday the chemical was found in samples from buildings where 2,4,5-T was made and stored before production stopped in 1978.

Barbara J. Sabol, secretary of the Kansas Department of Health and Environment, said the contamination presented no immediate health concern because it was in an industrial region. Willis H. Hart, an engineer for Thompson-Hayward, declined comment Thursday.

Diplomat,

NEW YORK (AP) — A Moroccan diplomat who won $1.5 million in the New York State lottery says many of his fellow diplomats play the state's legal numbers game.

"Sometimes they have to have a little recreation, too," Benasser Kassaoui, 37, a financial administrative officer in the Moroccan mission to the United Nations, said at a news conference held Thursday to announce the latest Lotto winners.

Lotto spokesman George Yamin said Kassaoui's winnings will be subject to tax. A diplomat's earned income is not subject to taxes but income from betting is, Yamin said.

Kassaoui, who lives in Forest Hills, Queens, will split a $3 million jackpot with Leonard Peters, 58, a Brooklyn window washer.

Although Kassaoui plans to return to Morocco in the "near future," he said he will "keep in touch with this nice state" by investing in the city.

Kassaoui said the first thing he will do with his winnings is pay his "everyday, ordinary" bills and "we'll see after that."

Unlike the diplomat, Peters said he knows exactly what to do with his winnings. "I'm going to buy me a nice big condo," he said.

Peters has worked as a city window washer at the Queens courthouse buildings for the last 23 years, and plans to work about two more years before considering retirement.

The two winners will receive their money in 21 annual installments of $71,500, less 20 percent that will be withheld for state taxes.

Asked by one reporter if he would consider paying the city an estimated $30,195 for the 671 outstanding parking summons issued to the Moroccan embassy, Kassaoui at first answered, "I hope so."

Massoud Rajavi, leader of the Iranian People's Mujahedin guerrilla movement, left, flanked by his brother Saleh Rajavi acting as an interpreter, answers questions from newsmen at his exile residence in Auvers-sur-Oise, Paris suburbs, Thursday. Sky pirates face 5-10 years in prison

PARIS (AP) — The six Iranian dissidents who hijacked an Iran Air Boeing 747 to Paris were questioned at police headquarters today, and judicial officials said they face 5-10 years in prison if convicted of air piracy charges. The prime minister's office announced that the six, who surrendered their 199 hostages at Orly airport on Thursday, would be tried in French courts despite Iran's demand that France return them to face Islamic justice. The hijackers commandeered the jumbo jet on Wednesday in Iranian airspace, forced it down in Kuwait, released women, children and old men among the 371 original passengers and flew on to Paris, where they surrendered on orders from Iran's exiled guerrilla leader Massoud Rajavi. The passengers freed in Paris left the French capital Thursday night on a special Iran Air flight. The hijacked plane's crew, exhausted by the ordeal, received permission to spend the night in Paris, the government said. Iran's state-run Islamic Republic News Agency reported the passengers arrived in the Iranian capital Tehran today. It said the hijacked plane would be flown home Saturday. French officials, aware the hijackers would almost certainly be executed if returned to Iran, probably will grant the six political asylum after they have served out their prison sentences, in the view of most observers. Relations between France and Iran have worsened in recent years. Ambassador Jose Paoli, named in October 1982, has never taken up his post and French interests in Tehran are being represented by a charge d'affaires. The regime of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini places France alongside the United States among what it calls the supreme evils in the world, largely because France hosts most of the Tehran government's staunchest enemies.

European conference nears end

MADRID, Spain (AP) — The European security conference, interrupted and delayed by East-West squabbles for 31 months, appeared close to an end today as agreement on a final text was reported imminent, delegates said. It would be the first major agreement between the Soviet and Western blocs since the Soviet Union invaded Afghanistan in December 1979. No details of the final draft were made available, but some delegate sources hinted foreign ministers from all 35 participating nations would be summoned to Madrid to ratify the agreement around July 15. U.S. chief delegate Max Kampelman flew to the Spanish capital early today after a consultation trip to Washington. The Madrid conference was convened in November 1980 to review and bolster the 1975 Helsinki Final Act, a charter for the behavior of signatory nations in the areas of human rights, military security, economic cooperation and freedom of information. The United States and Soviet Union signed that charter. The Madrid conference has been repeatedly stalled and deadlocked because of wide differences between East and West over wording of the final document. Western nations had complained it omitted many references to such subjects as protection of human rights and prohibition of broadcast jamming. A breakthrough apparently came when the Soviet Union said it was prepared to accept a compromise document that does not contain human rights amendments.

Thieves steal from labor group

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — A group of 15 men seized four people and a truckload of documents and equipment from the headquarters of a labor group opposed to Chile's military government. The raiders arrived in four unmarked vehicles and entered the building without force Thursday night. They refused to identify themselves to reporters who came to the scene after being alerted by the Human Rights Commission. The men removed filing cabinets, a typewriter, a photocopier and two banners from the offices of the National Labor Coordinate. Maria Rozas, leader of the women's branch of the labor group, and three unidentified men were taken away in a station wagon. The coordinate is composed of labor activists who lost their elected union positions after the 1973 military coup. Last month it joined other labor groups in leading a one-day anti-government protest, the biggest protest since President Augusto Pinochet came to power in the coup.

Singer arrested in spy case

PARIS (AP) — A 45-year-old Chinese opera singer has been arrested in connection with a spy case involving a low-level French Foreign Ministry employee charged with passing information to Chinese intelligence agents. A magistrate Thursday charged Shi Pei Pu with complicity with foreign intelligence agents and ordered a medical examination to determine whether Shi Pei Pu is a man or a woman. The action follows the arrest Sunday of Bernard Boursicot, 39, who is accused of passing confidential information to a Chinese agent while working at the French Embassy in Peking between 1970 and 1972. Sources said Boursicot returned to France in 1981 and last year was joined by Shi Pei Pu, whom he had known in Peking.

Heir to fortune released on bail

LONDON (AP) — Earl Grey, a Liberal member of the House of Lords and heir to the Earl Grey tea fortune, has been released on bail on charges related to prostitution. Grey, 44, a descendant of 19th-century Prime Minister Earl Grey, was ordered to appear in court with four other men for a hearing Aug. 9. They were released on unconditional bail, meaning they were not required to post any money. During the arraignment hearing Thursday in magistrates court, the five men were charged with living totally or partially off the immoral earnings of prostitution from April 5, 1982, to May 4 of this year. Details of the charge were not disclosed. Police said Grey, who has denied the charge, and the others were arrested May 10 after raids

Gas flowing through pipeline

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union says natural gas has begun flowing through a 620-mile stretch of the Siberian pipeline recently completed by construction crews. The official news agency Tass said Thursday the completed section runs from Urengoi, where the pipeline starts in northwestern Siberia, toward the Ural Mountains to the southwest. When completed, the pipeline is to run 2,782 miles from the Arctic circle gas fields of Urengoi to the Czechoslovakian border. It will be linked through Czechoslovakia with west European systems and is slated to begin delivering gas next year. The United States tried to stop delivery of U.S. technology and equipment for the project last year. The embargo was defied by many European concerns and was lifted last November.

PUBLIC NOTICE

At the request of the Office of the General Counsel of the Public Utility Commission, the Commission has established Docket No. 5113 to inquire into pressing issues involving the entire telephone industry in Texas. Docket No. 5113 will deal with many issues resulting from the impending divestiture of American Telephone and Telegraph Company and Southwestern Bell Telephone Company. Some of those issues include establishing the service areas of Southwestern Bell after divestiture and assessing the impact on other telephone companies in Texas of current settlement arrangements between Southwestern Bell and those companies. Additionally, Docket No. 5113 will deal with the issues arising from the Federal Communications Commission's Final Order in Docket 78-72 (the Access Charge Docket) as they impact all telephone companies. It is anticipated that Docket No. 5113 will be evidentiary in nature. RATES FOR SOUTHWESTERN BELL MAY BE DETERMINED BY THE COMMISSION IN OR AS A RESULT OF THIS PROCEEDING. Interested parties seeking further information or desiring to participate in Docket No. 5113 are advised to write to Rhonda Colbert Ryan, Secretary and Director of Hearings, Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757 or telephone the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or 458-0227, or (512) 458-0221 TTY for the deaf.

AVISO PÚBLICO

A solicitud de la Oficina de Consejo Legal (Office of the General Counsel) de la Comisión de Servicios Públicos (Public Utility Commission), la Comisión ha establecido la Acta No. 5113 con el fin de investigar asuntos de importancia que incumben a todas las compañías de servicio de teléfono en el Estado de Texas. La Acta No. 5113 tratará con muchos asuntos que resulten del despoamiento que está pendiente entre American Telephone and Telegraph Company y Southwestern Bell Telephone Company. Algunos de estos asuntos incluyen el de establecer las áreas de servicio de Southwestern Bell después del despoamiento y el de tasar los efectos de los arreglos judiciales que están en vigor entre Southwestern Bell y otras compañías de servicio de teléfono en el Estado de Texas. Adicionalmente, la Acta No. 5113 tratará con los asuntos que surjan del Decreto Final (Final Order) de la Comisión Federal de Comunicaciones (Federal Communications Commission) en la Acta No. 78-72 (ó sea la Acta de Cobros por Acceso — Access Charge Docket) en cuanto al efecto que tengan en las actividades de todas otras compañías de servicio de teléfono. Se anticipa que la Acta No. 5113 será probatoria. PUEDEN LAS TARIFAS QUE COBRE SOUTHWESTERN BELL SEAN DETERMINADAS POR LA COMISIÓN EN Ó COMO RESULTADO DE ÉSTE PROCESO. A las partes interesadas que busquen más información, ó que deseen participar en la Acta No. 5113, se les aconseja comunicarse por escrito con la Sra. Rhonda Colbert Ryan, Secretaria y Directora de Vistas, Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757, ó llamar a la Consumer Affairs Division (División de Asuntos de Consumidores) de la Public Utility Commission al (512) 458-0223, ó 458-0227, ó (512) 458-0221 TTY para aquellos que padecen de la sordera.

Count continues on the number of cable viewers

By the Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

HOLLYWOOD — The Great Cable Numbers Crunch goes on. Home Box Office and the A. C. Nielsen Co. continue to report wildly divergent figures for viewers of the pay-TV network. The two companies are still more than 50 percent off — nearly 6 million homes — with their respective numbers.

As of June, HBO claimed more than 12.5 million homes across the United States. But Nielsen's most recent report on the size of the cable audience pegs the pay-TV network at 22 percent of the total TV households in the United States — about 18.3 million.

In May, there was quite a flap in the cable business over what was then a 59 percent discrepancy between HBO and Nielsen figures. HBO stuck by its count. Nielsen shrugged its shoulders, admitting a possible error but saying it did not know where the problem was or how to correct it.

The ongoing debate surrounding the different counts for HBO has led to serious questions about HBO's business practices as well as Nielsen's apparent inability to accurately count homes with a multitude of TV channels.

In a recent interview, Robert Alter, president of the Cabletelevision Advertising Bureau, said that his industry-funded organization had some problems with the way cable ratings are figured. Alter claimed that the ratings methods developed for the neat three-channel TV world of the past do not work in the multichannel present.

"We're no longer in a situation when everybody has access to rela-vely few channels," Alter said. "The same (ratings) technologies that were used for years are not capable of performing in this new environment."

THAT CONTENTION has been made elsewhere, especially by local over-the-air broadcast stations in New York and Los Angeles, where even homes without cables have access to 15 or more stations.

The problem is especially acute in pay television, however, where revenues are tied to the number of homes paying to receive a program service.

Potentially, HBO can profit by under-counting itself because film producers sell movies to HBO based, in part, on the number of subscribers they believe the pay network will have at the time the film shows up on the service. A 6-million-home under-count can mean as much as a $1.2 million price difference for an average movie.

That being the case, producers naturally turn to independent third-party estimates of HBO's audience size. And Nielsen, until now, has been considered an unimpeachable authority.

Unlike other independent estimates, which are based in large part on HBO's own figures and count only paying households, Nielsen measures actual viewing homes. So Nielsen's count probably includes a great many pirate pay-TV viewers — people watching but not paying. A firm count of pirate pay-TV homes does not exist, but many industry experts place the figure at around 3 million homes — about half the HBO-Nielsen discrepancy.

That is still enough of a gap to send a cold shiver down the spine of a studio accountant trying to balance the books of a so-so movie with a lucrative sale to pay television.

UPDATE: Assistant U.S. Atty. Gen. William Baxter is back from Europe, but none of the partners in the controversial Showtime-Movie Channel merger plan (which the Department of Justice plans to block) has made the trek to Washington to again plead the case for the merger of the No. 2 and No. 3 pay-cable networks.

The five partners — MCA (Universal), Paramount, Warner Bros., Viacom and American Express — have scheduled a strategy meeting for this week in Los Angeles. Rumors as to what they are going to do are as easy to come by these days as finding an out-of-work actor at Schwab's Drug Store.

Persistent speculation has it that one or more of the studios may drop out of the deal and clear the way for one of the commercial networks to step up to the table. ABC, which tried to buy into Showtime late last year, has come up in some of the talks.

There is also speculation that NBC may be interested. The network's parent company, RCA, recently closed down the Entertainment Channel pay network (in which RCA had a 50 percent interest). NBC is the only one of the Big Three networks that has no corporate division heavily involved in cable or pay-TV development.

ONE MORE "STAR WARS": Remember the first time you saw the first "Star Wars"? Remember riding with Luke Skywalker and R2-D2 through the defenses of the dreaded Death Star? Remember watching the action on Luke's video screen in the cockpit of his fighter plane and saying to yourself: "What a terrific video game?"

Well, you finally can relive those moments. Atari and Lucasfilm Ltd. introduced Friday a new video arcade version of the famous sequence of the movie that started it all. The machine is expected to start appearing in arcades sometime this week.

THE NEW GAME was displayed at the offices of C.A. Robinson Co., California's largest distributor of video arcade games, and designer Mike Hally was on hand to take a novice through the paces.

"This game was designed to duplicate a highlight of the action scenes of the movie," Hally said, blasting Imperial rocket ships into oblivion and diving for the Death Star. "We've tried to put the player right into the seat where he was (in the movie) watching Luke Skywalker and let the player react like Luke."

Blasting the exhaust portal and blowing the Death Star to smithereens was a cinch for Hally, who easily made it to round two — another bout with the spaceships, then a cruise over the surface of a second Death Star. The object here was to blast the laser towers, which were trying to blast him in the process.

'Yellowbeard' not exciting

By The Associated Press

"YELLOWBEARD" is a puzzlement. How could so many comedic talents produce such a mirthless movie? The idea seemed a natural: Combine Monty Python members Graham Chapman, Eric Idle and John Cleese with an array of international players — Cheech and Chong, Madeline Kahn, James Mason, Peter Cook, Peter Boyle, Marty Feldman — in a rollicking satire of pirate movies. Fine, except there's no rollick. The outrageous Python comedy proves merely tedious as the plot moves from Queen Anne's England to the high seas and a treasure island in the Caribbean. The plot, such as it is, concerns an infamous pirate who is released from an English prison so he can be followed to where he buried his Spanish loot 20 years before. The players perform competently in the face of no material. Of special notice are Cook as a befuddled nobleman and Mason as a deluded Captain Bligh. Rated PG, although it contains nudity, faintly naughty language and much bloodshedding.

Problems pickling pork packers

AP Laserphoto

The Montfort of Colo., packing plant in Grand Island, Neb., is one example of a large efficient company that, according to one analyst, is dominating the beef-packing industry. Charles Levitt, senior livestock analyst with Shearson American Express, says the pork-packing industry will soon end up just like the beef packers.

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Soaring labor costs, poor management and reduced consumption of red meat are forcing a major realignment in the pork industry where, industry analysts say, only a few large, highly efficient companies will survive.

"It seems to be the way of all flesh that control of the industry will fall into the hands of a few giants," said Charles Levitt, senior livestock analyst for the investment firm of Shearson American Express.

It's a trend that's already being seen in the beef industry.

In 1972, the nation had 717 beef packers, Levitt said. By 1981, the number had fallen to 479, with 95 packers shutting down in that year alone. Today, he said, four packers — IBP Inc., Excel, Land O'Lakes and FDL — share more than 40 percent of the market, up from 29 percent in 1976.

Levitt sees developments involving two pork packers — Wilson Foods Corp. and Armour Foods Co.

— as the beginning of a similar trend.

Some 5,000 United Food and Commercial Workers struck Wilson Foods June 4. Greyhound Corp., owner of Armour, said last week it would close Armour's 13 unionized meatpacking plants within six months if they are not sold beforehand. Greyhound Board Chairman John Teets said 3,000 workers in 12 states would be affected.

Packing company officials blame their troubles on high labor costs. Workers struck Wilson after it filed for reorganization in federal bankruptcy court and cut hourly wages by 40 percent, from $10.69 to $6.50.

"There are some 300 to 400 regional and non-union packers who are undercutting the (union) rate," said Teets. "The company (Armour) can no longer successfully compete against non-union and low-wage rate packers who pay less than half the wages" stipulated in the union contract.

Industry analysts like Levitt say that the companies need wage concessions from the union to survive. IBP last summer won a battle with the UFCW by hiring non-union workers during a strike at its Dakota City plant that was marked by violent confrontations between pickets and the National Guard and Nebraska State Patrol. Employees eventually went back to work on the company's terms.

Labor officials blame the pork-packing industry's problems on poor management and outdated plants, and say the workers are being punished by conglomerates that haven't put profits back into the industry.

"If you're going to compete, you have to have modern, efficient plants," said John Mancuso, assistant to the director of the packinghouse division of the UFCW in Chicago. The UFCW represents about 100,000 workers — by far the largest bargaining agent in the nation's roughly 500 packing companies — according to Mancuso.

The changing American diet also has affected meat packers. Consumption of red meat is down and dropping.

"When you get a protein product, like chicken, that is less expensive than beef or pork, and people start eating more of it, then it's going to have an effect on the packers," said Jim Smith, deputy administrator of the USDA's Packers and Stockyards Administration in Washington.

A USDA report issued early this year said red meat consumption — beef and veal, pork, lamb and mutton — is expected to average 149 pounds per person this year, down from 157 pounds in 1981 and 160 in 1980. For the first time since records have been kept, the report said, Americans will eat more poultry than pork.

Miami officer gives up desk job, returns to Overtown street beat MIAMI (AP) — When he was promoted to sergeant, Miami police Officer Brian Glaccum didn't have to walk his street beat in the run-down Overtown neighborhood anymore.

His advancement let him leave the grinding poverty, the joblessness, the drugs and the frightened senior citizens who call the slum area home. Instead, he had a desk, a $2,000-a-year raise, nine officers to supervise and a stack of paperwork.

He hated it.

So after six weeks, he gave up the stripes and returned to Overtown.

"My wife, Amparo, agreed with me. I wasn't doing anybody any good remaining in a job I hated," said Glaccum, 36, a husky 6-foot officer with blue eyes and graying hair.

"If I was miserable, she'd be miserable and the kids (14-year-old Robbie and 4-year-old Diana) would be miserable, too. And the first day back on the beat, I came home with a smile on my face and I knew I had made the right decision."

Half the storefronts along Glaccum's 15-block beat are empty. Heavy metal grates or plywood cover the windows of most others. One, Bucktown Grocery Inc., has hand-painted signs advertising pig's ears, pig's feet, smoked ham hocks, smoked neck bones and pork chops.

Glaccum is relaxed in Overtown as he walks the streets with his partner, Officer Herma Justice, exchanging greetings with the shopkeepers and handing out free pool passes to eager children.

"I was surprised when he came back — it's unusual for anyone to turn down a promotion," said Ms. Justice. "He's good with people."

Hard-core police work is left to the patrol cars — Glaccum and Ms. Justice are there mainly as a preventive measure, with the aim of improving community relations and defusing potential trouble. They also direct lost tourists and even local residents out of the neighborhood.

Last December, Overtown erupted with two days of racial violence sparked by the shooting of a black man in a video-game parlor by a Hispanic police officer.

But since the city started the Overtown detail, there have been no major outbreaks of violence.

"I like to think we made a difference being here," Glaccum said. "When the force first started the Overtown detail in February, the first thing we did was scare off all the little street-corner thugs who were selling dope and stealing ladies' purses. We received a lot of nice compliments, especially from the elderly people who were scared to go down to the stores."

UTPB sets historic preservation course during summer term

ODESSA — A course on historic preservation which includes group tours to area historic house museums is scheduled during the second summer term at The University of Texas at the Permian Basin July 11 through Aug. 19.

Registration for the class will be from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. July 11, in the UTPB admissions office. Classes will meet from 5:30 to 8:15 p.m. each Tuesday with mandatory group tours scheduled on weekends.

Students in the class will learn about new work in historic preservation, its procedures, stages, types and effectiveness.

Weekend outings include group tours to see different examples and stages of preservation, he said.

Historic house museums are located in Midland, Big Spring, Kermit, Rankin, Pecos and Stanton, as well as other area communities.

The course, History 489, may be taken for degree programs or enrichment credits. Students may enroll in Encore.

Students must have completed 60 semester hours of college-level work at an accredited community college or university.

'Yabba dabba do' debated

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Yabba dabba doo!" A court is about to consider whether a motel with a Stone Age theme room is infringing on a copyright for "The Flintstones."

Attorneys for Hanna-Barbera Productions Inc. say they've filed suit in U.S. District Court in Los Angeles against a motel where one room features an early Bedrock decor.

The company is trying to protect its claim to Fred Flintstone — Bedrock's first citizen in the long-running cartoon series — his wife Wilma, baby Pebbles, neighbors Barney and Betty Rubble, and his pet, Dino the Dinosaur. The lawyers said earlier this week the Madonna Inn, near San Luis Obispo, features a "Flintstone Room," a rock-walled cavern that contains likenesses of Fred and Wilma.

It also contains Fred's favorite phrase, featured on television since 1964, which the suit contends is spelled wrong.

The lawsuit says Fred's phrase properly should end with a word spelled "doo," the lawsuit says. The motel incorrectly spells it "do."

Hanna-Barbera attorneys say the company owns it either way.

Truck not tough

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Just how tough is a Ford truck? Not as tough as a San Francisco cable car.

A television commercial was supposed to feature a Ford three-quarter ton pickup truck pulling one of the famed cable cars up Hyde Street — one of the city's more infamous hills.

The truck supposedly is able to tow 10,000 pounds, but a cable car weighs closer to 11,500 pounds, and the hill has an 18 percent grade. That proved too much for the truck.

You make an important breakthrough.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your intuition is basically correct where finance and romance are concerned. Curb a jealous streak. You and mate begin to see eye-to-eye. Be more careful about spending. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Summer jobs can be more lucrative than you realize. A nice bonus or promotion is in the works! Temper your reactions. Do not betray someone who has confidence in you. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Do not let oversensitivity color your behavior towards others. An attempt to drum up fun and games this afternoon could be unsuccessful. Seek solitary pursuits to fulfill your spiritual needs. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Let others take the lead today while you stay out of the limelight. A platonic relationship intensifies. Try to keep an open mind. Postpone going over budget matters with mate. PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your charm turns a relationship around. Stick to any diet or exercise resolutions. You need to take the initiative in romance. Partner is tired of making all the overtures.

Network in world of cable TV

NEW YORK (AP) — Introduced in 1976 as a one-night-a-week, locally distributed program service, the TeleFrance USA cable network today reaches 10 million homes nationwide with a mix of Malraux, Moliere and Marie Antoinette that seems to have caught the fancy of an English-speaking audience.

That audience — 92 percent American — is a measure of success in the increasingly uncertain world of cable television, which has seen two generously endowed networks collapse in the last half-year, and several others talk merger, presumably for self-preservation.

"We are dealing in a tough market," says Jean Vallier, chief executive and director of programming for TeleFrance, which began to serve customers outside New York City in 1980. "I am convinced that most people who are watching TeleFrance had no idea three years ago that they would be looking at the kinds of things we have to offer."

"We do have a tradition of putting stories into pictures that began in 1896," he says of the French, "and many Americans know Godard, or Truffaut, or Chabrol. Today, we don't know who the French writers are, but years ago ... Balzac. Millions know him, and what a great script-writer he was. He wrote about the power struggle around money and women, like 'Dallas.'"

Vallier, born near Grenoble in the French Alps, is a former director of the New York-based Alliance Francaise, which merged with the French Institute in 1971. He has lived in this country since 1962.

The cable network was purchased in 1978 by Gaumont, Europe's largest filmmaker, and is distributed by the Satellite Program Network.

Introductions on TeleFrance generally are in English, but the programs themselves are subtitled, rather than dubbed. Moviegoers in big cities are familiar with subtitled, but, says Vallier, "We took a gamble doing that for television. But when you start dubbing French dialogue, you go against nature."

The TeleFrance schedule, fed each night, 9 p.m.-1 a.m. EDT, through 700 local cable systems, is aimed at the highbrow, or "upscale" viewer, with programs on art, history, culture and public affairs, along with recent and classic French motion pictures.

his side had a heart fit, North elected to gamble on a slam if his partner held good hearts. His jump over game was a request to his partner to go on to slam if his trump holding merited that action. South's hearts certainly qualified for a raise.

West felt that the only card in his hand that might be of use to his partner was the jack of diamonds. So, in an attempt to build a trick in that suit, he led a low diamond. The result was dramatic. Since declarer had no place to put his diamond loser, he played low and East won the king. The defenders had to score a trump trick for down one.

Note that, with any other lead, declarer can make his slam. He wins, draws two rounds of trumps and then clears the spades. Next, he starts running clubs. Since he would be end played if he ruffed, East can take three discards on the clubs. But he is only postponing the inevitable. After running clubs, declarer simply exits with a trump. East wins his queen of trumps but he must either lead a diamond away from his king or else concede a ruff-sluff to declarer. In either case, declarer avoids losing a diamond trick.

An offer to help

Farmers surely must believe they're in the middle of another bad dream. After all, when you're drowning and someone throws in a rope that's three feet too short to reach you, you feel totally lost.

That's what happened in the Reagan administration's PIK (payment-in-kind) program. It was offered as a way to help struggling farmers make it through another bad year. The government agreed to pay farmers "in-kind" with crops for acreage they would withhold from production.

But so many farmers responded to the program that the USDA now estimates it will lack 500,000 to 1 million bales having enough cotton on hand to meet requirements of the program.

There are a number of plans being considered to remedy the situation. But there's only one requirement the government must meet. It must deal fairly with the nation's farmers. These individuals have faced enormous obstacles just to stay in business the past few years. They signed up in good faith and to pull the rug out from under them now would be more than many of them could bear.

U.S. Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, has said the government's plan to remedy the shortfall would "create chaos in the cotton industry" and cost already-strapped farmers millions of dollars.

He's urging USDA to offer farmers substantial incentives to turn over their unsold 1980, 1981 and 1982 crops to the government to use in the PIK program. What the Reagan administration wants to do is to require cotton farmers in the PIK program to make up the shortfall.

It's obvious that what's needed is a compromise, something that can keep farmers afloat without sinking the federal government.

Telling the nation's cotton farmers "tough luck" isn't enough. The government extended a helping hand, which is exactly what it should have done. If it pulls that hand back now, it's likely to find that farmer support is lacking for future set-aside programs.

Tough two to beat

One of the more interesting bits of news in the past few days did not come from our nation's capital, but from the capital of Ireland. It came from Dublin, and from the lips of Vice President George Bush who paused there during his sojourn to eight nations in northern Europe.

The vice president said President Reagan would run for reelection in 1984 and that — guess who? — would be the No. 2 man on the Republican ticket. Here is the way he stated, clearly and succinctly, what has been becoming more and more evident in recent weeks:

"Prediction: President Reagan will run again and will win. He has generously asked me to be his running mate again." Furthermore, he added, Mr. Reagan would be a "very hard man to beat." He repeated it briefly in Iceland.

Surely the vice president would not have spoken like this unless he knew whereof he spoke.

Two things can be said about another Reagan-Bush ticket in 1984. First, Mr. Reagan would indeed be difficult to defeat mainly, as the traveling vice president pointed out, because of "the improvement in the United States economy." Hardly anyone is scoffing at "Reaganomics" these days because the president's policies have laid a solid foundation for economic growth. A solid six months of recovery is witness to this. And second, the ticket would be strong because of the loyalty, and ability, of Vice President Bush.

The news from Ireland and Iceland will be flavorful food for political thought until it is amplified in Washington.

Another View: Let public decide

Is something being kept secret and is someone being protected? That's the key question at the moment in the brouhaha over former President Jimmy Carter's 1980 debate-briefing book that fell into the hands of Reagan campaign aides.

On the surface the flap looks much like routine, if scruffy, politics. President Reagan, in responding to persistent questioning at his news conference June 28th, dismissed it as insignificant, but he has asked Attorney General William French Smith to "monitor" it. June 30th he officially ordered the FBI to investigate.

It is to be hoped that the FBI will find out how the briefing book and a thick pile of other Carter campaign documents were made available to the Reagan campaign. Did they come through the mail from a source unknown? Were they sent by a disgruntled Carter aide? By a friendly journalist? Or had the Reaganites planted a spy in the Carter campaign? Was any money paid for delivery of the documents? Is there evidence that a crime was committed?

There are ethical questions involved, too, but it is best to leave them without comment until more facts are known. But, if this is a case of a molehill becoming a mountain, the president's men are largely responsible.

The president said in his news conference that he was not aware during the campaign that his key staffers had access to confidential Carter campaign documents, and there is no reason to doubt him. But he also said he does not know how they reached his headquarters, though there was a sure way to find out — ask the men now holding high positions in the White House who have said they had the material in their possession. Common sense says that one or more of them knows whether there was a mole in the Carter campaign, whether any money was paid and the answers to the other questions.

Every serious political campaign in history has involved confidences and trying to determine opponents' strategies. Vast numbers of them have routinely involved broken confidences and ostensibly secrets being whispered or slipped into pockets or under doors. Little of that is criminal, and even the ethical standards that seem to be abused are often far less than clear. But the casual, somewhat nervous way the White House has handled the briefing-book controversy, or whatever it will come to be called, has provided reasonable grounds for speculation that the administration has something to hide. If it doesn't, then the quick, sure way to end the brouhaha is to put the facts before the public and let the chips fall where they may. The president could do that. So far, he hasn't.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Andropov lets KGB agitate West

WASHINGTON — A beleaguered Yuri Andropov, still consolidating his control of the Kremlin, has unleashed his trusted KGB secret police to stir up trouble in the West.

At first, he cautiously dangled an olive branch, apparently hoping for a limited detente that would permit him to concentrate on his internal problems. But Ronald Reagan merely sniffed at the branch suspiciously, without reducing the belligerency level in Washington.

According to intelligence reports, Andropov then activated the KGB that he used to direct KGB agents and agitators began a major effort to split the Western allies on nuclear defense. But President Reagan, bolstered by conservative victories in Britain, Japan and West Germany, succeeded in tightening the bonds that hold the Western Alliance together.

Now the latest intelligence gatherings show that Andropov has intensified the subterranean warfare, at which the Soviets specialize.

A Pentagon analysis describes how it works: KGB agents identify "discontent opinion leaders" in the West and bring them to the Soviet Union for training. This usually lasts two to four years. They are indoctrinated in Marxist ideology and instructed in revolutionary methods. They are taught how to exploit discontent, destabilize governments and organize rebellions.

Not long ago, I spoke to a graduate of a typical Soviet training camp. He said a thousand trainees from "liberation movements" around the world were enrolled at the camp where they were drilled in the fine points of guerrilla warfare. What he called "liberation movements," it turned out, were the world's most notorious terrorist bands.

The graduates emerge as disciplined political activists and guerrilla leaders. They return to their native lands where they exploit legitimate grievances and manipulate the downtrodden and the disaffected.

In recent years, the KGB has also formed shadowy alliances with drug smuggling rings, whose debilitating products help to weaken the West. The drugs are channeled through Bulgaria and Cuba, which the KGB has turned into illicit drug centers.

A classified, 38-page CIA report explains that Bulgaria has become "a safe haven from where major narcotics operations are directed. The role of Bulgaria in the field of international narcotics has increased tremendously in the last several years."

In the Caribbean, Fidel Castro's gunboats actually escort ships loaded with Colombian cocaine and marijuana into Cuban ports where the illegal drugs are loaded on to smaller boats for the quick run to the Florida coast. Sometimes the gunboats use their radar to scout for U.S. Coast Guard cutters. According to the CIA, Castro calls this drug smuggling operation "Plan Bravo."

After Andropov took charge of the Kremlin, the KGB began to step up its mischief in the West. The effort is described in one Pentagon document as a "low-risk, low-cost, low-profile" Soviet offensive. The most vulnerable "targets of opportunity," the documents suggest, are El Salvador and Guatemala — situated as they are below the soft U.S. underbelly. Next will be an attempt to take over "the petroleum fields in southern Mexico."

But the ultimate target, the analysts warn, is the United States itself.

UNDER THE DOME Rep. Bob Edgar, D-Pa., is a United Methodist minister. So when Rep. Claudine Schneider, R-R.I., was auctioning off a date with Edgar at an environmental fundraiser, she suggested that the high bidder would "learn to get to Heaven the easy way." This alluring prospect brought a bid of $50 for the cause.

Schneider, incidentally, lives in the same Capitol Hill neighborhood as Sens. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., and Slade Gorton, R-Wash. All are dedicated joggers, and are out running most mornings. But Schneider says there's no deep political conversation amongst the puffing and panting because "we're all pretty serious runners."

— Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., has been predicting that Interior Secretary James Watt will take a leave of absence from the Cabinet to pursue a movie career. His first film, Wilson says, will be "Raiders of the Last Park."

INSIDE REPORT:

Bailing out Israel costly to U.S.

WASHINGTON — Although couched in fastidiously neutral language stripped of political buzz words, secret portions of a government study on U.S. aid to Israel pose this warning: The United States confronts a rising spiral in financing Israel that may be impossible to stop.

The study, between the lines of bureaucratic prose, tells a mournful tale of the U.S. repeatedly deceived by Israel. Pleas for a one-time-only concession become a pattern for the future, at high cost to American taxpayers. According to the study, Israel has camouflaged efforts to obtain U.S. financing for the Lebanon invasion.

The study by the congressional watchdog agency, the Government Accounting Office (GAO), was submitted to Secretary of State George Shultz and other officials March 23. Since then, a sanitized version has been released to the public, with sections classified secret kept from public view. The reason for their classification seems to have far less to do with U.S. national security than the state of U.S.-Israeli relations.

The secret portions forecast a crisis building as Israel finds itself unable to repay its foreign debt of more than $20 billion in installments just beginning to peak. With the U.S. holding 45 percent of that total debt, Israel by 1993 would need $955 million in extra U.S. aid each year just to service its debt to American taxpayers.

Israel is today the largest U.S. aid recipient. The GAO report's secret portions, however, predict that Israel will either seek still higher U.S. cash gifts to finance its debt or press Congress to require offsetting the loans by mandatory U.S. purchases of Israeli goods. But the likeliest Israeli strategy would be a request for debt forgiveness. Which ever way the Israeli government goes, its record of getting what it wants from Congress faces a severe test — if American lawmakers read the GAO report.

The only alternative to higher American grant aid, more borrowing or outright debt forgiveness, the authoritative GAO study suggests, would be a political decision by the Israeli government to move toward economic austerity. Instead, the report continues, "Israel's strong unions have been able to extract real wage gains, thereby increasing (consumer) demand." Israeli industry naturally produces for this domestic market instead of selling abroad for foreign exchange.

Despite its restrained tone, the report recounts examples of one American president after another outmaneuvered in dealings with Israel — most recently Ronald Reagan following the invasion of Lebanon. Quoting Israeli officials as saying the U.S.-opposed invasion "will not result in any increase" in demands for U.S. aid, the report flatly states that Israel has asked the U.S. for "compensation for its losses during the Lebanon campaign." That was among the sections stamped "secret."

The classic example described in the secret sections shows how Israel has transformed U.S. aid (foreign military sales) that is intended solely for foreign countries buying military hardware off U.S. government shelves. In 1977, Israel talked the Carter administration into using $107 million of military aid to produce the Israeli-designed Merkava tank as a unique case, said the report, "considered a one-time exception by both countries."

But in dealing with the Reagan administration, Israel cited the Merkava as a "precedent" for U.S. aid to build its proposed Lavi fighter aircraft. In May 1982, then defense minister Ariel Sharon turned the exception into common practice by requesting $250 million a year for four years to boost production rates of the tank, develop the Lavi "and for other miscellaneous production."

But that is not the full story, according to the GAO report. After the U.S. reluctantly approved the financing for the original Lavi as "a low-cost replacement" for the obsolete A-4, the report says, Israel "changed" the design and performance characteristics.

The transformation to a "very advanced" aircraft was necessary, Israel told the U.S., because the U.S. had started selling high-performance planes to Arab states.

Woven throughout the 69-page report are scrupulously-neutral allusions to such Israeli use of Arab animosities to induce the U.S. to grant ever higher aid.

But there is not much fair-play-for-Arabs sentiment in Capitol Hill. What may catch the congressional eye in the midst of Israel's political appeal is a warning closer to home. "The many facets of the U.S. economy ... must all be considered" in handling the escalating Israeli aid crunch that lies ahead, says the GAO. In other words, the congressional watchdogs are barking that the burden of bailing out Israel may be too much for American industry and labor to bear.

CHARLEY REESE

Saudis show folly of U.S. plan

When Ronald Reagan made a full court press to persuade the Congress to allow him to sell advanced radar planes to Saudi Arabia as well as a package of offensive equipment for Saudi fighter planes, he based his argument on the fact that Saudi Arabia would be a "partner" in Middle East peace efforts.

This, of course, was a lie. At the time, Saudi Arabia was already clearly on record as violently opposing the Camp David peace treaty between Israel and Egypt. Moreover, the Saudis — to their credit — never once said publicly that they would do what Reagan was claiming they were going to do in exchange for buying all the military hardware.

Not long after this sale was approved, Saudi Arabia raised its oil prices and publicly condemned the United States when two of our planes shot down two Libyan planes in self-defense. More recently, when Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger flew to Saudi Arabia to enlist their support for the Israeli-Lebanese peace agreement, the Saudis told him coldly, "You are nothing but an arms merchant and we pay cash."

Anybody who is knowledgeable about the Middle East easily saw the folly of the Reagan policy. Unfortunately, the only thing people in Washington know about the Middle East is that the Arabs have a lot of money and oil and American corporations do about $35 billion worth of business with them. Therefore U.S. government policy is "to heck with peace or morality, let's suck the toes of the Arab sheiks."

Saudi Arabia is a weak country. Despite its hardware purchases, it has no army worthy of its name. Therefore, Saudi policy is to buy protection from other Arab countries which have the capability of knocking over the Saudis anytime they choose. A fearful country which is paying protection money is in no position to influence those countries it fears. Thus, Saudi Arabia always goes with the Arab crowd, never leads it.

Secondly, Saudi Arabia is an unbelievably backward and semi-barbaric country. It did not get around to legally outlawing human slavery until 1962. There were an estimated 100,000 to 300,000 slaves in Saudi Arabia in the 1960s and there is considerable evidence that despite the 1962 law, human slavery still thrives.

According to the "Encyclopedia of the Third World" (Vol. III, by George Thomas Kurian): "Saudi Arabia is the only country in the Middle East where slavery is officially countenanced. Though slavery was officially abolished in 1962, the demand for slaves is sufficient to enable slave traders to continue operating profitably, although perhaps with some circumspection. Private auctions are common. Africa and Baluchistan are the main source of slaves."

In fact, the Arab word for slave, (abd, singular, 'abed, plural), is also used to refer to any African or black. There are also reports that Syrian orphanages have supplied rich Saudis with children who are used as slaves.

Eldredge Cleaver, the American Black Panther who lived in the Arab countries during his fugitive years, has also reported seeing evidence of slavery. In fact Cleaver said when he returned to the United States that the Arabs are the "most racist people on earth."

If American liberals were not such hypocrites, they would be demanding disinvestment in Saudi Arabia rather than in South Africa. South Africa, after all, practices only segregation. Saudi Arabia practices slavery.

Money can buy a lot of consciences, however, as well as politicians, college professors, bureaucrats, lawyers, lobbyists and even journalists.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, July 8, the 189th day of 1983. There are 176 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On July 8, 1835, the Liberty Bell in Philadelphia cracked as it was being rung during the funeral of Chief Justice John Marshall.

On this date: In 1663, King Charles II of England granted a charter to Rhode Island.

In 1822, the English poet Percy Shelley drowned when his boat capsized in the Italian Gulf of Spezia.

In 1919, President Woodrow Wilson received a tumultuous welcome in New York after his return from the Versailles Peace Conference.

And in 1940, the government of Norway moved to London after 62 days of resisting Nazi invaders during World War II.

Budget disputes halt welfare checks

By The Associated Press

Budget disputes in California and Pennsylvania have prevented the mailing of more than 380,000 welfare, unemployment or disability checks, and some recipients say the loss of payments could lead to violence.

"It's a boiling teapot ready to explode," said Roxanne Jones, director of Philadelphia Citizens in Action, which has sued in federal court to force the state to mail out 150,000 welfare checks.

If the impasse continues next week, another 150,000 Pennsylvania recipients will not receive their checks, which are about $322 a month for families and $170 for individuals. Paychecks for 18,000 state employees also have been held up.

In California, a similar standoff has prevented checks being sent to more than 230,000 people receiving unemployment or disability payments.

"It's cruel," said Ms. Jones, whose $86 check was due Wednesday. "The governor is playing around with our lives, but he's messing with the wrong people at the wrong time of the year. It's hot, and the people are desperate."

Legislators passed an $8.1 billion budget calling for $1 million in new taxes but failed to agree on the increases before the July 1 deadline. The state has not been able to spend money for the last week.

Gov. Dick Thornburgh has refused to sign the unbalanced budget, saying he will give the Republican-controlled Senate and Democratic-controlled House time to compromise before he begins slashing programs. Talks continued Thursday, but no progress was reported.

William Goodman, 23, unemployed and "desperately needing" the $82 check he receives twice a month, went to a church soup kitchen Thursday. "I heard some people say that if they don't get their money they would go and break into some stores," he said.

About double the usual number of people have taken advantage of meal programs in the Philadelphia area since last week. The 51-member League of Cities sent a telegram to Thornburgh urging him to sign the budget because the frozen welfare checks are putting a strain on cities trying to help the poor.

Several cities are preparing to create or expand soup kitchens if the budget impasse continues, "but they don't want to be named because they don't want to create a panic situation," said league executive director William Hansell.

In California, Republican Gov. George Deukmejian met for 80 minutes Thursday with the majority Democratic leaders, his opponents in the Legislature, and more talks were planned today.

Deukmejian wants to balance a proposed $27.2 billion budget by vetoing up to $1.2 billion. Democrats want state programs protected from cuts, favor a tax increase and have refused to pass the budget until Republicans vote for a companion bill limiting Deukmejian's veto power.

Earlier Thursday, Democrats put more pressure on Deukmejian by approving a stopgap bill that would let the state write benefit checks for unemployed and disabled workers. Through Thursday, 231,400 people had been denied biweekly unemployment or disability checks, and an additional 400,000 could be affected in the next seven days, said Gera Curry of the state Employment Development Department.

HUD secretary criticizes ex-assistant secretary

WASHINGTON (AP) — Housing and Urban Development Secretary Samuel R. Pierce will seek reimbursement from a former assistant secretary of the agency who allegedly used subordinates and department equipment to edit and promote a book he had written, a HUD spokeswoman says.

Emanuel S. Savas resigned Thursday, a week after HUD officials received a report from Justice Department investigators who concluded that he had "abused his office and misused government resources."

The Justice Department said it would not prosecute Savas because his activities did not meet government standards for legal action. But the report urged HUD to seek reimbursement from the man who helped President Reagan forge his policy of reduced federal aid to cities.

"He said to me, 'We're going to make him pay,'" HUD spokeswoman Robin Raborn said Thursday evening of a conversation she had earlier with Pierce. Ms. Raborn said the department would seek reimbursement for the time agency employees spent on Savas's book, as well as for use of copying machines, HUD stationery and other equipment.

"It's something the (HUD) Inspector General's Office is figuring out now," she said. "It will be in the thousands of dollars."

The Justice Department report had suggested that the agency might "consider strong administrative action" against Savas. It said HUD might "recover from Savas whatever unjust enrichment he received from the improper use of government supplies and personnel."

In his two-page letter to Pierce, and in a statement released with it, Savas insisted that "any work on the book was a proper HUD activity." He dismissed other charges as "even more trivial insinuations, gossip and innuendoes."

But Pierce, who was in Ohio on Thursday and had portions of the resignation letter read to him by an aide over the telephone, said he had given Savas the chance to resign rather than be fired by 5 p.m.

Public Notice

Southwestern Bell, in accordance with the rules of the Public Utility Commission of Texas, hereby gives notice of the company's intent to implement a new schedule of telephone rates in Texas, effective August 1, 1983, unless otherwise determined by the Commission.

A complete copy of the new rate schedule is on file with the Texas Public Utility Commission (PUC) at Austin, Texas, and with each affected municipality served by Southwestern Bell, and is available for inspection in each of the company's public business offices in Texas. The Commission staff has contended in the past that all rates are subject to change as a result of Southwestern Bell's rate application.

As a result of the settlement of a lawsuit brought by the U.S. Department of Justice against AT&T, Southwestern Bell, on January 1, 1984, (or as otherwise ordered by the United States District Court) will no longer be a part of the Bell System, but will be owned by public shareholders. Under the terms of the settlement, Southwestern Bell has identified 15 areas in the state within which it may provide service, and the federal court with jurisdiction of the settlement has tentatively approved these areas, called LATAs (Local Access and Transport Area). On or about January 1, 1984, Southwestern Bell can not provide service between these LATAs, and in addition, must transfer to AT&T customer premises equipment that it leases to customers.

Southwestern Bell has filed a proposed revised rate schedule with the PUC reflecting these changes. These rates would become effective August 1, 1983, if they are not suspended by the PUC; however, it is expected that they will be suspended and that the rates ultimately set by the PUC will become effective on or about January 1, 1984. If the rates were to become effective as filed, they would produce a 48.2% increase in Southwestern Bell's unadjusted test year revenues (or a 76.36% increase in Southwestern Bell's test year revenues adjusted to reflect the effect of Southwestern Bell's divestiture from AT&T). Any change in the rates for any interLATA services offered by AT&T or a subsidiary after January 1, 1984, could affect customers of Southwestern Bell Telephone Company.

Notice to Customers of Other Telephone Companies

While Southwestern Bell has proposed no increase in rates for intralATA interexchange toll services, any change in those rates could also affect customers of other telephone companies. Southwestern Bell is proposing changes in the structure of the present private line and foreign exchange services. Changes in these rates may affect customers of other telephone companies. Any change in the rates for any interLATA services offered by AT&T or a subsidiary after January 1, 1984, could affect customers of other telephone companies.

Aviso Público

Southwestern Bell, en conformidad a las reglas del Public Utility Commission (Comisión de Servicios Públicos) de Texas, por la presente hace saber su intención de establecer un nuevo arancel de tarifas para servicio de teléfono en Texas, con vigencia a partir del 1o de agosto de 1983, a menos que la Comisión haga otra determinación.

Una copia completa del nuevo arancel de tarifas se ha archivado en las oficinas del Public Utility Commission (PUC) o Comisión de Servicios Públicos de Texas en Austin, Texas, al igual que en cada municipalidad afectada y que es servida por Southwestern Bell, y dicho arancel está disponible para inspección pública en todas las oficinas de Southwestern Bell en Texas. En el pasado, la Comisión ha sostenido que toda tarifa está sujeta a cambios cada vez que Southwestern Bell solicite un cambio en dichas tarifas.

Como resultado del arreglo judicial al cual se llegó tras el proceso legal entablado en contra de AT&T por el U.S. Department of Justice (Departamento de Justicia), Southwestern Bell dejará de formar parte del Bell System (Sistema Bell) a partir del 1o de enero de 1984 (o en la fecha que disponga el United States District Court — Tribunal Federal de Distrito), y pasará a ser posesión de accionistas públicos. Bajo las condiciones de dicho arreglo, Southwestern Bell ha identificado 15 regiones dentro del Estado de Texas en las cuales puede proporcionar servicio, y el tribunal federal con jurisdicción en el arreglo ha dado su aprobación provisional a estas regiones, que se denominan "LATAs" (Local Access and Transport Area, o Regiones Locales de Acceso y Transporte). A partir de fecha 1o de enero de 1984 aproximadamente, Southwestern Bell no podrá proporcionar servicio entre dichas LATAs, y además deberá ceder a AT&T todo equipo ubicado en premisas de clientes y alquilado a los mismos.

Estos cambios se han incluido en el propuesto arancel de tarifas de servicio revisado que Southwestern Bell ha archivado con la PUC. Dichas tarifas tendrían vigencia a partir del 1o de agosto de 1983, a menos que fueran suspendidas por la PUC, sin embargo, se espera que si serán suspendidas, y que las tarifas que en último caso establezca la PUC entrarán en vigor a partir de fecha 1o de enero de 1984 aproximadamente. Si las tarifas entrarán en vigor tal y como se han archivadas, aumentarían en un 48.2% los ingresos no-ajustados de Southwestern Bell para año de prueba (unadjusted test year revenues), o sea un aumento de 76.36% en los ingresos de Southwestern Bell para año de prueba, ajustados para reflejar el efecto del despojo entre Southwestern Bell y AT&T. Cualquier cambio en las tarifas para cualquier servicio tipo-interLATA que proporcione AT&T o una compañía subsidiaria después del 1o de enero de 1984 podría afectar a los clientes de Southwestern Bell Telephone Company.

Aviso a los Clientes de Otras Compañías de Teléfono

Mientras Southwestern Bell no ha propuesto un aumento en las tarifas para servicios tipo "interLATA interexchange toll", cualquier cambio en dichas tarifas también podría afectar a los clientes de otras compañías de servicio telefónico. Southwestern Bell está proponiendo cambios en la estructura de los servicios actuales de línea privada (private line) y de intercambio extranjero (foreign exchange). Cambios en las tarifas para dichos servicios podrían afectar a los clientes de otras compañías de servicio telefónico. Cualquier cambio en las tarifas para cualquier servicio tipo-interLATA que proporcione AT&T o una compañía subsidiaria después del 1o de enero de 1984 podría afectar a los clientes de otras compañías de servicio telefónico.

KANASKIS COUNTRY, Alberta (AP) — The young, red-haired scout from Denmark hobbled into the field hospital, a teddy bear tucked under her neckerchief and an ingrown toenail accounting for her limp.

"It's been bothering me, so I thought I better come in to have someone take a look at it. I don't want to miss anything," Charlotte Larsen of Copenhagen said Thursday while waiting for a medic.

For 13,600 scouts from 106 countries attending the 15th World Scout Jamboree on fringes of the Canadian Rockies, help is as close as the olive-green tent with the large red cross on the side.

One scout, Jay Steen, 16, of Minnetonka, Minn., had a complaint similar to Miss Larsen's and worried he might miss some jamboree activities.

"When it first began bothering me on the way out, I thought, 'Oh, no. Now everything's ruined...' I feel a lot better about it now," he said after receiving first aid.

Even though most ailments are minor scrapes and runny noses, the scouts' campground home for two weeks has a full military field hospital.

Their "wilderness" also has electric lights, telephones, a water and sewer system, stores, snack bars, a bank and a post office.

Lt. Col. Ken Nickerson of the Canadian Forces, commanding officer of the camp hospital, said its staff expects to treat between 3,500 and 4,000 scouts before the jamboree ends.

As of Thursday morning, 609 scouts had come through the hospital. Only 17 were admitted.

"They'll only be here for 24 to 48 hours. If they need extended care, they'll be taken off-site" to Foothills Hospital in Calgary, about 50 miles to the east, said Nickerson, a general practitioner.

Seven physicians are on call at the hospital — five general practitioners, a surgeon and an eye-ear-nose-throat specialist, Nickerson said.

There also is a gynecologist at the camp for this, the first jamboree involving girls. There are separate hospital wards for boys and girls.

Soviet girl's letter to Andropov not answered

MOSCOW (AP) — A 12-year-old Soviet girl, inspired by the letter-writing of American schoolgirl Samantha Smith, wrote to Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov to ask that her father be freed from jail.

Unlike Samantha, who was invited by Andropov on a two-week visit of the Soviet Union, Irina Tarnopolsky has had little publicity and no reply. And her father, Yuri, has just been sentenced to three years in a labor camp because of his activities as a "refusenik," a Jew who has been denied permission to emigrate from Russia.

After Tarnopolsky's two-day trial last month, his wife, Olga, told Western reporters in Moscow in a telephone call that "Irina is crying all day long. She hoped her father would be released. She can't believe she won't see him now for three more years."

After watching interviews with Samantha on Soviet television, Irina decided to write her appeal to Andropov, about two weeks before her father went on trial.

A copy of the letter was made available to Western reporters in Moscow. Reproductions of the copy disappeared from the Los Angeles Times office in the Soviet capital. The Tarnopolsky file, which also contained a copy of the letter, disappeared from the offices of The Associated Press after the news agency had written the story.

Irina's 46-year-old father is a Jewish scientist who lives in Kharkov, an industrial city about 650 miles south of Moscow. He and his wife and daughter have been trying to emigrate to Israel for four years, but are among the estimated 20,000 to 30,000 Jewish refuseniks.

Tarnopolsky was active in refusenik circles until his arrest March 15. He was sentenced June 30 to the maximum sentence of three years in a labor camp on charges of slandering the Soviet Union.

Irina had written to Andropov earlier in June, asking him to let the family leave for Israel.

"On the first day of the trial, she saw him, but they (the authorities) told her she had to leave" the courtroom, Mrs. Tarnopolsky said in the June 30 telephone call.

Ruidoso offers year-round escape oasis

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

RUIDOSO, N.M.—There could be better and cheaper weekend escape packages from the Midland area than Ruidoso, but they are well guarded secrets. Ruidoso's year-round potential for getting away from it all is a guarded secret worth giving away.

(Results, Page 2B)

In the winter months, the mountains near Ruidoso and in the Lincoln National Forest provide excellent skiing opportunities. The Sierra Blanca Resort on Sierra Blanca Mountain is located over 8000 feet up in the Sacramento Mountains, a southern extension of the Rockies. Sierra Blanca recorded 134 inches of snowfall last April to cap a successful season.

The city of Ruidoso promotes itself as a summer resort area, also, and most of that image is being exuded through Ruidoso Downs race track.

RUIDOSO DOWNS has a 74-day schedule that began May 6 and ends with the All American Futurity Sep. 5. The All American Futurity is one of horse racing's richest races, with a million dollar payoff for the winning horse.

RD's advertising campaign offers the slogan, "Great Racing in the Cool Pines". It is an accurate statement. Indeed, Ruidoso could be considered the Oasis of West Texas.

Last year, Ruidoso Downs set record levels in both attendance and wagering, but totals this year are down a little from those figures. And a proposed Monday strike from the New Mexico Horsemen's Association has cast some shadows on the immediate future of the track. Nevertheless, RD has a full complement of loyal fans in New Mexico, Texas and Oklahoma.

Ruidoso Downs is accessible only by Roswell, N.M. and US 70 from West Texas. Getting to Roswell, then, becomes the initial goal. The shortest route goes from Midland to Seminole north on US 385. From Seminole, travel on 214 to Plains, then west on US 380 straight through Roswell to Ruidoso.

That route is about 260 miles. A longer (70 miles), more scenic route is west on I-20 to Pecos and then north on US 285 to Carlsbad Caverns National Park. Pecos is an authentic western town and Carlsbad Caverns is an inexpensive, fascinating bit of scenery.

There are many places to stay in Ruidoso. Tourism is the chief commodity. Hence, the city is filled with hotels, motels, condominiums and cabins. In addition there are several trailer parks. Of the first two, the choices are numerous. The Ruidoso Inn is one of the most expensive but is thin on native atmosphere. The Cree Manor Inn is located on Golf Course Road just off of Highway 37. Cree Manor is quiet, pleasant, and reasonable, with a tremendous view of Sierra Blanca. A good rule of thumb is to avoid the highway-side lodging places. Most are overpriced and are located well on the beaten path.

Condos are very expensive, but could be more economical to use when large parties are planning to visit. Cabins are competitively priced and very picturesque. There are plenty of good locations but they require a little digging.

THE RACE track on US 70 on the east side of Ruidoso. Parking is $1.00. Once at the track, there are several options on where to see the races. The best seats are in the All American Turf Club, where visitors get reserved seating with tables, waitresses come to the tables for food and drink orders, there are instant replays of the races and patrons are shielded from the wind. Turf Club seats are $7, with lower prices of $5 and $4.50 for box seats slightly higher up.

General Admission seats, all open air, are priced at $2 and $3. These seats are exposed to the elements but on a nice day the weather is quite suitable. Ruidoso temperatures run cool. Wednesday night the mercury dropped to 47 degrees. Sweaters are never out of season.

There are gamblers, there are horse racing enthusiasts and there are professionals. There are all kinds at the track, and any style of dress is acceptable, from blue jeans and boots to Ralph Lauren. Wagering is the toughest part.

RULE P1: Do not go unprepared to lose. This is gambling. There are no sure things, but there are some things one can do to stay in the running.

Ruidoso Downs features several different wagering styles to heighten interest. One is the Quiniela bet, in which bettors attempt to select the top two finishers in a given race. More difficult is the Trifecta, featured Thursday in the Eighth and Twelfth races. The Trifecta selects the top three horses in order of finish. Trifectas are big scores when they pay off, which is rarely.

To win money at the track takes more than just luck. It takes at least a program and a racing form, and tip sheets are often helpful in at least making some selections.

Cubs catcher Don Hyman hits the dirt on a wild throw from El Paso pitcher Rene Quinones Thursday night. Catching for the Diablos is Joe Henderson. Hyman led Midland at the plate with a 2-for-3 performance, but the Cubs ended up losing, 3-1.

Diablos hoist Cubs' Banks

Midland loses 5th straight

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

El Paso short reliever Jack Lazorko came on in the top of the ninth inning for starter Rene Quinones Thursday night to pick up his third save of the six-game home stand, helping the Diablos beat Cubs starter Darryl Banks for the first time in five meetings.

The 3-1 Texas League victory over Midland was the Diablos fifth-straight win, giving the Diablos the series, 5-1, as well as a three-game lead in the West Division with a record of 12-6. The Cubs fall to 5-9 and remain in second place.

The only run Quinones allowed was unearned in the third inning, giving the Cubs a 1-0 lead.

With one out, Rick Baker belted a single up the middle and went to second with his 41st stolen base of the year. Diablos catcher Joe Henderson's pickoff throw went wide and into the outfield, sending Baker to third. He scored when Bill Hatcher grounded out to shortstop.

Quinones' only real trouble after Baker's run came in the seventh when Don Hyman singled down the third base line and A.J. Hill followed with a walk. Neither runner moved any further.

When Quinones fell behind Trey Brooks 3-0 in the count, El Paso manager Tony Muser decided it was time for the change and brought in Lazorko to finish the game. Lazorko walked Brooks (credited to Quinones, his fifth of the game) with his first pitch, got Carlos Lezcano to pop up to shortstop and then gave up a single to Hyman. Both runners advanced when A.J. Hill grounded out to first baseman Carlos Ponce who threw to Lazorko covering the bag. Jay Loviglio took a called third strike to end the game.

Hyman's single off Lazorko was only the second hit the reliever gave up in his three appearances. Lezcano tagged him for a double Sunday night.

"He's been pitching super," said Muser who was also pleased with Quinones' four hit performance after his starter lost the opening game of the series on Saturday. "Sometimes it takes a little time to come around. Rene has been pitching well but he gave up eight runs in his first outing. The difference in his two outings was this time he kept his fastball down. He didn't have it breaking ball as good tonight, but he adjusted with his fastball. When you only give up four hits in this park you're pitching a hell of a game."

led off with a single to left field and moved to third on Billy Max' single to right. He scored when Jim Paciorek grounded into a double play.

The winning runs came in the seventh. Eric Peyton led the charge with a single to right field and moved to second on Ponce's sacrifice bunt. Max followed with an RBI single to left and, one out later, Mike Felder hit an RBI double down the third base line.

Max, who led all hitters with a 3-for-4 performance with one double, "broke out of a mild slump tonight," said Muser. "He hasn't been swinging the bat very well. Riles played a good game at shortstop and (Juan) Castillo played flawless at second. He was playing the hitters well."

Despite El Paso's 11-hit attack, pitching and defense was the key to the game.

"We got good defense to go with our pitching," said Muser. "Good pitching and good defense have to compliment each other. This has been a series of breaks and I think our club got most of them. Next time, Midland might get the breaks."

"I want to compliment the Cubs. I know how frustrated they must feel right now," said Muser. "But, they have nothing to be ashamed of. They played good baseball."

The Cubs hit the road today and will start a five-game stand at Shreveport followed by five games at Tulsa and a three-day break for the All-Star game. They return home July 22 against Jackson.

1935 — The American League extended its All-Star Game winning streak to three with a 4-1 victory at Cleveland's Municipal Stadium. Jimmie Foxx provided the margin of victory in the first inning with a two-run homer off left-hander Bill Walker of the St. Louis Cardinals.

1941 — Ted Williams' two-out, three-run homer off Claude Passeau in the ninth inning gave the American League a 7-5 victory in the All-Star Game at Briggs Stadium in Detroit and wasted a pair of two-run homers by National League shortstop Arky Vaughan.

1952 — The National League edged the American League 3-2 in the first rain-shortened All-Star Game. The five-inning contest at Philadelphia's Shibe Park featured home runs by Jackie Robinson and Hank Sauer. Bobby Shantz of the Philadelphia Athletics struck out Whitey Lockman, Robinson and Stan Musial in succession.

1970 — Jim Ray Hart of the San Francisco Giants hit for the cycle (single, double, triple and homer) and became the first National League player in 50 years to drive in six runs in one inning in a 13-0 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

Ump benched for shove

NEW YORK (AP) — In what is believed to be the first in-season suspension of an umpire in major league baseball history, National League umpire Joe West has been set down for three days and fined $500 by league President Chub Feeney for shoving Atlanta Braves Manager Joe Torre after a June 28 game with Houston.

Richie Phillips, counsel for the Major League Umpires Association, told The Associated Press by telephone from his home in Philadelphia early today that he hopes to overturn the suspension at a hearing before Feeney in New York on Monday.

In the meantime, Phillips said West would work the series between the Astros and Mets in New York starting tonight.

The incident occurred after Torre followed West to the umpires' dressing room walkway to dispute a $100 fine given Bob Watson for protesting a called third strike called by fill-in umpire Steve Rippley for the final out in the Braves' 4-3 loss to the Astros.

"Umpires, ideally, should be above losing their composure, and there is little doubt Joe lost his composure," Phillips said. "But the circumstances don't warrant the severe disciplinary action that has been imposed. I don't agree with it. I can't say I'm shocked by it, but I don't feel Joe being suspended is proper."

Phillips said his appeal would be based on Torre's being in a restricted area where "he had no right pursuing him. Joe was operating in a very hostile area," Phillips said.

The Atlanta Constitution quoted Torre as saying he had talked to Feeney and had not been informed if he was being disciplined, "but Chub led me to believe I was going to be fined, too."

"This is a precedent for Chub and a precedent for the game," Phillips said. "He sees it as a very serious matter where he feels the same set of standards that apply to managers should apply to umpires."

"I don't think that's quite right. In some respect, umpires should have higher standards than managers. In another respect, there are some special standards that should pertain to umpires."

West, 31, a six-year veteran, admitted after the game he shoved Torre.

"I was wrong. But he shouldn't be where he doesn't belong... I was afraid he might incite the crowd," West said at the time.

Phillips said he doesn't "take the position that umpires can't make mistakes, or that they cannot even make outrageous mistakes. I take the position that umpires are right, right or wrong."

"But it seems to me Torre instigated the action and it should be taken into consideration that it was off the playing field and in an area where Torre had no business being. These are two important factors that should mitigate against a suspension."

Feeney said last week he that he did not recall an umpire ever shoving a manager before.

"This is obviously not something the league condones," he said.

Billy Williams must be feeling his age

Billy Williams must be feeling his age. In Tuesday's Oldtimers' game, the appetizer to Wednesday's All-Star extravaganza, the former National League batting champion hit a home run to win the game.

It wasn't too many years ago, when Billy was roving batting coach for the Chicago Cubs, that they talked him into participating in an exhibition softball game against the Dallas Playboy Bunnies at Cubs Stadium.

In his last time at bat, Williams whistled a liner through the box that almost decapitated the blonde pitcher. It was a real scorcher.

I had been taking a picture behind the plate and after he rounded the bases Billy, looking like he'd just been scared by a ghost, confided, "That's why I don't take part in these Oldtimers' games. I still take a pretty good rip and some of the older guys don't move that well and could get hurt."

Tuesday Billy made sure nobody got hurt. He put it out of reach. Still, the fact that he even participated indicates he perhaps feels that "rip" isn't quite as terrorizing as it was a few years ago...

WHEN the Midland Cubs attracted only 536 fans for Wednesday's Cubs Stadium game against El Paso, General Manager Bill Schammel, after crowds of 3800 and 2710 on successive nights, acted almost relieved for the "night off."

Still, it broke a string of 19 straight games in which the Cubs had played before crowds of 1,000 fans or more. In fact, Midland averaged 1,910 fans per game during that stretch...

TED BATTLES

In Monday's game, right fielder Randy LaVigne was involved in a rarity, getting starting two double plays.

In the first inning, he grabbed Juan Castillo's fly and gunned the ball to first in time to double Mike Felder. Then, in the ninth, he took Bill Max's fly and when Carlos Ponce tried to score from third after the catch, completed another double play with a bullseye throw...

Chances are Midland won't see as much of Chicago Cubs General Manager Dallas Green this year as it did last season, the first year of the New Tradition.

Dallas used the farm clubs as an excuse to escape the "heat" in Chicago when things got too uncomfortable.

This year, with Chicago not only winning, but projecting itself into the pennant race, life in the Windy City is a lot more bearable. In fact, if things keep up this way, it could be downright pleasant.

Brandon Davis, National Coordinator of Scouting for the Cubs organization, in Midland for a brief look during the El Paso series, admits things are better. "We had all the scouts in Chicago for the draft and the Cubs were on a winning streak and Dallas wasn't going to let us leave until somebody ended the Cubs' winning streak."

"I think he would be happy to for the Cubs to play 500 ball the rest of the way and attain respectability. What he's doing is buying time," by buying Phillies, "until the kids in the minor leagues have a chance to develop..."

Of the present Midland Cubs, four were on the Chicago Cubs Mesa, Ariz., spring training roster—pitchers Darryl Banks, Stan Kyles and Jim Wright and infielder Jay Loviglio. Wright, incidentally, was obtained during the off season in trade for former Midland lefty Mike King, who had originally been drafted No. 1 by the Oakland A's...

Did you see what they said about our Mel Hall in Sports Illustrated?

"...Hall is such a loud and relentless talker that his teammates have put up a clubhouse picture of a long-eared dog, beneath which was this inscription: 'My ears got this way from listening to Mel Hall for just three innings.'"

Billy Williams almost decapitates pitcher in an exhibition softball game with against the Dallas Playboy Bunnies at Cubs Stadium a few years back.

Fun Run set for July 16

The first annual Big Brothers Big Sisters Fun Run will be held at 7 a.m. July 16, starting at the Midlander Health and Racquet Club, 225 Corporate Dr.

Proceeds will go to the Big Brothers Big Sisters organization.

The events will be 10 kilometers and two miles. There will be competition for men and women and the age divisions are: 12-under, 13-19, 20-29, 30-39, 40-49 and 50-plus.

The top three finishers in each division will receive awards and the first 150 to enter will receive T-shirts. Entry fee is $10 for pre-entry and $12 for late registration. Registration will be accepted right up to race time.

Registrations may be picked up at the Midlander Health and Racquet Club or the Petroplex Savings Banking centers.

Aid stations will be located at the one, three and five mile markers of the course which will begin at the Midlander at Coprate Drive, move on to Air Park Drive, thence south on A Street, loop Neely, Garfield, Cimmaron and North 1, loop heading back to the Midlander.

For information, contact Sheldon Skinner (682-0813 or 683-6906).

City sponsors tennis clinic

A Texas Tennis Association Clinic Caravan, sponsored by the Midlander Parks and Recreation Dept., will be held July 15 at Lee High School. Division I for boys and girls to 18 is from 9 a.m. to noon. Division II, for adults, is 7 to 10 p.m.

Participants need their own racquets. Other equipment, including ball machines, will be furnished.

James Rytting, who played on the Cornell University team, is the caravan instructor.

Hill, Martin subpoenaed

DALLAS (AP) — Subpoenas have been issued for Dallas Cowboys football players Tony Hill and Harvey Martin to appear as defense witnesses in next month's scheduled trial of an accused cocaine dealer, the U.S. marshal's office has confirmed.

U.S. Marshal Clint Peoples said the subpoenas were issued Wednesday in the case of Lauriberto Ignacio, who was indicted by a federal grand jury in April for allegedly conspiring to smuggle cocaine from Brazil to Texas.

Ignacio, 39, of North Richland Hills, has been jailed in lieu of $50,000 bond since his arrest March 30. He is scheduled to stand trial Aug. 1.

Neither Hill nor Martin could be reached for comment at telephone numbers provided by the Cowboys organization, the Dallas Times Herald reported.

But Dan Guthrie, a Dallas defense attorney specializing in drug cases, said he was recently retained by Martin and said his client would accept the subpoena this week.

Guthrie refused to elaborate on why Martin hired him.

William McGarvey, Ignacio's defense lawyer, was out of town and could not be reached for comment.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Christopher L. Milner said the charges against Ignacio were part of a larger federal investigation into Brazilian cocaine smuggling that began last year with the arrest of Elias Murbach, who later pleaded guilty and agreed to cooperate with investigators.

Milner would not speculate on why Hill and Martin had been subpoenaed, but said, "If any of the Cowboys want to show up and testify under oath in court, it's sure going to be interesting."

Fernandez blanks Beaumont, 3-0

By Associated Press
Shreveport's Mark Schuster hit two homers and a double and drove in four runs to lead the Captains to a 7-4 win over Jackson in Texas League action.

In other TL games Thursday night, Arkansas trounced Tulsa 8-1, San Antonio blanked Beaumont 3-0 and El Paso beat Midland 3-1.

Dale Holman hit a solo homer in the second for San Antonio and added an RBI single in the third. The Dodgers' final run came in the ninth when Robbie Allen drove in Larry See with a double.

Sid Fernandez, 9-2, nabbed the win, scattering seven hits and striking out 10 in eight innings. Mark Vanderbush, 8-2, was the loser for Beaumont.

The Caps' Schuster had a two-run homer in the second inning and added a solo shot in the seventh. He also hit an RBI double during the Captains four-run third.

Jackson's Kevin Mitchell had three hits, including a two-run homer in the fifth.

Craig Chamberlain, 3-5, was the winning pitcher. Mike Huffman took the loss for Jackson.

Mark Salas, Rod Booker and Larry Reynolds led Arkansas' assault. Salas went 2-for-5, driving in three runs. Booker had three hits and scored two runs, while Reynolds hit a two-run double.

Arkansas' Dan Cox, 6-3, limited the Drillers to three hits while posting his fifth consecutive win. Billy Taylor, 3-4, was tagged with the loss.

Irish kids think national grid title

By HERSCHEL NISSENEN
AP Sports Writer

Hiawatha Nahomia Nokomis Francisco and the more-simply-named Alvin Miller, two of the top football recruits in the nation, are looking forward to the upcoming football season at Notre Dame.

But they're not just excited about playing at the college level. They're already thinking national championship.

The big thing going around this year is that Notre Dame can really come out No. 1," says Francisco. "When I made my official visit to Notre Dame, a lot of guys I knew from high school came up to me and said Notre Dame is going to be the Sugar Bowl."

FRANCISCO, a running back, played at Moeller High School in Cincinnati under Coach Gerry Faust, who became Notre Dame's head coach two years ago. But his first two campaigns produced unimpressive records of 5-6 and 6-4 and rumors have been flying that another season along those lines might mean a change.

"Everyone keeps mentioning it," says Francisco. "We keep reading in the press that Mr. Faust needs a winning season and a bowl game to keep his job. We have to do it to keep him and prove that he's capable of coaching a team all the way. I know things will change. I know Mr. Faust will bounce back and I want to be part of it."

Francisco and Miller, a wide receiver from St. Louis, were among 51 high school athletes — one from each state and Puerto Rico — honored in New York last week with "No. 1" awards from the Hertz Corporation for an outstanding athletic performance.

FRANCISCO, who rushed for more than 1,500 yards as Moeller won its sixth Ohio state championship in seven years, broke open a tight game against Massillon High School with a 64-yard touchdown run in the second quarter and scored another touchdown while gaining 135 yards on 10 carries.

Miller, touted in some quarters as the No. 1 football prospect in the nation, won a record four first places in the 86th running of the Missouri large school state track meet. He scored 40 of his team's 46 points, four points more than the entire second-place team.

Francisco, who was named after his father, has learned to live with his unique name, although he admits that "when people would kid me I wanted to punch them out."

Faust solved that problem.

"He gave me the nickname 'H' as a sophomore," Francisco said. "I really started getting fed up with people pronouncing my name wrong and making all kinds of jokes and I was thinking about changing my name. He said, 'H. don't change your name. One day that name will work wonders for you.' After that, everything started picking up."

Miller's exalted status surprised him because Kirkwood High wasn't a pass-happy team — "I was always a wide receiver, and running backs and quarterbacks usually get the glory," he said — he missed three games with an injury and, besides, he was a basketball hot-shot in his early high school days.

"At first, I got so many letters from basketball coaches, but only five or six from football coaches," Miller said. "Finally, football started to flow, but it didn't matter because I wasn't going to play basketball in college."

"I WAS mentioned in a national magazine after my sophomore year as one of the top players in the area and I was really pursuing basketball quite a bit. But I didn't improve as much as I would have liked after my sophomore year and I spent that summer running wind sprints and catching footballs instead of shooting baskets. Lifting weights kind of threw off my jump a little bit."

"Just before my junior year, the St. Louis papers wrote how I was the premier football player in the area, a big play guy. I guess they figured I did well the times I did get the ball. I also returned kicks and punted and I made good on the chances I did get."

Miller knew all about Notre Dame's football reputation, but what really sold him on the school was its academic tradition.

"When you graduate the numbers of football players they do, you must be doing something right," he said.

"Once I made my visit, I was impressed even more. I didn't know what to expect and I found a group of regular guys going at it."

lengths. A $5 win ticket returned $13.

On the other hand, in the fourth race, Queen of Cards was chosen Best Bet of the day by a consensus of race track people in the Racing Form. She was also mentioned in the tout sheets. Queen of Cards bolted from the gate in first, began to fade in the first turn, and finished sixth, a definite disappointment.

There is an element of luck involved, but the risk and chance involved are part of the allure of horse racing. Ruidoso's proximity to Midland and the fresh pace of the mountain hamlet make it well worth the trip.

Ruidoso—

Racing Forms give a horse's racing history, and numerous other statistics that can aid in making intelligent choices. For example, in Thursday's eleventh race, Slalom seemed to be the pick. Slalom had finished out of the money, in fourth, only once in seven starts. Clearly, the horse had staying power. In addition, Slalom was mentioned on the tip sheet and in the Form selections. Into the first turn Slalom was running dead last, but moved up to sixth in the first turn. On the far side, Slalom moved through the pack to fourth, and blasted into first on the near turn. Slalom won by 10

O'Meara on verge of realizing promise

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Mark O'Meara used to think he could earn a handsome living on the pro golf tour simply with his raw abilities, which are considerable.

Now that he is refining his skills, he seems destined to fulfill predictions that he will become one of the best in the game.

O'Meara, the 1979 U.S. Amateur champion, fired a 7-under-par 65 Thursday, joining Lon Hinkle as a first-round leader in the $250,000 annual Greater Milwaukee Open golf tournament.

Wally Armstrong solved a three-year putting problem and was a stroke back at 66. Buddy Gardner was at 67.

Tied at 68 were Dale Douglass, Ken Green, Mick Soli and Dennis Tiziani, the University of Wisconsin golf coach and reigning state Professional Golfers Association champion. Defending champion Calvin Peete, the top money winner here with $196,508, good for eighth place, was tied at 69 with Jim Colbert, Roger Maltbie, Don Pooley, Clarence Rose, Mark Calcavecchia and Chi-Chi Rodriguez.

The field was to be cut to the low 70 and ties after today's round at the 7,010-yard, par 72 Tuckaway Country Club course in suburban Franklin. The tourney concludes Sunday.

O'Meara, who played bogeyless golf in Wednesday's pro-am event, repeated that feat Thursday. He also had five birdies and eagled the 524-yard par 5 sixth hole.

O'Meara does not dispute that he may be only a few refinements away from greatness.

From Staff Reports

Neither side walked away with what it wanted after a meeting this week between MGF Oil Corp. executives and discontented creditor Stanford N. Phelps, company spokesman Phillip Marcum said Thursday.

"He is very tough," Marcum said of Phelps, who along with two other creditors filed a petition against the financially-strapped oil, gas and contract drilling company last week.

The suit, filed in San Antonio bankruptcy court, is seeking liquidation of the company under Chapter 7 of the bankruptcy code, in order to satisfy unpaid debts.

Now that the parties have met and they understand more about each other's business techniques, MGF has a better understanding of the difficulties involved in satisfying Phelps and terminating his litigation, Marcum said.

A nine-member team of MGF's officers, bankers and attorneys met in San Francisco to find a way to settle with Phelps, a New York stockbroker for Prudential-Bache.

Phelps, who owns $5 million in MGF senior subordinated debentures, is one of many creditors who did not receive a regular interest payment due May 1 on the bonds. The payment is a standard debt, and Phelps' suit said MGF was not paying its debts (such as interest) and asked the court to dismember the company.

Caught in a cash flow pinch because of a depressed drilling market and heavy debt load, MGF lost $80 million in 1982. It has been restructuring its debt position with its lenders and trade creditors for the last several months.

Representatives of First National Bank Midland, Texas Commerce Bank and InterFirst Corporation — MGF's principal lenders — also attended the San Francisco meeting.

The process of negotiating with Phelps is still going on, although specific disagreements change too fast to keep a tally sheet. MGF officials must try to come to some agreement with Phelps before July 19, the deadline for filing a response in U.S. Bankruptcy Court.

If the parties don't reach a compromise, Marcum said, MGF still intends to do everything it can to contest this petition in court. The company would be forced to liquidate and would become a virtual ward of the court if Phelps' petition is found to have merit.

"Everything seems to change on an hourly basis around here," Marcum said. "But the main thing is, the company is still operating, and morale is very high."

Company executives and advisors met again Thursday — back at MGF headquarters in Midland. They are trying to find alternatives to being forced to liquidate the company's assets.

Marcum said he didn't know what the next move would be, but that several alternatives are under consideration. No further meetings have been scheduled with Phelps at the present time.

The key seems to be convincing Phelps and the other bond holders to accept MGF's new offer to swap its 14.5 percent debentures due in 2001 for a new issue of 6 percent bonds maturing in 1988.

Other steps the company might take include making the missed interest payment or otherwise settling out of court with Phelps and the other two creditors who joined him in the suit, filing a counter-petition, or seeking protection from creditors under Chapter 11 bankruptcy laws.

Mini-well drilled at UT

Texans don't do everything big, as is demonstrated by the mini-well drilled at University of Texas' Austin campus. The 552-foot well can help petroleum engineers in research that could develop techniques for automated oilfield production. This week, in its shortest casing-cementing operation in history, a Halliburton Services team took 16 minutes to place a solid shield of protective cement around the pipe. The June 28 cement job is part of a 220,000 square-foot, $25 million engineering facility scheduled for completion in 1985. In the background is UT's Main Tower.

Money from jobs bill headed for Texas

By GARDNER SELBY
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — State and federal officials are still trying to sort out supplements to more than 60 employment-related programs approved by Congress in April, they said Thursday.

The emergency jobs bill that Congress okayed apparently earmarked roughly $150 million for Texans, but only some of that has trickled into specific programs so far, an aide to Gov. Mark White said.

"Congress has created a little bit of a monster," said John Hanson, employment training coordinator for the Texas Office of State-Federal Relations in Washington.

Hanson said that because Congress simply passed the complicated bill without specific directions for distribution, government agencies were left with the task of divvying the money up.

Pam Autrey of the Governor's Office of Management and Budget said her spot-check with various responsible agencies last week showed that in most cases money has reached the state or local level.

"So many of the programs did require planning and did require some preparation to go into," Autrey said. "It hasn't really been a problem, given the number of programs and the complexity of all of them."

While the Emergency Jobs Act encompassed numerous programs, citizens in San Antonio and Midland are most directly affected by supplementary appropriations to community development block grants, officials say.

By July 15, San Antonio officials expect federal approval of 12 construction projects to be paid for with the supplemental funds, said Margi Gant, a budget and research analyst with the city.

If rubberstamped by the Department of Housing and Urban Development, the $4.47 million in projects will get under way, Gant said.

"We're used to working with HUD," Gant said. Although similar block grants are being provided to Midland, a Texas Employment Commission office manager there said the special appropriations are overshadowed by an oil-related bust just beginning to affect the West Texas economy.

In May, Midland County reported unemployment of 5.7 percent, while Ector County, including Odessa, showed a 9.7 percent unemployment rate, compared to 4.9 percent in May 1982. Statewide unemployment in May was 8 percent, up from 6.3 percent in May 1982.

In contrast, San Antonio showed a May unemployment rate of 5.9 percent, down from the May 1982 rate of 6.5 percent.

Midland TEC Manager Ed Miller said, "We're just starting into a decline now. We haven't bottomed out."

Even as unemployment in Texas increases, the TEC expects to cut back on its employees devoted to job services, said Bill Grossenbacher, TEC employment services director.

Between 30 and 40 employees who traditionally have worked in helping unemployed citizens find jobs will probably be transferred to the unemployment insurance section of the TEC after October, Grossenbacher said.

The transfers were called for because of a change in the U.S. Department of Labor formula that determines how much money each state's employment services office receives, Grossenbacher said.

The old formula rewarded states with more money if they showed a high rate of job placement in the previous year. The new formula is based two-thirds on each state's labor force and one-third on the total number of unemployed workers, he said.

"Many of the northeastern states benefited more from that change than we did, because they've got more unemployed people," Grossenbacher said.

Solar energy powers offshore rigs

LAKE CHARLES, La. (AP) — Some oil and gas companies have lifted their sights skyward for their energy needs.

La. has a unique solar-powered monitoring system that is so accurate that it can be left unmanned for weeks at a time.

rate the gas platform is left unmanned for weeks at a time.

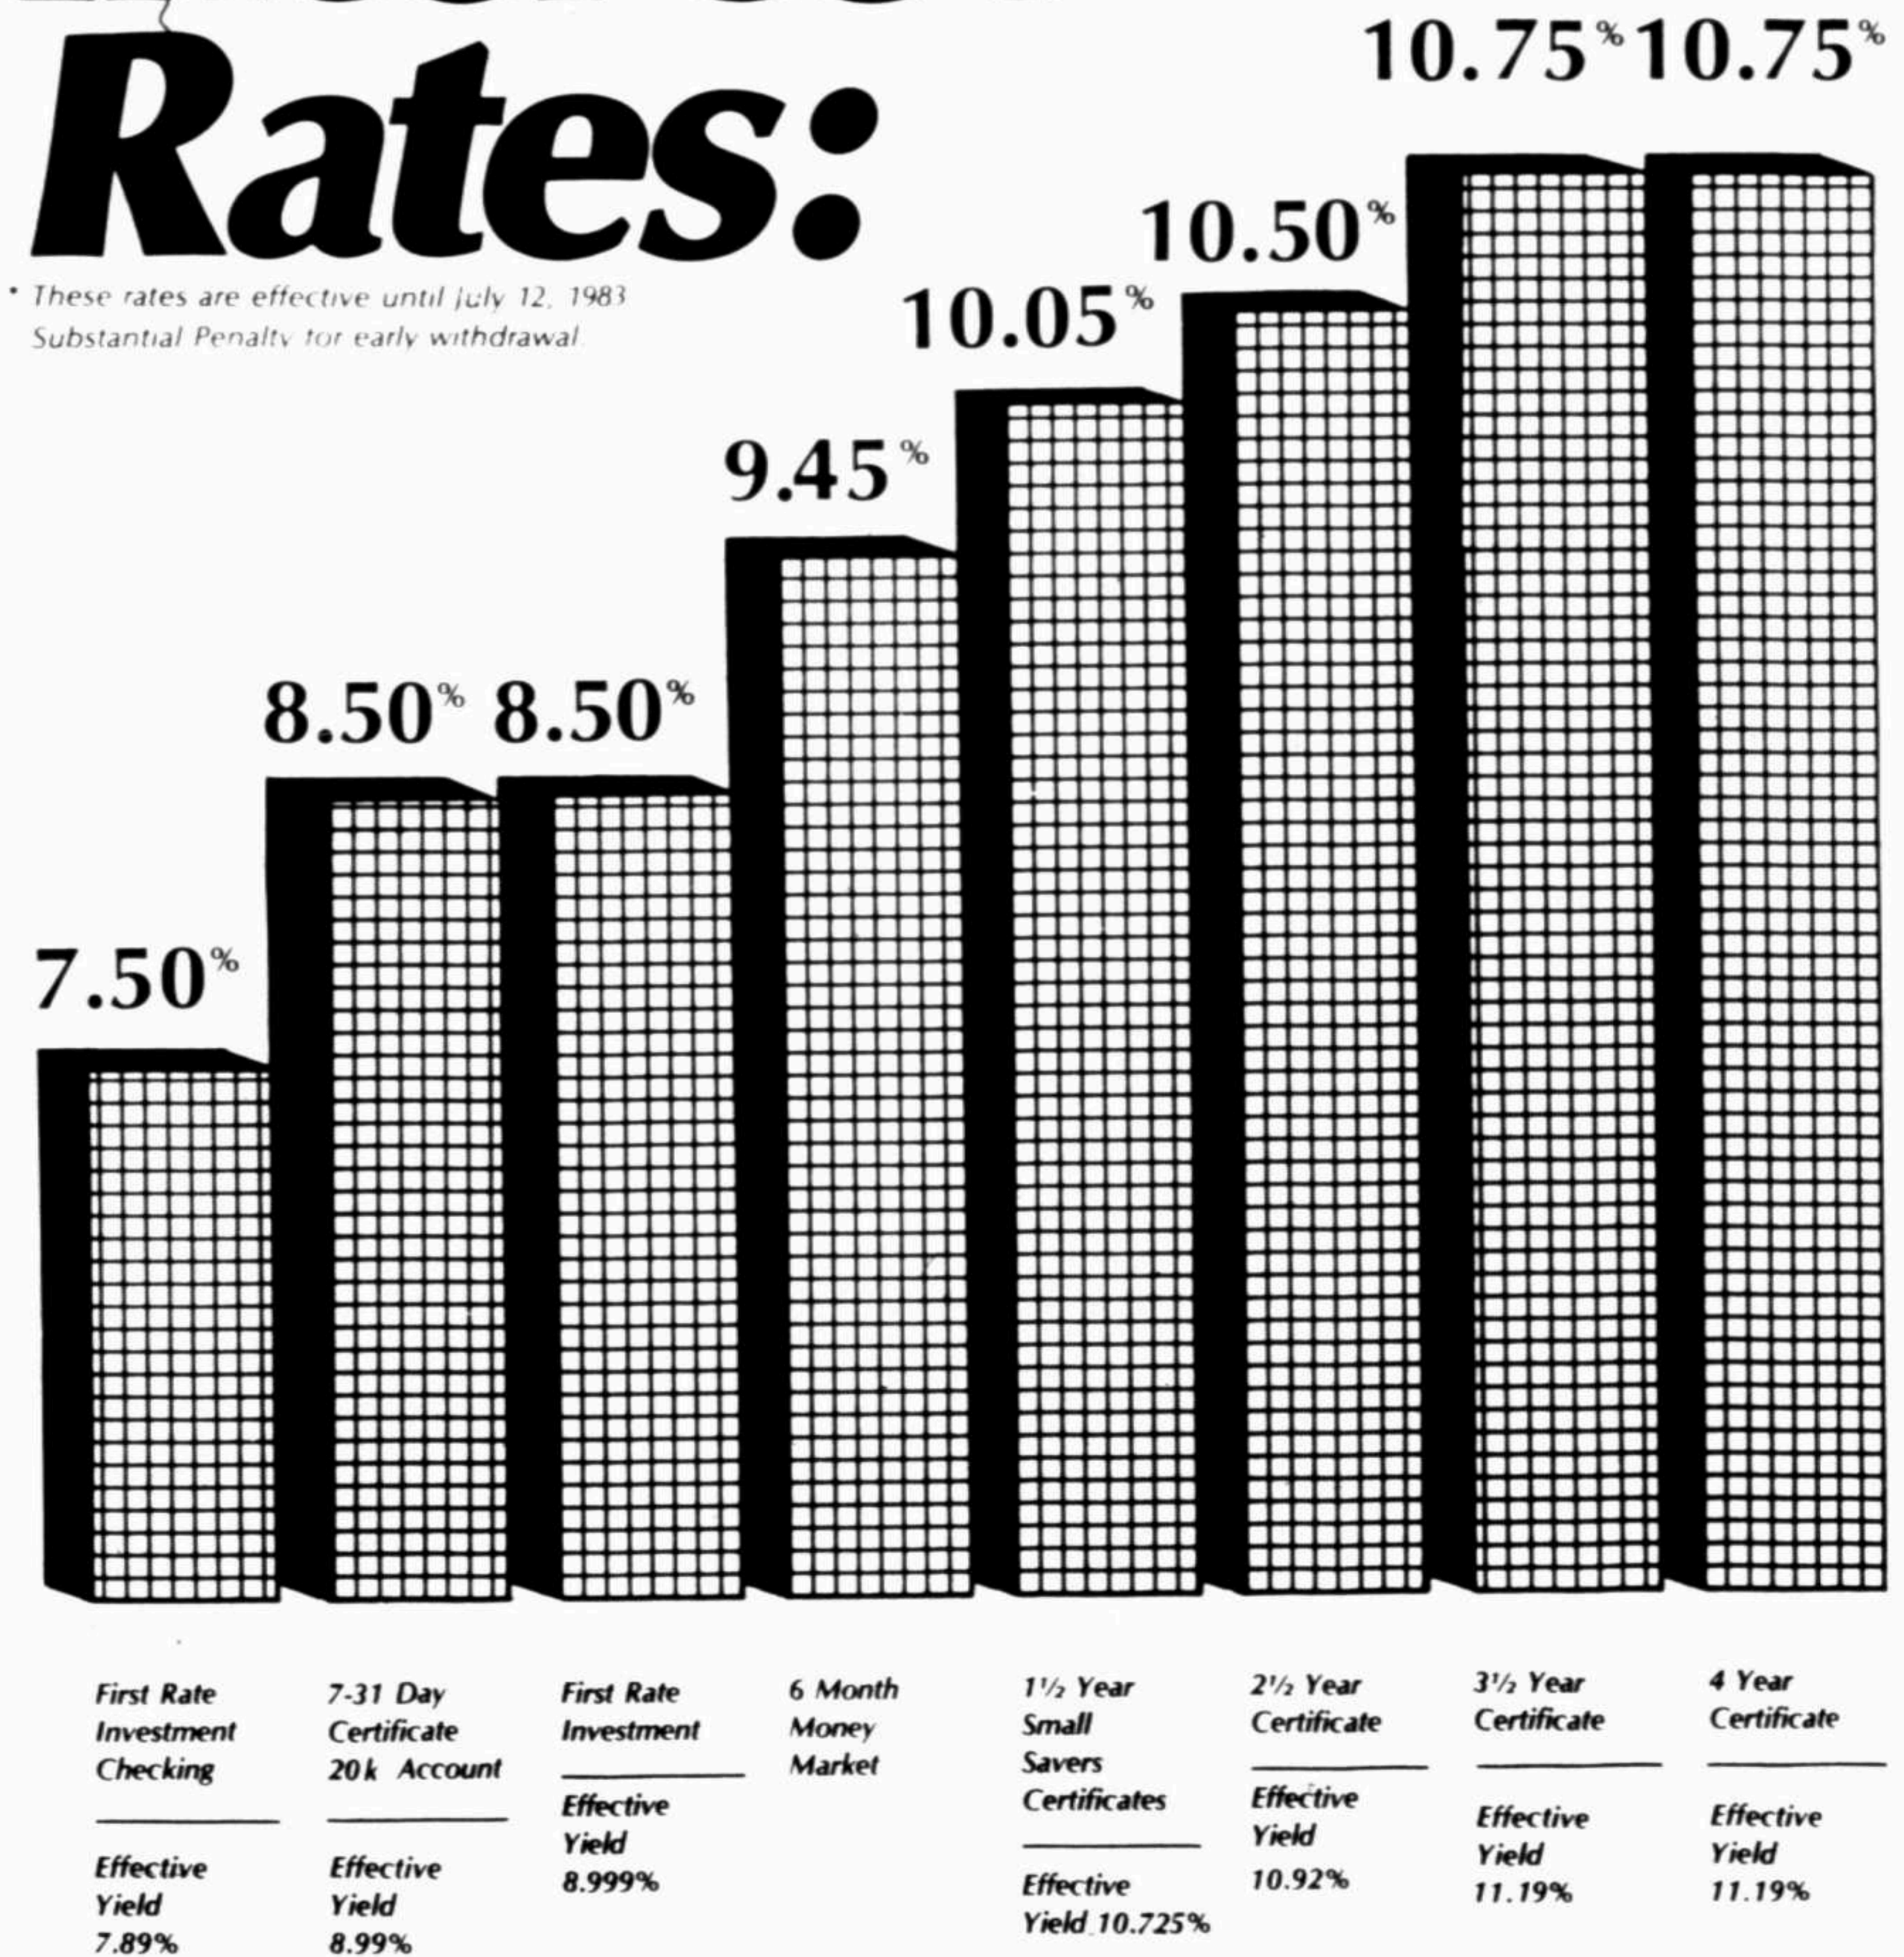

Conoco, for example, uses energy from solar panels, which absorb sunlight and convert it into electricity, on seven offshore rigs to power fog horns, lights, and even computers that keep an electronically controlled eye on the operation.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE Brokerage firms don't have to buy all stock orders

By CHET CURRIER AP Business Writer By BILL DOYLE Q. Two discount brokerage firms refused to handle my order to buy 1,000 American depositary receipts (ADRs) on a foreign stock exchange. Those ADRs have since gone up in price and I am out $12,000 in paper profits. In more than 35 years of dealing with brokerage firms, none has ever refused an order before. Is this how discount brokers "save you money?"

Q. I purchased stock through a broker at the price he quoted. I received the computerized confirmation statement two days later and paid within the five-day settlement period. Three days after payment, I received a cancellation of the original bill and a revised bill 50 cents higher.

When I questioned the broker, he said, "This happens all the time and the (brokerage) firm has the perfect right to do this." What are your comments?

An Unfortunately, it does happen — all too frequently. If there was an error in the original price, the brokerage house does have the right to bill you at the higher, correct price.

I do have to comment, however, that some brokerage firms and/or individual brokers will "eat their errors" and not lay the higher price on their customers — especially good customers.

Q. I paid off my 6.25 percent mortgage last year when the savings and loan holding it offered a 20 percent discount on the outstanding balance. Then, the S&L sent me a Form 1099-MISC listing "$1,650.86 Mortgage Discount" as miscellaneous income for 1982.

To me, this was not income, but a reduction of a debt. Am I right? Or, was I obligated to include this amount as income on my 1982 tax return?

A. You're wrong. You were required to report it. That's what Form 1099s are all about. You get a copy. The Internal Revenue Service gets a copy to feed into its computers.

Technically that $1,650.86, as a 20 percent discount on the mortgage balance, was a "forgiveness of debt." Under the Internal Revenue Code, it's taxable.

Q. I wish I have 15 shares of stock I wish to transfer to my granddaughter as a gift. What are the procedures for accomplishing this? I cannot believe it is necessary to engage the services of a stock broker to handle such a simple task.

A. You can make it a do-it-yourself project. Fill in the assignment form on the back of the stock certificate. Print or the granddaughter's name, address and Social Security number in the places provided. If she is not yet an adult, assign the stock in gift to minors act form. Sign your name exactly as it is printed on the front of the certificate.

Then, you must have your signature guaranteed by either a brokerage firm, commercial bank or trust company. Most banks do this as a service to customers. You might be charged a small fee.

Send the certificate to the transfer agent. For safety sake, do it by registered mail — return receipt requested. Your certificate will be canceled. A new certificate will be issued in your granddaughter's name and mailed to her.

Here's a note of caution. Make sure you mail to the correct transfer agent. Companies sometimes change transfer agents and the one listed on the face of your certificate may no longer be handling the transfer chore. You can check that point in the company's latest annual stockholder report, where the name and address of the transfer agent are required to be listed.

PUC will set opening days for hearings on Bell rate hike

AUSTIN (AP) — Opening day for weeks of hearings into Southwestern Bell's $1.7 billion rate hike request will be set today by a Public Utility Commission hearing examiner. Examiner Jacqueline Holmes also will rule on some 27 requests to intervene in the case. The list of intervention requests includes several Texas cities, telephone companies, the U.S. Secretary of Defense and Attorney General Jim Mattox on behalf of the State Purchasing and General Services Commission. Bell's request — the largest ever filed by a utility in the United States — would triple monthly residential phone bills.

Two indicted in clothing scam

AUSTIN (AP) — A Kerr County grand jury has indicted two Austin businessmen on charges of stealing more than $20,000 as part of a clothing investment scheme. John Colgin and William Flynt remained jailed in Austin on Thursday. Flynt is a former Texas A&M University assistant football coach. The Wednesday indictments said both men made false representations in November 1981 when they sold securities to three Kerrville residents. The men were charged with telling the invest-tors that the money would be used to buy clothing for resale, but the money actually was to be used to repay other debts.

Court's backlog under control

AUSTIN (AP) — A backlog of criminal appeals in Texas has been brought under control the past two years due to efforts of the new regional courts of appeal, the Texas Judicial Council said Thursday. The council said that when the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals ends its current term on July 13 there will be only 50 submitted cases pending. There were more than 3,000 cases pending in September 1981. The council, which records and publishes statistics of state courts, said the backlog was brought under control when the 14 Courts of Civil Appeals were made into Courts of Appeals, handling both civil and criminal matters.

White puts six on commission

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White on Thursday picked six Texans for seats on the Education Commission of the State. The appointments included Sen. Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas, and Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin. Also selected were Robert Hardesty, president of Southwest Texas State University; Vivian Bowser, a Houston school teacher; June Karp, legislative director of the Texas Federation of Teachers; and Kay Killough, associate executive director of the Texas Association of School Boards.

Two suspects both blame third for killings

HOUSTON (AP) — The first two suspects arrested in the brutal stabbing deaths of four employees at a popular recreation center are blaming a third suspect for the killings, attorneys said. Kenneth Ray Ransom, 20, who turned himself in Tuesday to Houston police, was arrested on evidence given police by James Edward Randall, 18, and Richard James Wilkerson, 19, said Assistant District Attorney Brian Rains. Randall and Wilkerson were arrested Saturday in the July 1 robbery and stabbing deaths of four employees of Houston's Malibu Grand Prix, a miniature race track and video game center. Wilkerson, who was a supervisor of three of the four victims before he was fired last month, and Ransom were charged with capital murder.

Randall, who is Wilkerson's cousin, has not been charged for his alleged role in the killings, but is being held by juvenile authorities. The district attorney's office plans to ask a judge in August to certify Randall as an adult so he can be charged. Wilkerson and Randall signed "businesslike" confessions shortly after their arrests and outlined their alleged roles in the slayings, said Detective J.C. Mosier. The two showed no remorse at that time, Mosier said. But Ray Howard, Wilkerson's attorney, said Thursday his client was in shock when he made statements to police. Howard said Wilkerson does not deny he was at the scene, but said it was Ransom who killed the four victims. Rains said Randall also blamed Ransom for the killings. Randall claimed Ransom asked him to stab one victim Ransom already had wounded, according to the prosecutor.

Panel pessimistic about border's problems

WASHINGTON — A special White House panel sent to the Mexican border to grapple with economic problems arising from devaluation of the peso has found that some federal help can be given, but is generally pessimistic about long range solutions. Robert G. Dederick, leader of the group, said the report "shows some matching of needs to federal programs already in being which can be of help. But we found that in some areas there is not much that can be done. "People we talked to were realistic in their assessments of the problems," he said. "This is a low-income area and the problems have been going on for a long time." Dederick, undersecretary of commerce for economic affairs, said he filed a lengthy report at the White House Wednesday night with Robert Carleson, executive director of the working group.

"I was astounded at the enormity of the problem," he said. "We filed a thick report." Dederick said contents of the report are confidential and will not be known until after the White House staff, President Reagan and his Cabinet have worked on it and make their determinations. There is no deadline set for revealing the contents. Craig Fuller, secretary to the Cabinet, will be the one to decide how and when it will go to the Cabinet meetings. "I have an idea it will go before several Cabinet councils (Cabinet committees)" before any action is taken by the administration, he said. The 15-member working group divided up cities along the border and went in segments to Brownsville-McAllen area, Laredo, El Paso, Tucson Ariz., and Calexico, Calif. They talked with local, state and federal regional officials as well as prominent citizens during their trips.

Agency's canteen not a disaster

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

While firefighters are battling a blaze, there's a group who stands behind the scene — the Red Cross. When residents are vacated from a burning structure, or firemen are fighting a fire for a long time, the Red Cross' disaster canteen is there to provide nourishment.

Midland's McDonald's, Coca-Cola and Tall City Ice donate food, drink and ice to the Red Cross for disaster victims, firemen and any other emergency workers. "We used to take out the canteen only if there was a large disaster," said Red Cross volunteer Bill Koegler. "But now we're trying to concentrate on single-family burn-outs and other larger structure fires."

The disaster canteen assisted many emergency workers and stranded residents at the September 1982 plane crash at the Warwick Apartments and the October 1982 Polo Park Apartment fire.

Koegler said 200 McDonald's burgers were served at the Polo Park and 350 at Warwick.

During the last two weeks, the Red Cross brought the canteen to three fires — a lumber yard, dump fire and a house fire.

According to Elvis Curb, director of Midland Red Cross, the disaster canteen provided food and drink for four hours during the lumber fire. "We served about 200 burgers and probably that many Cokes, if not more, at the lumber yard," Koegler said.

"We carry about eight cases of Coke and several packages of cookies," Koegler said. "If we find we have to feed, we call McDonald's and they begin preparing burgers."

Midland firefighter Mike Childs said the disaster truck allows more firemen to stay on the scene.

"It's fantastic," the "B" shift fireman said. "Most of the time if we stay out for a long time, our water gets hot because we don't have any ice."

"With the canteen, we don't have to send anybody out," Childs added.

He explained that a large fire could mean staying out most of the day and through the night.

"By them bringing out cold drinks and food, our firemen can take a break. It gives you a chance for a breather."

Steve Synatschk, Leonard Porter, Kathy Kirkpatrick and Chelle Dumas are special people. They love the thrill of competition and next week will be going up against 4,000 persons from around the world.

Patterned after the "other" games, the International Special Olympics will be opening Sunday in Baton Rouge, La., with these four persons representing Midland Association for Retarded Citizens.

The group leaves Saturday at 8:30 a.m. on Muse airlines for Houston where they will join with the rest of the Texas delegation for a bus ride to Louisiana. Going as coach will be GeorgeAnne Powers, a special education teacher with Midland Independent School District.

Texas Tech designs MMH nurses' program

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

In another effort to provide life-long learning for nurses, Midland Memorial Hospital and Texas Tech University joined together in the first of a year-long contract Thursday.

According to Mary Gradwohl, acting inservice director, the seven-part program is different from other inservices offered at MMH because it specifically was designed for the Midland nurses.

"We've always had a series of continuing education programs," Ms. Gradwohl said, "but what Tech is doing for us is they sent a nursing staff to find out what it is we need to improve nursing care. Dr. (Helen) Cox (director of the continuing nursing education division at Tech) specifically designed this to meet the needs of Midland Memorial."

Ms. Gradwohl said the Tech program supplements other inservice training nurses will continue to receive.

In-house teleconferences from the University of Texas Medical Center at San Antonio, although helpful, are pre-programmed, she said. Personnel including physicians, dentists, physical therapists and nurses all receive the inservice programs in rooms equipped with microphones and audio receivers.

Statewide fireworks ban would aid firefighters

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Blast it all, a firefighter's job would be easier and safer if the legislature would do the unexpected and impose a statewide ban on all fireworks.

This past July 4 weekend, the Midland Fire Department was called out 110 times to extinguish grass fires caused by fireworks during the 78-hour holiday period that began at 6 p.m. Friday and ended at midnight Monday.

Thirty-four of the fires occurred in rural Midland County, while the other 76 broke out inside city limits, where most fireworks are already banned by municipal code.

"It's the worst year we've had in the recent past," noted city Fire Marshal Jerry Petree. "I'd definitely like to see a state law banning everything, except public displays."

While fireworks are banned inside city limits, authorities say many are smuggled in and set off by reckless adults or unsupervised youngsters. A state law banning them altogether would save a lot of headaches for firefighters across Texas.

"Fire officials throughout the state are opposed to fireworks," said Petree. "Most cities are in the same boat Midland is."

About two years ago, a state statute outlawing the sale or possession of bottle rockets went into effect.

Quality of treated wastewater in nose of beholder

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The quality of Monahans Draw's treated wastewater received contrasting marks — from passing to failing — Thursday in a Texas Water Commission (TWC) hearing here.

And two ranchers disagreed sharply on the draw's benefits to their cattle operations.

"They (cattle) will not drink the water that runs down the draw," said Chris Scharbauer, general manager of Scharbauer Brothers Ranch. The draw slices through the operation's No. 1 Ranch.

Scharbauer said the effluent, from Odessa's two sewage treatment plants, running down the eastward-flowing draw is ruining grass and trees along the draw and apparently is bringing in the hardy salt cedar and prickly cocklebur plants.

Residents and landowners along the draw testified its wastewater is contaminating their well water and damaging their land.

A contrasting view was tendered by W.T. Averitt III, general manager of Averitt Land & Cattle Co. He testified the draw's water is usable and potable — at least for cattle.

"They (his cattle) prefer the draw's water over the well water," he said. Averitt, however, said he doesn't drink the well water. "We use bottled water — don't use well water. As long as I know, those wells have not tasted good."

Averitt, who was Odessa's first witness to bolster that city's case for continued discharge into the draw, said the draw's water is "very beneficial" to his 850-head yearling operation. He said he irrigates 490 acres but owns or leases 20 sections.

SCHARBAUER, ONE of seven witnesses called by Midland County, said the draw was detrimental to his ranching operations.

"If it were drinkable, it would be nice to have some water down there," said Scharbauer, who described himself as a fourth-generation cattleman whose family has been ranching in the Midland area since 1885. "We're in a tremendous drought...it could be lush next year, but I don't think it will be."

"We are watering by windmill," said the Midland rancher. Even so, water from the windmills south of the draw has been "getting a little gypsy — flat as that table. It's got a little twang to it."

Scharbauer said he's "not sure what's in the water there...and it sure has damaged the grass." He said china berry trees used to be along the draw.

Averitt, who lives in El Paso and Midland, said the effluent is vital to his cattle and forage operations.

"I'm happy with it," Averitt, 40, said. "I'd been out of business without it."

AVERITT SAID he routes the cleaned-up wastewater to lagoons from which he irrigates his pastures, alfalfa and tall wheat grass. He can run three head of cattle to the acre.

Noting he is a "third-generation cowman" whose family has ranched here since the early 1930s, Averitt said "there is human error" and the possibility of raw sewage getting into the treated effluent. "So far," he said, "things have been hunky dory."

Scharbauer, who doesn't have benefit of irrigation, said he runs 111 head of Hereford cattle and "some black cattle" on nine sections. A section — one square mile — is made up of 640 acres. None of the land is under cultivation.

The rancher allowed that his head count was 120 but has decreased. "I'm not specifically saying it's on account of the draw, but I'd like to."

"We strictly are ranchers. We don't have any need to be farming," Scharbauer said. "But they (farmers) have a hard enough time. Ranchers do, too."

Aside from bringing in salt cedars and cockleburs, the draw's water is attracting mosquitoes and eroding the draw, he testified.

"Anytime you hold water up, the mosquitoes (get) pretty bad. They'll carry you away if you're down in that draw."

Scharbauer also testified the draw has "eroded bank to bank. It's white; everything's dead." In places, the draw is 150 feet wide and has developed "ditches" due to erosion. "You could stand in it and not see out," he said.

He also alluded to mesquite shrub and salt water from oilfield disposal operations. "We have no salt water disposal on this ranch and never have."

"I wouldn't mind if it (Monahans Draw water) killed all the mesquite in this country. The main thing is the grass."

The hearing, conducted in Odessa City Hall by TWC examiner Kaylene Ray of Austin, is to gather information so the three-member TWC can decide whether or not to renew Odessa's two permits to discharge effluent down the draw. Its two discharge permits expired Aug. 31. The city got its first permit to discharge into the draw in 1963.

The natural draw meanders through Midland County and then to other channels which ultimately lead to the Colorado River. That river is a main feeder to lakes which provide municipal water to Midland, Odessa, Big Spring and Stanton. These and other towns buy water from the Colorado River Municipal Water District.

AS THE HEARING continues today, Ms. Ray again will be monitoring testimony of witnesses and the hearing's parties — Odessa, Midland, Midland County, Texas Department of Water Resources (TDWR) and Garland Frasier.

Representing the parties are Ted Kerr, a Midland lawyer representing

DEATHS

Dwain Welch

ODESSA — Services for Dwain Welch, 19, of Odessa, brother of Terry Lehman of Midland, were held Thursday at Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home with the Rev. H. Bailey Stone officiating. Burial was in Sunset Memorial Gardens.

Welch died Tuesday in a Palo Pinto hospital from a drowning accident.

He was born Oct. 20, 1963, in Andrews. He was a student at Odessa College and a graduate of Permian High School.

Others survivors include his mother and step-father, his father, a brother and his grandparents.

Randall Carlton

Graveside services for Randall Alexander Carlton, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Randy Carlton of Midland, will be 1 p.m. Saturday at Resthaven Memorial Park with David Wallace, minister of North A and West Tennessee Church of Christ, officiating under the direction of Newnie Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Friday in a Midland Hospital.

Other survivors include his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Dale Carlton and Mr. and Mrs. Alex Ewing, all of Midland; his great-grandparents, Mrs. C.H. Reid of Hedley, Velma Ewing of Arlington, Mr. and Mrs.

Virgil Harris and Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Carlton, all of Madill, Okla.; and his great-great-grandfather, Elmer Harris of Madill.

Jim Dobbins

Jim Dobbins, 65, of rural Midland, died Thursday morning at his home.

Services will be at 11 a.m. Saturday in Ellis Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. Curtis Hollis, pastor of Temple Baptist Church officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park.

Pallbearer will be Ken Arp, Wesley Blansett, J.C. Crawford, Jimmy

Cates, Jim Hawkins and Vernon Syler.

Alva May Cobb

Alva May Cobb, 86, of Beaumont died Tuesday at Schiesinger Geriatric Center in that city.

Services were to be at 9:30 a.m. today in Newnie W. Ellis chapel with Owen Cosgrove, minister of North Midland Drive Church of Christ, officiating. Burial was to be in Resthaven Memorial Park.

Pallbearers were to be Jerry Lands, L.C. Briley, Don Sutton, Bill Futrell, Jim Moore and Sammy Fields.

Following Scharbauer's testimony, his brother, Clarence Scharbauer III, president of Scharbauer Brothers Cattle Co., testified ranch land in the Monahans Draw area has potential as a residential development.

In the "natural growth of the city," Midland "some day" may expand to the ranch southwest of the city, he said. "Hopefully, by then we won't have the problem we have there (in Monahans Draw)."

"We've dreamed and hoped that the (two) towns do grow, he said."

In addition, he said URS Co., Dallas-based master planners and developers, already has determined the Scharbauer Crowley Ranch, west of Holiday Hill Road, is suitable for residential development.

"We've got problems," Clarence Scharbauer III testified, "and water is one of them."

THE DRAW'S WATERS allegedly have polluted the water well on Jack Ellison's 14 acres north of the draw in the Warfield community along County Road 1270.

"I have a commercial water-softener to soften the water," Ellison said. "I have a distiller to make it drinkable." He installed those units in 1977 or 1978.

When the well was drilled in 1973 or 1974, he said, the water table was 30 feet from the surface. Today, it's "less than 10" feet.

Ellison said he has seen "big chunks of foam" 10 feet in diameter and four to five feet high floating down the draw. The foam gave the appearance that "it snowed."

Since the late-1970s, his well water has "gotten progressively worse," he said.

Prior to the hearing's testimony, Ms. Ray had asked the spectators, including Midland County Judge Bill Ahders and the four commissioners and Midland city officials, if they had any comment. Few did.

"I have," said Ellison, "but you won't like it. Is the outcome planned the way it was last time (in 1977 when the state re-approved Odessa's discharging effluent into the draw). It was cut and dried last time." He called the previous hearing a "fiasco."

Joyce Six, who lives south of the draw at CR 170 West and CR 1270 South, said the "gippy" well water there is undrinkable and her family uses bottled water for drinking. Well water is used for washing dishes and clothes, she said. "There is an odor."

"There has been a continuous flow of water (down the draw), but it has not been this severe since 1978," she said. "It has run over on numerous occasions."

"IT JUST crystallizes everything," another off-the-draw resident, John Ovsak, said of the well water on his five-acre homestead. The water has a "chemical odor," he noted, smells like brine but that the sewage smell is "not real bad."

Ovsak said he is experimenting with a charcoal filter to clean up the water so he can grow a garden.

"I've got to get my water system straightened out first." He said the water crystallizes the leaves, and "they burn up."

Lucille Arick, who owns half a section off CR 715 and CR 140 southeast of Midland, testified the draw's overflow in December 1980 "took out a hundred acres of good farm land."

"A lady called to say I had a lake, and I knew it hadn't rained that year."

Since then, the draw has flowed "practically continuously," she said. "We've had very little rain. It smells something terrible — like an old sewer."

Since the draw started flowing in recent years, Mrs. Arick said she has noticed an "abundance" of salt cedar. "You can't do a thing with them."

Fraser, who said he bought 54.8 acres along the draw in the Warfield area in 1968, drilled a water well there in the 1970s.

"At that time, we drank the water up until about four years ago," he said. "There has been a smell to the water," which, he said, repeatedly has damaged his hot-water heater.

"There is a definite skim on that water in Monahans Draw," he said. "It changes colors."

With the draw's waters have come cockleburrs and flooding, which has taken 10 to 15 acres out of production. "It takes about five years to get rid of cockleburrs."

Aside from the water's foul smell and the tenacious cockleburrs, the draw's waters harbor mosquitoes and has led to "one of the worse mosquito problems I've seen," Fraser said.

The Midlanders have marked their years in local, regional and state Special Olympics. Last October, their selection for the international meet was announced at a sports banquet here.

As their names were called out, each had a different reaction.

"Leonard, his face, you just can't describe it," recalled Jean Ellison with MARC, adding that this will be his first airplane trip. "Chelle almost cried. Kathy was excited. She likes competition and to her it means getting to swim and compete again. Steve clasped his hands together as if to say 'Yea.'"

Leonard, 31, will be showing his bowling prowess, a sport he's been rolling around with for four years. Chelle, 14 and the youngest in the group, will be running through track and field events. Steve, 31, with 10 years of experience under his belt, will be going in for track and field. And Kathy, 23, will be stroking with the world's swimmers, the sport she has been involved in for the past eight years.

Since the Special Olympics falls under the Kennedy Foundation, this international event will see Eunice Kennedy Shriver as a special guest, and possibly other members of that family, said Ms. Ellison.

Also showing up to work with the contestants will be Rafer Johnson and Bruce Jenner, a gold medal winner from the "other" Olympics.

And as in that other well-known event, these athletes will be pouring their hearts and souls into winning the gold, silver and bronze medals, according to Ms. Ellison. But unlike the other Olympics, each person also will receive a "participant's" medal.

Events cover a wide range of abilities and activities, including Frisbee, wheelchair competition, pentathlon, floor hockey, soccer, volleyball, 50- and 100-yard dashes, relay races, swimming and broad jump.

"There will be a walking event where people will be shown how to do it," said Ms. Ellison. Another highlight will be an equestrian demonstration with riders telling and showing how to get such a group started locally.

All 50 states and 60 nations will be represented, she said. Nations include Kenya, Korea, Israel, Italy, Jamaica, Cuba, El Salvador, Hong Kong, Sweden and Ireland.

And as with any such international event, interpreters will be there to translate.

For the opening ceremonies, all of Texas' participants will be dressed in cowboy boots, black pants, cowboy hats and red bandanas.

All competition will be held on the campus of Louisiana State University with participants and coaches staying in the dormitories. Parents must find other accommodations.

But for the athletes, it probably means a week with little sleep, said Ms. Ellison. "They'll be up and down the halls talking all night."

Tech designs MMH program

"We've also done a lot of things with UTEP (the University of Texas at El Paso) because they have a continuing education division," Ms. Gradwohl said. "But Texas Tech's department is new and Mr. (Al) Kelm (vice president of patient care services) is always looking for new programs for us."

Neonatology, or the study of newborns, will focus on unusual child-births, such as those of high-risk mothers and babies born who are critically ill.

Adult chest conditions, oncology (or cancer) and chemical dependency programs will introduce nurses to new treatment techniques in the three fields.

The final program, scheduled for next July, is nursing accountability and professionalism.

"With all of the new innovations and medicine, nurses' responsibilities change," Ms. Gradwohl said. "They'll learn what has changed, how their responsibilities have changed and what they are legally liable for."

A seven-session program on physical assessment, to be offered in September through November, will teach nursing techniques for helping in the assessment of injuries.

Thursday's one-day seminar was pain control in patients and relaxation techniques, such as therapeutic touch, concentration and deep breathing.

"They showed us all the different things nurses can do to help patients in pain relieve that pain without medication and about different medications."

As a measure of its effectiveness, Petree said the toll of roof fires has been drastically cut. In fact, there were no roof fires this year in Midland.

Although no injuries or serious fires were reported in the 110 fire-works-related calls this year, costly equipment was tied up and emergency vehicles screaming up and down the streets always pose a potential danger — not only to firefighters, but also to the general public.

Petree said "there are too many variables" involved to accurately assess the financial cost to taxpayers every time an emergency vehicle makes a run. "But," he added, "there's always the danger a fire truck won't be available for more serious fires when we're out on grass fires" that could largely be eliminated if fireworks were banned across the board, like they are in other states.

Petree isn't making any bets the legislature will come to the rescue, however.

Noting that a bill to outlaw fireworks was beaten down in the mid-70s — perhaps because of the upcoming Bicentennial celebration or perhaps because of a strong fireworks lobby — Petree said:

"It's my personal opinion, but I don't think we'll see any changes in the immediate future."

Fireworks ban would aid firemen

Throughout the day antiques will be on display in the community center and artwork and photography in the building between Bee Gees and First Bankers.

An old fiddlers contest sanctioned by Texas Old Fiddlers Association will be held in Martin County Community Center at 2 p.m.

An evening meal catered by Johnny's Bar-B-Que will be served in city park. Tickets will be $4.25 per plate.

Several class reunions will be held during the day, including those for the classes of 1933, 1953, 1963, 1968 and 1973.

Stanton to celebrate Old Settlers Reunion

STANTON — The 50th annual Old Settlers Reunion will revive memories of the Great Depression in an all-day celebration Saturday.

A parade will kick off activities at 10 a.m. in downtown Stanton, as floats will portray life in Martin County in the 1930s. Doc Young Music Company will provide music from a sound float, while judges will scrutinize costumes and floats for cash awards.

Lemonade will be served bystanders during the event. Box lunches at $3.90 each will go on sale at 11:30 a.m. at Stanton View Manor.

Hearing-impaired children finish new program

By FRANK CLARK
Summer Intern

Seven Midland children are graduating today. They won't be college or high school graduates nor will they receive elaborate plaques or scrolls. Nevertheless, they are all very special individuals graduating from a very special program.

Today is graduation day for hearing-impaired youngsters enrolled in a new educational program at Bonham Elementary School. The "Help Them Hear" program, made possible partially by a donation of $675 by the Westside Optimist Club, is designed for hearing impaired children from three to six years old. Improvement of language and communication skills are stressed as well as basic reading and writing techniques.

"We are working to expand the world of these children," said Jenny Klatt, instructor of the program. "To do this, we try to increase their vocabularies, their ability to communicate and, with the older children, reading and writing skills."

In the classroom, Ms. Klatt uses a combination of sign language and the spoken word in her teaching style.

"I use an auditory trainer when working with the class. Each child has an individual hearing aid which is connected to a microphone that I speak into, allowing them to hear my voice in varying degrees. When I combine this with sign language, we communicate very well."

Using the trainer, Ms. Klatt can read stories, ask questions or work with the children individually.

"These kids are eager to learn," said Ms. Klatt, "they want to know more about the world they live in. The talent and enthusiasm they display is terrific."

Building company burglarized

Panel forms valued at $2,000 and mobile-home furniture and major appliances valued at $3,400 were taken in burglaries reported to Midland police Thursday.

Twenty 8-by-2-foot panel forms were stolen from Wright Construction Co. at 1500 Denton St., police reported.

At Tidwell Homes of Midland, 2916 Rankin Hwy., two bed and mattress sets, three chests of drawers, a washer, dryer and a dinette set were taken in the burglary of two repossessed mobile homes, police said.

Wolves breeding

For the first time since wolves became a protected species in Norway 11 years ago, there are signs that they have started to breed. Packs have been sighted both in southern Norway and in the Trysil district close to the Swedish border.

Conquering the rapids of the Colorado River provides a special thrill for these rafters, some of whom are kidney dialysis patients. Their trip was part of a program called Dialysis in Wonderland, which is sponsored by the University of Utah Division of Artificial Organs.

Dialysis patients face danger on rapids

By The Los Angeles Times
Washington Post New Service

LEE'S FERRY, Ariz. — A grizzled river runner squatted in the shade of a stone house in this outpost on the banks of the Colorado River recently, just before the heavy flooding began. The man told the travelers assembled around him that during their rafting trip through the Grand Canyon they might face perils such as heat, snakes, scorpions and mighty rapids.

It was a speech that would give pause to any adventurer, but this group had special reason to feel apprehensive.

One of the men and four of the women going along were hemodialysis patients. Since they had lost the functioning of their kidneys, they had to be hooked up to sophisticated medical machinery three times a week in order to stay alive.

PARTICIPATING IN a program called Dialysis in Wonderland sponsored by the University of Utah Division of Artificial Organs, about 175 dialysis and kidney transplant patients have experienced the wilderness in trips to Yellowstone National Park, Lake Powell, Hawaii and other destinations. The Grand Canyon trip (accomplished for the first time last summer) is the most daring of all.

For an entire week as they rafted through the remote canyon, patients would be without the sources of fresh water and electricity necessary to operate the type of artificial kidneys used in urban dialysis centers. Once on the river, they would rely on an experimental device called the WAK, the wearable artificial kidney. There would be no easy way out should a medical emergency arise.

Susan Smith of Cooperstown, N.Y., would have preferred researching Jane Austen in London to riding on a raft in Arizona this summer. But that is one of the things dialysis patients find out, she said: You can't always go where you want to.

Smith, a 40-year-old professor of English at the State University of New York at Oneonta, looked into visiting a London dialysis center as what they call a "transient" patient, but was turned down.

Smith's goal in taking the river ride was to learn about the portable battery-operated kidney, in hopes that she would soon be able to buy one and plan her own trips. (After receiving its toughest test in the Grand Canyon last summer, the device was recently approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration. It could become commercially available as early as September.)

DAY ONE ON THE RIVER. There were 21 passengers (including crew, medical staff, patients and friends of patients) on two large pontoon rafts powered by 25 horsepower engines. (Without an engine, trip leader Rich Robins explained, the group could not cover the 180-mile course in enough time to fit in two dialysis days.)

The outside world slipped away as the boats descended into the canyon. For the next six days there would be only rare glimpses of the canyon's outer rim. Most of the time they would be locked in by sheer rock walls several thousand feet high.

A few miles into the trip came the first rapids. Robins explained that each rapid was rated on a scale of one to 10 on the basis of how difficult it was to run. If he judged a rapid to be severe, he would announce it an "innie" meaning everyone should be tucked down beside the pontoons. "Outies" could be ridden bronco-style on the pontoons if the riders dared.

The first few rides proved that the rapids were unpredictable. A small wave could flex the boat in two. A monstrous wave could toss the raft so gently that no one even got wet. The bold were soon sorted out from the timid who jumped inside at the least sign of white water. Wherever they sat, however, the travelers were tossed and buffeted. The dialysis patients soon sported brilliant blue bruises — they take a drug called heparin which keeps their blood from clotting in dialysis but makes them susceptible to bruising.

AFTER LUNCH A HELICOPTER appeared and dropped a plastic packet weighted with pebbles. It was a note warning that 60,000 cubic feet per second (a standard river measurement) of water had been released from the Glen Canyon Dam that morning. River guide Robins calculated that meant the river would rise 14 feet by sundown. It was the highest water ever. The only advice the message gave was: "Camp high."

Robins, a nine-year veteran of the river and an elementary school teacher in the off-season, asked to go along both last summer and this year when he learned that his employer, Tour West, was going to ferry dialysis patients down the river. Robins said as far as he knew no other groups of disabled people had attempted the trip.

Robins said he is inspired by the bravery of the patients. He cited a situation the previous summer when a 22-year-old man injured his arm, collapsing his surgically constructed insertion point for the dialysis needle. The man chose riverside surgery without anesthetic over an attempted helicopter evacuation.

Expedition physician Jeff Harrow pointed out that patients on dialysis are easily fatigued. They would later prove they could keep up, however, on hikes to hidden waterfalls and swimming holes. One fringe benefit the patients enjoyed is that they were naturally protected from sunburn by the substances built up in their bodies between dialysis treatments.

Dialysis on the river was more of a social event. Because the lean-to was the only shade in camp, the patients soon found their cots crowded with river guides, passengers and crew, all passing the time until they could proceed into the inner gorge, a narrow 50-mile section of the river with a rapid every 1-2 miles.

After dialysis, the group was treated to a luxury unheard of on a river trip. The same contraption that had heated their dialysate was now rigged with a shower head and patients, passengers and crew all had hot showers.

Dr. Willem Kolff created the first workable artificial kidney March 17, 1943, in the Netherlands during World War II. Until that time, a patient with failed kidneys was doomed to die. But preserving life was not enough for Kolff. "His philosophy is, we shouldn't keep people alive by artificial means unless we can make that life enjoyable," said John Warner, administrator of the Dialysis in Wonderland program.

Marine trades swagger stick for nail file

The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

SIMI VALLEY, Calif. — Former Marine Corps drill instructor Tim Palmer is a big, burly guy who does not rattle easily or mince words.

But when he struts into a bar or a party, he hopes the man sitting next to him does not ask the all-but-inevitable question: "What do you do for a living?"

"If a man asks what I do, I say construction," the 34-year-old Palmer said. "If he asks, 'What kind of construction?' I say, 'Nails.'"

But Palmer will gladly tell a lady about his profession.

He is a manicurist. And inside the small, smartly decorated salon here in Simi Valley he opened in March — Nails by Tim — Palmer is unabashedly proud of his new livelihood.

"I BELIEVE I do nails better than anyone except my wife," Palmer, who manures, sculpts and paints nails five days a week, 14 hours a day, said.

"I do pedicures once in a while too. Those are fun."

"I wouldn't go to anyone else," D.D. Brinkley, one of Palmer's 60 regular clients, said. "I get so many compliments on my nails."

Brinkley, 36, added that there are drawbacks, however, to having a male manicurist.

"My husband is not real pleased about my coming down here and holding hands with a guy for two hours," she said.

BRINKLEY'S DILEMMA IS shared by others, Palmer said.

"I have another woman who has to tell her husband I'm gay," Palmer, who is married, said. "We have a little secret going."

With its antique cabinets and mirrors and flower-patterned wallpaper, Palmer's salon is about as far as one can get from the grueling obstacle courses and rifle ranges of the Parris Island boot camp in South Carolina where he made life miserable for recruits from 1976 to 1978.

And Palmer (5-11, 195 pounds) is quick to admit that he misses the "ego trip" of putting 80 trembling young men — rich and poor, large and small — through their paces.

"I'd always pick out the biggest guy on the first day and give him the hardest time I could," Palmer recalled, arranging a rainbow swath of bottled nail polish on a diminutive worktable.

"AND I'D HOPE that with my voice, hat and belt, and the reputation of the Marines Corps behind me, he'd back down. If one had turned on me, I don't know what I would have done."

His cultivated abuse brought him national infamy in May 1977, when a photograph showing him chewing out a nervous recruit was published in the New York Times.

At the time, Palmer had led his platoon through a three-day field exercise. Before returning to boot camp he routinely frisked each man for weapons or ammunition that they might be hiding.

"We didn't want them shooting you (the drill instructor) or anyone else," he said.

"During a quick frisk," he recalled, "I caught one recruit with three rounds of live ammunition in his pocket."

UNBEKNOWN TO PALMER, a photographer for the New York Times captured the scene.

"They (the newspaper) were doing a story on how boot camp training used to be and how it was now," he said. "The picture seemed to show it was just as bad as always."

Palmer said that he probably would still be ferreting out the weaknesses of men and women in uniform if he were not for a motorcycle accident in 1978 that permanently damaged his left arm and leg and forced him into early retirement after 12 years with the Marine Corps.

With a $20,000 insurance settlement, Palmer bought the Stagger Inn in Beaufort, S.C., where he tended bar and "was my own bouncer, which is difficult with one good arm."

"BEAUFORT IS A Marine Corps town," he said, "so every Friday night was 'Friday night at the war.'"

It did not take long for the excitement of owning a bar to wear off, leaving him more depressed than ever about being disabled and out of the Marine Corps.

In the interim, Palmer divorced his first wife, who he said grew weary of trying to curb his wild living — behavior Palmer said grew out of trying to "prove I was still as good as anyone else."

In 1980, Palmer sold the bar, moved to California and tended bar at the Simi Valley Inn.

It was there, six months later, that he met Ami Watt, owner and operator of Nail Central. They would marry.

ON THE FATEFUL the fateful night they met, Palmer said, "I was tending bar and said I liked her nails."

"She said I'd be good at doing what she does. I said, 'What's that?'"

Watt dangled her long, perfect nails in front of his eyes and said, "I make these. Think you could do it?"

Palmer, in what he ruefully acknowledges was a "typically macho" response, answered, "F COURSE."

A short while later, he repressed his macho posture enough to become an apprentice in the thoroughly feminine atmosphere of Watt's Simi Valley salon, Nail Central. He also enrolled at a beauty college where he devoted the necessary 350 hours of training to earn a state license.

"I WAS LOOKING for a new career. I like women and I like to talk. Besides, the field was wide open to a man."

In addition to mastering the fine art of using an emery board and drawing smooth, even lines with a brush, there were other, more subtle lessons such as learning "to talk girl talk."

"At first I talked a lot about the weather and news," Palmer recalled. "Now I talk about breast feeding and problems they might have with a boyfriend or husband. I rarely argue with them."

Annette Parrino, a manicurist at Palmer's salon, said that her boss offers some women what they may have a hard time getting elsewhere — "a man's point of view."

Former Marine Corps drill instructor Tim Palmer has found a new career as a manicurist in Simi Valley, Calif. When men ask the burly man his occupation, he says construction worker. But when women inquire about his line of work he gladly tells them he works with emery boards and nail polish. What other job allows a man to hold women's hands all day, he asks.

Sodium aggravates heart, blood disease

Sodium is one of a number of factors that may contribute to high blood pressure and heart disease.

As a result, many people are cutting down on salt. However, there is one part of their daily diet that most people don't think of when they are counting milligrams of sodium. Their water.

The American Heart Association and the Environmental Protection Agency recommend no more than 20 milligrams of sodium per liter of water (about a quart) for people with heart conditions or high blood pressure.

DEAR ABBY

Bride bends tradition

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I did not agree with "Sentimental's" desire to have her mother walk her down the aisle and give her away instead of her father because her parents were divorced. And worse yet, you said there was nothing "improper" about it, and encouraged her to do so. What an insult to her father! I'm glad I wasn't invited to that wedding.

My ex-husband and I have been divorced for 18 years, but he walked our two daughters down the aisle, which made everyone very happy. After all, he is their father; he did give them life.

He may have been a lousy husband, but if it weren't for him, I wouldn't have my wonderful children. — GRATEFUL

DEAR GRATEFUL: "Sentimental" said she preferred to have her mother walk her down the aisle instead of her father, not because they were divorced, but because her mother had raised her alone — with no help from her father.

This, in my book, makes him a "lousy" father who did not deserve the honor of giving his daughter away. (He gave her away years ago.)

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the boy who chose to get his high school diploma even though he was in jail. Hurray for him! Send me his address and I'll send him a graduation present. — EX-"CON" COLLEGE GRADUATE

DEAR GRAD: Sorry. Neither the name of the boy nor his location was disclosed in the letter, but thanks for a sweet and generous thought.

DEAR ABBY: How can I persuade my husband to start getting professional haircuts at a barber shop? He is quite content to have me cut his hair, although I have had no training and the results are mediocre — to say the least.

When we married 10 years ago and we both were in graduate school, he asked me to cut his hair in order to save money. I did, and it's been my job ever since.

We are both working professionally now and he can well afford to go to a barber shop, but he doesn't see any sense in "throwing out" money.

I have stalled, hoping he would go to a barber, but he just waits until I cut his hair. He has never been vain about his appearance and doesn't care whether his hair is long, short, stylish or not. If he were your husband, how would you handle it? — HIS LOVING WIFE

DEAR WIFE: I would say, "Honey, you deserve to look spiffier. If you don't want to go to a professional barber for yourself, please do it for me."

Gay group rejects church celibacy plan

Copley News Service

Members of a Dignity/San Francisco support group for Roman Catholic homosexuals, expressed disapproval of a pastoral plan that assigned gays to a life of celibacy, but say they still hope to bring the church and the gay community to a better understanding.

While the group voiced opposition to the pastoral plan, it expressed support for an earlier church task force report on homosexuality and social justice that called for "sensitive ministry" to Catholic homosexuals.

Rick Duffer, editor of San Diego's Dignity magazine, said the task force report could make "an honest and loving improvement in the quality of life for many persons." The two-year study that resulted in the report was begun partly in response to escalating violence against gays in San Francisco.

The task force report was released last year by Archbishop John Quinn of San Francisco. It termed sexual activity between persons of the same sex as sinful, as in any sexual activity outside marriage for Catholics, but it adopted a posture of gradualism in bringing gay persons toward that strict standard of behavior.

The report also called for a continuing study of the question and for education about homosexuality, support for their civil rights, and an end to violence against gays.

Under the archdiocesan plan issued in June by the Priests' Senate in San Francisco, a Board of Ministries to Homosexual Men and Women will be appointed this summer by Quinn from among priests, laity and persons in orders involved in ministry to gays. They will be expected to clearly rule any sexual activity between homosexuals as sinful and refuse absolution unless the sin is "truly occasional."

Kevin Calegari, a spokesman for Dignity/San Francisco, said the archdiocesan plan leaves homosexuals "without a morally acceptable option besides celibacy."

"The task force report," he said, "had called into question the church's teaching that sex can only be exercised between sacramentally married persons open to having children and asked for an exploration of a standard of moral behavior for homosexual persons."

He said news reports that Dignity had "returned" the pastoral plan to the archdiocese meant they view it as theologically defective.

"The teachings of the church are supposed to be received by the people, but we aren't receiving this one," he said. "It was written by three men on a committee without consulting the sense of the faithful or seeing the churches as the people of God in dialogue, as is called for by the Second Vatican Council."

"The plan will have a crucial and devastating impact on the lives of thousands of people."

Dignity supports and promotes permanent and supportive relationships between gays. The pastoral plan also supports particular friendships, but without sexual activity.

"It puts gays and lesbians in the same boat with married couples who practice birth control and divorced and remarried Catholics," Calegari said. He called it a blueprint for duplicity, adding: "We will not lie to go to the Lord's Supper."

Guitars now world famous

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — When Lorenzo Pimentel came to Albuquerque in 1962 and tried to sell his handmade guitars to local music dealers, they threw him out.

The prestigious Pimentel guitars now are known worldwide — and the maker selects the music dealers who will be allowed to sell his fine instruments.

"When I came to Albuquerque there were a few music stores, and I had some guitars with me that I wanted to sell," said Pimentel. "The store owners said they didn't want anything to do with Mexican guitars."

Pimentel, 55, said his popularity changed in 1964 when a feature article describing his work appeared in a well-known music magazine.

"Since then, we've been so busy that we don't sell to the Albuquerque music stores," he said. "We choose the people we know are going to use the guitars and not just hang them on the wall."

Gloxinias flourish in summer temperatures

By ELVIN McDONALD

Gloxinia tubers are visiting my desk today, most of them sporting furry mouse-ear sprouts that tell me which side to plant up. If you've ever thought of growing this flower, summer is the season when it can be brought quickly (60 days) into an extended flower show (until late fall).

What I have in mind are hybrid, large-flowered forms of Sinningia speciosa, a botanist's way of identifying the florist gloxinia. My biggest successes with them have been in sunny-bright windows, bright but shaded home greenhouses and outdoors on a porch or in a slat house, with protection from rains and winds that would spoil the trumpet and hairy leaves.

Tubers for this kind of gloxinia cost less than two dollars each and are widely offered in the spring at local nurseries and garden centers. Look for them displayed with other summer bulbs — gladioli, caladium and tuberous begonia. They are also in catalogs such as Burpee and Park. A 6- or 7-inch azalea pot, which will be 4 or 5 inches tall, is ideal for each tuber. Use a soil-less mix such as Pro Mix or Jiffy Mix, or Optimara Potting Soil. If you want to prepare your own, I suggest about equal parts of garden loam (or packaged all-purpose potting soil), peat moss (or well-rotted compost) and sand (or perlite).

Fill the pot with soil, then rap on bench and level with your fingers to a half inch or so below the pot rim.

Set the gloxinia tuber in the center, rounded part down, any visible sprouts up, and press it down so that the growing medium tumbles over the shoulders.

Until leaf growth becomes active, keep gloxinia plantings nicely moist, warm (60-80F.) and in bright light. At this stage a fluorescent-light garden can be used. Avoid letting the sprouting tubers be cold and soggy wet at the same time.

Within a month after planting, gloxinias begin making rapid growth and flower buds may even appear on the most vigorous. Now the advancing season will provide abundant light, warmth and fresh air, in turn calling for plenty of water and fertilizer from you.

That's all summer gloxinias need to give hours of pleasure from minutes of gardening. Enjoy!

Q. I have rooted a medium-size gloxinia leaf in water; what next?

A. Set it with the rooted part a half-inch deep in soil-less or African violet mix. Enclose in glass or plastic until the roots take hold and the leaf feels firm. Eventually a tuber will form in the soil and a new plant will grow, producing flowers exactly like those of the parent.

Q. Why are my gloxinia buds rotting, on a brown slimy stem?

A. Your gloxinia needs more direct sun and fresh air circulation. Go over the plant carefully and remove every part that is rotted or otherwise discolored. Keep the growing medium evenly moist to only slightly on the dry side; never leave a gloxinia standing in water more than an hour. Q. About Easter I was given a gloxinia with many dark red blossoms. It has continued to bloom but now I see no more buds and new growth is starting at the base. The leaves will die; the tuber can then be dug and stored in dry sphagnum peat moss.

Gloxinia

original leaves appear strong and healthy. Will it bloom again?

A. Yes. I would cut off the old leaves, which can be rooted the same as African violets, and nurture the new basal shoots for flowers all summer. When this second round of bloom finishes, after Labor Day, stop watering and fertilizing. The

Modulars solve seating problems with style

By BARBARA HARTUNG Copley News Service

Q. I have a large living room, with a fireplace at one end which rather dominates the room. It is difficult to place all the furniture in such a way as to have a comfortable conversation area.

I have arranged seating at the opposite end of the room, but would like to be able to have seating by the fireplace without cutting off the two seating areas.

Chairs placed by the fireplace look forbidding when you look at their backs.

—R.D.

A. You might consider some modular seating such as a chaise that has a back to the seating only at one end. Guests could sit on either side of the chaise. Without the back you have a piece of furniture that can bridge both areas of your room.

You will find more and more of these types of sofas or chaises in furniture stores. If you don't, ask for them. They look great and solve the problem created when a person enters in a room such as you describe.

Artist sends 1,500 helpers pink checks made out for $1

MIAMI (AP) — The artist Christo, who encircled 11 Biscayne Bay islands in pink plastic, is saying thank you to his 1,500 helpers by sending them pink checks for $1, a spokesman says.

The checks are signed by Christo, making them valuable mementos of the "Surrounded Islands" project, displayed for two weeks in May. Most probably won't be cashed, said Joseph Fleming, Christo's lawyer.

"I feel like another piece of Surrounded Islands has come back to me," said Orlando Domiguez, who was Christo's driver for two months. "The check is only for a dollar, but for me it's $1 million. I'll probably put it in a pink frame...if I can find one."

The first checks went out two weeks ago to 420 people around the country who worked on the $3 million project, according to Elizabeth Nelson, office manager of A&H Builders, the construction firm that turned Christo's dream into reality.

Other checks were going to vendors and others who backed Christo.

"It's his way of thanking people," Fleming said recently. "He does this at the end of all his projects. It's to all the people who were in any way involved. Christo sees it as a way to improve the project once it's over."

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Director John Huston, who filmed the classic "The Treasure of Sierra Madre" in Mexico, will return south of border next month to make a $4 million version of Malcolm Lowry's "Under the Volcano."

Alberto Isaac, head of the Mexican Film Institute, told reporters that the movie will star Albert Finney, Jacqueline Bisset and Anthony Andrews. Filming will start Aug. 1 for 12 weeks in the state of Morelos, southwest of Mexico City, Isaac said.

CULDROSE, England (AP) — Prince Andrew, perhaps the most famous British veteran of the Falklands Islands war, was scheduled to begin leave today before undergoing training to fly a new type of helicopter, the Royal Navy says.

The 23-year-old second son of Queen Elizabeth II, who co-piloted a Sea King helicopter from the carrier Invincible as a Royal Navy sub-lieutenant in the 74-day campaign against Argentina last summer, will learn how to handle the smaller, multi-purpose Lynx helicopters.

"It will be like moving from a tank to a sports car when he first gets into a Lynx," an officer said Thursday at Culdrose, Cornwall, the largest helicopter base in Western Europe.

NEW YORK (AP) — Rock star Peter Townshend says a heroin habit nearly killed him and even stopped his heart at one point, and he credits an electric-impulse treatment with his cure.

The 38-year-old guitarist for The Who said that his heart stopped beating after a friend injected him with heroin. He was rushed to a hospital and resuscitated with heart massage.

"From the moment I touched heroin, I felt as if I'd joined forces with the devil," Townshend was quoted as saying in the August issue of Penthouse magazine. "I went from being unbeatably lucky to becoming a powerful foe — my own worst enemy."

Townshend said he was rescued by Dr. Meg Patterson, a Scottish physician now practicing in California.

Journal has come long way

CHICAGO (AP) — It was 1899 when Chicago physician Denslow Lewis asked the Journal of the American Medical Association to publish a study he felt important. The editors wouldn't hear of it.

The subject was the physiology of sex. Lewis, a gynecologist, was very specific about the body's functions. He also said a woman needs sexual satisfaction for a healthy marriage.

Today, the weekly journal known as JAMA is celebrating 100 years of continuous publication by making amends to Lewis.

Along with his paper, JAMA is offering a commentary by sex researcher Dr. William H. Masters of the Masters & Johnson Institute in St. Louis.

"Obviously, Denslow Lewis was a physician far ahead of his time," writes Masters. If papers like his had been published, "Sexual malfunctions and disorders...might have been far better understood today."

The anniversary edition also includes a reproduction of the first edition a quarter century before Lewis' paper and proudly says medicine has come a long way since Victorian ideas of propriety reigned over science.

JAMA has come a long way, too.

No longer simply a record of proceedings at once-a-year AMA meetings, JAMA now publishes 48 issues annually on an estimated budget of $20 million.

It disseminates research on matters as urgent as AIDS — acquired immune deficiency syndrome — and as specialized as ultrasound evaluation of thyroid gland diseases.

It prints letters suggesting cures for hiccups and trap-shooter's cramp.

It editorializes against too many medical tests and against boxing.

It raises questions about preserving life at all costs in an age when technology has altered the definitions of life.

JAMA circulates more than 420,000 copies in six languages — German, French, Chinese, Japanese and Flemish as well as English — with plans to publish in two more — Spanish and Portuguese.

"Its influence is enormous, incalculable," said Dr. Drummond Rennie, a professor of medicine at Rush Medical School in Chicago who recently joined JAMA's editorial board after working full time for four years at its chief rival, the Boston-based New England Journal of Medicine.

Though JAMA is the official publication of the largest organization of doctors in the United States, its influence is open to debate.

In 1981, for example, the Philadelphia-based Institute for Scientific Information found New England Journal articles were cited more than twice as often as JAMA articles by researchers publishing later work in any of more than 3,900 scientific and medical journals surveyed by the institute.

"JAMA would probably generally appeal more to physicians concerned solely with practice than with research," said Dr. Edward J. Huth, editor of the Annals of Internal Medicine.

JAMA is "more newsy," said Rennie, reluctant to draw comparisons because the New England Journal and JAMA have "entirely different flavors" and both have his respect and loyalty.

The difference is apparent even on their covers.

JAMA is spelled in a large modern typeface, usually on a pastel border setting off an art print.

The Massachusetts Medical Society prefers a more traditional typeface in black-on-white, setting off a cover wholly consumed by the table of contents.

If JAMA is not perceived as the most intellectually influential of the general medical journals, its editor pledges to remedy the situation.

"My vision is to make JAMA unequivocally the best medical journal in the world," said Dr. George D. Lundberg, 50, former chairman of the pathology department at the University of California at Davis who took over the magazine about a year ago.

Lundberg said he wants to toughen the review process by which research articles are approved and to tackle controversial issues more aggressively.

He also hopes to make doctors more aware of patients as people, cultivate an awareness of history, and promote "a view that all people are brothers and sisters and especially all physicians brothers and sisters."

And Lundberg wants to speed the turnaround time on submissions, which now require an average of six months from receipt to publication.

About 87 percent of the manuscripts submitted are rejected. If a paper clears the first cut by one of nine physician editors to whom manuscripts are assigned, it is sent out for review by specialists in the field.

JAMA has a "bank" of about 3,000 reviewers, who themselves are graded on their expertise, Lundberg said. "We do report cards — we're constantly adding and throwing out."

After an article is reviewed, a physician editor may reject it, bring it up for discussion at an editorial meeting or ask an author to make changes. Editors are often solicited to accompany the published research.

"It's a rare manuscript that gets accepted as is," said Lundberg, who alone has authority to approve articles for publication.

Popular appeal is not a stated goal of the journal, but a journal "both educational and enjoyable to read" is "I see our audience in the United States and Canada becoming more and more the public," said Lundberg. "Despite what you hear about functional illiteracy, the number of well-educated people perfectly capable of understanding medical science is becoming larger and larger."

Firm makes sure scripts jibe with reality

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — In the make-believe world of movies and television, staffers at De Forest Research make a daily stand for reality — or the semblance of it.

Susan Chernus, one of seven reality-watchdogs for the company, said she checks details on scenery, logistics and characters in movies and TV shows, but the details don't always jibe with real life.

The script of one prime-time television program set in New York City, for example, called for cars slamming into a Chinatown bus stop, a scene set in an outdoor flower market and another scene set in a midtown Manhattan alley — all impossible situations, Ms. Chernus said recently.

"You can't have a car chase in Chinatown with the cars plowing into a bus stop because there are no bus stops on the side streets of Chinatown," Ms. Chernus said.

"There is no outside flower market in New York City," she said. "And when was the last time you saw an alley in midtown Manhattan — other than the Shubert (theater) alley?"

Ms. Chernus won't say which show contained those errors — which stayed in the script despite her efforts — because "we get very paranoid about insulting our clients."

But most producers take the firm's advice, Ms. Chernus said.

The producers of the "Dallas" TV show, for example, wanted to know about the intricacies of offshore oil production and the means for adopting a baby in Texas before scripts that might contain such details were written.

The original script for the film "Rollover" had someone picking up a briefcase filled with gold Krugerrands. De Forest reported such a briefcase would be too heavy for any one person to lift.

Located on the Paramount Pictures lot in Hollywood, De Forest Research is the brainchild of Kellam de Forest, 56, who has been in the business since 1952, three years after he got a history degree at Yale University and decided that he wanted to be in show business.

From a one-man operation in de Forest's apartment, the firm grew to employ seven researchers and collect a library filled with 16,000 volumes and countless magazines and photographs.

"We have the kind of library that if a prop man needs a picture of a Turkish telephone booth or if somebody needs to know what a 1938 Wisconsin truck license plate looks like, we get them," said researcher Peter Sloman.

About three-fourths of the research involves making sure that names of people in scripts don't match real people, that a screen murder doesn't take place at the same address as a real person's home or that a getaway car license plate doesn't match a real one.

When De Forest Research handled the film "Tootsie," it made sure there was no real actress named Dorothy Michaels — Dustin Hoffman's female character in the movie — and no actor named Michael Dorsey, Hoffman's male character.

De Forest also confirmed there was no real lawyer in Massachusetts named Frank Galvin, the name of the character played by Paul Newman in "The Verdict."

For the film "Prince of the City," the researchers verified that none of the names of the film's policemen matched those of real New York officers.

Bookmobile has bad day

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Poor Big Red. The Eugene Public Library bookmobile was forced into retirement last week after 22 years of service because of budget cuts — then got its first parking ticket.

The ticket was from the city of Eugene, which runs the library.

"It's kind of the last straw," said librarian Jim Meeks.

While a library parking lot was being repaved Tuesday, the bookmobile was moved from its usual spot to one in a metered lot. When library workers returned for the bookmobile, it had a $10 ticket, Meeks said.

The fine won't be paid, he said, because one city agency cannot levy fines against another. A telephone call to City Hall straightened the matter out, Meeks said.
