Rafsanjani offers help in hostage crisis

■ Bush hopes diplomacy will spare lives — 5A
■ Related stories — 2D

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — President Hashemi Rafsanjani of Iran today offered to help find a solution to the hostage situation but said the United States must pressure Israel to release a kidnapped Shiite Moslem cleric, Iranian media reported.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater called the development "encouraging."

The New York Times reported today that President Bush had "all but decided" to attack terrorist strongholds in eastern Lebanon if another hostage had been killed. One hostage was reported killed Monday.

Israel, meanwhile, was awaiting a list of prisoners that a Shiite Moslem group in Lebanon wants freed.

"I tell the White House, the problem of Lebanon has solutions, the freeing of the hostages has solutions, reasonable, prudent solutions," Rafsanjani said in a speech carried on official Tehran radio.

"These bullyings, arrogant approaches and tyranny will not solve the problems. Come let us approach the problem reasonably. We too will help solve the problems there, so the people of the region can live in peace and harmony," he said in the broadcast monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus.

Rafsanjani's comments were made during the weekly Friday prayer session at Tehran University.

He said if the United States wants hostages in Lebanon freed, it must take the inititive by asking Israel to free Sheik Abdul Karim Obeid, a Shiite Moslem leader abducted by Israeli commandos one week ago.

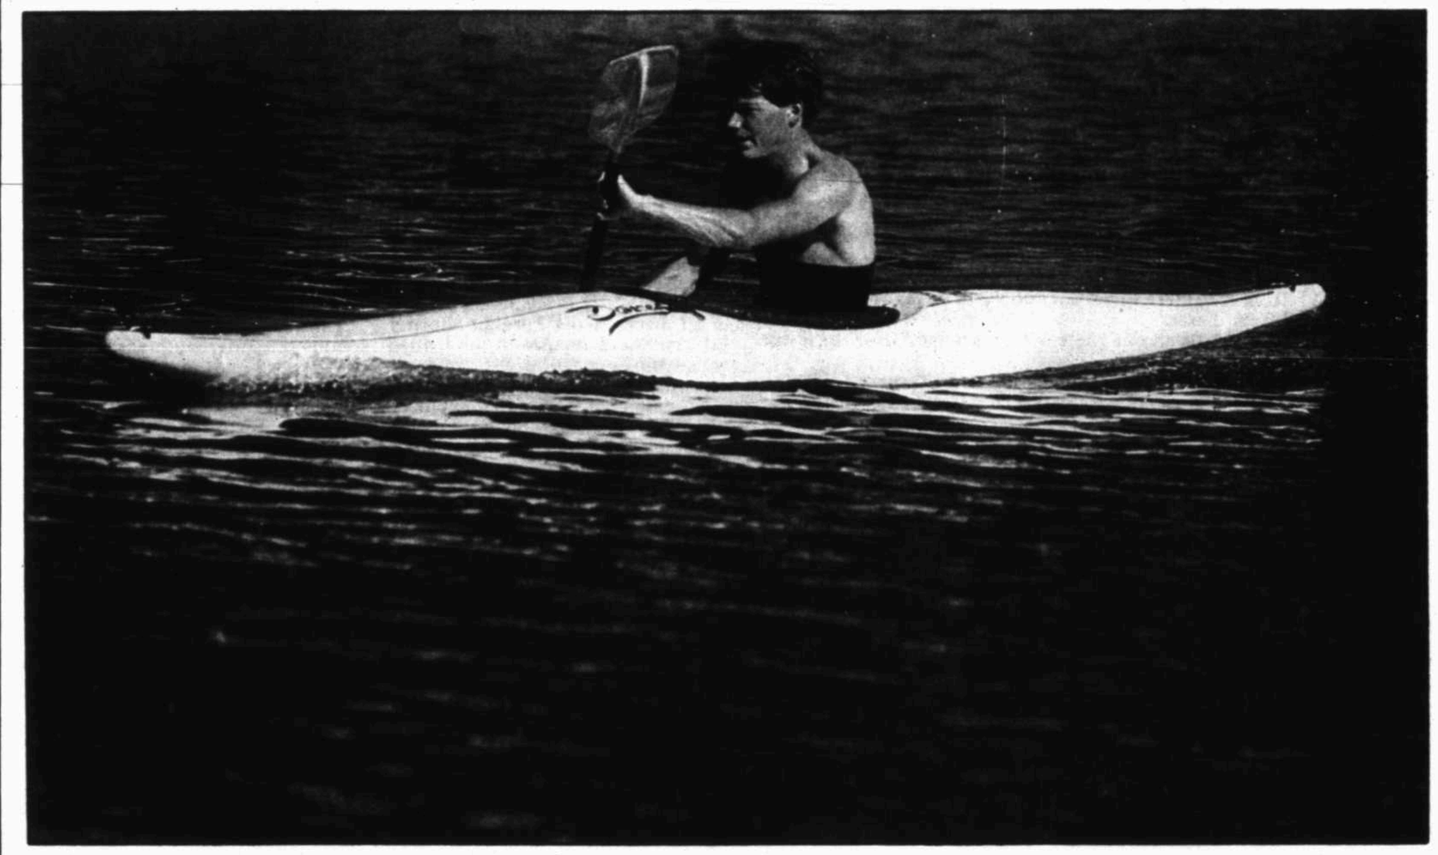

"We do not make any judgment about the group which executed the American colonel," Rafsanjani said, referring to Monday's reported slaying of Marine Lt. Col. William R. Higgins by the pro-Iranian Organization of the Oppressed on Earth.

"But if the United States wants to take the inititative (in freeing hostages), it must ask Israel to free the Friday prayer leader of Jibchit," Rafsanjani said.

If the U.S. responds by saying it cannot pressure Israel into freeing the Moslem cleric, "this isn't acceptable to us," he added.

Israeli commandos last week stole into Jibchit, in south Lebanon, and kidnapped Sheik Abdul Karim Obeid, a Shiite Moslem clergyman who is the local prayer leader. Obeid also is reputed to be a spiritual leader of the pro-Iranian group Hezbollah, believed to be the umbrella for factions holding most of the 16 foreign hostages in Lebanon.

Beating the heat

Steve Myers paddles his kayak across the waters of Wadley-Baron Park Thursday evening. Midlanders have found an assortment of ways to beat the heat during a summer that has featured numerous record high temperatures.

Weather picture changing in August

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

If July's forecasts sounded like a broken record, it might have been because weather records that month did nothing but break.

But more clouds and a shade less heat should be in store for Midland in August as an incessant West Texas high pressure ridge packing scorching air continues to break apart, a local weather forecaster predicted earlier this week.

The stagnant ridge resulted in a July that was nearly rainless but abundant in heat, according to a meteorologist at the National Weather Service (NWS) at Midland International Airport.

As the high pressure ridge breaks up, moisture from the Gulf of Mexico has room to move in and blanket Midland with clouds, Constantine Pashos said Thursday.

Cloud cover reduces the high temperatures and increases the chance for rain and thunderstorms.

Such was not the case in July when the mercury pulsed well above temperatures not experienced in Midland in at least 60 years.

The stagnant ridge made for seven days in July with temperatures above 100 and five of which broke or tied record highs, Pashos said.

On July 2, Mother Nature burned two local weather records.

The 112 recorded that Sunday finished off the city's all-time high of 109 set twice in 1946 and 1951 and the date's previous record high of 104 set in 1964, Pashos said.

Sixteen days later, the mercury rose to 111 and broke the record high for that day of 104 set in 1981. In addition, July 18 was the second hottest day in Midland since record-keeping began in 1930, the meteorologist said.

Other remarkably hot days last month were recorded on the 16th and 17th when temperatures broke records set in the 1980s, but with temperatures of 105 and 108 respectively.

On July 1, the 105-degree weather tied the record set a quarter of a century ago.

It was also so hot in July, even the lows were too high.

On July 17th, 18th and 19th, new "high-low" records were set as the overnight temperature didn't drop below 74, Pashos said.

The rainfall totals in July were well below the monthly average.

In July, .34 of an inch of rain was recorded at the NWS, Pashos said. The average is 1.72-inches in July.

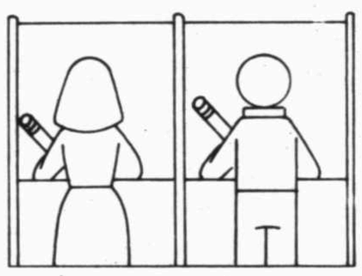

Despite the sweaty appearance July exuded, the average daily high was 97 or just 2.8 degrees above "normal," while the average daily temperature was 83.1 or 2.4 degrees above the month's usual.

The average daily low last month was .2 below the normal, Pashos said.

Pashos said the seemingly little difference between the July 1989 averages and those of the months in other years was "surprising."

August should be less surprising if the NWS' headquarters 30-day forecast for the Permian Basin holds true.

Tax figure could lead county to rollback vote

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Somehow, the figure just doesn't appear to add up. ...

... The figure relates to the rate at which Midland County Commissioners may tax property owners and avoid the possibility of a rollback election.

Commissioners meeting Thursday for a special budget workshop were in agreement that they don't have much elbow room in which to work after hearing estimates from the county tax assessor-collector.

Frances Shuffield says it is the first time since she took office that the county's rollback rate of 16.8 cents per $100 valuation has fallen below the effective tax rate of 17.5 cents per $100 valuation.

Under a normal set of circumstances, the effective tax rate serves as the basis for determining how high the county may go before risking a public rollback election.

An entity must have a public hearing for a proposed rate hike of more than three percent of the effective rate, and may be subject to a rollback if that rate exceeds 8 percent.

But Mrs. Shuffield says circumstances are anything but normal this year.

The county, which lost 5.7 percent of its tax base, from $3.94 billion to $3.7 million, would have to raise property taxes to 17.5 cents per $100 valuation if it was to generate the previous year's tax revenues.

County commissioners said they don't expect a tax rate hike to that level for several reasons, including their plan to use $4.3 million in sales taxes to offset the property tax rate.

Property owners got their first tax break in 1988 when county commissioners used $3.3 million in sales tax revenues generated over a 10-month period to reduce the property tax rate to 16.5 cents per $100 valuation.

Schools could gain funds in Yates Field suit

By RICK BROWN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The state Permanent School Fund could gain as much as $35 million from settlement of a royalty dispute in the Yates Field, a case one elected official is calling a "watershed" for Texas schoolchildren.

Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro said the settlement "sets the stage" for the state to recover millions of dollars lost to the fund, which was established in 1854 to help finance public education.

The suit, Summit Energy vs. Texas Commerce Bank in 83rd District Court in Fort Stockton, involves royalties due the PSF since 1934 from a 240-acre lease in the Yates Field, which is centered around Iraan.

The well under dispute is located on the Summit tract and produced 24,000 barrels a month.

With settlement of the suit, of which the state acted as an intervener, the school fund retains the mineral rights subject to the Relinquishment Act of 1919.

The act provides that surface owners are responsible for negotiating oil and gas leases, but the owners also must share equally with the state all royalties and other income.

The state's position as intervener was that the state had not received its share in the Summit case, Mauro said.

Bush's bow sets other hopefuls hopping

From Staff and Wire Reports

AUSTIN — Texas Rangers baseball club owner George W. Bush's decision to stay on the bench for the 1990 governor's race leaves the Republican Party's other candidates, including Clayton Williams of Midland, scrambling to claim his supporters.

"I have to suggest that the remaining candidates are relieved. They have to feel better," said state GOP Chairman Fred Meyer of Dallas.

Bush, a former Midland oilman who is also the president's eldest son, had been seen by many as the GOP frontrunner if he decided to run for governor.

But this week he announced that the only race which interests him is for the American League pennant.

Former Secretary of State Jack Rains and Williams, a Midland oilman, both of whom have announced their candidacies, say they will attract Bush's supporters.

Railroad Commissioner Kent Hance, who is preparing to announce but hasn't yet, made a similar prediction.

And T. Boone Pickens, the Amarillo oilman-corporate raider, said Bush's decision has no bearing on his, which is expected within the next few weeks.

University of Houston political scientist Richard Murray said the Bush withdrawal leaves the nomination up for grabs, with Hance as the early favorite in a race he described as "very, very fluid."

Hance, a former Democratic congressman from Lubbock, has run three statewide races before.

He lost the 1984 Democratic nomination for U.S. Senate to then-state Sen. Lloyd Doggett, and after switching parties he lost the 1986 GOP gubernatorial nomination to Gov. Bill Clements.

After Clements appointed Hance to the Railroad Commission, he last year became the first Republican elected to that panel.

"It certainly makes the campaign easier for me, because a lot of people were on the fence because they didn't know what Bush was going to do," Hance said.

Rains, a Houston lawyer, emphasized that he had worked in every campaign waged by Bush's father since 1964, and said, "His not being in the race, I believe, will give me the opportunity to (reach) those people" who had been aligned with the younger Bush.

A spokesman for Williams, Frank Walter, said he already is feeling the effect. "We've noticed a lot of movement in our campaign in the last 30 days as a signal that Bush would not be in the race," Walter said.

The younger Bush attended San Jacinto Junior High School in Midland and later graduated from Yale University and the Harvard University graduate school of business.

He brought a master's of business administration degree to Midland where he began a career in the oil business as a petroleum landman.

He later merged his Spectrum Seven Energy Corp. with Harken Energy of Dallas.

He moved to Dallas last year after helping his father win the presidency.

One Democrat, state Treasurer Ann Richards, already has announced for governor. Attorney General Jim Mattox has raised some $4 million for an expected gubernatorial bid, and several others, including former Gov. Mark White, are said to be considering the race.

Crash of Greek airliner kills 34

SAMOS, Greece (AP) — Rescuers crawled on their hands and knees today to reach the site of an Olympic Airways crash, but they found no survivors from the aircraft that slammed into a mountain with 34 people aboard.

The British-built Short plane crashed Thursday into 4,800-foot Mount Kerkis on Samos island. Airline officials blamed the accident on heavy fog that covered the mountain, the highest in the Aegean Sea.

Rescuers searched for the flight recorders, which should contain information on the plane's equipment and any conversations involving the pilot.

Transport and Communications Minister Nikos Gelestathis said the plane, which was flying to the island from Salonica in northern Greece, carried 31 passengers, including an infant, and three crew members. All were Greek.

Rescuers said they apparently were killed instantly when the aircraft hit the mountain.

"Unfortunately, we could do nothing, I checked every body I could find," said Emmanuel Karlas, a doctor from a village on this eastern Aegean island within sight of Turkey's southwestern coast.

The propeller-driven plane gave no sign of trouble before it disappeared from radar screens.

Only a wing and twin-tail section of the aircraft was recognizable. The front disintegrated on impact and was just a black scar on the mountainside.

Police could identify only four of the charred bodies. Olympic, Greece's national carrier, was flying in relatives to help identify victims.

Helicopters could not land close to the crash site and rescuers crawled up the mountainside on hands and knees for 90 minutes in the dark.

The steep terrain prevented them from carrying down the dead.

Officials ruled out foul play as the cause of the crash.

An Olympic official who spoke on condition of anonymity said: "It appears that thick fog in the area at the time played the villain's role as the pilot flew blindly into the mountain."

WEATHER SUMMARY

Fair, mild conditions anticipated

From Staff and Wire Reports

Fair skies and mild temperatures are in the forecast for tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low will be in the upper 70s and winds will be from the south at 5-10 mph.

Saturday is expected to be sunny and hot with the high near 100 and winds continuing from the south at 10-20 mph.

Thursday's high of 97 was nine degrees cooler than the record high temperature of 106 set for that date in 1953. The overnight low of 67 was six degrees warmer than the record low of 61 set for this date in 1973.

STATE

A warming trend is expected through the weekend across most of Texas with a few isolated thunderstorms possible in Southeast Texas, along the rest of the coast and in extreme West Texas.

It will be partly cloudy and hot through most of the weekend statewide.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 70s.

Highs Saturday will be mostly in the 90s, ranging upward to near or slightly above the 100-degree mark in portions of North Texas and in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas.

The warming trend is the result of a ridge of high pressure over the lower Mississippi Valley.

Early today there were some low level clouds and along the coast, drifting northward into Central Texas. Skies were partly cloudy over the rest of the state.

Early morning temperatures are in the 60s in the mountains of Southwest Texas and in the 70s and 80s over the rest of the state. Extremes ranged from 60 at Marfa in the Davis Mountains to 83 at Corpus Christi.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 74 at Amarillo, 78 at Wichita Falls, 77 at Fort Worth, 76 at Waco, 77 at Austin, 79 at San Antonio, 77 at Houston, Corpus Christi and San Angelo, 76 at Lubbock, 71 at Midland and 73 at El Paso.

NATION

Severe thunderstorms continued in several north-central states today, packing damaging winds, rain and hail.

Storms were continuing over northern Illinois, southern Wisconsin and eastern Iowa this morning.

Thunderstorms caused flash flooding around Clinton, Iowa, late Thursday, and storms produced wind gusts of 54 mph at Rockford, Ill., downing trees and power lines about midnight.

Still stronger storms hit farther north late Thursday. Winds blew over a barn near International Falls, Minn., and a thunderstorm in southeastern North Dakota produced gusts of 75 mph at Oakes. A storm in northeastern South Dakota produced golf ball-size hail west of Hecla.

Fair weather prevailed across most of the rest of the nation, although a few showers and thundershowers lingered in northeast Colorado and northwest Florida.

Today's forecast called for showers and thunderstorms to be scattered from the middle and upper Mississippi Valley across the Ohio Valley and Great Lakes to the northern Atlantic Coast. Severe thunderstorms were possible from the lower Missouri Valley to the upper Great Lakes. Showers and thunderstorms also were predicted for the central Gulf Coast and Florida, and widely scattered afternoon thunderstorms were expected in the western Plains, the Rockies and much of Arizona and New Mexico.

Highs were expected to be in the 70s in much of Maine, western Montana and along the Pacific Coast; between 100 to 105 degrees along the Rio Grande Valley of Texas; up to 110 degrees in the southwestern deserts; and in the 80s and 90s elsewhere.

Temperatures at 3 a.m. EDT ranged from 45 degrees at Yellowstone Park, Wyo., to 88 at Phoenix.

Hurricane Dean drifts toward open sea

MIAMI (AP) — Hurricane Dean turned away from Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands and moved slowly northward to the open Atlantic today, apparently rendering its 85 mph winds harmless.

All hurricane and flood warnings and watches have been lifted throughout the eastern Caribbean, officials at the National Hurricane Center in suburban Coral Gables said today.

"The main thing is that it did what we wanted it do in that it missed the islands down there," said forecaster Bob Case of the hurricane center. "It appears now that it's going to be a marine problem for the next couple of days."

The waters north of the islands are heavily traveled by local craft and cruise ships, but Case said the vessels will be able to steer around Dean.

"Looking at the satellite, it looks like it's going to drift northward," said forecaster Jesse Moore. Dean won't threaten any land for days "unless something really strange happens," he added.

At 6 a.m. EDT, the storm's center was located 195 miles northeast of San Juan, Puerto Rico, near latitude 20.5 north and longitude 64.0 west. It was drifting generally northwest at 5 mph, and forecasters expected it to move in a more northerly direction today.

A weakening of upper atmosphere winds that steer the storm kept Dean away from the islands on Thursday.

The Puerto Rican National Guard canceled plans to evacuate 2,000 people from flood-prone areas.

Earlier, repeated warnings on television and radio that Dean was headed for the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico caused a shopping rush as people stocked up on food, drinking water and buckets, batteries, candles and tape.

Dean was not expected to gain much strength today.

"It may puisate a little bit in strength," forecaster Hal Gerrish said. "Normally when hurricanes slow down they strengthen. In this particular case I think that's being offset by deleterious winds at the upper level."

Dean, the second hurricane of the Atlantic season, became a tropical storm Monday night and on Tuesday passed the hurricane threshold of 74 mph winds.

U.S., Soviet negotiators ending round of arms talks

GENEVA (AP) — U.S. and Soviet arms negotiators met today for the final full meeting in the latest round of talks aimed at a treaty to reduce each side's long-range nuclear forces by half.

The round, the first since the Bush administration took office, formally ends Monday with a meeting of the two delegation heads, Yuri Nazarkin and Richard Burt.

Both chief negotiators have indicated that while some progress was made in the seven-week session, long-standing differences on major points remain after nearly 4½ years of talks.

The talks, which also include negotiations on defense and space, are due to resume in late September after Secretary of State James A. Baker III meets Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze in the United States on Sept. 19-20, U.S. officials said.

No details on today's two-hour final plenary at the Soviet mission were released under a news blackout in Geneva agreed by both sides.

Burt expressed hope Thursday the round would permit "productive" arms control discussions between Baker and Shevardnadze.

The major publicized initiative in the round was a Bush administration proposal for testing anti-cheating measure before a Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty on long-range forces is completed.

Nazarkin said the idea seems "quite useful" but that the Soviets would still analyze it.

Negotiators made plain that a main dispute remains over Soviet insistence on linking a START accord to what the United States considers crippling limits on its program for space-based missiles defenses, the Strategic Defense Initiative or Star Wars.

And disagreement persists on long-range nuclear cruise missiles based at sea. Moscow wants to include them under START's limits but Washington refuses, saying their presence cannot be monitored reliably.

The United States also wants to ban mobile intercontinental ballistic missiles, which it does not have. The Soviets have the weapon and want to keep it.

The draft START treaty covers nuclear forces with ranges above 3,400, including intercontinental missiles and heavy bombers.

Many details of the 400-page text have been agreed, including limits of 1,600 ballistic missiles and bombers and 6,000 nuclear warheads on each side.

TAX

Sales tax collections over a 12-month period will drive that figure up by more than $1 million next year, which is precisely the reason why the rollback rate falls below the effective rate, Mrs. Shuffield said.

County Auditor Floyd Jarnagin said only two situations would cause such a scenario to occur: If the county had experienced a monumental decrease in the debt service or a sizeable increase in sales tax revenues.

"In our case, we've had a sizeable increase in sales tax revenues because we didn't have the comparable period of time to collect last year as we did this year," said Jarnagin.

Still, the commissioners hope to avoid a tax increase altogether by issuing $1.8 million in certificates of obligation for the renovation of the Midland County Courthouse and other building projects.

Those projects account for a substantial portion of next year's proposed budgetary increases.

If commissioners were to raise the property tax rate to the rollback rate of 16.8 cents per $100 valuation, the county would generate an estimated $6.2 million. With the addition of $4.3 million in sales tax, total revenues would equate to $10.5 million.

Collection of fines and fees would make up for the county's remaining revenue in 1989.

AUGUST

It is the time of season when high pressure ridges begin to break apart.

With that disassembly, moisture from the Gulf of Mexico and the Pacific Ocean is given space to center over the Permian Basin, Pashos explained.

"If we have any tropical disturbances coming over the area, that will keep us cooler even though tropical air is said to be warmer," the meteorologist said.

Rainfall averages in August are 1.6 inches while temperatures should range from 93 to 68 daily, he continued.

"I'm going out on a limb by saying the temperatures in August should be half a degree lower.

"It won't be as warm as July," Pashos said.

Temperatures aside, rainfall counts should be substantial as compared with July "if last night (Wednesday) was any indication.

"With all the tropical moisture, we should probably see one or two more remnants of tropical storms in the area."

The alltime high temperature for August is 107 and was set in 1936 and 1964.

The lowest temperature — and likely one not be seen here in August — was set in 1947 when it dipped to 52.

"That certainly isn't normal," Pashos noted.

The settlement means that the state now will share in the income of the lease for the rest of he life of the Yates Field, estimated at about 50 years.

The lease originally was held by Pecos Producers Inc. and currently has nearly 70 interest holders. More than 60 of those, representing about 94 percent of the interest in the lease, have signed a settlement agreement, according to the General Land Office.

The settlement also has been approved by the School Land Board, Mauro and Attorney General Jim Mattox and Governor Bill Clements.

Mauro said the settlement should serve as a "signal ... that our cases are solid" to parties of other disputes whose issues are similar to the Summit case.

According to the GLO, original surface owners through a series of private transactions had succeeded in keeping their one-sixteenth legal share of royalties in addition to a majority of revenue from the lease.

The office said that was accomplished through "strawman" transactions in which the owners leased the oil and gas to a second person, the strawman, who assigned the lease to a shell company.

The company, which was wholly owned by the surface owners, paid little or no compensation in the transaction, according to the office.

The land office is in the midst of an investigation into all leases on lands that are affected by the Relinquishment Act.

Already, the state recovered $1.33 million from the King Ranch in South Texas, and earlier this year, a surface owner's agency rights were judicially forfeited for non-compliance with the act.

The office has reviewed about half of more than 32,000 leases since 1986 and identified eleven cases in which lease holders may not have shared equally with the state. Those cases have been referred to the attorney general.

Mauro said that most surface owners subject to the act "have nothing to fear" from the review.

However, those who have illegally circumvented the act and "received millions of dollars belonging to the schoolchildren of Texas ... will be hearing from us soon," he said.

HOSTAGES

The Organization of the Oppressed on Earth claimed it hanged Higgins in retaliation for Israel's refusal to release Obeid. Israel claims Obeid instigated attacks on Israel.

Another pro-Iranian group, the Revolutionary Justice Organization, threatened to kill another U.S. hostage, Joseph Cicippio, but announced Thursday it had suspended the death order.

It also demanded that Israel free not only Obeid but also Palestinian and Lebanese prisoners "within days." The group did not say if the death sentence would be restored if Israel did not comply.

There are eight Americans among the 16 foreign hostages in Lebanon. Cicippio was acting comptroller of the American University of Beirut when he was abducted Sept. 12, 1986.

The hostage held longest is Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press. He was abducted March 16, 1985.

Had another hostage been killed, The New York Times reported, Bush planned to target for attack the Baalbek base of 4,000 Iranian Revolutionary Guards in eastern Lebanon. The guards work closely with Hezbollah.

A White House spokesman reached at home Thursday night, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said, "To my knowledge that is not true,' but added, "We just don't discuss those sorts of things."

In Jerusalem, Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin said Israel would examine the new demands "on a positive basis." Four top Israeli leaders, including Rabin and Prime Minister Yitzkhak Shamir, met today in Jerusalem to fashion a response to the Shiite radicals' demands.

A spokesman for Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said Israel was awaiting the list of prisoners the Shiites want freed.

The International Committee of the Red Cross said it was willing to transmit to Israel the demands for the prisoner release.

Israel has offered to trade Obeid, 33, and other Lebanese Shiites it holds for foreign hostages and three Israeli soldiers held in Lebanon.

Hezbollah has rejected such a swap. Sheik Na'im Qassem, a Hezbollah leader, said there had been no direct or indirect negotiations with Israel on a prisoner exchange and would not be.

The Revolutionary Justice Organization granted Cicippio a reprieve 45 minutes before the deadline Thursday that it had set for killing him.

It was the third time the group held off on its death threat.

"Out of respect for the intervention by the parties and states with whom America pleaded to mediate and stop the execution, we declare the freezing of the death sentence and its substitution with an initiative," said a statement by the group.

None of the mediating nations was named, but press reports in Beirut have said Iran, Syria and Algeria were believed to have interceded. Algeria helped secure the release of American diplomats taken captive at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran in 1979.

Rafsanjani, known as a pragmatist, has not commented on whether Iran played a role, but a knowledgeable Shiite Moslem source in Beirut, said the final word on Cicippio's reprieve came from him.

Rafsanjani is believed to want to improve ties with the West and to change Iran's image as a sponsor of international terrorism.

Messiest desk could win tidy little prize

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a transparent attempt to curry favor with the news industry, a consulting firm is running a contest to find the messiest desk in Washington.

A news release announcing the contest got mislaid on cluttered desks in news bureaus all over the city.

The prize, anyway, is one no newsperson would know how to appreciate: a $415 course in the time management program of the sponsor, Priority Management. A course in cleaning off one's desk, and out one's mind.

"A cluttered desk is a cluttered mind," contended Cynthia M. Rozzo, director of marketing.

Priority Management, a national chain, has found a ready market in Washington, where it offers advice chiefly to those who offer advice to the government: contractors, consultants and trade organizations. It has trained people at the Small Business Administration, the Navy and the Agriculture Department's Graduate School, "but the biggest customers are government contractors — they have the healthier budgets," Ms. Rozzo said.

The contest entries — photographic evidence is what's being solicited — will be scrutinized for these symptoms:

- Multiple calendars. (They lead to overbooking, says Ms. Rozzo.)
- Those little pink phone messages, scattered around.
- Reminders on scraps of paper, strewn.
- Someday files (as in "someday I'll get around to it").
- Leaning towers in the "in" box.

Settlement gives freed inmate full rights to 'Thin Blue Line'

HOUSTON (AP) — After weeks of negotiation, filmmaker Errol Morris and former Texas death row inmate Randall Dale Adams have settled a lawsuit in which Adams demanded the rights to his life story.

Adams

Adams, whose conviction of killing a Dallas police officer was questioned in Morris' film "The Thin Blue Line," will receive full rights to any commercial movies or books about his life, according to the settlement announced Thursday.

Charges against Adams were later dismissed.

"I'm pleased that we were able to settle this, but I'm not pleased with the way it had to come about. It never should have gone to litigation," Adams' attorney, Randy Schaffer said.

"After being a prisoner of the justice system for 12 years Mr. Adams should not have been required to be a prisoner of Errol Morris for life," Schaffer said.

Adams, now living in Ohio, sued Morris in Houston District Court June 22 for rights to the story, which depicted his account of his arrest and conviction for the murder of a Dallas officer Robert Wood.

Morris' attorneys released a statement from the Cambridge, Mass. filmmaker, in which he said he had agreed to return the book and commercial movie rights to Adams.

As part of the agreement, Morris said, Adams dropped his demand that he be paid $60,000 for "The Thin Blue Line," although Schaffer said Thursday that was never part of the lawsuit.

"Nothing can erase the terrible tragedy of what happened to Randall Adams in Dallas in 1976 and in his subsequent 13 years of imprisonment," Morris said. "It is my hope that both of us can now return to our lives and that we can put this lawsuit behind us."

The case was transferred to U.S. District Judge Lynn Hughes' court June 30, and settlement negotiations continued for about a month before all parties completed signing the agreement Wednesday, attorneys said.

Adams was freed from state prison in March after an appeals court overturned Adams' conviction earlier this year, and Dallas County prosecutors declined to retry him.

The former inmate's lawsuit asked for a judgment on who owned the rights to his life story.

A written agreement between Adams and Morris said that Adams was owed $10 if Morris produced a documentary about Adams, or $60,000 and 2 percent of profits if a commercial film was produced.

Schaffer had contended that "The Thin Blue Line," although produced in a documentary style, was actually a commercial film. The film was released in commercial theaters around the country.

"I was unwilling to pay money to Adams for "The Thin Blue Line," a documentary motion picture for which I received no profits and for which I am still approximately $100,000 in debt," Morris said in his Thursday statement.

"I am relieved that this lawsuit has been settled," Morris said. "In my opinion, it was unnecessary and uncalled for. It has never been my intention to deprive Randall Adams of the opportunity to make money from his life story."

Schaffer said the lawsuit became necessary because Morris refused to yield rights to Adams despite attempts at a friendly resolution.

Adams has received numerous letters of inquiry from filmmakers and writers interested in his story, and those materials were packaged and mailed to him Thursday, Schaffer said.

Men tie up postal workers, rob safe

ARCHER CITY (AP) — A real-life drama was being carried out at the Archer City post office while just down the street hundreds were lining up to take part in a make-believe drama, the filming of a sequel to the classic movie, "The Last Picture Show."

Authorities say two men in their early 20s forced their way into the Archer City post early Thursday morning, tied up two female employees and robbed the safe of $40 and some blank money orders.

Just down the street, hundreds were lining up for a "cattle call" casting session for the filming of "Texasville," a sequel to "The Last Picture Show," a classic movie about life in Texas in the 1950s.

The casting call drew about 1,000 would-be actors for the picture, which is to be filmed here starting Aug. 15.

The movie adapted from the book by Pulitzer prize-winning author Larry McMurtry, a native of Archer City, will star Cybil Sheppard, Jeff Bridges and Timothy Bottoms, who also were in the original.

Postal clerk Deanna McMahen, 28, said that one of the robbers waved a pistol at her while demanding that she open the safe.

"I was scared," she said.

Ms. McMahen said she inadvertently let one of the men into the building.

"I thought it was some kid who didn't know any better, but then I realized he had a silver pistol," she recalled.

STATE IN BRIEF

If Treaty Oak dies, cast it in bronze, man says

AUSTIN (AP) — If herbicide poisoning claims the Treaty Oak, an Austin foundry operator says he has a ringing idea: cast the live oak in bronze and replant the metal replica.

"The city owns the tree. All I can do is plant the seed of its rebirth in bronze and hope the city or some public-spirited people from the private sector get behind the idea and help us make it a reality," said John Kasson II.

Kasson guesses the project could weigh 15 tons and cost more than $1 million.

The live oak, estimated to be 500 years old and having a branch spread of 110 feet, was poisoned with the herbicide Velpar last spring.

Police have accused Paul S. Cullen, 45, of Elroy, with poisoning the tree, allegedly as part of a ritual. He remains jailed on a charge of felony criminal mischief.

Kasson said he hopes the tree, which is being treated by foresters from around the country, recovers.

Birth defect more common

AUSTIN (AP) — More than 700 Texas infants from 1981 through 1986 were born with anencephaly, the fatal defect of having little or no brain, according to a Texas Department of Health study.

The birth defect occurs more often in East and South Texas than the rest of the state, said the study published in Texas Medicine, the journal of the Texas Medical Association.

It is least common in the Panhandle.

There were 727 cases of anencephaly recorded in Texas by the Bureau of Vital Statistics during 1981-86. Most infants with anencephaly are stillborn or die soon after birth.

Researchers worldwide are looking for causes of the birth defect, said Jean D. Brender, director of the health department's environmental epidemiology program.

Genetic and environmental factors are being examined, she said Thursday.

Anencephaly rates among infants in the East and South Texas public health regions averaged more than 4.9 cases per 10,000 live births between 1981 and 1986, said the study.

Beckwith urges action

AUSTIN (AP) — The United States should take a strong stand against terrorism as it faces the hostage crisis in Lebanon, said the ground force commander in the ill-fated 1980 Iran hostage rescue attempt.

"If we don't do this, it's going to keep on getting worse and worse," retired Army Col. Charlie Beckwith said Thursday.

U.S. leaders should work to get the information they need to rescue American hostages, he said. Terrorists claimed they killed one American hostage in Lebanon and threatened to kill another.

"I'd like to see the United States be able to go in there and eliminate all of those terrorists and bring those beautiful hostages home," Beckwith said.

"I'd like to see us do it in such a vigorous way that we tell the rest of the world, 'Never fool with the United States again,' " he said.

The United States should warn Iran that support of terrorism will result in a U.S. strike, he said.

Six plead innocent to charges in coupon scam

ABILENE (AP) — Connie Arvidson said she became so obsessed in her quest for coupons that she would sift through trash bins behind nightclubs in the middle of the night.

The avocation netted the Florida housewife more than $40,000 last year, but this summer it brought federal charges that she knowingly distributed counterfeit coupons.

Mrs. Arvidson, of Boca Raton, Fla., was one of six people who pleaded innocent Thursday to federal conspiracy and mail fraud charges in connection with a $2 million counterfeit coupon scam.

Four others indicted by a federal grand jury agreed to plead guilty in their home states and did not appear at Thursday's proceedings before Senior U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward, officials said.

James Floyd Richards of San Antonio; David George Rackmill of Stamford; David Keith Rees of Center Point; Peggy Joyce Bunce of Deerfield Beach, Fla.; and Margaret McBrayer Goodman of Kingsport, Tenn., also pleaded innocent.

All were released on personal recognizance bonds.

The defendants face a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $250,000 fine on each count.

But Mrs. Arvidson said Thursday she has been wrongly implicated.

"They were good coupons," she told the Abilene Reporter-News. "There was nothing wrong with them as far as I was concerned."

When she was arrested, "I was shocked," she said. "I didn't believe it. I still can't."

Assistant U.S. Attorney Steven S. Sucsy said evidence gathered during a four-month investigation will show that Mrs. Arvidson knowingly bought and distributed tens of thousands of dollars worth of fake coupons.

In the alleged scheme, coupons for food and other products from 47 major consumer product companies allegedly were printed and distributed nationwide from Texas.

The 24-count indictment, handed down June 22, said that beginning in June 1988, Rackmill advertised the coupons in a circular mailed to hundreds of people after buying the fake coupons from Rees, who had them printed by Richards.

The three allegedly counterfeited 603,000 copies of 90 coupons issued by the 47 manufacturers. The other defendants allegedly purchased the coupons from Rackmill through the mail, according to the indictment.

U.S. Postal Inspector Sam Prose, who worked undercover in the case and offered Rees coupons for Crisco shortening, said the coupon purchasers participated in the conspiracy by using the coupons to obtain large amounts of the products, then sold them at flea markets.

The coupons were similar to those offered by manufacturers to customers in exchange for proof-of-purchase seals and were valued between $1 and $10.89.

Mrs. Arvidson, who had made her living collecting coupons for seven years, said she "never dreamed" there was anything wrong with the coupons she got from Rackmill.

But the indictment alleges that Arvidson conspired with James Patrick Caprose of Newcastle, Pa., to obtain more than 10,000 counterfeit coupons. Caprose was one of the four defendants who agreed to plead guilty.

Arvidson said the publisher of the magazine, and not her, should be in court.

"They're the ones who printed the ads," she said. "They should be held responsible."

Also agreeing to plead guilty were Evelyn Christine Peoples of Humphrey, Ark.; Carol Jean Juel of Fullerton, Calif.; and Yvonne Suits of Cambridge, Minn.

No date has been set for trial, but Woodward told the defendants their trials would be conducted in Dallas.

Thomas Cicippio, left, brother of American hostage Joseph Cicippio, hugs David Cicippio, Joseph's son, by a sign outside their home in Norristown, Pa., home Thursday.

Bush hopes diplomacy will spare hostages

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration hopes its diplomatic juggernaut is not only helping spare Joseph Cicippio's life, but boosting the chances of gaining freedom for all the hostages in Lebanon.

At the White House, tension over the hostage situation eased Thursday when Shiite Moslems sent word in Beirut that they were sparing Cicippio's life for now. Twice earlier the so-called Revolutionary Justice Organization had postponed the execution hour.

Earlier, President Bush prayed in the Oval Office for the hostages with a prominent visitor, television evangelist Robert Schuller.

The president planned to meet with senators today, sign a noise abatement bill and then head off to Baltimore in the evening to see some ex-Senators — the Texas Rangers baseball team now partly owned by his son, George — play the Orioles. The Rangers were the Washington Senators before the team moved from the nation's capital in 1971.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater told reporters Thursday evening the hostage situation "has changed somehow" with the blitz of diplomatic contacts and intense, worldwide focus on the problem.

That "may open up some opportunity over the long haul," he said. "I don't think we're back at square one."

Earlier, Fitzwater issued a formal statement calling the reprieve for Cicippio "an encouraging and hopeful development. But it still does not answer our continuing concern for release of all hostages.

"We urge that all parties in the region use whatever influence they have to end the tragedy of hostage-taking and to release those remaining in captivity. And we express our appreciation to all those who have been thus far trying to help."

There were signs that Bush had been prepared to order a military strike if the terrorists, who claimed to have hanged Marine Lt. Col. William Higgins on Monday, killed Cicippio as well.

U.S. ships were converging on the eastern Mediterranean within striking distance of Lebanon and Iran.

Schuller said Bush had "made it clear he would take appropriate action" if another hostage was killed.

The New York Times reported today that Bush had "all but decided" to attack terrorist strongholds in eastern Lebanon, including the Baalbek base of 2,000 Iranian revolutionary guards, if a hostage had been killed.

A White House spokesman reached at home Thursday night, who spoke only on condition of anonymity, said, "To my knowledge that is not true,' but added, "We just don't discuss those sorts of things."

Cicippio's captors indicated he still could be killed "within days" unless Israel releases unspecified Palestinian and Lebanese guerrillas as well as the Moslem cleric kidnapped by Israeli commandos, Sheik Abdul Karim Obeid.

Asked if the president would recall any ships, Fitzwater said: "I urge everyone to keep in mind, especially in regard to the ships, that we still have a serious problem in the Middle East."

Fitzwater, asked whether the United States was considering asking Israel to extradite Obeid for possible involvement in the kidnapping of Higgins, said only that the Justice Department "is looking into the case."

A law enforcement source said the FBI is reviewing laws that allow the arrest and prosecution of terrorists for the kidnapping and murder of U.S. citizens overseas.

Fitzwater said the president called at least a dozen leaders in the Middle East and elsewhere over the past two days.

The diplomatic thrusts were aimed at friends and foes alike.

As parliament speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani was sworn in as Iran's new president, Fitzwater said the United States was cautiously hopeful "that the elevation of Rafsanjani is a positive sign for U.S. relations."

He voiced the hope that Rafsanjani would seek "a changed relationship with the West."

"There must be some cracks in the structure that (Ayatollah Ruhollah) Khomeini created against the United States," Fitzwater said.

At the State Department, spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said before Cicippio's life was spared, "'We have been in touch with Iran through a variety of channels and at this time have no reason to believe that Iran is not dealing with this matter in a serious way."

Study: 254 youths committed 223,000 crimes

NATION

MIAMI (AP) — Drug-prevention programs should begin as early as preschool, according to researchers who found that 254 juvenile crack users each confessed to a stunning average of 880 crimes a year.

"We've got a population of adolescents out there — we don't know how large it is — that is heavily involved in drugs and crime," said University of Delaware sociologist James Iniciardi. "The current methods of interdiction are really not doing anything for this group."

The research focused on adolescents, ages 12 to 17, known to be drug users — nine out of 10 had been arrested at least once. Crimes they confessed to included drug possession, robbery, assault and shoplifting. In all, they added up to some 223,000 crimes a year for the group.

Current anti-drug programs in the inner cities are simply too little, too late, researchers and local officials said Thursday.

"A large segment of a generation is being severely put at risk because of crack cocaine," said James Rivers, the report's author. "If they continue in this pattern, it is very likely they are going to get into heavier crime, serious health consequences and will never be able to integrate into society."

The interviews, done between October 1986 and November 1987, asked about when they began abusing alcohol and drugs and how many crimes they committed to sustain their drug use.

"First use is an average age of 7 for their first drink, and by 13, half of these kids had been behind bars," said Rivers.

The average age for the first time they became drunk was 8 years old, first drug use occurred at 9.9 years, and regular drug use began at age 11.

The average breakdown of crimes per juvenile, with some numbers rounded, were: 37 major felonies including assault and burglary, 101 prostitution and other vice offenses, 205 petty property crimes such as shoplifting and 538 drug sale and possession violations.

But only one out of 555 crimes resulted in an arrest, the study found, and only 4 percent of the juveniles ever received drug-abuse treatment.

As other studies have shown, crack — a highly potent and addictive form of cocaine — generates far more crime than other addictive drugs such as heroin, Rivers said.

"Cocaine is a stimulant — you remain agitated and alert," he said. "The small dosage and the short duration of the high...predisposes the user to use it again and again and again."

And when the users run out of money, they turn to crime, he said.

Both Rivers and Iniciardi emphasized that those studied were hard-core cases, not average adolescents. They said many had committed crimes even before becoming involved with drugs.

Solutions are difficult, Rivers and Iniciardi said.

"Drugs are not the problem in the ghetto, the ghetto is the problem in the ghetto," Iniciardi said. "Drugs are a coping mechanism, and for some, drugs are seen as a mechanism for upward mobility to get out of the ghetto."

Desire for freedom alive in U.S.S.R.

Mikhail Gorbachev's much-heralded reforms in the Soviet Union have raised many an eyebrow in recent years. As the Soviet president opened up public discussion through his policy of glasnost and perestroika — openness and revolution — and made Communist Party members more accountable for their performances, he walked a thin line, seemingly forever on the verge of taking that one step too far and falling victim to the historic wrath of the old men in the Kremlin.

Yet that day has never arrived and now, with Soviet mines falling prey to workers' strikes and demonstrators in the three Baltic republics helping to gain economic freedom for those parts of the Soviet Union, one must wonder whether Gorbachev could put the genie back in the Soviet bottle if he had the inclination to do so. While the tendency in the West may be to suspect that the tanks will roll out at some point, Gorbachev himself continues to insist that the current change is altogether necessary and must proceed.

Judging from reports in recent years regarding the inferior state of food production and living conditions in the Soviet Union, one would assume Gorbachev is correct. Of course much of the reason for the failure lies at the heart of the communist system. A society in which virtually every aspect of an individual's life must be controlled allows no room for the creative energies necessary to design new or imaginative mousetraps — one of the end results of freedom and precursors to economic progress.

Gorbachev recognized that shortcoming and presumably was the driving force behind the decision of the Supreme Soviet to give two of the three Baltic republics economic independence by Jan. 1 while freeing all three to trade with other Soviet republics. That change will mean Baltic trade relations involving Moscow and the other Soviet republics will be based on contracts rather than the present system in which authorities in Moscow make economic decisions. Even someone uneducated in economics can see the fallacy of that practice.

While a number of critics noted it was unfair to grant this economic freedom to the Baltics while withholding the right from other republics, there's little doubt that the trend is toward eventual economic freedom for all the Soviet republics. When that economic freedom is granted, can true change in the lives of the people in the Soviet Union be far behind?

History underscores the need for caution when dealing with authoritarian regimes, but this most recent step on the part of the Supreme Soviet appears to suggest that the desire for freedom is alive and well, and now has achieved an important foothold behind the borders of the Soviet Union. Once that desire has a foothold, it can never be shaken loose.

Some Gander crash testimony ignored

WASHINGTON — It lit up the dark morning, then "blew up like a mushroom, like a bomb."

That's how Judy Parsons recalls the morning of Dec. 12, 1985, when a chartered airliner crashed in Gander, Newfoundland, and killed 248 American soldiers on their way home from Egypt for Christmas.

Jack Anderson

The U.S. and Canadian governments apparently don't want to hear the words "blew up" or "bomb" in connection with the crash. Parsons was not invited to tell her story at the formal inquiry. Instead, her testimony was hidden from members of the Canadian Aviation Safety Board. It lends credence to a minority faction on the safety board which suspects that the jet blew up in the air.

U.S. and Canadian officials have dodged the "terrorism" tag. The U.S. government welcomed the Canadian board's findings last November that a glaze of ice on the wings had forced the plane to stall during takeoff and crash. We have learned that the State Department had a letter from a tipster who blamed terrorists, but kept that letter top-secret until the Canadian safety board issued its findings.

Bats, man.

As we reported recently, a U.S. intelligence source claims that American officials leaned on Canadian officials to steer clear of any conclusions pointing to terrorism. That meant steer clear of people like Parsons who saw something that couldn't be explained by ice on the wings.

Parsons was in the parking lot of her rental car business next to the Gander runway making sure the cars would start that morning. The airliner took off, and then the predawn sky turned bright. "There was a streak of light, gray-bluish light, then out of that light came this bright orange oval object. It blew up like a mushroom, like a bomb. I could see pieces going up in the sky and then falling," Parsons told us. Her account was echoed by two other eyewitnesses.

Police and aviation investigators interviewed Parsons and then told her she didn't need to go to the public inquiry, that they would use a tape of her testimony. They didn't. Parsons now feels like "I saw something I shouldn't have seen."

Our associate Jim Lynch has uncovered more documents that show the U.S. government took the terrorism prospect seriously.

A Beirut-based group, Islamic Jihad, took immediate credit for the crash, but U.S. officials publicly called that a hoax.

Privately, the United States had another clue that it was terrorists. Within a month after the crash, a U.S. diplomat in Mauritius, a tiny island off eastern Africa, received a letter from a group calling itself "The Sons of Zion." The letter said the crash was "a cold-blooded premeditated act which involved an expert sabotage of the aircraft...with the complicity of several Egyptian and Lybian (sic) mechanics and other Anti-U.S. and Anti-Israeli individuals."

The State Department stamped the letter "top-secret" and shared it with 25 high-level intelligence posts in the White House, the Pentagon, the State Department and the Justice Department.

Within two days after the crash, the State Department asked the Egyptian government to thoroughly search Egyptian Airline planes that were being used to fly other U.S. troops in Egypt.

Five months after the crash, U.S. planes bombed Libya, ostensibly in response to known terrorist acts that the Reagan administration said were the work of Moammar Gadhafi. If Reagan had the Gander crash in mind, he didn't say so publicly. After the 1983 bombing of the Marine barracks in Beirut, the prospect of 248 more soldiers dead at the hands of a terrorist may have been too embarrassing to admit.

CHARLEY REESE

Congress questioning necessity of B-2 bomber

If we ever have a nuclear war, God forbid, I hope the first Russian shot lands on Washington on a payday when most of the congressmen and senators will be there with their grubby hands outstretched.

That would at least add one small bit of justice to an otherwise catastrophic tragedy, for if ever deterrence fails, no institution in American will be more directly to blame than the U.S. Congress.

Charley Reese

It should not surprise us that an institution which acted so irresponsibly on fiscal matters should also act irresponsibly on defense matters. The current posturing on the B-2 Stealth bomber is an instructive example.

The favorite trick of Congress is to blame its messes on the executive branch, especially when the opposite political party controls it. All the horror stories of the Defense Department, however, are properly to be laid at the feet of Congress. Congress created the department and Congress wrote all the laws and rules that make the American procurement system such a joke.

There are congressmen now questioning the B-2, after Congress itself authorized and appropriated $22 billion to develop it. Twenty-two billion dollars is a bit late to decide you don't want something you've already ordered. It's one thing for a housewife to take a pair of shoes back the next day, but quite another for Congress to spend so much money, to call so much human labor and capital into a project, and then decide it really doesn't want what it bought.

Actually, Americans should be celebrating the B-2, for it is a triumph of American technology comparable to the Apollo project. Instead of celebrating, however, Congress is whining and posturing because in reality it wishes to dump its fiscal irresponsibility on the backs of America's armed forces.

Defense, however, did not create the deficit, and if they cut it to the bone, defense could not cure the deficit. The deficit is powered by the combination of out-of-control domestic spending and the unwillingness to levy the taxes to pay for it. Just interest and entitlements now eat up 58 percent of the budget. Defense is down to 25 percent.

Congress should proceed with the B-2 project. It is, from all known evidence, a great advance, and its role in our strategic deterrence will become even more important if, in fact, arms control negotiations result in an elimination of some land-based and sea-based missiles.

Defense, which has already slashed its own budget request and is now in its fifth consecutive year of reduced spending, is asking $4.7 billion for the B-2 this year. That's about a third of the foreign aid bill no one in Congress is questioning and which buys us, for all practical purposes, nothing.

Congress ought to proceed with the B-2. If it does not proceed, it ought to kill the entire project outright and not, as it loves to do, kill it in slow stages with ridiculous stretch-outs. Ron Dellums, California's most leftist congressman, wants to buy 13 and then shut down the production line. Dellums has as much credibility on defense matters as Jim Bakker has on Christian economics.

Thanks to congressional mismanagement, the U.S. Air Force, which has a total of 7,496 aircraft, is flying a rapidly aging fleet. Twenty-three percent of those planes are 24 years old or older, and 53 percent of all Air Force planes are 18 years old and older.

Bear in mind, by the way, that between 1979 and 1988 the Soviet Union and its satellites produced 8,500 NEW tactical combat and interceptor aircraft or more planes than exist in the entire U.S. Air Force inventory.

Perhaps we've reached the point where Congress is not in our national interest and by that I mean the men and women in it who have wrecked us fiscally, turned this republic into a bloated welfare state, weakened the common defense, and set a public example of venality, cowardice, incompetence, and irresponsibility.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Nixon, Newt Gingrich on the list of 'bozos'

Ted Turner's in trouble again. All because he called a bozo a bozo.

Not many people do that anymore, because they're afraid of offending somebody.

Lewis Grizzard

Call a bozo a bozo today, and you will be covered up in bozo wrath.

Ted Turner called female anti-abortionists bozos. So outraged were these bozos, Turner's Atlanta offices had to put on extra operators to handle all the outraged callers.

Remember the Supreme Court ruling about the flag? The Supreme Court said if some bozo wants to go out and burn the American flag, it's OK because such an action falls under freedom of speech.

So what was Ted Turner doing? He was exercising his right of free speech. You might not agree with what the man said, but if flag burning is protected under free speech, then Ted Turner ought to be able to say what he pleases, regardless of whom he offends.

In fact, I believe that so strongly, I've decided to make public my own list of bozos, and I frankly don't care who it offends, and I don't have to answer the phone around here, so call all you want.

If Gail Godfrey of Delta Airlines can handle an entire army platoon calling her for reservations (so goes the commercial), my secretary, the lovely Miss Wanda Fribish, can handle all the bozos smart enough to dial a telephone.

The Grizzard Bozo Hall of Fame includes:

- Gun nuts. May they all shoot their toes off.
- The Rev. Al Sharpton.
- Newt Gingrich. You can look at him and tell he's a bozo.
- People who think Elvis is still alive. He's as dead as Pete Rose.
- Morton Downey Jr. Did you read where he's launching a singing career? Get the bozo hook.
- Richard Nixon. He was already a bozo and then he made that statement about Congress spending too much time on ethics. Now, he's a double-bozo.
- Mike Tyson. A rich bozo, but still a bozo.
- His ex-wife.
- Anybody who still sends money to television evangelists, bozos all.
- The two guys who took Siskel and Ebert's place reviewing movies on public television. Their mothers dress them funny, too.
- Members of the Ku Klux Klan. They even wear official bozo pointed hats.
- The entire nation of Iran.
- Geraldo Rivera.
- Religious fanatics who think the devil is behind the annual Sports Illustrated issue.
- Them and anybody who claims to talk to God.
- Anybody who begs for money at an airport.
- Automobile dealers who do their own commercials.
- Zsa Zsa Gabor.
- Anybody who still doesn't realize professional wrestling is fake. This particular brand of bozo can be dangerous.
- Not all anti-abortionists, but some. The loud ones who show up on television being dragged away from an abortion clinic by police.
- Ted Turner, of course. He's a bozo, but at least he's a bozo with guts. Which is more than you can say about most of the others.

Miss Fribish is standing by for your calls. Fire when ready.

MARIANNE MEANS

War on drugs needs to be free of politics

WASHINGTON — If a federal crusade to end the terrifying spread of illegal drugs is to succeed, it has to be comprehensive, well-funded, and fairly free of partisan politics.

But, even before the president officially unveils the national anti-drug strategy that Congress has demanded, the political gain to be had from the issue is proving more alluring than actually getting the job done.

Marianne Means

President Bush has made several speeches vowing to fight crack and cocaine and calling for tough measures to put drug pushers out of business. But he did not put in his first year's budget the $1.8 billion necessary to fund a sweeping anti-drug measure already passed by Congress last year.

The measure authorized more law enforcement officers, expanded treatment programs, new drug education projects and additional prison space — all goals expected to reappear as though new when the Bush administration unveils its anti-drug program in September.

The Democratic-controlled Congress, however, didn't rush forward to appropriate the authorized money, either. Like the president, the Democrats were more interested in holding down the budget and avoiding tax increases than in fighting drugs. They are waiting for Bush to stick his neck out first.

All of which frustrates Judiciary Committee chairman Joseph Biden, the Senate's point man on drugs. He would like to get down to serious business. But he is stymied by the mismatch between rhetoric and reality.

It particularly irritated Biden that Bush went to Delaware, Biden's home turf, to champion law and order and plead for longer sentences against drug dealers. It happens that Congress, led by Biden's committee, has passed 208 anti-crime laws in the past five years, including provisions to ensure stiffer prison terms.

In a major policy speech at the National Press Club, Biden grumbled that Bush is offering only "cardboard cops, cut-out courts, paper prosecutors, pretend prisons and tenuous treatment." To draw a contrast, Biden outlined his own Democratic strategy that emphasizes both law enforcement and treatment and is explicitly funded by liquor and cigarette taxes.

He contended that he's just impatient and not trying to get "a political jump" on the administration. If he is, it isn't working. He has been having trouble getting attention; senators can't dominate the news the way a president can.

Biden also fingered the State Department for failing to put pressure on other countries to stop exporting drugs. He noted wryly that secretaries of state "want to carry treaties in their $500 briefcases, not plans to fight drugs."

Biden's view is echoed by Customs Commissioner William von Raab, who quit his job with a blast at State Department officials for not supporting his efforts to stop border smuggling. They are too busy, he said, pursuing their "quest to make the world safe for cocktail parties."

In the midst of this political buck-passing, new drug czar William Bennett has been doing a good job of beating the drums for the president's still-vague campaign. Bennett is cleverly stressing things that don't cost money, such as denouncing the concept of legalizing drugs, a red herring that has very little support and is in no danger of becoming national policy.

But not even Bennett can prop up the program if it isn't adequately funded. Biden warns that the Bush plan will work only if "he plans to spend enough and he plans to spend it right."

Otherwise, the so-called "war" on drugs will continue to be just another political skirmish.

ITEM: Haiti may not seem as imminently threatening to hemispheric stability as Panama and Nicaragua, but its chaotic politics and intractable poverty represent a festering problem that has long defied American solution.

There is no better example of our limited ability to affect the internal conditions of another country than Haiti, a small nation of 6 million virtually on our doorstep.

Congress, in fact, gave up on Haiti two years ago, cutting off all financial aid after an attempt to hold democratic elections ended in a massacre.

When Baby Doc Duvalier fled three years ago, ending his family's ruthless, rotten 29-year-reign, things were supposed to get better. Four governments later, the country is still desperately poor, still plagued by drugs and violence and still under a military dictatorship.

But Haiti's ruler, Lt. General Prosper Avril, is viewed favorably by State Department officials, who believe he is trying against enormous odds to clean up the corrupt armed forces, end the drug trafficking and restore civil order.

So the House has quietly and conditionally approved a resumption of U.S. aid, to be doled out in small amounts with each step toward democratic reform. The Senate is considering a similar move. Avril is asking for $1 million to conduct a secure election and $10 million to launch public works projects designed to busy the military with building roads and installing electricity.

Human rights abuses continue in Haiti. Disease is rampant. Avril has not disarmed Duvalier's murder squads. No one knows if he can pull off a transition to a civilian government, or even if he is sincere about trying. But doing nothing will condemn Haiti to ever-worsening conditions. Helping Avril seems like a small risk worth taking.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, August 4, the 216th day of 1989. There are 149 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On August 4, 1735, freedom of the press in America won an important victory as a jury acquitted John Peter Zenger of the New York Weekly Journal of a charge of seditious libel brought by the royal governor of New York.

On this date:

In 1790, a U.S. naval task force known as the Revenue Cutter Service was formed. It would later become the Coast Guard.

In 1830, plans for the city of Chicago were laid out.

In 1892, Sunday school teacher Lizzie Borden was arrested in Fall River, Mass., charged with the hatchet murders of her father and stepmother. (She was later found innocent.)

In 1916, the United States purchased the Danish Virgin islands for 25 million dollars.

Guatemala offers fertile fields for opium poppies

GUATEMALA CITY, Guatemala (AP) — Opium is the new king of Guatemala's rugged western mountains.

The crimson poppy began infecting the area about two years ago, accompanied by high-powered guns and huge wads of cash. It has spread like blood down guerrilla-infested slopes and through hidden valleys, stirring visions of another Colombia.

U.S. officials say one harvest of 16 metric tons — and the fertile region can produce three or four harvests a year — now yields enough heroin to supply the needs of U.S. addicts for a year.

The fight to dethrone the opium poppy, from which heroin is derived, has become a top U.S. priority here, and worried Guatemalan officials have agreed to aerial spraying despite the controversy over the threat to legitimate crops.

"I've detected a real sense of panic in some people," a U.S. official said. "In a small country like this, it wouldn't take the dopers long to take over."

They almost have in the no-man's land where more than 4,000 acres of opium poppies now flourish.

The U.S. spraying operation was halted in November after only two months because the low-flying planes were taking so much ground fire.

The flights are resuming, but this time with air cover from a pair of helicopter gunships supplied by the U.S. government and flown by U.S. pilots under contract, according to U.S. and Guatemalan officials.

"These people live by the poppy. They aren't afraid to kill anyone," said Lt. Col. Eduardo Santis, a Treasury Police spokesman.

In January, armed growers in the Cuilco Valley region killed six members of a Treasury Police patrol.

The 2,100-man Treasury Police force is responsible for drug enforcement, but Santis said it is undermanned, poorly equipped and outgunned.

U.S. officials say the military, which governed Guatemala until 1986 when a shaky civilian government under President Vinicio Cerezo took over, is staying out of the opium war.

Officials say the only hope is to make the cost of doing business too high for the traffickers.

The United States has doubled its budget for the drug war in Guatemala this year to $900,000. The spraying program is a key part of the battle.

Officials say each of the two planes can spray about 100 acres a day under ideal conditions. The poppy has a 90-day growing cycle and officials say only continuous spraying can discourage the growers.

Small-scale opium cultivation has always existed in the area, but officials blame the boom on an influx of Mexican traffickers and the persuasive power of hard cash in a primitive, isolated area beyond the reach of central authority.

U.S. officials say they have detected some signs of money-laundering but the drug trade does not appear to have affected the national economy yet.

U.S. officials also believe that a few of the traffickers have employed leftist rebels eager to raise cash for arms.

The Guatemalan National Revolutionary Movement, a Marxist coalition of rebel bands believed to number fewer than 2,000, controls a small zone in northwestern Guatemala but has lost ground in recent years.

U.S. officials said some captured guerrillas have admitted working with the traffickers, chiefly as providers of muscle for strongarm tactics.

There is no stong evidence, however, any extensive involvement by the guerrillas in the opium trade.

The Mexican traffickers take the opium gum north to their refining laboratories in Mexico. They also arm the growers and teach them how to avoid detection.

Some growers have begun using raised earthen walls and rolls of canvas or plastic that can be unfurled to protect the brilliant opium blossoms from herbicides. Others are growing opium poppies with in crops like corn.

NATION IN BRIEF

Half of all Americans live in 37 metro areas

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two centuries after the United States was founded as a largely agricultural nation, nearly nine-tenths of the population growth is occurring in metropolitan areas, the Census Bureau reports.

Almost half of all Americans reside in just 37 major urban areas, the bureau said Thursday in a new analysis of the patterns of growth. And the metropolitan share of the population is growing faster than that in rural areas.

The "rural renaissance" reported in the 1970s when small towns and rural areas were growing seems to have ended, with increases in cities and suburbs now well in the lead.

The census study found that about 86 percent of the nation's population growth since 1980 has occurred in the 282 officially designated metropolitan areas across the country. That pattern represents a return to the metropolitan area dominance that has been common since the era of the Great Depression, the bureau reported.

The analysis of 1987 figures found that nearly half of all Americans, 48.9 percent, reside in the 37 metro areas with populations of a million or more.

Led by New York and Los Angeles, these metro areas had 119 million residents in 1987, the Bureau said.

New Jersey leads the way as the only state entirely included within metropolitan areas, the bureau noted. The northern portion of the state is included in the greater New York metro area while the southern portion is part of the Philadelphia region.

Senate OKs aid for vets

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vietnam veterans exposed to Agent Orange will be eligible under legislation passed by the Senate for disability benefits for some illnesses associated with the herbicide.

"It has been a long, hard struggle," Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., a co-sponsor of the bill and chairman of the Veterans Affairs Committee, said Thursday. "Too many Vietnam veterans and their families have suffered anguish for far too long."

An estimated 2.6 million military personnel were in South Vietnam during the war in the late 1960s and early '70s. Some 250,000 have told the Department of Veterans Affairs that they believe they were exposed, and 35,000 have applied for disability benefits.

About 12 million gallons of the herbicide were sprayed during the war to remove the foliage providing ground cover for the enemy. Agent Orange contains dioxin, one of the most toxic chemicals known, as well as 2,4,5-T and 2,4-D, also harmful chemicals.

Simpler tax forms urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — An expert in cutting through gobbledygook is offering some free advice on how to cut the federal deficit and ease taxpayer anxieties: simplify federal tax forms.

"Further simplification of tax forms and instructions — without compromising technical accuracy — is possible," says Janice Redish, a linguist. "The payoff would far exceed the investment."

"Such a project has the potential to collect billions of dollars in taxes that are not now paid and the potential to change the public's perception of the IRS and of government in general," Ms. Redish said Thursday to the House Ways and Means subcommittee that oversees the Internal Revenue Service.

Ms. Redish, who recently wrote a "user-friendly" owner's manual for the Ford Taurus, cited the basic 1040, the most common individual form, as visually overwhelming and incredibly crowded.

"It has 65 numbered items — and several unnumbered ones — all on one piece of paper...boxes on the left for some items and on the right for others. It means that IRS uses small type for most lines and then condenses that type even further to fit all the words in other lines," she said.

She got no argument from the subcommittee. Chairman J.J. Pickle, D-Texas, had the Ways and Means hearing room decorated for the occasion with a copy of each of the 392 federal tax forms — enough paper, he said, to produce a stack thicker than the District of Columbia yellow pages.

New Neptune moons found

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The universe is a little more crowded than we thought.

Cameras on the Voyager 2 space probe discovered three new moons as it hurtled toward Neptune, Jet Propulsion Laboratory scientists said Thursday.

The announcement by JPL, which operates America's unmanned craft exploring the solar system, raised the number of known Neptune moons to six, including Triton, Nereid and one found earlier this summer by Voyager.

Voyager 2 was 22 million miles from Neptune when the moons were confirmed by scientists Wednesday, indicating there may be more discoveries as the space probe draws closer in the next few weeks.

Brown speaks at caucus

ST. PAUL (AP) — The Democratic Party could do more for women, but deserting it for a third party would lead to "self-righteous failure," Democratic National Committee Chairman Ron Brown told female political activists.

Responding to last month's decision by delegates to the National Organization for Women's convention to explore the formation of a political party for women, Brown conceded Democrats did not do enough to garner votes from women in the last election.

"In fact, we blew a major gender gap that might have carried the Democratic candidate for president to the White House," Brown said Thursday.

Mosaics to be returned

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A federal judge's order that a U.S. dealer must return four sixth-century mosaics to Cyprus changes the rules of acquiring rare treasures from Europe and the Middle East, museum officials say.

U.S. District Judge James E. Noland ruled Thursday that Peg L. Goldberg of suburban Indianapolis never obtained proper title to the artworks purchased for $1.1 million last summer in Switzerland.

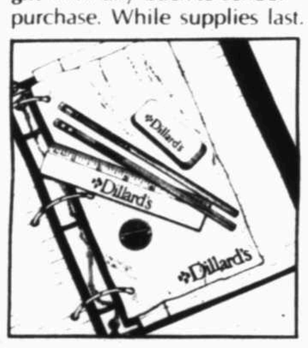

The federal Republic of Cyprus and the Greek Orthodox Church of Cyprus sued to recover the mosiacs last spring when they learned Ms. Goldberg was trying to sell them to the Getty Museum in Malibu, Calif., for $20 million.

Noland said because Ms. Goldberg never obtained title of the rare fragments she must return them to the church.

Monahans Draw issue to stay in Midland

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The Monahans Draw controversy took another turn in the pursuit of justice when Judge Pat Baskin Midland's 142nd Texas District Court this week opted to keep two Midland lawsuits against Odessa in Midland.

In doing so, the judge denied Odessa's motion to move the Anderson-Gay cases out of Midland where Odessa's lawyers claim too much anti-Odessa sentiment exists to effect a fair trial.

"I am tickled pink with the decision," said Midland lawyer Paul Bohannon, who represents two Midland cotton farmers, George Anderson Sr. and his son, George Anderson Jr., and Midland businesswoman Louise Gay, in their suits over the flooding of Monahans Draw.

"It is about high time that a Midland County jury gets an opportunity to hear the facts of this case, which involves a sewer plant located in Midland County but owned and operated by the city of Odessa," Bohannon said.

The Odessa legal counsel, however, was not pleased with the judge's ruling.

"We will just go forward with the case," Odessa City Attorney Joel Roberts said today. "We made the motion (for a change of venue) looking for a favorable ruling, and we are disappointed that we didn't get a favorable ruling."

Anderson and son claim that their cotton operation was damaged by the flooding of Monahans Draw, which carries effluent — treated wastewater — from Odessa's two sewage-treatment plants eastwardly through Midland County and just south of Midland's city limits.

Ms. Gay contends that her horse-stabling and trucking operations were flooded out by the draw's overflow.

Baskin has docketed the Anderson-Gay cases for trial in late October in his court.

In a similar case tried in Stanton last March, a Martin County jury awarded Midland farmer Lee Bell $454,000 in actual and exemplary damages due to the flooding of his farmland and other land which he had reserved for residential development.

Odessa is appealing that verdict.

Bell's case, which initially was filed in Baskin's court in 1983, was moved to neighboring Stanton on a "friendly agreement" between attorneys on both sides of the Bell-Odessa dispute. Odessa had wanted the case tried out of Midland and in Big Spring, where the docket was too crowded to handle the case there. Big Spring Judge Jim Gregg of the 118th Texas District Court presided over the jury case in Stanton.

Ironically, the 35-year-old Bell has been brought — reluctantly — into the Anderson-Gay-versus-Odessa on a motion by Odessa's counsel — Roberts and retained attorney Jim O'Leary of Odessa.

Odessa argues that a channel cut into Bell farmland contributed to the Monahans Draw flooding of the Anderson farmland and the Louise Gay property downstream from Bell's farm.

Bell's lawsuit against Odessa parallels the Anderson-Gay cases against Odessa.

Bohannon, who represented Bell in his case against Odessa, represents Anderson and son and Ms. Gay on the Monahans Draw dispute.

And Bell speculated today that Odessa brought him into the Anderson-Gay cases "only to cause in-house turmoil."

Rather than hire another attorney, Bell said he would "handle" his own stance in the Anderson-Gay-versus-Odessa cases.

LHS creates new opening procedure

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

They won't be fiddling with forms and juggling class schedules at Lee High School on the first day of school this year.

When the chalk hits the blackboard Sept. 5, students should be prepared to put their brains to the academic grindstone rather than stumbling around for two weeks and finally falling into the routine.

Housekeeping items on the usual chore list, such as scheduling classes or buying yearbooks, will be crossed off two weeks in advance.

Taking care of the tasks in past years sometimes lasted two weeks into the start of the semester, said Jane Carrens, LHS instructional services director.

"In the past it has always been a zoo for the first two weeks of school," Mrs. Carrens said. "We want the students to come to school that first day and be ready to start learning."

In addition, the students should be ready to park — in their reserved, paid-for spot in the LHS parking lot.

During the preopening procedures, which begin Aug. 21, students have the chance to pay $25 for a reserved parking space. The spots will be sold on a first-come, first-serve basis.

"We hope that if kids know a parking spot is theirs, they don't have to come roaring into the parking lot after lunch to hunt for a space," Mrs. Carrens said.

Limited parking at the school has been a long-time problem, Mrs. Carrens added.

Seniors get the first shot at a reserved space. Their preopening day is Aug. 21, with those with last names beginning with "A" through "M" scheduled for 8 a.m. to noon, while those with last names beginning with "N" through "Z" filing in from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Juniors, "A" through "M," can go from 8 a.m. to noon on Aug. 22, while "N" through "Z" go from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. "A" through "M" sophomores can hit the lines Aug. 23 from 8 a.m. to noon, while "N" through "Z" go from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Mrs. Carrens said she is not sure how many parking spots will be sold because the lot has not been marked yet. She said, though, that most seniors and juniors should have little trouble getting a space.

Principal Jack Fryar said the ideas of preopening activities and reserved parking spaces, both unique to Midland Independent School District, came after a group of LHS educators visited Richardson and Plano school districts.

"We said, 'That's simple. Why in the world haven't we done that?'" Fryar said. "We're really excited about it. It will be to the benefit of the student and the teacher.

"We're going to knock ourselves out trying to make it work."

Fryar said revenues from parking spot sales will be used primarily to create additional spaces. The money also will be used to repair the existing lot and fund student activities.

Big Spring woman reunited with English brother after 44 years

BIG SPRING (AP) — It all came down to a blinking red light on a telephone answering machine.

Louise Nall, who left her native England in 1944, had not seen any of her family members since that time. Although she never totally gave up hope of seeing them again, she had begun to wonder whether the reunion would ever take place.

Then came the day — about a month ago — when she came home to find a message waiting on the answering machine.

"I came home that day and saw that the red light was on," Mrs. Nall said. "I got me a glass of tea, sat down, and played the message."

The message was short and to the point — and definitely caught Mrs. Nall's attention: "Louise, this is your brother, Fred. Please call me..."

"It knocked me for a loop," she said. "I thought, 'Lord, it can't be true. It's been 44 years.' "

But, the news was true. Mrs. Nall called the number provided on the message and spoke to her brother for the first time since 1944.

A couple of weeks later, the two reunited at Midland International Airport and since then, Fred Wilson and his wife, Joyce, have been Mrs. Nall's guests at her Big Spring home.

Fred said he's enjoyed his stay in Texas, but there are a few things he could do without.

"It's so hot here you can't sleep comfortably at night," Fred said. "And the grass — it's like wire. It's not what I call green grass."

But wiry grass and oppressive Texas heat were not the main topics of conversation Friday. Louise and Fred chose to discuss, instead, how a family torn apart by an abusive father was finally reunited.

"My father was an alcoholic...he was always whipping me with a strap...so I didn't stay there," she said of her childhood home in London when she was 15. "It was one of those things. I thought I'd be better off away from home."

Fred said his father's abuse soon caused his other three sisters to leave home. "Pretty soon, the family just split up."

Louise recalls spending the first few nights away from home at the Salvation Army, then working at various jobs for the next few years.

"I was just a kid on all my jobs; everybody was older," she said, her years in the United States not quite dulling her British accent. "Of course, I had lied about my age to begin with."

The family split was compounded when Louise's and Fred's mother was committed to a mental institution, where she died soon afterward.

When World War II began, Louise went to work with the 100th Bomber Group. She married Big Spring native Harry Nall in 1944 and left for the United States that year.

"When I was walking up the (ship) plank, I said to myself, 'Well, if I don't like it there, I can always come back.' I found out you don't get back that quick."

Fred left England by a different route the next year; he joined the Army and served for three years in India. After receiving his discharge, he worked for the city of Westminster for 39 years before retiring.

After retirement, Fred and Joyce moved to Clacton-by-Sea in eastern England. It was about that time he began the effort to find his sister.

"When you're old, you come home to roost, kind of like a mother hen," he said of his desire to see Louise again. "You wonder how your brother or sister is doing."

AP Laserphoto

Fred Wilson gives his long-lost sister, Louise Nall, a kiss on the cheek, recently. The two were reunited after 44 years of separation.

He began inquiring with the Salvation Army about ways to find his sister. Two years ago, the Salvation Army located Fred's younger siblings, Trixie and Charles, who he hadn't seen since the family split.

"When they found Trixie and Charlie, I had no doubt they'd find Louise, also," he said.

Unknown to Fred, Louise — who lived in Cleveland, Ohio and Dallas before moving to Big Spring 12 years ago — had also been in contact with the Salvation Army in hopes of locating her brother.

"About a month ago, the Salvation Army sent Fred a wire saying that his sister was trying to find him," Joyce said. Fred then called Louise, leaving the fateful message on the answering machine.

Louise called back soon after receiving the message, but forgot about the time-change difference between the two countries.

"She had trouble with the time change the first few times she called," Fred said. "When she called me, it would be the middle of the night (in England)."

Fred and Joyce will be staying in Texas until Aug. 8, when they and Louise will fly back to England for another reunion — this time with the rest of her brothers and sisters.

"We'll take her back for three weeks," Joyce said. "If she likes it, she'll stay."

For her part, Louise is uncertain about a permanent return to her homeland.

"I've been alone so long — just me and the dogs and the parrot," she said. "Fred says, 'Well, you can sell out.' But, I think of Texas as my home."

Law protecting flag signed; 20 jobs unprotected under other bill

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements signed into law legislation protecting the United States and Texas flags but the fate of 20 state employees remains uncertain under another signed bill that one state official said represents a personal vendetta.

The flag law signed Thursday makes it a misdemeanor, punishable by up to a year in jail, to burn, mutilate, destroy or deface the state or U.S. flag.

Lawmakers rallied to protect the flag after the Supreme Court ruled in favor of Gregory Johnson, who burned a flag in protest at the 1984 Republican National Convention in Dallas.

After the decision, President Bush urged passage of a constitutional amendment to ban flag burning.

But Sen. Craig Washington, D-Houston, filibustered for 12 hours and 20 minutes, against a resolution calling on Congress to exempt desecration of the U.S. and Texas flags from the constitutional protection of freedom of speech.

Washington finally relented, saying he had made his point with the public against tampering with the constitution.

In addition to the flag bill, Clements signed a measure to convert the Texas Aeronautics Commission into the Texas Department of Aviation.

Aeronautics Commission Chairman Richard Emerson said the legislation was aimed at getting back at him for not supporting earlier positions of Clements' and that it would cost 20 employees their jobs.

But the governor's staff refuted the charge and said they are working to secure funds to maintain those jobs.

The new aviation department comes on line Oct. 18, but funds for the old one run out on Sept. 1 because of an earlier veto by Clements.

"Those people down there are going to be out of a job at the end of this month, just to get even with me," Emerson said. It is wrong for people to be put out of work "because of a personal vendetta," he said.

Jay Rosser, deputy press secretary for Clements, said, "Our office is now working to find other sources of funding. There is no intent legislatively or in the governor's eyes to abolish those jobs."

Emerson opposed Clements' earlier attempts to merge the Aeronautics Commission into the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation. He said the small agency would get lost in the massive highway department.

Also, he bucked Clements' no-new-taxes pledge by advocating an aviation fuels tax, which has been opposed by the airlines.

Emerson, the Caldwell County Republican Party chairman, said he had in the past supported Clements, also a Republican, but added, "It will never happen again."

The Aeronautics Commission primarily assists small airports in planning, construction and financing of aviation facilities.

Under the restructuring, the department will handle the same duties in addition to channeling federal aviation funds to airports.

Clements signed other measures to:

- Increase from a misdemeanor to a felony the penalty for damaging or destroying a place of worship, or a community center that offers medical, social or educational programs. The so-called hate crimes bill was a response to the damaging of synagogues by white supremacists called "skinheads," backers said.
- Reduce the oil production tax on oil produced from certain enhanced recovery techniques. The oil industry sees the measure as an incentive to increase drilling activity.
- Establish a four-year university in Killeen, contingent on approval of the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board.
- Require state-licensed child-care facilities to post notices that failure to report child abuse is a crime.

Questions cover path of altruism

There is this bit of verbiage on yellowing newsprint: "A man with his knowledge should know right from wrong."

Todd

And he probably does.

But knowledge, unfortunately, does not equate to wisdom. And knowing right from wrong does not equate to proper behavior.

The theory is that people who have reached the age of accountability know the difference between right and wrong. They supposedly know what is good and what is bad.

But that doesn't seem quite the case in a world where there is a vast area of gray hues between the black and the white. What is "evil" is not so labeled, and what is "good" may not be so readily apparent.

In this so-called New Age, there seems to be a dearth of altruism — pure goodness of the heart.

There seems to be a lacking of a will do what is necessary to reach a high level of discernment. The tendency is to take the route of convenience and pleasure. The tendency is to bypass the discipline that is needed for men and women to do their best and to know what is best for them. And often what is best for them is, in turn, best for their family and friends.

But one of the most difficult challenges for mankind, it seems, is to discern what is "best" in all areas of life. And even if a person knows what is best and right, there often is the blinding fog of emotionalism, self-justification and rationalization to sidetrack good intent.

There seems to be an inner voice — a force — deep within the mind and heart that gently whispers to the self what is "good" and what is "bad" even within that gray area wherein discernment is required for interpretation.

That voice is a thing called "conscience." And conscience, experience has taught, must be fine-tuned and heeded and exercised.

Otherwise, a person will be overpowered by rampant emotion and selfish ends. And the mind, if the heart so desires, can be fooled into thinking that "wrong is right" and, indeed, that such-and-such language or such-and-such action "really doesn't matter."

In truth, all that is done does matter. Whether a thought, word, or act is deemed major or minor, everything that is done shapes character and action and the ability to discern "right from wrong."

DEATHS

Vera Crawley White

Services for Vera Crawley White of Midland have been set for 1 p.m. Saturday at Ellis Chapel with Rev. Lucian Rudd officiating. Interment will follow at Sunset Memorial Gardens in Odessa. Ellis Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

She died early this morning at a local hospital.

She was born Sept. 7, 1898, in Commanche County. She spent her early life in Eastland County where she attended school. Mrs. White later attended North Texas State University. Following college, she taught for a few years in country schools. She married John F. White on April 1, 1923. Her husband was an district clerk and county treasurer in Eastland County before moving to Odessa in 1945, where he was with Humble Pipeline. They resided there until his death in 1984. Mrs. White moved to Midland a year later. She was a member of Belmont Baptist Church of Odessa and had taught Sunday School at First Baptist Church in Eastland.

Survivors include one daughter, Mrs. Mike (Fae) Smith of Midland; two brothers, R.J. Crawley of Rising Star and D.B. Crawley of Eastland; one sister, Mrs. H.A. (Ruby) Reynolds of Stephenville; two grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

The family requests memorials be directed to a favorite charity or to Hospice of Midland.

Ralph H. Geisler

Services for Ralph H. Geisler of Midland were to be at 11 a.m. today at St. Stephen's Catholic Church with the Rev. Robert Kelly officiating and Rev. Cliff Blackburn, OMI, assisting. Burial was to follow at Fairview Cemetery with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Pallbearers were to be Michael Geisler, Mark Geisler, Daniel Geisler, John F. McGuigan, Orman Hubbard and Paul Davis, Jr.

Honorary pallbearers were to be Dr. Henrie Mast, Dr. John Mast, Dr. Gregory Bartha, Tom Ingram, Art Gibson, Maurice Kennedy and John E. Reid.

H.B. Johnson

Services for H.B. "Wort" Johnson of Midland are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

He died early this morning at a local hospital.

Milford woman recognized as 'grouch'

MILFORD (AP) — Judy Dickerson's eyes widened and her long fingernails appeared to curl into her palms when a stranger pulled up in front of her house the other day.

"What do you want?" she barked.

Mrs. Dickerson didn't exchange pleasantries when the stranger told her he had come to repair her car. Instead, she almost dragged him into her back yard to begin the work.

Mrs. Dickerson wasn't having a bad day. She's ALWAYS in a bad mood, friends say.

So last month, residents "honored" her with the title of Milford Grouch of the Year. Mrs. Dickerson beat out more than a dozen other grumblers in what city officials hope to make an annual event.

And for once in her life, she wasn't complaining — much.

"I think I'm a grouch," Mrs. Dickerson said. "I get tired of putting up with these people's nonsense."

By that, she means the local teenagers who hang out at a nearby park in the Ellis County town of 700 people, about 55 miles south of Dallas. She said her temper flares when they start playing that awful music, which prevents her from taking her nap.

"They play all this loud music," she charged. "When they do that, I go down there and tell them they are too loud and they should go home."

The teen-agers usually don't have to be told twice, friends said.

"When the kids get carried away, it's known that Judy will go out and stop them," said Carol Sliwa, owner of the Country Corner Gas Station.

"One time, all the kids were in town making noise. Judy came to use the phone, and they all split."

Mrs. Dickerson doesn't own a phone.

"When anyone wants to talk to me, all they have to do is yell," she said.

Mrs. Dickerson, 48, was chosen town grouch from a field of about 15 candidates. She received 76 votes, said Mrs. Sliwa, a contest organizer.

AP Laserphoto

Judy Dickerson, elected Grouch of the Year in the Ellis County town of Milford, says she gets tired of "people's nonsense."

The contest was held as part of the city's Fourth of July festival. The celebration, held for the first time this year, was intended to bring residents closer together, organizers said.

Mrs. Dickerson, who moved to Milford from the McCulloch County community of Brady 13 years ago, said she didn't expect to be named Grouch of the Year.

She thinks the contest was rigged.

"They stuffed it — the kids did," said Mrs. Dickerson, seated on a lawn chair in her back yard with a cigarette between her fingers. "One person wrote my name 43 times in the same handwriting. I haven't found out who did it yet."

Although Mrs. Dickerson won the contest, no one would admit to actually voting for her.

"I didn't vote for her because I don't really think she's a grouch," said Myrtle Probasco, 72, who quilts with Mrs. Dickerson at the Senior Citizen's Center once or twice a week.

"She really is nice — when she's asleep."

Toya Jean Presley, director of the Senior Citizen's Center and a contest organizer, said Mrs. Dickerson was the best choice for the award.

"It was all done in fun, and she has been real good about it," Ms. Presley said. "She's a fine lady."

Mrs. Dickerson's husband, Jerry, said h would have voted for her. But he was away on business when the contest was held.

"I cracked up when I heard," Dickerson said. "If I had been here, she would have had twice as many votes."

Mrs. Dickerson didn't think that was funny.

"Shut up!" she snapped.

Wink to give tribute to late Roy Orbison

WINK (AP) — An Aug. 26 concert with two former bands of rocker Roy Orbison will help raise money for a tribute to the late musician, a promoter said Thursday.

Promoter Dennis Grubb of Midland said the goal is $35,000. The money would be used for a Roy Orbison Memorial Statue here, where Orbison spent his school years, said Grubb.

The daylong event will be held at the Wink High School football stadium. It will include a barbecue, a concert and a reunion of two of Orbison's bands — the Wink Westerners, and the Teen Kings, said Grubb.

Orbison died last year in Hendersonville, Tenn., after suffering a heart attack. He was 52.

Brothers drown in river after going swimming

FORT WORTH (AP) — Two young brothers who went for a swim while searching for aluminum cans to pay for video games drowned in the West Fork of Trinity River, fire department officials say.

Joshua Webster, 12, and Steven Webster, 10, had been out searching for cans when they disappeared Wednesday afternoon, their mother told authorities.

"They'd gone hunting cans the day before and come back on time, so I said they could go again," said Robecca Webster, a homemaker. "They only ever go two or three streets over. We don't know what they were doing by the river."

A search was launched when the boys hadn't returned two hours later. Helicopters, police dogs and police officers searched the neighborhood until 3 a.m. Thursday before giving up the search.

A fisherman found one body about 8 a.m. Thursday about two miles from their home and the second body was found in the water 90 minutes later near two sets of clothes, said Fire Department Lt. F.D. Tacker.

Foul play is not suspected and accidental drowning is suspected as the cause of death, but an autopsy was planned.

"Josh was a beginning swimmer, and Steve could dog paddle a little," said George Webster, their father. "We think Steve may have gotten in trouble and maybe Josh tried to save him. They were real close; they did everything together."

Report: Rural banks used to launder drug money

By JENNIFER DIXON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rural East Texas banks, restaurants and body shops are frequently used to launder drug money, while narcotics traffickers are using shrimpers' boats to move illegal drugs, according to federal prosecutors.

A report released by Attorney General Dick Thornburgh Thursday also said the opportunity for public corruption at the local level in East Texas is "clearly present."

A heavily wooded area, the East Texas terrain is also "excellent for secluded marijuana growth and especially well-suited for clandestine labs to produce methamphetamines," said the report, based on information provided by the region's U.S. attorney, Robert J. Wortham.

Federal prosecutors elsewhere in Texas also describe in the report their problems with drug traffickers. The study includes reports from all 93 U.S. attorneys nationwide.

"The existence of clandestine laboratories in the Northern District of Texas continues to be a major problem for all law enforcement agencies," said the section by U.S. Attorney Marvin Collins.

The North Texas district also has organized groups of cocaine traffickers, including those run by "American nationals, Mexican nationals, Colombians, Cubans and Jamaicans, with the Dallas-Fort Worth area serving as a transshipment point," the report said.

Crack cocaine abuse, the report said, is growing so rapidly as a street crime problem it is difficult to know how much worse it will become in the next two years, the report said.

The report said Jamaican posses in North Texas are also involved in firearms trafficking, and some possess have reportedly told their guards to shoot any law enforcement officer who raids a "stash" or "dope" house.

"It has been reported that in many cases a gun is held to a customer's head until the drug transaction is completed," the report said, predicting the legalization of parimutuel gambling will intensify Jamaican gang problems.

Although cocaine and crack are widely regarded as major drug problems in the Northern District, Collins said too few people realize the impact amphetamines and methamphetamines have in the area.

Over the past four years, law enforcement agencies have found it increasingly hard to locate and shut down speed laboratories, Collins said. He said clandestine labortories have become large scale operations, rather than the one-person operations they used to be.

"This is a drug that does not depend on some foreign imported substances," Collins said. "So there is no way you can control the production of speed by intercepting freight substances at the border."

In the Southern District, the report by U.S. Attorney Henry K. Oncken said the immediate Houston area has a high potential for money laundering activity, and that "air routes are readily available from Houston to the Grand Cayman Islands and other notorious bank secrecy countries."

A Federal Reserve analysis indicates a $1.6 billion cash surplus in the banks serviced by the San Antonio district of the Fed, with 88 percent of the surplus in banks within 15 miles of the Mexican border in the Rio Grande Valley.

"This is particularly interesting in view of the rural nature of this area and the depressed state of its economy," the report said.

In East Texas, the report said marine smuggling is a substantial problem in the Beaumont, Port Arthur and Orange urban areas.

"This includes the use of cargo ships and freighters to transport controlled substances as well as the extensive use of shrimp boats to import controlled substances," the study said.

Air smuggling is also a major problem in the region, the study said. And rural banks, the study said, are frequently used for money laundering.

"Sometimes as a result of ignorance in rural areas regarding currency transaction reporting requirements and other times because of the availability and accessibility of rural bankers, rural banks are particularly susceptible to money laundering," the study said.

The study said restaurants and other retail businesses, and body shops, are used for drug money laundering.

The study said some shrimpers' and fishermen's boats are financed by narcotics traffickers.

Women's chili cookoff planned

From Staff Reports

HOBBS, N.M. — The New Mexico Ladies Open Championship Chili Cook-off is scheduled for Saturday in Hobbs at the Brass Bottle Lounge on Bender Street and Seminole Highway "Y", with a cooks party to be held in the evening.

Open to all women at least 18 years of age, the competition will award trophies to the top 10 chili cooks, the top three New Mexico cooks, and the top three showmanship teams. Chili Appreciation Society International rules will be followed.

The cooks meeting will be held at 10 a.m. that day. All chili must be prepared from scratch at the cookoff and the cooks must have a covered cooking area. A gift bag, known in the cookoff world as a "goodie bag" will be presented to each cook. Overnight camping is permitted, but no hookups are available.

Proceeds of this cookoff will be donated to the Lea County Women's Shelter.

On Sunday, the annual Hobbs America Chili Cook-off will be held at Trusty's Sales on the Seminole Highway and Bender Boulevard. Open to both men and women, this cookoff is the yearly fundraiser for the Llano Estacado Chili Pod. Entry fee is $15 and the cooks' meeting will be held at 9 a.m. with chili turn-in time at high noon.

Mosbacher considers asking for more frequent net checks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher is considering asking a federal judge to allow shrimpers to make more frequent net checks as an alternative to using turtle excluder devices, a Texas congressman says.

Rep. Greg Laughlin, a Democrat who represents a long stretch of Texas Gulf Coast, said Mosbacher's proposal would "have some teeth" so that shrimpers abide by the rules.

U.S. District Judge Thomas Hogan has given Mosbacher until Monday to decide how he will protect endangered sea turtles from shrimpers' nets. The option Mosbacher is considering would require shrimpers to check their nets every 90 minutes.

"Certainly, if the 90-minute drag does not kill the Kemp's Ridley turtle, it needs to be enforced," Laughlin said. "The new regulation needs to have teeth in it. This is a whole lot better than for them (shrimpers) than the TEDs, on any amount of drag."

But if Mosbacher fails to meet next week's deadline, Hogan said he would go along with the National Wildlife Federation's request that the Commerce Department be compelled to enforce the TEDs regulations.

"We intend to submit regulations for publication (in the federal register) by next Monday."

Backpacking course offered to adults

From Staff Reports

A backpacking course to be offered August 9-20 by the Midland YMCA has been opened up to adults as well as youths age 12 and older.

The course will climax with a trip to White Mountain Wilderness, N.M., near Ruidoso, on Aug. 17-20.

Included will be 18 hours of instruction, an evening clinic for adults, transportation, tents, stoves and a guide. The fee is $80 per person.

Final registration will be at 9 a.m. at the Central YMCA on Big Spring Street.

For additional information, contact Patrick Dearen at 699-6103 or leave a message at Community Services YMCA, 699-0142.

Bell noted that "multi-parties" have been involved in construction along Monahans Draw to, for example, prevent flooding of roads and land. Those parties include Odessa, Midland County, and the state of Texas, Bell noted. And Bell reasoned that he was singled out merely to create "inner turmoil" within the Anderson-Gay side of the dispute.

Bell noted that Anderson and son and Ms. Gay "had a hard time keeping this (dispute) in Midland.

"And we don't want to take this to Timbuktu (for trial)," Bell said.

Bell said that a fair and impartial trial could be held in Midland or Odessa since, he reasoned, jurors are sworn to abide by the law, to consider the facts, and to be reasonable, fair and impartial.

Farmers spent more in '88 to raise crops, livestock, report says

AGRICULTURE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers spent $118.4 billion in 1988 on animals, feed, labor, machinery and other items needed to raise crops and livestock, the Agriculture Department says.

The 1988 figure represented a 7.5 percent increase over the $110.1 billion spent in 1987, the department said Wednesday in the report, "Farm Production Expenditures."

Still, the figure falls short of the record $131.8 billion farmers spent in 1981, just before the general financial crunch that stalled expansion in the nation's agricultural sector.

Annual spending by farmers reached its nadir this decade in 1986 — $106 billion — when many massively cut back their capital investments during a time of plummeting land values and rising debt burdens.

Average expenditures per farm were $54,956, an increase of $4,165 from 1987. The top 16.8 percent of farms — those with annual sales of $250,000 or more — accounted for more than 68 percent of the total expenditures.

The figures suggest that raising livestock is a big-time investment.

Feed was the highest single cost item at $17.9 billion in 1988, accounting for 15.1 percent of total costs. The previous year, feed cost $14.9 billion and accounted for 13.5 percent of expenses, the highest single expense item that year as well.

The livestock and poultry that devour that feed cost $13.6 billion, accounted for 11.5 percent of the total. The previous year, the cattle, swine and poultry cost $10.7 billion, accounting for 9.7 percent of the total.

Farmers bought $3.9 billion worth of agricultural chemicals in 1988, about the same amount and percentage as the previous year; about the same percentage and dollar amount of fertilizer, lime and soil conditioners, $6.9 billion worth; and the same percentage and dollar amount of seeds and plants, 3.7 billion. Those items accounted for 12.3 percent of the total.

The machinery to do farm work cost $11.5 billion, for 9.7 percent of total expenses, up from $10.9 billion.

A composite category — farm services, including rent, — was the largest, $24.6 billion or 21 percent of the nation's production expenses. That's up from $24 billion in 1987.

That category includes cash and share rent, vet supplies and services, marketing and storage expenses, insurance, utilities, leasing and transportation.

The only expenses to fall were interest, which decreased 3.7 percent to $8.37 billion, and building and fencing, which fell 10.3 percent to $2.23 billion.

The analysis dealt only with production expenditures and did not include figures for net income or profits.

Statistics recorder makes farming count

AMARILLO (AP) — Mary Borchardt, a Texas Agricultural Statistics Service field enumerator, spends her days with farmers, gathering the information needed to estimate production figures for the Texas Panhandle.

"Everybody in every business benefits from current information about their industry," Ms. Borchardt said. "Good or bad, at least you're not in the dark about it."

Ms. Borchardt gathers agricultural information on livestock and crop production through telephone interviews, field sampling both before and following harvest, and personal interviews.

Producers are picked at random by computers to give an unbiased, representative sample of the area, she said, often making her job a challenge because once she finds the operator, he has to be willing to talk.

"A lot of farmers feel that their business is confidential information," she said. "It's not always easy to find someone who is cooperative and will help. But in order to do this job you have to find them."

This year Ms. Borchardt, after just 2½ years in the business, was awarded a Certificate of Merit for her outstanding performance as a field enumerator. She was cited for her low rate of farmer refusals.

"It's really hard to say why I have so few farmers refuse to help me," she said. "A lot of it's just luck. Sometimes I get a list and everyone will talk to me. Other times, they've had bad experiences or think the reports the government puts out will hurt them."

Ms. Borchardt said some farmers think the reports negatively affect the prices of their commodities. And many don't use the information provided by the sampling and therefore can't see the importance in it.

"I'd think it would give them information on how many acres of a crop to plant," she said. "And if there's one crop already being planted heavily, they might want to go with an alternative crop that would still have a fairly good payback."

Texas Agricultural Statistics Service is a service agency, Ms. Borchardt said, providing information to anyone free of charge. Reports are published and can be sent directly to individuals if they request them.

In December and January, Ms. Borchardt spends much of her time conducting telephone surveys.

"In December I contacted 76 farmers in nine days," she said. "That's hard to do. It's hard to find farmers, except at night. We're talking big telephone bills."

Personal interviews are conducted with farmers and ranchers whose property was randomly chosen by computer. Ms. Borchardt said in those cases she's given an aerial photograph and must find the current operator to question him about his position.

When producers can't be reached through telephone interviews, they are often assigned to Ms. Borchardt for tracking down.

"When they can't find someone, they send us out," she said. "Those people are picked by computer so we have to find them to be able to get objective, unbiased data."

Ms. Borchardt also takes field samples to gather current information for estimates of statewide production. She currently takes samples on wheat and cotton crops, and beginning in 1990, will start doing milo fields.

To gather a sample, Ms. Borchardt marks off a small plot from the field, and begins counting plants monthly from the time they emerge until harvest. And heads are clipped and sent to a central research lab in Illinois for further data.

After harvest, a "gleaning sample" is taken to determine harvest loss.

Natural controls can help eliminate gardening pests

Home gardeners can cut down on pesticide use with a few simple changes in cultural practices that take advantage of natural controls.

Kiker

You don't have to know all the available alternatives for controlling pests without chemical pesticides. One of the easiest ways to start is by selecting disease-resistant varieties for planting. When seeding direct, always use good quality, certified seed.

Other methods of control involve altering cultural practices. For example, maintaining slightly acid soil (around ph 6.5) is not only good for the vegetables, but provides a good environment for earth worms and microorganisms that help the soil.

Fertilizer that is supplemented with organic matter or compost helps assure that all trace elements are present.

Adding organic matter feeds the soil, not just the plant. A good soil environment for all plant roots results in healthier flowers and vegetables.

Crop rotation is another natural pest control measure. If you plant related crops on the same site only once every three to four years, pest populations have trouble getting a foothold.

Water management is another cultural practice that can help control pests and disease. Plant on raised beds with furrows in between to provide good surface drainage when more than an inch of rain falls.

Placing mulch around the base of the plants will not only help conserve water, but will cut down on soil splash that can put disease in contact with the crop. However, mulches also can harbor insects when more than one inch thick.

By watering in the morning so plants have time to dry before the cool evening, gardeners can cut down on the change of disease. Drip irrigation prevents foliage from getting water at all, and drip uses less water than traditional sprinkler or furrow irrigation methods.

If plants do become infected or diseased, remove all damaged or affected material before the problem spreads and dispose of severely diseased plants before they contaminate the whole crop. Finally, take advantage of the biological control already in the garden by learning to identify helpful insects and encouraging their growth.

One of the best ways to learn natural control practices is to pay close attention to what is going on in the garden and spot problems early.

Chantal misses dry areas, director says

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Hurricane Chantal stirred up the weather along the upper coast and in eastern and central Texas, but missed the areas that needed rain most, said Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, Texas Agricultural Extension Service director.

Carpenter said that although drought still impacts Coastal Bend, southern, southwestern and western counties, Chantal added more rain to an already damp southeast Texas.

FAMILY MATTERS

'Dream house' too expensive

By JIM MAY

May

DEAR FAMILY: I just had to write you about another problem that you didn't talk about in your answer to the woman whose husband spent all their money. My husband isn't like that at all. He lost his job almost 18 months but he has been doing contract work ever since. I was able to go back to teaching. Things have been hard but not impossible.

The problem is our house. We bought the "dream house" back in 1982 when we first moved to Midland and my husband had a great job. We paid too much by today's standards, but everything was going up then. We have had the house on the market for over a year now. We really can't afford the house anymore. It seems like we are working just to support the house. We have reduced the price several times, we've changed realtors, we've "neutralized" the inside, we've done everything the realtors have suggested and we still can't sell it. Even if we did sell it now, we would lose everything that we put into it plus another $6,000.

We've both grown to hate the house. We could make it without the house payments. Our mortgage company is (name) from Houston and they are totally unsympathetic and unwilling to do anything to help us. This is just a very depressing situation for us. I don't really have a question. I do feel some better just writing this letter. Maybe there are other people out there who are having the same experience. I just long for the day that this nightmare is over. TIRED

DEAR TIRED: Many families are in the same situation you are.

A home is typically a couple's largest single investment. Many people, especially in Texas, grew up when the real estate market for home values was constantly increasing, and losing money on a home was almost impossible.

Unfortunately that all changed. You and your husband experienced the worst of that change.

A significant financial loss is just like losing a member of the family — I encourage you and your husband to grieve your loss.

You are survivors. You are making things work. I hope you both can take pride in the fact that you are successfully enduring a financial disaster beyond your control.

DEAR FAMILY: My daughter-in-law has been seeing a counselor because of some problems that she had with her parents. I have asked my son what her problems are, but all he has told me is that she didn't have a "normal" childhood. I asked if he meant normal like his and he said no.

I was so shocked that I didn't ask him what he meant. I still don't know what he meant. I think that his father and I provided a totally normal home for him and his sister. It wasn't perfect, but what is? What I want to know is what he meant by "normal?" IN THE DARK

DEAR IN THE DARK: Defining a "normal" home is difficult. I have found it easier to draw the distinction between "functional" and "dysfunctional" homes.

A functional home has been defined as one that promotes the children's sense of well-being, is relatively consistent, somewhat predictable, minimally arbitrary, and only occasionally chaotic (Dr. Herbert Gravitz, clinical psychologist).

In a functional home, children can trust and depend on the parents. The children have rules to follow, but do not live in fear. The parents are physically and emotionally available to the children.

I encourage you to read John Bradshaw's book, "The Family." He addresses issues of functioning (or dysfunctioning) families in a positive manner.

I also encourage you to have a talk with your son about his observations of his childhood. It is very important to come to some form of closure on childhood issues.

If he has some issues associated with his childhood, take the risk of finding out what those issues are. The results may be painful, but we grow through pain.

Woman teaches others how to utilize their intuition

By MARLENE AIG

PLEASANTVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — If you already know what this story is about, you probably don't need to study under Nancy Rosanoff.

Rosanoff has made a career of teaching people how to tap their intuition, their sixth sense.

"Not everyone's going to be a psychic," she says, "but everyone has some intuitive ability."

Rosanoff says that intuition, which used to be called witchcraft, can be turned into a valuable tool for businessmen, writers, parents and almost anyone willing to let their "inner voice" speak.

"People are afraid of their intuitive ability," she says. "They think if they listen to their intuition, they'll do something dramatic or change their lives and they'll be making a huge mistake."

The mistake, Rosanoff says, is made by those who ignore gut feelings. She offers her own experience as a case in point.

Trained as a pianist, she developed a severe case of eczema at age 22 which made playing the piano painful. Visits to doctors and dermatologists were unsuccessful, but a psychic advised her that she was using the skin disease as a fear of expressing creativity.

Once she accepted that, she says, she began to heal.

"But I thought there had to be something here other people should know," says Rosanoff, a 38-year-old mother of two and author of "Intuition Workout." Intuition has long been considered the province of women, who have been allowed more leeway culturally, Rosanoff says. But she says intuition is not feminine. Regardless of gender, intuition is "being in tune with emotions and being allowed to explore it."

She and her husband, John Krysko, a financial planner, say they are so attuned to each other that each knows when the other is going to call.

Her aim, she says, is for people to accept what feels like a "sense of rightness" about intuition and to trust it enough to overcome fear or desire when they intrude.

Married life is complicated

By DAVID GRIMES
New York Times News Service

Divorce is a terrible problem in this country, and I think a lot of the breakups occur because men and women think married life consists entirely of three things: 1) Sex, 2) Recovering from sex, and 3) Getting ready for more sex.

Unfortunately, there is more to married life than sex.

Indeed, during the course of a 10-year marriage, you and your spouse will probably spend more time ripping the little cardboard inserts out of your magazines than you will spend doing that other stuff.

I'm convinced that marriages would be stronger (assuming anyone went through with it) if prospective husbands and wives had a better idea what was in store for them.

To this end, I think what we need is a College of Life After Marriage where prospective husbands and wives can go to learn the idiosyncracies of the opposite sex.

Course offerings would include:

■ How to Recognize Your Wife's New Hairdo: An introductory course in which husbands-to-be study appropriate and inappropriate ways to comment on their wife's new 'do.

Appropriate comment: "It makes you look thinner."

Inappropriate comment: "AAAAEEEEIIII!!!!!"

■ Introduction to Laundry (men only): Study of unfamiliar laundry room concepts such as bleach, fabric softener, separating colors from whites, folding and why three days is too long to leave shirts in the dryer.

■ Sports Worship (women only) — Theology course covering the four major faiths: Football, Baseball, Basketball and Hockey.

Graduate level coursework available for students wishing to know more about golf, tennis, bowling, Canadian rules football and monster truck competitions.

■ Children: Put them off indefinitely or forget them altogether? Take either side of the issue in this controversial debate class.

■ Dirt: Why Wives Can See It And Husbands Can't — If time permits, instructor will also examine Why Women Know Where Everything Is While Husbands Have Trouble Locating Major Appliances.

■ Houseguests and Pesticides: Safe, fun eradication techniques.

■ The Joys of Two TVs: When "All My Children" is on at the same time that ESPN is broadcasting the world's arm-wrestling semifinals live from Las Vegas, something's got to give.

■ Wallpaper: Just Say No: Counseling for the chronic do-it-yourselfer.

■ Newspapers and Breakfast Conversation: How to say "um," "uh-huh" and "mmmhmmm" like you really mean it.

Banks' names change too often

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

Is it my imagination or are the names of stores and banks changing every week?

I wrote a check to a grocery store the other day and the cashier smiled and said, "That's our old name. We're part of a chain now."

I said, "That's OK, the check I'm writing is on the old name of my bank, which changed its name a month ago."

Remember when you always needed a point of reference to recall the year your children were born?

It was always something like, "Jeff was born the year we paid the freezer off," or, "Sarah came just before we closed in the patio."

Well, now it's, "Let's see, Michael was born just before the hostile takeover of RCA by General Electric." Or, "Wendy didn't come along until the summer that Goldwaters department store became Robinson's."

I don't pretend to know the ins and outs of corporate raiding, mergers and acquisitions. All I know is that banks are driving me nuts. They change their names, their logos and their spokespersons.

After watching a TV commercial for the First Bank of Federal National Statesmen, I said to my husband, "That sounds like a great bank. Maybe we should put our money there."

He said, "We already have our money there. It used to be called the First Premier Bank of the Great Plains."

"What was it before that?" I asked.

"A convenience store," he said.

Frankly, I'll be glad when we finally end up with "Trump" on everything with a number behind it. At least I won't get stuck with a stack of blank checks, good for nothing but scratch pads.

Loretta Silkie, a reader from Harrison, N.J., is sick of it, too.

She threw an envelope in the wastebasket from Westminster Bank, thinking it was an advertisement from England. It turns out it was her bank changing names again.

"I have reached a point," she wrote, "where I can't recall the names of any of my banks, and someday I shall have to scan the newspapers to see if there are some dormant accounts lying about in some bank that I won't recognize because it's changed titles 10 times." (Don't count on it, Loretta.)

She said she wouldn't be surprised if people who save their money in the First Sealy Mattress change its name to First Serta Savings, just to be trendy.

It's a mystery how bank pens have a greater record for longevity than the financial institutions in which they're found. It's not unusual to see a sign in a bank window reading, "A tradition since 1984."

The only sure thing in all of this is that 10, yea 20, years from now, you can count on a gift from my mother in a Goldwaters box!

Time heals homesickness for first-time campers

NEW HYDE PARK, N.Y. (AP) — There are two types of homesick campers: Those who have fun during the day but get teary at night and those who won't eat or take part in any camp activities.

The child who develops fears at night will probably make an excellent adjustment, says Dr. Bruce Bogard, but the one who is withdrawn may not be ready for an extended time away from home.

No matter how homesick a child, Bogard warns that the worst scenario would be for a parent to rush in and take him from camp. This, he says, could set up a lifetime pattern of running away from uncomfortable situations. Rather, parents should express understanding of the child's predicament, acknowledge his feelings and try to help him feel more capable.

Bogard is director of outpatient services of Schneider Children's Hospital at Long Island Jewish Medical Center.

Sleep-away camp offers an excellent opportunity for children to learn how well they can manage without their parents, says Bogard, but it can also produce anxieties. Children often feel that without parents to care for them they cannot survive. Children also often feel guilty because they have left their parents behind.

"Let the child know that you have confidence in his-her ability to cope," says Bogard.

Bogard recommends discussing a child's homesickness with the camp director and asking that the child receive a little more attention for a while from counselors.

If all else fails and you decide to remove a child from camp, do not label him a failure. Either the child was not ready for camp, or the camp was not the right one for him.

Parents enjoy child-free trips

Associated Press

Parents don't have to suffer separation anxiety when they take a vacation without the children, provided the children are the right age for the experience.

Dr. Benjamim Spock, in his parenting column in a recent issue of Redbook, writes that a week away from the children can give parents, especially overworked mothers, a much-needed rest.

"As strange as it may seem," Spock wrote, "I have found that some mothers crave a vacation most when their first baby is only 2 or 3 months old.

"Fortunately," he wrote, "taking such a break is not out of the question for new parents, since babies before the age of 3 months do not appear to distinguish sharply between familiar and unfamiliar caregivers."

He did suggest vacationing parents either use a familiar caregiver or hire a sitter who can stay in the home a few days before the parents leave and spend time with the baby.

In dealing with a child over the age of 3 months, it is important to consider the psychological states through which children pass.

"During the 3-to-5 month period," he wrote, "we don't yet know how a long-term separation affects babies, so we can't say it's harmless."

By the age of 5 months, babies are able to distinguish between regular caregivers (mother, father or babysitter) and other people, and they show an uneasiness or fear with strangers.

Between the ages of 5 months and a year-and-a-half, Spock wrote, the mother-child bond becomes so strong babies are likely to become depressed if their mothers are absent for longer than a day. They are visibly sad, they cry more than usual and have poor appetites.

Between 1½ and 3 years, a child begins to develop a taste for independence from his parents but is still keenly dependent on them, particularly his mother. He is torn between wanting to explore by himself and wanting to remain safely at her side. If she is gone longer than a day at a time, he worries she may not return and his security can be undermined.

"Given the serious effects of separation anxiety, I would recommend parents not leave an infant or toddler at home unless there is a regular sitter with whom the child is very familiar," Spock wrote.

If parents have no regular sitter and are willing to risk separation anxiety, Spock urged that whoever will be taking care of the child should live in the house at least two weeks before the parents' departure.

"It isn't until children are at least 3 years old that they are equipped to handle a separation of a week or two from their parents," Spock wrote. "By age 3, most children are able to verbally communicate and they have a much better sense of time."

Family of therapists provides counseling for families

By VINOD CHHABRA
Hearst News Service

ALBANY, N.Y. — Perhaps it happened again yesterday: A trivial disagreement turned into a painful family argument. All you know is that it was another cloud in your day, and you know there will be more. Another reason why your life together "works," but isn't fun anymore. Another seed of divorce.

Wake up and smell the coffee, Mr. and Mrs. Cleaver! The Perfect Family doesn't exist. Just ask the Schwebels.

All five of them — Andrew, Bernice, Carol, Milton and Robert — a family of therapists, have spent years counseling families and individuals in personal crises, and have now teamed up to author "A Guide to a Happier Family: Overcoming the Anger, Frustration and Boredom that Destroy Family Life."

It's a straightforward book, heavy on common sense and the simple message that problems are the rule, not the exception, in any family's life.

"Differences are inevitable whenever two or more people live together, yet our society considers this to be the exception," says Milton Schwebel, a psychotherapist and psychology professor at Rutgers University in New Jersey.

Trivial concerns with our loved ones, when strung together, make up our family lives. Conflict is inevitable, but the way in which a couple deals with it is not.

Small conflicts, left unresolved, contribute to the breakdown of the entire family. And from there the problem spreads — single parenthood, child abuse, poverty, a future molded by bitterness and frustration seemingly beyond repair.

All too frequently, the solutions are as simple as the trivial conflicts that began the crisis, the Schwebels say. The answer doesn't lie in a psychiatrist's den, but in your own analysis of exactly how and why you feel discontent, bored and unhappy with family life. The hows and whys are the basis of the Schwebels' book.

"We try not to hit anyone over the head with advice," says Milton, "but merely urge you to view life a bit more philosophically. Life is a drama, and everyone has a script. Fortunately, unlike Hamlet, that script can be changed — it's up to you to make the changes with a bit of cooperation, understanding and adjustments. If a family can understand what's tearing it apart, it has the ability to bring it together."

The pressures threatening to rip the American family apart have never been greater, the Schwebels add.

They rattle off the social and economic pressures: Two wage-earner families strapped for time; the lack of national child, elderly and health care programs, which are considered basic rights for citizens in many industrialized countries.

The Schwebels say America's stingy vacation time and absence of free higher education are equally scandalous.

A close American family — "one which, even for a few minutes a day, comes together for something as basic as dinner, is, sadly, an aberration." Children progress to adulthood barely tolerating their aging parents who, in turn, dismiss them as "kids."

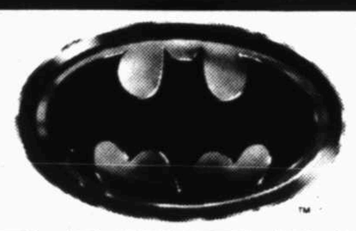

Family projects (be it as simple as researching and planning a vacation), staying in touch, spending more quality time, or using common sense such as for a physical or psychological escape, to reduce tension by reducing the amount of time spent together, is some of what the Schwebels recommend.

And, most important, abandon the idea that everybody else is having fun, and you're not.

"Perfection doesn't exist," says Milton, "and it definitely doesn't in marriage. As long you dream of a happy family life, you know it's possible."

DEAR ABBY

Parents' lending principle is in children's best interest

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: While going through some files, my husband ran across this copy of a letter we sent to our children seven years ago. Since that time they have all married and purchased their own homes, without any help from us. He thought you might be interested in seeing this and knowing that it has worked well for our family. — ROSE E. STERVINOU, ROCKWALL, TEXAS

TO: Jeannine
Greg Michelle
Renee
FROM: Mom and Dad
DATE: Feb. 22, 1982
SUBJECT: MONEY

Since the subject of loaning money has come up from at least half of you this week, we decided we would let you know our feelings about this.

We will not loan any of you money except in the case of a bona fide emergency (severe illness, accident, etc.). Each of you has been blessed with intelligence, good health, and the ability to earn a living. What you choose to do with your time and money is up to you.

This decision stems from what we think is "common sense," and observing how others have handled this situation and the problems that can occur when, for one reason or another, the money is not repaid. It causes hard feelings between parent and son/daughter and between siblings.

This probably puts us somewhere between minus 10 and 0 on your popularity scale, but we feel this is the best thing for our family. We love each of you dearly and want to do for you what we think will benefit you most in your lifetime.

DEAR ROSE: Thanks for sharing a sensible, no-nonsense idea.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem that you may feel is too trivial to print, but I'm hoping your love of animals will prevail.

Our family is moving nearly 3,000 miles cross-country, and our problem is our cat. He gets deathly sick while riding in a car — even a 15-mile trip to the vet is a terrible experience for him. I'm not sure if it's the motion, or just plain claustrophobia. The tranquilizers prescribed by the vet make him sick.

I've tried covering his carrier to keep him from seeing out. I've tried putting butter on his paws so he would be preoccupied with lapping it off. I've tried taking him for short rides (a couple of miles each day) to get him accustomed to riding. No luck.

He cannot travel in the carrier. He broke his teeth biting on the door of the metal carrier. (That's when I began to think he might be claustrophobic.)

Abby, this cat is 6 years old and is truly our baby. He's strictly an indoor cat; he never goes outside and is afraid of anything new, so I wouldn't even consider flying him in a plane. I know there are cat psychologists, but none within 200 or 300 miles of our tiny town.

Has anyone had experience with a cat traveling a long distance in a motor home? Perhaps the larger area would make a difference? If there are any cat lovers out there with any ideas, please help. I am desperate for suggestions. — CAT LOVER IN MAINE

DEAR CAT LOVER: Your vet should be able to provide you with a tranquilizer your cat can tolerate. And if there are any cat lovers out there who have successfully handled this problem, I hope they'll write to me.

DEAR ABBY: Re those TV viewers who "mute" the commercials: Will you please tell me why the commercials have to be so much louder than the regular program? — ANNOYED IN SWEETWATER, TEXAS

DEAR ANNOYED: Because the sponsors want to be sure the viewers can hear the commercials while they're running to the fridge.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the letter signed "ANYWHERE, USA," regarding courtesy to bicycle riders.

I will gladly give these people the respect I give to automobile drivers when these bicycle riders:

1) Obey the same rules of the road as drivers (i.e., no riding through stop signs, red lights, etc.)

2) Stop weaving into the path of my car.

3) Stop making turns or changing lanes without signaling or checking to see if the way is clear.

4) Start yielding the right-of-way to those who deserve it.

I'm sick and tired of listening to bicycle riders complain about how motorists are always trying to run them off the road. Law-abiding bicycle riders are few and far between. Respect is a two-way street.

The same goes for motorcycle riders! — TICKED-OFF MOTORIST

These lawyers don't object to courting fun

By KILEY ARMSTRONG

NEW YORK (AP) — The four Manhattan lawyers chanted, shrieked and slapped themselves. Not their usual work-day behavior.

But they were on a stage, performing Wednesday night in a festival called Serious Fun at the usually serious Alice Tully Hall.

The piece by performance artist and choreographer Ann Carlson was called "Sloss, Kerr, Rosenberg & Moore" — for John, Chet, Scott and Tom, the real-life lawyers who star in it.

In the piece, a work of performance art, Ms. Carlson examines the lives of lawyers.

"I think this is our 15 minutes of fame," said Sloss, an entertainment lawyer.

"I never really thought I'd be appearing at Lincoln Center onstage," said Moore, a corporate lawyer, before the big moment. "My God, this is really something."

Their feet firmly grounded in an invisible box, the lawyers do dance-like interpretations, alternately frenzied, fidgeting and mellow. They call a cab, go to the beach, ride a roller coaster and see their suits smudged by puppies.

At one point, each lawyer recites something he learned in childhood: his address, a prayer, the months of the year.

Ms. Carlson's life gets equal time, when Rosenberg points accusingly at the audience and yells, "You're the biggest baby in this room!"

"It happened to me in the second grade; it was traumatic," Ms. Carlson said.

At the end, "their lawyerishness sort of drops away," said Ms. Carlson. They take rose petals out of their breast pockets, sniff them and drop them onto the floor. They lunge out of their box and notice each other.

"I have friends in the audience tonight — but I was somewhat selective about the people I notified," said Moore. "Some people think it's kind of strange or weird. I've gotten a little bit of ribbing. But most people are very positive."

The program of works by 10 contemporary dance or performance companies also was highlighted by the Second Hand Dance Company's "Clackers," in which a precision dance trio kicked percussion instruments strapped to their derrieres, and "3B49," a whimsical dance portrayal of a taxi driver and passenger by Blondell Cummings and Tom Thayer.

The lawyers were "discovered" in 1985.

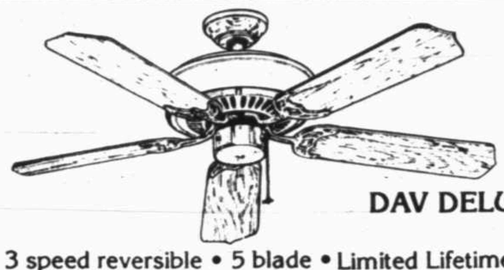

Ms. Carlson, living near Wall Street, noticed "the visual climate around me was mostly three-piece suits and briefcases. I had this dream where these four men in suits had their shoes glued to the floor."

She asked Kerr, a civil litigator and former high school classmate from Park Ridge, Ill., to bring over three lawyer buddies to talk about themselves and experiment with dance. She also spent time at a law firm, observing lawyers' movements and attitudes.

What evolved was a 9-minute work with lawyers who "look like they're running around and getting nowhere."

"It's a very frenetic piece, reflective of the way we often work," said Kerr. "We spend little time in the piece communicating with each other."

Reds play for one, wind up with 14

By HAL McCOY
Cox News Service

CINCINNATI — The irony was that Cincinnati Manager Pete Rose was playing for one run in the first inning Thursday afternoon in Riverfront Stadium.

Just one, Mr. Baseball god, just one.

Houston starter Jim Clancy walked leadoff hitter Mano Duncan and Rose, realizing his team sometimes strings zeros across the scoreboard like popcorn hanging on a Christmas tree, made a decision.

"I bunted my second hitter of the game and I usually don't do that. I was just trying to get ahead to relax my pitcher ... and look what happened," Rose said.

WHAT HAPPENED? Total carnage. Massive destruction. The Reds littered the record books in an 18-2 rout of the Houston Astros, scoring 14 runs in the first inning, 13 more than what would have satisfied their manager.

— They set a major league record with 16 hits.

— They set a major league record with 12 singles.

— They set a major league record when seven players had two hits in an inning (Luis Quinones, Eric Davis, Ken Griffey, Rolando Roomes, Todd Benzinger, Jeff Reed and Ron Oester).

— They came within two runs of a major league record for most runs in one inning.

Rose's pitcher, Tom Browning, was sitting in the tunnel behind the dugout, trying to keep cool when Duncan walked.

"I remember Pete telling Quinones to bunt Duncan over," Browning said. "And the floodgates opened."

The Reds splattered 26 hits here, there and everywhere.

Quinones bunted, as instructed, and beat it out for a hit. Six more hits followed before Browning, the ninth hitter, made an out.

After Browning's out, the Reds cracked a record nine straight hits. They led 14-0 on 16 hits and had the bases loaded with one out.

"WE kept the rally going so quickly it never sunk in what we were doing," said Benzinger, one of three Reds with four hits (Roomes and Reed were the others). "As soon as Pete said in the dugout, 'Nobody ever got 16 hits in one-third of an inning,' we woke up and made two quick outs," Benzinger said.

Houston's Clancy didn't retire anybody, giving up a walk and six hits, including Griffey's three-run homer.

"I've never seen anything like that," Houston Manager Art Howe said. "We threw 63 pitches before we got an out."

When Howe removed Clancy, he brought in Bob Forsch, who gave up a major league record nine straight hits as the first inning continued, continued and continued.

Forsch, in fact, finished the game, giving up 10 runs and 18 hits.

At one point, Howe walked to the mound and told Forsch, "I'm sorry about this, buddy, but I gotta leave you out here."

The second-place Astros open a three-game series against the first-place Giants in San Francisco tonight, so Howe was saving his pitching staff.

"Everything they hit dropped in or found holes," Forsch said. "Sometimes it's better to be lucky than good. You don't like to give up all those runs, but you bite the bullet and don't hang your head."

WHILE Forsch bit the bullets, the Reds sprayed bullets around Riverfront.

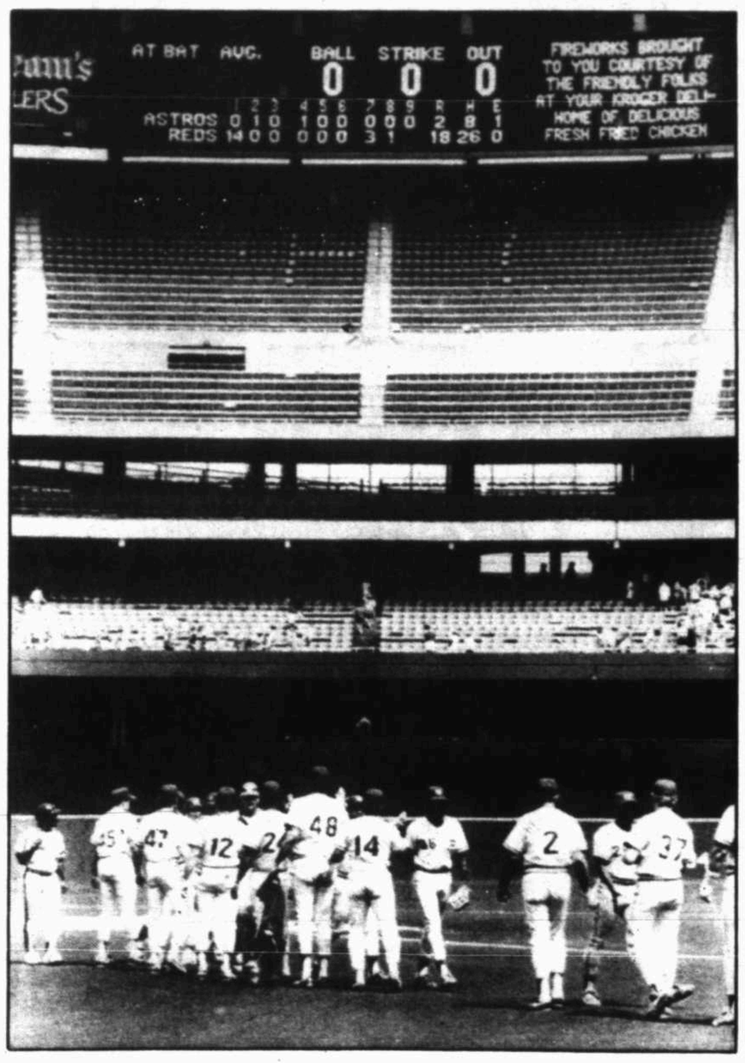

After Duncan's leadoff walk, Quinones bunted, as instructed, and beat it out for a single. Quinones singled later in the inning and came up a third time with a chance to become baseball's first man to hit safely three times in one inning.

But he ended it, 38 minutes after it began, with a fly to right.

Davis singled for a run and Griffey crashed his three-run homer to make it 4-0.

Roomes and Benzinger singled and when Reed singled home Roomes, Benzinger stopped at second as Howe changed pitchers.

"I was standing on second talking to their shortstop (Rafael Ramirez), Benzinger said. "And it was only 5-0 then. I remember looking at the clock once and it was 12:55. I said, 'This is a long inning.' And it didn't end until 1:18."

Angels return home for El Paso Diablos

From Staff Reports

Midland's Angels will open a 10-game homestand 7 p.m. tonight at Angel Stadium with David Graybill, 2-3, getting the starting assignment against the El Paso Diablos, one of two in-hot-pursuit challengers.

Wichita, the other, will follow the Diablos into Midland next week and then the Angels travel to El Paso and Wichita. In these 20 games, the Texas League West second half pennant could be decided.

Midland returns from a 2-3 road trip to San Antonio, a trip that could easily have been 5-0 had the Angels been able to hang on to late inning leads in the first three games of the series.

The Halos eked out a 5-4 victory in the finale against the Missions with Scott Lewis winning his 10th and Tim Burcham picking up a save while John Orton's triple drove in Mark Howie, on with a single, with the tying run and then Gary DiSarcina sac fly plated the deciding run.

Royals zap Jays; Rangers lose, 9-6

TORONTO (AP) — Tom Gordon, 12-5, pitched a three-hitter for his first career shutout and complete game, while Danny Tartabull went 3-for-4 with an RBI single in the Kansas City Royals' 5-0 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays Thursday night.

Fred McGriff singled in the second and doubled in the eighth and Kelly Gruber singled in the seventh to account for the only hits off Gordon.

Jimmy Key, 7-13, lost his seventh straight decision.

Tartabull led off the fourth with a single, the first hit off Key, and Pat Tabler followed with a double. Bob Boone then drove in Tartabull with a sacrifice fly for a 1-0 lead.

George Brett's RBI grounder and Tartabull's RBI single off reliever Frank Wills put the Royals ahead 3-0 in the fifth.

Tigers 9, Rangers 6

DETROIT — Alan Trammell's second RBI single broke a tie in the eighth inning and the Detroit Tigers went on to beat Texas in a game that saw each team issue eight walks.

Mike Henneman, 8-4, worked the last 2 2-3 innings for the win. Cecilio Guante, 5-5, was the loser.

Mike Heath started the eighth with a single and Gary Pettis walked. After Kenny Rogers relieved Guante with a 2-0 count on Trammell, Rogers got the count to 3-2 before Trammell singled, scoring Heath with the go-ahead run.

Pinch-hitter Tracy Jones' two-run single completed the scoring for the Tigers, who overcame a 3-1 deficit with five runs in the sixth inning before the Rangers tied it 6-6 on Julio Franco's three-run homer in the seventh.

Indians 4, Red Sox 2

BOSTON — Rod Nichols beat Boston for the second time in a week and Cory Snyder drove in two runs with a bases-loaded single, leading the Cleveland Indians over the Red Sox.

Nichols, 2-1, who edged the Red Sox 2-1 in Cleveland last Friday, gave up 10 hits in seven-plus innings, including Nick Esasky's two-run homer in the eighth. Nichols earned his third major league victory when Doug Jones got the last six outs for his 25th save.

In the third, with runners on second and third, Joe Carter was walked intentionally, but the strategy backfired as Snyder, starting his second game since coming off the disabled list July 30, singled off the left field wall.

Hershiser thwarts Giants, again

Associated Press

All Russ Swan had to do in his major-league debut was beat Orel Hershiser. He didn't.

Hershiser beat San Francisco for the 15th time in 19 career decisions, leading Los Angeles past the injury-plagued Giants and Swan 6-3 at Dodger Stadium despite Kevin Mitchell's three-run homer, his 34th.

Despite the loss, the first-place Giants maintained a one-game lead over Houston in the National League West.

Eddie Murray sparked a four-run fourth inning with a two-run triple and Mike Marshall capped the rally with a two-run homer off Swan as the Dodgers beat their longtime rival for the second straight game.

With the Dodgers trailing 3-1, Willie Randolph led off the fourth with a walk from Swan.

Second baseman Ken Oberkfell booted Mickey Hatcher's grounder for his second error of the game and Murray tied the score with his first NL triple, only the 26th of his 13-year career. Marshall then hit Swan's 0-2 pitch into the left-field seats for his seventh homer.

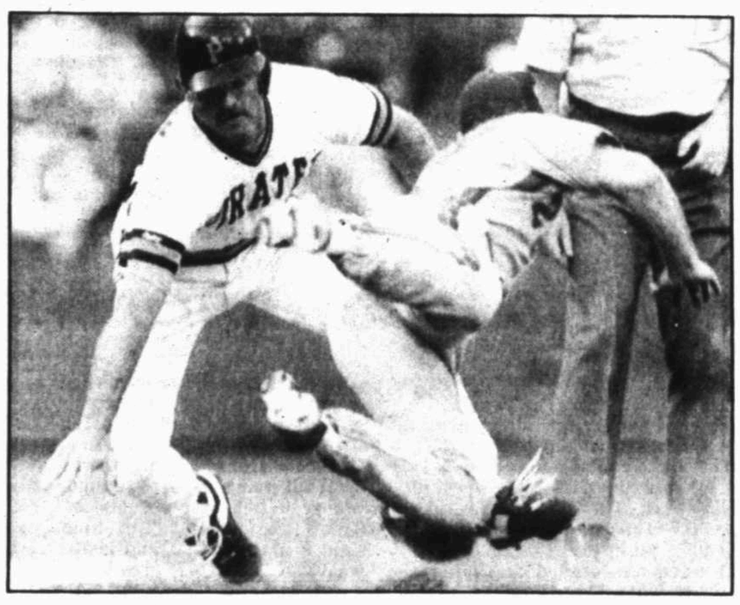

Swan, the 12th pitcher to start a game this season for the Giants, allowed five hits and three earned runs over five-plus innings.

Swan, 25, was called up from Phoenix of the Pacific Coast League late Wednesday night after lefthander Atlee Hammaker went on the 21-day disabled list with a knee injury. The Giants are also without starters Rick Reuschel, Mike Krukow and Scott Garrelts.

Reds 18, Astros 2

Cincinnati set a major-league record with 16 hits during a 14-run first inning and routed Houston at Riverfront Stadium. The first inning took 38 minutes to play, and then it took the statisticians almost as long to figure out the records.

Seven Reds had two hits off starter Jim Clancy and reliever Bob Forsch in the first, breaking a century-old record. The previous record for most batters with two hits in an inning was set by Chicago against Detroit in 1883.

AP Laserphoto

Pirates Glenn Wilson tries to slip past Montreal's hurtling third baseman Tim Wallace on an attempted steal. Wallach made the tag.

Cardinals 6, Mets 5

Tom Pagnozzi's run-scoring single broke a sixth-inning tie and Milt Thompson matched his career high with four RBIs as St. Louis beat New York at Busch Stadium.

Pagnozzi, a reserve catcher hitting just .167 in 66 at-bats this season, lined a two-out run-scoring single in the sixth inning off reliever Jeff Musselman, who lost his NL debut.

Thompson hit a three-run home run, his third, in the third inning and had a run-scoring groundout in the first. Terry Pendleton had a solo homer for the Cardinals.

Dan Quisenberry, 3-1, got the last out in the sixth for the victory. Ken Dayley, the last of five St. Louis pitchers, got the final out for his eighth save. Kevin Elster hit a three-run home run, his fifth, to cap a four-run second for New York.

Cubs 2, Phillies 0

Greg Maddux, Mitch Williams and Les Lancaster combined on a six-hitter for Chicago's eighth shutout, leading the Cubs past Philadelphia at Veterans Stadium.

Williams relieved Maddux, 12-8, with one out and runners on first and third in the seventh inning. He struck out Len Dykstra and got Tom Herr to fly out.

Lancaster pitched the final 1 1-3 innings for his third save, securing Maddox's fifth victory in his last six starts. It was the 11th time the Phillies have been blanked this season.

Damon Berryhill hit his fifth homer leading off the fourth inning to give the Cubs a 2-0 lead.

Padres 6, Braves 5

Tony Gwynn helped visiting San Diego complete a three-game sweep with two-run scoring singles as the Padres beat slumping All-Star John Smoltz and Atlanta.

Gwynn's single broke a 4-4 tie in the fourth, scoring Bip Roberts, who had doubled and advanced to third on an infield grounder.

Gwynn's first-inning single also scored Roberts, who had walked and advanced to third on Roberto Alomar's single. Gwynn was 3-for-5 and raised his average to .337, second in the NL.

Smoltz, 11-9, lost his third decision in a row since the All-Star Game. He allowed six runs and 11 hits in seven innings, walking four. Smoltz has pitched at least seven innings in 16 of his last 18 games.

Pirates 1, Expos 0

Pinch-hitter Benny Distefano's run-scoring single with two outs in the 12th inning broke a scoreless tie and lifted Pittsburgh past Montreal at Three Rivers Stadium, cutting the Expos' lead over Chicago in the NL East to two games.

The victory broke a six-game Pirates' losing streak, and enabled Pittsburgh to avert a four-game sweep by the Expos.

Andy McGaffigan, 3-5, the Expos' fourth pitcher, retired the first two batters in the 12th before Rafael Belliard singled to left. Belliard stole second, and Distefano, batting .280 as a pinch hitter, lined a shot into right-center field gap.

Doug Bair, 1-2, pitched two scoreless innings as the Expos stranded 12 runners, including eight in the final five innings.

TED BATTLES

Putting Yipes...show no respect for anyone, anywhere

Battles

Thomas Boswell, the baseball writer par excellence, turned his attention to golf in a recent issue of Golf Magazine to decry the Yips and they're distressing effect on a one-time Midland golfer of note.

The Yips are something that usually strike with age. It wasn't the car wreck near Van Horn, or the advance, years or those aching legs that finally made a mere mortal out of Ben Hogan. It was the Yips.

IT WAS AT a Shell Wonderful of Golf filming at the Eisenhower course at the Air Force Academy a couple of decades ago. Sam Snead met with the press after his match with Jimmy Demaret and discussed the Yips.

"There's nothing wrong with Hogan's game except that he can't bring the putter back."

Of course, Snead was afflicted by the Yips whenever the U.S. Open approached. And it's probably just as well or he might never have lost a tournament.

I reluctantly must admit that the Yips have been a lifelong malady of my game, but for one wonderful year.

On a golf tour of Texas' resort courses a few years ago, the first stop, they worked on the golf games of the tourists so they wouldn't embarrass themselves on some of the world class courses to be played.

Kelly Cook looked at my game, threw up his hands in despair and said, "well, let's try to do something about your putting, at least."

What he did was revamp my grip, stance and stroke. It was awkward, uncomfortable and painful. It was also successful.

FOR ONE year, I couldn't miss, even when the Texas media held its statewide putting contest at Abilene's LaJet in connection with the Southwest Classic. It's the only thing I think I've ever won. For a year, I was deadly and then I lost my touch and have never been able to find it again no matter how twisted, painful and ungainly my stance.

In his article, Boswell calls on Dave Pelz to analyze what has happened to the former Midlander's putting game.

He says, "It's terrible. Your friends laugh at you. They won't give you a six-inch putt, because they know you're apt to stab it in the dirt," Boswell quotes our former Midland golfer.

Says Pelz, it's a "fail-safe shutdown", such as in car crash, "the brain shuts off for an instant before disaster strikes. In other words, people just pass out. They can't remember it, because they never saw it."

PELZ is a story of golf frustration in himself. He now lives in Abilene and designs golf clubs and gives putting lessons.

In high school, he was one of Indiana's outstanding basketball players, "only I had the white man's disease."

At Indiana University, he had serious ambitions of becoming a touring golf pro. He was that good.

"Only trouble, I couldn't beat this fat kid from Ohio State. I lost to him 22 straight times. I finally asked myself, "'If I can't beat this fat kid from Ohio State, what am I going to do when I meet a real pro."

By the time the Fat Kid became Jack Nickluas, it was too late. Pelz, distraught, discouraged and defeated, had given up golf and joined the French Foreign Legion, or the equivalent....he became a scientist in the NASA program.

But now he's back in golf and theorizes that the Yips can be cured, pointing out the key to yipping is that, with the years, every golfer misses so many exasperating putts the the fear of failure inevitably goes up.

The Yips were something our former Midlander, Boswell chronicles, never experienced in baseball, batting in the clutch, and never as a WWII fighter pilot or while on the political stump.

Boswell suggests George Bush may be able to handle the world's tackiest problems with poise and serene assurance of someone who revels in self confidence.

Just don't ask him to settle anything that depends on a six-inch putt.

Amarillo Globe-News

McLEAN, Texas (AP) — Sitting in the breaks surrounded by cottonwood trees, one can enjoy the sites, listen to a red-headed woodpecker or race along a motorcycle trail on the McClellan National Grasslands.

And now, after several years of drought, one can add boating and skiing to the list of things to do at Lake McClellan.

Recent rains in the Panhandle have revitalized this small lake, three miles north of Interstate 40 between Groom and McLean, which was in danger of drying up only a couple of months ago. Now the lake, which covers 405 acres when full, is only six feet below the spillway, the most water its held in about four years.

THE LAKE has always had water problems, but more so the past several years with the increase in farm pond dams in the watershed.

"It's always strictly an act of God whether we get water or not. It's strictly runoff," said Buck Williams, game warden in Gray and Roberts counties. "The watershed is pretty big. Basically, and this is a personal opinion, for years farmers could have dams built for a small cost. That's the main problem right there. You get enough of those little dams and you've backed up a lot of water. It was the worst I'd ever seen it until we got this rain."

Williams said the recent rains should be enough to keep the water level up to a satisfactory level for two years, assuming it rains no more.

"This was the worst I'd ever seen it in my 25 years here until we got this rain," he said. "The water level was down to five feet between the point and the dam. In 1982-83, the water level between the spillway and the point was 26 feet."

McClellan was built in 1938 as a Works Progress Administration project and the spillway was moved to the middle of the dam in 1964. The Grasslands, owned by the U.S. Forest Service and leased to a concessionaire, covers 1,449 acres.

JOHN ROBERTS of Amarillo is the concessionaire, but subleases the facility to Glenn and Burl Sain.

There are 12 individually marked areas with several picnic tables in each area. It also offers camping, fishing, boating, skiing, horseback riding trails and 450 acres of off-road vehicle trails.

Permits are $2 per person per day and there are group rates for organizations. In addition, costs include $2 for mobile homes or travel trailers per night, $1 for horses and $1 for motorcycles.

In the permit office is a store that sells bait, fishing tackle, food and picnic supplies. There are 20 restroom facilities scattered around the lake, but no showers are available — yet — Glenn Sain said. Work is being done to get approval from the Forest Service to put in an RV park with hookups, showers and a little restaurant.

The lake itself offers largemouth bass, hybrid stripers, crappie and blue and channel catfish.

JOE KRAAI, fisheries biologist with Texas Parks & Wildlife Department, said they stock hybrid stripers every year, except the past two years because of the lack of water. They will begin stocking hybrids again next spring, as well as continue stocking catfish.

"There ought to be pretty good survival of bass and crappie. There is plenty of cover for protecting the young," he said.

Williams said that the average number of fish caught each hour per fisherman in McClellan exceeds any lake within 200 miles. One thing is certain, there are plenty of fish to be caught and, even if the fish aren't biting, there are plenty of other things to enjoy.

Dorsett football future in doubt

Tony Dorsett's football future was put into doubt Thursday when his knee gave way during a passing drill.

Dorsett, the second leading rusher in NFL history, was scheduled for further tests Friday to determine the extent of the injury. But team officials fear it could be career-ending.

NFL

Dorsett's left knee gave way while running a pass pattern during a non-contact workout.

The 35-year-old running back was examined by trainer Steve Antonopulos and a team orthopedic surgeon. They indicated Dorsett could have suffered ligament or cartilage damage, but were reserving judgment until Dorsett undergoes a magnetic resonance imaging test in Denver on Friday.

"It's a little bit vague," Coach Dan Reeves said. "Until we do more tests, we won't know exactly the status of his knee. The knee is pretty stable and that's encouraging. But we do believe there is some damage in there.

"We realize we could be talking about his career, so we're being very careful."

Dorsett, entering his 13th NFL season, had just returned to practice Wednesday after missing several days of workouts because of a pulled hamstring.

He gained 703 yards last season in his first year in Denver after being acquired in a trade from the Dallas Cowboys, but played sparingly late in the season. Dorsett was warned that his pass-catching skills would have to improve to keep a job this season.

Another ex-Cowboy, tight end Doug Cosbie, was placed on the reserved-retired list. Cosbie had signed with Denver as a Type B free agent.

Phoenix Cardinals

Phoenix coach Gene Stallings wants his team's three first-round draft picks and four unsigned veterans in camp so badly he's willing to help negotiate their contracts.

Quarterback Timm Rosenbach, linebacker Eric Hill and offensive lineman Joe Wolf still are unsigned. Hill and Wolf were first-round picks in the regular draft and Rosenbach was picked in the first round of the supplemental draft last month.

Phoenix also has four unsigned veterans — starting offensive tackle Luis Sharpe, starting linebacker Ricky Hunley, backup tight end Jay Novacek and second-string cornerback Reggie Phillips.

"I don't ask our (front office) people how the negotiations are going," Stallings said Thursday. "They know what they're doing. I don't know anything about the dialogue. I'm not going to interfere and ask them to speed up the negotiations.

"I have no authority in that at all. Would I help? Only if they ask me to," he added. "It's a fine line. I don't know what their salaries are. I don't care what they are. But I got to coach them when they get here."

No progress was reported in contract talks Thursday. The rookies were supposed to report by July 19 with the veterans by July 27.

Cincinnati Bengals

The Bengals are pleased with the dietary progress of rookie guard Freddie Childress, who has gone from 374 to 359 pounds since checking into camp. Coach Sam Wyche wants Childress to get down to 330, but acknowledged that 340 pounds might be a more realistic goal.

Pittsburgh Steelers

Harold Daniels, the agent for first-round draft pick Tim Worley, and Steelers negotiator Jim Boston plan face-to-face contract talks this weekend. The Steelers' initial offer to the seventh overall pick in the draft was $1.6 million over four years, the same salary given 1988 first-round pick Aaron Jones. Daniels' initial demand was $9.2 million over five years, or four times more than Steelers have ever paid a player.

Green Bay Packers

Linebacker Tim Harris, whose 13½ sacks was tops on the team last season, signed a two-year, $1.185 million contract: Harris, 24, has led the Pack in sacks in three straight seasons. Veteran safety Tim Stills also said he has reached agreement on a one-year contract, leaving four players unsigned, including No. 1 draft pick Tony Mandarich.

Chicago Bears

With the Bears' defense riddled by injuries and holdouts, linebacker John Roper, defensive backs Marcus Paul and George Streeter and lineman Tony Woods — all rookies — have made good impressions. Defensive coordinator Vince Tobin said the four look like "good quality young people" and will get a chance to prove themselves in exhibition games.

New Orleans Saints

Milton Mack, projected as the starter at left cornerback, returned to work after missing two days of practice with a strained hamstring. Reserve offensive lineman Joel Hilgenberg ended his 13-day holdout by agreeing to a contract. Still unsgined are first-round draft choice Wayne Martin, a defensive end, and veterans Morten Andersen, Jumpy Geathers and Pat Swilling.

Houston Oilers

Ernest Givins said he was a step closer to walking out of camp if he doesn't get his contract renegogiated. Givins, the Oilers' second leading receiver last season with 62 catches, said he could leave before Sunday's workout if the two sides aren't close to a settlement. But he and his attorney, Jim Ellis, both expressed optimism that a deal could be reached.

New England Patriots

With veteran Irving Fryar and top draft pick Hart Lee Dykes both unsigned, there are berths to be won at wide receiver. Veterans Stanley Morgan, Cedric Jones, Sammy Martin and Mike Jones and rookies Michael Timpson, a fourth-round draft choice from Penn State, and Glenn Antrum, a free agent from Connecticut, are battling for five or six jobs.

Los Angeles Raiders

Sam Graddy, a member of the 1984 gold medal-winning 400-meter relay team, is trying to make the Raiders as a wide receiver after signing as a Type B free agent.

He played two seasons at Tennessee and two with the Broncos, but is facing an uphill battle.

"I know the receivers here are good, that's why I never expected the Raiders to call," he said. "You're in great shape when you've got James Lofton, Willie Gault, Tim Brown, Fernandez. But you know, every team in the league has good guys. Wherever you go, you've got to win a spot."

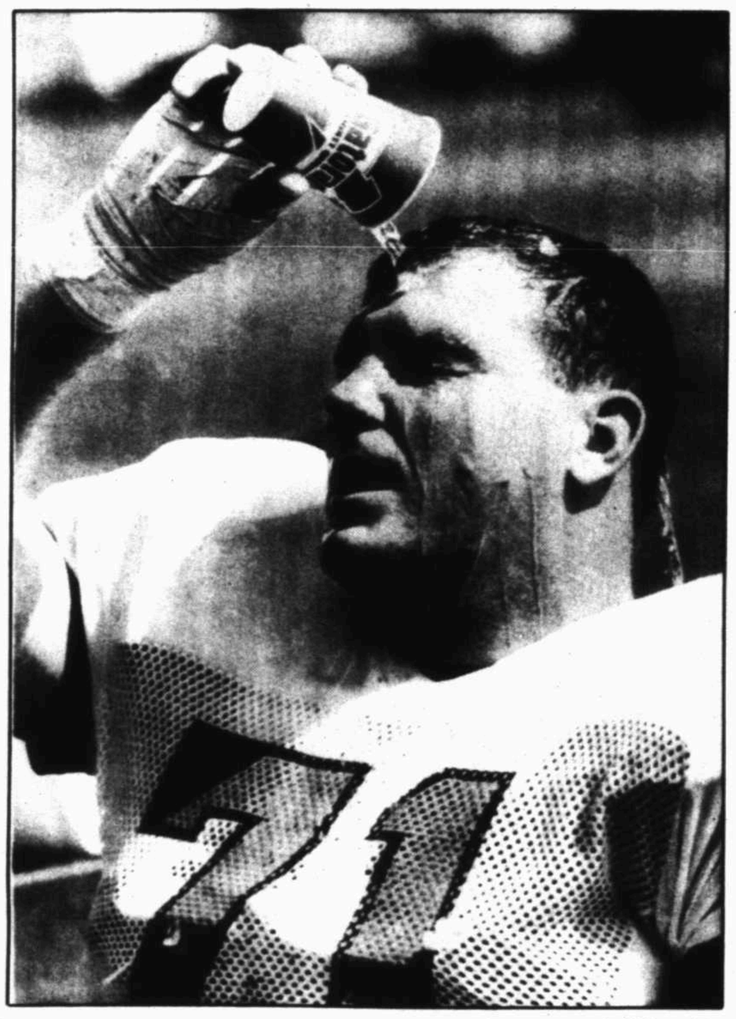

Seattle Seahawks

With a week before the exhibition season starts, the Seahawks still are missing their starting backfield and seven key veterans. Running backs Curt Warner and John L. Williams both missed practice with minor injuries.

General manager Tom Flores said there was no progress in talks with the seven unsigned players, a group that includes three starting offensive linemen and kicker Norm Johnson.

Atlanta Falcons

The Falcons are piling up injuries even before exhibition play starts. Cornerback Bobby Butler's sore neck kept him out of a joint workout with the Miami Dolphins. He joined quarterback Chris Miller (pulled stomach muscle) wide receiver Shawn Collins (pulled groin) and nose tackle Tony Casillas (knee) on the sidelines.

Carter grid coach takes no responsibility

DALLAS (AP) — The football coach at Dallas Carter High School said he doesn't hold himself responsible for the involvement of six Carter football players in a 12-student robbery ring.

"I don't see how they can blame me," Freddie James said Wednesday in his first public comment since June 20, the date former Carter players Derric Evans and Gary Edwards were arrested on armed robbery charges.

"I'm with these kids three hours a day. After that, I don't see them unless they're in the cafeteria," James said. "The rest of the time, they're at home. When they leave me, they're out of my hands. When they're with me, I do the best I can."

"What about Al Capone?" James said. "I'm sure he had a coach at some time. Is he to blame for what Al Capone did? What about all the people over there in Lew Sterrett (Justice Center)? They all had coaches. Do you blame (their coaches) for being at Lew Sterrett?"

James also denied that players gambled in the coaches' offices, but said some were caught gambling in the locker room and on school grounds.

James said he doesn't plan to change his coaching style, adding he does not believe his job is in jeopardy.

Howard inks Kelli Glaspie

From Staff Reports

STANTON — Former Stanton High standout Kelli Glaspie recently signed a basketball scholarship offer to attend Howard College, HC coach Royce Chadwick said Thursday.

Glaspie averaged 16.5 points, 5.2 rebounds and 8.6 assists for Coach Rob Young's Lady Buffs. She was a two-time All-District pick and was instrumental in gaining a playoff berth for Stanton.

Chadwick likes the 5-7 Glaspie's potential.

"She should steadily improve over the course of her college career," he said. "She's the kind of girl you would like to go to war with."

Howard also signed three-time All-State pick Kim Robinson of Slaton.

Glaspie is the second Stanton player in as many years to earn a college scholarship. Post Kristi Fryar accepted an offer to play for Schreiner College in Kerrville last year.

Tewell breaks course record

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Doug Tewell found the new Tournament Players Club course at Southwind to his liking Thursday, firing a course record 8-under-par 63 to grab the first round lead in the $1 million Federal Express St. Jude Classic.

Green responds to Steinbrenner blast

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Yankees manager Dallas Green, responding to a published report, defended himself and his coaches against criticism from owner George Steinbrenner on Thursday.

"My boss chooses to use the newspapapers instead of a face-to-face confrontation, and I don't think that's fair," Green said in a half-hour impromptu press conference before a game with the Minnesota Twins.

"But he's the owner and he can say whatever he wants. I may not like it. But I don't have to like it. I just have to do the best that I can as long as I can."

In Thursday's editions of the New York Daily News, a day after the Yankees split a doubleheader with the Twins, Steinbrenner was quoted as saying, "From what I saw tonight, the managers and coaches are going to have to do a better job for us to win."

Steinbrenner, more specifically, criticized Green's placement of Yankee outfielders and offensive strategy in the team's 4-3 loss in Wednesday's nightcap.

"What manager George made was a logical second guess," Green said calmly. "But hindsight is always 20-20, and is also what gives managers grey hair. I guess you could say, 'Consider the source,' and take it from there. If he's using this as a motivational tool, he's wasting his time. No one on this team can work any harder."

Green, who signed a two-year contract last Oct. 7 to replace Lou Piniella as Yankees manager, said he "can't remember the last time" he spoke to Steinbrenner directly, adding that he only communicates with General Manager Syd Thrift.

Green will not initiate a meeting with Steinbrenner at this point, saying, "He knows where I am if he wants to talk to me."

Yankees 8, Twins 1

NEW YORK — Chuck Cary pitched a five-hitter for his second straight complete game and the New York Yankees hammered Rick Aguilera in his debut with the Minnesota Twins.

Aguilera, acquired by Minnesota from the Mets in the Frank Viola trade Monday, gave up 10 hits and six runs in four-plus innings.

Cary, 2-0, pitched 16 consecutive scoreless innings before Greg Gagne homered in the ninth.

Luis Polonia drove in three runs and Mel Hall had three of the Yankees' 15 hits.

White Sox 6, Athletics 4

OAKLAND, Calif. — Ron Karkovice's first career triple broke a sixth-inning tie and the Chicago White Sox ended Oakland's four-game winning streak.

Dan Pasqua led off the sixth with a walk off Bob Welch, 11-6, and scored on Karkovice's two-out triple off the wall in right-center. It was Karkovice's first three-base hit in 418 major league at bats.

Angels 6, Mariners 0

SEATTLE — Kirk McCaskill pitched his third shutout and lifting the Angels into first place with a 6-0 victory over Seattle, the Angels' 15th shutout and 24th complete game, both tops in the major leagues. It was also California's second consecutive shutout over Seattle, following Bert Blyleven's 7-0 win Wednesday. The Angels have had back-to-back shutouts three times this season.

Johnny Ray and Devon White each hit two-run homers to support McCaskill.

AP expands grid rankings

By ED ZIERALSKI
Copley News Service

The Top 20 polls have been as much a part of college football as the Heisman Trophy and the bowl games.

The Associated Press poll, using opinions from the well-informed and objective media, goes back to 1936. United Press International, relying on the insight of unbiased college coaches, began in 1950. From these seeds grew America's No.1-ism, the raising of the proud index finger for all to see. Today, "We're No. 1" follows "Hi Mom" on many a sideline shot in many a Saturday afternoon game.

What alumnus hasn't looked at the newspaper each week to see where his or her team is ranked?

"Look honey," a guy says over his bran muffin and coffee. "State is ranked fifth this week."

This year, those checking the Associated Press poll anyway, will see more ranked teams. AP has made no formal announcement, but the wire service, which polls 61 members of the media each week for its list of teams, is expanding its Top 20 to a Top 25.

Meantime, UPI, which uses the votes of 50 Division I-A coaches, is staying with its Top 20.

Both gave reasons for their stances.

"I guess the best explanation would be evolution," AP sports editor Darrell Christian said Wednesday (Aug. 2) from his office in Los Angeles. "Over the past several years the number of top caliber football teams has increased to the point where 20 doesn't seem to me to be sufficient. We actually considered going to 30, which would be my choice, especially for basketball. But it's such a big jump from 20 that I didn't know if our poll board would give us enough depth in voting to hold it up. So we stopped at 25."

Christian said the move was his decision, and he expects UPI to follow.

"If history holds up, UPI will start out with 20 and at some point go to 25," Christian said. "I know when we went to changing the poll table to include the previous week's rankings a few years back, UPI caught up to us about halfway through the season."

NOT THAT we're trying to start some dueling wire polls here, but the folks at UPI disagree with Christian's prediction. They're holding to 20.

"We have no intention of going to 25," UPI sports editor Fred McMane said from his office in New York City. "In this case, less is more. I don't think there are 25 good teams in the country."

Unlike AP, UPI can't arbitrarily increase the number of its teams. The UPI poll is governed by the American Football Coaches Association, which provides 50 Division I-A coaches each year to serve as UPI voters. Each week, the coaches vote for 15 teams, and from that data, UPI arrives at its Top 20.

"Anything we do has to be approved by the American Football Coaches Association," McMane said. "I talked to them and I believe they're happy with our position. They think we should stick to 20. Why AP went to 25, I have no idea, nor do I particularly care.

"I THINK there are probably only five teams that are very good. I think that there are 10 teams that may be good. Beyond that, you're grasping at straws. Believe me, these coaches have trouble coming up with 15 teams. I don't see the point in raising the thing unless you truly believe you have some teams worthy of it. Twenty-five just cheapens what you're doing. Nobody cares about anything except who is No. 1 anyway, so what's the difference."

AP uses the insight of 61 media members from 36 states, and last year the total included three national voters — Lee Corso of ESPN, Keith Jackson of ABC Sports and Brent Musburger of CBS Sports.

The 25 figure certainly is not new in the poll business. The USA Today-CNN poll has been using 25 teams, and AP and UPI list "others receiving votes" at the bottom of their polls.

HAVE TO disagree with McMane, however, and his statement that No. 1 is the only thing people care about. Last year, the AP poll made big news when voter Ron Christ of the Harrisburg Patriot-News inadvertently left Florida State off his Top 20 list. If Florida State was a second-10 team, then no one would have noticed. But the Seminoles were a Top 10 team, and even though they won that week, they actually slipped in the rankings. Folks in Tallahassee went nuts.

To his credit, Christ admitted his omission the following week. And don't think there wasn't a search party looking for him.

Whiteside team wins scramble

From Staff Reports

Steve Whiteside led a team of Don Thomson, Jim Allega and Jamie Winkle to an 11-under 59 and victory in the Media Scramble Thursday, the dramatic prelude to the start of today's Midland City Golf tournament at Hogan Park.

The Whiteside team beat out the Shawn McDonald, Ted Battles, Bill Branson, Dick Cramer team by one stroke.

Tied for second at 61 were the teams of Bobby Gee, John Okrasinski, Dan Koetting and F.J. McDonald with Randal Strickland, Mike Sneed, Don Garlington and Kerry Garnett.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 5, 1989

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You may feel that someone is preventing you from getting your fair share. Devise a strategy to swing public opinion in your favor. Love relationships should thrive over the next 12 months. There is a real success story in your future. Do not jump the gun, however. Keep a lid on spending until you have a nice financial cushion.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Loni Anderson, first man on the moon Neil Armstrong, actor Robert Taylor, legendary film director-writer-actor John Huston, former quarterback Roman Gabriel, former U.S. Attorney General Richard Kleindienst, British actor Reginald Owen.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Speak up if you feel your territorial rights are being violated. Listen to your conscience when making a strictly personal decision. Travel is favored. Visit places you have never been before.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Recent apprehensions fade. Family ties sustain you even when things do not go as smoothly as planned. Stick to your diet and follow a self-improvement regimen faithfully. True friends applaud your efforts.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your charisma attracts people from all walks of life. Choose your confidants with care. A perfect day for taking a walk around town. A shopping trip yields pleasant surprises.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You know what is best for you. Why keep sitting on the fence? It is time to get a personal relationship into high gear. Travel will not produce any new answers.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): People may request more help than you can deliver today. Be kind but firm. You will find yourself at your romantic best this weekend. Be imaginative when choosing a gift for mate.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Express your feelings in a positive manner and everyone will benefit. Your subconscious may be working overtime. Find a way to get more sleep. Burning the candle at both ends is a serious mistake.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): If boredom with your usual routine is a problem, look for constructive diversions. Take steps to draw your loved ones together. Do not fiddle around; only prompt action will mend a rift.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Romantic activities may go in a different direction than you expected. A trip to the mountains or seaside gives you time to think things over. Remain true to your dreams and ideals.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be on the lookout for an opportunity to travel. You could find that your senses are more acute than ever this evening. Avoid noisy social gatherings. Romance takes root in a quiet setting.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Financial goals are easier to achieve when you have a partner to help you keep things on an even keel. Stop worrying about whether or not people like you. You are more popular than you think.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Let the milk of human kindness flow and a new relationship will become something very special. Although it is difficult to forget a past love, you must get on with your life.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Even if money is scarce, you can have a great weekend. You need to be honest with partner if you are to build the kind of relationship you desire. Avoid ducking the issue.

One of the highlights of the British socialbridge calendar is the annual match between the House of Commons and the House of Lords. Started fifteen years ago by Rixi Markus, the House of Lords had an 8–6 lead going into this year's match. They won again, despite this fine effort by Dr. L. Moonie of the Commons, which won him the Brilliancy Prize.

At both tables the contract was four hearts. Sitting South for the Lords was perhaps their most accomplished player, Lord Lever. The British still use four-card majors, so the opening bid was automatic. Since a jump raise to three hearts would be invitational in their methods, North chose to jump to game.

With nothing to guide him, West found the devilish opening lead of the ten of diamonds! Not suprisingly, declarer called for a low diamond from dummy, and a startled East found his queen had won the trick. A diamond return went to the ace, and East ruffed the diamond continuation to complete the defensive book. Declarer had no way to avoid losing a trick to the king of clubs for down one.

The opening lead was less inspired in the other room. West led a routine top-of-nothing spade, and declarer had no difficulty in holding his losers to two diamonds and a club.

We have learned that political speeches should be treated with a pinch of salt. Are we going to have to extend this policy to the bridge table as well?

Comic strip will no longer 'Bloom'

DENVER (AP) — "Bloom County," the popular comic strip featuring Opus the penguin, ends Sunday but cartoonist Berke Breathed is working on a new strip.

"Outland" premiers in Sunday newspapers Sept. 3, featuring a black child who was a "Bloom County" regular, with Opus possibly making appearances.

Breathed, who lives west of Denver in Evergreen with his wife and basset hound, is working in Florida on the new strip.

In a telephone interview, Breathed had little to say about giving up "Bloom County" after a successful nine-year run that included a Pulitzer Prize in 1987 for cartooning. "I'm pushing on a deadline right now and I'm working so hard that I haven't even thought about it," he said.

William Dickinson, general manager and editorial director of the Washington Post Writers Group, said "Outland" is "kind of a serial comic strip that features a black girl, a child really, living in the ghetto who had a fantasy world outside of it."

Dickinson said the new strip has animal characters "but it's not clear totally when, or if, Opus will be showing up in the new strip."

"We and millions of readers obviously hope so," he said.

The new strip will appear in as many as 400 newspapers nationwide.

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor-comedian Steve Martin says being a parent isn't much fun and games.

Martin

"It's like the Lenny Bruce story about the Doberman pinscher," he told USA Weekend in its Aug. 4-6 issue. "You train him, you raise him, you love him ... 10 years later, he kills you."

Martin, 43, stars in the Ron Howard movie "Parenthood" as Gil Buckman, a father who "wants to try hard but he doesn't know quite what to do."

Martin and his wife, actress Victoria Tennant, have no children. But, he said, many of their friends do.

He listed the four emotions of parenting: "Rage, rage, rage and joy."

And he offered this advice to those raising kids: "Rather than getting serious with them and tough, I think you can accomplish a lot of the same things by being lighthearted, although it must be fairly impossible at times when your nerves are frazzled."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jurors found divorce attorney Marvin Mitchelson innocent in a civil lawsuit filed by a former client, who had accused the famed palimony lawyer of legal malpractice in her 1984 divorce from a millionaire.

The jury, which had deliberated since Tuesday afternoon, refused to award any monetary damages to Felicia Gordon.

The panel Thursday chided Mitchelson for failing to exercise the proper care and skill required of an attorney, but found his inattention had not injured Gordon or caused her emotional distress.

Gordon had claimed that Mitchelson's bungling and inattention to her case had cost her half of an estimated $9.9 million in community property.

Later, in the hallway, the two confronted each other. Mitchelson huffed away and Ms. Gordon addressed the cameras.

"He lies in the middle of his office and asks you to work on his neck when he's supposed to be working on your case," she said.

The 61-year-old Mitchelson, who countersued Ms. Gordon for $127,716 in unpaid legal fees, denied the charge.

"The system does work," he said after the verdict. "Jurors are intelligent. They know when someone is telling them the truth."

Andrews

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Leonard E.B. Andrews, who stunned the art world with his purchase of Andrew Wyeth's previously unknown "Helga" series in 1986, has added 290 more Wyeth works to his holdings.

The millionaire art collector said Thursday he bought Wyeth's Olson drawings and sketches from Arthur and Holly Magill of Greenville, S.C. He would only say the price was "several million dollars."

The works are on 228 sheets of paper and include 62 drawings on the verso, or other side, of the paper. The value of the entire collection was estimated at $2.4 million in 1982.

The collection includes pencil, ink, watercolor and charcoal studies, and one tempera on panel, dating from 1939 to the early 1970s. Sixteen studies show Wyeth's process leading up to "Christina's World," Wyeth's best-known painting, now in the Museum of Modern Art in New York, said Andrews, who lives in the Philadelphia suburb of Newtown Square.

Andrews put the Helga collection up for sale for $40 million in February. He said he did not know yet what he would do with the Olson works.

Louganis

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Greg Louganis, whose graceful dives won him four Olympic gold medals, is making his professional stage acting debut with a part that also demands grace.

The 29-year-old plays the prince in a production of "Cinderella" for the Long Beach Civic Light Opera. The production opens Saturday and runs through Aug. 20.

"It's great to be in an ensemble," said the performer recently before a rehearsal. "Everybody in the cast, they're real pros, and they've been helpful."

Louganis, who studied drama and dance at the University of California, Irvine, also has had to fight a handicap: a reading disability called dyslexia, which causes him to read some words backwards and makes it difficult to read from a script without studying it in advance.

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Prime Minister Wilfried Martens crashed on his bicycle when he tried to avoid an obstacle along the road, but a government official said he will be OK.

"We were scared because the accident was pretty spectacular, but it did not jeopardize his summer holidays," said the official.

Martens, 53, broke a finger and bruised his face in Wednesday's accident near his holiday home on the Belgian coast.

Martens, who took up cycling after a 1983 heart operation, has been prime minister for most of the 1980s. He now heads a five-party coalition.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Syndicated columist Carl Rowan, an outspoken advocate of gun control who was charged last year with using an unregistered gun to shoot a teen-age intruder, may be having a philosophical difference with his son.

Lawyer Carl Rowan Jr. recently was hired as a lobbyist for the National Rifle Association.

"My father and I have one standing rule," the younger Rowan said in a letter to WJLA-TV, which reported the job. "I don't tell him what to write and he doesn't tell me who to represent."

Jobless rate drops to 5.2 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate fell one notch to 5.2 percent in July as businesses added 169,000 new jobs despite the slowing economy, the government reported today.

The Labor Department said the growth was again found predominantly in the service-producing sector of the economy, which added 140,000 of the new jobs.

The civilian joblessness rate declined from the 5.3 percent reported for June. The government also revised its figures on new jobs created in June to 250,000, up from the 180,000 reported last month.

Today's report contained further evidence of persistent wage inflation.

The department said hourly earnings of production and nonsupervisory workers increased 0.8 percent in July — about twice the rate analysts had predicted — while average weekly earnings climbed by 1.7 percent. The jump in hourly earnings followed two months of modest increases.

Goods-producing industries added 29,000 new positions as construction posted a gain of 35,000 jobs, helping to offset a decline of more than 10,000 jobs in the automobile industry.

Manufacturing posted a modest gain of 3,000 jobs last month after three months of declines, according to the Labor Department's survey of business establishments.

In all, 117.4 million Americans were at work in non-farm jobs last month, the government said.

The rebound in construction coincides with reports showing a upswing in housing starts and home sales.

And the decline in auto manufacturing follows recent announcements by major automakers that they are cutting production bacause of sluggish sales.

The 140,000 job growth in the service-producing sector came despite a 25,000 drop in the number of government jobs.

Elsewhere in that sector, retail trade added 52,000 jobs, wholesale trade 5,000, transportation and public utilities 23,000 and finance, insurance and real estate 11,000. Employment in services was up by 74,000 positions and both business and health services posted modest gains, the government said.

The payroll and wage data is taken from the Labor Department's survey of businesses. A separate household survey found few major shifts in unemployment among demographic groups, although joblessness among black teen-agers fell to 33.1 percent last month from 40.2 percent in June. The June total was up sharply from 28.4 percent in May.

For white adult men, the unemployment rate was 3.8 percent last month, up from 3.7 percent in June. Among adult white women, the rate rose from 4.1 percent to 4.3 percent.

Unemployment among white teenagers was 13.4 percent, up from 12.6 percent in June.

The average work week for production and nonsupervisory employees in private industry increased by 0.3 hours, to 34.9 hours. The factory work week held steady at 41 hours and overtime in July averaged 3.9 hours a week, up from 3.8 hours in June, the Labor Department said.

The jump in hourly earnings brought average hourly pay in the private sector to $9.70 on a seasonally adjusted basis, up from $9.62 in June.

Weekly earnings rose to an average of $338.53 from the June average of $332.85.

Oil market looks for driving news

From Staff Reports

By mid morning oil prices had dropped only 3 cents from Thursday's close, resting at $18.19 per barrel.

Petroleum futures prices declined Thursday with little news to drive the market forward.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the September contract for West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark grade of U.S. crude oil, fell 7 cents to close at $18.21 a barrel after trading as high as $18.50 during the session. The contract had finished 25 cents higher on Wednesday. Contracts set for delivery later in the year also declined.

Refined oil products traded on the exchange also finished lower. The September contract for unleaded gasoline closed down 0.19 cent to 50.66 cents a gallon and heating oil for September delivery fell 0.42 cent to 49.12 cents a gallon.

Other contract months also closed lower.

Analysts said nervousness about the U.S. hostage situation in the Middle East helped buoy prices early in the day. But once the crisis passed, investor concern about excess oil returned.

Dollar gains amid jobless report

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar gained against European currencies this morning.

Gold prices retreated from Thursday's peaks in U.S. trading.

Dealers attributed the dollar's advance during Asian and early European trading mostly to position-squaring ahead of the release today of July U.S. unemployment figures. The threat of a U.S. military action in the Middle East is lending additional support to the currency, they said.

"People had been already short, and then came the events in the Middle East," said Manfred Totzauer, a dealer at Citibank AG in Frankfurt, West Germany.

Gold opened in London at $371.90 a troy ounce, up from $369.75 late Thursday. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $371.55 an ounce.

In Zurich, gold traded at $371.50 an ounce.

On Thursday, gold for August delivery closed at $373.70 a troy ounce on the Commodity Exchange in New York.

In Hong Kong today, gold closed at $372.86 an ounce, up $2.19 from Thursday's figure.

Silver was trading in London at $5.29 a troy ounce, up from $5.23 an ounce late Thursday.

Market struggles to small gain

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market struggled to a small gain Thursday, following through on Wednesday's advance after some early hesitation.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 16.32 on Wednesday, gained another 4.17 to 2,661.61. That pushed the average past its previous post-crash closing high of 2,660.66, reached on Monday.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 4 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 874 up, 628 down and 499 unchanged.

Although the Dow Jones industrial average remains more than 60 points below its 1987 high, the NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market became the latest of several broader market measures to hit a record level. It rose 2.85 to 456.93, surpassing its reading of 455.26 on Aug. 26, 1987.

The Commerce Department reported Thursday that the index of leading economic indicators dipped 0.1 percent in June, following a downward-revised drop of 1.3 percent the month before.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 168.69 million shares, down from 181.76 million in the previous session.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Texas bank failure tally passes 100

DALLAS (AP) — Federal regulators closed two Texas banks Thursday, pushing the number of failed institutions to 101 in the state this year.

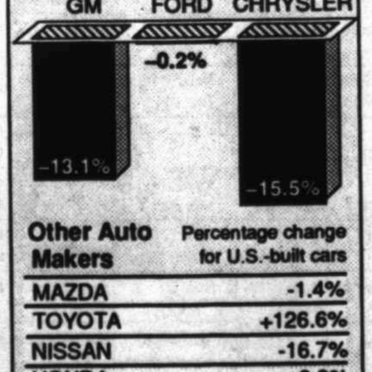

University National Bank of San Antonio, with $20 million in assets, and Park Forty-Five National Bank in Spring, with $21.1 million in assets, were both declared insolvent by the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, which regulates national banks.

The Frost National Bank of San Antonio will assume $21.3 million in 2,500 deposit accounts at University National for a premium of $25,000. It also will purchase $3.3 million of the failed bank's assets and have options to purchase other loans and assets.

Klein Bank, in Harris County, will receive only the insured deposits and fully secured liabilities of Park Forty-Five bank.

DETROIT (AP) — The Big Three automakers' late-July sales of U.S.-made cars and light trucks fell 7.4 percent from the comparable period last year.

General Motors Corp., Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. reported Thursday that vehicles sold at an average daily rate of 37,113 in the July 21-31 period, compared with 40,096 during last year's late-July period.

GOP senators ready to block bailout bill

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON – With the House ready to approve a $50 billion bailout of the nation's ailing savings and loan industry today, Republican senators vowed to try to block action on the bill before Congress' summer recess begins Friday.

"It looks like we'll have to see who blinks first," said Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan.

Republican senators have pledged to block the bill because its financing plan will sharply increase the federal budget deficit.

But House Democrats said Thursday they remain convinced Republicans won't risk delaying final approval of the bill and adding to the cost of rescuing the nation's 400 insolvent thrifts.

Last week, a conference committee of House and Senate members adopted a House of Representatives plan to raise $50 billion to close and merge insolvent S&Ls by selling U.S. Treasury bonds.

That plan would require a formal waiver of the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit reduction targets. Without this exception, Congress would have to raise new taxes or cut other government spending programs to finance the S&L rescue plan.

With the support of the Bush administration, Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, an author of the deficit reduction law, has threatened to block Senate action on the House-Senate conference committee's proposal.

Gramm and Bush administration officials have said that the waiver will open the door for future exceptions for everything from constructing housing to fighting drugs.

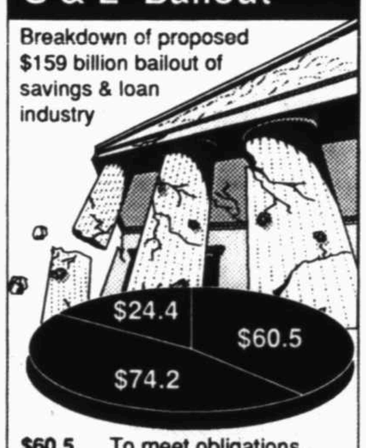

"Pretty soon, we could say we have a balanced budget under Gramm-Rudman and still have a $300 billion deficit," Gramm said.

Gramm needs 41 votes to prevent a waiver of the deficit reduction act, which would force new debate on the $50 billion S&L bailout plan. In early June, Gramm produced a letter signed by 41 senators opposed to the plan. He said he has gained support since then.

Gramm supports the administration's S&L funding plan, which would avoid a budget deficit increase by selling $50 billion in bonds through a government-sponsored agency, the Resolution Funding

'U.S. must pump more oil': Boren

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. David Boren says it's "long past time to take action" to increase domestic oil and gas production, and tax incentives that promote drilling are one key for tapping previously unrecoverable reserves.

"With the level of imported crude oil and refined petroleum products rapidly approaching 50 percent of our consumption, it is vitally important to increase our domestic production," Boren, chairman of the Senate Finance subcommittee on energy and agricultural taxation, said Thursday.

Boren, D-Okla., said the domestic rig count has fallen more than 82 percent since 1982, and production in Oklahoma alone has declined more than 30 million barrels between 1985 and 1987.

With the rig count falling below 900 active rigs, Boren told the committee: "It is vitally important that we encourage additional exploration to replace our dwindling reserves."

"When we talk about the health of the domestic oil industry, we're also talking about the health of the nation and national security concerns," Texas Railroad Commissioner John Sharp testified at the committee's hearing on the proposed Enhanced Oil and Gas Recovery Tax Act of 1989.

The tax incentives are aimed at increasing domestic production by tapping existing reserves that previously were unrecoverable, given today's oil prices and technology.

"Almost one-half of all the oil ever discovered in the continental United States is still in the ground. We know where the reserves are. We simply have to find a way to get them out of the ground," Boren said.

Sharp said enhanced recovery projects accounted for 54.6 percent of oil production in Texas in 1987.

Texas account for 23.6 percent of the nation's crude oil production, Sharp said.

"In fact, if Texas were a member of OPEC, we'd be producing more than 10 of the 13 OPEC member countries," Sharp said.

Yet with the decline in domestic drilling, he said, new enhanced recovery projects have also declined.

"The capital costs are just too high and the prospect of low price oil too strong to take the risk," Sharp said.

Sharp said that unless the rate of production can be increased by moving beyond primary production methods, all remaining oil will be wasted because it is not recovered.

"For the state and the nation, this is a loss of tax income and natural resources," Sharp said. "When enhanced recovery is used, though, it could mean that another 20 percent or more of the total oil in place can be recovered."

Brown suits making a come back

NEW YORK (AP) — Lawns aren't all that's turning brown this August: Men are shucking their blue and gray business suits and dressing up in the color rarely seen before in boardrooms.

Theories for the summer brown-out include the influence of European fashion, attempts by the clothing industry to drum up sales with a new look and even nostalgia for a military look.

"Brown is coming back," said Rick Pallack, a clothier to the stars in Sherman Oaks, Calif., whose clients include talk show host Pat Sajak.

Not chocolate brown suits, which are still very out despite a blip in sales after Ronald Reagan wore them.

What's in is taupe, a chameleon-like brownish gray.

"Basically brown's never been an important color in this country. But taupe, with off shades of different colorations, that could be big, if the retailer gets behind it," said Jack Bier, vice president of the suitmaker Greif Cos.

Clothing manufacturers are disarmingly frank in their attempts to engineer interest in browns and olives as a way to promote sales.

Yates field royalty settlement finaled

AUSTIN (SWN) — A settlement in a landmark lawsuit involving the Permanent School Fund's right to oil royalties will bring in $2.7 million to the fund immediately and eventually add $35 million more, Land Commissioner Garry Mauro announced Thursday.

"This settlement sets the stage for the state to recover millions of dollars lost to the Permanent School Fund," Mauro said. It is a watershed case for the school children of Texas."

Mauro

The state was an intervenor in the suit, Summit Energy vs. Texas Commerce Bank, which involves royalties due the Permanent School Fund (PSF) since 1934 from a 24-acre lease in the oil-rich Yates Field in Pecos County. The Yates Field, one of the richest and most famous oil fields in the world, produces 2.4 million barrels of oil a month. The one well on the Summit tract is credited with producing 24,000 barrels a month.

The PSF retains the minerals under the land subject to the Relinquishment Act of 1919. This act provides that the surface owner is responsible for negotiating oil and gas leases and sharing equally with the state all royalties, rental income and bonuses paid for leases by oil companies. Mauro and the Land Office maintained that this had not been the case in the Summit suit.

"This settlement shows conclusively that surface owners must share lease benefits equally with the Permanent School Fund. We are back to where we should have been to begin with. The Permanent School Fund will share in the income from this lease for the rest of the life of the Yates Field – about 50 years," Mauro said.

More than 60 current interest holders, representing 94 percent of the interest in the lease held originally by Pecos Producers, Inc., have signed a settlement agreement. The settlement has been approved by the School Land Board, Commissioner Mauro, the Attorney General and the Governor. Other interest holders, representing less than six percent of lease ownership, have not settled.

"The Land Office's Relinquishment Act Lease Compliance Section still has numerous other cases to pursue whose issues are similar to the Summit case. This settlement should serve as a signal to these other individuals that our cases are solid. Now, we can put our full efforts into these to see to it that the schoolchildren of Texas get what is their due," Mauro said.

Through a series of private transactions, the original surface owners in the Summit case succeeded in keeping not only their legal share, a 1/16 royalty interest, but also in arranging to retain a majority of revenue from the lease.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Oryx, BTA announce Lea discovery

From Staff Reports

ORYX ENERGY CO., Dallas, and BTA OIL PRODUCERS, Midland, announce a gas discovery in Lea County, N.M., 1-1/2 miles south of the Grama Ridge (Morrow) field.

The No. 1 Grama (8817-JV-P-COM) flowed 2.13 Mmcfd and 12 barrels of condensate from perforations between 12, 905 and 13,063 feet in the Upper and Middle Morrow sands. The well tested through a 10/64-inch choke at a flowing tubing pressure of 3,900 pounds per square inch and was drilled to a total depth of 13,500 feet.

Oryx, the largest independent oil and gas producer in North America, has a 50-percent working interest in the discovery. BTA Oil Producers has the other 50-percent working interest and is the operator. The partner companies currently are evaluating plans for further development.

Runnels discovery flows 58 barrels oil

KINLAW OIL CORP., Dallas, has completed a Serratt discovery in Runnels County.

On potential test, the No. 1 Sykes "B" flowed 58 barrels of 38 gravity crude and 75 barrels of water on an 18/64 inch choke from perforations 1,941 to 1,944 ft. The interval was acidized with 250 gallons of acid and fractured with 4,750 gallons of gel and 45 sacks of sand. Gas-oil ratio is 344:1.

Total depth is 2,396 ft. and the well is plugged back to 2,055 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set.

The well topped the Serratt at 1,941 ft., Home Creek at 2,218, and Winchell Reef at 2,382 ft. on ground elevation of 1,764 ft.

Location is 1,995 ft. from south and 467 ft. from west lines of Section 50, Block 1, GH&H survey, 12 miles east of Ballinger.

Marathon opens pay in Upton County field

MARATHON OIL CO., Midland, has opened Devonian production in the Benedum field of Upton County.

The No. 9 H.F. Neal "8" was completed to flow 14 barrels of 52 gravity crude and one barrel of water on a 10/64 inch choke. The well flowed from perforations 11,098 to 11,148 ft., which had been acidized with 4,400 gallons of acid. Gas-oil ratio is 9,928:1.

Drilled to 11,552 ft., the well was plugged back to 11,330 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 11,550 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,691 ft., include the Upper Spraberry at 6,641 ft., Strawn at 10,054, Devonian at 10,730, and Fusselman at 11,340 ft.

Location is 3,785 ft. from south and west lines of Section 8, Block 4.5, GC&SF survey.

The well is two miles northeast of the Devonian gas opener, the No. 1 D.O. Alford, drilled by Sinclair Oil & Gas Co. The discovery was compoted Dec. 26, 1963 for a calculated absolute open flow of 2.1 Mmcfd from perforations 10,013 to 10,219 ft.

Develoment continues in Sugg Ranch field

Another Canyon producer has been added to the Tom Green County portion of the Sugg Ranch field.

IP PETROLEUM CO. INC., Midland, tested the No. 2301 Pfluger "D" to flow 36 barrels of 42.2 gravity crude and no water on a 15/64 inch choke from perforations 7,951 to 8,266 ft. The interval was acidized with 100,000 gallons of gel and 140,000 lbs. sand.

Total depth was 8,452 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set. The well was plugged bck to 8,407 ft.

Location is 1,980 ft. from south and east lines of Section 23, Block A, TCRR survey, Abst. 5203, 24 miles southwest of Sterling City.

Red Eagle buys United Drilling

OKLAHOMA CITY (SWN) — Red Eagle Resources Corp. has announced the acquisition of United Drilling Co. of Oklahoma City.

A company spokesman indicated that the primary purpose of the acquisition was to establish a stand alone subsidiary devoted exclusively to contract drilling. The acquisition brings Red Eagle's rig fleet to a total of 10 with depth capacities ranging from 5,000 to 20,000 feet. Red Eagle's drilling operations have formerly been conducted by Cimarron Operating Company, one of its wholly-owned subsidiaries.

United Drilling Co. was founded by pioneer Oklahomans Fred Jones and Sam Shelburne and acquired its first rig in 1946. In 1957, Vernon E. Pellow became a partner and the company name was changed to Jones and Pellow. In 1968, United was formed as a subsidiary to continue the contract drilling operations of Jones and Pellow. Kenneth I. Will joined the Jones and Pellow operation in 1954 as a roughneck working his way up through the ranks to become president of the company.

Rig utilization in both companies has been over 80 percent so far during 1989 and is expected to increase above that.

JOBLESS

The government said the summer expansion of the youth labor force in the past four months has totaled about 3.1 million, about the same as recent years despite a significant drop in the youth population.

The unemployment rate fell last month despite a dip in the number of Americans at work from 117.5 million to 117.4 million. The rate fell because the 169,000 new jobs were created in a month in which the civilian labor force — the number of people who have jobs or are looking for them — fell by 146,000.

Evidence of a number of recent economic developments could be found in today's unemployment report, the first comprehensive look at the economy's performance in July.

The data showed employment in the mining industry fell by 11,000 jobs — the result of a coal strike in Virginia, West Virginia and Kentucky that also has led to wildcat walkouts in other coal-producing states.

Among blacks, the overall jobless rate was 10.9 percent, down from 11.9 percent in June. Unemployment fell from 9.4 percent to 9.3 percent for adult black men and from 10.5 percent to 9.9 percent among black women.

The government said 9 percent of Hispanics in the civilian labor force were unemployed in July, up from 8.1 percent in June.

A separate calculation of unemployment that includes members of the armed services stationed in the United States was also 5.2 percent in July, unchanged from June.

This was done by setting up a "strawman" transaction. The surface owners leased the oil and gas to a second person who acted as a "strawman." Three months later, this "strawman" assigned the lease to a shell company, Pecos Producers, (wholly owned by the surface owners) for little or no compensation, despite the tract being in one of the world's richest oil fields.

Instead of retaining their fair share, a 1/16 interest, the surface owners, their families and associates acquired the remaining 7/8ths interest in the lease without sharing the additional revenue with the Permanent School Fund.

Consequently, the surface owners acquired the vast majority of the lease they executed on the state's behalf, in a manner unauthorized by the Relinquishment Act.

The Summit suit is another major outcome of an in-depth General Land Office investigation initiated by Mauro into all leases on Relinquishment Act lands. A significant settlement was reached with the King Ranch in 1986 when the state recovered $1.33 million. Earlier this year, a surface owner's agency rights were judicially forfeited for non-compliance with the Relinquishment Act.

There are more than 32,000 leases covering much of this land and the General Land Office, since 1986, has reviewed approximately half of these leases. The staff has identified additional cases in which the lease-holders may not have shared equally with the Permanent School Fund. Eleven of these cases have been referred to the Attorney General thus far.

"The vast majority of surface owners of Relinquishment Act lands have nothing to fear from this review. They have handled their business properly and above-board, and have been good agents of the state," Mauro said. "However, there is a small percentage of bad apples in this barrel who have received millions of dollars belonging to the school children of Texas.

"Rest assured that these people will be hearing from us very soon," Mauro said. "I would hope that they will prove as cooperative as the majority of the defendants in the Summit suit."

The suit was filed in the District Court of Pecos County, 83rd Judicial District.

SUITS

"We're trying to stimulate the business by obsoleting last year's designs," said Robert E. Bruno, executive vice president of Hart Schaffner & Marx.

About 5 percent of Hart Schaffner & Mark's men's suits this year are in taupe or olive shades and that share could double in 1990, Bruno said. Last year, he said, sales were "minuscule."

Similar increases are being posted by Greif, whose suit lines include Perry Ellis and Chaps by Ralph Lauren, and Joseph & Feiss Co., maker of Cricketeer suits.

Jeffrey M. Moriber was spotted recently on Manhattan's fashionable 57th Street wearing a good-looking suit, brown but "cast with blue influence," as he put it.

"I like it because it has a subtle pattern. It can go either way. It has blue tones as well as warm tones," said Moriber, creative director of a public relations agency.

Dressing advice books say a man in a brown suit won't be taken seriously, but taupe may be another matter. It is hard to descriptively pin down.

Webster's Third New International Dictionary says taupe comes from the Latin talpa, for mole, and calls it "a brownish gray that is paler and slightly yellower than chocolate, duller and slightly redder than mouse gray, and duller and slightly redder than castor."

For fall and winter, taupe will carry on in its darker tones, as a thread or accent color in a pinstripe, windowpane or subtle plaid suit, said Tom Julian, associate fashion director of the Men's Fashion Association of America.

Europeans have always used a bigger palette of colors in men's suits, and that influence is crossing the Atlantic. But the most interesting theory on the popularity of brown and olive is the military one.

"Men get a little leery of wearing things like taupes and olives when they just get out of the military.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Investors can switch money between mutual funds

By BILL DOYLE

Q. In 1985, I transferred my individual retirement account from a bank to a brokerage firm and put most of the money in a mutual fund. I was advised it would be possible in the future to switch to another mutual fund in the same management group.

In 1987, when the value of my mutual fund's shares went down and down, I called the broker and instructed him to move my account to a money market mutual fund. Then, I was advised such a switch could not be made, because the brokerage firm was holding my shares. Does this make sense to you?

A. Not at all! Virtually all mutual fund groups allow transfers from one fund to another within the group — usually without any commission charge. The fund group you named in your letter does.

There's an exception to that "usual" rule of thumb when you switch from a fund with no commission or a low commission to a fund with a high commission. Then, you're hit with an additional load charge.

But money market mutual funds, including the one into which you wanted to switch, never have commission charges. You most certainly should have been able to transfer your IRA into the money market mutual fund.

The fact that your shares were held by the brokerage house should not have impeded the switch. Instead, that would have made the transfer easier.

Doyle

Q. When stock prices were sliding in September 1987, I phoned my broker and, after much discussion, told him to redeem the mutual fund shares his firm was holding for me and put the proceeds in a CD.

I later found out that the transaction was carried out three weeks later — after the October 1987 crash. Of course, I wouldn't have sold at that time. Was this standard procedure on the part of the broker and/or mutual fund?

A. Of course not. Mutual funds are required to redeem shares on every business day. With most funds, if your redemption order is placed before 4 p.m., Eastern time, you get the price established at the close of business that day. If your order is placed after 4 p.m., you get the next day's closing price.

The exceptions are those mutual funds which price their shares more than once a day. Pricing is done by adding up all of a fund's assets — mostly the securities held as investments — subtracting any liabilities and dividing by the number of fund shares owned by investors. The resulting number is the fund's net asset value per share, the price you get when you redeem — unless the fund has a rear-end load in the form of a redemption charge or contingent deferred shares charge, which reduces the amount you receive.

Besides having to redeem as described above, every mutual fund must pay out the proceeds of a redemption within seven days. That's a requirement of the Investment Company Act of 1940.

If the redemption of your shares was delayed three weeks, you have a real gripe. Take your complaint to the National Association of Securities Dealers.

Q. Being very unhappy with the broker with whom I did business for a few years and whom I no longer trust, I decided to move my IRA and other holdings back to my bank.

Everything was transferred, except a CD from an out-of-state bank I purchased at the brokerage. I wanted to terminate the CD and pay an early withdrawal penalty, to get all my business away from that broker. But he says the CD cannot be redeemed before its maturity date. I say, at banks, all CDs can be terminated. Right?

A. Wrong. Although most banks and savings and loan associations allow depositors to redeem CDs early — and pay the penalties — some don't.

A CD is a contract between a depositor and a bank or S&L. Unless the contract specifically states that the depositor has the right to redeem a CD early, the bank or S&L can insist that the money be left on deposit until the CD reaches its maturity date.

Hsu Hsiao-dan
Taiwan candidate

Model exploits her exposure in campaign

By JOHN POMFRET

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — As this island of 20 million inches toward democracy, a 30-year-old model has gained notoriety with a political campaign that relies on maximum exposure — nudity.

Hsu Hsiao-dan is running, sometimes naked, for a seat in Taiwan's Yuan legislature in the first election since the lifting of martial law two years ago.

Like the raucous chair-throwing sessions and fights that break out in the Yuan, Hsu's unusual campaign for the December vote indicates how much the island has changed since martial law.

During the 38 years that Taiwan lived under military rule, Hsu might have been locked up for stripping in public and demanding greater freedom and free love. Now, Taiwan's version of Cicciolina, the Italian porn star who won a seat in parliament, has become the most talked about woman on this island.

Every major newspaper has carried her half-naked picture. In-depth interviews on her sex life have appeared in leading magazines.

And although the "little cabbage," as she's called, is not expected to win, her campaign has added spice to Taiwan's changing political scene.

"My body is a political weapon," laughs Hsu, as she snuggles with one of her three cats in her downtown Taipei apartment. "My breasts are nuclear warheads."

A slight woman with thick eyebrows and an easy smile, Hsu is recognized everywhere she goes. Men tend to grin broadly and woman hiss when she walks by.

Hsu has cataloged her fame in three notebooks, filled with newspaper stories revealing her exploits. She has crammed several other photo albums with her nude pictures. She shows these with pride.

"When I dream, I am naked," she says. "What is more beautiful than that?"

Since last year, when Hsu first stripped to make a political point, she has been arrested several times, sentenced to 40 days in jail and fined. She remains serious about her campaign.

Public opinion is mixed.

"By stripping off her clothes, she is ripping the mask of hypocrisy from Taiwan," said one government official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Others criticize her as a politically naive publicity hound.

"Elections always produce crazy people like that," said Antonio Chiang, editor of Taiwan's top news magazine, The Journalist.

Hsu recently appeared on the steps of the legislature to demand more democracy in Taiwan. She had planned to stand there for one hour, posing as a model of the Goddess of Democracy, erected during the movement for freedom in Communist China's Tiananmen Square. But when she exposed her breasts, female police officers bundled her off to jail. She was released later that day.

"I was there to say that Taiwan has no right to gloat over the communist crackdown," she says. "We need more changes in our country, too."

Filipino rebel's arrest probably won't hurt guerrillas

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The arrest of a leading Communist figure has been hailed as a major blow to the rebels. But the insurgency that has persisted for two decades has weathered the capture of other key figures.

Satur Ocampo, 50, a member of the Communist Party's central committee, was arrested last week in a Manila suburb with his common-law wife, Carolina Malay.

"His arrest will hit the party quite hard because of his position in the movement," said military Chief of Staff Gen. Renato de Villa.

Maj. Gen. Ramon Montano, chief of the Philippine Constabulary, said the arrest was "the beginning of the end" of Southeast Asia's last major communist insurgency.

But in an editorial later in the week, the independent Philippine Daily Globe said, "We have had days like this before. ... Despite all the hoopla, the insurgency simply moved on, renewing itself and becoming more resilient than ever."

A leftist human rights group also expressed concern that Ocampo's arrest diminished chances for resuming peace talks to end the 20-year insurgency.

"Most likely, the leadership will go deeper underground and might answer the military operations with counter-military actions," the Ecumenical Movement for Justice and Peace said. "Peace will be as elusive as ever."

Ocampo's arrest follows claims by the military that the rebels are in disarray because of leadership differences. The rebels gained strength during the authoritarian rule of ousted President Ferdinand Marcos but have not found a formula for promoting their cause under the more popular administration of President Corazon Aquino.

About 10 members of the Central Committee have been arrested since 1987 although one of them, Romulo Kintanar, escaped. The military claims the party's armed wing, the New People's Army, has declined by about 8 percent to about 23,500 fighters, only half of whom are fully armed.

Israel awaiting word on swapping prisoners

JÉRUSALEM (AP) — Israeli officials said today they will consider making a hostage exchange with Shiite Moslems in Lebanon if they provide a list of prisoners they want freed from Israeli jails.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir told reporters in Jerusalem that Israel was "waiting for proposals" from the Shiites. ... "We hope we will get some proposals and it will be the end of the crisis."

Shamir's top aide, Avi Pazner, said Israel was awaiting the specific list of prisoners whose freedom the Shiites seek. The list was promised in a statement from a militant Shiite faction in Beirut on Thursday night.

After the faction, the Revolutionary Justice Organization, on Thursday suspended its threat to kill U.S. hostage Joseph Cicippio, Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin said Israel will examine the demands "on a positive basis."

The "freezing" of the death threat came just minutes before a deadline set by the group for killing Cicippio unless Israel handed over the Shiite clergyman it kidnapped last week from his home in south Lebanon.

Another Shiite Moslem faction that was holding Marine Lt. Col. William Higgins hostage said it killed him Monday because the clergyman, Sheik Abdul Karim Obeid, was not freed by Israel.

Israel radio quoted Shamir as saying Israel was moving closer to starting negotiations to free three captured Israeli soldiers in Lebanon. Israeli said it abducted Obeid on July 28 hoping to swap him for the three soldiers.

Israel has said it will also try to secure the release of 16 Western hostages, including Cicippio and seven other Americans.

Earlier today, Shamir discussed with Rabin, Foreign Minister Moshe Arens and Finance Minister Shimon Peres the demands made by the Revolutionary Justice Organization, an offshoot of the Iranian-backed Hezbollah, or Party of God.

Peres, who is also vice premier, was asked after a meeting with Shamir whether Iran was actively involved in the process. "I'm hopeful," he replied.

In its first statement, the Revolutionary Justice group demand that Obeid be freed. After suspending the threat to kill Cicippio, it also demanded that Israel release "a number of" Lebanese and Palestinian prisoners.

While the statement did not mention Israel's offer to exchange Shiite prisoners for Israeli POWs and foreign hostages, Israeli officials and commentators saw the halting of the threatened killing of Cicippio as a sign the Shiite radicals were ready to deal.

"If indeed there are real grounds for the report on a proposal for prisoners exchange, we shall examine it on a positive basis," Rabin told reporters in Jerusalem Thursday night.

Israeli officials noted the Shiite demands did not mention the Israeli air force navigator and two soldiers believed held by Hezbollah, and said Rabin's statement was meant to solicit a specific response regarding them.

Monument in Lebanon will honor Higgins, peacekeeping casualties

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Lebanon says it will build a monument to U.S. Marine Lt. Col. William Higgins and 164 other U.N. peacekeepers who have died while serving in that country.

"Lt. Col. Higgins would be very prominent in the memorial," Lebanon's ambassador to the U.N., Chawki Choueri, said Thursday. "He was one of the commanders and lost his life for the peacekeeping force."

A competition for the monument's design will soon be announced, according to Choueri. The most likely site for the monument will be southern Lebanon, where the peacekeepers are working to enforce a truce zone, Choueri said.

Higgins was heading a U.N. observer group when he was kidnapped on Feb. 17, 1988, by a pro-Iranian Shiite group, the Organization of the Oppressed on Earth.

The group accused Higgins of spying for the CIA, and announced Monday he had been hanged in retaliation for Israel's abduction last week of a Shiite cleric, Sheik Abdul Karim, believed to have directed kidnappings in Lebanon. In addition to Higgins, six members of the U.N. Truce Supervision Organization have died while on duty in Lebanon since the group's founding in 1948.

Four Irish members of the 5,854-strong U.N. peacekeeping force have died in two separate attacks over the last six months. Machine-gun fire from a Christian militia killed one man, and three died when their truck hit a mine.

Nations contributing to the U.N. forces are Fiji, Finland, France, Ghana, Ireland, Italy, Nepal, Norway and Sweden.

Canada's high court to debate abortion

By SOLL SUSSMAN

MONTREAL (AP) — The Supreme Court of Canada is returning from summer vacation for an emergency hearing to decide the case of a Quebec secretary who is pregnant and battling her former boyfriend to have an abortion.

Chantal Daigle, 21, has been barred from having an abortion by an injunction obtained by the ex-boyfriend, former nightclub bouncer Jean-Guy Tremblay. She will be in her 22nd week of pregnancy when the Supreme Court hears her case on Tuesday and any decision, unless it is soon, could be moot.

Canada has been without an abortion law since January 1988, when the Supreme Court ruled that procedures required for approval under the law infringed on a woman's rights.

That decision and a related one a year later left abortion as an issue between a woman and her doctor.

This summer, however, a series of cases in provincial courts brought attention to the legal void and turned abortion into a pressing national issue.

Prime Minister Brian Mulroney has said Parliament will confront the issue on return from summer recess but will not be rushed into a decision.

Only in French-speaking Quebec, Canada's second-most populous province, has an injunction preventing an abortion been allowed to stand.

Quebec's Court of Appeal split 3-2 in upholding the injunction. Justice Yves Bernier wrote for the majority that "the child that has been conceived but not born is a reality that must be taken into account."

About 10,000 pro-choice supporters protested the ruling in Montreal and smaller crowds staged demonstrations elsewhere in Canada.

Ms. Daigle at first hinted she would defy the injunction and seek an abortion in the United States, which could have brought a two-year prison sentence and $50,000 fine for contempt of court.

She since has said she would abide by the Supreme Court decision and raise the baby alone if the injunction is not lifted in time.

Most Quebec doctors will not perform abortions after the 20th week but Ms. Daigle could have the procedure done in the United States, where some doctors will perform them until the 24th week of pregnancy and thereafter.

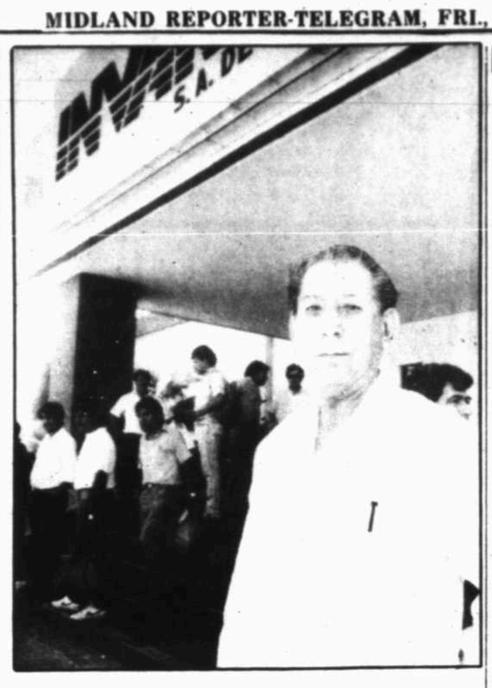

Although Ms. Daigle has not appeared in public in recent days, she said through relatives that she would not want help from Tremblay, 25, who obtained the injunction.

She said in court documents that during arguments Trembley had thrown her to the floor and threatened "to control and subdue" her.

Her lawyer, Daniel Bedard, told reporters Tuesday that he expects a decision in time for an abortion.

"I'm convinced that before she reaches her 24th week she will have a decision," Bedard said.

The Supreme Court hearing is shaping up as a major legal battle that will involve not only the lawyers for Ms. Daigle and Tremblay but also the federal government.

Labor leader Abel Hernandez says a rival union leader is illegally forcing workers to strike at U.S.-owned maquiladora plants in Reynosa.

Labor union feuds idle maquiladoras

REYNOSA, Mexico (AP) — Feuding between rival labor union leaders has prompted strikes idling about 3,000 workers over the past week at U.S.-operated manufacturing plants along the border.

Workers and plant managers said there is no labor-management dispute involved in the strikes called at 11 plants in the Texas-Mexico border "maquiladora" program.

Economic development officials from McAllen, just north of the border, were so worried about what effect the strikes would have on future efforts to attract industry that they sent delegations Thursday to Mexico City and Washington, D.C., to push for a resolution.

Plant managers said Mexican labor leaders have harassed them in the state of Tamaulipas and other areas of the border for years, and that some U.S. companies are becoming reluctant to locate plants in Mexico.

Labor boss Jose Rafael Morales de la Cruz of the powerful Confederation of Mexican Workers, known by its Spanish initials as CTM, provoked the Reynosa strikes to protest employees joining a CTM faction controlled by rival leader Abel Hernandez.

Although the 11 plants are not under Morales' control, no one is allowed under Mexican law to cross the red-and-black banners Morales' people hung at the plants to signify a strike.

Hernandez and Morales are equally certified by the Mexican government to represent maquiladora employees, but Morales has refused to recognize Hernandez' faction, despite two court injunctions ordering him to stop the strikes at Hernandez-controlled plants.

"He (Morales) wants to control everything," Hernandez said. "He doesn't want anybody else to work. We have a right to work."

Morales was out of town and was unavailable for comment, as was another spokesman for his CTM faction.

Morales served notice to four more plants organized under the Hernandez faction that strikes would be called at their operations Friday, but management at those plants on Thursday called a work stoppage of their own in sympathy with the 11 other idled operations.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Mexicans encouraged to keep savings 'home'

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — Convincing Mexicans to keep their savings inside the country is essential for Mexico's economic recovery, says President Carlos Salinas de Gortari.

Salinas inaugurated the Fifth National Banking Meeting here Thursday with a plea to bankers: "Improve the quality of attention that customers receive."

"Making savings grow, dividing it efficiently and equitably among the economic areas and branches, giving credits to groups with lower incomes so they can incorporate themselves into the task of development is part of your responsiblity," he said.

During the past few months Mexicans brought back $2.3 billion deposited in foreign banks, helping to bring the country's foreign reserves to $6 billion, said Miguel Mancera, general director of the Bank of Mexico, the country's central bank.

Akihito addresses press

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's new emperor held his first news conference today and said his main duties include promoting international peace and upholding the nation's constitution.

Emperor Akihito and Empress Michiko had a carefully orchestrated 37-minute meeting with Japanese and foreign reporters at the Imperial Palace, fielding questions that had been prepared long in advance.

Seated side by side at a table draped with gold brocade cloth, the royal couple spoke slowly and distinctly, although the empress spoke so softly her voice was like a whisper.

"I want to fulfill my duties as emperor that are laid out in the constitution to work for the happiness of the people and to have a monarchy that is fitting for the present age," the 55-year-old Akihito said.

He ascended the Chrysanthemum Throne on Jan. 7 upon the death of his father, whose 62-year reign was the longest in Japanese history and included Japan's defeat in World War II and its subsequent rise to an economic superpower.

Funeral rites restricted

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — Police imposed restrictions today on the funeral of two slain activists in a township near Cape Town and reported a series of skirmishes between police and mixed-race youths.

In other incidents, police said five blacks were killed in three separate clashes in Natal Province, where supporters of militant and relatively conservative political factions have engaged in a three-year power struggle claiming hundreds of lives.

In Soweto, Johannesburg's main black township, hand grenades were thrown late Thursday into the home of a well-known anti-apartheid poet, Mzwakhe Mbuli. The Rev. Frank Chikane, general secretary of the South African Council of Churches, said no one was injured and blamed "agents of apartheid" for the attack.

Seven hanged in Seoul

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The government hanged seven convicted murderers today and said the executions should be taken as a warning that it will not tolerate the nation's rising crime rate.

They were the first executions in South Korea in more than two years.

The Justice Ministry said the men had been on death row since 1985. They were hanged at prisons in Seoul, Taegu and Kwangju, the ministry said.

"Capital punishment will help safeguard our society against home-destroying criminals and repeated offenders in violence," said a ministry spokesman.

President Roh Tae-woo said in July that violent crime had "grown to alarming proportions" and ordered greater enforcement.

"We can accomplish nothing if lawlessness and violence make people feel uneasy," Roh said.

2 die in fireworks mishap

TOKYO (AP) — About 350 fireworks accidentally exploded at the same time on a barge off the port of Yokohoma, killing two technicians and injuring seven others, police said Thursday.

More than 100,000 spectators were watching an annual display Wednesday night when one technician set off a charge on a skyrocket aboard the 1,037-ton barge, berthed about 900 feet from a seafront park, police said.

They said the sudden blast ignited 350 other fireworks aboard the barge.

Kanagawa Prefectural Police spokesman Teruo Matoba said those injured were taken by a coast guard boat to nearby hospitals in Yokohama, 18 miles south of Tokyo, for treatment of burns and bruises.

Police were investigating.

Phillips Petroleum Company currently operates approximately 110 miles of plastic pipeline in Texas for which it has applied to the Railroad Commission of Texas for a waiver of certain of the testing and plastic pipe requirements as set forth in 49 Code of Federal Regulations, Sections 192.59 and 192.513 as adopted by the Commission under 16 Texas Administration Code, Section 7.70. The waivers are requested in accordance with the authority granted to the Commission pursuant to 49 U.S.C.A., Section 1672(d) and Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. art. 6053-1 (Vernon Supp. 1989).

The Commission has set a hearing on August 29, 1989, at 10:00 a.m. in the William B. Travis Building, 1701 N. Congress Avenue, Austin, Texas, to take evidence on whether or not these waivers should be granted. Any interested person may intervene in the proceeding by filing a Motion to Participate with the Legal Division, Railroad Commission of Texas, P. O. Drawer 12967, Austin, Texas, 78711-2967, on or before August 24, 1989. Any interested person who desires to file evidence in the matter must file its exhibits on or before August 8, 1989.

PUBLIC NOTICE

The Federal Communications Commission in Washington, D.C. has designated for comparative hearing the applications of Midland Educational Broadcasting Foundation and Radio Ministries seeking authority to construct a new FM station on Channel 211A at Midland, Texas. The hearing is presently set for September 27, 1989 on the following issues:

1. To determine whether there is a reasonable possibility that the tower height and location proposed by Midland would constitute a hazard to air navigation.

2. To determine: (a) whether a share-time arrangement between the applicants would result in the most effective use of the channel and thus better serve the public interest, and if so, the terms and conditions thereof; (b) the extent to which each of the proposed operations will be will be integrated into the overall cultural and educational objectives of the respective applicants; and (c) whether other factors in the record demonstrate that one applicant will provide a superior non-commercial radio broadcast service.

3. To determine, in light of the evidence adduced pursuant to the specified issues, which of the applications should be granted, if any.

The application of Radio Ministries is available for public inspection during normal business hours at: 2800 N. A. Midland TX 79705.
