Syria fires missiles at Israeli jet fighters

CHTAURA, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian anti-aircraft missile batteries fired at high-flying Israeli jets over the eastern Bekaa Valley at daybreak today but none was hit, according to Lebanese who said they saw the firing. The Christian Voice of Lebanon radio also reported that Syrian missiles were fired.

Syria and Israel had no comment but Israel Radio said unidentified Israeli sources denied the report. Israel has said Syria risks war if the surface-to-air missiles aren't removed, but has shelved plans to knock them out to give President Reagan's Mideast troubleshooter more time to defuse the crisis. Lebanese citizens in Chtaura, a Lebanese city near the Syrian frontier, said they saw two SAM-6s blast off from half-track vehicles two miles south of the Lebanese border airfield of Rayak into the clear, blue sky toward the white vapor trail of the jets.

This reporter was shaken out of his bed by two explosions at 4:50 a.m., and from his hotel window, saw two vapor trails heading toward the contrails of the high-flying jets. The missile trails died out before reaching the jets. The jets did not bomb.

Military sources said the SAM-6 can destroy targets up to 35,000 feet, and they speculated the Israeli jets were flying much higher than that.

The reports, if confirmed, would be Syria's first use of its Soviet-made surface-to-air missiles since they were moved into the Bekaa Valley on April 29, spurring the most dangerous Syrian-Israeli confrontation since the 1973 Mideast war.

It came while U.S. envoy Philip C. Habib was in Jerusalem on a mission to ease the crisis between Israel, which demands the missiles be withdrawn from Lebanon, and Syria, which refuses to move them.

It came on the morning after Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin appealed to Syrian President Hafez Assad to "retreat from the brink" and withdraw the missile batteries from Lebanon.

Begin said Monday night in an address to Israel's Parliament that the Syrians would pose "a danger to Israel's existence" and dominate all of Lebanon if they controlled Lebanon's skies and its central mountain peaks.

"War would be inevitable, and in the worst possible conditions for Israel," Begin said. He also disclosed that he had ordered his air force to destroy the Syrian missiles 12 days ago but canceled the operation first because of bad weather and then because the United States pleaded for time to solve the crisis peacefully.

Conservative Democrats paving way for a tax cut compromise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Conservative Democrats who helped push President Reagan's budget cuts through the House are now trying to lay the groundwork for a compromise tax cut smaller than the administration wants but still spread over three years.

The numerous variations of a three-year plan under study by members of the Conservative Democratic Forum all fall short of the 30 percent reduction in personal income tax rates that Reagan insists is needed to revitalize economic expansion.

Rep. Kent Hance, D-Texas, who has been drafting alternative tax bills for the 47-member conservative group, said a 25 percent cut over three years — 5 percent in the first year and 10 percent in each of the next two years — is the maximum our people will consider.

With political momentum on its side following last week's passage of a Reagan-inspired budget plan by the Democratic-controlled House, the administration has been unwilling so far to move off of the president's tax plan. Instead, Reagan aides merely have expressed a willingness to listen to alternatives.

"I suspect that we have momentum with us now," Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan told a group of financial analysts Monday. "He (the president) need not give ground. I would suspect that by staying firm on this one as we did on the budget cuts, we again will carry the day."

Regan said the administration is insisting on a three-year tax cut, but would consider alternatives to the make-up of the president's plan "if there is a better one out there."

Norman Ture, an undersecretary of the Treasury for tax policy, said the administration is unwilling to compromise now because Congress keeps moving closer toward Reagan's position.

The chances for the president's plan "look awfully good to me," Ture said. "But if you can't get what you want, you see what you can get."

He said the administration is willing to look at any tax plan "that has a great big cut in marginal rates," whether all in one year or spread out over three years.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, has proposed a one-year tax cut totaling about $40 billion — $14 billion less than Reagan wants in the first year of his plan.

Lawmakers snap, bark in rabies bill debate

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A rabies control bill that would allow county commissioners and the State Board of Health to set up quarantines for up to 180 days in areas with confirmed cases of the deadly disease received tentative house approval amid a chorus of barks and yelps from legislators.

Representatives were to cast the final vote today on the bill that would allow state officials to require vaccination and restraint of domestic animals suspected of having rabies and impose a 10-day quarantine on the animals.

The rabies control bill — already passed by the Senate — ran into opposition from legislators who said the ordinance-making power it would give counties interfered too much with people's daily lives.

Debate and the voice vote of approval were punctuated by yips and woofs from members on the floor.

Rep. Tom DeLay, R-Sugar Land, introduced an amendment that would have struck all but one provision of the bill. Asked if his change was designed to gut the measure, he said:

"Yes. This bill is foaming at the mouth, members. Let's put it to sleep."

Rep. David London, D-Bonham, called the amendment "stupid" and urged rejection. It failed, 29-87.

Waving a map of Texas illustrated with the sites of rabies outbreaks, London argued for passage of his bill.

"Rabies is serious business with me. I'm talking about human lives," he said. "I guarantee your county has rabies, and if you want to vote against this bill — a record vote — and somebody in your district gets rabies, well... more power to you."

"Let's not get emotional about human lives and all that," countered DeLay. "Those of you who represent farmers, ranchers, and sheep and goat herds should know they aren't going to like this."

In Social Security benefits

Reagan seeks early retirement penalties

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan wants to sharply cut Social Security benefits for Americans who retire early, offer more incentives for people who work past age 65 and reduce the tax burden for workers who pay into the system, administration sources say.

Reagan's plan, being revealed today by Health and Human Services Secretary Richard S. Schweiker, is a far-reaching set of proposals designed to save the destitute system from possible bankruptcy.

Highlights of the package to be submitted to Congress, as outlined by White House sources who asked not to be identified, included:

—More than doubling the penalty for people who retire before age 65. Instead of getting 80 percent of full Social Security benefits at 62, they would get only 55 percent.

—Abolishing limits on how much people between the ages of 65 and 72 can earn without losing benefits.

—Keeping the minimum age for full benefits at 65, instead of 68 as proposed by the House Ways and Means subcommittee on Social Security.

—Lowering Social Security tax rates on 114 million workers now paying into the system. Although no figures were available, sources said a 7.05 percent payroll tax scheduled to take effect in 1985 would be pared somewhat and taxes would be reduced from current 6.65 percent levels by 1990.

—Delaying for three months the July 1982 cost-of-living adjustment for the nation's 36 million Social Security beneficiaries to save about $4.5 billion. The 11.2 percent increase due this July would not be affected, and deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said Reagan would honor his pledge not to reduce Social Security pensions for those already retired.

The administration also is reportedly considering cuts in survivors' benefits for widows and other economy measures in the $140 billion Social Security program, which could run out of cash in late 1982 or in 1983.

The proposed penalties for early retirement are aimed at reversing a decades-long trend and saving Social Security more than $17 billion between 1982 and 1986.

About 1.6 million workers retire on Social Security each year, and agency officials say at least 60 percent are under age 65.

Congress made it possible for workers to draw benefits at age 62, starting in 1961.

Before then, government statistics indicate, about three-fourths of men between 62 and 64 years old were working, by 1975, that had dropped to less than 59 percent.

City officials to study police turnover

By DEBORAH BRIDGES
Staff Writer

City fathers today directed the city staff to conduct a study of the large turnover rate in the Pampa Police Department and asked the personnel director to look into the officers' reasons for leaving.

The instructions came during the regular commission meeting held at 9:30 a.m. in city hall.

While considering salary changes for April, Mayor H. R. Thompson asked City Manager Mack Wofford if the Pampa Police Department was "up to authorized strength."

Personnel Director David Callison answered that there was currently a vacancy for one patrolman on the department which had been applied for by a former police officer.

The city police department has been working with two and three vacant positions for several months. Police officials have said there has been difficulty in attracting qualified applicants, especially certified police officers, to fill the vacancies.

Four officers resigned from the department last fall, giving better paying jobs as their reasons for leaving.

"Isn't that an unusual amount of turnover?" Commissioner O. M. Prigmore asked.

City Manager Mack Wofford explained the turnover rate in police departments in general, saying it was not uncommon to have a high turnover rate.

"I don't know if it is common or not," Prigmore said, "but it seems when you compare the fire department and the police department, you see a stability in the fire department, but not in the police department."

"It seems to me something could be done about this," he added. "It indicates you have a serious problem."

Discussing reasons for the turnover rate, Wofford said, "Compensation is the first thing you'll hear about. Then conditions. It looks like a good thing until they do it."

Wofford said the turnover rate seesaws to an extent. "It was more stable two or three years ago than it is now," he commented.

Mayor Thompson suggested a study of the turnover rate going back two to three years.

The city manager said, "If you go back and read the letters of resignation, 85 percent of them will cite compensation. People working in one area will move to the oil-related industry. No doubt, compensation has something to do with it. It could be something else. I don't know."

Defending the police department, Callison commented, "We're already getting back two patrolmen who went to Wexler. This is two situations where they love the police department and are taking a reduction in pay to come back to it."

Mayor Thompson commented, "Well, this report on the turnover is something to look at. The departing interviews is a good idea, too."

Callison suggested that when an employee gives his resignation, he be interviewed by the police chief or captain.

"You should do it," Prigmore answered. "They'll talk to you before they will talk to their immediate supervisor."

Commissioners approved first reading of a renumbered ordinance concerning allowing mobile homes on Block 1, and lots 1 through 10 of Block 2 of the Wynnealea Addition, and all of Block 1 of the Priest Addition. The area includes the central blocks of Nelson, Sumner and Faulkner streets.

Mayor Thompson made it clear before reconsidering the item, that no comments would be accepted from the audience on the hotly contested zoning issue.

"This item has been discussed extensively in other commission meetings and public hearings. So we will have no discussion from the audience," he said.

In the April 28 meeting of the city commission, area residents, opposed to the rezoning, strongly voiced their opinions to the city fathers.

When faced with a vote on the matter, commissioners declined to act and the item died for lack of a motion.

Today, commissioners looked at each other several times before Commissioner Coyle Ford mumbled the motion favoring acceptance of the renumbered ordinance. Then the other commissioners rushed in to second. It was passed unanimously.

In other action, commissioners awarded the bids for the landfill trash compactor to Conley-Lott-Nichols for the low bid of $99,049. Two Tractors with mowers were approved to be purchased from Crossman Implement at a total cost of $10,870. The purchase of two half-ton pickup trucks from Culberson - Stowers Chevrolet and one truck from Harold Barrett Ford was also approved by the commission.

Salary changes for April and current accounts payable were also approved in today's commission meeting.

Congress setting terms on Salvadorian aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Committees on both sides of Congress are setting conditions on U.S. military aid and advisers in El Salvador while agreeing to lift a ban on arms sales to Argentina with no more than non-binding restrictions.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted Monday to require withdrawal of military aid and advisers from El Salvador unless President Reagan certifies that the ruling junta is trying to improve human rights and effect democratic reforms.

The proposed sanctions were added to a $5.6 billion foreign aid bill despite a warning from Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. that they could trigger more violence in the Central American republic.

The vote was 11-1, with three Republicans joining eight Democrats to support it and only Sen. Richard G. Lugar, R-Ind., opposing it. Five Republicans were absent.

The action paralleled a vote two weeks ago by the House Foreign Affairs Committee tacking similar conditions onto aid to El Salvador. Eight Republicans joined 18 Democrats on that vote.

In response to a separate Haig appeal, the Senate committee softened a proposed amendment Monday to tie renewal of U.S. military aid to Argentina to efforts by that country to account for 5,000 persons listed as "disappeared."

The foreign aid bill, and any conditions on U.S. aid, must be accepted by the Republican-controlled Senate and the Democrat-dominated House before becoming law.

Second hunger striker near death

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — IRA hunger striker Francis Hughes is blind, nearly deaf and slipping in and out of coma as he nears death on his 59th day without food, his family said today.

Spokesmen for Protestant and Roman Catholic militants said the all-out sectarian warfare that was predicted — but did not develop — after the death last week of another Irish Republican Army hunger striker, Bobby Sands, could break out if Hughes dies.

Violence flared overnight as Hughes' condition deteriorated. Dozens of Molotov cocktails were hurled at security forces in Londonderry during the night and police said they returned fire when snipers attacked in the Roman Catholic Creggan district in Belfast, where police and army patrols were attacked with more than 1,500 Molotov cocktails last week. Security forces said they found a storage hut containing 12 crates of bottles, a gallon of hydrochloric acid, gasoline, funnels and cloth twisted into wicks — all for making acid and gasoline bombs.

The Belfast Brigade also urged residents of Catholic areas to keep their children away from army vehicles.

Officer eager to go to work

Kenneth Hopson has been a patrolman on the Pampa Police Force for 19 months, and he continues to wake up eager to go to work.

"I've always wanted to do this since I was knee high to a grasshopper," he says with a broad smile.

"I was in the Air Force and two or three other jobs. I hated to get up and go to the old eight-to-five," he recalls. "Now I don't mind coming to work."

Hopson says he prefers patrolling the city streets to assembly line fare. "It's something new every day," he says.

"From day to day, you never know what's going to happen next. Sometimes you get nothing but routine calls, boring stuff. Then, like last night, you're really busy. I was up at the station until 2 o'clock making out reports," Hopson explains.

A graduate of Pampa High School, Hopson was born and raised here.

Being a local boy can be an asset, he says.

"Some of these guys come here from somewhere else, and when they get a call, they don't have any idea where they are supposed to go," Hopson says. "I know exactly where to go," he adds.

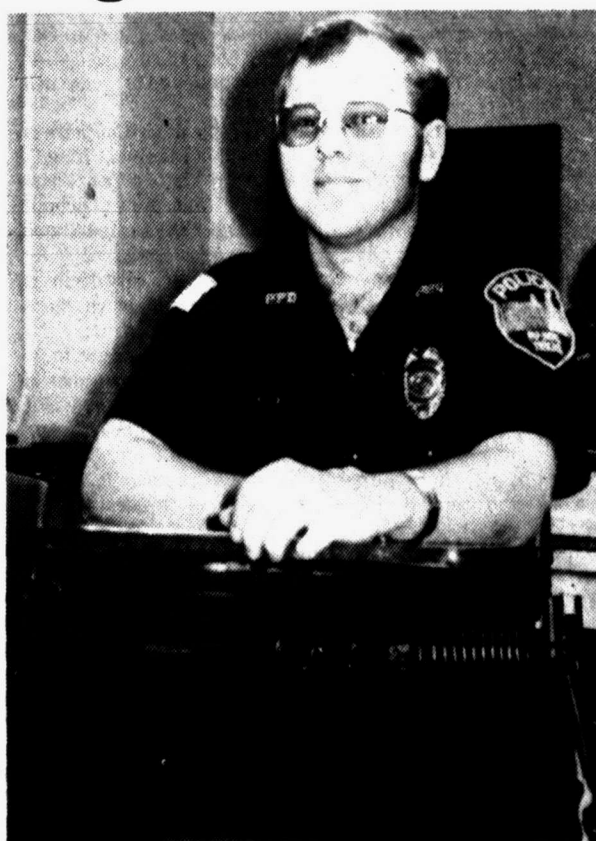

Hopson says he sometimes runs into people through his work that he went to school with. "Some call me pig, some of them say, 'Hey, I see you finally made it,'" he says.

"The ones that gave me a lot of problems are in the pen (prison) or dead," he comments.

"In my opinion it helps with the black adults I went to school with," he says.

"When we get a call like that, and another police officer shows, the blacks clam up. They know he's a stranger. They'll talk to me. I'll remember them by name, too. It's a big advantage," Hopson explains.

Prior to becoming a Pampa police officer, Hopson served in the United States Air Force for four years. He worked part time for the Sedgwick County Sheriff's Office in Wichita, Kan., for two years while he was in the Air Force.

CHECK AREA WHERE BODY FOUND. Police investigators comb an area in DeKalb County, near I-20 in Atlanta, Tuesday morning after the body of 17-year-old William Barrett was found in the area. Members of the task force investigating the deaths of 26 young Atlantans are involved with the investigation. (AP Laserphoto)

Body of black Atlantan found

ATLANTA (AP) - The body of a black teen-ager found early today in a wooded area east of Atlanta was identified as that of 17-year-old William Barrett, who had been reported missing during the night, police said.

"We are going on the assumption that the child was murdered," said Chuck Johnson, DeKalb County police spokesman.

Johnson said he expected the case to be turned over to a special Atlanta police task force investigating the deaths of 26 other young blacks since July 1979. Members of the task force were called to the scene when the body was discovered.

"We believe it is related," Johnson said. "It certainly fits the profile of the other" slayings.

The cause of Barrett's death was not immediately known, but the case was being treating as a homicide, he said.

An autopsy was scheduled for later today.

A missing persons report on Barrett was received almost simultaneously with the report that his body had been found, police said.

"A rough guess would be that he had been dead approximately three hours," Johnson said, adding that the body was "not decomposed at all."

He declined to release details of where the youth was last seen, what clothing was found on the body and whether there were any obvious signs of the cause of death.

"We're afraid that if lots of details about the youth are released, it will jeopardize our investigation," Johnson said.

The body was discovered between 1 a.m. and 2 a.m. just outside the Atlanta city limits in DeKalb County.

Today's discovery was similar to at least six earlier cases in which a body was found by roadside in a wooded area. By contrast, six of the last seven victims had been found in or near area rivers.

Meanwhile, an aide to Vice President George Bush says a decision could come as early as the end of the week on a request by Atlanta officials for $1.26 million in federal aid to help finance a high-security summer recreation program for the city's youths.

Pete Teeley, press secretary for Bush, made the prediction after the vice president met in Washington with Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson and other local officials to hear their pitch for federal aid.

The Reagan administration already has allocated $1.5 million to Atlanta to help finance the investigation.

Federal officials also have funneled $1 million to the city for counseling of youths who have developed psychological problems as a result of the string of unsolved slayings that began in July 1979.

But the local officials told Bush that more federal money is needed for the "Safe Summer" program because some 70,000 school children will be streaming out of schools next month.

Crater may have gulped its last

WINTER PARK, Fla. (AP) - A gaping hole in the ground that sucked in a house, trees and expensive sports cars as it grew and grew may have gulped its last, or so officials hope.

Engineers said Monday the sinkhole, which had reached a diameter of 400 feet by Monday and caused $2 million in damage, apparently was stabilizing. They said except for sloughing off its ragged edges, it was not expected to expand much more.

"It may slope out a bit more, but it's starting to stabilize," said Dan Fulford, a geotechnical engineering consultant.

Dr. Frank Kujawa, a geology professor at the University of Central Florida, also agreed that more erosion was unlikely. He said the mud-and-water-filled base of the sinkhole had sunk to the Floridan Aquifer, an underground limestone latticework underlying all of Central Florida that supplies much of the area's fresh water.

Experts blamed a recent drought-caused lowering of the underground water table for formation of the sinkhole. Withdrawal of water from an underground limestone cavity created a vacuum, causing the ground to collapse when it couldn't withstand the weight of surface earth, vegetation and buildings, they said.

"There'll be a little bit of additional movement," said Suheil Jammal, a sinkhole expert who heads the group of consultants advising this Central Florida suburb. "It's normal that the top edges are sloughing off."

The pit began forming Friday night and grew to alarming proportions Saturday when it swallowed a three-bedroom home, expensive sports cars, a camper, parts of two businesses, a number of trees and most of an Olympic-size swimming pool.

Four small businesses with their backs on the south edge of the chasm suffered structural damage, and parts of the buildings also crumbled into the hole.

Officials believed they would have to be condemned, but they said there appeared to be little danger to other streets and property around the sinkhole.

City officials met with representatives of Gov. Bob Graham, but they held little hope of state or federal aid to compensate for losses estimated at more than $2 million by City Commissioner Dave Johnston.

Vandalism to vehicle windows being probed

Police are continuing the investigation of six reports of windows smashed in parked vehicles sometime the night of Sunday night or early Monday morning.

Police Chief J. J. Ryzman said he did not know if the vandalism was related.

"It appears to be a similarity in the vandalism incidents," he said.

He said officers were checking for possible suspects in the vandalism, but no arrests had been made.

Six Pampa residents reported broken windows Monday with damage estimates amounting to more than $800.

Archie Lee Maness, 431 N. Sumner, reported someone broke the window on the right side of his 1975 Ford while it was parked at his residence. Damage was estimated at $67.

Jill Duggan, 2401 Navajo, reported someone broke the window, valued at $100, on the left side of a 1969 Volkswagen parked at the address.

Ken Elliot, 2234 Lynn, reported someone broke the window of a 1977 Ford while it was parked at his residence. Damage was estimated at $67.

The rear window of a parked 1980 Suburban belonging to W. L. Gabelmann, 2564 Aspen, was broken. Estimated damage was $120.

David E. Holt, 2544 Christine, reported someone shattered the back window of a 1975 Suburban while it was parked in front of his residence. He estimated the window was worth $200.

Larry Houston reported for Larry Houston Motors, 900 W. Wilks, that someone had shattered the front and rear windows of a 1980 Oldsmobile. Damage was estimated at $300.

Basic skill results now available at schools

The Pampa Independent School District has received the test results of the Texas Assessment of Basic Skills tests taken by 1,135 third, fifth, and ninth grade students, said Bob Phillips, district superintendent.

Individual student results will be released only to the student, parents, or guardian, and school personnel directly involved with the student's educational program.

Parents are urged to set up appointments with the teachers of the participating students to examine the child's test results.

School district and campus aggregated scores will be released to the public and the press at the first scheduled meeting of the district's board of trustees after June 1.

Phillips said he and members of the district's staff will present the results and a detailed analysis of what the results mean for future planning and educational programs.

New FM country-music station for Pampa

A 32,000-watt FM radio station will go on the air Monday in Pampa, serving the area with modern country music. The station, located at 100 on the FM dial will have the call letters, KOMX - FM.

"The modern country concept on which KOMX will be programmed will include artists such as Charlie Pride, Ann Murray, Glenn Campbell, Kenny Rogers, among many other," said owner Jim Hughes. Hughes also owns KGRO - AM radio station here.

The progressive country format was selected because it is the largest segment of the radio audience not now being served by a Pampa radio station, Hughes said. He added that in the past few years, country music has changed and now includes a much broader group.

"Although KGRO in the past has played a combination of adult contemporary and modern country, with the new facility, KGRO now will be devoted entirely to adult contemporary and KOMX will be exclusively devoted to modern country," he said.

The antenna for the new FM station is mounted on top of the 300 foot broadcast tower north of Pampa.

The daily operating hours of KOMX will be 5:55 a.m. to midnight.

Police attend crime school

SAN MARCOS - Two Pampa police officers attended a 40-hour crime prevention course at Southwest Texas State University recently.

Kenneth Hopson and J. D. Smith of the Pampa Police Department were two of 28 law enforcement officers participating in the course on the practical application of the techniques of crime prevention. The workshop was held April 27 through May 1 at the Texas Crime Prevention Institute located at the university.

Bracero plan gets mixed reactions

WASHINGTON (AP) - A proposal - favored by President Reagan - to once again allow Mexican workers to legally enter Texas to work on a temporary basis has drawn the endorsement of a Texas congressman but scathing criticism from the head of a Hispanic organization.

Rep. Sam B. Hall Jr., D-Texas, gave his backing Monday, saying a similar project, the bracero program, worked when it was in effect two decades and would again succeed in cutting down the illegal alien problem that plagues Texas.

"It worked fine. It was a rather popular program, and a very small illegal alien program existed during the time it was going on," Hall said.

Ruben Bonilla, president of the League of United Latin American Citizens, bitterly denounced the proposition, saying the bracero program of 1942 to 1964 was in effect "was a dismal failure" and added it is "absurd" to consider bringing it back again.

The New York Times reported Monday that the White House staff has developed a detailed proposal for a guest-worker program. Although the president has not yet reviewed it or received advice from his Cabinet, "he is believed to favor such a program," the newspaper said.

An official was quoted as saying, "On this question, there is a strong tidal force that stems straight out of the Oval Office."

The president said during a campaign visit to Texas last September that he favored a policy that would permit hundreds of thousands of Mexicans to enter the United States and work on a temporary basis.

Officials of the Mexican government in Mexico City declined to comment on the proposal until they could learn more details.

The proposal of granting visas to Mexicans who want to go back and forth across the border while holding down jobs is one Reagan said he plans to discuss with Mexican president Jose Lopez Portilla, who is slated to visit Washington June 8-9.

Thomas O. Enders, the president's designee for assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, was in Mexico last week and discussed the possibility of a guest-worker program, he said. Enders said he advised them of the United States' preliminary efforts, but did not indicate the reaction of the Mexican officials.

Congress is expected to be asked for its approval of a guest-worker program even if it should be established by executive agreement between Reagan and Lopez Portilla.

The bracero program brought 4 million to 5 million agricultural workers to the United States during the 22 years it was in effect.

Joseph Ghougassian, a senior policy adviser at the White House, has recommended a temporary worker program as the best way to deal with the current illegal alien problem.

If the border cannot be sealed and if the influx of illegal aliens cannot be curbed, Ghougassian said in a memorandum to his superiors, then "it is best to document the undocumented entrants."

The bracero program ended after labor unions and Democrats joined in opposition, but Ghougassian said "a sound public relations program could deal effectively with any initial opposition" to another guest-worker program.

Reagan has expressed particular interest in a suggestion by Texas Gov. Bill Clements - to allow Mexican workers to move freely into industries where they are needed instead of tying them to specific employers as under the old bracero program.

Arnold Torres, congressional liaison for LULAC, was among several representatives of Hispanic and labor groups who met Thursday at the White House with Reagan aides and expressed their disapproval.

Bess Truman critical

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) - Former first lady Bess Truman remained hospitalized in critical condition today after kidney and heart complications developed following hip surgery, a hospital spokesman said.

Tom Peck, a spokesman for Research Medical Center in Kansas City, said Mrs. Truman, 96, spent a quiet night in the intensive care unit.

He said her blood pressure stabilized and her potassium level returned to normal during the night, but doctors continued to monitor her kidney output.

"It's nip and tuck," Mrs. Truman's long-time personal physician, Dr. Wallace Graham, said Monday evening. "But I certainly think we can beat it."

Graham said Mrs. Truman's kidneys began to fail Sunday night, causing her potassium level to fall very low, a condition which could lead to heart failure. He said the former first lady also had experienced cardiac irregularities and fluctuations in her blood pressure, but the problems were "under control."

"Anyone 96 should be considered in critical condition until removed from the intensive care unit," Graham said. "Statistics show the percentages are against her, but all things considered, she seems to be holding up quite well."

State adding traffic lights here

AUSTIN - Bids to install traffic signals at the intersection of State Highway 152 and Farm to Market 282 at Pampa are scheduled to be received May 13 by the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation. Texas highway department officials have announced.

Amarillo District Engineer Al McKee said the signals to be installed at the intersection of Alcock and Price Road will be traffic actuated. He said the signal lights will remain green for State Highway 152 (Alcock) traffic until FM 282 (Price Road) traffic triggers a detector loop for a signal change.

T. L. Armstrong of Amarillo, is the department's engineer supervising the installation.

Reward committee says Wood case near solution

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The head of a committee that posted a $100,000 reward in the Judge John H. Wood Jr. assassination investigation says the FBI is near a solution in the case and that one or more persons have qualified for the money.

"I can report to you today that one or more persons have provided the FBI with information which will, in its judgment, lead to successful prosecutions in the Wood case," attorney Sam D. Millsap Jr. told a news conference Monday.

Millsap, spokesman for the Committee for Justice, announced cut-off of the reward offer for any future information in the case.

He said his prepared statement was reviewed and approved by Jack Lawn, special agent-in-charge of the San Antonio FBI office, and Justice Department attorneys Ray Jahn and John Emerson, prosecutors who have headed the investigation since last December.

"I cannot say the case has been solved," said Millsap, who declined to speculate on when indictments may be returned. "A lot of work still has to be done. I'm optimistic that the case is near its solution, but I haven't been told by anyone in the FBI that that's the case, so we can only speculate."

However, Millsap said the reward might not be paid for years, after any appeals have run their course. And he said the identities of those receiving the money may never be made public.

The Committee for Justice — comprised of attorneys, businessmen and others throughout the state — announced the reward the day Wood was buried and have extended it five times during course of the investigation. In addition, the Justice Department approved an additional $25,000 reward in the case.

Wood, 63, a federal judge known as "Maximum John" because he was tough on narcotics offenders, was killed on May 29, 1979, by a single .243-caliber bullet fired by a sniper outside his fashionable San Antonio condominium. His death touched off one of the most massive FBI investigations in history.

The grand jury investigating the killing has scheduled its next session for May 20. In recent months it has concentrated its efforts on friends, relatives and associates of convicted narcotics trafficker Jimmy Chagra and convicted contract killer Charles V. Harrelson, both of whom are in jail on other charges.

Chagra, since convicted and sentenced to 30 years without parole, was scheduled to be tried before Wood at the time of the assassination. Harrelson, released from prison in 1978 on a 15-year sentence for a kill-for-hire slaying, is jailed at Houston without bond.

"I have been advised... that the reward offer has been a valuable tool in the investigation and that, following final convictions, such person or persons who have provided useful information will be eligible for all or part of the $100,000 reward," Millsap's statement said.

"I have also been advised by the FBI and the prosecutors assigned to the case that the reward offer has served its purpose and is no longer needed."

Millsap said that neither he nor any other member of the committee had been provided the name of any informant or any other details of the investigation. He said it was possible the committee would disburse the reward through the FBI without ever being told the identities of its recipient or recipients.

He said he did not know whether convict Jerry Ray James, a former member of the FBI's 10 most wanted fugitives, was or was not a candidate for the reward.

Last week, New Mexico Gov. Bruce King granted James, 42, a conditional release in a deal with federal authorities for cooperation in the case.

James allegedly allowed conversations he had with Chagra at the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan., last year to be taped by federal agents. The tapes allegedly linked Chagra to the Wood killing.

Although saying he had no information that James was eligible for any reward money, Millsap said the committee had no qualms about paying the reward to a convict or ex-convict, if the FBI recommended it.

"Angels do not witness deals that are made in hell," Millsap said. "I'd like nothing better for us to give this money to someone who preaches in a local church. But I don't think that'll be the case and I'm not comfortable with the possibility that this money may go to someone that I'd prefer not to eat dinner with."

Millsap said the Committee for Justice offered the reward because the death of Wood, the first federal judge in modern times to be assassinated, threatened the American system of justice.

"When federal judges or prosecutors can be assassinated, can be attacked, and (the attackers) get away with it, do so with impunity, the nothing about our system can remain sacred," he said.

committee last week, 7-4.

"It's a bad law and we need to have it off the books," said Rep. Al Luna, D-Houston, sponsor of the repeal bill.

Illegal alien education bill advances

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A bill repealing Texas' law that denies free public schooling to children of illegal aliens has gained preliminary approval in the House.

The measure, advanced Monday, 78-59, with a final vote expected today, would send the measure to the Senate, where a similar bill was approved by a

Senate plans for redistricting unfolded

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — At least two Texas senators, and maybe four, would have to oppose each other in 1982 if the Senate's latest redistricting plans are adopted.

There would be no paired incumbents in the next race for Congress, under the Senate plan.

House plans on congressional districts are due shortly.

"It was easy with congressmen," said Sen. Tati Santiesteban, D-El Paso, chairman of the Senate redistricting committee, "because we have three new seats (because of the 1980 census)."

"We believe every citizen in the state has had a chance to tell us how he thinks Senate and congressional district lines should be drawn," said Santiesteban to a crowded Senate chamber as the committee, which includes all senators, met to receive staff reports.

"This is the genesis of our substantive efforts," Santiesteban said. "I must stress that these redistricting plans are not presented at this time for adoption, rejection or amendment by this committee."

A subcommittee will meet Saturday to consider any proposed changes in the staff recommendations — which included one plan for congressional districts and two plans for senatorial districts.

"We (the committee as a whole) will meet again Tuesday and hopefully send the bills to the House by Tuesday," Santiesteban said.

The three new congressional seats went to the Dallas-Fort Worth and Harris County areas as expected.

Under Plan 1 for senatorial redistricting there would be six districts with a majority of their population in Harris county and five for Dallas and Tarrant counties. Sens Jack Ogg, Democrat, and Walter Mengden, Republican, would have to run against each other as would Sens. John Leedom of Dallas and Dee Travis of Garland, both Republicans.

Plan 2 for senatorial redistricting would pair incumbent Sens. Mengden and Mike Richards, also a Houston Republican. The plan would give Dallas and Tarrant counties six districts and Harris County five.

Sen. Pete Snelson, D-Midland, whose subcommittee helped draw up the two senatorial district plans said there was "ample room for change, I hope all 31 Senate members will be happy but if they are not I hope we can make the majority of them happy."

Seirra Club lawyer blasts Clayton's water fund bill

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A

Sierra Club lawyer has suggested Speaker Bill Clayton's proposal to create a water trust fund is nothing more than an attempt to take care of West Texas farmers.

"I'm not disagreeing that we may have to bail out West Texas farmers, but if we're going to bail them out let's do it up front," Stuart Henry of Austin told the Senate Finance Committee on Monday.

"The proposal before you doesn't talk about importing water to West Texas at all, but it sure as dickens accommodates it," said Henry.

Clayton, a West Texas farmer, said comments that his proposal to create water and "rainy day" trust funds would result in a tax increase are "hokey."

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Unruly nuclear genie

The nuclear genie, once out of the bottle, cannot be put back in. That is as true of India and Pakistan, bitter adversaries on the subcontinent of India, as it is of the United States and the USSR.

When India exploded a nuclear device in 1974, it was inevitable that Pakistan would bend all efforts toward the goal of doing the same.

And it now appears that Pakistan is nearly ready to conduct its first nuclear test explosion. Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., told the Senate in a somber speech recently that both India and Pakistan appear to be making preparations for underground tests of nuclear warheads.

Cranston's view, shared by a number of other Democratic senators, is that we should deny all aid to Pakistan unless Pakistan promises to terminate its nuclear weapons development program.

The problem with that approach is that Pakistan undoubtedly prizes its nuclear bomb effort more highly than any amount of external military aid. Pakistan will refuse the aid and continue the bomb effort.

There is something a little inconsistent about the policy of the major nuclear powers, which refuse to submit their nuclear facilities to any intentional inspection and have no intention of renouncing nuclear weapons. We are insisting that Third World countries submit to inspection and renounce such weapons at the same time that we are multiplying and modernizing our own stockpile of nuclear warheads.

The United States, USSR, France, England, China and India have the bomb. Israel probably has it, too, but is keeping it secret. Pakistan will have it soon, and so will a dozen other countries in the next century.

We must continue to resist nuclear proliferation. But we should realize that the effort is almost certainly a lost cause, and weigh our options accordingly.

Barking at the wheat

The most charitable case that can be made for President Reagan's decision to lift the partial U.S. grain embargo against the Soviet Union is that he was fulfilling a campaign promise made to American farmers last year.

But that rationale sidesteps two overriding points: The promise should never have been made in the first place, and, once it was, should have been broken.

No president should feel compelled to make ill-adviced campaign promises, especially when doing so damages the credibility of American foreign policy and, worse yet, encourages the Soviet Union to believe that the penalties for its acts of aggression — including the invasion of Afghanistan — will never be sustained.

Put another way, keeping peace in the world ought to have a higher priority than placating a disgruntled farm lobby that, on the grain embargo issue, was and is dead wrong.

The White House statement announcing Mr. Reagan's decision characterized the embargo as "ineffective," a description that echoed the farm lobby's own self-serving critique.

The truth is that the partial embargo imposed by former President Carter in January 1980 cost the Soviet Union roughly $1 billion in scarce foreign currency reserves, the sum required in the form of premium prices paid for nearly 6 million tons of replacement grain purchased elsewhere on the world market.

Without the embargo, that $1 billion would have been available for other items in the Soviet budget including, for example, the bombs, shells and poison gas being used to exterminate Afghans bold enough to defend their country against the Soviet steamroller.

Just the other day, the Soviet news agency Tass acknowledged, in effect, that the embargo had disrupted the Soviet economy, curtailed the supply of feed grains for livestock, and forced Moscow to spend an additional $1 billion in long-term contracts for the purchase of Argentine beef.

Lest the American Farm Bureau and the Reagan administration dismiss all this as inconsequential, it should be recalled that the 10-million member Solidarity movement in Poland began last year as a protest over rising meat prices. And the Kremlin hardly needs to be reminded that Soviet citizens currently consume less meat than nearly any other people in Europe, including the Poles.

As for the American farmers supposedly discriminated against by the embargo, their export sales of grain during 1980 hit record levels, thanks to increased purchases by China and other nations.

But even these testimonials to the embargo's punitive economic consequences for the Soviet Union pale by comparison with the most important issue — which is the credibility and constancy of an American foreign policy upon which global peace and security quite literally depend.

The Reagan statement lifting the embargo included the following:

"I am determined that our position now cannot be mistaken: The United States, along with the vast majority of nations, has condemned and remains opposed to the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan and other aggressive acts around the world. We will react strongly to acts of aggression wherever they take place. There will never be a weakening of this resolve."

We have no doubt whatsoever that Ronald Reagan meant every word. But the hard-eyed realists in the Kremlin necessarily judge American presidents primarily by their actions, not by their rhetoric.

The grave danger raised by the President's decision to rescind the grain embargo is the possibility that Ronald Reagan's bark is far worse than his bite. Should the Soviets choose to act on that assumption, the world will become a far more dangerous place than it is today.

Why construction supports the economic package

BY HUBERT BEATTY

On March 15, network television coverage showed more than 2,000 general contractors at the Washington Convention of the Associated General Contractors of America (AGC) wildly applauding Office of Management and Budget Director David Stockman as he acknowledged that President Reagan's spending cuts would reduce federal construction expenditures by at least $18.2 billion.

The following day the networks again travelled to the Washington Hilton's International Ballroom to show all 5,700 convention attendees cheering President Reagan as the association presented him with its Man of the Year Award. The award indicated AGC's total support of the president's economic recovery package, including the $18.2 billion in construction cuts.

Why did the management side of the construction industry enthusiastically support President Reagan's proposal to cut their market?

The answer is complex and has its roots in problems that have been building for at least a decade. In that time the construction industry and the purchasers of its products at every level have been subjected to a mindless barrage of regulatory overkill. Some of that regulatory onslaught resulted directly from bad legislation. Some of it resulted from well-intentioned executive orders intended to help the less privileged in our society. Much of the regulatory burden, however, resulted from the inane actions of bureaucrats acting on the basis of either no or flimsy authority.

The Federal Register, the government's method of officially registering its actions, published 2,000 pages of regulatory proposals and new regulations in the last two days of the Carter Administration. That was 10 percent of the entire Federal Register content for the year 1970. However, that barrage had a certain wild consistency because in 1980 alone the Register published a staggering total of 87,012 pages.

The construction industry has been particularly hard hit by all those regulations. Anyone unconvinced of that fact should request a set of bidding documents for any federal construction project. You will be staggered by the number, complexity and irrelevance of the regulations involved in building anything from an Army latrine to a multimillion-dollar mass transit project.

At the same time that regulatory overkill made regulatory reform essential, the management side of the construction industry realized the tax relief elements of President Reagan's package would revitalize the sagging private construction market, an economic sector which is now suffering from the combined effect of excessive taxes, excessive interest rates and government policies that penalize productivity and production while they subsidize inefficiency and failure.

Support for President Reagan's entire package of tax and spending cuts is not limited in the construction industry to the 30,000 firms that are a part of the Associated General Contractors of America. Just a few days ago representatives of 50 other national construction associations representing every facet of the construction contracting process met in Washington as a coalition formed to work enthusiastically for the implementation of President Reagan's economic package.

The construction industry has put its weight behind the President's plan, not as a special interest that stands to gain special favor (remember, construction faces an $18.2 billion cut), but as a group of businessmen that believes their own long-term interests and the national interest are best served by the President's plan.

(Hubert Beatty is executive vice president of the Associated General Contractors of America.)

"They've changed the grand finale. Ordinarily the opera ain't over until the fat lady sings."

Peace in hell

by ART BUCHWALD

I may not have been reading the newspapers too carefully lately, but I haven't seen the word "peace" mentioned by one person in the Reagan administration.

When I brought this up with someone on the Reagan team, he said it wasn't true. "We talk about peace all the time. But we don't make a big deal of it."

"How do you talk about peace?" I asked him.

"We've called for the placing of neutron bombs in Europe, the installation of an MX system, revival of the B-1 bomber, the sale of AWACS to Saudi Arabia, and the building of a three-ocean Navy. If that isn't talking about peace, I don't know what is."

"Come again?"
"You can't have peace unless you have strength. The more weapons you have, the less chance there is of someone starting another war. It's the people who talk about peace all the time that are endangering it."

"Does the Reagan administration have an embargo on the word peace?"

"We're not censoring anyone, but if some high administration official wants to use it in a speech, he'd have to clear it with the White House."

"Why?"

"It's very dangerous to talk about peace because we could be sending the wrong signal to the Soviets."

"You believe the more you talk about going to war with the Russians, the more impressed they'll be that you are seeking peace?"

"Exactly. Everytime we announce a new weapon, they know our only reason for building it is to assure ourselves that they will think twice about starting a war."

"But suppose someone in the Kremlin believes that you are building the weapon for offensive purposes and decides to test us. What do we do then?"

"We go with everything we've got. If they can't read our signals properly they're in a lot of trouble."

"Then go with everything they've got, and there goes your peace strategy."

"The Soviets talk about peace all the time, but all they're doing is preparing for war. We talk about war all the time, but we're really preparing for peace. If we talked about peace they would be sure we wanted to start a war."

"Couldn't we just have one person in the administration who thinks in terms of peace?"

"We do, but nobody listens to him."

"What's his name?"

"We can't tell you or the Hawks on The Hill will want to fire him."

"There are some Americans who are getting very nervous about all this war talk."

"You can't worry about them. There have been peaceniks since time immemorial. But they haven't learned anything from history. The only way we can have peace in our time is to make sure everyone has enough stuff to kill everybody else."

"So the Reagan administration believes the road to peace is to arm everybody?"

"Not everybody. Just our friends. By giving AWACS to the Saudis we are assuring their peace."

"How do you assure the Israelis their peace if they know the Saudis have AWACS?"

"We supply the Israelis with long-range fighter planes to shoot down the AWACS."

"And ad infinitum?"

"Something like that. To paraphrase General Custer, 'Peace is too dangerous to be left to civilians.'"

The Jesse Helms show

BY DON GRAFF

If there's a good word to be heard for Sen. Jesse Helms these days, it's not coming from colleagues in the United States Senate.

Almost to a bipartisan man and woman, they are unhappy with the North Carolina Republican's use — or misuse, as most see it — of his senatorial powers and privileges to bend the rest of the chamber to his way of thinking.

That way happens to be emphatically conservative, but that in itself is not the problem. The single-minded zeal with which he gives it expression is. Even more so the tactics he employs.

Helms has been using every trick in the parliamentary book to stall confirmation of key State Department appointees on grounds they do not measure up to the administration's conservative standards as defined by Helms.

It is a bravura performance by a master of political infighting that has irritated and in some cases infuriated the other members of the Foreign Relations Committee and the Senate leadership. Which bothers Helms not in the least. On the contrary, he gives every appearance of enjoying the stand-off hugely.

Obviously no believer in the politics of consensus, he is disproving a supposedly basic congressional truth — that to get along a member must go along. Helms is not only not going along, he is using his independence as a weapon. In the process, he has become for the moment one of the most powerful figures in the Senate.

It is to be sure a negative power, the power not to effect a result but to frustrate it. But given his own party leadership and obstructing the processes of government, it is a power that his more cooperative colleagues are compelled to reckon with.

They are not, however, powerless against it. For all Helms' skill in guerrilla politics, they can override him when sufficiently moved to do so — as they have demonstrated in beginning to push through the contested nominations.

And look at it this way: Jesse Helms vs. the United States Senate may be providing us with a classic lesson in the theory and occasional practice of representative government.

The founders never promised that making it work was going to be easy. Jesse Helms is doing his considerable best to prove them right.

And don't forget Millard Fillmore. It could be worse.

The library builders could have been at work from the very beginning. By now, the Republic would be studded with institutions memorializing the whole string from Washington and Jefferson through Buchanan, Lincoln and Chester A. Arthur.

As it is, the builders got a late start and we have had to make do with the Hoover, Roosevelt (Franklin D.), Truman, Eisenhower, Kennedy and Johnson libraries. To that list we can now add the Gerald R. Ford Library.

This latest in the series of privately established but publicly maintained presidential memorials was dedicated April 27 on the Ann Arbor campus of the University of Michigan. And as sure as presidential elections are held every four years, it is not the last. Jimmy Carter of Plains, Ga., for one, is already deep in his own plans.

To give the presidential libraries their due, they do make available historical materials that are of some interest to the public at large and of great value to scholars. But it may be questioned whether this end is achieved as satisfactorily through a proliferation of separate institutions as it would be if the responsibility were lodged at the start with the National Archives, to whose custody in any case the libraries are transferred once constructed to be maintained thereafter at public expense.

Back to the Ford Library, even though the $4.3 million structure is the repository for the records of less than 30 months in the White House it could be considered downright modest in comparison to some of its predecessors if this were all there was to it. But more is to come. A separate Gerald R. Ford Museum is under construction at a cost of $11 million in Grand Rapids to house personal belongings, gifts from foreign potentates and other memorabilia.

If this sort of double play catches on in the presidential self-memorialization game, the situation may indeed be worse.

Paving of garbage holds up under test

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texas motorists soon could be driving on broken glass, tin cans, rusty appliances and other trash.

Littercrete — an asphalt paving mixture that uses a city's incinerated solid waste as aggregate — has proven successful in six years of testing, say Texas A&M University engineers.

The garbage is burned to remove paper products and other organics, leaving an aggregate-like litter of non-combustible material, said Dr. William B. Ledbetter, a civil engineering professor who has worked on the Texas Transportation Institute project since a test section of roadway was built into a Houston street.

Field observations and laboratory tests show the littercrete is performing essentially the same as the control section constructed of a conventional asphalt concrete base, Ledbetter said.

He said minor cracking occurred in the littercrete section just as it did in the conventional surface, but the cracks did not progress through to the littercrete base. The 200-foot section, on Bingle Road at Hempstead Highway, exhibited no rutting, shoving or stripping, he said.

"I'm convinced this material will not degrade any faster than asphalt concrete," Ledbetter said.

But obtaining the refuse to make littercrete presents problems, since the incinerator used to construct the Houston littercrete came from a plant that was closed because of pollution complaints from nearby residents.

"We can't incinerate without some pollution," Ledbetter said. "It requires special handling. There's some stuff in garbage that is highly detrimental to precipitators and other pollution control equipment."

Any major metropolitan area could get rid of all its solid wastes in its street maintenance program, Ledbetter said.

"In the future, I'm convinced it is going to become acceptable and cost-effective for households to separate garbage into three containers, one for plastics, one for combustibles such as paper and one for non-combustibles like cans, metal and glass," Ledbetter said.

Band of Renown to perform in Pampa

Les Brown and the Band of Renown will perform at 8 p.m. Wednesday, May 13 in M.K. Brown Auditorium for members of the Pampa Community Concert Association.

Brown will offer music in the styles of such greats as Benny Goodman, Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey, Art Shaw, Duke Ellington, Charlie Barnet, Bob Crosby and Glenn Miller.

The 17-member band is one of the few from the Big Band era that has remained active and vital, carrying on a tradition of swing music that is uniquely American.

Through the years, Brown has worked with such show business greats as Bob Hope, Bing Crosby, Dean Martin, Steve Allen, Doris Day, Nancy Wilson and Johnny Mercer. Many of these artists have recorded with Brown and his band on the Columbia, Capitol, Kapp and Decca labels.

Brown, an arranger, song writer and director, has won more magazine polls through the years than any other band leader. He has traveled for more than three decades with Bob Hope's famous Christmas shows for American troops abroad, and has been musical director for the Dean Martin and Steve Allen television shows.

His other television credits include Hollywood Palace, The Milton Berle Show and his specials, the Marineland Show, televised every Easter, and the Grammy Awards.

Brown and his band have toured across the U.S. and Canada and has also performed in Europe and South America.

Featured artists performing with the band during the concert are Butch Stone, Jo Ann Greer and Stumpy Brown.

Stone, vocalist and baritone sax player, has been with Brown since 1941 and is his assistant band leader and road manager.

Jo Ann Greer has been with the band for over 20 years and has also worked with band leaders Ray Anthony, Lawrence Welk, Alvino Rey, Charlie Barnet and Freddy Slack.

Brown, bass trombone player and vocalist, is Les Brown's brother and has been with the Band of Renown since 1943. His film appearances include the lead in "Kilroy Was Here," and MGM movies with stars such as Van Johnson and Esther Williams.

Tomatoes add color to Sole Duglere

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Whenever we have the luck to come on a good version of Sole Duglere, we are reminded of how much tomatoes benefit fish fillets. The dish itself was created in the 1850s for the Cafe Anglais in Paris, considered one of the glorious French restaurants of its day. Adolphe Duglere, a co-owner of the Anglais and in command of its kitchen, invented the dish that bears his name. Sole Duglere has a lovely creamy sauce to which tomato adds its color and flavor.

The following recipe comes from "Cooking Fish and Shellfish" by Ruth A. Spear (Doubleday), a book whose praises we have sung before.

FILLETS OF SOLE DUGLERE
4 whole fillets of sole, taken from two 1½-pound whole soles, skinned, bones reserved
1 shallot, chopped
6 peppercorns
½ bay leaf
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup water
1 cup dry white wine
Salt and freshly ground

Much salt consumed unknowingly

There's more to cutting down on salt than taking the shaker off the table or passing up the salted snacks.

Experts say that much of the salt in today's diets is consumed unknowingly, contained in processed foods. And efforts are under way by government and industry to tell shoppers how much salt they are getting in the foods they buy and to make it easier for them to cut consumption.

Among the examples:
—A major supermarket chain, Jewel Food Stores of Chicago, announced recently that it was introducing a line of 10 private-label fruit and vegetable products with no salt or sugar added.

—General Foods Corp. has started labeling many of its products with the salt content when the amount of salt exceeds 35 milligrams per serving.

—The U.S. Department of Agriculture already requires some processed meat and poultry products to carry complete ingredient information — including the percentage of added salt.

The problem with salt is its sodium content: 40 percent of table salt is sodium and 60 percent is chloride. Many medical authorities say too much sodium in the diet can contribute to high blood pressure or hypertension.

The American Heart Association says a sodium intake of about two grams or 2,000 milligrams a day is adequate for good nutrition. That's about the amount of sodium in one teaspoon of salt.

Everyone seems to agree that more information about salt and sodium is needed.

white pepper
2 medium ripe tomatoes, blanched and peeled, or 3 canned peeled tomatoes
3 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
½ cup heavy cream
Dash of cayenne pepper
Lemon juice
1 tablespoon chopped parsley

Make a stock by combining in a saucepan the fishbones, broken into 2 or 3 pieces, the shallot, peppercorns, bay leaf, salt, 1 cup of water, and wine. Bring to a boil, lower heat, and simmer, covered, for 20 minutes. Strain.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Butter a 12-inch oval roasting pan and ovenproof dish. Cut the fillets in half lengthwise (you will now have 8 pieces). Score them slightly on the milky side, season with salt and pepper, fold in half, scored side inside with the pointed end on top. Arrange in the prepared dish, add the stock, bring to a simmer on top of the stove, cover with buttered foil, and poach in the preheated oven for 8 to 10 minutes.

Cut the tomatoes into quarters, pick out the seeds with the tip of a pointed knife, and cut each quarter into 3 lengthwise strips. Set aside.

When the fish is done, drain the cooking liquid into a 3-quart saucepan, replace the foil cover, and keep the fish warm while you prepare the sauce.

Bring the poaching liquid to a boil and cook rapidly over high heat until reduced to about 1 cup. Add any liquid that has collected in the fish dish during this time.

Melt 2 tablespoons of the butter in another saucepan, stir in the flour, and cook for 2 to 3 minutes without letting the mixture become more than pale blond in color. Remove from heat and whisk in the poaching liquid, stirring until smooth and thick. Return to heat, bring to a boil, and cook, stirring, for 2 minutes (the sauce will be very thick). Once more stir in any liquid that has collected in the fish dish, then stir in the cream. Season to taste with salt, pepper, a dash of cayenne, and a few drops of lemon juice. Swirl in the remaining tablespoon of butter, then fold in the tomatoes and parsley, spoon over the fish, and serve at once. Serves 6 to 8 as a first course, 4 as a main course.

At Wit's End

By ERMA BOMBECK

For some reason, this country has "suffered" a "trust recession."

I see it in our attitudes toward the government, consumerism, and national institutions like the phone company and the six o'clock news.

I'm one of those people who want to believe everything I see and read. I want to believe Peter Pan can fly. Or that Chrysler will pay dividends next year, and that the woman who uses Oil of Olay and wears a 43 on her T-shirt is lying about her age.

I want to believe that my car will never be recalled, my prescription has been taken by someone other than a research monkey, and that my plumber will indeed show up on Friday, June 12 after lunch.

I want to believe, but I can't. Sometimes, I think I'm getting paranoid about people who have given me no reason whatsoever to doubt them, but I can't help it.

I never take my children to a pediatrician whose office goldfish have died.

I never leave my dog with a vet who says, "What seems to be her problem?" (The dog's name is Murray.)

I never trust a bank where all the fountain pens have been ripped off, or a restaurant with no garbage cans.

I don't trust people who say, "Trust me."

I don't accept drinks from a urologist with a sense of humor.

I become very suspicious when a garage mechanic has clean fingernails or a doctor carries his instruments in his gym bag.

I wish I could go back to the way I used to be, but during the past 10 years or so, there have been too many political bribes, too many broken warranties, too many broken promises and too many washer-repairmen who have retired to Hilton Head on my service calls.

I even looked with suspicion on my husband the other day when he said to me, "Erma, you really look like you've shed a few pounds."

I looked at him closely. He was the man who drove an Edsel with a McGovern bumper sticker on it. Who wouldn't spring for an 8½ percent loan 10 years ago because houses were going down. Who bought Nehru jackets in five colors.

What the heck! You have to take a chance on people once in awhile!

Dear Abby

Psychologist gives 'therapy' to patient

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My home is on the verge of breaking up. If I leave my husband, there will be three teen-aged children without a father, but I see no other solution.

My husband is a successful therapist. He recently admitted to having had sexual relations with a young woman patient, but he claims he still loves me. Is this possible?

We were married when we were both in college (23 years ago) and our sex life has always been good, yet he tells me that "in the line of duty" he helped this woman find her "ego identity" by teaching her how to make love.

I can't stay married to a man who is having sexual relations with other women in the line of duty, or for any other reason.

Is this something new in psychotherapy? I can't believe psychologists really believe this will help their patients. And what about their own emotional involvements, and those of their families?

HEARTBROKEN

DEAR HEARTBROKEN: No ethical therapist in his right mind would have sexual relations with a patient. Your husband needs treatment himself and should not be allowed to continue practicing until he has been rehabilitated.

If you love him, you will not leave him, but you will insist that he seek help from a colleague about his problem. If he continues as he is, he probably will lose not only his family, but his practice as well.

DEAR ABBY: Last week my partner and I were walking together when we spotted a wallet on the sidewalk. My partner picked it up and upon examining the contents, we discovered $140 in cash and a bankbook with the owner's name on it.

My partner took $70 and gave me $70 and the bankbook. My conscience will not allow me to keep the $70, but if I return it with the bankbook, the owner will probably assume that I held back $70.

My partner refuses to give up his $70. He said the Lord put it there for him to find, and if I don't want my half, he will take it.

What should I do?

CONFUSED IN CULVER CITY

DEAR CONFUSED: Tell your partner you are returning your $70 and the bankbook to the owner. And warn him that if he doesn't return his $70, you will not hesitate to identify him.

It will undoubtedly end your partnership, but you'll come out ahead. Who needs a crook for a partner?

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday my boss's wife came to the office while he was out of town. She went into his private office and closed the door. I heard her opening and closing drawers and rummaging around in there. Whether she found what she was looking for or not I do not know.

She rarely comes to the office, and when she does she is very cold, abrupt and unfriendly. She has asked me some questions about her husband's activities, but I am very careful not to give her any information. After all, my first loyalties are to my boss, and I am not about to give his wife ammunition.

Now I wonder if I should tell my boss that his wife was down here rummaging around in his drawers. Would you?

LOYAL EMPLOYEE

DEAR LOYAL: I wouldn't.

DEAR ABBY: LISA asked, "Who should give me away at my wedding — my father or my stepfather? I love them both equally and don't want any hurt feelings."

I had the same problem 26 years ago and I solved it by walking down the aisle on the arm of my future husband. No problems.

Dr. Lamb

Get plenty of rest for 'wear and tear'

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband, who's 70, and I, 67, both have arthritis. It seems to be getting worse. He has been on medication for a number of years. Can what we eat make it worse — like orange or grapefruit juice and meats? Are acid foods harmful?

DEAR READER — It is essential to be certain what kind of arthritis you are talking about. Osteoporosis, dissolving bones, is sometimes called arthritis but it isn't really. It is unlikely that you have rheumatoid arthritis, which is inflammatory arthritis, but you could. The most likely type is osteoarthritis, the type we all have if we live long enough. It is sometimes called wear and tear arthritis.

There seems to be an inherited weakness to develop it. And this form of arthritis can develop as a result of overuse, or inappropriate use of joints. Experiments have been done of running sheep over concrete which causes experimental osteoarthritis. The arthritis of a pitcher's elbow is similar, as are the changes noted in the ankles of a ballet dancer. This form of arthritis often involves the hips. Primarily it affects the weight-bearing joints.

Special diets are not useful for this form of arthritis. You need a well-balanced healthy diet like other people. The exception is if you are overweight; getting to the right weight helps. Some people with osteoarthritis are on diets because of other medical problems common at that stage of life.

Exercise is often misused in this form of arthritis as explained in The Health Letter number 4-10, Osteoarthritis: Degenerative or Wear and Tear Arthritis, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. It is important to maintain flexibility.

The right approach is to use plenty of rest. Don't overuse a joint that is already suffering from overuse. Do enough exercise to maintain strength and use your joints through the full range of motion every day, but otherwise rest the afflicted part.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Would you explain what a "fugue" is? What causes it? Is it related to brain damage or nerve damage? What brings on an attack?

DEAR READER — They are often called fugue states. They are usually periods of amnesia. The person is still functioning, sometimes in an illogical manner, but has lost all recollection of his past. A person may be found wandering far from home and only remember the present. Once the fugue state is over, he may not remember what happened when he was in that state.

Soldiers have been found wandering around in foreign countries and the only way they were identified was from their dog tags. A fugue state can occur with epileptic attacks but they occur in people who do not have epilepsy. The most common cause is psychological. Something may have happened in the person's life that is unbearable, such as a young girl subjected to incest.

Obviously, the best treatment in these instances is psychotherapy to uncover the underlying unbearable event and come to some resolution of the basic problem.

House approves student regent for UT system

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Young lobbyists working to get a student on the University of Texas Board of Regents haven't learned the political rule that a deal is a deal, a House member says.

Rep. Jerry Cockerham, R-Monahans, said in arguing against the student regent bill that students had reneged on a deal made with a subcommittee that worked on the measure.

House members tentatively approved the bill Monday, 71-57, with final action expected today.

The bill would put one UT student on the board as a non-voting member but allow a majority of the other regents to bar him or her from discussions of lawsuits, land purchases and investments.

Before passing the bill, the House rejected an attempt to exclude student regents from discussions of personnel actions, such as firing a professor or hiring a president.

Rep. Jerry Cockerham, R-Monahans, protested that student lobbyists had agreed to the exclusion but later got Rep. Gerald Hill, D-Austin, to carry an amendment giving student regents the right to sit in on personnel discussions.

"If that's the quality and caliber of the young people who are going to be sitting on the Board of Regents, they (the regents) are going to need all the help they can get," Cockerham said.

Hill said the barring a student regent from personnel discussions was a bad idea because "if you are going to have students on the board, they should have something to do besides come to meetings and decide how wide the floats are going to be at the homecoming parade."

Personnel matters, such as tenure for professors and selection of deans and presidents, are the main task of a board of regents, Hill said.

Hill later said if the student lobbyists had agreed to accept the personnel exclusion as the price of getting the bill out of committee they should have kept their word. He said he did not know of the agreement when he carried the amendment.

Rep. Jay Gibson, D-Odessa, objected that allowing the student regent to listen to personnel discussions could be harmful because the regent "might go and tell a newspaper."

The bill says students at each of the seven general teaching campuses of the UT system will nominate one person to serve on the board. The governor would appoint the student regent from among the seven nominees.

House members approved an amendment requiring the governor to rotate his appointments of student regents among the seven schools.

Congressman's wife is now a private detective

By MIKE ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sam Spade and Phillip Marlowe, move over. There's a new private eye in town — and she's the wife of a congressman.

Arlene Crane, wife of Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-Ill., insists she won't be an armchair detective. "I want to dig it out," she says. "I want a challenge. Solving puzzles is my bag."

But it is unlikely that the busy Capitol Hill socializer, who refuses to reveal her age, will have many of the nation's lawmakers sitting at her desk, chain-smoking and nervously stammering their tales of woe.

Mrs. Crane says she won't take any clients she knows socially. But she says she won't hesitate to take a case just because a congressman or senator is a target of the investigation.

Mrs. Crane says she always wanted to be a private eye. "I like solving puzzles," she says. "I like helping people. I feel like a doctor."

So, at the urging of a neighbor, she enrolled in a private detective training course. After graduation, she was hired by International Investigations Inc. of McLean, Va., where the neighbor, Dick Bast, is chief sleuth.

Mrs. Crane concedes that her husband, a conservative congressman who made an unsuccessful run for the 1980 Republican presidential nomination, at first had mixed reactions to her new career. But she says he is happy now that she is fulfilling her ambition.

Among other things, Mrs. Crane says her women's intuition will help her crack cases.

"A woman can size up a man without even talking to him," she says. "Men are always looking for the good — not creeps, of course, but most men. Most women are protecting their bets by looking for the good but seeing the bad."

House committee approves legalized horse race betting

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A House committee gave its approval to a bill allowing horse race gambling in Texas, but legislative odds makers said final passage was thought to be a long shot with less than three weeks left in the legislative session.

The bill allowing the gambling on a local option basis was approved Monday night by the House State Affairs Committee.

The 8-7 vote makes the measure by Rep. Craig Washington, D-Houston, eligible for floor debate, but the bill still must get through the House Calendars Committee.

The companion Senate bill was sent to a subcommittee on April 7, and there has been no further action on it.

Despite the difficulties lying ahead, a roomful of horse race advocates cheered and applauded when the House committee vote was announced.

The bill would allow horse race betting only in counties where the voters approved.

In addition, all races would take place under supervision of a five-member Texas Horse Racing Commission, which would license tracks and people ranging from horse owners down to exercise boys and betting window attendants.

Voting for the bill in committee were Reps. Bill Ceverha, R-Dallas; Bill Blythe, R-Houston; Paul Elizondo, D-San Antonio; Smith Gilley, D-Greenville; Frank Madla, D-San Antonio; George Pierce, R-San Antonio; Paul Ragsdale, D-Dallas; and Terral Smith, R-Austin.

NUMB ARMS, LEGS Danger Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebrae in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling, tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others.

Here are nine critical symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations which are usually the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these usually spells back trouble.

(1) Paresthesias (see above) (2) Headaches (3) Painful joints (4) Numbness in the arms or hands (5) Loss of sleep (6) Stiffness in the neck (7) Pain between the shoulders (8) Stiffness or pain in lower back (9) Numbness or pain in the legs.

These signals indicate that your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be incapacitated. The longer you wait to seek help, the worse the condition will become. Don't wait! Should you experience any of these danger signals, call for in depth consultation in Layman's terms.

Astro-Graph by bernice bede osol

May 13, 1981

If you have been entertaining thoughts about taking up a new sport, this coming year is the time to do it. You'll enjoy the activity and also become rather skillful at it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Step in and manage situations in which you are involved today if you see the leaders faltering. You can get things back on course better than your peers. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph, Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Something that you've led yourself to believe requires the help of another can actually best be done alone. Don't be intimidated by challenges.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Something might develop today with a friend which could be advantageous to you, but not necessarily to him or her. Much to your credit, you'll pass the action.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You have a special knack of pulling things together in ways which are profitable to yourself and others. You might have two chances to use your skills.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Hunches could be deceptive today, but you won't go wrong if you follow your logic and practicality. Be realistic—even in small matters.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your financial prospects look very encouraging today and there is a possibility you could garnish rewards from several areas. Keep looking around.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Friends will find you a very desirable companion today. You are fun to be around and, at the same time, are able to help them where needed.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Major achievements are possible today because you have all that is needed to put you over the top. If one method won't work, you'll devise another.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Should something unusual occur today, you may surprise yourself and others with your ability to cope. Pressure stimulates your ingenuity.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Two situations which you felt could be adjusted for the better may begin to swing in the hoped-for direction today. A little push from you won't hurt.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Someone with whom you're associated today may come up with the germ of a very clever idea. After you've added your input, it could really be something.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) This should be a very productive day once you get your second wind. Space your tasks so that they do not become tedious or boring.

A HITTING PITCHER. Andy Richardson drove in two runs with a double and was also the winning pitcher in Pampa's 13-3 rout of Palo Duro Monday afternoon in Optimist Park.

Pampa ends season with win

It wasn't a bad end to a rather uneventful season. Pampa, which had no chance of a District 3-5A championship, vented its frustrations on Palo Duro to the tune of 13-3 yesterday afternoon at Optimist Park.

The Harvesters, 4-8 in league play and 10-12 overall, had already clinched fourth place going into the district meeting.

"We've played pretty good baseball the last six or eight games," Harvester coach Gary Haynes said. "We just haven't been able to win every time out."

The Dons finished 0-12 in district play and 3-24 counting all games.

Pampa righthander Andy Richardson (5-4) held the Dons scoreless the first four innings and retired eight batters in a row.

Meanwhile, the Harvester offense erupted for seven runs in the third inning and ended the game earlier with a four-run explosion in the sixth.

Richardson went the distance to scatter seven hits while striking out seven and not walking a batter.

Clay Coffee paced Pampa's 12-hit attack with two singles and a triple in five trips, driving in two runs.

Scott John knocked in three runs with a pair of hits, including a two-rbi single in the sixth that ended the game due to the 10-run rule.

Mark Case had two hits and two rbis. Mark Qualls had two hits. Richardson had a hit and two rbis. Sam Edwards and Rob Hammer had a hit and one rbi apiece.

Babe Allen led the losers with two hits and an rbi.

Starting pitcher Juan Lopez, who lasted two and a third innings, took the loss for Palo Duro.

Three of Pampa's four wins in district play came against Palo Duro. Pampa surprised Caprock 6-5 Saturday.

Amarillo High wrapped up the district championship yesterday, winning a 21-15 slugfest over Tascosa.

The Sandies, 21-9 overall and 10-2 in the district standings, meet Lubbock Monterey, the District 4-5A champion, at a later date.

Entries due Friday for doubles tourney

A mixed doubles tennis tournament is planned for 9 a.m. Saturday at the Pampa High School courts.

There will be A and B divisions and partners will be drawn.

Cost is three dollars per entry, and persons interested may call 665-4435 or 665-4159 before Friday.

Benefit tennis tourney planned at Perryton

Entries are now being accepted for the second annual March of Dimes Open Doubles Tennis Tournament in Perryton May 23-24.

The tournament is sponsored by the Tennis Association of Perryton, and all proceeds will go to benefit programs in birth defects prevention.

Entry deadline is May 21. Entries can be submitted by calling 435-2746 or 435-5038.

The tournament will carry the same A-B format, with a C division added this year. Play begins at 8 a.m. May 23, and continues through the next day.

Trophies will be awarded to the top two teams in each division.

Nearly 150 players throughout the Panhandle competed in last year's tournament, and more than $1,700 was raised for the March of Dimes. The tournament replaces the annual Mother's March in Perryton.

Cooney knocks out Norton

NEW YORK (AP) — At this rate, we may never find out if Gerry Cooney can take a punch.

Ken Norton landed precious few of them on the undefeated 24-year-old heavyweight before Cooney destroyed him in the first round of their scheduled 10-round heavyweight fight at Madison Square Garden Monday night.

Cooney spent just 54 seconds doing away with Norton, tearing into the former World Boxing Council champion with a savage, devastating shower of punches. The end came with Norton slumped in his own corner as referee Tony Perez waved Cooney away.

It was the 25th consecutive victory for the youngster from Huntington, N.Y., and set the stage for an almost certain WBC title shot against Mike Weaver. And promoter Don King was a ringside letting it be known that Cooney, the No. 1 ranked contender in both boxing divisions, could have a fight with Larry Holmes for the World Boxing Council version of the title.

For Norton, listed as 35 years old, it could mean the end of his career, once and for all.

Ironically, the quick knockout came four years to the night after Norton had devastated Duane Bobick in the same Garden ring. That fight took 58 seconds but Cooney was finished four seconds faster. The end came so quickly that Cooney remembered almost everything that happened in the fight.

"I hit him with a right hand to the jaw, a straight right," he said. "Then I dropped down to the body and caught him inside with two punches."

The lefts to the body left Norton grimacing, crouched in his corner.

Texas legislature briefs

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby told Sen. John Traeger on Monday senators can do unto each other what they can do to House members in delaying action on bills.

Traeger, D-Seguin, appeared upset over a "sudden flurry" of "tags" on Senate bills.

When a senator tags a bill, he or she must be given 48-hour written notice before the bill can be heard in committee. The maneuver is used mostly toward the end of a legislative session to make it more difficult — if not impossible — to pass a proposal.

Even though Traeger has been in the Senate for eight years, he said Monday he could not recall a senator tagging another senator's bill.

"I don't question the right of any senator to tag a House bill," he said. "But we may be starting a procedure in the Senate that will be traumatic."

Hobby, the Senate's presiding officer, assured Traeger. "There is no distinction in Senate rules between House and Senate bills."

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Senate voted 31-0 Monday to authorize the Texas Department of Community Affairs to coordinate state youth programs, which are now administered by at least 11 agencies.

"This takes away no power from any other state agency," said the bill sponsor, Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi.

The bill would abolish the Texas Commission on Services to Children and Youth, which is in the Department of Community Affairs, but the department would be given authority to assist communities in providing for children and youth programs.

One of the department's duties would be to develop and implement a state plan for early childhood development.

The department also would prepare an annual report for the governor, which would include legislative recommendations.

The bill now goes to the House.

LAREDO, AUSTIN NOTE
AUSTIN, Texas (AP) —

The Senate on Monday commended Amado Maurilio Pena Jr. "for his quite meaningful contribution to the art of the Southwest."

His work is now displayed in 50 galleries across the country and has been featured in more than 30 shows. It will be featured in cultural exhibits in China, Japan and Israel.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas' rare and endangered native plants would get some protection under a bill passed by the House and sent to the Senate Monday.

The measure by Rep. Debra Danburg, D-Houston, was finally approved on a voice vote. It would prohibit the commercial gathering and sale of the endangered plants growing on public land.

No carefree summer for Atlantans

By DICK PETTYS
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — A vague restlessness, a sense of unease, hangs in the balmy spring air over this Southern city, which has buried 26 young black murder victims in the past 22 months.

Fear and suspicion — products of months of frustration over the killings — overshadow the normal languid expectation of carefree summer days.

This summer will not be carefree.

With 70,000 children, mostly black, ready to dash from public school buildings in Atlanta on June 5, city officials are deep in plans for a "Safe Summer" campaign to keep children off the streets — and, they hope, out of danger.

City-run day camps will spring up in 47 recreation centers around Atlanta the Monday after school closes, operating from morning to night on weekdays until school starts again in September.

Each will be closely supervised with low ratios of counselors to campers, color-coded T-shirts for the children and roll-call three times a day.

"It won't be a prison," said Roma Harper, the city's deputy commissioner of parks and recreation, "but we are going to insulate the children so they can play without fear of strangers."

City officials estimate the day camps can accommodate 33,000 of the 56,000 children aged 6 to 15 in the city school system. They expect another 14,000 to attend supervised activities of nonprofit agencies. The remaining 9,000 will be in summer school or on vacation, they believe.

Fears for the children, believed to be especially vulnerable while school is out, are not the only source of apprehension as summer nears.

City leaders also say the potential exists that lingering frustration over the killings, high unemployment among working-age blacks and the continued pinch of inflation could form an explosive mixture during hot summer days and nights.

"When you talk about a half million people and the temperature rising and the cost of living going up, and you talk about the great sense of assault many of our citizens feel by these killings, who can predict what response will come?" asked Leon Hall, director of the mayor's office of community and consumer affairs.

"There are people who tell me they feel they are being raped and can't do anything about it because of these killings," he said.

Federal budget cuts have cost the city hundreds of government-funded positions which typically went to young, poor blacks. Some 400 new slots will be made available as the city hires staff for the day camps.

The National Association of Business, headed by Wade Mitchell, a banker and former Atlanta City Council member, hopes to provide at least 1,000 summer jobs exclusively for low-income black youths.

"A lot of questions have been asked, does the business community really give a damn? This is just one effort to say, 'Yes, we're concerned,'" said Mitchell.

Another group planning summer strategy is the United Youth Adult Conference, led by Councilman Arthur Langford, which spearheads weekend searches for clues by volunteers and assists in a police-sanctioned neighborhood watch program.

"We plan to cover all areas where children are going to be assembling," Langford said. "We're going to work our best to make sure we're going to have all our children supervised."

Suspicion is symptomatic of Atlanta's problem.

"This community's eyes and ears are open and close to the ground," said Hall. "Everybody is literally a possible suspect. As you go into various communities where you are not known, you can feel them wondering if you may be the one."

A prominent minister, seeing a black teen-ager on the street late at night, considered offering him a ride home and then thought better of it, Hall reported.

"He told me that in the middle of thinking about it, it suddenly hit him: 'My God, suppose the child panics. Then I have to live under the cloud of somebody suspecting I was after that child.'"

The sense of suspicion is not evident to casual visitors, who seem to expect a city under siege.

"In their (visitors') minds, everybody is locked up inside. The only people out on the streets are the police and killer," Iman Plemon El-Amin, a Muslim leader in Atlanta, said.

Despite the intense national and international news coverage of the slayings, business leaders say they have detected no slackening of economic activity or convention business. Outwardly at least, the city's workaday life goes on as normal.

Space engineer Tech speaker

LUBBOCK — The engineer who oversaw the country's successful space shuttle project for Rockwell International, the shuttle's designer and manufacturer, will deliver the 1981 commencement address at Texas Tech University Friday, May 15.

Texas Tech graduate Charles H. Feltz, president of the Space Transportation Systems, Development and Production Division of Rockwell International, will speak during university ceremonies at 7:30 p.m. Friday in Municipal Coliseum, Texas Tech President Lauro F. Cavazos reports.

Degress will be conferred on approximately 2,000 candidates during the ceremony.

Feltz, who received a bachelor's degree in mechanical engineering from Texas Tech in 1940, was one of the first four graduates of the College of Engineering to be named "Distinguished Engineer" when the awards program was initiated in 1967.

During more than 40 years with Rockwell, Feltz has helped push back the frontier of space. In 1961 he became involved with the Apollo Program as Rockwell's chief engineer and assistant program manager. Advancing to deputy program manager, he planned and directed the development and fabrication of the Apollo Command Service Module for the nation's successful moon-landing program.
