Doctors amputated part of the left leg of Karlee Kosolofski, 2, after they determined there was no blood supply, a hospital press release said Saturday. The operation was performed Friday. Kosolofski was accidentally locked outside her parents' home in Rouleau, Saskatchewan, for about six hours in subzero temperatures on Feb. 23. She was brought to the hospital with no pulse, a body temperature of 58 degrees Fahrenheit and no signs of life. Surgeons got her body temperature back to normal. She is said to be in serious condition.

Dahmer's pen pals

Spy case adds insight to debate over KGB defector

By Michael J. Sniffen
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Ames spy case has reignited a debate over whether the curious three-month defection of KGB officer Vitaly Yurchenko in 1985 was genuine or a Soviet trick designed to protect their highest-ranking spy inside the CIA.

This time the primary question is: Did Yurchenko reveal the spying of ex-CIA officer Edward Howard so the KGB could arrest U.S. spies betrayed by the CIA's Aldrich Ames without casting suspicion on Ames?

Howard, trained by the CIA for a Moscow assignment he never got, escaped before he could be arrested on Yurchenko's tip.

Another question comes from Angelo Codevilla, a Senate Intelligence Committee official when Yurchenko defected: "Was Yurchenko sent over here to check out this guy Ames," to see if he had genuinely cast his lot with Moscow or was part of a CIA plot?

The Ames arrest adds new insights into the Yurchenko case, Codevilla said.

Counterintelligence experts inside and outside the government are asking these questions. Several of them, demanding anonymity because of the sensitivity

U.N. fears peace is slipping away

Residents from the Serb-held suburb of Grbavica cry during a demonstration in downtown Sarajevo, Sunday. About 700 downcast people, refugees in their own city, rallied quietly Sunday in central Sarajevo to protest its ethnic division.

■ NATO swoops over besieged northern town after Bosnian radio claimed Serb warplanes destroyed bridge in attack similar to one that provoked retaliation.

N.Y. Times News Service

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Striving to open up this besieged city, U.N. officials are increasingly worried that the impetus of their peace effort is slipping away, risking the resumption of the brutal, stalemated war.

"We must press this momentum," one officer involved in the planning said. "If the momentum dissipates, they will go back to their old manipulative ways, back to the Balkan way of doing things."

A flurry of peacemaking began a month ago after a mortar shell killed scores of people in a Sarajevo market and NATO threatened the Bosnian Serbs with air strikes if they did not remove or place under U.N. control their heavy weapons in the Sarajevo area.

But now U.N. officials say that the failure of other countries to provide strong military and political support — particularly the thousands of new troops needed to police the cease-fires here and in central Bosnia — and mounting Serbian recalcitrance could mean these efforts, like others in the past, will fade away.

Sunday, the senior U.N. representative here, Yusushi Akashi, and the military commander, Lt. Gen. Sir Michael Rose, hoped to get agreement on plans to begin opening the roads in and out of the city, establishing U.N. checkpoints and guarded bus routes to and from Bosnian-held areas outside Sarajevo.

But they emerged Sunday evening from meetings with the nationalist Serbian leader, Radovan Kar-

Transcripts reveal details about alleged conspiracy

By Larry Neumeister
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The alleged mastermind of a plot to bomb the United Nations said he was told to kidnap Henry Kissinger as trade bait to free those charged in the World Trade Center bombing, according to secretly taped conversations.

Several hundred pages of transcripts, reviewed by The Associated Press, give the clearest view yet of an alleged conspiracy that prosecutors say included the bombing. Fifteen men will stand trial in the conspiracy case in September.

Four men were convicted Friday in the World Trade Center bombing. They face up to life in prison without parole at their sentencing May 4.

The conversations were secretly recorded by Emad Salem, a government informant who's expected to be the prosecution's star witness in the coming trial. So far, lawyers in the case have filed about 500 pages of the roughly 1,000 pages of transcripts in U.S. District Court in Manhattan. Several dozen pages had been leaked to news organizations in the past.

According to transcripts:

— A plot to assassinate Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak outside the Waldorf Astoria Hotel was thwarted when the FBI learned of the plans.

— Sheik Omar Abdel-Rahman, a 55-year-old blind Egyptian cleric who prosecutors say inspired and authorized the conspirators, told the men "to inflict damage to the American Army."

— Siddig Ibrahim Siddig Ali, the conspiracy's alleged mastermind, wanted to kill a man because he thought he was an FBI informant. That

Vice President Al Gore

Top officials accuse GOP of exploiting Whitewater

WASHINGTON (AP) — The administration blamed Republican sniping Sunday for much of the furor over Whitewater, and stressed there is no evidence of any wrongdoing. But GOP Sen. Phil Gramm countered that President Clinton is "getting deeper in a hole" that threatens his presidency.

Two top administration officials, Vice President Gore and White House adviser George Stephanopoulos, appeared on Sunday news programs to state their case that while mistakes have been made, the White House is cooperating fully in the Whitewater investigation.

They said Republicans are trying to exploit the issue because of the successes of Clinton's programs and his rising popularity.

There's "an enormous amount of partisanship," Gore said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

"What would you do if you were in the opposition and you saw an opportunity to make a dent in this growing popularity?" he asked. "Of course you would try to exploit it."

Stephanopoulos, speaking on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley," said, "The Republicans can't run on the economy, they can't run on health care, they can't run on welfare, they can't run on crime, so they are going to try to exploit this issue."

"We shouldn't help them by making mistakes, that's our fault," he said.

Stephanopoulos was referring to the White House's admission that senior staffers received three private briefings from Treasury Department officials on the status of an investigation into a failed Arkansas savings and loan tied to the Clintons and their Whitewater land venture.

Government seeks to curb militant settlers, reopen Mideast peace talks

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel took fresh steps to crack down on Jewish militants Sunday as it sought to reopen direct talks with the PLO and salvage the Middle East peace talks.

Since the massacre of 30 men and boys in a mosque in the West Bank town of Hebron on Feb. 25, the PLO has said it will not return to the talks until Israel removes radical Jewish settlements in Arab towns and permits an international peacekeeping force in the territories.

But Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's government hesitated on a decision to uproot Jewish settlements. The government fears that could look like caving in to PLO demands — and possibly ignite a rebellion among the settlers and their supporters.

The Cabinet did vote to order the attorney general to charge anyone who praises the mosque massacre with incitement, punishable with several years in prison.

AMES: Case adds insight to KGB defector debate

(From 1A)

of the case, agreed to discuss the arguments in detail. One retired intelligence officer said there were "passionate advocates on both sides of the Yurchenko debate."

Questions raised by the Ames arrest may never be untangled in CIA damage estimates now under way, says David Wise, author of "Molehunt" about the CIA's search for Soviet agents. Wise said he's convinced that "part of the answer goes back to ... Yurchenko."

At the time, the CIA concluded that Yurchenko, a general-designate and deputy chief of KGB spying aimed at the United States, genuinely defected in Rome in August 1985, dissatisfied with his job and hoping to live under a new identity in the West with the wife of a Soviet diplomat then in Canada.

The agency concluded Yurchenko went back to the Soviets in November after "she spurned him as a traitor" and he "got really sore over some very nasty interrogators here," according to one former intelligence officer.

Since his return to Moscow, Yurchenko has periodically been quoted in the press and seen by Western correspondents in ways that never quite resolve the questions about him.

But the arrest last month of 31-year CIA veteran Aldrich Ames and his wife on charges of selling the then-Soviets U.S. secrets has strengthened the hand of those who always doubted Yurchenko. Ames is suspected of betraying as many as 10 U.S. agents arrested and executed since 1985.

The Yurchenko arguments now go like this:

Yurchenko doubters note the FBI lists the first Soviet payment to Ames in May 1985, three months before Yurchenko's defection. They say at his level he should have known of a catch as big as Ames, but Yurchenko never betrayed him — even though Ames, who headed the Soviet branch of CIA counterintelligence, personally took part in his interrogation.

Instead, they say, Yurchenko gave up Howard, who was out of the CIA and no further use to Moscow, and former National Security Agency officer Ronald Pelton, also of no further use.

In this view, the KGB had a morale problem because the FBI arrested 10 Soviet spies during 1984 and early 1985, and might have concocted a dramatic, phony defection so it could use information from Ames to round up CIA spies but protect its new agent, Ames, by deflecting suspicion to Howard.

"We initially thought these losses were explainable by Howard's actions," said one former officer.

Moreover, KGB Lt. Col. Valery Martynov, who was serving in the Soviet Embassy in Washington, was assigned to escort Yurchenko home, where Martynov was unmasked as a spy for the FBI and executed. Until March 1985, Yurchenko had been working in counterintelligence to find U.S. spies inside the KGB. If he was a real defector, why didn't he warn U.S. officials that the Soviets suspected Martynov?

Yurchenko's defenders still outnumber his doubters. They respond in several ways. First, they say, defectors rarely give up all their information at once, but instead parcel it out to ensure their continued good treatment. Yurchenko could have changed his mind before he got around to warning about Ames and trying to save Martynov.

A different explanation comes from one former officer who believes "Yurchenko was in the doghouse" when he defected. Since Ames was a new agent, "they might not have told him immediately about Ames, or even Martynov."

Another former officer provides a third view: "The Russians would have spent a long time checking any information from Ames before they believed him." This officer said it was way too early to mount a risky phony defection in order to act on data from Ames.

Another theory is that Yurchenko was sent to test whether Ames would report accurately on his defection.

"Yurchenko gave us a tremendous amount of stuff that all checked out," said one former official. "People felt they wouldn't have given up that much on a ploy."

Robert M. Gates, CIA director in the Bush administration, has said the agency eventually discovered "some problems that couldn't be blamed on Howard." Eventually, the trail led to Ames.

"We knew by 1987" that Howard didn't explain all the losses, said one former official — meaning if Yurchenko was sent to pin the blame on Howard, the Russians only got two years' benefit.

But The Washington Post reported Sunday that in 1985 and 1986, seven U.S. agents were arrested by the Soviets or just disappeared.

TERROR: Transcripts give conspiracy information

(From 1A)

man, Abdo Mohammed Haggag, is expected to testify against the other defendants.

— Siddig Ali suggested sniper attacks on Jewish leaders in Manhattan, including state Assemblyman Dov Hikind, who at one point had pushed to have El Sayyid A. Nosair retried in the killing of extremist Rabbi Meir Kahane. Nosair was convicted of related weapons charges and is charged in the plot to bomb the United Nations.

— When the defendants were arrested in the trade center case, Siddig Ali suggested to Salem that they could kill some FBI agents in retaliation. He also said that if the defendants were sentenced to life in prison, "we'll hit them with missiles and we will take hostages."

William Kunstler, Siddig Ali's lawyer, said the defendants were manipulated by Salem.

"These guys are hopped-up guys, Islamic fundamentalists," Kunstler said Sunday. "They have wild thoughts, no questions about it. But wild thoughts are not a crime."

The defendants in the conspiracy case were arrested June 24 during a raid on a garage where some of the men were found mixing chemicals, allegedly for a bomb.

In published reports last year, lawyers who had viewed the transcripts before they were filed in court were quoted as saying Salem and Siddig Ali had discussed abducting former President Nixon and former Secretary of State Kissinger.

The transcripts reviewed by The Associated Press mention Nixon, but mainly involve Kissinger.

According to the transcripts, Siddig Ali told Salem he had visited Nosair in prison and asked him, apparently talking in code, if there was anything "that you like to get done to serve your cause first" and whether he had any "personalities in your mind."

Siddig Ali said Nosair mentioned Kissinger as a good person to kidnap, according to the transcripts.

He said Nosair told him to make sure to take Kissinger's clothing off immediately because he might be wearing electronic devices, "throw it in the nearest garbage with the shoes and dress him any way, take him and proceed."

"He said trade with him and they'll release all the brothers" arrested in the trade center blast, Siddig Ali is quoted as saying.

But at one point, Siddig Ali says the Kissinger plan wouldn't work because the former diplomat no longer has the same influence, according to the transcripts.

During another conversation, this one between Salem and Abdel-Rahman, the informant is quoted as telling the sheik he considers the United Nations the "house of the devil" and is planning a strike that is "a devastating one and not an amateur one like the one that took place at the trade center."

But Abdel-Rahman told Salem to "find a plan to inflict damage to the American Army because the United Nations will damage the Muslims, will damage them deeply," he's quoted as saying.

Salem told Abdel-Rahman that another target was the FBI building in Manhattan, according to the transcripts.

"It's OK," the cleric is quoted as responding.

Salem and Siddig Ali also described plots to bomb the Holland and Lincoln tunnels, which link New York and New Jersey.

The transcripts are filled with references to men eager to follow the orders of their religious leaders in a holy war for their cause. They also indicate that the men tried to speak in code at times.

They referred to a timing device that Salem showed Siddig Ali how to work as "the box," bomb ingredients were "groceries," weapons were "toys" and Mubarak was the "Laughing Cow," an apparent reference to his expression in a photograph.

The transcripts also show why lawyers who saw the papers said they read like a spy novel.

At one point Salem gives Siddig Ali a ring that he says should be worn by anyone Siddig Ali sends to talk with him.

NATO: U.N. fears peace effort is slipping away

(From 1A)

adzic, and Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic with little but optimistic statements for television cameras and the usual promises of more negotiating sessions.

"The situation in Sarajevo is much happier and more relaxed," Akashi announced before conceding to journalists that the opening of roads in and out of the city, the reopening of Tuzla airport for relief flights, the Serbian siege of Maglaj and the persecution of Muslims by Serbs in Banja Luka, were all "political questions."

A NATO jet swooped over a besieged northern town Sunday after Bosnian state radio claimed Serb warplanes destroyed a bridge in an attack similar to the one that provoked NATO retaliation.

With Serb troops barring access to Maglaj, there was no way for NATO or U.N. officials to visit the site to check the claim that planes attacked the Muslim-held town about 40 miles north of Sarajevo. But NATO officers raised questions about the report.

The reports apparently originated from amateur radio operators in Maglaj, the town's only means of communication with the outside world.

A senior NATO official in Europe said that the reports of a bombing attack appeared to be untrue. He said that NATO had heard news reports of two raids. He said that it was dark at the time of the first reported raid and that the weather was foggy at that time, and that the Serbian planes are not able to operate in the fog and darkness, he said. At the time mentioned in the second report, the official said, NATO aircraft were in the area and saw nothing. There also were no corroborating reports from Awacs surveillance aircraft or from observers on the ground, he said.

Last week, in the first military engagement in the history of the NATO alliance, American fighters shot down four Serbian planes after they violated the no-flight zone declared by the United Nations and bombed a Bosnian munitions factory.

In Sarajevo on Sunday, reporters in the Holiday Inn and on the main street known as "snipers' alley" heard two explosions at midmorning and and saw dust rising from the impact of shellfire in the Jewish cemetery area clearly visible on a hillside.

A U.N. spokesman said Sunday evening that the peacekeeping command was unaware of the incidents.

The area around the Jewish cemetery, which has been the site of several cease-fire violations by Serbian troops in the last few days, is manned by both French and Russian peacekeeping troops assigned to keep the two sides apart.

Indeed, at Sunday morning's briefing, it was announced that a French soldier in the area had been slightly injured when his unit was fired upon by Serbian forces.

PEACE: Israel hopes to reopen Mideast talks

(From 1A)

The killer in the mosque massacre was a Jewish settler. Israel TV showed settlers rejoicing and dancing when they heard about the massacre. Palestinians and moderate Israelis alike were incensed.

The government has already sought to curb militant settlers, ordering the arrest of six leaders and the disarming of 18 others. But there have been widespread calls for tougher action.

Foreign Minister Shimon Peres is trying to arrange a meeting with PLO chairman Yasser Arafat, possibly this week, through Egyptian intermediaries in an effort to revive direct contacts with the Palestinians.

Peres' spokeswoman, Bahira Burdugo, said the meeting would deal with the Palestinians' demands — except for their demands about the settlers. Arafat arrived in Cairo, Egypt, on Sunday for consultations with President Hosni Mubarak about reviving the peace talks.

There was no immediate response to the Israeli moves from the PLO.

Rabin opposes dismantling any of the 144 settlements in the occupied territories, where some 120,000 Jews live alongside 1.8 million Palestinians.

Over the last few days, a growing number of Cabinet ministers have come out in favor of removing 400 militant settlers living among 80,000 Arabs in the heart of the West Bank town of Hebron.

BLAME: Dems accuse GOP of exploiting Whitewater issue

(From 1A)

Special prosecutor Robert Fiske issued subpoenas Friday to senior White House officials to obtain information on the meetings, and White House chief counsel Bernard Nussbaum, who was involved in the briefings, on Saturday announced his resignation.

But Republicans charged the administration was involved in a coverup with overtones of Watergate.

"Richard Nixon turned a third-rate burglary into a constitutional crisis by not leveling, by interfering with the investigation," Gramm, R-Texas, said on ABC.

"If the president wants to serve this term out, he is going to have to begin by leveling with the American people." The president, Gramm said, "is getting deeper in a hole."

Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y. also told The Associated Press that as a result of what he says is the administration's attempt to stonewall the investigation, the issue has "the potential of being as great if not greater than Watergate."

The presidency is in danger, he said, "as a result of the continued conduct and the continued pattern of deception."

Gore insisted that whatever mistakes were made in permitting the briefings to take place, "there is now an aggressive determination to make absolutely certain that there is no interference of any kind."

He said that within an hour of the White House's being informed of the subpoenas, "the word went out clearly and firmly: You save everything, whether it's on your computer, whether it's in the wastebasket." Even janitors were told not to throw anything away, he said.

"We will have the highest ethical standards in this White House," Gore said.

The vice president said there is "still no credible allegation of wrongdoing by anyone in the administration." But he acknowledged that "sometimes the handling of something can be infinitely worse than what it is being investigated."

Mexican Indians begin debating deal promised by government

IBARRA, Mexico (AP) — The government is tempting the people of this little village with offers of things they have never had: roads and electrical power, good schools and clinics, democracy and justice.

That package of promises, aimed at ending the New Year's Day revolt by the Zapatista National Liberation Front, may be a tough sell in Indian villages like this, where rebels began debating the offer on Sunday.

"The worthless government offers only tricks," said a local Zapatista leader named Hector, who — like other Zapatistas here — gave only his nom-de-guerre for fear of government reprisals.

The government made its offer on Wednesday. Rebel negotiators are now explaining it to their supporters in tiny villages across Chiapas state to decide if they should sign a peace treaty or hold onto their guns. An answer could take weeks or months.

Zapatista supporters in Ibarra, about 50 miles southeast of Ocosingo, and in nearby Santa Elena said they were skeptical of any government promises after decades of being ignored or pushed aside.

"If the government delivers this in 90 days, then we would agree," said Ricardo, a Zapatista in nearby Santa Elena. But he said that if the government does not come through, violence could start all over again.

Two weeks of fighting that began on Jan. 1 and left some 145 people dead has garnered more government respect for the people here than generations of legal, peaceful requests for help.

There are no roads to these two hamlets of a few hundred people. A bush plane or hours of driving on muddy jungle paths are the only ways to reach them.

Few have the opportunity to get the legal minimum of nine years of schooling. There is no electricity, no telephone and precious little water.

The government first invited impoverished settlers into this Lacandon forest area, then in 1972 gave them 60 days notice to leave after the area was declared a reserve for one small Indian group. That planted the seeds of anger from which the Zapatista rebels eventually sprung.

Dozens of Zapatistas gathered in the dirt courtyard of a thatch-roofed safe house to discuss the proposals with two visiting reporters. Most spoke only Tzeltal Mayan. Others spoke a little Spanish and relied on reporters and a woman named Oralia to read the government commitments.

Struggling through the wordy passages promising greater democracy, Oralia looked up with a bemused grin.

First Ukrainian nuclear warheads arrive in Russia

MOSCOW (AP) — The first trainload of Ukrainian nuclear warheads to be dismantled by Russia under a disarmament agreement arrived in Russia on Sunday, a Russian Defense Ministry spokesman said.

The train carried 60 warheads that will be disassembled under the pact in which Ukraine has agreed to give up its nuclear weapons in exchange for fuel for its nuclear power plants.

The agreement to eliminate 176 long-range missiles and more than 1,600 nuclear warheads was signed in January by Ukrainian President Leonid Kravchuk, Russian President Boris Yeltsin and President Clinton.

Clinton, at the end of a state visit by Kravchuck, announced Friday he would double aid to the former Soviet republic as a reward for nuclear disarmament and economic reform.

Ukraine has yet to ratify the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, and some Ukrainian lawmakers say giving up the arms would threaten the country's security and status.

Ukraine also has been slow to introduce market reforms.

But Clinton praised Kravchuk as the driving force behind Ukraine's agreement to eliminate the nuclear arsenal left behind after the breakup of the Soviet Union.

The ITAR-Tass news agency said it could take up to a year to complete the dismantling of all the Ukrainian weapons.

A second trainload of Ukrainian warheads was scheduled to be sent to Russia in mid-March, the Defense Ministry said.

Radical Jewish settlers vow never to leave

By Joel Greenberg
N.Y. Times News Service

HEBRON, Israeli-Occupied West Bank — Even as the Israeli Cabinet considered dismantling the Jewish settler enclaves in Hebron, Rabbi Moshe Blaycher made clear Sunday that he was determined to stay put: he celebrated his son's bar mitzvah near the Cave of the Patriarchs, which contains the mosque where Muslim worshipers were massacred by a settler nine days ago.

The Jewish population in Hebron will not be moved, asserted Blaycher, who heads the Shavei Hevron yeshiva, adjacent to the shrine.

"The thought doesn't even occur to me," he said of the prospect that about 400 Jews living among 70,000 Arabs in Hebron would be ordered out by the government. "It would be like the prime minister stopping Jewish immigration to Israel or evacuating the Western Wall."

"The only people who ever evicted the Jews from Hebron were their Arab enemies who massacred them in 1929," Blaycher continued. "I'm sure that a Jewish government will not evict us. It's a hypothetical, illegitimate question."

China continues crackdown on dissent

BEIJING (AP) — Authorities detained a top student leader from the 1989 pro-democracy movement in a continuing crackdown on dissent before Secretary of State Warren Christopher's visit, sources said Sunday.

Police have rounded up at least nine dissidents in Beijing and Shanghai since Wednesday. The latest was Zhai Weimin, who served a 3½-year sentence for his pro-democracy activity in the Tiananmen Square movement. He was arrested Sunday, said Wang Dan, another top student leader from 1989.

The latest arrests have "cast a pall" over Christopher's visit, said John Shattuck, the top U.S. official for human rights, who was in China last week for two days of what he called "intensive, serious discussions with the Chinese government." Some of the arrests occurred during his visit.

Shattuck, speaking at a news conference Sunday in Hong Kong, called the arrests "a setback" to the progress he said China has made on human rights.

Christopher's Beijing visit next week nd is likely to weigh heavily in Clinton's decision whether to renew China's trading privileges with the United States. The Clinton administration is threatening to strip China of those privileges unless it improves its human rights record.

Meanwhile, China's most famous dissident, Wei Jingsheng, reportedly left Beijing on Sunday, a day after he was released by police after a brief detention.

One apparent sign the authorities want Wei quiet is that on Sunday at least 16 uniformed police and plainclothesmen were stationed outside the apartment compound where he keeps his office, refusing to allow foreign reporters inside.

Wei has continued to press for democracy in China since his release in September after more than 14 years in prison. His essays have been published abroad, and he has spoken with foreign journalists and with Shattuck, who is assistant secretary of state for human rights.

Police would likely want Wei out of town in the coming weeks, when the national legislature convenes its annual meeting and Christopher visits.

Wei's secretary said he left town on his own free will.

Killing journalists is crime against truth

The murder of journalists has become a global plague. At least 56 journalists were killed last year while gathering news, including nine in Algeria, seven in Moscow, four in Turkey and three in Angola.

Within the past 13 months, five journalists died while on duty for The Associated Press, the greatest toll in so short a period in the agency's 146-year history.

Why the escalation? One reason is that the rules have changed. In earlier wars, belligerents generally tolerated correspondents, who were normally unarmed and plainly identified.

Now journalists are not only exposed to fire but deliberately targeted, as in Bosnia, or taken hostage, as in Beirut.

This happens at home, too. Two years ago in Queens, N.Y., a crusading journalist, Manuel de Dios Unanue, was gunned down by a contract killer who, under orders from a Colombian drug cartel, silenced the former editor of New York's leading Spanish-language daily, El Diario-La Prensa.

The proper response is for governments and press organizations to clamor for the prosecution of the killers. That was possible in de Dios' case but is not always feasible elsewhere.

The AP staff members were killed in turbulent circumstances in Somalia, Afghanistan, South Africa and in a battle between Georgian and Abkhazian soldiers in the former Soviet Union.

But where killers are beyond the reach of justice, the memory of the dead can be kept alive.

A conference recently commemorated the death of four journalists in Mogadishu last July. All were killed by a mob because they were foreign journalists.

One of the victims was 22-year-old Dan Eldon, a Reuters photographer. A selection of his evocative pictures of Somalia is now on display at Columbia's School of International and Public Affairs.

There is as yet no single place where the names and work of journalists like Dan Eldon can be preserved; perhaps it is time to consider such a memorial to those who have given their lives while recording the bravery and follies of the human race.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, March 7, the 66th day of 1994. There are 299 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On March 7, 1850, in a three-hour speech to the U.S. Senate, Daniel Webster endorsed the Compromise of 1850 as a means of preserving the Union.

On this date:

In 1849, horticulturist Luther Burbank was born in Lancaster, Mass.

In 1875, composer Maurice Ravel was born in Cibourne, France.

In 1876, Alexander Graham Bell received a patent for his telephone.

In 1911, the United States sent 20,000 troops to the Mexican border as a precaution in the wake of the Mexican Revolution.

In 1926, the first successful trans-Atlantic radio-telephone conversation took place, between New York and London.

In 1936, Adolf Hitler ordered his troops to march into the Rhineland, thereby breaking the Treaty of Versailles and the Locarno Pact.

In 1945, during World War II, U.S. forces crossed the Rhine River south of Cologne, Germany.

In 1965, a march by civil rights demonstrators was broken up in Selma, Ala., by state troopers and a sheriff's posse.

In 1975, the U.S. Senate revised its filibuster rule, allowing 60 senators to limit debate in most cases, instead of the previously required two-thirds of senators present.

In 1981, anti-government guerrillas in Colombia executed kidnapped American Bible translator Chester Allen Bitterman, whom they accused of being a CIA agent.

Ten years ago: Three Israelis were killed when a bomb exploded on a bus in the port city of Ashdod, south of Tel Aviv, in the third major attack on Israeli Jews in three months.

Five years ago: Secretary of State James A. Baker III met with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze in Vienna, Austria. Baker agreed to visit Moscow the following May to discuss prospects for a summit between President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

One year ago: Authorities said David Koresh, the leader of the Branch Davidians, was becoming irritable and had rejected proposals to end a week-long standoff at his compound near Waco, Texas.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The shorter the letter, the better its chance of publiction.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis.
- We do not publish 'open' letters or copies of letters sent to others.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702.

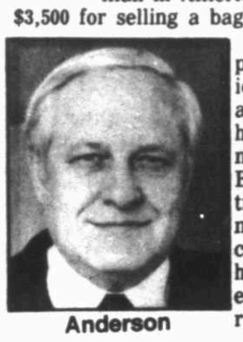
Superfund penalizes innocent little guy

WASHINGTON — Russ Zimmer, of Torrington, Wyo., is probably the only man in America who has been fined $3,500 for selling a bag of dog chow.



Anderson

He calls what happened to him "un-American." At least now, he and thousands of others have a friend in the administration: Carol Browner, the administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency. She is "furious" at how little guys are being exploited by big corporate polluters.

Zimmer's story exemplifies such exploitation. His only crime was accepting two third-party checks that were issued by Torrington Hide and Metal, a "battery cracking" plant that salvages used batteries. One of these checks was used to pay Zimmer for a bag of dog chow in 1977, the other to pay him for a $4.85 bag of seed in 1984. Zimmer, who runs a feed mill, paid his $3,500 fine as part of a court settlement after Torrington Hide and Metal was found to be badly contaminated under the federal Superfund. Superfund is a 14-year-old law whereby polluters pay to clean up the mess they create.

When the EPA brought "emergency" cleanup action against Torrington Hide and Metal in 1991, Torrington Hide and Metal promptly declared bankruptcy to protect itself from creditors. The next step for the EPA was to sue the five largest companies who contributed to the toxic Torrington site. In an attempt to deflect part of the $1.25 million cleanup fine that EPA was demanding, four of these five companies turned around and sued 54 third parties identified as potential contributors to the mess, including Zimmer whose name appeared on two canceled checks. Other defendants included the St. Joseph's Home for Children and a South Dakota volunteer fire department that allegedly brought used batteries to the site for disposal. The third parties were asked to contribute $500,000 to the cost of the cleanup. After consulting an attorney, who advised them it would be cheaper to settle than fight the charges — since the Superfund law actually encourages such third-party actions — the defendants got together and paid the money.

This tactic is familiar to Browner. "There are lawyers who are making a fortune on this," she says. "I'm sure the people who get these letters panic and send the check."

Browner told us she is particularly concerned about unsuspecting families who are getting the shakedown. Under law, corporate polluters are given wide discretion to go after small-time polluters — including families — to help in cleanup costs.

Having paid his $3,500 share of the pie, Zimmer is still bitter. "We went to war over less idealism than this issue," he says. Even more outrageous, says Zimmer, is that after all the travails he's endured thanks to a sack of dog chow, the toxic mess has yet to be cleaned up. "I blame Congress," he says. "They're the ones who allowed this to become the law. They should straighten it out."

Zimmer might get his wish next fall, when Congress will have to reauthorize Superfund. Since its enactment in 1980 following the infamous Love Canal disaster, the Superfund has lately earned the ire of lawmakers — from both sides of the aisle — who agree that the fine print written into the law has often made a mockery of its intent. Originally designed to clean up the 400 worst toxic-waste sites, the Superfund's priority list now contains nearly 1,300 entries. Only 40 sites have been completely restored.

The Clinton administration agrees that the time has come to reform the Superfund. The administration recently released a plan to reauthorize Superfund that Browner claims would cut litigation costs by 50 percent, largely by exempting small-time polluters like Zimmer. Browner has called for "strict limits on the liability of people who have contributed only small amounts of waste to these toxic sites."

CHARLEY REESE

Together, Americans can start revolution

Here's a lesson in the obvious: Any law passed can be repealed; any government agency created can be abolished; any appropriation made can be zeroed out the next fiscal year.

Reese

One of the favorite tricks of contemporary politicians is to commiserate with their constituents about some government-caused problem and then shrug their shoulders helplessly and say, "Well, that's the law."

The proper response of a citizen to that dog and pony show is to say, "I know it's the law, you bozo, and you bums passed it and I expect you to repeal it."

After all, what is the advantage of being a democracy if we allow ourselves to be conned into the belief that whatever laws are passed, whatever rules are written, and whatever bureaucracies are created are as permanent and unchangeable as the Alps?

The advantage of a democracy is that if you pass a bad law, you can amend or repeal it; if you create a bureaucracy that runs badly, you can abolish it; if you enact a program and it doesn't work, you can stop it; and if you elect a politician who isn't doing the job, you can throw him out of office at the next election.

Politicians for some reason are loathe to repeal any law, however useless or pernicious. I sometimes think they don't want us to realize that we really do live in a democratic state. In my early days as a reporter, I ran across a wise elected court clerk who was friendly and cooperative and asked only one thing — that we never put his name in the newspaper.

He didn't want too many people to realize that the office he held was elective and, by golly, his strategy worked. Nobody ever ran against him.

Status quo is as solid and unchangeable as the Rock of Gibraltar. It's not, of course. We have, thank God, the power to stage a political revolution every two years without firing a shot.

Do you realize that every two years we have the opportunity to dump 435 members of the House and a third of the U.S. Senate? Think what a political earthquake that would be! As a matter of fact, just changing 150 congressmen at one whack would register a good 6 or 7 on the political Richter scale.

What we Americans must do is exactly what most incumbent politicians don't want us to do — recognize and understand that the destiny of the nation rests in our hands, not theirs. You don't have to talk about empowering the people. The American people are already empowered. Every two years, we have the power to bring down a government and radically change the course of the country — if we choose to do so.

Naturally, if we are lazy and ignorant; if we are never aroused from our apathy except by some tinhorn promising us something, then we will, like sheep, be shorn by the more alert people in the society.

Some people believe it is a sin not to take a sucker for all he's worth, and maybe they're right.

The big weapon of status quo gang, however, is division. The last thing in the world they want is for Americans to become united, and that's why they are eternally promoting differences — racial, party, philosophical, ideological, age, ethnic, sex, you name it. Anything to divide Americans and keep us in manageable little cliques, preferably hating each other.

Nothing new about the strategy. Divide and conquer is as old as swords and blood. It's survived all these millennia because it works. Keep the American people divided and they will never realize their potential, they will never know who their real enemies are, and they will never use that power our forefathers gave us to make our lives better.

Charley Reese's column is distributed by King Features Syndicate.

Harrell jury deserves thanks

Recent dissension over the punishment verdict in the Ramsey Harrell trial that has been published in your paper brings to mind the continuing need for balanced reporting.

In all the furor over the verdict rendered by the jury, what was not mentioned is the respect and gratitude we should each afford our fellow citizens who served on the jury. The media alludes to the sanctity of the jury system only when the harshest of punishments is meted out.

The individuals who served on the jury during the Harrell trial did not ask to be on the jury. The "luck of the draw" placed them there. They each gave up their businesses, homes and family lives for more than a week, and they each accepted the stress that goes along with jury service. They heard all the evidence. They deliberated together and made a conscious decision.

Real democracy at the "hands on," grassroots level occurs in our right to a trial by jury. We should each offer our support and gratitude to those individuals who gave their service in this trial, rather than trying to second-guess or ridicule their decision when we didn't hear all of the evidence as they did.

Mail service needs overhaul

I want to know what one can do about poor mail service. I have talked to friends in various parts of Midland, and several have the same complaint I have.

Mail you expect never arrives. You get other people's mail. They get your mail. Most people put mail, misdelivered, back in their box, but some just throw it away.

I have talked to Stanley Sartain, the postmaster, several times to no avail. He says perhaps it was never mailed. Perhaps the company/person, used the wrong address. What a merry-go-round. You get nothing done. I don't want anyone else's mail. I just want mine. I have made formal complaints three times in five years about the mail carrier. I'm ready to buy carrier pigeons.

Restaurants should care

The expose of meat processing and the imported, heavily sprayed vegetables and fruit on TV reminded me of an experience in a Midland restaurant.

The host's mother from Florida sat to my right. Her dinner was served on a plate with two chips as large and wide as my thumb. Big and brown, the chips were very obvious but the waiter couldn't see them; he called the manager. We had to point them out to him — guess he was looking at the food. There was no excuse or apology.

I reported this to the health department. I was informed there are only three girls to inspect seven hundred restaurants, and that they get around to some places twice a year.

Many places are very strict. In Milwaukee every food handler had to have an exam once a year and a venereal disease inspection every two months.

McDonalds' employees all over the world have to wear hair nets, I was advised.

At a hotel luncheon this month, a waitress had a six- or seven-inch wad of hair hanging down her cheek.

It's disgusting to pull a hair out of food. Short hair or nets tell management's concern for their reputation.

Lawman foils fatigue-clad, bomb-toting drifter who takes hostages

By Peg McEntee
Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — The man who carried a bomb into a library and took 10 hostages was a drifter with a grudge against the government who lived in a tiny hotel room stuffed with combat gear, gun magazines and ammunition.

He was thwarted by a 22-year lawman dressed in civilian clothes who made himself a hostage by slipping into the room where Clifford Lynn Draper, armed with a gun and a homemade bomb, had herded his captives on Saturday morning.

More than five hours later, Draper told the hostages they had to draw lots, apparently to determine the order in which they would be executed. That's when Salt Lake County Sheriff's Lt. Lloyd Prescott identified himself.

Draper pointed his gun at the deputy, who pulled out his concealed weapon and shot him. The hostages were unharmed.

Prescott "is the kind of guy who would do something like he did today — put himself in harm's way to make somebody else safe," said Deputy Jim Potter. "He did a heck of a job for those people in there."

By Sunday, police still knew little about Draper, who had lived in a downtown residential hotel since late December. He was from somewhere in California, where he had a criminal record and a history of mental instability, Salt Lake Police Lt. Marty Vuyk said.

Draper apparently had been in Texas and Arizona before coming to Utah, Lt. Scott Folsom said. Investigators were still trying to pin down his hometown in California.

Neighbors at the hotel described Draper, 29, as a peculiar loner.

"He had a lot of survival gear," said Cary Tanner. During a minor earthquake in February, she said, Draper "freaked out and came out with big survival gear and everything.

"And one time, when he was looking for a job, he went out wearing a suit with his headband and canteen on."

Draper had watched for several days as a group of visiting Tibetan Buddhist monks created an intricate sacred sand painting, or mandala, at the main downtown branch of the Salt Lake City library.

On Saturday, he leaped onto a table and started taking hostages from among library patrons. He let the monks go. They chanted prayers for peace outside.

Police initially said Draper held 18 hostages, but Folsom said there were 10.

Draper told a radio station he wanted to speak on the air and read a list of demands and explanations, but police told station employees to refuse. The station placated Draper by playing songs he requested by Jethro Tull, Led Zeppelin and Aerosmith.

"I want all your classics. This is not good mood music," Draper told the station in one recorded call. "I may wind up in the morgue, bits and pieces of me at the crematorium, but I'm not going to jail."

Draper did not want to talk to police officers, telling the station "This is a military matter" and demanding to talk to the police chief, Utah Gov. Mike Leavitt and the commander of the National Guard. He never did.

He told the station he had been wronged by the government and claimed he was bilked out of money in the military. He said he wanted a pardon from President Clinton, but didn't say what he wanted to be pardoned for.

Draper also gave a letter to one of the monks. Police would not divulge its contents.

Draper was armed with a .45-caliber handgun and wore fatigues with razor blades sewn to the pants, apparently to keep anyone from tackling him.

His bomb was made of a can of black gunpowder, usually sold in cans of a little less than a quart, with more than 100 lead pellets glued to it, police said. It was wired to two 9-volt batteries with a hair curling iron as a "dead man's switch" trigger.

Pen pals send serial killer Dahmer money

MILWAUKEE (AP) — One woman said she wanted to teach serial killer Jeffrey Dahmer about Jesus, so she sent him $350, along with some Bible literature.

Another woman sent $50 so that Dahmer could buy "cigarettes, stamps and envelopes." And a 74-year-old nun sent $10 to reimburse Dahmer for postage on two art books that he mailed to her.

"He did awful things but way deep down he isn't a mean kid," she said.

In all, Dahmer, who admitted killing and dismembering 17 men and boys, has received more than $12,000 from letter-writers around the world, according to prison records.

The gifts have come from as far away as South Africa and France, and include a $5,920 donation last year from a woman in London.

The money and letters are itemized in the files of Columbia Correctional Institution in Portage, where the 33-year-old Dahmer is serving life sentences, The Milwaukee Journal reported in Sunday's editions.

People who send Dahmer money represent "a very sick group of people around the world that contribute for whatever reason," said Thomas Jacobson, who represents relatives of victims.

The relatives have obtained judgments against Dahmer worth more than $80 million, but Jacobson said his clients have so far received nothing.

It is "an absolute travesty" that Dahmer isn't sharing his donations, Jacobson said.

Jeffrey P. Endicott, the Columbia warden, said no law forbids Dahmer from soliciting financial assistance, as long as he does not commit fraud. But prison officials have restricted Dahmer's spending since November, when they learned of the unpaid judgments.

According to prison records, which show how much money an inmate receives and how he spends it, Dahmer received $11,000 in 1993. His parents were among the donors.

Besides the donations, Dahmer earned 24 cents an hour as a prison gymnasium janitor. He lost that job because he imitated a prison employee on the telephone. The incident kept him in solitary confinement for more than a month.

In late January, according to the latest records available, Dahmer's assets were $4,284. He has bought magazines, comic books and cassette recordings — including Gregorian chants and sounds of humpback whales — through catalogs.

In addition to exchanging letters, prison records say Dahmer uses Bible study and dark humor to deal with penitentiary boredom, which he is quoted as calling "a living death."

Greek actress, Mercouri, dies in N.Y. at 70

NEW YORK (AP) — Melina Mercouri, the Greek actress who gained fame in the film "Never on Sunday" and became a crusader for the arts as her nation's culture minister, died Sunday of complications from lung cancer.

Mercouri

Mercouri, 70, died at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center, where she had undergone surgery last week. Hospital spokeswoman Pat Turi said her condition had worsened Saturday.

She helped found Greece's Socialist party and was the first woman ever to hold a senior Cabinet post in Greek government, which she used to fight for the return of the Elgin Marbles. The priceless marble statuary was removed from the Parthenon in Athens by Scottish antiquarian Thomas Bruce in the early 19th century. It remains in the British Museum.

Movie theaters across Greece closed on Sunday to mark Mercouri's death.

"Greece mourns the death of Melina, a woman who fought, a woman who was a great actress and fantastic person," Premier Andreas Papandreou said.

Papandreou, who had worked with Mercouri for decades, appointed her culture minister in October, when the Socialists returned to power after four years. Mercouri also held the post from 1981 to 1989.

Although she suffered from lung cancer and underwent surgery after being hospitalized in New York on Feb. 3, Mercouri had repeatedly ignored doctors' advice to stop smoking. She was smoking at her last public appearance at Athens airport on the day she left for New York.

Elect Jim Prince, County Judge

Since Midland County spends 21-plus million dollars, the county judge needs extensive experience in investigating expenditures and developing economic plans limited to necessary expenditures. As former CEO of two major real estate firms, and now principal of a successful Midland business, I have many years of proven experience in budget planning and expense control.

Proven leadership, ability to organize, lead and compromise is required. I have more than a quarter century of successful experience doing this.

Conducting arraignments is best done by someone with the maturity and sound judgment that I possess and have used successfully for decades.

More JOBS = A Better Economy for Midland

SAVE TAXPAYERS MONEY by:

Work camps, not expensive jails, inmates performing community duties in print shops, laundries, landscaping and janitorial, by secure supervision of our capable law enforcement

Diversification = A Brighter Future & JOBS

Midland County deserves and could have a brighter future, but only if diversification is undertaken and accomplished. For years it has been unrealistic to depend economically exclusively on the oil industry. To grow, Midland, new industries and businesses must be attracted that create jobs. This can occur only with an organized professional plan, budgeted and undertaken by local government. I am the only candidate with years of direct involvement and participation in successfully relocating numerous major and small business firms.

Midland County is long overdue for a complete study of the activities that devour the citizens' ad valorem taxes, and after this thorough investigation, programs with policies, and procedures like that of a successful business need to be initiated. No other candidate has the experience and proven ability to accomplish this all-important task.

The overcrowded conditions of the jail could be solved immediately by the creation of boot camps and work facilities at much less cost than building additional jails. Why are we waiting? There should be printing shops, laundries, facilities for automotive, office equipment and furniture repairs, landscaping and janitorial duties all performed by inmates under careful and secure supervision of our very capable law-enforcement agencies. I will strive to accomplish this with the cooperation and assistance I have been promised.

Midland could be recognized as one of the most progressive and best communities in the USA, thereby better able to attract new businesses. Midland County needs a successful business leader not another attorney.

Scientists: Rodent Hantavirus probably occurs all over U.S.

ATLANTA (AP) — Urban rats prowling subway tunnels and house mice scurrying through cupboards are not the culprits.

Federal health officials say other kinds of rodents that usually shy from humans are the most likely to carry the hantavirus that has shown up in the Northeast after killing more than 30 people in the Southwest.

"We're going to find hantavirus all over the U.S.," predicted Dr. Jamie Childs, a CDC epidemiologist in charge of trapping rodents and looking for signs of infection.

"This is not a new disease. We're just newly recognizing it," Childs said.

There's no reason to panic, he said. Hantavirus, in an even rarer form than that now under investigation, has infected rodents in the United States for years without causing epidemics.

And those infected with the newly discovered forms, most commonly deer mice, are usually "either out in the woods or in the fields," Childs said. "There is no indication that Norway rats (common to urban areas) or house mice are going to be the major reservoir of this disease."

Most victims of last year's outbreak lived in the Four Corners area of New Mexico, Arizona, Utah and Colorado, where the rare respiratory disease caused by hantavirus was first recognized in May. Since then, only isolated cases have been reported across the country.

The latest victim was David Rosenberg, who died in January when he returned to school in Rhode Island after a visit home on New York's Long Island.

New treaty targets international adoptions

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Rena Steinzor decided to adopt a child abroad, she hired a lawyer, flew to a Colombian orphanage to meet the birth mother and brought home 3-month-old Daniel.

About a year later, little sister Hannah came home the same way.

But an impending treaty could make such private, parent-initiated adoptions a thing of the past, and Steinzor fears international adoptions in the United States will slow to a trickle.

"We're not talking about widgets, we're talking about children who . . . don't need to get caught up in a bottleneck of bureaucracy because only certain people are allowed to help them," said Steinzor, a Baltimore lawyer fighting provisions of the treaty that the United States is expected to sign.

She and others are worried about the treaty's requirement that the U.S. government establish a federal authority to regulate and oversee each of the 6,500 annual adoptions of foreign children by Americans.

And they're worried about the influence of a Washington lobbyist who represents the National Council for Adoptions, a private association that has been mistaken by at least three nations — Russia, Ethiopia and Poland — for a federal adoption clearinghouse.

Critics contend that the lobbyist, William Pierce, perpetuates that mistaken assumption. Pushed by complaints, the State Department last fall wrote to 50 nations explaining that the NCFA was not an official agency and governments can work with whomever they choose.

"I've been accused of running an adoption mafia, of trying to set up an adoption cartel," Pierce said. "It's absolutely nuts."

Pierce says he never misrepresented his organization, which charges 125 U.S. adoption agencies up to several thousand dollars to join. NCFA researches and lobbies on adoption issues and provides information, for free, to the State Department.

Currently, international adoptions are subject to laws of the U.S. state and the other country involved. Prospective parents, working privately or through an agency, must pass a home study showing they're fit and prove to the Immigration and Naturalization Service that the child is orphaned or abandoned so he or she can enter the country.

Adoption experts say the process has worked smoothly here. But some 66 countries, horrified by the widespread selling of Romanian orphans several years ago, decided some international regulation was needed.

Some people having a hard time finding a job may want to check whether they've spelled everything right on their resumes. Personnel executive Robert Half has a collection of gaffes by job applicants on their resumes.

For example, "I am a rabid typist," "Operated Pitney Bones machines," and "Hope to hear from you shorty."

He's also found bizarre statements on resumes, including this from an applicant with more honesty than common sense: "Insufficient writing skills, thought processes have slowed down some."

Color me creative

Grace McGartland doesn't have a gray flannel approach to management. McGartland, a consultant, encourages executives to bring balloons or toys into board meetings or to pass out crayons at sales meetings so employees can draw their ideas.

Or, she suggests, dance on your way to your next meeting. McGartland, who has formulated a concept she calls "Thunderbolt Thinking," says too many companies are on automatic pilot.

By doing something different, even very off-beat, "you create shifts in thinking," she says.

Charged up

It's not true that nobody likes electric cars. Researchers at the University of California at Davis surveyed 100 owners of electric cars and found they were happy with their wheels although they needed frequent charges.

"People are learning for the first time how little driving range they need on a daily basis," said researcher Kenneth Kurani. Another researcher, Tom Turrentine, said a survey shows there is a market for electric cars, including those that run just 50 to 100 miles before needing a recharge.

Roles change

While many Japanese women fill the traditional role of homemaker, others, particularly college grads and those with grown children, are increasingly going into the job market.

Changes in society, including the rising cost of living and less gender stereotyping in the workplace, have drawn more women to work, according to two professors, Penn State's Edwin Herr and Agnes Watanabe of Meiji Gakuin University in Tokyo.

The professors, who have written a paper on job issues in Japan, say the government has responded to the trends by providing counseling for women and helping them pick jobs.

This year's nostalgia fad may well be the 1964 Ford Mustang, a classic among car buffs. With the 30th anniversary of the Mustang's introduction this year, Ford is using the car to advertise the brand-new 1994 model.

The 1964 version is hard to come by, and out of the price range of most of us. But some consolation is offered by Recoton, a company that makes video cassette rewinders.

ARMs race on wane

If rates increase, ARMs savings may die quickly

Associated Press

HSH Associates, a Butler, N.J., mortgage research firm, compared a one-year adjustable rate mortgage with a 30-year fixed rate mortgage to see how much, and for how long, ARM borrowers can expect savings.

Using a worse-case scenario of rising interest rates, it contrasted an ARM, with an intial rate of 4.125 percent, with a 30-year loan carrying a 7 percent fixed rate. The ARM has a two percentage point annual cap, with a six percentage point limit over the life of the loan. The loan amount is $100,000.

In the first year, the ARM borrower comes out way ahead, paying $484.65 in monthly principal and interest payments, vs. $665.35 for the fixed-rate loan, for a total savings of $2,875.15 in cumulative interest paid.

■ Interest is declining in adjustable rate mortgages, but appeal remains for some.

By Vivian Marino
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — Like many homeowners, Marlene Brown took advantage of the low interest rates to refinance her two-bedroom condo in Studio City, Calif. last fall.

But unlike most borrowers, she chose a one-year adjustable rate mortgage over the more popular fixed-rate loans.

The 4.5 percent rate locked in the first year saves the 40-year-old Brown $400 in monthly mortgage payments over her previous loan. Even with a likely increase of two percentage points next year, she'll continue to pay less than the old mortgage. However, if rates continue to move up, any savings may be history.

Brown doesn't care. "I'm planning to move in about two years. I'm taking the money that I'm saving each month and using it toward the down payment on my next home," she said, adding that closing costs from the refinancing should be recouped this summer.

Mortgage Loans

	Total dollor volume (in billions)	ARM share of conventional loans closed (in percent)
1984	$204	62%

As rates tumbled to historical lows, many homeowners bid farewell to ARMs, preferring the stability of low fixed-rate loans. But ARMs have remained the loan of choice for a significant number of borrowers — usually those willing to ride the ups and downs of financial markets and those who are planning to move soon, such as Brown. Also, families with limited incomes have found it easier to qualify for an ARM.

"There's always going to be that market for them," said Ronnie J. Wynn, president of Colonial Mortgage Co. in Montgomery, Ala., where ARMs account for around 10 percent of mortgage volume.

"For most people the idea of having something that can move up and down within a wide range over time is not very attractive to them. But many people have come out ahead."

Wynn, himself, is a prime example. The rate on his ARM has been adjusted down six times and up three in the past nine years.

"My payments today are 40 percent lower than when I made the loan," he said. But he noted, "Those who are most comfortable with them are used to dealing with financial instruments, such as stocks and bonds."

Other homeowners with ARMs — whose rates are linked to an index of short-term financial instruments, most notably the one-year Treasury bill — have done equally well as rates declined to the lowest level in 25 years.

The provision affects estimated taxes, which are paid quarterly by people with significant income from investments, by the self-employed and by many professionals whose pay is not subject to withholding. About 1 in 9 taxpayers make the payments.

Most of them can expect less aggravation and smaller accountant's fees this year. The rules for calculating payments, which were made more complicated in 1992, have been altered to make it easier to avoid penalties.

Investing in futures

Q. What is a managed futures fund?
— Shelly Steinberg, Manhattan

A. Futures are an investment vehicle. They include not only commodities like grains and meats, but also markets for interest rates, currencies and stock indexes. Many people without the skill, time or emotional discipline to trade in these volatile markets invest instead in managed futures funds, sometimes called commodity funds or pools.

Managed futures funds, which operate similarly to mutual funds, use professional commodity trading advisers to make buying and selling decisions. Minimum investments in these funds are typically lower than they are for purchases of individual futures contracts. Some funds may use more than one adviser for diverse points of view.

"The returns of managed futures are generally not correlated to the returns of the stock and bond markets, an attribute which can assist in dampening the fluctuations of the overall portfolio," said Jane E. Martin, executive director of the Managed Futures Association. "In addition, managed futures offer entrance to global markets not otherwise easily accessed."

457 plan distributions

Q. I work for city government and have retirement money invested in a tax-deferred annuity — a 457 plan. How long after retirement can one leave funds in this account before a distribution must be taken?
— Glen H. Shane, N.Y.

A. Like 401(k) plans in the private sector and 403(b) plans for teachers, 457 plans let government employees tap the assets after they reach age 59½ without paying a penalty of 10 percent for early withdrawal. Plan participants generally have the flexibility to keep funds in the plan until they reach age 70½.

If the money is not needed — and you are comfortable with the plan's investment performance — you can achieve further tax-deferred growth by leaving it in the plan.

Leaving college in debt changes some lives

By Mike Feinsilber
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Hillary Wicai has her dream job as a television reporter, but she can't afford the clothes that make her look professional on the air.

She's trying to pay off "an enormous debt, probably $20,000 or $21,000" for the year at Northwestern University's Medill School of Journalism that helped her land the job. And that's on a novice newsperson's salary of $16,000 a year.

"All my clothes are gifts," says Wicai, who works for WLFI in West Lafayette, Ind. "Every single thing I have for work was given to me. My mother, my grandmother — they shop for me for bargains."

Millions of today's students must smirk when, studying Shakespeare, they come across Polonius' advice to his son Laertes, "Neither a borrower nor a lender be."

If they weren't borrowers, they wouldn't in college be.

And after they get out, their debt can influence the course of their lives. A study finds that many graduates in debt postpone marriage, delay having a family, hold down two jobs, even put off medical care.

Much attention has been paid to college borrowers who default, but relatively little to the impact of indebtedness on the 12.5 million who ploddingly, month after month, pay off their loans.

Collectively they owe $41.9 billion. Many are still in hock 10 years after graduation.

No time for these young people to backpack across Europe; no year off to "find themselves" — they've got debts to pay!

"There are students who would like to take a couple of years of their life and go to work in the nonprofit sector, and return something to their country before they mush on with their careers," said Victor Lindquist, director of placement at Northwestern.

'But they feel they are unable to do that and still meet their financial obligations. The clock begins ticking once you graduate."

For a variety of reasons — college tuitions have soared, more people of all incomes are enrolling and there are more loan programs available — more students are leaving school in debt.

In many schools, 70 percent of the student body must borrow. One survey said that the average undergraduate borrower carried away a $7,900 debt. Those who also borrowed for an advanced degree owed $31,000.

And the burden is compounded when one student debtor marries another.

"When I was in school in the 1950s, I had three jobs and worked summers," recalled Lindquist. "If you hustled you could make your way through."

Joanne Peevey, director of career and counseling services at the University of Houston at Clear Lake, said some graduates with loans leap at the first job offer that comes along "rather than taking the time to find the job that fits their skills and interest. So they pay a price."

Debt, of course, isn't a burden for every borrower. Jerry Heet, a Northwestern computer engineering graduate with AT&T Bell Laboratories in Naperville, Ill., the first member of his family to go to college, finds his loans an inconvenience, but not much more.

He pays back $110.59 a month; he knows the figure by heart. He said he had to postpone buying a new stereo system and drove his 1981 Nissan 220SX "basically into the ground."

"But looking at what it gave me — a great education — I would recommend borrowing rather than going to a lesser school," Heet said.

Newscaster Wicai agreed.

"Could I have gotten this job without that degree?" she asked. "Yes. But would I have been as prepared? No. I wanted to be the best entry-level reporter I could be, so I could feel confident in my abilities."

"My lifestyle is dictated by two things — my loan and my lack of income," she said. "I could have had these loans and been a stockbroker and been OK. But the combination means I have no social life."

To measure the after-college impact of college debt, educational researchers Joseph Boyd and Carol Wennerdahl questioned 551 recent college graduates who had borrowed.

Four in 10 said they found their payments easily handled.

But for one in four, the debt affected decisions on when or if to marry; more than a third who did marry said it influenced decisions about starting a family.

Four in 10 work at two jobs or more because of their debts. More than a quarter said their loans caused them to live with family or relatives and 35 percent said they postponed needed health care because of their debt.

Significantly, about 13 percent said their loans forced them to drop out of college — leaving them perhaps worse off than if they had never gone.

Teens and indvidual retirement accounts

By Bill Doyle

Q: My daughter had a part-time job in 1993 and has received a W-2 Form showing the income she earned. She would like to start an individual retirement account. But, because she is only 17 years old, neither our bank nor two mutual fund organizations would open an IRA for her.

Doyle

Can you suggest an option?

A: Although it doesn't qualify as an option, your daughter should follow the timeworn advice to try, try again.

I checked with the bank and both mutual fund groups you named in your letter and found the door to IRAs is not slammed shut to her.

The hang-up is your child has not reached the age of majority, which varies from 18 to 21 in different states. Minors cannot legally own stocks in their names, and contracts entered into by minors can be repudiated.

With that in mind, spokesmen for the mutual funds said their organizations will not knowingly offer IRAs to minors, but their IRA application forms do not require proof of age – indicating some minors have opened IRAs.

A spokeswoman for the bank provided more hope. Conceding that the bank does "bend the rules," she said youngsters sometimes open IRAs there. She suggested that your daughter visit the local branch, sit down with the community relations officer and have everything explained.

Q: Our teen-age son has landed a minimum-wage, after-school job. He is a very serious young man and has arranged to open an IRA. My wife's brother, who is an accountant, suggests that our son make nondeductible contributions to the IRA until he earns more money.

What do you think of that?

A: It's an excellent suggestion for long-range financial planning. But it does get complicated. Hang on for details.

Along with everyone else who has taxable compensation and is younger than 70 1/2, you son is entitled to put $2,000 or his entire salary, whichever is smaller, into an IRA annually.

He could take a deduction for each IRA contribution and not pay income tax on it. Tax would then be postponed until he made withdrawals from the IRA, usually after retirement. That is the way the vast majority of people handle IRAs.

If your son does not take tax deductions for IRA contributions, he would pay income tax on that money as he puts it in annually. But, when he later made IRA withdrawals, the portion attributable to the nondeductible contributions would not be taxed.

In his minimum-wage job, your son almost certainly is in the lowest – 15 percent – income tax bracket. So, by making deductible contributions, he would reduce his income tax by $300 each year.

Assuming he is successful in life, he would be in a higher income tax bracket when withdrawal time rolls around. As a result, his income tax would be cut by a good deal more than $300 every time he would withdraw $2,000 of nondeductible contributions from his IRA.

Q: If I make nondeductible contributions to my IRA, how am I supposed to keep track of the total amount of such contributions I make over a lifetime, so I know how much of the withdrawals I eventually make will be tax-free?

A: You are required to file Form 8606 with your Form 1040 federal income tax return for every year in which you make nondeductible IRA contributions. Hang on to those 8606s, just in case the Internal Revenue Service questions a return for a later year in which you make tax-free withdrawals.

You also designate a contribution as being deductible or nondeductible when you send a check to your IRA trustee. An on-the-ball IRA trustee keeps a record of that and, on your periodic statements reports what portions of your contributions were deductible and nondeductible.

The ages and stages of household assets

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Young, first-time buyers are back in the housing market in force — good news not just for them or for housing but for the entire economy, now and for years to come.

It has been a long time. Millions of them were denied the opportunity to buy in the 1980s because of economic conditions that hardly could be blamed on the young.

First-time home ownership is not just another statistic. Young households are the foundation of the housing industry and the future of the economy. Nothing compares with ownership as the initial step in asset building.

You might not guess this, however, when you read the usual statistics, the routine numbers that stress existing home sales (up 7.9 percent in 1993 to 3.8 million) and new-home sales, (up 9.7 percent to 669,000).

Very impressive, but they tell little about the return of the young who were forced to rent at ever-higher rates in the '80s because they were priced from the market, denied opportunities their parents had taken for granted.

Had market conditions remained as they were in 1980, according to an estimate by Harvard University's Joint Center for Housing Studies, 2.2 million more young households (ages 25-34) would own homes today.

High mortgage rates and soaring prices blocked them, and for the first time since World War II their rate of ownership fell. In 1980, 51.4 percent of households aged 25 years to 34 years owned homes; in 1990, only 45.3 percent.

The deterioration of young ownership ended last year when, a study shows, nearly half of all homes sold during the year were to first-time buyers. The average age of these buyers was 31.6 years.

ARMs: Some use drop to switch to fixed rates

(From 1B)

(The rate on the 30-year conventional mortgage broke below the 7 percent mark last fall, while the first-year rate on an adjustable rate mortgage hovered around 4 percent.)

"ARM borrowers have been dancing in the streets," said Paul Havemann, a vice president at HSH Associates, a Butler, N.J.-based mortgage research firm. "They didn't have to refinance. They just watched their rates tumble."

Yet many more used the drop in rates as an opportunity to switch to a fixed-rate mortgage, remembering the early 1980s, when soaring rates revealed the negative side of ARMs.

Refinancings accounted for 55 percent of the record $1.06 trillion in mortgages last year. Only 20 percent of those loans were ARMs, unchanged from the previous year. Ten years ago the market share for adjustable mortgages had peaked at 62 percent.

But lenders say some of those homeowners might actually do better with an ARM since there are more variations, with more attractive terms, now available.

"There are so many alternatives to a straight one-year ARM," said Warren Lasko, executive vice president of the Mortgage Bankers Association.

In a one-year ARM, the rate is usually adjusted up or down a maximum of two percentage points each year, with a cap of six percentage points over the life of the loan. The margin, or the amount by which the rate paid exceeds a specified index, is usually fixed at around two to three percentage points. Since the first-year rate, or teaser rate, is deeply discounted, it almost certainly will rise the second year.

Lasko says one product that has become increasingly popular is the so-called 10-1 mortgage, which stays at the same rate for the first 10 years, then converts to a one-year adjustable mortgage. Also popular is the 7-23 mortgage, which is fixed for the first seven years, adjusted once, then fixed for the remaining 23 years, he said.

There are also the five-year ARM, adjusted every five years, and the 5-25 mortgage, fixed for the first five years, then adjusted once for the next 25, to name a few.

Conversely, there are loans fixed for shorter periods, like the six-month ARM. Its rate may be tied to an index of six-month bank certificates of deposit.

"Lenders can roll out almost every possibility you can imagine," said Gregory A. Samp, president and chief operating officer for Sibley Mortgage Corp. in Rochester, N.Y.

Samp noted that some ARMs carry options allowing them to be converted to a fixed-rate loan, usually after three to five years, for a nominal fee. The rate at the time of the conversion, though, may be slightly higher than the prevailing fixed rates.

Of course, the longer the rate on a loan is fixed, the higher it will be.

The rate on a five-year ARM, for instance, is only about three-to five-eighths of a percentage point below the rate of the 30-year fixed rate, according to Samp.

"(But) if you're a first-time buyer and this is your starter home and you'll probably be moving in five years ... why not save the half percentage point or three-eighths of a percentage point," said Samp, noting that the average stay in a home is five to seven years. "They can't possibly lose."

That's what convinced Brown, the southern California condo owner, who says she wants to move to a bigger home in two years to keep pace with her expanding business preparing food for photographs.

"Very few people pay off their mortgage. It doesn't happen very often," said Brown. "I see my loan as just an instrument for finding more money, basically. If you know how to use it, you can use it to your advantage."

While there are some financial advantages to an ARM, most lenders agree variable mortgages won't regain their popularity unless fixed-rate loans return to double-digit levels.

Economists say that shouldn't happen anytime soon even though lender concerns about inflation have caused long-term rates to head higher recently.

ON-LINE: Be choosy when taking advice

tion on such on-line services as Compuserve, Prodigy, America Online and the mother of all networks, the Internet.

Pricing for the services varies, but a monthly fee of $10 to $20 generally entitles a user to establish a dial-up connection to the network for a specified number of hours. Additional hourly fees are assessed depending upon how long the user stays connected, the speed of the modem's data transfer rate and the time of day the service is used (evenings and weekends are usually cheaper than daytime hours).

The Compuserve Information Service is clearly the major center for tax-related information, which is expected because Compuserve is owned by H&R Block, the country's largest tax preparation service.

Without getting up from the computer, a Compuserve subscriber can browse through and select from among more than 450 Internal Revenue Service publications and forms, retrieve the documents electronically (a process called downloading) and print them on a desktop machine.

While still connected, the taxpayer can select tax preparation software, pay for it on-line and download it. If questions arise that are not answered by that software, the user can prowl through dozens of electronic forums where tax experts and experienced taxpayers share their insights.

If Lincoln were unsure today of the deductibility of oats and hay used to fuel his official limousine, he might pose his question on the "Work at Home" forum on Compuserve. Within minutes, or certainly by the next day, one or more of the hundreds of habitues of the forum — including, no doubt, some accountants — would advise him on the oats and hay issue.

And as an official resident of Illinois, Lincoln could today file his completed return electronically to the IRS through Compuserve.

Illinois is one of nine Midwestern and Southwestern states participating in an experiment this year of direct filing of federal tax returns via modem.

An IRS spokesman said the test will be evaluated to see if all taxpayers will eventually have the option of filing their returns from home computers (or, if the technology evolves as expected, from television sets and telephones).

Finally, Lincoln could instruct the IRS to send him a refund electronically, depositing it directly into his bank account. He would still have to use the United States Postal Service to send in his written, legal signature and his income statement W-2 forms, but everything else could be handled over the phone lines.

One does not have to subscribe to Compuserve to get access to tax services. The Prodigy information service's 2 million subscribers can peruse "Block on Taxes," a weekly tax column by Julian Block, chat with other taxpayers on a money-talk electronic bulletin board, and research tax issues in the electronic version of the Kiplinger Tax Guide.

On America Online every Wednesday at 9 p.m., EST, "Taxman" — also known as Charles A. Bish, a former senior accountant at Price Waterhouse in Washington, D.C., is host of a tax help forum. Anyone can ask questions of Bish, delve into a library of tax-related files or pose tax questions to other subscribers.

While Prodigy, Compuserve and America Online are the largest online services in numbers of subscribers, dozens of other networks offer tax information, along with other topics and services. Among them are Fidonet, Bitnet, Relaynet, Smartnet, Genie and Bix — and there are probably hundreds of smaller, noncommercial bulletin board service providers.

A word of caution: Virtually anyone, regardless of credentials, can establish a bulletin-board service.

SIMPLIFY: Many now breathe easier thanks to new law means accurately estimating one's income, a sometimes tricky matter for people with their own businesses.

Before 1992, taxpayers had a choice of paying 100 percent of the previous year's bill or 90 percent of the current year's bill. For people whose incomes were rising rapidly, paying 100 percent of the previous year's bill provided a "safe harbor." No penalties.

But President George Bush and Congress changed the estimated tax rules in a manner that was cumbersome and costly to taxpayers.

The 100 percent payment ceased to be a safe harbor for people who earned more than $75,000 and whose income increased by $40,000 or more. These people had to adopt a "pay as you go" method, and calculate taxes on each installment date.

"Over the last two years, you have had to do four tax returns a year to determine how much you owed and to avoid penalties," said Barry Salzberg, a tax partner in the New York office of Deloitte & Touche.

Many of these taxpayers can now breathe easier. The 90 percent safety clause remains. That means that if you pay 90 percent of your current year's liability you avoid a penalty.

And a safe harbor has been instated for those who expect their income to rise. Taxpayers with adjusted gross income of less than $150,000 in 1993 can avoid a penalty for 1994 if they pay the equivalent of 100 percent of their 1993 taxes in installments.

Those with an income of $150,000 or more must pay 110 percent of last year's tax liability. The numbers are the same for single taxpayers. The breakpoint is $75,000 for married taxpayers who file separately.

The new rules make it much easier — and cheaper — for those who had been forced to figure their income and deductions on a quarterly basis.

"The new rules are wonderful for taxpayers," said Laurence I. Foster, a tax partner at KPMG Peat Marwick in New York.

"It's not wonderful for the accountants because for a couple of years it was a good reason to bill your clients for more work."

Midland firm cuts deal with Indians for gas

FORT WASHAKIE, Wyo. (AP) — The Arapaho and Shoshone Indian tribes have entered into an agreement with a Midland company to open a large tract of the Wind River Indian Reservation to natural gas exploration.

The agreement signed Thursday with Tom Brown Inc. would allow the company to explore for natural gas on about 342,000 acres of agricultural land near Riverton for which the tribes hold mineral rights.

The company, already the largest natural gas producer and taxpayer operating on tribal land, expects to spend up to $6 million on exploration, according to Tom Brown chairman and chief executive officer Don Evans.

He said the company plans to begin seismic studies of the area next winter after it completes required cultural resource surveys covered by the agreement. The surveys involve archaeological searches for artifacts and are required by the federal government.

Tom Brown already operates two natural gas fields on the reservation and has a 50 percent interest in a third. Production from the two wholly owned fields totals up to 30 million cubic feet of gas per day, Evans said, adding the company hopes to boost production to about 50 million cubic feet per day with additional wells.

The tribes would benefit from royalties on new production and also would receive a severance tax on the production.

The "dual taxation" has discouraged some companies from exploring and developing mineral reserves on the reservation, Wind River officials have said, but the tribes offered Tom Brown some unspecified tax incentives, said reservation Tax Commission Director Richard Ortiz.

Evans and Ortiz said the agreement was the culmination of five to six years of negotiations.

Lions sign QB

PONTIAC, Mich. — Quarterback Scott Mitchell, the backup to Miami's Dan Marino the past four seasons, signed Sunday with the Detroit Lions, a three-year contract worth $11 million, radio station WWJ-AM reported.

Mitchell hadn't started an NFL game until Marino was sidelined with a torn Achilles tendon.

Chaps crush McLennan

■ The Midland College Chaparrals overpower No. 11 McLennan by 21 points to face Odessa College in a semi-final of the Texas-New Mexico Junior College championship.

By Bill Petitt
Staff Writer

WACO — Midland College rallied from a one-point halftime deficit riding the backs of Andre Owens and John Brown to a 92-73 win over McLennan Community College at the Starburst Junior College Basketball Championships here Sunday.

Midland advances to the Region V finals against Western Junior College Athletic Conference foe Odessa College at 8:30 p.m. McLennan, ranked eleventh in the nation, finished its season at 28-3.

Odessa dismantled the nation's top scoring team in Temple Junior College 113-93 earlier in the day. Larry Johnson scored 31 points while Martyn Norris added 19 as the Wranglers led by as much as 37 in the game.

For Midland and coach Steve Green the Region V final is chance to settle the score with OC. It will be the third meeting between OC and the Chaps this year, both teams have won on the others' home floor.

"It figures that we would have to drive 300 miles to play the rubber game when we live just 10 miles apart," said Green, who looked forward to the rematch. "Hey, they ruined our season first and then we ruined there's, so we'll be ready."

Owens, playing nearly flawless ball at the point guard, scored 19 points, 10 in the second half, and dished out a season-high 14 assists. Brown played physical scoring a team-high 20 points, including 14 in the second half as teammates Steve Walston, Kirk Ford and Calvin Morris were saddled with four fouls each with 11:19 to play and the Chaps clinging to a 60-55 lead.

"I was real scared at that point," said reserve center Ben Radford, who contributed four points.

"We just took the air out of the ball basically," said Green. "We tried to slow it down, spread the ball out and put it in the hands of our best free throw shooters."

It worked. Midland hit 12-of-15 free throws in the second half to negate the foul trouble. Only Brown fouled out and that came after the outcome had been decided.

The Chaps went into the game without reserve guard Tellas Lampley, who suffered stretched ligaments in his left shoulder in the Chaps' 85-76 win over Weatherford College on Saturday.

Midland was forced to go to its thinned out bench early as the Chaps picked up 17 first half fouls, including three on forwards Calvin Morris and Steve Walston. The rest of the bench came through in critical moments of the game.

"They put us in a position to go in even at the end of the first half," Green said. "I was real proud of Richard Edwards. He played outstanding. He handled the ball, he defended, he went after the ball on the glass, he was a big, strong body for us.

"I don't know, something hit me this morning that Richard would be able to contribute tonight and he did. He was very instrumental in us going in at half only one down."

Rangers noticing Oddibe

■ A budding star ten years ago, Oddibe McDowell has had to work his way through the minor leagues for a tryout with the Rangers this spring.

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. — First, Oddibe McDowell had to get Marty Scott's attention. Now he's being noticed by Texas Rangers manager Kevin Kennedy.

After a disappointing end to his first tour with the Rangers in 1988, McDowell pestered Scott until the Rangers' director of player development signed McDowell to a minor league contract last July.

"I kept calling and finally Marty gave me the opportunity to go to Tulsa and play," McDowell said. "I went there and played real well."

Cinderella story never told like this

The question kept flying at me Sunday morning with rather rapid enthusiasm.

"Did you really think the Midland High basketball team had a chance to go to Austin?"

Williamson

The first inclination was to reply, "Sure, I knew it all along. There was never a question."

But this business is cruel. You have to live with your words. This is the same guy who said these Bulldogs wouldn't get out of town. My pre-district pick was Midland High — fourth place. It's not that I didn't pick them to go to Austin that hurt. I didn't even think they would make the field of 96.

To say the least, those words tasted pretty foul at the Sunday morning breakfast table. So much for a career in prognostication. At least we gave you a lesson on where NOT to invest your hard earned money.

Still, you have to remember why MHS was picked fourth early in the season. When the picks were made, I had seen MHS play about five times. Four of them were losses. To be quite frank, these guys looked more like pooches than Bulldogs. They certainly were not the team that shot 61.5 percent from the field against The Colony Saturday in the Region I finals.

Shoot, these Bulldogs had a raw-boned 6-5 post (Jason Kopp), who couldn't buy playing minutes as a freshman. They also had a guard (Ryan Bradberry) begging for playing time off the bench. Who would have thought that "Bradberry Hill" would rise to be better than the song.

Jumon Hailey was kicking the ball around. I was afraid he couldn't see out of those strange goggles he wears on the floor. Donald Carter, the team's leading scorer was inconsistent, but truly showed signs of promise even in the wake of a 2-5 beginning. And John Marc Sanon probably didn't even want his girlfriend to watch those early games.

I even snickered when Jack Stephenson told me, "We're playing bad right now, but this is the best 2-5 team in the state." A bold admission at that time of the season, but who's snickering now?

By Saturday, the Bulldogs were wearing T-shirts that read, "I Believe." This team believed in themselves — even if no one else did. They rose from the ashes like a proud Phoenix and joined the state's elite Final Four — just forget the proud 96 that started this tournament.

And they did it through pain and suffering. Forget the losses. Just prior to the Region I semifinals with Fort Worth Dunbar Friday, the team learned that sophomore coach James Johnson's mother had died in Levelland (the funeral is there today). Every team huddle was broken with a battle cry of "Coach Johnson."

"We got together and all signed the game ball from The Colony for Coach Johnson," Stephenson said. "That won't bring his mother back, but he will be able to remember his mother when he sees that ball. I know when my mother died, I felt like I had lost my best friend. We know what he's going through."

It is very rare for a team with 11 losses ever to get a chance to play before 16,000 fans in The Show at Austin's Super Drum. This is a Cinderella story in real life. The glass slipper is still waiting to be found.

Did I know this would happen? I never believed the Cinderella story when I was a kid, so you can see how much I missed even in childhood. We need a Midland High to tell us that story from time to time.

UIL: Linder leads Sandies to 5A championship

(From 1C)

11 rebounds and had six blocks as Amarillo clobbered Conroe 62-46 Saturday and wrapped up back-to-back Class 5A titles for the first time since Duncanville won three straight 5A crowns in 1988-90.

Amarillo defeated Cleburne and Euless Trinity in Midland Feb. 25 and 26 in the Region I Tournament.

"It feels even better the second time," said Linder, who was voted the championship game most valuable player. Amarillo finished the year 36-1.

Linder got a lot of help from senior Tracie Swayden, a hoops teammate since grade school who scored 11 and helped steer the Sandies through an early fourth-quarter charge by Conroe.

"Every time I think of Austin, I can say, 'Hey, we won state there — twice," Swayden said.

Conroe, led by Nici Johnson with 13 points and 12 points each from Tracy Bougere and Tiffany Moore, ended the year 33-2 after its first tournament appearance since finishing as runner-up in 3A in 1974.

"Amarillo was the better team out there," Conroe coach Marsha Porter said. "They deserve to be state champions — again."

In Class 4A, Amanda Mooney scored 20 and Mary Curry added 17 as Waco Midway overcame a considerable size mismatch and dismantled Dallas Lincoln 52-40.

Midway (37-3) won its sixth state title by out-hustling Lincoln and by collapsing on the Lady Tigers' massive frontline, which includes a rotation of four players 6-feet or taller.

Lincoln, the 4A runner-up in 1991 and making its third state tournament appearance, was led by Cynthia Hogg with 16 points and 17 rebounds. The Lady Tigers finished the year 29-6.

"I told myself not to get intimidated by their size," said MVP Mooney, who missed her first eight shots and then finished strong. "I just stuck to my moves .. and I finally got in a groove. I just saw the life go out of them in the second quarter."

Hogg, a signee with Kansas, said, "There's no way they should have beaten us. We just gave up. I was saying this isn't over yet, but deep inside I was getting down."

In Class 3A, Melanie McMullin hit a momentum-stealing 3-pointer with 1:42 to play and then converted six straight free throws in the final 35 seconds to help Dripping Springs defeat Waco La Vega 64-56.

Dripping Springs finished the year 36-3 and grabbed the title it narrowly missed last year in a bitter finals loss to Dimmitt.

Waco La Vega, making its first tournament appearance, ended the season 32-4 and received outstanding performances from Katrina Price, who scored 31 points Saturday and 41 Thursday in a semifinal victory against previously unbeaten Brownsboro.

The victory was the first state title for Dripping Springs coach Jerry English in eight trips to the tournament.

"It's so exciting," McMullin said. "We wanted this so bad for our coach and for ourselves."

In Class 2A, Marissa Thomas scored 13 points, including both ends of a one-and-one free throw attempt with 26.9 seconds left, to help secure a 31-29 victory for Tuscola Jim Ned over Hemphill.

Jim Ned, located about 60 miles south of Abilene, held off a late Hemphill charge to win the 2A title in its first ever appearance at the state tournament, finishing the year 34-2.

Hemphill, also making its first showing at the state tournament, ended the season 30-5.

ODDIBE: McDowell hit .342 in 34 Tulsa games

(From 1C)

through the Rangers' minor leagues.

But he hit .342 in 34 games at Tulsa and earned a non-roster invitation to the Rangers' spring training. He's already impressed Kennedy.

"Oddibe has done some good things," Kennedy said. "He's still got his speed and gets a good jump on the stolen bases and he reads the pitchers well. He's shown some good things already."

McDowell was a highly respected Rangers prospect in his rookie year in 1985 when he led American League rookies with 18 home runs and 25 stolen bases.

The following year, McDowell stole 24 bases in 26 attempts for a 92.3 percent success rate that led the AL.

Injuries took a toll in 1987 and after a disappointing 1988 season he was traded to Cleveland, beginning a careening spiral through the minor leagues until he was released by the California Angels on May 14, 1992.

McDowell was out of baseball until he signed with the Rangers' Class AA Tulsa Drillers.

"I don't know that it was a last chance but it was a chance," McDowell said. "I hadn't had an opportunity to play other than Mexico and I didn't want to do that so I kept phoning and finally Marty said, 'Okay, we'll give you a shot.'

"I stayed on him and let him know that I wanted an opportunity to play and so he said what the heck. That's what happened."

McDowell couldn't help but notice the difference from his previous experience with the Rangers.

"When I was here first, I was the up and coming youngster and now I'm a suspect instead of a prospect," he said. "As far as playing, I feel more comfortable. I've had some time off and made some adjustments over the years that I feel are for the better."

McDowell also has a chance in the Rangers' outfield. He's among a large group fighting for the right field starting job. He played Saturday's game against Chicago in center field.

"Kevin hasn't told me anything," McDowell said. "I just know I've got an opportunity to play in right field or to provide experience or be another guy to add depth off the bench."

McDowell sees an outstanding opportunity for the Rangers, too.

CHAPS: Midland will face OC

(From 1C)

Nine Chaps scored in the first half, including a pair of three-pointers from Luis Camabraia to keep Midland close. Camabraia and Earl Tyson came off the bench to help shut down the Highlander guard duo of former Howard Hawk Brian Green and Marcus Moss.

"We knew they had some guards that could stroke it, not from the college three-point line, but from the NBA three," said Owens. "We wanted to get out on them and put pressure on them and that's what we did."

Moss and Green combined for 44 points in McLennan's win over South Plains. Against MC they were held to just 14 points on 4-of-20 shooting from the field.

Rodrick Monroe, who did not score in the Highlanders' 79-77 win over South Plains College on Friday, led McLennan with 12 first-half points as the Highlanders lived on the charity stripe, hitting 15 of 23 free throws compared to just of 3-of-10 for the Chaps.

McLennan led 42-41 at intermission after sophomore Gerard Darnes hit a three-pointer with five seconds to play in the half.

The Highlanders opened the second half with a bucket from Norman Williams to take a 44-41 lead with 19:50 to play. The Chaps then took over, outscoring McLennan 51-31 in the second half.

Midland went on a 17-6 run over the next 4:23 to take a 58-50 lead with 15:27 left, highlighted by six by from Brown.

The Chaps used a tough, zone defense to keep McLennan without a field goal for 5:54 and extend their lead from eight, at 69-61 with 7:22 to play, to 86-66 with 1:26 left.

CHAP NOTES: Tonight's Midland-Odessa game will be televised on Home Sports Entertainment at 8:30 p.m. as part of a doubleheader for the right to go to the national tournament. The first half of the doubleheader will feature Jacksonville College versus Kilgore College... Midland leads the overall series over Odessa College 27-24, but the Wranglers are 2-0 in postseason games... Brown big reason UNM won WAC

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — In the arena where the late Jim Valvano reached the pinnacle of his coaching career, another little man with a big heart Sunday put the final trim on a championship.

Greg Brown, New Mexico's 5-foot-7 point guard, began and ended the Lobos' cutting of the nets, symbolic of the school's first Western Athletic Conference title in 16 years.

The final strands of net were cut by Brown at the north end zone basket in the arena known as The Pit, where Lorenzo Charles' last-second slam dunk gave Valvano's North Carolina State Wolfpack a 54-52 win over heavily-favored Houston in the 1983 Final Four.

New Mexico, which had not won the WAC regular season title since 1978, clinched it with an 84-82 overtime road win at Brigham Young on Thursday. But instead of cutting the nets at Provo, the Lobos opted to celebrate with their fans.

And in a town where attendance at Lobo games ranks among the nation's top 10 every year, it was an invitation that had plenty of takers.

An estimated 4,500 fans turned out on the sun-drenched Sunday to celebrate with a team that was a pre-season pick to finish no better than fourth in the WAC.

"This is a team that has done the unexpected. They have over-produced," said Jake Wodarz, a season-ticket holder who was among the many who showed up at the arena two hours early to secure a courtside seat.

What the Lobos produced was a 22-6 regular season record, the school's eighth straight 20-wins or better year. And although the conference post-season tournament awaits, New Mexico is a virtual lock to earn a second straight NCAA tournament bid for the first time in school history.

AP Book Recounts Agony, Action Of World War II In Europe

War in Europe, a 192-page hard-cover book by The Associated Press, combines an incisive narrative with compelling photographs to mark the 50th anniversary of World War II.

The D-Day invasion in Normandy, Anzio, the Battle of the Bulge, Berlin – all are recalled vividly, with colorful quotes and anecdotes and archival photos that capture the stupifying human cost and staggering proportions of the war. Author Sid Moody offers a penetrating analysis of the war, along with powerful and poignant tales of epic battles and individual exploits, of mayhem and of men.

War in Europe is available to readers of this newspaper at a special price.

Couples withdraws; Huston wins

Associated Press

MIAMI — Playing as a onesome after Fred Couples withdrew with a back injury, John Huston came from four shots behind Sunday to shoot a 6-under-par 66 and win the Doral Open by three strokes.

■ Golf Roundup

Huston was alone over the first 11 holes at Doral's Blue Monster course after Couples — his scheduled playing partner — injured himself warming up and withdrew before teeing off.

"I hit one ball and it felt like my back exploded," said Couples, a former Masters champion and two-time PGA Tour Player of the Year. "I stood there and absolutely could not move."

Couples, a runner-up three times in four previous worldwide starts this season, said he hopes to defend his title in the Honda Classic at nearby Fort Lauderdale next weekend "but at this stage I'm not sure of anything."

With Couples receiving treatment for lower back problems at the on-site Centinela Fitness Center, Huston had only a walking scorer in his group until the 12th hole when Brian Claar, who had completed play earlier, came out to join him.

"It worked out OK," Huston said of his mostly solitary journey to victory. "When Brian came out, it kind of helped me pace myself coming home."

Huston finished at 14-under 274 in registering his third victory — all in Florida — in his seven years on the tour.

The triumph, his first since 1992, was worth $252,000 from the $1.4 million purse. It pushed his season's earnings to a leading $396,800 and secured a place in the field for next month's Masters.

"I'm really looking forward to it," Huston said. "One of my goals was to win in Florida and get in a winning frame of mind."

Third-round leader Billy Andrade and journeyman Brad Bryant shared second at 277.

Andrade, a non-winner since scoring consecutive victories in 1991, had the last chance to overtake Huston, who played about a half hour in front of the other contenders.

Two shots off the pace, Andrade hit a 7-iron to within 3 feet of the cup on the 17th hole and needed that birdie putt to close to within one with one hole to go. But he pushed it to the right and his last real chance was gone.

GTE West Seniors

OJAI, Calif. — Jay Sigel staged the biggest comeback in the history of the PGA and Senior tours, rallying from 10 strokes behind to win the GTE West Seniors Classic in a four-hole playoff with Jim Colbert.

Sigel, a rookie on the Senior Tour, rolled in a four-foot birdie putt on the 60th hole of the tournament to collect the $82,500 first prize.

To get there, Sigel had to shoot a closing 62 after trailing leader Colbert by 10 shots going into the final round.

The previous senior comeback record was from seven strokes behind on the final day, set by Rocky Thompson this year. The regular tour's biggest comeback was eight shots — Chip Beck (1990), Hal Sutton (1985) and Mark Lye (1983).

"I was looking to shoot 65 and hopefully finish in the top 10," Sigel said. "I was happy for the playoff."

Sigel nearly didn't compete in the GTE West Classic. After Lee Trevino suggested Ojai's short layout wouldn't fit his long game, Sigel had to be talked into playing by fellow Senior Tour pro Dave Stockton.

"I'm glad I came," Sigel said. "This is one of the most beautiful stops on the tour."

He began the day at 4-under-par on the Ojai Valley Inn and Country Club layout.

The two-time U.S. Amateur champion put together a course record-tying round of 8-under to go to 12-under after 56 holes.

Mediterranean Open

TORREVIEJA, Spain — Jose Maria Olazabal of Spain ended a two-year winless drought by capturing the Mediterranean Open in a sudden-death playoff.

Olazabal defeated Ireland's Paul McGinley on the second extra hole after both shot 2-under-par 70s in the final round and finished the regulation 72 holes tied at 276.

Jackson sets hurdle mark

SINDELFINGEN, Germany (AP) — Colin Jackson of Britain set a world indoor record for the 60-meter hurdles on Sunday with a time of 7.30 seconds.

He trimmed .06 seconds off his finish at Glasgow on Feb. 12, when he tied the record set in 1987 by Greg Foster.

Mark McKoy of Canada was second Sunday in 7.53, and Mike Fenner of Germany third at 7.54.

No. 1 Lady Vols win

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — No. 1 Tennessee moved closer to the Southeastern Conference tournament title Sunday, combining defense and rebounding with a little Tiffany Woosley.

The Lady Vols (28-1) beat No. 16 Alabama 72-56 to advance to the title game Monday night against the winner of the other semifinal between No. 13 Vanderbilt and No. 22 Florida.

Woosley scored 25 points to lead the Lady Vols, including a tournament record 10-of-10 from the foul line.

As important as the offense, however, was Tennessee's dominance on the boards. Dana Johnson grabbed 18 rebounds to help Tennessee to a 60-31 edge in rebounding. Johnson also scored 15 points.

The Lady Vols held Alabama to 30 percent shooting (17-of-57) and were especially effective on Alabama's star guard, Niesa Johnson.

She had 31 points and 15 assists in the Crimson Tide's 86-84 overtime victory over Mississippi on Saturday, but managed just seven points on 2-of-12 shooting from the field against the Lady Vols.

"The obvious stat to me, and the obvious stat to probably everybody in the arena, is the fact that we just got annihilated on the boards," said Alabama coach Rick Moody. "And we don't get annihilated on the boards."

Alabama closed a 12-point first-half gap to four points early in the second half, but couldn't keep Dana Johnson away from the glass. Tennessee slowly built the lead back up to 50-38 on a Johnson basket with 9:30 left.

The Crimson Tide was never closer than nine points after that.

"It wasn't a pretty contest, but we'll take it," said Tennessee coach Pat Summitt. "The key for us was rebounding. We shot poorly (also 30 percent) but got three and four chances. Dana Johnson was tremendous."

Substance Abuse. Often It's Not The Only Problem.

Quite often substance abuse is a symptom of depression. And depression is a serious illness. Unfortunately, many people choose to 'treat' their depression themselves, often leading to:

- Excessive drinking
- Use of illegal substances, such as cocaine or marijuana
- Abuse of prescription drugs
- Overeating

If you or someone you know is experiencing any of these problems, call us 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Our experienced staff and innovative treatment programs can help over-come the obvious and not so obvious problems - the right way.

Becky Berones performs CPR on a child dummy.

During a medical emergency, people generally call 911 for help. But the minutes until an ambulance arrives may mean the difference between life and death.

"Something as simple as opening an airway, pushing back the chin, could save a life," said Genie McCartney, marketing director and CPR/first-aid instructor trainer for the Midland County Red Cross.

Thousands of Americans die each year due to injuries related to heart attacks or strokes because immediate help isn't available.

Cardiopulmonary resuscitation/first aid training can prevent some of those deaths or permanent injury.

"It's a very simple procedure to learn and more than likely it will be a friend or family member" helped, Ms. McCartney said.

The Red Cross provides such health and safety lessons to the community and to volunteers, as well as instructs volunteers in disaster relief and military family assistance.

■ March is Red Cross Month

Services include:

■ Health and safety courses consists of CPR/first aid, water safety, HIV-AIDS training, nurse assistant training and baby-sitting safety. Costs run from $25 to $50.

Water safety, taught through the YMCA and city facilities, includes lifeguard training, water safety instructor training and swimming lessons. During the summer, through a United Way-funded program, free water safety is provided to children who might not otherwise have the opportunity.

HIV-AIDS training presented to companies and civic groups explains the virus, how one can and cannot get infected and preventative measures. Instructor training is also available.

Pat McLain, director of health and safety, said education remains an important tool in the fight against HIV-AIDS. The Red Cross approaches the subject strictly as a public health and safety issue not a political, religious or moral one.

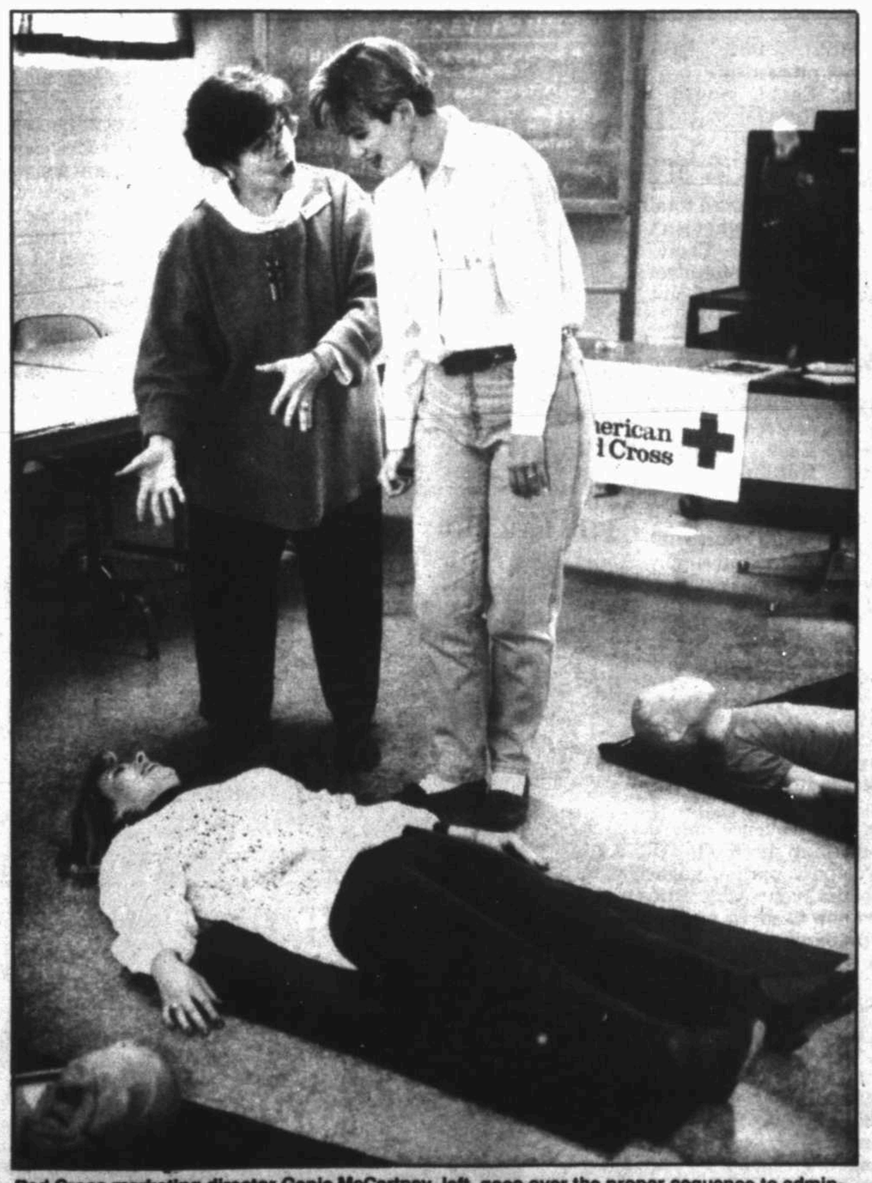
■ Free disaster relief courses provide training for volunteer assistance.

The three-day basic training qualifies volunteers for the disaster relief national data bank.

The local chapter responds to disasters such as the recent earthquake in California, when 14 local volunteers were dispatched.

Ellen Pate, executive director and a disaster relief trainer, said local help is also provided for disasters such as single-family fires. About two to three such families are helped each month.

■ Services to military families include providing support and information to relatives of military personnel during wartime as well as contacting personnel in peacetime in the case of a death or another emergency back home.



Red Cross marketing director Genie McCartney, left, goes over the proper sequence to administer CPR to an unconcious person with Jimmi Gamble. Becky Berones is the victim.

Red Cross instructor Debbie Erdwurm applies a splint to victim Dana Allen's arm. Allen is playing the victim with a broken arm. Jimmi Gamble performs CPR on a child dummy in the background.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠963 ♡J765 ◇9852 ♣83
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♣	Dbl	Rdbl?

What action do you take?
A.—You don't have to bid to tell partner you are weak—North already knows that. Here, you simply want to play in partner's best suit, so pass and leave the decision to North.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠96 ♡J7652 ◇952 ♣832
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♣	Dbl	Rdbl?

What action do you take?
A.—Bid on this sequence only if you have something specific to tell partner. If you pass, partner might retreat to spades, your worst suit. Bid one heart now to advise partner you are not prepared to play in any other strain.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AQ762 ♡94 ◇AJ104 ♣J3
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 NT	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
3 NT	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—Even if partner has a maximum 18 points, slam is out of reach now that you know there's no spade fit. Don't go chasing after moonbeams. Pass and let partner declare what should be a very comfortable contract.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠10542 ♡AKQ72 ◇5 ♣AK4
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Neither a jump to four spades, nor a splinter bid of four diamonds, if that's in your armory, does this hand justice. We would start with a quiet two clubs, forcing in any methods, to see what partner does next.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K9 ♡J6 ◇AKJ5 ♣Q9652
What is your opening bid?
A.—The problem with opening one club is you will be stuck for a rebid should partner respond one spade. You can spare yourself those worries by opening one diamond. Over a one-spade response you have an easy rebid of two clubs; over one heart you have a choice of one no trump or two clubs, with our vote going to the former.

Quayle to finish book tour before next political step

WESTMINSTER, Md. — Former Vice President Dan Quayle is waiting for the end of his book tour before deciding the next chapter in his political career.

Quayle told a group of Christian farmers that he was seriously considering another run for office.

"After I complete my book tour, I'll make my decision," he said.

Quayle's autobiography "Standing Firm" is due out in May.

More than 700 people came to hear Quayle speak Saturday about family values, education and health care. The $15 tickets sold out six weeks in advance. Quayle was greeted with a standing ovation.

"With that kind of enthusiasm, how'd we lose?" Quayle joked. "I feel right at home."

ETNA, Ohio — Dawn Wells was surrounded by a bunch of little buddies. Some even looked like Gilligan.

The Skipper, too. The millionaire and his wife.

Wells, who played homespun Mary Ann on "Gilligan's Island," visited an elementary school to promote reading, and was greeted by students and teachers dressed as characters from her old television show.

"It's just such a hoot after all this time we're still talking about it," she said as she signed autographs at Etna Elementary School last week.

"Gilligan's Island," about a ship's crew and passengers marooned on an island, ran for three seasons and has remained popular in reruns for 30 years.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Garrison Keillor and his radio show "A Prairie Home Companion" will leave the prairie for a special show.

Keillor will broadcast June 4 from the newly renovated Ryman Auditorium in Nashville. The 102-year-old Ryman, where the Grand Ole Opry show was broadcast from 1943 to 1974, has undergone an $8.5 million renovation.

The theater has been a museum for most of the last 20 years. The broadcast will be one of the events marking the renovation.

SAN FRANCISCO — It was a big San Francisco night for Chris Isaak.

His solo album, "San Francisco Days," won the outstanding album prize at the 17th annual Bay Area Music Awards, also known as the Bammies.

And his group — Chris Isaak & Silvertone — won the Bammie for outstanding group. The group's drummer, Kenney Dale Johnson, also received an award.

4-Non Blondes received two awards: "What's Up" was named best song and dreadlocked lead singer Linda Perry top female vocalist.

Van Halen lead vocalist Sammy Hagar also received two honors, the Arthur M. Sohcot Award and outstanding male vocalist. The Sohcot award is for public service and excellence in performance.

Neil Young was named the Bay Area's musician of the year.

NORMAL, Ill. — Betty Friedan, who helped ignite a social revolution with her book "The Feminine Mystique" two decades ago, hopes to help spark another one.

The 73-year-old Friedan, whose latest book is "The Fountain of Age," is attacking the notion that people slump into "a programmed decline to senility" as they get older.

On the contrary, Friedan told an audience at Illinois State University, life becomes extremely valuable once you pass 60.

"You become more uniquely yourself, more authentically yourself, more whole," she said Friday. "You stop obsessing about what your mother did or not do to you before age 4, or obsessing about your nose or your thigh. You become liberated from the things that tore you up before."

LOS ANGELES — The National Enquirer didn't, repeat DID NOT, get the story wrong in a Clint Eastwood "exclusive" interview: It made the whole thing up, according to a lawsuit the actor-director filed.

Highlights of the allegedly bogus interview, published Dec. 21, according to the federal lawsuit filed Thursday:

— On raising a daughter, Eastwood was quoted as saying: It "isn't what I had planned to be doing at this stage in my life, but what the hell. It's better than sitting around getting fat and lazy."

— On proposing marriage to actress Frances Fisher, mother of his child: "Sometimes she says yes and sometimes she says no, so we never really get around to getting married."

— On his movie roles: "I can't keep playing someone else's idea of a tough guy."

Eastwood, 63, seeks unspecified compensatory and punitive damages against the tabloid.

Iain Calder, the Enquirer's editor in chief, said Friday from Lantana, Fla., where the paper is based, that he hadn't seen the lawsuit and couldn't comment until he had.

Purdue moves into 1st behind Robinson's 37

Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Glenn Robinson scored 37 points Sunday, including a driving jumper with 6.5 seconds to play that gave No. 9 Purdue a 95-94 victory over No. 3 Michigan and moved the Boilermakers into first place in the Big Ten.

Michigan led 94-87 with 1:37 to play, but Purdue's Matt Waddell hit a 3-pointer with 1:20 left and Robinson got the Boilermakers (25-4, 13-4 Big Ten) within one with a three-point play with 49 seconds left.

Jalen Rose of Michigan (20-6, 12-4) missed a 3-pointer with 35 seconds left, but Ray Jackson grabbed the rebound and Michigan passed the ball around waiting to get fouled. Purdue didn't foul and Rose's pass to Jimmy King went off his hands and out of bounds with 10.5 seconds left.

Robinson outplays Shaq

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — David Robinson won the battle with Shaquille O'Neal, especially in the fourth quarter.

Robinson had 36 points, 13 rebounds, seven assists and six blocked shots Sunday as San Antonio rallied late in the game for 111-103 victory over Orlando.

Robinson had 12 of his points in the fourth quarter as the Spurs outscored the Magic 37-17 to come back from an 86-74 deficit after three periods.

"This was a big, big victory for us," Robinson said. "The intensity level was high today. It was a television game, so it was big for both teams. There was almost a playoff feel to it."

O'Neal finished with 32 points and 11 rebounds, but he scored only three points in the fourth quarter.

"We had them beat, but we made some mistakes at the end of the game that cost us," O'Neal said. "We made a couple of turnovers down the stretch that really hurt us."

San Antonio actually trailed by 16 points late in the third quarter after Robinson sat out much of the period with foul trouble.

"David grew up today," Spurs coach John Lucas said. "He was struggling and we couldn't get Shaquille off the box as we needed to at the beginning. But David came out with all his guns flaming."

Nets 126, 76ers 99

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Derrick Coleman had his second career triple-double with 13 points, 12 rebounds and 10 assists and New Jersey set a team record with nine 3-pointers in a victory over Philadelphia.

It was the 13th straight loss for the 76ers, their longest streak since the 1972-73 season.

Cavaliers 99, Bulls 95

RICHFIELD, Ohio — B.J. Armstrong committed a critical 10-second violation in the final minute and Cleveland scored its last five points on free throws.

■ NBA Roundup

The Cavaliers won their 10th in a row, one away from the team record set twice before. The Bulls have lost five straight, their longest skid since they dropped six in a row in April 1989.

John Williams, subbing for injured Brad Daugherty, led Cleveland with 23 points and made the foul shot that put Cleveland ahead by four with 5.1 seconds to play. Bobby Phills scored 19 and Gerald Wilkins had 16.

Pete Myers scored 17, Luc Longley 16 and Scottie Pippen and Horace Grant 15 each for the Bulls.

Nuggets 117, Timberwolves 97

DENVER — Mahmoud Abdul-Rauf scored 21 points and Dikembe Mutombo had nine blocked shots to lead the Denver Nuggets to an easy 117-97 victory over the Minnesota Timberwolves on Sunday night.

Denver led by 12 points after one quarter and 20 at the half. The Timberwolves never were able to mount a serious threat after intermission.

La Phonso Ellis finished with 21 points and Reggie Williams had 17 points on 10-of-11 shooting. Bryant Stith added 16.

Chris Smith scored a game-high 25 points for Minnesota, which has lost 13 straight on the road and 16 of 18 overall. The Wolves played without guard Isaiah Rider, who had a twisted right ankle.

Denver outshot Minnesota 56 percent to 41 percent.

Sonics 102, Kings 85

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Gary Payton scored 24 points and Vincent Askew added a career-high 19 as Seattle beat Sacramento night for their second victory over the Kings in less than 24 hours.

Kendall Gill contributed 17 points for Seattle, which built a 20-point halftime lead and cruised to its eighth straight victory over the Kings. Seattle also completed a five-game sweep of the season series.

Andre Spencer, signed to a 10-day contract four days ago, scored 18 points off the beach for Sacramento, which led only once, 4-2, less than two minutes into the game.

Seattle improved its league-leading record to 42-14 and its road mark to 19-11, also a league best.

The Sonics defeated the Kings 114-98 on Saturday night in Seattle, and now have five straight victories.

Mitch Richmond contributed 15 points, nearly nine below his average. The Kings have lost four straight after winning six of their previous eight.

Richmond had 10 points in the third quarter as the Kings used a 15-4 run in the final 4:12 to trail Seattle 82-65 entering the fourth quarter, but they couldn't close the gap.

Jazz 103, Suns 92

PHOENIX — John Stockton had 18 points and 20 assists, many of which helped Karl Malone score a team-high 30 points, as the streaking Utah Jazz defeated the Phoenix Suns 103-92 Sunday night for their ninth straight victory.

The Jazz ended the Suns' 10-game homecourt winning streak and won in Phoenix for the first time since March 7, 1986.

Cedric Ceballos had 22 points, Kevin Johnson 21 and Charles Barkley 19 for the Suns, who weren't able to capitalize on a 50-34 rebounding edge because of poor free-throw shooting (26 of 43).

Tom Chambers scored 17 points off the bench for Utah.

Burditt SWC top defender

DALLAS (AP) — Texas center Albert Burditt, who averaged 2.2 blocks and 1.9 steals per game this season, was selected Sunday as the Southwest Conference defensive player of the year.

Texas A&M guard David Edwards also made the team.

Texas women finish with win over TCU

AUSTIN (AP) — Erica Routt scored 25 points and Amie Smith had 22 points and 16 rebounds leading Texas to a 99-70 victory over Texas Christian Sunday in the regular season finale for both teams.

The Lady Longhorns (18-8, 10-4 Southwest Conference) led 40-32 at halftime, but freshman Amber Hasenmyer hit three of four 3-point shots in the second period to help put the game away.

Hasenmyer scored 18 points for the game, and Texas hit 51 percent from the field in the second half. TCU (5-19, 1-13) shot only 33 percent for the game.

Kim Altman led the Lady Frogs with 17 points, including four of five 3-pointers. TCU's leading scorer, Donna Krueger, was held to just nine points but grabbed 12 rebounds.

Texas meets Rice in the first round of the SWC post-season tournament Wednesday in Dallas. Last-place TCU takes on Texas Tech, the sixth-ranked team in the nation.
