COUNTY WIDE DAIRY MEETING IS CALLED FOR SATURDAY ASKING FOR CONTRACTORS BIDS ON NEW OCHILTREE COUNTY COURT HOUSE

TO CONSIDER ORGANIZATION OF DAIRY ASSOCIATION IN COUNTY

CONTEMPLATE SHIPPING IN GOOD DAIRY STOCK IN CAR LOAD LOTS FOR DISTRIBUTION OVER THE ENTIRE COUNTY

A meeting of all men over the county interested in securing one or more good milk cows has been called for Saturday afternoon, February 4, at 2:00 o'clock to be held in the Ochiltree county court house. The purpose of the meeting is to form the nucleus of a dairy association to be organized in the county.

The meeting is sponsored by G. R. Sheets, county agent of Ochiltree county, who has been gathering information and data preparatory to calling a county wide meeting, for the past several weeks. Information as to where good dairy stock can be secured and the cost has been gathered by Mr. Sheets and will be submitted at the meeting.

Both of the Perryton Banks, the First National and the Perryton National, are sponsoring the move to organize a dairy association and are anxious and willing to help in every way possible.

According to Mr. Sheets, the orders will be placed for the number of cows that every one interested wishes to secure, and some one capable of selecting good stock will be sent to pick them out of the herds. Due regard to milk production will be taken in making the purchases.

The stock will be shipped to Perryton in car load lots and distributed over the county to the buyers. It is hoped that after the general meeting called here, that local community organizations can be started at various points in the county. The dairy association will not be confined entirely to the county but will include anyone in this trade territory interested in starting a herd of good dairy cattle.

Giving Real Service

Wilson-Carver Ambulance Service Not Balked by Disagreeableness of Job

E. C. Carver, manager of the Wilson-Carver Funeral home, Borger, has earned some of the disagreeable parts of the profession, recently, when his ambulance responded to a call to receive a man who had been blown by a tank explosion in an oil slush pit.

The ambulance was at the scene of the accident scarcely three minutes after the call was received and remained for Carver and his assistant to wade into the murky pit, drag the injured man thoroughly enched with oil waste onto the ambulance, place him in the ambulance and rush him to the hospital. The Borger Daily Herald has the following to say regarding the part played by Mr. Carver and his assistant:

Due to their profession the two ambulance drivers waded into the oil, grabbed the man and started pulling him out when their feet slipped and all three sank into the mire. Another attempt was made, successful and the body was placed in the ambulance and rushed to the hospital where he received emergency treatment. Two hundred dollars damage to their clothing and car was reported by Wilson-Carver this morning, from the insurance company.

POWER FARMING MEETING HERE

J. I. CASE PEOPLE WILL CO- OPERATE IN SERIES OF MEETINGS ON FEB- RUARY 8-9

Following the first announcement made last week regarding the big free power farming meetings to be held next Wednesday and Thursday, February 8 and 9 by Jno. N. Stump & Company in conjunction with the J. I. Case Threshing Machine company, many enrollments have been made. Quite a large group of farmers have already signified their intentions of attending these meetings.

Reports have been received from other points where these meetings have been held recently to the effect that large enthusiastic crowds have attended and have derived much practical knowledge from them. The men who the Case Threshing Machine company are sending here to conduct the discussions and the demonstrations are not only thoroughly schooled on theory but also are extremely practical men with years of rich experience gained on the farm, in the factories, in the engineering field and actual field work. They know threshers, tractors, combines and other power farming equipment thoroughly and are prepared to assist all who attend.

The meetings are really a boiled down, short course in power farming machinery operation, care and repair. Unlike a short course, however, it does not cost a single penny to attend, neither is it necessary to go away from home for several weeks. The meetings are to be held right here and will only last for these days. Inasmuch as each day's work will be entirely different, all who will attend are urged strongly to be on hand promptly for the opening hour of the first day and stay until the very close. The school is purely and simply an educational and good will proposition to help and assist the farmer to make greater profits from their power farming equipment, and no one will be solicited at the meeting to buy.

The motion pictures that are shown at these meetings are as a part of the instruction are of the very best and are extremely interesting and educational as well. Much other equipment such as slides, charts, working tractor parts and models are supplied by the Case organization which is used at the meetings.

The local farmers who have power farming problems they want answered are urged to bring them up at the meeting and they will be discussed and answers given. No matter what make of machinery farmers may be working with, they are cordially invited to attend and bring a neighbor.

Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Brady were Saturday night guests of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Roper.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Teter, Follett, were Sunday guests in the J. T. Carlson home.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Staggs, Farnsworth, were shopping in Perryton, Monday.

The new courthouse will be 58 by 85 feet, three stories including the basement which will only be about four feet under grade level. The exterior of the building will be of a beautiful rich white and black dotted brick with cut stone trimmings.

The corridor floors will be made of terrazzo. The wainscoting in the corridors will be of marble. The floors in the offices will be covered with the best grade of battleship linoleum. All floors in the basement will be of concrete.

The main entrance to the first floor will be from the west. On this floor will be offices for the clerk, sheriff, judge, commissioners' court, treasurer, county attorney and a number of other unassigned offices. In the basement will be found offices for the surveyor, assessor, county agent, Justice of peace and a large ladies rest room and a storage vault for dead records. The boiler room and janitors quarters are also in the basement. On the top floor is the district court room, grand and petit jury rooms, offices for the court reporter, district clerk, bailiff and district judge. Rest room for both men and women will be located on all floors.

The estimated cost of the building including all furnishings, complete ready for occupancy is $100,000.00 and the commissioners will not let the cost go above that amount. No provision is made for a jail in the new building, it being the intention of the commissioners to use the present jail and equipment.

Work on the new building should start about the first of April and the building should be completed about December 1.

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY

GRIMSTEAD, called "the pirate," a millionaire is stranded when his car breaks down on a California mountain side.

BURTON GRIMSTEAD, his daughter, is with him. She is "spoiled" and not overly pleased because he's brought with them.

ROSS GARDINER, Grimstead's "second in command," a young man of ability, whom, Burton suspects, her father is throwing her way.

SIMMINS, the Grimstead's English butler-chauffeur, whose gay spirits are repressed by his dignity.

DAVENPORT, a youth, comes by and astonishes them first by saying his small car runs on electricity so that he has no "gas," to give them, and next by winning a $10,000 bet from Gardiner by predicting a rain storm. The stranger makes another bet with Gardiner, this time that his car will run a certain period of time on its battery.

CHAPTER IX

A Marvelous Discovery

Grimstead put on his poker face to conceal his inner excitement. This offer was more than he had hoped.

"I should like to very much," he replied.

"So should I," spoke up Burton, "but I want to hear it in words of one syllable."

"It is not at all complicated. Now you know if you put a copper plate and zinc plate side by side in an acid solution and connect them with wires you generate electricity. That is the simple wet battery."

"All right. If you run a dynamo you also generate electricity, this time by induction."

"Where does that electricity come from? You might say chemical action in the one case or mechanical action in the other, but they are actually only a means to an end. The world lies in a great field of static or inert magnetism. That cell and the dynamo are merely means by which this inert electricity is livened up, made into kinetic or active electricity they actually produce nothing themselves. Is that clear?"

"Perfectly," said Burton.

"When we have used this kinetic electricity, or it becomes 'grounded,' it returns to the reservoir of static. All I've done is to make a short cut between the static electricity in which we are immersed and the kinetic electricity we can use."

"That is self-evident, young man," remarked Grimstead drily.

"I am just making it clear for Miss Burton. Go back to the wet cell. It is heavy and awkward and short lived. My battery is just like a wet cell without those disadvantages. The wet cell consists of two plates of different metal in a solution. Mine consists of two plates of different metals side by side in air. The wet cell transforms or produces its electricity by or through, chemical action that is limited in effectiveness and in duration. My battery transforms the static from the air into kinetic without chemical action—apparently, and in such greater quantity in proportion to the size of the plates."

Grimstead was sitting up now in his interest.

"There must be chemical action!" he cried. "You can't lift yourself by your boot straps."

"Of course; there probably is," agreed Davenport. "I only said there was apparently none. It must be very slight—like the apparent loss in radium, I suppose—for, as I say, I have used this battery to drive my car eleven hundred miles without any wear I can determine by looking at it."

"What metals do you use?"

"Pardon," returned the young man, "but there, of course, you're asking my secret. I will say this, however. They are alloys of metals easily procurable. The alloy must be exact and the distance between the plates must be exact. I have a micrometer screw to adjust my plates."

"You say the metals are easily procurable. How much do you estimate it cost you to build such a battery?"

"Mine up to now have been experimental and built piecemeal by experiment," Davenport pointed out. "But in quantity they could be built—of that size—for somewhere between fifty and a hundred and fifty dollars. It isn't the materials; it's the accuracy, and I don't know just what workmen of the necessary skill would cost."

Grimstead's poker face was still doing business, but his cigar butt was chewed to a frazzle.

"You say that battery there will run a brake test of forty horsepower?" he asked.

"About that."

"Will a larger battery develop more horsepower in proportion? What are the limits in capacity?"

"I haven't the slightest idea. There's no limit apparently to the amount of static you can take by means of dynamos; why should there be any more limit to what you can take by other means? Of course, I don't know; I'm just beginning to try it out."

"Well, you may have something, though it sounds pretty radical," yawned Grimstead, as though the subject had ceased to interest him.

Burton hopped from the log on which she sat.

"The moonlight is heavenly," she declared. "I must see it through the big trees. Will you go with me, Mr. Davenport, outside the firelight?"

Davenport jumped to his feet. Gardiner too stirred as though about to rise, but paused as he felt Grimstead's restraining hand on his arm.

The two young people stepped out into the enchantment of the forest.

CHAPTER X

"The" Larry Davenport

They walked for 100 yards, feeling their way in the black and white contrasts of moonlight; then sat side by side on a log.

"It is almost too perfect," said Burton. "It almost hurts. But I shall never forget it."

They began to chat, to make disjointed remarks, swinging back down the wide arc of ecstasy to the starting point of everyday things. In a little while Davenport was talking eagerly, openly. The subject was his battery.

"It ought to be tremendously valuable. You'll probably make a million or so out of it. I hope you do," the girl said.

"Yes, of course. I'd like to make something out of it. But that isn't the real point. Do you mind if I talk a little about it?"

"Oh, please!" she begged.

"Don't you see what it will mean to the world," he said. "The poor struggling old world? What a burden it does carry. Lord, what a task it has assumed just in feeding itself and clothing itself and keeping itself warm. And it has to hustle just to do that."

He twisted on the log more nearly to face her. "Look here, he demanded, "what is the greatest material need, the very greatest need of the world?"

"Davenport's batteries," she replied promptly.

He threw his head back and laughed boyishly.

"I was getting rather preachy, wasn't I? Well, the thing the world needs most is breathing-time, time to play more and to soak up the things that never come to a man when he's in a hurry or surrounded by the buzz-flies of detail. What the work-a-day world needs most is leisure, a little leisure."

"The trouble is," said Burton, "people are never satisfied. If they'd be contented to go without so many frills they'd have leisure enough."

"No, you're wrong. They should have the frills. The frills represent the grace and the beauty of life. We all have an instinct for frills; and real instincts should be gratified—in proportion. But the point is, frills are too hard to get. A living is to hard to get. Heaven forbid we should ever get anything without working for it; that is absolutely fatal. But there's no sense in having to perform soul-deadening and grinding toil for it."

"But what has the battery to do with this?"

"Why don't you see? Every invention that reduces the labor necessary to produce things is a step toward that leisure for the race. It's a step toward supplying more frills, besides more abundant necessities, with the same amount of labor."

With vivid sentences he sketched the world as he saw it: a reorganized world, free to put its energies into the positive creation of those things which men's true instincts crave; producing its abundance by honest, sincere, necessary labor, but accomplishing the production without the exhaustion of squalor.

It was no impossible Utopia; it was no absurd dream of an impossible "equality"; but it was a world of opportunity released from pressure. What men did with the opportunity would still be, as it had always been a matter for them selves.

But no longer would there be any reason or necessity for the submerged under inexorable circumstance of the man whose hands reached toward the stars.

That is what he envisioned; and that is what Burton, kindling to his ideas, saw too. And as she had not lived with the idea, as had he, and was unaccustomed to it, she was the more eagerly afire. They sat silent for a time.

"Tell men about yourself!" she said suddenly.

"I was born of poor but honest parents and my friends call me Larry," he began.

"You're not the Lawrence Davenport?" she gasped.

"I'm the only one I know about. There may be others I know not of; but be assured, O Lady, that they are nothing but spurious imitations."

"Why, I've read all your books and I've just loved them!"

"Long and patient study has not yet revealed to me the suitable answer to one who claims she loves your books," sadly confessed Davenport.

Burton began to chuckle, then to laugh aloud.

"I'm thinking of the joke on us," she explained. "of Dad. We thought you were a garage mechanic!"

"And me with such gentlemanly manners," he mourned, "and my dictation, faulty as it is, yet observes the rules of grammar."

"Your funny little car misled us. I suppose," she explained, "and then you were so handy about everything."

"You relieve me. The car was the cheapest I could get for a pure experiment."

"And the battery?"

"Came to me just like a story, a little at a time. I'm no mechanic. No one could be worse fitted than I to be an inventor. But I couldn't help noticing from time to time the incredible amount of power everywhere going to waste, and one day when I was filling the starting battery of my car—I have got a car—it struck me what a nuisance it was, and I wondered if we couldn't get a battery that would work with air."

"And then you figured it out."

"I did not," he disclaimed. I merely kept it in mind, the way I do a story, and it worked out its own plot, bit by bit. It took me some time to tumble to the fact that the plates had to be just exactly so far apart. But at last I got it to work and to work hard for a long time. One horrible thought occurred to me that maybe it will only work near electric plants already in operation under the old methods."

"Stealing what's already been made! I see!"

"That's why I'm up in this wild country, bag and baggage. I'm going to find out. It seems to be all right, though."

"You don't know how I appreciate you telling me all this, Mr. Davenport," then said she.

"I told you my friends call me Larry," he pointed out; then at her slight withdrawal, "Now, really, look at me. Am I a Larry looking person or a Davenport looking person?"

He cocked his eye comically in her direction.

"You're right—Larry," said she.

CHAPTER XI

In the morning the famous battery, lashed to the running board had been connected up with the self-starter which was now turning over in the laborious and vociferous manner peculiar to the species.

Grimstead and Gardiner were inclined to stand and watch it in fascination; but Davenport was quite unimpressed.

"That's all there is to it," said he. "Now all we have to watch out for is that she doesn't run dry of lubrication. Simmins can keep track of that."

He turned away.

"Now we've got a good morning's work in front of us," he announced cheerfully. "I picked a good place for camp, before breakfast. We must move camp, and then we must make a start on our road out."

"I'm going fishing this afternoon," warned Grimstead.

The evening meal that night was a jolly one, thanks to a large trout. Grimstead's high good humor over its capture carried temperamental difference before it. Even the tac-iturn Gardiner unbent to tell an anecdote.

Burton was in highest spirits, also, for she had what she considered a very intriguing secret, which she intended to keep for the time being at least, in the hope of extracting from the situation still further amusement.

In this she was abetted by Larry Davenport himself. Now that that young man really understood the position in the social structure he was supposed to fill, he played up and became the Perfect Garage Mechanic. When this performance drew Simmins' puzzled eye Larry's happiness was complete.

"Now," sighed Grimstead comfortably, as he struggled to his thick legs after supper, "if you young people will excuse us, Ross and I have a little business to talk over."

He lighted a cigar and, followed by Gardiner, disappeared in the darkness.

"Now," he demanded of Gardiner, er, once they were settled on a convenient spot. "How about it?"

His benign good humor had fallen from him and his whole being had tautened into a hard alertness.

"It's been running without a break, and without apparent loss of energy at any time up to five o'clock," answered Gardiner.

"We've got to tie this thing down before somebody else gets hold of it," declared Grimstead. "I wonder if anybody has? He might be tied up already."

"May be," agreed Gardiner, "but I don't think so. This seems to be his first test of the thing."

"Well, we must tie him up," said Grimstead.

"Going to buy him out, chief? You could probably get it cheap comparatively."

"Gardiner," said the pirate, "sometimes wonder a little about you."

"What do you mean?" asked

Gardner.

"I gather you think we could drive a cheap bargain with this young man."

Gardner considered his reply for a moment.

"Yes," he said finally, with conviction. "I think we could—before he gets talking with some one else."

"Of course we could, but we won't

I'll offer him the very largest share

I can, or the highest royalties possible consistent with control and good business. See why?"

Gardner shook his head.

"Well either this is a whooping big thing, or it is a flivver. If it's a flivver it doesn't matter if we give him the whole works; it would be giving him nothing. But suppose it turns out to be a world beater and we've made a sharp bargain. Either

he, or some one else is going to buck

Then there's law suits without end.

If, however, we have at the very start, before the thing is proved up at all, given him a full share, then when it turns out big he'll stay with us."

"Well young man," said Grim-stead when they had returned to the fireside, "your battery seems to be making good. There's no doubt that you have a big thing there. I don't know just how big, but it's good enough to market as it is. Ever thought of it?"

"Yes of course. But I've never been sure enough it was going to work to do anything about it."

Grimstead cast an eye of triumph toward Gardner.

"Well said he, "I am considerably in the electric line myself. What would you think of taking it up with

"I was going to propose it myself

ne."

"After you had satisfied yourself the thing was going to run."

"Good! Now I'm not going to in-ult your intelligence by trying to outright," said Grimstead, "but raftily gaining merit from his decision. "You'd know better than that. There are two other methods.

By one you would get a certain amount of stock in the company. By the other you would be paid a determined royalty. In the first instance you would have a voice in the management, and also responsibility. In the second instance you would be relieved from all trouble, but would have nothing to say."

"I see the difference," Davenport nodded. "But I don't believe I could decide as to choice until I heard a more definite proposition of each kind. How much stock would I get, and how much royalty?"

Grimstead here showed further

About Your Health

Things You Should Know

by John Joseph Gaines, M. D.

Laryngitis

One of the most common affections of the throat. It may be acute or chronic. The latter form is rare.

I'm glad to say, because it strikes terror to me—the thought of tuberculosis of the larynx. My purpose in this sketch is to deal with the acute form only.

This varies from slight hoarseness with no fever, to the most profound illness, with loss of voice and dangerous temperature. Diphtheria and croup are the most formidable of throat ailments of childhood. An old author once said that croup is attended by loud, rasping cough; seldom a cough in diphtheria. That was when diagnosis depended entirely on physical signs.

The first symptom of laryngitis in any of its forms is—loss of voice.

This tells us that the disease is in the larynx—in the vocal "box." It is the signal for immediate action;

get the physician at once!

Mouth-breathers are by far the most likely to be attacked. To take young children suddenly out of a warm house, into zero temperature, without warm muffler, or woolen wrap placed lightly over the breathing passages, is to invite trouble;

the change from warm to cold should be gradual. Teach children to breathe through the nostrils, if suddenly exposed to the cold; they will never forget it. And, be sure there are no adenoids there to obstruct.

Prevention is golden here. Keep the child's bowels freely open. Require plenty of drinking-water, and good, plain, nutritious food. Air the bedrooms well during the day. I would not house children too closely —cultivate tolerance for pure, outdoor air, but wrap the body warm, especially, keep the feet and legs warm and dry. Until the doctor comes, treat the victim with sweating and inhalations of turpentine vapor, eucalyptus oil, or from slaking lime.

Abraham Lincoln

THE NAME of Lincoln is linked inseparably with a love for his fellow men, a passion for the welfare of humanity.

Dealing with a Nation's destiny, he came to be clothed with a nation's majesty. In his own great heart, as in a nation's crucible, he assembled and resolved the nation's complexities; and in his own pure unselfish desire, as in a nation's purified hopes, he defined and described our national goal.

Abraham Lincoln's conscience was his only guide—his conscience was king.

Altho Lincoln's face has long vanished, his voice hushed, this sweet and beautiful soul—one of the most beloved characters in American History will live forever.

Section 5. The natural gas to be furnished hereunder shall be at all times kept at a standard of eight (8) British thermal heat units or higher per cubic foot at the point of consumption, at a temperature of thirty-two degrees Fahrenheit, or higher, and to determine whether the gas supplied is of the heating value above specified, the City of Perryton, Texas, may have tests made by a competent analyst under recognized and scientific processes, according to the approved method of making such tests, and said tests shall be from samples of gas collected from the grantee's mains at any point or points within the City. If the result of such tests show that during a month the daily average of gas supplied is below eight hundred British thermal heat units, then there shall be deducted from the customer's bills for gas during such month a proportionate amount, based upon the deficiency below said eight hundred British thermal heat units. In any month when such tests are being made the City shall advise the grantee of the results of each test, and within a reasonable time after it is made, and the official report of such analyst, of which said grantee is so advised, shall be taken and accepted as the agreed prima facie correct test of the heating value of the gas furnished during such month and thereafter until a different result is determined or ascertained in a similar manner; said grantee shall furnish gas to consumers at a pressure of not less than four ounces per square inch, measured at the consumer's meters outlet.

Each consumer of gas shall install and maintain suitable piping within his property lines and suitable appliances and fixtures, except meters, subject to the approval of the City Council, or such supervisor, inspector or other representative as may be authorized by said City Council, to pass upon the same.

Section 6. The City reserves the right to lay and permit to be laid electric conduits, water and other pipe lines or cables, and to do and permit to be done, any underground work that may be deemed necessary or proper by the City Council, in, across, along or under any street, alley, highway or other public place occupied by the grantee; and whenever by reason of changes in the grade of any streets, or in the location, or manner of constructing any water pipes, electric conduits, or other underground structures it shall be deemed necessary by the City Council, to alter, change, adapt or conform gas mains and service pipes of grantee, such alterations or changes shall be made by the grantee when ordered in writing by the City Council so authorized to act, without any claim for reimbursement for damages against the City; said grantee shall indemnify and save harmless the City of Perryton, Texas, from and against all claims for injury or damages to persons or property occasioned by or arising out of the construction, maintenance, operation or repair of said grantee's transmission, transportation and distributing system, and by the conduct of the business in the City.

Section 7. The right to use the streets, alleys, highways or other public places or places of the City of Perryton, Texas, by the grantee as herein provided in Section 2 above, shall be and is subject to the following restrictions, limitations and conditions, viz: that in building additional mains or lines of pipe, said grantee shall build and construct the same along and under the alley-ways, where alleys exist, rather than along and under streets, and shall only use the streets for same insofar as may be necessary in connecting from one alley to another; and said mains and pipe line shall be placed below the surface of the street or alley and so as to protect all paving, wire cables, water pipes, underground wires or sewer lines, and shall be so constructed and located with reference to water lines and sewer mains as not to interfere therewith, and under the direction and to the satisfaction of the City Council or the City Engineer.

That the City Council hereby reserves the right to install at the point where said grantee receives its gas for distribution in the City a meter through which all gas for distribution to the City and its inhabitants shall be passed, an adequate self-registering pressure gauge adequate to record the amount of gas distributed to the City and its inhabitants and the pressure at which same was received by the grantee.

Said grantee shall also supply and install one distant pressure gauge under the direction of the City Council and at the place designated by the City Council which will indicate the pressure at such designated point, said gauge to be placed in the City Hall in the office of the City Engineer.

Section 8. That after the said gas distribution system shall have been fully constructed, equipped, and in operation as herein provided in the City of Perryton, Texas, if the said grantee shall fail to substantially comply with the conditions of this franchise, the City of Perryton, Texas, shall have the right by ordinance duly passed therefor to forfeit all the rights and franchises herein granted to the said grantee, provided that the City of Perryton, Texas, shall give the said grantee, its successors and assigns, sixty (60) days notice in writing, specifying the conditions claimed to have been violated, and giving full and fair opportunity to be heard thereon before declaring such forfeiture, which notice shall fairly and fully set out all of the conditions claimed and complained of and shall be given by the said City Secretary under the seal of said City; after having been properly authorized by the Mayor and City Council of the said City; provided, however, that the said grantee shall have sixty (60) days after receiving such notice in which to rectify and correct such violations and to substantially comply with the terms and conditions of the ordinance; should the violations of this ordinance so complained of not have been rectified and corrected and the terms and conditions of this ordinance fully complied with at the end of said sixty (60) days, then and in that event the City shall have the power to forfeit this franchise on account of the violation specified in said notice. That in case of forfeiture as herein provided, the City of Perryton, Texas, reserves the right to purchase the distributing plant of the grantee at its fair appraised value or to allow the grantee to remove same within one year from the date of such forfeiture, provided that before any of said property may be removed, the grantee shall be required to give to the City a good and sufficient bond that the streets and alleys will be placed and left in as good condition as found.

For each and every breach or violation of any of the provisions of this ordinance by the grantee, it shall be liable to a penalty of Twenty-five Dollars to be recovered in any court of competent jurisdiction by suit, of any persons, firm or corporation injured or damaged by such breach or violation; and if the breach or violation shall be a continuous one, each day during which such breach or violation continues shall be deemed a separate breach or violation and a separate ground for recovery against the grantee.

Section 10. That in further consideration of the privileges and franchises granted to the East Plains Gas Co., of Amarillo, Texas, they agree to build six-inch water line for their main line from the field. It shall be buried at a depth of not less than eighteen inches (18") under ground, and shall carry a pressure of not less than one hundred pounds (100 lbs.) at City gate. It shall adopt and use all and any reasonable safeguards to provide for the protection of persons or property against injury or damage growing out of the use of gas and pipes or equipment used in said City for the distributing of gas, and shall always be prepared to furnish said City and its inhabitants a sufficient quantity of gas for all purposes; provided, however, that in case of explosion or accidents of any character or nature beyond the control of grantee, to the main line or to the distributing system provided hereunder, or shortage of gas supply in the fields from which grantee secures the gas and the grantee is not able to furnish on account of such unavoidable conditions gas for all purposes, that preference shall be given domestic consumers, schools and hospitals in the use of gas until such time as the supply may prove adequate for all purposes. Provided further that grantee shall not be liable for any damage resulting from such accidents either to the lines of the grantee or to the lines on property of consumers.

Section 11. That in further consideration of the privileges and franchises granted to the East Plains Gas Co., of Amarillo, Texas, they agree when the total amount of meters reach twelve hundred the price shall be reduced to ninety cents per thousand cubic feet, when the total amount of meters has reached sixteen hundred the price will be reduced to eighty cents per thousand cubic feet, when the total amount of meters has reached twenty-four hundred the price will be reduced to seventy cents per thousand cubic feet, and when the total amount of meters has reached twenty-four hundred the price will be reduced to sixty cents per thousand cubic feet.

By the total amount of meters is meant the amount or number of meters connected on said line, or lines, from the point of origin or wells, to, through and including all towns to the termination of said line including the City of Perryton, but should said line extend beyond Perryton, this scale shall not apply beyond that point.

Section 11-A. That in further consideration of the privileges of the franchise granted to the East Plains Gas Co., of Amarillo, Texas, they agree to build for the installation of the town, a six-inch belt with four inch mains and three inch laterals. The location of the mains and laterals to be determined by a competent engineer, to be selected by the City Council.

Section 11-B. Section 12. That the grantee herein shall have the right and privilege of assigning this franchise and all the rights and privileges granted herein, and wherever the word "grantee" appears herein it shall be construed as applying to its successors and assigns.

Section 13. This ordinance shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage and approval and publication as provided by law.

International Sunday School Lesson

by KEITH L. BROOKS

(Managing Editor "The King's Business," Secretary Correspondence Courses of the Bible Institute of Los Angeles. FEBRUARY 5, 1928)

Text: Mark 3:19-35; 6:16

Jesus Misunderstood and Opposed

Jesus having entered into a house, a great throng of people gathered, and so many pushed their way into the house that we are told, in the opening verse of the lesson, they could not even get room enough to eat. (v. 20). His friends, hearing of the situation, thought their Master was going a bit too far in His enthusiasm, and went "out to lay hold of him for they said, He is beside Himself." (v. 21).

Well-meaning friends often interfere with one's usefulness. If we are to be close followers of Jesus, we may as well make up our minds to be completely detached from the concerns of friends when we are sure we have a clear call to service. We shall be misunderstood as He was. It brings one severest pain to be misinterpreted by friends, yet it has always been the price of doing the will of God.

The Scribes who had arrived from Jerusalem, were quick to turn to their own advantage the opinion of Christ's friends. They went a bit farther. They said: "He hath Beelzebub, and by the prince of demons casteth He out demons" (v. 22). Are we aware that unsaved people have ears that are keen to pick up our expressions of doubt concerning Christ and His church, and to make use of them?

The remark of the Scribes brought forth a parable from the Great Teacher: "How can Satan cast out Satan?" What a weak piece of philosophy—that Satan's kingdom should be divided against itself! "If Satan rise up against himself," argued Jesus, "he cannot stand, but hath an end." How spontaneous and unanswerable were the arguments with which Jesus demolished the theories of His learned critics! He employed no anger or invective to meet their outrageous insults, but patiently proceeded with His teaching, and, by the simplest illustrations, showed the childishness of their reasonings.

He compares the devil to a "strong man" (v. 27). He holds men as His property. Can anyone get his goods away from him without first overcoming him? If Jesus was in league with the devil, the idea that he was taking men away from him was absurd. He who breaks men loose from their sins must have power to overcome Satan. They believed Beelzebub was wise and crafty. Behold—by their logic they made a fool out of him!

Then comes a statement that has troubled many minds. "All sins shall be forgiven unto the sons of men, and blasphemies wherewithsoever they shall blaspheme: but he that shall blaspheme against the Holy Ghost, hath never forgiveness, but is in danger of eternal damnation" (v. 28-29).

If the wording of this is carefully noted, it will appear perfectly plain that this does not refer to some sudden, slighting, trifling words such as curses, ALL SINS and BLASPHEMIES shall be forgiven BUT! Blasphemy against the Holy Spirit consists in words malignantly spoken, against the power of the Holy Spirit, working in Christ.

The writer believes little can be gathered from this as to any particular sin which some today imagine has put them beyond hope. Rarely could it be committed now. Attributing the beneficent works of Jesus to Beelzebub is a sin that must have proceeded from an incurable disposition of mind. It was the outburst of an inner condition long developing, a hardening of heart that caused a man deliberately to turn against the highest evidence of our Lord's greatest miracles.

There is a blasphemy that incapacitates the soul for repentance. He has no desire whatever to be saved. It is certain that those greatly troubled lest they might have committed this sin, are those least likely to have committed it. The very spirit of repentance is an evidence that the door of salvation is not closed to them.

Verse 31-35 inform us how even the family of Jesus had to be taught that they must not attempt to interfere with His public ministry. His "brethren and His mother stood without, calling Him." He apparently paid no attention to the interruption. Then some in the crowd began to call out: "Behold, thy mother and thy brethren without seek for thee."

"Who is my mother, or my brethren?" He asked, and then gave His own answer: "Whosoever shall do the will of God" (v. 35). It is remarkable that in two cases where Mary figures in the gospel story, she appears to be gently reproved and to be placed, so far as relationship is concerned, alongside of all other of His obedient servants. The last we read of Mary, she was gathered with the rest in the prayer meeting before the Pentecost.

In the opening verses of Chapter 6, we have another view of the critics of Jesus. He goes to Nazareth and in the synagogue on the Sabbath day He begins to teach. "From whence hath this man this wisdom?" and "Where does He get the power to do these mighty works?" Is He not the carpenter, the son of Mary? Does not his family live here in Nazareth? "And they were offended" (v. 3).

Like many today, they did not see the weakness of the argument. A carpenter! What of it? Is one dull because he is skilled with tools? An ass is not the wiser for being loaded with books. Men of clear vision, high and enduring motives, exist outside of the schools of the Rabbis. But how shall they account for His wisdom and power? They knew He had not sat at the feet of any of the Rabbis or any of the learned philosophers. They knew He had possessed no book but the Scriptures. If He did not get His wisdom from men, where could He have gotten it? Says Dr. Strong: "Without the broadening influences of reading, travel or educated companionship, He presents a character, a spirit, a sympathy, a doctrine as broad as mankind and as profound as human need." When He said anything, it was as if God had said it. There is but one explanation: "Surely this was the Son of God."

May we not rejoice that God's infinite Son was a carpenter when here on earth? It assures us of His complete sympathy with all who toil. The very hands that hold the scepter of the universe (Col. 1:16) once held the hammer and the saw. His stamp of approval is upon the toiler. He chose the chief toilers as His greatest instruments.

"Jesus said unto them, A prophet is not without honor, but in his own country, and among his own kin, and in his own house" (6:4). Envy still causes men to find fault with those who have been honored, when once the person was their inferior or their equal.

"He could do no mighty work there" (v. 5). Jesus did not work miracles to convince skeptics, or

He would have worked His greatest ones where there was the worst unbelief. Miracles were the seal of His authority to those who were ready to receive the truth.

Unbelief ties the hands of the Almighty so that He cannot do all that He desires to do. Nazareth saw most of Jesus and profited least. "Light obeyed increaseth light. Light resisted bringeth night."

PITH AND POINT

The snares of Satan may be concealed within the glove of friendship (v. 21).

Professed followers of Jesus often furnish the fuel for His enemies to burn (v. 22).

Some who cannot deny the reality of Christ's power are quick to attribute it to the devil (v. 22).

The sin that hath never forgiveness is the sin for which forgiveness is not desired.

No tie is so close as that which joins one degenerate soul to another (vs. 33-35).

Even the bonds of family affection can find no stability save in Christ (v. 33).

Many a man goes to college to learn to express his ignorance in scientific terms (6:3).

SUGGESTIVE QUESTIONS

What special fellowship does a servant of God sometimes have with His Master? (Mk. 3:21; cf. Jn. 7:5).

Was anyone else called crazy beside Jesus? (Acts 26:24; cf. 1 Cor. 1:27).

If a man has a desire to be saved, has he committed the unpardonable sin? (Jn. 6:37).

Is ordinary blasphemy the unpardonable sin? (Mk. 3:28).

If any man calls Jesus accursed, by what power has he done it? (1 Cor. 12:3).

What does God say to those who deliberately shut their eyes to spiritual light? (Isa. 5:20-21).

Find the two tests of spiritual kinship in Jn. 6:29 and Mk. 3:35.

What is the only answer to the question of Mk. 6:2 (Col. 2:3; Heb. 1:2-3).

GOLDEN TEXT ILLUSTRATION

He came unto His own and His own received Him not. But as many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on His name (John 1:11, 12).

NEW WESTERN THRILLER
BY ZANE GREY COMING

One type of picture, typically American and immensely popular, can be made only in America—and that is the western drama. America and all the rest of the world loves this type of adventure screen story. The dean of western writers is Zane Grey whose name is famous the globe round and his latest romantic tale for the screen "Nevada" will appear at the American Theatre on Friday and Saturday.

"Nevada," like its fore-runners, is faithful to the west. It has all the dash, thrill and romance of the southwest frontier country in the days of the cattle barons, the days of two-gun men, brave sheriffs, picturesque cowboys, villainous cattle rustlers and lovely heroines.

In directing the picture, John Waters was given a superb cast by B. P. Schulberg, associate Paramount producer; namely, Gary Cooper, handsome young western star; Thelma Todd, young leading woman of great promise and beauty; William Powell, character heavy known to millions of fans; Philip Strange, Ernie S. Adams, Guy Oliver, Christian J. Frank and Ivan Christy.

Calvin Flowers and family were dinner guests in the W. G. Hibbs home Saturday.

EDWARDS' TOGGERY

A Home Suggestion—

The spiritual standard of a community is stamped by its citizenry. The town or community with the well-filled church pews is the prosperous, the peaceful, and the happy place in which to live. Because—therein are people who know the wisdom of the practise of "The Golden Rule."

In this day of motor cars—good roads and the appeal of pleasure—every citizen should take particular care to see that the spiritual standard of his household is not weakened.

Church services have their uplifting influences which cannot be explained in mere words. It is essential that every mother and father—by example—give their children every opportunity to balance their lives with church influences—the spiritual—as well as the material.

Why not establish a standard in your home that every member of the family will attend church services regularly? Each member shall go to the church of his or her choice—but by mutual agreement—all shall go—THIS SUNDAY and EVERY SUNDAY!
