Wielder Of Guns Removed From Town For Safety As Additional Trouble Is Feared In Family Row

(By Associated Press)

CLOVIS, N. M., Jan. 18.—Pandemonium reigned in the crowded main street of Clovis late today when a long-standing feud between the Tates and Bohannans blazed into open warfare in front of the Citizens' bank, resulting in death to two of the Bohannans. The dead are: G. C. Bohannan, 55, and his youngest son, Carl Bohannan, 19.

Passersby on the street dropped to the sidewalk as the shooting started, and others dived into doorways and crouched inside automobiles.

Removed From Town.

V. Tate, Curry county auctioneer, who wielded the gun, was taken by officers out of town for safety, and every available officer in Clovis was placed on vigil fearing that the trouble was not yet over.

The long-standing differences between Tate and the Bohannan family, composed of the father and seven sons, was reopened Thursday evening when four of the Bohannan boys gave Tate a severe beating in a fight at Grier, 15 miles west of Clovis. Following that fight, Tate went to his home, got a gun, returned and quarreled with Louis Bohannan. They fought and Tate fired three shots at him, one of which clipped off three fingers on Louis' right hand. Tate was arrested on a charge of assault with intent to kill, but yesterday was released on bond.

The feud started several years ago when one of the Bohannan boys

Possibilities Of Securing Railway Discussed With Meeting Of Organization In Texas Baby County

George E. Lance was re-elected president of the Morton chamber of commerce for the ensuing year, with E. T. Smith as secretary, Mrs. J. J. Jones as treasurer and J. A. Monroe vice-president. Directors will be elected later.

At the meeting for election of officers, the Morton municipal band of 30 pieces made their initial appearance in concert, having been organized only 10 weeks ago with D. W. Crain, director. Crain is also director of the Sudan band.

Railways Sought.

Prior to election of officers discussion occupied members of the chamber pertaining to possibilities of securing a railroad, or railroads for Morton and the upper part of Cochran county. Mr. Lance is to go to Fort Worth and St. Louis immediately, where he will confer with officials of the Fort Worth and Denver and Frisco lines, respectively, presenting petitions from residents of Cochran, Bailey and Lamb county, Texas, and Roosevelt and Lea counties, New Mexico.

Efforts will be made to get one or the other of these two roads to build through Cochran county, via Morton, and on to El Paso via Tatum, Lovington and Artesia, N. M.

MUST RESPECT HOME

Federal Agents Warned Ir Pro Enforcement

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18. (AP)—Emphatic instructions to respect the sanctity of the home were reiterated today in a lengthy monograph distributed by the treasury department among federal officers charged with enforcing the Volstead act.

Prohibition Commissioner Doran made public the 53-page document as the first move by his bureau in a campaign to educate the public as to the duties and difficulties faced by the agents. The monograph, which will be distributed as well through other officials channels, recalled that the courts have always held a person's home "should not be invaded except in strict compliance with the law."

Robert N. Miller, Manager Of Bus Station, Drops Dead Here

ROBERT N. MILLER, 51, manager of the Union Bus terminal, died suddenly Saturday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock at the family residence, 1608 Eighth street, presumably a victim of heart failure.

According to a statement made by a cab driver, who took Mr. Miller to his home at 5 o'clock, he was apparently in good health and in excellent spirits. Business associates stated that he had not complained of ill health.

Found By Wife

He was found by his wife a short time later lying on a bed and in an unconscious condition. She stated that she called a physician but Mr. Miller was dead before he could arrive.

Coming to this city about a year ago from Hagerman, N. M., Miller had taken an active part in civic affairs of Lubbock. He was a member of the local Lions club and affiliated with the Eastern Star, Masonic and I. O. O. F. lodges.

The body is lying in state at Bynum Brothers funeral home pending the arrival of relatives. It probably will be shipped to Hagerman for burial.

Survivors are the wife, two daughters, Marjorie, of Lubbock, and Mrs. Kenneth Veitsh, Hagerman; a son, Victor, of Albuquerque and one other son.

Politics Begin To Claim Spotlight Here; Mayfield Seeks Governorship

Few Candidates in County are Faced By Opponents

POLITICS FROM precinct to state confines, makes ready to take the stage, with several announcements already out and considerable talk going the rounds as to who is going to run against whom. Indications from a local survey do not yet reveal any great amount of excitement in the offing. It can hardly be said, as yet that the political pot is boiling.

Senator W. H. Bledsoe of Lubbock has announced his candidacy for Lieutenant - Governor while Judge Thomas Christopher of Lamesa has given notice that he is out for the congressional post from this district. The incumbent, Marvin Jones, has not made a statement, although it is generally known that he will be a candidate.

Have Easy Going.

Candidates in Lubbock county appear to have the easiest going at this stage of the race; only three having opponents.

Chas. Metcalfe is an opponent of Mrs. Flora Atchison for re-election in the district clerk's position, while Claude Burrus and Claxton McCrummen have announced for commissioner of precinct one. The incumbent, N. A. Payne has not yet announced. W. F. Pruitt is seeking the commissioners post of precinct three in opposition to W. L. Brashear, the incumbent. L. C. Denton, commissioner number four and J. T. Pinkston are unopposed in their races, thus far.

No Opponents.

Other present officials who have announced and have no opponents yet are: County Judge Robert H. Bean, County Attorney Vaughn Wilson, County Tax Collector A. J. Clark, County Tax Assessor A. B. Ellis, County Treasurer Anne Ford, County Sheriff Wade Hardy, County Clerk Amos Howard and County School Superintendent Mae Murfee. All are seeking re-election.

Reports from other South Plains counties give cloudier outlooks for the campaign. In Castro county, five are seeking the office of county-district clerk. They are: Wade Parks, Frank Cone, W. P. Ray, W.

Woman and Child Overcome by Gas

Their room smelling strongly of gas, Mrs. A. T. Block, 1614 7th street, and her 10-year-old daughter, Mary Jim, were discovered early Saturday morning unconscious in their bed.

The two were found by Mr. Block as he dressed and started to work. A physician was called and they were soon revived, reports yesterday afternoon stating that they would recover.

Unconsciousness was thought to have enveloped them sometime early Saturday morning after gas fumes from a heater had filled the room.

Delegates Await Naval Conference

High Envoys From World's Sea Powers Are Hopeful; Realize Success Will Be Far From Easy In Meet

By FRANK HAVILAND KING
Associated Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Jan. 18.—Hopeful, but realizing success would be far from easy, high envoys of the five greatest sea powers in the world assembled in the British capital tonight to await the hour for meeting in front of King George Tuesday in the greatest naval conference yet known.

This eminently is the consensus among the members of the American delegation, and it is echoed by the chiefs of the British, French, Japanese and Italian representatives.

Has Double Purpose

Born of the Hoover-MacDonald conversations last autumn, the conference was first designed for the double purpose of ending useless expenditure of the taxpayers' money on fleets and of furthering the ideal of enduring peace and security among the peoples.

As Secretary of State Stimson and his colleagues of the American delegation neared the British shores, Prime Minister MacDonald restated its purpose as "the maximum reductions consistent with national security."

This basic proposal by Britain's labor prime minister and President Hoover's expression of high hopes for results at London are the two rocks upon which the structure of an international treaty eliminating naval building competition will be built. But around the base of these rocks swirl treacherous cur-

Former U.S. Senator Throws Hat Into Ring Saturday

AUSTIN, Jan. 18. (AP)—Declaring for an elective highway commission against an enormous state bond issue for building highways, for a modern penitentiary system on a site owned by the state and advocating substitution of other methods of obtaining revenue than through an ad valorem levy, former United States Senator Earle B. Mayfield announced his candidacy for governor of Texas today.

Mr. Mayfield has been a familiar figure in Texas politics for many years, having served on the railroad commission prior to going to the national congress. He was in the senate for one term of six years.

Opposed To Malice

He said he "indulged the hope that prejudice and malice, spite and envy, hatred and jealousy may take refuge in the forgotten incidents of the past and that the campaign may be confined to a discussion of those problems that so vitally concern the welfare and happiness of our people."

In his platform he declares for a modern prison system, but said he thought it "absurd to say that Texas cannot have such a system unless it is located within 20 or 30 miles from the city of Austin."

"The state owns 80,000 acres of prison land, a large part of which is as fertile as the valley of the Nile, and we should think a long while before disposing of our penitentiary lands," he said.

Declaring that in 1927 the Humble Oil company had brought in its first oil well "within sight of the Imperial farm," owned by the state as prison property, he said that in his opinion there is enough oil under this farm "to build the most modern prison system in the United States."

"I am at a loss to know why a test for oil has not been made on the Imperial farm," Mayfield said. "If I am elected governor of Texas one of the first things I shall do will be to make arrangements to have this particular tract of land drilled for oil."

Continuing a discussion of the prison system, he said:

"It is my opinion that a suitable

Issuance Of Road Bonds Ordered By County Dads Here

Three Hundred Thousand Of $991,000 Issue Will Be Issued To Hurry Paving Program On Highway

Let Contract Soon

Laying On Concrete Likely To Begin In Next March Or April On Lubbock To Slaton Route

THE Lubbock County Commissioners court Saturday afternoon ordered the issuance of $300,000 in road bonds, out of the $991,000 approved by voters of the county December 17, and levied a 10-cent tax on each $100 valuation to facilitate immediate inauguration of a paving program and also to liquidate a $21,500 indebtedness against road district No. 1.

Action of the commissioners followed a conference Friday, when County Judge Robert H. Bean and Commissioners L. C. Denton, W. L. Brashear and J. T. Pinkston drove through the season's worst blizzard to fulfill an appointment with Judge Walter R. Ely, member of the State highway commission, at Abilene.

Judge Ely virtually assured the local delegation that the State department would advertise some time in February for letting of contract on grading and drainage structures on Highway 7, between Lubbock and Slaton, and expressed opinion that conditions will be favorable for laying of concrete on that section of the county-wide project in March or April.

The State official further indicated that contracts for grade and drainage structures on all highways included in the complete project should be let this year.

Work will be started first on either Highway 7, between this city tween Lubbock and Abernathy, it was disclosed at the conference.

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

LAMESA, Jan. 18.—Robert Durham, charged with murder of his aged father, today left this city for the state insane asylum in custody of deputy sheriff A. M. Bennett.

Durham will remain in the asylum until the April grand jury takes action on the charges pending against him.

He was adjudged insane by a jury in the county court last week following filing of insanity charges against him by relatives.

The elder Durham was killed at his farm near O'Donnell on December 31 when he was shot three times with a shotgun. The bullets entered his legs and side and he died almost instantly.

He was thought to have been lying on his bed in the house when the shooting started. Following the first shot he ran into the road screaming for help. The younger man was captured a short time later by neighbors and held for officers. Charges of murder were filed against him a short time later.

Death And Arrest Follow Robbery Of Bank At Kemp; Youthful Bandit Suicides

Body of Youth Found with Note Frozen in Hand; Other Confessed Robber Jailed After Making Statement to Cops

KAUFMAN, Jan. 18.—Death and arrest was the aftermath of the robbery of the First National bank at Kemp yesterday afternoon.

The body of Ervin Bobalek, one of two young men edarged with the robbery earlier in the day, was found today in a wooled pasture near Murdock's lake. He had died of bullet wounds, the freshest one self-inflicted.

A sort note was found by the body, saying the youth was taking his own life.

George Wheeler, former Kaufman high school student, was in jail here, charged with robbery with firearms. In a statement to officers he said that Bobalek was his companion, and the charges were placed before officers knew Bobalek was dead.

The body was found near the spot where the bandits abandoned their car yesterday when pursued by a citizens' posse.

Immediately after news of the robbery spread the posse was formed. About dusk Bobalek was located in the woods and ordered to surrender. He opened fire and his shots were returned.

Not knowing they had wounded him, members of the posse gave up the search when night fell. Early this morning they returned to the place and found a trail of blood leading to the body. The note was in his hand, frozen rigid by the zero weather.

Wheeler was captured by Sheriff Adams a short time after the robbery. He is the son of J. N. Wheeler, former county agent of this county. Both youths attended public school here. Wheeler had been married only a short time.

Bobalek's body was first taken to Kemp, where it was identified by his father and where, at a coroner's inquest, Justice of the Peace Harry Peel rendered a verdict of suicide.

About $400 was found near Bobalek's body.

A number of representatives of the various towns were planning a trip to Austin to meet with the commission on Monday, however, the trip was postponed in order to allow time for an engineer to go over the route and to make estimates on putting the road up in shape for acceptance by the state. Efforts will be put forth to have this work done in time for the group to present their claims to the commission at the February meeting.

Prison Set Fire As Convicts Try To Gain Liberty

Attempt Frustrated When Guards Extinguish Blaze At Huntsville; Prisoners End Hunger Strike

(By Associated Press)

HUNTSVILLE, Jan. 18. — Still gripped with the urge to escape, rebellious convicts in the Wynne State Tubercular's prison farm set fire to the chapel today, despite a chilling north wind, in the vain hope that they could flee during the excitement.

The men just had quit a hunger strike, begun Thursday after Manager D. E. Wright had discovered and frustrated their attempt to clean out the concrete blocks from an old tunnel through which more than 40 of their companions had crawled to freedom two or three months ago.

The fire, which destroyed bedding and loose pine the prisoners had drenched with kerosene, was extinguished by prison guards, who formed a bucket brigade, before the Huntsville fire department arrived. Had it not been promptly put out all four buildings on the farm site might have been destroyed, as the chapel was northernmost of the structures and the wind was blowing cold and hard from the north.

Within two years nine efforts to fire the farm buildings have been made by the inmates.

Seventeen Persons Including Sheriff And Deputies Arrested On Pro Count

(By Associated Press)

HOUSTON, Jan. 18.—Seventeen persons, including Sheriff H. Wyatt Collins of Fort Bend county, his jailer and four deputy sheriffs, were arrested tonight when a squad of 30 federal agents swooped down on Richard, 40 miles from here, and made 11 simultaneous raids on alleged resorts in "Mud alley."

The raid was characterized by federal prohibition enforcement officers and attaches of the United States district attorney's office here as one of the most important ever made in South Texas. It was led by C. D. Cooper, of Fort Worth, prohibition administrator for Texas; Paul Jackson, his assistant, also of Fort Worth, and Raymond Wisehart, assistant United States district attorney, here, who for the past month has been directing activities of investigating officers.

Raids Simultaneous

The officers gathered in Houston early tonight and planned the raid. When they reached Richmond they separated into 11 groups and the raids were staged simultaneously.

Those arrested were charged today before United States Commissioner Brandley Harris at Galveston. The charge against them alleged that "the defendants did on or about January 17, 1930, at Fort Bend county conspire to violate the national prohibition act and did manufacture, sell and possess intoxicating liquor."

Those charged were:

Two Prohibition Agents Shot Down in Attempt to Search Home for Liquor

(By Associated Press)

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., Jan. 18.—Two federal prohibition agents were shot and killed here late today when they attempted to search a residence for liquor.

F. R. Catterson, who came here from Fairfax county, Virginia, was killed instantly and Robert K. Moncure, of Washington, D. C., died en route to a hospital.

Sheriff Robert Baker arrested George W. Moore at the scene of the shooting and held him on a blanket charge.

The prohibition agents were conducting the raid alone.

It was reported that customs officials had been watching the house all day and that the agents carried search warrants when they entered. This, however, had not been confirmed early tonight.

Chief of Police Frank Matthews, who was summoned to the place, was held at bay for 20 minutes by a shotgun in the hands of Moore, but persuaded the man to surrender.

Bearing search warrants, four agents went to the Moore home, which had been under surveillance all day. Moncure and James Crugler went to the

OPERATOR ENJOINED

J. A. Jarman Named By State Railroad Commission

AUSTIN, Jan. 18. (AP)—The Railroad Commission today asked Dewey Lawrence, assistant attorney general, to bring an injunction suit against J. A. Jarman of San Antonio, independent oil operator.

Jarman is alleged to be drilling a well without a permit in the Darst Creek field east of Seguin in Guadalupe county. He was said to have started drilling yesterday.

Jarman has title to a strip which he claims is an abandoned lane, three feet wide at one end, 20 feet at the other and about half an acre in area. He twice applied for a permit but the railroad commission refused it pending a possible settlement with the Texas and Humble companies, who own adjoining land and who opposed the application. The law forbids the drilling of a well within 150 feet of a property line.

Lon M. Smith, railroad commissioner, said that this was the first time that a suit had been filed to enjoin an operator from drilling.

Tatooing Appears On The Decline

Local Physicians Declare Tatooed Men Strive To Hide Decorations; Foible Draws Shame In Age

"COME ova! Come ova! Now is your chance to see the eighth wonder of the world! See him, hear him! The most tattooed human in the world!"

Thus might we hear from any side-show barker. And if we cared to draw nearer we might almost believe that such was the case, if it were not for the fact that in almost every side show there is a man who is tattooed from his neck to the soles of his feet.

Some Right Here

Right here in Lubbock there are many men, doctors and hospital attaches aver, who in their younger days sought to improve upon nature by having tattoos placed upon their bodies. Most of them, investigations show, had the work done while young and, after reaching maturity, have become more or less ashamed of the foible.

The practice of tattooing is an old one, dating from the early history of mankind. It has been favored by people high in the scale of civilization, but it prevails mostly among the brown and yellow races.

Barbarians use it to a great extent because the figures indicate a degree of rank or distinction. Tattooing also symbolizes in some tribes remembrance for some great person or member of the family who has died.

Primitives Use It

Primitive people use instruments of bone and stone and various figures and colors are used. In some instances a thread is drawn through the skin and coloring matter is injected into the puncture.

Instruments of steel with small teeth or needles are used in the more civilized nations. In some countries tattoos are put out of sight but some use it on the face and hands. Sailors use it extensively, and it is a favorite among the Bedouin women of the present time. It is also a favorite among the natives of the South Sea Islands where it is a matter of pride and personal ornamentation.

Although tattooing is of religious origin, Leviticus, nineteenth chapter and 28th verse, prohibits its use among the Jews, "Ye shall not make any cuttings in your flesh for the dead, nor print any marks upon you."

Art In Many Countries

However, prohibited or not, tattooing is a high art in many countries. The Japanese pride themselves upon the artistic colorings of their figures. Every figure imaginable is tattooed, animals, birds, historical scenes, bloody daggers, snakes, names of sweethearts, initials, flags of different countries, and anchors and ropes. In enlightened U. S. A., spread-eagles, lodge emblems and fraternity pins are tattooed, religious fanatics have crosses or other figures on their bodies, rings tattooed on fingers are common and some have their own names or initials tattoed.

Sailors For Ropes Or Women

Sailors prefer anchors with ropes through them, daggers, snakes, nude women and mermaids. The real old-time seaman might have a picture of his ship tattooed upon his arm or chest and exhibit it with pride.

Tattooing consists of the introduction in the derma of insoluable substances. Carmine, indigo, vermillion and cinnabar are more commonly used. They are indelible and permanent and to remove them is very painful and not always successful.

There are several methods which are used but none are reliable or cleanly. Tattooing with zinc chloride and rubbing with silver nitrate is used. This forms a crust which, when it drops off, takes the tattoo color with it. This method may have to be used several times before it is effective. Deep freezing with carbon dioxide snow sufficiently destroys the tissue and when it heals leaves a soft white scar.

Have Removed Them

Out of several local doctors interviewed on the subject only two had ever had any experience. Dr. J. W. Rollo, city health officer, stated that he had removed one several years ago but did not remember just how he had taken the tattoo off.

Dr. Sam Dunn declared that he removed one from the first "stiff" he dissected by cutting it off. He preserved it and kept it "just for fun," he declared.

Tattoos are seldom removed. Small boys often exhibit their "Spartan endurance" to their playmates by being tattooed and show them with pride, some is done on a dare or for other reasons, but it seems that few are proud of them after they are older, at least they are ashamed to show them.

Business Survey Points Out Transition Period During Month; Readjustments In Order Over Nation

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—Dun's review today said: More than half of January having passed, evidences of business revival, although by no means general, are becoming more numerous. Neither the measured pace of the recovery nor its scattered development should be surprising, for this is a transition period, and it is scarcely to be expected that gain will come other than slowly and irregularly. That has been the experience of most preceding eras of readjustment, yet a gradual advance upon a sound basis is more to be desired than a too rapid expansion whose duration might be shortened by over extension. The present process of recuperation from the effect of the late financial unsettlement is chiefly visible now in the quarter where it had been confidently looked for, and the further rise of steel production is especially encouraging at a time when such a trend is helpful to sentiment. The distinct turn for the better in that field reflects a similar change in some allied industries, including automobile manufacture, and the increased number of buyers in dry goods centers is viewed as another hopeful sign. Distribution of merchandise not unnaturally has receded from the best previous records, yet remains heavy in the aggregate, and purchasing for replenishment has been more of a factor since annual inventories were completed. Weekly bank clearing $10,745,448,000, a decrease of 22.3 per cent from a year ago.

Extension of Time Not to Be Allowed

AUSTIN, Jan. 18. (AP)—No person has authority to grant an extension after Feb. 1 for payment of 1930 automobile registration fees, says L. G. Phares, chief license inspector for the state highway department.

After Feb. 1, he declared, tax collectors are bound by law to collect a penalty of 20 percent of the total fee for delinquency on vehicles being operated without license and any person who drives an unlicensed car after that date is subject to a fine not exceeding $200.

Phares made his announcement after he said the department had received inquiries from a number of tax collectors asking if the time would be extended after Feb. 1.

WATER SUPPLY THREATENED

SANTOR, S. D., Jan. 18. (AP)—The water supply of the state tubercular sanitarium was threatened today when the hospital thermometer sank to 46 degrees below zero. The severe weather partially cut off the flow of water from springs upon which the institution depends.

Prohibition Commissioner Says Industrial Alcohol One-Fifth Of 3 Years Ago —Corn Sugar Enters

(By Associated Press)

DETROIT, Jan. 18.—Diversion of industrial alcohol furnishes but a small portion of the intoxicating beverages sold by American bootleggers, Dr. James M. Doran, prohibition commissioner, said in an address before the Anti-Saloon League national convention.

While asserting that the present diversion is one-fifth that of three years ago and is continuing to be reduced, Dr. Doran warned the dry crusaders that too much stress could not be placed on this phase of enforcement.

Price Too Big

"Crippling of our scientific and educational institutions, our medical arts, and our commercial organizations dependent on the efficient and rapid movement or procurement of essential alcohol supplies is too big a price to pay for extreme national prohibition," he said.

The commissioner estimated that not more than 2,750,000 gallons of industrial went into the bootleg market last year, while at least seven or eight times that amount of high proof alcohol was manufactured illicitly from corn sugar.

"The corn sugar liquor racket now surpasses all others in the field of operation of the bootlegger," he said.

To dry workers, Dr. Doran counselled less "tinkering with the top of prohibition and more work with the foundation—the people."

A review of the activities of the federal prohibition enforcement agencies since their establishment was given in an address by James J. Britt, attorney for the prohibition bureau. The average annual appropriation over a period of ten years, he said, has been $8,800,000 and the average number of agents 1,800.

Australian Breaks World Speed Mark

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, Jan. 18. (AP)—Norman Smith of Australia bettered the world's automobile straightaway record for 10 miles on North Auckland Beach today. He covered the distance in four minutes, two and one-fifth seconds, an average speed of 148.637 miles per hour.

Available records say the present world's straightaway automobile record for 10 miles is 4:09:31, an average of 148.409 miles per hour. The record was set by Ralph De Palma at Daytona Beach, Feb. 16, 1919.

INVESTIGATION ASKED

Oklahoma Senators May Make Probe Oil Waste

OKMULGEE, Okla., Jan. 18. (AP) W. B. Pine and Elmer Thomas, Oklahoma senators, today were asked to institute a senatorial investigation of the "disastrous differential" between the price of crude oil at the well and the retail price of all its by-products. The request was made in a resolution, adopted today by a committee of the independent oil and gas association.

The ultimate result of drastic reductions in crude oil prices, the resolution reads, is the absolute annihilation of the producing companies and individuals who are engaged solely in the production of crude oil."

BETTER BE SAFE THAN SORRY.....

The next time some peddler tells you he can save you money on a monument, ask him to let us figure on the same design and material, we don't want to know his price, simply the size, finish, material, etc. Nine times out of ten he will commence to make special inducements to close the sale before you see us.

It is absurd to think that any dealer, located in Vernon, Wichita Falls, San Antonio, Georgia, or any where else, can pay a commission of 25 per cent to 35 per cent for the order, then pay local freight and compete with us on prices, he cannot do it, all we ask is that you compare our prices, then you be the judge.

We are among the largest buyers of Granite and Marble in the entire state, we get quantity and cash discounts that some dealers do not get, our goods are BOUGHT RIGHT. Compare our prices and you will see that they are SOLD RIGHT. Yet, some folks will go wrong and take some tin-horn peddler's word for it that he can save them money, and never see their local dealer, Of course, they just don't think.

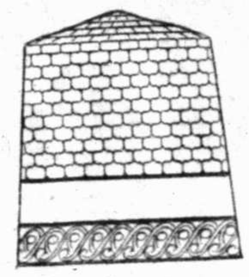

Is this loyalty to your home town? We just want to know.

Cottle Sheriff Too Much For Bandit

PADUCAH, Jan. 18. (AP)—Ernest Oglesby, alleged bad man, was an ex-bad man today as he meditated his chains in the Cottle county jail.

Oglesby escaped from the penitentiary last July, where he was serving 10 years from Callahan county, eight years from Stephens county, 55 years from Eastland county and two years from Shackleford county, on various and sundry charges.

Last night he had an encounter with Cottle county's athletic sheriff, A. A. Payne. Oglesby attempted to draw two guns and Sheriff Payne made a flying tackle. Down they both went. Oglesby for the count.

A full set of burglary tools alleged was found in his car. Officers here said there was a reward of $1,500 posted for his capture.

'Amnesty Bill' To Turn Up Again If Jim Is Candidate

Pardoning Of Former State Governor By Legislators Gives Room For Entry Into Politics Again

(By Associated Press)

AUSTIN, Jan. 18. — If Former Governor James E. Ferguson runs for governor this year, and all indications point to his entry into the race, Texans will hear a good deal of the "amnesty bill."

They already have heard considerable about it, since it was drawn and passed by the legislature in 1925 to wash away the political sins charged against Ferguson by reason of his impeachment in 1917.

Mrs. Ferguson Signed It.

Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson, wife of James E. Ferguson, was governor when the amnesty bill was passed, and, as the chief executive, placed her signature on it. Mrs. Ferguson became a candidate for governor in 1924 when the state democratic executive committee barred her husband's name on grounds that he had been impeached from office and under the constitution was, therefore "diqualified from holding any office of honor, trust or profit."

After Mrs. Ferguson was elected in one of the most heated campaigns Texas had ever known, the legislature decided that the people of Texas had doubtless passed on the matter at the ballot boxes and desired Ferguson pardoned from the stigma of impeachment. It passed what was known as the "amnesty bill."

Law Is Repealed.

But Mrs. Ferguson was defeated for reelection in 1926 by Dan Moody and the legislature in 1927 promptly repealed the law which Ferguson and his friends claimed gave him the right to hold office of "honor, trust and profit."

Friends of Mr. Ferguson claim the legislature had the power to pardon him and did so in good faith, and having done so, unconditionally could not revoke it.

Now the question of Governor Ferguson's qualification is moot, with the likelihood it will be given the acid test in the higher courts this summer.

Granted Release.

The legislature in the amnesty bill directed "that every person against whom any judgment of conviction has heretofore been rendered by the senate of the state of Texas in any impeachment case, shall be and is hereby granted a full and unconditional release of any and all acts and offenses of which he was so convicted by said senate of the state of Texas, upon any charge or proceedings of impeachment."

Going further, the bill recited: "That any and all penalties or punishment inflicted by or resulting from any such judgment heretofore rendered by the senate of Texas, in any such impeachment case, including any disqualification to hold any office of honor, trust or profit under said state, shall be, and the same is hereby fully cancelled, remitted, released and discharged."

Business Starts Active In Lamesa

New Firms Open As 1930 Gets Under Way; Paving Work Nearing Completion In City

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

LAMESA, Jan. 18 — Several changes in ownership and a few new business establishments met the new year in Lamesa. Two new grocery stores have been opened to the public since the first of January and several automobile agencies and filling stations have opened their doors under new management. One new $7,000 filling station began serving the public last week. Three large busiess institutions here changed hands during the first of the year. The Dal-Paso hotel was sold by Reuben Usher of Lubbock to A. A. Hutton, also of Lubbock, for $104,000. The Sanders-Attaway Motor company changed ownership almost at the same time that the Lamesa Candy Kitchen sold. Activity in building is increasing here with several new business houses under construction and numerous residences. A few of the stores are remodeling at present.

Paving in Lamesa is rapidly nearing completion as one street has already been opened to traffic and two others are nearly ready for use. The street paving program for this city totals $80,000, with fifteen city blocks hardsurfaced with brick. This will make a total of thirty-one blocks of paving for Lamesa, eleven of which are in the residence section

Milk Plant Starts

Construction of Lamesa's $200,000 powdered milk plant began three weeks ago and the contractor, Harvey C. Allen of Lamesa, states that the factory will be in operation by April 1. Concrete foundations for the plant have already been laid and brick work will begin soon, it is said.

Contemplated building in Lamesa during 1930 will total somewhere near $350,000, excluding the milk plant and paving. A new Baptist church and parsonage, costing $75,000, will be constructed during 1930, it is reported. Funds for the new church building have already reached the half-way mark acording to O. B. Norman, treasurer.

Laborers in Lamesa have plenty of work ahead of them, it is pointed out, although there is no need for outside help. Contractors here state that there is no need for more assistance, for there is plenty of labor in Lamesa to supply the demand.

Good wages, plenty of activity in building and very little unemployment will contribute to a record construction year for Lamesa, it is thought.

More than 500 cities and towns in Texas teach fire prevention in their schools.

Lynn County Stresses Agricultural Work; Five Experts Are Employed to Give Instructions to Its Citizenship

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

TAHOKA, Jan. 18.—Five agricultural experts are now employed in Lynn county to teach her future farmers and farm wives the high points of proper agricultural methods and to assist her present farmers and farm wives. This is one of a few counties in the entire Southwest that can boast of three vocational agriculture teachers, and, in addition, a county agent, and a county home demonstration agent.

Interest in agriculture is steadily growing here, and farmers are taking more and more interest in the raising of high grade stock and the planting of better seed and a larger variety of farm products, largely due the educational campaign being waged. Realizing that Lynn county is primarily an agricultural county, practically ninety-five percent of its land being tillable, her citizens have set out to get the most from their land that is possible. The result is seen in the fact that local banks are in excellent condition, postal receipts are larger than ever before, many land notes have been paid, and there has been more building during the past year than ever before in Tahoka's history—all in spite of the fact that 1929 was an unusually poor crop year and 1928 afforded rock-bottom cotton prices.

Vocational agriculture is taught in the high schools at Tahoka, Wilson, and O'Donnell by Taylor White, W. M. Kopecky, and Vernon Martin, respectively. Fifty-seven boys are receiving instruction in the local school, and between 60 and 70 in the other two schools. This teaching service was inaugurated at Tahoka five years ago by W. R. Lace, who was succeeded three years ago by Mr. White, who is considered one of the outstanding teachers in the state. Wilson and O'Donnell have had vocational agriculture two and one years, respectively.

Miss Thelma Greenwade is county home demonstration agent, coming here a year ago to succeed Miss Millie M. Halsey, who inaugurated that work four years ago. Women and girls receiving home demonstration instruction total 495, thirteen women's clubs having a membership of 350 and twelve girls' 4-H clubs of 145. Outside of the schools and churches, this group of organizations is the greatest educational force in the county.

Mrs. R. W. Penton, prominent home demonstration club member, is president of the State Home Demonstration Association and also is one of the five Master Home Makers of Texas.

County Agent Added.

County Agent Ray E. Shaver was added to the agricultural force of this county last March, and he has accomplished much in spite of the short time he has had in which to arouse interest in the work. He has organized boys' 4-H grain sorghum, Jersey calf, poultry, and pig clubs, secured two terracing schools, conducted a poultry show, and assisted with a half score of other agricultural meetings.

These agricultural meetings have also played a big part in carrying out of the agricultural program. Among them are included a farm short course, a county fair at Tahoka, a community fair at O'Donnell and a community fair at Wilson, the poultry show and two terracing schools, a women's club encampment and a girls' 4-H club encampment, and numerous club meetings.

Towns Cooperate.

Chambers of commerce at Tahoka, O'Donnell, and Wilson, of which C. C. Williams, G. S. Dowell, and Carl Holden, respectively, have co-operated and in many cases been the leaders in staging these agricultural meetings and in boosting the cause of agriculture.

Evidence of the value of farm instruction work can be seen to some extent in the fact that last year 210 cars of hogs valued at $357,000 were shipped from Lynn county, $250,000 worth of poultry products, ad although interest is just now developing to a creditable extent in dairying, products from this industry totaled $203,000. Last year's feed crop was very short, little more than enough for home consumption, but the 1928 crop totaled approximately one and one half million bushels of grain sorghums valued at $780,000. The cotton crop averages around 40,000 bales, though during the so-called poor year of 1929 the total was only about 29,000 bales.

Lynn county is sold on agriculture, and two or three years will see a greater change in this section than has the past five or six.

One of the novelties of the recent Paris Motorcycle Show was a five-horse-power three-wheel delivery motorcycle having a carrying capacity of half a ton.

Extremes Offered At C. I. A.

DENTON, Jan. 18. (AP)—The heaviest girl at the College of Industrial Arts here weighs three and one-half times as much as the lightest and the shortest girl on the campus is four feet three inches tall, with the most towering an inch more than six feet.

Between those extremes the average weight of all students was found to be 119 pounds and the average five feet four, indicating girls have added two inches to the height so popular a few years ago.

That the girls do not fear obesity is indicated by the daily consumption of 60 pounds of butter, 150 gallons of milk and 120 dozen eggs, and the weekly figures showing: 500 gallons of ice cream, 200 hens, 425 pounds of fish, 55 gallons of oysters, 2,000 pounds of potatoes and 25 sacks of sugar.

Lubbock And Ralls Cagers Fall Before Athens Quint

IN THE REALM OF SPORT
WITH ALLAN CARNEY
Avalanche Sports Editor

A whirlwind start by the Texas Tech basketball team comes in the light of a decided reaction from the disastrous football season experienced by the Matadors last fall. The Crimson basketeers have won the first five games on their schedule by decisive scores, defeating Wayland, Howard Payne and Simmons in successive games, and appear to be headed for a highly successful cage campaign.

The turnout for the skirmish with the Simmons Cowboys Thursday night of last week furnished proof that the fans of Lubbock will support a winning ball club. The college gymnasium was jammed to its rafters and few empty seats were available even on the north end behind the backboard. In every home game the Matador cagers have exhibited plenty of zip and fight; this is the element in collegiate competition that makes the turnstiles click.

From present indications the Tech basketball quintet will have a court season just as successful as the past football season was disastrous. This has been the case with any number of colleges, and is not in the least surprising here. The success of the Tech cage team this year is like a cool, refreshing shower after a long, hard drought. Lubbock fans are to be commended for their all-time support of the college teams and they deserve to be partially repaid with an occasional winner.

Unless games can be matched within the next few days, the Matador court artists will be without competition next week. The original schedule for the Matadors had the Daniel Baker Hill Billies carded for a pair of games here the first of the week, but the Brownwood school authorities cancelled the series because of conflict with term examinations. If a series cannot be arranged with another college team, the Paynemen will likely stay in playing trim by meeting the Lubbock city team and the Littlefield quintet.

Old man sunshine peeked through the clouds yesterday to cast its warm rays on Lubbock for the first time in almost two weeks. The advent of warmer weather will give the college track candidates an opportunity to start their preliminary work. Coach Payne has already started issuing equipment to the candidates for the distance runs and if good weather prevails this week, the number will be increased to several.

The outlook for the 1930 track team at Tech is not what you would call bright, but the Matadors are certain to have a well-rounded organization, capable of holding its own with Tech's chief rivals. Eleven letter men are back in addition to a host of seasoned tracksters, who should make up for those who have been lost by graduation. The mere fact that Ransom Walker is eligible for another track season is good news in itself for Coach Payne.

Walker laid out last track season and was in training for only a few weeks during the past football season. This layoff may affect him adversely and still the rest may have been just the sort of tonic that will give him a much-needed enthusiasm for competition. "Percy" has been, more or less, burnt out on athletics, due to the fact that he was entered in all sports through high school and has carried the brunt of battle for Tech athletic teams throughout his college career. The daily training grind tends to become "old" to an athlete who goes from one sport into another, year in and year out. Unless his lengthy layoff has reduced his stamina, Walker is due to go places on the cinder path this spring.

Coach Jimmy Kitts and his Athens Hornets had little trouble in turning back the basketball teams of this immediate section during their visit which closed last night at Ralls. The national schoolboy champions clearly outclassed both Lubbock and Ralls High school teams and so far as West Texas is concerned, the Hornets are headed for another state title and possibly their second national championship. Enormous reserve strength will make the Athens club hard to beat on anybody's court, and seldom will you find a squad made up of so many lanky lads.

Thus far the Westerners of Lubbock High have shown little to write home about and unless we are far wrong, the locals will lose both to Ralls and Slaton if these two teams win their way to the district meet here on Feb. 21 and 22. A passing glimpse of the material on Coach Morgans squad is enough to convince the passer-by that the Westerners are not likely to set the woods on fire in a basketball way this year.

Pity the poor Rice Owls and their long beards. The feathered ones swore solemnly following their 41-40 defeat at the hands of S. M. U. Mustangs at Houston that they would not shave until they won a conference basketball game. Since that time they have continued to slip down the conference ladder, losing Friday night to S. M. U. in Dallas and last night to the Frogs of T. C. U. It was their fourth consecutive defeat and they have yet to win a game from a Southwest opponent.

New Criticisms Made On College Athletics

Second Carnegie Report Harps On Outside Control

"Bulletin 24" Less Harsh Than First Famous "23"; Urge That Athletics Be Offered More Students

By TED VOSBURGH
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Jan. 18. (AP)—The Carnegie foundation's famous "Bulletin 23," which stirred the country three months ago with sensational charges of recruiting and subsidizing athletes, was followed today by the publication of "Bulletin 24," which also contains criticisms of American college athletics.

"Some of the institutions that have most completely adopted the doctrine of faculty control have been found to be doing most to impair the status of the amateur," says Dr. Henry S. Pritchett, president of the foundation, in a foreword.

Represent Desires

"Many of the advantages that are claimed for present-day sport," Dr. Pritchett declared, "represent the desires and hopes of its proponents rather than demonstrated results."

The bulletin contains 305 pages and was compiled by Prof. W. Carson Ryan, jr., of Swarthmore college.

"Once opposed, then tolerated, athletics have come to be regarded as an important part of the educational process," Professor Ryan observes in summarizing the results of his study.

Evils Result

"Existing opposition to athletics is directed for the most part not at athletics themselves, but at what are regarded as evils resulting from an exaggerated and commercialized athletic system, especially in intercollegiate football.

"It is now recognized that more and more the educational institution—school or college—must exert itself to administer athletics educationally, with adequate student responsibility, but freedom from outside non-educational control.

"The claim that athletics seriously interfere with scholarship apparently remains unproved, although there is some recent evidence that athletes do not reach fully the levels of intellectual attainment their inherent ability would make possible.

"As to health, college athletes are found to have better life-expectancy than the general population, but no better than the college population, which is itself a selected group, and not so good as that of college men of high scholarship rank.

"More athletics, rather than less athletics, is generally accepted as one of the remedies for athletic ills—that is, an opportunity for all youth to participate in athletics through intramural and similar activities."

Beaumont to Hold School for Rooks

BEAUMONT, Jan. 18. (AP)—Purchase of Frank Stapleton, first baseman, from the Wichita Falls club was announced today by Exporter officials. It was an outright deal, although the sale price was not given out. Stapleton succeeds Bill Kelly, sold to Fort Worth.

The Exporters also announced a rookie school will be conducted for three weeks, starting February 15, open to all who think they have baseball possibilities. The club will furnish baseballs, bats and instruction, the latter to be given under the personal direction of Manager Del Baker. Candidates must provide the rest, including uniforms, gloves, transportation to and from camp and maintenance while here.

Latonia Spring Races Abandoned

Thoroughbred Race Meeting Eliminated In Radical Step From Kentucky's Racing Program

COVINGTON, Ky., Jan. 18. (AP)—The Kentucky Racing commission met here today and decided to eliminate Latonia's spring thoroughbred race meeting. The step was a radical departure from Kentucky's spring racing program.

The commission announced the chief reason for abandoning the Latonia spring meeting, which has been held regularly at that time for seven years, was the weather.

Last spring the commission said, Latonia experienced 24 rainy days out of a 29-day meeting. During the fall, Latonia had a similar experience, a good track prevailing for only seven days of a 30-day schedule.

Due to those two misfortunes the commission decided to set the opening day for the first Latonia meeting for June 23. It will last until August 9 and include 37 running days.

There will be no racing in Kentucky from Decoration Day until Latonia's late June opening. Lexington and Louisville will have their usual spring dates but under the new schedule, horse men will be in a position to ship from Churchill Downs at the conclusion of that track's first meeting to Washington Park, Chicago.

Willis Glassgow Is Most Valuable

IOWA CITY, Ia., Jan. 18. (AP) — Willis A. Glassgow, retiring University of Iowa football captain, was acclaimed here tonight as the Western conference player of most value to his team during the 1929 season with presentation of the Chicago Tribune trophy between halves of the Bradley Tech-Iowa basketball game.

Former Aggie Star Sings Praises Of Huskies

BY GAYLE TALBOT JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

DALLAS, Jan. 18. (AP)—The difference between a college football star and a professional football star, says Fay (Mule) Wilson, formerly a big touchdown man for the Texas Aggies, is something like 18 months, or, roughly, a year and a half.

Wilson, an all-Southwest conference back not so many years ago, recently returned from the professional gridiron wars. He has been through several campaigns with the New York Giants, and has some first hand information on the brand of football played by the salaried lads.

Praises Pro Football

"Boy, that is football," he said, pushing back a derby and wrapping his spats about a restaurant stool. The emphasis was on the is. "The pro game takes up where college football leaves off. There's no comparison."

All of which, coming from a fellow who rank as one of the greatest halfbacks ever produced by the Southwest, carries considerable authority.

"I don't care how great they were in college, it takes them at least a season and a half to amount to anything in the pro racket," Wilson continued. "It's just like a high school star entering college. He has to learn a lot of football before he's of any value."

Strong Is Cited

Wilson chose Ken Strong, a unanimous all-American choice at New York university two years ago, as an example. Strong was in the same league with the former Aggie ace during the last season. He didn't gain his length against the Giants, Wilson said.

"You don't see many long gains. Every time you carry the ball you're trying to go through 11 fellows who are just as good, if not better than you are. It's tough when your opponents know every trick in the bag and half the time are thinking ahead of you."

Wilson saw little service in the Giants' backfield during the past season, because of an ankle injury early in the campaign. The only other Texas player in the league was Jake Williams, crack Texas Christian university tackle of 1928.

Small At 190.

Although Wilson weighed 190 pounds while in shape, there were only two other Giants lighter than he. Both were quarterbacks. A lineman weighing less than 200 has little chance to make good in the pro racket, he said. And it takes a powerful man to stand the battering of a 12-game schedule. Rigid training is necessary.

Negro players are vanishing from the professional field, Wilson said. Only one remains in the National league.

Under the plan, academies, denominational and private institutions which meet University of Chicago eligibility requirements will be permitted to participate. The winner of the tournament, in the widened scope of competition, will have a powerful claim to the national prep basketball title.

Athens high school won the 1929 event, defeating Classen high school of Oklahoma City 25 to 21 in the championship contest.

Preliminary Work For Tech Cinder Artists To Begin

Outlook For Matador Track Team Not So Bright; Ten Letter Men To Be Available For Coach Payne

Although completely wrapped up in the current basketball campaign, Coach Victor Payne has turned a part of his thoughts to flying feet and sailing weights with the 1930 track season just around the corner.

Preliminary training for the distance candidates on the Tech track have been limbering up their muscles for some time, but prospect for a let-up in the assault of King Winter will bring out a large crew next week. Warm sunshine broke through the clouds yesterday for the first time in two weeks and if this continues, the Matador cinder hopefuls may begin to turn out in droves.

Payne Busy Now

Coach Payne will be held close to the college basketball squad until late in February and will be unable to give his full attention to the cinder artists until after the final game of the season with the Canyon Buffaloes at Canyon on Feb. 20. Training up until that time will be carried on on the players' own initiative.

Eleven letter men will be back this year to furnish the Tech mentor a nucleus for his track unit. These are Fisher Tadlock, R. Walker, Pace, Lee, C. Wooldridge, F. Wooldridge, Payne, Dallas, Cole and Hill. This crew of veterans is likely to carry the load of the point scoring pastime, but a horde of newcomers give promise of strengthening the Tech squad.

Last year the Matadors excelled in the field events, but a survey of the material available for the coming season indicates the locals will be much weaker in the weights and jumps in the coming season while their track entries will be somewhat stronger.

In the dashes, especially, the Paynemen will be well fortified. Captain James Dallas, of Brownfield, will lead the sprinters. Leon Fisher, all-around track performer will ably assist Dallas, and the Wooldridge brothers, Charlie and Floyd may be counted on to turn in some points in the dashes. After a season's layoff, Ransom Walker should be able to take his old place in the short runs.

Tadlock, Payne, Fisher and Pace will give the Matadors plenty of strength in the high and low hurdles, but in the middle-distance and distance races, the Tech team will be little stronger than last season. Loss of Froeland, the Matadors mile and two-mile specialist, will hurt the locals considerably. Coach Payne plans to enter Basil Hill, last year's 880 star, in the mile this season.

Ayers, Shell, Chenoweth and Hopper, sophomore recruits, are in line for the distance events. Cole and Perry from last year's squad are also included in the candidates for the longer runs.

In the jumps, the Matadors will present strong competition for their hardest opposition. Tadlock and Pace are the veteran high jumpers and Lee will show the way for the broad jumpers. Crites, Fisher, Floyd Wooldridge and several others are apt in the art of taking off from the board.

Payne and Fisher are the only veterans available for the weight events, but Coach Payne will have a flock of newcomers out for the juggling acts. There are none to take the place of Reed and Westerfelt in the shot put, but Vinzant and Simmons may develop into point winners in hurling the sphere. Payne and Fisher will be assisted in the discus and javelin by Harper and Claunch, a pair of sophomores who have much promise.

It will be necessary to develop a new pole vaulter this season, since both Davis and L. Walker have been lost. Tadlock, Pace and Grimes are prospective members of the squad who have had experience in clearing the bar and one of these may find himself.

1 MINUTE INTERVIEW

WITH GEORGE LITTLE

Little

"Football is not a 'gladiatorial game,'" declared George E. Little, director of athletics and head of the physical education department of the University of Wisconsin, "and from my observations at Wisconsin I find that most criticisms of the game are unjustified."

The Badger athletic director imparted this information to us recently before reading his paper, "Results of Intramural Football at Wisconsin University for the Past Two Years," at the thirty-third annual meeting of the Society of Directors of Physical Education in Colleges in New York.

"Perhaps the chief criticism directed at football has been due to the belief that so much time and attention of the coaches were given to training only a few college men," continued Director Little. "The method of participation meets that objection, I believe, and proves that football is not a gladiatorial game. Our records at Wisconsin in 1929 revealed 662 regular football participants and 600 other students taking part in touch football.

"Doubtless you'd be surprised at the enormous increase in the number coming out for football at Wisconsin," the director added. "In the last three years it has grown to the extent of interclass and interfraternity teams organizing and playing regular schedules, in addition to the work of the varsity, B team and freshmen."

Director Little's neat remarks ought to put a crimp in the old-timers who are forever telling of the exploits of the athlete of long ago.

"We constantly hear it said by many persons today that the boys of this luxurious age cannot withstand hardships as well as the young men of the good old days. In all my observations they seem to be just as eager to participate in body contact games if given an opportunity, as the men before them."

RALLS, Jan. 18. — Basketball as played by champions proved too great a handicap for the Lubbock Westerners here Saturday afternoon and the Hornets from Athens buried the forces of Del Morgan beneath a veritable avalanche of baskets. The final score was 50 to 18 with the Hub City lads on the small end of the count.

The tall lanky lads from East Texas, who romped off with the national schoolboy championship last year had a picnic in their one-sided fracas with the Westerners, Coach Kitts using nine men during the contest.

Hornets Run Wild.

With the Athens big guns firing at the netting in their usual uncanny fashion, the visitors from the Piney Woods were complete masters of the Lubbock team from the outset, piling up a topheavy advantage in the opening period. In the first period the Westerners were completely disorganized, scoring but two points during the entire 20 minutes of play. The half ended with the Hornets riding high on a 25 to 2 score.

Lubbock came back in the last stanza and showed something that resembled basketball much more closely than did their unwieldy antics of the first half. But while the Westerners were counting 16 points the invaders chalked up another 25 to run their total score to a half hundred.

Thompkins High.

Fred Thompkins with 7 field goals and one free toss, led the Hornets in scoring. Owen was second with 10 points.

Hardberger, Lubbock center, accounted for seven points for the Lubbock crew. Holmes was next with six markers.

Rabbits Lose Again To National Champs.

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

RALLS, Jan. 18.—A crowd of more than 1,000 basketball fans filled the municipal auditorium here tonight to see the Athens Hornets take their second victory in as many nights from the Ralls Jackrabbits, 37 to 20.

Although clearly outclassed by the national champions, the Rabbits put up a courageous fight in their attempt to cope with the clever play of the invaders. Athens scored 11 points before the locals were able to scratch, but the Lobo crew came to life before the first half ended, the count at the rest period standing 20-12.

For the most part, the work of the Rabbits consisted in holding down the score of the rangy East Texans. Richards and T. Z. Walker, Ralls guards, were two good reasons why the Hornets scored no more than they did. Both played stellar defensive games, and Richards tied with F. Walker for scoring honors for the Rabbits, both having 4 points.

Fred Tompkins was again high scorer for the visitors with 10 points.

Frankie Genaro Stops Trevidic

Flyweight Champ From New York Is Too Clever For French Youth; Knockout Comes In 12th

PARIS, Jan. 18. (AP)—Frankie Genaro of New York, recognized by the National Boxing association as flyweight champion of the world, stopped Yvon Trevidic, 18-year-old Brittany youth, in the 12th round of their 15-round title bout here tonight.

The little New Yorker was too clever and too smart for the French youth, who took a bad battering from Genaro from start to finish. The veteran gave Trevidic a boxing lesson, cutting him up with sharp lefts to the head and weakening him with heavy rights to the body. The ringside impression was that the French youth was much too young to be rushed into a bout with as experienced a performer as Genaro. Genaro weighed 110 pounds, Trevidic 111.

Longhorns Are Facing Gruelling Baseball Campaign

Yanks And Giants Appear On Steer's Early Season Card During Visit Of Major League Clubs To This Region

Conference Champions Will Have Best Pitching Staffs In Years; Veteran Coach Has Other Worries

AUSTIN, Jan. 18. (AP)—Weather permitting, baseball practice at the University of Texas will begin February 3 and from then on it will be a sequence of practices, games with professional clubs, tilts with northern college teams and conference contests until late in May or early June.

So far 24 games are on the schedule and "Uncle Billy" Disch, veteran mentor, is anxious to get more contests with college teams which train in Texas. A trip through the east after the conference season is over has been discussed but has not been definitely arranged.

Giants and Yanks Carded

Both major league teams from Gotham are due to perform here this spring. The Giants, who train in San Antonio, are scheduled to open the Longhorn season March 6 and the Yanks, Babe Ruth and all, are due to pay Austin a visit on "All-Fools" day, April 1.

One of the chief worries of university officials is how to take care of the crowd expected for the fray with the Yanks. Seats probably will be placed on the centerfield embankment to take care of the kids who will want to see the Babe clout one.

Northwestern and Iowa already have signed to play games here and four contests with every other conference team except Arkansas has been carded. The basepaths have been worked over and will be in the best shape since the field was built two years ago. Winter rye grass in the infield will be green by the opening of the season.

Indications are that the Longhorns, conference champions 17 of the past 18 years, will have the best pitching staff they have boasted for several seasons.

Ralton Is Mainstay

Johnny Ralton, portsider from Houston, is expected to be the mainstay of the hurling corps as he has for the past two years. Oscar Peeples, who was referred to as a schoolboy pitcher up until midseason last year, and then held Baylor to one hit in the spring's crucial series, should be better this year.

Thomas Jefferson Hunt, a sophomore from Bartlett, is reported to have everything, particularly a blinding fast ball. De La Fuente, a veteran, will be back and there are several ambitious youngsters who may strike their stride. Peeples, Hunt and De La Fuente are right-handers.

Noma Rees, three-sport man, will be at his familiar place behind the plate so Disch's battery worries should not be sufficient to make his hair noticeably whiter.

Stars Are Missing

The inner and outer gardens present something of a problem. Tex Mughes, centerfielder, now with Des Moines; Meredith Hopkins, second baseman, now signed with St. Paul; Bill Ford, outfielder, Dusty Rhodes infielder, and Walker, first baseman are last year's regulars who will be missing.

Bassett and Lamb, veterans, perhaps will occupy two of the outfield positions. Dexter Shelley, football captain-elect and reputed to be quite a slugger, will be trying for a place as will "Dutch" Baumgarten, another gridster.

Frank Higgins of Dallas, captain-elect, is assured of one of the infield berths, probably at third base. Higgins probably shared with Ralton the honor of being the most finished player on the team. He should have a great future and he stayed out of football last fall in order to ward off any possible injury.

White Has Competition

Minton White, letterman, may get the call at shortstop, but there will be a host of promising sophomores battling for that and the other infield positions.

So far the following games have been scheduled:

March 6—New York Giants here.
April 1—New York Yanks here.
April 4, 5—Rice here.
April 11, 12—Baylor here (tentative).
April 16, 17—Iowa here.
April 19—Northwestern here.
April 21, 22—A. & M. at College Station.
April 25, 26—S. M. U. at Dallas.
April 28, 29—T. C. U. at Fort Worth.
May 2, 3—Baylor at Waco.
May 5, 6—Rice at Houston.
May 12, 13—T. C. U. here.
May 16, 17—S. M. U. here.
May 20, 21—A. & M. here.

HOOKS and SLIDES

By William Braucher

THE MERRY HOLDOUTS

With Babe Ruth and Robt. Shawkey walking arm in arm on Florida's sunny pathways, the one a holdout and the other his manager, the big league season has officially begun.

The Babe is one of the merriest of the holdouts. All he has to worry about is a few thousand either way, and when you get up into the 70 and 80 G's, what are a few paltry thousands?

Meanwhile, the young man who led the National league in pitcher-abuse last season has a few outlandish ideas about batsmen's wages. When Bill Baker went to sign Lefty O'Doul, NL outfielder mumbled figures that sounded very much like $17,000. Inasmuch as Lefty busted a lot of fences last year for a modest $8,000, Mr. Baker's eyebrows went up with a sharp click. Mr. Baker isn't accustomed to bringing up ball players in that kind of style. What Lefty will get remains an interesting development.

CAN MR. EVANS CONVINCE?

Then young Wesley Ferrell, the Indian rook pitcher who won 20 games for himself last year while toiling at a salary said to be not above $8,000, is said to be holding back on Billy Evans, head man of the Cleveland team, with a hankering for $10,000. Mr. Evans has a way of convincing ball players who made good in their first year that they probably will be duds in their second trip around the big ring. It remains to be seen if Mr. Evans can persuade Mr. Ferrell that he is only a very lucky young fellow to be pitching for the Indians at all.

Two other pitchers who gave the batsmen no end of annoyance in years not so remote are said to be at odds with the management about pecuniary matters. We mean Dazzy Vance and Burleigh Grimes. Dazzy got $15,000 last year, but Wilbert Robinson feels quite sure there will be no more mistakes like that around Brooklyn. What the club aims to hand Vance is $18,000 and an arrangement whereby he can increase his income according to the way he wins ball games. Vance retaliates by saying that even at $20,000 last year his style was somewhat cramped.

THE CASE OF MR. GRIMES

Burleigh Grimes was voted the best right-hander in the big leagues last year by a consensus of sports writers. He was picked generally for the all-star teams. His spitter is just as deadly now as ever. All these facts are giving Mr. Dreyfuss of the Pirates a few uneasy days and nights, as Grimes is said to entertain the strange idea that he might be worth $20,000 to some ball club next season.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

Lew Fonseca has been suffering from scarlet fever and may be a little late in getting to the Indians' training camp at New Orleans. . . . Old Grover Alexander turned down a couple of managerial jobs he might have had in the minors in order to pitch for the Phils one more year. . . . He told Bill Baker he thinks the old soupbone has one more good year in it and he'd like to show those other National league clubs they don't know a pitcher when they see one. . . . John Kieran of the New York Times says Art Shires' favorite song is "I May Be Wrong But I Think I'm Wonderful." By the way, Mr. Shires is said to be asking for $25,000 for playing first base for the Sox this year. . . . he got more than $19,000 in five fights within a little over a month. . . . "I'm really not as valuable a drawing card as Babe Ruth right now," says Art.

Brothers Returns Prisoner to City

Deputy United States Marshal Oscar Brothers returned late Friday from Pocatello, Idaho, where he placed Jack Vann, charged with transportion of a stolen automobile from one state to another, in the hands of federal authorities, after having transferred him from the Lubbock county jail.

Mr. Brothers transferred Lowell Porter, also charged with violation of the Dyer act, from Amarillo to the federal penitentiary at Golden, Colo.

"The thermometer in Idaho registered 30 degrees below zero," said the deputy marshal, "but the weather seemed colder when I arrived in Lubbock Friday."

Air Mail Service Schedule Offered

A letter mailed in Lubbock at 6:43 o'clock in the morning will be delivered in New York two days later by virtue of air mail service offered by the local post office, according to a schedule presented by John R. Green, superintendent of mails at the Lubbock office.

Air mail service is now offered to all points of the nation. From one to three days are saved by putting an extra three cents on a letter and marking it "air mail." Only five cents for the first ounce and ten cents for every additional ounce is required as postage.

Jail Closed

Small Pox Causes Ban on Bastile

TEXARKANA, Jan. 18. (AP)—"Closed to prisoners" is the order issued by the keepers of the Miller county jail here.

There is one prisoner, however, who will not get his freedom for several days. He has smallpox.

When the prisoner, a negro, was found to have contracted the disease Sheriff Fleet Magee announced county prisoners would be confined in the city jail until the county bastile was clear of disease.

"What! Change Your Section?"

Tech Students Have Varied Excuses For Changing Class Times; Deans Have Their Opinions

"WHAT! Change your section?"—and another Tech student answers his respective dean with "I have to work."

A "section" refers to the number of a student's particular class if more than one teacher offers the same subject at the same hour.

When a change is made in a student's schedule it requires the approval of the dean of his school and the sanction of the individual instructors. It is necessary to pay a fee if the change is made after the payment of the regulation registration fees. And due to the fact that some students enjoy the good old custom of changing their minds about certain things the deans of the various schools of the college are put to a lot of work. Especially is it common for requests for changes to flood the dean's office right after the beginning of a new term.

Leidigh Is Quoted

"Why bring up the matter of section changing," moaned Dean A. H. Leidigh of the School of Agriculture. "Of course we have it to deal with and as the policy of this school is to always encourage students in doing individual thinking we always try to arrange it so that the proper section is available. Of course though the student should have a reasonable excuse."

"I find that college boys don't like the idea of taking a "P. T." class at 12 o'clock and thus being forced to go without a noon meal and so I change lots of sections for them. Second on my list of reasonable excuses is that students must have convenient working hours. Occasionally I have a demand for a change in teachers but this request is rarely granted, especially to freshmen and sophomores. We do try to arrange it so that advanced students can take work under special teachers.

"In this school I do not think there are more students who want to change sections than there are those who have to change sections on account of overcrowded class rooms."

Gordon Watches Changes

As a general rule working is the chief excuse that students give for changing the sections. James M. Gordon, dean of the School of Liberal Arts stated that deans sometimes okeh a change on the excuse of working when the real excuse is that the student just doesn't like the instructor.

"I'd be the last person in the world to say that students couldn't put one or two excuses by the deans but I try my best to keep them from it.

"In this school the majority of excuses deal with working hours but we have a variety such as: conflicts, wrong section registered, departmental changes, student's personal desire, section discontinued and a few others. If a student has failed in a course twice under the same teacher we usually find it best for both the student and the instructor if a change is made in the relations of the two.

"Just take it for granted though that deans really are wise to the fact that students don't always give the exact excuse.

Would Change Subject

Dean William J. Miller, of the School of Engineering, throws up his hands at section changing and says: "Let's talk about something pleasant!"

"We have very little section changing in this school. My boys must be pretty good managers for they always seem to get things just like they want them. They rarely ask for changes in instructors because they must prefer to have someone they know to some one they have just heard about. Not over five per cent of our student body applies for changes.

"As a whole I am very sympathetic with a student when he asks for a change in his schedule for I think that a college student who is willing to pay one dollar for the right to change sections must have a fairly good reason for doing so."

"Just about 10 per cent of the girls want to change their classes," declared Miss Blanche Bacon, secretary to Dean Margaret Weeks, of the School of Home Economics. "Most of these are on account of work but once in a while it is because the girl's mind wasn't fully made up during registration. Once in a while it is because the student just didn't register for the right course in the beginning. Sometimes the girls add and drop courses after registration but not often. I find that the Lubbock business men are not often cranky about student's working hours."

Part of the ashes of Colonel H. G. Mayes have been scattered over his father's grave in Leicester, England, and the remainder will be scattered in South Africa, in Canada and in Greece, he having been on military duty in the three countries.

"Singing Fingers" Win Radio Debut For Woman Of 73; Is Just Starting

WREC Entertainer Is Popular With Radio Fans

MEMPHIS, Jan. 18.—At the age when most women are content to retire to the seclusion of the front porch rocker, knitting and an occasional gossip fest with the neighbors, Mrs. Julia Raine, 73, is just getting a good start in radio at WREC here.

This little white-haired woman is known as "the lady who sings with her fingers." Give her a piano and she can make it sing with fingers that impart a soulful touch to the keyboard.

Nearly half a century ago she was a young married woman playing a piano in a dark upstairs room The light of a street lamp gave enough illumination to guide her. Passersby used to pause outside the window and listen to the simple little compositions that found their way into the street. Old favorites like "Little Gray Home in the West," "The Rosary," "Coming Through the Rye," and others attracted the attention of the music lovers who passed.

Increase in Popularity

And so this little women became known as the "lady who sings with her fingers" and her lifetime residence here added increasing popularity and affection to herself and her playing as the years rolled by.

Then came radio. And it was only natural that Memphis' Mrs. Raine got her chance to entrance radio audiences with her music. So she took her music to the studio one day and made her radio debut.

Her program was a success. When it was over she came out of the studio with her hands full of messages and request numbers. And now, in recognition of popular demand, WREC has given Mrs. Raine a regular weekly program—"Grandmother's Hour," every Thursday.

Writes Own Pieces, Too

Mrs. Raine is a composer, in addition to being an accomplished pianist. "A Peerless Rose," is one of her works, and so is "In Tennessee," centennial hymn of the state.

She interprets selections as she has heard them sung by famous singers. For instance, she plays "Home Sweet Home" as she heard Patti sing it.

When she isn't busy making up her radio program, the little "lady who sings with her fingers" plays the organ in many churches here.

Miss Hayes

The old popular jazz tune, "That Red-Head Gal," accurately describes Bernadine Hayes the blues singin' red head of the Columbia Farm Community Network. She is now playing speaking parts in two of the nobottume radio plays over the network key in Chicago. She is a "show me" girl of Missouri, and entered radio at KMOX, St. Louis. Tried "vaude" for a time and then hankered back to her old love.

John T. Hopkins, III, of WJAX, Jacksonville, Fla., is one of radio's busiest men. As manager and chief engineer of the station, he has a record of broadcasting every day in the four years that the station has been operating. "Coronet" Brings Back Old-Fashioned Novel; Makes You Want To Find Out What Happened; Is Book Of Interest

THE modern novelist unfortunately, often forgets that a novel must tell a story. He plunges into the murkiness of the "stream of consciousness" business or he turns out a sociological tract in disguise, or he concentrates exclusively on character-drawing and in the end, his book does everything but hold the reader's interest.

Manuel Komroff's "Coronet" is [illegible] Coward-McCann [illegible] mistake. He set out [illegible] and he succeeded admirably. [illegible] net" entices [illegible] and holds [illegible] fascinating [illegible] want to [illegible]

Covers Much Ground

The story covers a lot of ground. It begins in the early days of Renaissance Italy, shifts to the Paris of Napoleon Bonaparte, jumps thence to the Germany of Wilhelm II and winds up in present-day Chicago. Yet Mr. Komroff has done the job with such skill, has made the people and events of each epoch so real and life-like, has encased his whole story in a literary covering of such a high order, that the tale never seems jumpy or disconnected.

The preeminations of a jeweled coronet made by a Florentine goldsmith constitute the thread that unifies these episodes. Mr. Komroff undertakes to prove that aristocracy must forever replenish its ranks from below, that the rude uncouth parvenu of today is the ancestor of the cultured aristocrat of tomorrow. He shows a Parisian nobleman of the era of Peter the Great and a Chicago meat packer of the twentieth century and demonstrates that they are blood brothers.

Packed With Life

The book is packed with life. The story of the two drummer boys who followed Napoleon's army to Moscow is a novel in itself. All in all, the infant year is not likely to bring many novels that are more worthy attention than this one.

Lee Is Revealed In Young's Book On Confederacy

"Marse Robert" Has Lee As He Is Not As Hero

MILITARY experts without number have written biographical studies of General Robert E. Lee. They have taken his amazing campaigns apart to study them, and almost without exception have reported that Lee was one of the supremely great military geniuses of all history.

James C. Young, in "Marse Robert: Knight of the Confederacy," tackles the subject from a different angle. His biography is concerned chiefly with getting the halo of tradition off of Lee's figure and presenting the man as a human being; and, to my mind, he succeeds admirably.

Leaves You Explained

His book does not explain Lee's campaigns as well as several others do, but it does leave you with the feeling that at last you have found out what sort of man Lee was. It enables you to understand the unparalleled devotion that the Army of Northern Virginia gave to this silver-haired, soft-voiced general. In fact, it almost makes you wish that you yourself could have been a member of that army.

You may gather from this that "Marse Robert" is a fine book. Whether it is because Mr. Young has done an unusually good job, or simply because it would be impossible to write an uninteresting biography of Lee is a matter of opinion, and you are urged to read the book.

The book is published by the Ray D. Henkle Co., and costs $5.

Book News Notes For This Week

Of Love

IN "The Midnight Bell," Patrick Hamilton has chosen a subject that might well have been made the basis for one of these isn't-life-a-dreadful-mess novels; the love affair of a waiter in a London saloon and a girl of the streets. Mr. Hamilton doesn't take this obvious course, however; instead, he makes this inherently sordid love story almost idyllic in its charm.

Don't be mistaken; he doesn't wind his tale up with a romantic flourish by having a great, pure love reform the heart of the painted little miss who is the book's poor heroine. Mr. Hamilton is an adult, writing for adults. His girl remains, at the end, what she was at the beginning. The young man who falls in love with her comes a fearful cropper, squanders all of his money, loses his job, plunges deep into degradation and finally goes to sea to forget about it.

But the story, nevertheless, is fleeked with sunlight. It is a good job of writing. Little, Brown and Co. are offering it for your consideration.

Flaming Coffins

Simple, literary tales about the war in the air are grouped together by Ben Ray Redman under the significant title, "Down In Flames."

These stories of dramatic moments among fatalistic men of the Royal Flying corps, who drank and played poker while they awaited the reckless uncertainty of the morrow, are more tragic, more poignant than the previous output of Elliott White Springs and similar narrators of life among the wartime aviators.

There is pathos in the scene between an American flier and a French war bride. Post war madness is described in the death of another aviator who imagined himself attacked by a fleet of Fokkers as he gazed at the flight of sea gulls.

The book is a further contribution to the record of the war.

Most of the old Sourdoughs have gold teeth—full sets of them in some instances—and when one of the old boys gets to singing 'Up in Alaska,' rolling his eyes, gold teeth flashing through his beard, I'm telling you the effect is something to be remembered—like the Northern Lights that play over the towns at night or the malamute chorus that goes keening up to the stars before dawn!"

Lamesa Man Has Own Broadcasting Station; Is Heard for Thirty Miles

(Special to the Avalanche-Journal)

LAMESA, Jan. 18.—Radio listeners were astonished here Monday when they heard R. R. Townsend, local citizen, broadcast from Lamesa's first sending station. The small broadcasting set is owned by R. E. Renfrow, who is planning to enlarge his studio and equipment during the summer and broadcast under the name of KFBD at Lamesa authorize by the Federal Radio Commission. Townsend was the first person to send his voice over the new station and he was followed by a number of short speeches by by-standers who had gathered in the studio.

Phonograph records were broadcast Monday afternoon and Tuesday morning.

The local fans enjoyed a special treat Tuesday morning when John Booker, negro, rendered a number of songs accompanied by a guitar. Renfrow described Booker as a "radio fiend" for his voice carried excellently and was well modulated. Possibilities of a radio station in Lamesa are excellent according to Renfrow, for he believes that the South Plains could easily support one. The first programs broadcast were heard at a distance of 30 miles according to phone calls reaching Renfrow's studio. Local fans also assured him that they had heard the programs.

LIBRARY RECEIVES MAGAZINES

Two new magazines have been added to the ones already in the library as the gift of Dr. T. J. Beck, head of the department of French and German. One of them is a French and deals with Americanization. It is called the "New York Magazine." The second is entitled "American Scandinavian Review."

NOVELS FOR USE

Modern American novels may be secured from the library at a fee of 5 cents a day. The books have been purchased by the members of an advanced English class which deals with the American novel. The books have been placed at the disposal of the student body and faculty members on the following conditions: a fine of 5 cents a day must be paid for the use of each book; a book may be kept only one week; fees cannot be paid out of the library deposit. All novels were purchased by the class instead of purchasing a text book. The fees collected will be used to make additions to the collection.

LEARN TO DANCE

Plans are being made by the council members of the Association of Women Students to conduct dancing classes in the gymnasium. There will be no fee and those women students who do not know how to dance will be taught. Teachers will consist of college girls who like to lead and can do it well. Present plans call for classes twice a month in the gymnasium. Until the class grows a piano will be used for music. Marjorie Ann Ainsworth is in charge of the tentative plans.

RECEIVE REPORT

A report on the activities of Tech students has recently been compiled by Helen Coon under the direction of the Woman's Forum. It shows that 60 per cent of the student body have outside interest in the college. Whereas, at the beginning of the fall term there were only three social clubs, there are now six according to the report. At present there are no strictly literary organizations nor none which have as their stated purpose the setting of high scholastic standards. Including the T association, awarded to athletics, there are 10 honorary clubs.

The report shows that when a student is interested in one outside activity he usually belongs to several. Approximately 100 more girls had outside interest than boys.

What Is It?

Radio Is Not An Instrument

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 18.—Strange as it may seem, a radio is a radio and not a musical instrument and therefore retailers who sell radios in Alabama cannot be required to pay a retail music dealer's license tax, according to the opinion of Assistant Attorney General Luther Patrick.

"A musical instrument has been judicially defined as 'a contrivance by which musical sounds are produced.' There could, in my opinion, be no serious contention that a radio is such a contrivance," he says.

Louisiana To Build New State Capitol

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 18. (AP)—Gov. Huey P. Long announced late today that he would proceed immediately with plans for building a new $1,125,000 state house here "in line with President Hoover's recent request for speeding up public works for the relief of threatened depression and unemployment."

Governor Long said he proposed a building of 16 or 18 stories and indicated that he hoped to see work started within the next few months. He described the proposed capitol as "a white limestone shaft," modernistic in design, and sufficiently large to accommodate all state departments, which are now scattered here and in New Orleans.

Chicago Massacre Linked With New York Gang Murder

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—The "St. Valentine's Day massacre" in Chicago last year and the murder of Frankie Yale, who was "put on the spot" in Brooklyn in July, 1928, were linked today in a police report which indicated the bullets fired in both killings were from the same submachine gun.

Commissioner Grover A. Whalen made the announcement that he had received "startling information" from Chicago, where he had sent two of the New York police department's firearms experts with slugs taken from Frankie Yale's body.

The experts were to compare these slugs with those which killed the seven members of "Bugs" Moran's gang while they were lined up in the rear of a Chicago garage February 14, 1929.

New York police previously have declared several racketeer slayings here have been the work of Chicago gunmen. The automobiles from which Frankie Yale met death as he drove down a Brooklyn street, it was pointed out, bore an Illinois license.

Slaton Plan For Bulls Successful

Co-Operative Bull Association Proves Profitable In Slaton Area; 200 Calves Sired

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

SLATON, Jan. 18—Excellent and very economical means of building up better dairy herds in this territory were explained here this week when members of the Slaton Cooperative Bull association held their first bi-annual meeting to exchange sires for the first time since the bull circle was formed two years ago by the Slaton Chamber of Commerce and County Agent D. F. Eaton. The members of the association are J. W. Massingill, S. A. Johnson, Charles L. Griffin and J. R. Boyd.

In January, 1928, when the bull circle was organized, these four men purchased four fine young registered Jersey bulls, using the cooperative ownership plan. Each member has kept one of the bulls during these two years. The four men reported that in the two years the four sires have sired 200 calves. Assuming that half of the number were heifers, 100 [illegible] dairy cows have been added to the territory in the two-year period because of the organizaton of the bull circle.

Gets Different Animal

By holding membership in the association, each member gets a different bull every two years, thus bringing to his herd and to the herds of neighboring farmers a new blood strain without being forced to purchase another sire.

Through the bi-annual exchanges of locations of sires, it is said by dairy experts that a better line of butter fat producers can be developed more cheaply than could be done in any other way.

Slaton farmers in the four communities where the four bull circle members reside are making regular use of the four sires, in this way gradually improving their dairy stock without extra expense. Instead of buying registered milk cows outright, they are breeding up their own herds into better milk and butter fat producers.

The Slaton bull circle is the only one in Lubbock county, according to County Agent Eaton. He would like to help farmers organize other circles, if desired, he said.

In making the announcement of the firm change, Mr. McWhorter pointed out that the same principles of business inaugurated when the store opened its doors six years ago would be continued.

Both Mr. McWhorter and Mr. Arnett have lived in Lubbock practically all of their lives. Jack May, associated with the firm for several years will remain in the business.

Broadcasting Is Rather High

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 18.—It costs lots of money to run a broadcasting station, as revealed in a recent report of the Federal Radio Commission.

For a 100-watt station, the commission reports, it costs $9113 a year; 200-watt, $7933; 750-watt, $99,193; more than 100 and less than 2000-watt, $33,900; 5000-watt, $115,268; 10,000-watt, $117,076; 20,000-watt, $179,000; 25,000-watt, $458,256; and 50,000-watt stations, $265,707.

These figures show that the cost of operating does not increase proportionately with increase in power.

Johnson Host For Anti-Saloon Meet

"Pussyfoot" Entertains At Banquet; Says Stupidity Is Only Sin In World; Prohibition Praised

DETROIT, Jan. 18. (AP)—William E. (Pussyfoot) Johnson, picturesque prohibition campaigner, entertained delegates to the Anti-Saloon League national convention at their banquet here tonight.

The crusader told the league that he has made a study of wrongdoing and has come to the conclusion that there is only one sin in the world. That, he said, is stupidity.

"It was stupid of Cain to kill Abel," Johnson said. "It was stupid of Noah to get soused. It was stupid of Al Smith to attempt to rise to the presidency as the representative of the ambitions of the underworld."

Johnson said attempts to regulate the alcoholic beverage business for 4,000 years had proved failures and that America discovered prohibition to be the only successful manner of handling the situation.

Other speakers at the banquet were Judge Florence Allen of the Ohio supreme court and P. H. Callahan of Louisvile, Ky.

Human Element Is Responsible For Accidents Of Air

By OSCAR LEIDING,
Aviation Editor,
Associated Press Feature Service

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18. (AP)—The human element again has been found to be the greatest cause of aircraft accidents.

Clarence M. Young, assistant secretary of commerce for aeronautics in making public today the federal accident report on civil aviation for the first six months of 1929, said 59.04 per cent of accidents were laid to personnel.

Bears Out Findings

His analysis of accidents in the civil field bore out the findings of the army air corps and the navy bureau of aeronautics in the military field.

Army pilots in 1928 were held responsible for 63 per cent of fatal injury accidents, while navy fliers for the 1929 fiscal year were termed the cause of 74.6 per cent of fatal crashes.

Major Young noted a marked increase in the number of miles flown for each accident in civil aeronautics. In the six months period for all classes of civil flying there was one fatal accident for every 442,430 miles flown.

Decrease In Percentage

For the like period in 1928 there was one fatal accident for every 169,94 miles flown. Accidents decreased in percentage in face of the fact that a total of 56,201,338 miles was flown by civil aircraft, more than three times as much as during the first six months of 1928.

In scheduled air transportations in which aircraft carry passengers, mail, or express on scheduled service over regularly established routes, there was one fatal accident for each 1,022,271 miles flown where, in 1928 only 896,822 miles were flown for each fatal accident.

In contrast to the number of accidents laid to pilot errors, the second largest item was power plant failures, causing 13.06 per cent of accidents.

Father-In-Law To Carry Texas Youth Back To Face Wife Desertion Charge

(By Associated Press)

RALEIGH, N. C., Jan. 18.—R. L. Turner Jr., 20-year-old State college textile student, was arrested today on a capias carrying a charge of wife desertion in Brownwood, Texas.

Service of the capias, however, only started his worries. He found that the special deputy sent to carry him back to Texas was his father-in-law, M. T. Bowden.

Turner made no objection to arrest at the college, but when he found his father-in-law waiting at the courthouse here for him, he indicated he might resist extradition. He telegraphed his father in Brownwood for advice.

Parents To Forbid.

BROWNWOOD, Jan. 18. (AP)—Mrs. Rose Bowden Turner, bride of a few months whose husband was arrested today in Raleigh, N. C., for wife desertion brought suit in district court here last November against her husband's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Turner, charging they influenced her husband to leave her.

Hundred Families Move To Section During Past Year

Number Of Purchases Are Announced By President Of Land Company; Land Being Cultivated

Approximately 100 families have moved into new tracts of land in Hockley, Cochran, Lamb, Castro Howard and Borden counties during the past year, about 40 of these families settling on the George M. Slaughter block of the Shackleford county school lands, according to W. P. Soash, president of the Lone Star Land company.

These 100 families represent sales made by the Lone Star Land company and all are putting land into cultivation this year.

Lands Settled Up

The Hockley and Cochran county lands being settled are located on two leagues of the Shackleford county school lands that were part of the George M. Slaughter ranch and are situated just north of the town of Whiteface, seven miles east of Morton and about 50 miles west of Lubbock.

Mr. Soash announces that a deal has just been made whereby the third league of this land is being placed on the market. The new tract is composed of 4,500 acres, the other two being between 9,000 and 10,000 acres, of which 80 to 85 per cent has been sold.

Purchases Small

No very large tracts have been purchased by new settlers, the company urging that farmers buy only such acres as they can cultivate efficiently. One family of five, for instance, purchased three 40-acre tracts, one of 100 acres and another of 120 acres, all in one block.

The Lone Star Land company has offices at Lubbock, Levelland, Vealmoor and Dallas. Officers other than Mr. Soash are George W. Soash, secretary; Guy M. Witt, assistant secretary; J. D. Slaughter, sales manager; E. C. London, field man. Stockholders in the company are Dr. George T. Veal, Bob Slaughter, W. P. Soash, George W. Soash and R. L. Slaughter, jr.

Break in Cold Wave Brings Hope to Poverty Stricken Group at Shamrock

SHAMROCK, Jan. 18. (AP)—Breaking of the cold wave brought mingled hope and fear to Shamrock's charitable organizations today — hope that suffering of several score indigent families would be alleviated, and fear that warm weather would bring fresh job-seekers to Shamrock, lured by the prospect of railroad construction work that is still several months away.

Saturday was the first time in two weeks that many of the stranded families have been able to venture forth from their makeshift tents and hovels without feeling the bite of a blizzard-like north wind. During this period, they have had only the food that has been given them, barely sufficient to keep them alive, and practically no heat.

Charity Runs Low

Church women, charitable and civic organizations have united in attempting to care for the people but the funds provided by this town of 5,000 are running low, under the load of caring for at least 140 poverty stricken persons.

The hovels the visitors have erected usually house at least eight persons, some of them more, and few of them having the necessities of life.

Try To Keep Warm.

One family with eight children was visited today by social workers. They found the whole group, except the father, crowded together under their three quilts, trying to keep warm.

The largest parties include one group of 21 persons, another of 16 two of 10 each, one of eight members and a number of smaller families.

City police have been instructed to warn all vagrants to move on, and warnings have been sent out that no work is in prospect here for several months.

Adequate Duties On Livestock Are Adopted In Meet

Inequalities In Present System Cited In Convention Of American Livestock Association

DENVER, Jan. 18. (AP)—Adequate duties on livestock to remove "in some degree the inequalities at present existing between agricultural and manufacturing industries in the matter of tariff protection were urged in a resolution adopted today to the convention here of the American National Livestock association.

Another resolution approved the agricultural marketing act and the policies of the Farm Board appointed in accordance with the act. Members of the association were urged to support the program of the Farm Board.

Amendment Urged.

A resolution urged congress to amend the Interstate Commerce act to vest the commission with jurisdiction over holding companies acquire railroads. Congress was asked to give the commission power to bring all railroad valuations up to date by adding or subtracting net property changes from its original basis of valuation.

Modification of the consent decree under which packers were barred from retail business was urged.

Changed conditions, including establishment of food stores, make it expedient that the Big Four packers not be permitted to engage in retail selling of meats, the resolution stated.

Opposition was expressed to proposed application of the quota provisions of the immigration which would result in drastic cutting of number of Mexican immigrants and congress was asked to defeat this.

Establishment of uniform grades of beef was recommended and congress was asked to provide adequate funds to extend the government grading service.

Tariff-Ridden Senate Changes from Sugar Bowl Fight to Milady's Hat

BY HAROLD OLIVER
Associated Press Staff Writer.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18. (AP) — Finished for the time being with the dispute over the American sugar industry, which has held the tariff-ridden senate agog for four days, the Hawley bill today and voted an increased duty on Milady's hats — or rather the wool felt forms that are trimmed and sold to the ladies as hats.

The increase, which would also be on relatively few hats that are imported, was approved fully conditionally, however, by Senator George, democrat, Georgia, expected opposition but allowed it to go through without a roll call with the understanding that later he would have a record vote on proposals not only to cut this duty, but also other protective rates in the wool schedule to the levels of existing law. Several increases in these rates including that on yarn have been approved.

The rate tentatively approved today would be 40 cents per pound and 10 per cent ad valorem on all values of wool felt hat bodies, 4,000,000 of which were said to have entered the United States last year under the present rate from 24 cents per pound and 20 per cent ad valorem to 60 cents per pound and 20 per cent ad valorem on all values of wool felt hat bodies, 4,000,000 of which were said to have entered the United States last year under the present rate from 24 cents per pound and 20 per cent ad valorem to 60 cents per pound and 20 per cent ad valorem on all values of wool felt hat bodies.

Misery And Death In Blizzard Wake

Discomfort Carried Over Vast Area On Crest Of One Of Most Extensive Cold Waves In History

CHICAGO, Jan. 18. (AP)— Misery and death rode here and there and discomfort went everywhere today on the crest of one of the most extensive cold waves in history.

North, south, east and west experienced either blinding blizzard, chilling wind or temperatures shrunken to almost unbearable depths.

Four Lives Taken

Two persons died in Ohio and two in Chicago, due to the extreme cold and death counted 14 others in blizzard-ridden southwest states.

Temperatures reaching 14 degrees below zero early today sharpened the misery in the flooded areas of Indiana, Missouri, Illinois and Arkansas. The homeless families along the St. Francis river in southern Missouri and northern Arkansas reached 700 and the number was growing as the levee broke again at Hitts ferry, near Holcomb, Mo. Still further breaks were predicted by engineers.

Areas Threatened

New areas were threatened in the lower Mississippi valley as the Arkansas, Mississippi and White rivers surged against their levees.

Reports from the banks of the Wabash indicated that stream had finished its rampage. The Red Cross was rushing workers to Vincennes to alleviate the misery left in its wake.

Hope for relief from the cold was blowing across the middle west with a southwest wind.

Reparations Plan Waits Acceptance

Final Wiping Out Of Old Problems Now Depends On Acceptance Of Protocol; Creditors Agree

THE HAGUE, Jan. 18. (AP)—Final wiping off of the world war reparations problem from the slate of European diplomacy depended tonight upon acceptance of the protocol to which the principal creditor powers already have agreed.

Some of the smaller powers have not yet solved the eastern reparations problem, but their difficulties were believed to be only temporary.

In any case, the leading powers have made all plans to sign the protocol Monday morning. It will put into effect the Young plan for reparations settlement and establish the International Bank at Basle which hereafter will handle transmission of the German payments on a pure economic basis. Quite apart from the political considerations which have dominated reparations in the past.

Several of the leading delegates have left the Hague and as soon as signature is completed the rest are expected to journey home.

Texas Takes Toll Of Severest Cold Wave Since 1899

Blizzard Claims Two Lives, Great Livestock Losses

Grain Crops Hurt, Roads Blocked In Panhandle As Norther Sweeps Section: Relief Given Saturday

(By Associated Press)

Texas Saturday took toll of the most severe cold wave this Southern State has known since 1899.

At least two deaths, several critically ill from exposure, hundreds of cattle frozen to death, garden truck crops and citrus fruits damaged in the Rio Grande Valley, grain crops hurt, roads blocked by snow in the Panhandle, snapped telephone circuits, and delayed traffic over the state were disclosed in a preliminary checkup.

Deaths of J. A. Pars from automobile injuries and exposure, and J. E. King, 81, who froze to death in his cabin in the Texas Panhandle, previously were reported.

Infant Near Frozen.

A five-weeks-old infant came near freezing to death at his home in Nacogdoches this morning. He had kicked off his covers. When his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Whitaker, went to the baby's room, he was still from the cold, and was revived only after a physician had worked over him for an hour.

Death from freezing or starvation faced several families who went to Shamrock in hopes of obtaining work, but found none.

Firemen in Houston, fighting a blaze in near-zero weather, had to be thawed out. Their clothes were frozen to them. A railroad lineman was in a critical condition at Wortham after working all night repairing lines in sub-zero temperatures. A negro at Corsicana was critically ill from exposure, paralyzed from the waist down.

No Accidents.

Unlike previous cold spells of the winter, no fatal automobile accidents were reported. Precipitation was slight except in the Panhandle, where snow which has covered the ground for several days was piled high in drifts. This section, according to advices from the highway commission, had almost impassable roads.

Cattle losses were reported from points as widely separated as Wichita Falls, Beaumont and Abilene, but their extent was not ascertained. Neither was the exact amount of damage done to Rio Grande Valley truck gardens known, although the loss was believed great, especially to the tomato and cabbage crops. Gardeners said, however, that all frozen crops would be replanted in time for the spring market. The citrus belt suffered some damage to fruit still on trees, but unless another cold wave hits the section Saturday night the loss was expected to be nominal.

Water Frozen.

One of the unusual phenomenom of the cold was the freezing of many bodies of water which had never been frozen before. The waters of Galveston and San Jacinto Bays were frozen several hundred feet along the edges and great slabs of ice were in the channels.

Sub-zero and near-zero weather prevailed over nearly all Northern and Central Texas Saturday morning, and hard freezes extended into the southernmost reaches of the state.

While the Panhandle readings, in far Northwest Texas were lowest, the below-zero reports came from Fort Worth, Dallas and other more southern cities. The lowest unofficial reading was 10 below, and the lowest official eight below, both in the Panhandle.

Skies were clear Saturday, however, and temperatures ascended almost as fast as they had fallen. Relief was promised for northern areas Sunday and Monday.

Minimum temperatures included: Cuero 10 minus; Lufkin 2 minus; Kerrville 1 plus; McKinney 1 minus; Lonview 4 minus; Tyler 4 minus; Texarkana 3 minus; Paris 5 minus; Hillsboro 1 minus; Jefferson 6 minus; Victoria 9 plus; Uvalde 13 plus; Coleman 5 minus; Carthage 4 minus.

BROWNSVILLE, Jan. 18. (AP) — Freezing weather prevailed in this section again tonight after the lowest temperature—24 degrees—in 11 years was recorded last night.

The mercury climbed to 36 degrees during the day, but after nightfall it had slipped to two degrees below the freezing point.

No estimate of crop damages had been made. Growers were of the opinion that much of the fruit and some of the truck plants might have escaped, but they feared great damage should the temperature drop to a lower level tonight.

The 24 degrees last night was the lowest registered in this section since 1918. The all-time valley record was marked up in 1911 when the temperature was 18 degrees.

CHILDRESS, Jan. 18. (AP)—As unofficial reports indicated a new record temperature of 13 degrees below zero here, early today, traffic on highways out of the city was blocked by snow drifts, trains were running behind schedule and 75 automobiles were stalled by freezing weather on highway No. 5 east of Childress. Charitable organizations were working overtime caring for needy but sunshine during the day gave hope for abatement of severe cold.

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 18. (AP) — Although a break in sub-zero temperatures today brought some relief to much of the Southwest and Southern mountain area, the icy hand of winter, which has exacted a toll of nearly a score of lives and caused untold suffering, still maintains its grip.

Only the extreme cold which has shattered records of long standing in Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas and other states, spread to parts of the south and east, a shivering citizenry struggled to restore normal transportation and communication.

Government weather forecasts offered little consolation to most of the storm ravaged area. "Continued cold" was the prediction for next week in the Upper Mississippi and Lower Missouri Valleys, the northern and central great plains, and the region of the Great Lakes.

The ash blonde is one of the most exquisite types of women that exists in this world. To us in France, her pale, radiant beauty is an exotic type that speaks of the far north—the snow of Sweden, the white glimmer of the midnight sun, the courage that dwells in northern races. The fog shrouded mystery that hangs over the shores of the Baltic sea is hers. Her eyes are the color of the shadows in icebergs. Her shoulders are like snow and her cheeks are like snow in the sunset.

In America and England the pale ash blonde is far more frequently seen than in France. Strains of north European blood which have come direct from generations of Viking ancestors are always responsible for the pale haired ruddy blonde. Yet, however numerous the ash blonde type may be, she is always tremendously attractive. Often beautiful of feature and of figure, her coloring alone signals her out for admiration. The exquisite charm of this coloring must guide her in her choice of make-up and of dress.

The ash blonde, depending on her stature, runs the risk of being too pronounced in one way or another. If she is tall and muscular she may appear too perfectly a Valkyrie, reminding one of the sturdy northern maidens who think nothing of doing 50 mile a day on skiis and then coming home to cook supper with her cheeks fiery red from the tingling contact with snow-dryed air.

Overstrong Woman Repellant

The strong, able sportswoman is very admirable, but there is such a thing as looking too strong—it repels certain men. Therefore the tall ash blonde will do well to avoid an over-use of cosmetics and will, on the other hand, stress the artificial refinements of make-up and dress. A black evening dress which I have especially designed to suit this type of woman is pictured.

The tiny, fragile ash blonde, on the other hand, should avoid the obviously artificial as much as possible. Her figure and her coloring already suggest the Dresden china shepherdess, and this style is rather unduly sentimental for our modern age. Women who know how to preserve their individual charm and yet submit it to the style of dress, make-up and bearing which makes modern smartness, are the most admired, and they are always the cleverest. Any woman who is born beautiful needs not mind to make her sweet to look at. But the woman, be she homely or pretty, who can achieve the smartness of the current season and the current minute, has real wit.

Consequently, the Dresden shepherdess girl makes herself more piquant by avoiding excessive cosmetics, robes of style and all the obvious artifices that will make her appear eighteenth century.

It is curious, is it not, that the size of women has so much influence on their coloring? This is true because style, like psychology, is a matter of association. The Viking type and the Dresden china type carry such different associations that though their coloring is identical, they must take very different means of achieving the modern smartness which is called style.

Telephone lines are being introduced into many parts of rural Ireland.

The ash blonde is one of the most exquisite types of women, according to Lucien Lelong. The tall woman of this type must be careful of her make-up and dress so as not to stress her height and apparent strength. The tiny, fragile ash blonde with the coloring of a Dresden china shepherdess, should avoid the too sentimental in dress and strive for smartness.

Ten Years of the League

The moot question of whether or not the Geneva assembly of nations has justified its creation and annual expenses of five million dollars is here answered through a simple summary of just what supporters of the league claim it has accomplished since its first meeting at Paris in 1920

By RAYMOND LESLIE BUELL

Research Director, Foreign Policy Association

THIS month peoples in every country of the world are celebrating the tenth birthday of the League of Nations.

This child was born of the famous treaties of peace drawn up at the close of the World War. At that time the world was in the depth of black despair. Nations had fought each other for four long years. While the Allies finally won the war it was a pyrrhic victory. Their blood had been shed and their fortune had been expended to nearly as great an extent as in the case of the Central Powers.

It was natural, human nature being what it is, that the Allied governments should have forgotten about all of the fine ideals for which they had been supposedly fighting. And when the peace conference came, they attempted to wreak revenge upon the German people and to walk off with as much lucre as they could conveniently carry.

Their demands were resisted by a president of the United States, Woodrow Wilson by name. And while he finally accepted many vindictive provisions in the peace treaties, it was only on condition that an organization, called the League of Nations, should be established.

This League would, in the eyes of President Wilson, gradually remove the defects of the peace treaties, gradually bring together the enemies of the World War—gradually build up a world community in which nations would work for a common good.

In Wilson's view, the vindictive provisions of the peace treaty were to be temporary; but the processes of international co-operation, embodied in the League of Nations, were to be permanent.

THE League of Nations was officially born on the 10th of January, 1920. Only 24 nations were present at the birth. The representatives of these nations were good but unimportant men. No government then took the League seriously. Many people thought the child would soon die.

The father of the child, the United States, had disowned its offspring—the League was a foundling upon the doorstep of Europe.

During the first few years a number of governments failed to pay their dues and the League nearly went bankrupt. It did not even have enough money to print the records of some of its most important committees. It is needless to add that when the League was first established, none of the defeated powers was invited to become a member.

During the last 10 years, the League has thrown off its swaddling clothes. And although 10 years is not a long time, today the League has nearly become a man. Its membership has grown until it now includes 54 states located in every corner of the world.

It is a mistake to think of the League as a European organization, since 29 of its members consist of non-European states.

The cosmopolitanism of the League is shown by the fact that the president of the Council today is a Persian—His Highness, Mohammed Ali Khan Faroughi. The president of the last Assembly was a distinguished Latin-American diplomat, Dr. Guerrero of Salvador.

The growing importance of the League is also shown by the fact that whereas governments originally sent comparatively obscure men to the meetings at Geneva, today these governments send their most distinguished representatives. Thus 22 out of the 26 foreign ministers of Europe and seven prime ministers, including Ramsay MacDonald, were present at the last Assembly.

Most important of all, the League now includes those countries defeated in the last war. Germany was admitted in 1926, and since then has been as active as any other state in the world in advancing the interests of peace.

WHAT do these men do at Geneva? In other words, how is the League organized, and what are its objects?

The largest wheel in the League machine is the Assembly, which consists of representatives of every member state. This body meets every September at Geneva.

Its duties are many. It supervises the work of all the other organizations of the League, and it discusses any question affecting the peace of the world.

In some ways, the Assembly resembles the World Parliament of which philosophers and poets have dreamed in the past. Through its annual meetings several hundred of the most important political and intellectual people from nearly every country in the world come into personal contact at Geneva.

One of the greatest functions of the Assembly is that it helps one nation to understand each other by creating personal contacts. About 400 journalists representing important papers from all over the world, including the United States, follow in detail the debates at Geneva. When a statesman speaks at the Assembly, he knows that he has a world audience. Simply as a forum for discussion, the Assembly has a powerful educational influence upon world opinion.

The second body of the League, smaller in membership and more active when it comes to administrative detail, is the Council.

This body now consists of 14 members: France, Germany, Great Britain, Italy and Japan are permanent members, and nine other members are chosen every three years by the Assembly.

The Council hereafter will meet three times a year; while special sessions may be called overnight. If the League is compared to a corporation, the Assembly may be said to be the annual meeting of the stockholders, while the Council is the Board of Directors.

Underneath the Council are a host of committees and technical organizations.

Thus there is an organization for Communication and Transit whose job is to make it easy to travel from one country to another. There is a Health organization which is working out international means for fighting disease, especially epidemics.

There is the Economic and Financial Organization which has arranged loans which have rescued Austria and Hungary from bankruptcy and which has brought substantial aid to other states, such as Bulgaria and Greece.

There is an important commission on Mandates which watches over the administration of 14 different areas taken from Germany and Turkey. The purpose of this commission is to see that native interests in these various territories are placed foremost.

THERE is a commission on opium, which is trying to stop the illicit "dope" habit. There is a White Slave Commission which has revealed appalling conditions in regard to the traffic in prostitutes in various parts of the world. There has been also a commission on the Black Slave Traffic, which is working hard to bring an end to slavery in Africa. We should not, moreover, forget that a League Commission has during the last 10 years been governing the Saar Territory, and that a League commissioner has been in charge of the port of Danzig.

Finally mention should be made of the League Secretariat. This is an international civil service, composed of about 600 officials from 36 nationalities. These people are permanent employes of the League. Their job is to keep the whole League machinery oiled.

Alongside of the League of Nations there has also grown up during the last 10 years a World Court located at the Hague, and the International Labor Office, located near the League Secretariat at Geneva. The latter organization brings together representatives of employers and employes, with the purpose of improving world labor conditions. As a result of the efforts of this office, a number of important international labor treaties have been made.

HOW much does it cost to run this organization? The paltry sum of $5,000,000 a year. This is the price of one-fortieth of a battleship—the cost of a single submarine. As the above figures show, the way of peace is the only real way of economy.

Such are the manifold organizations which have come into existence during the first 10 years of the League of Nations. Their work is all tied together by the Council and by the Assembly. But the League of Nations is not a superstate. Except in minor matters, no action of the Assembly or Council may bind any government without its consent.

How cartoonists in four European nations view the League. . . . A Berlin newspaper sees it as a nutcracker operated by a complaining Angel of Peace. . . . "It can crack every nut except disarmament."

An English lampoon . . . shows Uncle Sam and Soviet Russia, lone League holdouts, as wall flowers at the League of Nations ball.

A cynical Italian view of internationalism. . . . "While they speak of peace above board at Geneva, under the table they constantly kick one another."

The French press generally opposed Germany's entry into the League. . . . "Can she get in without upsetting the boat?" asked the cartoon below in Le Petit Provencal.

BUT the most important and controversial disputes are "political." And these disputes are placed before the League Council.

An example of how the Council acts is as follows:

In October, 1925, a Greek soldier was killed by a Bulgarian sentry. Greece started to march an army into Bulgaria. There was a danger that a new Balkan war would break out. Instead of resisting invasion, Bulgaria sent a telegram to the League of Nations, asking for help.

The League Council hurriedly met in Paris and at once sent telegrams to Greece and Bulgaria to stop fighting, and to withdraw their troops from the frontier. These governments both agreed to do so, and a commission of military officers, appointed by the League Council, investigated the situation and reported that the promise had been kept.

Having thus induced these two states to stop fighting, the Council then proceeded to decide who had been responsible for the fighting. For this purpose it sent another commission to investigate the affair on the spot. This commission after careful inquiry ruled that Greece had been the aggressor and should pay damages to Bulgaria—and Greece loyally paid the bill. Altogether the Council by such procedure has been successful in preventing half a dozen wars from breaking out. An imposing record for so short a time as 10 years.

While these activities in preventing states from going to war are important, the more fundamental, if more quiet and more difficult activities of the League, relate to removing the underlying causes of disputes.

Why is it that nations fight? Do they fight for the fun of it, or do they fight because they believe some vital interest is at stake?

If you study the great wars of history, you will find that nations do not fight for the fun of it, but they fight in order to safeguard what they regard to be national welfare and independence.

The League is simply a body of nations working together to promote common ends by co-operative means. The League has no flag; it has no army; it has no power to collect any taxes. It is just a group of the governments of the world who come together to do things which they could not do separately. No state is obliged to join the League; and any state may resign from it simply by giving two years' notice.

These different organizations of the League have two main purposes: one is to settle disputes peacefully which otherwise might lead to war; the second is to remove underlying causes of disputes which have led to international troubles in the past.

Members of the League take an oath that when they become engaged in a quarrel they will not go to war, but will send their quarrel either to the World Court or to the League Council. It is generally recognized, however, that the World Court must confine itself to legal questions—to disputes in which some principle of international law is involved.

THE great causes of war today are disputes arising out of economic questions, such as tariffs, debts, struggles for foreign markets and concessions; of the mistreatment of foreigners and minorities, of unjust boundary lines, and of armaments.

If the League of Nations is to succeed in its task of securing world peace, all these problems must be tackled and they must be solved. In its early years the League steered clear of controversial issues. It was not strong enough to intervene, for example, between Germany and the Allies in their dispute over reparations.

Until 1926 at any rate, the League was under control of the Allied powers who were interested primarily in maintaining the status quo established in 1919. Nevertheless within recent years the League has proved more active in its desire to remove the underlying causes of war.

Through its work in the financial reconstruction of Austria and Hungary, the League has brought about a vast improvement in the political conditions of Central Europe. It has been the existence of the League which has made possible the gradual decline of the hatred between France and Germany. The League held an important economic conference in 1927 and it has called another such conference for 1930.

Generally speaking, the League has already accomplished a great deal in the formulation of new international law. Under its auspices about 75 new treaties have been signed regulating the conduct of nations.

The extent of the work of the Council may be indicated by the fact that during its first 53 sessions it transacted 2400 items of business. For the first time in history, we have continuously functioning international machinery out of which a world conscience may gradually be evolved.

UPON the tenth birthday of this unique international institution it should be pointed out that the League has not been the failure predicted for it by its enemies, nor has the League achieved as many successes as its friends have desired.

Nevertheless, during these first 10 years the League has solidly established itself as a factor in international life. As one important statesman said the other day, if this League were to be destroyed, the nations would immediately have to construct another.

As a result of the conference system established by the League, the habit of holding discussions has gradually come to take the place of the old habit of sending ultimatums. As a result of these discussions, the foundations are being laid for the establishment of an international society from which war will be definitely banned. This society has not yet arrived. But its foundations have been laid during the last 10 years. The erection of the superstructure is the task of the future.

HERE, briefly and in tabulated form, are some of the more important things that have been accomplished by the League during its first 10 years:

1. Brought about the establishment of the World Court, 1920.
2. Prevented possible war between Sweden and Finland over the Aaland Islands, 1920.
3. Settled disputes between the Allies and Germany over Upper Silesia and Memel, 1922.
4. Made Italy evacuate Corfu, 1923.
5. Prevented Poland and Lithuania from going to war over Vilna.
6. Stopped the war between Greece and Bulgaria, 1925.
7. Co-operated with the Pan-American Arbitration Conference in stopping a war between Bolivia and Paraguay, 1929.
8. Saved Hungary and Austria from bankruptcy, 1922-23.
9. Stopped the sufferings of millions of refugees and provided them with work.
10. Fought epidemics and promoted health around the world.
11. Established and supervised the mandate system of ruling primitive peoples.
12. Organized international economic conference, 1927.
13. Made treaties to improve labor conditions around the world.
14. Made other treaties to facilitate travel between countries.
15. Started the codification of international law.
16. Organized a campaign against slavery and forced labor.
17. Improved the condition of European minorities.
18. Published about 1800 treaties, thus doing away with secret treaties.

THE two great world powers who do not belong to the League today are Soviet Russia and the United States. Both of these governments have, however, come to cooperate whole-heartedly with the League of Nations in many of its activities.

As long as the Communist party is in control in Moscow, no one may predict whether or not Russia will eventually enter the League upon the basis of the capitalist powers.

There are, however, many students who believe that the United States sooner or later will become an "associate" member of the League; that is, the United States will eventually send representatives to the Assembly and the Council to aid these bodies in conciliating disputes which threaten to violate the anti-war pact; and also to participate in the formulation of new international law.

When another birthday of the League rolls around, it may be that this sort of relationship between the United States and the League will have been established. If this prophecy proves true, the strength of the international movement to ban war from the earth will have been immeasurably strengthened.

Local Store Stock Damaged by Water

Display windows of McWhorter-Arnett clothing store, formerly McWhorter-Roberds, reflected the chilly atmosphere of winter Saturday.
A broken water pipe created the display.
Water leaked through the ceiling into the display window, after contents had frozen and had broken a pipe in an office over the clothing store. Members of the clothing store were summoned at 1:30 o'clock Saturday morning to remove clothing from the windows, after considerable damage had resulted.

Week-End Session Dullest Of Entire Season In Cotton

Price Fluctuations Confined To Narrow Limits As Disposition To Trade Is Light On Saturday

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 18. (AP) — The short week-end session in the cotton market proved to be about the dullest of the season with no disposition to trade and price fluctuations confined to very narrow limits. The trend was slightly downward, due more to lack of buying support than any other cause. Liverpool came in 7 to 8 points lower than due and was responsible for the opening decline of 5 to 7 points. After the start fluctuations were confined to 3 to 5 points and at the lowest prices were 7 to 9 points under the previous close. There was a slight rally at the end on a little week-end covering. March after trading down to 17.15, down 7 points, closed at 17.16, or 4 points net lower for the day. The general market closed steady at net declines of 4 to 6 points.

Trading Confined.

Trading at the opening was confined to March and May. March gradually eased off to 17.13 and May to 17.36, or 7 to 8 points below the previous close. Lack of support and absence of trading led to moderate liquidation.

In the second hour the market ruled dull but fairly steady and near the end prices recovered slightly on some week-end covering. March trading up to 17.17 and May to 17.41, or 4 to 5 points up from the lows. March closed at 17.16 and May at 17.39, or 4 to 6 points net lower. The fact that the total ginning prior to January 16 will be published next week discouraged all disposition to trade.

Cotton Inactive On Saturday

NEW YORK, Jan. 18. (AP)—Cotton was inactive today and prices were lower largely in response to easier Liverpool cables which resulted in a moderate amount of local liquidation. March contracts declined to 17.20 and closed with a slight rally at 17.31 with the general market closing quiet at 3 to 9 points net lower.

The opening was steady at 6 to 10 points lower and after showing partial further losses of 1 to 2 points prices rallied at one time 6 to 7 points from the lowest on local covering and a little trade buying. The weather news attracted unusual attention for this time of the year, as the map showed the lowest temperatures over the central and southwestern belt experienced in the memory of many of the oldest cotton traders, sub-zero weather being reported in portions of Texas and Arkansas, with zero in Louisiana and 14 to 20 above on the Gulf coast.

REVIVALS PLANNED

Curtailed Hog Receipts Prompt 25 to 60 Cent Upturn in Livestock Market

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 18. (AP)—(U. S. D. A.)— Curtailed hog receipts around the eleven-market circuit this week prompted a 25 to 60c upturn in prices with most points reporting closing prices as high or higher than any time this season. Total offerings were around 592,600, a decrease of 95,000 from last week and 201,000 short of the corresponding period a year ago.

The sheep supply approximated 274,691 against 280,786 last week and 299,198 a year ago. Fat lambs showed losses of 50c to $1 as compared with a week ago. Trade on matured classes was somewhat uneven.

Cattle trade was marked by material price declines on most all-killing classes except highly finished yearlings, low grade cows and bulls. The in-between grades of beef steers and yearlings slumped 50c or more at most points. Fat she stock generally shared this break on steers. Aggregate receipts were estimated at 216,200, 15,500 heavier than last week and 9,000 short of the same week a year ago.

CONTROVERSY LOOMS

Legislators Are Expected To Oppose Pen Location

AUSTIN, Jan. 18. (AP)—A poll of the few legislators who had arrived tonight in response to the call of Governor Moody for a special session of the legislature to consider prison concentration and relocation indicated that there would be an evenly fought controversy over the proposal to place the prison near Austin.

The majority of the prison centralization commission, created by the legislature, to make a survey and submit recommendations, proposes to centralize the penitentiary within 20 miles of Austin on a site of 1,000 acres. There are two minority reports, one suggesting rehabilitation of the present walls at Huntsville and another proposing a central site on the Imperial state farm near Houston.

Fresh Upturn In Wheat Price Sat.

New Ammunition Touches Off By Cooperative Auxiliary Of Federal Farm Board Saturday

CHICAGO, Jan. 18. (AP)—Touching off new ammunition, the cooperative auxiliaries of the federal farm board succeeded quickly today in bringing about a fresh upturn in wheat values. Notice that the National Grain corporation would pay 2c a bushel more than previously for rural arrivals of No. 1 and No. 2 hard wheat at Chicago did the work. Regardless of total absence of export business today in wheat from North America, the Chicago market for wheat future deliveries advanced with considerable force, and closed at nearly the day's top level.

Wheat closed unsettled 1-2c to 7-8c a 1c higher, corn 1-4c to 1-2c up, oats 1-8c to 1-4c advance and provisions showing a rise of 5 to 12c.

Price upturns here today in the wheat pit took effect despite a stationary market at Liverpool as well as laggard action at times in Winnipeg, and notwithstanding also a sharp break at Buenos Aires.

Corn and oats were strengthened not only by the upward trend of wheat but also by announcement that the National Grain corporation would commence to purchase corn at northwestern markets in the next few days.

Provisions paralleled upturns in the value of hogs.

Dr. Arnold undertook a post mortem examination of the bird several days ago. Psittacosis has caused several deaths in eastern cities recently.

Profit Taking Is Aftermath Of New Market Onslaught

Bear Forces Hammer Stock Exchange For Two Full Sessions; Prices Take Rebound After Drop

By CLAUDE A. JAGGER
Associated Press Financial Writer

NEW YORK, Jan. 18. (AP)—The bear crowd, after hammering at the stock market for two full sessions, hurried to take their rather meagre profits in the last hour of trading today, after a fresh onslaught during the early transactions. Prices dropped moderately, only to rebound under the influence of short covering, and closed irregularly higher.

The price movement remained narrow and unimpressive. Todays price index of 99 leading stocks showed a gain of only 6-10 of one point over yesterday.

Announcement of the filing of a receivership petition for Fox Film appeared to give the signal for the covering movement. This unsettling development had been expected for more than a week, and with the bad news out of the way, bears withdrew. Fox Film dropped 4 3-4 points to 18, then quickly rallied, closing at 20 5-8.

Road Bonds

partment toward initiating work in this county is viewed here as highly favorable recognition of the dill and Slaton, or on Highway 9, be igent efforts employed in Lubbock county for the hard-surface projects.

Guy R. Johnson, recently appointed resident engineer during construction work in this county, will arrive in Lubbock February 1. He will be accompanied by a staff of assistants.

The State and Federal departments will require a 100-foot right-of-way on all highways where aid will be given, with the possible exception of the route to Slaton. A problem which can hardly be remedied faces the highway officials on Highway 7, south of Lubbock, due to the fact that a gas line runs parallel with the road on one side and the Santa Fe railroad on the other, limiting the project to an 80-foot right-of-way. In the event that the highway departments insist upon creation of the 100-foot right-of-way on this strip it would require the removal of the gas line 20 feet from its present location. Such a situation will be probably not necessary, county officials say.

40-Year Serial Plan

The $300,000 in bonds will be issued on the 40-year serial plan, bearing 5 per cent interest, and payable as follows: $4,000 for each of the years 1931, 1932, 1933, 1934 and 1935; $5,000 for each of the years 1936, 1937, 1938, 1939 and 1940; $6,000 for each of the years 1941, 1942, 1943, 1944 and 1945; $7,000 for each of the years 1946, 1947, 1948, 1949 and 1950; $8,000 for each of the years 1951, 1952, 1953, 1954 and 1955; $9,000 for each of the years 1956, 1957, 1958, 1959 and 1960; $10,000 for each of the year 1961, 1962, 1963, 1964 and 1965; $11,000 for each of the years 1966, 1967, 1968, 1969, 1970.

Amounts to be expended on highways out of the aggregate bond issue are as follows:

State highway 7, from Hockley county line by Shallowater, Lubbock and Slaton to the South line of Lubbock county, $325,000.

State highway 9, from Lynn county line by Woodrow and Lubbock to Abernathy, $274,000.

State highway 53, from Crosby county line by Idalou and Lubbock and Wolfforth to Hockley line $370,000.

The above amounts represent only one-third of the total road improvement expenditure to be made in this county, as figured by the state highway department engineer, necessary to pave all excepting 53 southwest, and one-half of that necessary to pave that portion of this highway. The state and federal governments are to pay the remaining two-thirds.

shot Tate's son.

Tate and G. C. Bohannan met in front of the Citizens' bank. Their argument progressed into a fight. In the scuffle Tate drew his pistol and shot Bohannan three times.

Bohannan slumped to the sidewalk, dead. Tate ran inside the bank pursued by Carl and John Bohannan who were attracted by the shots. Tate dived inside an open vault for protection.

Charged Vault

Carl and John charged the bank vault. Tate from his steel refuge there opened fire and two shots felled Carl Bohannan. Persons in the bank seized John Bohannan and held him. Meanwhile, outside the bank, Carsey Bohannan, another brother, had heard of the shooting. He tore through a crowd surrounding his father's body and rushed inside of the bank. He carried a rifle and said he was going after Tate.

Several persons in the crowd, however, overpowered him.

Carl Bohannan died a few minutes later.

An inquest will be held Sunday morning.

Carl Bohannan carried a pistol, it was learned, but did not draw it in the bank. It was found in his coat pocket after his death. Louis, the brother whose fingers were shot off by Tate, and Reuben Bohannan also were in Clovis at the time of the killings, and Virgil, another brother, lives in Clovis.

Brazil now has 22 theatres equipped for talkies.

Mayfield

location for the construction of a modern prison system can be found on state-owned lands, yet as governor of Texas I would not assume a 'rule or ruin' attitude on the matter. I would be willing to locate the penitentiary system wherever the combined wisdom of the people of Texas, speaking through their chosen representatives, say it should be located, provided the legislature adjusts our tax laws so that those interests now escaping taxation in the state woud be made to pay their proper portion of state taxes.

"If the penitentiary system is moved, the purchase of additional lands, together with the construction of a modern prison system, will cost between $5,000,000 and $10,000,000. Let those who favor this proposition tell the taxpayers of the state where and how this money will be secured."

Mayfield opposes a state-wide bond issue for highway construction, but said a "correlated system of highways, constructed at the earliest date and at the lowest cost, is imperative."

"The only way this can be done," he said, "is for the state to construct and maintain with state funds all designated state highways, independent of county aid, leaving to the counties the construction and maintenance of all lateral roads."

Comig out for an elective highway commission, he said "the responsibility of discharging the affairs of such a department should not travel through the governor's office, but should go direct to the people."

He pointed out that the highway commission has upon its payroll something like 5,500 employes, "which is over five times as many as are employed in all other departments of the government combined."

"The elective franchise is the surest safeguard to prevent the office of highway commissioner from being subjected to corrupting and intimidating influences," Mayfield said. "The glory of the Texas constitution has been that it repudiates the false theory that the people are not capable of electing their officers. This government was made by the people and it is theirs. Why not let them rule?"

Saying that "it is too early to pronounce the federal farm board a failure," he promised that if it should fail "to meet the situation" he would if elected governor, "appeal to the agencies of the entire cotton growing section in the early spring of next year to enlist in the fight for economic justice and freedom.

"As governor of the state that produces over one-third of the cotton of the entire county. I would call a conference of the governors, commissioners of agriculture, representative farmers, business men and bankers of the cotton-growing state and agree on uniform legislation for adoption by the states producing cotton, that would liberate our cotton farmers from the shackles of economic slavery and serfdom," Mayfield said.

W. Gregory Hatcher Outlines Platform

DALLAS, Jan. 18. (AP)—W. Gregory Hatcher, state treasurer and candidate for the democratic nomination for Governor, issued a statement today containing a preliminary outline of his platform and a plea to party votes to support office seekers on "issues, not isms."

Hatcher said his platform would contain, among other things, planks favoring the abolishing of unnecessary jobs, board and bureaus and reducing state expense to a minimum; increasing enforcement of all laws on the statute books, particularly those relating to murder, bootlegging and violation of the anti-trust laws; increasing the efficiency of state-supported institutions, with ample appropriations for their conduct; and a comprehensive system of state-designated highways on the pay-as-you-go plan, with funds received from the gasoline tax.

Opposes Bond Issue

He said he was unalterably opposed to the $350,000,000 bond issue plan.

In regard to "issues and isms" Mr. Hatcher's statement said:

"The people of Texas have a right to expect a candidate for governo rto run for office on issues and not isms. Six years ago Ku Kluxism took the place of issues and Ferguson was elected in preference to Robertsonism. Four years ago Fergusonism took the place of issues and Moody was elected. Two years ago Texas politics was under the pall of the national election and prohibition and religion were the isms that took the place of issues. For 1930 two candidates already have announced for governor, one for, the other against, Tammanyism, endeavoring to make this take the place of issues. And how to cap the climax, rumor has it (and it is said to be on mighty good authority) that Governor Dan Moody and former Givbrnor James E. Ferguson are preparing to enter the race, that time with Ferguson turning the tables on Moody in an endeavor to make Moodyism the issue. I believe the voters are ready for a new deal, and that important questions should take the place of isms in selection of state officials."

Delegates from O'Donnell included G. S. Dowell, secretary of the O'Donnell chamber of commerce and T. J. Yandell, Lynn county commissioner.

Delegates from Lubbock included B. Sherrod, J. J. Clements and Garnet Reeves.

B. Howard and Mrs. R. B. Boren. J. H. Flanagin and I. B. Brooks are out for sheriff and tax collector. Percy Estes is seeking re-election as tax assessor while J. A. Maynard and F. J. Axe oppose each other in the commissioners race for precinct 2. J. G. Davis has no opponent for commissioner of precinct 3 in that county. Other officers have not announced.

In Lamb county, County Treasurer M. M. Brittain, County Sheriff J. L. Irvin, County-District Clerk A. H. McGavock and Commissioner No. 2 C. A. Daniel are unopposed for re-election. Roy Gilbert and Edwin N. Ray are seeking the county tax assessor's post.

Competition In Race.

Floyd county's race has already assumed competitive attitudes in nearly every candidacy. Roy O'Brien is opposing T. P. Guimarin for re-election as district clerk, F. N. Clark seeks to oust P. G. Stegall as sheriff and tax collector while three are seeking the county superintendent's office, now occupied by Price Scott, who has announced again. They are: J. B. Allen, Miss Ola Hanna and George Gilpin.

Joe M. Day and A. A. Tubbs oppose each other in the race for county tax assessor while G. M. Meredith and J. G. Wood are opponents for the tax collector's post. Joe P. Hart and George K. Fawyer seek the precinct 4 post while A. J. Cooper, E. R. Harris, T. Z. Reed, J. Paul Sils and J. F. Dollar are out for commissioner of precinct 2. M. H. Taylor is unopposed for commissioner of precinct 3. Maud Derrick, county treasurer; County Judge Wm. McGehee and County Clerk Tom W. Deen are unopposed.

Sheriff J. G. Montgomery of Cochran county is opposed in his race for re-election by Lee W. Johnson and John L. Scott. Lee Cooper, W. A. Wartes are seeking the county tax assessor's post, while A. C. Hooper, Mrs. H. A. Beaty, Mrs. Lillie Scott, Miss Ellen Gill and J. P. Taylor are out after the county treasurer's office. R. E. Rose, J. R. Ward and W. A. Herridge are opponents for the commissioner's office of precinct one.

In Lynn county, only two offices have opponents. They are T. W Brown and A. I. Thomas for tax assessor and B. L. Parker and S. W. Sanford seek the sheriff's job. District Judge Gordon McGuire, District Attorney T. L. Price, County Judge G. C. Grider, County-District Clerk Truett Smith, County Attorney G. H. Nelson, County Superintendent H. P. Caveness and County Treasurer Viola Ellis are all unopposed for re-election.

Dawson county's campaign is rather active with several offices having a number of candidates. Owen C. Taylor and Miss Viola Thurston are opponents for county clerk; W. F. Morris, R. L. Barrett, Gus Ragsdale, O. H. Preston and Byron Southard seek the county tax assessor's post; while four men, M. Q. Martin, E. B. Warren, Dr. C. F. Warnick and R. L. Meyers are out for mayor of Lamesa.

County Sheriff A. M. Bennett, School Superintendent W. T. Webb, County Treasurer Mattir Herndon, County Attorney A. W. Gibson are unopposed for re-election. Six men, J. R. Williams, S. D. Austin, Jud Watson, Henry J. Price, M. Hatch and W. L. Marr are out for commissioners of the city of Lamesa.

In Crosby county not a single opponent has appeared in any race up to date.

Morton C. C.

district has added 56 new pupils since the first of January, making a total of 456 students enrolled in this district. In 1923 there were only five school children in the county. There is not a frame school house in Cochran county and no school house that cost under $15,000, the five schools being at Morton, Bledsoe, Whiteface, Lehman and Neely Ward. The Morton schools include a high school and grammar, both built of brick, fire-proof throughout, steam heated, electric lights, valued at $165,000.

Forty-two of the 71 farmers who have bought farms in Cochran county within a radius of five miles of Morton, during the past fall and winter have moved onto them and are now making farm improvements and preparing to put in this year's crop. Approximately 125 new farm families will be settled on un-broke land in this county by April 1. These are coming from Eastern and Central Texas and southwestern Oklahoma.

Cochran county bears the distinction of being the baby county of Texas, having been organized in 1923. Its courthouse, costing $160,000, is one of the best on the Plains.

Indications are that a new mail route will soon be established from Morton to Lehman, which will meet the train westbound, giving daily mail service from Lubbock. At present mail goes to Littlefield and in order to get mail from Morton to Lehman, only nine miles south, the mail is carried through five counties, through Lamb, Bailey, Lubbock, Hockley and back into Cochran, requiring three days to make the journey.

The bus line from Lubbock to Levelland is said to be planning to extend their regular route to Morton, giving round trip daily mail between these points.

Work in both Texas and New Mexico is progressing on the route from Lubbock to Portales and Elida, N. M., via Morton, a distance of 125 miles.

SENTENCED TO LIVE

CHICAGO, Jan. 18. (AP)—Samuel Howard Door tonight was found guilty of the murder of William O'Brien, husband of his alleged paramour, and sentenced to life imprisonment.

The assistant stationmaster at the Gare de l'Est in Paris recently found a bundle of notes worth 20,000 francs, and when the owner, in claiming the money, offered a reward of 10 francs, it was promptly declined.

outside world again I will never come back to such a place."

"But Mrs. Tucker," she was asked, "suppose the jury finds you guilty and sentences you to the pen for a period of three, four or even five years?"

Never Go To Pen

"I will never go to prison," she declared, and her eyes sparkled with fire as she thought of the prospect. "I will not go to the pen and they can't make me. They will just waste their breath if they try to take me. The only way I will ever go is in a little black box and I won't know about it."

At first Mrs. Tucker was recitent to talk. "Please," she asked, "I wish you wouldn't write anything in the papers about me. Perhaps if I die, then you can have a story." And she lay in thought for several minutes. "Oh, I know you don't care if I die—you don't care what happens to me—no one else does—they won't even think anything about this.

"But one more foolsh thing in my life I guess won't make any difeernce."

"Do you really want to die, Mrs. Tucker?"

Hard To Wait

"Well, I'll admit its awfully hard just lying here and waiting. I imagine its something like waiting for a rope around your neck or the electric chair. But, you asked me a question—I don't really know now. It scares me sometimes when I think about it and then I realize that I have to go one time or another and anything would be better than being in jail."

Mrs. Tucker, arrested in October of last year, had been an inmate of the Lubbock county jail for only a month when she and J. B. Brown escaped after hoding up Jailer Will Earnest. They were recaptured a short time later, however.

Did Not Plan Break

"I had no planned part in that affair," she explained. "You would have done the same thing if a man holding a gun told you to. We did not plan it beforehand. Brown told me to tie up Mr. Earnest and I had to do it."

"Were you afraid of him just because he had a gun?"

"No, I was not. I am not afraid of anythihg on earth."

Mrs. Tucker stated that she took the tablet last Thursday night between 11:30 and 12 o'clock. "I felt for awhile like I was going to die and I didn't care."

Officers Deny Poison

Sheriff Wade aHrdy, ChCief Deputy O. B. Conley and Jailer Will Earnest yesterday afternoon, when questioned regarding the rumor that Mrs. Tucker had taken poison, denied it and said that she was ill and suffering of pneumonia.

Doctor W. L. Baugh last night said that he could not determine her exact condition until a few days had passed, stating that he could not tell just yet whether or not she took a bichloride of mercury tablet.

Physicians explained that bichloride of mercury poisoning often is not fatal for as along as a week or ten days.

Officers Held

deputy sheriff and Jailer Rue Lincecum, Chief Deputy Frank Bell, Deputy R. L. Wheaton, Deputy Joe Bingham Crawford, Deputy Tom Davis, J. W. Fendley, Homer Howard, Sam W. Smith, Bob Haggard, Bill Goodman, Tom Daniels, one Flores, Bill Brent, Bob Johnson and Charlie Dodd, all of Richmond, and one Miller, of Fairchilds, near there.

The complaint was filed by Prohibition Agent R. B. Hamilton.

Prohibition agents from all sections of Texas, immigration officials and agents of the department of justice participated.

Gambling Reported

Most of the places raided were in the street known as "Mud Alley." The officers said they found gambling proceeding in some of the alleged resorts when they entered. In one place the agents allowed a poker game to continue while they waited for an immigration department patrol automobile to pick up the defendants. The raiders said the dealer, holding a stack of chips, looked up calmly as the officers entered, and, when they gave permission, continued dealing the cards.

After the agents took charge of the places raided, they held persons found there until the patrol car arrived and those named in the warrants were in custody. The patrons of the resorts then were released.

Prisoners to Houston

When all the defendants had been rounded up they were placed in the patrol, which immediately left for Galveston, where the men will be placed in jail.

It was learned that under cover men of the prohibition department have been operating in Richmond for many weeks, some of them having obtained employment in the county.

The raids came as a complete surprise to the places visited by the agents.

No violence was reported, all of the arrests being made peaceably.

WOMAN CONVICTED

Gladys May Parks Is Found Guilty Of Murder

CAMDEN, N. J., Jan. 18. (AP)—Gladys May Parks was convicted by a jury tonight of second degree murder in the killing of a child left in her care and of manslaughter in the death of a second child.

The murder verdict was for the death of Timothy Rogers, aged two, while in the death of the boy's sister, Dorothy, aged four, the jury returned a finding of manslaughter. Sentence will be pronounced Monday.

Lubbock Warms Up After Cold Wave

Following two days of sub-zero weather, Lubbock and the South Plains Saturday were bathed in a warm sun as temperatures rose steadily from a minimum of five degrees below to a maximum of 31 degrees above zero.

Water pipes throughout the city were reported frozen to a large extent but at mid-day, thawing began which continued during the afternoon. Only a slight drop in temperature had been experienced at an early hour this morning.

Livestock on South Plains ranges has suffered considerably for want of grazing and drinking water during the last two weeks, local stockmen report.

Those who have been preparing stock for markets have been dealt a severe blow by the icy blanket which has covered the area. Frozen streams and ponds have created emergency methods for watering stock throughout the region.

Frigid temperatures have not claimed any death tolls, according to reports of Lubbock stock raisers, as ample shelter has been provided on most of the ranches.

George E. Lance, president of the Morton Chamber of Commerce and editor of the Cochran County News, with S. L. Carlton, attorney of Levelland, were Lubbock visitors yesterday.

rents of difficult and complex international problems.

Dangers Presented

Sea power today presents dangers as real as they have been throughout the centuries, and one of the greatest fears of the delegates assembled in London is that the peoples of the world will be led to believe that a naval millenium is dawning.

Such is the warning and counsel of Prime Minister MacDonald, himself a great idealist.

As the day nears for the opening of the conference, Mr. MacDonald believes that there is no need to depress world opinion, nor to arouse its expectations to too high a level.

The British government feels that even a satisfactory agreement will seem disappointing, if too much is expected. All the delegates insist that the step by step advance toward the ideal of general world disarmament must always be kept in mind. The London conference is but one effort towards this ultimate goal.

Stimson Undaunted

Undaunted by difficulties, Secretary Stimson, Prime Minister MacDonald, Foreign Minister Grandi of Italy, Reipiro Waktsuki of Japan, and Foreign Minister Briand of France, are spending final hurried days exchanging viewpoints and opinions, and seeking an informal preliminary understanding that will smooth the troubled waters of world naval problems.

Secretary Stimson faces another busy day tomorrow. Today he led the entire American delegation to Downing street to pay its formal respects to the chiefs of the British mission. The conversation lasted an hour.

The 17 American girl secretaries continue to be a center of attention in London. Their photographs in groups have appeared more often and more conspicuously in London newspapers than those of the delegates.

front door, while Paterson and William McNalty went to the rear of the residence.

Man Killed By Buckshot

Police said they found Patterson's body in the kitchen of the residence, while Moncure lay on the front porch. Both men were hit by buckshot from Moore's gun.

Moncure was killed instantly when a single buckshot entered the center of his forehead after passing through a screened door. Patterson died at a hospital.

When the shooting began, police said, the two agents who escaped the fire ran to summon help.

Moore's wife and small daughter were in the home at the time of the slaying.

Police said it had been alleged that a truck load of liquor had been taken into the house last night.

TO INTRODUCE BILL

Parrish, Woodul To Seek Two Tax Experts

AUSTIN, Jan. 18. (AP)—Senators Walter Woodul of Houston and Fink L. Parrish of Lubbock said today that they planned to introduce a bill in the special legislative session providing for the employment of two experts to assist in the equalization of taxes.

The measure would authorize the governor to employ the state tax experts at a salary of $6,000 annually for each. They would assist the county boards of equalization and county officials in determining the valuation of taxable property.

The two men would travel over the state.

Woodul and Parrish pointed out that, although these men would have no authority to change valuations, they could bring about an improved condition by submitting inequalities to the "glare of publicity."

MRS. HINES BETTER

Following two weeks of serious illness, reports from the Lubbock sanitarium last night stated that the condition of Mrs. Fred Hines, 809 Avenue J, was decidedly improved and that her recovery is now only a matter of a short while.

Mrs. Hines, following an operation, has been a sufferer of pneumonia.

Nichols Drafted As City Manager

Assistant City Attorney At Beaumont Selected To Succeed Ousted Official In Five-Day Fight

BEAUMONT, Jan. 18. (AP)—W. S. Nichols, assistant city attorney, will act as Beaumont city manager temporarily. He was drafted by the commission today shortly after the council by a 6 to 5 vote declared the office of the city manager vacant thereby ending the five-day fight to oust W. Anderson. Nichols accepted the appointment with reluctance, since, he explained, he will be a candidate for the county position soon.

Efforts to stop the ouster movement earlier in the day were defeated by the council, meeting in special session. The meeting was called to receive a report from the commission that Anderson withheld his resignation Friday when the commission asked it in compliance with the council's vote Tuesday. Upon its opening R. B. Ferguson moved for rescinding the ouster request but before a vote could be taken R. T. Talley jumped to his feet and demanded that the motion be tabled. The tabling motion was carried, 6 to 5, a motion that the officer of city manager be declared vacant carried by the same vote.

J. L. Appling, who had been mentioned as a possible successor to Anderson, was the commissioner who nominated Nichols for the temporary position.

Anderson cleared his office of personal effects immediately after the council meeting. He said that he will take a rest and that his plans are indefinite. He said he believed he had been vindicated in the eyes of th public because "no specific charges had ever been presented.

Floydada Creamery Ships Out 10,000 Pounds Of Butter

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

FLOYDADA, Jan. 18.—The Floydada Creamery company shipped by express the past week 10,000 pounds of butter to eastern markets. Despite the fact that cream is cheaper than it has been in some time the Floydada Creamery company is buying enough cream to keep their plant running almost to full capacity.

The Floydada Creamery company was organized and started operation in the late summer months of 1929, and today it is considered one of Floydada's leading industries. they have always found a ready market for all the butter they could make. Their butter is recognized as being one of the best that is made, owing largely to the fact that the grade of cream that is produced in this section is of a very superior grade.

It is conservatively estimated that the cream marketed in Floydada last year amounted to $120,000, which can be seen at a glance brought in to the farmers of the Floydada trade territory $10,000 for each month of the year for that commodity alone.

PROPOSAL REJECTED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18. (AP)—The senate today rejected the Howell proposal to grant a federal bounty to continental sugar growers and refiners of 44 hundredths of a cent a pound.

The vote was 53 to 22.

The bounty amendment was supported by five democrats, the farmer labor senator, Shipstead of Minnesota, and 16 republicans.

Two Modern Princesses

NO CINDERELLA

ROYAL CO-ED

"Dressed like a princess" sounds fine, but it doesn't mean a luxurious wardrobe to pretty Princess Eudoxie, sister of King Boris of Bulgaria. So impoverished is her native land that the little princess buys only one new dress a year, according to a statement made at the Hague debt conference by the Bulgarian protocol chief — who himself makes only $15 a week! She often wears the simple costume in which she is shown here.

The only feminine heir to a European throne, Crown Princess Juliana of Holland, above, intends to be well versed in world affairs when the time comes for her to be a queen and wear a crown on her bobbed head. Although not yet 21, she has just been awarded a degree of Doctor of Philosophy after passing her final examination in international law at the University of Leyden.

Wichita Fireman Is Also a Seer

George O'Steen Can Tell Future For Folks; Has Many Callers During Hours Off Duty

WICHITA FALLS, Jan. 18. George O'Steen, captain of fire station No. 2, sees a year of comparative ease for himself, and approximately 11,000 Texans, knowing the bulky O'Steen's wierd powers of reading the future, accept it as final that Wichita Falls will experience comparatively few fires during the twelve months.

During the last four years nearly 12,000 persons have visited the genial Irish fireman, heard his uncanny deductions and left miserable or happy, depending upon what he considered the future turn of events.

O'Steen, who says he cannot explain his powers, contends he is "natural" rather than supernatural. He makes no charge for interviews and seldom does he find himself without engagements for weeks ahead. He receives callers only during the hours he is off duty and considers himself a fireman first, a seer second.

More women than men consult him, according to his records, but the ratio is not great. He refuses to discuss domestic troubles with callers.

In hundreds of instances he has told callers almost exactly where lost articles may be found, how financial problems will culmiate, what to expect in love affairs, and the outcome of illness.

Although he credits his strange powers with locating articles he has lost, O'Steen says he cannot read his own future.

'Gator Is Trained

Pet Catches Crabs For Fisherman

GALVESTON, Jan. 18. (AP)—14-foot pet alligator has been trained by Fred St. Marie, Galveston fisherman, to catch crabs on the bottom of Offat's Bayou near here.

About 40 pieces of meat were wired around the 'gator's body, after which he is sent crawling along the bayou floor. When the crabs have attached themselves to the meat, the pet crawls slowly to shore into a wire enclosure.

Skirts For Tiny Tots Are Shorter Than Ever Before

BY LUCY CLAIRE
Fashion Writer for Central Press

Tiny tots don't have to worry about long skirts. Theirs are, if anything, shorter than ever. While mother's hemline reached the top of the calf, little daughter's hangs little more than half way between the hip and the knee. But then little daughter wears socks nowadays, summer and winter, else her skirts might have to reach her stocking tops, and very cute are the little bare legs, ending in short socks and bright colored kid slippers. The little short frock may even show a suspicion of the pantie without being in the least immodest. While simplicity rules in the styling of these tiny tot things, there is a certain Frenchiness about them that is charmingly childlike, without elaboration. Handwork and wash fabrics are important.

Inexpensive as it is effective is the colored dotted swiss or the voile frock. You will find one of these models sketched. Look for the frock with the demure little bertha, the frock hung full from a yoke finished at the shoulders with ribbon bows. This may be on a white ground with blue, red or pink dots, and the bertha piped with the same color, the ribbon bows also matching. Worn with blue, red or white or slightly pink opalescent kid slippers, this frock makes daughter a darling little chip off the old block.

Linen For Tinier Tot

For the still tinier tot there is the little dress of handkerchief linen in white, with cute little animal designs appliqued on the front to catch baby's delighted eye, and with bindings to match the color of the animals, whether they be pink elephants or blue doggies or green pussies. Heavier handkerchief linen interprets the little frock with conventional little flowers appliqued around the hem and collar. The may be either white or in one of the pretty, soft colors in which these linens come, with the appliqued posies in a contrasting color. Another interpretation of this linen dress is shown in the model with a scarf design. This is of white, while the scarf is incrusted with pink, and pink trims the tiny sleeve caps.

Wash silks and crepe de chines are also used for the tiny tots, especially as party frocks. Even more simple in design than the cotton and linen frocks is the party frock sketched. This is of blue crepe de chine in a sky shade. The only trimming is achieved in narrow strips of pink and blue cut on the bias, and fagoted together with pink and blue embroidery silk. Sky blue kid slippers are worn with this frock.

Cattle Shipments Under Restriction

Many Breeding And Dairy Cattle In State Found Afflicted With Contagious Abortion

FORT WORTH, Jan. 18. (AP)—Shipment of dairy and breeding cattle into Texas was under restriction today after discovery that many dairy cattle in the state were afflicted with contagious abortion, or bang disease.

Tests made over a year's time by veterinarians of the livestock sanitary commission disclosed that 17 1-2 per cent of dairy cattle in the state were infected, that not a single large herd was free of the disease, and that dairy profits were being lessened as a result.

The quarantine, ordered by Governor Moody, went into effect yesterday. Under its terms, all dairy or breeding cattle, including calves six months old, must pass blood tests 21 days before being permitted to enter the state, except that cattle from herds certified to be bang abortion free may enter without the 21-day tests. Ten other states already have instituted similar regulations, veterinaries here asserted.

So far as known here, there is no certain cure for the malady, which is believed to transmit undulant fever to those who drink milk from diseased animals.

California Court Upholds Decision On Wastage

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 18. (AP)—The California supreme court today cleared away legal obstacles to the state's efforts to prevent an alleged daily wastage in its oil fields of 70,000,000 cubic feet of natural gas.

The Los Angeles county supreme court was upheld in its injunction proceedings against 42 individuals and concerns operating oil and gas wells in the Santa Fe Springs area.

FURTHER INQUIRY LOOMS

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 18. —(AP)—Deputy District Attorney Daniel Beecheg, in charge of an investigation of the financial affairs of Angelus Temple, said today an audit of the books of the mother church of the group headed by Aimee Semple McPherson, evangelist, warranted "further inquiry" which probably would result in a grand jury probe. He declined to reveal what the audit had disclosed.

Lovely Affairs Are Given By Silver Key And Sans Souci Clubs Here

They're Prominent In The Woman's Realm In Lubbock

Dinner-Dance Is Given In Matador Ballroom Friday

First Annual Event Holds Interest For More Than Two Hundred; Elaborate Decorations Are Used

ELEGANT in every detail was the first annual dinner-dance of the Silver Key club given Friday evening in the Matador ballroom of the Hotel Hilton.

Hanging from the center chandelier was a large silver key tied with streamers of red tulle which reached to a table banked with ferns and potted plants and lighted with red tapers. On each end of the table was placed a stand holding two bowls of cyclomen.

The tables were arranged around the room to form a square and greenery made a pretty background of soft light from red tapers tied with silver tulle and placed in pewter holders added to the beauty of the effect. Plate favors for the girls were wrist bouquets of red rosebuds tied with silver ribbon to which was attached a small silver key bearing the name of the guest. Silver keys for the men were tied to the handle of each cocktail basket.

A five-course dinner was served to seventy-two guests, including members, pledges, and their dates. Mr. and Mrs. James O. Allen, club sponsors, were honor guests for the occasion and Mose Clark was toastmaster. Dr. W. J. Howard is the club president.

Dancing was enjoyed between courses, and later a reception was held on the mezzanine floor to welcome 150 guests who had been invited to attend the dance immediately following the dinner.

Members and their guests were Clarence Rollo, Pierce Magee, Dick Busby, Audrey Brown, William Evans, Clayton Reed, Max Harbison, Brooks Penney, Merrill Craver, Julius Craver, Ben Geer, John R. Luncheon Is Held Favoring Alumnae And Patronesses

President Christens Aztec Dining Room; Tea Roses, Candelabra Give Added Beauty To Table

PERHAPS the smartest club luncheon of the week was the one given Saturday at 1 o'clock by members of the Sans Souci club as a courtesy to their alumnae and patronesses. The event marked the christening of the Aztec room, private dining room of the Hilton hotel.

As guests arrived they were greeted on the mezzanine floor by Misses Geraldine Smith, Lucille Moxley, and Mary Snyder.

The reception hall leading into the dining room was made attractive with floral decorations, and the luncheon was served in six courses from a lovely U-shaped table. Centering the table was an arrangement of pink tea roses, while cyclomens were used to center the two sides. On either side of the roses was a candelabrum holding three tapers, and at either end of the table was a candelabrum with two tapers. Place cards were designed as framed miniature samplers.

Miss Geraldine Smith, president, christened the dining room and dedicated it to the club. "The Aztecs," she said, "are the most famous of native American peoples. They attained quite an advanced civilization, but were conquered by Cortez. Yet there are in Mexico even today nearly a million Indians speaking the Aztec language."

The name of the room will be placed outside the door in the club colors, pink and green.

After the first course, Miss Catherine Jamison, a new member of the organization proposed a toast to old members, thanking them for their favors to the new girls, after the second course, Miss Blanche Bradley, an active member, proposed a toast to the alumnae and patronesses, and after the third course, Mrs. J. H. Stiles responded to Miss Bradley's toast.

Patronesses attending were Mesdames D. K. Bondurant, W. O. Stevens, J. B. Crisler, Earl Hunt, J. E. Vickers, Floyd Beale, C. E. Maedgen, and Miss Delia Wilkerson.

Alumnae were Mesdames L. L. Thompson, J. H. Stiles, Lorenz Ellis, Lewis Price, R. M. Chitwood, Miss D'Aun Sammons, and Miss Ruth Slaton.

Members present were Misses Dorothy Oxsheer, Christine Carter, Mary Lou Bayless, Mary Ann Thompson, Mary Lee Bardwell, Kate Boyd, Lena Bert Medlin, Cornelia McCanne, Blanche Bradley, Hazel Ligon, Anne Snyder, Alma Spikes, Faye George, Virginia Conley, Lucille Moxley, Mary Snyder, Geraldine Smith, Dorothy Rushing, Jane Mast, Catherine Jamison, and Zona Stiles.

Mrs. George Ingham of Amarillo was a special guest for the occasion.

Upper right: Mrs. Kenneth I. Kimbro, recipient of many delightful social courtesies, who will soon leave to make her home in Dallas. Lower left: Mrs. Walter W. Royalty, president of the Lubbock Parent-Teacher Association council, whose administration is proving particularly successful. Lower Middle: Mrs. William Dingus, president of the local branch of the American Association of University Women, under whose direction four study groups are being conducted. Lower right: Mrs. W. H. Mrs. Kenneth I. Kimbro, Who Is To Leave Soon To Make Home In Dallas, Named Honoree At Social Functions

MRS. Kenneth I. Kimbro, who will leave in about two weeks to make her home in Dallas, has been honoree at two attractive social functions recently. Several other persons have announced their intentions of entertaining for her during the next two weeks, although definite dates have not been set. One of the loveliest of these will be a luncheon one day during the coming week at the Hilton hotel at which Mesdames Richard Douglas and B. C. Dickinson will be joint hostess.

Some time ago, Mrs. John Herd, who was matron of honor in Mrs. Kimbro's wedding, entertained with five tables of bridge in her home in Post, this being the first of the inhonor function for Mrs. Kimbro since it became known that she was leaving soon. The second was given Mr. and Mrs. Kimbro Thursday evening in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ross A. McWhorter, 1804 Avenue Q, with Mr. and Mrs. Owen W. McWhorter as joint hosts.

Games of bridge furnished the evening's diversion, with pretty snow scenes in art being used for tallies and score pads. Mrs. B. C. Dickinson was favored with a Venitian perfume bottle for high score among the women, and Lee Quillen was given a pretty tie for high score among the men, and a dainty cut prize was given at each table. A cloisonne clock was the favor to the honoree.

P. T. A.'s And A. A. U. U. Announce Elaborate Plans For Coming Year

Under Leadership Of Mrs. Royalty, Unusual Progress Is Made By City Council And By Associations Here

Keen Interest In Ground Beautification Is Being Shown By Each Of The Groups; Special Attention Also Given Health Of Children

UNDER the leadership of Mrs. W. W. Royalty, president of the Lubbock Parent-Teachers Association council, backed by the efforts of the presidents of the P. T. A.'s of the various schools, members of the different groups have made unusual progress since the opening of school in September.

The most recent activity of the P. T. A. council was the sponsoring of an art exhibit on 13-17, inclusive, in the high school auditorium, thus giving both the school children and all others interested an opportunity to view prints of some of the most famous paintings of both America and Europe. The exhibit was under the direction of Mrs. W. T. Milam.

Council members sent their president to the state P.-T. A. convention held at Waco this fall, after which Mrs. Royalty made talks pertaining to the activities of the convention to the different local organizations as well as to the P.-T. A. of Shallowater.

One of the outstanding social events scheduled for P.-T. A. members for the year is a Colonial tea to be given by Mrs. G. T. Scales, publicity chairman of the organization, February 22 in her home, 1620 Avenue X. All district officers are invited to be among the guests for that occasion.

To Address Pupils

Of special interest to members of the Senior High P.-T. A. are the talks which will be made by mothers to pupils of the various rooms Tuesday morning, January 21, at 9 o'clock. Every mother is invited to visit the school at that time, according to Mrs. E. N. Smith, president of the association. Regular meetings of the group are held on every third Wednesday of the month.

Work Under Difficulties

Mrs. O. T. Scales, president of the junior high P.-T. A. reports that that organization is working under difficulties, since the teachers are not able to attend day meetings. She reports also that an entertainment will be held in the juior high school building soon in order that parents and teachers may meet and discuss their children's problems as well as enjoy a pleasant social hour. Plans also are being made to assist the junior high girls in buying playground equipment.

Varied Activities

Mothers and teachers of Central Ward are quite active in their P.-T. A. work. They sponsored a Christmas cantata as a means of raising funds, and have kept towels and soap in the school, have bought pot plants for the classrooms and a gas range for their cafeteria, and are planning to beautify the grounds of the school. At a meeting held during the past week, the group heard Miss Margaret Weeks speak on "Nutrition and Mental Development", Mrs. E. L. Robertson is president of the organization.

Furnish Milk For Pupils

The furnishing of milk for undernourished children of the school is the outsanding activity of the Sanders P.-T. A. The president, Mrs. J. A. Wright is conducting a study course, "Study of the Child", which includes both lectures and roundtable discussions at each meeting.

Purpose of Programs

Mrs. George Dupree, president of the Dupre P. T. A. reports that programs are planned with this end in view: "To bring the parents and teachers closer together as a study group." Their programs are based on "The Child, His Nature and His Needs" by O'Shea.

The Dupre P.-T. A. has bought playground equipment, has placed a linoleum in the cafeteria, has purchased victrola records and pictures, and has awarded two dollars in prizes each month to the rooms having the largest number of mothers present at P.-T. A. meetings. The group now is making arrangements to beautify the school grounds.

George M. Hunt Work

The George M. Hunt P.-T. A. is planning to beautify the grounds with grass and flowers, according to the president, Mrs. W. E. Twitty, who states also that new scales have been bought for the health department of the school and that the old scales were given the health nurse to use where she saw fit. Mrs. Twitty is inviting the P.-T. A. council to meet at the George M. Hunt school in February.

Tulip Bulbs Planted

Elaborate plans are being made by the K. Carter P.-T. A. to beautify the school with flowers. The president, Mrs. E. B. Wheelock states that 300 tulip bulbs have been put in the window boxes and that five pots of tulips have been given each room. Reading tables and benches have been bought for each room, victrola records have been provided, and a cement walk has been placed around the building. The K. Carter P.-T. A. has 135 active members.

Skirts For Street Have Even Hemlines

BY LUCY CLAIRE
Fashion Writer for Central Press

THE bogey ghosts of yesteryear that came out to frighten us at the first mention of long, or longer, skirts, and the "corseted" figure, have gone back to their graves, or wherever it is that ghosts retire when they are not stalking around. The ankle length skirt for daytime wear is not coming back. To be sure skirts are a little longer, which is a good thing for everybody, but the added length which makes the skirt from three to four inches below the knee is nothing to get excited about. Thefive and six inch length is extreme at the moment, but the woman must take into consideration her individual height in determing the length of the skirt along conservative lines. Five or six inches would look extreme on the short woman, but might be very becoming, with nothing extreme looking about it, for her tall sister.

The uneven hemline for daytime wear is getting a bit passed. Even the more formal afternoon frocks are making their debut with even hemlines. The uneven hemline, with sections flapping and dripping below the coat line for street wear, is a bit too hard on the frock and hard on the observer's eye, to be tolerated for any length of time, charming as it may be on the ballroom floor. But even here it has had its day, and skirts of ankle length, without the raggety hemline, are appearing; and we must remember that in all the expressions of the changing mode evening fashions have led the way. This is true of the longer skirt, but these innovations must be taken as trends to be boiled down to the practical, and not repeated in slavish copies.

Effect Dependent on Waistline

As much of the long limbed effect now so fashionable depends upon the raised waistline as much as upon the lengthened skirt, and this is being generally accepted. Waistlines have not gone up just under the busts, as some seemed to think they would. They are either posed at the top of the hips or at the normal line, a little higher.

There is the tuck-in blouse with its waistline that couldn't very well be anything but normal, and the one-piece frock taking inspiration from the tuck-in, like that sketched at the center. This is especially adapted to bordered fabrics, and is here shown in red flat crepe, worn with dull black kid shoes. The accessories for the red dress would naturally be black. Then there is the favorite model, with its shirred waistline posed at the top of the hips and draping in yoke effect, sketched at the right. This is of brown crepe, worn with brown kid shoes.

In footwear there is little change except for formal occasions, where heels are higher and shoes more conspicuous. As long as skirts fail to reach the ankles, the kid shoe will be the favorite, because with the medium long skirt the feet are sufficiently conspicuous in themselves to avoid anything that would make them more so. With the long evening frocks, the feet may be clothed as conspicuously as one pleases, and look most enhancing twinkling in and out among the swirls and folds and drapes of the floor touching skirt.

Mrs. W. H. Abbitt Now Making Cruise Around World On Belgenland; Party Left San Francisco January Eighth

A cruise around the world is being made by Mrs. W. H. Abbitt, 2207 17th street, who left Lubbock the early part of the month for San Francisco where she joined her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Knight of Portland, Oregon, and Miss Sally Knight. The tour is being made on the steamer, Belgenland, which is the largest steamer ever to circle the globe.

The party sailed from San Francisco on January 8 and stopped first at Hilo in the Hawaiian Islands and proceeded from there to Honolulu; Yokohama, Japan, and Tokyo are next on the itinerary and after crossing the Yellow Sea the ship will stop next at Chinwangtao.

After leaving Chinwangtao, China the party goes to Shanghai, Hong Kong, Manila, Bangkok in Siam and travel on down the eastern coast of China to Batavia. The next stop is scheduled to be at Singapore and from there the steamer, Belgenland sails up the Bay of Bengal and docks at Calcutta. The party plan to leave the ship here and go as far inland as Darjeeling and go aboard once more at Bombay.

The schedule calls for the steamer to cross the Arabian Sea and proceed up the Red Sea docking at Port Sudan, Africa. On continuing up the Suez canal the ship will take port at Alexandria, Egypt, cross the Mediterranean Sea and stop at Athens, Greece. After leaving Athens the next stop will be made at Naples, Italy.

Here the party will take another side trip inland and stop in Rome, Venice, Milan, Berne, and crossing the English Channel visit London. From London they will go to Southhampton where they will go aboard once more and said for New York. They expect to arrive in New York on May 20.

The two side trips are said to be very interesting. After leaving the ship at Calcutta the party will proceed by special train to Darjeeling and take rickshaw rides for views of local interests and of the mountains. An early morning trip will be made to enable them to see the sunrise on the Himalayas. At Jaipur the party will make three half-day trips, visiting the Maharaja's stables, tiger cages, Jewelry street, museum, and the native bazaars, and will proceed by night train to Bombay where they transfer to the Belgenland and sail in the afternoon for the trip across the Arabian Sea.

The second side trip is a delightful inland tour of Italy, France and London.

Intimate Chats with Eve Ve Verka on Personality-Beauty-Health

Madame Ve Verka Will Conduct The Avalanche-Journal Free School of Beauty and Charm, February 3-7

When I was a little girl with long curls around my shoulders and a passion for mud pies, I had a Sunday school teacher who did me a life-long service.

She was a gaunt scraggly creature, with virginial "shirt-waists" and skirts, and prim bonnets innocent of the merest daisy. But the fire of other worlds blazed in her eyes, and her tongue was sharp with the winning of souls.

I was in almighty awe of her. Her missionary ferver struck terror to my childish heart. And besides, I felt she disapproved of my little red leather shoes which were the joy of my heart. They were probably one of the sins of the flesh which would be offered in evidence on the Judgment Day when they finally told me my eternal Home would be in the close vicinity of the brimstone lake henceforth.

I could picture the towering figure of Saint Peter, stern, uncompromising, glowering at me, and holding the wicked red shoes aloft so that all might have the proof of mine iniquity, and shaking a long accusing finger in my face. That I was a hopeless, lost sinner, doomed black of heart—at the age of five or six—I never doubted after a session with my lean spinster.

But this poor tight-minded soul did me a life-long service. Not at all the service she intended. The exact contrary, in fact. She even groans in her grave, no doubt, when I speak of it.

You see, it was like this: Sunday after Sunday I sat and listened to the hot polemics of this lean advocate. Always, of course, with my guilty red shoes (and oh yes, I don't believe I have yet confessed that they buttoned with the most precious jet buttons) tucked as far back under the bench as my short legs would reach.

Sunday after Sunday she carved upon my plastic sensibilities her onerereiterated theme. Namely, that the world and all there was in it was God's and was only loaned to man. So far, so good. (Except that I was always vaguely worried for fear he might decide he wanted my red shoes back.

Now from this first premise, this good lady did the rather feverish reasoning that we like to think passed with the medieval burning of witches. If the world and the flesh were God's, and only loaned to man, then men must take no joy in the world, and no joy in the flesh. The world must be despised and the flesh mortified.

Isn't that pitably wrong? Why not glorify God with the glorification of His own fights? Rather than despise the world, redeem it by bringing to it more and more manifestation of its own inherent beauty. Rather than despise the flesh, make it express, more and more of its divine parentage.

This means that we respect and love and admire beauty of body. That we recognize it as an instrument of expressing the divinity within. And an instrument for usefulness in the world. With this conception then, we give the body the most particular care. We take pride in its strength and beauty. We take joy in making it more and more worthy a temple of the Living God.

And this is one of the great services which my good lady of the red-shoe and jet-button days did for me. By stressing so emphatically this theme that our bodies were God's, this thought of the ultimate divine nature of humanity in that sense was impressed upon me. Out of it has grown my philosophy that it is almost a religious obligation to keep our bodies strong and clean and healthy and beautiful. So that they may be a more fitting dwelling place for the spark of divinity which is within.

TO GIVE COMEDY

Two Hundred Local People Will Take Parts

Initial plans are being made by the local chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy to stage a comedy, "Corporal Eagen" on April 3-4 with 200 local persons taking parts. The play will be given in the high school auditorium.

Three-fourths of the motion pictures being shown in Brazil are American.

Four Groups Are Under Direction Of Organization

Mrs. William Dingus Heads Activities Of Past Year; Is Reelected At Meeting Held This Month

"THE MAJOR interest of the local branch of the American Association of University Women for the next two years will be to assist in every way possible the program of the national organization in raising a Million Dollar Fellowship fund," said Mrs. William Dingus, president of the branch. The local organization sponsored an elaborate bridge and forty-two party for the benefit of this fund Thursday evening at the Hilton hotel with more than 450 persons attending.

"The local interest," Mrs. Dingus said, "will be directed chiefly toward the study groups of various kinds which are being sponsored in Lubbock. There are four such groups now functioning, each one doing a work suited to the special interests of the group concerned. International relations, parental education and child welfare, book reviews, and reading are the subjects of special study at present.

"Members of the A. A. U. W. have always carried on a definite program of work which is concerned with the advancement of opportunities and incentives for higher education for women. Adhering to this definite purpose even in the smaller units of the work is one of the chief causes of the success of the organization.

"The International Relations group is planning to assist in arranging a conference on international relations to be held here April 3 and 4. The West Texas Historical society and probably other groups in this part of the state will work with them."

Officers of the A. A. U. W. serving during 1929 and reelected at the January meeting for the year 1930 are as follows: Mrs. William Dingus, president; Mrs. R. S. Williams, first vice-president; Miss Lucille Gill, second vice-president; Mrs. O. C. Corry, treasurer; Miss Alma Girand, secretary, and Mrs. George Dupree, parliamentarian.

The WOMAN'S DAY

The woods is full of advice on beauty—how to massage the wrinkles from the furrowed brow, how to retain a skin you love to touch, how the get rid of an extra chin, or keep white hairs at bay.

In fact, there is infinitely more advice than there is good information. And like most advice, you can take it or leave it as you will.

But in the Chicago Flower Technical high school, I observe that beauty culture is being recognized as a legitimate study, quite as important in its way as domestic science or algebra, and it is being taught logically and intelligently.

The girls are being taught the chemistry of their own skins, their hair and something of the action of light, sun, air and water on the same. They have lectures on the circulation of the blood, the digestive system, and the action of certain stimulants and sedatives.

ANALYZING BEAUTY

But this is not the most important thing, from a practical point of view. They are taught how to analyze face powders, creams and soaps, so that they can tell just what is in all the various expensive and high-priced cosmetics on the market—so they know whether they are paying for real quality, or for fancy labels and pretty boxes and ribbons.

In examining critically the contents of a highly advertised lotion that produces a tropical complexion in one application, they were surprised to learn that the basic properities were castor oil and alcohol, and a few vegetable colorings.

They found that a formula for cold cream, which any druggist could put up in a few minutes, was quite as effective, and more pure, than some of the expensive brands. In short, they learn about cosmetics as they learn about cooking.

They can make them as they would cakes, and know what should make them cleansing, and good, just as they know what makes devil's-foods rise and fall or stick to the pan.

NOW, IN GRANDMA'S DAY—

Most of us moderns know little or nothing about what we use on our faces and hands, and that is why we will buy anything that looks "attractive." Our grand-mothers were much more wise than we, because, in their day, they made their own lotions and potions.

They knew how to make good bleaches compounded of such harmless ingredients as cucumbers or lemon juice, and on their own ranges they used to stir up a cream that was better than we can buy at five times the price, because it contained only pure products.

We are inclined to believe that beauty culture is something peculiar to this age, just because we see so many advertisements, and know so many cosmetics are sold. But women have always "beautified" and many a belle of a generation or so ago spent infinitely more time on herself than the modern maid. She wore cosmetic gloves at night, and sometimes a mask of suet to keep her face soft and unlined. She whitened her hands, and she "rinsed" her hair. In fact, she did practically everything we do, but did it more quietly and with more mystery.

So the Chicago high school girls, if they are attentive, may some day become as wise in beauty as their grandmothers for many generations back—back possibly to Eve!

Living and Loving

BY MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

Some years ago an eminent doctor is said to have remarked that when a person reached the age of 60 years he should be chloroformed.

If that suggestion was carried out, many useful lives would be snuffed out in untimely fashion. But, on the other hand, there would be fewer tragedies of old people living on year after year without means of their own, and unwanted in the homes in which they are forced to live.

And, again, many married couples would live more happily, because there would be no elderly father and mother-in-laws interfering with them and presenting problems because of their support.

A woman writes for my advice on the following problems

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I have received a letter from a dear friend asking me to visit her and give her some advice. I, knowing all the family affairs, and not knowing what to tell her, am asking you to help me.

"May lives in a small town. Her husband makes just a living wage. They are compelled to keep his father and mother, who are past 60. May has two children and expects another in April.

"They have to live close, as they are buying a home. May has no clothes, no pleasure, nothing except a life of torture. Her mother-in-law makes ugly remarks every day. She is able to work, but doesn't do a thing.

"This couple has two other sons, one who has a family of six, the other no children. When this father and mother were able to have a home of their own, the latter and his wife would aways spend the winter at home, living on what the aged couple made. They both work in a large town and could help the parents if they would. This son and daughter-in-law are everything to the aged couple. They are always talking of them.

"This affair has almost separated May and her husband. May loves her home but has no happiness. Shall he be asked to choose between his family and his father and mother? Shall they go to the poor-house? Please tell us what to do. Will follow your advice.

"BETH."

I don't believe your friend would be very happy in her home with her father and mother-in-law in the poorhouse, even if they are very trying to live with. I think the matter should be put up to the husband in this way: That your friend has plenty to do with her home and children without extra burdens, and that, therefore, the mother and father-in-law shoud be asked to do their share. The son who has no family should also be approached and asked what he can do for his parents. It would be proper, indeed, that he and his wife should be asked if they cannot give the old people a home. They could put it up to the parents as a business proposition. The aged couple could keep house while the son and daughter-in-law worked.

I do not know whether there is any law to compel an equal division of such burdens on married children. There should be. Your friend cannot well quarrel with her husband on account of his people. She can appreciate how he feels and how she would feel were they her relatives, but her husband should be made to realize what a burden their presence is in her home and to see what can be done to lighten it.

If, after all efforts have been put forth and nothing is accomplished to relieve your friend, she will have to be patient, get as much joy as possible out of her children, and wait for something to "turn up." It's a long road that has no turning, you know.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I am a girl of 17 and have never been out with a boy yet. It is not that I'm not attractive, but my parents are very strict. They give me everything, evening gowns, fur coats, but still I'm not happy, because I'm missing all the good times.

"I went to school with two girls but am not supposed to go with them because they are 'loud.' It is almost driving me mad, in the house every night, as I have no girl or boy friends.

"Won't you please give me some advice? I am crazy for dancing and a good time, and am considered friendly and attractive.

"MELODY."

You're a "poor little rich girl," it seems, Melody. Have everything but friends. Parents like yours are my greatest bugbear because they are not the ones who are asking for advice, and it is so hard to know what to say to you children. I can't very well tell you to make friends without your parents knowing it. I don't want to make sneaks and liars out of you, even if I could, and yet that is what this attitude of parents does to young people, in many instances.

There is one thing I can say, however, that my experience has taught me, and this applies to all cases of trouble. "Almost going mad," as you put it, and all similar ways of giving way to your ills, never helps. Now let's see what you can do to keep normal, and even happy, until such time as you get a chance to get away from your too fond parents. Going away from home is probably the solution. If you can only go to college and make your friends outside.

Have you a hobby? If not, get one. It doesn't matter much what it is. Take music, drawing, painting, collecting, studying nature, the stars, or flowers, but get some kind of an avocation and absorb yourself in it. This may be the means of corraling a few congenial friends, too.

PATSY: You don't say how old you are or how old Billie is. I think it would be wise to wait until you are free before you marry her, especially if you are both young. If you love one another very dearly and think it would help to keep you straight to marry her, it might be advisable, but much may happen in two years, and I really advise waiting. The fact that she will be waiting for you will be an added incentive to you to keep in the right path after this trouble is over. Good luck to you.

When Boston, England, was recently flooded, drinking water had to be taken there by train from Willoughby, 20 miles away, and one bucketful was delivered to each house daily.

How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

TAKE TIME FOR BEAUTY EVERY DAY

So many women write me: "You say that any woman can be good looking, and I don't doubt you, but I haven't the time to take care of myself."

Actually the time it takes is negligible, and there is no woman—no matter how busy she may be—who cannot find the few minutes necessary. Check through your day and see if you cannot salvage ten or fifteen minutes from your pleasant telephone chats. Yes? I'm sure you can, for almost every woman squanders precious minutes in pleasant but useless talk, minutes that can be salvaged for beauty.

If one is going to be in the mode this year, one simply must find the time to keep one's face fresh looking and free from lines. For the new fashions from the smart little off-the-face hats to the chic high heels that adorn the latest slippers, are feminine. Lines, crowsfeet, freckles, sallow, muddy skins, all are definitely out of the picture.

Fortunately there are definite means—simple and easy means—to rid one's face of these blemishes. The first necessity is perfect cleanliness, for this is the primal law of beauty. Every woman things she is cleansing her face correctly, but the fact is that many are not. Surface cleansing is not enough. It must be a deep pore cleansing, and more than this, the cleanser must be chosen for your individual skin. If your skin is oily, then you need a cleanser that cuts the oil from the pores and regulates the oil glands, thus checking the excess flow of oil. On the contrary, the dry skin needs a cleansing cream that is rich in oil—so rich that it melts slowly, seeping down into the very depths of the pores, soothing and lubricating at the same time it cleanses.

The second step to a new face that will harmonize with the new fashions is an active skin—with the blood bounding through your veins, washing away all impurities, toning up the skin, feeding the impoverished tissues (how can you expect your skin to be young and firm and smooth when the cells are gasping for breath and starving for food?), clearing the complexion, making it radiantly transparent eliminating all that dull, sluggish, sallow look! Yes, you need a good stimulating and clarifying cream and plenty of patting—brisk patting, but not hard enough to break down the tissues.

Diets Placed As Important Part Of School Activities

Local Schools Provide For Hot Lunches; Cafeteria Service Available In 3 Different Wards

IN this day of scientific living, more and more attention is being given to diet, especially to the diet of the growing school child. One of the most modern and one of the most popular movements along this line is the school cafeteria.

No longer are children required to eat cold lunches hurriedly packed into a paper sack or a lunch pail, which may have been dropped several times on the way to school, but instead, are given well-balanced meals, in which hot things are hot and cold things are cold, and planned from a scientific standpoint.

Have Cafeterias

Three local schools, George M. Hunt, Central Ward, and Dupre, now have up-to-date cafeterias. Although they are operated by individuals, they are under the general supervision of the P.-T. A.'s inspected from time to time by the school nurse, Mrs. Joe Smith, who cooperates with the cafeteria managers in their efforts to meet the needs of the children in the schools.

Clear days find about 200 pupils eating in the three cafeterias, while on cold or rainy days, the number is about doubled, according to reports from the schools.

Prices of the food served at the cafeterias make it within the reach of every child. Salad, vegetable dishes, desserts, sweet milk, and in some cases the meat dishes are only five cents a serving.

Dupre Cafeteria

The largest cafeteria is the one at Dupre school. There about 100 pupils are served lunch each day, according to the principal, Mrs. J. S. Larmer.

Mrs. Larmer gives the following as a typical menu for the Dupre school: meat loaf, salad, creamed potatoes, apple dumplings, ice cream, sweet milk, and hot rolls with butter. Another typical menu at the school, according to Mrs. Larmer, includes soup, sandwiches, salad, dessert, milk and rolls.

Each morning at the recess period, undernourished children are served one-half pint of rich milk with graham crackers, and as a result some of the children have gained from four to five pounds a month, Mrs. Larmer said.

Two fifth grade girls assist with the serving, and are given their meals as compensation. Different girls are chosen for this work each month.

Five-Cent Dishes

Each dish served at the cafeteria at George M. Hunt school is only five cents, according to Mrs. Guy L. Trow, principal. Mrs. Trow states that about 50 pupils eat at the cafeteria during clear weather and between 80 and 100 on bad days.

A great deal of waste is avoided in this cafeteria by appointing various boys and girls to go to the different rooms in the early mornings to find how many pupils will want milk on that particular day. Not only does this inform the cafeteria manager as to how many bottles of milk to buy, but also indicates the number of pupils who will eat at the cafeteria.

Mrs. Trow states that by February 1 it may be possible to serve milk during the morning recess period to undernourished children.

The cafeteria at Central Ward school is operated in much the same way as those of the other two schools. About 660 pupils are served on clear days at Central Ward, and more during bad weather, according to Mrs. Percy Spencer, teacher in the school.

Drunks Set Mark

All-Time Record Set in Angelo

SAN ANGELO, Jan. 18. (AP)—The year 1929 set an all-time record for drunkenness arrests in corporation court here, a perusal of the 17-year record of M. B. Jones, former recorder, shows. The number in 1929 was 547, heavier than it was at any time before prohibition days, though arrests are made more readily now. The record shows that arrests for drunkenness fell off to 14 in 1919, rose to 24 in 1920. In 1923 as the city grew, it rose to approximately 400, Judge Jones, who retired in May, 1929, does not believe that prohibition is a failure. He says it is a different, a lower class, that is drinking and being hailed into court now.

The bird kept pecking very fast. Said Clowny, "How long will this last? I'm getting tired of waiting. I would like to take a ride. The bird's pecked deep into the tree. Come on now, Tinies, let us see if we can move it off our bike. At least it can be tried."

"There's not much use," another said. "But, if you want to, go ahead. We all will gladly lend a hand, but it will do no good."

So once again they tried their luck, but only found the tree still stuck. Said Scouty, "That was foolish, lads. I didn't think we could."

The bird then spoke up, "Merry me, you're as impatient as can be. Just give me time and I will shortly have your fine bike out. When this big trunk is pecked in two, there'll be one thing for you to do. Just move the upper end of it. 'Twill free your bike, no doubt."

And so the punch just sat around and listened to the bird's beak pound. At last the tree trunk squealed real loud and slowly broke apart. "Ah, there you are," the kind bird cried. "I guess you'll shortly have a ride. You must admit the way I peck is really quite an art."

The Tinies then pulled at the tree and, though 'twas heavy as could be, they soon had pulled it off their bike and stood the bike up straight. Said Coppy, "Now there's nothing wrong. We'll ride and take the bird along. Let's hurry, lads, and hop aboard, cause I can hardly wait."

The bird jumped to the handle bars and cried, "I hope we go to Mars. I always have to fly, but I will take a rest today." Each Tiny jumped into his place. A smile spread on each little face. The pedals soon were going 'round and they were on their way.

(The Tinymites have a blowout in the next story.)

East Texas Campaign Has 500,000 Trees Out

LONGVIEW, Jan. 18. (AP)—More than 300,000 young fruit trees have been set out in East Texas home orchards in the course of the first and second annual Home Orchard campaigns. Principal efforts of the East Texas Chamber of Commerce and cooperating agencies during the third campaign, now in progress, have been directed toward education on adequate care of orchards. Necessity of proper care was stressed in the first two years, but planting of trees naturally received the home orchardists' greatest attention.

ONE MINUTE PULPIT

Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me. —Psalms 23:4.

Faith, though it hath sometimes a trembling hand, it must not have a withered hand, but must stretch.—Watson.

DAMAGING DIFFICULTIES

TWO churches in Lubbock county, one located in this city and another in Slaton, have recently encountered internal difficulties and have handled them in such a manner that public attention has been drawn.

This condition, as The Avalanche-Journal views it non-denominationally, is not only regrettable but is likewise unnecessary.

Church people—even those active in the conduct of their churches—are like everyone else. They are human and we all know that "To err is human." Whenever a group of people is vitally and actively interested in any project—whether or not it involves religious conduct—there is opportunity for disagreement and misunderstanding. But even so, there is no necessity of airing it publicly and bringing disrepute, even temporarily, upon any denomination or unit.

When church people find it impossible to agree in the conduct of their church's business, and when the fact becomes known to the world, all churches and the good work which they do, suffer. A new avenue of criticism is opened to the scoffers. Many wavering upon the brink of actively supporting a church are withheld from making that decision.

If there is any human endeavor which should be carried on without noticeable friction—if any cooperation can be trusting and understanding—it should be the advancement of the Kingdom of God and the teachings of Jesus Christ. If those most interested in following the Lowly Nazarene cannot follow Him without public dissension there is little hope that the entire world will be saved—at least not any time soon.

Active churchmen of all denominations have a greater responsibility resting upon their shoulders than the mere operation of their own particular, local denomination. They represent to the world at large the most powerful and important evangelism—personal workers for religion. That responsibility should never be forgotten for to forget it is perilous to the cause.

The Avalanche-Journal knows very little concerning the underlying causes of the two dissensions which have, in part, been aired here recently. Without making any effort to explain any points of them we content ourselves with hoping that similar misunderstandings will not arise here again soon.

WHY WOMEN TAKE JOBS

If you still cling to the old maxim that woman's place is in the home, you might read over the recent bulletin from the United States Women's Bureau.

This bulletin reveals that women in increasing numbers are being called on to support their families.

Out of 30,000 families investigated, for instance, 27 per cent were supported entirely by the wages of their women members.

Of 17,000 unmarried women studied, one in five was supporting a family unaided.

An enormous proportion of city families is depending wholly or in part on the money earned by wives and daughters. In certain industries which employ women, 65 per cent of the women workers are married.

Evidently the woman who marries for economic security stands a fair chance of getting badly stung. Instead of being freed from the necessity of supporting herself, she may have to pitch in and help support, not only herself but her husband as well.

It would seem that there are several things back of this recent influx of women into the realm of jobs. It isn't, apparently, the outgrowth of a sudden desire, on the part of womankind, for freedom. The marriage-or-career stories written by our popular fiction producers—how idiotic they sound, now that the real facts are coming out! Most working women, one concludes, are working because they have to, not because they want to. The modern world is giving them not a new freedom, but a new duty.

Stuart Chase, in his recent book, "Prosperity: Fact or Myth," sheds a bit of light on the subject.

One out of every 13 male wage-earners in the United States, he estimates, is always out of a job. The "technological unemployment" that our engineers talk about—the replacement of workers by labor-saving machinery—is giving us an army of jobless men that averages around 3,000,000.

Yet we have had no breadlines, no unrest, no nation-wide exhibit of suffering, despite the fact that we are continually harboring this enormous number of men who cannot get work. Why? Well, Mr. Chase suspects that the woman worker has a good bit to do with it. Many and many a family in which the breadwinner has lost his job has been saved from starvation by the fact that the breadwinner's wife has gone to work as a salesgirl or telephone operator.

We won't know what the remedy for all of this is until competent economists have studied the whole thing more carefully. Meanwhile, however, it is obvious that something is wrong somewhere. Our prosperity can't be quite all it is cracked up to be if it is placing a constantly-increasing economic burden on the women.

COOLIDGE AND SMITH

The recent announcement of the manner in which the $6,000,000 estate of the late Conrad Hubert is to be divided among various charitable organizations brings to a close an episode that has made extremely pleasant reading.

Former President Calvin Coolidge and former Governor Alfred E. Smith were two of the committee of three named to settle on the method of dividing the estate. For a number of months they worked together; and there was something very refreshing about the manner in which these two distinguished men—utterly unlike one another in birth, breeding and outlook—pitched in together to perform a public service.

Calvin Coolidge and Al Smith—a strange pair to work in harness together, surely! It was pleasant to read about their joint activities, pleasant to speculate on the contrast which their presence on the same committee kept emphasizing. We are sorry that their work has been brought to a close.

It's the age of marvels and all that, but the hens haven't started laying them scrambled yet.

On the Firing Line at the Nation's Capital

COOLIDGE MAY BE GIVEN SEAT ON SUPREME BENCH

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—Ex-President Coolidge is believed by quite a few tolerable reliable political mind-readers to be saving himself for a seat in the United States supreme court.

The fact that he shows no enthusiasm for this year's Republican senatorial nomination in Massachusetts is no proof of it, to be sure.

Forlorn hopes never have seemed to have much appeal to Mr. Coolidge. He prefers to be mighty certain, in advance, of landing any office that he goes after.

Not, perhaps, that the Bay state G. O. P.'s chances of succeeding the retiring Senator Frederick H Gillett with another Republican are quite dubious enough to be referred to as a forlorn hope.

Still, a 50-50 outlook is about the best the G. O. P. can claim in that commonwealth anyway.

The situation speaks for itself, if anyone questions it. David I. Walsh, one of Massachusetts' senators right now, is a Democrat. The state went for Al Smith in 1928.

One might guess that Mr. Coolidge would be an especially strong senate candidate—maybe somewhat better than 50:50—if the G. O. P. could get him to make the race.

His state's own particular ex-president! Some kick about that!

On the other hand, it doubtless would be an exceptionally bitter pill to Mr. Coolidge, in the circumstances, to ask Massachusetts' voters to send him to the senate, and be beaten.

So it does not necessarily follow that the Northamptonian's reluctance to try for a toga means he has the supreme court in mind. Possibly he simply considers this a poor time to seek anything elective whatever—in Massachusetts—for a Republican.

It may be that Mr. Coolidge has mentioned the supreme court to someone—and it has leaked out without trace, thus getting into the atmosphere.

Or it may be that someone else has mentioned it—as a good idea.

There is considerable sentiment in Washington to the effect that a dignified place in the public service ought to be found for each of our ex-presidents.

Ex-President Taft's appointment to the supreme bench has given this sentiment more or less of a slant in that direction.

Such a position obviously would have to be either appointive or automatic. It could not very well be elective, for then there would be no certainty that any given ex-president would be able to get it. On the contrary he would risk being defeated, which would be the reverse of dignified.

With four of the present justices past the age of 70, and one of this quartet only a year short of 90 nothing can be more certain than that there will be a supreme court vacancy or so in the not distant future, and there is no question at all that Mr. Coolidge will be suggested to fill it.

In case he wants it, the Taft precedent will make it difficult not to give it to him.

True, he can very well be passed over unless he is urged, but he himself can easily provide for plenty of urging, without appearing to do so, assuming that he has the inclination.

Indeed, it is extremely probable that he will be urged in any event, supposing he fails to register some very definite objections; for he is just the individual whom a formidable group of highly influential folk would like to see on the supreme bench, in place of either one of a couple of justices long known for their unorthodox dissenting opinions in the nation's court of last resort.

Ex-President Coolidge, too, is comparatively young (three years below the veteran Justice Holmes' age at the beginning of his nearly 28-year term of service), promising a long career of judicial usefulness for him, should he be chosen to round out his career among the constitution's interpreters.

Diet and Health

Medical Adviser for Central Press and The Avalanche-Journal.

SUFFERER'S QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Questions and Answers

C. Has had a duodenal ulcer. She wants the following questions answered:

1. "Is baking soda harmful."

Ans. Sodas and other alkalies are frequently given for medication in the beginning treatment of ulcers, in connection with the ulcer diet (meals every two or three hours of milk or milk and cream, egg mixtures, or whatever the doctor in charge has had success with), and taken once in a while after the cure, it is probably not harmful. But if you are having any symptoms, you should go back to your doctor and see if you shouldn't go back on the original curative diet.

2. "Do fried eggs, corn, whole wheat bread and eggs aggravate the condition?"

Ans. One who has had an ulcer always has to be more or less careful of certain foods. If you find they do aggravate, it is best to not use them.

3. "Do ulcers affect the eyes?"

Ans. I don't find eye complications listed as a result of ulcer, but it is possible for any prolonged under-par condition to also include the eyes.

4. "Is smoking hard on ulcer?"

Ans. YES, decidedly so. In fact, the gastric disturbance caused by smoking can closely simulate ulcer. It apparently increases the hyperacid condition.

5. "Wouldn't a small amount of good whisky help strengthen my stomach?"

Ans. NO, decidedly not. Alcohols and tobacco are to be strictly avoided. They markedly irritate chronic ulcerous conditions.

6. "Should one eat between meal?"

Ans. Yes, frequent and smaller meals are advised. Something should be eaten every three hours. It is advisable to have a few crackers or a glass of milk, or half milk and cream, at this time, between meals. This food engages any free acid which has been formed which will irritate the organ. It is a good idea to have some food at the bedside to take if waking during the night.

7. "Should no acid foods be eaten?"

Ans. The citrous fruits, and tomatoes, for instance, are acid-tasting, but they leave an alkali ash in the body. However, in conditions of irritated stomach and intestines they cause some irritation before they are digested, and so may have to be avoided for a while. But if fruits and vegetables are avoided too long, vitamin C (the anti-scurvy vitamin) may be deficient, and a state at least bordering on scurvy may be brought on. This, of course, adds to the complications of the original disease. For a while it may be best to get the vitamin C from the bland fruits, especially bananas, melons and mild apples, thoroughly masticated. But physicians are giving the citrous fruit juices much sooner than they used to.

RECEIPTS INCREASE

New All-Time Record Set By Tahoka Office

TAHOKA, Jan. 18.—(Special)—Postal receipts at Tahoka during 1929 totaled $12,115.48 to set a new all-time record, according to Postmaster D. A. Parkhurst. The gain over the previous year was fifteen percent of $1,601.24, the receipts for 1928 being $10,514.24. The growth of business at the local office was normal, however, since the increase has ranged from ten to fifteen percent for the past five or six years, indicating the steady growth of the town and country surrounding. With a fair crop in 1930, Parkhurst believes the receipts will mount to the $15,000 mark.

Plans are now under way by the local postal force and local citizens to secure free mail delivery for the town.

Rash Romance

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JUDITH CAMERON marries ARTHUR KNIGHT, executive of a New York publishing house in which she is employed. They sail for a six weeks' honeymoon in Bermuda. Knight is a widower with an 18-year-old daughter, TONY, who is in Europe, and a son, JUNIOR, 16, at school. In his infatuation he overlooks the fact that Judith is not communicative about her past life. She does not tell him about her frequent meetings with a young man known as "DAN"'

After the first week in Bermuda a cablegram arrives announcing that Tony Knight is coming home. Arthur tells Judith they must return at once to meet her. Since neither of the children knows of the father's remarriage, Judith is skeptical of her welcome. The fear proves well founded.

Arthur and Judith reach the Long Island home just one day before Tony's boat docks. Next morning Knight meets his daughter but when they arrive at the house Tony ignores Judith and rushes to her own room. Knight tries to reason with the girl and later assures Judith the difficulty will be soon settled. He goes to his office. Later that afternoon Tony confronts her stepmother and exclaims: "You're going to get out!"

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XIII

Tony Knight, infuriated and in action, was a sight to make strong men quail. Her eyes flashed. The vivid, petulant lips were drawn with rage. Tony stamped one foot as she cried:

"You're going to get out of here—you gold digger! You cheap, scheming, money grabber, you! Don't think you can stay in this house and get away with your tricks! I won't have it. I—!"

Judith was on her feet too now. Judith's eyes had narrowed. There was a dangerous light smoldering in their blue depths. No one had ever said that Judith Knight could not defend herself.

For a moment she hesitated, and in her perfect silence there was strength. Tony, spent with the tempestuous outcry, stood quivering and glaring at the older girl. Judith's lips moved—but before the words came out she had checked herself.

She was remembering this was Arthur's daughter with whom she had to deal.

"I am not a gold digger," she said calmly. "I'm your father's wife and there is no reason why you should dislike me so. I want to be friends with you—"

The blazing Tony had recovered her voice again.

"But I won't be friends!" she screamed, and her voice rose to a higher, louder pitch. "You're nobody! You're nothing but a sneaky designing shop girl and you want my father's money. Well—you won't get it, do you hear that? You fooled him into marrying you but he'll get rid of you all right. He'll do exactly as I say and I won't have you here! Do you get that?"

Someone else had come into the living room. Neither of the two girls had heard the third person's footsteps. Both turned at the sound of his voice.

"You are to apologize at once, Tony!"

Arthur Knight, coat over his arm and holding his hat, stood in the doorway. He had come into the house just in time to hear his daughter's last tirade. Knight's face was flushed and his chin (of which Tony's was an exact replica) was set in a hard line.

"Apologize to Judith!" he commanded his daughter the second time. "You are to do it at once."

"I won't."

The air of the room was electric. One spark—and the fuse would be lit. Judith glanced from her husband to Tony, then back again. What would happen next? It was terrifying.

"But you mustn't!" she protested. "You mustn't, Arthur—"

"Stay out of this, Judith," Knight told her curtly. "Tony is going to obey me. She is going to ask you to forgive the outrageous things she has been saying and tell you she is sorry for them. All right, Tony." He turned toward the girl. "Let me hear your apology."

Judith had never seen her husband in a mood like this. There was anger in his voice to match Tony's own. In addition there was determination to brook no resistance.

The decisive figure in this drama of clashing will was Tony Knight. She met her father's gaze sullenly and rebelliously. Then, as though his unflinching disapproval was too much, she sank into a little heap on the davenport, hid her face in her hands and began to weep.

Ruddy circles of embarrassment shone in Judith's pale cheeks. What a scene for her introduction to the Knight household! And what gossip for the servants. Both the father's and daughter's voices must have carried far enough for them to hear. Judith had taken no part in the controversy and yet she knew she was the guilty cause of it all.

She looked at Arthur and thought his obdurate mood was weakening. Tony's shoulders rose and fell. Her quick, gasping sobs made the only sound in the room.

"Excuse me, ma'am!"

Frightened, apparently in doubt about the intrusion, Harriet appeared in the doorway.

"What is it, Harriet?"

"It's—someone on the telephone. A message for Miss Knight, ma'am."

"Thank you."

The maid turned to leave. Tony raised her head, seeking her father with tearful, accusing eyes. Then she arose, brushed back her disordered hair and called to Harriet in a quavering, unsteady voice:

"I—I'll take the call in the study."

Tony Knight, disappearing through the study door, gave the impression of a forced and hasty retreat. Temporarily Tony's were lowered.

Judith placed a hand on Knight's arm.

"I don't mind about what she said," Judith told him. "Don't be severe with her, Arthur, on my account.

He shook her hand off.

"Tony defied me," he said. "I will not have defiance. Why, she was talking like a—like a vixen. It was outrageous!"

"But I don't think it's going to help any to antagonize the child," Judith pleaded.

Knight made no answer. There seemed nothing for Judith to do but wait dismally for the outcome.

It was a good five minutes before Tony reappeared. She had to pass through the living room in order to reach the stairs. Otherwise she certainly would not have returned.

Tony looked as though she had recovered from her temper. The small face was petulant and sullen still, but the look of wildness was gone. Some word had come to her over the telephone which had proved quieting. She was an odd-looking little creature as she entered the living room. The scarlet lounging suit she wore had a blouse and loose trousers, the top part of the garment very gay with appliqued figures in black. Tony wore her dark hair in a low knot at the back of her neck. It curled becomingly about her face, but just now the curls were unkempt and the knot was disordered. On the girl's feet were frivolous pumps which shrieked "Paris!"

Tony gave her father an apprehensive glance and started across the room. Knight stopped her.

"Tony," he said, "who was that on the telephone?"

"Why, father—just—a friend. A friend who crossed on the same ship I took."

"Was it a man?"

"Y-es. He—he asked to take me to the theater."

"You're not leaving this house tonight until you apologize to Judith for what you said to her."

Surely Arthur Knight had never used that tone with his daughter before. She stared at him for an instant, as though studying the man. Suddenly Tony looked toward Judith.

"I apologize," she said in a low grudging voice, "since my father insists."

With that Tony Knight fled. She ran out of the room and up the stairway.

The restraint was broken and Judith made the most of it. Her face lit with a smile as she turned quickly.

"Time is flying, Arthur. It's nearly six o'clock and neither of us is dressed for dinner. With a treasure like Cora in the kitchen it would never, never do to keep the meal waiting. Shan't we go up?"

Knight picked up the hat and coat he had dropped into a chair. He looked tired.

"Yes," he agreed. "Here, I've got to get rid of these things."

Judith took the hat and coat from him. She hung them away in a closet for wraps. Then they mounted the stairs.

Dinner had been ordered for seven o'clock. Fifteen minutes before that time Judith was downstairs, nervously assuring herself that there could not be another scene. Such things did not happen. Two affairs like that in a row were impossible!

Would Tony appear for dinner? Arthur came down, looking very handsome in his dinner clothes. The hour had refreshed him and he seemed to have forgotten his anger.

"I sent off a note to Junior this afternoon," he told her. "By the way, he'll be here Saturday. Can't decide what to buy the young rascal for Christmas. You know, to really please him it ought to be the Graf Zeppelin. Think you could wrap it in an attractive package, Judith?"

She was glad to hear him joke. Just then Judith's heart lifted, for down the stairs came Tony.

"Dinner is served, I think," said Judith Knight. "Let's go into the dining room."

Tony spoke only once or twice throughout the meal but was civil toward her stepmother. The girl had dressed for the theater in a dazzling white frock which combined the crispness of taffeta with tulle. It was sophisticated, low-cut, and a great bow on the skirt suggested its French origin. Tony wore coral jewelry, no more flaming than her lips.

The dinner passed more comfortably than Judith had expected. Tony asked to be excused when coffee was served. She went up to her room, and 15 minutes later when Harriet announced a young man was waiting, Tony descended.

Judith saw that the girl was wrapped in white fur. Without any word for the two in the living room, Tony and her escort left the house.

An hour or so had passed before Judith Knight said hesitantly to Arthur:

"Do you know whom Tony is with tonight?"

"Good Lord, no! I can't keep trace of her admirers. Never could!"

At that precise instant, it happened Tony Knight rode in an imported coupe driven by a young man in evening clothes.

"No, no, darling!" he was saying to her. "Not the Casino! Much too likely there to meet my wife!"

Patent Situation In Radio Field Is Said Intolerable

Combine Seeking To Create Monopoly And Dominate Industry, Grigsby Says Before I. C. C. Committee

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17. (AP)—B. J. Grigsby, president of the Grigsby Grunow company of Chicago, testified before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee today that the patent situation in the radio industry was becoming intolerable and that a combine was seeking to dominate the industry and create a monopoly.

Telling the committee as it continued hearings on the Couzens communications bill that his company, which produces Majestic sets, was licensed under patents of the Radio Corporation of America, the General Electric company, the Westinghouse company and the American Telephone and Telegraph company, Grigsby said:

Would Save Millions.

"In the year and a half in which we have made radio sets, we have paid that monopoly $5,302,879.15 in royalties." He added that had his company not been compelled to add this royalty to the manufacturing cost, the retail purchasers of its sets would have been saved millions of dollars.

"We did not pay this royalty because we considered these patents worth such a royalty," he continued. "We did not believe we needed these patents, and none of them had been adjudicated. But the radio combine had so terrorized the industry and had so intimidated the dealers and jobbers everywhere that they were afraid to handle what they called 'unlicensed' sets."

Galaxy Of Stars Appear On Week's Screen Programs

Farce Comedy To Feature Program At Palace Today

"The Kibitzer" Is Hebrew Dialect Comedy Film

"THE KIBITZER" with Harry Green in the title role, comes to the Palace Theatre for a two-day run beginning today.

"The Kibitzer," which has often been referred to by showmen as "The Comedy Wolf of Wall Street," is the first all-talking dialect film.

Green, who has made a great success on the stage and screen in his Jewish dialect character roles, is ideally cast for the part. He is remembered for his screamingly funny work as the theatre manager in "Close Harmony;" as the box-fight manager in "The Man I Love" and as the personal manager of Moran and Mack in "Why Bring That Up?". He has a splendid gift for character-comedy.

He is supported in this picture by Mary Brian and Neil Hamilton.

The picture is based on a big Broadway success of a year ago, "Kibitzer," which was written by Joseph Swerling and Edward G. Robinson, with Robinson playing the title role. Edward Sloman, director of "We Americans," "The Foreign Legion" and other successes, directed "The Kibitzer."

Foreign style footwear is being worn in many cities of China.

"Spies" To Open At Lyric Today

Mystery Play Is Popular Show In Europe

"SPIES," the enthusiastically heralded UFA mystery play which comes today to the Lyric Theatre, introduces to American audiences a new entertainment which has of late taken the Continent by storm.

This is the practice of staging prize-fights between dancers in the smart cafes of Berlin, Leipzig and leading European cities. Attempted as a novelty by the ingenious proprietor of a cabaret in the German capital, the idea spread like wildfire and has attracted a wide vogue, although as yet America doesn't seem to have caught on.

In one of the colorful sequences of "Spies," a scene actually staged in a leading Berlin night club, close-ups of the dancers were shown, then, in remarkably fast order, the floor was cleared by attendants while two strapping pugilists took their places in a ring previously constructed, but noted by few persons, in the middle of the room.

Dancers rush about the squared enclosure to enjoy this new thrill; then, after ten or fifteen minutes of furious tussling, culminating usually in a knockout, the orchestra appears in a trice and the tumult of the dance is on.

Buddy Rogers And Jean Arthur Star In Palace Drama

New Talkie "Half Way To Heaven" Coming Here

EVERY CORNER of the world has come to know Charles (Buddy) Rogers as a great dispenser of joyful entertainment and, in his latest action-romance, "Half Way to Heaven," which will show at the Palace theatre, starting Friday for two days, he has a part which gives him all the opportunity he needs to amuse and thrill.

"Half Way to Heaven" brings Rogers to the all-talking screen as a youthful trapeze performer in a carnival. In this daring role, he falls in love with Jean Arthur, his feminine partner whose charms have also captured the heart of the third member of the act, Paul Lukas a dangerous character whose fiery jealousy threatens even Rogers' life. Rogers' own skill and daring alone save him from Lukas' rage but Lukas vows to kill him while the trio are performing under the "big top."

Climax Thrilling

The story comes to a smashing, hair-raising climax when Rogers, evading Lukas' attempt on his life, turns on the villain, beats him so severely that Lukas leaves the show and Rogers and Miss Arthur are free to continue their interesting romance.

"Half Way to Heaven" was filmed in the modern manner by George Abbott, maker of the Moran and Mack picture, "Why Bring That Up?"

Joan Crawford To Show in Film at Lindsey Thursday

Dancing Features "Our Modern Maidens"

IF JOAN CRAWFORD had continued to average the same number of steps daily for four months that she used the first two weeks during the filming of her first starring picture, "Our Modern Maidens," which comes Thursday to the Lindsey Theatre with a synchronized sound score, she would have exercised the same energy necessary in dancing from Los Angeles to Chicago.

For this popular Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star, famous for her dancing both on the stage and in pictures, danced practically every day for five weeks, having spent three weeks training for a specialty number seen in her latest picture. Several different dances were executed during this period.

The old, but still popular "Black Bottom" and the "Charleston" contributed several thousand steps to the possible marathon record. Many of the steps were earned in ballroom dancing during "rest periods" between scenes, when the set musician played especially for the star.

One of the unique items of the dancing record is that Miss Crawford danced to several different sources of music and on various floor materials. During the picture she stepped it off on pavement, grass, in a private parlor car, and in a regular ballroom, the music being everything from whistling to an 18-piece orchestra. She also danced to the rumbling of thunder during an unusual California storm.

The story is a filmization of ultra-modern youth written by Josephine Lovett, author of "Our Dancing Daughters." Jack Conway directed. The supporting cast includes Rod La Rosque, Douglas Fairbanks, jr., Anita Page, Edward Nugent, Josephine Dunn, Albert Gran and others.

"Applause" Will Be Seen Today At Lindsey Theatre

Helen Morgan Star Of Burlesque Picture

IT cost Helen Morgan just $175 to find out that she could speak lines. And now that she has the leading role in "Applause" the Paramount all-talking picture that comes to the Lindsey Theatre the first half of the week, she figures that it was worth that much and more, to know that she could talk as well as sing.

Miss Morgan made her experiment at the Grove Street theatre in New York as a member of the Grand Guignol players in "Minuet," eight months before she joined the cast of Florenz Ziegfeld's justly famous "Show Boat".

Changed Name

"I went under the name of Neleh Nagrom, which is my name spelled backwards," explained Miss Morgan in telling of her first experience as a dramatic actress. "I knew I could sing a song but I didn't know whether I could go on the stage and speak lines. So I took part in the production of 'Minuet' just to satisfy myself. I had a hunch that I could do it but I wanted to be sure. I only played a week but I was satisfied that if I ever went on the stage in a legitimate production I could acquit myself creditably.

For the week's work Miss Morgan received $25 but the management was having financial difficulties so she loaned $200 to pay some urgent bills. The company closed without any profits and Miss Morgan checked off the $... net loss to experience.

In "Applause" Miss Morgan has a role of great dramatic intensity and as she explains it: "I would never have taken the part if I had not first assured myself that I had at least a little bit of talent for acting."

Rouben Mamoulian, Theatre Guild director of famous stage successes in New York was the director of "Applause." It is his first moving picture as well as Miss Morgan's first. When the picture opened for a big New York run several months ago, critics there gave it a very cordial reception.

Zimbalist Careful About Violin Bows

Artist Careful With Bows As With His Violins

Efrem Zimbalist, famous Russian violinist, will appear in Lubbock on Tuesday, February 4, at Texas Technological college, according to an announcement Saturday.

Fine violin bows are almost as rare and nearly as necessary to the virtuoso as are fine old violins, though little is ever said about them or their value, according to Mr. Zimbalist. "It seems absurd that such a simple thing as a bow should be worth $400 or $500, or, as in some cases, as much as $1,000. But a great deal besides the wood and the hair go into the making of a really good bow, without which the artist is helpless in a tonal sense and greatly handicapped technically, no matter how excellent his violin."

The coming artist has been as careful in his search for bows as he has in his collecting of rare violins, of which he possess half a dozen of the best in America, not to mention the famous "Lamoureux" and his Lorenzo Guadagnini. Several of his bows cost him around $500 each and are not for sale now at any price.

Well-Rounded Program Offered By Farmers' Course Here Soon

Tech Preparing For Three Big Days, Feb. 3, 4, 5

An exceptionally well-rounded program is to be offered at the Second Annual Texas Tech Farmers' and Homemakers' Short Course, February 3, 4 and 5, with almost every phase of farm problems covered.

Representatives of Texas A. and M. college, the Federal Farm Land Bank, the American Cotton Cooperative and America Wheat corporation as set up by the Federal Farm Board, the Texas and National Wheat Growers associations, Texas Farm Bureau and Farm Bureau Cotton association, agricultural agents of both the Santa Fe and Fort Worth and Denver railways, the American Farm Bureau Federation, and other organizations are to deliver addresses, as well as the faculties of the Tech schools of agriculture and home economics.

Bower Tells Import

The import of this short course is very aptly expressed by H. J. Bower, chairman of the event and professor of agronomy in the Tech school of agriculture.

"In the past 25 years we have had good crops and poor crops," says Mr. Bower, "but the ambition for rural advancement has exhibited a continued interest. This ambition brought about the location of the Texas Technological college. To serve in this capacity with resident students has brought about an increasing enrollment, but there are many who can not be resident students. For that reason the Short Course is to be held.

Greater Benefits Derived

"With this class of interest obtaining, it is the desire of the school of agriculture and the school of home economics of Texas Tech to perform this desired service. The different departments of the school have been giving servie to various individuals in the different communities of West Texas. This work has now developed to where greater benefit can be derived by all coming together once a year at Texas Tech.

"Texas Tech extends an invitation to all who are interested in the development of this program for the welfare of all concerned in rural progress of West Texas."

In speaking of the special emphasis placed on community development at this year's Short Course, Mr. Bower continues:

"A scientific agriculture is developed by the advancement of rural communities on scientific lines. Counties located upon the West Texas prairies, where we secure most of nature's advantages. Community Service is our watchword. We are here to stay and here to serve.

Community Work Featured

"This is accomplished by all service organizations working together. Thus the second day's program on Tuesday, February 4, is one of united effort by the Texas A. and M. Extension service, the Texas Farm Bureau Federation, the Houston Federal Land Bank of Texas, and the Texas Technological College.

"Mrs. Charles W. Sewell, director of the American Farm Bureau Federation and a lecturer of national reputation, is the leader for this day's program. To hear Mrs. Sewell is an inspiration for the development of every home in the loyal communities for the advancement of West Texas.

"The expenses of Mrs. Sewell are met by the Farmers' organizations of West Texas. With such advanced interest, this promises to be the best day of the program, as each attendant will carry an inspiration home that will mean more to his or her life, and to that of his or her community."

Farmers Of Tulia Join Cow Testing

With the addition of eight dairy farmers of Tulia, who are trying out for designation as master dairy farmers, the West Texas by Mail Cow Testing Laboratory at Texas Tech, now has 32 who are taking advantage of service offered by this laboratory and keeping accurate daily records of each cow's production.

The laboratory is a non-profit organization, charges made to dairy farmers covering only the cost of actual handling and testing. It is sponsored jointly by Sterling C. Evans, district agricultural agent of Texas A. and M. college, the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce and Texas Technological college. K. M. Renner, professor of dairy manufacturing at Tech, is in charge of the laboratory.

Plans are underway now that will more than likely increase the number of farmers using this service to 75 by the first of April, Mr. Renner announces, as many county agents in West Texas are stressing the work and the result of accurate records kept by those who have been using the service since it was established last May is creating much favorable attention.

Brady Area Sends Out 48 Carloads In Season

BRADY, Jan. 18. (AP)—Forty-eight carloads, or approximately 1,000,000 pounds of dressed turkey, were shipped by Brady produce houses during the Thanksgiving and Christmas season. The average price paid was 20 cents per pound, liveweight.

While this season's shipments were ten carloads less than for the 1928 season, it is expected January shipments will be sufficiently large to reach the previous season's total.

Planting Of Perennials Explained For Plains By Professor At Tech

Fruit And Shade Trees Are Best If Planted In Latter Part Of May; Mahoney Gives Directions

During average years, the best time for planting fruit or shade trees, evergreens and shrubs, in the South Plains area, according to Charles H. Mahoney, professor of horticulture at Texas Technnological college, is the latter part of May. If the year proves to be the possessor of a wet spring, these may be planted in March.

It is better to wait until the latter part of May for planting the above plants, because of winds prevailing, lack of moisture and late freezes, Mr. Mahoney explains. Plans for planting trees may be made now, however, and it is considered the best practice, always, to first buy evergreens and shrubs in cans or pots, keeping them inside until planting time. By purchasing these in cans or pots before planting, insurance of good root systems is had.

Now Time To Plant

The month of January, however, is time for planting perennials, and Texas Tech is to start two perennial plans this spring, in which all varieties will be tested for this particular section. The plans will be located near the greenhouse at the college.

In planning the perennial border, Mr. Mahoney explains many details which everyone interested should welcome.

Informal perennial borders, Mahoney says, should be planted in clumps, unevenly or scattered. Masses may be obtained and yet have the plants in rows. In rows they are easier to cultivate, but the rows need not be straight, but parallel.

Explains How To Be Planted

These perennials should be tall at back and low in front, not too regular, except in straight borders. It is well to break the line with evergreen or pergola. Allow the bold groups of tall plants to come to the front.

Width of the borders should not be less than four feet, the best being between six and eight feet. "Get big eyefuls of color," is a suggestion, "little dabs are puny."

For backgrounds, use lattice fence, evergreen hedge, shrubs, etc. When hedge is used, put the border two feet from it, on account of root competition.

Will Not Bloom All Year

It is almost impossible to have plants bloom the entire season, without some bare spots. This fact calls for planning and compromise.

Color of perennials is a matter of personal taste. Texture is really more important. Light shades mix, but not light and dark shades. "Suit your own fancy, but plan it out first on paper. The best enjoyment is in moving and transplanting.

A neutral soil is needed, with manure and organic matter to be added. Azalea, laurels, etc., need acid soil. Depth of two feet, mix one-half rotted manure. Some plants are put in during the fall, if it is wet, and mulched. The anemone, aster and shaster daisy must not be planted in the fall.

Cultivation Necessary

Cultivation is necessary and planting in rows is for that purpose. Water heavily and not too frequently.

A cold frame or hotbed should be used for seeding. Start in January for most seed. Transplant to thumb pots and leave in frames until after the spring winds are over.

Following is a list of perennials suggested for the South Plains:

Michaelmas daisy, Italian aster, Beauty of Colwell aster, grandiflorus aster, St. Egwyn ster, Tartaran aster, Grandiflora Coreopsis, Sweet William, Baby's Breath, Bearded German, Amoena Phlox, Moss pink, garden panticulata, blue divaricata, Spike Speedwell.

Market Review

Butter markets of the East and Pacific coast as well have been weak and unsettled during the week. There has been a liberal supply of fresh butter and the surplus of storage holdings compared with a year ago is increasing. These conditions are creating a lower tendency and quotations have declined.

According to the U. S. Government report, receipts of fresh butter Chicago, New York, Boston and Philadelphia from Monday to Friday of last week were 127,961 60-pound tubs as compared with 123,377 same days previous weeks and 125,427 same period a year ago.

The weekly cold storage holding report as issued by the U. S. Department of Agriculture shows that on January 4, 1930, there were in these cities 34,929,500 pounds of butter as against January 5, 1929, 27,619,100 pounds. On December 28, 1929, there were 87,118,100 pounds of butter in storage in the 26 cities as against a year ago, same day 30,978,500.

The Chicago market today on 90 Score Standards is 32 cents, a decline of two cents from Monday a week ago. The New York market on 92 Score Extras is 35 to 35 1-2 cents, compared with 37 cents on last Monday.

Egg production and receipts in the Eastern markets last week showed an increase over the preceding week and while there is clearly good buying demand, the increased supply available is causing an adjustment of selling prices to a lower level.

Chicago market today on Fresh Graded Firsts is 41 to 42 1-2 cents. A week ago, the same grade was quoted 44 to 45 cents. The New York market on Firsts is 43 1-2 to 44 cents, representing a decline since Monday a week ago 2 1-4 to 2 1-2 cents a dozen.

There has been a noticeable increase in the volume of poultry being marketed. There is an active buying demand on fowl; and springs are moving out at prices varying directly in accordance with quality. Percentage of staggy young roosters is increasing and they are selling at differentials under good quality soft meated springs. This situation is being reflected in the country on paying prices to the producer for this class of poultry.

Chicago live poultry market today is quoted as follows: Leghorn fowl 20 cents, colored fowl 26 1-2, spring, leghorns 17, heavy colored stock 21 1-2, stags 19, old roosters 18 cents.

NATIONAL FARM OUTLOOK

By ARTHUR H. JENKINS
Editor, The Farm Journal

About this time of year the professional and amateur statisticians get out their adding machines and start to grind out figures on the farming business.

They will show what the 1929 production of the farms was, in dollars, and what the cash sales were. What the average farmer should have gotten for his time as a worker, and for his brains and attention as a manager. And many of them will wind up by telling the farmer how much more money he ought to have made, and what a general sucker he is to be in the business at all.

There would be no complaint about this if it were a true picture of farm incomes. But as a matter of fact, it is a very incomplete picture, and consequently misleading. It is wrong, in the first place, to speak of the "average farmer." There is no such thing. You cannot average six and a quarter million farmers. You cannot average a colored man with his mule in Mississippi, with Thomas D. Campbell in Montana with 20,000 acres of wheat, with a poultryman in New Jersey with 5,000 White Leghorns in a four-story laying-house, and get any result that means anything.

Suppose five farmers have incomes of $6,000 each, and five other farmers incomes of $800 each. You can say that in this case the average income is $4,400; but which one of these ten men is the "average farmer?"

However, I started to speak of something even more important, and that is, that the actual income of farmers is something that is not known to anybody.

Nobody knows for example, what value should be placed on the free house-rent that the farm family receives.

Nobody knows just what food and fuel the farm family obtains from its own farm, nor what valuation ought to be placed on it. I am personally convinc that the item of food from the farm—milk, eggs, poultry, meats, vegetables, fruits, etc.—is grossly undervalued in most studies of this kind.

Most important of all, nobody knows how much and in how many ways the farm family income is increased by outside work, or the carrying on of some other business "on the side."

We can be sure only of one thing, it seems to me, and that is that the real farm income, the real reward for labor and management, is much higher than the statisticians are able to figure it.

Certainly there is no movement of energetic and progressive farmers off the productive farms of the country.

There is a good profit in most branches of the business when carried on by a man who knows what he is about. He does not remain on the farm because he is a sucker, but because he believes in country life for his family, and earns an income that is a good deal higher than the statisticians would have us believe.

Moore Bros. Have Oliver Day Monday

Moore Bros., hardware and implement dealers, who were recently made company distributors for the South Plains and local dealers of the Oliver Farm Implement company, will hold open house for farmers of this section Monday, January 20, in observance of Oliver Day.

Following a merger of a number of well-known implement manufacturers about a year ago, the Oliver company now offers, and Moore Bros. will distribute, Oliver tillage tools, Hart-Barr tractors, Nichols & Shepard "Red River Special" threshers and combines and Amrican seeding implements.

A full day's program for Monday has been arranged, with moving pictures, lectures, demonstrations and lunch, George H. Moore announces.

Special Course In Grain Sorghums Is Offered By School

Texas Tech Short Course To Give Instruction For Men Of South Plains Desiring State Certificates

Growers of grain sorghums, who aspire to become breeders and receive state certification of purebred grain sorghum seed growers, will be interested in that part of the Second Annual Texas Tech Farmers' and Home Makers' Short Course to be held here February 3, 4 and 5, which has been planned for their especial benefit.

Charles H. Mahoney, professor of horticulture in the Tech school of agriculture, announces that Don L. Jones, superintendent of the State Agricultural Experiment Station here and an authority on grain sorghums, who has been appointed by the U. S. government, will offer instructions on these crops.

Mr. Mahoney will give instruction on plant breeding, in connection with the short course for grain sorghum growers.

"The government not only recognizes Mr. Jones as an outstanding authority on grain sorghums," says Mr. Mahoney, "but they recognize the fact that the South Plains section is the leading grain sorghum country of America."

PURCHASES CHICKS

San Marcos Planter Orders 20,000 Chicks

LOCKHART, Jan. 18. (AP)—Herman Conrad, a San Marcos river planter, announces that he will diversify with poultry in connection with his large black land plantation. He has ordered for immediate delivery 20,000 baby white leghorn chickens.

Eggs during the holiday season here reached the peak in prices, selling as high as 60 cents a dozen. It is reported this is causing many farmers to consider the better opportunity of poultry raising as against cotton.

VIOLATORS FINED

State Reaps $3,000 In Fines During Season

AUSTIN, Jan. 18. (AP)—Two hundred and fifty-one fines, amounting to approximately $3,000, were paid last month for violation of the state conservation laws. One hundred and sixty-one fines were paid for infractions of the game laws, 77 by fur law violators and 13 for violations of the fish statutes.

Sixty-one persons were fined for hunting without a license, 35 for killing quail and doves out of season, one for killing a black tail deer out of season, 13 for killing does, 9 for killing fawn deer, 7 for hunting on game preserves, 4 for headlighting, 2 for running deer with dogs, 2 for shooting turkey hens, 3 for exceeding the bag limit, 1 for shooting ducks after sundown and one for killing a non-game bird.

The fur law fines were for trapping without license and for possessing pelts before the season's opening. The most important of the fish fines was one for the dynamiting of fish.

Mrs. Perkins Says It Is Remarkable

"I Suffered About 20 Years And One Half Bottle Of Orgatone Has Completely Relieved me," Says Wichita House Wife

"I sincerely think Orgatone is a wonderful medicine and wouldn't be without it for anything," said Mrs. J. Perkins of 201 Patterson, Wichita Falls, Texas.

"For twenty years I have suffered from a terrible, chronic case of stomach trouble. I had such miserable, sick headaches. I would get blind and numb and simply wasn't able to stay out of bed. Every time I would get one of those spells I would have to quit my work and lie down until I got over it, and sometimes, it would last for hours. I had dizzy and bilious spells, almost every day, and wasn't able to eat hardly anything, without it bothering me. I had pains in my back and sides, which bothered me almost all the time, and was severely constipated. My livet also was out of order, and I think, this was the cause of my pains.

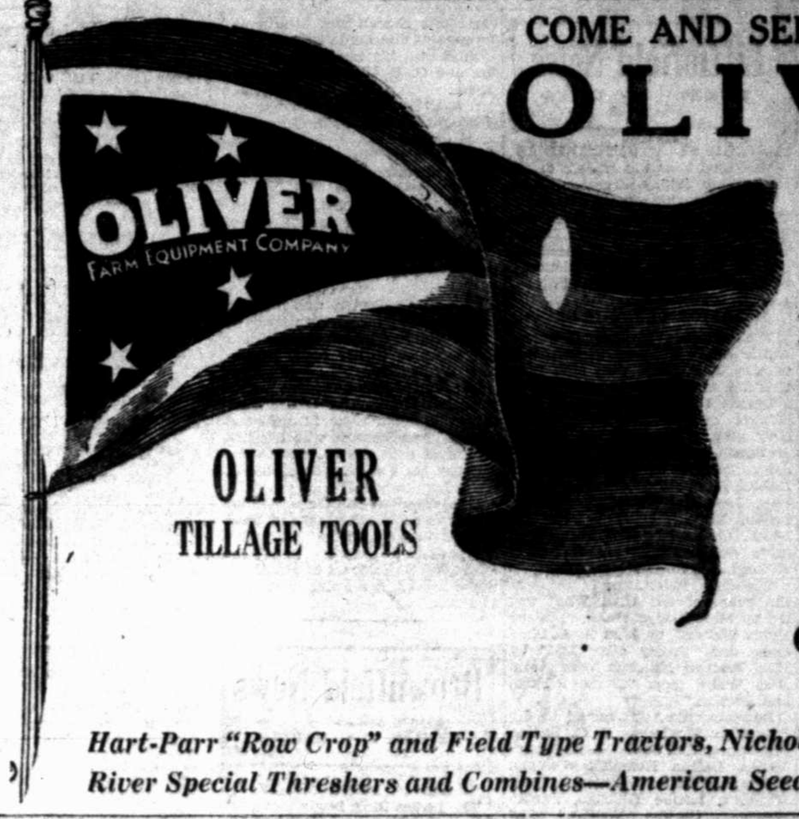

"I heard about how Orgatone was benefiting so many of our people right here in Wichita so I decided to try a bottle. It began to help me right from the start. I haven't had a dizzy or bilious spell since taking the first one-half bottle, I eat anything I want, and am completely relieved of those miserable sick, dizzy headaches, and the pains in my back and my constipation has been relieved. I have recommended Orgatone to my friends, for I know what it will do for you. I think it is a wonderful medicine and wouldn't be without it for anything, and I'm going to take it as long as I can secure it."

Genuine Orgatone may be obtained in Lubbock at Bowen's Drug Store. Adv.

Young Guatemalan Tech Student Is Methodist Pastor Of 'Little Juarez'

Alfred Melendez Is Doing Good With Work In City

BY MARGARET TURNER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

EACH SUNDAY morning and evening when students of Texas Technological college gather in the churches of their preferences a young Guatemalan student ascends the pulpit of the small Methodist church in "Little Juarez" and preaches in Spanish to either a handful of people or a full house dependent entirely on the weather conditions of whether members of his congregation have returned from their week's labor.

This young Tech student, Alfred Melendez, is a member of the Texas Mexican conference and has ambition of becoming an ordained minister of the gospel. He attended Wesleyan Institute, training school for Mexicans in the city of San Antonio which is under the supervision of the Methodist church, and was for four years in the theological academy there.

Granbery Advised Him

"I had planned to attend a church school upon graduation, said Mr. Melendez, "but Dr. John C. Granbery advised me to come to Texas Technological college." "That started me to thinking about going to a state institution and when I found out that I could be appointed minister of the local Mexican Methodist church I made up my mind to come here."

The appointment to the position came through Bishop W. B. Beauchamp who heads Methodist Mexican work in the state of Texas.

When the young Central American arrived in Lubbock and went out to inspect the church that was to be his work for at least one year the prospect was not bright to say the least. Lamps which smoke in winter and attract myriads of insects in summer hung from the ceiling, a rackety hand organ was there for the purpose of furnishing music, while the members had scattered through lack of organization.

Situation Looked Bad

"I was terribly discouraged," confessed young Melendez. "It seemed a very difficult situation and I didn't know how to begin, but the Missionary societies of the First Methodist and Asbury Methodist churches came to my aid and have aided in every possible way. Right away Dr. Paul W. Horn's Sunday school class bought me a car in order that I may go the long distance from my boarding place near the college to the Mexican settlement.

"The next thing, continued the student, "the Woman's Missionary society of the First Methodist church were instrumental in having running water installed in the parsonage, which is occupied by a needy family, and in having the church wired. They also furnished the parsonage. Of course I am truly grateful for this missionary work."

Parishoners Clothed

Many of the parishoners have been clothed partly in dresses and suits furnished by women of the churches under the supervision of Mrs. Granbery.

The Asbury Methodist church gave the little church a piano and pews which are comfortable, have replaced the plank benches which formerly furnished the room. More than 100 persons can be seated comfortably in the tiny chapel which little resembles that of last September.

There are two services a Sunday and Sunday school is conducted. On Thursday evening an hour, corresponding to prayer meeting is held in the church. There are 38 members on the church roll and from 20 to 25 are usually in attendance although the congregation is transient and unstabilized to a great extent.

Majority Are Laborers

"The majority of my people are from the laboring classes," said the minister, "and are not versed in the ways of the church. As a consequence you realise that I couldn't make a scientific approach to a subject and expect them to get anything out of it. For the past few Sundays I have been preaching on the history of Christianity and of the Christian church in the beginning. An avoidance is made of the contraversies and they are given only what they can comprehend."

Albert Melendez is a native of Quezaltenango, Guatemala and before coming to North America attended a military school. He learned to speak English in Wesleyan Institute at San Antonio and later went to Cuba where he was assistant pastor in a large church. He is 26 years of age and is a freshman student in Texas Technological college.

Needs Missionaries

"I think the great need of my country is for trained missionaries to go there and preach to the educated and wealthy classes," he said. "In Guatemala alone there are over 4,000,000 inhabitants and yet to date there is only one Protestant church established and that is the Presbyterian. Approximately 100,000 of the Guatemalans belong to the Presbyterian church while the remainder are Catholics or do not profess any religion.

The well-educated people do not go to church in many instances, according to Mr. Melendez, because 75 per cent of the native preachers have only a high school education and there is no appeal to the educated. Many women go to the Catholic church.

Home Town Catholic

"The city of Quezaltenango, which is my home town, is composed of the wealthier class of people. It has a population of 85,000 and at the last census only 10,000 of this number were Protestants. Many are educated in Europe and America and are as well prepared to hear an educated minister as any person in America. Of course they do not care to hear an illiterate sermon and consequently many do not go to church.

When prepared preachers are sent to Latin America it is the earnest belief of this young college student that the country will become Protestant and he points out instances of progress in that direction which although slow is lasting.

Need For Careful Driving In Lubbock Is Stressed; Campaign Would Not Be Amiss, Officers And Citizens Aver

WHILE a large percentage of Lubbock motorists are careful drivers, valuing the well being of their fellows and guarding the title of a "careful driver," in the opinion of local officers a campaign to encourage this attitude would not be amiss.

"Anything that could be inaugurated to encourage careful driving would be good for the city and even the state," Judge J. T. Inmon, of the city corporation court, stated. "Personally I believe a law in the state such as is used in Massachusetts, to reduce insurance rates and licenses to motorists at the end of the year who turn in an unstained record, would have its effect. This law is being enforced in that state and from all reports, is proving a success."

Many Careful Here

Chief of Police John Lemond declared that, even though the majority of Lubbock drivers are careful, too much encouragement cannot be given them. "I am a strong supporter of the idea," he said, "of a reduction of insurance rates and licenses at the end of the year for every unstained record. To be sure, there are many accidents that are unavoidable. These I do not think should be held against the drivers for even the best sometimes have mishaps. As officers of the law we try at all times to keep the idea of careful driving before the public and to date I think Lubbock can boast a long list of careful and intelligent motorists.

"Carelessness is nothing less than criminal and I think any accident which occurs as a result of pure carelessness should be prosecuted. Only by a rigid enforcement of traffic laws can we reduce the mounting list of fatalities."

Carelessness Seen

Traffic officers of the local police department are forceful in their convictions that some steps should be taken by the state of Texas to advance a program of careful driving. "Many times while riding the streets of Lubbock we see evidences of carelessness that could be avoided and stopped," C. E. Luce, motorcycle officer, said. "But as a whole we have very little trouble with local citizens."

A brief survey among local drivers reveals a new idea, one in which they express the opinion that a pride would be taken in by all motorists.

In several sections of the country cities have had windshield stickers printed which proclaim to all that the driver of that automobile is careful. In order to get these stickers a motorist must at all times keep his record clean and upon evidence presented that he is thoughtful, city officers will give him the emblem. This plan is being used in Iowa and cities have become enthusiastic about it.

"In my opinion car owners and business men are cautious in their driving," said C. A. Sheffield. "From observation it seems that the majority of reckleasness is from drivers of borrowed cars or employes of speedy service concerns. Tax reduction only once a year is not a frequent enough reminder while the emblem or sticker would serve as a reminder 365 days out of the year."

Careful driving, it has been pointed out, does not necessitate slow driving but rather a regard of all traffic signals and laws of the city and state. Mechanical conditions of all automobiles should be in good order at all times, headlights, brakes, etc., are commonly referred to as "accident causes."

"A cut in tax of insurance is good in a way but anyone who is reckless with his car is more or less so with his money," explained J. F. Frye. "I believe that we need something to continually impress on the minds of people that careful droving is the order."

Arthur Brown is a believer in the windshield sticker plan. "The emblem would cause friendly competition and build up a community pride for reduction of car accidents. This plan has been adopted by many cities and motor accidents are being cut to a minimum."

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN.....

'Paid too much for a Whistle'

BUT-

he founded a law of ECONOMY

It didn't take seven coppers to buy a whistle in the days of Benjamin Franklin, but that is what he paid for it. He paid it, because, boy like, it was worth more in his eyes than its commercial value. Because someone asked seven coppers for it after first seeing the seven coppers, Benjamin paid the price.

It is not that it injured the family finances, as indicated by the mother's reproach to the lad, but that Franklin afterward placed an evaluation upon every commodity and every institution with which he came in contact during his life. So thoroughly did he appreciate values that he became a great man. Through his greatness he passed on to future generations this great principle of economy—this great lesson of value—"Don't pay too much for a Whistle." It is upon this principle of "making the most of what you have" that Thrift Week has been instituted, and upon this principle that Thrift Week is worth serious thought by every individual.

U. S. Employment Service Sees Better Time In 1930, Rodney Dutcher Avers

Warning, However, Is Given That It Will Not Be Uniform

By RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—There is a wide variation of industial-employment conditions over the country, but only in few fields is there no more hopeful prospect during the coming year, according to a general forecast of the U. S. Employment Service.

Predictions include a good outlook for skilled labor in California and Georgia but not so good for unskilled labor lower employment level in Illinois than in 1929 without much improvement before summer, improved labor demand in Kansas, better employment prospects than in 1929 in Massachusetts, great improvement expected in Michigan, which entered this year with considerable unemployment, some increase in Missouri, an early return to satisfactory employment conditions in New York, possible increase in North Carolina, slight increase probable in Oklahoma, better conditions by spring in Pennsylvania comparing favorably with a year ago, normal conditions in Wisconsin, great increase in Kentucky when construction programs start, as good or better in Louisiana and adequate employment in Minnesota with better weather.

Building Conditions Uneven

The building trades situation is a little spotty. Predictions include some expected decline in California, no decrease and possibly increase in Illinois, enough jobs for resident building workers in Kansas, good prospects in Massachusetts, more work in Michigan, possibility that demand for workers in Missouri won't equal 1929, greater volume expected in New York, fair-sized building programs in North Carolina, good volume in Oklahoma, large volume in Texas, satisfactory in Wisconsin by spring and favorable prospects in Kentucky.

In agriculture increased acreage is expected in California and a big expansion in Wisconsin dairy business. Demand for farm labor may be slightly less in some agricultural states owing to increased use of machinery, Kansas, North Dakota and Nebraska being specifically mentioned. Indiana farmers anticipate a good year.

Manufacturing in many states had a brief recession late in 1929, but the outlook is considered "fairly satisfactory" in Illinois, generally good in Massachusetts and satisfactory in New York. Pennsylvania expects the recession to continue briefly into 1930, with a gradual upward trend likely to regain the 1929 levels. Fairly satisfactory schedules and some expansions are predicted for Indiana. Metal manufacturing is better off than a year ago in Wisconsin and an equally good year is forecast for New Jersey.

Furniture factories here and there may show a decline in production.

In the steel industry fairly high levels are expected in Indiana through the year, the outlook is very optimistic in Ohio and prospects are favorable in New York despite reduced working forces at present. Things also look brighter for steel workers in both Pennsylvania and Michigan.

The textile outlook is not considered rosy in Massachusetts, but increased production and employment are anticipated. Mills in several North Carolina centers have curtailed considerably, but expect to increase. Greater production is also hoped for in Rhode Island.

Automobile and allied industries in Michigan, New York and Ohio are working with considerably reduced forces, but normal levels should be reached in the spring months with great improvements as early as February. Detroit makers plan to regulate production in order to avoid abrupt curtailments such as those of last year.

Mining Is Picking Up

Coal mines still continue in poor shape, though a brighter trend is predicted for Ohio and Indiana. In metal mining California looks for a boost in copper and gold production, marked increases are expected in Colorado, copper mines will work fairly satisfactorialy in Michigan and metal mining in New Mexico, Wyoming, Utah and Idaho is considered steady.

Lumbering is offering less employment, with the possibility of gains in the Oregon mills than in the last three years, curtailment in Washington and Oklahoma, only fair conditions in Texas and "at least equal" in California.

All this is condensed and incomplete, but it may serve to give a cross-section of the way things are.

Eight Replacing Six Cylinder Car

Studebaker Among First Of Manufacturers To View Handwriting On Wall In Trend Of Popularity

After 16 years of supremacy, the six cylinder car has given way to the eight, particularly in the price field above $1000. This is shown by the 1930 New York Automobile Show where 28 out of 46 makers displayed eights. At last year's New York show, 23 manufacturers exhibited eights.

Figures on the number of eight cylinder makes exhibited at the New York Automobile Show since 1926 are of considerable interest in the light of this popular swing to eights. At the 1926 show there were 18 makes of eight cylinder cars on display. In 1927 the number was 22; in 1928, 22; in 1929, 23 and this year 28.

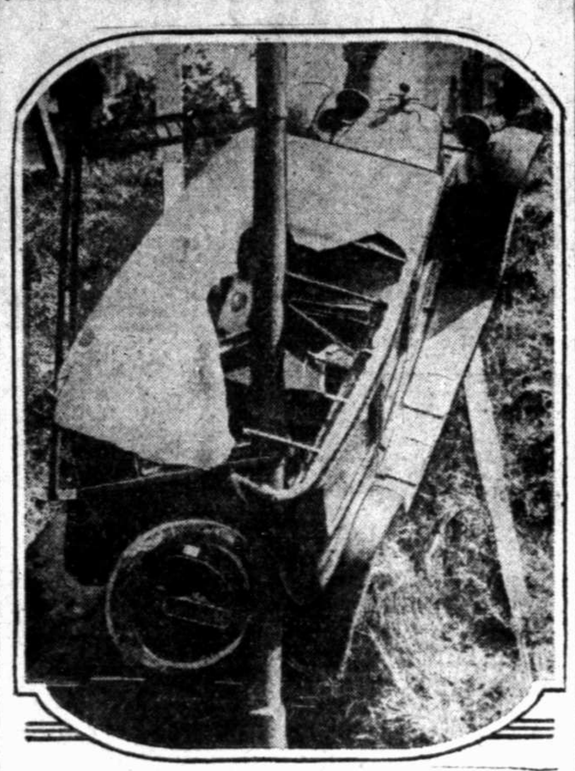

The advance from the higher priced six to the eight has now attained the momentum of the historic shift from fours to sixes ten years ago. In 1914 when the swing started, 54.2 per cent of all makes of American cars were fours. Today only 4 per cent are fours.

Study Among First

Among the first manufacturers to see the handwriting on the wall and switch from the four to the six in response to the public demand for greater and more flexible power, Studebaker again played the role of pioneer and pointed the way to the popular priced eight.

In 1927, Studebaker brought out an eight cylinder car, the President Eight, priced to command mass sales. So successful was this move that it was quickly followed by the introduction of the Commander Eight in January, 1929, and by the Dictator Eight last summer.

Four Wheels—No Brakes

Here's another incentive to have your brakes adjusted regularly. The owner of this car is an Oakland, Calif., man who was lucky that he wasn't in the car when this accident occurred. He parked his car on an incline and left it. The brakes slipped, the car ran down the hill, over an embankment and wrapped itself around a steel light pole, as illustrated in the picture.

Marquette I s Run By 1,200 Drivers

Sedan Used By Chauffeur's License Bureau In State Of Illinois In Examining Of Applicants

Many cars are driven thousands of miles by one or two drivers to establish endurance records, but few cars have ben driven by as many different persons as the Marquette sedan used by the state of Illinois Chauffeur's License Bureau in examining applicants for licenses. Although the Marquette has been driven only 1,450 miles, more than 1,200 different persons have operated it.

Buick officials consider it an unusual tribute to the Marquette that Illinois state authorities selected this car from among those in its price class for the rigorous tests of constant starting, stopping, turning, dodging, and backing—particularly since many of the drivers have never owned an automobile themselves and their examination often amounts to their first driving lesson.

R. E. Osborn, who is directly in charge of the road tests and who witnesses first hand the operations of this Marquette, was also well pleased with its performance qualities that he purchased one for his own use without solicitation.

Modernism Overtakes Automobile

Aviation And Era Of Architecture Furnish New Ideas

New 1930 Cars Have Speed, Power And Bigness; Car Lines Assume Impression Of Airplane Velocity

BY ISRAEL KLEIN
Auto Editor, NEA Service

NEW YORK, Jan. 18—Airplanes and skyscrapers—symbols of modernism—have been adopted also as representative of the trend in automobile design. These more than any other sign of the times, summarize the impression conveyed by a glance over the 1930 models on display at the National Auto Show here.

Lines, inside and out, seem to emphasize the idea of speed, and where the lines fail the very size of the cars complete the impression. Beyond this, more lines seem to run upward, like those of skyscrapers in an apparent effort to typify the thought of today.

The American cars on display here are not alone in this effort. In fact, the two European cars shown—the French Voisin and the German Mercedes-Benz—seem to surpass the American cars along these lines. The up-stretching wings on the Voisin radiator cap and the sharp V-shaped radiator on the German care are good examples.

On the American cars, this modernistic idea is noticeable mostly in the design of the instrument board and the various hardware fittings inside and out. It may be seen in the fine that cuts along the top from front to back and down the middle of a popular automobile, and it may be observed again in the spear-head louvers of one automobile and the pennant-shaped louvers of another.

Where lines stop in bringing out this feeling of modernism and speed, the general size and shape of the individual body take it up. Such can be felt in looking over the two front-drive automobiles at the show and the third new front drive car in private display—long, low, broad bodies on substantial chassis. Such also can be felt by a glance at the new 16-cylinder automobile with its particularly roomy body set on a wider and longer frame.

Speedsters "Plane-lined"

Again comes the impression of airplane velocity in the peculiar bullet-shaped headlights on at least two snappy roadsters, and the accompanying long fender lines.

One of these speedsters, a $3,500 roadster, even goes to the extent of transferring almost an entire dash of an airplane to its own dash. For here, reaching almost to the driver's knees, are a collection of instruments that any pilot could depend on for flying—altimeter, compass, R. P. M. indicator, clock, gas and oil gauges, ammeter, thermometer, spark, gas and heat controls—making the front of this car a veritable pilot's cockpit.

The same car takes another forward step in making the rumble seat available through the front, rather than by climbing over the rear fender. It is a thoughtful, quite swanky improvement.

Although all these and other designs are such as to convey the idea of speed and power, these are actually promised by the more powerful eights, bigger sixes, a sixteen with higher compression, finer construction, improvements in the various important gadgets of the automobile, and altogether cleaner, more complete jobs than those of last year.

In the close competition of the industry, three familiar names failed to be noted at the present auto show. The Stearns, the Moon, the Locomobile—old standbys—seemed to have breathed their last. And the competition has grown closer and keener.

Another change comes in the name of the Graham-Paige to Graham, thereby dropping a fourth old familiar name in the automotive industry.

Additional striking improvements and innovations may be found among the accessories at this year's auto show. Among these we find an improved type of speedometer with clock dial, attachable hydraulic jacks operated from the intake, elbow or toggle lever windshield cleaners, three-spoke steering wheels to afford full view of the dash, and finally a trailer for touring that is almost a little cottage in itself.

Trailer Is Show Feature

This little trailer is so constructed that, at any stopping point, the sides can be pulled out to a total width of ten feet, and the top pushed upward so that four persons can make their home in it comfortably. It carries a kitchenette with refrigerator, has room for four berths and is equipped even to a portable radio receiver. Yet the standard trailer costs only $675.

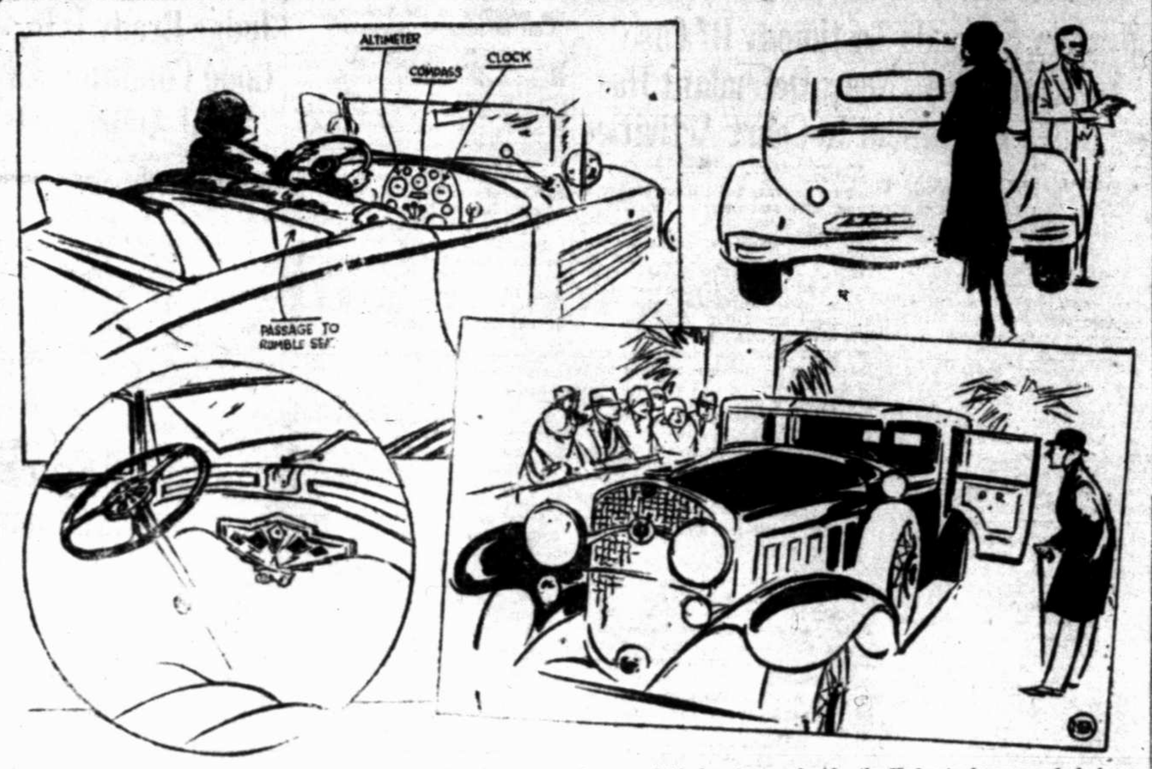

Although all sorts of color combinations can be noted among the new automobiles, black seems to prevail. The black body, however, finds its relief in white pencil lines around the moldings, or around the windows, or even broader stripes of sedate color.

The more general use of black has been found a pleasing method of compromising the outside speedy appearance of a car with the interior comfort and homeliness. There is more room in the average automobile today, and the interior is fitted more comfortably and pleasantly than ever.

MEETING DATE SET

SAN ANGELO, Jan. 18. (AP)—E. B. Taggett of Ozona, secretary of the Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers' association, has announced the quarterly meeting of the organization's executive committee at Kerrville will be held Feb. 13. Jan. 12 was the original date set.

While Belgian coal mines have 30,000 less workers the production is almost equal to that of 178,000 men a year ago.

How Is She Hittin'?

Pertinent Facts About Automobiles By Israel Klein, Science Editor For NEA Service

BY ISRAEL KLEIN
Science Editor, NEA Service

When the temperature is just low enough to keep the snow on the ground and yet not high enough to melt it, when the soft fluffy snow falls heavily over what remains of the last snowfall and it is a little slippery under foot, then beware of driving conditions. Beware, too, of demanding too much of the motor in order to overcome the difficulties presented by such weather.

For instance, there is the little matter of getting out of a slippery rut. As the clutch is let in and the rear wheels begin to spin with the engine, deeper and deeper they dig themselves in, making the job of getting out so much more difficult.

The mistake most drivers make in encountering such trouble is to jam down the throttle quickly, with the thought that this will cause the wheels to grab and jerk right out of their ruts. On the contrary, they merely spin faster and dig in deeper.

Worse yet, such action endangers the wheel and engine bearings. And such fast spinning action burns up the tires. It's costly and to no avail.

What can be done is much simpler. First, the driver might try to apply the throttle easily and slowly, so that the wheels may have a better chance to grasp some rough spot in the rut and pull out. Turning fast, the tires will pass up such rough edges and in fact smooth them down to make climbing out so much more difficult.

If this doesn't work, either the snow and ice should be shoveled out of the way of both rear wheels, or chains might be applied. An old piece of rag might be tied around the tire and rim of each wheel, and the throttle again let down slowly, in order that this may give the wheels an opportunity to grasp the ground and pull out.

Sometimes a plank placed lengthwise under each wheel will afford enough traction for the car to pull out.

At any rate, it is to no avail to step on the gas in order to get the car out of a rut. That merely digs the wheels in deeper and puts great strain on the motor and wheel bearings.

The brakes in this kind of weather, may also cause some alarm.

A car may be perfectly equipped, so far as brakes go, and yet make a driver's heart miss a beat by sliding smoothly along when it should stop quickly under pressure of the pedal. The driver may blame the brakes, but really nothing in the car is to blame except perhaps the driver himself.

What happens is this: When the motorist applies his foot to the brake pedal, while riding over slushy or slippery pavement, the brakes act as usual — they grip the wheels—but the breaking action fails to go beyond that. As a result the wheels slide smoothly along, while the momentum of the car in action pushes it on beyond the point at which it ordinarily should stop.

Braking action includes application of the brakes against the wheels and friction of the wheels on the pavement. If there is no friction between wheels and pavement, no matter how efficiently the brakes hold the wheels, they will have no effect on stopping the car.

Therefore it is important that the motorist does not rely altogether on the brakes when the streets are slippery. He must use his own judgment and greater care, in addition, slowing down gradually and applying his brakes intermittently with the clutch still engaged in order to be sure of stopping where he wants to.

The car must be under constant control in all weather, but to this must be added more personal attention and care when the weather is bad.

ON AUTO ROW

FORD MEN OPTIMISTIC

Ford officials in Lubbock as elsewhere predict for 1930 the greatest year in the history of the Ford industry. With the exception of 1924, when the Lubbock Auto company established a sales record of 1154 cars, the year just past was the best in the nine years history of the local concern. Figures for 1929 show the Lubbock agency to have delivered 1136 new and used cars.

THREE LOADS RECEIVED

Thus far three carloads of the new 1930 Fords has been shipped here, but Harry Morris promises that all orders will be filled immediately hereafter. Thus far there has been shown a keen interest in the new Fords in local automobile circles.

THIRTY ON PAYROLL

Examination of the figures given above of the volume of business handled by the Ford agency here gives one an idea of what a Ford dealership means in a city of Lubbock's size. It is not surprising then to learn that 30 persons are on the payroll at the Lubbock Auto company.

BENSON IN DALLAS

Geo. E. Benson, manager of the Ford concern here, spent several days in Dallas last week attending a meeting of Ford dealers within the Dallas branch territory. The purpose of the meeting was to draw up contracts for the year 1930, outlining the unit program for each dealer.

INCREASE IN POWER

A sizable increase in horse-power is the feature of the 1930 Chryslers on display at Joe Hilton's on Texas Avenue. The Chrysler "70" now has a 77 motor and the "68" has a 70 motor. This has been affected with a slight increase in price.

SALESMEN ADDED

Two new salesmen have joined the Joe Hilton staff recently. W. R. Logan comes to the local Chrysler house from the Dodge agency in Abilene. C. D. Keever was formerly connected with the South Plains Motor company in Lubbock. Sales manager Ted Tipps reports a concentration on used car sales within the last week, with little efforts on the new machines.

USED CARS MOVING

Buick and Studebaker dealers here likewise have brought extra pressure to bear on their stock of used cars recently. Sale of new machines has been at a standstill at both places. Kent Buick company has delivered 10 used cars thus far in January, while Gough Motor company reports the sale of six.

NEW MEN EMPLOYED

H. M. Waggs, formerly with Webb-North Motor company in Fort Worth, has been placed in charge of the used car department at the Kent Buick company here. Another newcomer, C. M. Lingle, formerly with the Dahl Chevrolet company in Kansas City, Mo., has joined the payroll of the local Buick house as a member of the parts department.

NEW CARS SOLD

Caprock Motor company, local De Soto and Whippet distributors, is one of the few agencies handling the higher-priced cars that delivered new cars last week. J. W. Story, jr., of Peters, Strange and Bradshaw construction company, took delivery on a new De Soto sedan. A Whippet coach was sold to A. L. Ward of this city. Three used cars were included in last week's sales for the Caprock crew.

Low Priced Cars Attract Interest

Values Steadily Advanced By Public Demand For Low-Cost Transportation, Says Plymouth Head

"The keen interest in low-cost transportation that is being shown by the throngs attending the various automobile shows is strikingly noticeable this year," says A. vanDerZee, general sales manager of the Plymouth Motor Corporation. 'People seem to appreciate more and more the splendid values available in a low-priced car. They are coming to understand that a really fine car can now be had for a comparatively small initial initial investment, with economical maintenance in keeping with the original low cost.

"At the New York show, especially," Mr. Van DerZee continued, "crowds thronged about the improved Plymouth models with a new understanding of what can be done in the way of building a low-price quality car. Automobile buyers of today realize that a low-price car is not necessarily a cheap one in the quality sense.

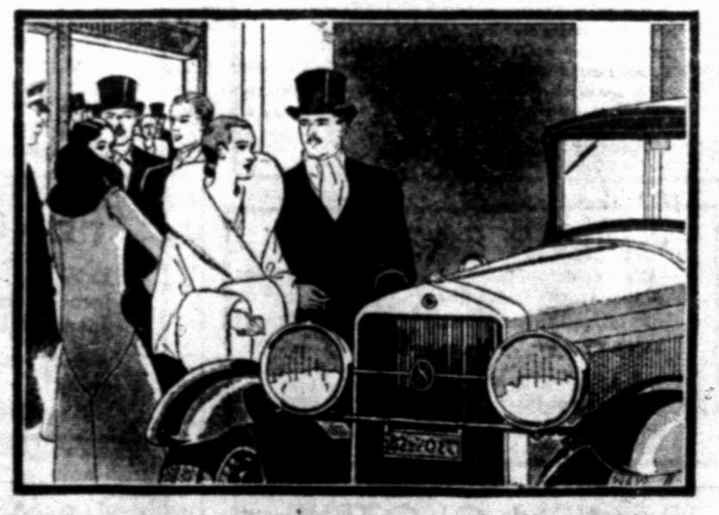

"The growing demand for individual transportation has brought to the building of low-priced cars skilled engineering and improved manufacturing processes that even high-priced cars failed to offer not so long ago."

MANY TAKE EXAMS

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 18. (AP)—More than 600 officers, student-officers and flying cadets have undergone the January medical examinations at Brooks, Kelly and Duncan fields and the Air Corps Training center.

These examination are conducted in January and July of each year to determine the physical reaction of pilots which may affect their flying.

Young District Attorney Selects Another Youth To Aid Him gainst Vets Of Bar; Interest High

(By Associated Press)

AUSTIN, Jan. 18.—Two men still in their twenties will match wits with nine seasoned barristers in district court here late this month with a man's life the stake.

Spurning offers of outside help, District Attorney Henry Brooks, 24, has decided to prosecute John W. Brady is charged with the killing of Miss Lehlia Highsmith, capitol stenographer.

Moses To Be There

Across the table will be such figures as Dayton Moses of Fort Worth, who defended J. Frank Norris; Lon Curtis of Belton, one of the best known lawyers of central Texas, and E. A. Berry of Houston, former judge of the commission of appeals of the court of criminal appeals.

A man who has sat on either side of the table in numerous cases will be on the bench. He is J. D. Moore, young as a district judge but possessor of a record for fairness.

Has Experience

A little more than a year ago, Judge Moore was district attorney. To him fell the task of succeeding Dan Moody in that position. After four years as district attorney he was elected district judge. He is in his fifties. He had many years experience as a defense counsel before he was elected prosecutor.

Now Henry Brooks, only a short time ago a law student at the University of Texas, is trying to maintain the excellent record set by Moore and Moody. The approaching trial might be characterized his second baptism as he was an important figure in the prosecution of Congressman Augustus J. McCloskey, who was acquitted of charges of altering election returns.

Assistant Is Young

In the McCloskey trial, however, Brooks had the help of Lamar Seeligson, Bexar county district attorney, and himself not much over 30. In the prosecution of Brady he will depend for all his assistance on Hollers, who was working his way through the University of Texas law school in the not distant past.

Brooks, always keeping his own counsel, is a stickler for his ideas even though he is young. His friends predict he will add further glory to the name left him by his father, the late Victor Brooks, who served as district judge here.

Hollers has announced for county attorney in this year's elections. He is hard-working and agreeable.

Defense To Be Divided

The defense "nine" might be divided into the "regular" four and five capable reserves. Berry will direct the defense and the three others on the firing line will be Samuel B. Dickens of Austin and Moses and Curtis.

Advising with these men but taking only a passive part in the case will be Jewel P. Lightfoot, former attorney general, and E. B. Robertson, former assistant attorney general, both of Fort Worth; John L. Peeler of Austin, former state senator; Julius Dorenfield of Amarillo, former assistant attorney general, and Will Brady of Ventura, California, a brother of the accused.

Associated With Defendant

John W. Brady was associated with Lightfoot and Robertson when he was in the attorney general's department. He practiced with Peeler when he was a rising young attorney.

No sketch of the men who will fight for Brady's acquittal would be complete without adequate mention of Sam Dickens. He is not as famous as some of the other defense lawyers, but for many years prior to Miss Highsmith's death he was Brady's pal. When the former judge was arrested Dickens went to his side immediately and has stayed there ever since. Dickens is no novice, however, as he will be participating in his sixty-second capital case.

Both Well Known

Moses and Curtis probably are the most celebrated criminal lawyer in the trial. Moses is well known in the capital city as a result of his activities as attorney for the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers' association. His home originally was at Burnet for a time he was district attorney there.

Curtis has taken part in a number of central Texas murder cases and helped win an acquittal for Jack Bonner, tried at Corpus Christi on a charge of sending a bomb which killed two persons when it exploded.

Dickens to Pick Jury

Dickens, who had offices next door to the courthouse for 18 years, probably will take the lead in selecting the jury.

Curtis is noted for his ability to cross-examine and the "Big Four" probably will divide the responsibilities of direct examination. Lightfoot, known for his speaking brilliance, and Moses, remembered as a man who presents a very practical case, probably will make two of the closing arguments for the defense.

Judge Moore is widely known because a number of the State's cases are filed in his court and he presided at the McCloskey trial.

One of the veteran courthouse employes was asked if Judge Moore's enemies admired him. "I can't say that they do," he replied. "So far as I know he does not have an enemy. He has had plenty of opponents during his long legal career, but no enemies."

Mystery Shrouds Testimony Of Case As Trial Draws Near; Defendant Has Been Prominent In Court Activities

Only One Is Believed To Know Anything Of Case; Trial Opens Tomorrow In Travis County

(By Associated Press)

AUSTIN, Jan. 18.—Charged with stabbing Miss Lehlia Highsmith, frail blonde stenographer for the commission of appeals of the state supreme court, John W. Brady, once a judge of the Third Court of Civil Appeals, will go to trial for his life here Monday.

The stabbing occurred at midnight of November 9, last, in front of the rooming house in which Miss Highsmith lived.

She died a little more than an hour after the knife blade entered her breast and never was able to shed any light on the attack.

Nothing Explained.

Likewise, nobody else has explained, and, aside from the prominence of the defendant, the trial will hold wide interest for the prospects of an explanation.

Brady, white-haired and aging, has remained in jail with state's attorneys opposing the granting of bail and his attorneys making no effort to force his release on bond.

Brady has made no public statement but he was reported to have said he remembered nothing the night of November 9 other than "having a difficulty with several persons" after attending a drinking party with friends in celebration of the University of Texas' annual homecoming.

May Be Witness.

Frank Graham Jr., university student and radio salesman, may have been an eye witness to the slaying but talked only to officers and they alone know what he said. Graham either accompanied Miss Highsmith home or arrived there about the time the long knife blade penetrated her breast near the heart.

P. R. McNaughton, roomer at the boarding house and one of the persons with whom Brady had his "difficulty," said he heard a quarrel and screams and rushed out to find the slip of a girl lying unconscious.

Testimony Is Mystery.

Both sides have spent much time working on the case but the testimony which they will seek to adduce remains a mystery. The large and imposing array of defense council has indicated that the defense plea may be temporary insanity, occasioned by periodic and excessive drinking. Henry Brooks, district attorney, spent four days developing his case before a Travis county county grand jury and some 30 witnesses were called.

Brady's friendship with Miss Highsmith was said to have been of long standing. Friends said he had used his influence to help obtain her positions at the capitol after the girl, an honor graduate from Bastrop high school, came to Austin to make her own way.

Was Peer For Eloquence.

When Brady was in his prime, he was without a peer for eloquence. He was appointed to the civil appeals bench by Governor Hobby, was a close friend of Governor Ferguson, and helped Governor Moody with his first law suit. He was active in political and religious affairs and took a prominent part in the activities of the University of Texas ex-students' association.

It will be a strong role Brady will begin to play in the old Travis county courthouse Monday when for the first time he will appear as a principal before the bar of justice where he has stood almost innumerable times as county attorney, assistant attorney general, attorney for the banking department, as counsel in civil law suits and as a defense lawyer.

Wife Stands by Him.

Probably nearest to Brady when he sits within the bar of the court room will be Mrs. Brady, whom he married 30 years ago. She came to his aid immediately after she heard of his trouble and promised to stand by him.

Of his nine attorneys, several were friends or pals of the former judge — Jewel Lightfoot, of Fort Worth, who was attorney general when Brady was an assistant; Sam Dickens, of Austin, who has been his companion for many years, and Will Brady, of Ventura, Cal., who came halfway across the continent to help his brother.

E. A. Berry of Houston, former judge of the commission of appeals of the court of criminal appeals, will direct the defense and the other lawyers on the faring line will be Lon Curtis of Belton and Dayton Moses of Fort Worth.

The youthful prosecuting attorneys will be 24-year-old District Attorney Brooks and Hardy Hollers, also in his twenties. With them will sit A. G. B. Highsmith, superintendent of the accounting department of the Humble refinery at Baytown, whose only daughter was the stabbing victim.

Judge Brady Is In Good Condition As Trial Approaches

Defendant Has Been Held In Jail Since November 9 Following Stabbing Of Young Stenographer

(By Associated Press)

AUSTIN, Jan. 18.—"Despite his incarceration since November 9, last John W. Brady, former judge of the Court of Criminal Appeals, was in good physicial condition today as the time neared for him to face a jury charged with the murder of Miss Lehlia Highsmith, stenographer for the commission of appeals of the State Supreme Court.

Next Monday when Brady is led through the court yard from the ancient Travis county jail to the 43-year-old courthouse it will be the first time his feet have touched the ground since he was placed in a cell after the frail young blonde woman was stabbed to death in front of the house where she roomed.

Venire List Presented

Delivery to the defendant of the list of 250 men from whom an effort will be made to empanel a jury of 12 men was set for today the first revolution of the wheels of justice in his case. The law requires the sheriff to furnish the defendant in a criminal case with a list of the veniremen served by him within 48 hours of the start of the case.

No effort was made to free the former judge on bond after his arrest, attorneys for the former member of the Court of Civil Appeals ex-assistant attorney general and one-time counsel for the State banking department, being content to let him stay in jail.

Former Governor Hobby And Calhoun Subpoenaed

AUSTIN, Jan. 18. (AP)—Former Governor W. P. Hobby of Houston and First Assistant Attorney General Galloway Calhoun were among 10 witnesses for whom subpoenas were issued today on application of John W. Brady, scheduled to go to trial Monday for the murder of Miss Lehlia Highsmith, bringing to 73 witnesses so far summoned by the defense. The state had had subpoenas issued for only seven.

Governor Hobby appointed Judge Brady to the Court of Civil Appeals.

Radio Salesman Is Summoned To Trial

BEAUMONT, Jan. 18. (AP)—Frank Graham, jr., radio salesman, who was wanted as a leading state witness in the trial of John W.
