Area lawmen honor Sheriff Jordan

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Staff Writer

SPEARMAN — Panhandle area lawmen gathered in the Hansford County Agriculture Building Thursday evening to honor outgoing Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan.

Jordan was guest of honor at the November meeting of the Panhandle Peace Officers Association, hosted by the Hansford County Sheriff's Department.

Amid a standing ovation, the state's senior sheriff was presented with plaques and awards from the Panhandle Peace Officers Association and the Sheriffs Association of Texas.

After 38 years as Gray County's high sheriff, Jordan was defeated by write-in candidate Jimmy Free in the November general election. He will be turning the badge over to Free, building superintendent for First Baptist Church and former Oklahoma police officer, on Jan. 1.

"We saw this as one of the last opportunities to let (Sheriff Jordan) know how much we respect him," said Ochiltree County Sheriff Joe Hataway. Hataway presented an award of recognition to Sheriff Jordan as a director of the Sheriff's Association of Texas.

Hansford Sheriff R.L. McFarlin of Spearman, president of the Panhandle Peace Officers Association and past president of the state sheriffs association, awarded Jordan a plaque from the local law enforcement officers group.

McFarlin said the plaque was a symbol honoring Jordan's years of service and his dedication to his job.

"Most of those who were there have known Sheriff Jordan a long time. He's a good lawman," McFarlin said. "He's a gentleman and always has been. He's a friend to everyone."

McFarlin said he first heard of Sheriff Jordan while a student in Borger. He was warned once not to go to Pampa and cause trouble, he said, because "Rufe will get ya!"

"What's a 'Rufe'?" McFarlin asked.

"I know a lot of young men who would have gone a different road if it hadn't been for Rufe Jordan," McFarlin said, admitting that the sheriff's ways were not always those written in the state's criminal code.

"I don't know who wrote the law book," McFarlin commented. "But you, as a local sheriff, should know that each situation is different and you have to handle the situation according to the individual."

"Sheriff Jordan gave us a little speech (after accepting the awards)," McFarlin said. "He was very gracious about his defeat."

"He's a gentleman," Hataway said. "I truly hated to see him lose the election. It was the times that beat Sheriff Jordan, not the man."

"I've talked to sheriffs across the state. There's 254 of them and not a one who has been in office for at least a year does not know of Sheriff Jordan," Hataway said.

"He's respected by all the members of the DPS and he's as welcome in the governor's office as anyone I know," he added.

Captains of the Texas Department of Public Safety and Texas Rangers were present at the meeting Thursday. Hataway said. "The Cattle Brand Inspectors were out in force. Just about every law enforcement agency in the Panhandle was represented."

Bush confirms Sununu as his chief of staff

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — President-elect George Bush, after picking a "take-charge kind of guy" as his chief of staff, said today he intends fill out his economic team and then turn to national security posts.

Bush, here for a private meeting with several governors, told reporters he planned to "flesh out the economic side of the house, I think, and then start working on national security."

Asked if that meant he was preparing to name Richard Darman, his longtime economic aide, as director of the Office of Management and Budget, Bush laughed but said nothing.

As the day began, New Hampshire Gov. John Sununu, publicly picked by Bush Thursday as his next chief of staff, told a television interviewer that the president-elect would communicate directly with Congress "to begin the kind of interaction that's necessary" to address the federal budget deficit.

"I think Congress and the president are going to work aggressively and quickly to deal with that issue," Sununu said on ABC-TV's Good Morning America.

There was unusual turmoil in the Bush ranks Thursday when the president-elect announced his selection of New Hampshire Gov. John Sununu as chief of staff and endorsed Lee Atwater, his wily campaign manager, as the next chairman of the Republican Party.

Craig L. Fuller, Bush's vice presidential chief of staff for four years and co-director of the transition, called The Associated Press beforehand to reveal that having been passed over for chief of staff, he would quit working for Bush as of Jan. 20.

Fuller said he informed Bush before the election that the only post he would accept in the new administration was chief of staff. He said he harbored no ill will toward Sununu.

Sources close to Bush said Fuller had been offered several plum positions, including Transportation secretary and head of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, but had turned them down.

In choosing the conservative, blunt-spoken Sununu and Atwater, a bare-knuckled campaign strategist, Bush may have been indicating to Democrats who control Congress that he is prepared to play political hardball.

But he sounded a different note at his news conference, saying he expects Sununu "to build a constructive relationship" with Congress. He also called Sununu "a take-charge kind of guy" with the experience to work with his former colleagues in the statehouses.

Bush, who previously announced his choice of James A. Baker III as secretary of state and Nicholas F. Brady as a hold-over treasury secretary, said he expects to announce a director for the Office of Management and Budget soon.

Transition sources have said that post is likely to go to long-

Palestinians ignore call for protest strike

JERUSALEM (AP) — Palestinians in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip today ignored strike orders issued in the name of the Moslem fundamentalist group Hamas to protest the proclamation of Palestinian independence.

Leaders of Hamas, Arabic for "zeal," claimed leaflets bearing the strike order were forged to confuse and divide Palestinian activists. It was not known if this was true or if the strike call failed for lack of organization and support.

Hamas opposes the proclamation of statehood because it implicitly recognizes Israel.

Throughout the occupied lands, Israeli troops were deployed near mosques in anticipation of nationalist demonstrations after Moslem noon prayers, often a spark for anti-Israeli protests.

Friday noon prayers are the high point of the Moslem week, and this week's gatherings offer the first opportunity for many Palestinians to celebrate the independence declaration issued on Tuesday in Algiers by the Palestine National Council, the policy-making body of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The Soviet Union and Cyprus today formally recognized the independent Palestinian state, bringing to 27 the number of nations that have recognized it. The Soviet Union is the first major power to do so, and it came at a time when the Soviets are moving toward closer ties with Israel after breaking relations in 1967.

The army imposed widespread curfews and travel restrictions on most of the 1.5 million Palestinians in the occupied lands in the days preceding and following the proclamation to choke off expressions of nationalist fervor.

The restrictions have been eased gradually since Thursday, and in the final move the army lifted curfews on Gaza's eight refugee camps today.

At least 29 Palestinians were shot and wounded in clashes with soldiers Thursday in the West Bank and Gaza as Israel lifted curfews on the areas, hospital officials reported. The army said it was aware of four injuries in the West Bank and was checking other reports.

More than 7,000 Palestinians have been wounded.

Salvation Army preparing for Thanksgiving

Pampa Salvation Army workers are preparing a free Thanksgiving dinner for 500 to be served from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and 4 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 24, in the Salvation Army building, 701 S. Cuyler.

The traditional Thanksgiving meal of turkey and all the trimmings is open to the public at no charge, said Larry Ballard, Salvation Army Corps helper. Anyone can go to one or both of the meals, he said.

Pampa Kiwanis clubs members have volunteered to help prepare and serve the meals, Ballard said, but more volunteers would be "greatly appreciated." Volunteers are need for serving, preparation and cleaning up, he said, adding the food preparation will begin Wednesday evening, Nov. 23.

Anyone wishing to volunteer to assist with the Thanksgiving dinner may call the Salvation Army office at 665-7233, Ballard said.

Beginning Nov. 28, Salvation Army officials will begin accepting applications for Christmas assistance, said Lt. John M. Leonard, Corps officer. Applications will be taken from 10 a.m. to noon and from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Nov. 28 through Dec. 2, he said.

"Anyone who feels the need for our assistance at Christmas is invited, make that 'urged,' to apply during that week," Lt. Leonard said.

Applicants need to bring with them the following items:

- Identification (driver's license, Social Security card, etc.)
- Copies of all current bills, including rent and utilities
- Birth certificates of all children

Lt. Leonard said donations from the Salvation Army's annual mail appeal have begun to slowly come in. "We hope to see them pick up in the next couple of weeks," he said.

"Donations of any kind are welcome," he said. "We're really strapped this year. We've already spent $1,500 on toys for our Christmas assistance program. Any help that anyone can give will be wonderfully accepted."

The Salvation Army's kettle season is set to begin on Nov. 25 at the Pampa Post Office. "We'll have some local dignitaries to man the kettle," Lt. Leonard said.

Other kettles will be set up at K mart and The Food Emporium, he said, and possibly several other Pampa businesses.

Applications for bell ringers will be taken at the Salvation Army office, he said.

New Ford dealership opening in Pampa

By BEAR MILLS
Staff Writer

Papers were signed late Thursday clearing the way for a new Ford dealership in Pampa.

The new company, which will be located in the same building that housed Heritage Ford, is a cooperative effort between Ford and a local couple.

Pampa Ford Lincoln Mercury Inc. is the fulfillment of a dream for Carolyn and David Hayden. The couple moved from Denver, Colo., to Pampa to begin the new dealership. They will cooperatively own the business with Ford Motor Company as part of a Dealer Development Program.

Pete Burton, who owned Heritage Ford since 1981, sold the business to Ford Motor Co. yesterday, he said. The Burton family will continue to operate Burton Ford Mercury in Wheeler.

The Haydens formerly owned a business which contracted to American Express to service 4,600 corporate and business accounts from their Denver offices.

"The business was called DCH Distributors. During the time we were with DCH we learned of a program by Ford to train to become dealers. Because of his management experience, David stayed with the business while I trained with Ford," said Mrs. Hayden.

She was one of only 13 people in the country to qualify for the two-year course of dealer training. She trained through Ford dealers in the Denver area.

"Upon finishing the program, we began looking for a dealership to buy. We felt Pampa would be an excellent place to raise our nine-year-old daughter," she said.

The couple said they looked into dealerships that were for sale all over the nation.

"We really liked it here," Mr. Hayden said. "We noticed people would wave as they passed you here. We looked in Washington and along both coasts. You can make money in lots of places, but quality of life was very important to us."

Mr. Hayden is a graduate of Eastern Washington University in Spokane and his wife graduated from Metropolitan State University in Denver. Both hold degrees in sociology. She also holds a degree in public administration.

"Carolyn will be the dealer here. She did the training with Ford. But the business is owned by both of us," Mr. Hayden said.

They said their decision to name the new dealership after the city was based on a commitment to the local community.

"We feel the Ford market is strong. We plan on providing good quality service and treating the customer right. After a while it really becomes a question of whether you treat the customer right and if they feel comfortable and welcome at your business," Mrs. Hayden said.

She said the stereotype of a dealer that doesn't care about the customer will no longer hold up in light of numerous choices of automobile types and dealerships.

"People are not afraid to drive to Amarillo to get a good deal. They have been doing that. We want them to come back home," she said.

They said the business is currently open and awaiting a shipment of 60 new vehicles. There are also plans to give the dealership a total facelift. Plans are being made for a new floor, new carpet and redecoration.

The couple said all current employees will remain with the company. There are also plans for new hiring in the near future.

Burton, the former owner of the Ford dealership in Pampa, said management problems caused him to decide to sell.

"The dealership had two years of losing money under the management it had. I took all the loss I wanted to take, so I notified Ford of my desire to sell," Burton said.

He expressed confidence in the new ownership team.

"I know Carolyn and I think they will do very well," he said.

Burton said he is continuing to manage his other business interests which include banking, a retail store, a motel, ranching and the Wheeler Ford dealership.

Rail cars burning in derailment

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A Union Pacific freight train derailed on the city's southwest side and burst into flames early today when parked cars from a side track rolled onto the main line, a railroad official said.
D.R. Castillo, 42, of San Antonio and Joe Wheatley, 41, of suburban Helotes, both employees on the moving train, were taken to Southwest Texas Methodist Hospital in undetermined condition, officials said. Their condition was not believed to be serious; hospital spokeswoman Barbara Williams said.
Alex Tice, regional vice president for Union Pacific, said 35 cars derailed in the accident. He added that it appears the moving train was not at fault in the accident.
"San Antonio is a switch yard,"

Tice said from the company's Omaha, Neb., headquarters. "Evidently a string of cars that had been on the side rolled on to the main track. The cars shouldn't be there."
Three engines and 74 cars comprised the moving train, Tice said, and 58 of the cars were loaded, mostly with trailers loaded on top of flat cars and auto parts.
"There were no hazardous materials on the cars that derailed," Tice said.
The fire broke out in cars carrying baled paper and cardboard, Bexar County Fire Marshal Carl Mixon said, adding that the products were so tightly bound that the fire was difficult to contain.
The accident occurred about 1.7 miles from the San Antonio yard limit, Tice said. He added that the moving train had already begun slowing when the accident occurred.

"Even with a loaded train, you have some stopping points that are required," Tice said.
Tice confirmed accounts that fog might have been partly responsible for the accident, which occurred about 6:35 a.m. CST. Witnesses said fog limited visibility in the area to about 200 feet.
Firefighters from the San Antonio Fire Department and Northwest Volunteers fought the blaze without breathing apparatus, an indication no toxic substances were involved.
The Northwest Volunteers were called when it was determined that the accident occurred outside the San Antonio city limits, fire officials said.

Odessa firm fined for toxic soil

ODESSA (AP) — An Odessa chemical company has been fined $4,000 by the Texas Water Commission and has been ordered to clean up soil contaminated in 1986 and 1987.
Imposed Monday, the penalty requires Rexene to submit a cleanup plan within 180 days, then initiate it.
Rexene's vice president of administration, John Wheller, said Wednesday the company had agreed to the fine and would "undertake further corrective actions if necessary."
The extent of the contamination in the aquifer has not been determined but it is the second water pollution penalty imposed against Rexene this fall.
The Texas Air Control Board fined Rexene $24,000 in October for violations of the state ACB rules and the Texas Clean Air Act.
Kevin Hamby, assistant director of public information for the TWC, said its investigation uncovered three violations:
■ Dissolved-phase hydrocarbon contamination;
■ Xylene releases in product storage tanks;
■ Solid waste sludge contamination from the facility's wastewater treatment plant.
The violations were discovered during a TWC investigation after Rexene, then El Paso Products Corp., reported free-floating hydrocarbons in shallow groundwater Dec. 15, 1986, and Feb. 23, 1987.

"It appears that the contamination is all trapped within the property, but obviously we are concerned for the nearby aquifers that provide drinking water," Hamby told the Odessa American.

Boy Scouts facing bag shortage in food drive

The Pampa Boy Scout Food Drive to collect canned goods for Good Samaritan Christian Services Inc. ran into a snag last Saturday due to a shortage of bags.
Over 2,000 bags were to have been delivered around the Pampa area. However, local officials said, the district only made several of the bags available.
"What we would like people to do is just use any sack and fill them with canned goods. If they will set those sacks on their doorstep Saturday morning, we will see they all get collected," said

Keith Cook, local district executive.
Cook said that Boy Scouts will be sweeping the city tomorrow as part of the food drive.
The effort is part of a nationwide push by Boy Scouts of America to help feed the needy.
Only nonperishable canned food items can be accepted by Good Samaritans due to health regulations.
Cook said anyone that did not get their sack of donated food picked up by Saturday afternoon could call 665-5613 to have the goods picked up.

Bush

time Baker aide Darman, while Stanford economist Michael J. Boskin is likely to be chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers.
Bush has had to contend with a succession of economic bad news since his election. The stock market has fallen and the dollar has declined in value, with many analysts questioning Bush's ability to resolve to cut the nation's massive trade and budget deficits.
Bush aides hope fast action in naming his economic team will bolster confidence in the president-elect.
Bush said the OMB job "is important and I want to get our economic team in place. ... Most people would agree we've moved very fast so far. But I will go forward with the economic team."

Bush, who had a breakfast meeting Thursday with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and lunch with President Reagan, also held a private chat with former Texas Sen. John Tower, who is rumored to be a leading candidate for secretary of Defense.
"We're going to start working on the national security portfolio pretty soon," Bush said, but he added that the economic team will come first.
Bush defended Sununu, an Arab-American, for his refusal to sign a proclamation two years ago condemning a 1975 United Nations resolution that equated Zionism with racism. Sununu was the only governor to balk at signing such a proclamation.

Bush said Sununu was "well within his prerogative" to not want to meddle in foreign policy as a governor. "Everybody knows my position on it, that I think that (U.N.) resolution is outrageous" and should be repealed, Bush said. He also pointed to Sununu's role in drafting the 1988 Republican platform, which called for a rescission of that U.N. Resolution 3379.
Sununu told reporters, "I have no problem saying that that (resolution) ought to be repudiated."

Restrictions to stop dumping of plastic in Gulf of Mexico

By MICHAEL L. GRACZYK
Associated Press Writer

GALVESTON (AP) — People caught dumping plastic garbage into the Gulf of Mexico face civil penalties up to $25,000 per day per incident, a new international agreement says.
A provision in an international agreement known as MARPOL, an acronym for "Maritime Pollution," goes into effect Dec. 31, making it illegal for any plastic items to be discharged into the Gulf of Mexico within 200 miles of shore.
The provision, called "Annex 5," also bars discharge of any floating debris within 25 miles of the Gulf of Mexico coast and paper and glass within 12 miles.
Aside from the civil penalties, violators face criminal penalties of up to $50,000 and five years in prison could be sought for blatant violators, Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Joel Whitehead said Thursday at a symposium on environmental quality in the gulf.
"Annex 5 is something very sweeping," he said. "It does nothing less than to change 4,000 years of maritime tradition. Mariners have always dumped their trash at sea. To change it suddenly on the 31st of December when this goes into effect is going to be something very difficult to do."
"We do not expect the whole world to change, but we do expect ports and ships to show they are taking steps to show they are going to change."
The agreement, ratified by the Senate a year ago, also applies to oil rigs in the gulf, pleasure boats and to U.S.-flagged ships.
Nancy Stehle, deputy director for the environment for the U.S. Navy, said the Navy was caught by surprise by the ban on plastics but is embarking on a program to separate plastics from other trash on all of its vessels.
"The Navy is serious about its commitment to the environment," she said.
The problem of marine garbage caught the public's attention through pictures of marine animals entangled in plastic beverage holders or fishing lines and nets, said Kathy O'Hara, director of the marine debris database for the Center for Environmental Education.
A recent canvass of some Florida beaches turned up 305 miles of abandoned plastic fishing line.

Other plastic debris included plastic bags filled with cocaine and plastic luminous light sticks, apparently used by smugglers to pinpoint drug shipments, she said.
"Marine debris is perhaps the most visible pollution in the Gulf of Mexico," Ms. O'Hara said. "Basically that's what marine industries have been doing for centuries. Marine debris is just a fancy term for garbage."
William Bettenberg, associate director for offshore minerals management in the U.S. Minerals Management Service, said he has been encouraged by a significant reduction of trash traced to more than 3,700 oil platforms operating in the Gulf of Mexico.
"The ultimate goal is to control wastes before they even reach the beaches," he said. "The fact of the matter is there will never be enough policemen on the beat to catch someone throwing a foam cup overboard. The key to cleaning up debris in the Gulf of Mexico is public education."
Whitehead said the new law also requires marine terminals and ports to provide facilities for ships to discharge wastes.
"Right now, there's a shortage of approved facilities," he acknowledged.
"Where we do have problems and difficulties is that shore-side facilities are nonexistent and unavailable," said John Scardasis, vice president for Lykes Bros. Steamship Co., a Houston-based company that operates 28 ships around the world.
But to deal with the problem of plastics, he said the shipping line in the past two years has switched to paper cups rather than plastic foam cups and has encouraged vendors to use jute or hemp bags for items such as potatoes and onions.
Port operators, however, are concerned the regulations will mean higher costs, and they will pass those costs to shippers and ultimately consumers, said G.K. Winn, acting port director for the Port of Lake Charles, La.
Winn said port officials have no idea how much garbage they need to prepare for, what kind of containers they might need or how far they can transfer it to landfills.

Special new water master named

PECOG (AP) — A new special master has been named to help decide whether New Mexico should repay Texas in money or water for 340,000 acre-feet of Pecos River water that New Mexico withdrew from 1950 to 1983.
D. Monte Pascoe, a water attorney in Denver, replaces former Special Master Charles Meyers, who died in July and left the case in legal limbo.
Pascoe is to oversee an environmental study to determine whether New Mexico should pay back in water over 10 years or whether it would be more fair to come up with a money settlement.

He will then make a recommendation to the U.S. Supreme Court, which decides disputes between states.
Pascoe said this week he plans to set a hearing within the next few months in which lawyers from both sides will present their cases.
New Mexico violated an interstate compact for 33 years that stated how much Pecos water each state should get. New Mexico attorneys have said paying Texas back in water, as Meyers recommended, would put some farmers out of business. New Mexico is expected to suggest a cash settlement.
"Texas is still asking for water, but we are preparing to show how much money they should give us," said Paul Elliott, an assistant Texas attorney general assigned to the case.
The money likely would be used to improve the dam at Red Bluff Reservoir and upgrade the water-distribution system, he said.
Experts have calculated that New Mexico profited by $981 million and Texans were damaged by $49.6 million because of the water shortfall.

Coalition to Abolish the Death Penalty gathering in Dallas

By SUZANNE GAMBOA
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Hours before San Francisco attorney Robert R. Bryan told a college audience how he saved a death row inmate from execution, a jury in San Antonio used a new Texas law to sentence a convicted mass murderer to death by lethal injection.

"I don't think the public realizes that innocent people have been executed," Bryan said Thursday night to a small Southern Methodist University audience.

It's a statement he and other death penalty abolitionists will be repeating throughout the weekend for the 1988 National Coalition to Abolish the Death Penalty National Conference.

Texas was the obvious choice for the conference because it leads the nation in executions with 28 since the U.S. Supreme Court resumed capital punishment in 1976, said Rick Halperin, Amnesty International regional co-coordinator for North Texas.

The conference, which begins today, should be the largest meeting of the coalition, an umbrella group of religious and non-religious groups opposed to the death penalty, he said.

On Thursday, a jury in San Antonio sentenced Leo Narvaiz Jr., 20, to death for the stabbing deaths of his former girlfriend, Shannon Mann, and three of her siblings. Under a new Texas law, multiple homicide is a capital murder offense punishable by death by lethal injection.

Part of the evidence presented during Narvaiz's trial was a recording of a 911 emergency call in which Ms. Mann pleaded with her assailant — saying, "Leo, please don't." — and told him she loved him moments before she died of multiple stab wounds.

"We as a human species have been killing each other in the name of God and law for thousands of years ... and yet the crime rate doesn't go down, the murder rate doesn't go down. Obviously this is not the answer," said Bryan, chairman and executive board member of the Washington-based anti-death penalty coalition.

"I think we should start looking to see why people commit crimes rather than just treat the result later."

Bryan says that's what he did when he defended Jerry Bigelow, a California death row inmate convicted of murder. Although Bigelow confessed 10 times to the slaying and begged to be executed, he was acquitted by the jury that heard Bryan's arguments.

Bigelow confessed to the crime because he was accustomed to doing so as a child to avoid beatings from his father, Bryan said.

"Every person I know of who has ever been on death row, who actually committed the act, was victimized as a child."

Bigelow's case is on appeal because of a legal question that threw the case into mistrial.

Bryan says the case clearly depicts what the coalition will try to convey this weekend. "Mistakes do occur. Sometimes things are not as they seem."

"I'm not saying everyone on death row is innocent. But innocent people have been executed and one innocent person is one too many," Bryan said.

But as the conference meets, 10 more execution dates in the next three months are pending in Texas. Nationally, 102 executions have occurred since capital punishment was reinstated.

Dallas trial lawyer Brad Lollar, quoting a recent newspaper poll, said 86 percent of Texans favor use of the death penalty and 90 percent of the white population advocates its use. "The death penalty does seem to be justified retribution," he said.

Additionally, expansion of the death penalty to drug-related murders makes up the core of a new anti-crime package drafted by state lawmakers, who are following the lead of similar national legislation.

"Admittedly, the imposition of capital punishment and life imprisonment are harsh and tragic sanctions," Rep. Dan Morales, D-San Antonio said when he unveiled the package Wednesday.

Today's technology is bad enough

The Pampa 2000 project is trying to get us ready for life in the 21st century. I don't know about you, but I'm still trying to get used to life in the 1980s.

We now have Coke dispensers that talk and automatic teller machines that give money any time of the day or night. What I really want is a Coke dispenser that gives correct change and a teller that would balance my checkbook once a month.

Microwave ovens have now been around for about a decade. I still haven't learned how to cook with the stupid things. Everything tastes like cement.

The only clear advantage I can see to owning a microwave oven is the chance to burn food in half the time.

And all those little foods you always thought you could never fix in the microwave, now you can. My wife bought some microwavable pot pies the other day. They cook in a mere eight minutes, a 22-minute savings from doing it the old way.

But since most microwaves don't brown, the frozen food company had to do something to make the things look done. Hence, they added a yellowish-brown food color to the crust. Nice try. Throughout the entire meal I had to fight the feeling I was eating a pot pie stricken with jaundice.

The 1980s have also given us new levels of clarity in communications. Remember the good ol' days when a long-distance phone call sounded long distance? Now, every call sounds like it's coming from next door. But this is not all it's cracked up to be.

I was in the D-FW Airport not too long ago and called my wife to let her know what time my flight would arrive in Amarillo.

"Hi, honey, it's me. Listen, I'll be in by ..."

"Where are you?"

"In Dallas at the airport."

"Who are all those people?"

"What people?"

"In the room with you. I can hear some girl giggling. Where are you?"

I looked around. The nearest people were about 20 feet away.

"Honey, I'm on a public phone. Those people are across the room."

"Well, that girl sounds like she's standing right next to you ... what the devil are you doing, Bear?"

Then I saw the sign over the phone. YOU ARE SPEAKING OVER NEW FIBER OPTIC LINES THAT PROVIDE NEVER BEFORE AVAILABLE CLARITY OF SOUND.

Great. That clarity was going to cost me a divorce if I didn't convince my wife I wasn't playing footsy with some dame at the next phone.

The '80s have also given us the largest explosion of computer technology in history. No longer do we type on paper. Little computer microchips take all our dictation for us. That makes correcting mistakes faster and saves lots of trees.

But what happens when the darn thing gets cranky and decides to eat 17 hours of research?

It has happened to newspaper people more times than any of us would like to count. You work, you research, you get a story written that will surely set the journalistic world in a frenzy. Then you come back the next day to give it one final edit and it's gone. Not missing, not misfiled, just plain gone.

As you try to suppress a mighty temper tantrum, you hear what you could swear is the computer burping. Good story.

And now they tell us that all this is nothing compared to how life will be in the 21st century. Soon we will have phones with visual ability, automated restaurants and Lord knows what else. All of that is fine, I suppose.

But my eggs are still hard as rocks, the Coke machine ate my 50 cents and my checkbook won't balance.

And I ain't convinced any amount of technology is going to help much.

Narvaiz given death penalty

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A man convicted of a quadruple murder has been sentenced to death after jurors heard a harrowing tape-recorded telephone call from one of the victims in which she begged the defendant for her life.

Leo Narvaiz Jr., 20, showed no emotion Thursday when the sentence was announced after the 11-woman, one-man jury deliberated one hour and 15 minutes.

The same jury on Wednesday deliberated 2½ hours before finding Narvaiz guilty of butchering his former girlfriend, Shannon Mann, 17, along with her siblings, Jennifer, 19; Martha, 15; and Ernest, 11; at their mobile home on April 15.

Narvaiz was tried simultaneously in all four cases under a new state law that provides the death penalty for multiple murders. An appeal is automatic.

"The tape was definitely some devastating evidence," defense attorney Jeffrey Scott said after the sentence.

Bexar County District Attorney Fred Rodriguez, who argued that Narvaiz killed the Manns over anger about a breakup with Shannon Mann, said the jurors' decisions echoed the community's sentiment.

"An hour and 15 minutes for the supreme penalty is really pretty swift, so I think the jury, as a representative of the community, said they are tired of this and they want the supreme penalty for these vicious killers and especially for a mass murderer," Rodriguez said.

Testimony in the three-week trial indicated the Manns were brutally slain with knives taken from their kitchen. Some of the knives were thrust with such force that they broke in the victims' bodies.

Testimony also revealed that Narvaiz was high on cocaine the morning of the slayings and that his former girlfriend told her she loved him and begged for her life moments before she died of multiple stab wounds.

In a tape-recorded telephone call to a 911 operator Shannon Mann says her family is being attacked. She then says, "Leo, please don't."

A man at the house, whose voice was identified by a police detective as Narvaiz's, tells her, "Why did you have to do this to me?"

Jurors heard the tape on Tuesday, when they also heard that Narvaiz had given police a statement two days after slaying and one day after hearing the recording.

Narvaiz told police that he remembered going to the Mann home after snorting a large amount of cocaine.

He said he stabbed Jennifer after she stabbed him, but that he did not remember stabbing Ernest, Shannon or Martha.

Narvaiz's parents, Leo and Janie Narvaiz, said they did not believe their son could have committed the crimes.

The father said law enforcement officials knew Narvaiz had not confessed, but that an officer told him he "didn't have to go look for nobody else as long as they had him."

"He was enough, that's all they needed," the elder Narvaiz said. "So I think that's not right."

Rodriguez refuted the claims about the confession and case not being investigated thoroughly, saying he'd heard the rumors, throughout the trial and that they were spread by the defendant himself.

"I am comfortable that justice was done and that the right culprit was given his due," Rodriguez said.

West Texas crude price tumbles

NEW YORK (AP) — Energy futures analysts remain skeptical that current OPEC talks will result in an accord to lower production and bolster world crude prices.

Oil futures prices sagged Thursday, pressured by fear that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries might flood the markets with more oil and bring about a price collapse.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the December contract for West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark grade of U.S. crude oil, tumbled 38 cents to settle at $13.29 per barrel. The contract had fallen 23 cents on Wednesday. Other contract months also declined sharply Thursday, with next October's contract down 87 cents at $12.70.

Futures prices of refined products were lower across the board. The December contract for unleaded gasoline settled at 45.65 cents a gallon, down 0.85 cent from Wednesday's close.

The December contract for wholesale home heating oil, which rose 0.07 cent on Wednesday, fell 1.50 cents to close at 42.97 cents a gallon.

Analysts said the market opened weakly, reflecting negative investor reaction to threats by Saudi Arabia and other OPEC members that they would start dumping more oil on world markets if a quota agreement among members was not reached.

Saudi Arabia produces just over half of its capacity of approximately 10 million barrels a day. Because of falling crude prices its oil revenue has plunged.

The threats came as two OPEC committees began meeting Thursday in Vienna to hammer out an accord that would limit production and bolster oil prices. Those talks will culminate with a meeting of all 13 OPEC ministers starting Monday.

Analysts said prices weakened further shortly after the meeting convened about noon CST in response to a statement by Iraqi Oil Minister Issam Abdul Raheem al-Chalabi, who told reporters before the closed-door meeting began: "It's very clear our position hasn't changed."

The Iraqis have refused to abide by the cartel's quota system, which analysts have said is the biggest stumbling block to reaching a production accord.

Thursday's meeting adjourned late in the day without any announcements and the ministers were not expected to convene again formally until Saturday.

"Having started out with negative news and not being given any positive news during the day, the market sagged under the pressure," said Mary L. Haskins, assistant vice president at Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc.

Overproduction has depressed the price of crude by more than 25 percent in 1988 below OPEC's $18 a barrel benchmark price.

Embassies waste taxpayers' money

Here's a real scandal for you: the waste of $650 million of your tax money. Several administrations, Republican and Democratic, were involved. President Reagan has ordered the destruction of the new U.S. Embassy in Moscow because the structure contains more microphones than a Radio Shack warehouse. The U.S. government stupidly allowed Soviet workers to build the place, even though a 10-year-old could tell you the workers would be KGB operatives looking for any chance to compromise security. The building cost $190 million to construct.

So putting up an equivalent building should cost another $190 million, right? That's true only in the real world. But this is politics and diplomacy, so the new work will cost an additional $160 million to tear down the bugged structure, plus $300 million for the new building — a total of $460 million more. Total tax dollars wasted on tearing down the old "new" embassy and putting up another new one: $650 million.

Worse, thanks to a deal the Soviets snookered President Nixon and Henry Kissinger into in 1969, the new U.S. embassy is located in a Moscow swamp. It will be easily bombed by microwave radar and other espionage devices. In contrast, in Washington the Soviets got a site for their equivalent new embassy atop Mt. Alto, one of the city's highest hills, allowing the KGB radar and antennae to snoop easily on the White House, the Pentagon, CIA headquarters and other sensitive posts, as well as to intercept most private telephone conversations.

What should be done? At a minimum we should insist on a quid quo with the Soviets. It's doubtful the Soviets would give up a spot atop a Moscow hill, so the Soviets should be forced to move from their Mt. Alto citadel to a lower place on the Potomac basin. And we should sharply scale back the scope and cost of the U.S. embassy. There's no way another $460 million is needed.

This is no longer the 19th century, when slow communications forced the major powers to establish large offices in each other's countries. Instantaneous communications prevent catastrophe, while important diplomacy, such as arms negotiations, is carried out in Geneva and Vienna.

It's time for major reforms here, saving billions of dollars a year. Let's reduce the U.S. embassy staff in Moscow and other big countries to an ambassador, a secretary, a valet and two marine guards. In small countries we'd only need a part-time ambassador who could moonlight as a Berlitz instructor.

LAME DUCK

This trial should not be held

WASHINGTON — Time is running out for Alcee Hastings. By March 1, "or as soon thereafter as the Senate may order," the flamboyant Florida jurist will go on trial before the Senate. If convicted he will become only the fifth federal judge in the nation's history to be removed by impeachment.

For reasons I have argued many times before, I believe Hastings should be acquitted, not because he is innocent — I suspect the fellow is as guilty as Cain — but because the ancient principle of double jeopardy ought to be seriously guarded.

In this regard, the facts may be briefly stated. In December 1981, a federal grand jury in Florida indicted both Judge Hastings and a Washington, D.C., attorney named William A. Borders Jr. The charge was that Borders had entered into a conspiracy with Hastings by which Hastings would accept a bribe in exchange for going easy on a defendant in his court.

Hastings and Borders were tried separately. The evidence against both men was substantially identical. In March 1982, a jury found Hastings not guilty on all counts. Subsequently, several of Hastings' fellow judges, convinced that he had lied on the witness stand, set in motion the investigation that led to impeachment by the House six weeks ago.

For all practical purposes, 16 of the 17 articles of impeachment against Hastings recite the identical charges on which Hastings already has been tried and acquitted. I am fully aware of the argument that impeachment is not a criminal but rather a civil proceeding — that a Senate trial does not threaten Hastings' "life or limb," and that conviction by the Senate results only in removal from office.

All this may be true, but the constitutional language relating to impeachment is couched in terms too familiar to be misunderstood. The Constitution speaks of "high crimes and misdemeanors." It directs the Senate to "try" an impeached officer.

Twice the Constitution refers to one who is "convicted" by the Senate. Article III provides that the trial of all "crimes," except in the cases of impeachment, shall be by jury. Tell me that Hastings' trial in March will not be a criminal proceeding!

Nothing quite like the Hastings affair has come to this juncture. In 1803, federal Judge John Pickering of New Hampshire was impeached and convicted for drunkenness on the bench. In 1862, Judge West H. Humphreys of Tennessee was impeached and convicted for promoting secession.

In 1936, Judge Halsted L. Ritter of Florida was impeached and convicted for corruptly accepting money in a bankruptcy case. In 1986, Judge Harry Claiborne of Nevada was impeached and convicted for cheating on his income tax.

Those are the precedents. Never before has a judge or any other federal officer been impeached and tried for offenses for which he has already been acquitted. Claiborne, it will be recalled, had been convicted of income tax evasion before the House impeached him. In the matter of Alcee Hastings, the Senate will be taking the kind of second bite that the Sixth Amendment positively forbids. Hastings will be twice put in jeopardy for the same offense.

The House has resoundingly rejected the argument of double jeopardy, and it is likely the Senate will follow suit. Under the tentative timetable approved before adjournment of the 100th Congress, the Senate Rules Committee will begin hearings on the Hastings case in the week of Jan. 23. A report on procedures is to be filed a week later.

During February both the prosecution and the defense will prepare their cases. House "managers," as they are called, will offer 18 witnesses on the bribery charge and another six witnesses on a make-weight additional charge that Hastings willfully messed up an FBI investigation.

The Senate will create a 12-member committee to sit for 10 to 12 days of testimony in March. The full Senate will review the record, and by mid-April, or thereabouts, will vote on the articles of impeachment. It takes two-thirds of those present to convict.

Hastings is the 14th person in U.S. history to be impeached by the House. His predecessors include one president (Andrew Johnson), one Supreme Court Justice (Samuel Chase), one Cabinet member (Secretary of War William Belknap in 1876) and 10 federal judges.

For high drama on Capitol Hill, nothing surpasses an impeachment trial, but the trial of Alcee Hastings, I submit, is a trial that ought not to be held.

Liberal press is a sore loser

The liberal news media still have their teeth in the trousers of George Bush. The same headline writers who six months ago were calling him a "wimp" are now protesting that he is a "bully" who "fights dirty."

The sore losers! You'd think this last election would have humbled the Manhattan-based media that did such a snide smear job on Dan Quayle; it didn't. Former CBS anchor Walter Cronkite has said that most "reporters are certainly liberal ... left of center ... and I think most newspapermen by definition have to be liberal."

His assessment was affirmed when the union of newswriters — the Newspaper Guild — voted to support Dukakis.

How can we be sure of liberal bias in the media? An organization called Accuracy in Media keeps score.

For example: The New York Times in 1985 carried 58 editorials and columns against U.S. policy in Nicaragua and only six editorials and columns in favor of that policy.

It's possible to be even more subtle in slanting the news. All one need do is talk about the "terrible famine in Ethiopia" while saying nothing about the Communist regime in that country, which is largely responsible for the famine.

"Sure," says Barbara Walters, "members of the news media in general are liberal."

Rebecca Chase says "the prevailing journalistic culture is liberal — that's how journalistic win awards."

Robert and Linda Richter, co-directors of the Center for Media and Public Affairs in Washington, D.C. — and Stanley Rothman, professor of government at Smith College — wrote a book called The Media Elite: America's New Power Brokers.

That book reports on the political and cultural attitudes of 240 top people in the print and electronic media, 80 percent of whom have never voted for a Republican.

A Los Angeles Times poll of 3,000 newspaper reporters and editors produced similar results.

A Lichter-Rothman survey of the class of 1982 at the Columbia School of Journalism revealed that 85 percent called themselves liberals; only 4 percent voted for Reagan.

But then, after a campaign such as the one of 1988 — when these media elite tried so overtly to influence votes, when their appointed candidate carried only 10 of 50 states — wouldn't you think they would back off and reassess their own prejudices?

If these self-appointed power-brokers were as influential as they imagine themselves to be, the election would have gone the other way.

Their politics is their religion, but 86 percent seldom if ever go to church.

What can you do to teach these misleaders to mind their manners? Precisely what you did on Nov. 8. Read them, listen to them and then thumb your nose at them.

Meanwhile, an increasing proliferation of news media, including cable competition, will force the entrenched networks to a more realistic reflection of you and your views.

Urban ferries making a return voyage

By ROBERT WALTERS

MUKILTEO, Wash. (NEA) — A ship's horn blares, seagulls shriek, and the water at the stern of the MV Kittitas begins to churn furiously as the ferry eases away from the fog-shrouded mainland and begins its journey to Whidbey Island.

That scene is repeated almost 500 times daily in 20 communities along the 2,000-mile shoreline of Puget Sound, but the Washington State Ferries never lose their appeal to either tourists or local residents.

Indeed, ridership has steadily increased in recent years not only in the Seattle area but in other cities throughout the country. Ferries are experiencing a revival as a means of urban transportation with a special mystique.

In San Francisco, ferries, which long ago were presumed to have been displaced by the Golden Gate Bridge, once again carry cars and passengers between the city and nearby Marin and Solano counties.

In Boston, almost $100 million has been invested in docks along the inner harbor by the Boston Redevelopment Authority, which believes it can attract 3 million riders annually to a fleet of water taxis.

Already in operation, under another public agency's sponsorship, is the Airport Water Shuttle, which whisks riders between Boston's waterfront and Logan Airport but avoids the chronically jammed Callahan and Sumner tunnels.

In New York, municipal officials turned to ferries earlier this year when the Williamsburg Bridge was declared unsafe and closed for the repair of structural deficiencies.

Boats capable of carrying 1,280 passengers each plied the East River between Brooklyn and the Whitehall Ferry Terminal at the southern tip of Manhattan.

Almost a dozen privately owned "boutique" ferries regularly traverse other routes that connect points in Manhattan, Brooklyn, Queens, Staten Island and New Jersey.

In addition, the Port Authority of

New York and New Jersey is seeking a private partner to share responsibility for a ferry operation that would cost more than $150 million to establish and that would eventually carry 4,500 passengers every hour across the Hudson River between the two states.

Finally, there is New York's venerable Staten Island Ferry, which carries fully half of the 160,000 people who board ferries every day throughout the country.

Although that route attracts the most passengers, Washington's ferry operation is by far the nation's most expensive and elaborate. A fleet of 23 vessels traverses almost 100 nautical miles and carries 18.5 million passengers (and 7.8 million vehicles) annually.

"Ferry boats are as much a part of Washington's heritage as our evergreen forests and snow-capped mountains," says the Marine Division of the state's Transportation Department.

The state took over the ferry system in the early 1950s after a private operator experienced financial difficulties. Today, 40 percent of its passengers are regular commuters and 60 percent tourists or other occasional riders.

Ferries here and elsewhere are long on allure but short on profits. Washington's ferries have an annual budget of more than $74 million but almost 30 percent of that total must be subsidized by the state.

The Staten Island Ferry charges only 25 cents for a round trip, compared with $1 for a New York City subway or bus ride. As a result, the ferry accumulates a $26 million annual deficit that must be made up by government subsidies.

Moreover, skeptics note that ferries are a solution to urban transportation problems principally for the relatively few people who live and work near the water.

But even with that limitation, the ferries here can boast of utility as well as charm. Every working day, they carry more than 20,000 people and 6,000 vehicles in and out of Seattle.

Questions remain concerning deaths of four young adults

By DEAN GOLEMBESKI
Associated Press Writer

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP)—A nationwide search for four young adults ended with the recovery of bodies from a car in a river, but questions remain whether the accident was a deadly combination of illegal drinking, missing safety barriers and a misdirected detour sign.

A car containing what authorities believed were the bodies of the four young people was found Thursday in 15 feet of water on the bottom of the murky Mill River near New Haven harbor.

Authorities were awaiting autopsy results to make positive identifications, but city police Lt. James Sorrentino said it was likely the four victims were the missing friends, who graduated together from East Lyme High School in 1987.

The three women and one man were last seen by their parents about 7 p.m. Saturday, when they left their hometown of East Lyme for a night in New Haven.

The four were Jill Sawyer, 19, a student at the University of Rhode Island; Christy Stevens, 19, a student at Mohegan Community College in Norwich; Michael Gallo, 20, a student at Southern Connecticut State University; and Laura Lagrotteria, 19.

"They were good kids. I can't picture them being drunk and driving," said Michelle Funaioli, a student at Southern Connecticut. "It's horrible. It's the most horrible thing I've ever seen happen."

Police have determined the four spent at least part of Saturday night drinking at a bar near Yale University. State police Detective Andre Trudelle said a bar employee told authorities that the friends left together about 3 a.m. Sunday. The legal drinking age in Connecticut is 21.

Their car apparently traveled down Chapel Street, went over a concrete barrier that was in place Thursday and plunged into the river, Sorrentino said. The street has been a dead end for years because the Chapel Street bridge is out of service.

Officials said the bridge pivots open on a center axis to allow water traffic to pass and has been in its open position for years.

Private investigator Francis "Bud" Mullen, former head of the federal Drug Enforcement Administration, said he believed the barrier was not in place at the time of the accident.

Mullen was hired by the youths' families to find them after they were reported missing. The families also put up a $20,000 reward for helping to locate them.

Several news reports, quoting unidentified sources, also said no barriers were in place the night of the accident.

"I have no information either way," Sorrentino said. "I've been led to believe the barriers were always there."

With several questions unanswered, including whether a sign incorrectly directed traffic down the dead-end street to the bridge, New Haven Mayor Biagio DiLieto told city officials to complete a report on the accident by today.

On Thursday, two signs leading to the bridge warned of danger ahead. One was a small green sign restricting the road to local traffic only. The other was an orange detour sign with an arrow that incorrectly directs traffic to the dead end.

The public works department referred calls to city Corporation Counsel Brian Murphy. He was in a meeting Thursday evening and unavailable for comment, his secretary said.

A Thursday night prayer service for the victims, planned when they were still missing, turned into a tearful memorial ceremony attended by about 200 friends and relatives at a Niantic church.

"There are no words to take away your pain," said Assistant Pastor Laurie Whinnem Etter. "The only way to respond is to celebrate the love and the joy that these friends shared."

Landlady's attorneys upset by media attention

By JENNIFER KERR
Associated Press Writer

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)—Attorneys for a landlady suspected of killing seven tenants for their Social Security checks accused the media and police of turning the case into a "circus."

Public defenders Peter Vlautin and Kevin Clymo criticized the Sacramento Police Department for transporting Dorothea Montalvo Puente from Los Angeles to Sacramento in a jet chartered by a television station and allowing a reporter to interview her.

"It's unheard of that a law enforcement agency would team up with a news organization to transport a person to jail," Vlautin said.

Bill George, assignment editor for the station, KCRA-TV in Sacramento, said Thursday night that the reporter, Mike Boyd, was "only doing a good job."

"(He) was just being an aggressive journalist," said George. "No deal was made with police. They needed a way to get back (to Sacramento) and we offered one."

George added that there were no commercial flights at the time.

Puente, 59, who vanished early Saturday after police unearthed the first of seven bodies buried in her yard, was arrested in Los Angeles late Wednesday. She appeared briefly Thursday in Municipal Court here, but did not enter a plea to a single murder count.

Assistant District Attorney Dan Kinter told the judge that additional counts and special circumstances would be filed. Special circumstances means the penalty upon conviction could be death or life in prison without parole.

Puente was ordered held without bail. Vlautin and Clymo were appointed to represent her, and the case was continued to Dec. 15.

Police have not identified any of the bodies, but have a list of 25 people, mostly impoverished elderly people on Social Security, who have lived at Puente's eight-bedroom rooming house and whose whereabouts are unknown.

During the television interview, Puente denied any involvement in the deaths.

"I have not killed anyone," Puente said on the plane. "I told you that. I have not killed anyone. The checks I cashed, yes."

The reporter said he didn't ask her about the murders and she volunteered her denial. She also told him, "I used to be a very good person at one time."

Puente has a criminal record dating to a 1948 conviction for forging checks. She served 2½ years in prison in the 1980s for drug and robbing three men she met in a bar, and remains on parole for a separate federal forgery conviction.

Her attorneys said they were infuriated that Puente was interviewed without a lawyer being present.

Puente was put on the jet with detectives and the television crew with "no opportunity to talk to anybody who had her interests in mind," said Clymo.

"Our client denies killing anybody. The true facts will come out in the courtroom," said Vlautin. "The Sacramento Police Department has enlisted the aid of the media to create a circus atmosphere."

Police Chief John Kearns said at a news conference he did not learn about the jet arrangements until Thursday morning. The plane arrived in Sacramento just before 5 a.m.

"The matter is being looked into at the present time," he said.

Kearns said police did not have enough evidence to arrest Puente after the first body was found, but he admitted investigators erred in not following her. She apparently boarded a bus for Los Angeles, Kearns said.

She checked into a downtown motel there, using the name of Donna Johanson, police said. At a nearby bar she met Charles Willgues, a 67-year-old pensioner.

Willgues said he became suspicious after Puente quizzed him about his Social Security benefits and suggested that they share an apartment.

"She seemed nice and sincere. I found her very believable," he said.

But her face seemed familiar, and he remembered seeing her on a morning newscast on CBS. He called the network's bureau, and eventually went there and identified a photo of Puente. Police were notified, and Puente was arrested at her motel.

Another B1-B bomber jet crashes in South Dakota

RAPID CITY, S.D. (AP)—A B-1B bomber crashed near Ellsworth Air Force Base in western South Dakota, the second accident involving the long-range strategic jet in two weeks, authorities said early Friday.

The B-1B crashed on the runway as it came in for a landing at about 12:30 a.m. CST, officials said. There was no immediate word on the extent of injuries to the crew.

"From monitoring the ambulance traffic, they say they were going to Ellsworth base hospital with four or five patients. We don't know if they're dead or alive," said Lt. Fred Brown of the Rapid City Police Department.

However, Navy Lt. Cmdr. James Kudla, a spokesman for the Defense Department in Washington, said, "Right now at least it looks like there were no fatalities."

The crash comes two days after officials reported that the Air Force had inspected and cleared more than two-thirds of the B-1B bombers grounded following a crash last week that destroyed one of the long-range planes in Texas.

Brown said the B-1B crashed on the runway as it came in for a landing at Ellsworth, which lies on the eastern edge of Rapid City. He said it did not hit any buildings and no one on the ground was known to be injured.

"Witnesses saw four people eject from the airplane before it crashed," Brown said. "It is possible that it came in too low and hit a power pole."

"Ellsworth has told us it was carrying a six-man crew," he said, adding that the jet normally carried four.

Witnesses reported a downed power line and airplane parts scattered in the landing area, he said. Power was reported out in Box Elder, a town south of the base.

On Nov. 8, a B-1B crashed and burned in a field near Dyess Air Force Base, Texas. It had been the second accident to claim one of the new bombers in 14 months. In that crash, the crew of four managed to eject and survived.

That crash was the third in four years since B-1 aircraft began flying as the nation's first new long-range bomber in more than 25 years.

On Tuesday, Strategic Air Command spokesman Lt. Col. George H. Peck said 63 of the 85 B-1B's located at SAC bases had been inspected as of Tuesday without any problems being detected.

The Air Force had refused to speculate on the cause of the Texas crash, although a fire had been observed by witnesses around the plane's left two engines before the crash. SAC's grounding order specified a mandatory inspection of electric, fuel and hydraulic fluid lines.

The Air Force has been criticized over the past two years for its handling of the B-1B program.

FRENCHBORO, Maine (AP)—Residents of this pristine island town are luring city dwellers with offers of low-cost land and homes in an attempt to stop Frenchboro from becoming just another tourist spot along Maine's scenic coast.

Sanford Lunt, his family and their neighbors developed the homestead plan after years of watching residents forsake the island for the mainland.

The first homesteaders arrived recently, and by Christmas the rest are expected to be living on the island, most of which is owned by the heirs of Nelson Rockefeller.

"These people are great," said Steve Beote, a 27-year-old electrician who moved from Salem, Mass. "You don't find people like this in Massachusetts anymore."

Beote's and six other families were chosen from about 300 applicants to move onto the 2,500-acre island, officially called Long Island, across Blue Hill Bay from the mainland.

Between 1960 and 1980, Frenchboro's population dropped from 57 to 43 as young residents left for the mainland and older residents died.

About the same time, vacationers discovered the island, with its clear, accommodating harbor and proximity to the popular resort town of Bar Harbor, 25 miles away by boat.

The island's attractiveness concerned residents, who prefer a relaxed life without distractions from the outside world, said Lunt, 78, the island's oldest resident.

"We're getting down in population, and if it gets down too far it might be all summer people," Lunt said, with bent nails protruding from his mouth as he repaired a lobster trap. "We don't want that to happen."

A twice-a-week ferry that takes 40 minutes connects the mainland with the island, which has no doctors, year-round stores, public telephones or traffic lights.

Islanders say life has a special meaning here, and as if to prove the point, they feed plump "wild" deer by hand and ducks and geese outside their doorsteps.

"It's a good place, it's quiet and you don't have to worry about anyone breaking in on you at night," said Lunt.

The homesteaders who have already arrived have been helping to build their own houses in thick, pine woodland, about a half-mile from the Atlantic Ocean. The rest of the town faces the harbor, where lobstermen sell their catch to a wholesale lobster pound.

The seven homestead families are renting the newly built homes for three years, and later will purchase them at below-market prices.

The homes are scattered among about 55 acres of land donated by wealthy heirs of Rockefeller, the late vice president. The construction was paid for with $400,000 in federal community development money.

Walter Pietrowski, who moved to the island a few months ago, said Frenchboro offers a tranquility he never found amid the hustle and bustle of New Haven, Conn., where he, his wife and three children lived.

"Sometimes you sit and you just don't hear anything," said Pietrowski. "It's strange, but I like it."

Pietrowski and the other homesteaders were awarded their land and homes after a selection and screening process by a panel of islanders and state officials.

Most of the homesteaders have young families, and the men have worked in trades such as carpentry and pipe fitting.

Much of the credit for saving the island goes to the Lunts, whose ancestors settled here in 1822. The family, which makes up half the island's population, was the impetus behind the homesteading project.

Lithuanians debate challenge to Moscow in nationalistic move

MOSCOW (AP) — Lithuanian lawmakers convened to debate a challenge to Moscow's authority, and residents of neighboring Latvia today marked their republic's pre-Soviet independence in another outpouring of Baltic nationalism.

This week in Estonia, the third Soviet Baltic republic, the parliament declared Estonia's sovereignty in all matters but defense and foreign affairs. It passed a constitutional amendment requiring Estonian approval of any new Soviet law.

In Lithuania, hundreds of demonstrators converged Thursday on the parliament building with banners and flags, according to Veleja Terleckiene. The demonstrators carried flags of formerly independent Lithuania and banners supporting Lithuanian autonomy, said Ms. Terleckiene, the daughter of Anastas Terleckas, a leader of the separatist Lithuanian Liberty League.

Lithuanians watched on live television as their legislators convened a session expected to take up a declaration of Lithuania as the official language and other laws following Estonia's example.

Alexander Gelbaf, deputy editor of the official newspaper Sovietskaya Litva, said in a telephone interview that the parliament took up only budgetary matters Thursday. He said the constitutional questions related to relations with the central government would be debated beginning today.

Terleckiene said the entire republic, including members of the Communist Party, supported initiatives of the grassroots Lithuanian People's Front being debated in parliament.

Meanwhile, in Latvia, residents planned demonstrations and rallies for today, the 70th anniversary of the birth of their short-lived independent nation.

The three Baltic republics of Lithuania, Latvia, and Estonia were independent countries between the world wars. The Soviet Union annexed them in 1940 after a pact with the Nazis.

The United States backed the Baltic nationalists Thursday. State Department spokesman Charles Redman said in Washington: "The United States does not recognize the forcible incorporation of the Baltic states. ... The people of the Baltic states have been denied their basic human rights."

It is not yet clear how Kremlin authorities will deal with the latest outburst of Baltic nationalism. On Thursday, they called Estonian leaders to Moscow to discuss Wednesday's challenge to central control, but no date has been set for the meeting.

The Kremlin has shown signs of impatience with the Baltics. Politburo member Alexander N.

Yakovlev, believed to be President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's closest adviser, said in an interview last month that the republics will not be allowed to take any major steps toward independence.

The Estonian parliament made its challenge under the banner of the reform effort Gorbachev calls perestroika. The challenge underscores Gorbachev's problems with rising ethnic feelings that could spread to other areas.

Thousands of Baltic people have joined grassroots nationalist groups. Some say privately their ultimate goal is secession from the Soviet Union.

Baltic nationalists have been angered by amendments to the national constitution proposed by Gorbachev. They say the changes would shift the little power they now hold to Moscow and eliminate their constitutional right to secede.

U.S.-Canada trade pact waiting on elections

TORONTO (AP) — How will Canada negotiate with its powerful southern neighbor after Monday's election decides the fate of the Canada-U.S. free trade agreement? That depends on which candidate for prime minister is talking.

Opposition Liberal Party leader John Turner, who wants to cancel the deal, says he will tell President-elect George Bush that President Reagan out-negotiated Prime Minister Brian Mulroney on the agreement signed in January.

In a crowd-pleasing routine that has been polished through weeks of campaigning to place the Liberals in a dead heat with the prime minister's Progressive Conservative Party, Turner imitates Mulroney's responses to President Reagan's requests.

"Yes, sir, Mr. President," Turner replies submissively to each point with a crisp salute. He charges the prime minister wants to be "governor of the 51st state."

Mulroney resorts to sarcasm as well in his increasingly biting attacks, describing a potential meeting next year if his rival becomes prime minister.

"Imagine Mr. Turner going to Washington to say, 'Hey, President Bush — I just tore up the free-trade accord and now if you have 15 minutes, we'll negotiate an acid-rain treaty.'"

"You know what the president would say?" Mulroney asks. "He'd say exactly what your mother-in-law would say — 'Hey, this guy can't be serious.'"

Canada claims half the acid rain falling in eastern Canada originates in the United States, making it one of the most troublesome issues between the two countries.

The free trade agreement has been approved by the U.S. Congress but needs final Canadian parliamentary approval. The socialist New Democratic Party led by Ed Broadbent also opposes the deal, so only a Conservative majority victory ensures the agreement will start taking effect Jan. 1 as scheduled.

The relationship with Washington attracted special attention Thursday because of Reagan's speech on international trade in Washington in which he spoke favorably of the Canadian agreement.

"As far as the United States is concerned, the Free Trade Agreement is an example of cooperation at its best. It is a testament to the commitment of our two governments to the principles of the open market and to economic cooperation," Reagan said.

Turner immediately described the speech as intervention in Canadian affairs.

"As a Canadian, and with no anti-American sentiment at all, I resent the intervention into our election," the Liberal leader said during a campaign stop in Quebec.

Turner also said the speech was very similar to language used by Mulroney, adding that such phrases "could have been written by Mr. Mulroney and perhaps they were."

The Conservatives have denied reports they sought any support or extra assurances on the agreement from Washington to calm down Canadian opposition to the pact.

Soviets battling reckless drivers, bad roads

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet drivers are so reckless and roads are so bad that the annual Soviet traffic death toll is almost as high as in the United States, which has 10 times as many cars, the Communist Party daily said.

About 40,000 people are killed in traffic accidents each year in the Soviet Union, Pravda said Wednesday.

"There is a lack of elementary ethics on the road, with drivers behaving rudely and without any respect towards each other," the paper. "The Soviet road and high speed are not compatible."

The 1986 traffic death toll in the United States was 47,900, according to the 1988 World Almanac.

Pravda said in an article Oct.

30 that the Soviet Union has about 50 cars per 1,000 people, compared to 560 per 1,000 in the United States.

Pedestrians account for about 13,000 of the annual Soviet traffic deaths, more than the combined total of the United States, Britain, France and West Germany, the paper said.

It said 13 out of every 100 people injured in Soviet car accidents die, compared to 1.3 percent in the United States.

Driving can be notoriously challenging in Moscow, whose main roads are clogged with trucks that spew clouds of black smoke and often break down in the middle of the streets.

Pravda said rudeness was the motivation for drivers "overtaking slower moving cars or simply refusing to give up the particular lane their cars occupy."

Traffic police, who stand at intersections and in the middle of major streets rain or shine, are disrespectful to drivers and don't help matters, Pravda said.

Drivers cannot get a license without a six-month course, but once they receive it, it's theirs for life unless it is revoked for repeated traffic regulation violations.

STILL WATERS

The old proverb "still water runs deep" meant that people who talked very little, like Calvin Coolidge, were supposed to be thinking profound thoughts about important things. There is probably more truth here if the proverb is reversed "deep water runs still," for most great people are not noisy about their greatness. Nowhere is this principle truer than when applied to God. He does not force Himself upon us; He will not dazzle our eyes and force us to respect; He has left man free even to reject his Creator. The Bible says that this is exactly what man, every person, has done. We have all repeated the tragedy of Adam and the meaning has drained out of life.

Our rejection, however, does not end God's love. He continues to send His rain on the just and unjust. But far more than this He sends an only son that through Him we may become reconciled to God, for here we can see the magnificent depth of God's steadfast love. His love continues to flow deep and still like this stream, ever there for whoever will turn to Him in trust.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: She went away and did as Elijah had told her. So there was food every day for Elijah and the woman and her family. For the jar of flour was not used up and the jug of oil did not run dry, in keeping with the word of the Lord spoken by Elijah. (1 Kings 17:15-16 NIV)

Remember the Bible story about the widow who made bread for Elijah with the last of her oil and flour only to find God caused the meager oil and flour to last for three years?

I used to be astounded that she seemed not to fully comprehend the fact God had worked a very special miracle for her. However, a season of setbacks for my family taught me how the widow could have missed the obvious.

We were in the throes of the holiday season of Thanksgiving and Christmas. Since we also have two daughters with birthdays at that time of the year, our dollars have to stretch like rubber bands under the best of circumstances.

That year, our problems began with the kids taking turns having tonsillitis which of course resulted in doctor and drug bills. Then my husband and I had a series of dental emergencies, all requiring gold crowns. We added huge dental bills to the other medical bills.

Someone stepped on one daughter's glasses during gym class; because of some problems in fitting her lenses, we ended up buying two pair of glasses, a pair from each of two optometrists.

Since I was an incurable money worrier at that time, I was still reeling under the avalanche of medical bills when I splashed across a sizable wet spot on the carpet; a whole had corroded in the hot water heater.

I spent that holiday season worrying and scrambling to pay the bills. The cash was flowing without so much as warming our palms; but, by the end of the year, we had paid the bills and had enjoyed a good Christmas with our family and friends.

As the money whizzed past us like speeding bullets, I kept trying to figure out how we were paying all the bills.

To this day, I've never been able to make our income and the enormous payments compute on paper. It took me several months to realize we hadn't done it at all; God had worked a very personal miracle for us! And I had been so busy worrying, I had missed the obvious!

This Thanksgiving, may we all have perfect heart vision; may we see with sublime specificity the everyday miracles God has worked in our lives. And may our giving of thanks be a sweet, sweet offering to our Miracle Worker.

Religion roundup

WASHINGTON (AP) — Membership in the Evangelical Council for Financial Responsibility has passed the 500 mark, with more than 75 religious organizations joining since last January.

The financial watchdog organization, which sets standards on raising and handling funds, gained increased attention in the last two years as a result of scandals in television ministries.

It recently expelled two members, Calvary Temple Church in Fort Wayne, Ind., and Virginia-based Christian Aid Mission for not complying with various standards, reports the fortnightly Christianity Today.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Conservative Roman Catholic Church historian James Hitchcock says ecumenical dialogue with fundamentalists is difficult but "more promising" than with mainline Protestants.

He told a recent conference on fundamentalism that unlike mainline Protestants, fundamentalists say there can be an authoritative expression of Christian faith, although they contend the Catholic version is wrong.

It is "more fruitful," Hitchcock said, to talk with someone who says "you're wrong" than with people who don't consider the issue important.

LAKE JUNALUSKA, N.C. (AP) — Back from a trip to Israel, the Rev. Joe Hale, general secretary of the World Methodist Council, said Israel security forces are flagrantly violating human rights of Palestinian Arabs.

He said, "Suffering is being inflicted not by isolated incidents, but as state policy."

Paster weds Pentecostal childhood with modern Methodism

By ED TODD
Midland Reporter-Telegram

MIDLAND (AP)—In emerging from "the darkness of poverty," Clara Reed says she answered God's calling to the ministry.

For years, though, she had resisted "the call," and had fled from and denied the inward yearning. But finally she "relented" to the light.

Today, the Rev. Clara Reed, who was born and bred in a Pentecostal environment in an impoverished coal-mining town in Kentucky, at age 35 is setting church history. She apparently is the first black woman minister in the Methodist Church's Northwest Texas Conference.

Mrs. Reed, who is pastor of Midland's St. Paul CME Church, is an ordained United Methodist Church minister who has wedded her old-line revivalistic Pentecostalism with today's Word-searching Methodism.

"I preach in what's known as the black tradition," she said recently. "I am not a lecturer. In Bible study, I teach as I would in class. But from the pulpit on Sunday morning when I'm preaching, it's the old-time preaching."

Mrs. Reed said she does not "lecture. I don't give a talk. I preach." And in weekly prayer meetings, the minister and the congregation pray, sing and read Scripture.

Mrs. Reed, who is one of 10 children, was bred in a religious setting. Though poor, her mother, 78-year-old Anna Mae Cook, was and still is a Pentecostal preacher in McRoberts, a town of about 1,000 people near the Kentucky-Virginia border. Her step-father, McCullom Cook, is a retired coal miner.

"It's a very poverty-stricken area — just like what you see on television — back in the mountains in the coal fields," she said. "You either worked in the coal mines, in the school or in the hospital, because that was it. My town was so small there was only one stop sign and that was at the post office. We didn't have a stop light. That's how small it was when I grew up."

In her childhood, Mrs. Reed was "always involved in the ministry, but chose the secular life for her career."

"I didn't want to be a preacher," she said. "I ran from it."

Her education got her into school teaching and into social work. She earned the bachelor's and master's degrees in sociology. Still, she worked within the Pentecostal Church as a lay-woman "trying to do that good work without answering the call."

At the University of Pittsburgh, she began work on the doctorate.

"But then I had my baby (Crystal, now 13) and got off into motherhood and put that on hold."

In the meantime, in 1977, Mrs. Reed became an ordained Pentecostal minister. "I joined the apostolic succession under the yoke of obedience," she said, and pursued spiritual enlightenment.

She preached and studied.

"My theological perspective was changing," Mrs. Reed said. "I was doing a lot of searching and studying. The waters were unsettled. I believe in the power of the Holy Spirit — how it changes you. Things that you used to do, you don't do any more."

As a Pentecostalist, Mrs. Reed said she "had the piety and emphasis on spirituality."

Yet, the minister said she felt a need to "balance" piety and spirituality with knowledge and understanding.

"All of my life, I had been taught to pursue education and training and knowledge. But in the area of religion and Bible history, those kind of things I didn't find."

But in the Methodist Church, the pursuit of knowledge was encouraged.

"I wondered why things eternal I couldn't probe."

So, she did.

Mrs. Reed enrolled in seminary at Southern Methodist University and earned the master's degree in divinity in 1986. That same year, her friend and colleague, the Rev. Hadley Edwards, pastor of Midland's Hollowell United Methodist Church, earned the master's degree in divinity degree from SMU.

Mrs. Reed did her ministerial internship at St. Paul United Methodist Church in Dallas.

In 1987, Mrs. Reed and her family moved to Midland, where her husband, Charles E. Reed, is director of employee relations for Arco Oil and Gas Co. She became children's minister at Edwards' Hollowell United Methodist Church.

Mrs. Reed is involved in community services — from the United Way of Midland to the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs.

"She takes seriously the commission of Luke about preaching on captivity, liberation of the oppressed, and opening the eyes of the blind and preaching the good news of Christ," Edwards said.

In the Methodist Church, Mrs. Reed said she senses that her "witness is more effective. The environment within the church is more fertile for that kind (probing of things eternal) of spiritual exploration."

And in answering a need, Mrs. Reed was "loaned" out by the Methodist Church to the Christian Methodist Episcopal Church to become pastor of St. Paul CME Church in the southeast part of Midland.

"I love to give my testimony of what God has done in my life," Mrs. Reed said of her spiritual journey and lifestyle changes — from poverty to affluence. "All the odds were against me."

Mrs. Reed and her family live in far northwest Midland just off the golf course at Green Tree Country Club.

"I often say 'I eat and sleep in Green Tree but live in southeast Midland'" in the predominantly black neighborhood, Mrs. Reed said. "These are the people I know best."

"In the CME Church, the ritual and liturgy are 'almost identical' to that of the Methodist Church," she said.

"Anytime, the bishop (of the Northwest Texas Conference of the United Methodist Church) can say he needs me and can call me home" to the Methodist Church.

Although Mrs. Reed said that she first "met God in the Pentecostal Church, that same God is speaking to me" in the Methodist Church. "We talk about the higher heights and the deeper depths."

In the Methodist Church, "I'm not leaving any of that power, that enthusiasm, the jubilation of the Pentecostal Church. In many ways, there's not a lot of difference."

Judge rejects all bidding for PTL assets

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — A U.S. bankruptcy judge Thursday rejected competing offers from two Canadian businessmen for the assets of PTL and ordered bidding to "start from scratch."

Judge Rufus Reynolds said the offers did not meet the financial conditions he set down Wednesday. He directed PTL bankruptcy trustee M.C. "Red" Benton to draft guidelines for prospective buyers along the lines of those conditions.

The auction Thursday between the two businessmen was expected to close the books on the evangelical empire built by Jim and Tammy Bakker before a sex-and-money scandal forced it seek Chapter 11 bankruptcy reorganization in 1987.

Reynolds scheduled another auction for Dec. 12 and said he would approve a buyer the next day, warning that if the case is not concluded by then, "I will not put up with this case any longer under (Chapter) 11. I will move it to Chapter 7."

Chapter 7 involves the liquidation of all assets. Under Chapter 11, the company develops a plan to put its finances in order. PTL's reorganization included selling off undeveloped land, a hotel, theme park and shopping mall at Fort Mill, S.C.

Reynolds said he preferred Chapter 11 because Chapter 7 "doesn't bring the most money to the most people."

Vancouver real estate magnate Peter Thomas opened the bidding Thursday with a $70 million cash offer that allowed him to back out of the deal within a certain time after closing — a provision Reynolds objected to.

Canadian businessman Stephen Mernick bid $115 million with a $50 million initial payment, but Reynolds objected that there were inadequate assurances that Mernick would pay the remaining $65 million.

Reynolds said he had decided to "turn all of them down and to start from scratch."

Last summer, the television ministry was split off as a non-profit organization known as Heritage Ministries, which has no assets.

The remaining for-profit organization, including the theme park, hotel and shopping mall at the Heritage USA complex at Fort Mill and 1,700 undeveloped acres nearby, have been under the bankruptcy court's control pending its sale.

Proceeds will go toward satisfying the ministry's debts, estimated as high as $130 million, including about $55 million claimed by the Internal Revenue Service.

Bakker's own $172 million bid for the ministry fell through in September when he was unable to raise a $3 million down payment. The Bakkers now are trying to raise money for a new TV ministry.

Mernick, a 34-year-old real estate developer who is an Orthodox Jew, also owns a tire plant, a travel agency, a garbage collection service and an import company, has said he is interested in PTL for its real estate.

Thomas, chairman of Samoth Capital Corp. of Vancouver, founded Century 21 of Canada. He has said he would operate Heritage USA as a resort and conference center that would stress "traditional family values."

Thomas said he would consider allowing the ministry to lease facilities at Heritage USA. Mernick has not said whether he would allow the ministry to stay.

PTL filed for bankruptcy protection in 1987, three months after Bakker stepped aside over a sexual encounter with Jessica Hahn, a church secretary.

Donations to the ministry dwindled amid ensuing revelations about the luxurious lifestyle enjoyed by the Bakkers.

Christian Scientists plan Thanksgiving service

AMARILLO - The Amarillo Christian Science Church will have a one-hour service at 10 a.m. Thursday, Thanksgiving Day, as a time for Christian Scientists and others to express their gratitude to God for spiritual healing in their own experience.

Church representatives said all members and the public are welcome to attend the special Thanksgiving service. The church is located at Georgia and Julian (2701 Julian Blvd.) in Amarillo.

Guest speaker will be Rowland Abiodun, a visiting professor at Amherst College in Massachusetts this year.

At one time doctors were expecting Abiodun to die soon. At least, not according to doctors in Nigeria and Canada, who only a few years ago diagnosed a terminal condition of leukemia for Abiodun. He was supposed to have only a short time to live.

While putting his affairs in order, Abiodun made a life-saving discovery. He later said he began to ponder a source of healing that had not seemed a serious possibility before.

Today, Abiodun is a well man and his family is very grateful he is alive. His healing is linked to something that millions of churchgoers from many denominations around the world will be considering this Thanksgiving — gratitude to God.

He said he feels God has become a healing power in his life, and this has made all the difference to him.

At Thanksgiving time, people are grateful for many things. At the special Christian Science church service Abiodun will be attending this Thursday, he will feel a deep gratitude along with others who have the opportunity to verbally express their thanks to God for spiritual healing.

This week is National Bible Week, and the thread of spiritual healing throughout both the Old and New Testaments will reaffirm the conviction of people from many religious persuasions that "God is... a very present help in trouble," Christian Science representatives said.

This feeling of God's presence and power helps explain why so many denominations will be offering a special Thanksgiving service this year, they added.

Members of First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Amarillo said they warmly invite the public to join with them to worship in their special Thanksgiving Day service.

Sale to aid Good Samaritan

The Aid Association for Lutherans will sponsor a garage sale Saturday, with proceeds benefiting Good Samaritan Christian Services.

The sale will be held from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday at 1200 Duncan.

"One of the most important needs of people is supplied by the Good Samaritan place," said an

AAL representative. "That's food, plus help in areas such as medicine, clothes, utilities and other assistance."

Proceeds from the garage sale will be used to purchase food and other items for distribution through Good Samaritan.

Good Samaritan is assisted by 21 churches in Pampa.

Religion Roundup

NEW YORK (AP) — Bishops of six of the 99 dioceses of the Episcopal Church have denounced the September election in Boston of the Rev. Barbara Harris to be the first woman bishop in the worldwide Anglican communion.

The Episcopal Church is one of 28 national branches of that communion.

Declaring that Anglican faith would be "irreparably compromised" if she is consecrated a bishop, the six protesting bishops said they "cannot accept the validity of ordinations or confirmations she administers."

Her consecration is not expected before next February. A few parish rectors in the Massachusetts dioceses have said they would not recognize a woman as bishop.

Roman Catholic J. Francis Stafford of Denver, head of the bishops' ecumenical affairs committee, said a woman's becoming an Anglican bishop would hinder the "process of reconciliation" with Roman Catholicism.

St. Mark plans to hold fish fry

St. Mark CME Church, 406 Elm, will hold a fish fry Saturday at the church.

The fish fry will begin at 11 a.m. and continue until sold out, said Rev. H.R. Johnson, pastor.

There will be a variety of fish available, along with all the trimmings.

The public is invited. Cost is $3.50 per plate.

EDINA, Minn. (AP) — Most modern architects don't seem to know much about what a church should look like, according to leaders of a conference here that sought to draw more of them into the field.

"We have been troubled in recent years by the number of new church buildings that end up looking more like roller skating rinks or doughnut shops," said officials of a division of the United Church Board for Homeland Ministries, which sponsored the Nov. 3-6 conference.

Coatracks help combat clutter

By APRIL BAIL

Pop quiz: Where should one look first to find a child's coat, sweater, boot or raincoat? If your answer was, "In the middle of the floor," you win.

In an effort to clean up and eliminate this problem in our household, I made three coat racks. They are placed in strategic locations and we are now able to walk through the house, including the kids' rooms, without tripping over piles of outerwear.

The coat racks are very easy to make. The largest one is a freestanding unit that measures 26 x 36 inches, with coats and boots painted on the backboard. It includes a lower shelf to keep dirty boots off the floor.

The pegged coat rack is a very simple one that's painted with a baseball motif, but any other design can be substituted. The third rack is less kid-oriented, but can be used anywhere. It has a mirror and decorative brass hangers.

You can reproduce these coat racks, and help eliminate the mess that might litter your home, in just a couple of afternoons. Our detailed plans include full-size patterns for the painted designs and contours, plus a materials list and step-by-step instructions.

To order the plans, specify Project No. 527 and send $4.95. If you'd like our catalog, which includes $16 worth of discount coupons, add $2.95.

Mail your order to: Kid's Stuff, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 1000, Bixby, Okla. 74008-1000.

To make the pegged baseball coat rack, you'll need a 21-inch length of 1x8 lumber, four wooden shaker pegs and acrylic paints. The 1x8 serves as the base. You can rout the edges, round them off or leave them square.

Drill four sockets into the board near the lower edge, but drill at an angle so the pegs will slant upward and prevent things from sliding off.

Sand the board thoroughly and paint the board and pegs one color. Don't glue the pegs into the sockets until you have painted on the design.

When the base paint has dried, draw the baseball, bat and cap on the board. Paint the basic colors. When they have dried, add the outlines and details. Paint your child's name on the cap if you like. Glue the pegs in.

To hang the rack on the wall, use molly bolts. The bolt heads that show on the rack can be recessed and covered with plugs.

Mom escapes daily drudgery by writing science fiction

By JIM WARREN
Lexington Herald-Leader

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — In the afternoons, while Lynn Hightower's husband is at work and her children are at school, she travels to worlds we have not dreamed of.

The 31-year-old Lexington woman writes science fiction.

"I'm somewhere else when I'm writing," she says. "That may sound strange, but when I'm writing, I don't have to live in the everyday world."

When she returns to reality, however, she has had to face what most writers face, the process of getting published. She is familiar with rejection. Her first story was turned down by a magazine when she was only 16.

Many more rejections followed.

But she kept trying, sustained, she says, by a supportive husband and a love for putting stories together.

Now, things are coming together. Hightower had a science fiction novel bouncing from publisher to publisher for the last few years. In August, Pageant Books agreed to buy it. The book, The Stars as Witness, is due out before year's end.

It is the first thing Hightower has sold.

"It was like being pregnant for five years and then the baby comes," she says.

As a writer, Hightower is interested in entertaining readers, not delivering some message about the meaning of life.

"Some writers do sit down and make a statement," she says. "But I can't see myself doing that. My motivation was always more along the lines of, 'Sit down and let me tell you this really neat story.'"

Hightower wrote her first novel when she was in fifth grade. It was a Nancy Drew-type mystery.

"One year at Jessie Clark school, I had a girlfriend, and we wrote a book together," she says. "She would write a chapter and end it with a cliffhanger. Then I had to figure a way out of the cliffhanger, write another chapter and leave her a cliffhanger to get out of."

At 16 she wrote a story about souls lost in mirrors. She knew nothing about the publishing game. But with the boundless optimism of youth, she sent the story to Redbook magazine. She was surprised when it was rejected.

"I had a lot to learn. I sent a lot of stories to Ladies Home Journal before I ever found out they didn't accept anything not submitted by an agent."

Hightower does not expect the book to make her rich. But it is the culmination of a dream and also a beginning.

"Before now," she says, "I always tried to define success as just being able to write. But to be honest, I really want to be published."

Adoptees have extra problems tracing lineage

One of the most controversial issues in our country today concerns adoption and the rights of the person adopted to know their heritage and ancestors if not their natural parents.

This has caused a major conflict for genealogists, and it is doubtful if an agreeable solution will ever be possible. Many feel that without the laws insuring privacy, more women will opt for abortion rather than adoption.

At the same time, physicians are stressing the need to have complete medical histories as more and more diseases are proven to be inherited, and many of them skip generations.

A 12-point guide citing ways to help adopted persons search for their true identity has been compiled by Warren E. Siegmund and can be obtained by sending a self-addressed envelope (business size) to: 382 Central Park West, New York, NY 10025.

is the Genetic Evaluation Guidance Committee. Information may be obtained from P.O. Box 2312, Carson City, Nev. 89702. This committee is a part of the International Soundex Reunion Registry, an organization that is free to registrants over 18 years of age who wish a reunion with their next of kin by birth.

Several books have been written on the subject and offer suggestions and techniques on tracing people and using documents other than the "sealed adoption records." Check the local library or the nearest genealogical collection for available books.

Now is the time to write for membership information to historical and genealogical societies that you might like to join. Many dues are for calendar years and by writing now you would have the benefit of the entire year. Plus, subscriptions make excellent gifts for relatives or friends and yourself!

If the membership includes a free query in a newsletter or publication, send your query along with the fee. Remember to be brief but include all the pertinent information.

Several of the large genealogy companies have enlarged their inventories of gifts or cards that relate to family lineage. Write for a catalog or check the latest issue of The Genealogical Helper magazine.

I have received several letters recently asking about fees charged by genealogists, and my advice is to get the amount IN WRITING before requesting the research. No set fees or regulations apply and it is up to the individual how much is charged. Often, a fee plus transportation and copies is appropriate.

It also would depend upon how badly you want the material. If it is a direct line, I am inclined to pay more than if it is just something to fill in the family sheet. Birth and death certificates, when available, usually cost $5, therefore I will pay $5 for a death date from an individual.

It is really a personal matter what is charged and what you are willing to pay. Research fees are increasing, and remember that often you are paying for time that the result will be "no record found."

Woman hopes to meet daughter she gave up

DEAR ABBY: The letter signed "Adopted in Illinois" (and your reply) prompts me to write to you for the first time since I started reading your column approximately 30 years ago.

The author of that letter could very well be my daughter. I gave up an absolutely gorgeous baby girl for adoption 27 years ago in the state of Indiana. It was the most painful and unselfish thing I have ever done. If there was any way I could have kept her and given her a life even close to normal or good, I would have. I was trapped in an impossible situation and had no other choice.

All these years I have hoped and prayed that maybe someday I would get to see her. I am married now with two grown sons, but I never had another daughter. I have my name on file in Nevada with an agency that unites adoptees and biological parents — but only if it is mutually agreeable.

If my daughter's attitude is anything like the person who wrote that letter, I'll never get to see her. (She wrote: "Why should I go searching for my 'real' parents? I found them the day they found me.")

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Just because I gave her up does not mean I did not love her — it meant I loved her enough to care about the kind of life she would have.

Abby, how could you call that letter a "beautiful and generous attitude"? I disagree completely. It's a narrow-minded, misunderstanding attitude. There, I've said it, and now it's off my chest!

HEARTSICK IN WASHINGTON

DEAR HEARTSICK: I owe you — and other mothers who unselfishly gave their babies up for adoption — an apology. And here it is.

DEAR ABBY: Recently my 3-year-old grandson got into my daughter's vitamins. We called the poison control center as soon as we discovered it and rushed him to the hospital. Fortunately, he survived.

The doctor in the emergency room said that five iron pills can be fatal to a 3-year-old! He also told us that some children who have taken iron pills feel just fine for a week or so — and then all of a sudden they die!

Abby, I was shocked to learn that iron pills are so dangerous. Please print this. It might help a mother who debates if she should or shouldn't take her child to the hospital.

GRATEFUL GRANDMA
IN MESA, ARIZ.

DEAR GRATEFUL GRANDMA: Thank you for the warning. Marc Bayer, M.D.,

medical director of the Los Angeles Poison Center, says, "Everybody should be aware that ALL over-the-counter drugs — particularly vitamins containing iron — are potentially dangerous to children."

Also, let me add that children should never be told that they are being given "candy" when taking medicine. All medications (and vitamins fall into this category) should be kept locked away, out of the reach of children.

"How to Write Letters for All Occasions" provides sample letters of congratulations, thank-you, condolences, resumes and business letters — even how to write a love letter! It also includes how to properly address clergymen, government officials, dignitaries, widows and others. To order, send your name and address, plus check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada) to: Abby's Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Astro-Graph

Powerful, new ambitions will be aroused in you in the year ahead. These will be fueled by your desires to have a better material lifestyle.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Today you'll be much more productive if you don't attempt to do too many things at the same time. Settle for less, but do that well. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be careful your generosity isn't taken advantage of today by one who might try to selfishly manipulate you. This person has tried this trick on you before.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You might buy items for the house today simply because you believe them to be good buys. However, it's unlikely you'll ever use or need them.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you tell someone who comes to you for advice today what you think he/she would like to hear rather than the truth, you could be doing this person a great disservice.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) In group activities today it's best you don't lead the finance committee. There are strong indications you may be careless with your resources as well as those of others.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your plans are likely to be sound today, but your methods of execution could leave something to be desired. Do not depart from your blueprint once you've thought things through.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you're reluctant to take the initiative today, be careful to whom you delegate assignments. An ineffective alternate won't get the job done either.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Should you make a loan to a friend today, establish that you expect to be paid back, or else it might be treated as a gift.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Don't make commitments to your mate today that you feel you might have to renege on later. Being honest and up front will avert problems down the line.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Miscalculations are likely today if you take things for granted. Be optimistic and hopeful, but don't let it overshadow your common sense.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be extra careful today if you are in the market for a big-ticket item. If the price you are given seems out of line, do some comparison shopping before buying.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You might find yourself in a position today where you'll feel a little white lie can slip by unnoticed. Unfortunately, it will stand out like a sore thumb.

Former Aggie says Sherrill paid 'hush money'

DALLAS (AP) — Jackie Sherrill, the coach who turned the Texas A&M football team into a conference champion, was paying "hush money" to a former player as his athletic program was being investigated for violations by the NCAA, according to a published report today.

Former Aggie fullback George Smith told The Dallas Morning News in a copyright story that Sherrill paid him $4,400 in a series of cash and money order transactions dating back to November 1986.

Smith termed the payments "hush money." Sherrill refused to comment on Smith's allegations, but John Keith, sports information director for the team, told The Associated Press early this morning that school officials would make an announcement today regarding The News story. "The announcement will come from the president's office," said Keith, "not the athletic department. They'll need to read the story first."

Sherrill is also the athletic director for the school.

A&M president William H. Mobley and vice president Robert Smith, interviewed by The News on Thursday, said the university had notified the National Collegiate Athletic Association it had received allegations of additional rules violations.

Mobley said he has since ordered an internal investigation to be headed by Robert Smith, the official in charge of finance and administration.

"Based on our further discussions this morning and information you have available," Mobley said, "without question we'll proceed expeditiously and bring to bear investigative resources we need to seek to establish the validity of the issues on whether or not there are violations of NCAA rules or whether or not there are other institutional issues involved."

George Smith, a Georgia high school All-American when Sherrill recruited him in 1982, said he received $500 in cash on Sept. 13 — four days after Aggie officials announced at a news conference that the NCAA had levied major sanctions against the university's football program.

The newspaper said that payment, one of three Smith claims to have received since June 6, was sent to Smith's Atlanta home in an overnight express envelope. The envelope bore the return address of Bob Matey, a member of Sherrill's support staff.

Two other overnight express envelopes bore the return names and addresses of A&M receivers coach George Pugh and a Matey associate who is not employed by the athletic department, the newspaper reported.

The News said it obtained all three envelopes from Smith. One, which was dated Sept. 26 and contained five $100 bills, was opened in Atlanta in the presence of a newspaper reporter.

Later, in more than eight hours of tape-recorded interviews, Smith told The News that Sherrill and his staff provided about $10,000 in money, extra benefits and airline tickets. Smith joined the Aggies in the summer of 1982 and quit the team in early 1984 to transfer to Clemson University.

George Smith said Thursday he had been contacted Wednesday night at his Atlanta home by coach Pugh's wife. As a result of that conversation, Smith said, he would refuse to stand by the statements he made in the tape-recorded newspaper interviews. Before those interviews, Smith signed a notarized, sworn statement that he would "be truthful in the information he provides."

A&M vice president Robert Smith, no relation to the former fullback, said George Smith had contacted him early Thursday, only a short time before A&M officials were to meet a reporter and editor from The Dallas Morning News. George Smith refused to say what his conversation with university officials entailed.

"If I say it didn't happen, nothing happened," Smith said Thursday. He said that Pugh, a longtime Sherrill assistant who recruited him, was being unfairly singled out by Sherrill as the allegations unfolded.

In interviews with The News, the ex-player recalled that Sherrill had pledged to "take care of me" and provide a good-paying job working around the head coach's College Station home.

Smith said Sherrill ultimately paid him hundreds of dollars for minor yard work — an apparent violation of NCAA extra benefits regulations. In other alleged violations of NCAA rules, Smith claimed:

—Sherrill and Pugh routinely paid for round-trip plane flights between College Station and Atlanta.

—The head coach-athletic director also arranged for Smith to receive credit for a physical education course he did not attend during the summer prior to Smith's official enrollment at A&M.

—Sherrill was aware that Smith and other players were scalping their complimentary tickets to alumni at inflated prices. Smith claims a Sherrill assistant set up those transactions.

Pro picks

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

The last time the New York Giants and Philadelphia Eagles met, the Eagles went flying into the game because it was their first Monday night appearance in seven games.

They won, but barely — had Mark Bavaro not dropped a pass at the 4-yard line or Stephen Baker knocked down teammate Joe Morris on the way to an apparent touchdown, the game might have gone the other way.

Now it's the Giants who are flying, as the Eagles come into Giants Stadium Sunday. Their loss at Phoenix last week dumped them back into a tie with the Cards in the jumbled NFC East, just a game ahead of Washington and Philadelphia.

"Our biggest game of the year," is the way Coach Bill Parcells describes it.

Neither team has been consistent this year — the Eagles just squeaked by the woeful Steelers last week. The oddsmakers agree, making New York a 3½-point favorite, three points for the home field and calling them a half-point better overall.

Forget the home field. ...

Lady Harvesters ready to get cage season started

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

If Pampa's Lady Harvesters play up to their capabilities this basketball season, there could be a playoff spot waiting on down the line.

The Lady Harvesters return 5-11 senior scoring machine Yolanda Brown, strong-rebounding Diane Wood (5-11 senior) and a number of letter winners from last season's fourth-place team.

"We're excited about this season. We have better overall team speed and our press is working better right now than it did of last season," said Pampa coach Albert Nichols.

The Lady Harvesters open the season tonight at Dalhart and then host Perryton Saturday night in McNeely Fieldhouse.

Pampa defeated both Dalhart and Perryton last season, but both teams return more experienced squads. Dalhart returns four starters while Perryton keeps its starting lineup intact.

The Pampa-Dalhart girls' game starts at 6:30 p.m. followed by the boys' tilt at 8 p.m.

"We've been shooting the ball well from outside and our inside game has been solid," Nichols said.

Tara Hamby (5-8 junior), Christa West (5-5 sophomore) and Nikki Ryan (5-9 freshman) are expected to join Brown and Wood in the starting lineup. Others slated for action are Lisa Johnson (5-9 junior), Sheila Reed (5-5 sophomore), Leslie Bailey (5-10 junior) and Crystal Cook (5-6 sophomore).

Shivonne Parker (5-9 junior) had to undergo knee injury and will be out indefinitely.

"We've got nine girls on the varsity and all of them should see a lot of playing time," Nichols said. "We'll be able to shuffle players in and out and keep a fresh team in the game."

Saturday's game against Perryton tips off at 6 p.m. The boys' game between Pampa and Perryton is scheduled to start at 7:30 p.m.

"We need a good crowd Saturday night to get these girls going. I want to urge the fans to get to the gym nearly and fill up the seats," Nichols said.

Bucks appear to be cream of the crop in Class A football

Unless Garland Lakeview Centennial is for real, the Class of 5A state championship will likely be played tonight at Rice Stadium in Houston. Sugar Land Willowridge, ranked No. 1 in Texas and No. 2 in the nation most of the season, faces irascible Houston Yates, whose ranking credentials are almost as impeccable. The two come into the fray undefeated and virtually unchallenged.

It's the first full weekend of playoff activity, Classes 4A and 1A joining the championship tournament which began in all other levels last weekend. The two late starters had to wade through a few bi-district clashes, a bunch of Byes, and right on into Area Championship competition. Locally, the main interest focuses on unbeaten White Deer, where the Bucks, rejuvenated in their new Class A surroundings, remain loseless and face Plains (7-4) at Plainview tonight. Other than Windy Williams dreadnaught, any truly "local folks" are turning to basketball. The old standbys, always dependable for an extended season like Panhandle and Wheeler, can ready for a restful Thanksgiving weekend and the rarity of watching traditional games on the tube. The Bucks look like they're for real, like the bunch that rolled over Elgin on a cold December day in Sweetwater exactly 30 years ago. Return of a couple of injured athletes only adds to the Bucks' firepower.

They say a team reflects its head coach, and in the case of White Deer this appears to be true. Windy Williams was a solid, dependable, hard-working ballplayer when he played his college ball for Joe Kerbel and Gene Mayfield at West Texas State. And that same consistent effort has been evidenced by his Bucks this season. While coaches say they don't look ahead, "we play them one at a time," others can do some peeking. White Deer looks like the cream of the crop in Region I to the quarterfinals where the likely opponent would be veteran Rankin, also unbeaten.

EXTRA POINTS: Half the defending champions didn't reach the playoffs this year. Failing were 3A Cuero, 1A Wheeler, and 6-man Lohn. Still in the running to defend are 5A Plano, 4A West

Orange-Stark and 2A Lorena... Out of 76 bi-district games last week in the three classes with full schedules — 5A, 3A, 2A — 29 runners-up defeated the champion of the opposing district. Most victimized were champions in Region I of 5A, where Amarillo Tascosa, Sherman, Arlington, FW Dunbar and Hurst-Bell fell. Only in Region 4 of Class 2A did all eight district champions survive the runner-up challenge, a second opportunity which was initiated with the 1982 season, and has been well received... A total of 37 11-man teams are still undefeated, plus six more in 6-man play. In only five games are unbeaten going head-to-head this weekend. Worst record to make the playoffs is 3A-28 champion Sweeney with a 4-5-1 mark. Several others have break-even seasons...

Again, the schoolboys get into the marquee stadiums, with four games set for Texas Stadium, two at Rice, and one each at the Sun Bowl, Cotton Bowl, AstroDome, Jones and Memorial Stadiums, and Kyle Field... The on again-off again presence of Dallas Carter (9-0-1) again points up a major problem in Texas schoolboy/girl athletic programs with no set policy on grading standards. It became sorely apparent in the Panhandle a few years ago when it was revealed by the school board of a generally powerful school district that the standard for extra-curricular activity had long been a 60 grade average, whereas all other schools, to the best of everyone's knowledge, had always used a 70 average as passing. It is impossible to evaluate that one school system enjoyed in all UIL activities, how many students from other schools were penalized in the form of all-district, all-region, etc., honors and scholarships. The Carter case probably cost Mike Bailey's Plano East a continuation in the playoffs. PEHS had started to prepare for Carter, then found out Wednesday it would be South Garland, only to find out again hours before kickoff last Friday it would be Carter, which beat Bailey's confused district champions, 21-7... District 1-4A's champion Levelland Lobos meet Monahans (8-2) in Odessa tonight, and runner-up Hereford takes on Sweetwater (10-0) and favored to win state) at Jones Stadium tomorrow night. Most expect a Sweetwater-West Orange-Stark matchup for the 4A crown... Bay City's Black Cats are still in the playoffs, as the program former White Deer star Ron Mills built into a powerhouse continues its successes although Mills has moved on to San Marcos. The Cats play Tomball, a game that was a major contest three seasons ago with Lance Pavallas at QB for Tomball... Another historic schoolboy matchup, Plano vs. Permian, could possibly occur on Dec. 10, but the defending 5A champions will have to knock off two undefeated teams in order to gain the semifinals... Former WTSU ace running back Albie (00) Owens is first assistant with unbeaten Sugar Land Willowridge, and also serves as assistant varsity basketball coach. The two Owens boys playing at Syracuse are nephews... In the state Private School playoffs, Texas School for the Deaf has reached the semifinals with a fine 9-1 record... Willowridge QB William Shankle hit 13 of 20 passes last week for 203 yards and a TD, plus the super senior ran for another... Four states wrapped up their football playoffs last weekend... The career scoring record of The Sugar Land Express, Ken Hall, is being challenged by Sheridan, Ind. junior running back Brett Law, who already has tallied 404 points and 59 touchdowns this year, both national and single-season records.

Steffi Graf advances into Virginia Slims semifinals.

Graf, Shriver win Slims matches

NEW YORK (AP)—At the end, Muhammad Ali was beaten by Trevor Berbick. Now, Chris Evert is losing to Raffaella Reggi and Pam Shriver.

As she nears the end of her storied tennis career, Evert is starting to lose to players who couldn't touch her in her prime.

The latest example was her 7-5, 6-4 loss to Shriver Thursday night in the quarterfinals of the Virginia Slims Championships.

Granted, Shriver is the fifth ranked player in the world, but until last year she was 0-18 against Evert. In their last four matches, Shriver has been victorious three times.

"After being on the tour for 15 years and being in your mid-30s, you have your ups and downs," Shriver said of Evert. "I'm sure it bugs her that she can't always play her best anymore."

Since Evert has already won more matches than anyone in history, Shriver suggested that maybe she should think less about winning and more about having fun on the court.

"The day I just play for fun, I'd lose a lot more," Evert responded. "I do what I do best. I don't take chances or risks. I've never needed to do that."

Evert, who turns 34 next month, plans to play at least one more year before settling down and having children with her husband Andy Mill.

"I could play more tournaments than I played this year," she said. "It depends on how I feel."

Evert defaulted a match at the Italian Open in May because of a heel spur and couldn't play Steffi Graf in the U.S. Open semifinals because of a stomach virus.

"I'd like to be 100 percent healthy next year so I can train harder and feel better about my tennis," she said.

Graf wasn't feeling her best Thursday night, but the flu-weakened top seed still managed to beat Manuela Maleeva 6-1, 6-3 to set up a semifinal confrontation with Shriver.

"I had no trouble during the match, just a little problem breathing," Graf said after winning her 46th straight match.

Although a doctor advised her not to play, the Grand Slam winner had no problems beating Maleeva for the 10th straight time.

"I played pretty good for the kind of shape I was in," said Graf.

Javelinas reach playoffs

KINGSVILLE, Texas (AP) — The Texas A&I Javelinas will meet the Mississippi College Choctaws in a first-round game of the NCAA Division II post-season football playoffs Saturday at 1:30 p.m. in Javelina Stadium.

The Javelinas have reached post-season action for the first time since they became affiliated with the NCAA in 1981. As a member of the NAIA, Texas A&I was involved in eight post-season playoffs and won seven national championships.

Mississippi College is in the playoffs for the second time. The Choctaws reached the semifinals in 1979 before losing to eventual champion Delaware.

Texas A&I earned a spot in the playoffs with an 8-2 season's record. The Javelinas won the Lone Star Conference and have been ranked in the NCAA Division II's top 10 throughout the season. They were No. 3 in the final regular season poll.

Mississippi College finished 9-2 and shared the Gulf South Conference title with two other playoff-bound clubs: Jacksonville State of Alabama and Tennessee-Martin.

The Choctaws also have ranked among the top 10 teams since the start of the year. The Mississippi squad was No. 6 in the latest poll.

Mississippi College is led in rushing by running back Fred McAfee, 5-11, 185-pound sophomore who averages 73.1 yards a game.

Quarterback Wally Henry, 6-4, 210-pound junior, is the team's leading passer but may miss the game because of a shoulder separation received in the Delta State contest last weekend.

If he's unable to play, Earl Lee, 5-9, 175-pound senior, will start at the spot. He's the team's second leading rusher with a 44.4 per-game rushing average. He has thrown only 18 times this year and completed five for 73 yards.

Wide receiver Ron Frank, 5-11, 181-pound senior, is the leading receiver with 23 catches for 253 yards and three touchdowns.

Noseguard Terry Fleming, 6-1, 225-pound junior, tops the team in tackles with 95 in 11 games. He has 10 sacks along with his impressive tackle figure.

The Choctaws, from Clinton, Miss., average 278.7 total yards a game, 202.7 rushing and 76.0 passing. The defensive unit allows 264.9 total yards a game, 123.6 rushing and 141.4 passing.

The Javelinas are led offensively by tailback Johnny Bailey, 5-11, 180-pound junior who averages 144.2 yards a game rushing, and fullback Heath Sherman, 6-0, 202-pound senior who carries a 112.6 rushing norm. Bailey has led the NCAA Division II in rushing for each of his three collegiate seasons and has already broken the Division II career rushing record.

Javelina quarterback James Guidry, 6-1, 180-pound senior, has completed 61 of 120 passes for 988 yards and eight touchdowns. His leading receiver is wide receiver Kerry Simien, 5-11, 170-pound junior who has 26 catches for 433 yards and five touchdowns.

Linebacker Kevin Beasley, 6-2, 225-pound junior, is the leading tackler for Texas A&I with a 7.3 average. End John Randle, 6-3, 245-pound junior, has 20 sacks after 10 games, one of the most impressive figures in the nation at any level.

Texas A&I averages 458.0 total yards a game, 336.9 rushing and 121.1 passing. The Border Bandits allow 290.7 total yards an outing, 110.6 rushing and 180.1 passing.

This will be the first time the Javelinas and Choctaws have met in football. The Javs have played three schools from the Gulf South Conference, and have a 3-4 record against these clubs. The opponents have been Jacksonville State (1-1), Livingston (1-1) and Troy State (1-2), all Alabama institutions.

The Javelinas, who have met squads from 26 different states, will be going against a team from Mississippi for the first time.
