Battle rages in Moscow

Tanks, troops storm Russian White House

■ Attack follows day of violence in which hard-line protesters broke government siege.

Associated Press

MOSCOW — Government tanks and troops attacked hard-liners holed up in parliament Monday, retaliating for the previous day's riots by opponents of President Boris Yeltsin. It was the worst political violence in Moscow since the 1917 Bolshevik Revolution.

Gen. Konstantin Kobets, one of Yeltsin's loyal commanders, confirmed that the storming of the parliament was under way, according to a Moscow radio station.

Defenders of the White House threw firebombs and fired back from the barricaded building, as artillery and heavy weapons rang out in the center of Moscow.

The attack caught motorists by surprise. Men waving pistols kept pedestrians and journalists off a bridge leading to the parliament, known as the White House. A

Drivers traveling south on Midkiff Road Sunday afternoon may have been surprised to see both sides of the street lined with pro-life supporters holding signs with anti-abortion slogans.

More than 2,000 people lined the streets between 2:30 and 3:30 p.m. Sunday forming individual links in Life Chain '93, according to Alice Brown, the coordinator for the Midland chain.

Participants lined Midkiff Road from Loop 250 south to Andrews Highway, holding one or more of four signs distributed by the event's organizers. Some of the blocks were filled with signs while

Somalis hit 2 U.S. copters; at least 5 die

■ Casualties are worst suffered in single day by American military in East African country.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — At least five American soldiers were killed and several were wounded on Sunday when a Somali militia shot down two American helicopters during U.N. military operations in Mogadishu, Pentagon officials said.

President Clinton offers condolences for American soldiers' deaths, stands firm on mission.

About 20 members of a faction led by a fugitive Somali fighter, Gen. Mohammad Farah Aidid, were taken into custody during the U.N. operation, including a high-ranking associate of the militia leader, the Pentagon said.

The operations continued into the night, and Pentagon officials cautioned that details, including the numbers of people killed and wounded, might change as more reports were received.

Earlier in the day, three American Marines were wounded and a Somali employee was killed when their lightly armored vehicle was blown up by a mine outside the gates of a port used by the United Nations in Mogadishu, the Somali capital.

State back in court on school funding

By Peggy Fikac
Associated Press writer

AUSTIN — Texas lawmakers' latest effort to reform education funding is under fire from property-rich and poor school districts.

A trial beginning today is the third round in the courthouse for officials trying to meet a 1989 Texas Supreme Court order to even out funding available to school districts with differing property wealth.

Schools rely primarily on state aid and local property tax money.

Two other reform laws passed since the 1989 decision have been ruled unconstitutional: One on a challenge led by poor districts, the other by property-rich ones.

This time, both have gone to court.

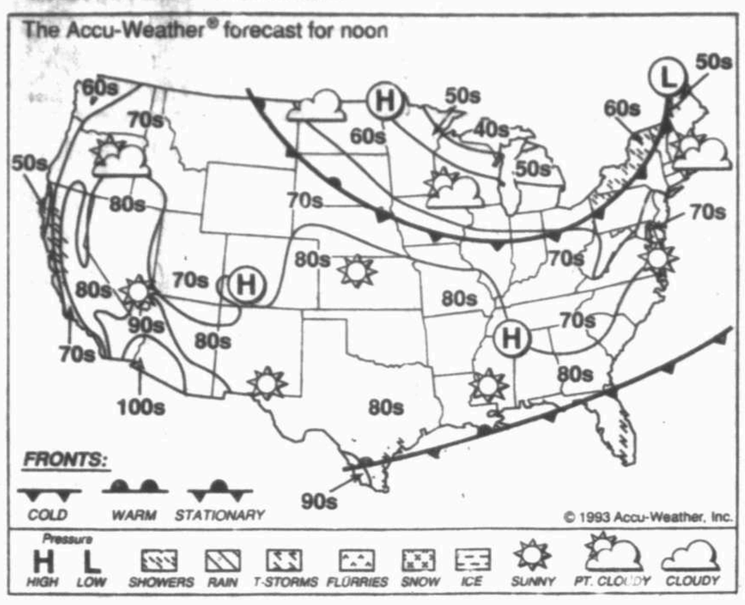
WEATHER WATCH



Clouds should break for sun

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for early low clouds and fog turning mostly sunny by the afternoon with highs in the 80s and winds out of the south at 5-15 mph, according to a National Weather Service spokesman.

Tonight should be clear with a low in the 50s. Tuesday should be partly cloudly with a high in the mid 90s.

After a low of 56, compared to the record low of 39 set in 1987, the temperatures rose to 80 — considerably lower than the record high of 95 set in 1951.

STATE

A cold front moved into the state Sunday pushing thunderstorms into North and South Texas and dropping daytime temperatures into the 60s and 70s.

The sun was starting to break through the clouds in North Texas Sunday afternoon as the scattered storms brought high winds and hail to Central and South Texas.

The forecast for North Texas called for low clouds and fog this morning. Otherwise, skies were to be partly cloudy with afternoon highs in the 80s and overnight lows in the 50s and 60s.

In South Texas, thunderstorms packing strong winds were widespread across South Texas, with hail reported in Bandera and Uvalde counties. Otherwise, skies were partly to mostly cloudy across South Texas. Temperatures were in the 90s in the lower valley and in the 80s elsewhere.

In West Texas, skies were mostly cloudy across the Concho Valley, the Edwards Plateau, the southern Permian Basin and Big Bend. Elsewhere skies were sunny. Highs were in the 70s and 80s with the wind variable at 5 to 15 miles an hour. The forecast called for sunny skies today with highs in the 80s and lows in the 50s and 60s.

NATION

Dry, autumn weather hung over much of the nation Sunday and more of the same was forecast.

It was pleasant and mostly sunny across the mid-Atlantic region. High pressure was expected to build over Virginia, Maryland, Delaware and West Virginia and fair autumn days were expected for the first half of the week.

A mild westerly flow was expected to dominate in the central United States early in the week. A cold front was forecast to move southeast across the upper Midwest through today, becoming stationary from southern Illinois into eastern Montana by Tuesday.

Temperatures were expected to remain typical of an Indian summer, with highs through mid-week in the middle 60s to 80.

Breezy, warmer weather and some scattered showers were forecast Monday for northern New England, while partly sunny skies were expected in southern New England.

There was a mixture of clouds and sun Sunday afternoon across New York and Vermont, with some scattered showers across the eastern parts of the two states.

Midday temperatures across the two states ranged from the mid-40s to the mid-60s.

A cold front was forecast to drop south into the upper Mississippi Valley Monday night bringing cooler temperatures to much of the Great Lakes region, while dry and mild conditions persist across the Midlands.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

RAGES: Tanks rumble toward White House

city bus passed through the area as frightened passengers crouched in their seats and the driver bore a look of terror.

Several of the defenders were wounded as a plume of white smoke rose from the burning barricade. The assault began when a column of armored personnel carriers approached the building from two directions at about 7 a.m. Tanks and trucks carrying infantrymen followed.

The attack followed a day of violence in which screaming hardline protesters hurling rocks and firing guns broke the government siege of parliament and seized other key installations.

Yeltsin, rushing back to the Kremlin from his country home, declared a state of emergency, giving police wide power to crack down on unrest, and appealed to people not to aid the protest.

"We call upon your common sense and responsibility for the fate of your children," a government statement said.

Thousands of unarmed Yeltsin supporters took to the streets to support the president, who dissolved parliament Sept. 21 in an effort to end his long power struggles with the Soviet-era parliament bent on hobbling his reforms.

The anti-government protesters struck suddenly and fiercely Sunday, beating young riot police in vicious street fighting and seizing Moscow's headquarters of city government.

They attacked the country's main television complex with rocket-propelled grenades, but were repulsed by government paratroopers in armored personnel carriers using machine-gun fire. Three TV channels went off the air, and fighting raged Monday morning.

At least 20 civilians were killed and more than 100 were injured, excluding casualties from the broadcast station, said Igor Nadezhdin, an official with Moscow's main medical authority. In addition, fighting killed four soldiers and injured dozens, city officials said without elaboration. Exact figures were impossible to gather.

Authorities said they believed dozens had been killed at the TV complex.

Hard-line lawmakers urged their triumphant followers to seize other installations and take control of the government. They chanted "Yankee Go Home" and called for Yeltsin's overthrow and the "liquidation" of his government.

"We have to take the Kremlin," parliament speaker Ruslan Khasbulatov told the parliament, referring to the government seat of power where Yeltsin was in his office.

There were no reports of unrest in the rest of the country, nor across most of Moscow. During the sunny Sunday, most Muscovites strolled, boated on the river or packed farmers' markets to buy autumn harvest goods.

In addition to the armored vehicles that arrived early Monday, government forces were guarding the Kremlin, and pro-Yeltsin supporters erected barricades near the Kremlin and at City Hall, where the city council is based. Moscow's mayor and top aides are based in the city government building.

"The fate of Russia and the fate of our children is being decided today," Yeltsin said in a statement distributed by the ITAR-Tass news agency. The agency itself was freed by a police commando unit after it was seized by rebels.

Yeltsin spent the night meeting with top advisers and key security officials, his spokesman said.

SOMALIA: At least 5 American soldiers die

the worst suffered in a single day by the U.S. military in the East African country. The losses come at a time when Congress and the Clinton administration are considering reducing the American presence in Somalia and reorienting its mission toward fostering a stable political system there.

The two Blackhawk helicopters were shot down over Mogadishu at about 3:45 p.m. Somali time, a few hours after the mine explosion involving the vehicle, and the two incidents did not appear to be directly related.

Somali gunmen set off the mine, apparently by remote control, just as the vehicle passed, then sprayed it with small-arms fire and rocket-propelled grenades, Pentagon officials said.

A Blackhawk helicopter landed and rescued the wounded Marines, coming under fire but leaving safely as troops of the United Arab Emirates, also under U.N. command, returned fire.

On Sept. 25 three Americans were killed when an Army Blackhawk helicopter was hit by a rocket-propelled grenade and crashed. It was the first time a Somali militia had downed a U.N. helicopter on patrol.

Four American soldiers were killed on Aug. 8 when a mine explosion tore apart their utility vehicle.

As tentative reports of the new American casualties filtered in on Sunday, legislators and Clinton administration officials debated whether the time had come to withdraw.

"I think we ought to leave now," said Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., who was appearing on the CBS News program "Face the Nation."

"I think we've accomplished our mission. I don't think we ought to be spreading troops all over the world. I think we ought to leave now."

Sen. Sam Nunn, a Georgia Democrat and chairman of the Armed Services Committee, disagreed.

"I don't think we ought to get out," he said on the ABC News program "This Week." "I don't believe in simply getting out. I don't believe in setting a date and saying we're going to get out by December the 1st."

Previous attacks on American forces in the U.N. peacekeeping and food relief mission have led to increasing demands that the country's role be changed and the number of American troops there be reduced.

But the Clinton administration appears determined, even as it reduces the American military role, not to appear to be doing so in response to attacks rails loudly over the sound system, customers sit in a room decorated with red-white-and-blue bunting and listen quietly, munching on burgers and steak.

RUSH: Restaurants offer 'dittohead' rooms

There are fax machines set up for them to send their views to the show, although on this day the machines sat dormant.

Limbaugh isn't for everyone.

Many find his remarks about "environmentalist wackos," "feminazis" and "commie libs" more than a little offensive. That's why Blackie's only seats people in the Rush Room if they request it.

Those who do are diehard fans — or, in Limbaugh lingo, dittoheads. Most find it a heady experience to be around others who talk the Rush talk.

Bill Bates of Olney, Md., loves the guy. So when his friends threw him a 60th birthday party recently, they knew just where to hold it.

Bates, who sat at a table covered with wrapping paper and presents, beamed as he talked about the experience.

"I think it's wonderful, because I am a great Rush admirer," said Bates. "It's so comforting to think that somebody in the public eye like Rush believes in what we do."

His best birthday present: a calendar counting down the Clinton presidency. Only 210 more weeks to go, promises the first entry on Inauguration Day.

Rush Rooms started springing up spontaneously in 1990. Since then, Rush has plugged some on the radio and on his TV show.

"The Rush Room in Washington, we're very proud of it," said Kit Carson, Limbaugh's chief of staff. "We get faxes and letters from it all the time."

"And they serve red meat," he added. "Of course, we're all for that."

Rush Rooms aren't always in restaurants, Carson says. He's heard about ones in hardware stores, even a dentist's office.

Three offensive linemen for the Green Bay Packers — Rich Marin, Ken Ruettgers and Harry Galbreath — have an unofficial Rush Room in their locker room, where they listen to him regularly on a boom box.

"It's nice to know there are so many people out there who know the truth," said Joan Schnabel, a Bethesda, Md., homemaker who listens to Rush every day.

She and her friend Nilda Beaumont convinced their husbands to take them to the Blackie's Rush Room.

Schnabel, Beaumont and other Rush Roomers share Rush's disdain for — among other things — President Clinton, environmentalists, multiculturalists, avid feminists, Congress and "the liberal media."

"It's not what the newspapers say," Schnabel warns. "It's what they're leaving out."

Most Rush Rooms aren't salons — people don't wander from table to table discussing the issues of the day. But there is a clubbiness in the shared laughter at Rush's jokes and collective groans at mentions of favorite scapegoats — such as Clinton or Gloria Steinem.

Ron Vandament, who started playing the show at the Barbecue Shack about a year and a half ago, says he's even seen a romance blossom because of Rush.

The woman came with two friends. So did the man, he said.

"The women were screaming, 'Who is that idiot on the radio?' and the guys were saying, 'He's a genius, that's who.' One of the couples started dating and they plan to get married the first part of next year," Vandament said.

"I darn well better cater it."

some blocks would have one person holding a sign. The signs were distributed in parking lots along the route.

"Life Chain '93 is a peaceful, prayerful, legal lining of streets in hundreds of cities across America . . . with people holding uniform signs," Ms. Brown said.

The signs included "Jesus Forgives and Heals," "Abortion Kills Children," "Lord Forgive Us and Our Nation" and "Adoption: The Loving Option."

People of all ages and races joined in the chain. Some of the pro-life supporters brought lawn chairs and others braved the sun; but all held their signs high as drivers passed by. Some of the motorists honked as they drove on while others yelled at the people lining the street.

Betty Clark of Midland proudly held her sign and explained why she was motivated to join in the chain.

"I'm thankful that I'm alive," Ms. Clark said. "I was adopted and I'm fortunate that my mother had me. She could have aborted me but she didn't. I just pray that those women in the same situations will chose to do the same."

Stephanie Sargent of Midland brought her children with her in an effort to motivate passing motorists to choose life over abortion.

"My beliefs in Jesus Christ and his commandment not to commit murder influenced me to come today," she said. "I believe the unborn child is alive."

The participants were recruited through the independent effort of local churches, Ms. Brown said.

She said the first Life Chain was organized by a small ministry in Yuba City, Calif., with about 2,500 participants stretched over a three-mile trek. In 1991, more than 771,000 people participated in 373 Life Chains across the nation. In 1992, more than 100,000 Texans joined the chain.

"Life Chains are a grassroots effort which have spread through local churches. They average several thousand people and cover several miles of road," Ms. Brown said. "Life Chain sign-up sheets in the churches allow coordinators to count the actual number of people involved in each city."

"It always just starts with two or three people who catch the vision and want to run with it," Ms. Brown said. "This year the real emphasis has been on prayer and intercession about the abortion situation in our nation."

TESTING: More students roll up sleeves

major who plans to marry in December. "I would just hate for them two years later to say, 'You're pregnant and you have HIV.' Do you want to enter a marriage like that?"

Such questions are being asked by more and more college students these days as they roll up their sleeves to take an AIDS test, often right on campus. Ten or 20 years ago, contraception and preventing treatable sexually transmitted diseases were the biggest issues facing sexually active students. Now, confronting AIDS has become the latest rite of passage.

On Ivy League campuses and at community colleges, in big cities and in small towns, students are being tested. Couples are tested when they decide to consummate their relationship or make it exclusive, college physicians said.

Some sexually active students are tested every two months. Men and women, gay and straight, are demanding the test as a prerequisite for intimacy.

At schools where the test is not available, like NYU, referrals and counseling are offered. Other schools, like the University of California at Los Angeles, began anonymous testing four months ago at students' request.

Eighteen months ago, Antioch College in Yellow Springs, Ohio, invited county health officials on campus to test students every quarter. Columbia University has been testing at its health center since 1986.

"It's a college thing," said Annissa Bone, 20, a dance and premed major at Columbia, who was tested in April. "Here's the first time people are having a sexual relationship. Most of my friends who are not in a monogamous relationship get tested regularly. Usually, it's after they switch partners."

Ms. Bone said she would go to the campus health center for another AIDS test if she broke up with her boyfriend of three years. "Communication is getting a lot easier," she said. "People just come out and say, 'Have you been tested for AIDS?'"

Many major schools now offer confidential testing in which the information is shared only by the doctor and the patient, said Paula Swinford, a member of the AIDS task force of the American College Health Association.

About one-third of those schools offer anonymous tests, in which students do not give their names but are assigned codes for their blood samples. Student demand for both has been steady, Ms. Swinford said.

"There are people who test pretty regularly, and many engage in condom use sporadically in between," said Ms. Swinford, who is also the director of health education at the University of Southern California.

"My perception is that for most students, the step of taking the test signifies that the relationship is somewhere in between going steady and getting engaged," she said. "They see themselves at risk, which is smart because they are."

In a 1990 study, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta and the American College Health Association analyzed blood samples from 19 universities throughout the country and found that 0.2 percent — or one of every 500 — were positive for antibodies to HIV.

The centers estimate that the rate for the general population is 0.4 percent, or one of every 250 people.

"You still have risky behavior going on on college campuses," said Kent Taylor, a spokesman for the centers. "It's misleading to think you're not at risk because you're a college student."

REFORM: State back in court

(From 1A)

"I think we're all tired," said Craig Foster, executive director of the Equity Center, a group of property-poor school districts involved in the long-running court fight for equity.

But not tired enough to give up what's been called "a life and death struggle" by lawyer Al Kauffman of the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund.

Poor school districts are challenging the way about $7 billion in annual state aid is distributed under the new law. Local taxes contribute more than another $8 billion to the system.

Compared to the funding system used last school year, about $165 million in state money is shifted from poorer to richer school districts, according to lawyers for the poor districts.

The law decreases the state's basic per-student funding grant, and it changes and limits state matching funds that are based on local tax rates. Districts with a poor property tax base say it's unfair to cut allotments across the board because they require much higher local tax rates to try to make up the difference.

The law would leave at least a $600 gap per student in funding between rich and poor school districts, say poor districts, who add that it virtually ignores classroom construction funding needs.

Wealthy districts also are unhappy with the law, which is meant to ensure none of the state's 1,048 school districts has property wealth of more than $280,000 per student. Previously, values have ranged from more than $4 million to less than $10,000.

The law gives school districts with more property wealth choices for sharing some of it. Among other arguments, property-rich school districts say the law amounts to an unconstitutional statewide property tax.

Wealthy school districts also have raised the argument that the state hasn't adequately funded public education.

As chaos erupts in Moscow, myths explode

By Celestine Bohlen
N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — For months now, as Moscow's political warriors have been locked in an increasingly vicious battle for power, each side has accused the other of pushing the country to civil war. Until Sunday, the threat always seemed idle, even in the days since President Boris Yeltsin disbanded parliament and ringed its headquarters with troops.

Like a deadly delayed reaction, the violence that swept Moscow on Sunday had been a long time in building. But even after the first eruptions, even as armed mobs were breaking through police lines, storming government buildings, piling into buses and trucks, brandishing the red hammer-and-sickle, news of what was happening spread slowly.

Perhaps because they were afraid of what could happen, most people in the capital and the provinces had decided to sit this particular battle out. The initial lack of information had something to do with the public's paralysis, after Yeltsin commandeered the state-controlled television and in the early days of the crisis, blocked his opponents from getting access to the airwaves.

■ Analysis

But the censorship was not airtight, and attentive citizens, reading opposition newspapers, listening to radio and watching Russian television's numerous political talk shows, could get a relatively good feel for the situation.

Certainly they knew that there was a standoff between two rival presidents, that there were troops, and that there were on-again-off-again negotiations, and all of that was enough to convince experienced Russians to keep their heads low until the crisis had cleared.

There was a permanent crowd in front of the parliament building, but it too had become a fixture. The faces were the same ones seen demonstrating on Soviet holidays, facing off against the pro-Yeltsin crowds at several sessions of the Congress of People's Deputies.

Their anger, aimed like scatter-gun fire at enemies that began with Yeltsin and ended with Americans and Jews, was as familiar as their faces. But even after a couple of skirmishes last week, it was hard to imagine this group as a real threat, certainly not against the array of forces surrounding the parliament building.

And their number never equaled the crowds which had turned out at the same site two years ago, when Yeltsin, together with Alexander Rutskoi, led the resistance to an attempted coup. Vice President Rutskoi is now Yeltsin's rival, named by parliament as acting president.

Most Russians, knowing their history and fearing the anarchy that could be unleashed by armed confrontation, honestly believed that their leaders — both Yeltsin and Rutskoi had been elected, after all — would manage to keep their word.

Mainly, people were lulled by the refrain constantly repeated by both sides: "God forbid that any blood be spilt."

And yet, here on a clear sunny Sunday afternoon, one of the few nice days of a brief and anxious autumn, suddenly, it was all happening. At 3 p.m., a crowd broke through police lines on the southern rim of Moscow's Garden Ring road.

Even then, it was hard to get a fix on the situation. Radio stations were carrying live reports from the parliament building during hourly news programs, but switched back to pop music in between.

World leaders weigh in behind Yeltsin in wake of insurrection

LONDON (AP) — Leaders around the world weighed in behind Russian President Boris Yeltsin and his reforms on Sunday as political violence broke out in Moscow.

Britain's Prime Minister John Major said Yeltsin "deserves the support of all democrats inside and outside Russia." Germany appealed to "the parties in the conflict to desist from the use of force."

In Washington, President Clinton told reporters, "I still am convinced that the United States must support President Yeltsin and the process of bringing about free and fair elections.

"We cannot afford to be in the position of wavering at this moment or backing off or giving any encouragement to people who clearly want to derail the election process."

In Moscow, thousands armed anti-government protesters broke through troops besieging parliament and attacked other installations, in the worst political violence in Moscow since the 1917 Bolshevik Revolution.

Major said in a statement the protesters "have no respect for civilized and democratic behavior." The Russian president, on the other hand, "has received a democratic mandate from the Russian people at the ballot box in this year's referendum and last year's presidential elections," he said.

German Foreign Minister Klaus Kinkel urged Russians "to once again pursue the peaceful course of mediation."

French government spokesman Nicholas Sarkozy said France believes "there are no other solutions than to support Boris Yeltsin, in any case as long as he maintains his will to hold free elections."

NATO Secretary-General Manfred Woerner told German television much depends on Yeltsin's use of the army.

"A lot (of what happens next) rides on this, if not everything," he told the ARD network. "If the situation spins out of control, no one knows what could happen."

CONSUMER REPORTS MAGAZINE® dedicated its August 1993 edition to purchasing eyeglasses. Their study on 71,000 patients indicated that the highest patient satisfaction was achieved from purchasing eyeglasses through a private doctor's office.
The report states "a much higher satisfaction with SERVICE, higher SATISFACTION with price and QUALITY."

We encourage you to buy the Basin, and at the same time, receive quality eyewear and eyecare.

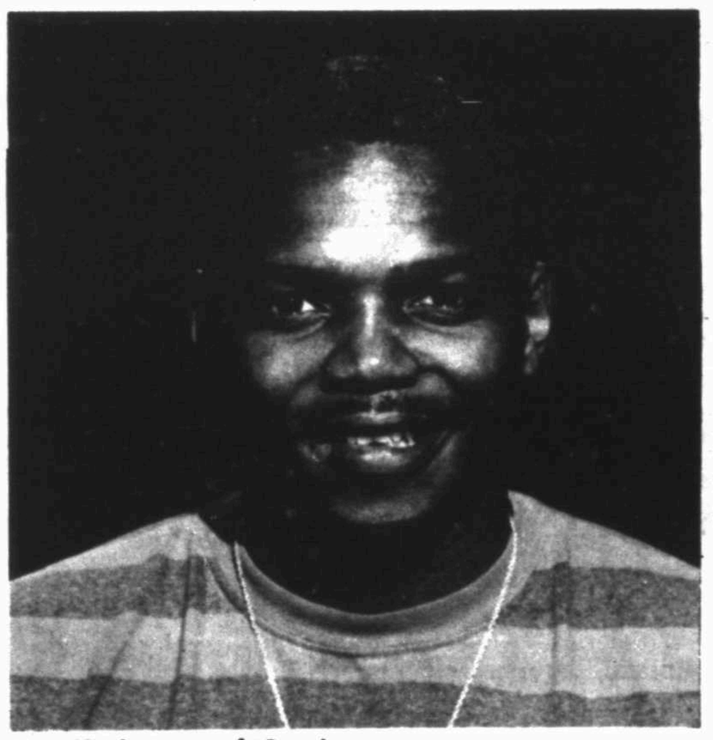
UNITED WAY AND BOYS CLUBS... DEVELOPING TOMORROW'S LEADERS.



Danny Wright, Director of a Boys and Girls Club

The Problem? Young people need positive peer support and activities, as an alternative to what they learn on the streets. Just ask Danny Wright, who remembers his own years as a young person on the streets.

The Solution? Developing the whole person, through tutoring, arts-and-crafts, and athletics, can make a difference. It was just that kind of program young Danny found at the Boys Club– the kind of program he offers to today's young people as Director of a Boys & Girls Club.

Through the United Way, your contributions to local Boys and Girls Clubs help develop thousands of West Texas youngsters into tomorrow's leaders.

Infighting worsens as Croats, Muslims sign new cease-fire

ZAGREB, Croatia (AP) — Government troops clashed with Muslim separatists in northwest Bosnia on Sunday, and Bosnian Croats and Muslims signed a new cease-fire for embattled Mostar that was quickly reported broken.

The man was killed and two people were wounded Sunday in Velika Kladusa, in the Bihac region, when supporters of Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic stormed the local radio station, said Col. Thierry Boutillier, commander of a French battalion of U.N. peacekeepers.

He said police loyal to Bihac rebel leader Fikret Abdic restored order, and the station remained in the hands of Abdic backers.

Lawmakers in Bihac, a Muslim pocket in northwestern Bosnia, declared regional autonomy last Monday. Abdic has good relations with neighboring Croats and Serbs and is credited with sparing the enclave from Bosnia's war.

Under an international peace plan rejected by the Bosnian Muslim parliament last week, Bosnia would be divided into Serb, Croat and Muslim mini states. The 860-square-mile Bihac area, home to about 300,000 people, would be part of the Muslim state.

Three other Muslims were wounded Saturday in the village of Skokovi, also in Bihac, when Abdic supporters manning a roadblock fired on government soldiers.

Elsewhere, a Croat-Muslim agreement to stop the fighting and protect civilians in the Mostar area was signed Saturday at Medjugorje, 12 miles southwest of Mostar, news reports said Sunday.

Mostar, which the Croats want as the capital of a Croat state, has been the scene of heavy fighting in recent weeks.

It was not immediately clear when it was to take effect. But late Sunday, Sarajevo radio reported it had been violated by Bosnian Croat forces.

Sarajevo radio said the Bosnian army protested to U.N. peacekeepers over artillery attacks launched Sunday against the Muslim-held town of Blagaj, south of Mostar, and on Mostar itself. There was no independent confirmation.

Many truces have been declared and violated in Bosnia's 18-month war.

The Croat-Muslim accord also provided for the evacuation of wounded and the exchange of prisoners, Croatia's Hina news agency reported. Both sides also agreed to let Spanish U.N. peacekeepers monitor its implementation.

Up to 200,000 people are dead or missing in the war, which began when Bosnian Serbs rebelled against Bosnia-Herzegovina's secession from Serb-dominated Yugoslavia.

In Croatia, there were reports Sunday that leaders of the self-styled Serb state of Krajina rejected any U.N. Security Council move to designate the region as part of Croatia.

Rebel Serbs in Croatia seized about one-fourth of that republic in a 1991 war and have held onto the territory under an uneasy truce that took effect in January 1992.

On Tuesday, the council may extend for six months the mandate for all 22,000 U.N. peacekeepers in former Yugoslavia, including 15,000 in Croatia.

In Sarajevo, an Italian citizen was wounded by sniper fire Sunday as a group of peace activists tried again to cross the dangerous Vrbanje bridge. They had turned back after making an attempt on Saturday.

IRA welcomes new peace initiative

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — The Irish Republican Army welcomed a new peace initiative Sunday by two parties in Northern Ireland, saying it has a "vested interest" in ending a quarter-century of bloodshed.

The IRA, which is fighting British rule in the province, said that although the British government has reacted negatively to the plan, "if the political will exists or can be created, it could provide the basis for peace." Its statement was issued in Dublin.

The leader of Sinn Fein, the IRA's political wing and one of the two parties behind the peace plan, said the current talks could mean peace for the province after 25 years of bloodshed, a report said.

"This is one of the best opportunities for peace since what are now called the troubles began in 1968," Sinn Fein leader Gerry Adams was quoted as saying in the Independent on Sunday.

Adams has been meeting since April with John Hume, leader of the mainstream Roman Catholic Social Democratic and Labor Party. They submitted a report on their progress to the Irish government a week ago, but details have not been released.

Adams and Hume said, however, that their plan proposes the participation in talks of all political parties in Northern Ireland, as well as the British and Irish governments.

More than 3,000 people have died in 25 years of political and sectarian violence in Northern Ireland.

The IRA statement came just two days after the group set off three bombs in north London, injuring five people.

The statement said the IRA had been "informed of the broad principles which will be for consideration by the London and Dublin governments."

It expressed regret "that the British government reaction to this initiative so far has been negative, fuelling unionist reaction."

The statement added that the IRA, its members and supporters had a "vested interest" in seeking a just and lasting peace in Ireland. But it stressed that the IRA remains committed to a united Ireland.

Army moves to end chaos in relief efforts

KILLARI, India (AP) — The Indian army cracked down on looting in the country's earthquake-stricken southwest on Sunday, taking control of police and civilian authorities and blocking outsiders from shattered villages.

Tremors continued to shudder through Maharashtra state, where as many as 30,000 people died in Thursday's earthquake.

In the days following the disaster, looters have slipped into villages in the guise of volunteers, stripping corpses of jewelry and wrecked homes of any valuables that could be carried away, relief workers said.

"I'm not allowing anyone today to work in the villages unless they are cleared by the army," said Col. S.K. Joshi, head of the relief effort for Killari and four surrounding villages.

"We are allowing only genuine voluntary groups in. They are being issued identification cards to avoid the thieving which has been going on the last two days."

The army barricades brought more hardship to victims driven from their homes by the earthquake.

"I do not understand these men in uniforms. They won't even let me into my own house," said Jagannath Kumble, a 65-year-old farmer who was stopped from entering his village.

Helicopters dropped food in isolated villages, and medical teams began a massive operation to inoculate survivors against cholera. Officials fear the disease may spread through water contaminated by the putrefying bodies of people and livestock.

Authorities decided to set up new townships for survivors, abandoning many devastated villages. New sites will be found within two weeks, said Anil Pawar, a local administrator.

Dozens of volunteer groups have arrived in Maharashtra state, bringing food, drinking water and temporary shelters to earthquake victims. But many remote villages off the main roads remain without aid,

Army vehicles, private relief workers and tens of thousands of curiosity seekers jammed the region's roads. The heavy traffic combined with a steady rain to churn muddy streets into slippery slush.

Volunteers gave uncooked rice to refugees who had no pots to boil it or firewood to cook with.

"We have to drink water with our cupped hands," said Jainab Sheikh, 30, whose village was demolished.

Survivors swarmed relief vans whenever they stopped. Without organized distribution, the weak went hungry.

"There has been a lack of coordination in the relief operation," said Brig. Pritam Singh, relief commander for the Latur district, one of the hardest-hit areas. "But this can happen anywhere, anytime, even in the United States."

The Indian government did not decide until nearly 24 hours after the earthquake that it needed international help.

"In the beginning, we had a problem whether to respond positively or negatively. We didn't know what the extent of the damage was or what was needed," said deputy relief controller Ashok Sekia.

Two Air Force C-5 cargo planes from the United States were expected to arrive in Bombay on Sunday with tents, plastic sheets and 18,000 jugs of drinking water. A convoy of 200 trucks was arranged to ferry it 250 miles to the stricken area — a 12-hour drive under normal conditions.

Meanwhile, a British plane carrying 40 tons of tents, blankets and other relief supplies for victims of the Indian earthquake left London on Sunday.

The state government of Maharashtra has said it would prefer cash donations to buy relief supplies locally.

"The Americans were a little too prompt with their aid," Sekia said. "But they are experts in these things. They probably know better what we will need."

Offers of aid poured in from dozens of countries, from Canada to struggling Bangladesh, which pledged $10,000. Collection boxes were set up in public places all over India.

Group accuses Kenya of failing to protect women refugees

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — A human rights group has accused Kenya of failing to protect Somali women refugees from rape.

The government has shown "an appalling lack of concern for the plight of Somali refugees," the New York-based Africa Watch said in a report released Sunday.

Victims of rape and sexual assault in and around Kenya's refugee camps ranged from 4-year-old girls to 50-year-old women, the report said. Most victims were also robbed, beaten, knifed or shot, it said.

Refugees have been attacked by Kenyan bandits and Somali raiders from across the poorly guarded border, the report said. Some women have reported being raped by Kenyan police or military personnel.

The report said 192 refugee women reported being raped in the first seven months of this year.

The Kenyan government has said it does not sanction rape. The government blames the assaults on criminals who get firearms in Somalia.

About 300,000 Somalis live in refugee camps in northeastern Kenya.

The United States said last week that it will give Kenya $3.5 million to improve security along its border with Somalia.

Africa Watch said the United States should require Kenyan authorities to spend some of the money on improving security in refugee camps.

Hollywood success story may have hidden secret

LOS ANGELES (AP) — By Hollywood standards, Jose Menendez' life was a classic success story — a Cuban immigrant who married a beauty queen, had two good-looking athletic sons and built an entertainment industry fortune.

But his sons say the glitzy surface of their privileged life hid the dark secret of their father's sexual perversion. They ended up shotgunning their parents to death in their Beverly Hills mansion.

For sheer drama, it was a bloody finale worthy of Shakespeare.

Now, Erik and Lyle Menendez have lifted the curtain on a life they say was a private corner of hell. Testimony about their father's alleged sexual torture has been so extreme that some choose not to believe it.

Defense team adviser Paul Mones says extreme abuse amounting to torture can drive a son or daughter to kill. "Denial and shock permeate the fabric of these cases," the attorney says in his book "When a Child Kills."

In two weeks of grim testimony, Erik and Lyle tearfully portrayed their father as a sadistic demon who sexually tortured Erik for 12 years and raped Lyle at age 7. They said shame kept them silent through the years.

"I just wanted more than anything else that when I died no one would find out this was happening to me," Erik said.

The brothers contend death threats from their parents, brought on by Lyle's threat to expose the alleged sexual abuse if it didn't cease, led them to kill. Prosecutors claim greed for inheritance money was the motive.

Among those who view the brothers' terrifying tale with skepticism is author Ronald Soble, who is writing a book on the case.

Soble, who began researching the story soon after the August 1989 killings, said he looked hard for someone to corroborate sexual abuse claims, but found no one.

"I do totally believe Jose was extremely strict with his sons and you could argue that he was mentally abusive," Soble said. "He did run his dinner table like a corporate meeting. I believe he did take a strap to these kids . . .

"But I have to tell you in all candor I have a great deal of difficulty with the testimony of the brothers that the father raped them. I just could not find anyone who suggested to me that he forced his sons into these gross sex acts.

"Of course, I wasn't there," Soble said. "And there are those who would argue only the brothers know."

Trial witnesses have painted Jose Menendez as a controlling, dominating father. His sister, Marta Cano, said what she admired most about him was his ability to intimidate people.

"He was a great humiliator," said author Dominick Dunne, who is covering the trial for Vanity Fair. "The people who were above him admired him enormously . . . but anyone who worked under him despised him. . . . He had a savage manner of speaking to people."

Menendez saved his company, Live Entertainment, from imminent bankruptcy and turned it into a profitable business. As chief executive of the video distribution company, he was earning a $500,000 salary and was due for an $850,000 bonus the year he died.

The Menendez family revered Jose's success and sought to preserve that memory. But in recent months, relatives have come forward to describe his dark side.

"They had a beautiful image of what the family name was," Ms. Cano said. "I wish I never had to change that."

Menendez's mother, Maria, a constant spectator at the start of trial, stopped attending when testimony turned to abuse. Family intimates say she disapproves of the defense.

Business associates have yet to testify. In fact, not a single witness has come forward to say a good word about Jose.

His longtime personal assistant, Marzie Eisenberg, said Friday she thinks the public is getting a one-sided view of her ex-boss.

"I can't say anything bad about him," she said.

But she acknowledged his demanding personal style.

"He wasn't a middle of the road type of person," she added. "Either you liked him or hated him."

$8.3 billion man tops Forbes list of richest rich

NEW YORK (AP) — Warren Buffett, the investor who began picking stocks at age 11 and prefers Omaha to Wall Street, nearly doubled his money in the past year to $8.3 billion, vaulting him to the title of richest American.

Buffett, 63, rode a roughly 70 percent increase in the stock price of his Berkshire Hathaway Inc. investment company to rise from eighth place and unseat Microsoft's Bill Gates as the nation's wealthiest person, Forbes magazine reported Sunday.

The magazine's annual Forbes 400 ranking appears in its Oct. 18 issue.

A passionate investor since his pre-teen days, Buffett parlayed an aging textile firm into a conglomerate with interests ranging from insurance to newspapers and from soda pop to shoes.

He is considered a living investment legend whose utterances can move the stock market. He also defies the stereotype of the megarich, wearing rumpled clothes and driving his own car.

He rarely vacations, lives in a nondescript house and relaxes by munching Cracker Jack and watching the Omaha Royals, the minor league baseball team he co-owns.

In recent years, Buffett was perhaps best known for rescuing Salomon Inc., the venerable Wall Street brokerage involved in a 1991 Treasury bond scandal. As a leading shareholder and director, he served as acting chairman, revamped the management and later upped his stake in Salomon stock.

Berkshire Hathaway is the highest priced issue on the New York Stock Exchange — worth $16,700 a share Friday. The stock was valued at less than $10,000 per share a year ago.

Buffett told Forbes that a charitable foundation eventually will inherit his accumulated wealth. The magazine reckoned the Buffett estate could be worth $100 billion in 20 years, dwarfing the legacies of names such as Rockefeller, Ford and Carnegie.

Gates, who at 36 was the youngest person to ever top the list in the 1992 Forbes ranking, slipped to second place this year with an estimated net worth of $6.165 billion, down from $6.3 billion. The founder of Microsoft Corp., based in Redmond, Wash., makes money from every machine that uses MS-DOS — the world's most widely used computer software.

Entertainment mogul John Kluge also fell back one spot on the list to third. Kluge, of Charlottesville, Va., topped the rankings from 1989-91.

His estimated worth of $5.9 billion was $300 million better than Sumner Murray Redstone, who, at No. 4, was one of only two newcomers to the Top 10. Fellow media magnate Rupert Murdoch was 10th, up from 15th last year.

Heirs of late Wal-Mart stores founder Sam Walton held spots five through nine with approximately $4.5 billion each.

Seventy-nine of the Forbes 400 were billionaires, up from 73 in 1992. It took a net worth of at least $300 million to qualify for a 1993 listing, $35 million more than last year.

Other well-known billionaires listed included H. Ross Perot, 20th on the list with $2.4 billion and CBS Chairman Laurence Tisch, No. 52 with $1.3 billion.

California was home to most members, 77. And the city of choice for America's rich? New York, where 50 on the list reside.

S&L cleanup nominee sought files on associate

WASHINGTON (AP) — While awaiting Senate confirmation, President Clinton's nominee to oversee the government's savings and loan cleanup requested confidential investigative documents involving a Florida thrift executive he has known for years.

The ethics rules for the Resolution Trust Corp., the S&L cleanup agency, mandate that all agency employees avoid even the "appearance of conflicts of interest" by recusing themselves from cases involving individuals they know.

In a Aug. 20 memo, which was obtained by The Associated Press, RTC president-designate Stanley Tate asked the agency's top lawyer to provide him a detailed status report on the investigations and lawsuits against Miami-based CenTrust Savings.

"In order to better understand how the RTC initiates and manages action against directors, officers and professional firms, I would like to use the CenTrust case as a starting point . . .," Tate's memo said.

Tate requested details on "suits against individuals and professional firms" and said he recognized "some of this information may be privileged and confidential," according to the memo.

"I would be willing to sign a confidentiality agreement," Tate wrote in the memo to RTC acting general counsel Richard T. Aboussie.

Tate, whose nomination is pending before the Senate Banking Committee, said in an interview with the AP he decided not to read the material after he received it because the package was marked "private and confidential."

"It was just sent back," he said.

He added his relationship with former CenTrust president David Paul had no bearing on his request.

"I would never involve myself in something privileged," Tate said. "I've tried very hard not to interfere in policy matters or deal with things like that before I am confirmed."

Paul, a Florida banker and developer, goes on trial Wednesday in Miami on criminal charges he diverted $3.2 million in CenTrust money for his personal use, falsified his tax returns, and lied to federal regulators.

The RTC still has pending litigation involving Paul and CenTrust, whose failure cost taxpayers $1.7 billion.

Tate said he knows Paul primarily because the two served together during the mid-1980s on the board of Miami's Jackson Memorial Hospital.

But two sources familiar with Tate's previous service on an RTC regional advisory board in Florida said Tate once organized a luncheon for his board colleagues at Paul's office.

One said Tate also talked about eating lunch with Paul on a weekly basis. Both spoke on condition they not be named.

A former RTC official, also speaking on condition of anonymity, said Tate also attended — as a spectator — a RTC hearing against Paul this past spring in Florida.

In the interview, Tate declined to answer whether he attended RTC proceedings involving Paul. "I've been involved in so many RTC activities," he said. "Why don't you fixate on some of the good things that I've done."

He denied eating lunch with Paul on a regular basis and said his dealings with the CenTrust head have been limited to occasional get-togethers involving their service on the hospital board and other charitable endeavors.

"I've never gone out socially with him, and I'm not his friend," Tate said. "I've been to his house once — but that was on hospital board business."

Tate said when Paul's CenTrust dealings came under scrutiny in 1990, he even helped persuade Paul to leave the hospital board.

Tate said he did not recall organizing the luncheon for his RTC board colleagues but said he did remember another time when a nonprofit group he worked with visited Paul's offices.

Clinton named Tate, a Florida developer and Republican donor, to oversee the government's multi-billion S&L bailout in July. Tate had served since 1990 on a RTC regional board and last year won recognition for helping temporarily place Hurricane Andrew victims in RTC-owned properties.

While awaiting confirmation, Tate has been paid as an employee of the agency's Washington-based oversight board, subjecting him to the RTC ethics rules.

Those rules bar any act that would represent "conflicts of interest or the appearance of conflicts of interest." The rules warn against employees taking any action "which might result in or create the appearance of losing complete independence or impartiality" in any agency activity.

Tate said he was unfamiliar with the specifics of the memo because it had been prepared by one of his aides and he just signed it.

He denied a Treasury Department spokeswoman's assertion that he had been instructed not to review the CenTrust file.

"Someone at the RTC called Frank Newman, the undersecretary for domestic finance, and mentioned a concern that since Stanley Tate had not been confirmed, it might not be appropriate for him to get these documents," Treasury Department spokeswoman Michelle Smith said. "Mr. Newman agreed, called Mr. Tate, and Mr. Tate agreed not to read them."

Tate said in retrospect he regrets making the request.

"I should have picked a bank in Oklahoma — if I knew one," Tate said. "It's horrible that I have to defend my reputation here after 45 years with a clean, good reputation."

Let's learn peace from Cambodia

Finally, the Clinton administration has gotten the message: Reports of U.S. and civilian casualties are threatening to sink public support for U.N. peacekeeping in Somalia — and in general. Humanitarian relief has degenerated into a turf war against one holdout warlord, Mohammed Farah Aidid.

Now Washington is demanding that U.S. forces no longer be used on patrol missions in the Aidid stronghold of south Mogadishu, and is seeking a redirection of the mission toward diplomatic and political reconstruction of a Somali government.

With those goals in mind, useful lessons can be drawn from the just-completed operation in Cambodia, where, against long odds, the U.N. achieved its main goals on schedule and is now withdrawing.

The two biggest challenges for Yasushi Akashi, who headed that U.N. mission, came from the Khmer Rouge, which abruptly withdrew from the peace agreement, and hard-line elements of the Vietnamese-installed Cambodian Government, which intimidated and murdered political opponents virtually under the eyes of U.N. peacekeepers.

Akashi understood the difference between peacekeeping and partisan engagement. The U.N. did not try to disarm the Khmer Rouge forcibly. And it relied mainly on diplomatic pressure to curb human rights abuses.

Like the Khmer Rouge, General Aidid reneged on his commitments to cooperate with the U.N. And since June he has orchestrated attacks on peacekeepers within his south Mogadishu stronghold.

But there's one critical difference between Cambodia and Somalia. Successive U.N. Security Council resolutions this year have called explicitly for disarming warlords in Somalia and prosecuting people responsible for attacks on peacekeepers — good ideas in principle, but a prescription for military confrontation in the country's present confusion.

That overambitious mandate has effectively denied Adm. Jonathan Howe, who heads the U.N. Somalia mission, the kind of diplomatic flexibility that proved so crucial to Akashi's success.

A restless Congress has set a Nov. 15 deadline for deciding the future of U.S. military participation in Somalia. That may be enough time to shift toward the more successful Cambodian model, perhaps by relocating U.N. units outside south Mogadishu. As Akashi has demonstrated, knowing how to evade destructive confrontations may be the surest path to peacemaking success.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702.

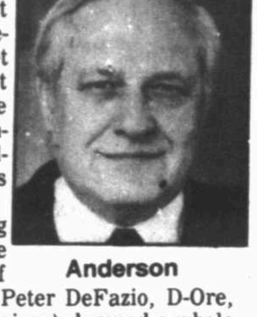
DOE should clean up own nuclear mess

WASHINGTON — Locals tout it as the "waste capital of the world." But it's not the U.S. Congress nor an abandoned landfill in Mexico City. Rather it lies in the pristine state of Washington, a sordid monument to Cold War excess.



Anderson

It's the Hanford Nuclear Reservation, and for decades it has built bombs in frantic competition with the Soviet Red Menace. Now that the nuclear arms race has subsided, the cleanup poses political challenges as daunting as any arms race.

"We're not doing much better than the Russians" in terms of nuclear cleanup, Rep. Peter DeFazio, D-Ore, told us. "They (the Russians) dumped a whole bunch of waste into a mine and ultimately . . . (there was) an explosion and it destroyed an area of the Soviet Union and turned it into a nuclear wasteland. We actually have that threat at Hanford."

In an age when laws like the Clean Water Act place tight restrictions on private industries caught polluting, nuclear bomb makers are still exempted from almost all environmental safeguards. This loophole has made the Department of Energy, which operates the nuclear complex, America's most prolific polluter. DeFazio is currently sponsoring a bill which would make DOE responsible under the Clean Water Act and the Environmental Protection Agency.

While DOE readily admits its nuclear facilities do not comply with federal standards, they maintain they're doing all they can to correct the problems. Much of the damage was done long before corrective laws were passed, they told us. Since then, DOE has avoided regulatory compliance by justifying their mess in the name of national defense.

At the Hanford site, comprising an area half the size of Rhode Island, investigators in the Office of Technology Assessment found an underground plume of contaminated water stretching 122 square miles and moving toward the Columbia River. Hanford is also home to 177 underground storage tanks, most of which have been filled with contaminated waste since the early 1940s.

DOE officials told our asseciate Andrew Conte they believe some of these tanks have started to leak into the ground, making Hanford "one of DOE's top priorities." Perhaps that's also because of a track record that includes pouring more than 200 billion gallons of liquid wastes into unlined, open dirt retainers at the site. Environmentalists charge that this water then seeps into the ground water below.

At another site, 20 miles north of Cincinnati, DOE has released more than half a million pounds of uranium into the air and water, raising radioactivity levels in nearby drinking wells to 250 times the level considered safe. In December 1991, DOE released contaminated water from a nuclear reactor into the Savannah River in South Carolina.

DeFazio admits that getting his bill approved by Congress would be "tough" to say the least. Nor has he received much help from the eco-sensitive Clinton administration. When he wrote a letter recently to Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary, he received a form letter in reply to thank him for writing.

Readers' views on: Restitution Center

City fails to recognize value of alternative

Ms. Cynthia Reed, a former Midland County employee, has again shown her lack of knowledge concerning the operation and funding of the Midland Restitution Center (Letters, Sept. 26). The center received quarterly funding from the state in the approximate amount of $200,000 dollars which pays for the salaries of the staff working at the center, as well as operation costs (utilities, contracts, etc.). The grant funding received from the state also paid for the upkeep and renovations to the Midland Restitution Center. In fact, the state pays $72,000 per year rent to Midland County to pay for the facility to house probationers in a structured living environment, where they can maintain stable employment, pay restitution, fines, court costs, and perform community service.

Ms. Reed is misinformed as to how grants awarded by the state are disbursed. The state requires that the checks be sent to the county treasurer for caretaking, and disbursement of those funds is done through a purchase order system. The county treasurer merely manages those funds with direction from the agency director and fiscal services director of the adult probation department — it is not funds that the county has to generate from taxpayer money. The county commissioners would only be involved when certification to go out for bids is required.

There is no way that renovation could have been done at the center while it was inhabited. Ceilings were torn out, painting had to be done, and furniture had to be moved. Therefore, no residents were accepted during this time. It also allowed for a new staff to be fully trained.

It is unfortunate that Midland County taxpayers do not realize the loss of revenue from the state it will now not receive in order to allow the operation of a program such as this to serve the community. Yes, probably jail expansion will be necessary, because the system failed to recognize the importance of a viable alternative to incarceration. Although the district judges have shown their total commitment to the Midland Restitution Center program, support could have been more forthcoming from other areas. As a result, Midland County will lose state revenue, and more to the point, 22 employees will lose their jobs.

Linda K. Smith
Director
Midland Restitution Center

Good management has loyal employees

This letter is in reference to the closing of the Midland County Restitution Center. I am an employee of the center and am offended by the fact that the current management is being compared to past management of this facility. The reason why most of the employees of the center are new is because the center was being brought up to current CJAD standards. Dimitria Pope, director of Community Justice Assistance Division (CJAD), stated that "the center is to be closed down because management is unable to implement the action plans mandated by CJAD to rectify the center's problems." That statement has been misconstrued to mean center management instead of upper management. All action plans, with the exception of one, were completed by May 1, 1993.

The one action plan that was not completed was the one that had to do with the fire alarm system, and the only reason it was not completed is because it was at a point in the bid process where it was not in the hands of center management. The fire alarm system not being handled in a timely manner is "indicative of red tape, not management."

Linda K. Smith is the current director of the Midland Restitution Center and she has poured blood, sweat and tears into complying with everything that CJAD wanted. Every employee of this center has worked long and hard and has been very dedicated, positive and loyal, and that is what is "indicative of good management."

Teresa Howery
Midland

Closing Restitution Center will hurt city

I am writing this letter to share my concerns on the possible closure of the Midland Restitution Center. The Midland Restitution Center was designed as an alternative to prison for non-violent felony offenders by providing a closely supervised residential setting for the residents.

Correctional institutions are constantly faced with many challenges, such as correctional operations, staff attrition, political pressures and a combination of other outside "influences," which tend to lead to failure for such an operation as the Midland Restitution Center.

In February 1993, the newly appointed Midland Restitution Center staff began its quest to alleviate many of the problems the center had experienced in the past. By generating a series of action plans mandated by the Community Justice Assistance Division the future looked hopeful. However, on Sept. 10, 1993, the center staff received alarming information that a recommendation for closure was in order due to circumstances beyond their control.

It is crucial that the general public be made aware of the economic implications and repercussions that will take place in closing this center. This community will lose thousands of dollars in revenue and many individuals, both staff and those we serve will be at a disadvantage because of the choices made. Those who will lose the most. . .the residents.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

'Fooling around' with health care means more sin taxes

I totally agree we need to do something about the health-care crisis in this country. Anybody with my medical history knows not being able to get the proper doctoring can even be fatal.

Grizzard

But I, like others, wonder how we're going to pay for the new Bill and Hillary Health Package. I may have a solution.

You probably have already heard about using a possible "sin tax" to help defer the costs. Specifically that idea is to add another tax on cigarettes and possibly hard liquor. But why limit the tax to the sin of smoking? And smoking most certainly is a sin because it is pleasurable, and a lot of people frown on it.

I suggest we also enact a sex tax to help pay for the new health program. Or, more specifically, a "fooling-around" sex tax. You wouldn't be taxed on sex that is not particularly pleasurable and a lot of people don't frown upon. Like sex with your spouse.

I'm talking about that other kind of sex — extramarital sex, premarital sex, sex that will get you on the Oprah Winfrey show, like sex on a UFO or with a famous politician.

I know you're asking, but how would the government be able to collect a fooling-around tax? People simply wouldn't admit to such a thing.

OK, I don't have all the details worked out yet. Maybe we could appeal to people's egos. You put out a tax form that says, "How much illicit sex did you have last year?" and what stud wannabe, or otherwise, is going to put down "I went scoreless."

Some might even exaggerate in an attempt to advertise their sexual prowess at their local IRS office.

Under my plan, how much fooling-around tax you pay would depend on these differentials.

For example:

If you did it in a mobile home, you obviously didn't get filthy rich in the Reagan-Bush era, so you don't have to pay as much as, say, someone who was able to pop for a suite at the Ritz and designer condoms with polo players on them.

If you did it in a private jet you would be taxed at a higher rate than someone fooling around in a van with a bumper sticker that reads, "If this van is rockin', don't come knockin'."

Faked orgasms are on the house.

Ask not who you can do, my fellow Americans, but who you can do for your country.

Lewis Grizzard's column is distributed by Cowles Syndicate.

Amendment could be first step to tax system overhaul

DALLAS (AP) — The dreaded "I" word — income tax — is getting mention around the state, with the head of one taxpayer group predicting a proposed constitutional amendment to ban a state tax may have the opposite effect.

If the proposal on the Nov. 2 ballot passes — as many believe it will — the amendment would prohibit the Legislature from implementing an income tax on its own.

It could, however, impose the tax if voters approved it and if it were coupled with a property tax reduction.

"I think it could be a Trojan horse," Richard Ford, who heads Texans Against State Income Taxes, told The Dallas Morning News for Sunday's editions.

Texas is one of only seven states without an income tax, but it levies a dizzying array of other taxes that are among the highest in the nation. Some say they also are among the most unfair.

The publication "State Budget and Tax News," in its April 20 issue, ranked Texas 19th in terms of state and local taxes. It used raw Census Bureau data in its analysis, which showed that the average Texan paid $1,757 in taxes in 1991.

The state sales tax of 8.5 percent is the sixth highest in the country. That tax, along with levies on everything ranging from imported cement to sulfur and bingo halls, are what some groups say makes the Texas system so unfair.

The nonpartisan Citizens for Tax Justice ranks Texas among its "Terrible 10." In a 1991 report, the group ranked Texas second behind Washington on a list of "states with the highest taxes on the poor."

"The richest Texans aren't paying anywhere near their fair share," the group's director of tax analysis, Doug Kelly, told The Morning News.

For example, a Texan pays 20 cents' tax on each gallon of gasoline, regardless of how much money that person makes.

Income taxes, on the other hand, are graduated so that the more you make the more you pay.

According to Citizens for Tax Justice, a Texas family making $10,600 annually paid 17.1 percent of taxes in 1991. A family earning $35,300 paid only 8.4 percent of its income in state and local taxes, while the wealthiest 1 percent of Texas residents — those earning more than $945,000 a year — paid just 3.1 percent of their income in state and local taxes.

But Ford, a Dallas consultant, disagrees that the sales tax is regressive.

Lawmakers still jittery over health reform

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hillary Rodham Clinton's soothing testimony about health reform didn't lay to rest all the concerns of lawmakers about whether the White House prescription will really cure America's health problems.

Doubts persist about whether President Clinton will be able to deliver on his promise of big savings and expensive new health benefits for the young and old.

"We learned she's one helluva witness," said Rep. Pete Stark, D-Calif., the chairman of the Ways and Means health subcommittee. "The president's goals are marvelous. But there's a long way between where this country is today and universal access and coverage."

Many Republicans fear that the White House blueprint would only make matters worse in a country with 15 percent of its population uninsured despite spending $900 billion a year on health care.

They question whether Clinton will really be able to find enough savings to pay for such promises as prescription drugs for the elderly and an 80 percent government subsidy to provide fully health coverage for early retirees at age 55.

"What a bonanza!" Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., told Mrs. Clinton at the Senate Finance Committee.

Mrs. Clinton assured him it would cost just $4.5 billion and put American corporations now saddled with steep health bills for superannuated workers in a better position to compete against the Japanese and other rivals overseas.

There have been other estimates that it might cost $10 billion. And a skeptical Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole of Kansas told the American Medical Association, "We get estimates as high as $80 billion" for the cost of covering early retirees. How can the nation afford it, he asked.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, questioned whether the Clinton numbers could pass "a reality check."

The White House health team may have done its best on the numbers, "but I would still bet a dime to a dollar they're wrong" based on the history of errant government forecasts, said Moynihan.

Clinton's yet-to-be-introduced health plan is not the only game in town.

Eighty-nine House Democrats and five senators are backing a bill to abolish private insurance and let the government raise taxes to pay all medical bills.

Several dozen moderates from both parties will make a push this week for pure "managed competition" and a less regulatory approach to health reform. They include Sens. David Durenberger, R-Minn., and John Breaux, D-La., and Reps. Fred Grandy, R-Iowa, and Jim Cooper, D-Tenn.

Conservative Republicans have no faith at all in the Clinton health plan and its promise of coverage for all by 1997 and medical inflation cut in half within five years.

"All of this is contingent on the federal government running the health care system ... more efficiently, cutting red tape," said Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, on CNN's "Crossfire" last Thursday. "I mean, who are we kidding?"

Another conservative, Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., agreed. "It is not a question of whether Bill Clinton is a good speechmaker or whether Hillary Clinton is a good witness," he said Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press." "The question is ... read what they are saying in their plan. It is an atrocity and it is unbelievable how bad it is, and for 10 days now, the city of Washington has been gaga over personality when it should be investigating the plan."

Notwithstanding Mrs. Clinton's five-committee marathon and further testimony scheduled this week before Ways and Means and Senate Finance by Health Secretary Donna E. Shalala, the Clinton bill is not yet finished.

The Treasury Department, the Office of Management and Budget and Ira C. Magaziner are still massaging the administration's numbers, and the White House will only say that it hopes to send a bill up this month, possibly in two weeks.

"We really haven't had a chance yet to put forward our full case on this," said Kevin Anderson, a White House health care spokesman. "We recognize it's going to take a while to make the case."

Polls have found the public by 2-to-1 margins support Clinton's call for fundamental health reforms.

Car's image of Virgin Mary excites believers in colonia

ELSA (AP) — The latest sighting of the Virgin Mary in South Texas, this time on the rear fender of a 1981 Camaro, is no less than a miracle for believers in a humble neighborhood of gravel streets.

"We are very proud that the Virgin visited us," said Aurora Quintero. Miracle seekers came to her home for weeks after her brother told neighbors that the image, less than a foot tall, appeared on a piece of galvanized steel he was riveting to his rusty fender.

"Everyone who comes is friendly. All of them believe in the Virgin," said Mrs. Quintero, 50. "We are not charging or selling anything. We are letting people see the Virgin."

The maroon Camaro has become an attraction for the devout and the curious, as had a Brownsville boarding house where believers saw the Virgin Mary in a cottonwood tree this summer. A few years ago, a similar sighting drew attention to the floor of an auto-parts store in the border town of Progreso.

Many people in the Rio Grande Valley believe such images are signals from God. Many others say they are natural events, made spiritual only through the fervor of the believers.

Although the crowds at the Virgin Mary sightings in this low-income, predominantly Roman Catholic area usually taper off after a few weeks — as they already have at Mrs. Quintero's small but well-kept place — experts say the devotion of believers is very real.

"This is called faith and belief, and it is serious stuff," said anthropology professor Tony Zavaleta, dean of liberal arts at the University of Texas-Brownsville.

"The novelty does wear off," Zavaleta said. "It can start back up. All it would take is a rumor of miracle, a rumor of apparition. It would start the whole process over again."

Mark Glazer, anthropology professor at University of Texas-Pan American, said many Mexicans and Mexican-Americans hold a deep veneration for the Virgin Mary and the Virgin of Guadalupe — the dark-skinned patroness of Mexico.

Apparitions of the Virgin play an important role in the Mexican culture, including the well-known story of the Indian peasant Juan Diego. His vision of the Virgin of Guadalupe in 1531 convinced the Catholic Church to build a shrine in her honor on an old Aztec holy site.

Many Mexicans believe the Virgin of Guadalupe, whose basilica remains a popular pilgrimage site in Mexico City, is the protector of the poor.

Mrs. Quintero has repeated her family's own story to perhaps hundreds of visitors.

Her brother, Dario Mendoza, was working on his car at 9 p.m. of Sept. 8 when he noticed that a black spot grew on the thin strip of galvanized metal. He wasn't using a blow torch or chemicals that could have stained the metal, she said.

The image grew until Mendoza and neighbors became convinced it was the mother of Jesus wearing a hooded robe.

Mrs. Quintero said her brother, a 34-year-old migrant laborer, had planned to take the car to work in Louisiana cotton fields. But he decided to ride with others and leave the car in Elsa with his sister.

She said she believed God sent the image as a message.

"There is so much violence. People killing and killing. We think that's why the Virgin appeared," she said in Spanish. "And this colonia is very poor, also. We do not have paved roads or anything."

Maria Luisa Rodrigues, a 75-year-old neighbor in the colonia, or poor neighborhood, north of Elsa, said: "We are very happy and grateful that the Virgin chose this place. We are very poor, but she doesn't distinguish between the rich and the poor. For this we are very grateful, very proud."

The family used donations from neighbors and pilgrims to build a new shelter for the Camaro. Mrs. Quintero called it an "iglesita," or little church, with a concrete floor and plywood walls.

The faithful have adorned the car with flowers, candles, written prayers, and pictures of sick relatives for whom they came to pray.

The Roman Catholic Diocese of Brownsville, which counts four in five Rio Grande Valley residents as adherents, has neither encouraged nor discounted the sightings in Brownsville or Elsa.

"The reason the Church doesn't take a position is because there's no way to really determine: Is it from God or is it from nature?" said Pam Downing, spokeswoman for the diocese.

Senior ATF officials resign amid report on cult raid

DALLAS (AP) — Two senior government officials who were accused in a report of lying and misleading the public after the botched Branch Davidian raid have resigned.

Dan Hartnett, associate director of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, and Dan Conroy, deputy associate director, told Treasury Department officials Saturday they were leaving the agency immediately.

In their first public comment since the release of the Treasury Department's review of the Feb. 28 raid, Hartnett and Conroy said they were unfairly accused of intentionally misleading the public and their superiors during the siege near Waco.

"We are resigning because we do not agree with the findings of the Waco administrative review. The report does not reflect the facts of what occurred in the aftermath of the Waco tragedy," Harnett and Conroy said in a prepared statement.

The two men were the agency's the two highest-ranking law enforcement officials until being placed on administrative leave last week in the wake of the treasury report. Three other ATF officials also were suspended with pay pending further review by the Treasury Department, which oversees the ATF.

The treasury report said Hartnett and Conroy, along with some others in Washington, did not take into account inexperience of raid commanders in planning the operation and didn't recognize the need for less risky alternative or contingency plans, according to The Dallas Morning News.

The report also said misstatements were made or allowed to be made to the public and superiors were not kept fully apprised of key reasons for the raid failure.

The months-long treasury review concluded that ATF officials designed a flawed plan to storm the compound Feb. 28 to arrest sect leader David Koresh and search for illegally stockpiled weapons.

The report said the raid should have been canceled when an undercover ATF agent told commanders that Koresh knew that agents were coming.

The operation left four agents and six cult members dead in a shootout. The confrontation lasted 51 days, ending April 19 when fire consumed the compound, killing Koresh and more than 80 of his followers.

Harnett, 53, a 24-year veteran, and Conroy, 50, a 26-year veteran, were the top ATF officials in Waco after the raid.

Hartnett and Conroy said before the Waco operation that they had planned to retire at the end of the year. Saturday's decision, delivered to treasury officials in Washington, made it effective immediately.

Stephen Higgins, the former ATF director, announced his resignation Monday before release of the report. The other three suspended ATF officials have said they have been ordered not to discuss the case by the Treasury Department.

Meanwhile, another report is in the works into the FBI's April 19 tear-gas assault on Koresh's compound. That attack, which ended in fire, was ordered by Attorney General Janet Reno and former FBI Director William Sessions.

The New York Times said in Saturday's editions that the Justice Department report will clear senior FBI officials and Reno of any significant mistakes. The Times said it reviewed a portion of the report provided by a person involved in the review.

Sessions, quoted in Sunday editions of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, defended the tear-gas strategy as a well-planned effort to break the stalemate.

However, the former director also said the Justice Department should have given greater consideration to a widely ridiculed proposal that he negotiate with Koresh.

"Great sport was made of it . . . that we were looking at a shootout at high noon at the OK Corral," said Sessions, a former Waco resident. "I think it was a very logical discussion, and although it was not done, it was certainly not a laughable circumstance."

Hospital giants' merger to create $10 billion chain

FORT WORTH (AP) — Fort Worth hospital company Columbia Healthcare Corp. has announced a merger with Hospital Corp. of America in a move that will create the nation's biggest for-profit hospital chain.

The new $10 billion chain will have 190 hospitals and medical care facilities nationwide, including three in Tarrant County and seven more in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Industry analysts say the merger exemplifies further consolidation in the hospital business, which is under strong pressure to trim costs in wake of President Clinton's health care reform package.

"The message is consolidation," John Hindelong, health-care analyst at Donaldson, Lufkin Jenrette investment bankers in New York, was quoted as saying in Sunday editions of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

"I think hospitals, as we see here, will merge, consolidate, slash . . . employment levels, cut supply expenses and get lean and mean," Hindelong said.

Columbia Healthcare was conceived six years ago by Fort Worth investor Richard Rainwater and Dallas attorney Richard Scott. HCA is based in Nashville, Tenn.

Talks of a merger began Sept. 2, just one day after Columbia completed another merger with Galen Healthcare Corp., Scott said. He will be president and chief executive officer of the new enterprise, to be named Columbia/HCA Healthcare Corp.

Scott predicted the merger will allow the company to adjust more quickly to any approved changes to the health care system.

"We'll have more networks than any other company in the country," he said. "Whether it's alliances or employers that do the buying, in our locations we'll be the logical providers."

The merger, approved Friday by directors of the two health-care giants, must still be authorized by shareholders and the government.

Diversified funds

NEW YORK (AP) — If you're looking to invest in mutual funds for income these days, you need a strategy.

Yields across the whole spectrum of funds that invest in interest-bearing securities from short-term to long-term, are at their lowest levels in at least two decades.

Risks, to judge from a cacophony of warnings about the perils facing bond-fund holders, are running high.

Should interest rates suddenly turn upward, the resulting drop in bond funds' net asset values could shock a generation of investors that has grown used to bull-market conditions.

It's enough to send any cautious individual fleeing for the sidelines to await some "less risky" occasion to put his or her money to work.

But many income-minded investors — including a large percentage of retirees — don't have the luxury of that wait-and-see option if they depend on income from their capital to cover their costs of living.

So they are pretty much forced to perform a balancing act between yield and risk, trying to wring the best possible return from their money while minimizing their exposure to misfortune.

Thousands of people each year must decide whether to start collecting Social Security benefits at age 62 or to wait until 65 or even later.

Some people, of course, need the money desperately. But others are still working, if only part time, or drawing on other resources. They have to weigh the advantages of having a little more now or much more later.

People can start collecting anytime after they turn 62. But by beginning then, their monthly checks will be 20 percent smaller — forever — than if they had waited until 65. And if they begin at age 65, their checks will be 20 percent smaller than if they had waited until 70. For each year of delay, the monthly payment rises 4 to 8 percent.

For example, someone turning 65 this year who is eligible to receive $800 a month would have gotten only $640 by starting at age 62. If he waits until 70, he could increase his monthly check to $960, said Philip Gambino, a spokesman for the Social Security Administration. These figures do not include the cost-of-living adjustments made regularly by the agency.

Last year, more people decided to start collecting benefits at age 62 than at any other age: 48 percent of men and 57 percent of women, according to the agency.

Bill collectors

The bill collectors have your number. They call you late at night, leave messages with your co-workers and threaten to garnish your wages or throw you in jail.

In doing so, they have crossed the line from aggressive to harassment. But you have some weapons if you know your rights.

In weak economies, collectors and creditors are apt to use tough measures to get their due. Consumer complaints about strong-arm collections tactics surged last year, and government officials are responding with a crackdown on overzealous collectors.

"Because of the economic situation, many people really don't have the money to pay now," said David Medine, associate director for credit practices at the Federal Trade Commission.

Baby boomers stand to inherit trillions

By Vivian Marino
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — They were born of the Great Depression, started families in the prosperous '50s, and watched the value of their homes and stock portfolios skyrocket in the last two decades.

Now, the parents of the postwar baby boom generation, many of them also receiving generous retirement benefits, are poised to pass on their accumulated fortunes to less-fortunate next of kin.

Economists estimate $8 trillion in collective net wealth will transfer from one generation to the next over the coming 20 years, the largest movement of inherited wealth in the nation's history.

That's a bit of poetic justice, some might say, considering that same parental generation helped amass the nation's largest debtload, now at around $4 trillion.

Signs of a financial shift already are visible. Some parents, for example, lavish gifts on adult children, enabling them to make a downpayment on a new house or start a business.

Edward Wolff, an economics professor at New York University who has studied the net worth of Americans among different age groups, has estimated 80 percent of the wealth of the average baby boom family comes from gifts or inheritance.

By contrast, nearly all the wealth of seniors comes from savings or capital gains on investments, Wolff said.

"Baby boomers are very poor savers. ... For some people, this will be manna from heaven. They may get inheritance from a relative they've never heard of. But others who might be counting on money may find their inheritence depleted," from health-care or other living expenses, said William Strauss, co-author of "Generations: The History of America's Future, 1584 to 2060."

Going strictly by mathematics, the anticipated windfall works out to roughly $50,000 per baby boomer family,

Using CDs to secure bank loans

N.Y. Times News Service

Don't cash out your certificates of deposit just yet.

CDs, which have been cursed by their owners because of dismally low interest rates, can help if you need to borrow money.

Using a CD as collateral on a loan can be a good deal if you need some quick loan money.

These loans usually have interest rates a couple of percentage points above the rate on the account — which isn't a lot more than 5 percent at today's rates. Unsecured loans run into the double digits.

If you are looking for a car or home improvement loan, you can apply for one backed by your CD. Remember, however, that with a CD loan, you're borrowing from yourself and are risking the money you've saved.

Before you sign up, crunch some numbers to determine the best deal.

Compare the interest cost of the CD loan, compared with simply cashing in the deposit and paying cash. Cashing in a CD may mean suffering an early-withdrawal penalty or losing a good rate of return on an older CD.

Early-withdrawal penalties vary among banks, but they can take a huge bite out of the interest you've earned, depending on how long you have held the CD. See if the interest you'd be paying with a CD loan would be more expensive than the early-withdrawal penalty.

Some financial planning educators abhor the idea of putting a CD on the line.

"In the long run, everybody is better off just closing out their CD and just taking the hit," said Paul Richard, director of education at

HOW THEY DO IT

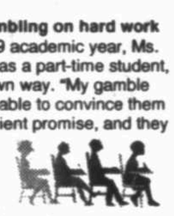
Study Hard, Show Promise, Earn a No-Debt Doctorate

In the late 1980's, Gail Triner decided to give up a 15-year career in the financial industry and a $70,000 salary to pursue a doctorate in history at Columbia University. She could afford it on one condition: After the first year, she would need full financial assistance to cover tuition and expenses.

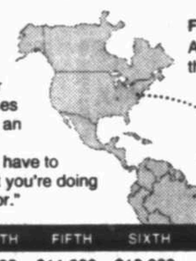
Loans were out of the question because she and her husband, Carter Kaneen, a financial analyst, had just taken out a mortgage on their Manhattan apartment. Still, she felt it was time to change careers, and set out to become an academic.

Kaneen's salary has covered their mortgage and living expenses, which they pared considerably, for six academic years. At 41, Ms. Triner is now finishing her dissertation on Brazilian economic history and preparing for her first teaching post. Here's how she did it without taking on any debt.

First year: Gambling on hard work
For the 1988-89 academic year, Ms. Triner enrolled as a part-time student, and paid her own way. "My gamble was that I'd be able to convince them that I had sufficient promise, and they would give me financial aid," she said.



The gamble pays off
She received funding, based on her performance and the topic of her research, to cover almost all educational expenses for the next five years. "Being an academic is like being an entrepreneur," she said. "You have to convince somebody that what you're doing is interesting enough to pay for."



Field work gets special funding
An extra fellowship paid for a three-month research trip to Brazil after the second year and a 10-month trip in the fourth. But travel expenses for Kaneen were out of pocket.

With the end of school in sight. . .
Ms. Triner has accepted a one-semester teaching position next year at Michigan State University. She will commute to New York on weekends. Although her income will be about half of what she made as a financial analyst, Ms. Triner is unconcerned. "We've gained confidence that we can live our lives very flexibly," she said.

Foreign stock investing

Q. Are there ways to invest in foreign stocks other than American depository receipts?
— Sheldon Zaslow, Bay Shore, N.Y.

A. Along with ADR's, which are traded on American exchanges, investors might buy shares of foreign companies by opening a foreign brokerage or custodian account and buying on exchanges abroad.

But there are a couple of ways to invest indirectly in foreign stocks that may be more feasible for small investors. One is the purchase of shares in global, regional and country-specific closed-end investment companies traded on the New York Stock Exchange, the American Stock Exchange and the Nasdaq market.

Another popular choice is the purchase of mutual funds that similarly specialize in foreign securities.

"Direct investment in foreign shares is possible but more difficult, in that it normally involves the purchase of foreign currency, the opening of a foreign custodian or brokerage account to handle settlements and the payment weeks before physical delivery of the shares can be made," said Derwood S. Chase Jr., president of the Chase Investment Counsel Corp.

Stock clearing practices

Q. My brokerage firm says that it clears through another, well-known brokerage firm. What does that mean?
— Ruth Shwab, Armonk, N.Y.

A. Clearing is Wall Street jargon for the administrative and communications work associated with buying or selling securities and maintaining brokerage accounts for customers.

It can include getting your order to the proper stock exchange or mutual fund sponsor, collecting interest or dividends on your securities and preparing monthly statements of your account transactions.

Many small and medium-size brokerage firms find it more convenient and cost-effective to hire another firm with substantial processing power and computerized technology to clear transactions. This clearing firm provides account protection from the Securities Investor Protection Corp.

"If your broker has a clearing arrangement, you'll see the name of the clearing firm on various documents or checks you receive," said Alton Jones, managing director of the Pershing division of Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette. "You may also be directed to make your checks payable to the clearing firm, which will then credit your account."

Medicare and Medicaid

Q. Are Medicare and Medicaid benefits the same in every state?
— Joan Davidson, Syosset, N.Y.

A. Medicare is a federal program and therefore its benefits are uniform throughout the country. Medicaid is a joint federal-state entitlement program that pays for medical coverage on behalf of eligible low-income people.

"Because each state designs its own Medicaid eligibility, coverage and payment policies," said Faye Baggiano, the associate administrator of the Health Care Financing Administration, "no two state programs are alike in all respects."

Gasoline tax

How will the new gasoline tax affect people in Texas?

Texas motorists likely will begin paying a bit more at the gasoline pump as of Friday, when the 4.3 cents per gallon gas tax hike takes effect.

The federal gasoline tax is rising from 14.1 cents per gallon to 18.4 cents per gallon.

Congress approved the tax increase earlier this year as part of the Clinton administration's deficit-reduction plan. The tax is expected to raise $22 billion over the next five years.

The Texas Mid-Continental Oil & Gas Association said drivers could pay as much as 4.3 cents per gallon more for motor gasoline and diesel fuel.

Texas motorists can expect to pay 38.4 cents per gallon in federal and state gasoline taxes combined, the association said.

"I think by and large, most of the industry will on Friday increase the price of gasoline 4 or 5 cents a gallon," said Roger Hemminghaus, chairman and chief executive officer of San Antonio-based Diamond Shamrock Inc.

"Whether or not that will stick depends on competition," he said.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Stock questions ... and answers

By Bill Doyle

Q: Here is a typical newspaper headline: "Late buying boosts Dow."

Couldn't it just as well be "Late Selling... " For every share bought, one is sold. Right?

Doyle

A: Right as rain. When you buy, one, 100 or any other number of shares of stock, someone sells the shares you buy.

However, it's the amount of buying demand or selling pressure that sends stock prices higher or lower at any moment in time. Prices of individual stocks and the overall stock market rise or fall in response to that.

It stands to reason that the market price of a particular stock will go higher when more people are attempting to buy that stock than want to sell it. Conversely, that stock's price will drop when, as the old expression goes, "there are more sellers than buyers."

Q: What is "The Dow" so often mentioned in headlines on stock market stories?

A: It's the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, the most widely used measurement of the ups and downs of stock prices in general.

Having served some time on a newspaper copy desk — "The Rim," as it was called before our trade entered the computer age — I learned those two words "The Dow" fit nicely into headlines, where there seldom is room for excess verbiage.

That average is compiled by adding up the market prices of the 30 stocks of industrial companies and dividing by a "divisor." The divisor, currently 0.44731238, is adjusted downward every time any of the stocks in the average is split or has a stock dividend.

Q: I have $500 I would like to invest in a certain stock. The stock is on the New York Stock Exchange and now is at $26 a share. How do I go about buying it?

I hope this is printed in the newspaper, as I am sure there are many other people who do not know how to purchase stock.

A: There's no doubt many folks do not have the foggiest idea about methods of buying stocks. Before you buy, I urge you visit a public library to obtain and study a couple of basic books on investing.

Unless you know someone who owns and wants to sell shares of that stock, the natural way to buy is through a securities brokerage firm.

At $26 a share, $500 will buy 19 and a fraction shares. But you can't buy fractions of shares in the marketplace. So, either settle for 19 shares or put some more money together and purchase 20 shares.

Depending on how the brokerage handles your purchase order and because you will buy fewer than 100 shares, you'll probably pay the market price plus and odd-lot differential of either 12 and one-half or 25 cents a share. On top of that, you will be charged a brokerage commission.

Be aware that the prices of all stocks can change from day to day or minute to minute. The market price of that stock you like might be higher or lower than $26 when you buy.

Q: A man with whom I work owns several thousand shares of a well-known company. I would like to buy 100 of those shares and he has agreed to sell them to me.

How can we arrange this between ourselves, without using a broker and paying commissions?

A: First, you two agree on the price you will pay him.

Next, when you give him your check, he hands you the stock certificate for 100 shares. He fills out and signs the assignment form on the back of the certificate. His signature must be "guaranteed" by a brokerage firm or a financial institution participating in a signature guarantee program. Most banks can arrange that.

Then, send the certificate by registered mail, return receipt requested, to the stock's transfer agent, whose name and address is in the annual report to stockholders.

That certificate will be cancelled and a new certificate, in your name, will be sent to you.

ESTATE: Many hesitant to discuss planning

(From 1B)

Wolff said. But the inheritance bounty won't fall evenly on this postwar generation. Three-quarters of the nation's assets are held by the wealthiest 20 percent of families.

"Minorities will probably receive the least inheritance," Wolff said, noting that the wealth of nonwhites is on average about a third of the wealth of whites. "It will exacerbate the inequalities among the baby boom generation between blacks and whites."

Still, even a modest inheritance calls for some advance tax and legal planning.

Professional advisers say estate planning should be just one part of a family's overall financial-planning picture, along with preparing for education costs, insurance needs or retirement.

"There are many people who don't understand the extent of the family wealth," said Jeffrey Lowin, who heads the trusts and estates division at the New York law firm of Reid & Priest. "Ideally, parents should sit down with their children to prepare for the nature of their inheritance ... so the children can do their own planning."

Estate planning tips

A few estate planning tips:

- Communicate. Financial advisers say parents and children must discuss estate planning to ensure the orderly distribution of wealth, particularly if minor children or a family business are involved.
- Share. Future tax liabilities can be reduced through cash gifts. The government lets individuals give away $10,000 a year tax-free to each of as many people as they like. After a person dies, federal estate taxes are imposed on gifts and bequests to everyone but a spouse that exceed $600,000.
- Shelter. Married couples with substantial assets can create a "bypass trust" that provides benefits to a surviving spouse, but the assets aren't taxed in the survivor's estate. Up to $600,000 can be sheltered.
- Insure. So-called "second-to-die" insurance policies provide cash to survivors to pay estate taxes and other expenses.
- Consult. Estate planning is best left to professionals. But there are also many good books on the subject. Among them: "The Estate Planning Guide" by Martin M. Shenkman; and the Nolo Press self-help books "Plan Your Estate With A Living Trust," and "Make Your Own Living Trust," by Denis Clifford.

Broaching such a subject, however, isn't necessarily easy.

Even Martin M. Shenkman, a Teaneck, N.J., lawyer and author who advises people on estate planning, can attest to that.

Although he's prepared hundreds of trusts and wills over the years, he said he had trouble recently helping out his own father.

"My dad had been asking me for two years. He finally said, 'If you don't do my documenting, I'm going to pay someone else to do it,' " Shenkman said. "You don't feel comfortable talking to your parents about what happens when they die."

Such reluctance can be found in both generations. A recent investor poll by Prudential Securities found that more than a third of those 55 and older said they had not yet discussed estate plans with their children.

"You still have this carryover from the Depression era: 'I'm not gonna tell you what you're going to get.' (But) I've seen the best families destroyed over a damn dining room table," said Hank Madden, a financial planner from Jacksonville, Fla.

That's what happened to client Fred Giordano, 60, a retired construction worker, after his father died 10 years ago. He said he and his three older sisters squabbled over money and control of the family home because his parents' wishes weren't clearly known.

He and his wife Joan, 56, recently established a comprehensive plan aimed at preserving and distributing their estimated $1 million estate between their adult son and daughter.

The consequences of poor planning can mean the difference between a loving legacy that provides years of financial security and a perpetuating nightmare of tax liabilities, family rivalries and business problems.

For one thing, the taxes can be enormous. While there's no limit to how much spouses can leave each other without paying federal estate taxes, the Internal Revenue Service taxes anything exceeding $600,000, or $1.2 million for a couple filing jointly, that's left to everyone else.

The tax rate ranges from 37 percent to 55 percent, but could easily exceed 60 percent when some state and local taxes are added.

"When you combine a life insurance policy, pension assets and houses ... you may find you are worth a lot more than you realize," Shenkman said.

Tax experts maintain most Americans can avoid any estate taxes or significantly reduce their liabilities with the right planning.

CDs: Program used for cars, boats and RVs tors abhor the idea of putting a CD on the line.

"In the long run, everybody is better off just closing out their CD and just taking the hit," said Paul Richard, director of education at the National Center for Financial Education in San Diego, a consumer education organization. "If it's a long-term CD, your money is tied up and you can't get to it unless you go ahead and borrow."

Cash from a CD also can act as a substitute for a down payment and a good way to get a short-term loan.

"If you're needing a temporary loan, a CD might be a good place to go," said Hugo Ottolenghi, editor of 100 Highest Yields, a newsletter in North Palm Beach, Fla., that tracks consumer interest rates. "You borrow the money for a couple of months, and you pay it back. You're borrowing it from yourself."

Bank United recently unveiled the "Helping Hand Loan" program that allows family and friends to help a borrower get a loan by pledging a deposit equal to the amount of the required down payment in an account at the bank.

The friend or family member can use a CD or savings account, earning interest at the account's regular rate for the length of the loan.

The program may be used for loans to buy cars, boats or recreational vehicles.

"Many times, people who would otherwise qualify for a loan don't because of a lack of available funds," said Ron Coben, senior vice president and marketing director for Bank United. "Many young professionals have established good credit but have no cash on hand to make the down payment on a new car."

Bank United allows a relative or friend to put up their CD in lieu of a down payment.

The lender is willing to do this because the money remains on deposit until the loan is paid off. The loan agreement allows it to be seized by the lender if the loan goes bad.

You won't see many other advertisements from banks for these types of loans, although those products have been around for a while.

"A lot of times, people don't like to get other people involved in those loans," said Kenneth Thomas, a Miami banking consultant. "Friends and family and loans don't mix."

It would have to be one special buddy or family member who would put his or her money on the line for you.

tack the market with manuals, kits containing forms and, most recently, computer programs.

Estate lawyers, whose clients present myriad eccentricities and complications, remain deeply skeptical of do-it-yourself wills. But the consensus among other legal experts is that a $50 computer program, or a $15 kit with a good manual and a competent user can produce an adequate bare-bones document.

"It ought to be possible," said Arthur W. Murphy, who teaches trusts and estates at the Columbia University Law School, "for a simple will in which everything goes to your spouse or your children. The age-old problem is knowing when the situation is simple enough. It's very hard to know that unless you talk to a lawyer."

Denis Clifford, a lawyer and author of "Nolo's Simple Will Book" (Nolo Press), says the consumer is a fairly good judge of whether his situation is simple. "There's nothing here like flying a jet or doing heart surgery," he said.

Like other experts, Clifford advises consulting a lawyer if your estate is worth more than $600,000 and therefore likely to be subject to the federal estate tax.

Among the other situations requiring a lawyer:

- You own a share in a small business.
- You want to disinherit your spouse.
- You want to leave money to your grandchildren but not your children.
- You are married and have children from a previous marriage.
- You must arrange long-term care for a disabled beneficiary.
- You fear a challenge to the will.

For the basic job, Nolo Press, publisher of the "Simple Will Book" and a smaller kit, has a software program, "Willmaker," that tailors the resulting document to the user's state laws. The program provides for the designation of guardians and an executor, a simple trust for minor children and instructions for paying taxes and debts.

Next month Nolo will issue a version with a living will and durable power of attorney, authorizing someone to make financial and medical decisions if you cannot. The program can be ordered from the company (800 992-6656) for $49.95.

Several publishers offer wills in bigger software packages. "It's Legal" by Parsons Technology generates 41 legal forms, customized by state, and is sold directly (800 223-6925) for $39. "Home Lawyer" by Meca Software (203 255-1441) includes a will form, which is not state specific, from Hyatt Legal Services; it retails for $49.95. (Most Hyatt offices charge $75 to draft an individual will and $95 for a husband and wife.)

The good news, which rarely applies in consumer matters, is that if you need legal advice, it is generally affordable. Most lawyers in metropolitan areas charge $250 to $500 for a simple will or husband-and-wife wills.

Schwartz, who "wanted to get personal advice from a specialist," had wills prepared for himself and his wife by a Westchester lawyer. The total cost was $300. Schwartz's only complaint? "I want a rebate from the law school."

Mutual funds that play the market for you

N.Y. Times News Service

Mutual fund companies are casting a wide net for neophyte investors who lack the desire or the skill to construct their own fund portfolios. The product of the moment? Asset allocation funds.

These funds can buy stocks, bonds and cash in any combination. Their selling points are instant diversity and the flexibility to respond to market conditions. But that built-in flexibility means that funds flying the asset-allocation banner may have very little in common.

"The whole category is so loosely organized that there are no hard-and-fast rules," said Thomas A. Desmond, associate editor of Morningstar Mutual Funds, a Chicago newsletter.

To know what you're getting, you need to look much more closely at the fund's investment strategy and at its manager than you would with other types of funds. "I'd want to have a lot of confidence in the manager," Desmond said.

Some asset allocation funds are free to shift nearly their entire portfolio into stocks or bonds, or even cash. In fact, the Blanchard Strategic Growth Fund used a huge cash position to create an outstanding return of 16.4 percent in 1987.

Since then, asset allocation funds have grown in number from 12 to 64. Fidelity Investments has heavily promoted its Asset Manager for retirement accounts in full-page advertisements, and the fund's assets have doubled from $3.4 billion in January to $6.9 billion. The Dreyfus Corp. jumped in the market in July.

These hybrid funds are close cousins to the better-established balanced group. As a rule, balanced funds own relatively fixed ratios of stocks and bonds, usually in a 60-40 mix.

Balanced funds have been the better performers. For the three years ended in June, they returned an average of 11.6 percent a year, compared with 9.9 percent for asset allocation funds, according to Morningstar Inc.

Fort Worth prepares for first religious crusade in 20 years

FORT WORTH (AP) — It's been more than 20 years since a religious crusade has made its way to Fort Worth.

But as the religious empire of Dallas televangelist Robert Tilton appears to be crumbling, another evangelist is preparing to make his debut in this neighboring city.

Luis Palau — the evangelist some call the heir apparent to Billy Graham — will open the Greater Fort Worth Crusade on Oct. 20.

For two years, 10,000 volunteers from 500 area churches have been preparing Fort Worth for an interdenominational crusade on a scale not seen since Graham visited Will Rogers Coliseum in 1951.

The Greater Fort Worth Crusade at the Fort Worth Tarrant County Convention Center, scheduled Oct. 20-24, will bring together Anglo, African-American, Hispanic and Asian church members who hope to make a spiritual and social impact on the community, said former Fort Worth Mayor Bob Bolen, co-chairman of the crusade. Officials expect up to 10,000 people to turn out each day.

"This is a great opportunity to see one of the outstanding evangelists in the country today who is trying to draw us back to the principles that many of us feel have made this country great," Bolen said.

Palau, 58, was born in Buenos Aires, Argentina, and immigrated to the United States in 1960. His headquarters are in Portland, Ore. He has close ties to Graham, after whom he says he patterns his evangelistic efforts and financing methods.

Planning for the Fort Worth crusade began when Palau visited Fort Worth in 1991. Volunteers and a four-person paid staff have contacted people in almost 1,600 churches within a 60-mile radius of Fort Worth, said Gary Turner, crusade coordinator. A $434,000 budget raised locally pays for advertising, convention center rental and staff.

Palau will receive no fee for speaking at the Fort Worth event. He receives a set salary of $60,000, plus expenses, said Fred Baye, spokesman for the evangelist and a former associate of Graham.

The Tarrant Baptist Association, which includes about 200,000 Southern Baptists in 191 churches and 250 missions, is supporting the meeting, along with independent Bible churches, Assemblies of God, Pentecostal and other evangelical congregations.

Also, members of some Catholic parishes and mainline Protestant congregations are working in the crusade.

"It's a real honor for Fort Worth to host this crusade," said Fort Worth Mayor Kay Granger. "Luis Palau is a really world-renowned evangelist who is kind of anointed to be the next Billy Graham."

DEATHS

Services for John R. Brooks, 74, of Lubbock will be at 2 p.m. today in the Sanders Funeral Home Memorial Chapel in Lubbock with the Rev. Jim Fullingim, chaplain of the Starlight Center, officiating. Burial will be in the Resthaven Mausoleum in Resthaven Memorial Park. Arrangements are under the direction of Sanders Funeral Home.

Brooks died Thursday in University Medical Center.

He was born Jan. 5, 1919, in Tulia. He graduated from Texas Tech University with a bachelor of arts degree in international trade. He served in the U.S. Army as a captain from 1941-45. He moved to Lubbock in 1936 and was married to Octavia Wilson on May 30, 1941, in Clovis, N.M. He was employed by the city and school tax office in 1953, where he later became the Lubbock tax assessor/collector in 1963, serving in that capacity until his retirement in 1983. He was a member of the Texas Municipal League, Texas Tax Assessor Association, in which he was a charter member and was instumental in the formation of requirements for the tax assessor's certification, and was a member of the Texas Tech Ex-students Association.

Survivors include his wife of Lubbock; a son, Dr. John R. "Rusty" Brooks Jr. of Sugarland; a daughter, Vicki Dee Smith of Odessa; five grandchildren and a great-grandson.

Pallbearers will be Jim Kilchenstein, Bob Shoop, Ed Murray, Jack Hinds, Jim and Bernard Van Natter. Honorary pallbearers will be Bill Van Natter and Ray Maxwell.

Memorials may be sent to the American Cancer Society or the Lubbock Chapter of Alcoholics Anonymous.

Melvin J. Orman

Services for Melvin James Orman, 85, of Dallas will be 2 p.m. Tuesday at Restland Memorial Chapel in Dallas. Burial will be in the Restland Memorial Park in Dallas. Arrangements are under the direction of Restland Funeral Home.

Orman died Saturday.

He was born Nov. 15, 1907, in Round Rock and moved to Dallas in 1910. He graduated from Sunset High School in 1926 and received a civil engineering degree from Texas A&M University in 1932, where he was elected to the Sul Ross Society. He was a member of Tau Beta Phi Honorary Engineering fraternity. He was married to Juanita Wales in 1934.

He was a second lieutenant in the U.S. Army and served from 1940-45 in the field artillery, returning from Europe as a lieutenant colonel. He worked for the cities of Dallas, Bryan and Midland, where he became city manager. In 1958 he became city manager for Farmers Branch, serving there for 10 years. He worked for the cities of Richardson and McKinney before returning to the private sector. He was a past president of the Texas Municipal League and the North Texas City Managers Association. He was a 32nd Degree Mason in the Scottish Rite and and Eagle Scout. He was a member of the Richardson East Church of Christ.

Survivors include his wife, Juanita Orman of Dallas; a son, James Orman; four grandchildren and a brother, Edward L. Orman.

Memorials may be made to the Salvation Army, Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children or the Richardson East Church of Christ Care Corps.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Sexual assault

Midland police responded to two reports of sexual assault during the early Sunday morning hours, according to a police log of activity.

Police were notified of one incident at 4:25 a.m. and another was reported at 4:26 a.m. Officers were dispatched to apartments at 5009 Rio Grande Dr. and 3316 Caldera Dr., the activity log indicated.

No reports were available on the sexual assaults and no further information has been released.

Store robbery

ODESSA — Police are investigating a Sunday evening robbery at a Merit convenience store located at the corner of Eighth Street and West County Road, according to police officials. The robbery, called a "grab and snatch" by one of the officers, occurred between 8:30 and 9 p.m. Police declined to release further details at press time.

DEAR ABBY

Let trooper's death be lesson for those pursuing their dream

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "Unsure in Framingham, Mass.," whose fiancee refused to marry him because of the high risk involved in his chosen career as a state trooper.

Van Buren

Our son served four years in the U.S. Army, returning home to become a Pennsylvania state trooper. His wife and we, his parents, feared for him in that hazardous profession, but we accepted it and were very proud of his achievements.

He got to live the life he wanted for just three short years — then while on vacation this summer, he died in a drowning accident.

So, to "Unsure": Follow your dream; you never know how — or when — your life will end. — BEREAVED PARENTS IN PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR BEREAVED PARENTS: Please accept my heartfelt condolences on the loss of your beloved son. Most people expect to bury their parents eventually, but for a parent to bury a child — of any age — is probably the most painful experience of a parent's life.

DEAR ABBY: A few months ago, you printed a letter from a woman who was distressed because a young man, apparently trying to reach his father on Father's Day to bury the hatchet after a longtime dispute, reached this woman's answering machine, but did not leave his own telephone number; so there was no way of letting him know that he had reached the wrong number.

Abby, this unfortunate situation was partly the woman's fault. Her answering machine must have had one of those messages that says, "Sorry, we are not at home" — without saying who "we" are.

Abby, please spread the word that all answering messages should begin with: "You have reached the residence of John and Jane Doe at 555-1234." Then, this kind of confusion would be less likely to occur. — ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL — NOT!

DEAR ALEX: I disagree. Why disclose to strangers who may have dialed your number by mistake that you are "Lord and Lady Gotrocks" and your telephone number is Pennsylvania 6-5000?

It would be wiser to have the following message on your machine: "You have reached Pennsylvania 6-5000. If you wish to leave your name and telephone number, we will return your call as soon as possible."

DEAR ABBY: When I read the letter in your column regarding slamming doors in anger, it brought a smile to my face remembering the last time I slammed a door.

Once, out of anger, I slammed my refrigerator door only to hear a sickening sound inside. I opened the fridge door and found all 18 eggs had been propelled from their slots in the door to the interior of the refrigerator!

It took me an hour to clean the mess I had made, but I chuckled the whole time at the consequences of my angry door-slamming. Needless to say, I have not slammed a door since. — KAY SANDERS, COMMERCE, TEXAS

DEAR KAY: I know egg-zactly how you must have felt.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "HAD IT" IN SAN DIEGO: Don't give up — it's part of the training, and separates the men from the boys. Besides, a kick in the pants is a step forward.

To order "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Abigail Van Buren's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

3 men rescue officer just before car catches fire

HOUSTON (AP) — Authorities are crediting quick-thinking residents with saving a Houston police officer from his wrecked patrol car just as it burst into flames.

Officer R.A. Lowe was pursuing a drug suspect at about 1:30 p.m. Saturday when he swerved to avoid another motorist and struck a utility pole, said Alvin Wright, a Houston police spokesman.

Wright said three alert residents dragged Lowe from the car just as it burst into flames near a southwest Houston restaurant. The officer, who was not seriously injured, was treated by Hermann Hospital and released Saturday.

Al Walters, a diner at Doneraki Restaurant, ran to the scene and with an unidentified high school teacher and a jogger, pulled Lowe from the patrol car.

"We finally got the window cracked open a little and then we got it open enough to pull him out through the window," said Walters, 43.

Mitch Thompson, a marketer with a local television station, was jogging in the area when he saw the cruiser slide out of control.

"We pulled him out and dragged him down the street," Thompson said.

Seconds after the trio pulled Lowe out, the car went up in flames.

The drug suspect surrendered a half-block from the wreck scene and faces charges of possession of a controlled substance. His three companions were also arrested and face charges of drug possession.

Cowboys kick Packers

■ Kicker Eddie Murray kicked a franchise-tying record five field goals as the Cowboys improve to 2-2.

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Troy Aikman, Michael Irvin and Emmitt Smith were in Super Bowl form but it was 37-year-old placekicker Eddie Murray who gave the Dallas Cowboys something they've been missing, a field goal kicker.

Murray tied a club record with five field goals, including long-distance 48 and 50 yarders, on Sunday as the defending NFL champions climbed back to .500 with a 36-14 thrashing of the Green Bay Packers.

"Eddie Murray helped us out of some crucial situations and he gets a game ball for what he did today," said Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson. "He's what we've been needing."

Dallas, which had lost its first two games thanks in part to poor placekicking by Lin Elliott, evened its record at 2-2 while the Packers, last-second losers in two games, fell to 1-3.

"I still like our team even though we're not as close to where we were at the end of last year," said Johnson.

Aikman, who was in flawless form with 18 of 23 passes for 317 yards, threw one touchdown pass and Smith, making his first start after his bitter contract dispute with owner Jerry Jones, scored on a 22-yard run and had 71 yards on 13 carries.

But it was Murray's day as the 14-year veteran tied the team mark set by Roger Ruzek in 1987 against the Los Angeles Rams with a five-for-five performance.

"It's important for me to have a game like that for a new team," said Murray. "I was in one of those good grooves. It's important I contribute because of the goals this team has."

Each time a Cowboys drive fizzled, Murray, who was signed Sept. 14 as a free agent, drilled one right down the middle. His other three field goals went 33 and 19 yards twice.

Murray was one of eight kickers who tried out for Elliott's position.

"I'm glad it happened," Murray said. "It made me decide if I still wanted to compete at this level."

Green Bay coach Mike Holmgren said the Cowboys looked in playoff form.

"We ran into a hot team today," he said. "We couldn't get going after our first drive. We had all kinds of breakdowns and you can't do that against Dallas. Murray is a tremendous kicker. He gave them a lift."

The Cowboys built a 16-7 halftime lead on three Murray field goals and a 61-yard touchdown strike from Aikman to Michael Irvin.

Brett Favre completed six consecutive passes on Green Bay's opening drive with a 1-yard run by Edgar Bennett producing the touchdown.

Dallas came right back to tie it at 7-all on a 61-yard touchdown pass from Aikman to Irvin.

Passes of 13 and 30 yards to Irvin positioned the Cowboys for a 33-yard field goal to give Dallas a 10-7 lead.

Then the Cowboys stunned the Packers with an onsides kick which Darrin Smith recovered after Derrick Gainer knocked the ball loose from Marcus Wilson.

"I thought that was a great call," Holmgren said. "It takes a very confident team to try something like that."

Johnson said "I didn't want to lose the momentum we had gathered and I felt it could take a little spark out of them and it did."

Murray made the gamble pay off with a 19-yard field goal for a 13-7 advantage after Dallas failed to score a touchdown from the 1 as Smith was stopped short on third-and-goal.

Stars draft Broten

DALLAS — The Stars have taken Paul Broten, the younger brother of Dallas Stars center Neal Broten, in the NHL waiver draft.

Paul Broten, a 27-year-old right wing, had five goals and nine assists in 60 games last year for the New York Rangers. He also had 48 penalty minutes.

Broten spent four years with the Rangers, scoring 60 points in 194 games. He had 27 goals and 33 assists.

Broten was a 4th-round draft pick from the University of Minnesota in 1984, and was the 77th player taken overall. He will join the Stars Monday.

Stich wins

BASEL, Switzerland — Second-seeded Michael Stich of Germany defeated top-seeded Stefan Edberg of Sweden 6-4, 6-7 (5-7), 6-3, 6-2 Sunday to win the Swiss Indoors tennis tournament.

Stich, who beat Edberg a week earlier in Germany's Davis Cup victory over Sweden, began feeling confident when the two-time Wimbledon champion appeared to slow down in the third set.

"I was a little surprised," Stich said after the 2-hour, 40-minute match. "In the beginning of the third set he suddenly let up. He appeared a little tired and his serve slowed down.

Cunningham out

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Randall Cunningham broke his left leg in Sunday's game between Philadelphia and the New York Jets and will be sidelined from eight to 10 weeks.

Late in the second period, Cunningham was hit by Marvin Washington and Scott Mersereau while moving in the pocket. The Eagles quarterback immediately hobbled to the sideline, where his leg was wrapped by the training staff. Bubby Brister replaced him and led Philadelphia to a 35-30 victory.

Cunningham, who missed all but one-half of the first game of the 1991 season with torn knee ligaments, suffered a break of the fibula.

"We can say it's a good break in that it does not involve the ankle joint, and it should be repairable," said Dr. Joseph Torg, who examined Cunningham.

The Eagles also lost top receiver Fred Barnett on Sunday with a torn right knee ligament and backup Jeff Sydner with a ruptured patella in the left knee. Both figure to miss the rest of the season.

Atlanta heads to NL championship

By Tom Saladino
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA — After winning game No. 104, the Braves waited and watched. And, finally, on the last day of the best pennant race in years, the San Francisco Giants cracked.

The Braves won their third straight NL West title Sunday — but it didn't happen until three hours after their 5-3 victory over the Colorado Rockies.

With players watching on big-screen television in the trainers' room, and about 8,000 fans watching on the scoreboard television in Atlanta Fulton-County Stadium, the title finally came when the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the Giants 12-1 a continent away. Then, after an marathon stretch drive that baseball will never forget, the celebration finally began.

Atlanta and San Francisco began the day in a tie for first, only the second time since divisional play began in 1969 that teams were even going into the final day. But the Braves made the Giants the first team since the 1954 New York Yankees to win 103 games and finish second.

The two-time NL champions needed a remarkable comeback to win the race. The Braves, in a hitting slump throughout the first half of the season, trailed the Giants by 9½ games on Aug. 8. But the July 18 acquisition of Fred McGriff helped the offense get going, and Atlanta won 39 of its final 50 games.

"He made everyone in the lineup better," Glavine said. "The day he stepped in the clubhouse we became a better team."

Seminoles, 'Canes set for battle

By Rick Warner
AP Football Writer

Almost everyone agrees Florida State is No. 1 heading into Saturday's showdown against No. 3 Miami.

After demolishing Georgia Tech 51-0, Florida State fell one vote short of being a unanimous No. 1 in Sunday's Associated Press college football poll.

The Seminoles picked up three more first-place votes than a week ago, giving them 61 of 62 and 1,548 of a possible 1,550 points in the media poll.

The other first-place vote went to No. 2 Alabama, which beat South Carolina 17-6 Saturday night. The defending national champions received 1,473 points after extending the nation's longest winning streak to 28.

Miami remained No. 3 after defeating Georgia Southern 30-7. The Hurricanes visit Florida State Saturday, hoping to spoil the Seminoles' title hopes for the third straight year.

Notre Dame stayed No. 4 with a 48-20 win over Stanford, and Florida re-

Future Hall of Famers make final appearance

■ Nolan Ryan and George Brett tip cap for last time as Arlington Stadium closed its doors.

By Jaime Aron
Associated Press Writer

ARLINGTON — Texas' Nolan Ryan and Kansas City's George Brett didn't get to square off pitcher vs. hitter, but Cooperstown's Class of 1999 went out together in style Sunday.

The sure future Hall of Famers ended their big league careers watching their teams play an otherwise meaningless game at Arlington Stadium, which also celebrated its farewell performance. Kansas City won 4-1.

Ryan's injured right elbow prevented one last head-to-head duel, so they settled for a pre-game handshake at home plate as they exchanged lineup cards.

Brett was in the lineup, batting in his customary third spot.

He made outs in his first three at-bats, then led off the ninth with his final hit — his 3,154th — on a grounder up the middle that shortstop Manuel Lee stopped and watched roll into center. Brett scored on Gary Gaetti's homer.

"It was as emotional as I've ever gotten on a baseball field," said Brett, who admitted that when he reached the plate he felt his Adrenalin pumping, his eyes watering and his body shaking.

He also noticed that all his teammates were out of the dugout, standing and clapping, as were the Rangers and most of the sellout crowd of 41,039.

"I said to myself, 'These guys are really into my last at-bat,' " Brett said with a smile. "I just hit it and ran. I was telling myself, 'I gotta run as fast as I ever have in my life.' I didn't want to run across the infield back to the dugout again. I've done that too many times."

As he trotted to first, Brett heard the roar of the crowd and looked up to see the ball rolling into center. It was thrown into the dugout as a keepsake and Brett stood on first, smiling and laughing.

The stadium burst into cheers, including Ryan, who was happy to share the spotlight on his final day as a big leaguer.

NL: Braves to meet Phillies in NL championship

From 1C

San Francisco, however, kept up the pressure by winning 14 of 16 before Sunday's loss. A Giants win would have forced a playoff game Monday night.

Atlanta players, who left their bags packed in the clubhouse for a possible flight to San Francisco on Sunday night, congratulated each other after the game but it was a quiet celebration. The victory gave the Braves a 13-0 sweep of the Rockies, the first time this century an NL team swept a season series from a rival.

Glavine (22-6) won for the eighth time in nine starts, allowing three runs and six hits in 6 2-3 innings with four strikeouts and one walk. Greg McMichael pitched the final two innings for his 19th save in 21 chances.

Dodgers 12, Giants 1

LOS ANGELES — Three minutes before the first pitch Sunday, the San Francisco Giants knew exactly what they had to do. They didn't do it.

After the Braves beat Colorado in Atlanta, the Giants had to defeat their long-time rival to force a one-game playoff for the NL West title. Instead, their surprising season ended with a 12-1 loss to the Los Angeles Dodgers, giving the Braves their third straight NL West title.

The Giants, who finished 103-59, became the first team since the 1954 New York Yankees to win this many games and finish second. It was only the eighth time in major league history — the first since 1980 — that a team with 100 wins didn't finish first.

The Dodgers, who lost the first three games of the series, counted on Kevin Gross (13-13), a 32-year-old right-hander who hasn't had a winning record since 1985. Gross pitched a six-hitter for only his third complete game this year.

Cubs 4, Padres 1

SAN DIEGO — Chicago's Sammy Sosa and Turk Wendell put a merciful end to San Diego's worst year in 19 seasons.

Sosa hit a two-run homer in the first inning, his 33rd, and Wendell allowed four hits in seven-plus innings to earn his first major-league victory as the Cubs beat the Padres.

The Padres, who jettisoned all of their high-priced players except Tony Gwynn and Andy Benes, finished last in the NL West at 61-101, six games behind the expansion Colorado Rockies and 43 games out of first. It was their worst record in a non-strike year since they went 60-102 in 1974.

The Cubs, meanwhile, finished fourth in the NL East at 84-78, only their seventh winning season since divisional play began in 1969.

Mets 9, Marlins 2

MIAMI — Baseball's worst club finished the season as the hottest team.

Pete Schourek pitched eight strong innings Sunday and the New York Mets extended its longest winning streak of the year to six games by beating the Florida Marlins. The game was called in the bottom of the ninth following a 76-minute rain delay, prolonging New York's agony just a little bit.

Despite the Mets' surge in the final week, they finished with a record of 59-103, their worst since 1965.

Even expansion Florida (64-98) fared better. But the Marlins faded at the end, losing their last six games and 15 of their final 19.

The Mets became only the second team to sweep Florida at Joe Robbie Stadium. Pittsburgh did it last month.

A season-high crowd of 45,900 pushed Florida's attendance to 3,064,847. The only other first-year expansion team to reach the 3-million mark is Colorado.

Reds 7, Astros 4

CINCINNATI — Nice start, nice finish. Everything in-between was a disaster for Cincinnati.

The Reds ended one of their worst seasons the way they started it: with a win. Hal Morris had four hits, including a homer, as the Reds overcame a three-run deficit to beat Houston.

The team that opened the season with a win and the National League's biggest payroll finished 73-89 — an expenditure of roughly $586,301 per win. Cincinnati scored three runs off reliever Jeff Juden (0-1) to avoid a 90-loss season just one year it won 90 under general manager Bob Quinn, now with San Francisco, and manager Lou Piniella, now with Seattle.

Expos 3, Pirates 1

MONTREAL — Expos rookie Lou Frazier typifies the kind of contribution Montreal got from its reserves all season.

Frazier drove in three runs with a pair of singles, and home-town favorite Denis Boucher (3-1) allowed three hits in 6 2-3 innings as the Expos concluded a hot second half with a win over Pittsburgh.

Montreal finished second in the NL East for the second straight year, going 94-68. The Expos, who led the major leagues with 55 home victories, won 15 of their final 19 games in Olympic Stadium and 30 of their last 39 overall.

Cardinals 2, Phillies 0

ST. LOUIS — Terry Mulholland answered the only nagging question facing the playoff-bound Philadelphia Phillies, throwing four strong innings in the regular-season finale.

As the Phillies wrapped up a dominant season in which they set a league record by spending 181 days — or all but six days — in first place, and then began the wait to see whether they'd be facing Atlanta or San Francisco, Mulholland solidified manager Jim Fregosi's rotation for the playoffs.

Mulholland, who'll start Game 3, showed no signs of a hip injury that caused him to miss almost a month in the Phillies' 2-0 loss to St. Louis. It was only the second time the Phillies have been shut out this season, the first coming on Sept. 30 to Pittsburgh.

Jays head into AL playoffs with win

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Toronto Blue Jays made history Sunday with an offensive display that showed why they ran away with the AL East title.

Joe Carter became the 25th major league player to home twice in one inning, connecting twice against Ben McDonald in an eight-run second inning that lifted the Blue Jays over the Baltimore Orioles 11-6.

Toronto became the first club since 1893 to have teammates finish 1-2-3 in a league batting race. John Olerud walked in the second inning before leaving with a .363 batting average; Paul Molitor closed at .332 and Roberto Alomar went 3-for-4 with five RBIs to finish with a career-high .326, one point better than Cleveland's Kenny Lofton.

The last trio to accomplish the feat was on the 1983 Philadelphia Phillies: Billy Hamilton (.380), Sam Thompson (.370) and Ed Delahanty (.368).

Toronto moves on to Chicago for Tuesday's opener of the American League playoffs against the White Sox. The Blue Jays bring a 17-4 streak into the series.

Brewers 6, Red Sox 3 (14 innings)

BOSTON — After 161 games and nine innings, Boston and Milwaukee still were not ready to end the season.

It took them five tedious innings more, with the Brewers winning 6-3 in 14 innings Sunday. The game featured five double plays, 45 players, 13 pitchers, 24 strikeouts and 15 walks.

The Red Sox ended the season with six straight losses, all at home. They led the AL East in late July, but lost 33 of their last 50 games to finish fifth. They lost 23 of their final 30 home games.

Boston (80-82) has had consecutive losing seasons for the first time since 1965-66. This season was just the fourth time in 27 years the Red Sox have finished below .500.

Milwaukee (69-93) finished last for the first time since 1984 and the fifth time in club history.

White Sox 4, Indians 0

CLEVELAND (AP) — A third straight sellout crowd celebrated the end of an era at Cleveland Stadium on Sunday by watching the Indians do what they have done so well for more than a generation: Lose.

Chicago, tuning up for Tuesday's playoff opener against Toronto, beat the Indians 4-0 as Jason Bere pitched seven shutout innings for a three-game sweep of the final baseball series at the stadium.

The series drew a major-league record 216,904 fans — more than 72,000 per game. Jose DeLeon struck out Mark Lewis for the final out the game and the ball park.

The Indians will move to a new, 42,000-seat park about a mile away next year. They played 4,197 games at Cleveland Stadium since losing the stadium opener 1-0 to Lefty Grove and the Philadelphia Athletics on July 31, 1932.

Mel Harder, the losing pitcher that day, was on hand to throw out the ceremonial last pitch following Sunday's game.

"I never realized I'd be back here to throw out the last pitch," said Harder, 83, who was 22 when he pitched the 1932 game. "If somebody had told me I would, I'd have thought that they were crazy."

Frank Thomas returned to the White Sox' lineup as a designated hitter, his first appearance since last Monday, and drove in two runs with a double and a single. His 128 RBIs left him second in the American League to Cleveland's Albert Belle, who drove in 129.

Thomas walked on five pitches with a runner at first his last time up. He flipped his bat away disgustedly, to loud cheers from Belle's supporters in the crowd.

Thomas, also Chicago's home run leader with 41, has been bothered by a bruised left arm since banging into the fence at Oakland on Sept. 19.

Bere (12-5) won his seventh straight game, giving up six hits, walking two and striking out two. Over the seven-game span, Bere had an ERA of 1.66.

Tim Belcher pitched the eighth, his first relief appearance in 12 games for the White Sox, and DeLeon finished up.

Yankees 2, Tigers 1

NEW YORK — Mike Stanley's one-out single scored pinch runner Spike Owen from second base with the winning run, allowing New York to close the season with a victory over Detroit.

Tom Bolton (6-6) hit Jim Leyritz with a pitch with one out and Owen came on to run. With Danny Tartabull at bat, Bolton threw a wild pitch and Owen went to second. Tartabull was walked intentionally and Stanley delivered his winning single.

Bobby Munoz (3-3), the fourth pitcher used by the Yankees, was the winner. He retired all six batters over the final two innings, striking out two.

The Yankees took a 1-0 lead when Pat Kelly singled with one out in the second, stole second and scored on Bernie Williams' single.

The Tigers tied it in the seventh when Alan Trammell led off with a walk, took third on consecutive singles and scored on Bob Wickman's walk to Skeeter Barnes.

Twins 7, Mariners 2

MINNEAPOLIS — For one game, Minnesota returned to 1991.

Kent Hrbek drove in four runs with two homers, Kirby Puckett homered and Kevin Tapani allowed six hits over 7 1-3 innings as the Twins took some of the sting out of a poor season by ending with a victory over Seattle.

Despite the victory, the Twins (71-91) finished their worst season since 1986.

The loss prevented Seattle (82-80) from matching its franchise-best record of two years ago.

Tapani (12-15), who in 1991 went 16-9 and helped the Twins win the World Series, continued to pitch well in the second half of '93. He was 9-4 with a 3.12 ERA in his 16 outings since the All-Star break after a 3-11, 5.79 start.

Tapani struck out seven and walked none. He retired the first 11 batters before Ken Griffey Jr. doubled. He had a shutout until the seventh, when Jay Buhner and Dann Howitt had successive RBI doubles.

Before that, the Twins had built a 4-0 lead against Tim Leary (11-9).

Angels 7, Athletics 3

OAKLAND, Calif. — Mark Langston pitched seven strong innings and notched his 2,000th career strikeout as California recorded a victory over Oakland, who went from AL West division champions in 1992 to a last-place finish in 1993.

The last team to win a division title one year and finish last the next was California, which won the AL West in 1986 but tied for last in 1987.

Langston (16-11) ended a personal five-game losing streak, striking out eight, walking two and giving up eight hits. He fanned Kurt Abbott leading off the seventh for his 2,000th career strikeout, then got one more to finish the season with 2,001.

RYAN: Hall of Famers hang 'em up

From 1C

"With as great a hitter as George was, I think it was only appropriate that he ended his career with a hit," said Ryan, who gave up 29 hits to Brett but struck him out 18 times. "He's a real special ballplayer and person."

The two may see each other game over the next few years, but they'll definitely be reunited in Cooperstown, N.Y., during the summer of 1999 for their induction into the Hall of Fame.

"I'd love it if it worked out that way," the always-humble Ryan said. "I don't think there's any doubt George is going to be inducted and I hope it works out that way for me."

The day was less emotional for the all-time strikeout king than it was for Brett. Ryan bid farewell to the Texas fans and to baseball this season, having announced his retirement before spring training.

He was honored late last month with Nolan Ryan Appreciation Week and Nolan Ryan Day, which wound up being his last start at home. His career ended Sept. 22 in Seattle when he tore a ligament in his historic right arm.

Brett said he's known this would be his last game for months, but he waited until last weekend to make it official because he didn't want to go through goodbye ceremonies in every city like Ryan endured.

Brett would've liked to have ended his career in Kansas City, the only city he played his 20-year career in, or Los Angeles, his hometown, but Arlington was a fine third choice.

"The fans have always been very nice to me here," said Brett, who hasn't been nice to Rangers pitcher. He's the all-time leader for a Texas opponent in at-bats, hits and RBIs and he's second to Reggie Jackson in home runs.

Ryan soon will mosey down south to his ranch in Alvin to begin the rest of his life, which will include some undisclosed duties with the Rangers.

Brett, who will become a Royals vice president, said he'll stay and shape and will be at spring training to hit fungoes and throw batting practice.

But he made it clear he doesn't plan to step into the cage for a few cuts.

"I don't EVER want to swing a bat again. Never," Brett said, pausing to laugh and add with a smile, "Except for an old-timers game at Kansas City.

"My hands hurt too much. I don't wear batting gloves so I have too many cuts, callouses and blisters. There will probably come a time where I'll want to, but as of now, not right now. I've had enough."

Cunningham out for year as Eagles remain unbeaten

Associated Press

■ NFL Roundup

Randall Cunningham and Joe Montana, two of the NFL's marquee quarterbacks, were knocked out of games Sunday — although you couldn't tell it by the final scores.

Cunningham broke his left leg in the Philadelphia Eagles' 35-30 comeback victory over the New York Jets. He will be sidelined eight to 10 weeks and may need surgery. Cunningham missed virtually all of the 1991 season with torn knee ligaments.

Montana was felled by a strained left hamstring in the second quarter, but the Kansas City Chiefs went on to defeat the Los Angeles Raiders 24-9. Montana, who missed the second game of the season with a wrist injury, was limping badly after the game and his status is uncertain for next week.

Seattle quarterback Rick Mirer also took his lumps, sidelined with a sprained left ankle in the last 21 seconds of the first half. After Dan McGwire threw for a touchdown before halftime, Mirer returned and led the Seahawks past San Diego 31-14 for their third straight victory.

Elsewhere in the NFL's fifth week, it was Denver 35, Indianapolis 13; New Orleans 37, the Los Angeles Rams 6; San Francisco 38, Minnesota 19; Chicago 6, Atlanta 0; and Buffalo 17, New York Giants 14.

Cincinnati, Cleveland, Houston, Pittsburgh, New England and Phoenix had the weekend off. Washington plays at Miami tonight.

Eagles 35, Jets 30

Eagles backup Bubby Brister rallied Philadelphia from a two-touchdown deficit. Eric Allen raced 94 yards with an interception for the winning touchdown. When he got to the end zone, he slapped hands with Cunningham, who was on crutches in the runway leading to the dressing room.

Cunningham was injured in the second quarter when he appeared to take a mis-step and then was hit by Marvin Washington and Scott Mercereau.

Chiefs 24, Raiders 9

Montana was hurt as he ran for the sidelines against the Raiders. Aaron Wallace, who hit the quarterback, drew a 15-yard penalty — one of 16 against the Raiders.

"It was a cheap shot," said defensive end Neil Smith, who had four sacks. "It was out of bounds. You get fired up when you see your quarterback on the ground and he doesn't get up."

Said Montana: "They say it happened when he grabbed me but I don't remember. All I know is right before I got to the sideline, just as I was going out of bounds, I felt it go. It was a little pop."

Buccaneers 27, Lions 10

The Tampa Bay Bucs awakened from a season-long snooze on offense to stun Detroit 27-10. Reggie Cobb ran for 113 yards — seven more than the Bucs had gained on the ground in their first three games.

Tampa Bay seemed on its way to another dreary Sunday, trailing 10-0. Then the Bucs got a 52-yard field goal from Michael Husted on the final play of the first half. They scored three third-period touchdowns and wound up with as many points in one game against the Lions as they had managed in three previous losses against Kansas City, the New York Giants and Chicago.

"Patience is a tough attribute to hang on to," coach Sam Wyche said. "We knew that this was a better team than our record suggests. We're a better team than we've played so far. We hadn't played the way that I knew that they were going to."

Seahawks 31, Chargers 14

Mirer was tackled by Junior Seau in the last minute of the first half and then watched from the sidelines as McGwire threw a TD pass. When the second half began, Mirer was back to complete a 25-for-40 day for 282 yards. He threw for one touchdown and ran for another.

Bears 6, Falcons 0

Kevin Butler accounted for all of the points in Chicago's victory over winless Atlanta, kicking field goals of 52 and 48 yards. It was the sixth time this season a team has won without benefit of a touchdown.

Saints 37, Rams 6

New Orleans pushed its record to 5-0 as Wade Wilson threw two touchdown passes in a rout of the Los Angeles Rams. Morten Andersen kicked three field goals for the Saints.

49ers 38, Vikings 19

San Francisco's offense stuttered against Minnesota but defense and special teams bailed out the 49ers against Minnesota. Dexter Carter returned a punt 72 yards for one touchdown and Eric Davis returned an interception 41 yards for another.

Broncos 35, Colts 13

Denver ended Indianapolis' four-game road winning streak — longest in the NFL — as John Elway threw two TD passes. The Broncos have won 19 of their last 21 games in Mile High Stadium and are 96-30 at home since 1977.

Bills 17, Giants 14

Jim Kelly's 8-yard touchdown pass to Pete Metzelaars with 2:27 left gave the Bills the victory on a night when New York was hurt by four turnovers. Both Kelly, 14-of-24 for 142 yards, and Phil Simms, 12-of-28 for 160, were hampered by a wind that gusted up to 30 miles an hour.

Wallace outruns Earnhardt for checkered flag

■ Holly Farms 400

NORTH WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — Rusty Wallace gained a little more ground on Winston Cup points leader Dale Earnhardt, taking the lead with 100 laps to go Sunday and holding on to win the Tyson Holly Farms 400.

Wallace took 10 more points off a deficit which, in the middle of August was 324. He now trails Earnhardt, a five-time NASCAR driving champion, by 72 points — 3,877-3,805 — with four races left this season.

It was in 1989 that Wallace came to North Wilkesboro Speedway trailing Earnhardt by 75 points. Wallace overtook Earnhardt and won the championship by 12 points.

The only obstacles between Wallace and his eighth victory this season was slower traffic. At one point, he squeezed his Pontiac between two cars in turn two to keep his edge.

Earnhardt, who usually doesn't back off from challenges, had to that time. Wallace maintained his momentum, and Earnhardt spent the rest of the cloudless afternoon in futile pursuit in his Chevrolet.

Polesitter Ernie Irvan was third in his Ford. Kyle Petty, who set an early pace but faltered in his Pontiac, finished fourth. Ricky Rudd, who in his Chevrolet was on the front row with Irvan, was fifth — a lap down.

While Wallace stayed near the front of the pack for the first 200 laps, Earnhardt lingered in the background, almost appearing to lose ground with every turn around the .625-mile oval.

At lap 223, Earnhardt missed his first chance to get ahead despite going high in the fourth turn to get around Wallace. Fifteen laps later, Earnhardt got another, and seized the lead.

Both drivers pitted for fuel and tires on lap 292, and seven laps later, Wallace would overtake Earnhardt on the backstretch and beat him back to the stripe.

With each lap, fans of both Earnhardt and Wallace would hold up either two fingers or three, showing their support for their favorite drivers.

COWBOYS: Dallas kicker equals record

From 1C

A 66-yard Aikman to Alvin Harper pass positioned the Cowboys for another 19-yard chip shot. Smith was stopped short again at the 1.

A 50-yard Murray field goal and Smith's scoring run put the Cowboys up 26-7 before Green Bay's Robert Brooks made the most exciting play of the game, a 95-yard kickoff return for a touchdown.

Then Murray got a piece of the Dallas record with a booming 48-yard field goal to make it 29-14.

Dallas is Murray's fifth NFL stop. He also kicked for Detroit, Kansas City, Tampa Bay, and Phoenix.

He has had one other five field goal game and it was against Green Bay. Murray kicked five field goals against the Packers for the Lions in 1980.

"The Cowboys just busted us good," said Green Bay defensive end Reggie White.

From 1C

mained No. 5 after beating Mississippi State 38-24.

Ohio State moved up one spot to No. 6 after routing Northwestern 51-3, while idle Nebraska fell one notch to No. 7.

Penn State rose one place to No. 8 by mauling Maryland 70-7, and Michigan slipped one spot to No. 9 after beating Iowa 24-7. Rounding out the Top 10 was Oklahoma, which downed Iowa State 24-7.

Tennessee was 11th, followed by Arizona, Washington, Texas A&M, North Carolina, California, Louisville, Virginia, BYU, Colorado, Wisconsin, Auburn, Syracuse, West Virginia and UCLA.

UCLA (2-2) broke into the Top 25 for the first time this season after beating San Diego State 52-13 Thursday.

North Carolina State (2-2), No. 24 last week, dropped out of the poll after losing to Clemson 20-14. Syracuse (3-1-1) plunged 10 spots after falling to Boston College 33-29.

Tracy continues hot streak with Mikita win

■ Mikita 300

MONTEREY, Calif. (AP) — Paul Tracy overcame loose seat belts and a strong challenge from Penske teammate Emerson Fittipaldi to win Sunday's Makita 300 at Laguna Seca Raceway.

Nigel Mansell, who clinched the title two weeks earlier, had an unhappy finish to a great season, injuring his right wrist in a crash with rookie Mark Smith late in the race.

Tracy, a 24-year-old Canadian in his first full season of Indy car racing, posted his fifth victory of the season.

The victory enabled Tracy to finish third in the standings, behind Mansell and Fittipaldi.

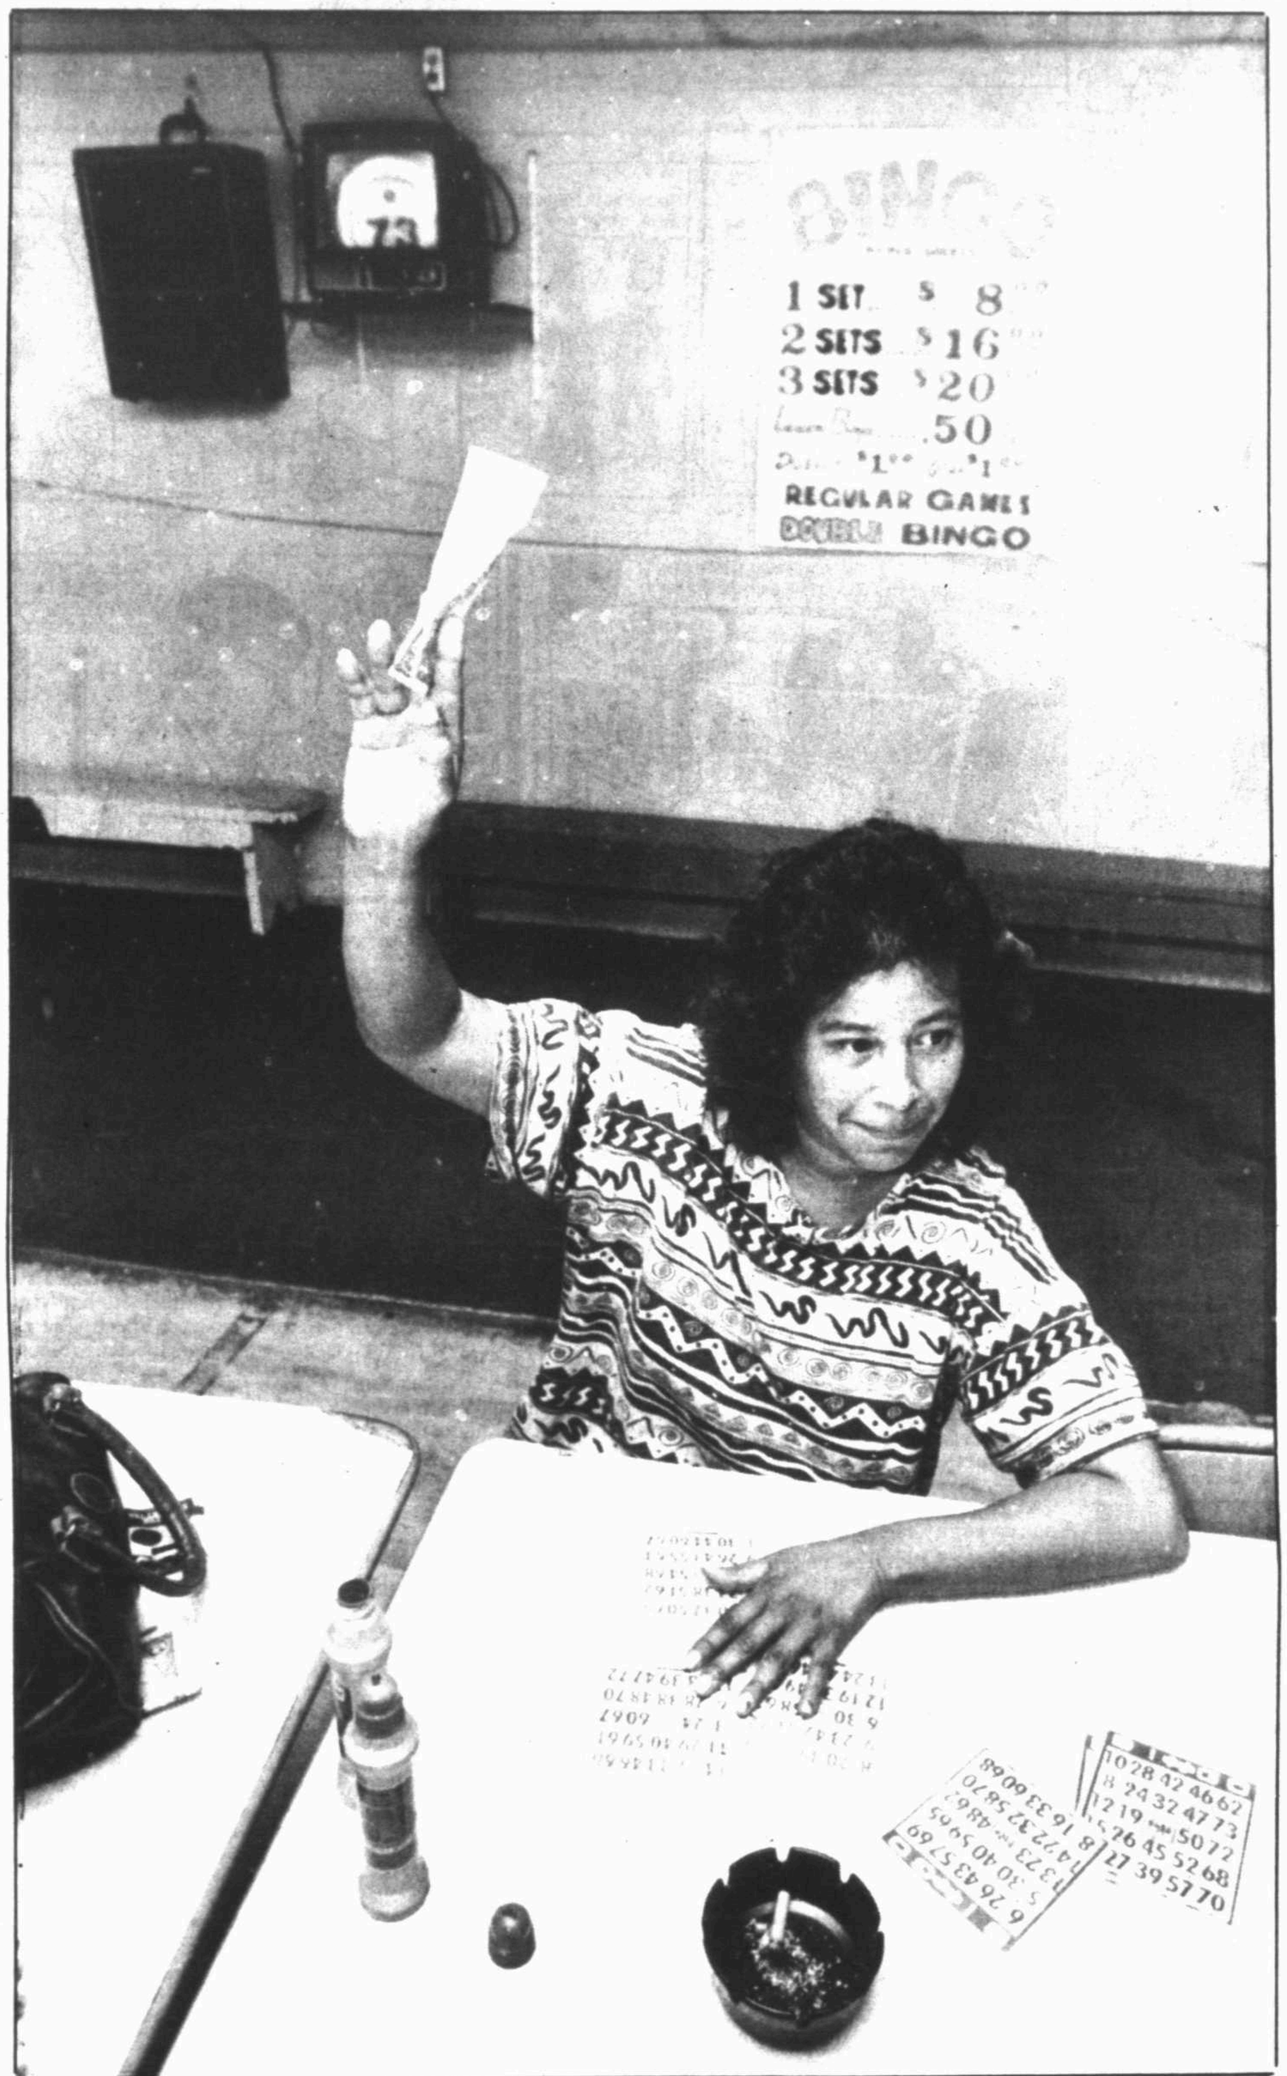
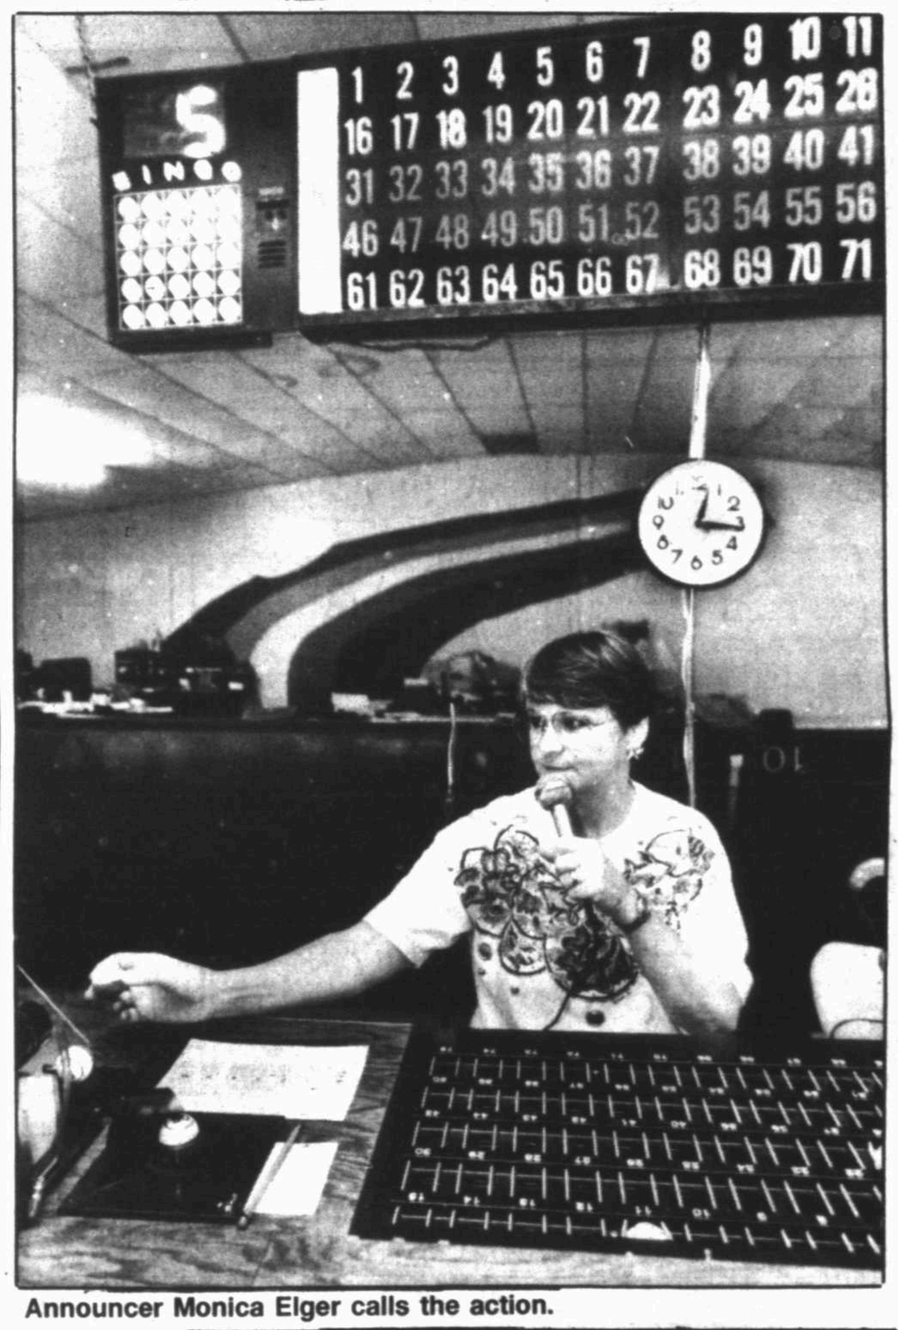
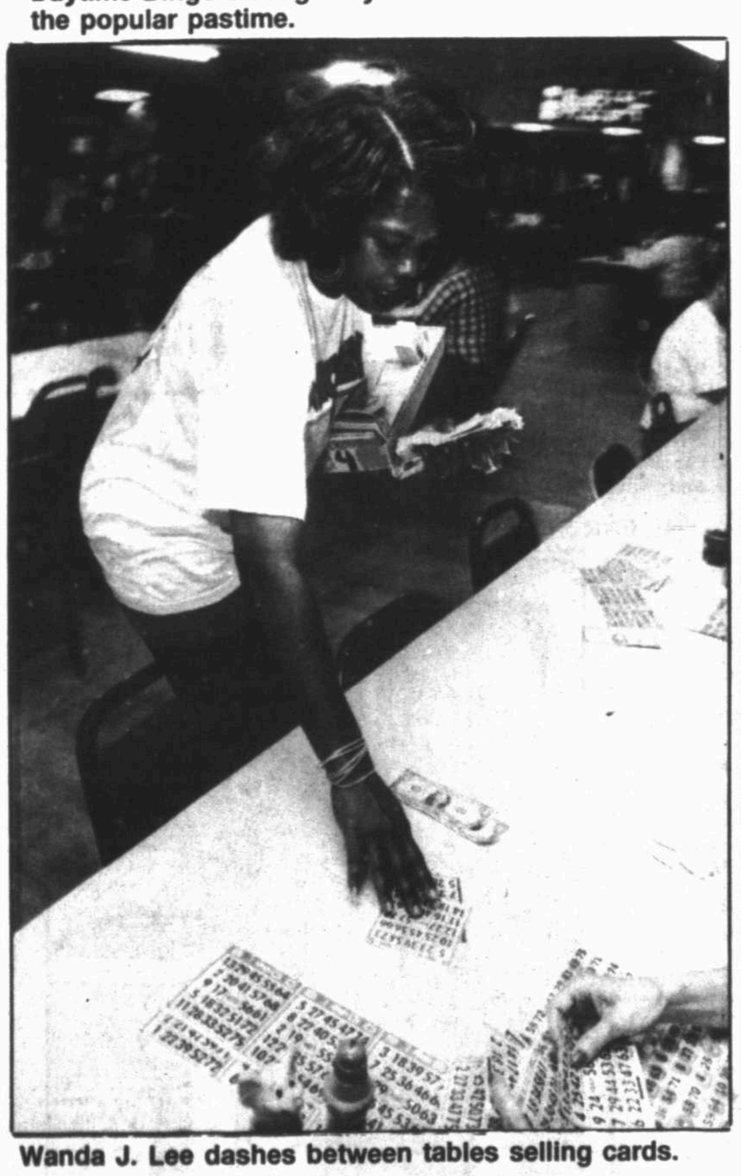
BINGO BONANZA



Tavita Mendoza holds dollar bills aloft to purchase more cards during an afternoon session at Daytime Bingo on Highway 80. The hall is one of several locations in the Permian Basin that offer the popular pastime.



Announcer Monica Elger calls the action.



Wanda J. Lee dashes between tables selling cards.

For Ethel Cook, the joy of anticipation is everything in playing bingo.

That's because she enjoys nearly winning as much as she does actually winning.

"It gets kind of exciting when you get down to one or two (numbers) to go," said the retired Midlander, who plays with her husband, L.D., and other members of her family.

"We can hardly wait to start another game. Win, lose or draw, we just love it."

The Cooks are part of the eager crowds who play at Daytime Bingo, a spacious hall just off Highway 80 in southwest Midland. Here, seasoned players mix with amateurs for two-hour afternoon sessions of blackout, bonanza and double bingo for payoffs that can be as much as $500.

Daytime Bingo's organizers agree that most participants are like Ethel Cook in that they enjoy playing bingo for fun and are not concerned solely with winning.

"Any gambling you do, you want to win," said Sandra Forward, a cashier. "But most people do it for the relaxation."

Numbered bingo balls are kept circulating by blown air during a game.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

MONDAY, OCTOBER 4, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Unexpected developments could turn your life around. Take a more positive approach to a job hunt. A new sense of hope will bring family members closer together in December. Early in 1994, a stroke of good luck turns a financial deal to your advantage. Real estate investments are favored next spring. Consult with trusted professionals before making far-reaching decisions.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actors Charlton Heston amd Armand Assante, actress Susan Sarandon, novelist Jackie Collins.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your creativity really comes alive this week. Use your original ideas to move forward. Set up a work schedule and stick to it. Secret transactions may help you overcome an obstacle.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Teamwork produces the kind of results that have eluded you recently. Someone bright and amusing could turn romance around. A sense of obligation pulls you in several directions. Follow your heart.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Pay close attention to detail. Your impatience with old methods and customs could cause a confrontation with your partner or mate. Avoid those who like to chatter; zero in on work.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Important business negotiations could make travel necessary. Your mate or partner will understand, following a candid conversation. Investments are likely to bring in better returns.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Will power and a sharp analytical mind are not enough today. When setting priorities, put a premium on love. Original ideas should be discussed only with people directly involved in implementing them.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your hopes and dreams could become a reality, thanks to something that happens today or tomorrow. Keep your eyes and ears open. An old friend's sage comments give you food for thought.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Emotion may cloud your judgment where finance or romance is concerned. Good organizational skills will help you straighten things out. Heed your hunches but check with a trusted adviser.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Recognition for your good work comes from peers or VIPs. Your methods clearly boost productivity. Look for larger financial rewards in the near future. Music has a soothing effect.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. -22-Dec. 21): A domestic situation needs attention early today. Make certain you get all the facts and figures. Expressing your affection to a partner will bring a touching response.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You complete a project with flair, utilizing skills or funds wisely. A new work task could bring you unseen benefits. The money you spend on fitness begins to pay off. Your self-confidence grows.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your warmth beams through and attracts favor. Festivities set the stage for romance. Play to an important audience today and you will win rave reviews. Faith in future success boosts your morale.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You could become involved in too many things for your own good today. Delegate some of the work before you paint yourself into a corner. Your mate or partner is unusually supportive.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ8742 ♡J ◇A7 ♣KQ84
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—With a minimum opening bid, you would rebid two spades to show your six-card suit. This hand is considerably better than that and you should describe it by first rebidding two clubs, intending to bid spades a second time at your next turn.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠63 ♡Q109642 ◇J43 ♣K6
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—Your hand may not be worth much to partner at a spade contract should you take a preference to that suit. However, if partner has even two hearts, you might do quite well at a heart contract. Bid two hearts.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K105 ♡Q42 ◇A10542 ♣94
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—You can't afford to bid two diamonds—since you are a passed hand that is not forcing and partner might pass, leaving the spade fit undiscovered. Although a raise to two spades does not do this hand full justice, we feel it is the most descriptive bid.

Q.4—North-South vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK ♡109742 ◇QJ74 ◇A4
Your right-hand opponent opens one club. What action do you take?
A.—What an ugly hand! Your prime values are in your short suits, but if you don't act now you might be faced with even more difficult problems later. Overcall one heart.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠J1032 ♡Q932 ◇J92 ♣K7
Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What action do you take?
A.—You don't have the values for game, even if partner is maximum, and with your balanced hand there's no need to check on the possibility of a 4-4 major-suit fit. Pass.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A ♡Q64 ◇AQJ853 ♣A53
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one heart. What do you bid now?
A.—It's simply a matter of whether you are good enough to double first and then bid diamonds, or whether you should content yourself with a simple overcall. We don't think you can make game, unless partner has enough to act voluntarily, so we would opt for the conservative two diamonds.

Stormin' Norman, Newman plan bivouac for seriously ill children

ORLANDO, Fla. — Retired Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf said his memories of summer camp convinced him every child should have a chance to go to camp, even if seriously ill.

Schwarzkopf announced Saturday he has joined Paul Newman in founding a 125-acre bivouac for boys and girls in Cassia.

"This is very special to me because it involves children," Schwarzkopf said.

Modeled after the Hole in the Wall Gang camp that Newman founded in Ashford, Conn., the Lake County facility will be called the Boggy Creek Gang.

It will be designed for seriously ill children whose medical needs usually force them to stay at home. Attendance will be free.

Newman has pledged $1 million to the Boggy Creek Gang. The camp will cost $15 million and have 40 buildings, including 16 camper cabins, a theater, a farm, a nature center, a dining hall and recreational buildings.

The land was donated by the Walt Disney Cancer Institute at Florida Hospital. Groundbreaking is set for February, and the first campers should arrive in 1995.

The camp will have a medical center providing chemotherapy, blood transfusions and other services. On-site doctors and equipment will enable ill children to attend, Schwarzkopf said.

"These children come in there, and they're not different," Schwarzkopf said. "If they were to go to a normal camp, they'd probably stand out like a sore thumb."

MADISON, Wis. — Cindy Crawford joined about 650 cancer patients and their families to honor the 20th anniversary of the hospital where her late brother was treated for leukemia in the 1970s.

Crawford

"It was a significant event in my life," Crawford said Saturday at the University of Wisconsin-Madison Comprehensive Cancer Center, referring to her younger brother Jeff's battle with cancer. He died in 1975.

The model and wife of actor Richard Gere has donated more than $100,000 from the sale of her swimsuit calendars to the center.

"When my brother was sick there weren't survivors," Crawford says, noting rapid scientific gains in cancer treatment. "It makes you not quite so depressed about (finding a cure for) things like AIDS."

NEW YORK — Spike Lee and Washington attorney Tanya Lynette Lewis did the right thing over the weekend.

Guests at their wedding Saturday included Bill Cosby and Denzel Washington. Stevie Wonder and the Boys Choir of Harlem helped provide music.

The New York Daily News said the film director met his bride, a Connecticut native, in Washington last year while attending the annual Congressional Black Caucus meeting.

A call to Lee's studio seeking details of the ceremony at Riverside Church was not returned.

Among celebrities in attendance were director John Singleton, actor Ossie Davis, former football star Ahmad Rashad and his wife, actress Phylicia Rashad, and basketball star Patrick Ewing.

Lee, who also takes acting roles in his movies, is the director of such films as "Malcolm X," "Jungle Fever" and "Do the Right Thing."

RICHMOND, Va. — Muhammad Ali made a pitch for donations to help Iraqi children injured in the Persian Gulf War.

The former heavyweight boxing champion attracted about 200 people to a $50-a-plate charity dinner Saturday.

"I spent two months in Iran and Iraq this past spring and summer trying to bring about a peaceful solution to the hostage situation," Ali said. "Therefore, I . . . know the tragedies and hardships that Iraqi children face daily and have seen the suffering first-hand."

Ali, 51, whose motor skills are slowed by Parkinson's disease, heads the Richmond Committee to Save the Children of Iraq. Earlier Saturday, he met with local students.

"It's important to do the best you can in school," he said.

He noted that he was 18 when he won an Olympic gold medal and 22 when he won the world heavyweight championship. Time is short and life is fleeting, he said. "So while you're young, find out what your purpose is."

SANTA FE, N.M. — Walkers in a weekend march to raise money for AIDS research got a pep talk from actress Ali MacGraw.

"If we don't reach out and care for each other, we may as well all be dead," said MacGraw, 55, the star of "Goodbye, Columbus" and "Love Story."

About 2,500 participants in the 3rd annual AIDS Walk Santa Fe on Saturday went on to raise an estimated $167,000.

"It means Santa Fe cares," said organizer Lynn Shepodd said. "It means there's a growing awareness and compassion in this community for HIV-infected victims."

National Businesswomen's Week
October 18-24, 1993

PHOTO

(Sample of ad)

Join us in honoring our area business women! If you know a special woman worthy of recognition for a job well done, (or if you ARE ONE YOURSELF) let us and the rest of Midland know about her.

On Sunday, October 17th, we will feature photos and biographical information of some of Midland's most successful women. It's something you will want to be a part of!

To make sure you or that special business woman you know is included in this year's section, simply provide the information needed below and send it in by Thursday, Oct. 14th.

A special time will be designated to take photos of those women who may need a more current one for this feature.

National Businesswomen's Week October 18-24, 1993

PHOTO

(Sample of ad)

Join us in honoring our area business women! If you know a special woman worthy of recognition for a job well done, (or if you ARE ONE YOURSELF) let us and the rest of Midland know about her.

On Sunday, October 17th, we will feature photos and biographical information of some of Midland's most successful women. It's something you will want to be a part of!

To make sure you or that special business woman you know is included in this year's section, simply provide the information needed below and send it in by Thursday, Oct. 14th.

A special time will be designated to take photos of those women who may need a more current one for this feature.
