Proposition would provide pollution control exemption

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third of a 15-part daily series looking at the pros and cons of 16 proposed constitutional amendments.

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Proposition 2 on the Nov. 2 ballot would allow property-tax exemptions for certain pollution control devices that would be taxed for the first time next year.

It's a pro-business issue described as a job saver that's backed by the Texas Chamber of Commerce. The Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce board is considering endorsement of it. A workshop last week indicates the local board backs it 11-1.

"It's in our best interest to endorse this wholeheartedly," said board member Jim Weaver.

One question raised was whether it's fair to businesses that have already started installing pollution abatement equipment, since that equipment would not qualify. But Jeff Morris, manager of the local Fina Inc. refinery, which has spent millions to meet federal pollution mandates since 1990, fully endorses it.

"I fear for other businesses that are not as financially strong as we are," said Morris, also a chamber board member.

Also questioned is the possible loss of property taxes or a shifting of taxes to homeowners. Board member Conrad Alexander, director of the VA Medical Center, also said the same logic for tax exemptions could also be applied to other issues like crime.

"I believe that there are other matters that are as important," he said.

Supporters argue, according to the House Research Organization, that less than 1 percent of state property value is tied to pollution abatement, according to a Texas A&M study, but the exemption could be enough to encourage businesses to stay and attract others from 17 states without

3. Relinquishing state interest in disputed land

13. Share funds with Texas State Technical College
14. $1 billion in bonds for more correction facilities similar incentives. That could increase the tax base.

Supporters also say, the study states, that exemptions affect only investments in land and equipment on Jan. 1 or after, and businesses shouldn't be hit with both forced pollution mandates and taxes.

"It's a win-win situation for business, employees and government," said State Rep. David Counts of Knox City. "Proposition 2 preserves jobs, keeps local tax bases strong and promotes a cleaner, safer environment."

Opponents say, according to the research organization, that industrial areas could be hit hard. The Harris County Appraisal District estimates that one-fourth of new industrial construction in that county would be exempted. Because technological obsolescence requires replacement, almost all pollution control devices would eventually be exempt.

City to begin giving tickets in fire lanes

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Parking violation tickets may soon be given to motorists who park inside fire lanes near the Wal-Mart store building or Big Spring Mall.

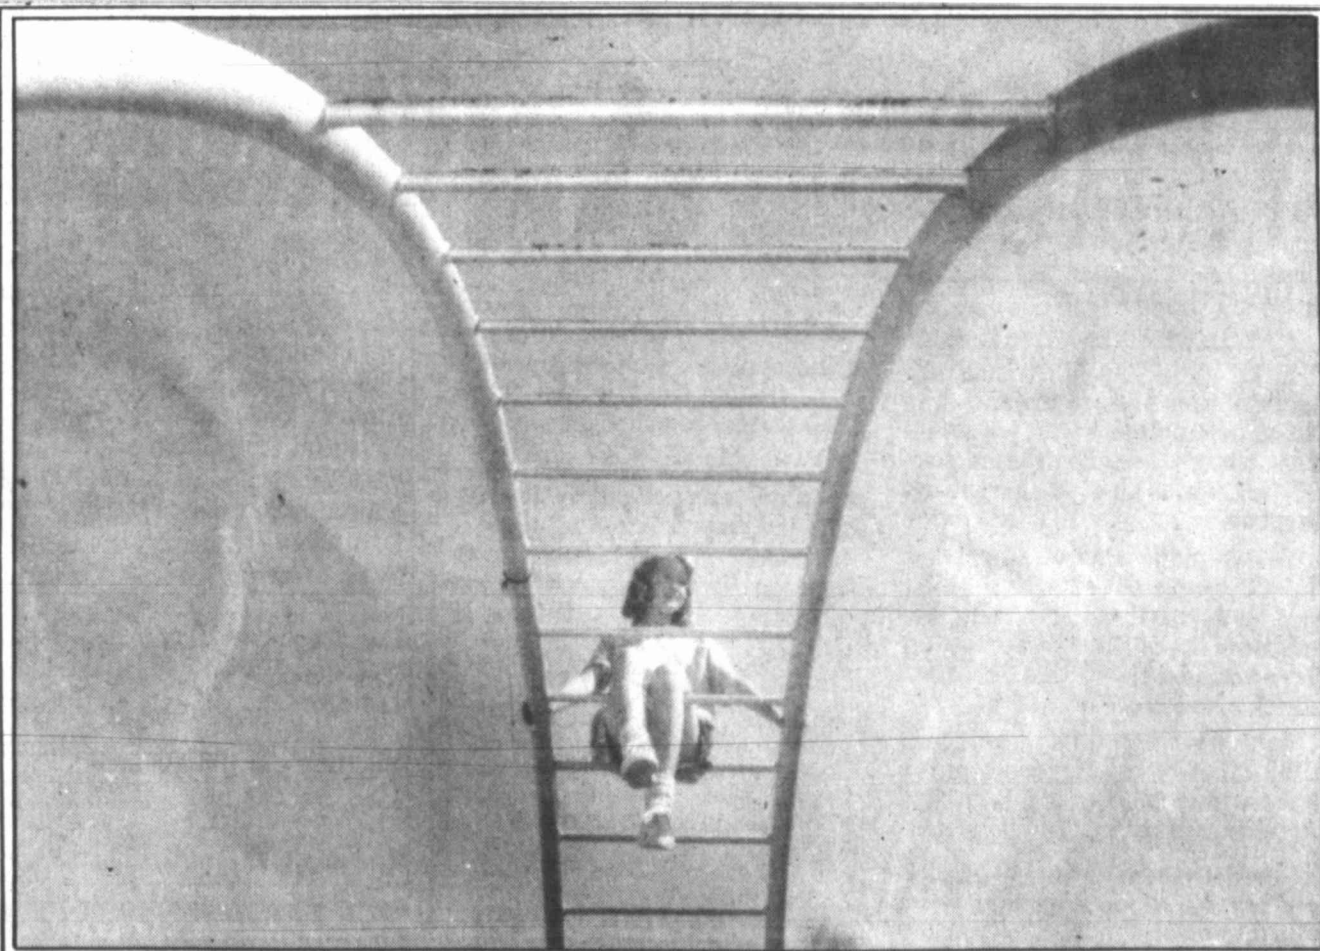

The Big Spring Police Department has permission from the mall to begin issuing tickets Nov. 1, Fire Marshall Burr Lea Settles wrote in a recent letter to City Manager Lanny Lambert. Wal-Mart Stores Inc. is sending a similar letter.

"It is our thought that we will have a short period of time of adjustment, allowing the customers to receive warnings, then as of Nov. 1, 1993, regular citations will be issued," Settles said in the Sept. 28 letter. "The Big Spring Mall had hoped to have this in place before Thanksgiving and the holiday shopping season."

The Big Spring City Council is scheduled to discuss the move tonight. It meets at 5:30 in Building 1106 in Big Spring McMahon-Wrinkle Airpark.

Fire lanes at the mall were repainted bright red and designated as "No Parking-Fire Lane," mall Manager Tammy Watt said in a Sept. 20 letter to Settles. All handicapped ramps and areas on both sides are marked with yellow for 10 minutes loading and unloading.

Wal-Mart this Saturday plans to repaint and stripe the area in front of its building, a spokesperson said.

Hispanic community remembers Vietnam hero

MARTHA E. FLORES
Regional Editor

At age 25, Agustin Chavez Paradez became a hero - hero who died in the service of his country.

Like many other patriotic young men growing up in the 1960s, Paradez at 19 joined the U.S. Army shortly after graduating from high school. He was stationed in Germany for six years before going to Vietnam in 1965 as fighting began to escalate.

He arrived in September, and died two months later during hostile ground action when a metal fragment lodged in his upper back.

Paradez was the first Howard County resident to die in Vietnam.

"Not to lessen the loss for other families, but Vietnam did not become real to me until they brought Agustin's body home," former Big Spring City Council member Pat DeAnda said. "Agustin was my brother's age and I grew up with him."

DeAnda did not want others to forget Paradez's death or that of the other 55,000 who died during the more than 15-year United States presence in Vietnam.

When she was elected to the city council in 1987, DeAnda's first project was to rename NW Fourth Street - the street where Paradez's childhood home is located - to Sgt. Paradez Street.

Paradez family members, DeAnda and neighborhood residents turned out to clean the weedy lots extending from North Gregg Street west to the railway. After the massive clean up and street name change ceremony, participants retired to the Big Spring Boxing Club to indulge in Mexican food dishes prepared by the Paradez family's neighbors.

Wednesday marks the fifth anniversary of the name change.

Agustin's older brother, Guadalupe Paradez and his family were heavily involved with the clean up and were proud to have the street they still live on named after their heroic brother and uncle.

"Agustin was the kind of guy who was happy all the time and got along with everybody," Guadalupe said. "He joined to serve, fight and, if necessary, die for his country, and he did."

Guadalupe has never forgotten the November day an Army sergeant rapped at his parents door to give them the news. "I was on a construction site when he told my

Wealthy districts testify

The Associated Press

AUSTIN — A Carrollton city councilman has testified that a requirement for his property-rich school district to share some local tax money with the state is "a blight on my American dream."

Bernard C. Francis, who took the stand Monday in the second week of a school funding trial, identified himself as African-American for the court record and said he grew up in a disadvantaged situation.

"I was told that if I worked hard, and if I got a proper education, and if I got a good job, then I could buy a nice house somewhere in a nice school district, and with a willingness to pay higher tax dollars, then I would be assured that my kids would have a well-funded ... education," said Francis.

"As far as I'm concerned, I did my part," he said, "and for the state of Texas to come in and pull the rug out from under me does not make me feel very good."

The new public education finance law, which is being challenged by both property-rich and poor school districts, gives the state's 98 wealthiest districts several options for sharing money with the rest of the school system.

If they don't make a choice, they face state action to move property from their tax rolls or to consolidate them with another district. The law is meant to ensure that none of Texas' 1,048 districts has more than $280,000 in property wealth per student.

"I think it's really contrary to free enterprise and really the American way of attempting to improve yourself and provide more for your children," testified Don Sheffield, president of the Carrollton-Farmers Branch Independent School District board.

The superintendent of another property-rich school district, Gary Rotan of Stafford Municipal, said in testimony that residents didn't get anything for the money sent to the state.

State District Judge F. Scott McCown of Austin, who is overseeing the case, interjected, "Except, of course, a well-educated populace."

The funding plan is state lawmakers' attempt to comply with a 1989 Texas Supreme Court order to even out funding available to school districts of differing property wealth. Three previous plans have been ruled unconstitutional.

Houston plans expansion of employee drug testing

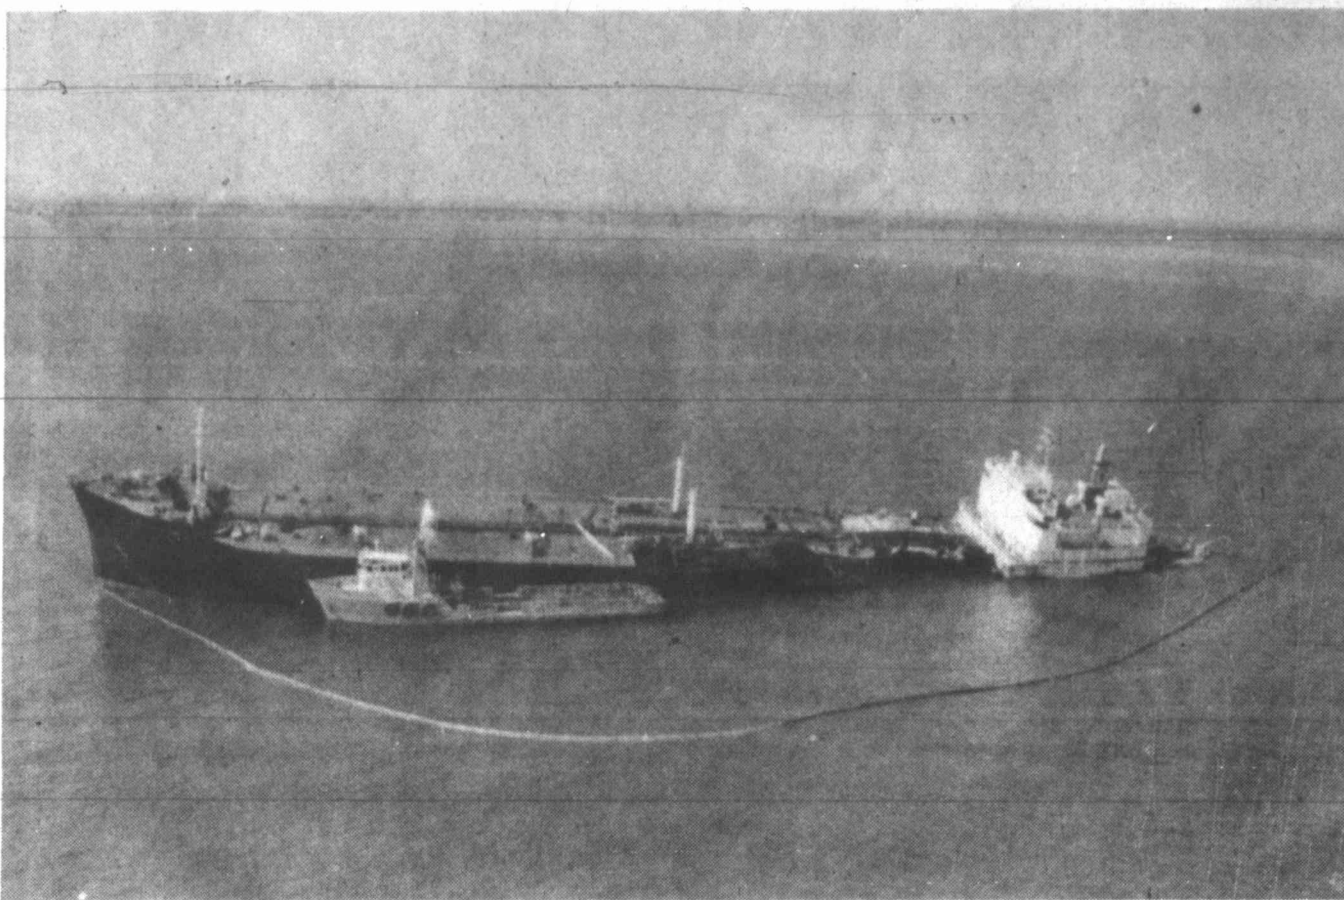

The Associated Press

HOUSTON — City of Houston officials say they plan to expand drug testing of employees and job applicants, citing a declining rate of positive test results since the program's inception.

"We've made a lot of progress in the last couple of years, and I think our drug-testing program has enhanced the quality of the city work force considerably," said Personnel Director Raul Castillo.

Since the program's inception in 1989, 15,931 employees and job seekers have been tested, with 2.98 percent showing positive.

During that first year, 40 employees and 1,594 job applicants were tested, compared with 4,257 employees and 1,836 applicants in the first

The 600-foot gasoline tanker OMI Charger lies Sunday with a giant hole in its side as a result of an explosion and fire that occurred Saturday night near the mouth of the Houston Ship Channel close to Galveston. The cause of the blast, which killed at least two people and left another missing, is under investigation.

Salvage crews study blast crippled tanker

The Associated Press

GALVESTON — Maritime traffic through the Houston Ship Channel is back to its usual busy pace as marine investigators look into what caused twin blasts aboard an empty 600-foot gasoline tanker.

Salvage crews, meanwhile, studied damage on the OMI Charger Monday and considered how to transfer thousands of barrels of fuel without moving or further harming the fire-ravaged tanker.

The ship exploded twice Saturday night less than a mile off Galveston Island. It burned for 5 hours and partially sank in an anchorage area adjacent to the ship channel, forcing officials to close one of the world's busiest waterways for nearly a day.

Lt. Emile Benard, a spokesman for the Coast Guard's Marine Safety Office, said the tanker remained stable on the harbor floor in about 38 feet of water. It leaned slightly to port with its stern on the bottom and its bow in the air.

A joint investigation board made up of the Coast Guard and the National Transportation Safety Board gathered in Galveston Monday to begin looking into the accident, Coast Guard Petty Officer Brandon Brewer said.

Workers examined the tanker for structural damage in anticipation of transferring to a barge some 8,700 barrels, or 365,000 gallons, of the ship's own fuel oil.

Hans Verswijver, whose Houston company Inert Gas Inc. is involved in such work, said crews must ensure the process doesn't disrupt a ship's position in the water.

"They will of course want to pump it out in such a way that the ship doesn't list any more," Verswijver said. "They will have to be very much concerned with the stresses that are on the hull now and the stresses that will be on the hull if they remove the fuel."

New York-based OMI Corp., owner of the ship, said the fuel removal, called "lightering," likely would start today.

Company spokesman Tom Scott said there was little danger of the fuel spilling into the Gulf of Mexico. Protective booms encircled the ship and guarded nearby sensitive marshlands just in case.

"From our standpoint right now I feel the risk is low," Scott said. "There's always the possibility something could happen, but that's something we can't calculate."

Coast Guard officials, who used infrared cameras to check for fuel in the water, said they found none.

Divers studying damage Monday recovered the body of an unidentified crewman missing since Saturday's explosions, bringing the death toll from the accident to three.

Milton Williams, 46, of Beaumont died Saturday night before rescuers could get him to the University of Texas Medical Branch at Galveston. Another body was found along the side of the half-sunken vessel early Sunday and taken to the Galveston Medical Examiner's office.

OMI Corp. released the names of the other two men, both contract employees from Mobile, Ala. They were Keith Kelly, 31, and Roger Dale Boutwell, 20, both welders.

About a dozen of the 35 crew were treated at Galveston hospitals. Only one, Mike Busbee, 45, remained hospitalized, listed in fair condition Monday with second-degree burns to his face, University of Texas Medical Branch spokeswoman Mary Powlledge said.

Although officials said two of the dead crewmen were welding in one of the fuel tanker's below-deck cargo holds at the time of the initial blast, no cause has been established yet.

Staff reprimanded following strip search

BROOKSHIRE (AP) — A strip-search of about 20 students at a Brookshire high school was in violation of school district policies, officials say.

Royal school district trustees voted Monday night to send letters of reprimand to two Royal High School staff members and letters of apology to female students subjected to the search last week.

About 20 females were strip-searched Thursday after a classmate reported she was missing $41.

Reprimanded in the incident will be Assistant Principal Nathaniel Richardson and school nurse Cindy Stasny, who conducted the searches.

Richardson and Ms. Stasny also will have to participate in additional training seminars, said Superintendent James Kemp. Kemp said the search was in violation of district policies.

Landowners battling state over riverbed

AMARILLO (AP) — Some Panhandle property owners want a court decision on where the state can draw a riverbed's boundary line.

State officials say the public still owns the land where the Canadian River used to flow.

But landowners along a 37-mile strip argue that the land is theirs to the Canadian's edge, even though the river isn't as wide as before Sanford Dam was built in 1965.

The squabble has made little headway since the landowners asked a district court in Miami, Texas, to determine the boundary. An Oct. 19 trial date has been postponed.

"Our clients own down to the water, and they don't want to be deprived of that property," said Amarillo attorney Jody Sheets, who represents the landowners in a lawsuit filed in 1989.

Fort Worth considering topless law revisions

FORT WORTH (AP) — John Bellam has been operating his Fort Worth topless dancing club, Showgirl, on a technicality. He's hoping it stays that way.

Bellam's club is in violation of regulations passed by the city in 1987 that bar sexually oriented businesses from operating within 1,000 feet of a residential area.

But because Showgirl was in operation years before the rule took effect, it's been allowed to continue to offer topless dancing.

But that could soon change. The Fort Worth City Council was scheduled today to consider proposed revisions to the rule.

Appeals court rejects 'happy face' claim

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal appeals court has rejected an execution stay request from a Vermont man scheduled to die this week in Texas.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans rejected on Monday Robert Nelson Drew's request for an execution reprieve. The request was made because a state judge had signed Drew's death warrant with a "happy face" as part of the signature.

The appeals court found State District Judge Charles Hearn's use of the smiley face in his sweeping signature has appeared on documents since 1988.

Hearn, 62, who is retired but still handles Harris County cases as a visiting judge, has insisted the inclusion of the happy face in his signature is meant as a symbol of his faith in God, is something he's always used and has no plans to alter it.

Drew, 34, of West Pawlet, Vt., is scheduled for lethal injection early Thursday for the 1983 stabbing death of Jeffrey Mays, 17, of Birmingham, Ala. Mays had given hitchhiker Drew a lift toward Houston from Lake Charles, La. Drew said he was headed from Florida to Oklahoma through Texas to take a carpentry job with an uncle.

Drug czar praises Texas prison system

AUSTIN (AP) — President Clinton's drug czar says he's impressed with Texas' program for providing drug and alcohol treatment for prison inmates to help trim the number of repeat offenders.

"Texas is serving as a model of how to deal with treatment within the criminal justice system. It's something we need to do at all levels — federal as well as state as well as the local level," drug czar Lee Brown said.

Brown, former police chief in Houston and New York City, and Gov. Ann Richards both spoke to a Texas' War on Drugs conference Monday. Brown also visited the New Vision chemical dependency facility at Kyle, south of Austin, where prisoners receive drug treatment.

The state in 1991 decided to build some 14,000 prison beds for drug and alcohol treatment. About 2,600 of those currently are in operation, according to the governor's office. Richards called the program the most extensive in the nation.

The governor said she told Brown that two elements are critical in winning the war on drugs.

Judge dismisses juror in Denny case

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — After eight tumultuous days of deliberations, the jury in the Reginald Denny beating trial is starting all over again without a juror who the others complained couldn't grasp the issues.

Superior Court Judge John Ouderkirk removed the juror on Monday after receiving a note about her from the forewoman.

The woman "cannot comprehend anything that we've been trying to accomplish," the forewoman wrote. She added: "This has nothing to do with her views on issues or her personality. She doesn't use common sense."

The anonymous, sequestered jury is deciding the fate of two black men accused of attacking Denny, a white truck driver.

Deliberations were to resume today.

After receiving complaints earlier about a problem juror, the judge on Saturday gave jurors the rest of the weekend to cool off.

Damian Williams, 20, and Henry Watson, 29, are charged with attempting to murder Denny in 1992 during the riots that broke out after four white policemen were acquitted in state court in the beating of black motorist Rodney King. The defendants could get life in prison.

Meanwhile, the two policemen convicted in federal court of violating King's civil rights, Officer Laurence Powell and Sgt. Stacey Koon, were scheduled to report to prison today to begin their 2-year sentences.

The dismissed juror, who is black,

Superior Court Judge John Ouderkirk confers with lawyers for the defense and prosecution in the Reginald Denny beating trial in Los Angeles Monday morning. Ouderkirk then met with one of the jurors who was then dismissed for "good, legal cause." The juror was replaced and the jury instructed to begin its deliberations all over again.

Arafat to head new Palestinian authority

The Associated Press

TUNIS, Tunisia — A triumphant Yasser Arafat says he will head the Palestinian authority that takes over from the Israelis when they withdraw from the occupied Gaza Strip and West Bank city of Jericho.

The Palestine Liberation Organization chairman late Monday night won endorsement of his peace plan with Israel from the Palestine Central Council.

The 107-member council, which sets Palestinian policy in between sessions of the much larger Palestine National Congress, also authorized Arafat to set up the authority that will take over from the Israelis.

Arafat told reporters that the authority, whose name and function is to be agreed on with the Israelis, will include PLO officials and Palestinians from the occupied territories.

Initially, Arafat pressed for the formation of a provisional government that he would head. But the idea reportedly was rejected by Israel, which told Arafat it violated the Sept. 13 peace accord signed in Washington.

Arafat said a Palestinian committee headed by his close aide Nabil Shaath was authorized by the council to negotiate with Israel the arrangements for the transfer of responsibility. Talks will begin Wednesday in Taba on the Egyptian coast of the Gulf of Aqaba.

The agreement was approved Monday by 63 members of the 107-member council. But the Palestine National Congress, a parliament-in-exile, must still endorse the accord. The PNC has yet to debate the pact.

However, Arafat said the approval of the council is compatible with the endorsement of the Israeli Knesset, and provides enough backing to proceed with negotiations.

Eight council members voted against the accord and nine abstained. The remaining members were absent.

Arafat, however, said he was very pleased with the endorsement by the council, which he called an expression of "the difficult Palestinian democracy."

"There were heated discussions but they were also fruitful and constructive," he said.

The pact gives Palestinians a measure of self-rule in Gaza and Jericho, with their powers to be spread over the rest of the West Bank pending was replaced by a young Asian-American woman drawn by lottery from among the alternates. The jury in the racially volatile case now consists of three blacks, two Asian-Americans, three whites and four Hispanics.

Defense lawyers objected to the juror's removal, which was requested by the prosecution, and asked the judge to declare a mistrial. He refused.

"I absolutely believe that this court has no authority whatsoever to remove this juror," defense attorney Edi Faal said. "There is no evidence of improper conduct or misconduct on the part of this juror."

Deputy District Attorney Janet Moore said the juror was unable to function as a member of the jury.

Michael Brennan, a professor at the University of Southern California Law Center, said the reason for dismissing the juror was unusual. Illness and failure to abide by court instructions are the most common reasons, he said.

"Unless the court goes through some very special procedures, it's dangerous to take the votes of 11 other jurors who say they don't want a particular person on the jury," he said. "It's not a popularity contest."

So one less suffers

A new group is being formed in Big Spring, one that will help victims of crimes — perhaps the most heinous crimes of all.

Court Appointed Special Advocate (CASA) is the name chosen by volunteers organizing the program. The main purpose of this specially trained group of volunteers will be to serve as the eyes and ears of District Judge Bob Moore in child abuse cases.

A crime no child should have to suffer, child abuse is fast becoming an epidemic in Howard, Martin and Glasscock counties, according to CASA organizer Ann Sigmon.

If CASA can help ease the pain of child abuse for one child, the group is well worth the effort it will take to get it going.

About 20 volunteers are needed. They will receive about 35-40 hours of intensive training, as well as schooling in court proceedings, law enforcement, rape crisis and training from police, sheriff and Child Protective Services. Volunteers will also undergo a board review in Austin and a criminal background check. Volunteers can call Jay Shaw at 267-1520 or Sigmon at 263-3726.

What is the life of a child worth? Is it worth undergoing the training and reviews? It should be.

'Who you gonna call' Toothbusters, that's who

Every once in a while, one is reminded of just how doggone good it is to live in communities such as ours.

For yours truly, all it took was a toothache.

Well, make that two teeth aching. Having been blessed with my father's looks, general physique, sense of humor and love of old movies on television — about all I didn't get was being left-handed, a recessive gene my daughter inherited — I guess it's only fitting that I should have been given the same kind of teeth.

But to be honest, I'd have been much happier being left-handed, and received my dental makeup from my mother.

Alas, it was not to be.

Therefore, Herald staffers last week were subjected to a less than happy news editor, who seemed to be doing his best to impersonate a 300-pound gorilla.

That is not my normal persona, and was quickly questioned as to what was causing the rotund one to behave in such an anti-social manner.

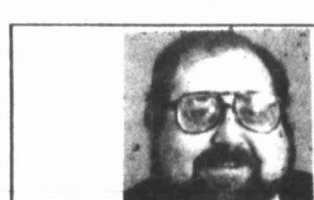

Everyone was sympathetic when told I had four broken teeth, two of which were hurting me mightily.

But it was not until Friday afternoon that staff writer Gary Shanks and NIE coordinator Glenda Cummings voiced the collective attitude that it was time to quit torturing myself and those around me — particularly those around me — and call a dentist.

Who should I call?

Since I'd just come from Friday's meeting of the Greater Big Spring Rotary Club and spent an hour not 15 feet from Dr. Alice Haynes and not bothered to mention my need for dental attention, it seemed only fitting that I call her.

By this time, of course, she was busy teaching her class at Howard College, but a nice young woman informed me that Dr. Haynes would

She did. Was sympathetic to the point of making me feel better having just talked with her on the phone. She also prescribed some medication, and asked if I'd like to be seen that afternoon after she'd finished with her classes.

Being desperate, I said yes ... and I think I added "please," but I might have told her I'd love her for ever ... something to that effect, anyway.

Nothing so serious as tooth pain could be handled without at least a little comedic relief. And sure enough, the right lower molar I told Alice I wanted pulled provided just the same.

Put simply, that tooth, despite my entire lower jaw being well anesthetized, didn't want to come out.

And while Alice may be small, she is certainly powerful enough to extract most teeth, even though at one point it seemed she'd have to stand with one foot on my chest.

To make a long story short, both teeth were pulled and I was on my way 1 1/2 hours later, having made a new friend and acquired a dentist whom I'll now see regularly.

Maybe it wasn't an earth-shattering experience, but let's see someone new to Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston or the like get the same kind of attention within three hours of calling a dentist on his or her afternoon off.

Thanks, Alice Haynes, you're another reason we can call Big Spring special.

Time to cancel the Somalia Show

Mike Royko

Suddenly, droves of congressmen are jumping up to make emotional speeches about Somalia: What the heck are we doing there? When are we going to get out? How did we get into such a mess?

Are they really as dumb as they sound?

Anybody with an ounce and a half of common sense could have predicted that what has just happened — the deaths of American troops — was going to happen.

You didn't have to be a foreign-policy or military expert to know that if you stick around a country like Somalia long enough, bad things will happen.

As some of us pointed out last December, no matter what we did, there could not be a neat, happy ending.

But most congressmen just sat there slack-jawed. Like many Americans, they were reacting to what they had been seeing on TV.

Night after night, we were shown the starving people of famine-plagued Somalia. And we were told about the cruel warlords who were hijacking the food sent in by relief agencies.

Of course, the TV networks might just as well have shown us the starving people of a dozen other miserable countries in that and other parts of the world.

But it happened that the starving people of Somalia were more accessible to camera crews than were the starving people in many other miserable countries.

So in an outburst of do-gooderism, President George Bush sent in troops to assure that the starving people of Somalia would stop starving.

And that made for much happier, inspirational TV fare. American troops landing, Somalis cheering, and the starving people finally getting three squares a day.

But Bush and Congress didn't answer the key question: Then what?

Bush simply said that our troops would be there for only a couple of months or so. Then he vacated the White House and retired to Texas to do whatever ex-presidents do, which isn't much.

Which left President Clinton with the Somalia problem. And he or his advisers recognized the obvious: If we pulled out of Somalia after opening the chow lines, it wouldn't be long before the well-fed people of Somalia were starving again.

That's because the strongest warlords and their thugs would come out of hiding, start hijacking the precious food, and before long, we would turn on our TV sets and see skinny Somalis with swollen bellies.

And Americans would say: Wait a minute, didn't we solve that problem?

So Clinton listened to the big talkers at the United Nations and agreed that we should stay there to disarm bad guys and hunt down the worst of the warlords.

Which put us smack dab in the middle of someone else's civil war. And there aren't many worse places to stick our nose.

Now, we are seeing TV images that to Americans are even more shocking than starving people: the bodies of American troops being dragged through the streets and a battered helicopter pilot taken prisoner by a warlord.

But why is anyone shocked — especially members of Congress, who knew what Somalia was like even before we went in?

They knew that Somalia has no tradition of democracy as we know it — that it is a primitive, nomadic society with a history of feuding families, clans, makeshift governments and anarchy. The rule of law in Somalia has always been decided by who had the most and best weapons.

And with hundreds of thousands of weapons in the hands of Somalis, it is a surprise that our instant approach to gun control didn't work? We can't keep assault weapons out of the hands of American street gangs, but our Washington deep thinkers thought our troops could somehow make Somali warlords act like Eagle Scouts.

And apparently some of them, including President Clinton, still think that can be done.

We're sending in more troops and some tanks and other military vehicles. Presumably, they will act as high-tech police cars, cruising the city of Mogadishu. We still think we can disarm Somalia, capture the meanest warlord, and make Somalia a happy place to live.

We can't. The only way we can impose peace and civility on Somalia is to send in a massive army, engage in a full-blown war, kill or capture the more troublesome Somalis and their leaders, and accept that they will kill as many of our soldiers as they can.

And when the Somali and American blood has been mopped up, we would set up some form of government and hope that it would rule wisely and justly, which it probably wouldn't.

See, the big problem is this: Sure, we are the only great superpower in the world. There isn't any country, big or small, that we could not annihilate if we chose to.

But the Somalis aren't impressed. Their warlords figure that the world's only superpower would have to be nuts to waste a lot of lives and effort to subdue a country that has no meaning or importance to the world's only superpower.

They're right. The TV show is over. Clinton should switch channels.

Biosphere 2

Rather have been where?

Bob Greene

The two-year-long grand experiment that was Biosphere 2 ended last month to decidedly mixed reviews.

Even as the four men and four women marched out of the sealed environment on the Arizona desert where they had lived in glorious isolation since 1991, some critics were blasting the whole project on the basis of traditional academic criteria. "A curious blend of pseudo science and pure hokum," one newspaper called it. "Two years of recycled air and lousy food made Biosphere 2 sound more like an airplane trip from Hell with farm chores."

But reducing the meaning of Biosphere 2 to science misses the point. The original goal of the project was to put the eight men and women in the $150 million glass-and-steel structure and see how they would do as they attempted to produce their own food and to create a self-contained world inside the huge terrarium — which came complete with rain forest, desert, savanna, ocean, farm, as well as 3,800 species of animals and plants.

Some of the scientific self-sufficiency worked as planned, and some didn't, but it seems shortsighted to judge the Biosphere 2 experience using those guidelines. Rather, ask yourself this question:

Given the shape of the real world — the world the rest of us have lived in for the last two years — would you rather have been out here, or inside the Biosphere?

You don't have to look too far to understand that the Biospherians (as the eight men and women were called) almost undoubtedly lived in a better world than the rest of us did. Pick up your morning paper: From Bosnia-Herzegovina to Moscow to South Africa, from Somalia to Miami to the killing streets of Chicago, the so-called civilizations that so-called civilized peoples have built up over the centuries appear to be crumbling, decaying and burning.

If the idea of Biosphere 2 was to see whether the people inside the dome could do as well as those of us outside, the contest seemed to be over almost before it started — and the Biospherians won. There have been reports of irritability and arguments inside Biosphere 2, but there were no crime waves, no drive-by shootings, no murders. (We checked with a Biosphere 2 spokeswoman this week and asked her whether there had been any guns inside the structure. "Absolutely not," she said. "None were allowed." Imagine that: a civilization that acknowledges the inevitability of human conflict, and heads off potential disaster by banishing firearms from the very beginning.)

It's not as if the Biospherians were totally removed from the outside world. Even though they agreed not to venture outside during the two years, and not to allow anyone else in, they had radios, television sets and telephones. At one point during the two years I spoke on the phone with one of the Biospherians, who told me that she regularly watched CNN, and had access to the complete text of USA Today every day on her computer screen. But the news seemed to be coming from another universe. "When I see people walking around outside, I just don't have the desire to be out there with them," she said. "It's very quiet in here. There's no pollution, no traffic noise. ... I'm where I want to be."

The irony of the Biospherians' two-year adventure seems to be that they set out to determine whether they could survive sealed off from the world where the rest of us reside — and we found out that the greater challenge was for the rest of us to survive out here.

Surely, as the eight men and women eventually publish their observations from inside, the details of some of their disagreements will make spicy news sidebars for a day or two. But in the context of the bombings, firefights, daily killings and numbing meanness that the rest of us consider to be civilization, life inside Biosphere 2 seems, in comparison, to be almost heavenly.

Indeed, while the scientific community debates the validity of the experiments conducted inside the structure, it will be surprising if a long line doesn't form at the front entrance of the dome.

For, in a few months, eight more Biospherians will enter the glass-and-steel gates and be locked inside. There must be millions upon millions of Americans who, at least fleetingly, dream to be among them. Florida? Hawaii? The Virgin Islands? All the traditional vacation spots now seem outdated and unsatisfying.

The Great Escape no longer involves travel or resortwear. Biosphere 2 will do just fine. Walk inside, seal the door behind you — and wave goodbye to all of us poor suckers on the outside, adrift in the true wilderness.

Local students prove talent, hard work keys to success in vocal groups

By DEBBIE LINCECUM
Features Editor

When Jaime Falkner was a little girl, her grandmother used to sing to her.

"She'd sing, 'She'll Be Coming Around the Mountain,' and stuff like that," Jaime remembered. "I guess that's where I got my love for singing."

Now a member of the Big Spring High School show choir Rhapsody, Jaime takes singing seriously.

"You have to work hard to be good," agreed Anna Castaneda.

The two joined many other local choir members recently in Odessa, trying out for the all-region choir. That select group, known as the cream of the singing crop in this area, will include 12 Big Spring students this year.

But whether they made it or not, members of Rhapsody remain devoted to their talents. Take Stephanie Green, who has belted out "The Star-Spangled Banner" at Howard College Hawk games.

"I guess I started when I was 3 or 4 (years old)," Green said, adding that, like many, "I started by singing in church."

Same with Karyl Davis, who thinks she sang a solo in church at age 3 - but can't remember too many of the details. Singing runs in her family, Davis says, since her sister was also in Rhapsody.

All members of the show choir had to audition to make that group, too. Some got there still unsure about their singing voice.

"My mom was always telling me I had a good voice," said Sandra Mendez. "But I didn't believe it."

"You need someone to let you know you have a voice," Castaneda added.

Others keep singing despite others' attitudes about it.

"We catch a lot of flak," said Jeremy Smith, a varsity football player and choir member. He and David Foresyth remember practices where a coach would say, "Why don't you go join the choir?" when they didn't tackle hard enough.

"They were kidding, but we'd look at them," David said.

the Air Force choir. At sixth grade, he had to make a choice - band or choir - and he's stuck with singing ever since.

Josh Peters and Ann Marie Scott admit they sing along with the radio. Stephanie Moss prefers classical songs above all others.

This tight-knit group of singers is also a source for a lot of kidding around. Everybody remembers when Chris Ochoa had to wear a Rudolph nose.

Then there was the time Foresyth ate Oreo cookies with salsa. Smith once fell off the stage during a performance. That nine-hour endurance test, the all-region choir auditions, provided a few laughs, too.

But they also have a lot in common.

"Choir is fun with your friends," said Scott.

"Singing is my life," said Moss.

BSHS seniors Viswa Subbaraman, Kevin Stephens and Raygan McCann already have been making preparations for college. Each has taken entrance examinations, applied to the schools of their choice and are awaiting word of acceptance.

Preparation for college begins in high school and the sooner these preparations begin, the better, which is doubly important for those seeking a medical degree.

An enormous paper trail that will follow the student through the high school graduation and into college should begin in the second semester of the junior year, according to Big Spring High School Academic Counselor RueAnn Cox.

Counselors hope to have students take the SAT or ACT entrance examinations during this semester, giving time to retake the test if scores are not adequate.

Three BSHS seniors, who are headed for medical school, are Raygan McCann, Kevin Stephens and Viswa Subbaraman. Each of these students began preparing for the collegiate career early.

"Pretty much everything you do in high school is in preparation for college," said Subbaraman. Indeed, honors classes such as the third year of math and science need preparation in earlier grades, said Cox.

Scores on entrance examinations are important, not only for acceptance into a particular school, but for scholarship money as well. "At Baylor, if you make a certain score on it, you get a certain amount of money per semester," McCann said.

Cox suggests honors and advanced classes for all college-bound students. These include two years of a foreign language, computer science and a fine arts course.

Having taken the SAT or ACT examination in their junior year, McCann, Stephens and Subbaraman have sent letters requesting acceptance to the schools of their choice. Currently, they are in a slow time, waiting for February when universities will begin sending letters to inform students of acceptance, McCann explained.

Subbaraman is waiting to hear from Harvard University or Duke University on his acceptance. Stephens is hoping for acceptance to West Point.

The need for financial aid effects the trio differently. Although a year at Harvard can run more than $30,000, Subbaraman is fairly secure with funding from his family. McCann is hoping for scholarships and other funding sources, whereas Stephens' acceptance into West Point will ensure his schooling is paid for in exchange for a commitment to serve a number of years as an officer and physician in the military.

Once accepted, college-bound students can begin seeking applications, for school funding, filing entrance forms, seeking housing and other paperwork, McCann explained.

For those students wishing to attend Howard College before continuing on to a university, this process is much easier as HC counselors will assist in gathering the correct forms for various applications.

The Howard College Financial Aid office is very, very good about helping our students, no matter where they go," Cox added.

Students fending for themselves to secure scholarship applications, housing information and other necessities would write letters to the colleges of their choice, asking for "everything they can think of," Cox said. Schools will send catalogs, residential information, academic transfer information, and requirements of all majors on campus.

Those students who know what they are going to major in should write a second letter to the whatever department handles their intended major, such as the college of biology, business, etc., Cox explained.

A "college day" is offered to all college-bound seniors at BSHS. This is an excused absence where the student travels to their college of choice to speak with registration officials, financial aid officers and those involved in their major.

BSHS receives a number of "generic" scholarships, but individual universities will have many more, Cox said.

Snooze News

Zzzzzzzz. Why do people snore? Most scientists say it's because they breathe in air through their mouths while they snooze.

But scientist Carole Anderson Travis has her own theory. She thinks snoring is left over from the days when early humans had to protect themselves at night.

Sleeping was dangerous out in the open. So by copying the sounds of meat-eating cats and hyenas, sleeping humans could broadcast throughout the night: "I'm not snoring, I'm roaring!"

What Is Money Made From?

Maybe you didn't know it, but your copper penny isn't solid copper. And your silver dime has no silver at all! Today's coins are made from metal mixtures that are cheaper than solid silver or copper.

Look closely at new dimes, quarters and half dollars. The coins have three layers. The inner layer is copper. The outer layers are three-fourths copper and one-fourth nickel. And pennies are now made with zinc, which is a cheaper metal, and a thin copper coating.

Teddy recovered with letter to editor

By PETER HOWARD
Providence Journal

EAST PROVIDENCE, R.I. — Chloe has her Teddy back!

Three-year-old Chloe Troia of Warren, R.I., thought her bear was a goner when she left him at Chili's Bar & Grill Sept. 23 after lunching with her mom and dad.

Finding her prized possession — given to her by her father the night she was born — didn't involve intense detective work. All it took was a letter to the editor, a little luck and a woman whose personal embarrassment didn't stop her from returning the little guy.

What began as a late afternoon lunch at the popular eating spot near the Seekonk line ended in tragedy. That night, as Chloe was getting changed for bed, she couldn't find her Teddy.

'Oh, shoot, I've taken this little kid's bear.'

Shirley Polaski, collector

A frantic search of Chloe's house in Warren, R.I., failed to turn up a trace of the stuffed grizzly.

Chloe's mom, Marcy, called Chili's. Do you have my daughter's Teddy? Yes, they said, it's right here on the counter.

It was 8 o'clock at night, not too late to rescue the bear. Still in her pajamas, Chloe went with her mom back to the restaurant.

Teddy was gone. An employee told the girl that someone who collects teddy bears had inquired about it. The next thing they knew, the bear was no longer there.

But Shirley Polaski of Rehoboth, Mass., who returned Teddy to the eatery Tuesday afternoon, said employees told her that the bear had been there for days. If she wanted to add it to her collection of nearly 500 teddy bears, go ahead and take it.

"So I took it," Polaski said. "Little did I know it had only been there for four hours."

A week later, a letter to the editor from Chloe's Dad, Daniel, appeared in the Journal-Bulletin asking that the bear be returned, "no questions asked."

Polaski saw the letter. "Oh, shoot, I've taken this little kid's bear," she thought.

Polaski put together a bag with Chloe's Teddy and two new additions in it, along with a letter of apology.

"I'm so sorry you missed your Teddy," the letter begins. "But he wasn't missing, he was visiting friends! And he had so much fun with his new friends that some decided to come and stay with you."

"Your dad was very smart to put his letter in the newspaper, otherwise I would have thought Teddy was a lost bear without a home. All Teddys need a home. I'm glad he's back to you."

"Shirley."

How's Chloe feel? "Good," the little girl said, "because I got my Teddy back."

Ideas for Successful Math Recipes

Cooking Up Good Math

The most important ingredients are:

- many ways to solve problems.
- to be able to explain what you do. Talk or write about how you do it.
- to think logically so your answer makes sense.
- to see how math connects or figures into your everyday life.

The Mini Page asked Rookie Cookie, our cook, to help us explain to kids and their parents more about what is going on in math.

New ways to teach math are being cooked up in classrooms across the country.

To cook up good math habits, according to experts, students should learn strategies to help them think through any math problem.

Most experts say that these strategies, blended with math facts and skills, result in success.

These new math recipes were cooked up by expert math teachers.

These standard ingredients were prepared by the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics.

The Mini Page thanks consultants Dr. Tom Rowan, co-director, project IMPACT, (funded by the National Science Foundation); Dr. Honi Bamberger, math specialist, project IMPACT; Dr. Brenda Hammond and Josepha Robles, math specialists, Montgomery County (Md.) Public Schools.

What to do:

- Use number sense.

I NEED MORE THAN 1 EGG AND LESS THAN 4. TWO WILL DO.

- Estimate.

MY LAST LOAF OF BREAD WAS TOO MOIST. A LITTLE MORE FLOUR WOULD HELP.

- Understand how numbers work.

I NEED 3 CUPS. I PUT IN 2. I NEED 1 MORE.

- Use numbers to add, subtract, multiply, divide.

EACH SANDWICH NEEDS 2 BREAD SLICES. THERE ARE 6 PEOPLE. $6 \times 2 = 12$

- Understand geometry.

I CAN CUT THIS SANDWICH INTO 2 TRIANGLES.

- Measure.

I NEED 300 DEGREES FOR HARD CANDY.

- Collect data and predict outcomes.

THIS WILL BE DONE IN 20 MINUTES.

- Use fractions and decimals.

THIS SALAD NEEDS $\frac{2}{3}$ OF AN APPLE.

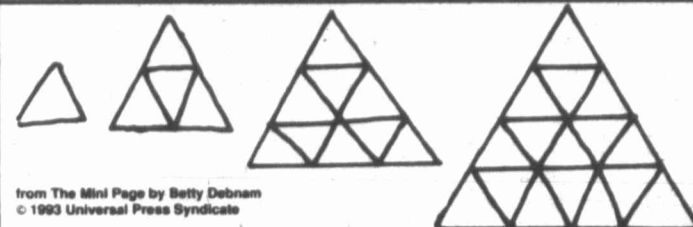

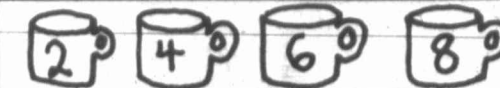

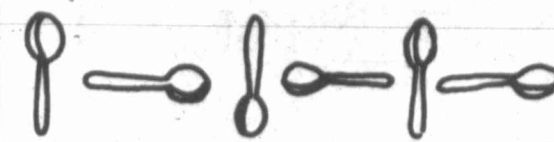

- Understand patterns.

THERE IS A PATTERN ON MY CAKE.

THESE PAGES SHOW WHAT I MIGHT THINK WHILE I'M COOKING UP GOOD MATH.

PETER PENGUIN'S PUZZLE & LE-DO

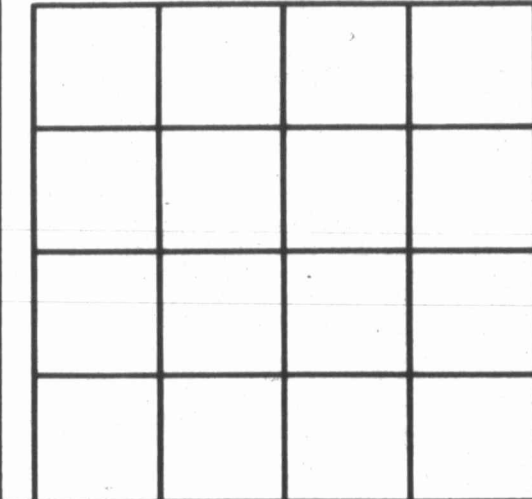

Understanding patterns is one of the strategies you'll need to cook up good math. Draw the object or write the number that comes next.

Use a separate piece of paper for this one.

PETER PENGUIN'S PUZZLE & LE-DO

Understanding geometry, or shapes, will help you to cook up good math.

HOW MANY SQUARES ARE THERE IN THIS BLOCK?

(HINT: THERE ARE MORE THAN 16.)

PETER PENGUIN'S PUZZLE & LE-DO

Making estimates or guesses is a strategy you'll need to cook up good math. Why not estimate how many of these things you have at home? Then count and see how close you came.

BASSET BROWN THE NEWS HOUND'S MATH TRY 'N FIND

Some of the things you will need to cook up good math are hidden in the block below. Some words are hidden backward. See if you can find: PROBLEMS, TALK, WRITE, THINK, DATA, STUDY, ANSWERS, NUMBERS, SENSE, ESTIMATE, ADD, SUBTRACT, MULTIPLY, DIVIDE, GEOMETRY, MEASURE, PREDICT.

ASK A PARTNER TO PUT A SQUARE AROUND THE LETTERS IN HIS OR HER FIRST NAME EACH TIME ONE APPEARS IN THIS BLOCK. PUT CIRCLES FOR THE LETTERS IN YOUR FIRST NAME. WHO HAS THE MOST?

Rookie Cookie's Recipe Crunchy Strips

- You'll need:
- $\frac{3}{4}$ cup butter or margarine, melted
 - $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon garlic salt
 - $\frac{1}{3}$ cup corn flakes cereal, crushed
 - $\frac{1}{4}$ cup Parmesan cheese, grated
 - 4 slices bread, lightly toasted

- What to do:
1. In medium bowl, combine melted butter or margarine and garlic salt. Mix well.
 2. In another bowl, combine cereal crumbs and cheese. Mix well.
 3. Cut each piece of toast into 4 pieces.
 4. Dip each toast piece in the butter mixture, then in the cereal mixture.
 5. Place on a baking sheet.
 6. Bake in a preheated, 400-degree oven for 10 minutes.

If you double the recipe, how much of each ingredient would you need?

For a Well-Balanced Math Diet, You'll Need to:

These cooks are learning how to estimate how much water is in the bowl.

Use numbers to add, subtract, divide and multiply.

Examples:

What is the price of your newspaper?

How much would 10 newspapers cost?

Count and see how close you were.

Collect data and predict outcomes.

Example:

How many photos will you see in the first 10 pages of your newspaper?

Count and see how close you were.

Use fractions and decimals

Example:

How many pages are there in half of your newspaper?

Count and see how close you were.

Understand how numbers work.

Example:

Freckles is 5 years old. Some people say a dog's year is 7 human years.

What is Freckles' age in human years?

Estimate

Example:

Close your eyes and open them again when you think a minute is over.

The more you practice, the better your estimate will be.

Use geometry

Example:

Cut out some paper squares. Experiment to see how many ways you can divide them in half.

Use measurement

Example:

How many pages of your newspaper would it take to cover the floor in your bedroom?

Use patterns

Example:

Pretend you are offered $1,000 to deliver newspapers for a month. Another offer is:

1¢ the first day

2¢ the second day

4¢ the third day

8¢ the fourth day, and so on for 30 days.

Which offer would you choose?

Dykstra's home run kills Braves' comeback plans

Phillies take 3-2 series lead back to Philadelphia

By The Associated Press

ATLANTA — The Philadelphia Phillies are the dream of every factory and office team in the country, proving it ain't the paunch that matters, it's the punch.

They're Len Dykstra spitting out tobacco juice, brown stains on his chin and shirt, hustling to the plate in the 10th inning Monday, getting the job done with a line-drive homer to beat the Atlanta Braves 4-3.

They're John Kruk, baseball's cross between Bluto and Belushi, thumping a double, driving in the first run in the first inning to point the Phillies toward their third victory in five games in the best-of-7 NL Playoffs.

They're Mitch Williams, the wildest and craziest of the bunch, skateboarding through the ninth-inning again, wiping out starter Curt Schilling's four-hit, 3-0 gem through 8 1-3, giving up the tying run and strutting away a grinning winner once more.

They're rude, crude, funny and smart — and one victory away from a National League pennant and a visit to the World Series.

They don't have the elegant starting staff of the Braves, who can boast two Cy Young winners: Greg Maddux, set to go Wednesday, and Tom Glavine, ready for Game 7 if necessary.

But the Phillies don't lack for players who love the challenge of beating the best. Dykstra is one of them.

Dykstra, whose ninth-inning homer gave the New York Mets a dramatic 6-5 playoff victory over Houston on the same date seven years ago, drove a 3-2 pitch from Mark Wohlers over the right-center-field fence with one out in the 10th and quickly remembered 1986.

"This was even bigger to me," he said. "Back then, I was just a kid trying to contribute in any way that I could. I was in la-la land. This year, I've been one of the main guys since Day One, and I expect that of myself."

Schilling is pitching like the best. He could be the first playoff MVP with an 0-0 record. He struck out 10 in the first game, nine on Monday, and both times he paved the way to victories.

Schilling breezed into the ninth but fell victim to his own mistake and one of his teammate's.

Schilling walked Blauser to lead off, then Kim Batiste, who replaced Dave Hollins in the eighth allegedly for defense, failed to come up with Ron Gant's grounder to third. That was it for Schilling.

In came Williams, also an instant disaster in Games 1 and 4.

Fred McGriff singled on the first pitch to make it 3-1. David Justice's sacrifice fly to left pulled the Braves within a run.

Then Terry Pendleton lined a single to center, moving McGriff to second. Up came Francisco Cabrera. Cabrera bounced a two-hopper just past shortstop Kevin Stocker as McGriff scored the tying run and Pendleton sped to third. Mark Lemke — 5-for-10 in his career against Williams, including that drive Milt Thompson caught in front of the left field wall Sunday night — came up and missed the winning hit by about a yard — a drive to left that landed a few feet foul.

That was as close as the Braves would come. Lemke struck out, pinch-hitter Bill Pecota flied softly to center, and Atlanta went quietly in the 10th against Larry Andersen, the Phillies' 40-year-old right-hander.

"There's nobody in this room who thinks we have anything won," Schilling said. "We're going home, but we're going to face maybe the two best pitchers in the league."

Atlanta shortstop Jeff Blauser (4) slides past the plate as Philadelphia catcher Darren Daulton holds up the ball in the first inning Monday. Daulton tagged out Blauser to end the inning on a fine relay throw from Phillies' shortstop Kevin Stocker. Philadelphia beat Atlanta 4-3 in 10 innings, so the Phillies take a 3-2 series lead to Philadelphia for Wednesday's sixth game. Atlanta's Greg Maddux will pitch against Philadelphia's Tommy Greene.

No comeback needed: Bills rout Oilers

By The Associated Press

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — This time, it was the Houston Oilers who needed the comeback. The comeback never came.

Continuing a skid that started when they blew a 35-3 lead in losing to the Buffalo Bills in last season's playoffs, the Oilers fell apart again in a 35-7 loss to the Bills on Monday night.

Asked how he felt after the game, Warren Moon, benched for the second time this season, probably spoke for many Houston fans: "Thoroughly disgusted and very disappointed."

That's what a three-interception, three-sack, one-fumble performance will do to you. And those were just the misfortunes that befell Moon.

All told, the Oilers lost three fumbles, threw four interceptions and surrendered four sacks.

Combined with Houston's under-achieving 1-3 start, it was the kind of abysmal effort that can get a coach fired. Not surprisingly, Jack Pardee deflected questions about his job security after the game.

"I'm worried about the team. That's my one worry," the embattled coach said. "I don't have control over anything else. We're not the team we have been. We've got a lot of work to get back to that."

Houston figured to be motivated to settle the score with the Bills, who beat the Oilers 41-38 in the greatest comeback — or the most colossal collapse — in NFL history last January.

Instead, the Bills (4-1) settled the outcome early with a 21-0 blitz in the second quarter.

Tied at 7-7 on touchdown catches by Buffalo's Don Beebe and Houston's Leonard Harris, the Bills started the second quarter with an 87-yard drive that ended when Andre Reed made a leaping, twisting catch in the end zone for a 24-yard touchdown.

Buffalo quarterback Jim Kelly passes as lineman John Davis (65) blocks Houston defender Ray Childress (79) Monday night. Buffalo beat the Oilers, 35-7.

Reed got free again on the Bills' next possession, took a Jim Kelly pass and then cut past several Oilers to trot into the end zone for a 39-yard touchdown score.

It was Buffalo's second-longest pass completion of the season and Reed said the Bills' willingness to throw deep made a big difference.

"I think the main key tonight was that we threw the ball long," he said. "We weren't doing that the first four games and the defenses kind of thought we couldn't go long."

Houston's third turnover of the game, a fumble by Haywood Jeffries that came at the end of a 26-yard reception, led to the Bills' third touchdown of the quarter.

Thurman Thomas, who had 24 carries for 92 yards, ran six times in a nine-play drive that ended when he burst through several missed tackles for the 7-yard touchdown that put the Bills up 28-7.

Local tae-kwon-do team ready to win

By STEVE REAGAN
Sports writer

Last year, Larry Brott came from Fort Worth in the hopes of establishing a Tae-Kwon-Do center in Big Spring. This weekend, he returns to Cowtown to display the fruits of his efforts.

About a dozen students at Brott's local Tae-Kwon-Do center will participate in the Fort Worth Invitational Tae-Kwon-Do Championships this Saturday at the Tarrant County Convention Center.

The tournament, which is open to both children and adults, will be divided into two competitions: sparring and form demonstration.

In sparring, participants will compete in full-contact fighting. Each match will be divided into three two-minute rounds. Points will be awarded for kicks to the midsection or head or punches to the midsection.

Brott compares the form portion of the tournament to a floor routine for a gymnast. Competitors will be awarded between one and 10 points each from judges based on their demonstration of speed, power, grace and balance.

"I expect that the team will do extremely well at the tournament," Brott said. "I expect that everyone, on average, will win at least one event ... I expect us to bring home at least one medal per person."

Up to 800 people are expected to participate in the tournament, which Brott said is indicative of the sport's rise in popularity.

"Tae-Kwon-Do is probably the fastest-growing sport in the world," he said. "People are finding out they can learn self-defense, self-confidence ... and also be in a competitive sport."

Tae-Kwon-Do, which originated in Korea around 50 B.C., did not become a competitive sport until the mid-70s and has grown to the point that it was a demonstration event at the 1988 and 1992 Olympics.

BROTT

The local team was formed in April and has progressed well, Brott said. At its last tournament, 13 team members brought back a total of 21 medals.

"(Tae-Kwon-Do) is not your typical West Texas type of sport," Brott said. "But I've noticed that people in West Texas are very competitive ... They find out they can be in a competitive sport and still do all the other things they want to do — and they like that."

Brott conceded that competitive Tae-Kwon-Do is not exactly what his students might expect.

"I encourage all the kids to compete at least once before they join the team," he said. "It is an eye-opener. They really don't know what to expect before they do it."

Even so, Brott expects the sport to continue growing, especially in Big Spring.

Aside from that prediction, however, Brott does not have many goals for the team.

"I guess, if I have any goals at all, it would be for them to enjoy themselves and learn (about Tae-Kwon-Do)."

Blue Jays perched one win from title

Stewart goes for knockout as Toronto looks to clinch

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO — It's supposed to be cold at Comiskey Park tonight, and both teams agree that will help the pitchers more than the hitters. Whether the weather will favor Chicago more than Toronto, however, depends on whose forecast you believe.

"The White Sox are not used to playing in cold weather," Blue Jays manager Cito Gaston said Monday, a day before his team took a 3-2 lead into Game 6 of the AL playoffs.

"They've been playing in warm weather all year," he said. "It's just like your blood gets thin. It will not be an advantage to either team, but the pitchers, it should be an advantage to them."

Temperatures are supposed to drop down into 30s this evening. But snow flurries, which fell on SkyDome during the weekend, are not expected.

"I think the problem will be with the Blue Jays," White Sox outfielder Ellis Burks said. "They really haven't experienced cold weather because they have been inside."

Dave Stewart, 7-0 lifetime in the playoffs, will start for Toronto against Alex Fernandez in a rematch of Game 2, which the Blue Jays won 3-1. Stewart may face a revamped lineup without Bo Jackson and perhaps with Mike Toronto's Joe Carter, left, takes batting practice from coach Larry Doby at Comiskey Park in Chicago Monday. The Blue Jays face the White Sox tonight in the sixth game of the American League Championship Series.

LaValliere, manager Gene Lamont said.

"I ask Gene every time it's cold to let me pitch," Fernandez said. "I think hitters don't like to hit when it's really cold and pitchers have an advantage. It's fine with me whether it's hot or cold."

Fernandez, who was born, raised and still resides near Miami, has done well in winter weather. He's 4-0 lifetime in decisions in which it was 50 degrees or cooler at game-time. It was 72 degrees when he faced Stewart last week.

Stewart knows his record when it's frosty.

"I've never pitched in 40-degree weather," he said. "I can tell you that in situations like this, I won't be thinking much about the weather. If I am, it affects the hitters as much as me."

The White Sox want some more offense, meaning Lamont might make a few changes.

Jackson, 0-for-10 with six strikeouts, could be benched as the designated hitter in favor of either George Bell or Warren Newson. Catcher Ron Karkovice, 0-for-14 with six strikeouts, could be replaced by LaValliere.

"I'm not sure if Bo is going to DH. I'm going to think about it a little more and talk to the coaches," Lamont said. "I'll decide today, but you'll know tomorrow when I put up the lineup."

Report: Mavs close to inking top draft pick

By The Associated Press

FORT WORTH — The Dallas Mavericks could sign their No. 1 draft pick Jamal Mashburn as soon as Wednesday, according to a published report.

In a copyright story published today, The Fort Worth Star-Telegram quoted a source with the NBA team as saying that negotiations are moving so well that the signing appears to be imminent.

"I think Jamal will be here at the very least by Friday's game (the pre-season opener against the Atlanta Hawks)," the source told the newspaper. "Things are heating up and getting real close, and I would be surprised if both sides can't strike a deal on Wednesday."

Mavericks General Manager Norm Sonju, met with agent Don Cronson for nearly three hours Monday. They are expected to meet again Wednesday when Cronson returns to Texas from a personal business trip to Phoenix, the source said.

"We had a very nice meeting today," Sonju said. "And the bottom line is, Don is going to take some things back to his people and I'm going to go over a few things with Mr. (Donald) Carter (the Mavericks' owner). We got a lot done."

One thing that may have been agreed upon, the newspaper reported, is the length of Mashburn's contract.

The Mavericks offered a six-year, $30 million package, with a buyout option on a seventh year at $5 million. Cronson countered with an eight-year, $35 million package with a buyout option in the seventh year.

It appears that Mashburn, who played collegiate basketball at the University of Kentucky, probably will settle in at $32 million over seven years, with a buyout clause for both sides in the last year, the newspaper reported.

"Don gave me an idea and I gave him another," Sonju said. "Both of them used 90 percent of what we've talked about already."

"It was a very meaningful meeting. We discussed things that interests both sides. We had a lot of different things in there. So much of it incorporated things that we've talked about in the past, which is encouraging."

"If things go well in the meeting Wednesday morning, there is no reason not to think that a deal won't be worked out," the source said. "If it gets close, we'll fly Jamal and his people in to town Wednesday afternoon for a press conference."

It had been reported about two weeks ago that a deal with Mashburn was imminent. But that quickly changed when Anfernee Hardaway, taken one slot ahead of Mashburn at No. 3, signed a 13-year, $65 million deal with the Orlando Magic, one day after Larry Johnson signed a $84 million, 12-year extension with the Charlotte Hornets.

Rangers say goodbye to two southpaws

ARLINGTON (AP) — The Texas Rangers, whose bullpen has been gutted by the retirement of Nolan Ryan, have decided not to retain left-handers Charlie Leibrandt and Craig Lefferts.

The club announced Monday it will not exercise its 1994 contract options on the pitchers. Both players will become free agents following the World Series.

Leibrandt, acquired from Atlanta in December, finished the season 9-10 with a 4.55 ERA in 26 starts. The 37-year-old was bothered by left shoulder trouble in the second half of the season. He is 140-119 in his 12-year major league career.

Lefferts was 3-9 with a 6.05 ERA in 52 games, including eight starts. Signed as a free agent on Jan. 13, Lefferts, 36, is 57-71 in 11 major league seasons.

Marino, Emtman

out for the season

DAVIE, Fla. (AP) — Miami Dolphins quarterback Dan Marino will miss the rest of the season after undergoing surgery to repair a ruptured right Achilles tendon. Marino, who had played in 145 consecutive games, was 14 of 19 for 161 yards and his 298th career touchdown before being injured in Sunday's 24-14 victory at Cleveland.

Barkley returns to practice

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP) — Charles Barkley returned to practice with the Phoenix Suns after the team said his recent collapse was caused by fatigue.

Barkley, restricted to riding an exercise bicycle, running and shooting by himself, said he would not scrimmage or run drills "for a couple of days."

The NBA's MVP last season collapsed during wind sprints and lay still for 30 minutes Saturday night following a two-hour practice.

Barkley complained of numbness in his legs, and a bulging disk in his back — first detected in August — was suspected. However, team doctor Ralph Emerson said it was caused by "muscular and respiratory fatigue."

Davis Cup team

names captain

NEW YORK (AP) — Tom Gullikson was about to be named as the new United States Davis Cup captain.

The naming of Gullikson, a retired doubles specialist, was first reported today by The Island Packet, a newspaper in Hilton Head, S.C. The newspaper quoted former tennis star Stan Smith as its source. Smith, who lives in Hilton Head, was among front-runners for the job.

Gullikson, 42, a national USTA coach, will replace Tom Gorman, who resigned Sept. 9. Gorman, captain since 1986, left after the U.S. defeated the Bahamas in Charlotte, N.C., last month. The 5-0 victory sent the U.S. team to the world group.

Trial starts for attacker of Seles

HAMBURG, Germany — Guenter Parche, a 39-year-old obsessed fan who stabbed Monica Seles in the back, goes on trial today facing five years in prison if convicted of causing grievous bodily harm.

The verdict and the sentencing could come by the end of the day.

Seles has not played a match since being stabbed April 30 during a changeover in her quarterfinal match against Magdalena Maleeva of Bulgaria during a tournament in Hamburg.

Seles, clutching her back, screamed in pain as security officials wrestled Parche to the ground. The unemployed lathe operator said he wanted to harm Seles because he could not bear to see her dominate the game over Steffi Graf, his favorite player and Germany's national heroine.

Horribly, Parche achieved what he set out to do.

In the 5 months since the stabbing, Seles, who suffered a half-inch deep wound, has dropped from No. 1 to No. 4 in the world rankings. Graf has regained the top ranking and is closing in on record earnings of $3.7 million.

With Smith, Cowboys on a roll

By The Associated Press

IRVING — Emmitt Smith thinks the Dallas Cowboys are unbeaten. He doesn't recognize the fact they lost two games before he signed a contract.

"We're 3-0," said Smith. "I don't know anything about those two losses."

Without Smith, the Cowboys lost to Washington and Buffalo. Since he came back they've beaten Phoenix, Green Bay, and Indianapolis.

They have a return match with their NFC championship game opponent, San Francisco, in Texas Stadium at 3 p.m. on Sunday.

Smith, who has been hampered with a sore hamstring, rushed to 27 times for 104 yards Sunday in a 25-3 victory over Indianapolis. It was his 19th game of 100 yards or more for the Cowboys. He also scored on a 20-yard run.

The Cowboys are back to their brash Super Bowl champion ways.

Coach Jimmy Johnson even dialed up a fake field goal run for a touchdown by tight end and holder Jay Novacek in Sunday's victory.

"I was kind of moping because we didn't go for it then I look up and coach Johnson had called the fake," Aikman said. "I told him he sure fooled me. This is the kind of confidence we have on the team now. The coach makes decisions that shows he has confidence in players."

A week earlier Johnson called an onside kick that took Green Bay by surprise.

Novacek ran two yards untouched for the touchdown.

"Who knows, maybe we'll try the option next," Novacek joked.

Special teams coach Joe Avezzano said "Jimmy is never afraid to pull the trigger. We saw something in the films we could take advantage of."

Aikman has been sizzling for the Cowboys. He was 21 of 28 for 245 yards and one touchdown against the Colts. In the Cowboys three games since Smith returned, he's 60 of 78, a 77 per cent clip.

"The guy is amazing," said Novacek.

Aikman said the Cowboys will have to take their play up another level against the 49ers.

"This is a pivotal game for us," Aikman said. "We need to win this game. A loss would be tough to take."

The Cowboys defeated the 49ers 30-20 in the NFC title game last January in the muck and mire of Candlestick Park.

This time the Cowboys will play them on the fast Texas Stadium artificial turf and it looks like Smith is back in shape.

"I carried the ball 25 times and caught four passes so how much more in shape do I have to be?" Smith said. "I'm sore today but nothing is wrong with my hamstring."

The Cowboys allowed the Colts 361 yards defense but Johnson wasn't concerned.

"We were rushing the passer and they ran the ball against us some," Johnson said. "But the object is to keep them out of the end zone not how much yardage they can gain."

The Cowboys produced four turnovers and Johnson said "that made me happy. It's something we've been trying to get going."

Johnson said the Cowboys concentration level will be higher this week. "I'm sure we'll get the 49ers best effort," Johnson said. "They've had an extra week to get ready for us."

Dear Abby - Letters...

Surgeon nose there's no guarantee

DEAR ABBY: Having a rhinoplasty ("nose job") performed by a board-certified plastic surgeon does not necessarily guarantee success, as was suggested in a recent column. Many ear-nose-and-throat surgeons started to do these procedures in the 1940s because the rhinoplasties performed by plastic surgeons of that era often failed to provide adequate post-operative nasal respiratory function.

Today, many (but not all) board-certified plastic surgeons perform excellent rhinoplasties. Advice to the person considering surgery: Consult your physician for a referral; consider why you want a rhinoplasty (the variety of reasons will amaze you!); ask others (physicians, medical society, patients) about your prospective surgeon; ask for a list of your surgeon's rhinoplasty patients and call, or better yet, visit with them; don't put your trust in before-and-after photographs (pictures lie!); and get a second opinion.

I am signing my name, but if you print this letter, please sign me ... RETIRED M.D. IN HOUSTON

DEAR RETIRED M.D.: I appreciated your valuable letter. Please read on:

DEAR ABBY: It appears that you have bought into the party line of the American Board of Plastic Surgery and the American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery. It is particularly demeaning, unfair and misrepresentative to the general public, in the light of the fact that the original plastic surgeons were otolaryngologists who advanced the science to the level that it is today.

Patients should carefully chose, based on performance - and not necessarily board certification. Many ophthalmologic plastic surgeons are not board-certified by the American Board of Plastic Surgery, and in DENNIS THE MENACE fact do excellent eye plastic surgery. Likewise, many oral surgeons, who are not actually MDs, do excellent plastic surgery on the face. By the same token, many other specialists, including otolaryngologists - who are extremely well-trained and have an extensive training of six years in head and neck surgery, including facial plastic surgery - may, in fact, be better qualified than other surgical specialists who may have a higher profile.

Nonetheless, all of us appreciate your interest in this matter, and I'm hopeful you'll receive this information in a positive fashion. - JIM E. GILMORE, M.D., FACS, FICS, DALLAS

DEAR DR. GILMORE: Thank you for your letter. Be assured that it was one of many bearing the same message. I now regret my failure to consult my own friend and plastic surgeon, Dr. Frank Kamer, before having "run off at the typewriter." He could have saved me the embarrassment of having to apologize to all the qualified surgeons whom I offended.

DEAR ABBY: The most useful Christmas gift I received last year was your booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Since it is priced under $5, I'm going to use that idea myself this year. I will enclose with each booklet a box of stationery and some colorful pens for each of my grandchildren. (This will save me a lot of shopping around!)

You may print this along with my name, because I believe in sharing a good idea. - ELLA MAE JOHNSON, PORTLAND, ORE.

DEAR ELLA MAE: Thank you. I have received many compliments from people of all ages about the "Letters" booklet.
