Wichita Leaders Join Weeks In Launching Farms Program

VALLEY LANDS OPENED FOR NEW SETTLERS

Good Crowd Expected At Ceremonies Despite Ice and Snow

Business and Civic Leaders To Take Part In Program at Noon

A winter's setting of snow and ice were promised Friday night for the formal opening today of the Charles Weeks small farm community which represents the first step in the colonization of large irrigated tracts of land just west of this city, but all arrangements for the day will be carried out as planned, according to Mr. Weeks.

Besides large numbers of out-of-town visitors, who have responded to letters and descriptive literature broadcast from the Weeks offices, many hundreds of citizens of Wichita Falls and vicinity are expected to be present during the afternoon to witness the actual beginning of development which is expected to constitute one of the foremost factors in the future stable growth of this community.

Bands to Play

The program is scheduled to open at noon, with musical entertainment furnished by the Wichita Falls high school and Lions club bands. Real estate men of this city, many of whom gathered at the Westmoreland park Friday morning with Mr. Weeks for a thorough discussion of the plans to be followed in peopling the district with "intensive farmers," will act as a reception and courtesy committee to acquaint all visitors with the areas under development and with the details for each small farm.

Mayor J. W. Akin will deliver an address of welcome at 2 o'clock and will be followed by Harry Hines, acting president of the chamber of commerce during the absence of Orville Bullington, who will speak on "Co-operation." Mr. Weeks is next scheduled to discuss the various phases of agricultural, poultry and horticultural development which will be the foundation of the community. Speeches by J. A. Kemp, Frank Kell, J. T. Harrell, J. Wilkie Talbert, Walter D. Cline and N. H. Martin will follow Mr. Weeks' address.

Three separate tracts are now included in the area whose development will be inaugurated today. The first is Westmoreland Park, consisting of approximately 500 acres, divided into lots 100 by 250 feet in size. As illustrated in the model farm which has just been completed under the supervision of James Yeths, general sales manager for Mr. Weeks, each of these lots is intended to accommodate one five-room modern house, a garage and two of the latest model poul-

Mr. Groundhog Given Assistance

Mr. Groundhog has no good reason for not coming out of his hole today now that Jean Arthur, cinema actress, is calling his attention to this date on the calendar. As everybody well knows, "Groundie" will come out of his hole, scan the horizon, and seek his shadow. If he fails to find his shadow, spring's just around the corner but if he finds it,—brr-r-r—winter will stay six weeks longer.

Witness Says He 'Was Told Friend Heard' Johnston Was Impersonator

OKLAHOMA CITY, Feb. 1. (AP)—For the first time in this investigation, Henry S. Johnston, suspended governor, was involved personally in one of the stories of favoritism and intrigue in his department, told to the house of representatives investigating committee.

The witness, R. L. Seaman, discharged secretary of the state highway commission, admitted the story had passed through two others before it reached him. The story accused Johnston of impersonating Seaman in a telephone conversation in which the governor was purported to have asked a contractor to make bond for his fulfillment of a state contract with a designated company.

Second-Hand Story

Seaman said he had received his information from H. E. Sullivan private secretary to the governor who in turn had told him he heard it by telephone from James R. Arm strong, uncle of Mrs. O. O. Hammonds. Johnston's confidential secretary.

The former secretary said a representative of the contractor to whom Johnston was claimed to have telephoned came to the highway office and asked for an explanation of the call, saying it had been cut off. Seaman said he knew nothing of it until Sullivan told him an hour later of the governor's alleged call. Seaman's story was that the governor had asked the contractor to patronize the United States Fidelity and Guaranty company.

Loyalty Investigated

Charles D. Carter, former Oklahoma congressman, member of the state highway commission, told the committee he undertook an investigation of loyalty to employes in his department after Mrs. Hammonds had told him it was "reeking with disloyalty to the administration." One employe out of a list of 30 submitted by Mrs. Hammonds, was discharged, he said and the remainder were found loyal.

Carter defended the specification of asphalt as a paving surface, a topic that has aroused much dissension in the opposing political ranks. The commissioner asserted asphalt is more durable than concrete and worth the difference in price.

Johnston's employment of Jose Alvarado, detective now serving a burglary sentence, as a special agent to hunt bank robbers was brought up by the committee in testimony by Eugene Gum, secretary of the Oklahoma Bankers' association, that Alvarado was paid about $500 by that organization, in addition to $1,000 paid him by the state, for two months of work. During that time, Gum said, Alvarado captured one bank robber. The banker's association furnished the detective with a motor car that was never returned, Gum said.

GROUNDHOG TO APPEAR TODAY

Now You'll Know What To Expect of Weather

It may have been a wolf, or a badger, or some more direct antecedent of the present day marmot, alias woodchuck, alias groundhog, or, if catalogued information may be relied upon, it might possibly have been a Christian martyr of Nero's playtime in Rome, who first sensed danger in too much sunlight when emerging from an underground hiding place, and thus started the age-old custom of regarding the climatic conditions of Feb. 2 as portending good or ill during the subsequent six weeks.

Candlemas, as Feb. 2 is known in Europe, originated presumably in the early Christian era as the date for observing the return of Mary, mother of Jesus, to the church for priestly blessing following the birth of Christ. Candle-bearing processions of parishioners marked the occasion in mediaeval European churches. Unburned portions of the candles were thought to have unusual powers, and were carefully retained throughout the year. The importance thus imputed to the day gave rise among the lower classes to the peculiar superstition which promised a punishment of unfavoring circumstances to him whose Candelmas day contained much brightness. An old Latin inscription retained in translation in England reads:

"If Candemas day be bright and fair
The half o' winter's to come, and mair;
If Candemas day be wet and foul,
The half o' winter's gone at Yule."

Pair Arrested at Paducah And Jailed Here Indicted For Murder

Special to The Record News.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Feb. 1—Five persons are charged with first degree murder for the killing of James A. Carey, National Park policeman, in indictments returned by the grand jury here today, as the climax of a two-year investigation which reached into several states.

Lawrence and Roy Wilson, arrested in Paducah, Texas, several weeks ago on federal warrants and later taken to Wichita Falls, and Dave Carey, Walter Welden and Raymond Hunt are the persons alleged by the state to have plotted the death of the officer on the night of March 12, 1927, in an effort to quash liquor conspiracy charges pending against them, officers charge.

Carey was one of the most popular officers on the government reservation at the National park and following his death a public subscription of $800 was raised to investigate the case. He was the principal witness against Raymond Hunt in a liquor case.

GRAND JURY BILLS HEITHER IN SLAYING

Indictment for Murder Voted in Death Of Clifford E. Wood

SIX LIQUOR CHARGES

District Attorney Silent On Identity of Alleged Pro Violators

An indictment charging O. C. Heither with the murder of Clifford E. Wood on Jan. 19 was returned by the 30th district grand jury just before its final adjournment Friday afternoon. Six other bills, all charging violation of the prohibition laws, were returned.

Heither Under Bond

Heither was at liberty under bond Friday afternoon. The indictment called for his re-arrest and the making of a new bond, court officials said. He was arrested on the night of Jan. 19 when Wood, shot eight times, was found lying on the floor of the Heither home, 2206 Buchanan. Wood died a few hours later.

Sam Spence, district attorney, refused to say Friday whether the whisky indictments returned were concerned with an alleged "school boy speakeasy" investigated by school authorities and city officials in Electra last week.

Electra Probe

Two members of the grand jury were present at the preliminary investigation at Electra, it was understood, and witnesses summoned before the body Friday included school officials and civic leaders of the town.

At the time of the investigation it was brought out that high school boys had gained access to a speakeasy, which operated near the school, it was claimed.

Ada Le Bouef Bears Up At Last To Define Her Hanging As Murderous Act

FRANKLIN, La., Feb. 1. (UP)—Two lovers, Mrs. Ada Bonner Lebouef and Dr. Thomas E. Dreher, who in an illicit relationship, conceived a murder, paid the state of Louisiana its price for the crime today—a gallows' death.

Mrs. Leboeuf, mother of four children, was the first white woman ever to be hanged west of the Allegheny mountains. She with the doctor, who was 10 years her senior, decided her husband, James, "stood in the way" and killed him to keep open their path of love.

With prayers on their lips they went to the gallows platform today—first the woman then the man—and found the "open path" was a small door that dropped them to death at the end of a yellow rope.

With her prayers, the woman mingled a bit of defiance and after wailing "O mother, O my God," she cried out:

"This is murder itself."

Mrs. Leboeuf was dropped through the trap door at 12:17 p. m. She was pronounced dead at 12:27.

Dr. Dreher followed to the end of the "open path" at 12:35 p. m. His legal hour of death was pronounced at 12:51.

The two had their last meeting half an hour before the noon hour set for their deaths.

"I hope I see you over there," the doctor said.

Mrs. Leboeuf did not reply but shook the doctor's hand and they were returned to their separate cells to await the death march shortly after 12 o'clock had sounded. Mrs. Leboeuf was led from her cell.

In a near state of collapse but with a resigned appearance she walked between the guards.

"Where is the doctor? Where is he?" she appealed between moans. The scaffold was but a few paces

CITY LOSES SEWAGE PLEA

Judge Rules Local Court Has Jurisdiction

Judge P. A. Martin late Friday afternoon ruled that the 89th district court has jurisdiction to enforce the terms of an injunction, granted on the petition of D. G. Whitney, restraining the city from polluting the waters of Wichita river.

The opinion of the court overruled a plea to the jurisdiction of the court, in which the city claimed that the supreme court is the proper authority to determine whether or not George Fairtrace, city manager, has violated the terms of the injunction and is in contempt of court.

Hearing Set Monday

Judge Martin said that the date for a hearing on the contempt charges will be set Monday morning, Feb. 4.

The present hearing grew out of an injunction granted by former Judge E. G. Thornton last summer, to be effective on Oct. 1. The court's order forbade the city to pollute the waters of the river by the bestowal of sewage and garbage, and was granted upon the allegations of D. G. Whitney, owner of land along the river banks. Mr. Whitney early in January filed another petition alleging that the terms of the order were not being carried out by the city.

Jurisdiction of the court was questioned by the defendant in a hearing shortly afterwards.

Other Cities Involved

Informed of the ruling Friday afternoon, Mr. Fairtrace asserted that if Wichita Falls is held in contempt of court for its present sewage disposal system, every other city in Texas will be involved at once in a similar suit.

"We are doing everything that is physically possible," the city manager declared. "Our system is better than used in Fort Worth and Dallas and most other Texas cities. This is a deep-seated matter; every other town will have some member of its official family up for contempt if our plant is held in violation of the order."

At the time the complaint was made, Mr. Fairtrace denied the charge that the order had been disobeyed. He asserted that the city had installed an emergency pump and motor and was not using the river for sewage disposal. He repeated his denial Friday afternoon.

The text of Judge Martin's ruling follows:

"I find that the weight of authority is to the effect that the court granting a prohibitory injunction retains jurisdiction to enforce the provisions of the injunction after an appeal unless its provisions are suspended by the court granting it. The rule as to a mandatory injunction is directly contrary.

"In this case Judge Thornton granted a prohibitory injunction, effective Oct. 1, 1928. The affidavit of the plaintiff charges violations of it since that date, and since that date the case has been duly transferred to the 89th district court. The contempt hearing will occur on a date to be announced Monday, Feb. 4."

N. TEXAS POLL TAXES SLUMP

Estimates Show Voters Less Enthusiastic

Decreases in the number of poll tax receipts in Northwest Texas counties are general, with one or two isolated exceptions, according to a poll of counties made by The Record News.

Donley county, one of the exceptions, which set a record for its number of qualified voters last year when 2,636 receipts were counted, promised to break that record this year. This estimate is based on the number of taxes paid in the Clarendon precinct, which totaled 935. Even temporary figures for the rest of the county Friday were not available. It was expected, however, that they would go over 3,000.

Wichita, Young and Wilbarger counties led in the number of receipts. Wichita county, with an estimated 12,800, reported a decrease of about 2,000; and Wilbarger reported 4,006, as compared with 5,122 last year.

A table, giving the approximate receipts for each of the nearby counties, follows:

County—	Receipts
Montague	2500
Knox	1700
Dooley	3000
Collingsworth	2120
Young	4000
Markell	4000
Foard	1319
Cottle	1091

OKLAHOMA AND NORTH TEXAS IN GRIP OF ICE

Rain Mixed With Pellets And Flakes in Most Districts

CROPS TO BENEFIT

Traffic Slightly Crippled On Roads but No Mishaps Occur

After being predicted for weeks, Northwest Texas got its first real snow of the season Friday, although it was cheated at that, portions of Southern Oklahoma receiving a much heavier fall that made a blanket in some places three inches deep.

In Wichita Falls and vicinity, it was diluted with sleet, which began falling in the morning, laying a slippery foundation of white for what little snow did fall. The illusion, however, was perfect, and when the thick flakes did tumble for a brief space early in the afternoon, people imagined they were in the midst of a real "snowstorm."

Temperature at 26

As a matter of fact, only about one-fourth of an inch of both snow and sleet fell, and the weather was too mild to create an illusion of terrible cold, the temperature at 5 p. m. being 26 degrees. The lowest temperature of the day was 22 degrees.

Every town in Northwest Texas and Southern Oklahoma near here, however, got a white blanket of either snow or sleet, and farmers were quite proud of it, seeing that it helped their ploughed ground and benefited grain crops.

The heaviest snowfall in this region was reported from Mangum, Okla., where three inches fell. In Northwest Texas, the heaviest was at Vernon, where one and one-half inches snow fell in two hours.

Traffic Crippled

Though roads were slippery, and traffic difficult, no accident casualties from the entire region were reported. The closest thing to an accident reported was in Frederick, Okla., where several cars skidded into ditches on roads leading into the city.

The snow and ice will prove beneficial to all small grains, and will act as a season to ground already ploughed, G. C. McGown, county agent, said.

ADA LE BOUEF IN GRIM STAND

Wailing Woman Shouts Murder to Hangman

ahead and the noose was adjusted as soon as the condemned woman, the guards, and the executioner were on the platform.

"This rope is too tight around my neck," she said as she gazed down through an enclosure filled with smoke where the official witnesses and newspapermen were gathered. They smoked and chewed cigars to steady their nerves.

A strange figure in high heel shoes, flesh-colored stockings and lavender dress stood as her arms and legs were bound.

A low voice, praying for her soul was the only sound audible in the room. It was the voice of the Rev. J. J. Rosseau.

The big moment arrived and the hush of the death house gripped all in the room.

Click, a dead silence, and a body swung in the air.

After a doctor had pronounced Mrs. Leboeuf dead, five men stepped forward, lowered the body and carried it to an adjacent room.

Eight minutes later Dr. Dreher had been dropped through the same gallows' door.

Attired in a grey business suit, his white shirt and striped tie neatly arranged, he had walked forth steadily.

"God in heaven knows we don't deserve this," he said as he ascended the scaffold. "Two innocent souls gone for a crime that we never could commit. God have mercy. God hear our prayers."

An injection of morphine given to both had somewhat steadied their nerves in contrast to their collapse yesterday when informed they must die today. The doctor was the stronger, muttering protestations of his innocence while the noose was adjusted.

The illicit love between Mrs. Leboeuf and her family doctor had its inception after she had been married 20 years to James Leboeuf, manager of the Morgan City Electric Light plant.

For nine years, secretly but in the surroundings of her home, near her husband for whom she had borne four children, at fishing camps, on picnics and along the shores of nearby lakes, they courted. They evaded the husband but found the evasions were becoming difficult. Then they made their decision—Leboeuf was to be "put out of the way." The husband was invited to attend a private outing.

The victim was lured into a rowboat on a lake July 1, 1927, and was shot.

From James Beadle, a trapper and friend, they borrowed a hunting knife. The body of Leboeuf was slit open, weighted down with iron slugs and dropped to the bottom of the lake.

Beadle was convicted of first degree murder and sentenced to life imprisonment for aiding in the crime.

Weeks Farms Opening Today

try houses, each with a capacity of 600 hens. These lots will range in price from $400 to $600.

The second tract is known as Lake View Farms, and contains about 800 acres, lying between the Johnson poultry ranch and Lake Wichita, and joining Westmoreland park on the west. This lot is cut into farms of from seven to 30 acres each, and will range in price from $250 to $450 per acre, according to location. Not only poultry raising, gardening and fruit cultivation, but considerable dairying is possible on farms in this section.

The third section is the Rancho Vista tract, of about 500 acres, which lies west of Westmoreland park, bordering on the Seymour paved highway. Farms in this area contain from 5 to 40 acres each, and will be priced at $250 to $450 per acre.

Irrigation with water from Lake Kemp extends to all parts of the three tracts, and will be supplied at a cost of $3.50 annually per acre. It is planned, according to Mr. Weeks, to include other lands in the project at a later date.

Farm School

Mr. Weeks' plans for the small farm colony here call for the establishment of a practical school of intensive farming and poultry development, in which students will be enabled to pay all of their expenses by work on the farms in the community, as well as a large community house in which the social life of the hundreds of residents may be fostered. Marketing of eggs and other products at the highest current prices is promised through the medium of an association similar to that which now commands the entire output of the two small farm communities developed during the last 12 years by Mr. Weeks at Palo Alto and Owensmouth, Calif.

Would You Know One If You Saw It?

If you ever came face to face with a germ, would you recognize it? Of course it is not likely that you ever will see a germ, unless you own a tremendously powerful microscope, for you would have to magnify one over a thousand times to make it as big as a pin head. But you should recognize the fact that these tiny germs can get into your blood streams through the smallest cut, and give you typhoid fever, tuberculosis, lockjaw, blood poisoning, and many more dangerous and perhaps fatal diseases. There is one sure safeguard against these dangers — washing every cut, no matter how small, thoroughly with Liquid Borozone, the safe antiseptic. You can get Liquid Borozone at Miller Drug Store.

Too Much "Dosing" Lowers Resistance to Flu-Attacks

A peculiarity of 'nfluenza is that its toxins upset the digestive system. Too much "dosing" especially in the case of children still further disturbs the digestion, and should be avoided except on advice of a physician.

Vicks VapoRub is especially valuable because it is applied externally and so can be used freely with no risk of upsetting the digestion. Nor can it interfere with any other treatment your doctor may prescribe.

Rubbed on the throat and chest, Vicks acts two ways at once: (1) through the skin like a poultice, and (2) By means of its medicated vapors, released by body-warmth and inhaled direct to the inflamed air-passages.—Adv.

Chicken thieves escaped with 70 hens valued at more than $100 Thursday night in "wholesale" raid upon a chicken house owned by W. T. Johnson, who resides on the Iowa Park road, according to reports received Friday morning at police headquarters.

The thieves are believed to have driven a truck along the highway close to the chicken roost and used it as a means of transporting the stolen fowls.

No members of the Johnson family were at home at the time of the theft.

A purse containing $46 in cash was stolen from the home of O. D. Harless, 1404 North Sixth street, by house prowlers who entered the residence through a rear door Thursday night, reports to the police stated.

G. W. Donnelly reported the loss of a tire from his automobile while two tires were reported to have been taken from a car at 1702 Pearl street.

Three bicycles which were stolen in the downtown section Thursday night were recovered in a vacant lot on Lee street Friday morning by Fred Fountain and Chris Jensen, city officers.

Mother Seeks Custody Of Child in Suit Here

A legal battle for the custody of a five year old girl will be waged between the child's mother and Wichita county in a hearing before Judge P. A. Martin Saturday morning.

The child was taken by Juvenile Officer J. A. McDonald last Monday upon the suggestion of city officers, Mr. McDonald said. The mother at that time was in jail. Since then the little girl has been under the care of Miss Katheryn Henricle, superintendent of the Children's Aid society.

The mother, a 25-year-old woman, Friday brought an application for a writ of habeas corpus before Judge P. A. Martin, alleging that the child was illegally held and that the mother had been wrongfully kept from seeing her.

J. A. Lants, representing the mother, will plead that the child has all the physical and moral necessities of life and should not be declared a ward of the county.

'BOSSY' TAKES ON NEW ROLE

Dairying Seen as Balancing Factor

By LUCILLE CLENDENIN
Special Correspondent

STAMFORD, Texas, Feb. 1.—Bossy has become an animal useful for other purposes than to be driven out of the cornfield. In West Texas she not only has become one of the best markets for feed crops grown, and made it possible for the farmer to have something to fall back on when cotton and other crops fail but she also produces a steady all year round income and in a number of cases has become the main source of support of the farmer and his family.

Backed by Bankers

Dairying in West Texas has become such a balancing factor in the agricultural program that merchants, bankers and professional men are as keenly alive to its value as the farmers are. It is no longer impossible to get financial backing on a dairying venture even if the price of the stock to be purchased is one which would have been called preposterous in former years.

The introduction of bull circles, the holding of dairy shows and the worth while prizes offered at them have all contributed to the growing interest in dairying. The establishment of cream routes, and the good prices paid for both sweet and sour cream have also aided materially in putting the dairy business in good favor.

Better Than Cotton

One citizen in a West Texas town who started with four dairy cows two years ago and now has 14 head states that they are surer money than cotton. He declares he can make more money clear year after year than could be made on 400 acres planted to cotton. He expects to build his own herd to 25 to 30 good dairy cows, raise less cotton and more feed, and let the other fellow worry about the price of cotton, the ravages of the boll worms, and his new relative, the pink boll worm.

In Brownwood the majority of the farmers sell their cream. Most of the farmers living close to town bring their cream in to the creamery built last March at a cost of approximately $75,000. Other farmers sell the whole milk.

An ice plant was built in connection with the creamery and the men who make the routes gathering the cream deliver ice at the same time. The creamery makes ice cream, pasteurized milk and Bulgarian butter milk.

The number of cows around Brownwood totals from one to 100 on each farm, with the owners of the larger herds supplying the whole milk to consumers in the town. From 30 to 40 bulls in circles in the county keep the standard of stock graded high.

Milk Routes Assured

The bonds which recently have been voted in Brown county to improve about 300 miles of lateral roads and make all highways concrete or macadam will make the establishment of milk routes in every neighborhood practical and certain.

The development of the dairy industry in Spur is shown by the fact that a census to determine the number of dairy cattle in Dickens county last spring found an average of four cows to every farm. Since that time the establishment of a cream factory which makes it possible for the farmers to market their cream either sweet or sour has increased the interest. The cream plant makes about 2,000 pounds of butter from sweet cream per week at present.

Interest Grows

There are some $10,000 worth of dairy cattle in the Spur trade territory. Thirteen head of jerseys, which breed seems to be most popular, were purchased at the State Fair Sales in, Dallas in October. The interest in the industry is rapidly becoming more than just a side issue with farmers in the territory, and they are studying the feeding and care of the stock, and other problems relative to dairying.

At Tulia 60 dairy farmers are endeavoring to build up line bred herds. Several years ago the Tulia Chamber of Commerce and the First National bank purchased 10 bulls at the price of $300 a head. They were purchased at a price that was very low on account of the lack of demand for Jerseys at that time, and were from world famous sires, which, in the opinion of Tulia authorities, could not be duplicated today for $1,000 per head.

During the year 1922 dairy products barely exceeded $100,000. Today the cream checks alone average better than $1,000 per day, each day of the year. The cream checks handled through one bank in Tulia exceed $20,000 monthly.

One hundred and twelve herds are on the accredited plan with the United States Department of Agriculture, which fosters price in stock and encourages building of more dairy barns with better equipment.

Ranger Interested

Ranger is interested in dairying to such an extent that a series of meetings, were inaugurated by dairymen and farmers Jan. 17. These meetings are to be held for the purpose of developing the dairy business in this territory, to create further interest in the establishment of dairies and the purchasing of registered dairy cows. Feeding problems, testing management, diseases of animals, marketing of products, care of milk and other dairy topics will be discussed in the series of meetings.

Plainview Show

Plainview is a leader in the cities interested in dairying in the South Plains. Plainview is the home of the Panhandle Plains Dairy Show, and the second annual show to be held April 2 to 5 inclusive will offer $5,392 in premiums. Premiums will be offered for Jerseys, Holstein Guernseys, grade cows, production contest, county herd, vocational agricultural students judging contest, 4-H club boys' judging contest and dairy products.

Bandits Take Swain's Car But Let Him Have The Damsel

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 1. (UP)—Nicholas J. Metzger, who was brave enough to look into three revolvers and tell three bandits what they could take and what they couldn't, was minus his car today. But his sweetheart, Miss Loretto Kuehnle, is safe.

The gunmen took Metzger's money, and the girl's jewelry and fur coat.

"Now beat it," they told Metzger, "we're going to take your car and your girl."

"I'll be damned if you do," said Metzger. "You can have the car, but you'll take my girl over my dead body."

The three revolvers wavered, and then their muzzles dropped. The bandits drove off in the car, and left the girl in Metzger's arms.

Congress Hears Texas Protection Requests

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1. (AP)—Two resolutions passed by the Texas legislature were read on the floor of the house here today at the request of Representative Black, Democrat, Texas.

One urged that congress in writing a tariff law give products of the ranch, the farm and the orchard, protection equal to that accorded those of factory and mine.

The other urged return to Southern states the records seized during the civil war.

Black discussed varjous duties placed on agricultural products under the Fordney-McCumber tariff act and praised the tariff plank adopted by the Democrats at the Houston convention.

Auditor Asks Damages For Hurts in Battle

OKLAHOMA CITY, Feb. 1 (UP)—C. L. Butler, former assistant state auditor, today filed suit here against Col. W. S. Key, former warden of the state penitentiary, for $35,000.

The action was the outgrowth of a fight between the pair, Jan. 17, which followed publication of an old prison audit in which Butler charged Key with irregularities in his supervision of the prison. Key was succeeded as warden two years ago.

The fight between the pair took place in the Huckins hotel. Key was fined $25 in justice court the next day when he pleaded guilty to assault.

Butler alleged in his petition that Key struck him several blows, knocked him against a table, claiming several teeth were loosened, and a deep gash cut in his lip.

For Those Who Fear Matrimony, Here Are the Odds—Fifty-Fifty

The Man Who Is Afraid to Get Married—Is Jealousy a Sign of Love?—Hero's Medal for the Man Who Would Marry a Widow With Four Children.

Dear Miss Dix—I am a man just past 35 years of age. I have a good position, a nice savings account, and am seriously considering marriage, but I see so much domestic misery all around me that I hesitate to take the risk when I am so well off as I am.

Would marriage take away too much of a man's independence? Is the institution of marriage a success after all?—E. A. B.

Answer—If you never went into any enterprise, Mr. E. A. B., until you found the one that was foolproof, you would spend your life sitting on the do-nothing stool twiddling your thumbs.

There is no field of human activity in which there are not plenty of failures. There are men who fail as preachers. Men who fail as lawyers. Men who fail as doctors Men who fail as writers, as musicians. Men who fail as merchants, as bankers, as farmers, as clerks, as salesmen. Yet there are plenty of other men who make successes in every one of these occupations and professions.

You wouldn't refrain from taking a good job because you know a man who has been fired by his employer. Knowing that a corner grocery store is in the hands of a receiver wouldn't keep you out of the grocery trade. The fact that you know a doctor who is down and out wouldn't prevent you from studying medicine if you felt you had an aptitude for the profession.

Why, then, be scared of matrimony because you have run across some scrapping husbands and wives, and seen a number of marriages land on the scrap heap? You can no more argue that marriage is a failure because some men and women fail to make a go of it than you can argue that law is a failure or that the dry goods business is a failure because some lawyers have no clients, and some dry goods merchants go into bankruptcy.

Every marriage is an individual experiment and it is a success or a failure, it brings happiness or misery, according to the amount of effort, good will, patience and common sense that the high contracting parties put into it.

There is nothing the matter with the institution of marriage. The trouble is with the quitters who think that they should get everything and give nothing in return, and who throw up their hands and rush for the divorce courts when they find out that marriage means work, and worry, and sacrifice, instead of being a perpetual party.

So don't be afraid to take a chance on matrimony if you have found the right sort of a girl. At its worst it is a good sporting proposition, where you have a fifty-fifty chance of winning out, and if you do win out, you will find that in having a happy home with a devoted wife and children you have got the best thing that life can give a man.

Whereas, if you refrain from getting married because you are afraid to take the risk, you will find that life grows cold, and empty, and dreary, and lonely, with no close family ties to keep the heart warm. The truth of the old adage that nothing venture, nothing have, is never better exemplified than in marriage.

Undoubtedly marriage does deprive a man of much of his freedom. When he takes upon himself the responsibilities of wife and children he gives hostages to fortune, and he is no longer free to follow his own inclinations as a bachelor is.

The bachelor may roam where he lists. The married man is nailed to his job because he has a family to support. The bachelor may do as he pleases. The married man must do as his wife pleases and consider her tastes and inclinations before his own. The bachelor may come home any old time, and spend his evenings disporting himself with the boys. The married man must be a fireside companion, and feel himself lucky to get one evening out a week.

Undoubtedly matrimony puts a crimp in a man's liberty, but no man has a right to get married unless he is willing to lay his freedom on the altar of matrimony, and make his bondage a willing bondage.—DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Dorothy Dix—My son is married to a woman who is a neat dresser, clean in her house, an excellent cook, and who would make a good wife if it were not for her jealousy. But, although my son is a fine, moral, Christian man, who has never given her the slightest reason to distrust him, she makes his life a hell on earth by her insane jealousy. He must have no friends, male or female. Never does a soul come to their home. She takes away his salary and allows him no pocket money, and goes through his pockets at night to see if he has had any letters from any one. If he comes home 10 minutes late he is accused of having been with some other woman, and there is a wild scene. He dare not even speak to one of the neighbor's girls. He must not love his mother, or give her anything.

My son has borne with this woman for years with angelic patience, but now he can stand it no longer and is on the verge of a mental and physical breakdown. His wife says that she does not love him, but that no other woman shall have him, so she will not give him a divorce, although he begs her to.

What can my son do? Is jealousy a sign of love?

—A TROUBLED MOTHER.

Answer—Jealousy is not a sign of love. It is an indication of colossal selfishness, and it comes from the desire of one individual to monopolize another and to dominate him or her. Love seeks the happiness of the beloved one. Jealousy seeks only the gratification of its own desires and does not hesitate to make its object utterly miserable in order to achieve its own end.

There is no rational way of dealing with jealous people because they are not amenable to reason. They are to all intents and purposes crazy, and their minds are filled with evil that they attribute to others. They feed upon the suspicions that originate in their own foul souls, and believe others capable of the sensuality, the lack of faith of which they would be guilty if they had the opportunity.

Your son has been foolish and weak to give in to his jealous tyrant of a wife so long and let her enslave him, and the thing for him to do is to make a break for freedom and salvage what happiness he can. No court in the world would force a man to live with a woman who took away all of his earnings from him, and who refused even to let him speak to a woman, or be good to his old mother.

If that isn't inflicting mental cruelty on him, I don't know what is. A proof of such inhuman treatment should be good for a divorce anywhere.—DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I am a man of 30 in love with a widow of 33, who has four children. I want to marry her, but she thinks my mother would not approve of it. Why should my mother object?—K. M. T.

Answer—Your mother would probably object because she would think that you were going out of your way to hunt for trouble in taking such a big ready-made family on your shoulders.

It takes a lot of money to feed, and clothe, and educate four children, and take out their tonsils, and straighten their teeth and get them all the doodahs that the modern youngsters seem to require. And while a man may really enjoy doing this for his own children, it is something else again, Mawruss, when it is slaving for another man's children.

If you have the high and heroic spirit that prompts you to sell yourself into slavery for the sake of love, go to it. A widow with four children needs help, and here's hoping that somebody will pin a hero's medal on your breast. You will deserve it.—DOROTHY DIX.

When the sun goes south for the winter

eat canned fruits and vegetables, sweetened for enjoyment

GLANCE at a chart of the United States showing all of the fruits and vegetables with the time when they come on the market, and you will be amazed at how many long months there are that are almost completely blank.

This of course means that during those months the sun goes south for the winter. It is the concern of every man, woman and child to see that health does not go south with the sun.

Viewed in this true light, the canning factories and sugar refineries of this country extend the season of fruits and vegetables into the winter. They place the health-giving fruits and vegetables, together with their acids, minerals and vitamines, in protecting cans, and place these in every grocery store throughout the United States where we can buy them with almost no difficulty at all, and the sugar refineries produce the sweetening to make these healthful foods delicious to the taste.

During the long months of winter every meal from breakfast to dinner may well contain some health-giving canned foods. Canned fruits, jams, jellies and preserves for breakfast, and canned fruits and vegetables for luncheon and dinner.

People are living longer than they used to. Isn't part of this probably due to the increasing use in the winter-time of canned foods? Eat enough of these healthful foods made enjoyable with sugar. A bit of sweet makes the meal complete. The Sugar Institute.

BAYLOR GIRLS STAGE BRAWL

Abduction of Class Head Is Cause of Battle

WACO, Texas, Feb. 1 (UP)—Intense rivalry, based on traditional conflicts between the sophomore and freshman classes, flamed into a free for all fight between first and second year coeds of Baylor university here late yesterday and ended in many of the sophomore girls taking a ride in Waco's "Black Maria."

The fighting took place at the rear of a dormitory dedicated to "education and piety."

Excitement keyed up by the sudden abduction of Willord Wilfong, sophomore class president, to prevent his presiding at the annual sophomore banquet Saturday night and his later recovery by classmates near Lockhart, converted the coed rivalry into a series of combats and fights throughout the afternoon.

Opposing coeds were locked in dormitory compartments by their rivals and their faces painted with black and red hair dye. Police broke up the fight and carted a group of sophomore leaders away.

LAWYER HEARD IN INDIAN CASE

'Hijacking Justice,' Charges Made in Inquiry

OKLAHOMA CITY, Feb. 1. (UP)—William Neff, Tulsa attorney, who has been linked in Indian land title cases being examined by the house supreme court investigation, began his testimony today.

He was questioned on a case styled Kelley vs. the New State Land company. The case involved 320 acres of Creek county oil land and was settled for $140,000.

Cas M. Bradley, J. W. Myers, and C. W. Turner, Muskogee real estate men, testified concerning their relationship in the case. Their testimony was substantially the same.

Myers and Bradley testified Neff contracted with them that for certain information he would give them a share in the judgment. The suit was brought in the name of Robert and Sukey Kelly, Cree Indians.

After relating all incidents concerning the transfer of the land, they testified Neff obtained the services of Allen & Underwood, Tulsa law firm, to aid him in prosecuting the appeal of the case in the state supreme court.

R. C. Allen, who is a former partner of former Chief Justice Fred P. Branson, had been charged in the testimony before the committee with having influence with the supreme court.

A $10,000 fee was reluctantly paid by them to Allen & Underwood, Myers and Bradley testified.

"I know we were hijacked for $10,000 to get justice," Myers testified.

The case was finally settled with the Wilcox Oil and Gas company paying $140,000 judgment to the litigants. The $140,000 was divided $8,000 to Myers; $28,000 to Allen & Underwood; $20,000 to Neff; $40,000 to the two Indians; $18,000 to John P. Cooper, attorney who had a contract with the Indians; $18,000 to Bradley and $8,000 to an attorney named Simms, Myers testified.

Trial court ruled against Neff's client. The supreme court upheld them. The Wilcox Oil and Gas company carried the case to the U. S. supreme court, which refused to take jurisdiction.

BRITISH NAVAL PLANS HEFTY

18 Major Ships Projected For Great Empire

LONDON, Feb. 1. (INS)—Despite the Kellogg anti-war treaty, disarmament conferences and a demand for economy, there is little likelihood of the British naval estimates for 1929-30 showing any reduction from the total of $286,500,000, voted for the financial year just closing.

In well informed circles it is declared the British parliament will be asked to authorize the construction of the following new vessels:

One 10,000 cruiser of the "county" class. Two 8,400 ton cruisers, one flotilla leader, eight destroyers and six submarines.

A new aircraft carrier and several sloops are also projected, but the introduction of another long-term building program is considered improbable. From 1930 onwards the requirements of the British navy are expected to be assessed year by year, according to the building activities of the other powers. The fact that the 1931 naval conference at Washington may result in further limitation of cruiser construction is being borne in mind.

New Member In Caterpillar Club

DAVENPORT, Iowa, Feb. 1. (UP)—The Caterpillar club, which is reputed one of the most exclusive organizations in the country and numbers among its members Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, admitted a new member today.

He was Jack Story, pilot of the Kansas City-to-Chicago run of the National Air Transport lines, who met the club's entrance requirements by jumping from his plane 3,000 feet above Davenport.

Story ran out of gasoline during a blizzard. Before leaping, he turned off the ignition of his plane and set the stabilizer in the hope that it would land without catching fire and destroying the cargo of mail.

Although the plane crashed in a field two miles north of here, the mail was not damaged.

The caterpillar club includes all air mail pilots who have been forced to jump from their planes.

WONDERFUL, STATES FORT WORTH MAN

Thousands of Texas people are now taking the Sargon Treatment with the most astonishing and gratifying results and scores of men and women are daily telling what the new scientific formula has done for them.

Among the latest to give enthusiastic praise to Sargon is H. M. Maxfield, of 304 East Fifteenth street, Fort Worth, who says:

"I wouldn't take any amount of money for the good Sargon did me and I know a lot of people who are taking it and praising the Sargon Treatment just as I am doing. It seems to me that I've taken enough other medicine to stock a drug store but nothing else did me any good until I got Sargon.

"About three years ago I became terribly run-down, nervous and anaemic. My liver was out of order and I was nearly always constipated and bilious. Nothing I ate agreed with me. I tried dieting, but that didn't help. Gas pains would shoot through my stomach and up into my chest. I would taste my food and frequently was so weak and sick I could hardly stay on my feet.

"At nights I was so nervous I couldn't sleep and would stay awake half the night. My breath was bad, my tongue was coated and I lost weight and strength until I didn't have any energy. I was susceptible to colds, too—would have one right after another and they were very stubborn and would hang on for weeks.

"Everybody seemed to be talking about Sargon Treatment so I got some and right from the first dose almost I began to feel better. I never saw anything like it. Now, nothing disagrees with me. My appetite is good and I eat what I want without a sign of gas pains or distress of any kind. I sleep like a tired boy and in the morning I just feel fine. All my nervousness is gone and I am brimful of new strength and energy.

"And to show that Sargon has built up my vitality I haven't had a cold since I started taking it and besides I've gained four pounds. The Sargon Soft Mass Pills are the most wonderful laxative I ever heard of. They ended my constipation without upsetting my system or making me sick in the least. Just have anybody ask me about the Sargon Treatment."

Sargon may be obtained in Wichita Falls from the Renfro Drug Co., Eighth and Scott streets, No. 1 main store, and Seventh and Indiana, No. 2; and in Electra from Lough's Drug store.—Adv.

Jesuits Offer Opposition To Settlement Plan

By PRINCE PIGNATELLI

(Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service)

ROME, Feb. 1.—New obstacles loom in the path of settlement of the Roman question. It is reported today from a reliable source that the Jesuit order is strongly opposed to the settlement plan.

The opposition seems to resolve itself into a bitter battle within the the church—the Jesuits against the adherents of the Barone-Pacelli scheme, headed by Cardinal Gasparri, papal secretary of state.

Father Ledochowski, supreme head of the Jesuits, and termed the "black pope," is now touring Europe and will later go to America with the believed purpose of gathering the consensus of clergymen and laity of the Roman question.

The report today would indicate strong opposition outside of Italy. One previous Jesuit proponent of the plan, Father Tacchi-Venturi, who has long been a minor intermediary in the negotiations between the vatican and the government, has gone into seclusion.

Blackmail Threat On Hero of Rescue

NEW YORK, Feb. 1. (UP)—A threat to kill Chief Officer Harry Manning, hero of the rescue of the Florida crew last week, unless his mother paid $7,000 was reported by detectives today.

The report could not be confirmed as Mrs. Manning was "upset and ill" at her home.

Detectives said the threat was embodied in a letter which had been mailed at the general postoffice here Wednesday evening. It directed Mrs. Manning to leave $7,000 in the hallway of 809 Grinity avenue, the Bronx, "or your son will be dead by Sunday."

"Don't use marked money, for we know all the tricks," the letter added.

M'FARLANE HAS PRISON PLAN

Graham Senator Proposes Unit Management

AUSTIN, Feb. 1. (INS)—The second shot in the prison reform battle was fired today when Senator McFarlane, of Graham, introduced in the senate his reform measure calling for the sale of the Shaw farm and empowering the prison commission to execute the modernization, centralization and reorganization of the prison system.

Provisions from the sale of the Shaw farm follow the plan advanced in the Holbrook senate measure providing for the disposal of the land.

Under McFarlane's measure, one central manager would be employed to supervise the entire system. It would allow the prison board to install such equipment as may be necessary for the manufacture of products needed in the institution and would allow the board of control to contract for products of the penitentiaries for use in the state eleemosynary institutions.

Archie Parr of Benavides, directed another shot in the highway controversy by offering a bill in the senate increasing the number of highway commissioners from three to nine and calling for their election by the people. No radical change in their powers is advanced.

Huge Utilities Company Formed

NEW YORK, Feb. 1. (AP)—Formation of a new $35,000,000 public utility holding company to be known as the Empire Public Service corporation was announced today. Properties to be acquired serve 140 communities in Maryland, Ohio, Kansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Texas and Colorado.

The company, to be incorporated in Delaware, is being organized by Floyd W. Woodcock, New York, and a group of public utility men. It will take over, the announcement said, the Electric Public Utilities company, Southwest Utilities corporation, Home Electric Light company, Antietam Electric Light and Power company, Midland Electric Light company and the Emittsburgh Electric company.

Bolters Can Vote

RICHMOND, Va., Feb. 1. (UP)—Atty. Gen. John R. Saunders ruled today that Democrats who voted for Hoover in the last presidential election are entitled to participate in the August, 1929, primary which will nominate candidates for governor and other state officers.

Coolidge Points to American Living Conditions as Result of Equality

MOUNTAIN LAKE, Fla., Feb. 1. (INS)—President Coolidge today looked upon life as it is lived in these United States and found it to be good.

He found a contented populace, enjoying its autos, its radios and its movies; and above all, he found a tried and true form of government set Gibraltar-like on the fundamental principles of equality and freedom.

The occasion for Mr. Coolidge's observations anent the political and normal make-up of the nation over which he has presided for the past five and a half years was the dedication of a bird sanctuary and a "singing tower," set up by Edward Bok, the Philadelphia publisher, and bestowed upon the people. The president had come all the way down to this winter playground solely to deliver the dedicatory address. This evening he and his party will return to Washington with only a short six hours of Florida sunshine behind them.

"When we erected our institutions on the basic theory of equality," said Mr. Coolidge, "our ability under such conditions to produce the finer things of life immediately was challenged. The correctness of our theory has been more and more demonstrated by the course of events. We have been able to raise up individuals who stand out in history undimmed by any comparisons to which they can be subjected. Our artistic growth has been constant and in its individual examples and its general application it is not excelled by any other people.

"In its main purpose to create a nation and increase intelligence, stability and character our republic has met with unexampled success. It has been thoroughly demonstrated that the principle of equality is sound. Faith in our people stands vindicated beyond further discussion. Into their hands we have entirely trusted the future of our nation."

Turning to the home life of these people, the president found naught about which to complain.

"The advantages that are enjoyed by people of moderate means," he observed, "including the great mass of wage earners, were never so great as they are at present. Not only is their income proportionately greater than ever before, but their whole method of life, their opportunities to secure benefits which but a short time ago were the exclusive possession of the rich, have been tremendously increased. I have already referred to the broadening field of education. Another new element is the wide use of the automobile. Whole families are able to have the beneficial results of travel at an outlay which is so small that it is practically within the reach of everyone. Within the last few years, the radio has come to afford entertainment and instruction to a great body of our people this has greatly enriched the life of those who were recently looked upon as poor."

Through the medium of the motion picture all that is attractive and instructive in the art of acting and the presentation of scenery is to be had at a very moderate cost. All

Secretary of War Makes Allotment for Harbors

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1. (INS)—Secretary of War Davis today included in allotments made for maintenance and improvement of river and harbor work an item of $2,000,000 to be spent on the Missouri river from Kansas City to the mouth. The money will be spent for channel rectification, bank protection work and the construction of a plane, the nature of which was not disclosed.

Blind Organist's Testimony Brings Friend's Conviction

CHICAGO, Feb. 1. (AP)—A jury today believed the story of a blind organist that he could recognize persons by their voices and in 10 minutes convicted Fred Leonardi of robbery, carrying with it a sentence of from one to twenty years imprisonment.

Richard Boehler, the organist, testified Leonardi had been his best friend. He said he and Leonardi were driving home when Leonardi stopped the automobile. A few seconds later a voice commanded him to hold up his hands and he was robbed of $100 and his watch.

The blind organist said he recognized the robber's voice as Leonardi's.

THE STAG AT BAY

Daily Editorial

THE Rockefellers simply won't keep off the wires.

At the moment, the two John D's are planning a Place de l'Opera on Fifth avenue, offering Egypt a $10,000,000 museum, marshalling their cash reserves and challenging the Stewart camp to a finish fight for Standard Oil of Indiana.

On March 7, the world will witness a championship bout between expediency and idealism.

The Rockefeller fortune is backing the principle that big business owes its first duty to representative government.

Colonel Stewart is defending the theory that a corporation head's primary responsibility is toward his stockholders and their dividends.

Mr. Rockefeller holds that Colonel Stewart's record in the oil scandal unfits him for his position. And Colonel Stewart's adherents point to company earnings, jury verdicts, and announce their intention to back him to the last share of procurable stock.

A battlefield of gold, on which Titans will hurl bank resources and trust funds—a war of Midases, which theratens to disrupt Wall street alliances and break Broad street lineups that have held rank for a quarter-century.

A once incredible situation—a spectacle without precedent—the richest man on earth at financial bay, his power denied, his prestige defied, and his authority questioned in his own domain!

Times have considerably changed since their days. Money-masters taught dancing lessons with much shorter whips, then.

THE sons of old Anselm tolerated no rebellions in their realm. Kings and chancellors did their bidding, and woe betide the non-conformist!

Spain's memory still smarts at the birching she received when Madrid "put on a high hat," and cancelled a bond underwriting. With a piddling $9,000,000, the Rothschilds crossed the Pyrennes and gave the royal treasury such a hiding that national consols fell from 70 to 37—a mere bear cub spreading panic through European markets!

Nowadays, the prospect of clashing billions doesn't even give the stock-ticker a heart skip.

Present scopes of operation are too great for one-man control. Group direction is fast succeeding autocracy, everywhere.

Caesar's occupation is gone. Consolidation is mightier than individualism.

The young bucks are uniting against the old stags.

At ninety, John D. must stand the sternest test of his invincible career.

And, don't you bet on the outcome.

One Kind of Blindness

THE MAN who has lost his sight is greatly to be pitied. But the man who has eyes and does not know how to use them is in an even worse plight.

A New York newspaper writer, crossing to Europe for a mid-winter vacation, writes a chatty little article about the trip and remarks that an ocean voyage is a bit of a bore.

"There is only one interesting ocean trip, and that is the first," he says airily. "Take it from one on his 16th crossing. The rest have a rubber stamp monotony."

A great deal of empty water, covered by an equally large expanse of empty sky, may not be the most exciting of spectacles. Yet, for a man who has eyes in his head and a little imagination and appreciation for beauty back of them, it is far from monotonous.

Every ocean trip, for the landsman, is a venture into the unknown. The ship lies in the center of an empty plain, steaming always toward an unattainable horizon where sky and water meet. The things that can be seen from the deck do not vary much—yet they are never the same. They offer a sure way of escape from the ties that bind one too close to earth. Beyond the horizon there may lie anything—the island of Avalon or the Gulf of Darien or the yellow beach of San Salvador, glowing bright as a beacon for a roving admiral. At dawn, if the traveler gets up to see it, there is an empty hush and a strange light that are not of this world; at sunset there is a gleam in the sky from an untraveled country.

All of this, of course, is for the man who has eyes to see it. Some men do not. For them, no doubt, a sea voyage is a bore—something to be lived through for the sake of what lies beyond.

But such men are to be pitied. They miss so much. The world is full of them; men who move through a pageant of mystery and splendor, surrounded by signs from heaven and echoes from distant trumpets, who see nothing and hear nothing, who look on life as a simple, unexciting business of eating and sleeping and getting and spending. You have met them; everybody has. At sea or ashore, they see only the matter-of-fact and the obvious. Not once do they get a vision of life as it is—a glow of dull-smouldering flames on a curtain of eternal blackness, rising at times to peaks of brilliance that touch all about them with a radiance that dispels the shadows and permits a peep into eternity.

It is easy, in this modern world, to fall into that attitude. There are so many material, three-dimension bits of furniture in the world that it is not hard to let them hold the attention to the exclusion of everything else. But to live that way is to fail tragically. To go through a lifetime and fail to get an inkling of the beauty, the power and the glory that surround the meanest mortal—this is the worst kind of blindness.

"There is only one interesting ocean trip and that is the first." To be sure; if you're that kind of man.

Songbirds in Hawaii

THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE of Hilo, Hawaii, is urging every resident of the island to buy a songbird.

Birds make pleasant pets, to be sure. But the Hilo chamber is wise enough to realize that a cage is no place for a pet of that kind. It wants Hawaiians to buy birds on the mainland, take them to Hawaii—and then turn them loose.

There is something extremely fetching about that suggestion. The people of Hawaii will be serving themselves well if they follow it. Setting the birds free will restock the islands with songbirds and make life more pleasant for everyone.

The Wild Hog Passeth

THE WILD RAZORBACK HOG, for years one of the most striking bits of animal life in the state of Arkansas, is apparently on the verge of extinction.

Students at the University of Arkansas plan to present a razorback to the undergraduate who is held to have done the most for the university during the present school year. When they adopted this plan they figured that getting the porker would be the least of their troubles. But now they are finding that the razorback is by no means as common as he used to be.

Accordingly, a bulletin from the university's news bureau says that the students are going to make a statewide search for a razorback. Time was when these wild hogs were so plentiful as to be a veritable nuisance—but that time has passed. Arkansas is no longer a backwoods state.

WE HAVE TO PAY FOR THEM

Speaking of something for nothing, reminds me that any number of people are in the habit of coming into the Democrat office and saying, "I want a paper." They seem to think that newspapers are free, but honestly, folks, we have to pay for them ourselves.

PEACE PACTS AND LIQUOR PROBLEMS

It seems that this Kellogg-Briand war outlawry pact is likely to be very difficult to enforce, and since we have decided to join up, we must get busy with an extensive naval building program and also increase the personnel of our army, for there is nothing like being ready for peace.

But with the army and navy engaged in the enforcement of prohibition, as has been suggested, we dislike the idea of taking on any more work for them, as it appears is certain to be the case now that our name is on the dotted line, and initiation fees, dues, etc., have been paid.

We find that the idea of using these arms of the service in the enforcement problem, rather appeals to us, in fact we rather felt all along that with a battle cruiser, a couple of destroyers and a submarine on the city reservoir, the local situation could be handled very nicely.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

Broadway Chatter by Grant Dixon

By GRANT DIXON

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—A very important election was held in one of the strongest unions in New York recently and two momentous things happened. First, the treasurer found himself in possession of a rubber check for $35. The other was the fact that the administration was beaten decisively even though a member of each faction sat on the ballot boxes until the count the morning after the polls closed.

It all came about in this way. Under the union rules a member must be in good standing to enable him to vote. Joe had been a member of the union for many years, but had forgotten to pay his dues for more than three years. He boasted around that he was going to vote at the present election. It was then that his attention was called to the rule about being paid up before he could even go to the polls.

So Joe, after looking over the field, decided that he had better get himself a check book. This he did and wrote out a check for the amount due the union. Then he voted. In due time the check bounced right back to the treasurer, who had sent it through his bank. Trouble was in store for Joe. When told he had committed a crime in issuing a bad check, he tried to laugh it off by asking:

"Ain't you satisfied that I did not make the check for $100 instead of $35 and take the difference in cash?"

That made the boys pretty sore. So a committee of the union waited on Joe and told him he was in for a lot of trouble unless he made good the check. They even threatened to protest his vote if he didn't get busy and make good at once. They told him they would throw him out of the union.

Everything the secretary and treasurer told Joe was just so many words. Then his boss, not a union man, heard of the manner in which Joe had flimflammed his pals and told him he would have to make good to his union or he would not protest any action they might take against him. Joe finally saw the error he had made and in two payments settled with his union. That protected his vote, but now he is telling the members of his wing of the gang that next time he will work against the present treasurer, who had caused him so much trouble, and defeat him.

The fact that the boys of the union do not trust to ballot boxes that are not double padlocked after the slit at the top has been properly sealed, was also told after Joe's troubles with his associates. It was a record vote in the union. New faces had appeared as prospective officers and all hands were brought out to do battle at the polls.

When the boxes were officially closed did the men directly interested, along with their political managers, leave the boxes and go home to rest?

They did not. Four men to each of four boxes kept the vigil for the night. Not a soul moved far enough away to permit anybody to do a thing to those precious ballots within the wooden boxes. Then the solemn board of canvassers went to work with enough tabulators to count the vote in any assembly district.

Despite all these precautions and the early propaganda, the new set of officers with two exceptions were ousted from their jobs. A new bunch was in command with the exception of the treasurer and another. Joe says the treasurer will lose his job next time the boys are permitted to vote on the subject. And further he says he will keep his dues paid up and be able not only to vote, but do vengeance to the one who has held him up to ridicule in his union.

Strange sights there are to be seen in New York, and the strangest thing is that most people accept them without a second glance around. The other day, for instance, a big lumber truck drove right up into City Hall park and two men began unloading it and shooting two by sixes and a whole lot of long planks right down a hole under the pavement alongside the old Tweed courthouse. In no time at all the big load of lumber had disappeared down the hole.

A business man walking through the park stopped and looked for a minute.

"I wish I had the courage to ask those fellows," he said to a friend, "what on earth they will do down under ground with a whole load of lumber. But, the fact is, it's none of my business!"

That is the motto, it seems, after all.

There is an ordinance or a police regulation or something of the sort, the inveterate New Yorker was saying, that prevents empty taxicabs from cruising through the crowded theatrical district at theater time. The police have their hands full, it seems, with taxicabs containing persons who want to get some place, without having to take care of the taxis seeking fares.

The rule is nicely circumvented, he went on to say, to the benefit of shrewd taxi drivers and the greater benefit of a group of small boys. These chaps stand on the outer boundaries of the forbidden district and taxi men, desirous of cruising through, pick them up and are glad to give them a ride.

Some of them even pay the kids for taking a spin!

"'But Joey, ve ain't got no $55 suits in the house! Our $35 suits are the highest!'

The VICARION

The Astounding Story of an Invention Greater Than the Movies

Copyright by Gardner Hunting

By Gardner Hunting

Serialized by Ledger Syndicate

In the year 1935 Radley Brainard has invented the Vicarion, a device with which it is possible to re-create scenes out of the past. The invention is a sensational success, with all the theaters installing it in place of motion pictures. Complete Illusions, Inc., which at that time controls all the improvements on the movie, faces ruin, but when Ferdinand Mortimer and Jerry Ballard, heads of the company, call on him, Brainard refuse to make terms.

Brainard's records of the past are contained in "bombs," which hold liquid air and while he is projecting one of the "bombs," which was unmarked, he sees a beautiful gossamar-clad girl, with whom he falls in love, although he is engaged to Phyllis Norman. During the first demonstration of the Vicarion, with Phyllis and her family looking on, a stranger has staggers in the studio. He is unable to tell who he is and Brainard names him Van Winkle, and makes him his aide.

Brainard calls in the operator who made the unmarked record, but gains no information from him. He orders Van Winkle to investigate the making of the bomb. Brainard projects one of the three remaining bombs containing the woodland scene in which the girl with whom he is infatuated appears and decides the records were made by Jeffry Homer, a criminal whom he has employed. Homer dies of fright while listening to the voice of his dead brother which Brainard projects by means of the Vicarion and Homer's secret of the "bomb," which contains the "sunrise nymph" passes into the hands of Mortimer and Ballard.

But the crowd itself was the greater phenomenon. Here were thousands upon thousands of people! She had not guessed that there were so many in the whole city. And a strange crowd it was! Used as she had become to some of the changes in men and their ways that had been effected by the new element in their lives, she had seen no such massed evidence as this.

Nearly everybody was on foot! Where at such a gathering a few weeks or months ago there would have been thousands of motors, here were dusty men, women and children dependent upon their own muscles for making their way to and from their destinations—and eagerly forgetful, it seemed, of all discomfort. Like a country circus crowd, they swarmed toward the great entrance gates. Except that there was little jollity or laughter among them.

Van Winkle divined some of her thoughts. "Chauffeurs are scarce these days," he said, "and it's hard to get cars repaired—or even supplied."

The "Airdrome"

But the faces Phyllis saw fascinated her. She found it impossible to single them out and scan them separately. Perhaps it was the dust, some of them seemed masked with it, as it settled on sweating skins. Besides, it was the mass effect that continually forced itself upon her. The tremendous scene had a unity of its own, that refused to divide to the eye or to the mind. The people were not people—they were a drove, a herd, a hundred thousand animals of the same mold and markings—of the same temper and intent! They moved alike, they carried themselves alike, they looked alike. It was as if some vital inner resemblance of each to all and all to each had turned its way to the surface of every individual, obliterating all insignificant personality! Merely human, all of them—cut to a fashion, like their clothes! As like as manikins! So many skins stretched upon so many sets of bones, upon so many skulls, varying only where slight inaccuracies chanced, tiny mischances and misfits! Or as toys—wooden toys!—turned on the same lathe, to the same form, smoothed in a tumbler, painted with a stencil.

She seemed to see men as nature saw them—a swarm, in which nothing mattered but preservation and propagation of the species as a species—where the individual was nothing! So might a creator look upon them, who swept them hither and yon by crowd passions, crowd curiosity, crowd epidemic, crowd madness—who wielded them as a plastic mass, forming of them some whole in which the crushing of one or any to conformity was of no moment—was necessity, part of the plan!

It was a stunning, dazing thing, that onward sweep of the multitude like the whitening rush of surf. Bubbles were no more alike than heads! The plunge of waves, driven by forces over which they had no control and of which they had no cognizance seemed no more blind than the incoming of this tide! Who but its creator might dare to meddle with its ebb and flow?

Within the gigantic arena—it was nothing less—was a great penned sea!

Organization of a sort was here. There was authority, direction. But the multitude was docile—so long as there was a continuous channel in which to flow. In streams it divided and swept in many ways and filled in where the vast basin was not already utterly full.

But Phyllis became part of it, and forgot for the time that she nursed a delusion of separateness. She wondered momentarily if the seats to which she and her companion were guided were not the only ones reserved. But there expectancy seized her like a fever, as she looked down into that great valley of humanity, in the center of which was but a small open space.

"I suppose you understand," said Van Winkle, at her side, "that Brainard has a new trick of releasing records."

She turned to him.

"He discovered in making multiple records of one event and releasing them together, that when the vents in the bombs are enlarged, and the records free to flow at their own chosen pace, as one might say, they unite and form a scene independent of any confining boundaries. Also they retain their original light and need no artificial illumination. I suspect that lighting has been part of Brainard's blind to cover the facts about projection of records from the overcurious. But now multiple records of a battle, say, can be here discharged into the open atmosphere together. They will unite and appear to each spectator as if the battle is actually occurring within his view, exactly as it did occur, regardless of the mere present physical conditions, including light and weather, around him. The whole event frays out at its ultimate edges, I might say, but only as it might be lost to your vision if you were looking at the original."

He spoke as if the mere fact of seeing the past at all had lost all novelty to him. And to Phyllis the crowd about them seemed to be in the same state of mental preparedness for progressive wonders.

"What are we to see today?" she asked.

"Didn't you see the announcements outside?"

"Outside? I think I had eyes only for the crowd."

Bloodshed

"It is marvelous, isn't it—the crowd?" he said, and seemed to lose himself in looking off over the people. Then he turned again to her. "Oh," he explained, "it's St. Bartholomew's Day, in Paris—the St. Bartholomew's Day, of course—the Medici little play-spell."

"The massacre?" gasped Phyllis.

"Yes," he replied, without looking around at her tone, "I don't know what we shall see of it; but I shouldn't wonder if we might learn whether or not the king really did fire on the Huguenots himself from a window of the Louvre."

He might have been speculating whether a favorite clown was still in the program at the Winter Garden! At her silence he did turn to her.

"Oh!" he said, understanding by intuition. "It is queer, isn't it? People seem to want the crime, the bloodshed, the cruelty of history. It's the old story; only the wickedness is interesting. People don't realize the evil only makes the red smears across the white pages of the good! I wonder if the good is usually so pallid to us because it seldom falls into action. We are absorbed in the action of a human devil running amuck—and untouched by the drab heroism of a man's quiet lifetime of unselfish devotion to a person or a cause. We would follow breathlessly the red career of a low-browed gunman, secretly hoping that he gets away with it—and be bored to death at the martyrdom of a doctor who gives his life to prove some scientific theory about disease. People would run away from scenes of Jesus of Nazareth teaching His followers to see Nero burn them. Why do tyrants' lurid deeds stir people more than a prophet's truth? Why does the cruelest of the Caesars have more power over their imaginations than the divinest of teachers?"

"Does he," asked Phyllis, "after two thousand years?"

"He does—when they can look at him!"

Phyllis was silent, filled with a sudden conception that awed her beyond words.

"We've recorded experimentally the Passion Play of 1910," Van Winkle went on. "It doesn't go!"

Phyllis turned on him. "But if—" she began, and stopped.

"Yes, I know," he said. "If the Passion Play, why not the event it commemorates? Well, why not? Because as picturesque tragedy it pales beside mere killings, like Waterloo, or Bannockburn, or Thermopylae, or Tippecanoe!"

"Picturesque!"

"Exactly. It's not—a show."

She was speechless.

"Of course," Van Winkle said, "it is infinitely—something else! After all, maybe the mob is right. It refuses to confuse its values. The Vicarion can fill an afternoon and the whole field of an afternoon's vision; but the Passion covers 2,000 years! And requires something more than vision to see. No, it won't be through the Vicarion that the world will see the Second Coming!"

He was silent. She could not answer him. Far away down there in the center, somewhere, there was music. She wondered what sort of musical score could go with the spectacle prepared for this day's consumption.

Behind her she heard two men talking. "I saw the damnedest thing," one said, "down at a little theater called the Welkin last night. I wonder if they'll put it on here, whole? I was a piece of a crowd wedged into a street in old St. Petersburg, with the Cossacks butchering at the red edges of it, as you might hack at a—"

Phyllis gasped. Van Winkle looked at her.

"Yes," he said. "But wait till they see Cortez—on the terrible Causeway!"

The man behind her was just finishing his remarks. "They ate it up!" he said.

Phyllis started up from her seat. "Why, I had no idea—I didn't realize—"

She was on the point of flight when, in the air, as it were, opposite her eyes, she saaw the window of some huge building—a single window that caught her gaze and held it—growing out of nothing there! A man and a woman—who might have been actors, dressed up in some trappings of the stage for a costume play—looking out from within, toward her—from just beyond that sill! But no actors ever conveyed a fraction of the emotion concentrated in those awful faces. Here in this amphitheater on the California coast a terrified American girl knew that she looked into the countenance of that woman of France whose memory has haunted the world for 350 years, and of a man whose sheer weakness took a ghastly toll of 50,000 of his people's lives!

From around her there arose a cry—inarticulate, fierce! The throng saw what she saw! Those two! And humanity could take heed of its individuals, if its Omnipotent Manipulator did not!

But the woman in the window had caught the man's arm and was ponting down. And Phyllis followed the direction of that gesture, three centuries old! She saw a naked child running. On the ground at hand lay a woman, her limbs tangled in her torn dress. A soldier in a fantastic dress was bending over her. What was he doing? He was—

Choking, Phyllis turned and fled. She ran back along the corridor toward the gates. She ran! She could not run fast enough. Horror shrieked at her heels. She burst out into an open space. Some one seemed to try to catch hold of her. She evaded the outstretched hands. She saw a space where no walls were, where no people moved. She ran for that. She ran silently. Screams struggled in her throat, but she could not utter them. Away—away—if she could only get away! If she could only get away, somewhere where men and women were not! She wanted to hide; she wanted to die! She did not want to live any longer in a world where men and women did such things—or looked at them!

But she was stopped by some one who threw arms around her and dragged upon her.

"Phyllis! Phyllis! Phyl" Relief Brainard's voice cried in her ear. "My God, where are you going, child? And why?"

The girl sank down. They were in the midst of an open field. The grass was trodden into the dust—clouds of it raised by their feet drifted all about them. It almost strangled her as she gasped and sobbed.

"What in the world?" mourned Miss Brainard, caressing her. "Now now! Nothing's hurt you, has it? You've been to the airdrome? To see Catherine's bloody fingers, eh?

"Well, well—after all, she's been in hell for a million years, hasn't she? And what she did don't hurt anybody now—except herself! It stopped hurting even too soon for her, I guess. When it's as old as that, spilled blood is no more worth crying about than spilled milk!"

Phyllis tried to answer. "Then it never is!" she sobbed. "The moment they died, their blood was old! When shall we cry over it!"

She uncovered her eyes—because, when she closed them, all she could see was that pointing woman—that bending soldier!

"Look here!" persisted Miss Brainard desperately. "Don't you know that Catherine de Medici didn't bring the world to an end, even for the Huguenots? Even she was only a little piece of history. You can't judge a man by what he did yesterday, unless you can also see what he did the day before, and today. The human race is just the same—it can't be estimated by one day's work! A bird's-eye view is the only true one—ensemble!—the world hasn't made for one individual—nor to be looked at in close-ups! Don't you see? Don't you see, Phyl?" she begged.

These were echoes of her own confused thought to Phyllis. She had thought these things. They steadied her.

"It's quite true," Aunt Relief hurried on, "that when somebody grabs the reins, or the tiller, or the steering wheel, and tries to manage things his way, he makes trouble! But whether a man is a murderer or a reformer he's only one little member of the great human body, and never runs things long to suit himself."

Somewhere here was a truth. Relief Brainard had not stated it, but the glimmer of it was before Phyllis Norman's eyes. She had seen it before, that glimmering. Catherine de Medici herself was a reformer! Instigating wholesale murder—with its unspeakable detail—for what she considered reform! Both—murderer and reformer!—destroying her kind, but changing nothing to suit herself!

Aunt Relief was watching her. "Come," she said presently; "I couldn't get a car to come out here, so we'll take yours back. I want to see Radley."

Phyllis wondered now that Van Winkle had not overtaken her. Perhaps he had not followed her; he had doubtless been lost in those scenes from which she had fled.

Brainard Attacked

Relief Brainard found the car. In it they drove back to the Bonmar, Phyllis sinking into the cushions, trying not to think.

At the door of Brainard's building a little crowd was hovering. An officer made way for them as soon as they alighted, and they went in and up the marble entrance stairs. But Relief Brainard asked the man what had occured to draw interest here.

"You won't be scared if I tell you, will you?" asked the officer, glancing from one to the other of them keenly.

"What?" cried Phyllis.

"A woman—big society bug from New York, as I get it—tried to stick a knife into Mr. Brainard just now!"

"Mr. Brainard? Was he—hurt?"

"Oh, a little bit! A little bit! I guess he won't die of it. He went back upstairs on his own legs."

"Where is the woman? Who was she?" demanded Miss Brainard.

"She's in jail by this time, I guess," he told them. Then he mentioned a name; it was one of America's best known.

The elevator was waiting for them. Phyllis found herself presently being swept upward in it. Together she and Relief Brainard left it at the eleventh floor and went into the private office suite. They found ebbing excitement here. Dr. Carmichael again. He was just leaving. Miss Arden, who was dismissing him, turned inquiringly toward Phyllis, but Phyllis passed her without vouchsafing her the recognition of a question. She found Radley alone in his inner room, sitting in his chair. His right arm was out of its coat-sleeve and bandaged in a sling.

"Radley, how much are you hurt?" she asked, going to his side.

He looked up at her, but he did not seem to hear her question. He only stared; and in his eyes was a quality of cold brutality against which she seemed to come with a dizzying impact. His face was white, and strangely revealed now the sharp lines that were developing about his eyes and mouth. Its planes seemed as edged as those of a sculptor's sketch in clay, blocked in. She thought of him again as graying before her gaze, though his hair was as black as ever it had been about his brows. He had lost blood from his wound, doubtless—but that had as little to do with these other signs upon him as with that look in his eyes.

She stood still, silenced, repulsed. But her emotion was infinitely deeper than anger.

"Radley Brainard, why did that woman try to kill you?" his aunt demanded.

He turned to her and smiled slightly. "As nearly as I could gather from what she said," he replied, "she thinks I have taken her little crown away from her."

"Her crown!"

"Perhaps I might better say her kingdom! Her subjects, her courtiers, her retainers, have all transferred their allegiance to The Vicarion. She doesn't like it!"

'DUCE' FLOUNTS TWO CALLERS

Socialist Agents Raise Mussolini's Wrath

LONDON, Feb. 1. (UE)—"Your visit here only emphasizes the incompetence and lack of wisdom of the Socialist party. I am Mussolini!"

Such was the abrupt and dramatic fashion in which Premier Mussolini terminated an interview with two of the leaders of the Socialist party in England, according to the Sunday Express. The interview took place at the historic old Chigi palace in Rome, and the two British Socialists who are reported to have attempted to persuade Mussolini to take a stand in favor of Socialism were Walter M. Citrine, secretary of the Trade Union congress, and J. Sassenbach, secretary of the International Federation of Trade Unions.

According to the Sunday Express, the two Socialists went to Rome for the express purpose of persuading Premier Mussolini to bring Italy into the ranks of the international federation. Italy and Russia are the only nations now outside the international organization.

Arriving in Rome, Citrine and Sassenbach sought an interview with Il Duce, which was granted in the ornate chamber in the Chigi palace where Mussolini has his headquarters. During the meeting, the two envoys of Socialism used every argument at their command to persuade the Italian dictator to change his stand against Socialism.

The premier listened patiently, according to the Sunday Express, until they were through, and then replied:

"Gentlemen, I will tell you a story."

For more than an hour, Mussolini spoke in withering terms to his interviewers. He painted a picture of his career; painted a picture of Russia and Italy. He painted pictures of how, as a blacksmith's son, he was still hammering at the anvil of the world. And then he concluded:

"I am the dictator of 50,000,000 Italians. My word is law. I am prime minister of this country. And you have the audacity to come here and ask me to delegate the rule of my work-people to a handful of political fanatics in Amsterdam?

"You have wasted your own time, gentlemen; I don't know whose money!"

Soviet Scientists Border on New Methods of Studying the Brain

Successful Experiment Permits Physicians to Keep Several Dogs' Heads Alive

Editor's Note: Following is the second of two United Press dispatches giving detailed description of the work of soviet scientists who are attempting to create a means of continuing or restoring life in an apparently dead body. This dispatch tells how an "artificial heart" was used to keep the severed head of a dog in an apparent state of life, holding out promise of a method by which scientists will be able to carry out intensive study of the brain.

By EUGENE LYONS
United Press Staff Correspondent

MOSCOW, Feb. 1.—Successful preliminary experiments by Soviet scientists with an "artificial heart" have aroused great interest in scientific circles in the possibility of new methods which will permit intensive study of the nature of the brain.

Dr. S. S. Brukhanenko and Dr. Sergei Chechulin, who built the artificial heart at the Moscow Chemico-Pharmaceutical institute, are of the opinion that their experiments in keeping alive for a certain period the detached head of a dog will open the way to far greater accomplishment in the study of the brain than heretofore.

Four Years' Work

The experiment with the dog's head, which has been completely recorded and documented after four years' study, was described to the United Press correspondent by Dr. Brukhanenko, who showed photographs of the experiment taken at every stage.

The bodyless head, lying on a plate and connected to a mechanical blood pump or heart, looked and behaved exactly in the manner of a living dog's head, except that it uttered no sound, Dr. Brukhanenko said. It showed the usual canine signs of pain and pleasure and reacted to light, sound, to touch and to taste, he added.

By such isolation from the body, the scientists point out, the activities of the brain may be observed more accurately and it may be possible to determine what substances feed the brain. Various substances could be placed in the blood flowing through the artificial heart and the effects recorded. In the same way the scientists propose to study brain toxins, which are supposed to explain fatigue and the need for rest and sleep.

Appeared "Alive"

Before explaining the experiment Dr. Brukhanenko said he was not prepared to assert that the head was "alive" during the three and one-half hours of the experiment, in the complete and ordinary sense of the word. He did state, without qualification, that the head was alive so far as appearances were concerned and that the natural functions of the brain were revived. This statement he supported by photographs and the fact that a number of noted scientists have witnessed several such experiments here.

The words life and death, he continued, are not so simple as is generally presumed. Only when science can define the words life and death will it be possible to accept or reject the statement that the head was or was not alive, he pointed out.

Dr. Brukhanenko explained that a delicate operation on the dog was performed, leaving the main arteries of the neck until the last. Then the final separation was completed and the artificial arteries of the mechanical heart were quickly attached to the four arteries in the neck.

Because of the chloroform which had been administered, the head remained apparently lifeless for some 20 minutes while the artificial heart pumped and ejected blood and oxygen just as a real heart works.

"The eyes were then opened," said Dr. Brukhanenko, "and had every appearance of life. The head responded to the slightest touch. If I touched the ear, the head responded in typical life-like movement. Our assistant, Volodia Drugkov, accidentally touched a wire to the nostril and the head jerked violently.

"When a strong light was flashed, the eyes shut instantly. A piece of cotton soaked in acid was placed in the mouth and it was immediately ejected. A piece of cheese was placed on the tongue and it was swallowed. Every test made during the three and one-half hours showed normal responses.

"Why were we unable to prolong the process?" Dr. Brukhanenko continued. "The cause seemed to be a change in the blood. It became darker and seemed to contain less oxygen. Towards the end of the experiment, the dog appeared to need air and opened the mouth as though breathing or yawning."

He pointed out that, when the artificial blood circulation was shut off, the head developed symptoms of "dying." If it was "dying," he said, it might be presumed that it had been alive previously.

That question, however, remains for future experiments to develop in detail.

AGREEMENT IN SALE OF SHIPS

Coolidge Approves Plan of Shipping Board

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1. (UE)—Tentative approval of the proposal to sell the United States and American merchant lines, only government-owned transatlantic passenger liners, was reached in a conference between President Coolidge and Chairman T. V. O'Connor of the shipping board.

Unless congress intervenes, the shipping board will hold a special meeting early next week and announce the sale of the luxurious ships to Paul W. Chapman & Co., Inc., of Chicago and New York.

The senate has adopted a resolution calling upon the shipping board to furnish that body with all information concerning the valuation of the ships as compared with the price offered, as the first step to investigate the proposed sale.

This information was forwarded to the senate by Chairman O'Connor after his conference with the president. He gave a lengthy detailed statement of the desire of the president and the board to turn the ships over to private operators and said he thought the price offered a fair one.

Chapman & Co. offer to pay $16,300,000 for the 11 ships, including the Leviathan, which make up the fleet. Chairman O'Connor points out in his letter that this price is within $25,000 of the valuation of the ships which the shipping board actually carries on its books.

In addition, he points out that the bidder offers $6,000,000 more than his nearest competitor, Winchester and Gibbs, experienced ship operators of New York.

Mehlhorn and 3 Others Tie For Second With 72's

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Feb. 1. (AP)—Horton Smith of Joplin, Mo., led the field in the first round of the South Central Golf tournament here today with a card of 38-33—71, one below par.

The slender youngster, winner of the Catalina Island and Oklahoma City tournaments this winter, was but a stroke ahead of Wild Bill Mehlhorn, whose sensational pace has fractured late meets, Al Espinosa, Chicago veteran, Al Watrous of Detroit and Johnny Golden, Paterson, N. J., each bringing home a 72.

Nor were the 72's of Mehlhorn, Espinosa, Watrous and Golden safe with Billy Burke, North and South champion, Ed Dudley of California, Joe Kirkwood of trickshot fame and Dick Grout of Oklahoma each posting a 73.

Wichita Bowlers In Southwestern

Locals Compete in Meet at Oklahoma City

Wichita Falls will be represented by a team in the annual Southwestern championship bowling tournament opening today at Oklahoma City. The Spudder alleys have sent a team to the meet, to compete in team, double and single competition.

The Wichita Falls team, which left last night, is composed of Pete Turgeon, captain; Art Kurtz, Cinderella Boot shop; Joe Stewart, Texas Electrics; Harry Davis, Cinderella Boot shop; Ben Flechtner, Panhandle company and Swede Johnson, Cinderella Boot shop.

The tourney starts today and will be ended a week from tomorrow. The Wichita Falls team will bowl in team competition today and doubles and singles tomorrow.

An effort will be made by Turgeon to bring the 1930 Southwestern tournament to Wichita Falls. The chamber of commerce has endorsed the holding of the tourney, according to Jim Galloway, associated with Turgeon in the management of the alleys here. The great success of the Spudder alleys lends belief that efforts to bring next year's tournament here may be successful.

Bowlers from Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas engage in the Southwestern meet.

Around The Ring

By CHARLES W. DUNKLEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

CHICAGO, Feb. 1. (AP)—Mr. Paddy Harmon, builder of the $7,000,000 sports arena on Chicago's west side, tossed the boys in the fist fight business for a loss when he selected Sam P. Hall, veteran sports writer as matchmaker for the club.

There were more than 300 applicants for the job, which promises to be the most important match making position in the West. Hall was not an applicant.

They say the reason Harmon chose Hall is that over a period of 20-odd years they have been friends their friendship having resulted in one continuous argument between them. If Hall liked a boxer, Harmon didn't. If Harmon liked a fighter, Hall insisted the fellow was a bum.

For 20 years they argued about the merits of boxers and never agreed. Neither would admit that the other could be right. They spent most of the night after a fight telling each other what a rotten expert he was. It is said that once they were caught in a blizzard and wouldn't even agree on the weather.

The appointment of Hall seems to indicate that Harmon admits that he was wrong in his judgment of fighters and that Hall was right Hall has an excellent background for his new duties. He knows boxers, but unlike the average matchmaker his experience also includes the spectators' viewpoint. He has been engaged in newspaper work fore more than 20 years in Chicago New York and Los Angeles, writing boxing. Before writing under his own name he wrote under the name of "Sol Plex."

His newspaper work gives him a good slant on what the public wants. And as Hall knows what the fighters will produce, the combination is expected to bring him success.

They say that Nate Lewis, for more than 30 years a manager of boxers, will become an assistant to Hall in making up the cards for the stadium which will be opened in March. Lewis is rated as one of the shrewdest judges of boxing in America. Back in the old days he managed "Kid" Herman, Chicago lightweight, steering him into a match with Joe Gans for the title at Tonopah, Nev. Later Lewis piloted Charley White, the famous Chicago left hook artist, Pal Moore the Memphis bantamweight, and other noted ringsters.

Battling Levinsky, once light heavyweight champion of the world, has wound up a 20-year ring career, one of those tragic figures of the ring. He was knocked out in a round a few nights ago. Shortly before he had been flattened in three rounds by Otto Von Porat the Norwegian heavyweight.

Above all things Levinsky wanted to end his ring career in victory, but the double knockout within the week convinced him that he was through. After his knockout, Levinsky did a most unusual thing. He wired various sports editors of his acquaintance that he was knocked out in one round, and that from now he intended to be a spectator

That was the end of Battling Levinsky, a man who, in his day fought five of the greatest fighters that ever lived—Gene Tunney, Jack Dempsey, Jack Dillon, Harry Greb and Georges Carpentier.

From now on, Jerry (Tuffy) Griffith, Sioux City, Iowa, light heavyweight, wants his name spelled as it should be, that is, without the "s" on the end. It is Griffith and not Griffiths, although Handsome Jack O'Keefe, his manager, did not know until the other day whether the name was spelled with or without an "s."

Suzanne and Baldwin Sail for France

On the same boat was Baldwin Baldwin, wealthy Californian, who it is said, she will marry as soon as he secures a divorce. Baldwin's mother, Mrs. Anita M. Baldwin, is shown lower center.

DAILY DOPE

By LARRY DAILEY

DEL PRATT, who for several seasons has led the Waco Cubs to more or less success on the diamond, and with no little success in the business office, has signed a new contract. There was some criticism from baseball enthusiasts of Waco because Del received 10 per cent of the sale price of his players. Those disgruntled fans held the belief that Papa Pratt at times was more interested in disposing of an athlete than in winning ball games. A very unjust accusation, no doubt. Papa Pratt likes his dollars as much as you or I. But he is a baseball man and a good baseball man. And good baseball men put winning ball games above all else.

Anyhow, to still the voice of Vox Pop, the owners of the Waco club tendered Pratt a contract, said to be one of the highest ever received by a manager in the Texas league. It carries a substantial increase over his former remuneration, and eliminates the 10 per cent clause in the sale of tossers.

APART for this season, it seems that Pratt is counting on the return of Our George Blackerby by the Chicago White Sox. Anyhow, a story a few days ago in a Waco paper listed Blackerby as an outfielder for the coming compaign. Blackerby went to the pale hose late last season and made quite a favorable impression. However, there is an abundance of experienced gardners on the Sox reserve list and it would be a tough job for George to break in on that combination.

THIS BOY Howard Scott has caught my fancy. Several years of glaring at the gladiators has tempered my enthusiasm for them as prospects. I have seen too many "future Dempseys and Leonards" who turned out to be mere palookas, to permit my judgment to be influenced by a boxer who looks like a comer. But Scott really looks like a PROSPECT. Of course, he has a long way to go before he gives real indication of his pugilistic promise. But I foresee a bright future ahead for Howard in the hemped arena.

I was attracted to the boy when I first saw him crawl through the ropes, by the marked resemblance he bears to Gene Tunney. The same mop of hair, the same straight nose and gray, wide-set eyes, mark the facial makeup of Scott and Tunney as remarkably identical. And when Howard started boxing I was amazed at the similarity of their styles.

Scott has that same peculiar, shuffling hop-skip as he advances against a foe, that was Tunney's. He shoots his punches in a manner reminiscent of Gene. That fighting style is natural to Howard, for he never saw Tunney.

THE ELECTRA featherweight is not yet 18 years old. He is about the first boy I have seen boxing here who really knows the science of the game. That is, he possesses that instinctive aptitude, which distinguishes a real boxer from the wild-swinging type. He is remarkably cool and ring-wise for a youngster of his years and limited professional experience, which is only 15 fights. He hits hard for his size. And best of all, he hits CORRECTLY. You seldom see him swing wild. Howard punches STRAIGHT, in a day when straight hitters are almost as forgotten as real fighters.

Alex Ross of course knows the promise of Scott and how to handle the boy. Alex will see that Howard isn't rushed too fast. Many a promising boxer has been ruined by fighting too frequently or meeting adversaries of too great experience and ability. A decisive defeat or knockout often will break the heart of a young boxer. Ross will bring Howard carefully along. There will be no setups for the boy, however. His mills will be against formidable opponents. But he isn't ready yet to meet the top-notchers and won't be for a year or so.

If Howard fulfills the promise he has shown in his bouts to date, we may see him strugging for the highest honors of fastiana ere many years have passed. Anyhow, he's well worth keeping an eye on.

Dempsey's Acquisition of Title Started Million-Dollar Gates

John Ringling Backed Rickard in Garden and Leo Flynn's Genius as Matchmaker Made Venture Great Success

By JACK LAWRENCE

(Copyright, 1929, by the New York American, Inc., and Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—The fight in which Jack Dempsey won the heavyweight championship of the world from Jess Williard in Toledo, July 4, 1919, was a disappointment from a financial viewpoint, but it brought Tex Rickard a step nearer the million dollar gate and established the famous triumvirate of Rickard, Dempsey and Kearns. The latter was to be banished from that powerful combination in later years, but while it lasted it was the most profitable association in ring history. The three collaborated in making millions.

Rickard's next great outdoor extravaganza was to be the Dempsey-Carpentier battle for the heavyweight title in New Jersey, July 2, 1921, the gate receipts of which were to break all records. That fight drew $1,626,580.

Within a year after the Dempsey-Willard fight Tex Rickard was in control of Madison Square garden, and, with the assistance of the Walker boxing law, put that giant structure on a paying basis for the first time in its history. Getting control of the old garden was not easy for Tex and it is possible that he might have failed had it not been for John Ringling, the millionaire circus man. Rickard was a wizard when it came to finding a bankroll man.

The New York Life Insurance company, which owned the garden, demanded $100,000 in cash as a rental guaranty. That is a lot of money, particularly when you haven't got it. And Tex didn't have it. But he literally conned John Ringling into putting it up for him He told John that other big interests were after the big arena and that if they got it they were going to make the Ringlings pay plenty for the privilege of staging the circus there during the annual engagement of six week in the spring

Tex's Reign Started

Whether Rickard actually knew anything of the sort I don't know, but John Ringling was impressed and hastened to put $100,000 on the line. And in this way began another highly profitable association for Mr. Rickard.

Ringling was aware, of course, that there was no other structure in the city, aside from the garden, where his circus could be staged. He had no desire to see the building pass into the control of alien interests who would be in a position to demand from him about anything they liked.

Once the garden was his, Tex Rickard entered what he often referred to as the happiest phase of his life. The new garden remains as his memorial, but his happiest days were spent in the old garden. There Tex Rickard reigned supreme. He was his own boss and his word was law. There were times when the venture was close to the rocks, but Tex was certain that he could make a go of it and he did.

Rickard's first matchmaker in the old garden wos Leo P. Flynn, and Leo showed him how to make the dollars roll in. Tex could hardly have made a happier selection for this important post. Leo knew the fight racket as nobody did and he wasted no time in turning this knowledge to account. The first fight in New York under the new Walker law was the match between Joe Welling and Johnny Dundee. That began a long series of successful shows.

Big Profits Made

In four months, in 1920, Leo Flynn's shows registered a profit of $182,000. After 22 months of matchmaking he was able to show a profit of $552,000, despite the fact that against every boxing show Rickard charged a rental of $7,700 for the garden. Rickard always regarded Flynn as the most successful matchmaker he ever had. He always had a keen admiration for Flynn's business ability. But for certain influences it seems certain that Flynn would have been made matchmaker of the new garden. It was to Flynn that Rickard intrusted the management of Jack Dempsey for the two Tunney fights after Kearns had vanished from the picture.

Rickard and Flynn were responsible for putting professional pugilism on an entirely new basis in New York and attracting to it an element the game had never known before. Rickard believed that when he sold a ticket that ticket ought to call for a seat and the one to sit in it should be the purchaser. He had to combat a gang of roughnecks to put this theory into practice, but he succeeded, and his boxing shows to the day of his death were famous for the orderly manner in which they were run off. An unescorted woman was as safe at a Rickard boxing show as she would have been in her own home.

Tex Visioned Future

Probably Rickard's first version of putting boxing in evening clothes and a high hat, so to speak, came to him when he staged that memorable battle between Benny Leonard and Ritchie Mitchell in the old garden for the benefit of devastated France. Associated with him in the promotion of this show was Miss Anne Morgan. For the first time in the history of the ring a prize fight was almost exclusively a society affair.

As Rickard looked over that brilliant gathering, back in 1921, he said:

"The time will come when all big fights will draw the same kind of a crowd."

They were prophetic words, as a visit to the new garden on the night of any big fight will prove.

The Leonard-Mitchell affair, which was for the lightweight championship of the world, drew slightly less than $134,000. On the floor for the count of nine, Leonard came closer to losing his title in that battle than in any other he ever had. He finally knocked Mitchell out.

GARDEN STILL PAYS DIVIDEND

In Fact, It Prospers Under Hammond's Direction

By FRANK GETTY

NEW YORK, Feb. 1. (UP)—Since the death of Tex Rickard, there has been no end of talk about his probable successor. Now it begins to appear as though most of us were unable to see the successor because of the applicants.

Up in the late promoter's office in Madison Square Garden is a bronzed, prematurely greyed-soldier—a West Pointer—who is carrying on in Rickard's job, and getting away with it, under conditions which never confronted Tex.

Receipts Increase

Colonel John S. Hammond, the new general manager of New York city's sports arena, has handled the affairs of the garden during the past month, in which time the net receipts have been $80,000 more than they were during the same period a year ago. Anyone who is acquainted with the quaint characteristics and prejudices of boards of directors knows that this financial statement will not react against the genial colonel.

The Madison Square Garden corporation is so intent upon the proposed Sharkey-Stribling bout at Miami Beach that it has given little consideration to what might be called internal affairs.

Yet the garden showed a net loss of several hundred thousand dollars during the last year of Tex Rickard's regime, and it is now started upon a prosperous 1929.

With all this absence, business goes on as usual. Colonel Hammand is probably the most harassed man in America. Everyone who wants a job, a free ticket to fights or hockey games, a contract for this or that, or an engagement has to see the colonel, and the wonder of it is that the colonel sees them. Somehow, with all the demands, the knocks upon his office doors, this soft-spoken, reticent West Pointer, shy to the point of diffidence gets through each 24 hours with the business of running the world's largest sports arena well attended to.

The Inevitable Scribes

In addition, to confess a trade secret, the colonel is expected to turn his office over to sports writers for a general talk-fest each afternoon. The fact that he is carrying on as active head of 10 or 12 departments with which Rickard never concerned himself does not worry the newspapermen, who accustomed themselves to tell Tex what he should do about this and that and have no intention of letting up, now that Hammond is in charge.

With a score of newspapermen to handle each afternoon, Colonel Hammond might be said to be doing a day's work. One married woman of my acquaintance tells me that handling one newspaperman is a life-time job.

Giant and Yank Secretaries Pick Their Teams

By BILL SLOCUM

NEW YORK, Feb 1. (US)—Ed Barrow came to bat yesterday with his all-American team of all-time and Jim Tierney stepped up to the plate today with his selections. The two teams could not be put on the field to settle the question of superiority or supremacy in the all time division, because Edward and Jim have agreed on most of the players.

In fact one might suspect that Ed and Jim got together at the Republican club or some other such spot and came close to a general agreement of principal interest in the team which Tierney picked and it could be quite an easy summer for any manager is the fact that Tyrus Raymond Cobb, the jewel of Georgia, did not make the grade. As Jim figures it, Ty was quite a performer but not among the top three of all time. So Tyrus must go to Tierney's Junior varsity which has yet to be announced.

Barrow picked as his catchers Ray Schalk and George Gibson, one a present day Giant coach and the other a former Giant and Pirate backstop. Tierney asked for waivers on both of Barrow's backstops and sent Roger Bresnahan to work behind the plate. This chronicler is inclined to string along with the Giant secretary in the choice of catcher, as the Rajah was a better hitter and base runner than either of Barrow's choices.

There was no argument about pitchers. Each of the secretaries choice Mathewson, Walter Johnson and Pennock.

Three of Barrow's infield selections made the grade on Tierney's all-star team. They were Hal Chace at first base, Hans Wagner at shortstop and Jimmy Collins at third base. Where Barrow picked Larry Lajoie for his second baseman, Tierney gave the call to Eddie Collins.

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—We are glad to hear that the ladies are going in for curves and beefsteaks.

Word comes from Paris that hips, chins and dimples will be stylish again no matter where located.

When a lady starts in to get thin she will back up against a buss saw and call it a diet.

Molly O'Day had 20 pounds of fat whittled of her chassis because her movie contract stipulated that Molly was to remain a flapper.

Peaches Browning commanded the surgeons to chisel the calves off her legs because she was putting on so much beef that she was knock-kneed way down at the ankles.

Now that the girls are to be plump again, Molly will probably rush to the doctors and demand her property back.

For the last three years the wife has been on a diet in an attempt to subsidize her girlish figure.

For breakfast, she nibbled the outer epidermis of a salad.

For lunch, she munched the western suburbs of a chunk of toast.

Supper consisted of an understuffed olive under a sheltering twig of parsley.

The only person who lost weight was the writer.

It is all right to remain thin. But a woman is wrong when she thinks a canary bird's cage is a dining alcove.

The fashion tip from Paris arrived just in time to prevent the consolidated husbands of America from throwing themselves into traffic in the hope of getting run over by a lunch wagon.

It's a tough thing to go on another person's hunger strike.

Last night we had a sirloin for supper. It was thick, brown and welcome. We got so much grease on our chin that we were ready to swim the English channel.

We were so hungry that a T-bone looked like the entire alphabet.

Diathermy and Pneumonia

Although the proportion of deaths from pneumonia has been greatly reduced within recent years, it still remains one of the most fatal of all diseases. The greatest number of cases occurs during the winter and spring. Even if one does not die from the attack of pneumonia, it may leave the body in such a weakened condition that some other serious disease is apt to follow—often tuberculosis.

When severe colds and influenza have been improperly treated, they frequently are followed by the more dangerous pneumonia. Pneumonia usually takes its toll from those who least expect themselves to be in danger, since it is frequently preceded by a slight gain in weight. Most of the deaths occur with those who are overfed and overweight and who have been neglecting to take the proper amount of physical exercise and have enervated themselves by mental overwork or nerve-wasting habits.

A thin person who contracts pneumonia is more apt to recover than his obese brother. Those who are underweight, usually respond quiet easily to treatment because their bodies do not have to burn up the excess fat. You can avoid pneumonia by keeping your weight down to normal, taking systematic exercises, and avoiding the enervation produced by overwork, late hours, and indiscriminate eating.

One of the best methods of treating pneumonia has been discovered within recent years. This is an electrical treatment which can be given in your home by a physician who uses a sufficiently powerful, portable high frequency apparatus. To give a treatment with this machine, pads are placed on the front and back of the affected area and an electric current turned on up to a certain strength. Through the agency of this special type of current, the tissues inside of the lungs between the two separate pads, are heated to several degrees higher than normal. No sensation is felt on the skin, since the heat can be directed to exactly the right spot inside of the lungs. This is called a diathermy treatment. This internal heating treatment is effective in throwing out the pus and its accompanying micro-organisms known as pneumococci. The metabolism of the tissues is increased by this treatment have been very successful during the last five years as can be proven by the records of physicians who use this method of treatment.

No food of any kind should be used during the first days of the attack, or as long as there is any high fever, but after about five days of this fasting regime, if a slight fever still exists, the patient may be given a mixed quantity of cooked non-starchy vegetables. No heavy starchy foods or protein foods should be permitted until the fever has entirely disappeared. The patient should, however, be encouraged to drink large quantities of water, distilled being preferable.

The bowels must be kept clean with at least three enemas daily. During the height of the attack, a warm sponge bath should be taken every two hours during the day and night. The patient should be kept warm by woolen blankets, but the fresh air should be allowed to circulate freely around the sick bed. The windows should be kept wide open and if necessary the air may be warmed by electric heaters, but never use a gas fire to produce heat in a room where one is sick with pneumonia.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Premature Baldness

Question—E. A. V. asks: "What is the cause and cure of a man 22 years old becoming bald. He also grinds his teeth almost constantly in his sleep, and his jaws and ankles crack most annoyingly at times."

Answer—Sometimes baldness in young people occurs as a result of a fever or from some constitutional disease, but most cases of baldness are due either to a lack of the proper circulation to the scalp or to a lack of certain mineral elements in the diet. These can be secured in most of the fruits and vegetables, especially those listed as follows: Asparagus, cucumbers, lettuce, bran, dandelion, parsnips, fruit skins, strawberries and beets.

Remedy for Nose Bleed

Question—Subscriber asks: "Is slapping the cheek for nosebleed a good method?"

Answer—Most cases of nose bleed can be stopped by cold applications over the back of the neck and over the nose while holding the head up and slightly backward. Severe cases might require a doctor's attention, since he could either plug the nose with cotton and stop the bleeding, or apply pressure upon the area supplying the nose.

Brown Spots of Middle Age

Question—N. B. C. asks: "Can you tell me the cause and cure, if any, of the dark spots and freckles that appear on the face and hands after middle age?"

Answer—The spots such as you describe are usually caused by the presence of bile pigment settling in the skin because of systemic acidosis. If you can increase the alkalinity of the body by using the correct diet, these will probably cease to form, and those present will disappear as the skin scales off.

Two Black Crows

KRAFT-PHENIX CHEESE CORP.

Five-Year Record

The Kraft-Phenix Cheese corporation was formed in November 1928, as successor to a company of a similar name which acquired earlier in 1928, the Phenix Cheese corporation and the A. E. Wright company. The company is engaged in making various types of cheese put up in retail sized packages and salad dressings. The company operates factories and warehouses in Illinois, New York, Idaho, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, Georgia, California, Canada, England and Australia. The business has shown steady expansion since 1919 and now is of international scope. The concern recently acquired control of Southern Dairies Inc., and other subsidiary companies.

The Kraft Cheese company, the Phenix Cheese corporation and the A. E. Wright company which were joined in February 1928 showed a combined net income of $1,189,065 for 1927, compared with $1,111,172 in 1926. The level of sales of 1927 was maintained in 1928 and consolidated net income for the first nine months of 1928 amounted to $1,859,000.

Funded debt totals $5,000,000. Capital stock outstanding includes $6,000,000 in 6½ per cent cumulative preferred stock of $100 par and 889,429 shares of no par common. Preferred has one vote per share with the common. The first payment on the preferred of the newly organized company was made Jan. 1, 1929 but dividends had been paid on the old preferred at the required rate without interruption. An initial common dividend of 37½ cents was paid on the common the same date. The rate on the old common was 6 per cent with occasional stock dividends.

As of Sept. 30, 1928, total current assets were $18,180,738, current liabilities $6,949,041, net working capital $11,231,697 and book value $22.91 a share.

It is said to be quicker in most cases to send a telegraph message from Liverpool to London via New York than to try the direct route.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Feb. 1 (AP)—Early declines under continued liquidation were followed by rallies in the cotton market today on trade buying and covering and talk of an improved technical position. May contracts sold up from 19.68 to 19.86 and closed at 19.85. The general market closed firm at a net advance of 3 to 7 points.

The market opened barely steady at a decline of 2 to 8 points in response to rather disappointing cables, and sold about 9 to 13 points net lower in the early trading. There was a little southern and local selling on the decline. This carried prices off to 19.68 for spring months and 19.02 for new October contract. The bulk of the pressure, however, was attributed to further liquidation. After initial offerings had been absorbed, there appeared to be comparatively little pressure. Some local traders regarded this as indicating that liquidation had about run its course and that the technical position of the market was likely to result in week-end rallies, such views promoting covering. There may have been some buying for an upward reaction.

While fluctuations during the afternoon were somewhat irregular, the best prices of the day were reached in the late trading. March sold up to 19.84 and the new October contract to 19.24 or about 5 to 8 points net higher on the more active positions.

Closing prices were within a point or two of the best on most months. There was a moderate volume of business on the early decline, but trading later in the day was comparatively quiet.

No fresh news of importance was mentioned in connection with the rally from the early low level. The weekly statistics came in for comparatively little comment. Fear of possible labor troubles in Lancashire may have had some influence on the opening declines and a tendency to restrict buying on the advance which followed.

A cable from Manchester said that order lists in the cloth market were running down and that the market was flat. Private cable advices from Liverpool reported continental buying and covering in the market there but said business in cotton cloths with India and the Near East was restricted and that yarns were inactive.

Exports today 45,362, making 5,669,111 so far this season. Port receipts 22,689. U. S. port stocks 2,233,178.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 1 (AP)—An early decline of 9 to 12 points met a good trade demand and short covering in the cotton market today and although there was a slight reaction at noon the market firmed up in late trading making new highs for the day and closing steady at net advances of 2 to 10 points. May, after trading down to 19.03, advanced to 19.24 and closed at 19.21, or 4 points net higher.

Liverpool cables were slightly easier and first trades here showed losses of 3 to 4 points in sympathy. Selling continued somewhat aggressive after ten reels of bearish weekly statistics. Some of the offerings were probably execution of overnight selling orders. March dropped to 19.04, May 19.03 and July 19.08, or 9 to 18 points down from yesterday's close.

This dip attracted fair trade buying on scale down orders and there was more or less covering by shorts which developed a scarcity of contracts. Just before noon March recovered to 19.17, and May and July to 19.20, or 12 to 15 points up from the lows and 3 to 4 points above yesterday's close.

At midday there was a flurry of selling when Secretary Hester's pointer for the week showed slightly bearish character and on the subsequent reaction lost 5 to 7 points above the previous close. The close was a few points under the best.

Stocks Close Strong When Rally Stops Slump of Early Hours

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Feb. 1. (US)—Stocks rallied and closed strong after breaking early in the afternoon when call money was unexpectedly advanced from 7 to 8 per cent today. Quite a wave of selling followed the announcement of the higher charge but good support was evidence and subsequent recovery made up most of the ground lost.

Railroads were in best demand throughout the session with New Haven in the lead of the speculative group scoring net gain of over 5 points. Illinois Central gained 9, New York Central advanced 3 while Erie and other favorites added lesser amounts to their recent gains.

Steel recovered 2 points further while other standard industrials closed slightly higher. Professional bears were caught in the radio and the new stock jumped over 6 points while Victor Talking Machine gained 7. Sinclair advanced a full point in the lead of a somewhat better oil group. Total turnover approached closer to the 5,000,000 share level.

Advance in the call rate came as a surprise so naturally influenced a wave of selling. The higher rate evidenced that banks had loaned out surplus Feb. 1 funds on Thursday and that the month-end period of tightness would not end until next week. The increase in loans of $116,000,000 did not have any influence even though no such big gain was looked for. When analyzed it did not appear so bad as it was indicated that only $24,000,000 went to the stock market with the balance being used in the new investment market. While it seems futile to point out that every increase in brokers loans further undermines the credit structure of the market the experienced trader is not ignoring the danger in the further gain in such borrowings and therefore confines operations to in-and-out transactions.

Great Northern Ore responded to report here of outlook for dividend of at least $3 a share this year which would mean return of 8 per cent. This is from current income with revenue from the large new acreage acquired to be considered. Electric Auto Lite was influenced by expectation of another split up of the shares. Similar influence was at work in the market for Carbide. There is some belief that as much as $3 a share may be paid on the new stock after Carbide is split up on a four for one basis. Durant interests continue bullish on combustion as they expect great doings when the Jersey plant is opened.

Best kind of investment buying is the character given recent orders for Simmons with the position taken by leading Chicago interests therein over a year ago remaining undisturbed. There has been some quiet accumulation of Butterick. Earnings last year are placed at close to $2.50 a share with betterment expected this year. New interests were reported taking a position in Nevada Consolidated coincident with a rumor of special development soon in the nature of merger with a leading producing company. Advices from the West indicated that the pipe line would be completed by August and result in larger black figures the last half of the year.

Special analysis of the position of Bethlehem prepared by the same brokerage firm which advised the purchase of steel before its last advance maintains that orders on hands are larger than at any time since 1920. It voices expectation that the cruiser bill will be carried. Earnings now are running at the annual rate of $10 a share, it pointed out, so that there are good prospects that from $12 to $15 will be shown for 1929. Best estimates for the first half of this year, it points out, run from $5 to $7 a share while the current quarter is expected to result in net income of $3.75 a share.

Foreign exchange remained very quiet with European currencies holding firm with the exception of the peseta which continued to drop into new low ground. Cotton remained dull but held fairly steady. Wheat rallied in good style on receipt of bullish weather advances and was followed in its advance by other grains.

TEXAS REVIEW

FORT WORTH, Feb. 1. (AP)—All classes of cattle and calves sold about steady on the livestock market here today. While the supply was about in line with the same day last week, it was only about half the number that came on the corresponding day last year.

Trading in steers for slaughter purposes limited to about three straight loads. Sales at $9.25 to $10.50, or about steady. The demand for steers was very narrow but values steady.

A few packages of bulls changed hands during the day with the better heavy bulls at $8 to $8.50 and common light ones around $6.50.

Very few slaughter yearlings and heifers included in the day's receipts—odd head and package lots of the common and fair kind. Values about steady.

Except for a few loads of very good cows, sales consisted mostly of mixed loads. Values on cow classes considered about in line with yesterday's trading. A three-car lot sold at $8.25, while other loads sold at $7.25 to $8.10. The light supply of canners and cutters sold at $4.50 to $5.75.

Nothing especially good in calves included in the day's offering with local packer buyers taking the bulk of the supply. Values fully steady, quality considered. A car in the southern division sold at $10.50 and a few packages of medium calves up to $11.25. Cull calves at $6 to $6.50.

The light sheep supply sold fully steady to a good demand. Wooled feeder lambs and yearlings sold at $14.50 and shorn wethers at $10.50, and fall shorn feeder lambs at $14.25.

Hogs considered around a quarter higher, rail top $9.50 and truck top $8.85. Bulk 175-250 pound butchers sold at $8.40@9.50; packing sows at $7.50@8.25.

SO stated the New York World the morning after "Interference," Paramount's first All-Talking Picture was shown. "A new experience in talking pictures" said the Los Angeles Times. The day of the quality talking picture is here! In Paramount's hands a novelty now becomes the greatest entertainment of the day! ¶ For two years—from the first day sound pictures became possible—Paramount prepared. The same inventions and facilities for making pictures talk were open to all. Paramount experimented constantly to better them. The most advanced sound equipment was installed in Paramount's great studios in Hollywood and Long Island City. The Paramount producing organization—the best in the world—stars, writers and directors—was trained in the new medium. Outstanding Broadway stars and directors whose stage experience would be invaluable were engaged. ¶ Before the first camera turned on "Interference" it was a foregone conclusion that Paramount Talking Pictures would be the leaders. It is only what you, who have known the supreme Paramount Quality in "silent pictures" for so long, had the right to expect. ¶ And "Interference" is only the beginning. With all Paramount's great resources and unrivalled manpower working in this new medium, and Paramount Quality to maintain, Paramount Talking Pictures of the future will exceed even your fondest imaginings. ¶ Soon you will see and hear "The Canary Murder Case," Jeanne Eagels in "The Letter," "The Doctor's Secret," etc. ¶ Paramount All-Talking SHOWS present, in addition, sound, singing and talking short features of the same Paramount quality. Watch for newspaper announcements and be sure you see them all. Until you do, you will never know what marvelous entertainment the quality talking picture is. Silent or with Sound—"If it's a Paramount Picture—it's the best show in town!"
