Jackson: Oil industry must be protected

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Democratic presidential hopeful Jesse Jackson Friday promised to help Texans rescue their distressed energy industry with a fee on imported oil, among other ideas.

In an afternoon speech to 150 Midland and Odessa supporters before flying on to Miami, Fla., for an evening fundraiser, Jackson said, "A nation such as ours must have financial independence and must have energy security."

Jackson, wrapping up a two-day tour that began Wednesday in Austin, arrived at Midland International Airport donning a straw cowboy hat that was replaced with Permian High "Mo-Jo" and Odessa High "Bronco" baseball caps.

An advocate of the Windfall Profit Tax, Jackson said the nation's oil industry should remain protected for "national security" reasons. His policy, which he calls the Pan-American Energy Alliance, calls for a fee on imported oil from all foreign countries other than Mexico.

"Oil producers cannot compete in the present market. That's why these oil wells are closed. Therefore, we must have a new policy and make some adjustments," he said.

The Democratic presidential hopeful, who is expected to sweep a number of Southern states in Super Tuesday primaries next week, concentrated at Friday's rally on his plan to help the nation's poor, homeless and starving.

"We do not need to deploy Star Wars. We need to employ the people. We need to pay those who work and we need to educate our children. That's our challenge," he said.

Jackson followed up on those remarks, saying he's confident that his coalition has attained a broad base of support, but that racial barriers must continue to be broken if he is to succeed at winning the presidency.

"We can't keep going forward and looking backward or we'll stumble and fall. We must forgive each other, redeem each other and move on to a brighter tomorrow. That's our promise," he said.

Jackson also called for a nationwide effort to "stop drugs from coming into our country."

"We speak of national defense. Defense starts at our borders. Our borders are weak — militarily weak to the drug war," he said. "If we don't stop drugs at the borders, then by the time they hit the end lines, the police are overrun by drug traffickers."

After meeting with local supporters at the rally, Jackson traveled to Odessa's Hillin Drilling Co., where he met with owner R.N. Hillin and promised to lessen the nation's dependency on foreign oil.

Hillin, whose business has felt the negative effects of falling oil prices in recent years, said his company drilled as many as 200 wells per year and employed about 150 people during late 1970s and early 1980s.

Today, Hillin said has six full-time employees and only a few working rigs.

"My concern is not for ourselves and for our economy here as much as it is for the United States as a whole," Hillin said. "I feel like we're getting into a very dangerous situation."

Asked why he chose to campaign in West Texas when he could spend more time in the bigger cities wooing a larger number of supporters, Jackson told reporters, "I'm trying to keep America strong and make America better. A president must run for all of the people."

Dole characterized as tough leader

By JANE MARLER DEES

Some of Sen. Robert Dole's Texas contingency swung through Midland Friday touting an energy policy and a promise of leadership they say the hometown presidential candidate can't offer.

Bouncing from talk of oil to taxes, Texas campaign chairman Richard Collins claimed Dole — "one tough hombre" — should win the national nod.

Dole is not expecting to win Texas on Super Tuesday because of the strong showings expected by Vice President George Bush and former televangelist Pat Robertson, Collins said.

A strong second place showing in Texas is expected by the Dole camp, Collins said.

Bush should win the state because "he's been campaigning here since 1979," the manager said, while adding Robertson should come in strong in Texas districts "where limited numbers of voters turn out."

However, Bush's expected show in Texas doesn't reflect the fact the vice president won't project the tough leadership Dole has offered in Congress and will offer in the oval office.

Dole wants to balance the national deficit, but he is against any trade bill reaking of protectionism.

The Kansas senator advocates maintaining a strong national defense and offers a four-part energy policy, Collins said.

Energy policy changes Dole supports include repealing the Windfall Profits Tax, enlisting a temporary oil import fee with a ceiling around $20, repealing the alternative minimum tax, and trying to deregulate natural gas.

The presidential candidate who won the Iowa caucuses will not raise either the tax rate or federal taxes, Collins pledged.

Augesen's office accounts will be audited

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — With less than four days remaining before Ector County voters decide the heated Republican primary race between incumbent District Attorney Eric Augesen and challenger John W. Smith, County Auditor Bill Hicks has begun an audit of Augesen office accounts.

"There have been some questions raised concerning bond forfeiture funds, and we're doing an audit," explained Hicks Friday.

While Augesen has called the audit "very political," Hicks rejected the notion.

The county auditor said he became aware that something might be amiss in the handling of bond forfeiture funds collected from attorneys and bonding companies and he notified Augesen of his intention to conduct an audit.

Augesen said the county's four district judges signed an order allowing a portion of the funds in question to be withheld for use in drug undercover operations.

Asked how much money might be in question, Augesen said probably "about $6,000 to $7,000."

"We relied on a signed court order and I don't know what else we can do," explaining why the funds were missing from the office books.

The district attorney, saying he had received a letter concerning the audit, was told "they would not go public for the protection of the people that I have under(cover). They didn't (keep it under wraps), they blew it," stated Augesen.

"Now that word of the (undercover) investigation is out," the district attorney said, "Every doper and everybody else out there is going to start looking around" trying to figure out if they've been infiltrated.

"I'm worried about my people now, real worried," Augesen said. "I spent all afternoon, when I found out this was coming down, trying to reach all of the (undercover) people to get them to hell out. They (drug dealers) won't hesitate to kill them."

Hicks said that, when he notified Augesen of the planned audit, he assured the district attorney he didn't want to know anything about informants or undercover officers, that the report on the audit would not identify any specific people, but would merely reveal if funds were properly or improperly used.

"I told him I would honor any records that were of a sensitive nature," the auditor stated. He said he expects to complete the audit sometime next week.

Sisters sailed right through high school

WELLESLEY, Mass. (AP) — If Tammy and Michelle Walsh were stumped by the Pythagorean theorem or baffled by Ohm's Law when they were doing their school assignments, help was usually just a call away, by ship's radio.

While sailing in the Bahamas, an engineer from Nassau was there with advice on algebra. A vacationing English professor from the University of California at Berkeley once offered essay-writing tips.

The sisters now are freshmen at Babson College, having completed elementary, junior high and high school while sailing on the Atlantic with their parents and two cats on a 45-foot boat called High Hopes.

They studied French in Florida and geometry in Georgetown via a Chicago correspondence school that once a year mailed books and exams. They completed the tests at their own pace and returned them for grading.

"I think we got a better education," Michelle, 21, who took some time off before going to college, said in an interview at the 1,650-student undergraduate business school outside Boston. "You learned much more because you read everything. You had a lot of responsibility. We ended up more well-rounded and ready to take on the world."

In 1971, when the sisters were pre-schoolers, Mickey and Joyce Walsh of Oakdale, N.Y., on Long Island's south shore, decided to take the kids sailing. Mickey gave up his job working on a clam dredge and the family left for Puerto Rico, where they lived for a year.

They returned to Puerto Rico in 1974 for another year, and Michelle started in correspondence school. The family sold their house in 1979 and decided to move to the boat.

Police warn about 'Jamaican Switch' scheme

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A variation on a confidence scheme known as the "Jamaican Switch" cost an area man $5,000 cash recently, and Midland police are warning residents to be wary of the rare but potentially costly contrivance.

"They are liable to be on their way from coast to coast," Det. Sgt. Allan Inman said of the three persons who escaped with the cash Feb. 19 after a few hours' work. "It's likely they left immediately after they got the money — but we want people aware of it nevertheless."

In the "Jamaican Switch," one person poses as a seaman new to town with a highly visible bankroll, according to a profile supplied by Inman. He approaches a victim, pays him cash for help securing a room or female companionship, and wins the victim's confidence.

At one point in the scheme, the "Jamaican" expresses fear of American banks — and with the help of an accomplice persuades the victim to withdraw money from his bank to prove this country's banks are safe.

"That's what this is — a faith game," Inman said. "The victim is put into the position of proving the banks can be trusted."

Investigators revealed few details of the Feb. 19 case, but say it was remarkably similar to the classic profile of the switch — but there was no switch.

The businessman was talked into helping a man who said he was a Jamaican seaman. The two traveled to an area motel where they met another man — the victim did not know it at the time, but he was an accomplice. The accomplice and the victim both withdrew money from their banks to "prove" to the Jamaican they trusted American banks.

Mattox has unique proposal

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox is asking Congress to require sex education programs for all mothers receiving welfare payments and to take other steps to provide for the growing number of children born to those who cannot support them.

Mattox joined state and federal officials, judges and childrens' rights advocates who testified last Wednesday on new ways to force parents who have evaded child support to pay what they owe, and thus ease the burden on taxpayers.

Admitting that his sex education proposal is controversial, Mattox told a House subcommittee on public assistance that the only way to ease the problem of unsupported children is to come to grips with the fact that welfare mothers, many of them teenagers, are having multiple births.

Mattox said he believes many teenage mothers receive little or no sex education.

Retired coal miner spiritually reborn in 'death'

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A 71-year-old retired coal miner who revived after being twice declared dead says he returned to life with a profound spiritual renewal.

"I think that it's from a spiritual standpoint that (my life) has changed," Shirley Barnett, who is also a retired Baptist minister, said Wednesday.

"When I came to...I had nothing but a heart full of love and joy for everybody. I was refreshed in the Holy Ghost."

Barnett, who revived while his funeral arrangements were being made, was declared dead Jan. 21 after a cardiac arrest. Doctors said he showed no vital signs for about 45 minutes during one episode and about 30 minutes during a second.

The slender, smiling man spoke to reporters from his wheelchair during a news conference at HCA Park West Medical Centers. Two of his doctors, who were at a loss to explain his revival, also were on hand to answer questions.

"I feel fine. A little weak, naturally," he said.

"The first thing I remember was my daughter telling me I was at Park West," he said. "She put it pretty bluntly that I had died."

On Jan. 16, Barnett was admitted to Methodist Medical Center in nearby Oak Ridge after suffering chest pains.

A heart artery constricted five days later, and doctors and nurses spent 45 minutes trying to revive him with an external pacemaker and electric shock, but he showed no pulse, blood pressure or neurological responses, said Dr. Victor McLaughlin, a cardiologist at the Oak Ridge hospital.

Saturday is expected to be clear, with a high near 70. The low Saturday night will be near 40, with winds expected from the south 5-15 mph.

Sunday will be almost identical, with clear skies expected and a high near 70. Sunday's low is expected to be near 40.

Friday's high was 68, 17 degrees cooler than the record high of 85 set in 1938. Friday's low of 26 was just six degrees warmer than the record low of 20 set in 1966.

STATE

High pressure over Texas kept the sky generally clear and the wind light and variable Friday, but cloudy conditions prevailed over East Texas and the Coastal Plains.

The weather service said skies Saturday should be fair to partly cloudy across the state. Highs Saturday should range from the mid 50s in the Panhandle to the upper 70s in the lower Rio Grande Valley.

In West Texas it should be clear with temperatures in the 50s in the northeastern Panhandle to the upper 80s in the Big Bend Valley.

NATION

Snow and freezing rain extended from the Ohio Valley into New England on Friday, and locally heavy rain fell southeast of the snowbelt.

Up to an inch of ice had accumulated on streets in central Ohio from Dayton to Zanesville and Chillicothe since Thursday night. Heavy snow fell across northern Ohio during the night, with up to 10 inches at Kenton and 8 inches at Sandusky.

Rain prevailed to the southeast of the band of freezing rain and snow, with thundershowers in West Virginia. Showers and thunderstorms extended along the coast of South Carolina and Georgia, and across northeastern Florida into the Gulf of Mexico.

Elsewhere, snow developed in the central high Plains along an advancing cold front, and one to two inches of snow were expected in western and central Nebraska.

A storm moving ashore in the Pacific Northwest produced rain in Washington and Oregon, with snow at some higher elevations. A snow advisory was posted through Saturday for the Cascades and the Olympic mountains of Washington state.

For today, scattered showers were forecast from the southern and middle Atlantic Coast states to Arkansas and southern Missouri, with rain most likely along the coast of Georgia and South Carolina and in northern Arkansas. Scattered thunderstorms were forecast across the Florida Peninsula. Scattered showers also were forecast across Washington and Oregon, with a few showers over northern Montana and western North Dakota.

AUDIT

Augesen said the funds used from the portion of bond forfeitures retained by his office helped to partially fund the undercover drug investigation, which has been a cooperative effort between his office, the Texas Department of Public Safety and the Odessa Police Department. Both of these law enforcement agencies have provided funds, too, he stated.

As to suggestions he was ordered to perform the audit by the county's district judges, Hicks said the judges had not ordered him to do anything, but he has their support in anything he does relating to his activities as auditor.

Hicks confirmed that the district attorney received the order signed by the district judges and that it authorized him to withhold portions of bond forfeiture funds.

But, because questions have been raised "I'm doing an audit just as I would do for any other department in the county," he stated.

Augesen stated that in any case where a defendant was granted a new trial and when a check for a bond had not been cashed, the check was simply held in his office to avoid any appearance of impropriety.

"Once we found out there was a question in their minds," he stated, "we have taken no action (regarding cashing checks) at all."

MATTOX

The Texas Department of Human Services, which administers Aid to Families with Dependent Children, the major state and federal welfare program, refers about 20,000, new, parental non-support cases to Mattox's offices.

In Texas, the attorney general is responsible for identifying, locating and prosecuting parents who don't support their children, regardless of their marital status or whether they are on welfare.

More than 19,000 babies were born to Texas teen-agers in 1987. A year earlier, Texas reported the highest number of births to girls under 14 years of age in the nation. Mattox said that more than 80 percent of pregnant Texas teenagers do not finish high school.

While not all of the babies born to teen-agers end up on welfare, many do.

At $184 a month for a family of three, welfare payments in Texas are the fourth lowest in the country; that is, 24 percent of the federal poverty level and far below the "standard of need" of $574 a month that Texas has set as a minimum for a family of three to survive.

The standard, however, is not binding in Texas, and lawmakers have been unwilling to raise benefits to meet the standard.

Texas monitors both voluntary and involuntary child support payments in non-welfare as well as welfare cases, and Mattox advocated the system as a model for the nation.

The state's system requires that accurate records be kept on child-custody awards, the amount of wage assignments ordered and the amount collected.

DOLE

An interesting highlight of the press conference came when Collins announced former ambassador to the United Nations Jeanne Kirkpatrick would likely be a shoe-in for secretary of state should Dole get elected.

Ms. Kirkpatrick this week was added to the list of Dole endorsements which includes former Secretary of State Al Haig and former Texas Governor John Connally.

Dole's wife, Elizabeth, the former secretary of transportation, is scheduled to visit Dallas Monday, Collins said.

Nurse sees son hit

CORAL SPRINGS, Fla. (AP) — A nurse who saw a young bicyclist struck by a car rushed to help him and found that the fatally injured boy was her son.

Jamie Schloendorf, 14, died soon after suffering severe internal, chest and leg injuries in the accident last week.

His mother, Debbie Schloendorf, said she was in an intersection on the way home and "right in front of me, I saw this car hit this young boy and carry him on the hood for awhile before he fell off. The car kept going.

"I jumped out of the car and ran to the injured boy and as I bent over to take his pulse, I saw that it was my son."

Richard Collins, Texas general campaign manager for the Robert Dole presidential campaign, shrugs when asked Friday if he and Dole would characterize Bush as a wimp. Bruno Hanson, left, looks on. Hanson is the congressional campaign chairman for the 21st district.

British Oxfam official, Syrian aide reportedly kidnapped in Lebanon

SIDON, Lebanon (AP) — A British official from a private relief organization and his Syrian aide disappeared in Lebanon, and one official of their group said Friday that they had been kidnapped.

The purported abduction came near the end of a week that saw two Scandinavian employees of the United Nations and a West German engineer released in Lebanon.

Peter Coleridge, the 44-year-old Middle East coordinator of Oxfam, and Oxfam's Lebanon representative Omar Traboulsi, 31, a Syrian, were kidnapped Thursday evening, spokesman John Magrath said in Oxford, England.

Coleridge was on his first trip to Lebanon in three years.

"We've had conflicting reports as to whether they are still being held or not," Magrath said. But Nissrine Rawda, an official at Oxfam's Beirut office, said there were "no eyewitnesses confirming the abduction."

Sunni Moslem leftist leader Mustafa Saad, whose Nasserite militia controls Sidon, told reporters the two Oxfam officials have been "detained for questioning" by an unidentified Palestinian group in Sidon's Ein el-Hilweh refugee camp.

"I expect their release within hours, God willing," Saad said. "This is not an abduction. There is a security mishap in the camp."

He said Coleridge had visited the Hittin area south of Ein el-Hilweh in 1982, when it was devastated by Israel's invading army.

"When he returned this time he took pictures of the area's reconstruction and a group inside the camp seized him for questioning, fearing he might be taking espionage photographs," Saad added.

Saad declined to name the group which he says is holding Coleridge and Traboulsi.

"But I have stressed upon the party holding him that he should be released in time to catch his scheduled flight to London on Saturday," Saad told The Associated Press.

He said Coleridge was booked on Middle East Airlines Flight 201 to London at 11:30 a.m. today.

Police in Sidon, an ancient city 25 miles south of Beirut, confirmed the two men had been missing since the night before, but could not say for sure how they vanished.

"They may have been seized by gunmen of the Moslem Ulema grouping," said a Sidon police spokesman who could not be identified in keeping with regulations. "We are acting on this assumption in our investigation."

The Moslem Ulema is a fundamentalist Sunni Moslem faction headed by Sheik Maher Hammoud and is influenced by the pro-Iranian Hezbollah, or Party of God.

Hammoud, however, disclaimed any involvement in the abduction.

"Why should I be blamed for every foreigner who is abducted in Sidon?" Hammoud told The Associated Press.

Hezbollah is believed to be the patron of underground factions holding many of 22 other foreigners held hostage in Lebanon.

Two U.N. Scandinavian relief workers — Jan Stening, 44, of Sweden, and William Jorgensen, 58, of Norway — were freed unharmed Tuesday after 25 days of captivity.

The U.N. Relief and Works Agency, with which the two Scandinavians served, had blamed their abduction on Palestinians acting without a political motive.

Coleridge and Traboulsi traveled to Sidon from Beirut on Thursday morning on a routine visit to inspect relief groups supported by Oxfam, a British charity that aids refugees and poor people in many countries.

Police said the missing pair had lunch Thursday in Sidon's Skandarani district with Alia Shammaa, who heads the Ghassan Kanafani Foundation, a Palestinian charity that receives aid from Oxfam.

They left Mrs. Shammaa's house at 3:30 p.m. and went to the suburban Ein el-Hilweh refugee camp in an orange station wagon, the police spokesman said.

They left Ein el-Hilweh to Sidon at 4:15 p.m., the spokesman said.

The vehicle was last seen at Jerusalem Square, about a half a mile from Mrs. Shammaa's house, the spokesman said.

Jerusalem Square is about 100 yards from Sheik Hammoud's residence in Sidon, Lebanon's third largest city.

Coleridge joined Oxfam in June 1981 and lives in Oxford with his wife, two daughters and son. Traboulsi is not married.

British Ambassador John Gray visited Mrs. Rawda at mid-afternoon and said afterwards: "I have no confirmation of the (abduction) story one way or the other."

The embassy's military attache Col. Patrick Hyland earlier said the reported abduction was "a false alarm at the moment."

The reported abduction came a day after pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem kidnappers released West German industrial engineer Ralph Schray, 30, from 35 days of captivity in west Beirut.

The 22 foreigners missing and believed kidnapped in Lebanon since 1985 include nine Americans, four Frenchmen, three Britons, a West German, an Irishman, an Italian, an Indian and two unidentified men.

Longest held is American Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press. He was kidnapped March 16, 1985.

Because he trusted the Jamaican and the other man, the victim simply handed over his $5,000 to prove a point — and the two disappeared behind a Midland restaurant.

Inman — who with Det. Sgt. Ronnie Wilson investigates bunco schemes — say cases such as the Jamaican Switch may occur only a few times a year. But, he said the "scores" are usually big. Cities located along the nation's busiest roadways, such as interstate highways, are most susceptible.

"They are con men — and I mean top-notch con men," Inman said. "Most of the plots are planned for at least $5,000, and they are very, very hard to catch.

"The only typical thing about them is the line of nonsense" they lure victims with, such as the oft-used tale of a suddenly rich Jamaican seaman, according to the detective. "If you read about it in the newspaper, no one would ever admit they would fall for it."

Although the crime is a rare one, "People should be worried about it. If it happens only once, $5,000 is too much to lose."

SISTERS

"They always liked sailing and wanted to live on a boat and travel," Tammy, 18, said of her parents. "They were going to wait until we grew up."

Instead, the family went to sea and the girls learned to discipline themselves in their studies. Their parents left them on their own almost from the start, they said.

"They felt we were mature and responsible enough to do it and by doing that we became more mature and responsible," said Tammy.

The Walshes spent summers on New York's Fire Island, then usually left in October and sailed down the Atlantic Coast. The trip offered maximum study time, often up to eight hours a day.

"Then we'd get to the beach and not (study) for months," Michelle said.

The family spent most winters anchored off Georgetown in the Exuma Islands in the Bahamas. Books often weren't a priority; Michelle needed three years to complete algebra.

Michelle and Tammy admit that while they disciplined themselves enough to finish the required texts, if the sun was shining and the water glistening, boardsailing won out over Shakespeare.

"We didn't have set hours," said Michelle. "If it was a beautiful day outside I wasn't going to sit and read."

Mary McKeown, principal of the Chicago-based American School of Correspondence, said Michelle received her high school equivalency diploma in 1984 and Tammy in 1987. They had to take at least 16 credits under Illinois requirements.

She said the school is accredited by the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools and serves a variety of students, from young people living abroad to adults seeking to finish high school. Tuition and books cost $679 for four years.

Science and math courses most frequently sent the sisters searching for help on the radio or high seas.

"People living on boats are very friendly," Tammy said. "You don't think anything about rowing up to someone's boat, knocking on the hull and saying 'Hi.'"

The Walshes say they don't regret missing the typical high school scene. And they offer their Scholastic Aptitude Test scores in defense of their academic preparation: 1,280 for Tammy and 1,090 for Michelle, compared to the 1987 national average of 906 out of a possible 1,600.

"They gave you a book and you had to read the whole book, no matter what," Tammy said. "I think that's a big difference. I know people who say they never finished a textbook."

Shaw still ahead in fundraising

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Incumbent Rep. Larry Don Shaw D-Big Spring, moved another $19,000 ahead of his opponent in the campaign fundraising game last month, records filed at the Secretary of State's Office show.

Cecil Gilstrap of Big Spring is seeking to unseat Shaw for House District 64.

In campaign finance reports for February, Shaw garnered $20,085 to Gilstrap's $1,477. Shaw spent $11,541 primarily for campaign advertising. Gilstrap spent all but about $73 of his funds on campaign advertising.

Shaw's largest contributions came from political action committees. The Higher Education Legislators PAC donated $5,000, while the Bankers Legislative League of Texas, the Texas Educators PAC and the Texas Medical PAC each donated $1,000.

Gilstrap's largest contributions came mainly from oil-related businesses. James Duncan of Duncan Drilling Co. in Big Spring gave the largest contribution — $500. A $300 contribution came from EMPAC, a political action committee of the Texas Utilities Co., the Texas Power and Light Division Employees PAC and Dow Chemical Company.

Shaw has garnered $34,484 since July of 1987, while Gilstrap has collected $3,113.

Father says ex-caretakers brainwashed his millionaire son

HOUSTON (AP) — The former caretakers of millionaire Ugo di Portanova — the oil heir ruled mentally incompetent in Texas — brainwashed him into leaving Italy illegally in hopes of gaining control of his fortune, according to his father Paulo di Portanova.

Paulo di Portanova, 83, who lives in Rome, says he had employed Tina LaMatta and her husband, Umberto, for years to look after Ugo, but that they have become only interested in getting Ugo's fortune — estimated at $50 million.

Mrs. LaMatta was named Ugo's personal guardian earlier this month by Probate Judge John Hutchison.

The LaMattas' attorneys, Gene Clements and Tom Croft, call Paulo's accusations "ludicrous."

Croft denied that Ugo was brainwashed or that the couple did anything wrong in bringing Ugo to Texas.

Ugo, 52, wrote his father on Jan. 7 that all the LaMattas really wanted was to "get their hands on my financial empire," Paulo says.

"The girl (Tina) is very ambitious. She wants power and money. He (Umberto) is the kind of guy who never looks you in the eye. He is a man who never expresses himself," Paulo said in a telephone interview with the Houston Chronicle.

Ugo is now reportedly living happily with the LaMattas at his exclusive condominium in Houston.

But Paulo said he is worried about his son's welfare and claims the LaMattas have prevented him from talking to Ugo on the telephone.

In January the judge removed Paulo as Ugo's guardian after he failed to provide financial accountings to the court for millions of dollars he had spent over many years on behalf of his son.

Other documents filed in court Thursday indicate that Italian police are investigating Ugo's disappearance from his apartment in Naples under circumstances which have not yet been clarified and after neighbors in the apartment building heard the victim's cries for help and the sound of battering against the door."

The international law firm of Jones, Day, Reavis & Pougue urged Hutchison Thursday to allow them to be hired by Paulo and to be paid from Ugo's estate.

But Hutchison told the firm's attorney, Sydney McDole, that he does not think it "proper to burden" Ugo's estate with additional attorney fees in order for them to represent Paulo — who has been removed as Ugo's guardian.

However, Hutchison said it would be advisable for Paulo to hire attorneys to represent his interests in the matter.

Meanwhile, Hutchison said he expects to receive a preliminary psychiatric report on Ugo's mental condition next week. He said he hopes to arrange an non-stressful session with Ugo, where attorneys can interview Ugo in a setting less formal than a courtroom.

STATE

Elk now roaming in West Texas

DAVIS MOUNTAINS (AP) — Nearly 100 elk from Oregon are now roaming the mountains of West Texas, where state officials hope the animals can prosper and eventually be hunted and photographed.

"As far as I know, they're doing fine," Charles Winkler, game program director for the state department of Parks and Wildlife, said Friday.

Fifty-one Rocky Mountain elk were released in the Wylie Mountains southeast of Van Horn on Wednesday, a week after 48 others were released in the Davis Mountains about 100 miles east.

The release is the beginning of an experiment to determine whether the animals can thrive in West Texas. If they do well, the herds could be opened to hunters in a few years, wildlife officials said.

Texas got the elk in a swap for 300 Rio Grande turkeys. The elk had become a nuisance in Oregon, feasting on farmers' haystacks around La Grande in the northeast part of the state.

The elk are similar to the Merriam's elk that used to roam West Texas before hunters and cattle-borne diseases rendered them extinct. Officials hope the animals, which were trucked in from the snowy Blue Mountains, can adapt to arid West Texas.

Winkler said he especially is concerned with conditions in the Wylie Mountains, where trees are few and rainfall averages 8 to 10 inches per year.

"If they make it in the Wylie Mountains, they can make it anywhere else in Texas," Winkler said. "Water is most important to them, and I'm told they need lots of shade. If they can shade up under a rock ledge or a hill, that might be just as good as a tree."

The Davis Mountains have lots of oak and juniper trees, and about 18 inches of rain falls annually.

Todd Callaway, a wildlife technician with the Oregon Fish and Wildlife Department, said he was impressed with the way the first group of elk bounded out of tractor-trailers and into the upper canyons of the Davis Mountains.

"After 48 hours, I was surprised," he said. "I expected broken legs...I think they'll do super (in Texas)."

Winkler said he expects the herds to settle and not to wander much once they find good grazing grounds because about a quarter of the animals are calves. About half the transferred elk are female.

A wildlife biologist based in Fort Davis and graduate students at Sul Ross State University in Alpine plan to track the animals and monitor their welfare.

If the animals do well, Parks and Wildlife will release about 100 elk annually for the next five years, Winkler said.

Group urges boycott

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Right to Life Committee urged state voters Friday to boycott the Democratic presidential candidates in the primary because of their stand on abortion.

"We want to send a clear message to the Democratic National Party that they are out of step with a significant portion of their membership, that they are out of step with a significant portion of Texas Democrats," said Mark Fury, committee executive director.

"It would appear that the national party has established an unwritten rule that in order to run for president of the United States, you must be pro-abortion," he said.

AIDS' spread affected by cultural conditions

BOSTON (AP) — The AIDS epidemic in sections of Latin America differs from the spread of the disease in the United States and may require educational programs tailored to different cultures, researchers say.

One such educational campaign is the intensive effort begun early last year by the government of the Dominican Republic, researchers said during a recent workshop on AIDS abroad at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

In its first year, the campaign has doubled condom use and dramatically improved public knowledge of the disease, said Edward Green, an anthropologist with John Short and Associates of Columbia, Md.

In Brazil, 70 percent of the 2,237 reported cases of acquired immune deficiency syndrome occurred in the urban states of Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo, noted Richard Parker, an anthropologist at the University of California in Berkeley.

While many of those cases occur in homosexuals, homosexuality is thought of very differently in Brazil than it is in the United States, and thus education campaigns aimed at homosexuals are unlikely to be effective there, Parker said.

Most Brazilians think of themselves not as homosexuals or as heterosexuals but as either active or passive sex partners, regardless of their sexual preference, he told the conference. He said with no well-defined gay community, there are no gay institutions to help the government with its AIDS education efforts.

The symptoms of AIDS in the Dominican Republic are much different from those in Haiti, with which it shares the same island, said Linda Valleroy, an anthropologist working with the U.S. Agency for International Development.

Of the 399 cases of AIDS reported in the Dominican Republic, many seem characterized by diarrhea and gradual wasting away, she said. In Haiti, which has a much more severe AIDS problem, the disease often leads to Kaposi's sarcoma, an otherwise rare cancer.

"We don't understand why...different patterns are seen in different populations," she said.

The AIDS information campaign there has involved the release of a half million leaflets, stickers and posters, widespread television education, the distribution of condoms and the cooperation of the Roman Catholic church, he said.

Dallas sculptor keeps his creative juices on ice for big competition

DALLAS (AP) — As an artist, Robert Bifulco keeps some strange company. His Deep Ellum studio is right down the hall from several hundred pounds of frozen french fries. Outside his door is a hand truck holding, among other things, frozen packages labeled "Beef Feet" and "Cheek Meat."

There is frozen stuff all around the place.

It's cold in here.

But cold is what Bifulco searches for, what he thrives on. It's what brought him to this cold storage building on Commerce Street, for it's here that he creates sculpted replicas of intricate bridges and ships, birds in flight, animals in motion and an endless assortment of other subjects, all in ice.

Regarded as one of the foremost ice sculptors in the United States — in 1986 he placed second in the U.S. Ice Carving Championships in New York City — Bifulco went to Japan recently to participate in the 16th International Ice Sculpture Exhibition at Ashikawa.

He is one of only six Americans selected to compete in what he calls "the most significant ice sculpture event in the world."

His hopes rest on a giant snake.

Bifulco, 36, and his partner, professional ice sculptor Mark Daukas, 27, of Newport Beach, Calif., recently completed a sort of rough draft of the piece they will create in the below-zero temperatures of Ashikawa.

The sculpture, sharing a freezer with hundreds of bags of cubed ice, is of a giant snake poised to strike. It measures about 26 feet in length and rises nearly 10 feet in the air.

When the heroic sculpture is done in Japan, Bifulco said, it will include a life-size chained human male figure in the foreground (as though he is about to become a snake's supper), and a pillar topped by an eagle. Like other competitors, Bifulco and Daukas will have 45 hours to complete their work.

Bifulco, who was a chef with the Marriott Corp. for 11 years, has been sculpting ice since he saw a chef in Chicago carving ice 13 years ago. He has been in Dallas six years and has operated his own business, Bifulco's Vanishing Sculptures, since 1984.

In Japan, he and Daukas will compete against about 50 other two-man teams, most of them Japanese. The Japanese took top honors in last year's competition, although Bifulco and his former partner were honored with a special award of excellence because of the promise shown by the new American sculptors.

By Japanese standards, Bifulco says, "I'm just a rookie."

When he isn't preparing for international competition, Bifulco works about 15 hours a day six days a week, sometimes seven.

"I eat it, sleep it and drink it. But I don't look on it as work," he says. Lately, though, he has stopped only long enough to get three or four hours of sleep a night.

He sculpts his creations primarily in two rooms — a cooler that has a temperature of 34 degrees and a freezer that creates an ideal atmosphere of 20 below zero.

"I wear mountain climbing gear," he says. "Thermal underwear that costs $80 a pair, heavy gloves. Oh, these are duck shoes from Maine. People here say they think they're stylish. In Maine, they're just duck shoes, but here they're a fashion statement."

The cold doesn't bother him, he says, because he loves what he's doing. But in the summer, when temperatures outside hang around 100 degrees, "I have to go into decompression. I'll maybe take my coat off and work for two hours, or work in my underwear for a couple of hours before coming out. If I were to come out of the freezer and get into my car and drive down Central Expressway, I'd fall asleep. It just does something to my body."

Typically, Bifulco says, he'll spend perhaps six hours at a stretch in the cold, working with a chainsaw to construct major pieces and with more delicate Japanese ice carving tools to do details. Pieces of ice are fused together by squirting or spraying water on the mating surfaces. The water freezes immediately, joining two pieces in a strong weld.

Sculptors in competition will try to either hide the seams or disguise them in the detail of the art work.

Fifth member named to racing panel

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — In the wake of Comptroller Bob Bullock's legal concerns over actions the still-incomplete Texas Horse Racing Commission took at its first two meetings, Gov. Bill Clements Friday named a fifth member to the commission.

Bullock Friday morning asked Attorney General Jim Mattox for official opinions concerning whether the commission had authority to act before Clements had appointed all six public members, whether the commission may have violated the Texas Open Meetings Law earlier this week and whether the commission may loan Texas A&M University money to develop a laboratory to test racing animals for drugs.

"I am extremely concerned with the validity of the actions which have been taken," Bullock said.

The commission has met twice since Clements appointed the first four public members Feb. 11. Although those four — along with Bullock and Department of Public Safety Chairman Ruben Cardenas — constitute a majority of the eight-member commission, Bullock points to legal precedents that say "a full board must be in existence and capable of exercising power before a majority of the board can exercise power."

Clements this morning named Glenn Paul Blodgett, a 39-year-old veterinarian from Guthrie, to represent veterinarians specializing in large animals on the commission. Blodgett is horse production manager at two Texas breeding farms and has treated horces at tracks in Texas and New Mexico.

"Glenn brings a sense of professional maturity, experience and wisdom to the commission which will ensure that the racing industry is beyond reproach," the governor said in making the appointment.

The commission on Monday met in secret session to discuss the salary and duties of the yet-to-be-hired executive director. Commission Chairman James Clement said the panel did not violate the Open Meetings Law.

"No vote was taken," Clement told reporters Monday. "We did not discuss specific individuals. We discussed descriptions of this job, office security — nothing we have to disclose."

Bullock this morning pointed out that previous attorney general's opinions permitted governmental bodies to meet in executive session to discuss the salary of specific individuals. "Where salaries or salary scales are discuseed without reference to a specific individual...the discussions...must be conducted in public," that 1975 opinion says.

Bullock also said that the 1988-1989 state appropriations bill apparently gives the commission no authority to loan funds to A&M. He also noted that the state Horse Racing Act "provides that the drug-testing laboratory is to be independent of the commission."

JUDGE BASKIN'S RECORD AND REPUTATION

"THE BEST WAY (to learn about Judge Pat Baskin's record and reputation) WOULD BE TO ASK SOMEONE WHO KNOWS...AN ATTORNEY WHO PRACTICES IN THE 142ND DISTRICT COURT..."

-suggested by Judge Baskin's opponent in political ads (February 3 and March 1)

Here's what most Midland attorneys have to say about Judge Baskin:

HIS RECORD? THE VERY BEST!

Criminal Cases:

- the toughest sentencing record of any sizable West Texas county.
- a superb speedy-trials record
- while truly tough, unquestionably fair

Civil Cases:

- an insistance on prompt trials
- evenhandedness in all cases
- keen understanding of complex legal matters

HIS REPUTATION? OUTSTANDING!

How is Judge Baskin known in the legal community?:

- as a hard worker who logs in over 55 hours a week at the courthouse
- conscientious and fair
- knowledgeable and experienced

WHO ARE WE?

We are members* of Midland's legal community including:

- a large majority of the attorneys practicing in the District Courts
- over a dozen former prospecuters from the District and County Attorney's offices
- attorneys who represent:
  - plaintiffs and defendants
  - individuals and corporations
  - independents and majors

We are supporters of Judge Baskin's campaign for re-election:

Woman possessed by 'Mickey mania'

PALESTINE, Texas (AP) — Joni Roberts got depressed one day 10 years ago. Then she saw Mickey Mouse and couldn't help but smile.

She now has more than 1,000 Mickey Mouse items in her house, including scales, watches, dolls, sheets, toothbrushes and just about everything else imaginable. Her clothes collection is also extensive, taking in every type of outerwear and underwear.

"Have you ever seen a Mickey Mouse that's not smiling?" she said. "That's why I like him. He's something else. Doesn't he make you smile?"

Her husband, Jimmy, has picked up Mickeys from Florida to California and every state in between on trips for his oil field company. He plays to his wife's passion by checking every town he stops in to search for another of her favorite Disney darlings.

"He buys them, but he doesn't want me to know what they cost," she said.

Since Mickey Mouse items are collectibles, she said, every purchase is an investment with guaranteed increasing value.

Walt Disney Productions ended in 1986 and became Walt Disney Co. Mrs. Roberts said all Disney Productions pieces are worth keeping since they are no longer made.

"A piece that sold five years ago for $5 is now worth $15," she said. "Stocks go up and down, but Mickey Mouse keeps going up. You're not blowing the money because it's an investment. I think everybody should collect something."

Her husband has amassed hundreds of Coca-Cola articles, mostly antiques, in just two months.

This year is Mickey Mouse's 60th anniversary. Mrs. Roberts has a ceramic collector's piece from Mickey's debut in 1928 in "Steamboat Willie."

Some of her other favorite Mickey Mouse articles include a gold ring, several Engersall timepieces, a talking scale with a pull-up nose measuring tape and the telephone that she uses every day.

One bedroom of the home is jammed with Mickey mementos. Her three young grandchildren call it "Grandma's playroom."

For friends and relatives, gift-giving usually means additions to the collection.

"They know that if they just give me something with Mickey on it, I'm happy," she said. "I guess I've got the 'I wants.'"

Mrs. Roberts said she has learned to have a keen eye for the little guy. A lot of times finding antique pieces means going to out-of-the-way places. Wherever they travel, a visit to the nearest antique or junk shop is a must.

"My husband and I will go to a junk shop that will have a thousand things in it, and I'll see the Mickey Mouse right away. I don't care what's in a room, I can spot a Mickey Mouse."

A couple of months ago she was in an old Western Auto store in Minden, La. Her eye caught a Hasbro talking Mickey Mouse doll behind some items on a top shelf. The doll was more than 25 years old and still in the wrapper, and the clerk sold the doll for the marked price of $7.95. Mrs. Roberts said the doll is worth more than $200.

Shareholders OK Chicago banker's plan to rescue First City

Abboud

HOUSTON (AP) — Shareholders on Friday approved Chicago banker A. Robert Abboud's controversial $1.5 billion plan to rescue First City Bancorporation of Texas Inc. in the largest government bank bailout since 1984.

Exact vote totals were not immediately released, but a two-thirds vote of the bank-holding company's 37 million shares was required to approve the plan, which includes nearly $1 billion in federal assistance, a spin-off of poorly performing assets and an infusion of privately-raised capital.

"The plan's approval by shareholders is a significant step toward achieving the financial reorganization of First City," said J.A. Elkins Jr., First City's senior board chairman.

"That, in turn, will make it possible for First City to go forward as a strong, healthy and independent Texas-based banking company — a Texas bank for all of Texas," he added.

It took only 10 minutes for the shareholders to approve the plan, and Elkins said the state's fourth-largest bank had received a commitment for a line of credit and obtained necessary tax rulings to complete the transaction.

Abboud will be become chairman of board and chief executive officer upon consummation of deal.

"Today's action allows us to move forward with a plan that serves the best interests of all of First City's constituencies," Abboud said.

First City, which grew quickly during the Texas oil boom, was hammered by energy and real estate loan losses when oil prices plummeted. For 1987, the company posted a $1.1 billion loss. It has assets of $11 billion, and operates 59 banks in Texas and one in South Dakota.

Abboud had promised banking regulators to rehabilitate the wobbly company.

In a 200-page, single-spaced proxy statement sent to shareholders, Abboud said an investor group he heads will raise $500 million to serve as the primary source of capital for the restructured company.

In addition, First City subsidiary banks will spin off $1.79 billion in book value of non-performing and other assets to Collecting Bank, a new national bank.

In exchange, First City will receive about $764 million in Collecting Bank notes and about $970 million in Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. notes.

The FDIC pledge is the largest such government rescue since the 1984 federal bailout of Continental Illinois Bank and Trust of Chicago.

The proxy statement predicted the new company would become profitable almost immediately, spinning off the poorly-performing assets.

Under the reorganization plan, each 100 shares of First City common stock will be exchanged for one common share of the new holding company, 100 shares of common stock in Collecting Bank and the right to buy more securities in the new company.

The restructuring plan was first announced Sept. 9. It was modified on Jan. 26 to allow common shareholders and the four classes of preferred shareholders to vote as one group.

The first plan had called for each class to vote on the plan separately, with a rejection from any one group sufficient to scuttle the deal.

The earlier arrangement inadvertently provided rancher Frederick Erck, a San Antonio preferred stockholder, potential veto power over the deal.

Dunbar, Southwest barge into 5A finals at 11 a.m. today

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The Region I Class 5A basketball tournament has developed into an All-District 6-5A Fort Worth showdown as the Cowtown teams of Dunbar and Southwest gained today's 11 a.m. finals at Chaparral Center.

Dunbar, who almost makes Midland a March vacation home every year, whipped Abilene High 87-49 in one semifinal game Friday while Southwest came from behind to beat El Paso High by a 56-51 margin. Dunbar has beaten Southwest twice this year in district play, but the last time these two teams met in a region final in Midland, Southwest pulled an upset after similiar regular season results.

"It's hard to beat Southwest twice or five times," said Dunbar head coach Robert Hughes, who treats every step on the court as heart attack time.

Dunbar got 27 points from Randy Williams, who can drive the baseline with the best of them and shoot from any angle.

Point guard Derrick Daniels also set a national career assists record in the second quarter with his 1,350th assist, a pass underneath to Williams. The old mark of 1,349 was held by Huey Scott of Florien, La.

"We hit the open man at Dunbar and Derrick is our point guard and we highlight our point guard in our offense," said Hughes. "Derrick is an excellent point guard, but he also has been a starter since he was a freshmen. Not many people get a chance to play four years."

Dunbar and AHS, District 4-5A's first team to earn a region berth since Midland High in 1981, were in a heated first quarter with the game tied twice and lead changes eight times before Dunbar took a 15-13 lead near the end of the period.

From there on it was a rout as Dunbar punished the Eagles with the running game.

"I got a little skittish when Cory Lockridge and Tony Moore got two fouls in the first half. I got some wrong matchups in the game and before you know it - boom, boom, boom," said AHS coach Gerald Coppedge. "Also, I think someone snuck out there and put a lid on that basket in the second half. We haven't hit that poorly in a long time. It may have looked like we folded, but we didn't. The ball just wouldn't fall."

Abilene's Tony Moore was the only Eagle in double figures with 16 points. The Eagles were also missing point guard Greg Denman, who was lost this week to grades. Without Denman to run the offense, Abilene looked to be without direction at times.

AHS has been known as a running team this year, but Dunbar's running show was something else and Hughes had the explanation for the difference.

"There is a difference between a running team from Stop Six in Fort Worth and other supposedly running ball clubs."

Southwest had to erase an 11-point El Paso High lead to gain its five-point victory over the Tigers, who end the season with a 28-5 record.

The Rebels did it mostly with 6-8 senior Oliver Miller, who scored 31 points. Miller had 17 of Southwest's 24 points or his team would have been down by more than the 30-19 margin the Tigers held with 2:22 left in the half.

Midland College moved in position to win its fourth consecutive Region V title at Chaparral Center Friday night with a 91-87 semifinal victory over the tournament's No. 1 seed New Mexico Junior College but "Battle Royale No. 5" stands in the way.

Odessa College defeated South Plains College 81-68 to form the other half of the Region V final today at 7 p.m. And when these two teams meet it is war West Texas war of thundering magnitude.

"I guess you can call this one Battle Royale No. 5," said MC coach Reggie Franklin after the win over NMJC. "I just hope it's our turn to win this time."

MC'S WIN OVER NMJC was one of those coast-to-coast victories, but it was like travelling by a train that stops at every depot in the nation. MC never trailed, but they never put the lid on this one until Chaparral fans were wringing out the heart for a quick transfusion.

"I thought it would be tough and it was," said Franklin. "I think we were a little flat and a little tense. I wasn't thinking ahead, but the kids may have been since they already knew that Odessa had already won.

"We just couldn't put NMJC away. We were taking quick shots and we don't usually do that. We hit one of 11 three point shots in the first half and still hit 50 percent from the field. We would have been in the 60 percent range if we had showed a little patience.

"Against OC we will have to be more patient and more active on defense to keep them off the boards."

TICKETS FOR this Region V title struggle will go on sale at 2 p.m. at Chaparral Center. Reserved seats are $5 with 350 left and general admission is $4.

MC's Billy Ray Smith, who had 19 poinst Thursday, came back with 23 against NMJC and Herman Henry also had 23 points. The Chaps had scoring help with 19 from Charles McCovery, 11 from Sydney Rice and 10 from David Martin.

Still Smith didn't feel completely satisfied with the win.

"You can say we played well enough to win, but we didn't stick to the game plan. We should have buried them when we had a chance, but didn't," said Smith. "We're going to have to play some ball in the finals."

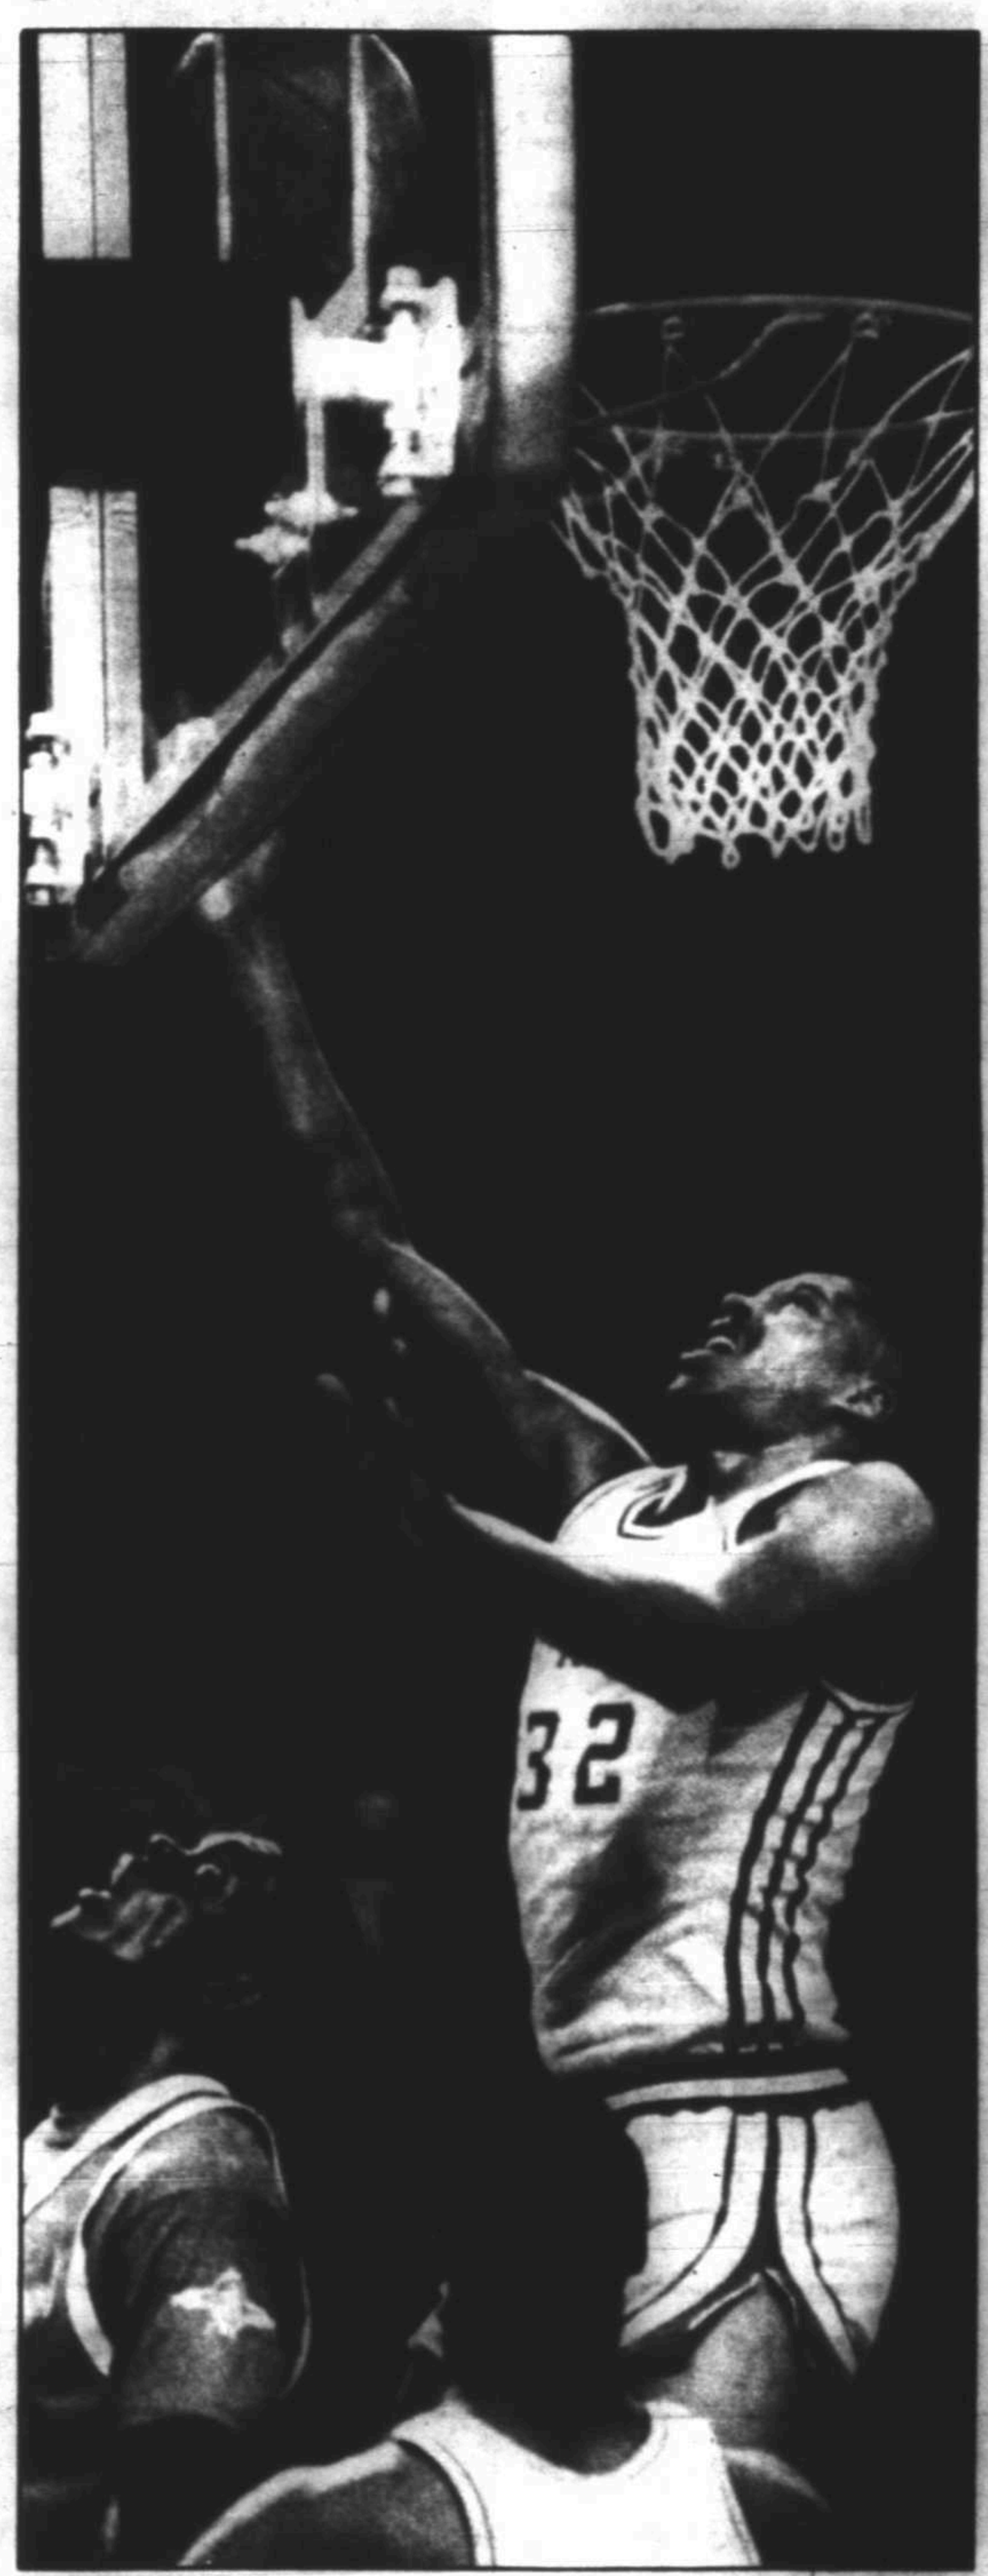
MC led NMJC by 12 points with 11:50 left in the game, but the lead eroded to a mere three points, 86-83 with 1:09 left. Henry took the game in hand at that point with a couple of steals and timely baskets to sink the T-Birds.

THE CHAPS had little success with 6-7 Rodney Jones, who moved into the top 10 in Region V scoring for a single game with 41 points, hitting 15 of 21 shots from the field and 11 of 12 charity tosses.

Odessa College used an eight unanswered point surge to open the second half and went on to down South Plains by 13 points.

OC's Larry Johnson sat out the last 15:36 of the first half after getting two quick fouls, but ignited the Wranglers 14 second half points and 10 rebounds.

SPC led 40-39 at the half, but Texan coach Ron Mayberry said, "We could play with them when Johnson was out of the game, but he was too much for us in the second half. We just got whipped."



Jerry Mennenga/Reporter-Telegram

Billy Ray Smith flies high to score two for Midland College in Friday's win over NMJC.

OC coach Dennis Helms said of his benching Johnson for most of the first half, "Larry got three fouls early. against Weatherford. He just seemed to be prone to the foul. What I wanted after he got two quick ones was to stay close and have a Larry Johnson for the second half."

JOHNSON SAID, "It was hard sitting on the bench, but I don't question what Coach says. I did question him one time during the season and he told me to let him do the coaching. I don't ever question him anymore and everything turned out for the best today. What I need is a complete game in the finals Saturday."

While Johnson was on the bench, Riley Smith scored 10 of his game high 20 points. OC also got a 16-point effort from Troy Bell.

SPC got 15 points each from Ron Shields and Keith Stewart and Donnell Hayden hit for 12 points.

"Donnell Hayden beat us in Levelland and we said he wasn't going to do that today. We put a lot of pressure on him," said Helms.

Hayden, SPC's hero against McLennan Thursday, hit only one-of-five three-point shots.

OC will carry a 29-4 record into the finals while SPC's season ends at 23-8.

Odessa College has beaten Midland College three out of four times this year and the teams have split at Chaparral Center. OC won at the Chap during the first WJCAC game between the two teams when Billy Ray Smith was hurt. The Chaps lost both times to the Wranglers in Odessa and defeated OC in the finals of the Chaparral Classic early in the year.

Except for the MC conference loss at home, the games have been nailbiters and this one is also expected to be.

"If you have your choice, you would rather not play against the home team in the tournament finals, but I expected Midland College to win," said Helms.

No matter which teams ended up in this tournament final, it would have been a good matchup. The WJCAC has been a rugged conference this year.

In a special ceremony, Amarillo's James Kile, who has been a WJCAC official for 39 years and a Region V official for 22 consecutive years, was honored for his service to the conference after the announcement of his retirement.

T of C in showdown stage

By JOHN FREY
MRT Correspondent

On day two of the Tournament of Champions, the weather conditions made a drastic improvement to catch up to the quality of play, which has been excellent. The Tournament of Champions is known for annually bringing in some of the top teams in the state and this year's tournament is no disappointment.

Lubbock Monterey and Fort Worth Southwest kicked off play on Friday in the first game of the winner's bracket. Southwest took a three run lead in the top of the third inning, highlighted by a two run triple by Todd Toomer. Monterey responded in their half of the third with one run to make the score 3-1.

SOUTHWEST added single runs in the fourth and fifth innings to push the lead to 5-1. Monterey again came back in its half of the fifth scoring a pair of runs on a single from Max Stephenson and tied the game in the sixth inning scoring two more runs. But Southwest came up with a run of its own in the seventh inning to put the final score at 6-5.

Scott Cunningham won his second game of the tournament, throwing one perfect inning in relief of starter Mark Harris. Frank Torres took the loss for Monterey.

EL PASO Ysleta and Thomas Jefferson-Dallas met in the other winner's bracket game and staged another one run game, the fourth of tournament in as many games. Ysleta came out the victor by the score of 5-4.

Ysleta scored single runs in the second and third innings to take a 2-0 lead. But Thomas Jefferson bounced back in the top of the fourth inning, scoring four runs, only two of which were earned. Joe Dickson, Pat Lara, and Mike Lara were each credited with one RBI in the inning making the score 4-2.

After striking out the side in the fifth inning, Thomas Jefferson pitcher John Cisneros ran into trouble in the sixth inning. Efrain Lara followed a lead off single by Faisto Hernandez with a home run to tie the game at 4-4. One out later Juan Galva singled home Javier Caro, who had tripled with the winning run.

Mario Lerma picked up the win for Ysleta with six strong innings of work while Rickey Felix picked up the save. Cisneros was the losing pitcher despite striking out eight batters in six innings.

MIDLAND LEE and Monterey hooked up the next game in what turned out to be the only lopsided game of the tournament so far, with Lee scoring an impressive 11-3 win.

Duncanville gals reach 5A finals

AUSTIN (AP) — North Mesquite remained unbeaten with a 50-34 victory over Clear Creek, and Duncanville earned a spot in the Class 5A finals opposite the undefeated Stallions by knocking off hometown favorite Austin Lanier 71-64 Friday night in the UIL state girls basketball tournament.

North Mesquite and Duncanville will square off at 7 p.m. Saturday for the championship, in the third match-up of the two teams this season. North Mesquite won the first two meetings, 49-39 and 49-43.

In other championship games Saturday, Nazareth, 33-2, and La Poyner, 33-1, battle at 9 a.m. for the Class 1A title; Godley, 36-2, and Grapeland, 34-4, clash at 2 p.m. for the 2A crown; Brownfield, 29-8, and Hardin-Jefferson, 34-0, play at 10:30 a.m. for the 3A trophy; and Levelland, 34-1, seeks to defend its 4A championship with a game against Calallen, 35-3, at 3:30 p.m.

Earlier Friday, Grapeland and Godley won Class 2A semifinal contests. Grapeland defeated Bloomington, 68-54, and Godley eliminated Shallowater, 53-52. The semifinal games in 1A, 3A and 4A were on Thursday.

Duncanville was sparked by Cinietra Henderson's 20 first-half points. The Pantherettes bolted to a 34-22 halftime lead over Lanier. The 6-4 junior had 14 of Duncanville's 16 first-quarter points. She finished with 29 points and swept the board for 17 rebounds.

The Vikings, making their second straight final-four appearance, began to chip away at that lead in the second half and pulled within five, 66-61 with 1:07 left to play on Tracey Clemons' layup.

But the Pantherettes scored the next five points to put the game out of reach.

Clemons led Lanier, 35-3, with 20 points and 18 rebounds. Teresa Cobble followed with 19.

North Mesquite beat Clear Creek, which ended its season at 31-3, on the strength of Teresa McMillan's 18 points.

North Mesquite beat Clear Creek for the second time, following a 71-50 verdict earlier in the season. Clear Creek scored first, but the 2-0 lead was its only advantage in the contest.

AS A RESULT of its win Friday, Godley will have a chance to avenge an earlier season loss to Grapeland. Earlier in the year, Grapeland defeated Godley, 51-44 — one of only two losses Godley has suffered.

Kim Martin hit both ends of a one-and-one with 42 seconds left to lift Godley over Shallowater.

Pointer, a University of Texas signee, erupted for a game-high 30 points and also pulled down 10 rebounds. The Fillies end the season at 30-6.

Led by all-state performer Trenia Willis, Grapeland 34-4, got off to a slow start but began to wear down the Lady Cats.

Willis, a 6-0 post, scored 30 points, pulled down 20 rebounds and blocked four shots.

Lee took an early 2-0 lead in the top of the second inning as Michael Pearson singled home one run and Greg Garrett stole home for the other run. Monterey came back in its half of the second with two runs to tie the score at 2-2. But Lee erupted for four nuns in the top of the third inning. Dudley Jordan knocked in one run and Paul Bacon knocked in two with a double each. Bacon later scored on a passed ball.

Monterey was able to add one run in the bottom of the third inning but Lee scored one run in the fourth, three runs in the fifth, and one more in the sixth to put the final score at 11-3. Michael Pearson was the winning pitcher.

Midland High and Thomas Jefferson met for the second time in the tournament and this game was similar to the first one as very few runs were scored. Thomas Jefferson took a 1-0 lead in the first inning as Albert Vasquez doubled home Monty Jones, who had singled. Midland High was able to tie the score in the third inning on an unearned run as Jamie Surratt scored on Scott Mowles single. But Thomas Jefferson added and unearned run of their own in the fourth inning in what turned out to be the game winning run. Thomas Jefferson added a single run in the sixth inning to make the final score 3-1.

Mike Lara was the winning pitcher for Thomas Jefferson throwing 5⅓ strong innings of relief. Eric Boyt took the loss for Midland High.

In a late game, Ysleta and Southwest, the only two undefeated teams left in the tournament, were playing at press time.

Play concludes today at Angel Stadium, beginning at 10 a.m. as Lee takes on Thomas Jefferson. Being a double elimination tournament, at least three more games will be played with the championship scheduled for 5:30 p.m. and possible one game playoff to follow at 8 p.m. if necessary. Midland High takes on Monterey at 3 p.m. in the fifth place game.

Mavs knock off Houston, 118-110

Associated Press

DALLAS — Guard Derek Harper scored 14 points in the third period to lead Dallas to a 118-110 victory over the Houston Rockets and extend the Mavericks' club-record winning streak to 11 games. The Midwest Division-leading Mavericks increased their lead to 6½ games over the Rockets.

Harper, who had 27 points, scored the first 10 points of the second half as Dallas extended a 63-55 halftime lead.

Houston gave Dallas a late scare, cutting the lead to 109-100 with two minutes to play on three straight baskets by Purvis Short. Dallas had only one field goal over a stretch of 5:52 before Roy Tarpley made two free throws with 1:44 to give the Mavs a 111-100 lead.

Mark Aguirre had 20 points and Sam Perkins 18 for the Mavericks. Akeem Olajuwon and Short led Houston with 22 points each.

Bullets 95, Pacers 88

INDIANAPOLIS — Moses Malone scored 27 points and Washington used a 13-point run late in the fourth quarter to defeat the Indiana Pacers 95-88 Friday night.

The game was tied at 82 when Charles Jones' layin with 3:46 launched the Bullets' spurt. John Malone's layin capped the string and put the Bullets up 95-82 with 41 seconds to go in the game. Tyrone Bogues scored eight of his 10 points in the final quarter to ignite Washington, which outscored the Pacers 27-18.

Indiana was led by John Long's 14 points. Chuck Person added 13.

Knicks 110, 76ers 108

NEW YORK — Mark Jackson had eight of his 19 points in overtime after tying the score with two seconds left in regulation as New York defeated Philadelphia 110-108 to give the Knicks' their 12th straight home victory and hand the 76ers' their 20th consecutive road loss.

Both teams lost all-star players during a violent third period as Philadelphia's Charles Barkley was knocked out when he was hit in the head while fouling Bill Cartwright with 55 seconds left. The Knicks' Patrick Ewing was ejected with 7:18 remaining for punching Philadelphia's Mike Gminski.

Southwest didn't take the lead until the 5:20 mark of the fourth quarter when a Miller basket and free throw for a three-point play gave the Rebels a 44-41 lead. El Paso never led again.

"We knew El Paso was going to try to get a lead and then control the ball and, boy, did they do that," said Southwest coach James Wood. "You talk about frightening. El Paso is a very good team and they got us in our weakness at the free throw line because we didn't hit free throws early."

El Paso had a balanced attack with 16 points from Victor Molina, 12 from Edward Milton and 11 from John Arizmendez, but wilted down the stretch with only 19 points in the second half. El Paso hit 39 percent from the field, but Southwest hit 49 percent.

The Tigers led the rebounding department 31-20 despite the big Miller inside. Although Miller didn't rebound well with only six, he hit 11 of 16 shots from the field and nine of 12 at the charity line.

"Our kids have been down before and have come back. We were down by 10 or 12 to Longview and down also to Seagoville and came back," said Wood. "We're just glad to be in the finals against anyone."

Southwest has lost twice this year to Dunbar.

Summer camps approved

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas school officials overwhelmingly approved a proposal to permit coaches to work with seventh, eighth and ninth grade students during the summer in football, basketball and volleyball camps, UIL athletic director Bill Farney said Friday.

Administrators participating in the annual University Interscholastic League referendum ballot voted to allow coaches to work with players in the seventh, eighth and ninth grades for no more than six consecutive days, beginning June 1 through the third Saturday in July.

The proposal must now be approved by the State Board of Education before taking effect. Current UIL rules forbid coaches from working in summer camps with players from their respective school districts.

Farney said administrators felt students in rural areas and isolated areas were at a disadvantage regarding summer camp participation.

"Many students in rural areas were forced to travel long distances, often at great expense in order to attend camps," Farney said. "This proposal, if approved by the State Board, would allow them to participate at a lower cost."

Farney also said that coaches would be allowed to charge for camp attendance, but local school administrators would have to approve added fee schedules and school building usage.

Santa Anita is big one in California

Murray

The Kentucky Derby is America's race. It has Stephen Foster, mint juleps, blue grass, the run for the roses, Col. Matt Winn, and David Harum, an entry that's pretty hard to beat.

Tied for second would be the Preakness and the Belmont.

But the Santa Anita Handicap is California's race. It always has been and always will be. The run for the geraniums.

It was the audacious idea of Dr. Charles Henry Strub in the bleak Depression year of 1935. He boldly posted an unheard-of prize of $100,000 for the winner at a time when the bank from which he borrowed the money sent along its armed guards to make sure it got the money back. You have to realize that the Kentucky Derby paid $28,175 to its winner the year before and it was freely predicted that Doc Strub and his track, like all horseplayers, would die broke.

INSTEAD, he put Southern California more firmly on the sports map. It used to be said that the Southern California football team was the only big-time sports story west of the Mississippi. The '32 Los Angeles Olympics played a role, but a $100,000 horse race at a time when one-third of a nation was out of work and on the dole was a tremendous bet on the future, a vote of confidence that caught the admiration of the whole country.

As the shrewd doctor had gambled, the networks — radio in those days — came running to put this show in prime time in the East. The best horses in the country took the next train west and the fields assembled for those first Santa Anita Handicaps probably have never been matched on a race track since.

Equipoise, the famed "Chocolate Soldier" of Eastern Establishment racing, was in the gate, as were the great Twenty Grand, Top Row, Time Supply and the winner, Azucar. It was Equipoise's last race.

THE NEXT year, the great Discovery joined the lists, but Eastern invaders never had conspicuous luck against the local crop and their home-court advantage. Discovery finished the same seventh as Equipoise had.

But the race never lost its appeal for racing interests the world over. The greats of the turf ran here — Citation, Hill Prince, Seabiscuit, Affirmed, Native Diver, Spectacular Bid. The race attracted the biggest non-Kentucky Derby crowds in the history of racing. A crowd of 83,768 showed up in 1947 and, just as racing seemed to be waning in its attraction for the modern fan, 85,527 showed up in 1985.

THE RACE this year will pit past Kentucky Derby winners against one another for only the 40th time, but only the 11th since 1930. Ferdinand and Alysheba (owned by Dorothy and Pam Scharbauer of Midland, Texas) are great race horses but the Santa Anita Handicap has always been a tough race to figure for bettor or owner. And there are some caveats. Such as:

1. Don't always bet the most famous horse or horses in the field. Discovery and Equipoise not only lost here at even money, but so did Citation, Native Diver, Dahlia, one of the great race mares of all time, and Time Supply, who tried three times. Seabiscuit tried three times before he won it. The great gelding, Armed, finished fifth.

2. Don't throw out the high weight in here. Seabiscuit, Thumbs Up, Mark-Ye-Well, Round Table, Ack Ack, Spectacular Bid and John Henry won toting 130 pounds. But don't bet the house. Citation lost under 132, Seabiscuit lost under 130. So did Equipoise, Discovery, Gun Bow — twice — and Nodouble and King Pellinore.

3. Don't throw out the low weight. Stagehand beat Seabiscuit carrying 100 pounds to the Biscuit's 130 in 1938. A hedge-jumper named Cornhusker won in 1957 with 105. Noor beat Citation carrying 110 to Big Cy's 132. Bay View carried 108 in 1941 and paid $118.40, biggest price in the race's history. Linmold got 110 in 1980

Yale's first black gridder 42 years ago recalls past

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — When Doug Williams of the Washington Redskins became the first black quarterback to start a Super Bowl and everyone made a big deal out of it.

Forty-two years ago, Levi Jackson became the first black to play football for Yale University and few people thought anything of it — Levi Jackson among them.

"I think when I really became aware — well, not aware; I always knew I was a Negro, as we'd call ourselves in those days — is when I became captain (his election for the 1949 season made the front page of the New York Times)," the 61-year-old Jackson after returning recently to New Haven to be honored as the Walter Camp Football Foundation's Man of the Year for 1987.

"PEOPLE SAY, 'You should have looked in the mirror, you idiot.' But I wasn't treated like a black guy; I was treated like a ballplayer by my teammates and by the oppositon," said Jackson, who retired in 1983 as the Ford Motor Co.'s first black executive after 32 years with the company.

"My sisters would sit in the stands and they'd hear racial slurs and they'd tell me they'd get up and say, 'That's my brother,' and everything would quiet down.

"There was only one incident on the field that I can remember. We played Vanderbilt here in 1948 and they had a guy by the name of Hoover. A monster — 6-foot-4, over 200 pounds — but he wasn't first-string.

"About the third or fourth quarter they got us down about 28-0 and he comes in and starts lippin' with racial slurs. One of our players reached up and says, 'Hey, Hoover, what are you lippin' off for? If you were any good you would have been in here a long time ago.' That shut him right up.

"IT'S FUNNY, but when my wife and I were married 25 years, we went to Jamaica. This is how naive I was — I didn't know that black people could tan or get sunburned. So Ginny is telling me, 'Put cocoanut oil on,' and I said, 'Aw, come on.' I got sunburned something fierce."

If there ever was an embodiment of an amateur athlete, it was halfback Levi Jackson, who set 13 modern Yale records, then spurned a pro football career.

DODGERS REALLY CLOWNS— Kirk Gibson, who stormed off the field prior to the Dodgers' first exhibition game, labeled his new teammates "clowns" and questioned their priorities. "I told (Manager) Tommy Lasorda that now I can understand why the Dodgers finished fifth the past two seasons. They have their priorities wrong."

Gibson angrily left camp Thursday just prior to the start of the Dodgers' exhibition opener after realizing that someone had smeared eyeblack inside his cap as a practical joke. He had already been introduced as the starting left fielder.

NORMAN LEADS— Greg Norman fired a 5-under-par 67—134 Friday and took a three-shot lead after the second round of the Tournament Players' Championship tournament. Norman, seeking his second victory in two weeks, said his form was "flaky" through the 10th hole. Tied for second at 137 were Anders Forsbrand and Leif Hederstrom and Brett Ogle.

SARGE RETIRES— Second string is not good enough for former Chicago Cubs OF Gary Matthews, so he is retiring from baseball and his future plans include hosting a radio show called "The Major League Baseball Notebook." "Over the last couple of years, I've always been a leading player on just about every team I've ever played with. To take a role as a part-time player at this time in my career doesn't set all that well with me."

JAPAN GOLF— Jan Stephenson and Erika Nakajima shot par 72s Friday and shared the lead after the first round of the Orchid tournament. Stephenson, winner of three tournaments in 1987, had three birdies and one bogey on the front nine and two bogeys on the back nine.

RAYCOM CARRIES SWC— The SWC semifinal games will be televised by Raycom Sports at 6 p.m. and 8 p.m. on March 12 in Reunion Arena in Dallas. Previously, only the Sunday, March 13 championship game was scheduled to be televised. ESPN and Raycom will carry the title game at 3 p.m.

Gibson is back and goes hitless

Associated Press

Kirk Gibson, who stormed off in a huff prior to the Dodgers' first exhibition game, was back in left field Friday and went hitless in two at-bats as the Dodgers beat world champion Minnesota 6-5 on Mickey Hatcher's pinch-hit single in the 10th inning.

"Everything is OK," Dodgers Manager Tommy Lasorda after a team meeting at which other Dodgers agreed to lighten up on the practical jokes that led to Gibson's anger Thursday after he had been announced as the starting left fielder in the game against the Chunichi Dragons of Japan.

Reds 9, Blue Jays 3

Nick Esasky and Paul O'Neill homered and Mario Soto pitched three scoreless innings for the Reds. Soto, trying to recover from two years of arm problems, pitched the first three innings, throwing 58 pitches, allowing five hits, walking none and striking out four.

Tigers 5, Red Sox 1

Matt Nokes doubled and scored one run, while Jack Morris and three other Detroit pitchers held Boston to six hits. Morris started and pitched two hitless innings, striking out two. He was followed by Jeff Robinson, Mike Henneman and Willie Hernandez, who yielded the Red Sox' only run in the eighth.

Pirates 6, Phillies 3

Bob Patterson pitched three scoreless innings and Barry Bonds had a solo homer for Pittsburgh, which scored five unearned runs. Greg Jelks accounted for all the Philadelphia scoring with a three-run homer off Mike Dunne.

Yankees 5, Braves 4

Joel Skinner had a two-run, sixth inning double to drive in the winning run for the Yankees. Dale Murphy had a homer off New York starter Rick Rhoden and Damaso Garcia, trying to comeback after missing last year with a knee injury, had two singles for the Braves.

Cardinals 6, Rangers 2

Bob Horner, back from a year with the Yakult Swallows in Japan, made his debut for the Cardinals with a two-run homer in the exhibition opener for both teams. All of St. Louis' runs were on homers — Tom Pagnozzi had a three-run shot and Ray Stephens had one with the bases empty.

Edwin Correa, attempting to come back from a stress fracture in the back of his right shoulder, pitched two scoreless innings for the Rangers.

Astros 9, Royals 7

Pat Keedy and Cameron Drew hit solo home runs off Dan Quisenberry in the eighth inning to give Houston the victory.

Drew led the Astros' 13-hit attack with three hits. The Royals had 18 hits — two each by Kevin Seitzer, Scotti Madison, Bo Jackson and Bill Pecota.

Quisenberry complained of back spasms after the game and will miss at least four days of workouts.

Brewers 14, Athletics 1

Rookie Joey Meyer drove in four runs with a double, a single and a sacrifice fly for the Brewers, who had 22 hits off three Oakland pitchers. Teddy Higuera, who will be the Brewers' opening-day pitcher, gave up two hits and no runs while striking out two in three innings.

and needed all of it. He won in a blanket finish in which four noses were on the wire.

4. Don't run to bet the Kentucky Derby winner, even when there are two of them in here as there are this year. The last time this happened, 1950, neither of the Kentucky Derby winners, Citation nor Ponder, won. Noor did. This year, Alysheba, last year's Derby winner, and Ferdinand, the 1986 winner, tackle the task. But Twenty Grand, 1930 Kentucky Derby winner, ran 10th here. Determine lost here. So did Decidedly. Of course, Lucky Debonair, 1965 Kentucky Derby winner, won here. So did Affirmed, Derby winner in '78, and Spectacular Bid, the 1979 Derby champion.

5. Don't hope for a foul. The winner's number has come down only twice in 50 runnings. Intent was taken down for bumping Miche in 1952 and Perrault was moved to second for bumping John Henry in 1982.

6. Don't bet any horse who has won this thing before. John Henry is the only horse ever to have won it twice and even he needed a claim of foul (see above). Azucar, the first winner, faded to fourth the next year. Rejected won in 1954 and was seventh in 1955. Prove It, first in 1961, was ninth in 1962. Physician won it in '62, then took eighth in '63.

ON THE other hand, check the horses who have been close before. Seabiscuit was second twice before he won. So was Cougar II. Top Row moved from third to first. Some horses kept trying till they got it right. Quicken Tree was seventh in 1967, fourth in 1968, and third in 1969 before he won it in 1970. Presumably, he thought they were going to keep him there forever or until he got the hang of it.

7. Don't be afraid to bet the jockey. Bill Shoemaker has won 11 of these things. Laffit Pincay has won five, Johnny Longden and Donald Pierce four each. You want to talk trainers, Charlie Whittingham has won seven. No one else has won three, and only three have won twice.

8. Bring your heart medicine. The biggest winning margin was six lengths — Bobby Brocato in 1956. Broad Brush won by a nostril last year, and 14 races have been won by a head, neck or nose.

9. Don't bet the exacta. Only 12 times in the 40 they have met have past Kentucky Derby winners run 1-2. And 21 times neither one of them won it.

Celebrating SMU still has some unfinished business

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

SWC

Southern Methodist is celebrating its first undisputed Southwest Conference basketball title since 1967, but there's still some big business left before next week's Post-Season Classic.

The Houston Cougars helped settle the first and second spots by defeating the preseason favorite Arkansas Razorbacks 82-77 Thursday night on national television.

SMU, which had overwhelmed Texas Christian 87-54 Wednesday night to clinch a first-place tie, won the title outright with a 12-4 record. The champions play Chicago State in what amounts to a practice game on Saturday in Moody Coliseum.

Arkansas still has a game left Sunday in Lubbock against Texas Tech and is tied at 10-5 with Baylor and Texas, who play Saturday in Waco.

If Baylor beats Texas, the Bears would clinch the second seed. If the Longhorns win, they would be the second seed in the tournament. Both teams have the edge in tiebreakers over the Razorbacks, who will be the third seed if they beat Texas Tech.

"I guess it was meant for us to be champions and we appreciate Houston playing hard," SMU senior Carlton McKinney said. "This makes it a great season for us, but now we have to win the tournament to be assured of a (NCAA) playoff spot."

The big SWC game Saturday will be in Waco's Heart O' Texas Coliseum between Baylor and Texas, both with 10-5 records. Besides being the last college game in the old drafty barn, it will be a battle for second place between the Longhorns and Bears.

Texas beat Baylor earlier in the season at Austin.

Rice and Texas Christian will also have a big interest in the game: They are tied for the eighth and last spot for the tournament that begins in Dallas next Friday.

If they finish tied after their games Saturday night, then the tiebreaker will rest on what happens in Waco.

TCU beat Baylor earlier in the year and Rice downed Texas. If Baylor wins, then TCU would go via the tiebreaker. Should Texas win, then the tiebreaker would favor Rice.

TCU hosts Texas A&M on Saturday night and Rice entertains Houston.

Baylor, which has already guaranteed its best season in 40 years, has played in Heart O' Texas Coliseum since the 1950s. Next season, Baylor moves into a new 9,000-seat building.

Baylor is 20-9 overall and Texas has improved to 16-11 after a slow start.

"I helped turn out the lights" T-shirts and flashlights will be sold at the door of Heart O' Texas Coliseum for the Bears' finale in the building.

The tournament begins at noon CST next Friday with the third-place team playing the sixth-place team at noon.

At 2 p.m., the second seed plays the seventh seed. At 7 p.m., the first seed meets the eighth seed and at 9 p.m., the fourth seed plays the fifth seed.

Road Atlanta track sold

FLOWERY BRANCH, Ga. (AP) — Road Atlanta, a 2.5-mile sports car road racing course, has been sold to two Atlanta investment-management groups.

Art and Al Leon, commercial realtors from Dallas, sold the 600-acre complex northeast of Atlanta to The Championship Group of Atlanta, headed by Ardy Aranti, and The Sheron Group, headed by Atlanta realtor Charles Sheron.

The Atlanta Constitution reported in today's editions that the sale price was between $4 million and $6 million.

Bobby Wadkins fires 67

MIAMI (AP) — Bobby Wadkins fired his second consecutive 67 Friday for a two-stroke lead at the halfway mark of the $1 million Doral Open Golf Tournament.

Wadkins, a non-winner in 14 seasons on the PGA Tour, completed two trips over the wind-blown Blue Monster course at the Doral Country Club in 10-under-par 134.

Chip Beck, who scored his first career victory last week in Los Angeles, shot his second straight bogey-free 68 and reached the midway point of the tournament at 136.

"I think there's a lot of carry-over from last week," Beck said. "The putter still feels good in my hand, and that always helps."

Jack Nicklaus, a part-time Tour player since scoring his sixth Masters triumph in 1986, was another shot back at 137 after a 69.

"Probably the best I've played since Olympic (the U.S. Open) last year," Nicklaus said.

Former champion Tom Kite, Dr. Gil Morgan and Robert Wrenn were next at 138. Wrenn had a 68, Morgan a 69 and Kite a 70.

The group at 139 included PGA champion Larry Nelson, Ben Crenshaw and two-time Doral champion Mark McCumber, who moved up with a 68. Crenshaw shot 69 and Nelson had a 71.

Defending champion Lanny Wadkins, Bobby's older brother, had a 71 and was at 145.

Bobby, who has played much of his career in Lanny's shadow, got away to a birdie-birdie start.

"I felt very comfortable out there. I never put any pressure on myself. But the key was getting off to a good start, guessing the wind right on the first few holes. After you do that, you feel like you can handle it," he said.

"I'm looking forward to the next two days," added Wadkins, who has led throughout the first two days. "If I play good, great.

"I've changed my priorities some in the last few years. I'm 36. I have some money in the bank. I've decided the game of golf is just that, a game. I'm comfortable with it."

Nicklaus is finding some comfort from a new metal driver, a new pitching wedge and an old putting stroke.

He put the two new clubs in his bag this week. And, after watching some films of himself from his younger days, he's adjusted his putting stance.

"I feel a lot more comfortable, a lot more confident with the short putts than I have in a long time," he said.

Vet Simpson hired as O's broadcaster

MIAMI (AP) — Veteran broadcaster Jim Simpson has been hired as the play-by-play announcer for the Baltimore Orioles television broadcasts this season, the Orioles say.

Alysheba, Ferdinand duel in Santa Anita

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — Alysheba and Ferdinand, winners of the last two Kentucky Derbys, headed a field of five entered for Sunday's $1 million Santa Anita Handicap.

In post position order, the five entries were Super Diamond, to be ridden by Laffit Pincay and carrying 124 pounds; Alysheba, Chris McCarron, 126; Judge Angelucci, Eddie Delahoussaye, 123; Ferdinand, Bill Shoemaker, 127, and Temperate Sil, Jorge Velasquez, 117.

Masterful Advocate, a possible starter, was not entered, as trainer Joe Manzi decided to run him in an allowance race at a later date.

In what some might consider a surprise, Alysheba, winner of the 1987 Kentucky Derby and the Eclipse Award as the best 3-year-old colt or gelding of the year, was made the early favorite over 1987 Horse of the Year Ferdinand, who won the 1986 Kentucky Derby.

Alysheba was listed at 7-5 with Ferdinand at 8-5 despite the latter's narrow victory over Alysheba in the $3 million Breeders' Cup Classic last November.

Each has one outing since — Alysheba won the 1¼-mile Charles H. Strub Stakes for 4-year-olds Feb. 7 and Ferdinand finished second to Judge Angelucci in the 1⅛-mile San Antonio a week later.

The Santa Anita Handicap is a 1¼-mile race.

Charlie Whittingham, who trains Ferdinand, also saddles Temperate Sil and Judge Angelucci, who were listed at 4-1 and 15-1, respectively, in the morning line. Since the three have separate owners, they will run as separate betting entities.

Super Diamond, an 8-year-old gelding, was listed at 7-2.

NCAA amends numbers, not sanctions, against UK

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — The NCAA on Friday amended its numbers but not its conclusions in explaining its mild sanctions against the University of Kentucky for rules violations in its basketball program.

NCAA enforcement chief David Berst acknowledged that eight of 33 people quoted or named in a Pulitzer Prize-winning newspaper series were not interviewed during the joint probe conducted with the university, which the NCAA reprimanded for foot-dragging in its part of the inquiry.

The Lexington (Ky.) Herald-Leader won a 1986 Pulitzer Prize for its stories reporting the Kentucky violations — a series in which ever interview was on the record.

The Herald-Leader reported that basketball recruits during the tenure of Coach Joe B. Hall received cash, clothing and other extravagent gifts in a consistent pattern of abuse dating back to the early 1970s.

The newspaper's series led to the investigation and on Thursday the NCAA instructed the university to audit its athletic expenditures and report the outcome for the next three years. It also reprimanded the school for its failure to actively pursue the investigation.

No other sanctions were imposed.

"I know there are sincere people who still can't believe that UK would violate the rules," said John S. Carroll, editor of the Herald-Leader. "Those who know the program firsthand, however, know that the violations were widespread, as described in our stories."

Big East battle continues on TV

By RICK WARNER
Associated Press

While his Georgetown basketball team battles with Big East opponents, John Thompson is waging a verbal war with CBS Sports.

TV

The feud started when CBS commentator Bill Raftery criticized Thompson on the air after a fight broke out near the end of the Georgetown-Pittsburgh game Feb. 20. Raftery said Thompson had to do a better job of controlling his team, which has been involved in a few fights over the years.

"John Thompson's got to do something," said Raftery, a former coach at Seton Hall. "There have been too many of these (fights) where Georgetown has been involved. I don't care how competitive the game, John has to control his team."

THOMPSON struck back on his weekly Washington television show.

"Who's he to editorialize on how I should control my team?" Thompson said of Raftery. "Here's a guy who's perceived as being an authority. How can that be when he was completely incompetent at the profession that he's now reporting on."

The dispute mushroomed when Brent Musburger, CBS' No. 1 sports personality, defended Raftery during an interview on a New York cable network.

"The question is, why is Georgetown involved so often in these things?" he said. "It goes further now. What about Thompson as a coach of the (1988 U.S.) Olympic basketball team? Do we now have to worry that our Olympic team will et involved in such incidents?"

Musburger also wondered whether Thompson, who is black, would put any white players on the Olympic team.

"Is that a question that can be asked?," Musburger said. "Certainly it is. I mean, take a look at his team down at Georgetown. I think a lot of people wonder about that."

In his latest counterattack, Thompson called Musburger's statements "ignorant" and "dangerous."

Thompson said questions about the black-white ratio on his teams are a "very tactful way of trying to get a quota on the number of blacks on the Olympic team."

"I'd be willing to bet you that nobody ever asked (1984 Olympic coach) Bobby Knight that question," he said.

Thompson said the fact that his Georgetown teams have been predominantly black doesn't mean he is a "biased person."

"I'd be willing to bet you that my life is far more integrated than Brent Musburger's," he said.

Maybe Thompson and Musburger can iron out their differences at the Big East tournament, which CBS will televise March 12-13.

It's fitting that Bob Costas' new late-night talk show will be produced by No Sleep Productions.

The busy sportscaster will have even less time to rest after he begins hosting "Later with Bob Costas," which premieres Aug. 22 on NBC. The 30-minute show, which will feature one-on-one interviews with people from all walks of life, will be shown Mondays through Thursdays following "Late Night with David Letterman."

"I like to think I have a healthy curiosity about people and subjects beyond sports," Costas said. "This program will give me a chance to explore those areas while still keeping my base in sports."

Costas, 35, will continue to host NBC's pregame NFL show, call play-by-play on major-league baseball telecasts and host a syndicated radio show. He also will be one of NBC's anchors at the 1988 Summer Olympics in Seoul.

Yogi confounds with eating habits

Battles

Which coach needed the fewest games to reach the 600-mark in college basketball victories? a- Phog Allen. b- John Wooden. c- Adolph Rupp. d- Dean Smith.

Yogi Berra was disappointed that time has asked to eat at the White House. "Yeh, I thought they said steak dinner, but then I found out it was a state dinner."

And when asked why he wanted the pizza cut in four slices, Yogi patiently and logically explained, "I'm not hungry enough to eat six pieces."....

Can it be that Sparky Anderson is going into his 10th year as manager of the Detroit Tigers? It seems like it was just five years ago that he was managing the Reds....

The Hobey Baker Award is the reward for what feat?

One has to wonder how much Coach Alex McGowan's criticism of the figure skating judging after the short program had to do with Debi Thomas' Saturday night downfall in the Winter Olympics at Calgary last week. You'll remember, McGowan held his nose, declared the judging stinks and inferred the judging was biased, and his pupil couldn't win, although Debi led. Could he have planted the seed of doubt that undermined her confidence?...

And just how bad was the U.S. Olympic performance? Total medals? The U.S. will never equal the Soviets in total medals because most of those medals are won in events in which there is little American interest.

Elsewhere, Dan Jansen fell twice, two golds gone; the women's alpine team was decimated by injuries; the men had no Steve or Phil Mahre and Bill Johnson apparently has lost interest since his gold in 1984 while in figure skating Brian Botiano won his gold and Debi didn't. Brian Botiano and Bonnie Blair came through in figure and speed skating and, really, how much interest, beyond those, is there for Americans?

Realistically, there's nothing wrong with the U.S. hockey team that a conquest of Canada couldn't cure.

But don't worry, George Steinbrenner will find out why the American team isn't winning more gold medals....just as soon as he figures out why his ball club isn't winning.....

Alysheba became the fifth Kentucky Derby winner to return to Santa Anita the following winter to win the Charles H. Strub Stakes, the Midland-owned horse also surpassed the $3 million plateau in earnings, not a bad return on a $500,000 investment....

The Oakland Athletics are trying Doug Jennings, the Midland Angels' 30-home run slugger last year, at first base in spring camp while Joe Carter, the one-time Midland outfielder, is Doc Edwards' centerfielder at Cleveland, which pleases Joe. Carter got the chance when Brett Butler was dealt back to the National League....

Fewest games to win 600...Rupp, Kentucky, 704. Allen was next at 754. It took Wooden 754 and Smith 775....

Shallowater sunk by judge's ruling

AUSTIN (AP) — A judge on Friday denied Shallowater's attempt to remain alive in the Class 2A state schoolboy basketball playoffs.

Shallowater on Feb. 25 defeated Hale Center, 63-60 in overtime, but on Tuesday the University Interscholastic League declared Shallowater starter David Shires Jr. ineligible under the UIL residency rule.

Hale Center, which had protested Shires' eligibility, was certified for the area playoffs against Canadian. That game was stopped at halftime with Canadian leading, 30-20, after Shallowater obtained a temporary restraining order.

The case reached state district court Friday in a hearing before Judge Bill Coker on a temporary injunction.

Coker denied the injunction and dissolved the temporary restraining order, which means Hale Center and Canadian were scheduled to play the second half of their game Friday night to see which team plays Saturday in the regional tournament at Big Spring.

Morton, Coleman and Haskell already have qualified for the Class 2A playoff and, with teams from Hale Center, Canadian and Shallowater, were waiting there for the judge's ruling.

The ruling was the second blow Friday for Shallowater, whose girls' team lost to Godley, 53-52, in the the semifinals at the state tournament here.

Shires, the ineligible junior whose residency cost Shallowater a chance to advance in the playoffs, scored no points and had seven turnovers in the bi-district victory over Hale Center, his father said Friday.

David Shires Sr. testified that he and his son moved to a mobile home in a trailer park outside Shallowater Oct. 6 because his son had emotional problems and was not happy at Lubbock Coronado High School.

Royals dedicate stadium

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — The Kansas City Royals and Florida State University officially dedicated Dick Howser Stadium in honor of the late major league player and manager.

A new $175,000 scoreboard carrying Howser's name and a bronze bust of the former Royals and New York Yankees skipper were commemorated during a ceremony Thursday.

"Today, for all of us who knew and loved Dick, who cared for him, our dream has come true ... Dick Howser Stadium," said Howser's widow, Nancy. "Dreams really do come true."

Howser became Florida State's first All-America selection as a baseball player in 1957 and later played in the majors for Kansas City, Cleveland and the Yankees.

Yale's tuition then was $800 a semester. Since Jackson went from high school into the Army — "I served 18 months, 19 days, three hours and 10 minutes" — the GI Bill paid $500. He waited on tables and raked concrete to earn the rest. Since his family lived in New Haven, he didn't have to worry about the additional $700 or so for room and board.

"I STUDIED while I was in the Army, took the College Boards and I guess I did pretty well. I had put down that my first choice was Yale, and when Yale saw that they accepted me.

"My GI Bill ran out the last half of my senior year. I went to the bursar to take out a student loan to be able to finish school because I didn't have any money and I was married.

"He said, 'You know, we had scholastic scholarship money for you. Why didn't you ask for it?' I said, 'I didn't need it; I had the GI Bill.'

"I got a loan for $600 to finish my senior year and I paid it back. It took me three years, but I paid it all back."

JACKSON studied engineering at Yale and learned the hard way that academics took preference over athletics.

"During my freshman year, I had an engineering drawing class on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, 9:30 to 11:30. They had the same class on Monday, Wednesday and Friday, the same hours.

"I went to the dean of freshmen, and I said, 'I'd like to change my course from Tuesday-Thursday-Saturday to Monday-Wednesday-Friday.' He said, 'Why?'

"I said, 'I play football.' He said, 'Mr. Jackson, never in the history of Yale have we changed a course because it conflicted with an athletic event.'

"I was sore when I walked out of the room and then I started thinking, 'What the heck am I here in college for? I'm here to learn. I'm not here to play football.'

"I had chemistry labs on Tuesday, when we'd scrimmage. I'd go to (Coach) Howie Odell and I'd say, 'I've got to go to chemistry lab.' He'd say, 'Go ahead.'

"I'd say, 'I'm going to miss practice.' He'd say, 'That's okay, you're here to study, not to play football.'"

SO WHEN the pros started sending him circulars, Jackson never answered them.

"I think I was drafted by the Baltimore Colts, but I don't even know what draft choice. I didn't want to play for money.

"When I was in the Army, a colonel at Camp Lee, Va., offered me $4,000 a year and a convertible if I went to Indiana.

"I never dreamed of playing pro ball. It just didn't interest me. Play for money? Nah. It turned me off, really. I played because I liked to play."

"Gotta look that up"

Scriptures Selected by The American Bible Society

Man has a hunger for knowledge. It first shows itself in childhood and prompts incessant questions and exasperating experiments.

But it continues all through life. Recently, on discovering something you didn't know, you murmured to yourself, "Gotta look that up."

Upon this basic hunger for knowledge, the Church's program of religious education is planned. That's why we urge parents to foster a Christian atmosphere in the home. It is also why the Church provides religious instruction long before secular education begins. And it accounts for continuing emphasis on youth and young adult activities in most congregations.

We adults haven't outgrown the hunger for knowledge. Most of us recognize that our scientific and material progress points up the crucial need for spiritual standards to believe in. God has vital truth to impart to men. The place to look it up is your church.

Has Swaggart's style reflected his guilt?

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

RELIGION

NEW YORK — In the month before TV evangelist Jimmy Swaggart was silenced by scandal, his preaching turned from outward attacks to self-criticism in what "may have been the outgrowth of his own sin," a researcher says.

"He lately started putting himself down," says Stephen M. Winzenburg, a communications professor at Florida Southern College. "It makes you wonder how much of it was guilt seeping through.

"He usually had put others down and pumped himself up as being greater than anyone else, with an inside, direct line to God. But then all of a sudden, he started saying these negative, deprecating things about himself. He seemed to be pointing a finger at himself, and preaching it to others."

Leaders of the Assemblies of God in Swaggart's Louisiana district initially recommended that he be suspended from preaching for at least three months because of his reported involvement with a prostitute. National leaders of the church have asked the district to review that recommendation, and perhaps make the penalty more severe.

Winzenburg, a Catholic whose monitoring project mainly aimed at timing and comparing fund-raising pitches of TV evangelists, said he was puzzled when Swaggart began switching his preaching targets.

"It was something that hadn't been there before, but now it makes more sense," he said in a telephone interview. "It may have been the outgrowth of his own sin.

"He also started picking on fellow Pentecostals. Before, he had focused more on attacking Catholics and mainline Protestants. But now he was denouncing his own kind."

From Swaggart's preaching since mid-1987, some of it taped and broadcast after his Feb. 21 confession to his congregation of "grievous sin," Winzenburg cites these samples of Swaggart's self-deprecation:

July 12 — "I'm scared to death of money and scared to death of women. Those two things have caused more creatures' downfall than any other."

Dec. 14 — "I'm a poor, pitiful, flawed creature."

Dec. 20 — Taking an odd subject for a Christmas sermon, he identified himself with Judas, who betrayed Christ.

Feb. 21 — Comparing himself to the biblical harlot, Rahab, he said he was a "poor, pitiful, scarred, flawed piece of humanity."

Samples given of his put-down of other Pentecostals:

Feb. 24 — Attacking higher education, he said, "Even Pentecostal schools are straying."

Feb. 25 — "Holy Ghost preachers are falling for seducing spirits at an alarming rate. This is the paramount danger of the church.... In supposedly Holy Ghost (Pentecostal) churches, the pastors never preach on the Holy Spirit."

July 24 — He said that after criticizing the Catholic Church, "all hell broke loose," but he had "a right to criticize others because the book (Bible) gives us the right.

"If Catholics go wrong, somebody's got to let them know. If Baptists go wrong, somebody's got to let them know. Even if Pentecostals go wrong, somebody's got to let them know. That's what we'll continue to do."

Swaggart lodged complaints of sexual misconduct that led to the ouster of former TV evangelist Jim Bakker and that also bumped a New Orleans evangelist, Marvin Gorman. Both were ministers of the Assemblies of God. Gorman reportedly provided evidence that unseated Swaggart — pictures of him at a motel with a prostitute.

Swaggart also has harshly assailed other denominations, declaring Dec. 13 that "in most churches in America, you couldn't get saved if you wanted to."

Some of his sharpest assaults on Roman Catholicism seem to have been toned down lately, Winzenburg said. Some TV stations had threatened to drop his program if the attacks continued.

The Louisiana Interchurch Conference, including most major Protestant and Catholic bodies in the state of Swaggart's headquarters, in 1983 formally protested his attacks on Catholicism.

The Rev. James L. Stovall, the conference executive director, says "we took it pretty lightly" when Swaggart denounced Baptists, Methodists and other Protestants, but when he began stirring up anti-Catholic venom, "We had to condemn it."

Swaggart has called Catholicism a "false cult," a "monstrosity of heresy" and a "complete contradiction of the word of God."

Roman Catholic Bishop Stanley J. Ott of Baton Rouge, La., met with Swaggart in 1984 to urge him to stop the attacks, but said afterward Swaggart continued to "harbor judgments and make statements" about the church that were neither true nor fair.

The Rev. Robert Furlow, a Catholic permanent deacon and communications officer for the Baton Rouge diocese, observed somewhat prophetically before Swaggart's downfall:

"When you start attacking others, it can turn in on oneself. When you're firing rockets around, you're liable to hit yourself in the foot."

A special ministers meeting with Copeland is scheduled for 10 a.m. April 4. Pre-registration for the ministers meeting is required on or before March 21. No one will be admitted unless pre-registered.

Guest to address church

Turri Sanders from Hiway Temple Assembly of God in Odessa will be ministering in the 7 p.m. Sunday service at Calvary Assembly of God Church, 908 S. Johnston St.

The church's pastor, the Rev. Gale Reeves, invites the public to attend.

Chapter to be organized

A local chapter for people involved in church administration will be organized at 11:45 a.m. Tuesday in the parlor of First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave.

A meal will be available for $3. Officers will be elected and by laws presented for discussion and approval. For reservations call Lacy South, 684-7821.

Any person involved in church administration is welcome to attend this meeting. The local chapter will be under the direction of the National Association of Church Business Administration.

Altar society to meet

St. Ann's Altar Society will meet at 10 a.m. Monday in the church's parish parlor.

Childcare will be available for those who call ahead.

Ratification encouraged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Roman Catholic, Protestant and Eastern Orthodox representatives have urged the U.S. Senate to ratify, without amendments or delay, the U.S.-Soviet treaty for reducing intermediate-range nuclear forces.

The Rev. Arie Brouwer of the National Council of Churches, including most major Protestant and Eastern Orthodox bodies, called the treaty a "first step toward developing real security for us and the world's people."

Roman Catholic Archbishop Roger Mahony of Los Angles, head of the U.S. bishops' international policy committee, said the treaty should become part of a continuing process of disarmament, making for more stable Soviet-U.S. relationships.

The religious leaders testified before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Home bases suggested

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A site-selection task force this week recommended that the Board of Pensions of the Presbyterian Church (USA) be based in Philadelphia.

The choice, subject to ratification by the church's general assembly in June, was among these three potential sites:

Louisville, where the newly merged denomination has established its headquarters; Atlanta, where the former Southern branch had its headquarters, or Philadelphia where the Northern branch had its pension board.

Commitment still strong

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Despite the anguish of American Jews over the current violence in Israel, their commitment to the Jewish state has not been weakened, says a veteran observer of the Middle East scene.

Hyman Bookbinder, American Jewish Committee special representative, told a conference sponsored by the Miami Herald and the University of Miami that U.S. Jews have felt "agony, anguish, frustration — even anger at times."

But he added: "It would be a serious mistake to interpret these reactions as rejection of Israel or even a dilution of commitment."

Vines may be candidate

DALLAS (AP) — A leader of the fundamentalist wing of Southern Baptists predicts that that its candidate for president will be the Rev. Jerry Vines of Jacksonville, Fla., opposing the Rev. Richard Jackson of Phoenix, Ariz.

Both take a conservative view of Scripture, the Rev. Paige Patterson, a fundamentalist leader, said in predicting their candidacies, but he said Jackson has been co-opted by the moderates.

To maintain the nine-year resurgence of conservative-fundamentalists at the denomination's convention in June, he said, they must back "an inerrantist for president who will do their bidding."

"Inerrantists" maintain Scripture is without factual error.

Lithuanians arrested

NEW YORK (AP) — The Lithuanian Information Center says several persons associated with celebrations last month of the 70th anniversary of Lithuanian Independence are being held under house arrest by Soviet police.

Court declines case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court has declined to reconsider a lower court decision that parents don't have a right to substitute home teaching for school-required textbooks that offend parental religious sensitibilites.

The high court let stand a federal Court of Appeals ruling that the Hawkins County, Tenn., school board was not obligated to provide alternative reading arrangements for pupils whose parents objected to various textbooks.

A district court had ordered school officials to excuse students for home instruction from the controversial reading assignments, but the appeals court said the state is not obliged to shelter children "from exposure to some ideas they find offensive."

'Rice bowls' distributed

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (AP) — Roman Catholic worshipers in this diocese — and others across the country — last weekend took home a little cardboard piece that folds into a small "bowl."

During the Lenten season between now and Easter, they're asked to place in the "bowl" each week the cost of a small meal — the accumulated proceeds of which go to feed the hungry.

Called "Operation Rice Bowl," the program is sponsored by Catholic Relief Services, with 75 percent of the total collected going to worldwide relief, and 25 percent of it retained to help the local poor.

Youngstown Bishop James Malone said the project is an excellent means of observing the Lenten practice of almsgiving and "adds an element of awareness of the hunger that others suffer."

Buddhists to be chaplains

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Buddhists have been authorized to endorse chaplains to the U.S. Armed Forces, the first time such recognition has been extended outside the Judeo-Christian tradition.

The recogniton was accorded recently by the U.S. Armed Forces Chaplains Board to the Buddhist Churches of America, based here. It reports 150,000 adherents, 63 clergy and 63 temples in this country.

At least 2,493 Buddhists serve in the Armed Forces, according to the most recent Department of Defense religious survey in 1984.

While the department requires equal treatment of all religions, they must meet certain organizational requirements to certify chaplains, such as having a training institution that validates clergy credentials.

The Buddhist denomination says it met the requirements by affiliating its Institute of Buddhist Studies with the Graduate Theological Union in Berkeley, Calif.

First Moslem wins Templeton Prize

NEW YORK (AP) — Inamullah Khan of Pakistan won the 1988 Templeton Prize for promoting interreligious cooperation. He is the first Moslem to win the $390,000 international award.

It is biggest prize given in the world, about $40,000 more than the Nobel prizes in science and literature.

Announcement of this year's winner was to be made at a news conference at Manhattan's Church Center of the United Nations.

Khan, 73, a founder and secretary-general of the World Moslem Congress, was cited for his "tireless work as a coordinator for peace between Moslems, Christians and Jews."

Khan, of Karachi, also is chairman of the executive committee of the interreligious World Conference on Religion and Peace, presiding at meetings around the world.

He has been keenly supportive of United Nations concerns, including disarmament, human rights, education and welfare, and twice has chaired meetings of the World Federation of United Nations Associations in Geneva, Switzerland.

Carlucci against using troops to fight war on drugs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci said Friday he would strongly oppose any effort to carve out an active law-enforcement role for the military in the war on drugs.

"That is not the function of the military. We are not the front-line agency in the war on drugs," Carlucci said.

Espousing the same approach as his predecessor, Caspar W. Weinberger, Carlucci said he was "very much against giving the military arrest authority or getting them into law enforcement" and did not foresee any change in administration policy.

Carlucci also called Libyan strongman Col. Moammar Gadhafi a "flyspeck" who wasn't worth listening to and said he thought the U.S. naval force in the Persian Gulf had been reduced to a proper level.

He predicted that a Soviet pullout from Afghanistan, if it occurs, would have little effect on the Kremlin's policies and its support of countries such as Nicaragua.

Carlucci also expressed hope that a meeting later this month with his Soviet counterpart, Dmitri Yazov, would at the least produce an agreement on steps to avoid small, but dangerous, confrontations such a recent ship-bumping incident in the Black Sea and interference with U.S. military observers in East Germany.

Carlucci, who assumed his post in November after Weinberger retired, was asked his views on drug enforcement after Education Secretary William Bennett suggested the United States consider "a broader use of military force against both the production and shipment of drugs."

Sen. Bob Dole, who is seeking the Republican presidential nomination, adopted the same approach on Thursday, calling for use of "the full force of our military..."

The defense secretary countered the Pentagon should continue to play only a supporting role in the war on drugs — sharing equipment and intelligence — because otherwise it would lose sight of its real mission.

"My own view is that...the military should be supportive," he said. "But I would be very much against giving the military arrest authority or getting them into law enforcement."

Carlucci reserved his most pointed rhetoric for Libya's Gadhafi, who earlier this week demanded once again the United States recognize his claim to the Gulf of Sidra, off the Mediterranean Sea.

The United States recognizes only the standard 12-mile territorial limit in the gulf. U.S. and Libyan forces clashed in March 1986 after the Navy ignored Gadhafi's "line of death" in the gulf and a month later, U.S. jets bombed Libya in retaliation for Libya's alleged involvement in international terrorism.

NATION

"I think (Libya's Moammar) Gadhafi's a flyspeck. I don't think he's worth paying attention to. We're certainly not dancing to his tune."

— Secretary of Defense Frank Carlucci

"I think Gadhafi's a flyspeck," Carlucci said. "I don't think he's worth paying attention to. We're certainly not dancing to his tune."

Carlucci refused to say whether the United States was planning any additional naval maneuvers in the gulf, but added: "If your question is, are we going ahead with the freedom of navigation program, yeah, we're going ahead with that program around the world based on our schedule..."

The defense secetary said he was satisfied with the state of U.S. forces in the Persian Gulf, where American ships have been protecting reflagged Kuwaiti tankers against Iranian attack since last July. The Navy fleet was recently reduced in size, with a battleship and helicopter carrier sailing for home.

"We are now on our 39th convoy, 38 of which have been without incident," Carlucci said. "And I think that record speaks for itself. We've obviously got the capability over there that we need."

Turning to his March 14 meeting with Yazov in Bern, Switzerland — the first such working session between the U.S. and Soviet defense chiefs — Carlucci predicted the talks would focus on avoiding "dangerous activities," or confrontations between small military units; arms control and human rights; Soviet defense doctrine, and planning for meetings of top-ranking military officers.

"In the area of what we call dangerous activities, I would hope that we can reach some meeting of the minds...at least set up a process so that they can be avoided," Carlucci said.

The Soviets, he added, are unlikely to change any of their military policies as a result of their setbacks in Afghanistan, where they are fighting U.S.-supported rebels.

"I guess people have in mind the Vietnam analogy," Carlucci said. "I don't think it works the same way in their system...the Soviet military and the Soviet people don't have access to the same amount of information that we have in our society."

Asked about the huge military buildup during President Reagan's first term, when he was Weinberger's deputy, Carlucci said he wouldn't second-guess the pace or manner in which those increases were pursued.

While political support for the buildup has evaporated — forcing budget cuts for three years running — "we could have well have ended up with less" if the spending hikes had been sought on a more gradual basis, he said.

Bill would require disclosure of covert action

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, trying to avoid another Iran-Contra affair, on Friday voted down an effort to let the White House withhold details about covert operations from Congress.

The 65-23 vote came as the chamber worked on a bill which would require that Congress be notified about all covert actions within 48 hours after they start.

Senate leaders had been hoping to pass the bill Friday, but the chamber became bogged down in a lengthy and unresolved debate about a pair of unrelated issues. That blocked a final vote until after the Senate returns March 21.

The vote killed an amendment proposed by Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, which would have allowed a president simply to tell Congress that a covert action had started, but withhold details until later.

McClure called his proposal "a compromise" which he said "gives the president some flexibility" about when to tell Congress.

But Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, chief author of the bill, said McClure's amendment "is not a compromise; it's a capitulation...This lets the president play 'I've got a secret' but not tell."

The bill's future is unclear. The Reagan administration strongly opposes the measure as an unconstitutional limit on a president's ability to conduct foreign policy. A similar measure is pending in the House, but has not yet reached the floor.

Cohen is vice-chairman of the Intelligence Committee and was also a member of the Iran-Contra committee which investigated the sale of U.S. arms to Iran and the diversion of some of the profits to the Contra guerrillas. President Reagan withheld notice from Congress for 10 months about the Iranian arms sales.

The bill overhauls procedures for notifying Congress about intelligence actions. The chief provision requires that notification be sent to Capitol Hill within 48 hours of the time a covert operation begins, replacing the current requirement that Congress be given "timely notification," which is not defined.

Cohen said the bill "cannot guarantee that future abuses such as Iran-Contra will not occur, but it will certainly minimize them."

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, an opponent, called the bill "an overreaction to the Iran-Contra situation." He termed it "unnecessary, unwise, and unconstitutional."

But Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said, "the requirement for this legislation has certainly been demonstrated."

"There is no question but that not being advised for over 10 months (about the Iran arms sale) was not a timely notification," said Bentsen. "What this legislation does is close that loophole."

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said the bill contained "small, but necessary steps," although he warned "we can write every law conceivable, but unless the people follow them, they are no good."

Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., said, "many people believe that if we had this requirement in place, Iran-Contra would never have happened, but that's not so."

Cohen agreed, noting that "there's no piece of legislation we can enact that would prevent a president from exercising poor judgment."

February 3, 1988

The 1988 Republican Primary election on March 8th will settle a very important local contest which affects all of us in Midland County. It is so important I wish I could talk with you personally about my feelings but a letter in the mail is the best we could do given the time constraints involved.

My concern is with the contest for Judge of the 142nd District Court. This election is crucial because it directly affects the quality of justice in criminal and civil cases in Midland County.

The good news is that we have an extraordinarily qualified Republican candidate in Nick Taylor. Nick's credentials are seldom found in individuals willing to make the sacrifice to serve as a judge. He has a distinguished practice as a partner of Midland's largest law firm. His educational background and experience make him exceptionally prepared to bring much needed reform to the 142nd District Court.

The bad news is that the present Judge, Nick's primary opponent Pat Baskin, has a reputation for presiding over a court that is liberal in criminal matters and inconsistent and indecisive in civil questions. Judge Baskin's campaign literature says the exact opposite, so how do we determine the truth?

The best way would be to ask someone who knows... an attorney who practices in the 142nd District Court, an off-duty sheriff's deputy or police officer, a member of groups such as Neighbors Against Burglary and Drugs, Mothers Against Drunk Drivers, Crime Stoppers or ~~Crime~~ Court Watch.

I have asked the questions and have concluded that, despite claims to the contrary, Judge Baskin must not be a conservative because his court record is not that of a conservative judge.

We are glad that Pat has joined the Republican Party but we should ask why did he wait so long? Are we to believe that the Democrat Party suddenly became too liberal for Judge Baskin in December of 1987 when all the left wing candidates and policies of the previous 25 years never moved him? Could the timing of his switch, just days before the filing deadline, have been motivated more by the near certainty that an eminently qualified Republican, Nick Taylor, would defeat him in November?

Please examine the record of our Republican candidates. Only one has extraordinary legal qualifications. Only one has a lifetime of public commitment to conservative candidates and policies. Only one was a Republican long before it was popular. Only one can change the direction of the 142nd District Court. That one is Nick Taylor.

I'm enclosing one of Nick's bumper stickers and a volunteer card. Please put the bumper sticker on your car or that of a friend and return the completed card.

Your help is needed in this critical race.

Very Truly Yours,

Ernest Angelo, Jr.

Ernest Angelo, Jr.

P.S. If you are already helping Nick, thank you. If not, please give him all the support you can - there's too much at stake.

Is this a claimed endorsement by these groups?

You be the judge.

Are these unreasonable questions to ask?

You be the judge.

"I'm proud to have Ernie Angelo's endorsement."

Judge rules on Robertson motion

Robertson can drop suit if he pays court costs

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge on Friday ruled that Pat Robertson can drop his libel suit against a former congressman who questioned his war record, but only if Robertson agrees to pay court costs.

The ruling, if Robertson consents to it by Monday, would free the GOP presidential candidate from going to trial on Super Tuesday.

U.S. District Judge Joyce Hens Green conditionally granted Robertson's motion to dismiss his own $35 million libel action against former Rep. Paul N. McCloskey Jr., R-Calif., who charged that the former television evangelist avoided combat duty in the Korean War.

In seeking the dismissal, Robertson had said scheduling a three-week trial starting next Tuesday, the biggest day of the primary season, unfairly presented him with a choice between sacrificing his candidacy and vindicating his personal honor.

McCloskey had said the former television evangelist was "chickening out of the trial just like he chickened out 37 years ago."

"There is no reason to force an unwilling plaintiff to proceed to trial, and the court concludes that dismissal of this action is appropriate," the judge wrote in a 15-page opinion.

Green rejected McCloskey's request to be reimbursed for his attorney's fees as a condition of dismissing the case. "While it is certainly understandable that a defendant, particularly in a libel case, would want to be fully compensated for his litigation expenses, the instant situation does not warant the awarding of attorney's fees," she wrote.

In court papers filed Friday, McCloskey's lawyers argued that Robertson "initiated this action for political purposes and has conducted this litigation in bad faith, putting the defendant to substantial, unnecessary and improper expense and public denigration."

Robertson's "last-minute tactics to avoid trial are just the latest, most flagrant example of his abuse of the judicial process and his attempt to treat this forum as a court of convenience," the lawyers said.

The libel suit against McCloskey was filed in 1986 following publication of McCloskey's charges that Robertson used the help of his father, the late Sen. A. Willis Robertson, D-Va., to avoid combat during the Korean War.

The former television evangelist "agonized over the decision to seek dismissal" but concluded that the trial date — which the judge refused to postpone — presented "a Hobson's choice of either abandoning his campaign during a critical period or forgoing the opportunity for personal vindication," Robertson's lawyers said Thursday in their motion to dismiss the case.

In a reply brief, Robertson's lawyers denied McCloskey's charges and accused the former congressman of pursuing his own political agenda.

"The record is abundantly clear that Mr. Robertson brought this suit for vindication of his personal reputation and honor (and that of his father)," lawyer Douglas V. Rigler said in the reply.

"Mr. McCloskey, a politician himself, has continually used his attacks on Mr. Robertson and this lawsuit as an opportunity for personal publicity. Mr. McCloskey seeks out media appearances in which to air what has become a vendetta on his part against Mr. Robertson," Rigler wrote.

McCloskey's lawyers asked the judge to order the trial to proceed to ensure "the right of Mr. McCloskey to have the same vindication of his integrity that Mr. Robertson apparently sought."

If the judge decides to dismiss the lawsuit, McCloskey's lawyers asked that she order Robertson to pay the former congressman's court costs and legal fees, which they estimated to be about $400,000.

They also asked the judge to preserve McCloskey's legal rights to initiate court action against Robertson and his attorneys involving "possible claims" of malicious prosecution.

"To allow plaintiff to initiate an action which may require the expenditure of significant legal fees by or on behalf of Mr. McCloskey in defending his First Amendment right of self-expression, on the eve of the trial to both denounce the defendant in the most outrageous fashion and then request that the court dismiss the case seems to be the very sort of manipulation of the judicial process which this court should resist," attorneys George Lehner, Roger Spaeder and Leslie Blackmon said in their brief.

McCloskey's motion also asked the judge to issue an order preventing "future legal actions against Mr. McCloskey based on any past or future repetition of the statements at issue in this action."

While a dismissal of the case would prevent Robertson from suing McCloskey over the statements he made in 1986, the former congressman "is concerned that Mr. Robertson may attempt to silence his free speech again, with yet another lawsuit based on repetitions of the alleged libels," the brief said.

Rigler opposed any award of legal fees and said Robertson should be allowed to sue again "if Mr. McCloskey is rash enough to launch new defamatory attacks upon Mr. Robertson."

Images not conclusive

BALTIMORE (AP) — Enhanced images of a 150 million-year-old, fist-sized dinosaur egg did not establish whether there's an embryo inside.

Columbia Scientific Inc., a Maryland software company, enhanced CAT-scan images of the egg, and the high-tech pictures revealed a small piece of shell inside the egg, in addition to a polliwog-like image of a possible embryo, said Brent Harker, a spokesman for Brigham Young University.

The polliwog image looks lifelike, but it would require cracking the egg to be sure, he said.

The egg will be displayed at the university's Earth Sciences Museum.

Teen found with bones

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — A teen-ager was jailed Friday after police found at his home the remains of Confederate Army Major John David Walker, who has been dead for 125 years.

Police Detective T.W. Carr said Walker's remains were stolen last year from a private cemetery near Augusta College.

James Bruce Meyer, 17, of Augusta, was arrested on a felony charge of wanton desecration of a grave, officials said. Police recovered the skull, pelvis, assorted other bones and the handles from the casket of Walker, who was killed in the second Battle of Bull Run on Aug. 30, 1862.

A relative of the dead soldier, 61-year-old Adele Shearer, had reported to police last October that his remains had been stolen.

Bank robbers steal coffee

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Authorities are searching for the crooks who broke into the First Jersey National Bank and stole non-dairy creamer and mouthwash.

Police Sgt. Robert Orlowski said Friday that the bank was robbed sometime late Monday or early Tuesday. The outlaws kicked in several inner doors and made their way to the employees' supply cabinet.

When the thieves departed, the bank was out 12 five-pound bags of sugar, 24 boxes of tea, six cans of decaffeinated coffee, 12 cans of regular coffee, 16 bottles of dish detergent, nine boxes of non-dairy creamer, three bottles of mouthwash and three cases of soda.

The loot was valued at roughly $260.

Paper money issued

The first paper money was issued by the U.S. Treasury in denominations from $5 to $1,000, on March 10, 1862.

jĕp´ər-dē

jeopardy — (noun) You have probably heard of the television game show Jeopardy, but have you ever wondered what the name of the program means? "Jeopardy" comes from two French words, "jeu parti," which mean game divided. In a divided game, each player has an equal chance of winning or losing. The risk of losing forms the meaning we recognize today: danger or peril. To "jeopardize," or place something "in jeopardy," means to risk losing it. So without a good education, you'll jeopardize your chance to appear on Jeopardy!

American volunteer among 13 people detained by Contras

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Contra rebels attacked a village in northern Nicaragua and seized 13 people, including an American volunteer for the Witness for Peace organization, group officials said Friday.

The Contras said the group was detained, not kidnapped.

Edward Griffin, local director of the U.S.-based Witness for Peace, said Richard Boren of Elkin, N.C., was abducted during the attack Tuesday in the village of Mancotal, deep in the mountains of Jinotega province.

The village is about 75 miles north of Managua and is in an area where rebels operate regularly in their war against the Sandinista government.

Four people defending the village and two Contras were killed in the attack, a Defense Ministry comunique said.

Gail Farris, U.S. southeast regional coordinator for Witness for Peace, said 11 people were wounded in the attack.

In Washington, Contra spokesman Bosco Matamoros said the group was "detained" by rebel forces who suspected them of being foreign military collaborators working with the Sandinista government.

Matamoros said the 13 would be released as soon as a "trustworthy" Nicaraguan was found to return them to a safe location.

Witness for Peace sources said Boren, 30, had been in Nicaragua since November, "documenting Contra human rights abuses and leading delegations to areas of conflict."

In October, Paul Fisher of Mill Valley, Calif., a Witness for Peace volunteer, was kidnapped by the rebels and held for 14 days. He was released unharmed.

Benjamin Ernest Linder, 27, an American volunteer with another organization, was killed in a Contra attack on another Jinotega town last April.

Generally, kidnapped civilians are held for a number of days by the Contras and then released. Others escape, saying the rebels tried to encourage them to join their fight.

Dennis Marker, Witness for Peace's Washington director, said the organization had contacted the U.S. State Department and the U.S. Embassy in Managua about the abduction. The State Department had no immediate confirmation.

Witness for Peace describes itself as a "politically independent organization which opposes U.S. support for the war against Nicaragua, while not taking sides on internal political issues."

Marker said it has documented abuses by the Sandinistas and Contras, although "our experience in the last four years is that the large majority of abuses are Contra abuses."

It maintains 32 volunteers in Nicaragua building schools and working on other community projects in rural areas. The group also sponsors tours to rural Nicaragua every two weeks for Americans interested in the Contra issue.

Shultz unveils 'ambitious' proposal

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Friday he has given Israel and three Arab countries an "ambitious" U.S. proposal for Middle East peace talks and requested a response within 10 days.

Under the plan, Israel would negotiate with a joint delegation of Jordanians and Palestinians over the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. Israel also would negotiate with Syria over the Golan Heights.

Israel captured the Golan Heights in the 1967 Middle East war. Part of it was returned to Syria under a 1974 military disengagement agreement, and in December 1981, Israel annexed the portion remaining in its hands.

Shultz said both Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Foreign Minister Shimon Peres were willing to negotiate over the territory.

Egypt was the third Arab country to get the U.S. proposal from Shultz, but it would not be involved directly in negotiations. Egypt and Israel signed a peace treaty in 1979, and except for the small enclave Taba, they have no territorial disputes.

"There is an attitude of a readiness to work to change things that should be taken advantage of by everybody," Shultz said. "The moment can be lost."

He cast the U.S. proposal for talks on an overall settlement of the 40-year Arab-Israeli dispute in the form of identical letters to King Hussein of Jordan and to Shamir, with a copy to Peres. Other versions were submitted to President Hafez Assad of Syria and to Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak.

In Damascus, Syrian presidential spokesman Jibran Kourieh said after the 2½-hour meeting that Shultz handed Assad "a written message from President Ronald Reagan, containing the American proposal for a comprehensive settlement in the region."

"Shultz explained the contents of the letter to President Assad and during their discussion, President Assad expressed several remarks on the letter," Kourieh added.

After the meeting at the downtown Muhajerine Presidential Palace, Shultz left for the aiport and took off for Cairo at 7:30 p.m. Shultz was expected back in Washington early today.

Earlier a U.S. official said Shamir and Hussein had not commented on the letter.

Shultz "did not get a yes or no from either of them," the official said as Shultz stopped in Damascus for talks with Assad.

The proposal calls for negotiations to open in early April to provide some self-rule for 1.5 million Palestinian Arabs who live in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza.

Negotiations for an overall Middle East settlement would be held by December.

The occupied territories have been marked by violence for nearly three months, and scores of Palestinians have died in clashes with Israeli troops.

Shamir is expected to give his response to the U.S. proposals when he visits Washington on March 14-16 for talks with President Reagan and Shultz.

Hussein, who has denounced the Reagan adminstration as hopelessly one-sided toward Israel, has kept away from Washington. Jordan's response is expected to go through diplomatic channels.

"We believe that things have begun to move," Peres said as he saw Shultz off for Damascus.

"Not that everything that was difficult disappeared," he added.

The foreign minister has been far more inclined to accept Shultz's plan than Shamir. The prime minister objects among other things to the U.S. concept of Israel trading land in exchange for Arab acceptance of Israel's right to exist.

Shultz met separately with Shamir and Peres, the two main forces in a divided Israeli government.

Hussein, meanwhile, has sought to gain a seat at the peace table for the Palestine Liberation Organization, which the United States and Israel brand a terrorist group.

PLO claims responsibility for car bomb

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following dispatch was submitted to the Israeli military censor, who ordered a deletion.

JERUSALEM (AP) — The PLO claimed responsibility for a car packed with explosives found Friday near a hotel where Secretary of State George P. Shultz was staying. The guerrilla group said Shultz was the target.

Police, who defused the bomb safely, said the car had been found accidentally after it was abandoned by its driver. There were no reports of arrests.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman said the bomb was well off the route the secretary took from the hotel to Israeli government offices.

But Yasser Arafat's mainstream Palestinian guerrilla group, Fatah, said in a statement in Beirut that "the driver had an accident and the car crashed into a power pole about 30 minutes before the time set for the bomb to explode."

"The driver deserted the vehicle and managed to escape," the communique said.

In a communique telephoned to The Associated Press office in west Beirut, Fatah said its military command "instructed the Limassol martyrs group to park a bomb-laden car in front of the Hilton Hotel in Jerusalem targeting Shultz, the messenger of imperialism."

Both the communique and Israeli police identified the vehicle as a white Renault-4. The PLO, however, said it contained more than 75 pounds of TNT, not the nearly 35 pounds reported by police.

Yosef Yehudai, the Jerusalem police chief, said the bomb apparently was intended to explode at a nearby commercial center to protest Shultz's mission.

"During the night we received a report of a car involved in a regular accident not involving other cars," Yehudai said. "Later the chief police explosives expert passed by and through his own experience decided the car was indeed suspicious...We found it was a car bomb."

The car carried Israeli license plates with a sticker reading: "Contribute to security."

Israel Television quoted police officials as saying the car was sold "to an Arab who apparently used a fake identity (card)."

The car was found less than a quarter-mile from the hotel, where Shultz spent Thursday night.

Three officials of Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization were killed in a car bomb explosion in the Cypriot port of Limassol Feb. 14.

The PLO blamed Israel's Mossad secret service for the bombing.

It said the attack was meant to be "a response to the Zionists' brutality against our people in the occupied territories."

"We warn Shultz and all agents of imperialism against reaching out for the PLO, the sole legitimate representative of the Palestinian people," the communique added.

It was the second report of a car bomb in two days. On Thursday, one exploded outside the bus station of Kfar Saba, a town in central Israel, causing no injuries.

FORMER PROSECUTERS RECOMMEND JUDGE BASKIN

TO MIDLAND COUNTY VOTERS:

As former prosecuting attorneys* in Judge Pat Baskin's Court, we enthusiastically recommend him to you.

As you know, Midland County has a long, well-earned record for being much tougher in criminal cases than other sizeable counties in West Texas. That toughness has served us well.

Midland's Police Chief recently announced that Midland's felony crime rate is lower than in other cities its size, and we take pride in having had a part in making that happen.

Judge Baskin is one of the main reasons that we have a lower crime rate. He insists on speedy trials in criminal cases. He also assesses stiff sentences when they are called for. Both of these practices are major deterrents to crime.

Judge Baskin is tough when he ought to be, but he is also always fair–fair to prosecuters and defendants alike, leaning neither one way nor the other. And that is just as important to successful law enforcement as toughness.

All of us respect Judge Baskin because he is honest, capable, and dedicated, and because he does a very difficult job exceedingly well.

George Harrison denies he, Paul McCartney are feuding

LONDON (AP) — George Harrison scoffs at reports that he and fellow former Beatle Paul McCartney are having a tiff, saying instead they are considering a reunion with Ringo Starr to "write a tune and play together."

During a recording Thursday for a television talk show, Harrison, 45, denied a recent British press report of a rift with McCartney.

"Maybe we will write a tune and play together. It won't be The Beatles, of course, but it may happen and we are getting on with Paul much better than we used to," Harrison said during the recording for the "Aspel and Company" show.

The British tabloid News of the World last Sunday reported that "a bitter feud" had erupted between Harrison and McCartney over a recent pop music festival at San Remo in Italy.

But Harrison countered: "For the last 10 years I did not see much of Paul at all. But recently we have been going out to dinner and seeing each other socially quite a lot."

John Lennon, the fourth member of The Beatles, was shot dead outside his New York apartment on Dec. 8, 1980.

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The executive producer of Ironweed said the movie almost went to the dogs when a pack of angry canines supposed to be attacking another actor turned on Jack Nicholson.

"Normally, we do five or six takes...by the time we did the fifth take, the dogs were starting to bite Jack," producer Denis Blouin said recently.

"Nicholson was getting fed up. He said he was finished, he was furious and said he was going home. It took us an hour to convince him to come back. Then, after 15 takes, we finally got the scene finished," he said.

In the film Ironweed, Nicholson stars as Francis Phelan, a former baseball star who returns to his hometown as a bum. His co-star, Meryl Streep, is Helen Archer, an educated woman who clings to her friendship with Francis.

BERLIN (AP) — An enthusiastic audience at the Berlin Opera recently brought singer Luciano Pavarotti back to the stage for a record 165 curtain calls after a performance of Gaetano Donizetti's opera "L'elisir d'amore."

Berlin Opera Spokeswoman Barbara Hering said Friday that the number of curtain calls was a record for Pavarotti and for the Berlin Opera house.

"It may have also been a world record, but we do not have records on that here, so I can not say exactly," Hering said from her office in West Berlin.

Hering said Pavarotti sang the role on two nights in Berlin. He returned to the stage for 165 curtain calls on Feb. 27, and for 115 curtain calls on Feb. 24.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A $4 million restaurant and "boutique" brewery proposed by chef Wolfgang Puck met with dis-flavor when a City Council committee recommended rejecting the plan.

At a hearing before the three-member Planning and Environment Committee this week, residents said the brewery and restaurant would bring drunken drivers, traffic and noise to their neighborhood on the city's Westside.

City Council members Ruth Galanter and Michael Woo agreed, but Councilman Hal Bernson, the committee chairman, withheld his vote until he could visit the site.

In a telephone interview at Spago's, Puck's West Hollywood restaurant, the chef said he would not push the project against strong local opposition.

"I want it to be a neighborhood restaurant," Puck said. "If the neighborhood doesn't want it, I don't want to spend years fighting them."

Puck envisions building what he called a "boutique," or "micro brewery" that would produce a quality beer.

PARIS (AP) — President Francois Mitterrand on Friday toured the tall glass pyramid capping the new entrance to the Louvre museum, finished after six years of controversy and delay.

The 72-foot-high pyramid is set between the museum's two main wings and tops three underground levels, which are still under construction. The lower levels will house a main foyer, boutiques, information desks, snack bars, storage rooms, restoration studios and other services.

The new $17.5 million complex won't be open to the public until the end of the year.

Mitterrand, accompanied by Culture Minister Francois Leotard and other government officials, awarded the Legion of Honor medal to I.M. Pei, the Chinese-American architect who designed the pyramid.

"Here is a man who is not only in love with the Louvre, but also with French history," Mitterrand said following the visit. "I knew he would do nothing to take away from the beauty and the history of the site."

Mitterrand said he had seen examples of Pei's work in Washington and Boston, and was taken with his pure, geometric forms.

"I guess you could say I like pure and simple shapes better than any others," he said.

Starting next year, the pyramid will be the Louvre's only above-ground entrance, though there will be direct access from nearby subway stations and underground parking lots.

The three underground levels form a hub and will be connected to the Louvre's two miles of painting and sculpture galleries by corridors resembling the spokes of a giant wheel.

The pyramid is but a small portion of a $2.6 billion overall moderization.

It was met with considerable resistance from public groups, art historians and political leaders after it was unveiled early in Mitterrand's presidential term, but he remained committed to it.

Renovations of the museum have been delayed by Finance Minister Edouard Balladur's refusal to vacate the sumptuous offices in the Louvre's northern wing, his ministry's preserve for decades. The Finance Ministry is supposed to move by the end of the year to new quarters in eastern Paris.

Panama cash crisis forces bank closure

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — International banks closed their doors Friday and anxious customers lined up outside, demanding their money. The National Bank accused the United States of crippling Panama's banking.

"No one, not even in his blackest nightmare, could have imagined we'd be in such a state: the banks closed, no money. People are getting desperate," said national assemblyman Mario De Obaldia. "We can't go on like this."

A general strike ended Friday, with opposition leaders saying the financial crisis would continue the pressure on the regime of Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega.

Noriega said the U.S. economic pressure had actually helped his cause.

"Thank you, United States, for unifying all Panamanian workers. Here you may find us dead, but never on our knees. Nobody surrenders here," he told a pro-government rally in Colon, 50 miles north of Panama City.

The National Bank of Panama issued a communique advising local banks it could not meet their requests for money because U.S. authorities had prevented the shipment of $10 million from the Republic National Bank in New York.

In Washington, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted unanimously for a resolution urging the Reagan administration to end all amounts of money last week following the ouster of President Eric Arturo Delvalle. International banks had limited withdrawals in recent days.

Delvalle was removed from office by the pro-Noriega National Assembly after he tried to fire the general, who is under indictment in Florida on drug-trafficking charges. Noriega is considered the power behind Panama's civilian government.

"What's the use of having a piece of paper with your name and an amount on it, when you can't get it cashed? What we need is money," said Franklin Iriarte, a retired Panama Canal worker. He waited with other retirees outside Banco General, hoping the institution would open.

Factories and stores opened Friday, but people appeared to be buying only essentials for fear the banking crisis would leave them without money.

Aurelio Barria, president of the contact with Noriega and to consider imposng economic sanctions against his government. It did not act on a measure to impose a total trade embargo.

International banks had remained open through the 4-day strike, but almost all of them were closed Friday as banking officials feared a run on cash. Long lines formed outside.

Local banks had closed after customers began withdrawing large Panamanian Chamber of Commerce, Industry and Agriculture, told reporters that if the bank problem is not resolved soon, "the results will be devastating."

"Checks are not clearing, there is no cash and businesses without currency cannot work, so there will be a de facto strike," said Barria, a leader of an anti-government coalition which had called the work stoppage.

An attorney for Delvalle said at a news conference Thursday night in Washington that federal courts in New York and Boston have issued temporary restraining orders to prevent withdrawal of government funds deposited in U.S. banks.

"We believe that whatever funds are in those institutions are at this point frozen and cannot be transmitted to the Noriega regime," the attorney, Daniel Resnick, said.

The National Bank said local banks should try to obtain dollars wherever they can and bring them into the country. It said Republic authorities advised the bank by telephone that $10 million was frozen by legal action taken on behalf of Delvalle.

Some local banks have branches abroad from which they can get money, bankers said. But others have no deposits outside Panama and would be unlikely to get approval of applications for loans from foreign banks.

Panama's economic crisis has been growing since last June, when government opponents began seeking the ouster of Noriega.

By the end of last year, Panama had defaulted on loans from the International Monetary Fund, the World Bank and the Inter-American Development Bank. Those insistitutions have cut off further lending to the nation.

Noriega has blamed the United States for the past nine months of unrest, saying Washington is trying to back out of a treaty requiring it to relinquish control of the Panama Canal by the year 2000.

Austrian general resigns over conflict involving Waldheim

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — One of Austria's five generals announced Friday he was resigning because of a disagreement involving President Kurt Waldheim and his service in the Nazi army during World War II.

Gen. Karl Schaffer said he asked to resign last month to protest a directive from Defense Minister Robert Lichal, who ordered the general not to edit an army film used for political education.

Schaffer wanted to cut out a segment in the film that quoted a historian as saying: "Historians are no apostles of morals."

He said he wanted to do so to avoid a potential association with a recent report by an international historians' commission that questioned Waldheim's moral integrity during his service as a lieutenant in the German army. The commission also said Waldheim was in "close proximity" to wartime atrocities.

Lichal, a conservative backer of Waldheim, decreed the segment must remain in the film.

Schaffer, who is director of the national defense academy, told The Associated Press he had tried to keep the dispute over Waldheim out of the army.

Since that had proved impossible, Schaffer said he was resorting to the "last means available to an officer" and asking for early retirement.

Under the Austrian constitution, Waldheim is commander-in-chief of the federal army.

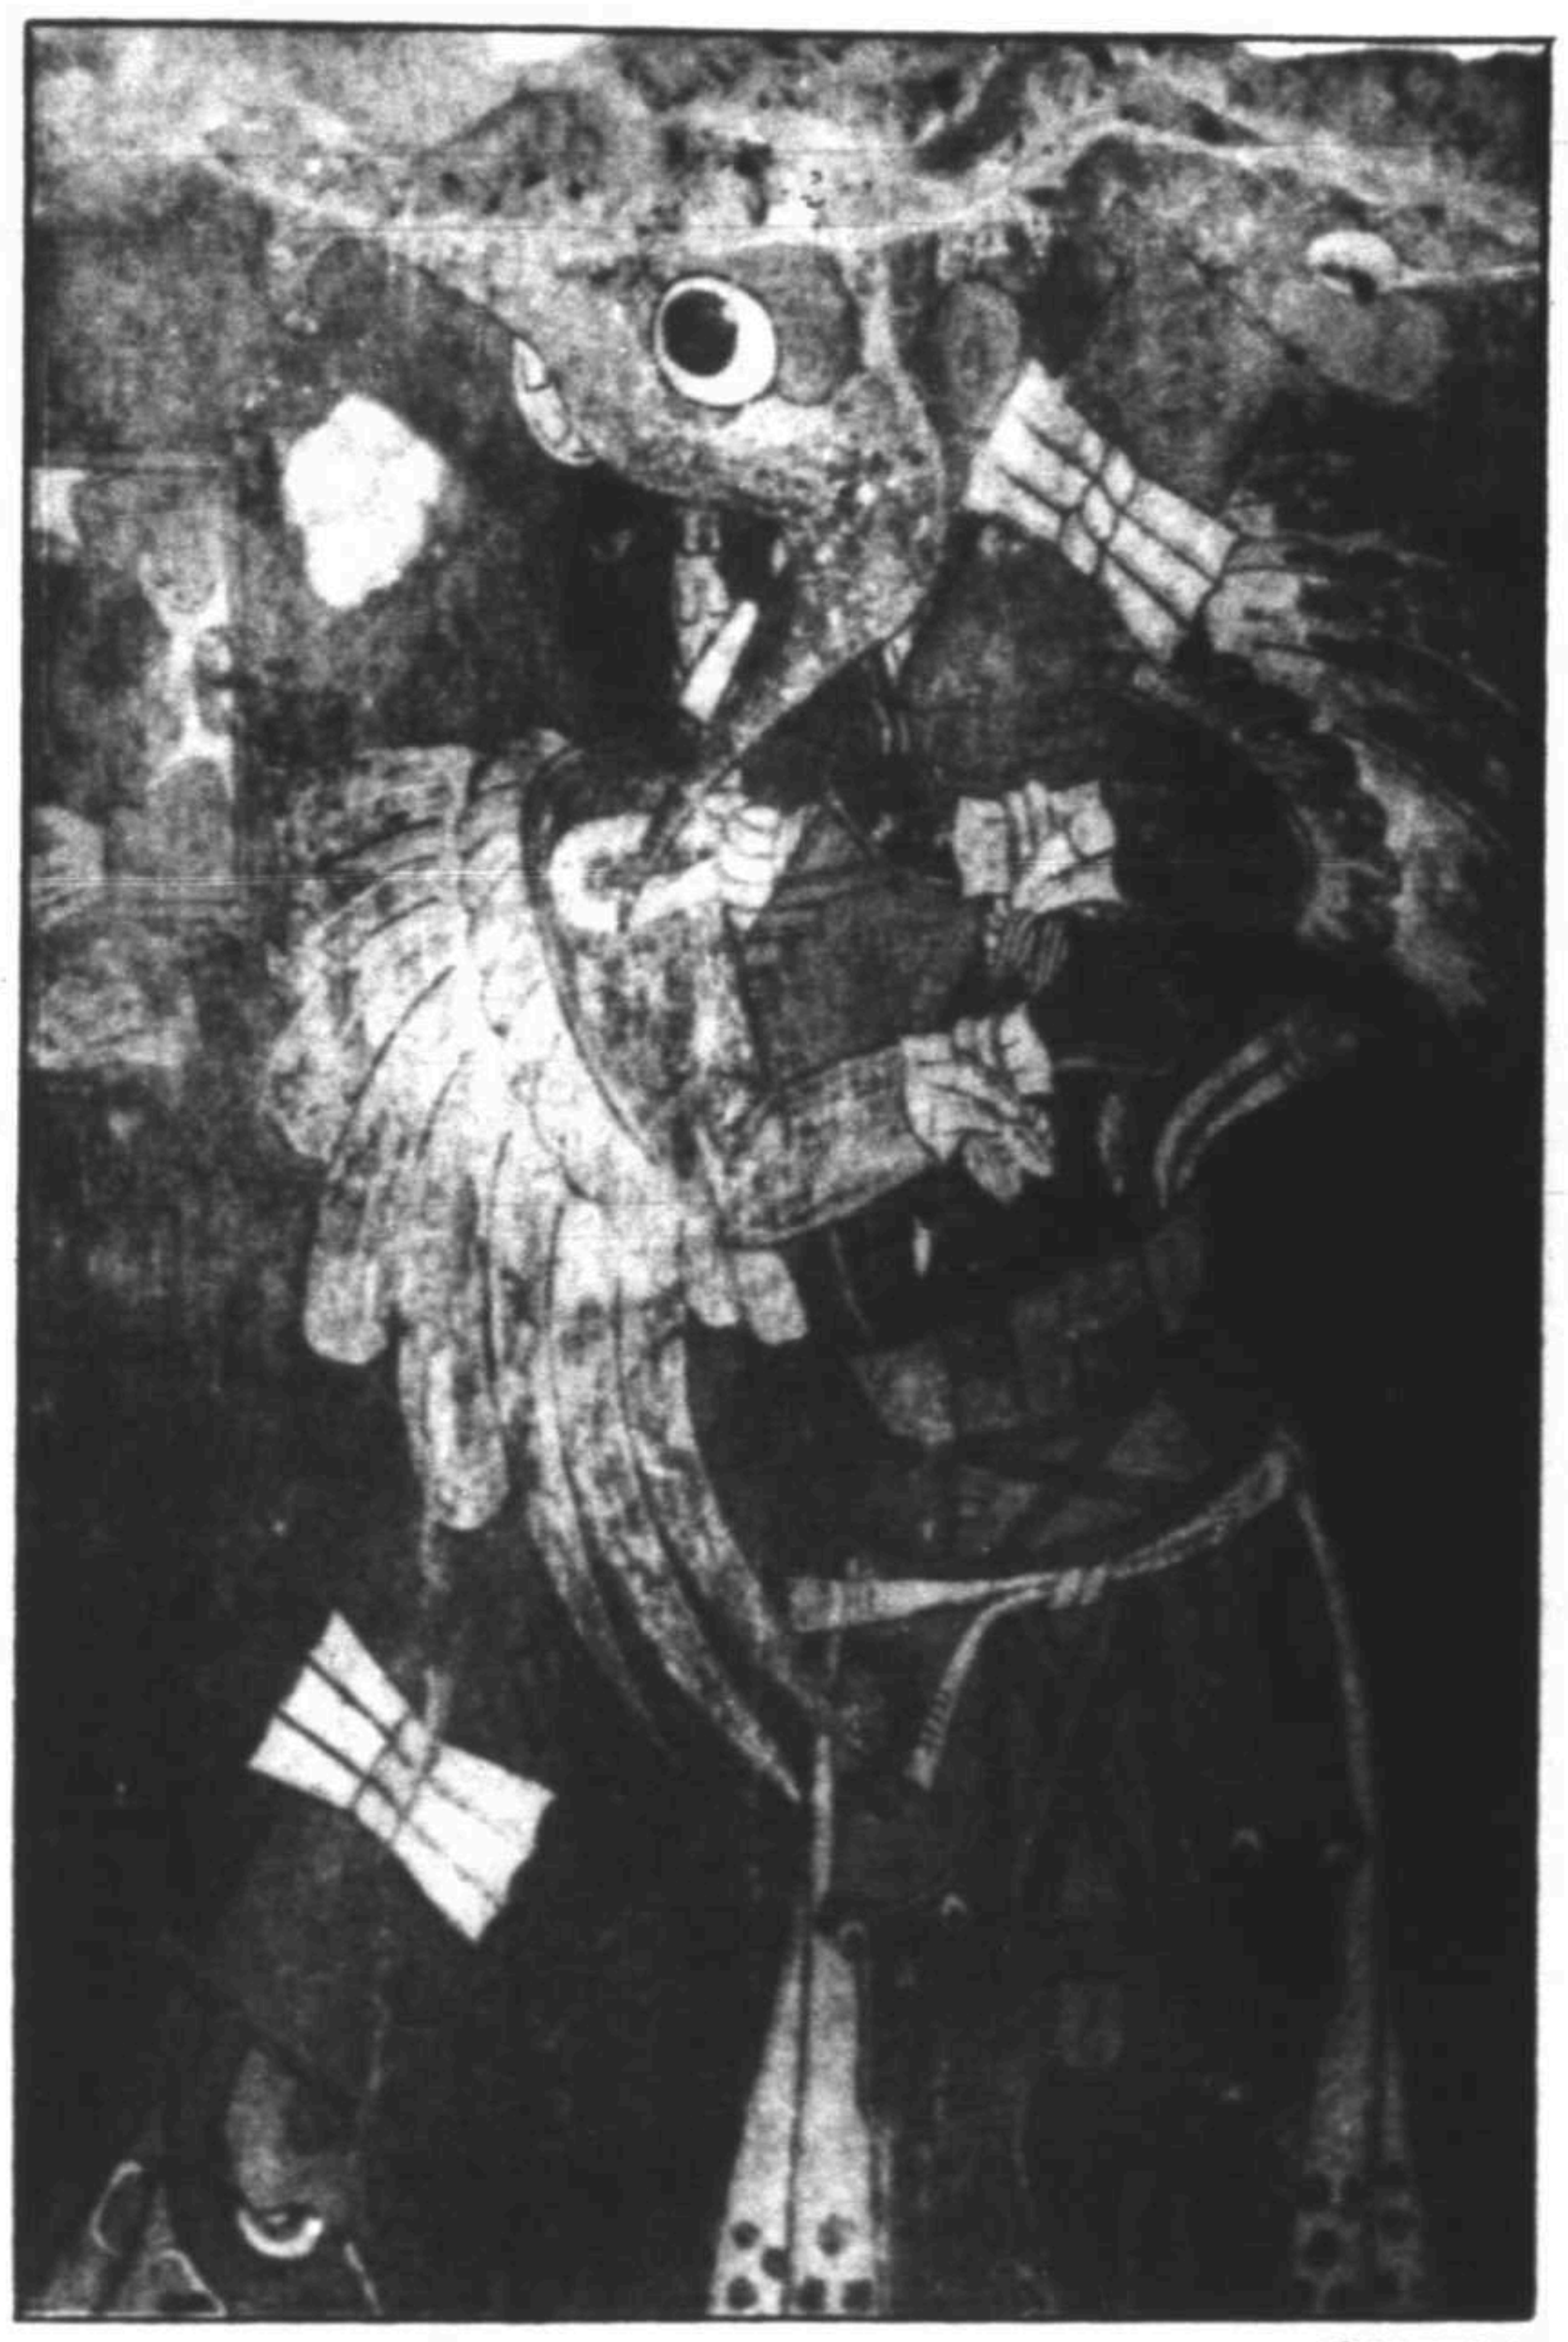
Origins of ancient colorful murals posing mystery

EDITOR'S NOTE — The men in the well-preserved mystery murals of Cacaxtla have Mayan features, but they were found at a site in Mexico where no Mayans are known to have lived. Rather, the paintings were uncovered at a site near Mexico City where a people known as the Olemca-Xicalanca built seven layers of palaces between A.D. 650 and A.D. 1000.

By CHRIS ANGELO

CACAXTLA, Mexico (AP) — Colorful murals buried for centuries in these pre-Colombian ruins near Mexico City pose a mystery.

Who painted them, and when?



AP Laserphoto

These colorful murals have been buried for centuries in the pre-Columbian ruins of Cacaxtla near Mexico City.

While more murals have been uncovered at other sites in Mexico, the detailed paintings here "are more well-preserved than is usual," says Joaquin Garcia Barcena, director of pre-Hispanic monuments of the National Anthropology and History Institute.

He said the paintings of a battle scene and two ancient priest-governors are also noteworthy for their naturalistic style.

Still more murals lie deeper in the seven layers of palaces built on a platform on the windy, 7,525-foot-high site. Archaeologists found them while installing a huge orange roof to protect the site from rain, sun and dust.

They will be excavated when conservation work on the part now open to the public is complete, Garcia Barcena said.

Exactly who painted the 56-foot-long "Great Battle" and the two other murals remains a mystery.

Cacaxtla reached its peak between A.D. 650 and A.D. 1000, when a people known as the Olmeca-Xicalanca built a city fortified with dry moats and walls. They abandoned it around 1100.

With a population of 7,000 to 8,000, Cacaxtla was one of several capitals that emerged after the decline of Teotihuacan, a powerful city of 150,000 outside the present Mexico City that traded as far south as the Mayan cities in Guatemala.

While there were earlier studies of the area, 40 miles southeast of Mexico City, the murals were not discovered until 1975.

In one, a man with a Mayan profile wearing a bird headdress and bird claws for feet stands on a blue-plumed serpent.

On the other side of a doorway, a man in jaguar dress is also standing on a serpent, holding spears dripping water.

Both of the 7-by-8-foot paintings have borders of snails, turtles and other sea animals.

Garcia Barcena dates them to A.D. 850 to A.D. 900, other sources 100 years earlier.

"There was a zoological study to try to find if the sea animals were local or from the southeast, to see if they were influenced or painted by Mayas," Garcia Barcena says. "There was no conclusion."

In the "Great Battle," on either side of a stairway a level below, men in jaguar skins step on their defeated opponents. Again, they are men with Mayan features in bird dress. One man's intestines spill out of his body, another has an arrow through his nose.

In red, blue, yellow, black and white like the other two, it is believed to have been done 50 to 100 years earlier.

"The glyphs are not Maya," Garcia Barcena says. "For me, they must have been painted by people from nearby."

He said small groups of Mayas and other ethnic groups lived in Teotihuacan and the artists may have been forced to do the paintings, he said.

The murals are near the top of the layers on the 363-by-660-foot platform.

The Olmeca-Xicalanca covered some of the murals with straw, then equally elaborate clay reliefs.

When they built another level, they knocked off tops of walls and filled in patios, protecting the murals for 1,300 years.

"What are unique are the palaces, that there was such a long sequence of remodeling," Garcia Barcena said. While building and expanding on a platform was common, "it is unusual that there were so many."

Built of dirt compacted with other materials such as volcanic gravel and covered with stucco, the structures also are vulnerable to the elements.

Builders ground sea shells with sand to make the stucco, then gave it a shiny finish with the slimy juice of prickly pear trees that abound in the area.

The new 495-by-284-foot roof is second in size only to one over an archaeological site in China, archaeologists said.

A double layer of metal keeps out the rain, but critics say installation of the imposing structure damaged the ruins. It won't keep out the wind-blown dust and spoils the aesthetics, they claim.

During installation of the roof, archaeologists found a foot of volcanic ash halfway through the structures and are trying to learn which volcano it came from. They also discovered grain bins and three more murals.

Only 37 acres of the 642-acre site have been explored.

Overgrown mounds dot the landscape, each hiding more ancient structures, one of them a pyramid larger than the palace complex.

"We've been working here about 15 years and to excavate, we need another 50," said Sergio Guevara, an architect working on the project.

Oyster port troubled by diseased beds, thinning of its skipjacks

EDITOR'S NOTE — Since the 1800s, the watermen of Chesapeake have dredged for oysters in squatty boats with tall sails, the last of this nation's working sailing vessels. But just as the oyster beds have been depleted by a disease, the sailing skipjacks have dwindled in numbers to a precious few.

By LARRY ROSENTHAL

TILGHMAN, Md. (AP) — The end has often seemed near for the aging and shrinking fleet of tall-masted sailing vessels watermen have used since before the turn of the century to dredge oysters from Chesapeake Bay.

And this year, with many of the bay's oyster beds ravaged by a deadly parasite, even the captains of the last stand of working sail in the country say it may not be long before they pass into history like the whaling men of New England.

"I'm scared we're going to lose some," says Russell Dize, a fourth-generation skipjack captain in this old oyster port.

There are not many left to lose.

Nearly 1,000 skipjacks — low, beamy, shallow-draft vessels with tall, raking masts and large, tapered spars extending forward from the bow — once plied the waters of the Chesapeake. When the dredging season opened this fall, the surviving fleet of working skipjacks numbered fewer than 20. At least five other boats didn't bother to set sail.

Bone-chilling cold wind and spraying water and long, punishing days are usually the lot for the skipjack captains and their five-man crews, whose season, Nov. 1-March 15, is a time when fair-weather sailors stay off the bay.

"Nothing's ever warm on these except when you're painting them in the summer," Dize says. "But when there are plenty of oysters, nothing much but ice stops us from going out."

In good times and bad, skipjacks leave port before the break of dawn in order to be over oystering grounds by sunrise, the legal starting time for dredging operations.

The unprecedented spread up the bay of the disease MSX, or multinucleate sphere unknown, has meant even earlier hours and more grueling days for the oystermen because they are having to travel farther to find healthy beds.

The resurgence of the disease, which thrives in drought years when the water is saltier, comes after a decade-long biological decline in the oyster fishery.

Last year, for the first time in 50 years, the bay yielded fewer than 1 million bushels of oysters. The prognosis for this season is even worse.

But on the first sail day this season, Dize and his brother-in-law, Gene Tyler, remained stubbornly hopeful they could still eke out a living.

Two hours before sunrise they were down at the wharf to rouse crew members who spent the night aboard their skipjacks, the Kathryn and the Martha Lewis.

The weather was warm, the wind was light and the air of uncertainty was great.

The boats left dock under the power of their "push boats." Small boats with large engines mounted in the middle, they are lowered from the stern of the skipjacks so they can push the sailing vessels along to their destination.

For two days a week the skipjacks are allowed to dredge while being pushed by the tiny powerboats. The "power days" have to be productive, particularly this year, for the skipjacks to stay in business. Last season, there were only several good sail days before Christmas.

Watermen who take oysters with tongs are limited to 30 bushels a day per boat, for which they have been getting $17 to $25 a bushel. Dredgers, whose costs are higher and who can't get started until a month-and-a-half after the tongers, are allowed to take up to 150 bushels a day.

Aboard the Martha Lewis, Capt. Tyler, 58, a soft-spoken but talkative man who quietly gives commands, sips a cup of coffee as he orders the mainsail raised to take advantage of any wind that comes along. It is 4:52 a.m. and the 46-foot skipjack has been under way for just eight minutes.

The Martha Lewis, which has been on the water for 32 years, was one of the last skipjacks built. There is a stove and heater inside Tyler's newly built cabin, but there is no toilet; crew members must make due with a plastic bucket.

As the boat makes its way up the Choptank River, crew members remain huddled below in the heated cabin sipping coffee and soda and smoking as fatty bacon sizzles in a frying pan.

With no wind and no reason to prepare to dredge, the crew stays below even as the sun creeps above the horizon and over the majestic sails of a half-dozen skipjacks that have already reached their destination and are drifting together in a cluster, bow to stern.

The 15 boats gathered in the mouth of the Choptank drift quietly for 2¼ hours before the wind suddenly picks up at 9 a.m.

On the Martha Lewis, the captain orders the jib raised and crew members begin putting on boots, gloves and Swedish-made oilskins. The wind is shortly up to 10 to 12 mph, perfect for dredging. The work begins.

When the winds are strong enough, two dredges are dragged simultaneously over the bottom from the port and starboard sides. The triangular, iron-framed dredges can each hold as much as three bushels of oysters. They have sharp teeth on the lower edge to scoop the sedentary bivalves into their netting.

Tyler rings a bell on top of the cabin to let crew members know when he has enough headway and the dredge can be dropped over a metal roller and into the water. When he wants a dredge pulled in, he yanks on a nylon cord to rev up the power winder engine at mid-deck that reels in the dredge cable.
