

Governor Submits Bill Defining Oil Theft

Arrangement Of Building Is Ingenious

Beauty And Utility Combined In Commodious Local Structure

Besides being one of the most modern and adequate municipal buildings in Texas, the new city hall and auditorium is a masterpiece from the standpoint of arrangement.

Stretching for nearly a hundred feet along the west side of the city hall and auditorium presents a pretty spectacle.

The main entrance on East Third street (Broadway of America highway) leads into the magnificent auditorium. Color schemes, although conservative, show a tendency to modernism without loss of dignity. Ten massive chandeliers of colored glass hang in two rows from the lofty ceiling. High in the rear is a large projection room. From the furthest seat in the house conversation can be heard plainly from the stage.

Balcony chairs are regular opera seats. Downstairs the chairs are heavily padded. Parquet and rows and seats are plainly marked.

To the front ample orchestra pit space is provided. The stage is large enough to contain a basketball court. Lighting effects will give shades varying from bright day to deep moonlight. The stage can be flooded in fiery red, a soft rosy glow, a hazy blue, or faint yellow in the twinkling of an eye. An automatic control board provides for instant changes to fit the needs.

Dressing
Compact dressing rooms rise on three levels on the west side of the stage. From the same wing projects a loading platform. Materials may either be brought to the auditorium from or easily transferred to the boiler room below.

The boiler room contains two boilers, one for furnishing heat to the house at large, one hot water. Above the boiler room is the winter department's equipment room. Here meters will be stored and tested. Necessary materials will be kept on hand to prevent delay when emergencies arise.

To the front lie quarters for firemen. Already they have taken out of their salaries to buy a billiards table for the recreation room. "Some whisper that the city bought us a table," said one of the firemen, "but we took it out of our own pay."

Lacking only a stove, table, and refrigerator, the kitchen presents a neat appearance. It is immaculately white and everything is kept very clean. Forward sleeping quarters for the firemen are kept in orderly fashion. Beds, all alike, are covered with green bedspreads. There is no pretense. Each bed is made up perfectly.

By locking an arm around one of two brass poles, firemen can touch the floor below and jump to the engines in a few seconds. Here doors swing back with a simple twist of the wrist. Next to the engine room is the chiefs office where calls are taken. Just a little to the east lies a cozy indoor courtyard. Across the way lie administrative offices.

Downstairs the water offices and private office of the city secretary are located on the southeast corner. A built-in vault will protect valuable city records. Back down the hall to the right is the engineer's office. Adjoining this is a roomy drawing and blue print room. Across the hall is the office of city chemist and city health officer. Connecting to this office is an ultra modern laboratory. Here runs will be made on water, milk, foods, gas, etc.

Offices
Upstairs is the city manager's office, room for city commissioners' conferences. To the office of city judge is near adjoining the state city court room. Across the hall chief of police will answer calls and direct activities of the city police force. To the rear is the place easy to enter but hard to leave—the new city jail.

Everything is of tool proof steel. There are no reachable parts inside cells. All modern sanitary conveniences are available to prisoners. In fact each prisoner will be forced to clean up and have clothes disinfected before leaving out sentences.

Bullet proof glass enables the jail keeper to locate the prisoners' position before entering the cell. Meals will be served through small port holes.

Even in this end of the building, those of the gentler sex are due consideration. Special cells are set aside and arranged to provide greater privacy.

Two "guests" of the city are awaiting the day when the city hall will have been formally opened. Both will have the honor of occupying the choicest city suites as first prisoners.

EXPLOSION STILL MYSTERY
AMARILLO (UP)—An explosion in a residence here Wednesday, which killed two men, remained a mystery Thursday as officers continued their investigation. Victims still are unidentified.

Soloist For Tonight's Program

Fay Bland Tandy, above, lyric soprano, of Abilene, will appear on two groups of solos this evening on the program marking formal opening of the new municipal building and auditorium. Piano accompaniments will be played by Mrs. Harry Hurt of Big Spring.

Death Takes W. N. Waddell

Ector County Rancher Drops Dead In Fort

FORT WORTH—W. N. Waddell, 72, Ector county ranchman and former chairman of the Livestock Sanitary Commission, Texas, dropped dead at 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon while playing dominoes with friends in the Fort Worth Club.

John R. Halsell, C. W. Connerly and W. K. Dillo, engaged in the game, saw his head drop an instant before it was Waddell's time to play.

The body is at the Harveson & Cole Mortuary pending funeral arrangements.

Mr. Waddell had returned earlier in the day from Lubbock, where he attended the State Democratic Convention.

He made his home at 1636 West Magnolia Avenue with a niece, Miss Kate Waddell. His wife, whom he married in 1881, died about seven years ago.

In 1911 Governor Colquitt appointed Mr. Waddell chairman of the Livestock Commission and he served four years. After retiring from the commission he engaged in the oil business for a number of years, dividing his time between his ranch and Fort Worth.

When Mr. Waddell and his family moved to Fort Worth from near Odessa, they resided for many years at Hemphill and Myrtle streets.

The son of Mississippi parents, Mr. Waddell was born in Gonzales county May 7, 1860. He attended school at Seguin and later, when his father received a government pension for services at the Battle of Gettysburg, was sent to Conroe.

Bond Measure Compromise Is Completed

Assumption Measure Ready For Action Late Thursday

AUSTIN (UP)—Representative Hubbard, New Bon, member of the house conference committee on the highway bond assumption bill, said the joint conference committee had agreed on terms of compromise for the bill which was to be ready for action late Thursday.

He said the conference report provided for state assumption of only those portions of bond issues that had been used in actual construction of state highways. Assumption of bonds used to purchase right of way may be precluded.

Fay Bland Tandy West Texas Girl Of Fine Ability

Fay Bland Tandy, soloist for tonight's opening program of the municipal auditorium, is a West Texas girl whose ability as a singer has made her popular for programs of this kind, and other musical affairs, throughout Texas.

In private life she is Mrs. H. B. Tandy, wife of an Abilene physician, and mother of two. She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Bland of Abilene.

She studied in Trinity university, Waco, of which she is a graduate. Her instructor there was Clark Leaning. For several years she studied with two of the south west's most successful voice instructors, Myrtle Dunn and Gypsy Ted Sullivan.

In addition to her work as soloist she has appeared regularly in program of the Musical Coterie, Abilene, and has directed choirs. One of her most successful appearances was last year in Abilene when the Abilene Orchestra and Oratorio Society under direction of Christian Thaulow presented popular songs from symphonic and operatic literature.

In that program the world's best known operatic quartet, the Rigollette, was presented with Mrs. Tandy as Gilda.

Holders Of Tickets Who Will Not Attend Should Return Them

Persons who have reserved seats for tonight's opening program of the municipal auditorium had better return their tickets if they will not be able to attend. The request was made by city officials because 75 persons who asked for tickets after all 1412 seats in the auditorium had been taken have left their names and telephone numbers in the hope of getting seats if some who have reservations decide not to go.

Admission is free. But reservations for seats were required to make sure that a larger number of adults, that is taxpayers, citizens, would be able to get seats. Nature of the affair is such, city officials pointed out, that object of the program will be best served by having an adult audience, instead of the usual large number of minors.

The reservation plan also was adopted to prevent over-crowding of the auditorium—that is jamming of aisles and other passageways—in violation of state fire and safety regulations.

Veteran Governor Of Arizona Runs Behind

PHOENIX, ARIZONA (UP)—Dr. B. B. Moore, dark horse candidate, had a sizeable plurality over the veteran incumbent, George W. P. Hunt, and two other candidates for the democratic gubernatorial nomination in yesterday's primary election.

Governor Hunt, seeking nomination for his eighth term, had 3,672 votes against 12,951 for Dr. Moore.

With a 4 to 1 democratic majority in the Arizona registration, the democratic nominee will be well on his way to the governorship.

Farmers Harvest Crop From Boats

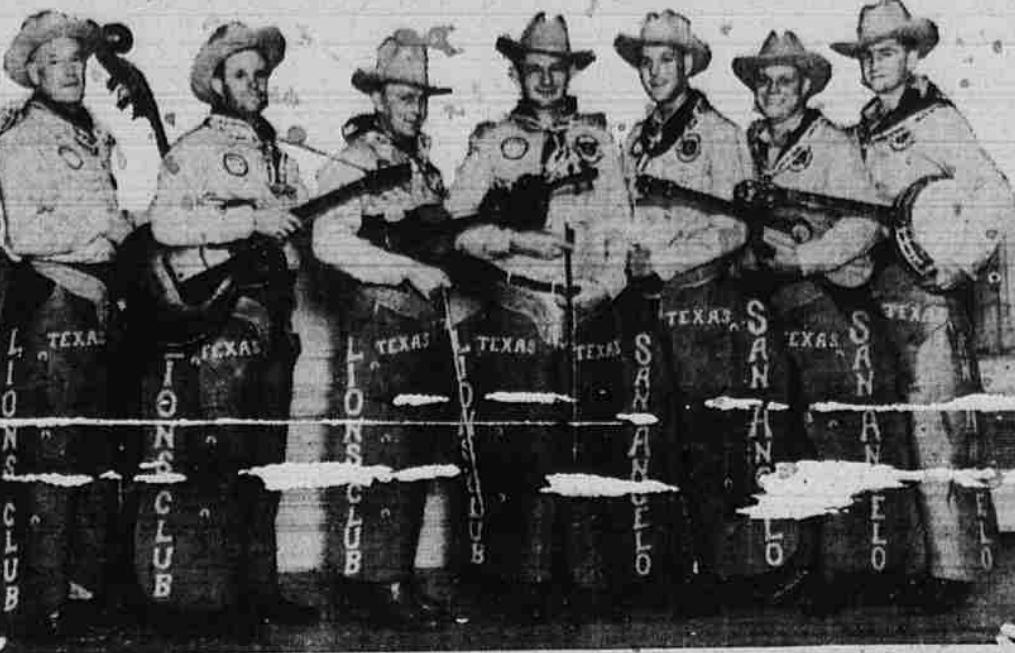

PALESTINE (P)—Much of the cotton and corn crop of Anderson and Houston counties are being harvested from boats.

The Trinity river bottoms, rich cotton and corn land, have been under water for days. As a result flat-bottom boats are going into the bottom fields, and harvesting the cotton and corn.

Cash Payment Demand Seen In Convention

Patman Holds Payment Save Administrative Expenditures

PORTLAND, Ore. (UP)—Representative Wright Patman, Texas crusader for the veterans' bonus, Thursday said immediate and full payment of the adjusted service certificate would save the government "tens of millions of dollars annually" in administrative expense.

He said his statement, made as the American Legion prepared to act on demand for immediate payment, was based on information supplied by the veterans' administration. Patman said Texas veterans under the plan would receive approximately $95,641,820.

Cisco School Head Confer On Grid Case

CISCO (UP)—Members of the school board here conferred on plans to renew the fight for reinstatement of the Cisco team in the 1932 interscholastic league football race.

A district court jury at Eastland was dismissed last yesterday after it failed to reach a verdict in the school board's suit for $10,000 damages and reinstatement.

The Cisco team was suspended by the league's executive committee after Fred Hightower, backfield player formerly of Tyler, had been ruled ineligible. He had played in a game at Cisco won from Breckenridge last fall 12 to 7.

The local team is being coached this year by Wilson (Bull) Elkins, former University of Texas gridiron star.

Tom Sullivan's Injuries Fatal

Tom Sullivan, long-time resident of Big Spring, succumbed at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon to injuries suffered Monday morning in the yards of the Texas & Pacific Railway Company, of which he had been an employee about 29 years.

Auditorium Of 1412 Capacity Will Be Filled

Dedicatory Program First; Entertainment To Complete Affair

With every one of the 1412 comfortable new seats in the place filled, Big Spring this evening will celebrate formal opening of her new municipal building and auditorium with a program which is expected to prove very popular with the large audience.

In a scene more beautiful and comfortable than any that heretofore would have been possible in this section of Texas the people of a community which only was a small town but which has grown into one of the most substantial small cities of the southwest meet for enjoyment of modern facilities erected in keeping with needs created by enlargement of interests of the community.

The building was erected from proceeds of a $200,000 bond issue approved June 16, 1931, by a vote of the people. The bonds were sold at par, accrued interest and $67.50 premium.

Total cost of the building fully equipped was $202,117.63. Proceeds from bonds, daily balances on bond money on deposit in banks, and pre-all equipment except $174.03 which was allowed in general fund appropriations in this year's municipal budget for this purpose.

Site for the structure cost $14,900. It covers half of a city block.

Tonight's program, beginning at 7:30 o'clock, will be in two divisions. The first will be the dedicatory program. Garland A. Woodward will be master of ceremonies. Mayor J. B. Pickle, members of the board of city commissioners and the city manager will be introduced.

Mayor Pickle will speak briefly, as will N. L. Peters and W. T. Strange, Jr., the architect and C. S. Lambie, the general contractor.

The principal address will be by R. E. Thomason of El Paso, congressman from this district. Doors will be opened tonight at 6:30 o'clock. After the program the entertainment will follow.

Full Consent Of All Parties May Be Needed

Fraudulent Conversion Without Royalty Holders' Approval Hit

AUSTIN (UP)—Governor Sterling Thursday submitted to the legislature a bill to define the term "theft" as it applies to conversion of oil. The bill would make it an offense for the lessee, assignee or holder of oil and gas lease, without consent of any person entitled to any part of oil produced, fraudulently converted any part of oil or proceeds therefrom to his own use with intent to deprive the owner of value of oil and gas or proceeds.

In the recreation room men have large sleeping quarters, a spacious room for recreational purposes,

Domino Players Lose Hangout In City Hall Move

Although they admit the city hall and auditorium are things to be proud of, veteran domino players around the old city hall are against moving the fire station "down there."

A padlock on the front door of the old fire department quarters put a crimp in the style of old cronies who sat for hours in the fire station playing dominoes and checkers.

"You bring the best you got over to the compress and we'll show 'em how to play dominoes," was a familiar phrase around the place. Now the compress players will have to invite the city boys over for a friendly game.

Mrs. David S. Orr celebrated her own twentieth wedding anniversary Wednesday afternoon with a linen shower honoring her niece Mrs. Delma Ausmus, formerly Miss Orilla Orr, at her home at 611 Gold street.

Handsome Structure

Big Springs new municipal building is one of the most complete public structures in the southwest. Combining the city hall, city jail, central fire station and auditorium under one roof, it covers a half block, the auditorium facing north on the Broadway of America (East third street), extending southward to East Fourth street, between Nolan and Johnson.

W. S. Strange and Company, Big Spring and Lubbock, were the architects, with N. L. Peters in personal supervision of the work. C. S. Lapham & Company, Big Spring, held the contract.

The city man and fire station face East Fourth and Nolan street, fronting southward. They are separated by a patio entered from the street. One may enter either the city hall or fire station from the street or the courtyard.

City Hall

First door to the left as one enters the main south door is a room where a fireman will be on duty at all hours to receive alarms. This man also will at night flash the police signal lights located on traffic signal standards in the business district, thus enabling the night sergeant of the police department to leave the police station for patrol duty.

Main entrance to the city hall is from Nolan street. First door to the left after entering there leads into the inspectors office. Across the corridor is the superintendent's office, with a drafting room. To the left, half way down the corridor, is a wide entrance to the main lobby of the public offices, where the public transacts such business as water bills, sewer bills and miscellaneous matters. On the east and south sides of the main office are a number of wide windows of special ventilating features, with steel frames and sills. Wainscoting in the public spaces is of terra cotta, difficult to deface and easily cleaned. The city secretary's office is at the west end of the public offices.

Directly across the east-west corridor, which has an entrance to the courtyard as well as from Nolan street, a corridor leads northward. On the north is the business department offices with a laboratory. A rest room is located at the end of the main or east-west corridor across the stairway leading to the second floor and next to the entrance from the patio.

Second Floor

Across the front of the second floor of the city hall is the public waiting room with the city commission meeting room on the west and the city managers office on the east, in the southeast corner.

Gas outlets are located in various parts of the entire building, to make possible heating of one or two rooms without using the entire heating plant.

Immediately north of the city manager's office is the city attorney's office and that of the corporation judge. These open into the municipal court room. The courtroom is furnished with benches, bar and all other modern court room equipment. A rail separates the judge, attorneys, defendants and witnesses from spectators. Across the corridor is the chief of police's office which also is next to the city jail, located in the north end of the city hall section of the building.

Jail

Jail equipment is of tool-proof steel. In doors to each cell are openings through which food may be passed without opening the door. A patented device also is fitted into the doors that makes possible conversation between a prisoner and a visitor without opening the door or any part of it. A series of small holes in each side of the door allow this. Nothing can be passed through the place, although words may be easily heard from either side.

Men's cells are on the west side of the main corridor and on the east side are the women's cells, with white and negro women separated. Equipment of the jail is designed to preserve cleanliness as well as to be as nearly escape proof as a jail can be made.

From the patio a stairway leads directly to the jail, making possible handling of prisoners with a minimum of contact with the public. A door to the court room allows prisoners to be led directly behind the railing without ever being among spectators. The stairway from the patio leads up between the chief's office and the jail cells.

Into Patio

The patio may be entered from the street, from the main corridor of the city hall, from the fire station, from the second floor of the city hall and from behind the stage of the auditorium, which is located across the north end of the patio.

There are three doors in the front of the fire station, making it possible for as many as three pieces of apparatus to leave simultaneously. At the back of the station is a store room, a meter room for the water department with an entrance off the alley.

On the second floor of the fire station is a recreation room, a room for a fire alarm system, a dining room and kitchen.

One slide pole to the station proper leads from the recreation room and two from the dormitory located in the south half of the second floor.

A locker room, showers and other conveniences are provided.

Heating Plant

Under the fire station the heating plant has been installed. There are two boilers, only one to be operated except when the auditorium is in use. Water may be cut off in various sections of the building without cutting it off in all parts. A freight elevator from the loading platform next to the hallway operates to the boiler room.

The circulation of warm air to the auditorium is a plant and for circulation of cool air from the outside.

The stage of the auditorium is 30 feet wide and fifty feet high with a 48-foot proscenium. A regulation sized orchestra pit is a feature. By use of special material in the wall and ceiling acoustical qualities of the auditorium are nearly perfect. Two and four-tenths seconds reverberation has been made possible.

On each side of the stage are individual dressing rooms with bracket lights and showers. Up stairs alongside the stage are the troupe dressing rooms, one on each side.

1,412 Seats

The auditorium will seat 1,412 persons. Every seat is a good one, the architect pointed out. The auditorium floor is bowl-shaped with a five-foot rise from the lowest point near the front entrance. The stage has complete electrical equipment.

Ducts through which warm air is circulated into the auditorium are built in near the ceiling along the sides. Ducts through which cool air is circulated from the auditorium are located in the floor. The upper ducts will be used in summer to send cool air into the building.

The intricate and highly modern electrical wiring and equipment and the plumbing installations were made by the D & H Electric company and A. P. Nash, both local firms.

Special material is used in the public lobby leading to the auditorium to make it more difficult for sounds to pass from the lobby into the auditorium.

There are four entrances from the lobby to the auditorium. A ticket window is located on each side of the lobby.

Easily Emptied

It is estimated that in case of fire the auditorium could be emptied in two minutes. The building is considered 90 per cent fire proof. There are four special exits in addition to the four between the auditorium and the main lobby. Rest rooms are located in the front of the building to the northwest and northeast corners, with entrances from the extreme ends of the main lobby.

At the head of one of the two stairways to the balcony, which lead from the lobby and not from within the auditorium is an office for troupe playing in the auditorium, with provision for plugging in a telephone.

Space for two projection machines.

Editors Comment On Maine Election

Daily Oklahoman (D)—Since Maine has spoken so angrily and so emphatically and so surprisingly, it is evident that nothing short of a political miracle can save the Republican ticket at the November polls.

Kansas City Journal-Post—Because it (Maine) has regularly been Republican the Republicans have come to use the state election there as a basis for claiming the country as a whole each four years.

For lazy liver, stomach and kidneys, biliousness, indigestion, constipation, headache and fever.
Buy and 30¢ at dealers.

They will suffer this year as a result of the practice, as the Democrats are bound to capitalize the outcome.

Cleveland Plain Dealer—Maine fired another 'shot heard round the world.' When the mother state of prohibition upsets the tradition of Republican nomination to elect a slate of wet Democrats, it speaks with a voice that commands attention. * * * Maine results indicate a deep seated conviction on the part of thousands of voters that a political change in the White House is desirable.

New York Times (I)—To have elected a governor and two out of three representatives in congress must have surpassed the wildest dreams of the Democrats. It accurately records the occurrence of an electoral earthquake. The prohibition issue may have played its part.

New York Herald-Tribune (R)—The striking victory of the Democrats is a challenge to Republicanism the country over. Unmistakably a depression psychology still ruled the minds of these voters. No one can deny that this overturn occurred in the original dry state of the nation and after the Republican party in the state had obstinately reaffirmed its dry allegiance.

Dallas News (ID)—Down here in Texas that sounds may as if the White House had said Mr. Hoover is withdrawing in favor of Mr. Roosevelt and moves to make it unanimous. It is not quite so, but the bragging that the Republicans are accustomed to about Maine accounts for our ideas. * * * There can be no question of the anxiety that Maine's performance will arouse in Republican breasts.

Mexia Daily News—If Maine goes Republican it means nothing at all. But if Maine goes Democratic, it certainly means a revolt, for Maine is as naturally Republican as Texas is Democratic. So from Portland, Maine, comes bad news for Mr. Hoover.

Chicago Daily News—The Democrats have scored a significant success which fits in with the claims they have been making, but it does not fit in well enough to justify them in thinking the national victory is at hand. The Maine elections fail to show any striking increase in their party strength.

Salt Lake Tribune—In reality, the Maine election but marks the beginning of the campaign. It is as pleasing to Democrats as it is disappointing to Republicans, but beyond that proves nothing.

Galveston News—The Maine barometer forecast stormy weather for the Republican party in November. Maine has gone Democratic for the first time in 18 years. Maine voters were asked to choose between the national policies of the Republican and Democratic parties. Their choice can not logically be construed as other than a rebuke to the national administration.

Bright Spots In Business

NEW YORK (UP)—Another decrease in business failures was reported by U. S. Commerce today, total for the week ended Sept. 8 being 384, against 435 in the preceding week and 398 in the corresponding week of 1931.

ALBANY, N. Y.—Factory employment in New York state gained 2.9 per cent in July and August according to Industrial Commissioner Frances Perkins.

BALTIMORE—Revenue freight loadings of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad totaled 134,693 cars in the four weeks to Sept. 3, a rise of 7,399 cars over the preceding four weeks.

JERSEY CITY—Current output of all products of the Union Bag & Paper Corp. is the highest for any corresponding period in the company's history and a large number of laid-off employees have been called back, officials said.

DETROIT — A gain of 20 per cent in Rockne retail deliveries by dealers in the last 10-day period of August, compared with the corresponding period in July was reported by F. L. Wethoff, sales manager.

Ferry Explosion Death List To 68

NEW YORK (UP)—The East river has given up 23 more bodies, bringing to 68 the known death list in the ferry boat explosion of last Friday. It was feared the final death list might reach 80.

N.W. CORLEY
BY N.W. CORLEY

CHAPTER XLIV

It was Barry's voice that Mona heard. "Oh my darling, you've come at last!"

Barry was beside her. After all these days and weeks of courteous formality of coldness almost, he was again the Barry she had learned to love. For a moment Mona did not speak. Did not turn her head. She sank against the white linen shoulder against the white which encircled her and sighed. Then, still without speaking, she raised her hand and pressed it against Barry's face.

"Yes, Barry I—Inch-re!"

They stood in silence. The sand lay white around them. The sea under the white moonlight rippled quietly. The flamboyant trees creaked at hand, swayed softly. There seemed no one else in the world except these two.

Mona did not look at Barry. Her head sank lower against his shoulder. She could feel the beating of his heart as tumultuous as her own. "Did you do it, did you?"

"Do what, Barry?" Still she did not look at him. He had caught her hand in his own.

"Do what? Oh, Mona, how could you? You did me away, didn't you? The despair in his voice tore her heart.

"Why did you run away?" she countered.

He was miserable and she was adding to his misery. "How could I stay when I knew?"

"Barry?"

He did not speak for a moment but his arm tightened about her.

"Barry! Do you think I married your uncle for his money?"

"Certainly looked that way. You knew I had none. You knew—"

She shook her head. The tendrils of her hair touched his cheek. "How could you think that of me?"

Mona demanded. "You hadn't asked me to marry you. You hadn't even said you loved me."

"But you knew."

"I thought I did. That was why when Mr. Garrison asked me to rush to Twilands and marry Barry Townsend I didn't hesitate. That was the way it all happened. Barry. It didn't occur to me that your uncle's name was Barry too. It occurred to me that he was that Twilands for any other reason except to marry you."

"But when Garrison told you it was my uncle—"

"He didn't! I talked it all over without mentioning the man's name. Finally I asked him just as I was going out the door who the man was and he said 'Barry Townsend'."

Mona nodded. "Until I was there in the sick room."

"And by that time I was on board the Miranda!"

Barry's head dropped miserably and Mona reached out a hand once more and touched his cheek. "It's not too late now, Barry," she said timidly. "It's not too late. We aren't old yet. And we're here—"

"How can I marry my uncle's daughter?" demanded Barry bitterly. "My aunt! He stated into space. 'Mona, oh, how could you—how could you?'"

"Your uncle's widow, Barry," Mona whispered, "but never his wife! I was never that!"

"You mean—"

"I mean I was to consider the marriage for a year. I told you that before. He died before the year ended."

There was a silence in which little by little Barry's misery spent itself. Here was Mona, loving him wholeheartedly, the past explained away. She had come to him of her own accord, since she guessed rightly that he would not seek her out.

They would be married tomorrow. Any woman who goes to Spain and the consul could perform the ceremony. Was the anything irregular about marrying one's aunt? Steve and Lottie could be the witnesses. They were always in happiness and peace. Why not?

Mona stirred in Barry's arms. She laughed a little happily. "Will you marry me, Mona? Right away?"

"I could feel her stiffen suddenly at the words. 'I can't do that.'"

"Why not?"

"Why do we have to think about that now? Isn't it enough that we have found each other and understand each other?"

"But I don't understand you, Mona. His voice was hurt, puzzled. 'You said you loved me and now you say you can't marry me! Why?'"

She did not answer for a moment. I have something I must do first," Barry said slowly.

"You mean you must go home first?"

"She shook her head at this, then slowly nodded. "Maybe, it might be necessary."

"There isn't any reason why you can't marry me is there?" he asked quickly. "Uncle didn't bind you in any way, did he?"

"You could never marry me—"

"Then it's the money!"

She nodded agreement and Barry's expression hardened. "You said you loved me."

mean if you marry me you'll forfeit your right to the fortune?"

As the girl did not speak he went on again. "Is that what you mean, Mona?"

"If I marry anyone, Barry."

"You mean you lose the money and you care for that? It means more than your love for me?"

"That's what you're trying to say? Tell me you would rather have this money than marry me! Tell me!"

He shook her fiercely.

"You don't understand," Mona began. "I do want to marry you some time. But not now!"

"Why not? His voice was harsh. 'Is it because you want to enjoy your fortune a little longer?'"

"Mona can't take me as I am with what I have to give you? Isn't that enough?"

"Do you own half the mine, Barry?" she asked deliberately.

He considered this. "No," he said. "But what has that to do with it? I'm not starving. You wouldn't serve as my wife?"

"Do you own Holiday?"

"Part of it. Holiday is figured in with the rest of the property. Steve owns more than half. I thought I explained that. The sale of the Empire clinched things. For a while at least until I'm 30—I'm rather Steve's stewardship, so to speak. He has more power in any measure than I have out there. Doesn't mean anything because it's Steve! It isn't as though he'd every try to do anything."

"If Steve should die tomorrow," Mona said slowly, "the mine would belong—more than half of it and more than half of Holiday—to his heirs. Have you thought of that?"

Barry pressed his face down on her shoulder. He said slowly, "Why think of death now when we can think of each other?"

"You see, Barry, if I don't marry you right off perhaps I can think of a way to help you!"

"So that's your plan! Barry's voice rose in dismay and disdain. "Do you think I'd let you help me, Mona? Do you think I'd take a cent of that money—?"

"Why not?"

"Because I couldn't! Mona, Mona, forget all this! What do you care for money? We have enough. Do I look so poor? Let the money go to the cat hospital or whatever he wanted it to go to and marry me!"

There was a rustle in the shrubbery close by. Then a shadow flung itself across the sand at their feet and separated from the clump of trees as if torn away by someone's hands.

"So this is where you are, Mona? Why didn't you tell me? I went into your room for some water—my thermos was empty—and couldn't find you. I was worried stiff! You know those snakes—oh Barry! Well, thank goodness, I didn't have the fire department called."

"Wait Lottie, I'm coming!" Mona rose from the sand and walked slowly toward the girl in the pathway.

"Say, I don't want to interrupt anything," Lottie began uncertainly.

"We've finished talking," Mona assured her.

"Are you sure there was anything more to say?" asked Barry. "We'll talk it over in the morning, Barry."

"There's nothing to talk over. You can simply say 'yes' or 'no.' Lottie interposed cheerfully. "Don't mind me! I'll run ahead."

"Let's wait until tomorrow, Barry please!"

"Say yes or no, Mona tonight!"

"Do you mean that?"

He nodded seriously. "I do."

"Then it will have to be 'no,'" the girl said slowly. "I'm sorry, Barry."

Mr. Coolidge on the Republican Case

Writing in the Saturday Evening Post Mr. Coolidge has stated the Republican Case. It appears that to the calamities of the past three years no single Republican policy has in anyway contributed. In his own record and in that of his successor Mr. Coolidge finds nothing that should have been done differently: he believes that at all times during the boom and during the depression the Republican party has continued to be "one of the most effective instruments of popular government that ever existed."

To achieve such sublime complacency in the face of all that has happened it has been necessary for Mr. Coolidge to reconstruct and re-interpret the historical record. His method may be studied in a specific case, in his account of the attitude of his own administration towards the great bull market. We are told that in the winter of 1928-1929 he became alarmed and put himself in contact with the Federal Reserve Board. At that time, it should be noted, brokers' loans were more than twice what they had been two years earlier and the average price of stocks had doubled in the same time. Thus for two years of the most extravagant bull market in history Mr. Coolidge was not alarmed. In fact, though he does not allude to the fact, it was in the middle of that bull market that Mr. Coolidge intervened with his famous statement that "the record-breaking increase in brokers' loans is not large enough to cause unfavorable comment." But in the 12 months following that statement the increase of brokers' loans reached a volume sufficient to give Mr. Coolidge alarm.

He tells us that when he felt alarmed he consulted the Federal Reserve Board and found that they were using their influence quietly, as was necessary, to check speculation, and for that reason they favored raising the interest rates, which had to be done carefully to avoid injuring non-speculative business. This will be news to the banking world. For the record is undisputed that from the winter of 1929 to that late summer "careful" about raising the rate that it refused to let the Federal Reserve Bank of New York raise its rate. It was not until August, which was two months before the crash, that the Washington Board gave permission to the New York bank. By that time brokers' loans had risen another 30 per cent from the date of Mr. Coolidge's first alarm and stock prices another 50 per cent.

Yet even now Mr. Coolidge believes that it was right not to raise the rate and arrest the speculation in the winter at the time when he first became alarmed. He still thinks Washington followed the right policy because the other policy of raising the rate would have injured business! Mr. Coolidge is not half-hearted partisan. Whatever his party has done, even to letting speculation run wild, was the careful, cautious, prudent, safe and conservative thing to do. It is almost beautiful to behold such untroubled faith.

In this one incident there appears the whole process of Mr. Coolidge's mind in dealing with the central question of the campaign. He believes implicitly (a) that the Coolidge property rested on solid foundations and (b) that the Hoover defense against depression has been adequate. His task then is to explain why the good prosperity over which he presided was followed so quickly by the bad depression against which Mr. Hoover had had to fight so hard.

Unless he admit that the Coolidge property was unsound, and contained within itself the seeds of its own destruction, Mr. Coolidge has to find plausible reasons, totally unconnected with the Republican policies, which accounts for the abrupt and catastrophic collapse. He has found reasons. They are in part "overspeculation" by "the great body of the people," but chiefly the economic breakdown in other parts of the world. By adopting this diagnosis Mr. Coolidge is able to blame the American people a little, the foreigner mostly, and the Republican party not at all. Having absolved his party completely, he is thus able to argue not only that it should be continued, but that its whole system of policies.

profound policy. Mr. Coolidge may never admit that. But in no other way can one arrive at a reasonable explanation of why the Coolidge property expanded so violently and collapsed so ignominiously.

In the last full year of Mr. Coolidge's term, that is, in the year 1931, we can see the anatomy of the Coolidge prosperity. By means of a tariff which limited the imports of manufactures, by means of forced draught mass production we sold foreigners that year 865 millions of goods more than we bought. We sent to foreigners 844 million dollars net on top of the 2,000 million net we had lent them in the five preceding years. We drew 272 millions of gold after we already possessed about half of the monetary gold of the world. All the other debts of the outer world, including war debts, may be ignored for, broadly speaking, they were balanced by the expenditure of American tourists, remittances of immigrants, and other obligations by Americans to foreigners.

The outstanding facts are that at the culmination of the Coolidge era we were selling nearly a billion dollars more than we bought, lending a billion abroad, and drawing heavily on the depleted gold supplies of the outer world. These three facts go a long way to explain the unsoundness of prosperity, the prodigious and acquiring paper evidences of debt, and the appearance of extreme prosperity.

which is characteristic of inflation. But these same facts go a long way also to explain the subsequent collapse. For the moment we stopped lending our customers and debtors the money to pay their obligations, they were forced to cut their purchases, to dump their goods, and to contract their credit. Thus prices had to fall and they had to bring down with them the huge pyramid of paper values built upon a radically unbalanced economic regime.

Thus the causes of the depression lie neither wholly in the United States nor wholly outside of it, but in the relation between the United States and the debtor nations. There were other world-wide maladjustments, of course, notably between France and the debtor nations, and there were profound political disturbances arising out of the failure to make peace after the Great War. But the American maladjustment, in which the Republican party tried to make us at once the great creditor and to maintain a huge "favorable" balance of trade, was the most serious of all the economic disorders in the world.

It created an unmanageable volume of debt and shut off the normal means of discharging it. It reversed the development of American industry by stimulating an over-investment in industries for which there was no demand in the market for the surplus of those industries.

It has left us not merely with the temporary consequences of an ordinary business depression but with a permanent structural dislocation of capital and labor which is likely to leave us, even after some recovery, with a problem like England's of permanent unemployment.

Yet Mr. Coolidge, surveying the past, finds nothing that he would change. He proposes that his party should continue in the same course. We are asked, in short, to face the future having learned nothing from the past.

If Mr. Coolidge speaks the mind of his party, then we have there the best of all reasons why that party should be displaced. For while a good case might be made by the Republicans if they said that having gone through the depression they had learned much from the experience and were prepared to apply the lessons, no case can be made for them if in the manner of Mr. Coolidge they are completely satisfied with themselves and their policies and their record.

There are limits beyond which complacency in government becomes a danger to the state. Mr. Coolidge's complacency is well beyond that limit.

10,000 Hear Governor In Topeka Talk

Reputation Of Responsibility Charged To Republicans

By FREDERICK STORM
United Press Staff Correspondent
STATE CAPITOL, Topeka, Kan. (UP)—Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt offered the agricultural mid-west a relief plan to give farmers a tariff benefit equivalent to the benefits given industry in an address here Wednesday before 10,000 persons.

vention of retaliation by foreign countries. He also advocated more equitable distribution of taxes, the need for refinancing farm mortgages and extension of credit to holders of farm mortgages on certain conditions.

The governor outlined his plan in six proposals that provide:

- 1—A tariff benefit over world prices which is equivalent to the benefits given to the tariff to industrial products.
- 2—The plan must finance itself.
- 3—It must not make use of any mechanism which would cause European customers to retaliate on the ground of dumping.
- 4—It must make use of existing agencies and as far as possible be decentralized in its administration, thus placing responsibility for operation upon the industry rather than upon Washington.
- 5—It must operate as nearly as possible on a cooperative basis and its effect must be to enhance and strengthen the cooperative movement.
- 6—The plan must not be coercive. It must be voluntary and the industry must have the opportunity of non-participation if it desires.

Roosevelt declared that, before putting the plan into effect, I would urge the United States Department of Agriculture, looking toward the administrative machinery needed to build a program of national planning.

Tax Distribution

The governor advocated that permanent relief for agriculture can come through national ownership in the reduction and more equitable distribution of taxes.

"With respect to this," he declared, "I propose to ease through the presidency, as I have through the governorship, such influence as I can, in favor of a national movement to reorganize local government in the direction of eliminating some of the tax burden which now bears so heavily on farms."

The nominee said there were too many taxing districts, too many local units of government, too many unnecessary offices and functions.

"The governmental underbrush which has sprouted for years should be cleared away," Roosevelt said.

The governor cited the necessity of refinancing farm mortgages if the agrarians of the nation are to enjoy prosperity. He pointed out that while the last session of congress did a great deal toward financially stabilizing banks, railroads and industry, practically nothing was done by that body "toward removing the destructive menace of debt from farm homes."

"It is my purpose, if elected," he promised his audience, "to direct all the energy of which I am capable to the formation of definite projects to relieve this distress."

Federal Credit.
"Specifically," he asserted, "I am prepared to insist that federal credit be extended to banks, insurance or loan companies, or other corporations or individuals which hold farm mortgages among their assets—but that these credits be made on the condition that every reasonable assistance be given to the mortgagors where the loans are sound, with the purpose of preventing foreclosure."

Means of bringing about, through governmental effort, a substantial reduction in the difference between the prices of the things the farmer sells and the things he buys, was declared by the governor to be an immediate necessity.

"One way of attacking this difficulty," he said, "is by restoring international trade through tariff re-

Penalties On Taxes Delinquent Now Or By December 31, 1932, Not To Be Added If Paid By That Date

Interest and penalties that have accrued or that may accrue on taxes that are delinquent or that will be delinquent on or before December 31, 1932, will not be added to delinquent taxes if paid on or before the last day of this year. Tax Collector Loy Acuff was informed Wednesday in a communication from Austin.

A bill passed by both houses and approved by the governor provided for suspension of penalties and interest on delinquent taxes if paid before the first of next year. It went into force September 10. Collectors of taxes over the state were instructed to refund such penalties and interest paid in since that date. Acuff said none had been received here since Saturday.

"That all interest and penalties that have accrued or that may accrue on taxes that are delinquent on or before December 31, 1932, due the state, any county, special school district, common school district, road district, levee improvement district, water improvement district and water control and improvement district, shall be and the same are hereby released, provided said taxes are paid on or before December 31, 1932."

Notification of suspension of penalties and interest on delinquent taxes sent by George H. Sheppard, state comptroller, did not point out that delinquent costs are still assessed. Delinquent costs, in most cases, run about $2 or $2.50, according to Acuff.

principal to the meeting. "I won't," the coach explains, "be doing any of the arguing but every time Mr. Gentry makes a statement I can say 'amen.'"

Another portion of the conversation will be centered around George Delker, San Angelo star. It is claimed by San Angelo officials that Delker is eligible, and it is claimed by Big Spring officials that he is not. But a newspaper record shows that Delker was the member of a school squad in 1926, at least that is the date we believe it to be, and among other things it is mentioned in a San Angelo paper as recovering a fumble. It is alleged by citizens of San Angelo that Delker was not a member of the team and was a newspaperman covering the contest in the absence of Blondy Cross making the mistake. It may be a costly error, for unquestionably the burden of proof lies with San Angelo.

Kid Cagun's real name is Winfield Moran and there's somebody back in Alabama who's real interested in his fight results and if we were any kind of a fellow at all we'd give him a break and say something nice instead of panning him because he clinched a lot in a fight with Moak Prehard a couple of weeks ago. He is sixteen, a pretty boy of two years experience, and has won exactly forty-six fights out of forty-eight.

The friendly, grinning youngster has been the most popular performer on the list of preliminary cards ever since the Casino arena was opened, and the principle difficulty he has encountered is a lack of competition. In other he has won one-sided decisions over "Bulldog" Gray, Aubrey Smith "Monk" Prehard, and T. Jimmie. In every fight he has dropped his opponent.

You're welcome, Alabama. Red McGinty, the Snyder Express, informed Promoter Lex A. James today that he will be here Friday night with "bells on." It is our opinion that McGinty should have left off the bells and secured equipment that will enable him to handle Young Kid Whittington in the main event. It is a winner-take-all affair, and at McGinty's suggestion.

Lillian Harris and Weldon Woods, another Lomax product, are suffering from injured ankles and their absence has given Hare an opportunity to run slinks with the first string backfield along with Co-captain Higgenbotham, Schwarzenbach, Roberts, and Morgan.

Co-Captain Coots has the other end under control, and is very liable to make all-district this year. He asks quarter from none as far as the defensive portion of the game is concerned, and is displaying an unexpected ability to catch passes this season.

of various groups in the interest of marketing surplus farm crops.
"Support for the trial of some plan to put the tariff into effect seems to be found everywhere except in the administration at Washington," he said.
He charged that this attitude was more than a failure to assume leadership.

Reputation
"It is an absolute repudiation of responsibility," he asserted.

Roosevelt then charged that the depression in agriculture began in 1921. Republican leaders first sought to belittle the plight of agriculture and later offered the Fordney-McCumber tariff as a remedy, he said.
Charging that the Fordney-McCumber tariff strangled the normal trade in farm supplies, the governor said farm leaders in 1922 worked out a program for equality in agriculture.

"They moved in the direction of a Republican agricultural conference to consider it. The conference met. It took the amazing position that production should be reduced to the demands of the domestic market by the cheerful means, it appeared of 'giving out the farmers who had formerly exported to Europe.'"

"It is a matter of common knowledge that the President, then the secretary of commerce, was not without influence in the determination of this result," Roosevelt said. Roosevelt went back to the Coolidge regime to seek material for his attack on the present administration.

"The claim that the Republican discriminatory tariff methods are a benefit to the farmer is a cynical and pitiful fraud," he declared.

He summed up the Republican farm program with the declaration that:

"The present administration asks farmers to put their interests in the hands of their bitterest opponents—men who will go to any and all lengths to safeguard and strengthen a protected few."

Then he closed with, "The time has come. The hour has struck."

Saturday afternoon the district eligibility committee, composed of numerous, sundry and limited officials from each respective school, will convene in the city of San Angelo for a brief, or maybe it won't be so brief, session.

One of the items to be discussed is the eligibility of a group of young men who last year wore the uniform of the Sweetwater Mustangs, and most conspicuous of the group are Ney Sheridan and Spiegel Woods, a nice halfback and fullback respectively. We have been assured by none other than Principal George Gentry that the "trick" statute will come in for its share of attention, and furthermore that there are at least three schools in the district in favor of it.

Obie Bristow will accompany the (CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1) The door opened. Out stepped Gergouloff, looking like a great monster in the form of early day. He had a peculiar, twisted smile on his face. Half angel and half devil. Gergouloff walked to the platform. A great crowd waited out of the form of the death machine, where side the police lines. They had no "Monsieur Paris" the official executioner, and his aides received the prisoner quickly and silently. Suddenly we became quiet. The faces of the execution crew were maneuvered into position. The faces of the execution crew were expressionless. But Gergouloff kept his unholy smile.

The silence was broken only by the tinkling of a bell from a convent nearby.

The Russian, with a guard on either side, was now pushed, or hobbled to the execution table. His neck was placed in the death groove. The knife fell swiftly, surely. The assassin's head toppled into a basket. It was all over in a few seconds.

Gas lamps around the guillotine were extinguished a few seconds before the knife fell. People not close to the scaffold could see little. Most of them heard the thud when the knife struck Gergouloff's neck.

College, a South Texas institution. His first employment was clerking in a country general store where he remained 14 months. At 19 he went to West Texas to become a cowboy at a time when settlers revealed in distances. At the camp where Mr. Waddell went to the nearest postoffice was at Buffalo Gap, 65 miles away. His base of supplies was at Little Plains, 100 miles distant.

The ranchman who owned the Waddell and Miss Ella Boyd had lost some of his cattle and made a standing offer to marry the cowboy. Waddell, the under of the herd, married his bride in a tent.

In 1881 Mr. Waddell sold his cattle to George M. Casey of Missouri and engaged the next two years in buying sheep, which he sold to Vermont investors.

Land and real estate business occupied his time until 1887, when he sold his interests and bought a large sheep and cattle ranch at Indian Tank, Howard county. There the ranchman remained until 1891, when he again disposed of his sheep business.

He then began traveling through the state, buying high grade male cattle and building up his herd. When a drought struck Texas in 1894 he lost more than 3,000 head for lack of water and grass.

Later years saw Mr. Waddell expand his cattle interests materially.

Second Meeting

At the second mass meeting for discussion of the project, City Manager Shubert and E. A. Kelley were speakers. Mr. Shubert took up the financial angle of the proposition, going into detail on the effect issuance of the bonds would have on taxation. He declared the bonds could be issued without raising the tax rate, which then was $1.50. The tax rate recently was reduced to $1.50.

Shortly before the election a group of citizens addressed the public through the local press in opposition to the bond proposal. Six days of the statement were A. P. McDowell, Ray Wilcox, S. A. OLD CITY HALL, USED 23 YEARS, ONCE WAS FINE

When city officials moved into the now abandoned city hall in 1909, it, too, was one of the modern structures of its kind in this section of the state.

Proof of this is found in the fact that the provision for the first motor driven engine in West Texas was made in planning the building.

At the time George D. Lee was mayor of Big Spring. In those days the mayor was city manager, mayor and city judge all rolled in one. He presided over the board of aldermen, attended to the city's business and held court when necessary. Mr. Lee died before the World War. His family still resides at 700 Runnels street.

On the board of aldermen were five well-known men. R. P. "Uncle Buck" Jackson headed the list. He lived where T. H. Johnson now resides. J. A. Davis, father of Jim Davis, of Big Spring, came next. Then W. R. Cole, builder of the old Cole Hotel and original partner in the Cole and Strayhorn addition.

Next was Pete Johnson, familiar figure in city and county public life for more than a quarter of a century. He was S. A. Bink, who became county judge. M. D. Willis was city secretary. Mr. Willis is now a photographer.

So work; W. J. McCandless, Fort Worth, lockers; Pearly Jail Building company, St. Louis, jail equipment.

In Sweetwater. R. L. Price, now vice-president and cashier of the First National Bank, was treasurer. W. A. Hill was city marshal.

On the corner stone, in addition to names of city officials, may be seen names of officers of the local Masonic lodge in 1909. E. E. Stevens, who lived where P. H. Coburn now resides, was Worshipful Master. Will E. Caffrey, who still lives here, was Senior Warden and J. E. Nabors was Junior Warden. J. W. Ward, postmaster here, at the time of his death a few years ago, was treasurer. E. F. Buskill, victim of a stroke a few years ago, was secretary. B. L. Cammatt, now of El Paso, was tiller.

The two-story red sand stone building is now emptied in favor of a new $200,000 structure. Hulk of the first automobile fire engine in West Texas now rests near the City Park, replaced by the latest fire fighting monsters.

COMMITTEE MEETING

The chamber of commerce civic committee will meet at 8 p. m. Friday in the chamber offices in the Settles Hotel. Members of the committee are Edmund Nefstine, chairman, Cecil Collins, E. V. Spence, W. J. Robb, W. L. Beatty, Will Olsen Raymond Lyons, Mrs. F. M. Purser and S. P. Jones.

JUDGMENT RENDERED

A jury Wednesday gave full judgment to the plaintiff in the case of State National Bank vs. M. J. Conland for suit on note. The case was tried in the 2nd Special District court under Judge James T. Brooks.

W. A. Ecker, recently returned from San Angelo with Mrs. Ricker, is quite ill at his home, 1510 Scurry street. He has been ill for some time.

The greatest advance ever made in gasoline...

CLIMATIC CONTROL*

At last a gasoline has been made that gives the highest usable level of performance in all kinds of weather and at all altitudes. Climatic Control is the greatest thing that has ever happened to gasoline!

In addition to the outstanding advantage of Climatic Control, Mobilgas has an unusually high ANTI-KNOCK rating. All this at no increase in price. Mobilgas is a regular-priced gasoline!

There's a new driving sensation waiting for you at the Mobilgas pump. Fill your tank today and breeze ahead.

*CLIMATIC CONTROL is the preadjustment of the specifications of Mobilgas, before it is placed on sale in your locality. It automatically adapts itself to the variations in "engine heat", caused by changes in temperature, altitude, humidity and road "pull". In the Mobilgas Research Laboratories all these changing climatic conditions have been "manufactured" in hot and cold testing chambers. The road performance of Mobilgas is thus scientifically verified at different "engine heats".

HOT - COLD - RAIN - SHINE
It's all the same to Mobilgas

HOT-ROOM TESTS (Above left)—In this specially constructed chamber tests are made at as high as 130 degrees F., hotter than the hottest day you have ever known. Here the "hot weather" preadjustment for Climatic Control in Mobilgas is scientifically verified.

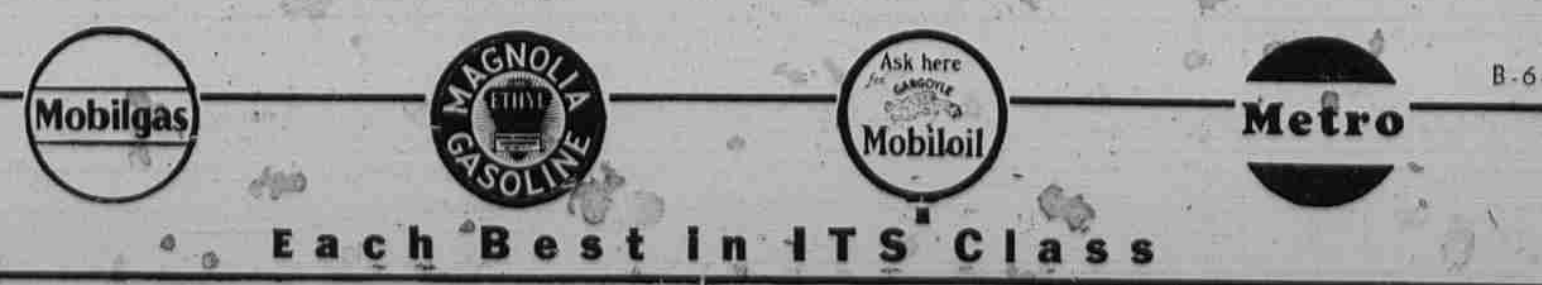

COLD-ROOM TESTS (Above right)—Here engineers reproduce dry-bulb temperatures as low as 20 degrees below zero. This verifies scientifically the "cold weather" preadjustment for Climatic Control.

"ENGINE-HEAT" READINGS (Below)—On this control panel, the exact performance of Mobilgas, under the different "engine heat" produced by the hot and cold room tests, is measured and recorded. Then Mobilgas is preadjusted to provide it with Climatic Control, a scientific achievement.
