Virginia execution

RICHMOND, Va. — An hour after killer and escape artist Willie L. Turner was executed, a loaded gun and the handwritten message "Smile" were found by his lawyer inside the typewriter Turner had in his cell for years. The lawyer, Walter Walvick, said the items might explain what Turner meant when he told prison officers before he died Thursday: "I'm letting you do this to me." Corrections officials are investigating. Gov. George Allen suggested the lawyer might have planted the .32-caliber pistol. Page 10A.

Bush signs right-to-carry bill

Texas joins 40 other states with concealed weapons laws

■ Citizens may begin to seek permits in September and start to carry pistols on Jan. 1.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Declaring Texans would have another weapon in the fight against crime, Gov. George W. Bush Friday granted citizens the opportunity to carry concealed handguns for self-protection.

"Texas now joins some 40 other states in fighting crime by recognizing that we have a dangerous society and that some Texans should be allowed to carry a gun if they so choose," Bush said.

"This is a bill to make Texas a safer place," he said as he signed the bill, which allows Texans to carry concealed guns for the first time since the 1870s.

Opponents disagreed, maintaining the law will increase violence.

"It makes me consider moving out of the state," said Loren Charter, an employee at Border's Book Shop in Houston. "It's a return to the Wild West — every man for himself. It doesn't frighten me as much as it embarrasses me."

Citizens may begin seeking concealed-gun permits in September and carrying pistols on Jan. 1. Officials have estimated that about 1 percent of Texans, or about 180,000 people, will apply for licenses.

Bush called the law an "anti-crime measure," saying it was one of a package of crime-fighting bills making its way through the Legislature.

He and the bill's authors rejected criticisms that the law will result in vigilante justice and more accidental shootings.

"This legislation that we've passed is not vigilante; it's self-protection," said Rep. Bill Carter, R-Fort Worth, House sponsor.

With Texas' new law, there are just nine states that prohibit the carrying of concealed handguns, according to Handgun Control Inc., a Washington-based anti-gun group.

Other states have implemented concealed-gun laws this year, including Oklahoma, where Gov. Frank Keating signed a bill Thursday allowing the carrying of concealed handguns, with permits, beginning Jan. 1.

The Texas law authorizes citizens who are 21 or older and meet certain requirements to obtain concealed-gun permits.

Applicants have to undergo 10 to 15 hours of training and pass a proficiency exam. A four-year permit costs $140, except for individuals 60 or older and the indigent, who receive a 50 percent discount.

The state Department of Public Safety will oversee the licensing process and already is working to develop the materials and guidelines for trainers, said DPS spokeswoman Laureen Chernow.

Celebration launch sends 4th-graders to next school year

By Kes Gilhome

Houston ground control was firmly in the hands of fourth-graders Friday when 285 students celebrated "blastoff to fifth-grade" at Memorial Stadium.

For the Sam Houston Elementary School pupils, it was the culmination of a two-week science project and a chance to celebrate the end of fourth grade by setting off approximately 100 rockets.

"We study the history of space travel, planets and astronauts during the last part of the year," said Karen Hendricks, fourth-grade math and science teacher. "Setting off the rockets is a nice way to round off the year."

In addition to learning about planets and other space-related topics, the students built the electrically launched rockets from kits. "They built the rockets from the bottom up," Ms. Hendricks said. "This way, they learn about all the parts and what they are for."

For the third year in a row, teachers and students were in the stands at Memorial Stadium to watch the launch. The model rockets, which the children decorated with paints and marker pens, can reach altitudes of around 700 feet.

Unlike fireworks, which are very unpredictable, the students used model rockets that were specially designed to be launched by a low- powered electrical current. This is a safe and controllable way of setting off the solid fuel in the rockets, Ms. Hendricks said.

Serbs capture peacekeepers as retribution for air assaults

PALE, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Battered by a second day of NATO airstrikes, Bosnian Serbs seized peacekeepers and chained them up at targets around their headquarters Friday. They warned the hostages could die if NATO attacked again.

The Serbs' action, broadcast by their TV and flashed around the world, dramatically upped the stakes in their confrontation with NATO and the United Nations.

The airstrikes raised the prospect of increased war and a forced pullout of the peacekeepers. But by late Friday, statements from U.N. headquarters in Zagreb, Croatia, indicated that more airstrikes were on hold while diplomatic channels were being pursued.

"We're still actively considering airstrikes," said Chris Gunness, a U.N. spokesman. "Meanwhile, diplomatic channels with the Bosnian Serbs are open. It is always useful to keep a twin-track approach."

Valedictorians, salutatorians of MHS, LHS prepare to take next step in their education

By Gary Shanks

Even though it was grade points that earned local top-ranking high school seniors honors, it was their efforts to be well-rounded that they believe is the greatest asset of today's young adult.

"We kept everything in perspective," said Midland High School valedictorian Christopher Allmon, when speaking about competing for grade points along with MHS salutatorian Blake Johnson. "We were well-balanced and ... active in other community activities."

Allmon earned a number of academic honors, including being named a National Merit Scholar and recipient of the MISD Board of Trustees Scholarship. He was president of the National Honor Society.

The son of Debbie and DeWayne Allmon, the valedictorian believes success in life is gained by "not giving up, and being flexible to change and open to new ideas."

Allmon intends to be a teacher and volunteered to teach a second- grade class at South Elementary School. "I really enjoyed that a lot," he said.

Allmon has been in band in past years and has served on the Student Council and as senior class secretary.

Johnson, the son of Lewis G. and Charlotte Johnson, has received a full scholarship to the U.S. Air Force Academy and hopes to fly as an Air Force officer after graduation.

A member of the MHS swim team, Johnson was named All-District, All-Region and All-State Honorable Mention during his high school swimming career. Among his many awards, Johnson, who is an Eagle Scout, has been given the Fina-Dallas Morning News All State

British, Sinn Fein officials disagree on U.S. policy

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Sir Patrick Mayhew, the British secretary for Northern Ireland, and Gerry Adams, the political leader of the Irish Republican Army, disagreed Friday on the direction of U.S. policy on Northern Ireland.

And as they left Washington at the end of a three-day conference on trade and investment in Ireland, they indicated that the Northern Ireland peace effort was moving into a new, difficult phase, centering on the issue of decommissioning of the IRA arsenal, estimated at 100 tons.

But the tone of their disagreement was calm, remarkably different from the anger and petulance that has characterized their exchanges over the three years they have been antagonists in Northern Ireland.

As they spoke at the closing of the White House-sponsored conference, both Sir Patrick and Adams, in separate interviews, said the conference was beneficial in that it may produce more business and jobs in the British province of Northern Ireland and in the border counties in the north of the Irish Republic.

They refrained from the kind of ill-tempered references they have made about each other in the past. The change in tone may have been the result of the first personal meeting between the two men, Wednesday night during a 35-minute conversation that Adams described as "friendly," and Mayhew as "civil."

But they disagreed on a number of important issues, including the direction of U.S. policy on Northern Ireland as it was expressed by President Clinton in a speech to the Ireland conference Thursday. Clinton urged all sides in Northern Ireland to sit down and negotiate a political settlement of the sectarian warfare that has killed more than 3,100 people since 1969.

Adams, president of Sinn Fein, the IRA political arm, said this meant Clinton favored seating Sinn Fein at a peace table now with all parties to the political situation, including the British and Irish governments, Protestant unionist and Roman Catholic mainstream political parties.

Adams emphasized that the president had mentioned no preconditions to such a Sinn Fein invitation.

But Sir Patrick said his meeting with Adams, which Adams had long demanded, had now cleared the way for a gesture, at least, by Sinn Fein that it was ready to discuss the arms issue formally.

Sir Patrick noted the part of Clinton's speech that urged all paramilitary groups in the North to begin decommissioning their arsenals. This would support the British insistence on "substantial progress" on the decommissioning of IRA arms before Sinn Fein can be allowed to participate in all-party negotiations, which most officials and experts feel are at least six months away.

German tourist office faces harassment, racism charges from four ex-employees

By Arthur Allen
Associated Press

BONN, Germany — The New York office that is supposed to make Americans feel 'Willkommen in Deutschland' was allegedly run by a leering racist. And a woman in the sales department published neo-Nazi agitprop in her spare time.

This isn't the face Germany wants to show the world.

But when a co-chairman of the German National Tourist Board traveled to New York City to straighten out the office last week, he only found new worries — these centering on a racist and anti-Semitic instruction in an office document.

After an argument during a May 18 visit to New York, co-chairman Guenter Colonius fired Friedrich Gross, the office's deputy manager.

On Thursday, Gross became the fourth employee to sue the tourist board, claiming the 42nd Street office was a nest of racism, sexism and anti-Semitism in which neo-Nazi flags were hung in the mailroom and employees were told to discourage blacks and Jews from visiting Germany.

Gross sued the tourist board for $30.8 million, claiming he was ousted because he opposed the office's discriminatory policies.

Colonius denies the claim, and said the main reason for the firing was Gross' "disrespectful" behavior toward board members.

In a German television interview Thursday night, Gross said employees in the New York office were issued the biased guidelines in a 1984 study commissioned by the office.

The 750-page study recommended the office avoid encouraging "Jews, blacks, Latin Americans and Asians" to visit Germany.

Colonius acknowledged that the "false, idiotic" sentence was contained in a document written for the office, but denied it was office policy.

"At no time have we ever discriminated against customers. Everyone is welcome here," Colonius said by telephone from his Frankfurt office.

He also denied Gross' claim that a neo-Nazi flag had hung in the New York office's mailroom or that neo-Nazi music was played there.

The office has been in hot water since March, when two women filed suits charging harassment by former office manager Henning Schreiber and a negligent response by the board's Frankfurt headquarters.

Monique Schlein, 42, is seeking $2.5 million for sexual harassment in suit filed in state Supreme Court. She says Schreiber constantly addressed her in a sexually suggestive manner and once suggested she pose in leather with a whip for a tourism brochure.

Christa Willibald, 36, is seeking $1 million in a federal lawsuit, claiming Schreiber made racist comments about her black husband.

A court has ordered the office to set aside $75,000 bond for Schlein's suit. Willibald's suit also is pending.

Schreiber, the office manager, was recalled to Germany last fall and promptly sued the board, claiming his transfer violated German labor laws.

The board's image was further tarnished this month when another employee, Elke Berg, was revealed to have translated anti-Semitic articles into English.

The newspaper tageszeitung said she and her husband wrote articles denying the Nazis committed mass murder and stating that the millions of Jews who died during the war mostly succumbed to disease because of bad hygiene.

Such statements are illegal in Germany, a country that has done much to make amends for Nazism and to banish Nazi thought from its territory. The tourism board fired the 56-year-old Berg.

The privately run German National Tourist Board is 85 percent funded by the government, and German opposition lawmakers claim it has scandalously misused taxpayers' money.

A parliamentary committee froze $2.8 million of the board's $31.5 million 1995 budget while the federal accounting office investigates alleged irregularities.

Economics Minister Guenter Rexrodt also has ordered an investigation into the document.

CARRY: Bush signs concealed gun bill into law

(From 1A)

Ms. Chernow said the department has been swamped with requests for information.

One person sent in a check to get on a nonexistent waiting list. The check was returned with a letter telling the applicant, "You jumped the gun, so to speak," Ms. Chernow said.

A telephone line will be set up later to answer questions about the law.

"Calling us now is not doing any good," she said.

Gun store owners also have reported a strong demand for the training classes.

"We have had thousands of requests for training, and what this means is that gun owners are basically a responsible group," said Bill Carter Sr., of Carter's Country shooting ranges in Houston.

"We're asking them to be a little patient while the Department of Public Safety sets out the curriculum," Carter said.

The Legislature gave its final stamp of approval to the bill last week, ending nearly a decade-long movement that gained momentum with the election of Bush, who said during his campaign that he supported the right to carry.

His opponent, Democratic Gov. Ann Richards, vetoed a bill in 1993 that would have allowed Texans to vote on the issue.

Supporters of the legislation have said the election of Bush, a Republican, over Richards shows that Texans want the right to carry concealed guns.

But throughout the debate, polls showed the public was split on the issue. Opinions remained mixed following the bill's signing.

Renate Randall, 43, a computer equipment employee in Dallas, said she didn't favor the legislation but now plans to purchase a gun.

"If everybody else is going to have one, I need to have one too," Ms. Randall said. "I don't like it, though, because there's a bunch of nuts out there that might not have felonies, but they don't need to have guns."

Co-worker Brent Eyster, 36, said he plans to get a permit and will carry a gun on an as-needed basis.

"I think there are some instances where people need to carry a gun for their own protection in an increasingly violent world," he said.

Law enforcement officials also remain divided on the law.

Jim Lyde, executive director of the Texas Municipal Police Association, said his group believes the law will not cause havoc on the streets but doesn't know whether it will make things safer, either.

"I don't believe it will make Texas any less safe," Lyde said. "I think we have seen graphic situations of how it may save lives."

Travis County Constable Bruce Elfant maintains his belief that the law will lead to more problems.

"I think you're going to see some additional accidental shootings, and I think you're going to see a lot more stolen guns," Elfant said.

"I hope that people who are carrying concealed weapons realize that it's a potentially very destructive thing, and they need to take their responsibilities very seriously," he said. "I hope my predictions are wrong."

DRENCH: Rain provides farmers relief

(From 1A)

ty, said of the rains.

He gauged about 1.4 inches of rainfall at the Grady public schools. That was about "the heaviest" rain in the area. Other places got about 1.1 inches in 30 minutes.

The rains were timely for the May planting of cotton.

"Some (farmers) have planted and got it up, and some are planting it now," Mitchell said. "And some are waiting to start planting. It's been a real good day.

"We had good rains, and what a blessing it is. We are just going to sleep with a grin on our face tonight."

Down south at Rankin in Upton County, rancher Tommy Workman gauged 1.7 inches of rain toward the end of the week.

"It's been terribly dry for two-and-a-half years," Workman said. The rains, direly needed on the rangelands and farmlands, "will green things up."

At the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport, the late May rains dropped 1.09 inches in a 24-hour period covering late Thursday to late Friday. The clouds deposited .47 inch Thursday evening, and .62 inch in a 30-minute period just before sunset on Friday.

Whipping winds and rumbling thunder accompanied the rainfall.

This week's rainfall brings the year's total to date to 3.89 inches, which is still below the 30-year average of more than 4 inches through May. The year's average rainfall for Midland is about 15 inches.

May's total rainfall so far is 2.12 inches, which is slightly above the May's 1.98-inch normal rainfall.

Southwest of Midland in the Warfield community, cotton farmer Brian Chandler gauged about 3 inches - 2.7 - of rainfall in a 24-hour period, and it was "still raining" there late Friday night.

"This is the most rain I've seen in three years out here."

Before this week's rain, his farmland was "looking bleak," said Chandler, who farms dryland cotton - without benefit of irrigation. "Now, it's looking pretty good. We're going to be in pretty good shape if we get it (cotton) planted real quick."

Chandler said his dryland farm briefly picked up some pea-size hail on Thursday, but "it didn't amount to much."

Stanton farmer Danny Fryar, who farms in the Lomax community of Howard County, got a fair-to-generous rainfall this week.

His cotton crop is about "75 percent planted and 25 percent up.

"Lots of areas right around here haven't had much rain up until today (Friday)," he said. "It's really going help the farmers," who were "getting to need some rain."

On rangeland south of Stanton, Fryar noted that the "pasture land is beginning to green up.

Phillip Morris recalls up to 8 billion cigarettes

NEW YORK (AP) — Philip Morris USA halted sales of many cigarette brands Friday, including versions of top selling Marlboro, and dispatched legions of sales representatives to collect up to 8 billion possibly tainted cigarettes.

The nation's biggest tobacco company said "a small percentage" of filters was contaminated and it doubted any reached the public, but could not be sure.

With the tobacco industry under intense pressure over the health effects of smoking, the company decided on a sweeping pre-emptive strike that could deny millions of smokers their favored brands for at least several days.

The contamination could cause smokers such "temporary discomfort" as eye, nose and throat irritation, dizziness, coughing and wheezing or just leave a bad taste in the mouth, the company said.

A prominent tobacco critic called the recall absurd.

"A company that makes products that are lethal and responsible for hundreds of thousands of deaths in the United States a year seems suddenly to have taken an interest in a little dizziness," said Dr. Alan Blum of the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

The recall affected 36 package styles, including the Marlboro red box, Marlboro soft pack and gold box and gold soft packs of Marlboro 100's, Marlboro Lights and Marlboro Lights 100's. It also included various packs of Virginia Slims, Benson & Hedges, Merit, Cambridge and Basic.

Spokeswoman Karen Derrigan the company expects up to 8 billion cigarettes may be returned, or 4 percent of the annual U.S. production of 220 billion cigarettes. The recall doesn't involve cigarettes sold overseas.

Philip Morris advised consumers to return the affected packages to retailers for a refund. Company representatives were to visit retailers to collect packages that may be contaminated and provide a certificate and poster saying the remaining Philip Morris products on the premises meet company quality standards.

The company declined to say how many cigarettes it has on the market at any one time. Philip Morris sells cigarettes in 238 packing styles.

Another spokesman, David Laufer, said the recall could cost about $200 million and the company has reserves to cover the expense. Philip Morris generated more than $11.1 billion in revenue from domestic tobacco sales last year and accounted for nearly 45 percent of all domestic cigarette sales.

The recall was announced late in the afternoon before the long Memorial Day weekend.

In trading on the New York Stock Exchange, Philip Morris fell $2 a share to $69.87 1/2.

The company said it used Mailgrams to notify vendors. As of Friday night, vendors spot-checked by The Associated Press said they had heard of no recall and were continuing to sell the brands.

James J. Morgan, president and chief executive of Philip Morris USA, described the recall as "preemptive and precautionary" because it's possible that none of the tainted cigarettes reached retailers.

Philip Morris said the contamination occurred at a company which supplies plasticizer, a material used to strengthen the cigarette filter. It triggered a reaction that formed methyl isothiocyanate, or MITC, in the filter.

Philip Morris identified the supplier as Hoechst Celanese, whose U.S. headquarters is in Somerville, N.J. A call to Hoechst after hours rang unanswered.

Cigarettes made with the defective filters may have an odor and leave a metallic or off-taste, the company said.

Lee High School valedictorian Eric Blake took the highest GPA at his high school. Quent Reese was honored as salutatorian for Lee.

For his academic prowess, Blake has been awarded scholarships from the West Texas Frontier Council of Math, the Texas Society of Professional Engineers and has received a full scholarship to Brigham Young University.

Blake, son of Benjamin LaRay Blake and LaRae Smith Blake, has been a band member and a member of the All-State Orchestra. The Eagle Scout was a top scorer in the Lee Math and Science Team and went to state with fellow Lee students for the National Engineering Design Challenge.

Working on his valedictory speech Friday, Blake said "The more we work in the face of adversity and keep our obligations in spite of hardships ... then the results will lead to success."

Blake sings in his church choir and was a National Merit finalist. He intends to study computer engineering and follow a career as a software designer.

Reese, the linguist of this year's top scorers, intends to major in Scandinavian language at the University of Texas Liberal Arts Honors Program. He already has been to the Scandinavian countries of northern Europe and intends to return there when possible.

A varsity swimmer in his sophomore and junior years, Reese is the son of Lillie and Chris Anderson. He hopes to one day teach languages at a university.

Reese was a member of the National Honor Society, the Spanish National Honor Society and served on the Literary Magazine staff at Lee. He has received French, English and Spanish academic awards and received the President's Academic Fitness Award.

CAPTURE: Serbs hold U.N. peacekeepers hostage

(From 1A)

NATO jets made repeated runs Friday morning at six ammunition dumps near Bosnian Serb headquarters at Pale, triggering explosions that shook the town and raised a cloud of smoke and dust a half-mile high.

Bosnian Serb television displayed six of the seized peacekeepers, chained to pillars and a door at an ammunition depot, and to a strategic bridge on the road linking Pale with Serb-held parts of Sarajevo 10 miles away.

Others were held hostage at a radar site, said U.N. spokesman Lt. Col. Gary Coward.

"These soldiers will not be hurt unless there are renewed airstrikes," the TV report said.

The Bosnian Serb military commander, Gen. Ratko Mladic, told U.N. commander Lt. Gen. Rupert Smith that "the lives of peacekeepers held on (Serb) territory are in danger if there are further airstrikes," a U.N. spokesman in Sarajevo said.

On Thursday, the Serbs reacted to NATO air raids on their ammo dumps by shelling the northern town of Tuzla and other U.N. "safe areas." In Tuzla, 71 people were killed and 151 wounded when a cluster bomb struck the city center.

But Friday's reaction posed a greater dilemma for a United Nations that has studiously avoided military involvement in the Balkan conflict.

The use of NATO air power is the first since November. The United Nations had been reluctant to call in NATO planes since then because the Serbs seized more than 400 peacekeepers after the November raids.

President Clinton appealed to Russian President Boris Yeltsin to intervene with the Serbs, Moscow's traditional allies, and "tell them to behave themselves."

A Bosnian Serb leader, Momcilo Krajisnik, said the detained U.N. soldiers would be tried for guiding NATO planes to targets. "The United Nations should be worried," he warned. "We can't be kind to those who behave as enemies toward us."

Television showed a Ghanaian soldier wearing a U.N. blue beret chained to the bridge. The soldier said that the NATO strikes killed "a lot of civilians" and were "a crime against humanity."

"I appeal to NATO to stop bombing Serb targets," he said. There was no way to determine whether his statement was voluntary.

An Associated Press reporter at the bridge was warned not to speak to the Ghanaian or to a Spanish peacekeeper held with him. The two were unshackled after being filmed and driven away to an undisclosed location.

Leah Melnick, a U.N. spokeswoman in Zagreb, said eight unarmed peacekeepers — a Spaniard, a Canadian, two Russians, two Czechs, a Pole and one Ghanaian — were taken hostage. She did not name them, but Canadian officials identified the Canadian as Capt. Patrick Rechner, 32. Madrid officials named the Spaniard as Capt. Jose Antonio Romero Huelin, 29.

A senior U.N. official who briefed the Security Council in New York said 13 peacekeepers from various countries had been seized. There was no way to immediately reconcile the different accounts.

NATO launched the raids in a blunt warning to the Serbs to stop shelling Sarajevo, the capital, and other civilian targets.

Defense Secretary William Perry, speaking to reporters in Rome, said NATO had taken the risks of Serbian retaliation into account before launching the attacks.

Besides threatening the peacekeepers, the Serbs also warned of possible retaliation against U.N. bases in government-held territory near front lines in Konjic, Visoko and Gorazde.

Serb forces on Friday shelled a Canadian U.N. base at Visoko, outside Sarajevo, and effectively trapped dozens of mostly French peacekeepers in five of nine weapons collection points around the city, U.N. spokesmen said.

Serbs also shelled Sarajevo, killing one person and wounding 23.

NATO officials said 16 planes took part in Friday's air raids, which occurred even before a noon deadline for the Serbs to hand back or remove heavy guns violating a weapons exclusion zone around Sarajevo.

Most of the dozen or so missiles were fired from high altitude, but an hour after the attacks began, NATO jets screamed low over the town. No anti-aircraft fire was seen.

The U.N. chief for former Yugoslavia, Yasushi Akashi, said Thursday's attacks took out two ammunition bunkers, and Friday's attack took out six more.

Despite the sign of resolve represented by the NATO bombing raids, Russia and several NATO members hinted they might be forced to withdraw their peacekeepers from Bosnia.

France, the largest contributor to the U.N. force, demanded an urgent meeting of the U.N. Security Council and of the NATO military alliance to discuss how to strengthen protection for the peacekeepers.

Female ex-Ranger details colleagues' harassment

AUSTIN (AP) — One of the first female Texas Rangers in history says she was constantly harassed by her colleagues for being "too lady-like ... too feminine ... and too sensitive."

"I was ridiculed in front of my peers for being a female and wanting to wear a dress occasionally," Cheryl Steadman says in a previously unpublished human rights complaint.

Ms. Steadman, 34, one of two women Rangers commissioned in 1993, says she was not permitted to investigate major criminal cases.

"I was denied the opportunity to work high-profile crimes when male co-workers with the same amount of experience as myself were being allowed and encouraged," she says.

In a specific homicide case, she said she was told: "We don't want you to cut your teeth on something that serious."

At the time, Ms. Steadman was a Ranger sergeant based in Houston.

She told The Associated Press previously her career "went to hell in a handbasket" after refusing to spend the night at a retreat she was required to attend with two dozen male Rangers who she said were drinking, gambling and using vulgar language.

Ms. Steadman said she was told to peel potatoes and wash dishes and perform other chores before she left the two-bedroom cabin that night and drove to the home of a female trooper.

She eventually requested reassignment to the Department of Public Safety, and is now working in the auto theft service in Houston.

After leaving the Rangers, she filed a complaint with the Texas Commission on Human Rights. By law, the commission does not confirm, deny or discuss such complaints.

But in a portion of the complaint obtained by the AP, Ms. Steadman, the wife of a DPS trooper, states:

"I was forced to wear gender restrictive clothing and abide by traditions (not policies) that were male dominant in origin with NO consideration for females."

When forced to wear a hat, tie, boots and jacket, she said her supervisors told her that was "to be a part of the tradition."

Ms. Steadman says she was given assignments and equipment no one else wanted and was "expected to be appreciative and cheerful, about my job as if it were given to me instead of being earned."

When she did make suggestions, she says, she was "counseled" by her superiors.

"I was constantly being reminded that I was too sensitive ... too lady-like ... and too feminine whenever I had an adverse reaction to the treatment I received."

She says when she objected to the "harassment and discrimination" she was often given excuses. They included:

- "We've always done things this way here in the Rangers."
- "The Rangers are NOT going to change for you."
- "You're not a team player."

Capt. W.D. Vickers, who commands the Houston headquarters, declined to comment on the Steadman case.

On Aug. 4, 1994, Ms. Steadman met with DPS Director James Wilson to discuss her treatment and to request a transfer. He granted the transfer and ordered an investigation.

She said she subsequently spent six hours setting forth her allegations with Internal Affairs Lt. David Dudley, a statement reduced to 10 pages of "belittling and minimized rhetoric."

Wilson, the director, and Maurice Cook, the senior Ranger captain, have declined to discuss allegations by Ms. Steadman and Lisa Sheppard, a Corpus Christi DPS criminal investigator who spurned a Ranger commission in 1994.

Ms. Sheppard also has filed a civil-rights complaint against the Rangers.

From Staff Reports

The report of an attempted kidnapping of a child turned out to be a hoax after Midland police found inconsistencies in the account of the story as related by Kerri Marcom, a 29-year-old baby sitter.

Ms. Marcom had reported to police at mid-week that two men had broken into her apartment, tied her up and kidnapped and held hostage a young boy, whom she was caring for at Windmill Park Apartments, 2600 N. Loop 250.

Police found inconsistencies in the kidnapping story and determined that "Ms. Marcom lied about the whole ordeal," said police Sgt. David Garcia Friday.

"What prompted Ms. Marcom to fabricate such an elaborate ruse is what the Police Department is looking into now," Garcia said.

The false report had alarmed and terrorized the child's mother, Garcia said.

"Ms. Marcom's action caused countless man-hours to be wasted on the initial investigation, not to mention what the victims had to endure emotionally," Garcia said.

"The threat of violence to a child is very serious, and the Midland Police Department is glad that closure to the initial case indicates that the child in question and his mother are not in danger. And now, we can focus on the real criminal — Kerri Marcom."

A warrant has been issued for Ms. Marcom's arrest on charges of filing a false report, Garcia said.

She had not been arrested as of late Friday.

Garcia said police now hope that "the lives (that) Ms. Marcom disrupted can get back to normal."

FBI looks for honors student suspected in bombing hoax

FORT WORTH (AP) — Faculty and students said Friday they were surprised and shaken by a bomb hoax that was intended to recall last month's carnage in Oklahoma City and allegedly pulled by a gifted high school senior.

The FBI continued its search for Paschal High School honor student Peter Jeune Koh, 18, the lead suspect in the bombing hoax. The agency said Koh, who was to have graduated last Sunday, may be carrying a handgun and a rifle, and is considered armed and dangerous.

"Acts such as this are inexcusable," principal Nita Whiteside said. "99.9 percent of our students are appalled by this. I'm sorry that the other faculty and staff have to contend with this."

The hoax was contrived to resemble the April 19 bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City, when a fertilizer and fuel bomb killed at least 167 people and destroyed the building.

On May 16, a Ryder rental truck was left in front of the Fort Worth Independent School District administration building. The building then received a phone call from someone who said that there was a bomb in the building, which was evacuated.

Authorities found the truck loaded with sacks of concrete doused in diesel fuel. Officials traced the truck to a Ryder outlet in Fort Worth, where the vehicle allegedly was rented for $150 cash by a man who used an Oklahoma driver's license and a fake Fort Worth address.

If caught and convicted, Koh could face up to five years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

"My heart goes out to his family and friends," Ms. Whiteside said.

This is not the first time Paschal High School has made national news. Exactly 10 years ago, a loose-knit group called the Legion of Doom — many of them honor students, athletes and sons of prominent community members — put Paschal in the spotlight.

Police said members of the group resorted to violence in a misguided attempt to rid Paschal of crime and drugs.

A handful of teen-agers, at the time both current and former students, were indicted on graduation day 1985 after a series of incidents that included a car bombing, shots fired at a house, the killing of a cat and notes passed signed with Swastikas.

House approves bill to overhaul welfare system

■ Measure now goes to Gov. George W. Bush, who made welfare reform top legislative priority.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — A bill overhauling the state's welfare system and cracking down on deadbeat parents with the threat of suspending their state licenses was given final approval by the Legislature on Friday.

The measure now goes to Gov. George W. Bush, who made welfare reform a top legislative priority. Bush said he would sign the bill although he had voiced reservations earlier this week.

"I think it will end the cycle of dependency," said Rep. Harvey Hilderbran, R-Kerrville, who sponsored the measure in the House.

"It is not punitive," said Senate sponsor Judith Zaffirini, D-Laredo. "It is really a productive bill in that it focuses on education, on training."

The bill also would establish alimony in Texas. A spouse could sue for divorce payments if the couple were married for at least 10 years and the spouse could not support himself or herself.

The governor didn't throw his weight behind the measure until a provision was added that would require people who get off welfare to wait five years before reapplying for benefits.

An earlier version of the bill had put the limit at three years.

The measure, approved by the House 128-19 and by the Senate 30-1, would limit the time people could receive welfare payments and require welfare recipients to participate in job training programs. Recipients would have to sign responsibility agreements and promise to do such things as remain drug-free.

Opponents of the measure said it hurts more than it helps.

"I just don't think we ought to impose the hardship of having them off public assistance for five years," said Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, the only senator to vote against the bill.

"These provisions appear to me as nothing more than political hot air to serve up to the constituents' back home," said Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin. "There are some great ideas in this and there's some atrocious ideas in this."

A new Texas Department of Workforce Development would be created to administer job-training and employment-related programs.

Rep. Rene O. Oliveira, D-Brownsville, said the job-training was desperately needed.

"The fastest-growing job category in Texas is that of a custodian. That is not the direction we want to be heading," Oliveira said.

Bush and House Republicans unsuccessfully fought to cap benefits to parents who continue to have children while on welfare. Families with two or more children would not have received additional benefits if they had more kids under the Bush-backed cap.

Mrs. Zaffirini helped convince Senate and House negotiators to reject the cap by saying it was "ridiculous" to think that women had more children simply to receive an extra $30 a month in benefits.

Hilderbran said before the bill went to a House-Senate conference committee it was "the most comprehensive bill in the country. Then we went to conference committee and won some battles and lost some battles."

Rep. Arlene Wohlgemuth, R-Burleson, said by removing the family cap, legislators had failed in trying to strengthen those on welfare.

The bill includes a campaign promise from Bush to suspend the licenses of parents who owe back child support.

As of Sept. 1, deadbeat parents could lose professional, driver's or hunting and fishing licenses if the money they owed was at least 90 days overdue.

The attorney general's office wouldn't take action unless the person owing child support had been provided the chance to make payments under a court ordered repayment schedule and then failed to comply with the terms.

'Peace Park' to be symbol of reconciliation for many

Associated Press

SONG MAI, Vietnam — War veterans from the United States and Vietnam began building a park Friday that they hope will be a symbol of peace and reconciliation between their once-hostile nations.

Three Americans and their Vietnamese counterparts took turns swinging with a pick-ax at hard, red earth to plant banyan and plum trees on a hill near Song Mai, a rice-farming village 35 miles northeast of Hanoi.

Michael Boehm of Mount Horeb, Wis., said planting the saplings will be the first step in the creation of a Vietnamese-American Peace Park that will include an earthen mound shaped like a dove and a concrete tower topped with a pair of hands holding a globe. The 30-acre park will also contain orchards and a fish pond.

"With this park we've got something that's extremely spiritual," said Boehm, a former U.S. Army staff sergeant who organized the project. "The Vietnamese picked up on it right away."

'It's not a structure to the dead. It's not a monument to the heroes and symbols of war. It's a monument to peace, love, friendship and unity.'
— John Hosier, former U.S. Army Special Forces sergeant

Boehm and Vietnamese veterans hope it will become a place of pilgrimage for people who once fought on opposite sides in the Vietnam War. Its construction represents one more sign of progress in the steady improvement of relations.

"It will help build better understanding," agreed Nguyen Van Luong, president of the Song Mai Veterans Association.

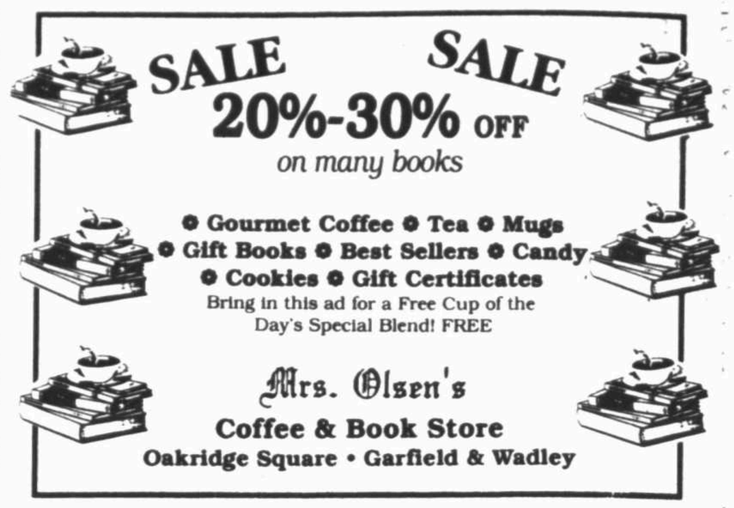
Boehm conceived of the Peace Park idea after meeting Nguyen Ngoc Hung, a former infantryman in the North Vietnamese Army, who toured the United States in 1993. The two men modeled it after a similar park built in Wisconsin in 1989 by American veterans of the Vietnam War.

"It's not a structure to the dead," said John Hosier, a Honolulu resident and former U.S. Army Special Forces sergeant who took his turn with a pickax. "It's not a monument to the heroes and symbols of war. It's a monument to peace, love, friendship and unity."

The first phase of the park will cost about $50,000 and is scheduled for completion in November. Boehm has raised $12,000 so far in private American donations.

The park will include fish farms and lychee orchards that they said should help local villagers earn a better living. Hung said he hoped Americans would contribute technologies to teach local farmers new skills.

Luong and his comrades said they hope the park also will draw free-spending tourists to Song Mai, a poor rural community of 11,000.



Temple Mount is too holy for Jews to pray, rabbi says

JERUSALEM (AP) — A chief rabbi issued an unusual appeal Friday for Israelis to avoid prayers on the Temple Mount, ruling that the site was too holy for Jews to enter.

The ruling by Sephardi Chief Rabbi Eliahu Bakshi-Doron came before the Jerusalem Day holiday Sunday, when Israeli radicals customarily attempt to enter the compound for prayers.

The Temple Mount is one of Jerusalem's most volatile sites because two of Islam's holiest shrines are also built there, while Jews revere it as the site of two ancient temples.

Bakshi-Doron told army radio that there were growing calls to pray on the mount from Jews worried that the site could be lost to Palestinian control in peace negotiations.

But, he said, "It is a most holy site, and that's why we mustn't enter. We don't avoid entry just because we don't control the area, but because it is so holy. Therefore this desire to feel ownership by use is basically mistaken."

Israel rabbis have banned prayers on the Temple Mount in the past, but few have spoken out recently amid repeated attempts by right-wing Israelis to pray there.

The reason for the traditional ban was a fear that Jewish visitors could unknowingly set foot on forbidden areas where holy scriptures were once kept or where only high priests were allowed to walk.

Some clergymen have eased the ban in recent years, permitting right-wingers to dramatize Jewish claims to the site, while also raising tensions between Jews and Muslims there.

Some Jewish activists are likely to try to pray there during Sunday's holiday, which marks 28 years since Israel captured Arab east Jerusalem in the 1967 Mideast War.

Candidates depend on voters' loyalty in Mexican elections

PUERTO PROGRESO, Mexico (AP) — Filiberta Ordaz de Cab lives atop a garbage dump in the middle of a coastal marsh and thanks the government for the privilege.

As she and other residents of Yucatan state vote Sunday for a governor and other state officials, Ordaz says she will remember the gubernatorial candidate of Mexico's ruling party, Victor Cervera Pacheco, who has promised to improve her life.

The central state of Guanajuato also has gubernatorial elections Sunday.

"He already came here and walked all around," Ordaz said proudly, a huge smile on her brown, Maya Indian face. "We are deeply connected to the government here."

"They've helped us a lot. They brought all this for a sanitary landfill and will still sustain us," Ordaz, 40, said as she stepped over white rocks and squishy sand brought in to cover plastic bottles, milk cartons, worn-out shoes and tattered bags.

More garbage floated in stagnant water on this fragrant fragment of a vast coastal wetlands at the northwestern tip of the Yucatan Peninsula.

Impoverished people like Filiberta Ordaz are filling it in, tolerating the flies and the stink and the heat because they have no place else to live.

The government, dominated by the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, offered credits to help them construct their shacks of corrugated cardboard. They also have electricity and potable water, but no sewage system.

An old leftist with roots in the student movement of the 1960s and peasant movements later on, Cervera was interim governor in the 1980s.

"It wasn't easy. We were in the middle of a severe crisis back then," Cervera said recently.

Serbs' attack on peacekeepers reinforces U.N.'s helplessness

By Julijana Mojsilovic
Associated Press

LUKAVICA BARRACKS, Bosnia-Herzegovina — A French unit's commander waved a small white flag of surrender.

A Ghanaian asked the world to stop shooting. He was chained to a bridge.

Other peacekeepers were mute, but equally helpless, chained to steel stanchions and doors. Canadians, Czechs, Russians, Poles — a host of nations taken hostage in the latest clash between Bosnia's rebel Serbs and the world.

The images, some of them flashed worldwide by television, illustrated the seeming impotence of lightly armed U.N. forces trying to quell the fighting in Bosnia but now confronted by Serbian fighters with little left to lose.

An Associated Press reporter watched Serbs take over 21 French soldiers who had been guarding Serb guns turned over to the U.N. at this barracks in a Serb-held suburb of Sarajevo.

A Serb officer, Lt. Col. Milenko Indjic, first tried to coax the French into surrender. He entered the U.N. quarters, unarmed, to negotiate.

The French commander said he had orders not to surrender.

Indjic then ordered military police to take positions and prepare to fire. For three minutes, automatic rifle fire targeted the building where the 21 Frenchmen were.

"Hold fire and watch for a white flag," ordered Vuko Cvoro, the commanding Serb officer.

No flag appeared. Two rocket-propelled grenades hit a truck and an APC. Minutes later, the French surrendered without firing a shot.

"Your politicians put you in this situation," Indjic told the French. "This situation has been forced upon both you and us and we have to do this to try to protect the Serb people from your bombs."

The Serbs seemed to be at pains to demonstrate to this reporter and Associated Press Television — the only foreign media present — that they were treating the peacekeepers correctly, even as they took them hostage, making a mockery of the U.N. mission.

"You are now POWs and you will be treated according to all Geneva conventions," Lt. Col. Milenko Indjic of the Bosnian Serb army told them.

Then, the Frenchmen were herded into one room, and their communications equipment and weapons — M-16 automatic rifles and grenade launchers — were confiscated.

The detention was just one of the ways the Serbs upped the ante in their confrontation with the world over the future of Bosnia.

On Thursday and Friday, NATO jets bombed Serb ammunition depots near Pale, the headquarters of the insurgency that started Bosnia's bloodshed in April 1992.

On Thursday, the Serbs responded with attacks on U.N.-protected "safe areas" that killed 76 people.

Some peacekeepers were shackled to potential targets and filmed by Bosnian Serb television.

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — With only six new cases of Ebola infection reported in Zaire over the last week, the World Health Organization said Friday that the epidemic of the deadly viral disease in the African country was "coming under control."

"The acute phase of the epidemic is over and transmission now has been greatly reduced, if not completely halted," WHO said in a news release issued from the headquarters of the U.N. agency in Geneva.

The international team of scientists investigating the epidemic has now identified a total of 160 confirmed or suspected cases, including 121 deaths, that have occurred in Zaire since late December. Of the 160 cases, 138 were in Kikwit, a city of about 600,000 about 300 miles from Kinshasa, the capital. The remaining cases occurred in five other areas near Kikwit in Bandundu province. The victims ranged in age from 3 months to 71 years. Only five were under 16 years old.

Health officials' worst fears were that the virus would spread from Kikwit to Kinshasa, a city of 6 million, and possibly to other countries. But no such cases have been reported, WHO says.

The number of cases is smaller than health officials had predicted. Last week, WHO officials warned that the total would rise substantially. They said they suspected that people were incubating the virus and would become ill in a new wave of the epidemic. Some health officials involved in the investigation estimated that the total might reach several hundred cases.

The incubation period ranges from two to 21 days.

Health officials' worst fears were that the virus would spread from Kikwit to Kinshasa, a city of 6 million, and possibly to other countries. But no such cases have been reported, WHO said.

The international team has included more than 60 scientists, and new members are arriving to replace some who have left, said Valery Abramov, a WHO spokesman. Now that the initial phase of the investigation — finding cases and cleaning the hospitals — has been accomplished, the scientists are aiming to improve the quality of health care in the epidemic area.

The scientists also are beginning studies to learn where the virus resides between epidemics. Ebola is a member of the hemorrhagic fever virus group that produce flulike symptoms and fever and that kill by causing uncontrollable bleeding throughout the body. Most such viruses are carried by rodents and other animals. The reservoir for Ebola virus is not known, despite attempts to find it during the two previously known outbreaks, in 1976 and 1979 in Zaire and Sudan.

At this point, the initial case appears to be a forest worker who was infected in late December. Members of the international team have expressed hope that clues from his case may lead them to the reservoir. The studies will take months as the scientists test scores of species to determine which are infected.

The investigation found that seven of 12 members of one household died in a chain of transmission of Ebola virus last winter. One area of interest to researchers is to determine why five members of the household apparently escaped infection or recovered. Among the unanswered questions are: Did the virus change as it passed from one person to another in the household? Was there something different about their immune defenses?

Abramov said one theory the investigators will explore is whether there is a continual low level of transmission of Ebola virus that burns out. If so, the scientists want to know why.

Officials puzzle over discovery of gun found in executed inmate's typewriter

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — An hour after killer and escape artist Willie L. Turner was executed, a loaded gun and the handwritten message "Smile" were found by his lawyer inside the typewriter Turner had in his cell for years.

The lawyer, Walter Walvick, said the items might explain what Turner meant when he told prison officers before he died Thursday: "I'm letting you do this to me."

Corrections officials are investigating. Gov. George Allen suggested the lawyer might have planted the .32-caliber pistol.

"We first have to find out if the allegation was true. At this point, I don't think you should accept as fact that Turner had a gun in his typewriter," Allen said. "If it is true, then we certainly have a lot of questions as to how did it get in there and why it wasn't detected."

Turner, who had been the longest-serving inmate on Virginia's death row at 15 years, had used the typewriter to write his memoirs. He recounted how he had come within hours of execution three times before.

The inmate got the typewriter 10 years ago, Walvick said. During Turner's final days in the death house a short distance from the execution chamber, the typewriter had sat on the floor just outside the cell door, within his reach, so that he could type through the bars.

Death-house inmates are allowed typewriters to work on their appeals because they do not not have access to the prison library, where typewriters are available to the other inmates.

William Cimino, spokesman for the Public Safety Department, would not comment on whether the Turner's typewriter was searched before being placed outside the cell. "I'm sure that's one of the things being looked at in the investigation," he said.

Investigators seized the typewriter and pistol.

Walvick said Turner had told him to look inside the portable typewriter after his death by injection.

Walvick said he found the pistol, loaded with six rounds, in a compartment behind the ribbon. He said he also found 12 bullets in a plastic bag, and the piece of paper with "Smile" in Turner's handwriting taped to the bottom.

Officer B. Richarson of the Emporia, Va., police department removes a gun from a typewriter Friday that belonged to Willie Lloyd Turner while he was in the Virginia prison.

Walvick opened the typewriter in his hotel room with two reporters watching. The lawyer angrily denied he planted the gun.

In his final hours, Turner repeatedly told prison officers, "I want you to know I'm letting you do this to me," Walvick said. With the discovery of the gun, the attorney said: "I realize now what he meant."

"If he was this really awful person that everybody said, he could have blown somebody away," Walvick said. "All day long he kept telling me, 'I could have gotten out of here if I wanted to. I just wanted you and everybody else who stuck by me to be proud of me.'"

Turner, 49, was executed for the 1978 murder of jewelry store owner W. Jack Smith Jr. during a robbery attempt.

He was involved in three escapes, but none involved his use of a gun. In 1984, he helped orchestrate the biggest death-row breakout in U.S. history at the Mecklenburg Correctional Center, but he wasn't among the six inmates who escaped.

Last year, Turner was transferred from the Powhatan Correctional Center after officials found a hacksaw and other prison-made weapons in his cell.

Turner had come within hours of going to his death in the electric chair three times before winning last-minute reprieves.

Arkansas governor challenges subpoenas from grand jury

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Gov. Jim Guy Tucker said Friday he received and is challenging a subpoena to testify before the grand jury investigating Whitewater.

He said the subpoena went to his lawyer Wednesday night for a June 1 appearance by the governor. Whitewater prosecutor Kenneth Starr already subpoenaed Tucker's financial records from his 1990 campaign for lieutenant governor.

Tucker said he was asking a federal court to throw out both subpoenas on the grounds that Whitewater prosecutors only have jurisdiction to investigate the executive branch of the federal government.

"They would be asking me to come in and be questioned about matters which have absolutely nothing to do with Bill Clinton, Hillary Clinton or any of the matters" involved in the Whitewater affair, Tucker said.

The governor also expressed frustration that being asked about thousands of pages of documents over many years put him at risk of perjury for any unclear recollection.

"I can't brief myself on 15 years or more of possible questions and subject matter and go in and do anything except be at their mercy," Tucker said.

In addition to the 1990 political campaigns of Tucker and Clinton, Whitewater prosecutors have been investigating Tucker's cable television holdings in the 1980s and his extensive borrowing from Madison Guaranty, the S&L once owned by the Clintons' partners in the Whitewater real estate venture.

Turkeys flock to streets of Martha's Vineyard

By Richard Lorant
Associated Press

TISBURY, Mass. — Martha's Vineyard Journal, Day One: Saw Carly Simon walking along the street. At least I think it was Carly Simon. Was that Walter Cronkite behind those big sunglasses at the drugstore?

Day Two: Car attacked by turkeys on the Edgartown-Vineyard Haven road. Chipped paint, slowed traffic.

Day Three: Buy more sunscreen.

Hundreds of turkeys are roaming this summer resort island, descendants of escaped domestic gobblers. They soil lawns, peck away shingles and stop traffic.

Some consider them a delightful part of the local fauna, others a growing health hazard and a menace to elderly islanders.

Their only predators are brave dogs and bad drivers, so soon there will be more of them.

"Figuratively speaking, we're going to be armpit-deep in turkeys," said Sgt. Bill Searle of the Massachusetts Environmental Police.

Searle gets 20 calls a week from people complaining about the birds, up from an occasional call just five years ago.

Aside from the damage to gardens and roofs, the not-so-bright birds chip paint from cars when they peck at their own reflection. One flock occasionally stops traffic on the Edgartown-Vineyard Haven road.

"They don't need the radar guns if they have the turkeys," said Diane DeMoe, Tisbury's animal control officer.

Nobody has been injured, but Searle has heard from several elderly residents who say aggressive turkeys knocked them down. One woman has been knocked over three times, he said.

That seemed hard to imagine on Thursday, when the only turkeys in sight were a nesting mother hen and her brood of chicks. They ran off when a photographer approached.

But the males, which weigh up to 25 or 30 pounds, can be more intimidating, especially during mating season, when they puff out their feathers and squawk loudly at those who approach too closely.

Foster nomination clears committee with 9-7 vote, goes next to full Senate

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Benefiting from the swing vote of a freshman Republican, President Clinton's beleaguered choice for surgeon general, Dr. Henry W. Foster Jr., cleared his first political hurdle Friday when the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee sent his nomination to the full Senate.

The 9-7 vote, with the freshman, Sen. Bill Frist of Tennessee, joining another Republican and all seven Democrats in voting for the nomination, was a victory for the administration.

The White House had stuck by Foster, an obstetrician-gynecologist from Tennessee, despite the furor that erupted after he disclosed that he had performed several dozen abortions during his career. The disclosure had embroiled the nomination in Presidential politics and the debate over abortion rights.

Democrats and Republicans said Friday that Foster probably had the support of a majority of Senators to be confirmed, but it was not clear whether he had the 60 votes needed to overcome a filibuster, or indeed whether his nomination would be brought to a vote in the full Senate.

Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas, a Republican who is seeking his party's nomination for President, has promised a filibuster and has the backing of other conservative opponents of Foster.

The front-runner for the Republican nomination, Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, has said he may use his position as majority leader to block a vote.

Dole issued a brief statement after the committee vote saying he remained opposed to the nomination and reiterating that he wanted to meet with Foster in June before deciding what action to take.

At the White House, President Clinton, with the nominee at his side, thanked the committee for its endorsement. "I look forward to going on to the next stage and working right through until we get Dr. Foster confirmed," he said.

John D. Podesta, the presidential aide who has guided Foster through the nomination process, noted, however, "We still have to work to get the 60 votes."

The Democrats on the committee and Sen. James M. Jeffords, a Republican from Vermont who often breaks ranks with his party, had announced in advance that they would support the nomination. Six Republicans on the committee had come out against Foster, leaving only Frist and the panel's chairwoman, Nancy Landon Kassebaum of Kansas, uncommitted.

Sen. Kassebaum opened the meeting by announcing she would oppose Foster, but Frist gave him the vote he needed.

Frist, who was a heart surgeon in Nashville, where Foster also practiced, said he was basing his vote on Foster's record.

"I know him as a fellow Nashvillian, who has done what few physicians do — step out of the clinic into their community to address the really tough problems of society," Frist said.

Following the vote, Gramm renewed his threat of a filibuster but said he would first try to block the nomination.

"As soon as practical after the beginning of any debate, I will move to postpone consideration of the Foster nomination until Congress makes a final decision on whether to fund the Office of the Surgeon General," he said. He was referring to the Republican budget proposal, which would strip the Office of the surgeon general of all its funding.

But even some senior Republicans threw cold water on Gramm's threat.

"I think it is a delaying tactic and not a particularly constructive one," said Mrs. Kassebaum.

Mrs. Kassebaum said she did not know when, or if, Foster's nomination would come up before the full Senate. But she said she hoped it was soon and she listed herself among at least six Republicans who would vote to crush any filibuster.

The surgeon general acts as the nation's chief medical officer, an office whose public influence far outweighs its puny annual budget of about $1 million and 18-member staff.

In recent years, the job has turned into a bully pulpit for an array of social issues and its occupants have become political lightning rods. The post has been vacant since December, when President Clinton dismissed Dr. Joycelyn Elders after comments she made regarding masturbation.

Clinton rejects Japan's offer of May auto talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration rejected Japan's request for urgent talks on their contentious auto trade dispute Friday, saying it would be better to wait until about a week before America's punitive tariffs take effect.

U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor suggested in a letter to the Japanese that both sides meet beginning June 20 in Washington. The tariffs of 100 percent on $5.9 billion worth of Japanese luxury autos are scheduled to take effect June 28.

The U.S. announcement was a rebuff to a Japanese effort to get consultations started quickly to clear the way for an early decision from the Geneva-based World Trade Organization.

Now, Japan's case will be handled under normal WTO rules, which means that a final resolution could take a year or more, allowing the U.S. sanctions against 13 models of Japanese luxury cars to remain in effect.

The entire dispute over the timing of talks was just the latest high-tension maneuvering between the two nations over the auto issue. Before Kantor's announcement, Secretary of State Warren Christopher met with Japan's ambassador to the United States, Takazu Murayama.

The entire dispute over the timing of talks was just the latest high-tension maneuvering between the two nations over the auto issue.

A senior Japanese diplomat, briefing reporters on condition that his name not be used, said that Japan believed the June 20 starting date was too late, given the fact that Japanese auto companies could already be suffering harm because the United States has made the sanctions retroactive to May 20.

This official said Japan will renew its request next week for earlier meetings to take place in Geneva.

But in his letter to Japanese Trade Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto, Kantor said he was suggesting resumption of the talks on June 20-21 in order to keep the automotive dispute from overshadowing the annual seven-nation economic summit, which will take place on June 15-17 in Halifax, Nova Scotia.

Trade experts said it was obvious that the United States was trying to make sure that Japan's case before the WTO challenging the U.S. sanctions took as long as possible and did not take precedence over a U.S. case, yet to be filed with the WTO, challenging Japan's barriers to automotive trade.

"As a tactical matter, the United States had to push the Japanese case off the urgent track or it could have been settled in a few months," said Greg Mastel, an Economic Strategy Institute trade specialist.

Now the U.S. sanctions, designed to eliminate the Japanese luxury cars from the U.S. market, will be in effect for at least a year before Japan will get a final ruling on their legality under world trade rules.

The United States is demanding that Japanese auto companies agree to "voluntary" purchase plans to boost sales of American-made auto parts. It also wants increases in the number of Japanese dealerships stocking American cars and relaxation of regulations it blames for keeping American-made parts from being sold by Japanese repair shops.

Texan strives to restore black cowboy to his place in history

By Cindy Horswell
Associated Press

RAYWOOD — The Stetson hat shading his eyes doesn't block the gleam from his 14-karat grin.

Without a moment's concern about staining those gold-capped teeth, A.J. Walker Sr. dips into the Skoal stored in his shirt pocket and tucks a pinch into his cheek. He wears scuffed boots, jeans and a red bandana knotted at his neck.

But being African-American, Walker knows he doesn't fit the romanticized role of a cowboy from the John Wayne genre. That's why at age 65 he is working to restore the black cowboy to his rightful place in history.

His business card even sports the logo, "Legacy of the Black Cowboy," as a reminder.

"Lots of people don't know there ever was a black cowboy," said Walker at his 40-acre ranch in this Liberty County town about 50 miles east of Houston.

He stages monthly rodeos at the ranch in an arena that he built himself.

Last May, he joined eight other black cowboys in presenting oral histories, singing songs and performing rope and whip tricks for the National Museum of American History, a branch of the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C.

The cowboys signed autographs for two hours afterward.

"People enjoy us so much," Walker said. "It does surprise us."

He has since been invited to tell his story to a radio station in Memphis, Tenn., at the National Black Arts Festival in Atlanta and at Colorado College in Colorado Springs, Colo.

"There is great interest in expanding knowledge about the West, particularly the black cowboy," said Alan Govenar, founder of Documentary Arts in Dallas, who organized the trips. "The appeal is to rewrite the history of the West to be more inclusive."

Govenar, who has a doctorate in arts and humanities, first met Walker in 1986 after noticing a sign advertising his rodeo. That year, Govenar had been scouring the countryside for talent for a folk festival to celebrate Texas' sesquicentennial.

He described Walker's Circle 6 arena, which can seat 1,000 spectators, as "ranch rodeo at its best." Spectators are treated not only to a rodeo at such close range that one can see the sweat on a cowboy's brow, but also catfish and barbecue cooked on the spot and zydeco music played at the ranch's dance hall.

Years later, when officials at the Smithsonian asked Govenar to research the black cowboy, he immediately remembered Walker and asked him to be in the program. Governar also is including him in a documentary film about Texas black cowboys being funded by the Texas Commission on the Arts.

"People need to understand that how the West was settled was not purely a white phenomenon," said Govenar. "Cowboys were a culturally mixed, diverse group."

While an estimated 20 percent of the cowboys in the West were black, only two of the 200 cowboys inducted into the National Cowboy Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center in Oklahoma City are black. One of those is Bill Pickett, who is credited with inventing bulldogging, or wrestling a steer to the ground. He mimicked English bulldogs by biting the steer's nose to make him fight harder.

But when the U.S. Postal Service issued a commemorative stamp in Pickett's honor, it used a picture of the wrong man. Govenar said that is typical of the way the black cowboy has been overlooked in Texas.

Yet the only place in the West where the black cowboy was prevalent before the Civil War was the Texas Gulf Coast, said Don Reeves, curator of the National Cowboy Hall of Fame.

Some started their careers as slaves, others as free men. But all had a common love of cattle, horses and the freedom of the open range.

Walker's parents moved to Texas from Louisiana about 1920, 10 years before he was born. His father was a sharecropper who worked long hours to care for his nine children, planting any crop he could and raising cattle and chickens.

Life was tough, with no electricity or running water, and Walker's clothes were made from flour sacks.

"I'd milk four or five cows, feed the chickens and then walk two miles to school," he recalled. "Saw wood at night to start the wood stove and shell corn. All we'd eat was milk and corn bread. There was mighty little beef. Maybe a cow's head, feet or liver once in a while."

'There is great interest in expanding knowledge about the West, particularly the black cowboy.'
— Alan Govenar, founder, Documentary Arts

As the oldest boy, Walker quit school in the ninth grade to help at home. His father had managed by then to save enough to buy the 40-acre homestead in Raywood.

Walker spent long days working in the fields, breaking horses and herding cattle. From age 16, his entertainment came from testing his mettle at the rodeos by riding bulls and bucking broncos.

In 1947, a few years before his father died, he spent a year building the 200-foot arena that he used for practicing his skills and promoting his local show. He named the arena after his father's brand, Circle 6.

Walker performed in rodeos all over Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and even Massachusetts and New York.

One highlight of his career came when he won the $800 first prize in bull riding at Madison Square Garden when he was 22 years old.

"While we could compete against the white cowboys, we had to ride after they were done at the end of the show," he said.

Plus, the black cowboy had to mount the bull from the back to avoid being seen by the fans and appearing too "uppity," he said.

Walker also rode in the all-black circuit and one year was named "best all-around" at a rodeo near Beaumont.

Today, Walker is president of the Anahuac Saltgrass Cowboy Association. The group has about 800 members, including 75 white cowboys, and promotes area rodeos including Walker's.

He fears the black cowboy is becoming as scarce as the buffalo that once roamed free.

But even if he quits holding his monthly rodeos, he has left an oral history for his 12 children from two previous marriages, and for his 30 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

"Youngsters don't have the hustle and heart to do it any more," he said. "They don't understand where they came from."

Reaction to census figures ranges from boredom to outrage

By Jim Barlow
Associated Press

HOUSTON — The U.S. Census produces boredom before it's taken and outrage afterward.

The nitty-gritty of counting the U.S. population every 10 years is a prime MEGO subject — as in Mine Eyes Glaze Over.

But the results in the last couple of decades has drawn the wrath of politicians and boosters of states and cities throughout the nation — convinced that their area was undercounted.

The groups most affected by the undercounting are usually the ones with the poorest record of returning the census forms, which are delivered by mail.

The non-responders are primarily poor, and in this country a lot of them tend to be racial and ethnic minorities.

Which brings racial politics into the mix.

Often overlooked is the huge stake business has in an accurate and complete census. The census provides the bedrock statistics for market research. If you don't know who the customers are, where they live and what they own, it's difficult and expensive to craft campaigns to sell them goods and services.

In recent decades, census costs have soared. Blame that primarily on the effort to count the non-responders, says the Panel on Census Requirements in the Year 2000 and Beyond.

The committee, put together by the Committee on National Statistics of the National Academy of Science, was charged by Congress to come up with a better and less costly census process. Its recently released report said the undercount of the population increased from 1.2 percent in 1980 to 1.8 percent in 1990.

The difference in the undercount between the black and non-black population rose to 4.4 percentage points.

That's despite a huge rise in the census cost, with most of that extra money going primarily to cure the undercount. The committee report said, based on historical patterns and taking into account inflation, the 1990 census should have cost $1.3 billion. Instead, it was $2.6 billion.

The committee made a number of technical suggestions to increase census reliability. They include a more user-friendly census form and better coordination between various levels of government — especially the U.S. Postal Service — to build better population records to get the census forms to everyone.

It rejected one regular suggestion, to have postal carriers double as census takers since they have the best handle on who lives where. The committee pointed out the biggest cost of the census is tracking down those who don't respond. It makes little economic sense to use postal workers for that task, since they make three times the wage of census workers.

Instead, the committee said we should use modern statistical methods to accurately estimate those who don't respond.

Statisticians know that if you can get an accurate sample of the population you can accurately deduce information.

After making a good faith effort to count everyone, the Census Bureau should sample non-respondents and derive its final figures from those samplings.

The final results will wind up being much cheaper to collect — at least as much as $400 million. And they will be more accurate than the present method.

The problem is perception. Based upon my own conversations, there must be millions of people who are unfamiliar with statistical techniques and equate such results with witchcraft.

It's going to take a selling job to make statistical sampling acceptable to the general public.

The committee did support one measure of prime interest to business — retention of the long census form.

One of six households gets the long form. Answers to those questions provide much of the underpinning of modern market research.

The committee said it found that dropping the long form would increase response rate by only 1 percent. What both business and government would lose is simply not worth what they gain from collecting more complete statistics.

Prosecution must do more to prove case against Simpson, ex-juror says

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The eighth juror dismissed from the O.J. Simpson trial said Friday a bloody glove and socks were "pretty compelling" evidence against Simpson, but she isn't convinced he murdered his ex-wife and her friend.

"I definitely need something to tie Mr. Simpson in with the blood drops," ex-juror Francine Florio Bunten said in her first interview since being ousted. "I don't know if having your own blood drops in your home is against the law. ... They would have to have more."

Bunten, a 38-year-old white telephone company worker, was replaced by a 71-year-old black woman who said she had never heard of Simpson before she was called for the case.

"Who's O.J. Simpson?" she told neighbors when they asked her about the murders.

The remaining sequestered jurors presumably were unaware of Bunten's comments or that the judge had ruled that Simpson can't put his claim of innocence before them without risking hostile cross-examination.

Judge Lance Ito said the legal door had not been opened to allow Simpson's police statement to be admitted at this time.

Despite a dwindling supply of alternates, Bunten said she believes the remaining jurors are "really dedicated and they will see this thing through if they're allowed to."

When it's over, she said, "I think the city, state and country will be proud."

Bunten said she was the victim of false reports that she was writing a book. She said Ito called her into his chambers Thursday afternoon after questioning other jurors, and read from a letter accusing her of writing a book.

"This is so far from the truth," she said. "I mean, I don't know who would be writing these letters to the judge."

She said she was "enthralled" with testimony about the science of DNA analysis, which she saw as an unraveling puzzle, and she said he believes her fellow jurors understood the complex evidence.

Bunten said she was "stunned" by defense allegations of racism against Detective Mark Fuhrman and adamantly denied another juror's claims that Bunten herself fomented racism on the jury.

"I'm not a racist," she said in the live interview on KABC radio.

Bunten said she found out after her dismissal that another ex-juror, Jeannette Harris, had accused her of kicking Harris and another black juror.

Bunten denied the kicking incident, although she said she did inadvertently step on one juror's toes as she squeezed past him into her juror seat.

"The juror then leaned over and he told me, You did that on purpose, and if you do that again I'll trip you," Bunten recounted.

Asked what evidence she found most compelling thus far, she said it was the blood of Simpson's ex-wife on his sock and his blood on a glove also stained with the victims' blood. The glove was found on Simpson's estate.

"By the end of the trial, all the evidence should be in place, and hopefully, the jury will be able to figure out fact from fiction, and if there's enough evidence there to believe Mr. Simpson was guilty," she said.

Defense attorneys appeared pleased with the replacement of Bunten, who was cited by Harris as a cause of racial dissension on the panel. Harris, who is black, also said Bunten received preferential treatment from deputies guarding the jury.

When jurors staged a one-day protest and three deputies were ousted from the guard detail, Bunten was among panel members who wore black to court that day. However, Bunten denied reports that she led the protest.

Bunten was replaced with a woman who said during jury selection that she'd never heard of Simpson, had no opinion about his guilt or innocence and read the newspapers only to keep up with her favorite hobby — horse racing.

"I haven't come to no conclusion one way or the other," she said during jury selection. "I don't know nothing about no O.J. Simpson."

Newly-released interview details Kennedy's widow's hopes, fears after assassination

BOSTON (AP) — A week after her husband's assassination, Jacqueline Kennedy remembered how the president collapsed into her lap when the shots rang out. And she remembered how he looked.

"His last expression was so neat," Mrs. Kennedy told journalist Theodore H. White in comments released for the first time Friday. "He had his hand out, I could see a piece of his skull coming off ... and I can see this perfectly clean piece detaching itself from his head.

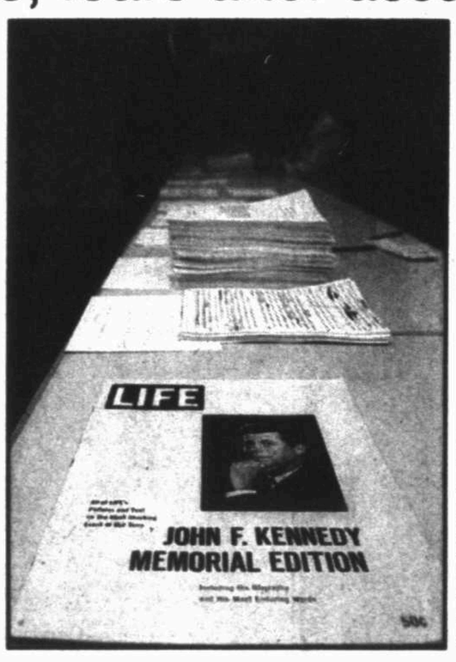
"Then he slumped in my lap," she said. "His blood and brains were in my lap.

"I kept saying: 'Jack, Jack, Jack' and someone was yelling: 'He's dead, he's dead.' All the ride to the hospital I kept bending over him saying: 'Jack, Jack, can you hear me, I love you Jack.' I kept holding the top of his head down, trying to keep the brains in," she said on Nov. 29, 1963.

Excerpts from the interview have appeared in Life magazine and White's 1978 memoir, "In Search of History," and the sight of the dazed widow in her blood-stained pink suit has become a 20th century icon. Now, the John F. Kennedy Library has released the full record of that interview, 34 pages that include White's handwritten notes and revisions in Mrs. Kennedy's handwriting.

White donated the papers to the library in 1969, saying they could not be released until one year after the former first lady's death. Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis died of cancer May 19, 1994, at age 64. White died in 1986.

The transcript also shows her hopes a week after the assassination included privacy for herself and memorials for her husband.



A December 1963 memorial edition of LIFE magazine, dedicated to the memory of slain President Kohn F. Kennedy, is displayed Friday, March 26, 1995, at the John F. Kennedy Library and Museum in Boston.

"I wanted that flame and I wanted Cape Kennedy. ... All I wanted was his name on just that one booster, the one that would put us ahead of the Russians," she said, apparently referring to the rocket to the moon.

The eternal flame still burns at JFK's grave at Arlington National Cemetery. And while Cape Canaveral was renamed for Kennedy on the day of White's interview, the rocket that went to the moon was not.

Cape Kennedy reverted to Cape Canaveral in 1973, although the NASA base there continues to be called the Kennedy Space Center.

"I'm not going to be the Widow Kennedy," Mrs. Kennedy told White. "When this is over, I'm going to crawl into the deepest retirement there is."

Speaking of her 3-year-old son, Mrs. Kennedy said: "I want John-John to be a fine young man. He's so interested in planes; maybe he'll be an astronaut or just plain John Kennedy fixing planes on the ground."

She recalled that her daughter, Caroline, "held my hand like a soldier. She's my helper; she's mine now."

Devoted brothers followed each other to Vietnam

By Eduardo Montes
Associated Press

EL PASO — March 1968 seems humorous to the Bolanos brothers now that mortar shells aren't raining down on three frightened siblings bolting for a beleaguered bunker in Dong Ha, Vietnam.

Rick and Bill recline in a comfortable living room with their expansive bellies quaking, their laughter booming freely as the combined recollections of an explosive family reunion more than 25 years ago tumble over each other in the excited air. Brothers Louis and Ben join in.

Rick, the youngster of the bunch at 46, is the first to stop and take stock of how dangerous that gathering of three of the four brothers really was, no matter how funny some of their panicked antics during the mortar attack may seem now.

"It kind of shocked me," Rick says, "because I said, 'Here we are and if something happens, it would wipe out three-fourths of the family.'"

"But if anything," adds Ben, "we wanted it like that. That's the way to go."

Rick again. "At the time, we just had a solidarity about us, and it was right."

That bond, as much as anything else, was responsible for giving the Bolanoses the distinction of being the only family to have four brothers serving simultaneously in Vietnam.

Officially recognized by the Johnson administration for the family's contribution, the brothers became decorated fighting men.

Now the brothers are in the spotlight again, this time for filing a $100 million federal lawsuit against Robert McNamara, the secretary of defense when the four went to war.

The Bolanos allege that McNamara failed to perform his duty as defense secretary because he didn't speak up during the 1960s and 1970s about his feelings that the war was hopeless.

The brothers want to make clear that they're not sorry they did their duty, but filed the lawsuit because they feel U.S. politicians betrayed the men and women who served in the war that claimed 58,000 American lives.

'The four, who gathered recently to discuss their experiences for what they said was the first time in about 20 years, trace their commitment to the nation to their father's teachings.

As the brothers tell it:

Luis C. Bolanos Sr., who still lives in El Paso, grew up so poor he didn't have his first pair of shoes until he was six.

But when he eventually emigrated to the United States from Mexico, it provided him with the opportunity to buy a home and raise a family.

"As far as he was concerned, this was heaven," said Rick Bolanos.

And he made sure his sons felt the same way, instilling in them a deep sense of patriotism and dedication.

So when the war came, the men who were then boys couldn't wait for their chance and began volunteering for military service in Vietnam, even though three of them could have gotten a deferral because they already had a brother in a combat zone.

In 1965, Bill, now 47, joined the Army and became a Green Beret and Louis joined the Navy.

In 1966, Rick also joined the Army. Ben, 48, became a Marine later the same year. "I felt like an outcast," he said. "I was the last one to go."

In March 1966, the entire family went to see Bill off to Vietnam, the first of the brothers to go.

"I remember the turmoil in my heart, the turmoil that was in my mother's heart," said Rick. "I think we cried all the way back."

"We made a pact," he continued. "We said, 'We're going to have to go back and help him.' You know we had the false, naive sense that we were going to go out there and help him win the war."

The brothers' arrival in Vietnam would disabuse them of that notion.

Ben recalls that the first time he came under fire, he ran out of his tent unarmed and wearing nothing but his shorts and a helmet. He would sleep clothed for the rest of the war.

Rick's first encounter with a firefight had him hiding in a foxhole and firing wildly with a machine gun until a superior held a gun to his head and told him "to get out and fire that gun like man."

"Right then I realized I wasn't John Wayne," he said.

The most memorable moment for the brothers, at least the three who served in the land forces, was the 1968 meeting in Dong Ha, which took place just as Bill was going home.

Bill made his way north by air and met up with his two brothers in a Marine camp.

Arriving with no headgear but his cherished Green Beret, which he joked was bullet proof, Bill had to scrounge up a helmet and flak jacket when they came under attack, said Ben, pointing out his Army brother was wearing a dreaded Marine helmet.

Rick finishes the story.

He said he scrambled for cover when the attack came, but got stuck as the guitar he had been strumming beforehand jammed crosswise in the door of the bunker.

As he struggled, Ben and Bill plowed into him from behind and pushed him through, snapping the guitar in two and leaving Rick holding nothing but shattered wood and popped strings.

The brothers laugh.

Later, Bill would board a plane for home, a moment he still recalls with a sense of dread.

Only 5 in 8 pregnancies leads to birth, government report says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some 6.5 million American women were pregnant in 1992, but only five pregnancies out of eight resulted in live births, the government reported Thursday.

In addition to 1.5 million abortions, there were 900,000 miscarriages and stillbirths, the National Center for Health Statistics said. Some 4.1 million babies were born that year.

The center said the abortion rate dropped by 12 percent from 1980 to 1992, partly due to a drop in the number of women in their late teens and 20s, when abortion rates are highest.

The average American woman has 3.3 pregnancies during her lifetime, representing 2.1 live births, 0.8 abortions, and 0.4 miscarriages and stillbirths, the agency said.

Stephanie Ventura, a demographer and co-author of the report on pregnancy trends, said it documents that black and Hispanic women have more pregnancies than white women.

The average black women becomes pregnant 5.1 times during her lifetime, the average Hispanic woman 4.7 times and the average white woman 2.8 times.

Cigar box evidence kit in tow, defense attorney has passion for law

By Libby Averyt and Eric Brown
Corpus Christi Caller-Times

CORPUS CHRISTI — In this age of laptop computers, defense attorney Douglas Tinker enters the courtroom carrying an old cigar box he calls his evidence kit.

If they didn't know that, renowned defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes would be happy to tell them so. In Tinker, whose bushy gray beard brings to mind Ernest Hemingway or an Old Testament prophet, Haynes recognizes qualities that remain timeless in a changing world.

"There's a natural distrust of lawyers on both sides — that they will try to be slick and manipulate," said Haynes, whose own successes include his defense of Fort Worth millionaire Cullen Davis on murder solicitation charges. "But Tink doesn't do that. He'll whip in there with his Big Chief tablet and his beard and start being professional with them, but in a way everybody understands. He's got an incredible genius in down-homing things."

IN HIS 32 years of experience, Tinker had represented some of the Coastal Bend's most controversial defendants including Duval County political boss George B. Parr.

Tinker also travels the country, sharing his knowledge and trial tactics with other attorneys. He once addressed a Georgia convention as a stand-in for John Grisham, the attorney and best-selling novelist.

"He's not just a South Texas lawyer, although that's his bailiwick," said Haynes, who has known Tinker for more than 30 years. "He's well-known all across the country."

The 60-year-old Tinker has overcome towering amounts of incriminating evidence, and persuaded dozens of South Texas juries to acquit clients accused of heinous crimes.

But one of Tinker's toughest challenges may be just months away.

On Oct. 9, he is scheduled to defend the woman accused of murdering Tejano music sensation Selena Quintanilla-Perez.

Yolanda Saldivar, 34, was charged April 3 with killing the 23-year-old singer at the Days Inn Hotel after the two met to discuss a business transaction.

Since the shooting, international attention has fallen upon Corpus Christi — and now to Tinker.

"When I heard about the Saldivar situation, my immediate thoughts went to Doug Tinker because I knew that nobody needed a lawyer worse than Miss Saldivar," said Mike DeGeurin, a prominent Houston attorney and friend of Tinker's. "I was afraid lawyers would not take the case because of the public outcry, and the only person I knew who would fade the heat and give her the type of representation that anybody is entitled to — and probably lose a lot of popularity over it — was probably Doug Tinker. He is the epitome of the ethical, professional lawyer."

FRIENDS AND co-workers describe Tinker as a hard-working yet fun-loving spirit who enjoys a heated cross-examination as much as a cold beer. While not in the courtroom, his passion is sailing, and he shares his love with anyone willing to step aboard his boat.

Professionally, he's among the best-known defense attorneys in the state, if not nationwide, colleagues say.

Tinker contends that there's nothing really special about him and that dozens of attorneys are smarter than him. He flunked a grade in elementary school, almost failed college and admits that he still can't spell.

He describes himself as a "one-trick pony" who can't do anything but criminal defense work and says he's not as good a lawyer as people think.

"My dad always used to say, 'It doesn't matter who you are, or who you think you are. The size of your funeral depends largely on the weather,'" Tinker said.

But those who have seen Tinker work say he doesn't need traditional smarts to be a successful lawyer. His charm, wit and respect for the law make him one of the toughest opponents in a courtroom, other attorneys said.

The small-town charm comes naturally for the California native, who moved to Texas with his parents and three older siblings when he was barely old enough to walk. His father left their West Coast home in search of work as a roughneck in an oil field and landed a job with Shell Oil.

THE TINKER family moved during the next 12 years from one small Texas town to another before settling in Edna, a town of 5,500 residents about 100 miles northeast of Corpus Christi. That was home, Tinker said, and where his father eventually retired after a stint as the town's mayor and a long career in the oil business.

An athlete who played all the major sports, Tinker graduated from Edna High School in 1953 and moved on to the University of Texas in Austin. His father had preached for that all of his children would go to college, as well as law school.

"I was a slow learner," Tinker said, "I flunked the third grade, and nobody expected me to get out of high school. That's the truth. I had some learning disability or something.

"I majored in physical education and barely graduated college," Tinker added. "Math and science escapes me. To this day, I don't know my multiplication tables and I can't spell. Fortunately, I don't have to spell nor do I have to use multiplication tables much."

Law school at the University of Texas at Austin came more naturally. "Law school was easy," he said, "because most of it was reading and I always enjoy reading."

BUT HE was to take a circuitous route to law school. He worked as an assistant coach at Driscoll Junior High in Austin, spent six months on active duty in the Army and worked in the oil fields as a roughneck. He also tried one semester of law school at the University of Houston before dropping out because he thought he was failing and because tuition was too expensive.

After leaving Houston, Tinker sold cookware. Nine months later, he decided to apply at UT and give law school one more chance. This time, Tinker was successful.

Tinker said he would do most of his reading and research while working nights full time as a ward assistant at Travis State School. He said that when he earned his law degree in 1963, he not only surprised himself, but others he knew.

"I told a friend when I got out of law school my opinion of lawyers went way down."

Tinker said the only job he applied for and landed coming out of law school was as a briefing attorney for the Court of Criminal Appeals in Austin. One year later, he moved to Corpus Christi and took a job as an assistant district attorney for Nueces County.

FOUR YEARS later, Tinker went to work for Corpus Christi attorney Guy Allison and began to develop his expertise in criminal-defense work.

"I knew I wanted to do criminal defense work, but was surprised that I could make a living at it," said Tinker, adding that he made $10,000 that year — $4,600 more than he earned in the oil fields.

Tinker started making a name for himself more than 20 years ago by representing Richard Ridyolph — a case he admits to taking for the publicity. Ridyolph was accused of murdering policeman John W. Sartain on Aug. 19, 1971. Tinker maintained that his client was shooting at the police station, not at Sartain.

Ridyolph was convicted and given a 50-year sentence, which was reversed on appeal. At a second trial, Ridyolph was sentenced to 90 years in prison.

Nueces County Attorney Carl Lewis, a former associate of Tinker's, remembers that civil rights were a hot topic at the time and that Tinker stepped up to represent Ridyolph, a black man.

"He really was kind of a champion of the community for taking that case and working with it as hard as he did," Lewis said.

LIFE WATCH

Infection fighter

It's astonishing how even modest doses of vitamin C can help elderly people recover from severe respiratory infections. That's what doctors at St. Luke's Hospital in Huddersfield, United Kingdom, recently discovered.

In a study of 57 elderly patients hospitalized for acute bronchitis or penumonia, about half received 200 milligrams of vitamin C per day; the others got a placebo (dummy pill). Within two weeks it was apparent that those on vitamin C were doing significantly better, especially the most severely ill, many of whom entered the hospital with a marginal vitamin-C deficiency. Those getting vitamin C got better faster.

What's surprising about this study is how potent the low doses of vitamin C were. Generally, studies have shown that at least 1,000 milligrams or so are needed to help decrease the severity and duration of the common cold. And some experts, such as the late Linus Pauling, have advocated thousands of milligrams of vitamin C to fight colds and other respiratory infections.

Doctors theorize that the 200 milligrams of vitamin C boosted immune responses and/or prevented inflammation that caused symptoms.

Smart babies

You may know that breast-feeding an infant improves the child's immunological functions. But there's accumulating evidence that breast-feeding may also benefit development of the infant brain. Dutch researchers compared the neurological status of 135 9-year-old children who had been breast-fed as infants for at least three weeks and 391 9-year-olds who had been fed infant formulas. All subjects had been full-term babies.

The neurological functions in the breast-fed children were slightly better. Minor neurological dysfunction was about twice as high in formula-fed children as in breast-fed children. Benefits were especially noticeable in children who had exhibited slight abnormalities in a neurological examination at birth.

Cancer antidotes

What can you eat to prevent so-called cancers of the upper aerodigestive tract — the mouth, esophagus and larynx?

Cut your intake of meat with carcinogens called nitrosamines and preservatives called nitrites, according to a new study from the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center in Seattle. Researchers studied the diets of 645 patients with such cancers and 458 similar persons without the cancers.

Here's what they found:

- Eating foods high in preformed nitrosamines, such as bacon, smoked fish and beer, boosted the risk of such cancers.
- Daily consumption of meats containing nitrite, such as ham, hot dogs, bologna, salami and other cold cuts raised the risk of esophageal cancer.
- Drinking beer every day raised the risk of oral and esophageal cancers. Drinking tea and consuming vitamin C helped prevent the cancers.
- Especially good news: Eating vegetables high in nitrate, such as beets, celery and spinach, does not increase the risk of such cancers; in fact, they reduce your odds.

'Smart' bike

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Feeling up to an energetic bike ride? Or is it a take-it-easy day? A new, "smart" bike engineered by University of Rochester students can adjust to the biker's energy level and find the right gear, no matter what the incline. The bike shifts automatically, just like cars with automatic transmissions. The "brains" behind the operation — besides the students — is a computer chip.

The cyclist decides how fast to pedal and programs the information into the chip by pressing a few buttons. The chip then "remembers." When the bike rider begins to pedal slower, the bike automatically shifts to a lower, easier gear. And when the cyclist pedals faster going downhill, the bike shifts to a higher gear.

The adenovirus is one of the viruses used to deliver treatment to specific places in the body by medical researchers working to cure illnesses and hereditary disabilities and to create new vaccines.

Viruses studied for scientific answers

By Donald J. Frederick
Associated Press

Viruses harbor a negative image; bad actors that subject the body to diseases such as AIDS, hepatitis and flu.

But scientists are finding new ways to use some of the mysterious genetic particles to help cure illnesses and hereditary disabilities and to create new vaccines.

Among the high-visibility afflictions for which virus research offers hope are cystic fibrosis, epilepsy, rabies and some kinds of cancer.

Unlike bacteria, a virus doesn't have a life of its own. Although it contains a core of genetic material — DNA and RNA — a virus must slip inside living cells to survive and reproduce.

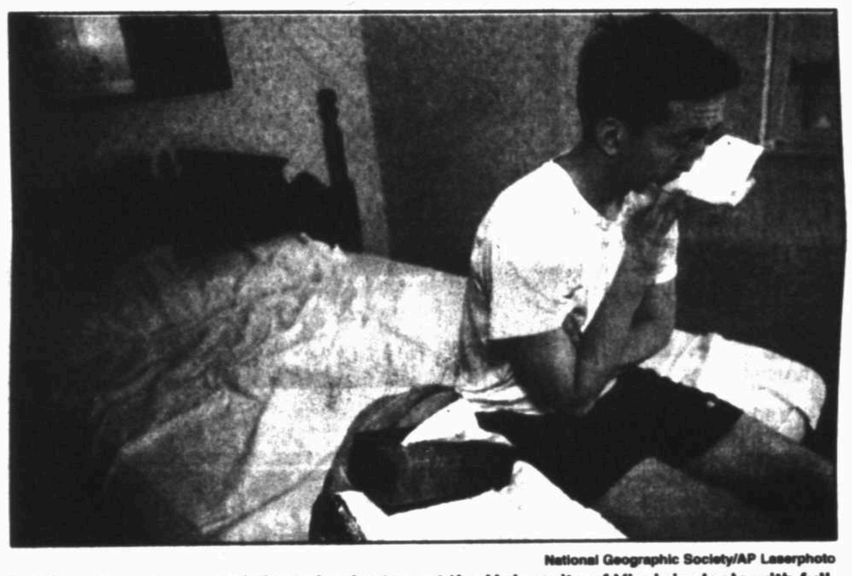
Capitalizing on this ability, researchers are engineering viruses so that they can zero in on defective cells and deposit new genetic material. In essence, these viruses serve as therapeutic couriers, replacing faulty or inactive genes with healthy ones.

"It's the magic bullet that only hits a specific target, nothing else, and is able to correct a deficiency," says Dr. Richard J. Duma, former executive director of the National Foundation for Infectious Diseases in Washington, D.C.

Gene therapy using viruses has taken off in the past three years. In 1993, an estimated 150 or more patients were treated this way; the number has now risen to almost 400.

"Thus far there has not been a single adverse reaction from gene transfers," reports Dr. W. French Anderson, director of the Gene Therapy Laboratories at the University of Southern California, a pioneer in the technique.

Although most of the work is still in the testing stage, there already have been some positive results.



National Geographic Society/AP Laserphoto

Sniffling for science, an infected volunteer at the University of Virginia deals with full-blown symptoms of a common cold. Two days earlier he was given a dose of a cold virus in a treatment and prevention study. In experiments that herald a new age in medicine, viruses are being harnessed to save lives.

The first patients to receive gene-virus therapy were two girls with combined immunodeficiency, a rare disease that shuts down the body's immune system, making it vulnerable to the slightest infection. Treated with gene replacements in 1990, the two children now lead normal lives.

There are hopes that cystic fibrosis, a major killer of young people, can be cured this way. The disease occurs in children who are born with a defect in the gene that helps prevent mucus buildup in the lungs.

To treat the disorder, Ronald Crystal, a professor of medicine at New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center in New York City, has spliced a replacement gene into viruses.

The viruses, inhaled through a nasal spray, ferry the gene into lung cells. The experimental technique offers encouragement to some 30,000 American youngsters who suffer from the fatal illness.

Another promising experiment involves administering a virus that makes it possible to alter selectively malfunctioning brain cells — neurons — that are responsible for certain kinds of epilepsy.

"Traditional treatment for epilepsy involves patients taking medicines that bathe the entire brain, despite the fact that only a small number of malfunctioning cells may be responsible for the disorder," says Dr. Robert L. Martuza, a neurosurgeon at Georgetown University Medical Center in Washington, D.C.

"With molecular neurosurgery," he says, "we may be able to insert a gene that affects only malfunctioning cells by modulating the action of one neurotransmitter (chemical messenger) or enhancing the action of another."

Martuza also has designed a genetically engineered virus that can kill malignant brain-tumor cells. "Our findings show that molecular neurosurgery can be used to kill intracranial tumor cells in a variety of nervous-system tumors without damage to surrounding normal brain cells," he tells National Geographic.

Anderson predicts that it will be at least five years before some of these techniques are approved for general use, and another decade before they become commonplace for treating a few diseases.

"But 20 years from now," he says, "practically nothing will be treated the way it is now. Almost every disease will have at least a component of gene therapy."

Beyond that, it will be "almost a Buck Rogers kind of stuff," says Duma. "Much of medicine will be trying to correct molecular deficiencies within patients, whether they're acquired through disease or inherited. By fine-tuning the genetic information that each cell possesses, we'll be able to do lots of things we hadn't thought of."

Eye on the eyeball

Former Midlander Randy Velarde of the New York Yankees is examined before practice by his sports vision specialist, Dr. Donald Teig, director of Sports Performance Centers of America in Ridgefield, Conn. Teig, who recommends contact lenses for athletes, uses a portable keratometer to evaluate Velardis' prescription for his daily disposable contact lenses. "Studies have shown that debris does not build up on daily disposable lenses, so athletes actually see better, and that contributes to top performance, said Teig.

In-line skates can set skater up for falls

By Ira Dreyfuss
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — With in-line skating, the little mistakes often are the ones that get kids in trouble.

"I saw a kid who injured his knees," said Dr. Robert R. Madigan of Knoxville, Tenn. "He had no safety equipment on."

That's not unusual for kids, and it's just one of the chances they take, the pediatric orthopedist said.

Wearing knee pads, wrist pads and helmets may not be what a kid wants, but it's something a parent must encourage, Madigan and other doctors say.

In this boy's case, he owned safety equipment but didn't wear it, Madigan said.

"A lot of skaters who skin their knees skin them again," said Dr. Letha Griffin of Peachtree Orthopaedic Clinic in Atlanta. "You'd think they'd learn."

In-line skating is a fun way to get aerobic benefits, but participants do have to think about safety. The federal Consumer Product Safety Commission's latest injury data, based on hospital emergency room visits, show 76,000 cases in 1994. That's more than double the 1993 total.

Most injuries are scrapes and bruises, but falls also can lead to broken bones, especially of the wrist as a person tries to break the fall. And in young people going through a growth spurt, the break sometimes can come in the relatively softer tissue where the growth takes place.

'Some children have more injuries than others; it doesn't follow a random basis.'

— Dr. Robert R. Madigan, Knoxville, Tenn.

Falls unshielded by plastic and uncushioned by pads lead to many injuries. About 40 percent of injuries in in-line skating are caused by loss of balance, and another 25 percent are caused by skating on an irregular surface, Griffin said.

And it's risky to skimp on equipment, Griffin said. The skates have to be good quality and in good repair.

Grass and twigs get caught in the wheel assemblies of cheaper skates if the skater has to walk off the street, she said. This could lead to sticky wheels — and a fall.

"Children sometimes use hand-me-down skates that don't fit, so they can't control them," Griffin said. "Their balance is not as good, and the ability to stop is not what it should be."

And parents shouldn't try to give a child a hand-me-down helmet to save the cost of buying new, she said. A helmet must fit the wearer without being loose, and it has to be sized to the child's head.

Skaters who roll to music also can be taking a risk, Griffin said. Headphones can reduce the skater's ability to hear road noise and thereby increase the risk of an accident, she said.

And skaters who go out at dusk should wear protective clothing, Griffin said. Some even wear flashing lights, an accessory the doctor approves of.

Similarly, skaters need to watch out for traffic if they are on the road, and for pedestrians if they are not.

Learning to skate is not as simple as continuing to try until you can roll without falling down. If a parent doesn't know how to skate, a professional skating teacher should show a child, Griffin said. Often, a skate shop knows where to find one.

Brave kids may also find themselves in big trouble. "Some children have more injuries than others; it doesn't follow a random basis," Madigan said. "We think certain children have less fear and are more aggressive."

Boys seem to be more likely than girls to be risk-takers, Madigan said: "They are culturally conditioned and encouraged to be more aggressive."

Griffin, however, disagrees. Personality traits make some people more aggressive than others, but girls have become bigger risk-takers in sports in recent years, she said.

New theory on chronic fatigue syndrome discovered

By Richard A. Knox
N.Y. Times News Service

BOSTON — Chronic fatigue syndrome stole John Friedlich's life back in October 1988.

Before that he was an active 37-year-old graphic designer, rock climber and sailor. Afterward he was perpetually exhausted and so confused he would forget his wife's name and get lost in his own home.

This spring Friedlich got his life back. Although he is still pale and not quite back to normal, he is amazed to find himself running up stairs, playing hard with his daughter, going on family outings for an entire evening and then driving home — unthinkable achievements for most of the past seven years.

"Now when I'm tired it feels good — a sensual, well-deserved feeling rather than the bone-crushing sensation I felt before," Friedlich said.

NO NEW drug or fancy technology made the difference. Friedlich and his doctors ascribe his re-emergence to nothing other than salt. Simple table salt, applied to food, along with a drug that causes the body to retain more salt.

Friedlich's case is testimonial to the latest in a long line of hypotheses and treatments for chronic fatigue syndrome, or CFS. Out of recent studies at Johns Hopkins University Medical School in Baltimore has come the notion that many CFS cases involve a blood pressure disorder called "neurally mediated hypotension." The name denotes a phenomenon of abnormally low blood pressure that results from faulty signals from the central nervous system.

For reasons still not understood, new evidence suggests that some CFS patients have episodes of low blood pressure severe enough to compromise the brain's oxygen supply.

Some CFS patients with evidence of the disorder respond well to increased salt intake, sometimes supplemented by a drug called Florinef (fludrocortisone) that keeps the salt from being rapidly excreted. By causing water to be retained, salt increases blood volume, counteracting low blood pressure.

LIKE MANY Americans, Friedlich had limited his salt intake in the belief that it was more healthful to eat that way. But in his case, salt is apparently a boon. After a week on the increased-salt regimen, he reports, "I ran up two flights of stairs without thinking about it. I hadn't done that in five years."

Some patients require an additional drug called a beta-blocker to slow the heart rate.

The Hopkins findings — a seven-patient study published in March in the British journal The Lancet, and a 23-patient followup presented earlier this month at a scientific meeting in Boston — are attracting considerable attention from patient activists and leading CFS researchers.

The work seems to dovetail with some of CFS's most common symptoms, such as light-headedness, dizziness and extreme fatigue after standing for prolonged periods. It also fits the increasingly well-accepted idea that CFS has a strong but so far elusive connection with brain and nervous-system abnormalities.

BUT THE neurally mediated hypotension hypothesis is also generating skepticism.

"It's promising, but I would characterize it as an important preliminary finding," said Dr. William C. Reeves, who heads the CFS program at the US Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta. "It's got a long ways to go."

Skepticism is appropriate considering that chronic fatigue syndrome has inspired dozens of labels, at least as many theories and hundreds of briefly fashionable treatments.

Like the fable of the blind men and the elephant, doctors over the decades have groped for names to characterize the features of the syndrome that seemed most prominent to them.

There's neuromyasthenia and myalgic encephalomyelitis to denote the nerve, muscle and brain aspects of the disorder. Atypical poliomyelitis and postpolio syndrome to refer to the polio-like features sometimes seen. Post-viral fatigue syndrome, chronic Epstein-Barr virus syndrome and other terms that point to a supposed viral connection. Iceland disease, Lake Tahoe mystery disease, Lyndonville, N.Y., chronic mononucleosis and other geography-based terms derived from periodic epidemic outbreaks dating back to 1938.

Even now, after a decade of concerted effort to get to the bottom of the phenomenon, there is fierce debate over whether the disorder should be called chronic fatigue/immune dysfunction syndrome (CFIDS) or simply chronic fatigue syndrome.

THE CDC insist upon the latter, "because we don't think there is evidence for immune dysfunction," Reeves says. "The name is chronic fatigue syndrome."

The Baltimore researchers stumbled upon their hypothesis after Dr. Peter Rowe, a pediatric cardiologist at Hopkins, noted a similarity between young patients who had unexplained fainting spells and another group with chronic fatigue.

"The children with recurrent fainting were also tired," Rowe said in a recent interview with CFS News, a patient-oriented newsletter. "But because their fainting was a more prominent symptom to everyone and much more distressing, the fatigue tended not to receive a great deal of attention. The children with CFS occasionally had fainting, but more commonly they would be able to abort an episode of fainting by sitting down. Their main symptom was...light-headedness."

Rowe gave seven teen-agers with CFS a standard cardiology test for neurally mediated syncope (or fainting), called a tilt-table test. Patients are strapped to a table, which is suddenly tilted into an almost-upright position. Those with a neural defect in blood pressure regulation will begin to faint.

All seven CFS patients had positive tilt-table tests. Fatigue and light-headedness went away in four of the seven after doctors told them to increase their salt intake and gave them drugs to slow their heart rate.

A SUBSEQUENT study of 23 adult patients with long-term CFS found abnormal tilt-table test results in 22, compared to only four out of 14 control patients without chronic fatigue. Of 19 patients treated with increased salt and drug therapy, 15 improved and 9 — nearly half — had complete or nearly complete disappearance of their CFS symptoms.

Dr. Issam H. Bou-Holaigah of Johns Hopkins, who presented those results at a Boston meeting of the North American Society of Pacing and Electrophysiology, explained that salt and drug treatment is not aimed at low blood pressure per se. "What we are counteracting is the heart's pumping too vigorously," he said.

According to the Hopkins hypothesis, it works like this: One of the heart's main jobs is to keep an adequate flow of blood to the brain. But when the body is in a sitting or standing position, gravity tends to make blood pool in the legs and arms. To counteract this, the adrenal glands secrete adrenalin, which makes the heart beat faster and more vigorously.

"However, if there is too little blood in the heart ventricle, the adrenaline leads to an abnormal very vigorous heart beat," Rowe explains. "This in turn can falsely signal the brain that the blood pressure is high, when in fact it is low. So the brain sends a command via nerves to lower the blood pressure even more. This...naturally makes the situation worse and can lead to fainting or, as seen by the current research," chronic fatigue and other symptoms."

Not yet understood is why CFS sufferers have insufficient blood volume in the left ventricle, inappropriate neural responses or both. Also a mystery is how either problem could be related to an infection, which many believe is the initial trigger for CFS in at least half the cases.

ALTHOUGH HE is skeptical of the "hypotension" hypothesis, Reeves says the idea that CFS patients have a neural disorder, possibly mediated by hormones and immune-system secretions called cytokines, "is a very hot area right now."

Dr. Anthony Komaroff of Boston's Brigham and Women's Hospital, a leading CFS researcher who is John Friedlich's doctor, has embarked on studies of neurally mediated hypotension. "We're not into the core of the illness," he cautions. "We're dealing with a manifestation of the illness that is present in some fraction. It's not going to be 22 out of 23 patients. But it's still large enough to be taken seriously."

Exercise-induced asthma can be treated, controlled

By Dr. Daniel Zapson
Associated Press

Children and young adults with exercise-induced asthma have often been kept away from physical activity, but with proper care and treatment there is no reason most can't participate in sports.

Asthma is a chronic lung disease typified by airway inflammation, with episodic tightening of the airways, known as bronchospasms.

Asthma attacks can be caused by a variety of factors within the environment, including dust and pollutants. In some cases, exercise may be the only trigger for an asthma attack, a condition known as exercise-induced asthma.

Symptoms can include chest pain or tightness, cough, shortness of breath, wheezing and endurance problems.

Proper treatment of this condition depends on communication among doctors, parents and athletes. Physicians, for example, should be informed immediately of a patient's symptoms.

Those athletes who require treatment for exercise-induced asthma often find that inhaled beta-2 agonists, such as albuterol, are most effective.

These medications are used 5 minutes to 15 minutes before exercise and may be repeated if necessary after two hours of intense exercise.

Beta-2 agonists work by relaxing the muscle around the airway, which in turn decreases the spasm and eliminates symptoms.

Cromolyn sodium is generally used for treatment of chronic asthma, but it can also be used sporadically to prevent exercise-induced asthma.

If cromolyn is being used for the prevention of exercise-induced asthma, it should be taken about 30 minutes before competition.

Cromolyn can be used as a substitute for beta-2 agonists. In some people, however, both medications are required for the desired results.

In some cases, symptoms of the condition peak within the first 15 minutes of exercise and will resolve themselves if athletes can continue to exercise.

Regardless of the sport selected, athletes should undertake a vigorous warm-up of 15 to 30 minutes before competition.

Coaches and teachers also should be alert to symptoms of exercise-induced asthma to ensure that young athletes receive proper treatment.

Because symptoms can worsen rapidly, young athletes with moderate or severe symptoms should not travel home alone or remain alone in an empty house after exercise.

Dr. Daniel Zapson is director of Primary Care Sports Medicine at New York University Medical Center's Hospital for Joint Diseases.

(From 1B)

This fine-tuning may use virus delivery systems to block diseases even before they start. For instance, people with a known propensity for breast or colon cancer may consider gene therapy before any symptoms appear.

"If it were possible, why wouldn't you get protective genes before you ever got those cancers in the first place?" French asks. "It wouldn't technically be a vaccine, but it's a similar sort of situation."

Viruses have long been an important ingredient in vaccines that protect the immune system against infection.

One promising new vaccine would protect wild animals against rabies before they can transmit the usually fatal disease to humans or their pets.

The vaccine has been field-tested in Europe, where foxes are a problem; in raccoon areas of Virginia, Pennsylvania and New Jersey; and in Texas' coyote country.

"The animals eat a vaccine-laden bait, which immunizes them," explains Bernard Moss, who heads the laboratory of viral diseases at the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases in Bethesda, Md.

Raccoon rabies has become a big problem in the mid-Atlantic and northeastern United States. "In Maryland and many areas of the East Coast, as many as one out of four raccoons will be infected with rabies," James M. Meegan, a National Institutes of Health virologist, estimates.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Celebration planned

The Rev. William C. and Carolyn Palmer will be celebrating nine years ministering to the Greater Mount Rose Baptist Church, 211 N. Tyler St.

An anniversary service is planned at 3 p.m. Sunday at the church.

The Rev. Norris Harris of Lubbock will be the speaker. All are invited to attend.

Students recognized

Teens from around the Permian Basin gathered in Odessa May 20 for seminary commencement exercises that recognized those who had completed all or part of the four-year religious study program.

The program featured Midland seminary instructor, Ruth Keller, as guest speaker. Nathan Walter of Monahans spoke on a graduate's perspective and the graduation theme, "Voices From the Dust."

Seminary is provided by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, Church Education System, to high school students. The students meet weekdays before school at 6 a.m. in various locations throughout the area.

Graduates from Midland were Jessica Boucher, Henrietta Douglas, Michelle Gaume, Michael Grandy, Gary Jones and Justin Tubb.

Missionary to serve

DALLAS — Members of Texas Baptist Student Ministry — including one from Gardendale — at 137 colleges and universities will support 112 student missionaries serving in five countries and 18 states this summer.

Clifton Miles, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Miles of Gardendale, will serve as Baptist Student Ministry summer missionary in Vermont. Miles, a student at Odessa College, is a member of Crescent Park Baptist Church at Odessa.

Ordination set

The United Church of Religious Science of Los Angeles has announced that the Rev. Merilyn Chilleen will be ordained Friday at the Permian Church of Religious Science, 2311 Elizabeth Ave.

The Rev. Michael Bechwith, founder of the Agape Church of Religious Science, will be the ordinating minister, and the Rev. Jesse Jennings, chairman of the international board of trustees and a monthly contributor to the Science of Mind Magazine, will be the presenting minister.

The public is invited to attend the night service. For time and more information call 684-4230.

VBS scheduled

Children from age 3 through those in the sixth grade and senior citizens are invited to Grace Lutheran Church's Vacation Bible School to learn about the "Mystery of All Mysteries."

The school runs June 12-16 with children's activities 9 a.m. to noon and senior citizens class from 10 to 11 a.m.

A closing program for parents and friends is planned for 11:45 a.m. June 16. A slide presentation of Vacation Bible School activities will be shown 9:15 a.m. June 18 and at the 10:30 a.m. worship service, the children will sing a special Vacation Bible School song.

To register call the church office, 697-3221, or Kathy McCown, 694-4924.

Celebration set

Hollowell United Methodist Church will celebrate its 49th anniversary June 11.

Theme for the 1995 celebration is "Standing in Faith in Stumbling Times: Making Jesus the Center of My Life."

Guest preacher will be the Rev. J.T. Garnett and the members of the Johnson Chapel African Methodist Episcopal Church of Odessa.

The celebration will kick off June 7, with a family dinner at 6:30 p.m. and a prayer and praise celebration at 7:30 p.m.

On June 10, the United Methodist Women of Hollowell will host a morning praise and prayer followed by a breakfast. Beginning at noon June 10, the pastor and communion stewards of Hollowell will hold a praise and prayer and memorial service. That afternoon, the members of the church will be treated to a picnic hosted by the United Methodist Men.

Hollowell UMC was organized in 1946. The first trustees were Mrs. C.E. Washington, Robert Hudson, J. Hicks, the Rev. Willie Weatherspoon, Mrs. E.M. Majors, the Rev. Jessie Hudson and Taylor Dockard.

The church was dedicated in 1947; the pastor was the Rev. C.L. King. The church was named Hollowell Chapel in honor of Howard Hollowell, pastor of First UMC from 1945 to 1950. The present site, 400 S. Marshall St., was built in 1962 by L.S. Littlejohn and Tillman Allen.

Current pastor is the Rev. Hadley R. Edwards.

Graduates recognized

ODESSA — Sunday is Graduate Recognition Sunday at Redeemer Lutheran Church of Joy.

High school and university graduates will be recognized during the 11 a.m. Festival of Praise worship with a gift and honored with a reception in the parlor following the service.

Students receiving special awards and academic accomplishments also will be included in the recognition ceremonies.

Church hosts singers

Greenwood United Methodist Church is hosting the "Friends Forever Singers" from the First United Methodist Church of Round Rock at 7 p.m. Tuesday.

Theme for the 27-member group is "We Need, Jesus."

No admission will be charged. The public is invited to attend.

Bible School set

The Cuthbert Avenue Baptist Church is holding its Vacation Bible School June 5-9.

Classes are set for 6 to 8:30 p.m. for children kindergarten through sixth grade. Members and nonmembers are welcome. For more information call 685-6076.

Student earns degree

AUSTIN — Fern Marie Davis graduated from Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary with a master of divinity degree earlier this month.

The ceremonies took place at University Presbyterian Church with the Rev. Robert Bohl, moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, U.S.A., presiding. The graduating class was comprised of 48 students from 14 states as well as Mexico and Korea.

Joint services set

Four congregations will be joining as one Sunday to hear Bishop Michael Marshall of England preach at the 10:45 a.m. service at First United Methodist Church, Main Street at Ohio Avenue, downtown.

Marshall also will preach at a joint 7 p.m. service Sunday at First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave.

Churches joining for the morning service include First UMC, St. Nicholas Episcopal Church, Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity and First Presbyterian.

Archbishop of Canterbury George Carey has described Michael Marshall as one of the two best evangelists in the Anglican Communion today.

In 1975, he was consecrated Bishop of Woolwich, becoming the youngest bishop in the Church of England since the Reformation.

In 1984, Marshall left his position to come to the United States and found The Anglican Institute, an international gospel organization within the Episcopal Church that enabled him to teach and preach throughout the world. In 1992, the Archbishop of Canterbury called Marshall back to England to serve as co-director of the Springboard Project, which fosters and encourages evangelism initiatives in the British Isles.

The bishop is known for his gift as a pianist. In recent years, he has performed with the London and St. Louis symphonies and under famous conductors, including former British Prime Minister Edward Heath.

"Music is another way of articulating my faith," Marshall has said.

Nurseries at each participating church will be used for the morning service. for the evening service, a nursery will be provided at First Presbyterian Church. To make nursery reservations for the evening service call 684-7821.

Registration begun

Trinity Presbyterian Church Preschool and Mother's Day Out Fall registration is under way.

For more information call Rhonda Braun, 682-5021, for preschool and J'Lynn Wheeler, 682-5325, for Mother's Day Out.

VBS begins

Midland Lutheran Church, 2705 W. Michigan Ave., is holding its Vacation Bible School Tuesday through Friday.

The school is open to ages 3 through sixth grade. Hours are 9 to 11:30 a.m. classes will include Bible stories, crafts and music.

For more information or to enroll children, call Mary Sunde, Vacation Bible School director, 689-7300.

Funfest continues

The Truelite Christian Fellowship Christian Funfest continues from 10 a.m. to midnight today at Martin Luther King Jr. Park, Scharbauer Drive at Carver Street, behind the Northeast YMCA.

The event, being held for the under-construction Heaven Bound, includes a talent show, games, food and drinks, cake walk, basketball tournament and face painting.

Bazaar scheduled

The Holy Cross Lutheran Church Women's Guild is preparing for its third annual fall bazaar.

The event will be held from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sept. 16 at the Midland County Exhibit Building, 2445 E. Highway 80.

Those interested in renting a booth may do so by calling Thelma Leek, 520-8716, or Karen Riff, 570-1110. Booth rental fees are $25 for a 10 by 10 booth.

Registration begun

Sign up is underway for "A Time for Healing," a divorce recovery ministry, at Crestview Baptist Church, 3300 Thomas.

The study, which is based around the new book by Harold Ivan Smith, will begin June 4. Smith is among the country's top authorities on single adult issues and was a guest speaker at Crestview in January.

The nine-week course is built around daily reading assignments of 30 to 60 minutes and weekly learning and sharing sessions set for Sundays at 4:15 p.m. Child care is provided during the meetings.

Some of the topics to be covered include learning to view divorce as a process, not an event; learning to relinquish unhealthy attachments to the past; and learning to resist discounting relationships.

Cost is $10 for the materials, and non-members of Crestview are welcome. For more information call Rooster Fletcher, minister with single adults, 694-7701.

Summer Slam set

Summer Slam '95 is set for 7 p.m. June 15-17 at the Midland County Exhibit Building, 2445 E. Highway 80.

"'Summer Slam '94' originated because Mount Rose wanted to allow saved youth a place to celebrate during the Juneteenth Holiday," said Greg White, publicist for Greater Mount Rose Baptist Church.

"This vision has evolved into being a collective community effort. It has challenged your youth and allowed God to direct their paths and steer them from the worldly things of drugs, violence, gangs and strife of the streets."

Sponsored by Mount Rose Baptist Church, 211 N. Tyler St., the event includes a Get Acquainted Fellowship Session at Mount Rose June 15 from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Classes being conducted during Summer Slam '95 include choir, dance, drama, drug awareness and praise and worship. Also attending will be youth groups from Oklahoma, California, New Mexico and in Texas from Corpus Christi, Dallas, Lubbock, Brownwood and Lamesa.

The Summer Slam Choir, consisting of youth from 12 years old through adult, will rehearse from 6 to 8 p.m. Saturdays at Mount Rose. Terrance Williams and the Rev. Anthony Jackson are the directors. Wallace NcNary and Carl Smith are the musicians.

For more information call White, 520-6641, or Glenda Maston, youth director, 520-8133. Worship Warriors Ministries of Tulsa, Okla., will be conducting the seminars. Pastor of the church is the Rev. William C. Palmer.

Singles to meet

ODESSA— Singles Moving in Love and Evangelism (SMILE) will meet for lunch at 12:30 p.m. Sunday following church.

For the location, call Jon or Cindy Harrington, at work, 550-0005, or at home, 1-915-367-9344.

Chapel services set

Country Chapel, formerly Country Chapel Ministries, holds Sunday morning worship services at 10:30 a.m. in Prescott's Cafe near Water Wonderland between Midland and Odessa. Bible study there is at 7 p.m. each Tuesday. For more information, please call the Rev. Leonard Cotten, 561-8993.

Services held

Harvest Time Church, 8300 W. Highway 191, is holding services in its new facility at 10:15 a.m. and 6 p.m. Sunday.

The church is located 3 1/2 miles west of Loop 250 in the north side of the service road.

For more information call the Rev. Mike Benson, 697-5085 or 689-3730. A nursery will be provided for all services.

Services start

New Life Presbyterian Church has started worship services at Greathouse Elementary School, 5701 Greathouse Ave.

New Life Presbyterian Church is affiliated with the Presbyterian Church in America, a conservative Presbyterian denomination with more than 1,200 churches in North America.

Services will be weekly from 6:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. For more information call 694-6728 or 550-0348.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

SATURDAY, MAY 27, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Follow through on your hunches and money worries will become a thing of the past. Small businesses and limited partnerships get a welcome boost in September. Know your job and do it promptly. Romance will have you on pins and needles until you decide to fish or cut bait. Strong attractions make you hesitant to agree to a permanent commitment. Renew old friendships.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Louis Gossett Jr., dancer Isadora Duncan, famed movie villain Vincent Price, author Rachel Carson.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Financial worries will escalate if you engage in reckless spending. A second job could be the most practical answer to a temporary cash shortage.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Seek solitude to work on a complex task. Original ideas make a big impression on VIPs. If they offer to back a pet project, jump at the chance. Only minor strings will be attached.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Do not be afraid to try out new ideas. A comparative stranger could have a tremendous impact on your personal or professional future. Additional education or new computer skills will boost your earning potential.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Others may not share your timetable. Discuss any financial problems with experts, ignoring the advice of well-intentioned relatives. Keep a secret entrusted to you by an old friend. Widen your social circle.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Do not mistake someone's aloofness for a lack of interest. This person may be trying to play it cool! An unexpected check or gift arrives in the nick of time. Financial pressures subside.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An excellent day to share new activities or a favorite pastime with friends. Romance flourishes. Be on your guard if someone approaches you with an unusual financial proposal.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Avoid spending money on travel unless sure of results. Distant affairs improve, thanks to a friend's intervention. Be careful not to make any promises you cannot keep. Romance on the rebound may be short-lived.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A new approach is needed. Stop trying to do everything alone. Make a special effort to please loved ones you may have neglected lately. Spend a cozy evening at home and turn in early.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A good day to purchase equipment designed to reduce household drudgery. Accepting a last-minute invitation will introduce you to someone intriguing. Exercise greater patience when dealing with a little child. Keep your promises.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Welcome an opportunity to mix business with pleasure. A romantic night on the town could follow. Give a loved one the benefit of the doubt. Bringing up old grievances will only prolong a quarrel.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Yesterday's financial trend continues. Act quickly to cement a valuable business agreement. Older relatives may be more demanding than usual. Stand up for your rights. A new admirer pops up in an unexpected place.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): An irksome financial development could cause stress. Protect your savings. Refuse a friend's request for a loan. Active sports will hold special appeal later today. See if a family member wants to join you.

NEW YORK — She could turn the world on with her smile. So what effect would Mary Richards have in her undies?

Mary Tyler Moore will cavort in her underwear in a scene in the movie "Flirting With Disaster."

Moore won the role after arriving "dressed very sexily" for a meeting at a hotel, the director, David O. Russell, said in the June issue of GQ magazine.

Russell, mindful of Moore's wholesome image, originally wanted to cast her in a less provocative part. But the 57-year-old actress lobbied for the role, he said.

"Mary is not walking around the whole movie like some Marilyn Monroe type," Russell said. "We had a lot of conversations about it, and the role is not some cartoon."

WASHINGTON — Former Texas Gov. Ann Richards has a message for y'all: Buy your own Doritos.

"For those of you who come up to me in airports with a smirk on your face wanting to know if I have a bag of Doritos — I want you to know the point is you're supposed to buy them. I'm not supposed to give them to you," Richards told an amused crowd Thursday.

Richards and another Democratic governor who was turned out of office in November — New York's Mario Cuomo — taped a TV commercial for Doritos chips months ago.

Richards was in town as master of ceremonies for an 85th birthday roast of Texas journalist Sarah McClendon. The former governor kept the crowd in stitches with her jokes and deadpan delivery.

NEW YORK — Ringo Starr and his old Beatles bandmates felt strange recording a new song with the disembodied voice of John Lennon.

The good news for Beatlemaniacs, though, is that "Free As a Bird" "really sounds like a Beatle track," the drummer said Thursday.

The Beatles "could have made this in 1967," he said.

Starr joined Paul McCartney and George Harrison in working around an old Lennon vocal to create the new recording, one of two featured in a five-hour Beatles documentary airing in November.

Hearing Lennon's voice on tape wasn't easy, Starr said.

"It was pretty emotional," he said. "We had to feel that he's gone for a cup of tea, that he's gone on holiday, but he's still there. That was the only way I could get through it."

"I can't imagine where The Mirage would be without Siegfried & Roy," Mirage Resorts Inc. chairman Steve Wynn told stockholders Thursday. "None of this happens by magic or by accident."

Wynn said the illusionists have drawn 3.6 million people and generated $250 million in revenue since they began performing at the resort in 1990.

The 1,500-seat theater, formerly known as Theatre Mirage, has consistently drawn standing-room-only crowds.

LOS ANGELES — Louis Gossett Jr. wants a restraining order against a woman he says is sending him racist hate mail.

The actor filed the request in court Thursday against Mary Kay Nelson, who identifies herself in the letters only as "Crazy Mary."

Gossett, who won an Oscar as the hard-bitten drill instructor in "An Officer and a Gentleman," said her letters so unnerved him that he changed his Christmas plans in order to protect himself and his children.

He asked for an order to keep the woman away from him, his family and his property.

Nelson has been in jail since her arrest Jan. 4 on charges of battery on a police officer and resisting arrest.

Itinerant ministers serve as old-time 'circuit-riders' did

By Gustav Niebuhr
N.Y. Times News Service

BINFORD, N.D. — The Rev. Eric Hulstrand, a slim young man with an engaging manner, figures he will put 20,000 miles on his four-wheel-drive Suzuki Sidekick driving to church this year.

The Lutheran pastor does not travel a simple road between home and pulpit, but a long, looping circuit over a web of rural blacktop that bisects seemingly endless miles of farmland.

Hulstrand serves eight small congregations in three counties, a duty he shares with one other full-time and equally peripatetic minister and a pair of part-timers, one of them his wife, Pam.

Say "circuit rider" and, chances are, it will conjure up a worn sepia image of a black-coated man on horseback, a Bible in his saddlebag.

The picture is outdated, as Hulstrand can attest, but the job is taking on new life, the result of large-scale changes afoot in the nation's major denominations.

In rural America, there have always been small churches that shared a pastor. But these days, denominational leaders increasingly speak of more churches forced by necessity to experiment with ministries in a way that is far removed from the traditional ideal of one pastor serving one congregation.

These experiments involve training lay people in ministerial duties, sometimes with a visiting minister or priest acting as mentor; creating "yoked" churches, with two or more congregations served by an itinerant minister, or trying some combination of both concepts.

"Among all the denominational leaders I talk with," said John Bennett, director of program for the Missouri School of Religion Center for Rural Ministry, "I think there is a readiness and an openness to consider a variety of models in this part of the country."

Indeed, Bennett said the Presbyterian Church (USA) recently produced a document listing 17 "pastoral options" for small churches, in addition to the traditional model of a single full-time pastor. Increasingly, he said, churches "look to lay ministry, yoked ministry."

There are no statistics to measure the extent to which such forms of ministry have grown, but Protestant officials say that economics, more than any other factor, has fueled them. Small church budgets, they say, cannot meet the rising cost of having a full-time minister.

"To support a pastor in ministry in the United Methodist Church, you're talking about a $45,000 to $50,000 salary package," said Robert Kohler, the director of the denomination's division of ordained ministry.

Kohler said that the Methodists were "using more and more lay people with special training in ministry" to keep small congregations alive. Sometimes, lay ministers work with clergypeople who may specialize in religious education or youth ministry. "It creates a team approach to ministry," he said.

Among Roman Catholics, a declining number of priests has meant that more priests who serve in rural areas have taken on an itinerant role, saying Mass in multiple parishes and performing marriages while nuns, deacons and lay people take on the daily administrative and even pastoral duties.

A similar arrangement prevails in small, isolated synagogues whose congregations bring in a rabbi to lead High Holidays services and officiate at bar and bat mitzvahs and weddings, but leave regular services to lay people.

The Hulstrands belong to the 5.2-million-member Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, the nation's third-largest Protestant denomination. Nearly 10 percent of the denomination's 9,703 pastors with congregations are serving two or more churches, said the Rev. David Alderfer, the denomination's director for rosters and statistics.

Three years ago, officials at the Lutherans' Chicago headquarters produced a study showing that one-third of their 11,000 congregations drew no more than 50 people each Sunday and had annual budgets of $60,000 or less.

Sooner or later, most of those will "not be able to support a full-time pastoral leader," said Mac Minnick, the denomination's executive director for outreach.

Associated Press

How often should churches offer Holy Communion? How young a child may receive the sacrament? Should both wine and grape juice be offered at the Lord's Supper?

The answers: Weekly. Infants. And hold the grape juice.

Addressing theological matters both large and small, a task force of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America is attempting to define what holds Lutherans together in their most important expressions of faith, while recognizing that not all congregations celebrate the sacraments the same way.

The discussion on the sacraments is welcomed by some as focusing attentions on the church's strengths in an age of the sometimes entertainment-propelled superchurch.

"It's an invitation to things that are really deeper, more full of the Gospel of Christ and more full of the great tradition of the Lutheran Church," said the Rev. Gordon Lathrop, a task force member from Lutheran Theological Seminary in Philadelphia.

The first draft of "The Use of the Means of Grace" was sent out recently to congregations, which have been given a year to respond. The task force will draw up a second report to be sent to the ELCA Church Council in the fall of 1996. The final report is scheduled to be presented to the denomination's policy-making body, the Churchwide Assembly, in 1997.

The task force report sets down few rules — "as though any of our practices were divine law" — but does encourage major changes in the way many of the denomination's 11,000 congregations approach the sacraments.

Perhaps the biggest change is the recommendation that churches recapture the Lutheran tradition set down in the Apology of the Augsburg Confession of celebrating Communion weekly.

Chaps claim second national title in four years

■ Midland College shoots tournament-best 287 to expand the one-stroke lead it held for the first three rounds to a 12-shot blowout of the defending national champion.

Staff Report

MESA, Ariz. — Delnor Poss said all along this was the best golf team he had ever had at Midland College. Friday the Chaparrals proved it by winning the National Junior College Athletic Association championship for the second time in four years.

The Chaps turned a nip-and-tuck battle into a blowout with the tournament's best team round of 287 Friday. Their four-day total of 1,172 beat second-place Scottsdale Community College by 12 strokes. Midland College had led Scottsdale by one stroke after each of the first three rounds at Alta Mesa Country Club.

"This team has accomplished more than any team we've had," Poss said. "They've won more tournaments, set more records and had more low scores. This is just the culmination of that."

It is the 11th national championship for Midland College, Poss said.

The Chaps opened up a seven-stroke lead on the front nine behind one-under par play from Jason Garduno, Graham Davidson and Derrick Pursley.

"That gave us a cushion to relax and we shot the second nine well," Poss said.

Davidson finished with a 2-under par 70 and Pursley, the medalist runner-up, shot a one-under 71. Garduno

Spurs stop Rocket rout

■ San Antonio climbs back into Western Conference finals with 107-102 victory over Houston.

By Bob Baum
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — Forget that Rocket rout. Put away the broom. The San Antonio Spurs aren't Lone Star losers after all.

The Spurs, their season in its death throes after two home losses to Houston, climbed back into the Western Conference finals Friday night with a 107-102 road victory, snapping Houston's five-game playoff winning streak.

The Rockets still lead the best-of-7 series 2-1 with Game 4 Sunday in Houston.

"Hopefully this is the kick-start to the Spurs," said San Antonio's David Robinson, "and now we can get back to playing the way we know we're capable of playing."

Hakeem Olajuwon scored 43 points and blocked five shots on the heels of his 41-point performance in Wednesday's 106-96 victory. This time, his supporting cast, so reliable in the first two games, failed as San Antonio rallied from 11 points down early in the third quarter, then broke away from an 89-89 tie over the final six minutes.

For the first time in the series, the Spurs looked like the team that had the league's best record at 62-20.

Avery Johnson, who had 20 points and 13 assists, made five of six free throws in the final 45 seconds to clinch the victory and assure a Game 5 next Tuesday night in San Antonio. The Spurs' point guard, playing despite a sore right ankle, had no turnovers.

"Our defensive intensity was through the sky," said Robinson, the league's MVP. "The last couple of games we were disjointed."

Robinson scored six of his 29 points during an 11-2 outburst that put the Spurs ahead 100-91 with 2:05 to play. But, as usual, the defending NBA champions didn't die easily.

Robert Horry made his fourth 3-pointer with 1:48 to play to make it 101-94, then after San Antonio's Dennis Rodman made one of two free throws, Kenny Smith made his fourth 3 of the game to cut the lead to 101-97 with 1:27 to go.

Olajuwon, proving he is mortal, missed a 14-footer and Johnson made two free throws with 45 seconds to play.

Olajuwon's 3-pointer with 32 seconds left sliced the lead to 103-100. But Johnson made two free throws with 26 seconds to go, then made one of two with 16 seconds remaining to make it 106-100.

"We were overdue for a performance and we finally got one," San Antonio coach Bob Hill said.

Vinny Del Negro, who scored just 12 points in the two previous games, tied his career playoff high with 19 for the Spurs.

Aggies lose; Tech, Texas rained out

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — Evan Thomas won his 15th game of the year and Florida International rallied with four runs in the fifth inning to beat Texas A&M 9-5 on Friday in the opening round of the NCAA Atlantic II Regional.

In the Midwest Region II, the Texas Tech game against Providence as well as Texas' contest with Oklahoma were rained out. In the South, Rice defeated Louisiana State 15-7.

Thomas (15-2) had the second-highest victory total in the nation during the season and he proved why on Friday. He went eight innings, giving up seven hits and striking out 10. Justin Atchley (9-5) took the loss for the Aggies. Atchley worked 5 2-3 innings, giving up 10 hits.

Florida International received offensive firepower from Francisco Lebron and Malcolm Warfield. Lebron hit a home run and drove in four runs. Jeff Bailey's three-run home run helped put Texas A&M ahead 5-1 in the second.

Florida International (50-9) stormed back. Trailing 5-2 in the fifth, the Panthers scored four runs, aided by a pair of Texas A&M errors. The Aggies had a total of five errors.

The winning run came on a fielding error by Aggies first baseman John Curl, allowing Dorian Speed to score, putting Florida International ahead 6-5.

Puckett collects 1000th RBI but Rangers get three from Clark to beat Twins, 6-5

The Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Will Clark homered and drove in three runs, and Otis Nixon had four hits as the Texas Rangers beat Minnesota 6-5 Friday night.

Nixon, who had two doubles, two singles and scored twice, had the third four-hit game of his career.

Bob Tewksbury (3-1) allowed four runs and nine hits in six innings, walked one and struck out three.

Kirby Puckett collected his 1,000th career RBI with a third-inning double for the Twins.

Minnesota's Kevin Tapani (2-3) gave up six runs, five earned, and 10 hits over 5 1-3 innings. He walked three and struck out two as his ERA climbed to 5.66. The

COM director bids for WAC meet

Staff Report

Midland's Mabee Memorial Aquatic Center is barely two months removed from having hosted two national level swimming and diving competitions. And center director Brad Swendig is already on the trail of another major swim meet for Mabee's Abell-Hanger Pool.

Abell-Hanger is on a list of four facilities the Western Athletic Conference is considering as sites for its swimming and diving championships. If the WAC selects the Midland pool for meets in 1997 or beyond, it would keep Mabee at the forefront of swimming facilities in the Southwest.

"The worse thing we can do is drop out of sight right now," Swendig said. "Getting the WAC meet would be a chance for us to kind of solidify ourselves at the Rebel, Bulldog team tie for Stampede lead

By Mike Butts
Sports Writer

One thing the first day of the Ranchland Hills Country Club Stampede proved is Rebels and Bulldogs don't stay rivals forever.

Midland High's Josh Jacobs and Midland Lee graduate Matt Clements put aside past differences and combined for a first-round score of 65 to tie for first place in the two-man, low ball tournament Friday. Don Pyle and Chris Brown also shot 65 in the championship flight.

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

"We've known each other for three or four years so there's a little rivalry there," said Clements, who finished his Lee tenure in 1994 and now plays golf at Western Texas College. He and Clements often went head-to-head in high school. But the two had never teamed up before this tournament.

After Friday's round Jacobs, who attends graduation ceremonies for Midland High today, was quick to remind Clements that his Bulldogs have beaten Lee the last couple of years in golf. Not used to playing for money, Clements, 20, and Jacobs, 17, started out a little nervously Friday.

Former San Francisco slugger Mitchell abrubtly leaves Japan

TOKYO (AP) — Going ... going ... gone. That's what the Fukuoka Daiei Hawks had in mind when they signed slugger Kevin Mitchell, and that's exactly what they got.

Mitchell, who is under suspension and hasn't played since May 7 because of a knee the Hawks aren't so sure is so sore, reportedly was en route to Los Angeles.

The San Francisco Giants, for whom he won National League MVP honors in 1989, have said in recent weeks that they may be interested in Mitchell. The outfielder's agent, Joe Sroba, refused to say anything about the situation.

The Hawks said Japanese doctors believe the injury was not serious enough to sideline Mitchell. The team asked him to go to a farm club while recuperating.

He refused and said he wanted to return to the United States for treatment.

Setoyama said the matter will be dealt with over the next few days.

Mitchell, 33, left the Cincinnati Reds as a free agent to play for the Hawks for $4.5 million guaranteed, the highest salary ever paid in Japanese baseball.

When the May payday came Thursday, the Hawks didn't have a check for Mitchell. It cost him $388,000.

"I won't play if I don't get money," he said.

And he probably won't be getting any more of it from the Hawks.

"The pay suspension was a penalty for violation of the contract so far," Setoyama said. "If the case is brought to the court, we are ready to cope with it."

Mitchell said he twisted his right knee while catching a fly ball April 15. He sat out the next day's game, but returned to action April 18 and played until pulling out again May 7. The club removed him from its 28-man roster May 17.

While Mitchell hit 211 homers in 11 seasons split among the New York Mets, San Diego, San Francisco, Seattle and Cincinnati, his recent injury history was not good. Every year since 1990, he has been on the disabled list.

In his MVP season, Mitchell had league highs of 47 homers and 125 RBIs while batting .291.

Rookie hurls shut out for Phillies

The Associated Press

■ NL Roundup

PHILADELPHIA — Rookie Michael Mimbs pitched a two-hitter for his first major league shutout as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the San Diego Padres 2-0 Friday night.

Mimbs (3-1) allowed a double to Ken Caminiti in the second and a double to Andujar Cedeno in the eighth. He struck out four and walked one in the first shutout by a Phillies rookie since Ben Rivera defeated St. Louis 10-0 in September, 1992.

Braves 8, Astros 3

HOUSTON — Rookie Chipper Jones had three hits, including his seventh homer of the year, as Atlanta beat Houston to hand the Astros their fourth straight loss.

The Braves got to Greg Swindell (3-2) for eight hits and six runs in 1 1-3 innings. After Atlanta got a run in the first, Mike Kelly and Marquis Grissom had two-run homers in the second and Fred McGriff added an RBI single that knocked out Swindell and made it 6-0. Kent Merker (2-1) picked up the win with five innings of work, giving up six hits and three runs with two walks and two strikeouts.

The Astros got a run in the bottom of the second on Scott Servais' RBI single, but Atlanta hit another homer in fourth when Jones reached the third deck in right field off Dave Veras.

Reds 4, Cardinals 3

ST. LOUIS — Cincinnati made it five straight victories and nine of 11 as Barry Larkin's two-out single capped a three-run seventh inning in a victory over St. Louis.

The Cardinals wasted a strong effort from 29-year-old rookie Mark Petkovsek, making his first start in nearly four seasons, and lost for the eighth time in 11 games. St. Louis led 3-0 after five innings.

Pirates 4, Rockies 2

PITTSBURGH — Paul Wagner won as a starter for the first time in nearly a year, holding Colorado to three hits in seven innings as Pittsburgh beat the Rockiest.

Wagner (1-5) hadn't won a start since last June 26 against New York, a span in which he was 0-8 with a 7.40 ERA, including 0-5 and 7.34 this year. Wagner was aided by four double plays, including one in each of the first three innings.

He also controlled the middle of the Rockies' order, holding Dante Bichette, Larry Walker and Andres Galarraga to a combined 0-for-8. Entering the game, they were 14-for-28 lifetime against Wagner.

Dave Clark drove in two runs with a double in a three-run sixth inning that carried the Pirates to their seventh win in nine games.

Jay Bell and Orlando Merced started the inning with singles against Juan Acevedo (2-3) before Clark grounded a double just past first baseman Andres Galarraga. Clark scored on Mark Johnson's single.

Marlins 5, Cubs 3

CHICAGO — Tommy Gregg, Kurt Abbott and Charles Johnson hit solo home runs as Florida beat Chicago for just its fourth win in the last 18 games.

Johnson led off the seventh with his second home run of the season, breaking a 3-3 tie against Mike Perez (0-2).

Pat Rapp (1-3), who had lost his last four decisions, scattered nine hits over six innings and gave up three runs. Rapp, who struck out five and walked two, earned his first win since Aug. 6, 1994, when he beat the New York Mets.

Robb Nen, the fourth Florida pitcher, pitched the ninth inning for his first save and only the Marlins' second this season.

The Marlins added an insurance run in the eighth, when Gary Sheffield led off with a single, stole second and went to third on an infield out. With the infield pulled in, Greg Colbrunn grounded to shortstop Shawon Dunston, whose throw home was too late as Sheffield scored standing up.

Expos 9, Dodgers 4

MONTREAL — Gil Heredia struck out a career-high eight and Tim Laker drove in three runs Friday night as the Montreal Expos beat Los Angeles 9-4, ending the Dodgers' three-game winning streak.

Heredia (2-3) worked 6 2-3 innings, allowing four runs on eight hits. He left with a 9-2 lead. Dodgers starter Ramon Martinez (4-3) had his worst outing of the season, allowing seven runs on six hits in four-plus innings.

Montreal's four-run second inning ended a stretch of 24 scoreless innings by Dodgers pitchers. Rondell White opened with a double and Mike Lansing followed with an RBI single. After Mark Grudzielanek was hit by a pitch, Laker's double made it 3-0 and Frazier's sacrifice fly made it 4-0.

Giants 6, Mets 4

NEW YORK — Darren Lewis broke a ninth-inning tie with an RBI single and Royce Clayton drove in three runs as San Francisco beat New York, extending the Mets' losing streak to six games.

New York reliever Doug Henry (1-3) entered the game in the ninth and gave up a leadoff double to Mark Carreon. Jeff Reed sacrificed, but Henry misplayed the bunt for an error and Lewis followed with a single. One out later, reliever Eric Gunderson threw a wild pitch that allowed Reed to score from third.

Mark Dewey (1-0) got the victory, pitching one-hit relief over 1 2-3 innings. Rod Beck pitched the ninth for his sixth save.

AL: Clark claims fifth homer of season; Gibson leads Tigers

(From 1C)

Clark hit his fifth homer of the season after Jeff Frye singled with one out in the first. Mickey Tettleton followed with an upper deck shot to right, his seventh, giving the Rangers their first back-to-back home runs of the season and a 3-0 lead.

In the third, Nixon doubled, took third on Frye's single and scored when Clark grounded into a double play.

Back-to-back doubles by Alex Cole and Puckett and an RBI single by Pedro Munoz brought the Twins to 4-2 in the third.

Tigers 8, White Sox 7

DETROIT — Kirk Gibson's two-run homer with two outs in the bottom of the ninth gave Detroit a victory overChicago.

The White Sox had taken a one-run lead in eighth on Tim Raines' solo homer. Raines homered with one out off Tigers reliever Buddy Groom to break a 6-6 tie.

John Kruk drove in three runs in his third game with the White Sox. All of Kruk's RBIs came after intentional walks to Frank Thomas, who has been intentionally walked eight times this season.

Jim Abbott's shortest start of the season lasted just 2 2-3 innings when the Tigers batted around for four runs in the third.

A walk and five straight two-out hits, including a two-run single from Cecil Fielder and RBI singles by Travis Fryman and Juan Samuel, finished Abbott.

The White Sox, who had taken a 3-0 lead off Tigers starter Sean Bergman on Kruk's two-run double to center in the first and Mike LaValliere's RBI single in the second, took advantage of an error to regain the lead in the fourth.

Indians 7, Blue Jays 4

TORONTO — Omar Vizquel led off the eighth inning with the go-ahead home run, and Paul Sorrento and Manny Ramirez each homered twice to give Cleveland a win over Toronto.

Vizquel sent Pat Hentgen's 0-1 pitch over the wall in right-center to break a 3-3 tie and send Toronto to its eighth loss in 10 games. It was Vizquel's third homer of the season — a career high — and all have come in the past week. The light-hitting shortstop had seven career homers entering the 1995 season.

Jim Thome added an RBI single, and Ramirez hit his second homer of the game, a two-run shot, and 11th of the season.

Hentgen (3-2) allowed a Blue Jays-record five home runs — he was also the last of nine Toronto pitchers to give up four homers in a game, on May 12, 1993, against Detroit.

Ramirez and Sorrento hit back-to-back solo home runs in the fifth to tie the score at 3-3. With one out, Ramirez sent a 1-0 pitch into the second deck in left.

Sorrento, whose leadoff homer in the third made the score 1-0, followed with his 10th of the season — his second multi-homer game of the season and the seventh of his career.

The Indians have 46 home runs in 25 games, putting them on pace for 265 in this shortened season. That would shatter the record of 240 set by 1961 Yankees.

Royals 8, Brewers 3

Appier (6-1) gave up nine hits and three walks in 6 1-3 innings, but worked his way out of two bases-loaded jams and stranded eight Milwaukee runners.

Appier's five strikeouts give him a major league-best 58 in 56 1-3 innings, and he lowered his ERA to 1.91.

The loss was Milwaukee's sixth straight at home and 10th in the last 13 games.

Athletics 4, Yankees 3

OAKLAND, Calif. — Terry Steinbach homered for the third straight game, a two-run shot in the seventh inning that gave Oakland a win over stumbling New York.

Sterling Hitchcock was working on a one-hitter for New York when Steinbach hit his fifth homer of the season, sending the Yankees to their fourth straight loss.

It was the third straight come-from-behind win for the A's, who have won 12 of their last 16.

Shaq causes Pacer problems

■ Orlando center is finally putting up the kind of numbers he did in the regular season.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Finally putting up the kind of numbers in the playoffs he was accustomed to getting during the regular season, Shaquille O'Neal is hurting the Indiana Pacers every which way.

If he isn't dunking in the face of Rik Smits, Antonio Davis or some other assortment of Indiana double-teamers, he's popping the ball out to Anfernee Hardaway, and one of Orlando's hot perimeter shooters is knocking in a 3-pointer.

That's the way it's been in the first two games of the NBA Eastern Conference finals, and with his team down 2-0 going into today's game at Market Square Arena, it was hardly surprising that Pacers coach Larry Brown put in some serious time in front of the videotape machine Friday.

Brown's conclusion was somewhat of a surprise. He came out thinking Orlando's 12 3-pointers Thursday night — including the one by Nick Anderson that clinched the 119-114 victory — weren't necessarily the result of double-teamming O'Neal.

"We went over the film, and we didn't get hurt when we helped on Shaq, like everybody thought," Brown said. "Only one time when Shaq kicked it out did they make an open three. They beat us in transition. When they got the offensive rebound, they kicked it out and got the open shot. And they penetrated a lot of times and got other people open.

"We had problems all over the court, not just on Shaquille."

Magic forward Horace Grant had the same assessment as Brown.

"That's a mistake if you don't double-team the big guy," he said. "He'll kill you. I think they have to double-team a little harder and have their rotations down when the ball comes back out."

O'Neal has come alive against the Pacers, scoring 71 points on 70 percent shooting in the first two games. In the first two rounds against Boston and Chicago, he averaged 23.6 points per game and shot 50 percent.

Even his foul shooting is better, up to 70 percent from 62 percent during the first two rounds. O'Neal shot 53 percent during the regular season.

"We've got to cut down his percentage a little and not give him as easy a look as he's getting," Brown said. "If you've got him shooting well, and making free throws, and the perimeter players knocking down 3-pointers, then you're in trouble."

"I say to myself we have a chance to win it (a championship) this year," he said. "If we do all the right things, make all the right decisions, we can win it this year and I can retire at age 23. I can lean back and chill."

With just over a minute to play Thursday night, dead-eye Dennis Scott put up a shot from behind the 3-point line. It didn't hit the rim, but it did hit the waiting hands of O'Neal, who went up for the putback and was fouled by Rik Smits.

O'Neal hit both free throws, the Magic led by four, and they went on to win.

"I don't think you can stop him," said Smits, whose game has suffered as a result of his concentration on O'Neal. "We've got to make sure nobody else gets the shots. We talked about that a little today."

Smits recalled a game during the 1993-94 season in which O'Neal scored 49 but the Pacers won 111-105 by shutting down his teammates.

Indiana figures the Magic, who shot 52 percent in Game 1 and 57 in Game 2, have to cool off. And Market Square Arena, smaller but just as noisy as the Magic's home court, hasn't been friendly, either.

Orlando hasn't won a regular-season or playoff game there since Nov. 27, 1992.

"We're not worried about what happened in the regular season or in the past," Magic coach Brian Hill said. "We're just going to concern ourselves with what we have to do to go in there tommorrow and win a game. I don't think that should be dwelling on their minds."

Hailey signs with JUCO

Midland High's Jumon Hailey, who topped off his senior year by being named as District 4-5A"s Most Valuable Player, signed a scholarship agreement today to continue his basketball career at Trinity Valley Junior College in Athens.

Hailey cited Trinity Valley's coaching staff's experience and the fact that the program has produced 12 all-americans and NBA stars Nick Van Exel of the Los Angeles Lakers and Shawn Kemp of the Seattle SuperSonics.

"The thing that made me decide on Trinity Valley was the fact that the coach (Leon Spencer) has been there a great amount of time," said Hailey. "He's been there at least 30 years and I know I will be dealing with someone who knows the game."

Hailey, a 6-foot-2 forward who averaged a team-high 22 points a game, led the Bulldogs to the Class 5A playoffs before they lost in the area round to El Paso Irvin. He was also the second-leading scorer behind Donald Carter on the 1994 team that claimed a Region I championship and a state tournament berth.

"I was in a winning program and by going to Trinity Valley, I'm right back into a winning program," he said, "The location is excellent. It's a small town and there's nothing much to do. So I'll be there just to play basketball and get my education.

"I want to be able to develop my game and get it ready for the next level," he said.

Hailey, who finished his academic career at MHS with a 4.0 grade point average on a 5.0 scale, said he will probably major in mathematics but is not totally decided.

M. Christian grad wins high jump

EMPORIA, Kan. — Christy Boles, a 1990 graduate of Midland Christian High, won the high jump at the NCAA Division II Track and Field Championships here Friday. Boles' jump of five feet, nine and 3/4 inches paced Abilene Christian University's women's team to a lead on the second day of the three-day event at Emporia State University. She scored 10 points with her win.

Abilene Christian has 43 1/2 points.

and Euan Little shot 73s and Jason Brooks shot 75. Pursley, a freshman from Andrews, became the fourth Chap to finish as national medalist runner-up.

"It was just an outstanding team effort and that was the case through the entire year," Poss said. "It was truly a team effort."

Scottsdale's final round score of 298 was their worst round of the tournament. Robert Russell of Kansas City Community College won medalist with a 287 total, one ahead of Pursley's 288.

The win kept a string alive for MC of finishing no worse than third in the NJCAA tournament for the last six years. The Chaps last won the title in '92

"We've had a really good stretch of play," Poss said. "We should be considered one of the best programs in the nation."

Davidson and Pursley made first-team all-American with their scores. Little made the second team and Garduno the third. It was the first time Midland College had four players make all-American.

"They're all a bunch of fine young gentleman and it shows in the way they play," Poss said.

Former Midland High golfer Jeremiah Luttrell of Odessa College made honorable mention all-American. Poss and the Chap golfers dedicated the win to volunteer assistant coach Dub Warden. Poss was named junior college coach of the year.

rible," and Clements called it "terrible." They stood one-over par after four holes.

But they birdied No. 5 and picked things up on the back nine.

Clements birdied five, seven and nine and the pair birdied 12 and 13. Then Jacobs, who will play for Midland College next school year, shot an eagle on No. 14.

Clements, who is Jacobs' guest in the member-guest format, was surprised at Ranchland's greens.

"I'm not used to these greens," Clements said. "To me Ranchland is slower greens and they were pretty quick today so I had trouble lagging by putts."

Pyle won the tournament several years ago when rain canceled the last two rounds. He is playing with Brown, another former Lee golfer, for the first time.

"We just made good partners," Pyle said. "We complement each other. When he is in trouble I'm there and vice-versa. (But) he doesn't need a lot of help. He hits it pretty good."

When Jacobs was asked if he planned to tone down the graduation celebration Saturday in preparation for Sunday's final round, his answer came quickly.

"No," the MHS senior said. "We tee off late Sunday anyway."

SPURS: San Antonio gets aggressive

while Sean Elliott scored 21.

"We're just trying to be aggressive," Del Negro said. "We got some easy baskets. We got more of our style of play. We hadn't been doing that. We got the ball out quick and we attacked the basket."

The Spurs outscored the Rockets by 15 points at the foul line, where they were 26-for-32, compared with 11-for-13 for Houston. The Rockets were called for 26 fouls, San Antonio for 15.

"Thirty-two free throws to 13 is a monster of a killer," Houston coach Rudy Tomjanovich said.

The Spurs held an emotional team meeting before coming to Houston on Thursday, but Robinson said it was time to forget all the talking.

"You have those team meetings and everybody talks. Everybody has an opinion," Robinson said. "None of that stuff means anything. All that it boils down to is are you going to come out on the floor and do what you need to do to win?"

In the second half, the Rockets finally began showing the effects of playing their 13th game in 24 days.

San Antonio outscored Houston 25-11 to start the third quarter as the Rockets made just four of their first 14 shots of the period and went 4 1/2 minutes without a point.

"Thirty two free throws to 13 is a monster of a killer."
— Rudy Tomjanovich, Houston Rockets coach

But Olajuwon owned the end of the quarter. He scored seven of Houston's last nine points, including a jumper with four seconds to go that put the Rockets back on top 80-79 at the end of the period.

The Rockets' cold third quarter was in stark contrast to their first, when they were as hot as the audacious fireworks that precede Houston home games.

They made 6-of-8 3-pointers in the first quarter, including 3-of-3 by Horry, to take a 37-31 lead. Houston shot 62 percent from the field in the period, then Olajuwon scored the first five points of the second period to put the Rockets ahead 42-31.

Olajuwon, who had 19 points by then, sat down for a short rest and the Spurs came roaring back. Chuck Person, who had been virtually shut out in the first two games in San Antonio, capped a 13-0 run with the first of his three 3-pointers that put the Spurs ahead 44-41 6:56 before halftime.

But once again, the Rockets took control from long range. Drexler scored seven as Houston outscored the Spurs 14-3 over the final five minutes of the half to go ahead 61-52. Drexler and Kenny Smith capped the run with 3-pointers. Houston was 9-for-15 from 3-point range in the first two quarters but 4-for-14 in the second half.

(From 1C)

national level."

The pool, which opened in June of '93, hosted the Speedo Junior National Championships West in March and the Phillips 66 National Diving Championships in April.

"We got a lot of people from across the country who have seen the pool and been impressed with it," Swendig said. "But when we make new bids memories fade quickly. And we want to stay in the spotlight."

The city council passed a resolution May 17 to provide $100,000 dollars of the hotel and motel tax fund to the City of Midland Aquatics to help acquire the meet. The Federal Way swimming facility in Seattle will host the WAC meet next year.

"After that it's up in the air," Swendig said. "We could be in a rotation with other facilities. We are proposing that they come to Midland five years in a row starting in '97 and what we are offering $25,000 per year."

The other facilities bidding for the competition are the Federal Way, Oklahoma City Community College and Palo Alto College (San Antonio). Abell-Hanger's best chance could be to beat out Oklahoma City or Palo Alto, which may have made up part of a three-site rotation with Federal Way.

"It appeared they had set the rotation but they weren't really happy with two of the sites," Swendig said. "And before they finalize it they're going to listen to our bid."

The WAC has picked up former three teams from the Southwest Conference — SMU, Rice and TCU — and has 16 teams in its proposed new lineup.

COM also has its sights set on one of the twice-a-year Texas Age Group Swimming Championships and the high school Region I meet.

"Our biggest problem here was credibility," Swendig said. "People didn't know whether we could do a good job or whether Midland could handle large meets ... if nothing else we established that we can do it."

DALLAS (AP) — The Southwest Conference elected a president, but no commissioner, before adjourning its final spring meeting Friday.

Dr. Tom Adair of Texas A&M will begin the last presidential term in the dying conference's 82-year history on July 1. Exactly one year later, each of the eight SWC schools will split up to join three other conferences.

Baylor, Texas, Texas A&M and Texas Tech will join Big 8 schools to form the Big 12 Conference; Rice, Southern Methodist and Texas Tech will become members of an expanded Western Athletic Conference; and Houston will be a charter member of the new Conference USA.

The final meeting included a heavy docket of voting by member schools, but the soon-to-be-vacant commissioner's post remain unfilled.

Published reports Friday said that Kyle Kallander, SWC assistant commissioner since 1992, would be appointed to succeed Steve Hatchell, who will take over the same duties with the Big 12 on July 1.

Son skeptical about Andretti luck

INDIANAPOLIS — Michael Andretti believes more in preparation than luck, even if everyone else talks about a family curse at Indianapolis.

Since his father, Mario, won the race in 1969, both of the Andrettis have come tantalizingly close to taking the checkered flag at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, only to have it jerked away by some outside force.

There have been crashes, mechanical ills and just about every kind of fateful twist to keep either from winning the world's richest and most prestigious race.

"I talk about luck and I say luck and all that, I just don't believe in it," Michael said. "Maybe there's a reason why I haven't won this race. Maybe I'm just not ready for it, or maybe there's reasons why Dad hasn't (won).

"If it's going to happen, it's going to happen. You can't cry over it. As long as I've done everything in my power to make it happen, that's all I can do. The rest is up to other forces."

There is a possibility of rain on Sunday, which could shorten the race.

"It could change the way people run," Michael said. "Obviously, in the race, if it looks like it's going to rain, you want to make sure you're right up in front, if you can.

"Maybe that's what it'll take for me to win this thing, to have it shortened. It seems like if it was a 400-mile race, I'd have won it a few times, and Dad, too."

Mario won't win it again. He retired after the 1994 season.

That leaves the job to Michael, who, going into his 11th Indy 500, is again the favorite to win — at least among the oddsmakers.

Asked how he would react to finally putting another Andretti in Victory Lane here, Michael blinked and said, "I don't even think about it. I think it would be huge. I think it would be probably more of a relief feeling than anything. But we'll never know until we get there."

Even if he does prevail, it will be in a year when the powerful Team Penske, winners of a record 10 Indy 500s, will not even have a driver in the race.

Al Unser Jr. and Emerson Fittipaldi, both two-time winners, failed to come up with enough speed to make the 33-car field — a shock to everyone.

"I'll be looking for red and white (Penske) cars coming up behind me, yeah. It's really going to be strange," Michael said. "It's going to be a weird race. First, Dad not being here and now Al and Emmo. Who would ever have thought that?

More Sports/8C

"But life goes on. I'm going to miss not having them in here because, even if you win it, they'll say, 'Well, those two guys weren't in it.' But I guess it just shows how competitive the series is. If you hiccup one little bit, you can be out of the show."

Michael himself has had the experience of missing this race.

In 1993, Andretti chose to give Formula One a try. He spent only that season on the globe-hopping Grand Prix circuit, and wound up watching the Indy 500 from a VIP suite.

"It's going to be a killer for Al. It's going to be a killer for Emmo. And it's going to be a killer for Dad," Andretti said. "It was a strange feeling watching that race. It's like something wasn't right. So I know they're going to feel very uncomfortable on race day."

In the final analysis, the younger Andretti, the leading active winner in Indy-car racing, needs to win Indy to complete his portfolio.

"I think every driver dreams about winning this race," he said wistfully. "You know, this is the biggest race in the world and somewhere along the line you always dream about being a winner here. But it's a dream. Now, we've got to make it a reality."

Team Menard, Luyendyk unhappy with U.S. Auto Club popoff valves

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — When the talk turns to popoffs at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, it has nothing to do with loudmouths.

Every race car that runs in the Indianapolis 500 is equipped by the sanctioning U.S. Auto Club with a popoff valve, a mechanical device that limits the amount of air pressure to the turbocharger, thereby limiting horsepower.

When a driver pushes down the accelerator too fast, the valve opens and a lot of the power goes away. If the turbocharger does not get its full amount of pressure, its performance is severely restricted until the driver backs off and the valve is reset.

At least one team in Sunday's Indianapolis 500 isn't happy with the valves it's getting from USAC, and that's Team Menard, with two cars in the front row.

Both Scott Brayton, who won the pole, and Arie Luyendyk, who will start No. 2 in the 33-car field, had problems with getting the full amount of boost from their valves on Thursday in the final practice session before the race. Teammate Buddy Lazier, who will start farther back in the field, was almost at full boost. It's the turbocharger boost advantage that places Brayton and Luyendyk among the favorites on Sunday.

The Menard V6 engine, a direct descendent of the Buick stock block, has been granted special status by the sanctioning U.S. Auto Club, with 55 inches of boost compared to 45 for the conventional Indy V8s used by every other team. But Larry Curry, the team manager, said neither of the top Menard drivers was getting the full amount.

"Scott and Arie's cars were both low on boost," Curry said. "Maybe one had 53.1 (inches). Buddy was pretty close at about 54.5.

"Part of fixing problems is believing you have one. There's a problem with the popoff valve. It's not fixed. The unfortunate thing is that this time it was low. Is it going to be low Sunday? Is it going to be high? Is it going to be lower?"

With no practice for Coca-Cola 600, drivers focus on Grand National CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — The troubles dogging Ken Schrader for nearly a month went away Friday.

■ NASCAR

Schrader led every inch of the way in cruising to a three-length victory over Ted Musgrave in a 40-lap qualifying race for today's Red Dog 300 NASCAR Busch Grand National event at Charlotte Motor Speedway.

The victory was worth a mere $500 and guaranteed Schrader just the 33rd starting spot in Saturday's 43-car lineup. But the fact that the qualifying race wasn't a disaster for Schrader made it stand apart from what's been happening to him at race tracks in recent weeks.

"Well, what do you know. We're actually ahead of the game," a smiling Schrader said as he relaxed in the back of his hauler after the race.

On April 30, Schrader charged from the 20th starting spot in the Winston Cup race at Talladega, Ala., and took the lead, only to be sidelined with a broken rocker arm.

On May 13, Schrader lost more than half of his left thumb when he was working under the hood of his NASCAR SuperTruck and a crew member inadvertently started the engine.

Last Saturday night, Schrader was leading The Winston Select, the annual all-star event for stock car racing's top circuit, when he was wrecked by Jimmy Spencer. The crash, which knocked Schrader out of the race, prompted some angry words by both drivers.

Spencer started on the outside of the front row — directly beside Schrader — in Friday's so-called hooligan race, which was reserved for the 21 drivers who didn't make the 300 field in Thursday's time trials.

But this time, Schrader didn't give Spencer a chance to get close to him. Schrader got an excellent jump coming out of the fourth turn to take the green flag, and he was already ahead of Spencer at the starting line. By the time the racers reached the first turn, Schrader had pulled his Chevrolet completely in front of Spencer's Ford, which slowly faded to a 12th-place finish.

Schrader, meantime, stayed safely ahead of the field the rest of the way. Musgrave, who never was able to get within strking distance of Schrader, wound up about 500 yards ahead of the third-place car of Terry Labonte.

Also making the 300 field out of the qualifying race were, in order, Kevin Lepage, Dirk Stephens, Greg Sacks, Jeremy Mayfield, Johnny Rumley, David Bonnett and Ward Burton.

The race was run on a hazy afternoon with air temperatures around 90 degrees and the temperature on the track exceeding 140. The National Weather Service was calling for similar conditions for Saturday's 300.

"This was a good race for us," Schrader said. "We got in what amounts to 40 laps of practice on a hot day on a hot track. This should help us for the race."

The qualifying race was the highlight of a day when there were no activities for the Winston Cup drivers in preparation for the weekend's main event, Sunday's Coca-Cola 600.

Notre Dame coach resigns after domestic violence charge

Black's resignation, announced Thursday, came less than three weeks after his arrest for failing to appear in court to answer a charge he struck his fiancee.

The Notre Dame sports administration did its best to skirt the unsavory circumstances surrounding Black and his departure. His resignation, which took effect Friday, was reduced to a single line in a six-paragraph news release announcing the hiring of his replacement, Parker Laketa, a restricted-earnings assistant for the Fighting Irish the past three seasons.

Black was more forthcoming. He issued a statement that was distributed to South Bend-area news media on Thursday.

"I apologize to the University of Notre Dame and the community for any embarrassment this has caused," said Black, a member of North Carolina's 1982 national championship team and an assistant to Notre Dame coach John MacLeod since 1991. "This situation will be remedied and will not occur again."

Black was arrested at his home May 7 on an outstanding warrant for failing to appear in court Jan. 4 on a misdemeanor domestic violence charge. The charge stemmed from a Dec. 13 fight during which Black allegedly struck his fiancee, Stacy Frick, on the leg.

Parry birdies way to Colonial lead

The Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Craig Parry had five birdies in a six-hole stretch on the way to a 65 and a two-shot lead Friday halfway through the Colonial National Invitation.

The stocky, 5-foot-6 Australian had the best round of a breezy day and completed two trips over the Colonial Country Club course in 131, nine under par.

Jeff Maggert, who had a hole-in-one in his round of 68, was next at 134 and Tom Lehman followed at 135 after a 68.

The group at 136 included Jeff Sluman, Billy Andrade, Mike Hulbert and Woody Austin. No one else was within six shots of the leader.

Parry, one of the early starters, got in most of his round before winds reached full strength and put some bite back in the course that played to a startlingly low average score of 69.9 under Thursday's benign conditions.

The dead calm of the first round gave way to winds 10-20 mph. Fairways and greens became harder and faster and the disasters common to Colonial again awaited the unwary.

John Daly, for example, went from an opening 71 to a 77 and missed the cut for the final two rounds.

Hometown boy Clark Dennis, who shared the first-round lead with Clements, had a lost ball, a shot into a gully and another into a bunker and took a triple bogey-7 on No. 5. He went on to a 74 and a 138 total, seven off the pace.

And Tom Purtzer, a former winner of this title, hit two into the water on No. 9, made an 8 on the hole, and shot 76-147. He, too, missed the cut.

So did U.S. Open champion Ernie Els of South Africa and Masters champion Ben Crenshaw. Els was 72-143 and Crenshaw 75-150. Defending champion Nick Price just made it at 69-142.

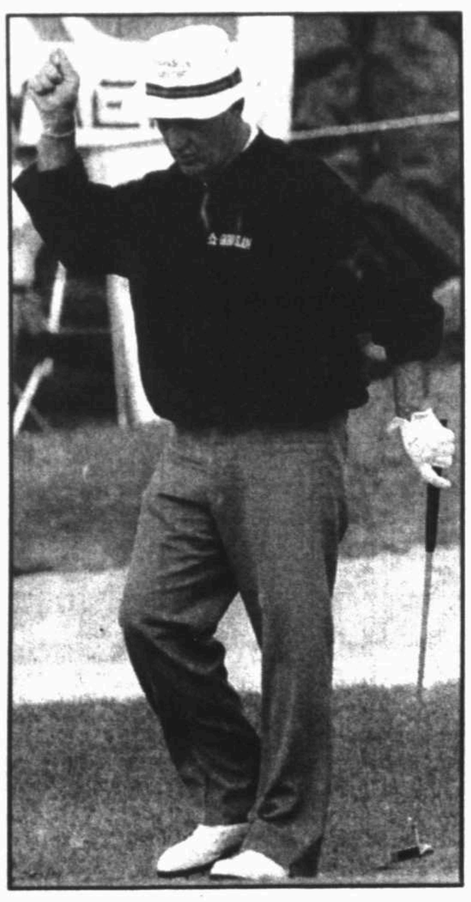
Quicksilver Classic

MIDWAY, Pa. — Larry Gilbert rallied from an inconsistent start with four birdies on the back nine to take a one-stroke lead on the first day of the $1.1 million Quicksilver Classic.

Gilbert, a two-time winner in three years on the Senior PGA Tour, shot a 5-under 67 at the soggy Quicksilver Country Club, nearly five strokes under his average in 33 rounds this year.

In second at 68 were Tommy Aaron, Buddy Allin and Isao Aoki. George Archer, Jerry McGee and J.C. Snead, who lost a lead and finished second in last week's Bell Atlantic Classic, shot 69.

"I haven't been playing well, but it seems like I'm starting to turn that around," Gilbert said. "I started off with that three-putt on 1 (for a bogey), and that's not the way you want to start. So I gave myself a kick in the rear, and it seemed to work."



AP Laserphoto

Larry Gilbert reacts to sinking an 18-foot putt for birdie at the Senior Quicksilver Classic. Gilbert shot a 5-under par 67 to take the lead after the first round.

He said he twice had to overcome self-doubt that has been dogging him on the tour all year — once after the par-4 opening hole and again when bad putting gave him a bogey on the par-4 9th.

A save on the par-4 10th boosted his confidence.

His drive landed near a white picket fence, but he hooked his second shot around a stand of trees and chipped in for a birdie. His birdies came in spurts, at 2, 3, 4, 12, 17 and 18.

It rained part of Wednesday, Thursday and Friday at Quicksilver, a former surface coal mine near Pittsburgh. In a late rule change, golfers were allowed to move balls that rolled into wet fairway spots.

Golfers said the leftover water helpfully shortened putts on the course's notoriously hilly greens.

"Today was OK, but if the weather gets better, the greens are going to be very tough," Aoki said through a translator.

■ Golf Roundup

The water shortened drives, however. Gilbert said he used a 5-iron on 18 on a shot he normally would have hit a 7-iron. He also blamed slow play on the water.

The course yielded only one eagle, to Simon Hobday on the par-5 4th.

Paired with Gilbert, Aaron shot a 68 following a two-week layoff to recover from a series of illnesses. He beat a sinus infection with high-powered antibiotics, but the drugs irritated his stomach.

He got sick in April at The Tradition in Scottsdale, Ariz., and was at his worst the next week at the PGA Seniors Championship, where a longtime friend surprised him at No. 9.

"I stumbled out to the tee, and the marshals must have thought I was 100 years old," Aaron said. "Then Marla Maples came out to say hello, and I didn't even talk to her. That's pretty sick."

LPGA Corning Classic

CORNING, N.Y. — Pat Bradley has been in the lead enough times to know there isn't much room for bogeys. After two rounds of the $550,000 Corning Classic, she has yet to make one.

The 21-year LPGA Tour veteran scrambled her way to a 4-under-par 68 and a two-stroke lead Friday over Loretta Alderete and Alison Nicholas halfway through the tournament.

"The birdies are out there to be made," Bradley said. "They're coming in bunches. Players are just getting ready for the weekend, myself included. There's still a lot of golf to be played."

Bradley might not need to worry about the rest of the field if she keeps up her current pace. Bradley's short game has been nearly flawless and has helped carry her to 9-under 135 after 36 holes.

She saved par three times and chipped in for birdie from 40 feet on the par-4 13th. She also made birdies on Nos. 5, 11 and 15.

Bradley, 44, who was inducted into the Hall of Fame in 1991, is hoping to become the first two-time winner at Corning. She won it in 1990 and has won 30 other tournaments and $4.7 million in her career.

"I still have some competitive life left in me," Bradley said. "Just because one gets into the Hall of Fame, it's not over. There are still wins out here to be sought, and I'm hearing Corning's seeking one."

Weather conditions along the 6,070-yard course at Corning Country Club favored the players for a second straight day. Rain softened the greens, and only a slight breeze blew across the course.

Alderete, who was tied with Bradley for the lead after the first round, had sole possession at eight under before making two straight bogeys. Starting on the back, Alderete made a 40-foot birdie putt on 9 to shoot 70 and remain in contention at 137.

Sun Bowl set for Dec. 29

Starr is "100 percent sure" the Sun Bowl will be staged Dec. 29 as scheduled, he said.

"On the board, and with our staff, we feel we have to do everything possible to preserve this 61-year-old tradition," Starr told the El Paso Herald-Post in Friday's editions.

He also said the bowl is closing in on signing a corporate sponsor.

"We are close to signing two companies," Starr said. "Neither company is local."

Meanwhile, the Western Athletic Conference is waiting to see if the Sun Bowl survives and likely would plant its league championship football game in El Paso, beginning in November 1996, if the Sun Bowl dies.

The WAC is also considering Las Vegas, Dallas and campuses of other WAC members as possible sites.

Last season's Sun Bowl was possible with a final payment of $600,000 from outgoing sponsor John Hancock Financial Services and a one-time payment of $600,000 from the City of El Paso.

Because El Paso won't be financially supporting the Sun Bowl this year, according to Mayor Larry Francis, that has left the contest at the corporate world's mercy.

But competition for corporate dollars in light of interest in women's sports, other bowls and the 1996 Olympic Games in Atlanta are hurdles that have to be overcome in landing a new sponsor, Starr has said previously.

Already, other bowls are poised to grab the Sun's teams. The new Haka Bowl in New Zealand and the Aloha Bowl in Honolulu have been mentioned as possibly getting the Sun's Pac-10 team, if the Sun can't find a sponsor. Starr said he has been in constant contact with representatives from the Pac-10, Big Ten, CBS and the WAC.

"We still want to have the Sun Bowl and the WAC championship," Starr said.

LPGA Skins Game begins action

FRISCO (AP) — Patty Sheehan is the defending skins game champion but she still has a healthy respect for the tour's leading money winner, long-hitting Laura Davies.

Sheehan, Davies, Nancy Lopez and Dottie Mochrie make up the field in this year's JCPenny-LPGA Skins Game, which returns to Stonebriar Country Club north of Dallas.

Nine holes will be played today and again on Sunday for a share of the $540,000 purse. ABC-TV will provide tape-delayed coverage starting at 2:30 p.m. (CDT).

Last year Sheehan, a member of the LPGA Hall of Fame, won a record 13 skins worth $285,000. But Davies, who leads this year's money list with $431,176, is 25-40 yards farther off the tee than her three rivals.

"Laura is playing about as good as anybody on our tour right now," said the 38-year-old Sheehan, 23rd this year in tour earnings with $112,064. "She's hitting the ball very, very long and she's very confident. She's awesome and really fun to watch because she tries to hit it as far as she can every time."

Davies, the John Daly of the women's tour, averages almost 270 yards off the tee, about 40 yards longer than Sheehan. But all the entries know that success in the skins game requires more than the ability to blast drives into the next zip code.

In the skins game format, players compete for a set amount of cash on each hole. If two or more players tie for the low score, the money carries over to the next hole or until a player takes a hole. Players vie for $20,000 on each of the first six holes, $30,000 on each of the middle six and $40,000 on each of the final six.

"When you're playing 18 holes, you're trying for pars on certain holes and trying to take advantage of certain holes," said Sheehan, attempting to become the first LPGA player to win consecutive skins titles. "In the Skins Game, you live a little more on the edge. Some holes everybody's rooting against you and some holes they're rooting for you."

Davies is playing the 6,296-yard, par-72 Stonebriar course for the first time, but she won't change her philosophy.

"I approach it as an all-out attack," said Davies, the 1994 tour leader with $687,201. "I don't intend to hit too many irons off the tee. You have to get out and try to make birdies and hopefully when you don't win a hole, the others will halve it."

Nissan Sentra rebuilt inside-out as miniature

BY BOB PLUNKETT
Special to the Reporter-Telegram

Erase any latent images your mind may still possess about Sentra, the subcompact sedan from Nissan — terms like boxy, cramped, sluggish or small. Instead, focus on the new design that's curvaceous, spacious, comfortable and surprisingly responsive to drive.

Sentra, it seems, has been reinvented from top to bottom, and this new edition, bearing a 1995 model-year designation and wearing sensuously smooth sheetmetal, measures larger, performs better and actually feels bigger than its subcompact dimensions suggest.

Still, Nissan has managed to hold the line on prices for its smallest sedan, as figures begin at $11,000.

Sentra takes its place in Nissan's sedan series behind the mid-size Maxima, recently revised in an award-winning new format, and the best-selling Altima compact. Park Sentra between these two larger Nissans and you may detect styling cues borrowed from both — particularly overall fluidity in the design and softly rounded corners to once-straight lines.

A strong C-pillar statement flows forward into an expanse of glass before sloping dramatically to the sharp slant of Sentra's front hood line. 'aero'-style curved headlamp clusters and a boldly extended windshield highlight the front section, while at the rear in a blunt tail treatment lights span the width of the vehicle and wrap around each side. At a glance, you could easily mistake Sentra for the larger Altima.

Drive Sentra, like I did recently in pre-production editions fresh out of Nissan's Tennessee assembly plant, and you too would discover that its stylish exterior shape is only the first of many enticing new assets.

As you settle into the front bucket, note that both front seats have been redesigned with contoured styling and concealed pelvic and lumbar arch support elements which work in concert to stem body fatigue. Seat upholstery, ranging from woven or knit fabrics to fancy velour in higher trim editions, looks sharp and feels good too.

Also, check out the amount of room you get for head, shoulders, knees and legs. With Sentra's wheelbase lengthened by 4.1 inches and the platform broadened by another inch, passengers end up with more interior space.

Specifically, in the rear seat you get two more inches of room for knees and 1.5 inches more for total legroom, half an inch more shoulder room for those in front as well as back, and about the same amount of increased head space.

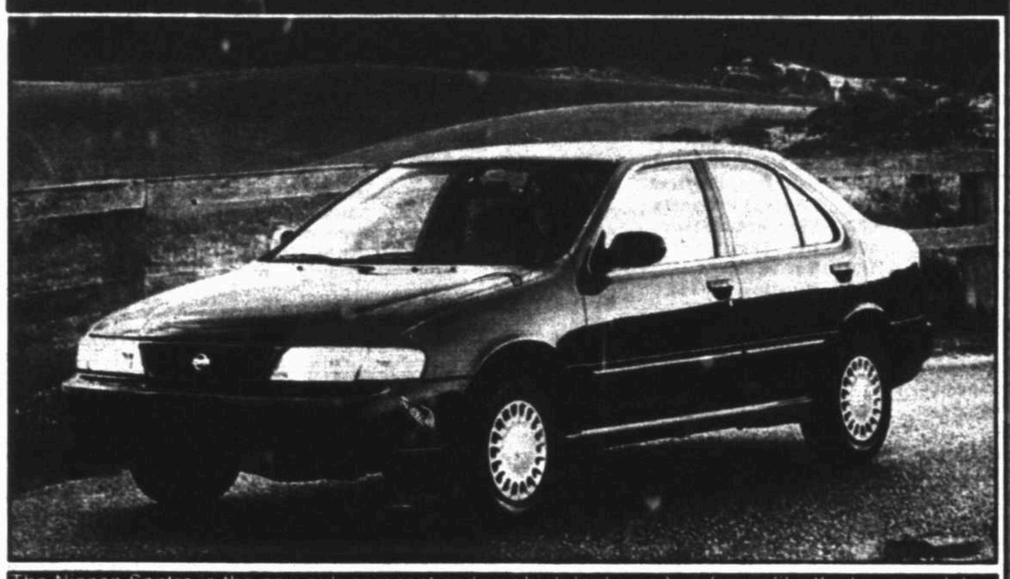
If you recall those horrendous motorized shoulder straps on previous Sentras, the new 3-point manual safety belts and dual air bags will be welcomed additions.

Other improved safety equipment cannot be seen so easily, such as new steel beams embedded in each of Sentra's four side doors, or the new chassis design which incorporates fore and aft crush zones that absorb impact forces from frontal or rear-end crashes.



The Nissan Sentra is the new sub-compact sedan which looks and performs like the large models.

Time to power up and move out, which Sentra does effectively with its revamped power train. The 4-cylinder engine, compact in 1.6-liter format, carries four valves in each cylinder and twin cams on top.

Improvements include micro finishing crankshaft journals, paring piston compression rings from two to one per cylinder, punching up compression ratios and recalibrating Nissan's variable timing control system to function within a broader range.

These enhancements boost output by 5 hp to 115 and improve fuel economy by as much as 2 mpg.

If blindfolded, you would not believe that Sentra's smooth ride quality could come from a car whose measurements pigeonhole it in the subcompact class. The stiffer new chassis design aids the smoothness, as does the bonus of a 4-wheel independent suspension, but the most significant improvement comes from the multi-link beam employed in the rear suspension. Borrowed from Maxima, it replaces the previous strut system.

FAST/FACTS

1995 NISSAN SENTRA

Description	Sub-compact Sedan
Model options	Base, XE, GXE, GLE
Wheelbase	99.8 inches

Transmission/speeds	Manual/5 Auto/4
Rear/front drive	Front
Steering	Power rack and pinion
Braking	Power 4-disc/drum optional 4-disc/ABS
Air bag(s)	2
EPA mileage est. city/hwy	M/T: 30/40 mpg A/T: 28/37 mpg
Price range	$ 11,000 to $15,000

My tests of Sentra in various trim editions occurred initially over rolling Texas back routes surrounding suburban lakes northwest of Dallas. Then I spent a week at home with a Sentra GXE, the trim version which Nissan estimates will account for 55 percent of all sales.

That car, pumped up with popular equipment, lists for $13,450, with an automatic transmission putting another $800 to the bottom line.

Entry level comes with the base Sentra. Even this barest edition contains the new low-fatigue reclining front bucket seats, plus dual air bags, rack and pinion steering and the multi-link beam rear suspension.

Next step up the model ladder leads to Sentra XE, equipped with air conditioning, power steering and AM-FM stereo sound with cassette deck and digital clock.

Sentra GXE goes further with cruise control, power windows and locks, twin remote power outside mirrors, split fold-down rear seat back and knit fabric covering seats.

'95 Dodge Stratus offers more than just styling

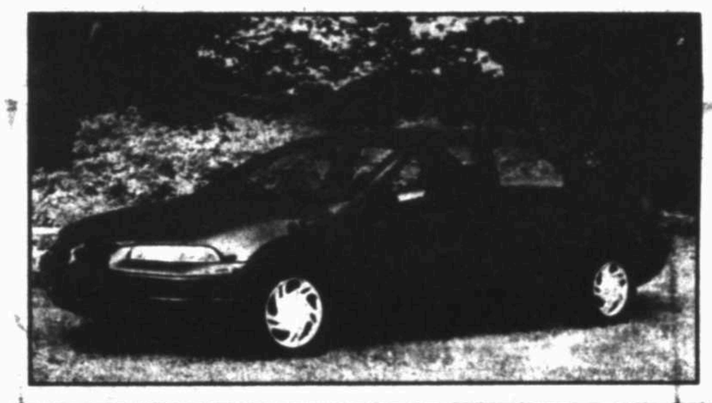
By Tom Keene
Special to the Reporter-Telegram

If two-door cars ever become extinct, the Dodge Stratus could have contributed to their demise. Take a good look at this car: you'll see what I mean.

Studying this four-door sedan's profile, I tried to visualize it as a two-door coupe and concluded that such a change would destroy its styling. Then the thought occurred to me, isn't styling the main reason that buyers are attracted to two-door coupes? It certainly isn't the convenience of getting into the rear seat of a coupe. I wouldn't be surprised if origin of the saying "feeling cooped up" is a result of the two-door cars; they don't offer a very spacious interior.

Four-door cars are noted for people comfort. It is easier to get in both the front and rear seats. Because each door is smaller, it doesn't open as wide, which is an obvious advantage in parking lots with cars parked on either side. Yet four-door cars have a sedate, family sedan appearance. Their eye-appeal has never been exciting — until now. Chrysler's cab-forward design has changed all that.

This new design has a smaller engine compartment; as a result, the hood is slightly shorter and the wheels are moved forward. This gives a different appearance to the rest of the body, making it more of a cohesive unit. Even the trunk appears smaller, but that appearance is deceptive; the Stratus has enormous storage space. Incidentally, I had to haul a load of stuff, and by simply lowering the rear backrest, I was able to transport more cargo than others thought possible.



SPECS: 1995 Dodge Stratus

Before I become too carried away with the practicality and design of the Stratus, let's take this baby for a ride. First thing I noticed was improved visibility. A lever next to the driver' s seat allows for quick elevation, so I could see right down to the road a few feet in front of the car.

Even the driver's seat has a new design. After driving a considerable distance, I didn't have my usual crick in the back. I'm not sure what Chrysler people did with the seat, but it is a big improvement over many other cars I've driven.

Another improvement I couldn't see but appreciated is the underbody rail design. These rails give the Stratus better rigidity, allowing the entire suspension system to be tuned for a better ride. The suspension along with the steering provides better handling. In addition, the wheels on this car have a wide stance, thus I found the Stratus has excellent traction when pushing it through curves and around corners.

Don't misunderstand when I say "pushing it" through curves. The Stratus I drove is not a high-powered car; it had a 2.4-liter four-cylinder engine with modest horsepower. I have no complaints, but it definitely could not keep up with a Stealth or Viper. Those cars are in the high-price lane.

The Stratus runs in the "easy to enter" lane. For about $14,000, you can drive it away. Even with the options on the car I drove — power windows and door locks, remote and heated power mirrors, seat height adjuster, conventional spare tire, automatic transmission and bigger engine — the total was $16f460. In today's market, this is an affordable car. Yet the Stratus comes loaded with comforts such as air conditioning, a decent four-speaker radio with cassette player, tilt wheel, wide side-body molding to keep the doors from getting dinged. Other features: dual air bags, anti-lock brakes, and it even takes the cup-holder race a new step forward; this car has a cup holder lamp.

The bottom line is that the Stratus offers a lot more than styling. Take a good look at this car; you'd see what I mean.

Dear Doctor: I own a 1985 Plymouth Aires and use it as a commuter car; I leave it at the train station every day. My commute is on the highway. The car has been riding lumpy and there seems to be a lot of noise while the car is moving. I had the car checked, and the mechanic said the only problem he could find was cupped tires. He said they were not worn out, and were safe to drive on. I have three questions: Are the tires safe? Why did they cup? What tire would suit my car? I have always bought Goodyear tires for my cars. Tim N.

Dear Tim: Because you live in the snow belt area, you need a tire that offers an all season design, yet will be quiet while on the highway. Goodyear sells a tire called Regatta. It is an all-season tire that has deep groves to allow the snow and water to escape. There are a few reasons why tires cup or scallop. A design that is not compatible with the car, a suspension or alignment problem, and lack of attention to tire inflation and rotation. As far as being safe, the lumpy ride is the tire actually bouncing off the road and banging on the asphalt instead of rolling smoothly. That means the tire does not have proper traction, therefore it is unsafe. Replace the tires, and pay attention to proper tire care.

Dear Doctor: I recently purchased a 1994 Chevy S-10 Blazer with the Tahoe package that has the 4.3-liter Vortec engine. The problem is that after I have decelerated, it seems to slip, then jolts into gear when I begin to accelerate again. This occurs mostly when I approach a corner or on a highway ramp. It happens with or without applying the brake, and without coming to a complete stop. I can best describe it as a clunk similar to when you shift a car from park to forward or reverse. The problem is also intermittent. I talked to the Chevy service department, and they told me this is normal. Tom G.

Dear Tom: The four-wheel drive system in the Blazer is over built for the majority of people that buy them. It is very heavy duty and has gears and chains unlike conventional vehicles. There is always going to be some annoying noise from the drive line of most four-wheel drive sport utility vehicles. The rest of the vehicle is so quiet and smooth, you notice the drive line noise. I have seen and driven almost all SUVs and this complaint is fairly common in the industry. GM does make a special lubricant for the slip joints on the drive shaft to help eliminate slip joint binding. Remember, you purchased a very good vehicle that has a combination of car and truck characteristics.

Dear Doctor: I own a 1985 Dodge Aires 2.2-liter four-cylinder engine that uses a carburetor, not fuel injection. The engine takes a long time to warm up. The choke keeps the fast idle on for about 10 minutes. I replaced the thermostat with the proper 195 F. setting, and still have the same problem. I need your help. Walter W.

Dear Walter: The engine warm-up time seems normal. If you want to lower the fast idle speed you can do that very easily. All you need is a 1/4 inch wrench or small screw driver to lower the fast idle adjustment screw. The screw is located between the carburetor and black electric choke thermostat. Back the screw off one full turn, that should lower the fast idle speed enough to satisfy you. Do not lower it too much, because you then take a chance of fouling the spark plugs.

1944 MARMON-HERRINGTON

"That's no Marmon, it's a Ford!" many readers might exclaim had they not learned that Marmon, once a builder of high-quality automobiles in Indianapolis, is a name later associated with heavy trucks and the conversion of Ford-built trucks to all-wheel drive.

Marmon's car and truck building ventures were two separate companies because, as Howard C. Marmon's Marmon Motor Car Company was just two years from bankruptcy, Howard's brother (Walter C. Marmon) joined forces with A.W. Herrington and founded the Marmon-Herrington Co., in 1931, also at Indianapolis, for the manufacture of heavy trucks.

In 1932, Marmon-Herrington built one of the largest trucks of its day: a gigantic 60-ton-capacity, 32-wheel truck-and-trailer outfit measuring 100 feet in length and towering far over the tallest of men. It was built for use by the Iraq Petroleum Co. for construction work on a 1,200-mile long pipeline across the Syrian desert into Iraq.

From 1935 to the early 1950s, Marmon-Herrington not only built its own heavy-duty trucks but was also offering Ford trucks of various sizes and types converted to four-wheel or all-wheel drive (as Ford was not including that feature back then). The telephone company truck (illustrated) is such a Ford conversion and, with all-wheel drive, was particularly suited for use in rough terrain or heavy snows.

After World War II, Marmon-Herrington introduced a line of delivery vans, and also electric trolley-buses. Other motor buses were added in 1950.

In 1963, the company closed down its assembly line, but a reorganized group moved to Garland and Dallas, Texas, after which time heavy cab-over-engine Marmon truck-tractors were built by the reorganized Marmon Motor Company (launched by Marmon-Herrington's former Southwest distributor).

At least one new model was also built at Knoxville, Tenn., according to a written report in my files.

In 1963, Col. Herrington's 25 percent of Marmon-Herrington stock was acquired by the Pritzker family of Chicago, who converted M-H into a private holding company for various enterprises (which included, once again, all-wheel-drive conversions of other brands of vehicles).

M-H also had a branch in France from 1957 to 1963, after which time the French company became known as Marmon-Bocquet, surnamed for the president of that organization.

Where else could you get a $100,000 bonus for just doing a good job?

That's right– a $100,000 bonus you can earn taking on one of the most challenging jobs in the brokerage business. A professional job that involves intensive training, brains, backbone, high energy, and a passionate interest in investing. One that requires an ability to listen carefully, understand a client's needs, and then suggest appropriate investments. In this job, you're not selling, you're consulting. Put simply, this job takes more than an ability to sell. And it demands you give nothing less than your very best effort–every day, all day.

Do you have what it takes to be a Merrill Lynch Financial Consultant?

If you do, we're willing to make a major investment in you. Willing to give you a good salary, extensive support systems, and top-ranked research, and, if you're just getting into our business, a place in our Financial Consultants' Professional Development Program. It's one of the toughest and most respected in the financial community.

With this support, we expect you to be very good. If you meet all the necessary professional requirements, including sustained results over a ten-year period, we'll give you a bonus–a Merrill Lynch Financial Consultant Investment Certificate that could be worth $100,000. A bonus you'll earn for just doing a good job year in, year out.

If this sounds like an interesting job–and a very interesting offer–sit down and write us a letter. Tell us about yourself–what you'd like about the job and why you'd like to be a Merrill Lynch Financial Consultant. And don't forget to enclose your resume. If it looks like a good match for both of us, you'll hear from us promptly.

The difference is Merrill Lynch.

HOW TO PLACE A PEOPLE MEETING PEOPLE AD

TO PLACE a FREE print ad you must have a touchtone telephone. Call 1-800-618-0738 to place your ad. You will receive a 20 word print ad and private voice mailbox. Your ad will appear for 4 weeks in the Midland Reporter-Telegram. You may fill out the People Meeting People coupon and mail it, or fax the coupon to place your FREE ad. See the coupon below for complete information.

IN ADDITION to your FREE mailbox, you get an 800 number for
- FREE message retrieval
- Unlimited message check
- Recording your greeting

Once you have setup your mailbox, and your greeting has been screened and approved, you may check and/or retrieve your messages.

WHEN RECORDING your greeting leave your first name, mailbox number and repeat the highlights from your print ad. You have 2 minutes, so elaborate about yourself and the type of person you would like to meet. Speak clearly and loudly. Don't include your last name, address or telephone number.

IF YOU HAVE QUESTIONS call 1-800-618-0738. Live operators are available: Monday - Friday, 8 am - 9 pm; Saturday and Sunday, 10 am - 6 pm.

TO RESPOND OR BROWSE CALL
1-900-230-0042
The cost of the call is $2.19 per minute. The average call is 3 minutes. You must be at least 18 years old to use this service.
