Yeltsin wins voters' favor

Partial results indicate 'victory' for president

■ Russians don't support new parliamentary elections, exit polls show.

Associated Press

MOSCOW — President Boris Yeltsin won a vote of confidence in a key referendum Sunday but fell short of his aim to force new parliamentary elections, according to exit polls and partial official results.

Yeltsin sought the referendum to overcome the Communist-era Congress of People's Deputies, which has tried to thwart his reforms and curb his powers. Although the results were mixed, his hand was likely to be strengthened.

One exit poll showed 63.8 percent of voters had confidence in Yeltsin and a surprising 56 percent supporting his market reforms, despite the hardships they have caused.

Yeltsin adviser Gennady Burbulis hailed the vote as a victory, saying "Russian voters took it upon themselves to decide the protracted power struggle of the top power structures."

He said on state-owned television that the president will use the results to push for early elections and a new constitution to replace the Congress with a two-chamber, U.S.-style legislature.

The vote, however, did not provide an uncontestable legal basis for early elections and a new constitution that Yeltsin hinted he would press for if given a mandate to call for the new parliamentary elections.

While polls showed strong voter support for new elections, it did not tally up to a majority of the electorate, as required. Voter turnout of 65 percent was heavier than forecast, but too low to give Yeltsin the majority he needed.

Lawmakers were certain to challenge the meaning of the outcome during a meeting of the smaller, standing Supreme Soviet legislature set for Monday.

Both sides alleged that election laws were broken.

In Washington, President Clinton's press secretary, Dee Dee Myers, called the preliminary results "encouraging" but added it was too early to make firm judgments.

In a speech earlier in the day in Boston, Clinton said he had deliberately avoided personal contact with Yelt-

DeGuerin says he'd drafted will for Koresh

■ First victim to be identified is David Jones, cult leader's brother-in-law, JP says.

Associated Press

WACO — Cult leader David Koresh asked his attorney to prepare a will but didn't sign the document before a fire devastated his religious group's compound last week, his lawyer said Sunday.

Dick DeGuerin, hired by Koresh's mother to represent the religious zealot, said the will was one of three documents he was asked to prepare during his visits into the compound.

But since Koresh never signed the papers, DeGuerin can't file them.

"It was his idea," DeGuerin said. "I told the FBI about it promptly and they said it was a good sign because he was looking to the future."

DeGuerin said the existence of a will reaffirms the cult's position that Koresh didn't set the fire to ensure the end of the world for his followers, as the government has said.

"You don't leave anything for the future if the world's going to come to an end," DeGuerin said.

DeGuerin said Koresh saw a

Residents collect items amid tornado's rubble

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Rescuers ended their search for victims amid tornado debris Sunday night, and survivors collected scattered belongings after the twister that killed at least seven people.

Ron Berry, the mayor of Catoosa, said authorities believe all residents were accounted for. Homeowners in the small town east of Tulsa were allowed back into neighborhoods to inspect damage and begin clearing rubble.

"This just flattened everything," Gov. David Walters said after seeing the damage in Tulsa and suburban Catoosa.

More than 95 people were treated for injuries that included cuts and burns.

WEATHER WATCH

Today's high to hit mid-80s

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high in the mid-80s and south winds at 10-15 mph. Tonight should be fair with a low between 50-55, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tuesday should be partly cloudy with a high in the upper 80s.

After an overnight low of 48, Sunday's high reached 78, compared to the record high for that date of 98 set in 1943. The record low was 37 set in 1946.

STATE

Clear skies prevailed over most of Texas Sunday but storms plagued some of the northern part of the state.

A weak cold front moving through North Texas Sunday brought a line of thunderstorms and some hail south of Lufkin to College Station.

Today will be clear and mild with highs near 80 and low in the mid 50s.

High pressure allowed for mostly sunny skies in West Texas where temperatures ranged from the mid 60s to the mid 80s.

Sunny days and clear nights are predicted for today with high temperatures ranging from the 70s in the north to the 90s in the Big Bend River valleys. Lows Monday night should fall to the 40s and 50s.

An overcast morning turned into a clear day in South Texas as a weak cold front moved into the central section of the region. Humidity from south winds combined with 80 degree temperatures to push the heat index into the 90s.

Clear to partly cloudy skies are predicted Monday except for the far east where there is a chance severe thunderstorms exists. Temperatures are expected in the 60s.

NATION

Rain was scattered from Texas up to the Ohio Valley on Sunday, with a threat of thunderstorms, and rain also spread across the Northwest.

At midday, showers and thunderstorms extended over the southeastern Plains, the lower Mississippi Valley, the Tennessee Valley, the upper Ohio Valley and the lower Great Lakes.

Hail three-quarters of of an inch in diameter was reported at Cleveland, Miss., and hail up to an inch in diameter fell at Shreveport, La., the weather service said.

North of the bands of rain, snow showers were widely scattered in Upper Michigan.

Showers were scattered from the northern Pacific Coast to the northern Rockies, and were widely scattered in eastern Nebraska and western Iowa.

Showers were scattered in northern New England.

Heavier rainfall during the six hours ending 2 p.m. EDT included 1.57 inches at Memphis, Tenn.; 1.20 inches at Dayton, Ohio; and 1.12 inches at Pine Bluff, Ark.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

WIN: Voters show support for Yeltsin sin in recent days lest he hurt the Russian leader's prospects. But he insisted, "We need to be in this for the long term with him."

Recent promises of Western aid and support have prompted some Yeltsin critics to accuse him of kowtowing to the West.

Across 11 time zones, from snowy Kamchatka to the balmy Black Sea, millions of Russians voted by dropping a paper ballot into a simple wooden box. Election officials in many districts reported voters returning early from their country dachas to cast ballots.

Many of the ballot boxes still bore the hammer-and-sickle seal of the Soviet Union, and many polling stations remained decorated with adoring portraits of Vladimir Lenin. Yeltsin voted at a ballot box near a statue of the Soviet founder.

Well-stocked buffets at polling places did a brisk trade in imported cigarettes, coffee, beer, tomato sauce, and other items — at market prices.

In the final days before the balloting, Yeltsin imitated a Western-style campaign, shaking hands and kissing a baby. He also relied heavily on the two state-owned television channels.

The 62-year-old leader also made a raft of promises to special interest groups, raising pensions for the elderly, increasing stipends for students, promising land to army officers and reversing a decision to raise the price of gasoline.

The referendum asked voters whether they:

- Had confidence in Yeltsin, who was elected to a five-year term in 1991 as Russia's first popularly chosen president.
- Approved of his economic reforms launched in 1992.
- Favored early presidential elections.
- Favored new parliamentary elections.

Unlike the questions on early elections, the questions on Yeltsin and his reforms required only a majority of those voting.

Hard-line lawmakers in the Congress, who have been whittling away at Yeltsin's authority for months, added the potentially embarrassing question on the president's economic reforms.

Nevertheless, preliminary results showed Yeltsin winning the first two questions by substantial margins in 13 of 16 regions and cities reporting. His highest results were in his hometown of Yekaterinburg, where 88 percent expressed confidence in his leadership and 81 percent approved of his reforms.

He received the least support in Amur in the Far East, where only 40 percent expressed confidence in him and 29 percent approved of his economic policies, according to the preliminary results from Russian news agencies and election officials contacted by telephone.

Nationwide, one exit poll of 5,219 voters by the Russian Center for Public Opinion and Market Research found that 63.8 percent backed the president and a surprising 56 percent supported his market reforms, despite the hardships.

The poll found that 28.7 percent of those voting, or 18.5 percent of the total electorate, favored holding presidential elections earlier than currently scheduled, in 1996.

And it found that 68.6 percent of those voting, or 44.1 percent of the electorate, favored holding parliamentary elections earlier than currently scheduled, in 1995. The margin of error was 3.5 percent of those questioned at 80 polling stations across Russia. The poll was commissioned by The Associated Press.

While the results would indicate Yeltsin winning on the first two questions, results on the third and fourth questions would be inconclusive.

Other polls showed similar results. Complete official results might not be released until Tuesday, authorities said.

Yeltsin's main rival, Congress chairman Ruslan Khasbulatov, told the AP as he voted Sunday that "in the Far East, false ballots have already been manufactured in large quantities."

In the Pacific port of Vladivostok, voters told the AP their ballots had not been signed by election commission officials, as required by law. Vera Arbatova, head of the regional electoral commission, said officials "were physically incapable of signing" all of them, so unsigned ballots would be counted.

In the western Russian city of Orel, a Communist stronghold, Yeltsin backer Olga Andreyeva said reformers were denied the right to observe the balloting in some precincts, and that pro-Communist forces had campaigned in front of some polling stations, which is illegal.

An election observer told the ITAR-Tass news agency that in the city of Rostov-on-Don, sample ballots were hung in voting booths showing people how to vote against Yeltsin.

RUBBLE: Officials confirm 7 tornado-related deaths

(From 1A)

next door. In Catoosa, it demolished at least 75 mobile homes, 23 houses and several businesses, Police Chief Benny Dirck said.

One victim who died in a rolled-over mobile home was identified as Leatrice Gardner, described as a bed-ridden. Her age was unavailable.

State emergency director Tom Feuerborn called a damage estimate of $100 million "very loose." He said he hoped to have better totals after teams from the state and the Federal Emergency Management Agency checked the area.

Feuerborn's state Department of Emergency Management initially reported 10 deaths, based on reports from ambulance services, but he said Sunday seven deaths had been confirmed. He said 16 people had been admitted to hospitals.

Walters sent about 100 National Guardsmen to Catoosa and asked President Clinton for a disaster declaration to make federal funds available.

"We will ask early and often," Walters said, standing in front of the truck stop where strips of shredded metal roof dangled like Christmas tree tinsel. Tractor-trailer rigs were turned over in the truck stop's parking lot.

"We hope to help as quickly as possible," Clinton said Sunday after getting Walters' request.

Houses were left without walls or roofs. Cars rested atop piles of rubble. Garbage clung to tree limbs. Utility crews worked through the night to remove downed power lines.

People knelt precariously on the ruins of their businesses and homes to reach for belongings.

"A lot of people just want to give up," Dirck said.

The tornado struck a few minutes after Tulsa's tornado sirens sounded, but the National Weather Service in Norman said the first signs of potential for a tornado were visible on radar 35 minutes before the first warning.

Don Devore, who heads the Tulsa office, said its radar didn't show the signs meteorologists in Norman saw.

"If they showed that, they did not call us and tell us," Devore said.

After destroying a church and downing power lines in east Tulsa, the twister lifted up and touched down again five miles to the east, moving along Interstate 44.

It swept away cars and trucks and blitzed the truck stop where Walters visited, along with a nearby truck stop, before hitting downtown Catoosa.

"There were pieces as big as a semi twirling in the wind," said Dirck, who lives three blocks from the hardest-hit area. "It looked like the whole funnel was lit up. It was really eerie."

Devore categorized the tornado as falling between F-3 and F-4 classifications in power. F-5 is the strongest tornado category.

"The structural damage is no more than an F-3," he said. "But these trucks out at the truck stop, where it looks like some giant took them in his hand and squeezed them together . . . that's what bothers us on the strength of this thing."

About 20 people were eating at the restaurant in the demolished truck stop when the tornado was sighted through a window. Worker Jeremy Bennett used his time wisely after someone came in screaming that a tornado was approaching.

In less than a minute, Bennett turned off all the pilot lights on the stove, covered grease vats with lids, and unplugged a microwave oven and placed it on top of the lids to keep them from blowing off.

rough draft of the will and asked for part of it to be reworked.

He said the other two documents, including one involving court protection of the property's ownership, involved trusts set up for Koresh's children.

"He wanted the sale of any kind of (book or movie) rights to go into the trust for the children," DeGuerin said, adding that the fund would be established after legal fees were extracted.

Before the attorney could return with the amended versions, the compound building burned down last Monday, claiming the lives of as many as 86 people, including Koresh and 17 children.

The first victim identified was David Michael Jones, Koresh's brother-in-law, officials said Sunday.

Jones, 38, was killed by a gunshot blast to the right side of his face, said David Pareya, a McLennan County Justice of the Peace.

Court records had earlier identified Jones as the mailman who notified Koresh that the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms was preparing to raid the site.

Jones, 5-11 and 155 pounds, was the brother of Koresh's wife, Rachel Jones. Jones' father, sister, two nieces and a nephew were believed to be among 86 victims of Monday's fire.

"Yes, I already know. I have no comment," said Mary Jones, the victim's mother.

Investigators said they determined it was Jones by matching fingerprints and dental records.

Pareya could not detail the caliber of the bullet or the angle it entered. Pareya said the corpse was found atop a cinderblock structure where Koresh stashed much of his ammunition.

DeGuerin said he spoke with Jones several times during his visits into the compound during the siege. One of their conversations lasted about an hour, dealing mostly with Jones' tip.

"He was called in when I needed to talk to him and he was very quiet," DeGuerin said in a telephone interview from Washington, where he is trying another case.

Jones told DeGuerin he had been driving his car, which had U.S. Postal service identification on it because he used it during his route, near the compound when he encountered a television photographer who appeared lost.

"The guy, looking nervous, said 'Are you really a mailman?'" DeGuerin said. Once Jones confirmed that he was, DeGuerin said the photographer warned Jones.

"He said 'There's going to be a big gunfight with these religious nuts over here. You better get out of here,'" the attorney said.

Jones then warned Koresh, who had his troops ready for federal agents when they tried to arrest the cult leader for weapons violations.

Investigators expect Jones' identity to be the first of many. They said Sunday they're confident they'll match names with 43 other corpses.

"They have a 90 percent probability of identifying the people that have been recovered," Pareya said.

Four more bodies have been located and are expected to be sent to medical examiners Monday.

ISRAEL: 30 Palestinian exiles are to return home

(From 1A)

The Palestinians reluctantly agreed last week — under pressure from the PLO and other Arab countries — to return to the talks. The delegation walked out in December after Israel deported more than 400 alleged Muslim militants to Lebanon.

"I hope very much that the Palestinian delegation and the public in the territories will understand that a better offer may never by made by another Israeli government," Rabin said in an interview with Israel TV's Arabic-language service. The interview had Arabic subtitles.

Saeb Erakat, deputy leader of the Palestinian delegation, told The Associated Press the 30 deportees to be returned are among Palestinians expelled from the occupied territories from 1967 to 1987.

Erakat did not say how long the repatriation process would take.

He said the 30 Palestinians, all believed residing in Jordan, would be let back in 48 hours.

"This is according to an agreement reached with Israel to reschedule the return of all Palestinian deportees," Erakat said.

The Palestine Liberation Organization earlier listed 1,700 Palestinian expelled by Israel since 1967, when the Jewish state captured the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

In the television interview, Rabin offered Palestinian peace negotiators an immediate role in directing investments toward the West Bank and Gaza Strip. He said the negotiators could also begin running some parts of daily life before an autonomy agreement is reached.

The offer marks a departure from Israeli policy that discouraged investment in the occupied territories. Israel was reluctant to permit the building of industries in the West Bank and Gaza Strip that could compete with Israel.

"From our side, there is a readiness, already in this stage, to give the Palestinian delegation greater participation in investing large sums for creating jobs, improving infrastructure, (and in running) health, education," Rabin said.

The peace talks are to produce a framework for Palestinian autonomy as an interim settlement. At the start of the third year of autonomy, negotiations on the permanent status of the occupied lands are to begin.

Palestinians have demanded that Israel pledge now that it will withdraw from the occupied lands at the end of the autonomy period, something Israel has refused to say.

But on Sunday, Rabin promised the Palestinians a land-for-peace deal and assurred them it would not try to drag out the autonomy period.

Rabin also promised to ease the closure of the territories, which he imposed March 31 to stop a rash of attacks against Jews.

Earlier Sunday, Erakat warned Palestinians "not to raise their expectations" of a breakthrough when the stalled negotiations resume.

"We face Israeli intransigence," he told The AP.

Hanan Ashrawi, the delegation's spokeswoman, said the negotiations will be a make-or-break session in the 17-month-old peace process.

The Palestinian delegation is returning to Washington reluctantly under orders from Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat, who has staked much on winning concessions from the Israelis.

KRUEGER: Senator pushes import fee

(From 1A)

ger, a Democrat, is running against a field of 23 candidates, including Republican Kay Baily Hutchison.

Krueger said he was in favor of an oil import fee that would establish a $25 a barrel floor price an imported crude oil. If the price of oil on international markets fell below that floor, a fee would be imposed.

"Today we will send $150 million overseas to buy foreign oil," he said. "Tomorrow, we will send $150 million and the next day and the next. Half of the nation's total trade deficit is for imported oil."

He added that one in every seven jobs in Texas relies on oil and natural gas.

"There have been 170,000 jobs lost over the past 10 years under Mr. Reagan and Mr. Bush in the oil field," he said. "That's not something they should be proud of."

The proposed oil import fee would generate about $35 million over the next three years and lessen the nation's dependence on foreign countries for oil, Krueger said.

The senator is against President Clinton's proposed Btu tax.

"It is unjust for Texans as consumers because there is not a lot of mass transit in the state and most residents must rely on their automobiles," he said. "The Btu tax is 2.3 times higher on oil than it is on coal. And, New England is exempt from the tax because home heating oil is considered a necessity. Well, the automobile is a necessity in Texas."

them," said Norma Velasco, a counselor at the organization's clinic.

"I think there are probably more (teens involved), but they aren't specifying why they came in for the test."

The girls, ages 14 and 15, boasted about the dare while being tested, said Planned Parenthood spokeswoman Jo Ann King-Sinnett.

"The girls said they were dared to sleep with someone who said they were HIV-positive," Ms. King-Sinnett said.

"If the test came up negative, then it was like they were brave enough to have unprotected sex and they were tough enough and their body was tough enough to fight the disease."

Ms. Velasco said she has encountered the initiation rite only among one San Antonio gang, but it's believed to be the largest gang in the city with hundreds of members.

Others who deal with teen-age gang members say they know of no other gang practicing the initiation. All agreed, however, that unprotected sex among gang members is rampant.

"I know there are some gang members who do have AIDS," said Sgt. Bruce Ritchey of the San Antonio Police Department gang unit. "And the girls like to get into gangs and sleep with these guys; and if that's the case, it will spread like wildfire."

DEAR ABBY

Man tries to teach daughter money management

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My unmarried, college-educated daughter is a high school teacher in her mid-30s. She hit me up for a $5,000 loan as the down payment on a house she wanted to buy. Knowing that she has a long history of improperly managing her financial affairs, I refused, and told her why. This brought on the tears, but I refused to give in because I feel strongly about subsidizing poor management.

Van Buren

I am the son of a sharecropper who grew up during the Great Depression days. I learned to deny myself many material things I wanted in order to have financial security. This is something my daughter never learned. She impulsively buys anything that strikes her fancy, with no thought of saving for a rainy day.

She and her brother have had their own checking and savings accounts since they were teen-agers. Their mother and I drove them on their paper routes, and they always had their own money for things they wanted. While we didn't lavish gifts on them, they never wanted for very much.

When she was in trouble at the bank, I offered to help her organize her financial affairs, but she informed me that her affairs were none of my business!

However, I still feel like a jerk of a father for not having loaned her the money for the down payment on the house, because I'm not exactly worried about where my next meal is coming from.

Well, her mother gave her the money without consulting me, and I am angry. Am I justified in being angry with both my daughter and my wife? — NO SUCKER IN ALABAMA

DEAR NO SUCKER: Don't waste too much energy being angry. Children have been playing that "Ask-Mom-if-Mom-says-no-ask-Dad" game for generations.

A schoolteacher in her mid-30s should be responsible for her own welfare without asking her parents to bail her out. Parents should present a united front.

I suggest you have a heart-to-heart talk with your wife about caving in to your daughter's requests for money, because this situation is likely to arise again and again — as the cost of maintaining a house is perpetual.

DEAR ABBY: Lately we hear so much about birth mothers being reunited with the children they had given up for adoption years after those children were grown. Some even had families of their own.

Well, I am now a grandmother. When my husband and I married, we desperately wanted a family, and believe me, we tried, but after four miscarriages, we gave up. Subsequently, we adopted three beautiful newborn babies.

We let them know that they were "chosen" and it presented no problems. We also told them that they could have all the information we had concerning their birth mothers, and if they wanted to look them up, we would not feel hurt. So, we gave them all the information, including their mothers' medical histories.

Abby, not one of our three adopted children had the slightest interest in "looking up" their birth mothers. I wonder if our children are unusual? What do you think? — D.D.H. IN ROCHESTER, N.Y.

DEAR D.D.H.: I think it's a wonderful compliment to you and your husband.

Former coach kills self after abduction attemptof pupil

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — A tennis coach who police said was obsessed with a 17-year-old player shot himself to death when officers approached after a failed attempt to abduct her.

Investigators believe Gary D. Wilensky planned to take the girl to a remote mountain hideout he had equipped with an elaborate security system and restraining devices.

Gary D. Wilensky, 56, used to coach Jennifer Rhodes, a promising amateur player from New York City, said Detective Lt. Steven Heider of the police department in suburban Colonie.

"In this case, what we believe that we're dealing with is a person who became obsessed with the 17-year-old," Heider said.

The girl and her mother were treated at Albany Medical Center for head injuries and released.

Wilensky of New York City had been undergoing psychological treatment for his obsession until last month and was considered suicidal, although his doctors did not think he was a threat to Rhodes or her family, Heider said.

TRAVEL

Us in a bus: Tour de farce

By Mike Nichols
N.Y. Times News Service

It's not too early to plan your summer vacation. If you want to travel, I suggest that you consider a tour group. It's great fun, provided the tour group is small. I recently spent eight days touring Spain and Portugal in a group of 35, and that's just too many people. In fact, our group's size made us, for eight days, the fifth-largest nation in Europe. We received invitations to join the Common Market. Iraq tried to sell us nuclear bomb plans. The United States sent us $5 billion in foreign aid. We used the money to buy postcards.

On the road our group traveled in a huge tour bus that bullied small European cars. On foot our group moved along sidewalks like a single organism, engulfing, undulating — an amoeba with sensible shoes. As we walked we swept all before us. Grown men screamed, dogs barked, small children wet themselves. When we undulated into restaurants and asked for a table for 35 the maitre d' would burst into tears and impale himself on a bread stick.

OUR GROUP was composed of two personality types: extroverts and introverts. The extroverts were joke-telling, back-slapping, business card-exchanging happy-go-lucky types who always enjoyed themselves, organized sing-alongs on the bus and preferred to shop and gamble and stay up late. The introverts were quiet, studious types who preferred to sightsee, explore museums and absorb the local culture while secretly wishing that they could get invited to the extroverts' all-night nude limbo parties.

At a bullfight, the introverts tucked their queasy heads between their wobbly knees; the extroverts chanted "Ole!" and performed the wave. In a magnificent cathedral, the introverts stared in hushed reverence; the extroverts chanted "Way to go, God!" and performed the wave.

OUR TOUR director was a likable, knowledgeable and infinitely patient man. Part professor, part trail boss, part saint. Day after day he rode herd over us — counting heads, providing commentary, solving problems and indulging members of the group who were always holding up the bus because they were off shopping somewhere or always leaving their passport back at the last hotel or always dropping their camera in a bidet. Not once did he strangle these people with his microphone cord, even though some of us offered to hold his coat for him while he did.

For eight days our group lived according to a rigid itinerary. We had to wake up by a certain time, have our bags outside our hotel room door by a certain time, finish eating breakfast by a certain time, be on the bus by a certain time, see selected sights by a certain time, be back on the bus by a certain time and reach the next hotel by a certain time. On and on we pushed, day after day, mile after mile. It was like the Bataan Death March with room service.

WE ATE TOGETHER, we traveled together, we "ewww"ed and "ahhh"ed at tourist attractions together, we searched for our luggage in hotel lobbies together. Searching for luggage together brings people closer. Especially if two people claim the same piece of Samsonite and get into a fist-fight. Thank goodness we didn't buy those nuclear bomb plans from Iraq.

And indeed all this togetherness brought about an amazing transformation: On Day One we were just 35 total strangers. But by Day Eight we were 35 total strangers who had caught each other's colds.

Then our tour came to an end, and we all had to go our separate ways, to return home to our jobs and families and real life. Upon parting, the extroverts were, for the only time during the entire trip, subdued; the introverts performed the wave.

Zoo opens new home for endangered Asian rhinos

By Deborah Bradley
N.Y. Times News Service

FORT WORTH, Texas — Built into a hillside of the Fort Worth Zoo is the new home for Arun and Arati, the park's young Asian rhinos.

This million-dollar exhibit, which opened Saturday, replicates their wet, grassy homeland of Nepal — outfitted with separate, his-and-hers yards, waterfalls, shallow pools and mud wallows.

Asian Rhino Ridge, built with a corporate gift from Exxon, is part of the zoo expansion that started with the World of Primates, which opened in 1992.

The design works well for visitors and the rhinos. Points above the exhibit and at eye level offer close-up views, while the big beasts still have room to romp in their 24,000-square-foot playground near the elephant exhibit.

Arun and Arati — whose names mean "rising sun" and "prayer," respectively, in Nepali — came to the zoo from Nepal in 1990. Since then, the rascals have managed to teach the zoo a bit about the Asian greater one-horned rhino.

Unlike their African cousins, which have two horns and gray skin, the Asian rhinos have one horn and heavy folds of skin that resemble a suit of armor. But the two species are different in more than just appearances. The African rhino tends to be solitary and quiet whereas the Asian rhinos are playful.

IN FACT, they frolic much like very, "very" big dogs. To be exact, Arun and Arati are 2,500-pound pups with opposite dispositions (Arun might weigh as much as 6,500 pounds when full grown, and Arun 5,000).

Arun delights in tossing his 40-pound ball effortlessly into the air. Arati relishes having her belly rubbed.

"He's a boy. He likes to prove himself — to use brute force and fight. He's like any 13-year-old boy you know," says mammal keeper Dan Grandquist. "Arati's a lot more docile. She doesn't like to play with her ball as much. She likes to be petted and to get attention."

In fact, when she's scratched on her hind quarters, she lifts her leg and gives it a shake. From there, it's not long before Arati manages to heave her hefty frame on to her back for a belly rub.

See rare, greater one-horned Asian rhinos at the Fort Worth Zoo's new Asian Rhino Ridge exhibit.

They both love to splash water, but Arun loves the belly buster, says Grandquist.

"Once Arun figures out he can make waves in his pool, he'll make some big splashes. If the crowd screams, he'll love it all the more," he says.

Along with the splashes and the fun is the sobering reality that the rhinos are a highly endangered species with fewer than 2,000 remaining in the wild and in zoos.

THE DECLINE is primarily due to poaching and the destruction of habitats for farm land. The Nepalese hunt rhinos, using every part of the animals for religious and cultural practices. And poachers kill them for their horns.

"In Asia and China, the black market for rhino horns is substantial," says Ted Beattie, zoo director. "They grind them up for aphrodisiacs and to make daggers."

The safe havens for Asian rhinos are zoos and the Royal Bardia National Park. Nepal has sent more than 30 wild rhinos, including Arun and Arati, to zoos around the world. The hope is that scientists can study them closer and increase captive breeding and ultimately, help strengthen the animals' numbers.

At almost 3 years, Arun and Arati won't be ready to mate for a couple more years. But they are getting to an age where they're flirting with the idea of mating.

"Arati has gone through one heat cycle, and she got stand-offish, moody and went off food," says Grandquist. "Normally, she gets upset if you don't pet her. Females also do a two-phase whistle to call their mate."

During the next few months, the rhinos will be introduced. Arun will join Arati in her yard, for a couple of hours at a time, Grandquist says. Up 'til now, they've been separated in hopes that they'll view each other as mates rather than as brother and sister.

"When they first get together, she'll love the attention and company, but he'll probably get too rough with her," Grandquist says. "She'll have to put him in his place before she eventually agrees to mate. The female only accepts the male at specific times — most of the other times, they fight."

A newborn rhino is several years off for the zoo, but coming May 29 is the birds of prey exhibit, Raptor Canyon. Also in the planning stages is a koala bear exhibit, which will make the Fort Worth Zoo one of the few in the nation to house the animals. No date has been set.

Zoo admission: $5 adults, $2.50 senior citizens and children (3-12), free for children under 3. Tickets are half-price every Wednesday.

Times: 10 a.m.- 5 p.m. daily.

Hong Kong most popular destination in Asia

N.Y. Times News Service

Hong Kong is the most popular travel destination in Asia, drawing more international visitors than China or Japan and eclipsing such exotic spots as Bangkok. Last year the territory counted seven million visitor arrivals — a remarkable increase of one million over the year before. And the Hong Kong Tourist Association, a government-financed body, estimates the number of visitor arrivals will increase 6 to 9 percent this year.

This growth comes at a time when the future of the British colony has never been more precarious. In 1997 Britain will return the freewheeling territory to China, which has one of the most repressive regimes in the world. While China has promised to leave life here relatively untouched, no one can be certain how the territory will fare.

But several years ago, with a flair and resourcefulness that is typical of the colony, hotels here began taking reservations for June 30, 1997, the eve of the handover of Hong Kong. Hotel managers estimate that more than 1,000 rooms have already been booked for that historic night.

The travel industry appears optimistic about life after 1997. The number of hotel rooms in Hong Kong has been increasing (from 17,000 in 1988 to 33,000 today), older hotels are renovating and expanding, and money has been budgeted to more than double the size of the glittering convention center.

But there are troubling signs. Hong Kong's Kai Tak airport will reach maximum capacity in the next few years.

Meanwhile the travel industry here has continued to flourish despite recessions in the United States, Europe and Japan, because a booming regional economy has given many Asians more money for travel, and travel restrictions in countries like Taiwan, Malaysia and South Korea have eased recently, according to a spokeswoman for the tourist association.

Aruba's 'Bon Bini' is a welcome treat

Island is filled with unusual natural wonders, surround by crystal sea

By Jennifer Merin

ORANJESTAD, Aruba (AP) — Each Tuesday evening, tourists and locals gather at Fort Zoutman for a Bon Bini Festival celebrating this Caribbean island's cultural heritage with song, dance, food and crafts.

"Bon bini" means "welcome" in Papiamento, a sometimes spicy, sometimes lilting language that's a blend of Dutch, Spanish and Portuguese, with several African dialects, some English and a little Arawak Indian mixed in.

Dutch is the official language, but the more widely used Papiamento reflects the multi-ethnic roots of Aruba's 70,000 people.

"Bon bini" is the first Papiamento phrase tourists learn. The words are on banners at the airport and on docks where cruise ships disembark. They are shouted to passersby by kids playing along the roadside and are the greeting of hotel clerks and shopkeepers.

The words "bon bini" genuinely express the island's friendliness, as does the Bon Bini Festival organized by Aruba's Instituto de Cultura. The festival is a showcase for local bands, dance groups, artisans and restaurants. A $1 ticket — equal to about 1.78 Aruba florins — covers admission and entertainment. Food and souvenirs are extra.

Fort Zoutman, the oldest structure on Aruba, is a perfect spot for the festival. Built by the Dutch in 1796 to protect against marauding pirates, it now houses Aruba's Historical Museum. Its tall, proud Willem III bell tower, added in 1867, overlooks Oranjestad's narrow streets lined with houses with pastel facades and red tile roofs and clusters of duty-free shops.

THE FESTIVAL IS also a great place for tourists to meet locals — and to learn more Papiamento. Although almost everyone on Aruba speaks English — plus Dutch and Spanish — the terms "bon dia" for "good morning" and "masha danke" for "thank you" can come in handy.

Aruba, about 15 miles from Venezuela's northern coast, is the smallest and most westerly of the Netherlands Antilles' "ABC" islands — Aruba, Bonaire and Curacao. The island, 19 miles long and six miles wide, has unusual natural wonders and is surrounded by clear blue seas.

On the windward side, where strong tradewinds whip the waters into whitecaps, the coast is marked by eroded coral cliffs. A natural rock bridge frames a luminescent blue-green sea.

The leeward side is known as the Turquoise Coast. Its calm, clear waters and white powder beaches are perfect for swimming and sunning.

A PERSISTENT WIND, averaging 18 knots since 1899, sweeps over the island, keeping temperature moderate and air dry. The desert-like interior supports vast fields of aloe. Fences of tall cacti surround homes and farms. Several of the farms have windmills.

The wind also shapes Aruba's divi divi trees, which seem to grow sideways rather than skyward.

In the center of the island is Mount Yamanota, a 617-foot cone-shaped rise known as "hooiberg," which means "haystack." Climb to the top for a spectacular view. Wind-sculpted boulders at Casibari and Ayo are also excellent for climbing.

Aruba has had independent status within the Kingdom of the Netherlands since 1986. The island, originally inhabited by Arawak and Carib Indians, was discovered and claimed for Spain in 1499 by Alonso de Ojeda. The Dutch gained possession in 1636 and, except for a brief British occupation in 1800, Aruba has been part of the Netherlands ever since.

From 1825 to 1916, gold mining made the island prosperous. In 1929, an oil refinery — the world's largest at the time — was built near St. Nicolas, Aruba's second largest town. It created a boom economy until the mid-1970s. At present, tourism is Aruba's biggest industry.

IF YOU GO: American Airlines' five daily flights to Aruba include one non-stop from New York's JFK and two each from Miami and San Juan, P.R. Passengers from any U.S. city can connect with Miami or San Juan flights. Viasa flies to Aruba from Houston.

Modern resort complexes, with air-conditioning and all of the amenities, are available. The Aruba Hyatt Resort is considered the island's best hotel, with rooms from $120 double occupancy (low season summer months). Bushiri Resort, a popular self-contained resort, is priced from $220 per day per person during the low season.

Driving in Aruba is an adventure. In town, streets are narrow and traffic can be heavy, but drivers are generally polite. Outlying roads are well-tended, but some stretches are unpaved so beware the ruts.

Car rental rates vary, with Dollar charging $46 a day for a compact with unlimited free mileage, Hertz $49 and Budget $50 with a two-day minimum.

Many restaurants feature seafood, often spicy stews. Steak and grilled iguana — it tastes like chicken — also are popular. Food in most restaurants is fresh and wholesome.

For further information: The Aruba Tourism Authority, 521 Fifth Ave., New York, N,Y. 10175. Telephone 1-800-TO-ARUBA or 1-212-246-3030.

Domestic violence calls for change

Early last week a popular singer's husband was arrested for allegedly kicking her in the face and smashing her with a chair. The story made headlines because she's famous — but it is hardly news. After all, every 15 seconds an American woman is beaten by her husband or boyfriend.

The Family Violence Prevention Fund, a 13-year-old non-profit group, released a study that reveals just how familiar Americans are with domestic violence. While only 19 percent of those surveyed had witnessed a robbery or mugging, 34 percent had witnessed a battering.

There aren't enough jails in the country to hold the men who've taken a fist, or a chair, to their female partners. Nor are there enough shelters to house their victims. What's true about any number of social pathologies is true of domestic violence: the best treatment is prevention, as the fund points out in preparing a public education campaign.

For too long Americans have lived in a culture that condoned domestic violence. Less than 10 years ago a Presidential Task Force on Family Violence found that many Americans saw nothing wrong in working over a wife who "needed a lesson." One of five college couples surveyed in 1981 reported exchanging kicks, slaps and fisticuffs; more than a third thought it "helped" their relationship.

That kind of nonsense doesn't show up in this new survey. Battering, the respondents said, is wrong. "He was drinking" is no excuse. Neither is that old canard "She asked for it." Americans seem finally aware that a woman socked in the kitchen by her husband is as much a victim as a woman mugged in the street by a stranger.

Panetta puts 'management' back in OMB

WASHINGTON — Office of Management and Budget Director Leon Panetta was stunned to discover recently that there's a "leper colony" within the vast federal bureaucracy he presides over.

Anderson

Panetta told us of an agency that created an alternative to firing or transferring undesirable workers. They were stationed at one location within the building — out of sight and mind. They became known internally as the "leper colony." Panetta expressed amazement that there are other such examples in the annals of federal personnel management.

Panetta called that management mind set "crazy." "That's the kind of thing you do to work around the system," Panetta stated. "We have to reshape that. I know you run into the unions, but even the unions have got to understand. I would think the unions have to be sympathetic. ... People work their way up through the system ... (then lose) what it's all about."

It's little surprise that Panetta has emerged as the Clinton administration's deficit hawk, since slashing government spending was the hallmark of his congressional career. But he has also devoted his energies to the "M" in OMB, to a degree his predecessors shied away from.

During a recent interview, Panetta floated some new proposals he says are under study. To be sure, they would revolutionize the culture of the federal work place, making it conform more to the standards of the private sector. He's pursuing some of these ideas in conjunction with Vice President Al Gore's top-to-bottom review of the bureaucracy.

"I'm basically going through a review process now," Panetta said. "We're looking at a whole series of things. For example, the whole issue of departments lining up at the end of the year and spending their money because they don't want to go into the next fiscal year with any money. It still happens. For the life of me I never understood why we couldn't say to an agency that if you save money, you ought not to be penalized because you're doing it."

Approaching 100 days on the job, Panetta is haunted by a General Accounting Office study concluded earlier this year, which found that virtually every department of the federal government is mismanaged. "I think about that statement every day," Panetta said.

If there's an underlying cause, Panetta pinpoints it as too much carrot and not enough stick. Thus he's examining ways in which for the first time punitive measures could be inflicted on agencies and departments that keep sloppy books or engage in year-end shopping sprees rather than turn back savings to taxpayers.

"So much of what we've done in government is the carrot approach, which is please be nice, please do it well, we'll give you a certificate at the end of the year if you do a good job," he explained. "I think what we've got to do is be much tougher, and put more teeth into the process and say, 'Look, if you can't give us a balanced book at the end of the period, that shows what you've expended and how you've expended it, then in some way we've got to take some (money) back. You've got to be penalized."

Panetta acknowledges the inherent problems in such a notion, which could wind up hurting beneficiaries of programs more than guilty bureaucrats. He also recognizes the political peril because it could entail "confronting" the "built-in constituencies" that are served by these agencies.

Managing a $1.5 trillion budget is a daunting task, and it's only part of Panetta's job description. But he suggests that his chief weapon — the budget — helps improve the odds of implementing a system of rewards and punishments.

After a career on Capitol Hill, Panetta is now becoming more attuned to the prerogatives of the executive branch.

'Canned hunts' leaves bad taste in true hunter

Most hunters are conservationists, understanding the delicate ecological balance of wildlife food supply and demand. But those hunters who would rather pay big bucks to shoot tethered big bucks or caged African lions were dealt a setback last week as the state Senate approved a bill to outlaw "'canned hunts," the practice of setting up the killing of wild animals that have been kept in captivity.

Can you imagine what a thrill of achievement it must be to stalk and shoot a penned cougar that has been declawed and fed much as you might tend a house cat? Take home that taxidermied head and hang under it a little brass plate that reads: "One mountain lion that won't bother anybody anymore."

Legally, there are no current restrictions on shooting these fish in a barrel. Ethically and morally, the practice must be reprehensible to all right-thinking persons.

Current Texas law allows canned hunts unless the animal is listed as federally endangered or threatened. The Senate bill, sponsored by Mike Moncrief, a Democrat from Fort Worth, would make it illegal to kill lions, tigers, cougars, leopards, cheetahs, hyenas, bears, several migratory birds and similar state-listed endangered species. The exception would be when human life is threatened.

The proposed law also would regulate possession and would require all wild animal owners to register with the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department. While the registration provision smacks of unnecessary government control, perhaps such a measure is required for adequate enforcement.

National news reports of canned hunts damaged Texas' wild west reputation and added a hash mark to the tally of state embarrassments. At the same time, those stories also lured lazy and inept hunters from out-of-state in search of easy and vulnerable prey.

Here's a question: why are people hunting lions, tigers, leopards, cheetahs, hyenas and bears in Texas, anyway? Because someone is willing to pay for the domestic safari instead of shelling out the really big bucks for an authentic African trophy trip.

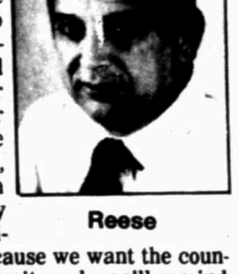
CHARLEY REESE

Dividing flock keeps people scared, ignorant

If the Republicans were smart, which they aren't, and if they had the nerve, which they don't, they would let all of Bill Clinton's programs sail through the Congress without any carping or filibustering.

They would say to the American people: "Look, you chose to put Clinton in the White House and you chose to put a majority of Democrats in the House and Senate. We think their ideas are not good for the country, but since you think they are, we're going to let them go through. If they work, then as Americans we'll be happy because we want the country to succeed; if they don't work, we'll remind you at the next election that we told you so and ask you to hold the Democrats accountable."



Reese

That way, neither House nor Senate Democrats in 1994 nor Clinton in 1996 could blame any failures on the Republicans.

But, of course, if Republicans were really that smart and had the country's interests at heart, they wouldn't have lost the election in 1992. What they can't face up to is that they had their chance and they blew it.

It may be true that Clinton, thanks to Ross Perot, won with a plurality, but it is also true that when you count Perot's vote, an overwhelming majority of Americans flat out rejected George Bush and for very good reasons.

By 1996, they may be ready to reject Clinton but they will not replace him with a Republican until that party can decide what, if anything, it stands for besides hot air, patronage, and obedience to the big money crowd.

It's still true, there's not a dime's worth of difference between Republicans and Democrats, but the Democrats at least have managed to put forth a coherent plan for doing what the big money wants done. They have at least done a better job of fooling the American people.

Bush's big sin, as far as the ruling cliques in this country are concerned, was not being disdainful of the American people, it was letting them realize he was.

Clinton, especially in foreign affairs, is doing exactly the same thing Bush did or would have done, but first he cries tears of compassion all over your suit and hugs you.

Nor, for that matter, is there anything in his domestic program that would have made Bush uncomfortable, but there again, Clinton is a better salesman. He keeps his arrogant Wall Street advisors off camera. And he talks compassion, not high finance, even though the people in high finance are delighted with what he's doing.

In America, the game is played this way: the intellectual elite figures you and I are not only too dumb to understand anything, but that if we had control of our government, we'd just mess it up. So the trick is to make sure we don't control our government while at the same time duping us into the belief that we do.

Noam Chomsky, a very smart guy who works at MIT, has explained it all in several books if you're interested in an academic explanation with footnotes and quotes.

But the simple explanation is that the elite makes sure the real issues— tax policy, foreign policy, monetary policy, and banking policy — never get debated and the way to do that is to keep the ignorant masses distracted with such issues as gays in the military, extremist anti-abortionists, crime, sports, soap operas, and foreign and domestic demons. Keep the dummies scared and uninformed and then do what the people who own the country want done. Use propaganda to manufacture consent. And keep them divided — pit race against race, labor against management, Anglos against Hispanics, etc. That's how this country has been run at least since the days of Woodrow Wilson.

Ben Franklin warned us: "If you make yourselves sheep, the wolves will eat you." It's true, even when the wolves smile before they bite.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, April 26, the 116th day of 1993. There are 249 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On April 26, 1986, the world's worst nuclear accident occurred at the Chernobyl plant in the Soviet Union. An experiment involving the No. 4 reactor went awry, causing an explosion and fire that sent radioactivity into the atmosphere. At least 31 Soviets died in the immediate aftermath of the accident.

On this date:

In 1607, an expedition of English colonists, including Capt. John Smith, went ashore at Cape Henry, Va., to establish the first permanent English settlement in the New World.

In 1785, the American naturalist and artist John James Audubon was born in Haiti.

In 1865, John Wilkes Booth, the assassin of President Lincoln, was surrounded by federal troops near Bowling Green, Va., and killed.

In 1900, seismologist Charles Richter, who devised the earthquake-measuring scale that bears his name, was born in Hamilton, Ohio.

In 1937, planes from Nazi Germany raided the Basque town of Guernica during the Spanish Civil War.

In 1961, Roger Maris of the New York Yankees hit the first of a record 61 home runs in a single season; the homer was off Detroit's Paul Foytack at Tiger Stadium.

In 1964, the African nations of Tanganyika and Zanzibar merged to form Tanzania.

In 1968, the United States exploded beneath the Nevada desert a one-megaton nuclear device called "Boxcar."

In 1980, following an unsuccessful attempt by the United States to rescue the hostages in Iran, the Iranian government announced the captives had been taken from the American Embassy and were being scattered to thwart any future rescue effort.

In 1989, actress-comedian Lucille Ball died at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in Los Angeles at age 77.

Ten years ago: A national commission released a scathing report on the state of American education, calling for sweeping measures to combat what it called "a rising tide of mediocrity" in schools. On Wall Street, the Dow Jones Industrial Average closed above 1,200 points for the first time.

Phone credit card complicates plan to reach out

The company was nice enough a few years back to provide me with a telephone credit card. I was told I could use it any time, except to call bookies or phone sex numbers. Fair enough.

Having my own telephone credit card indicated to me that my employers thought I was doing a good job and weren't going to fire me any time soon.

Grizzard

The problem with my card, however, was I had to punch in 14 numbers after I'd already punched in the number I was calling.

You punch in the number you're calling, and then you get an electric "baaawg," which signals you to enter your credit card number.

Then a lady says, "Thank you for using AT&T."

I've always wanted to reply to her, "You're more than welcome, lady, but all I did was pick up the phone and start punching numbers. I didn't make any sort of choice here. You could have been Lucky Leroy's Telephone Service and I wouldn't have cared."

Of course, about half the time I punched in my credit card number incorrectly and that same lady would say, "Your number is not valid. Please enter it again."

Sometimes I'd foul it up a second time and she would say, "Please hang up and try your call again."

So it often would take me 15 minutes just to get the telephone ringing on the other end because there were 90 many numbers involved. I've simply never been good with numbers.

I attempted to call my secretary last week using my old credit card number. The phone lady, who must be the only person in the world working seven days a week, 24 hours a day, said, "Your number is invalid, etc." And after I tried it two more times, she still said it was invalid. Did this mean I was getting fired?

So I called my secretary, the lovely and multi-talented Ms. Wanda Fribish, collect.

At first she wouldn't accept the call. "Tell Fish-face that I'm on my break," is what she said to the operator. I begged on the other end of the line for a few minutes, and finally she said, "I'll accept the call, but I'm putting him on hold until my break is over."

When Ms. Fribish went off her break, she came on the line and told me the company has a new long distance service and my old credit card wouldn't work anymore. I was relieved I wasn't getting canned.

"So give me the new number," I said.

And she did.

Before, I had to remember 23 numbers to make a long distance telephone call. Under the new system I must remember 35.

Thirty-five numbers to make one lousy long distance call.

First, I dial an 800 number. Then, I dial the office number. After that I must dial 14 other numbers. God knows what any of those numbers are for.

"This is insane," I said to Ms. Fribish. "I'll never remember all these numbers."

"I'll pin a note on your shirt, four-eyes," she suggested.

This is progress? Remember when you simply picked up the phone and said to the operator, "Hilda, get me the post office."

And if you asked her, Hilda would also give you the latest gossip she picked up listening in on other callers.

Today, I've got to remember 35 numbers to make a call and I've got to watch the Nightly News for 30 minutes to get the latest gossip.

Just to be certain this wasn't some sort of trick and I was really getting fired, I had Ms. Fribish switch me to personnel to see if I was still on the payroll.

The lady in personnel said she couldn't look it up with just my name. She had to have my employee number.

I hung up. If the check doesn't come in next week, I'll know my number is up.

Area farmer's stories tell of 6 decades on the plains

By Ray Westbrook
Associate Press writer

SHALLOWATER — Gale Ballard has lived on the same farm near Shallowater for 63 of his 80 years, and he isn't planning to move to town now.

A master at the art of understatement, Ballard said, "I guess we will stay here for a while since we are just about to get used to this place by now."

Ballard also has a down-home way of turning a phrase.

"Back in 1932-35 there were bad sandstorms here. Some of them just got dark right in the middle of the day — and you didn't turn the light on either because there wasn't any electricity," he explained.

A kerosene lamp provided some light, but not much. "You would just light the lamp, and then you would have to strike a match to see if the lamp was burning," he said.

Ballard has kept some memorabilia from the past, including a rare Model-T Ford. "It's a closed-in sedan," he said. "Back yonder in the '20s, they didn't make very many of those closed-in cars; they were all open-top cars. Most cars had a canvas top, and you could let the top down, but this is a four-door sedan. It has glasses that roll up and down, and even has locks on the doors."

Ballard still drives that car in some local parades; in other parades, he drives a 1929 Model-A Ford fire truck that is painted red.

He has reduced his collection of antique automobiles in recent years, however. "I have sold three in the past two years," he said. "I don't know how come me to do it, but I just decided I would."

Ballard has an eyewitness's perspective on the history of the Lubbock area. "Shallowater wasn't very big," he remembers. "I guess there was one filling station in Shallowater. It was right there where Virgil Bets' (service station) is now, and Uncle Pate Hardy ran it."

He remembers the picturesque scene this way: "We came through Shallowater in 1926, moving to Sudan. They had a horse trough there and a windmill, and we watered our horses at the horse trough right in the middle of Shallowater."

Ballard and his parents moved in 1930 to the farm where he now resides with his wife, Florence and where his children, Tommy and Alice, grew up.

He remembers the "rough times" of the Depression. "It was all dry land farming then, and all with horses. I will guarantee you farming has changed a lot. We just used horsepower then."

He doesn't do any crop farming now and has no plans to start again. "I don't guess I will farm anymore. I have my tractor in the museum down at Shallowater,' he said.

The tractor to which he refers is a 1937 John Deere that he bought used in 1942.

"We made a living with it," he remembers.

Ballard thinks farming would be difficult to break into the 1990s. "It's pretty hard for the farmers to make any money now the way things are. I was talking to a man the other day — a good farmer — who lives over at county line. Me and him were talking, and he said, 'Gale, it's just a little bit odd because I can remember back in '50 that I bought a brand new John Deere tractor, planter and cultivator and gave $3,000 for it. Cotton was 50 cents a pound. Now, cotton is 50 cents a pound and a tractor will cost you $50,000.'

"It's hard to operate and make any money farming now."

TU Electric introduces environmental program

Staff report

Teen-agers may drag their feet about cleaning their rooms, but they have responded with enthusiasm to a program in selected schools across the nation that teaches them how to clean their world.

TU Electric will bring this new environmental program to Texas for the first time this fall, as a pilot in five junior high schools. The company plans to make it available to more than 100,000 seventh grade students throughout its service area over the next five years, beginning in January 1994.

Called "In Concert With the Environment," it is a science curriculum course designed to teach students how their everyday use of energy affects the environment. By using a new concept called EcoWatts, students can calculate the environment benefits of energy conservation and learn specific actions they can take to create harmony between their energy use and the environment.

The interactive computer-based program was developed two years ago by EcoGroup, Inc. to be used in partnership with electric utilities. Through the participation of 17 utility companies, it has reached approximately 70,000 students in 250 schools in 15 states from New York to Hawaii.

"One of the greatest challenges we face is meeting the energy needs of our increasingly technological society while continuing to protect the environment," said TU Electric District Manager LuAnn Morgan.

"TU Electric has been a leader in the electric utility industry in the development and application of environmentally-beneficial programs at our facilities. This educational program is a continuation of our long-term environment," she said.

"By encouraging energy conservations, the program also meets the company's goal to keep growth in peak electric load down in order to reduce the need for future generating facilities," Morgan added.

The five point schools, representing a cross-section of TU Electric's service area, will be announced in May and training for the classroom teachers will be conducted this summer by TU Electric's Consumer & Education Services staff.

The course provides students comprehensive information about how natural resources are converted into energy for the home, transportation and other uses and how these conversions affect the environment. The students will exercise skills in investigative techniques, computer literacy and report and goal writing.

Materials include a motivational video, teacher lesson plans, student handbooks, energy use surverys, a computer learning station for students to use to process their results, a personalized energy and environmental report and an action plan that outlines ways students and their families can benefit the environment.

EcoGroup has customized these materials to reflect the energy use, fuel resources, residential electric rates and weather data in this part of Texas. Actors in the motivational video will be students from the Arts Magnet High School in Dallas.

To make the relationship between energy and the environment more clear, "In Concert With the Environment" employs an entirely new concept for measuring environmental impacts called the EcoWatt Benefit. These units are gained anytime an action is taken to use less energy more wisely, including added insulation, increasing vehicle fuel efficiency, using less hot water, car pooling and recycling,

Students learn how EcoWatt Benefits can result in cleaner air, less water resources depleted, less landfill space being used, fewer trees harvested to produce paper products and other positive results.

TU Electric serves about 5.5 million people in more than 370 towns and cities in 87 countries across the northern third of Texas.

■ Man falls 3 stories from hotel window

PORTLAND, Ore. — A man who refused to leave a hotel tried to escape from security guards by climbing down a rope of knotted bedsheets "like a jailhouse break," but he fell three floors.

William M. Holyfield, 35, was in critical condition Sunday in intensive care with a head injury and multiple broken bones, said a nursing supervisor at Oregon Health Sciences University.

Holyfield arrived Friday on a bus from Seattle, with identification giving an address in Chicago, said police spokeswman Henry Groepper. Holyfield checked into a room at the downtown Hilton Hotel and paid cash for one night's lodging.

Security officers went to Holyfield's room Saturday afternoon to escort him out of the hotel, but he bolted and ran into another room, Groepper said.

Holyfield barricaded the door with a bed frame and two mattresses, then smashed windows, and tore pictures off the walls and tossed them and the telephone out a window, Groepper said.

Holyfield then knotted sheets together and threw them from the window "like a jailhouse break," Groepper said.

The hospital said he would undergo a psychiatric evaluation.

No charges had been filed by early Sunday, police said.

■ NASA tries third shuttle launch today

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — NASA performed yet another sweep of safety inspections on space shuttle Columbia and replaced stale biological samples Sunday for launch attempt three of a German science mission.

Liftoff was set for 9:50 a.m. CDT today. Forecasters put the odds of good weather at 80 percent.

German researchers and space officials were eager to get going, not to mention the two German astronauts awaiting their first space flight.

They have endured a Saturday scrub due to a faulty navigation unit, a March launch abort due to an engine shutdown, and several earlier delays caused by other troubles.

Columbia's second countdown for the research mission was halted seven hours before liftoff because of an intermittent power supply problem with one of Columbia's three navigation units. The bad unit was replaced with a spare.

This will be NASA's 55th shuttle mission and the 14th trip for Columbia. It will be the third of eight shuttle flights planned this year.

■ Officials: Honeybees to arrive in 6 months

TUCSON, Ariz. — Africanized "killer" honeybees will arrive in Arizona in three to six months, according to an entomologist.

Justin Schmidt, who works at the Carl Hayden Bee Research Center here, developed the traps that caught the first killer-bee swarm to cross the Mexican border into Texas on Oct. 15, 1990.

Since then, the bees have spread to San Antonio, Austin, Laredo and Corpus Christi and they are expected to reach Houston and El Paso this year.

Gay marchers demand rights in rally

WASHINGTON (AP) — Throngs of gay men and women spilled across the historic Mall on Sunday demanding acceptance and equal rights from a society that often scorns their community. "A simple matter of justice" was their rallying cry.

In brilliant, summery sunshine, they came by the hundreds of thousands to tell America who they are and what they want: everyday citizens seeking an end to legal discrimination that threatens their jobs, privacy and peace of mind.

"We are the new American refugees, coming home from exile," Torie Osborn, executive director of the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force, exhorted the mellow, enthusiastic crowd.

"We won't compromise our freedom. We won't negotiate our freedom away so those who have freedom can be more comfortable," said David Mixner, a Los Angeles business consultant and fundraiser who has advised President Clinton on gay issues.

The U.S. Park Police estimated the crowd at 300,000. But march organizers said the event drew 1.1 million, a turnout that would rival the great civil rights and anti-war protests of the past quarter-century.

Police arrested four people for disorderly conduct during the march but said overall it was peaceful.

Some same-sex couples held hands or hugged in an atmosphere they described as more comfortable and supportive than what they encountered in their daily lives.

"You can walk around holding hands and being completely natural with each other without fear," said Chris Triebert, 41, a graphic designer from Brattleboro, Vt.

The formal program was a blend of music, political speeches, biting humor and insistent demands for rights. One speaker drew a laugh when she announced that red-sequined dresses were burned in front of the FBI's J. Edgar Hoover Building — a barbed reference to recent published accounts that Hoover liked to wear women's clothing.

At least two cross-dressers were on the program, including a male comedian who poked fun at straight fears about letting gays into the military.

The subject spoke volumes about the historic moment. The first gay march on Washington since 1987, in the planning for two years, came in the first 100 days of the first White House openly sympathetic to gay aspirations.

Clinton, who invited gay leaders to a White House meeting earlier this month, lent support from a distance. In a speech in Boston to newspaper editors, he said he had paid a political price for trying to end the military ban.

In a message to marchers, he declared, "I stand with you in the struggle for equality for all Americans, including gay men and lesbians."

Gay military veterans and a few still in active service were introduced to the crowd on the Mall. Allen Pemberton, a hospitalman at Bethesda Naval Hospital, predicted discharge proceedings would start as a result of his public acknowledgement he is gay.

Thousands of people came not for the rhetoric, but to shatter by their presence the stereotypes that others have about them.

"All gays aren't flaming queens," said Steve Starr, 43, a Denver travel agent marching alongside Robert Jacobson, 37, a telephone company technician.

Clinton vows to 'bust a gut' on health care system

BOSTON (AP) — At times reflective and at times bristling with frustration, President Clinton worried Sunday over the defeat of his jobs bill, vowing to "bust a gut" to deliver economic and health reforms as his administration moves beyond the 100-day landmark.

In a speech to the Newspaper Association of America, Clinton also expressed exasperation with the ongoing ethnic violence in Bosnia, calling it "the most difficult foreign policy problem this country faces."

Displaying sensitivity on his accomplishments to date, Clinton told the publishers, "You have to have a realistic feeling of how long it takes to get these things done. ...That's why you get a four-year term, not a three-month term," He said he regretted the tone of partisanship that ensnarled pieces of his economic program.

He chided Senate Republicans for blocking his $12 billion jobs bill and held out the hope for bipartisan cooperation on future initiatives.

"We cannot solve the problems of the country if every last issue that comes up, just because the president recommends it ... attracts only members of my party. I don't want that," he said.

Summing up his progress to date, Clinton said, "In the first 96 days of this administration, I think we have begun to fundamentally change the direction taken by the government over the past decade."

He pledged to mark Day 100 — Friday on the Clinton calendar — by issuing details for his plan to let students repay college loans through community service.

"Everything I talked about in the campaign is being done," he said.

He renewed his support for Boris Yeltsin's reform movement on the day the Russian leader was up for a public vote of confidence.

Clinton said he had deliberately avoided personal contact with Yeltsin in recent days lest he hurt the Russian leader's prospects in the referendum. But he insisted, "We need to be in this for the long term with him."

He predicted Yeltsin would do well in the referendum and said he planned to call Yeltsin "the minute it is appropriate."

Defending his focus on Russia, Clinton said, "I know the polls show that the American people think the president of the United States should not have spent time or their money on Russia but I respectfully disagree."

Asked during a question-and-session why he wasn't doing more on Bosnia, Clinton tensed up and retorted, "Suppose you tell me what you think we ought to do and what the end of it will be?"

He said the administration has spent immense amounts of time on the problem and pledged, "We are going to do everything we thing we can."

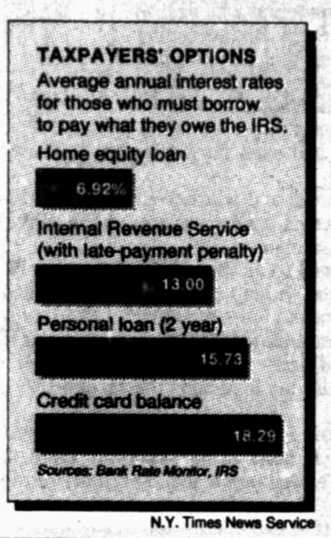
TAXPAYERS' OPTIONS
Average annual interest rates for those who must borrow to pay what they owe the IRS.



N.Y. Times News Service

Oops?

What if you blew it? April 15 has come and gone, and you (or shall we say someone you know), failed to file either an income tax return or a request for an automatic four-month extension.

"File as soon as possible and pay as much as possible if there's a shortfall," said Vincent D. Vaccaro, partner in Coopers & Lybrand in New York. After April 15 it is too late to request an automatic extension.

A tardy taxpayer should never assume that the Internal Revenue Service will be overwhelmed by last-minute returns and not notice who is missing. Its computers will notice, and meanwhile penalties and interest are mounting up for people who did not file.

The late-filing penalty of 5 percent a month of the balance due, up to a maximum of 25 percent, a late-payment penalty of one-half of 1 percent a month, and interest, currently 7 percent a year, could raise a tax liability of $8,000 to $11,040 in a year's time.

The thing to do, said Julian Block, a Larchmont, N.Y., tax lawyer and author, is file the return and a Form 9465 Installment Agreement Request proposing a payment schedule.

"The IRS is supposed to get back to you in 30 days and say if the offer is acceptable," he said. Taxpayers who have not come up with the money must then decide if the IRS is really their creditor of choice.

The cost — the 7 percent interest plus the late-payment penalty add up to an annual rate of 13 percent — is less than credit-card interest but more than a secured loan like a home-equity loan, Block noted. But anyone who borrows from the IRS should be absolutely certain to meet the payment schedule. Its powers of collection are broad.

Consumers no longer need be cryptographers to decode their credit history. TRW Information Services has started issuing credit reports written in English instead of columns of numbers and codes.

And it's a hit with consumer groups, which have long lamented the confusing nature of standard credit reports.

"We think its terrific. We think its high time that credit bureaus started speaking English to us and this one is speaking English," said Ruth Susswein, assistant director of Bankcard Holders of America, a trade group in Herndon, Va.

Others say the new form will take some of the mystery out of credit issues.

"It has been a problem," said Chris Lewis, director of banking and housing policy at Consumer Federation of America, a Washington, D.C.-based consumer advocacy group.

House hunters hire own brokers

By Vivian Marino
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — With a baby on the way, Kim and Marc Klingelhofer finally decided to give up the rental scene. But after weeks of house-hunting in the San Francisco Bay area, they found themselves up a dead-end street.

"We looked around on our own. I stopped counting after 25 (houses)," Mrs. Klingelhofer said. "Then we contacted real estate agents, but they seemed like they were just looking to make a sale. They weren't interested in what we really wanted."

It was only after the Klingelhofers hired their own broker that they got what they wanted: a $360,000 three-bedroom ranch in suburban Redwood City. The broker negotiated a deal in which the seller, who already knocked off $100,000 from the list price, agreed to throw in some appliances and furnishings and pay part of the closing costs.

"We haven't had to do anything at all, except sign papers," said Mrs. Klingelhofer, 36.

Such transactions were virtually unheard of a decade ago. All residential real estate brokers and "subagents" historically represented the seller, a role obscured by the nature of their work — finding buyers.

But experiences like the Klingelhofers are becoming more common as consumers take an increasingly aggressive approach to home buying in a buyer's market.

Today, as many as 50,000 real estate agents have been trained as home buyers' brokers — about 2,000 of them represent buyers exclusively — compared with just a handful in 1983, mostly on the West Coast.

While home-buyer agencies and franchises have been springing up nationwide, even the larger, traditional real estate firms have expanded their agents' services.

"We've gone through a major growth period," said Luke Graves, who operates Buyer No. 1 in Austin, the first home buyer agency in the state. The firm has represented buyers in 300 transactions since 1988, one-fourth of them last year alone.

"It (buyer brokering) has been known within the real estate community for a long time. It's just that traditional brokers didn't understand it and never thought it would work for many years," said Graves, noting traditional brokers' initial reluctance to share sales commissions with buyer brokers.

It wasn't until several months ago that the 750,000-member National Association of Realtors formally recognized this new breed of agents. The trade group also helped establish strict disclosure guidelines for agencies providing both seller-broker and buyer-broker services.

While traditionalists maintain buyer representation isn't necessary since they're required to treat everyone fairly under an industry code of ethics, buyer-broker proponents argue the one-sideness simply cannot be avoided.

"Sellers' agents can't negotiate effectively for the buyer because they're prohibited by law," said Raymond J. Stoklosa, the Belmont, Calif., buyer agent who found the Klingelhofers' home.

"Whenever you hire a buyers' agent, you hire an advocate. They can do everything that you authorize them to do."

Real estate scorecard

Associated Press

Major players in residential real estate:

■ Exclusive seller agents, also known as the listing agents. They market a property that's up for sale and are legally bound to negotiate the highest price and best terms for the seller. They're paid a sales commission agreed upon in the listing contract.

■ Subagents. Like the listing agent, they work for the seller — even though they show homes to potential buyers. They cannot legally negotiate on behalf of buyers. They share in the listing agents' sales commission.

■ Exclusive buyer agents. These agents represent the buyer and are legally bound to negotiate the lowest price and best terms for their clients. Many provide added services like arranging for mortgage financing, termite inspections or appraisals. They usually share in the listing agents' sales commission. Some are paid a flat fee or hourly rate in lieu of or in addition to the commission.

■ Dual agents. These agents represent both buyers and sellers. They're required in most states to disclose for which party they work, as well as the potential of representing both parties in the same transaction. Should that occur, they must keep opposing strategies confidential.

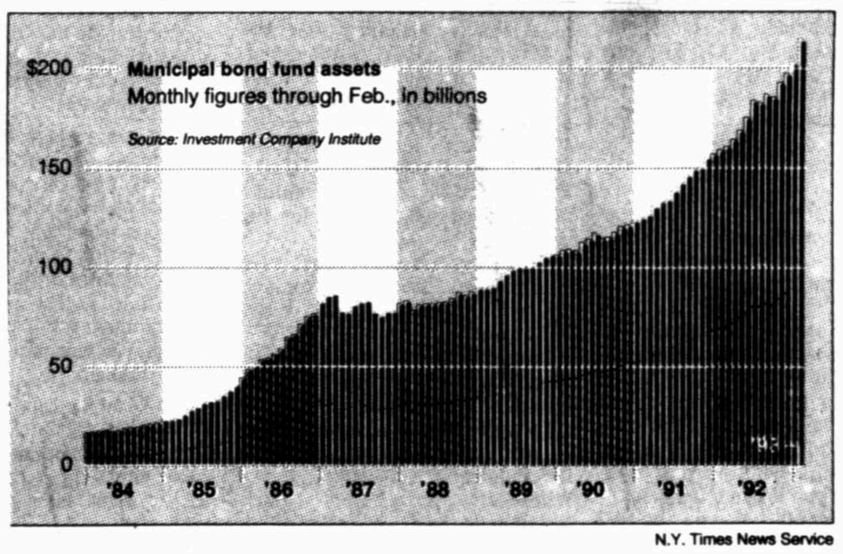
Caveat investor: Here come muni funds

N.Y. Times News Service

Mutual funds that purport to profit from baby booming and other trends are apparently out. What's in? New issues of small-stock funds, bond funds that promise high yields — and particularly municipal bond funds tailored to residents of individual states.

Forty-eight such funds registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission in January and February alone, said Patricia Ciccoretti, editor of Mutual Fund Monthly, a Washington-based newsletter. "Munis are out of control," she said with a laugh.

If the January-February rate were to last through 1993, there would be 288 muni funds, up from 161 in 1992, and 116 in 1991, Ms. Ciccoretti pointed out.



N.Y. Times News Service

But investors be wary. With a limited number of municipal bonds available, "you have funds that will increasingly have to go into higher yields, and I think investors will lose out" from the higher risk involved, said Ms. Ciccoretti.

Another oddity: even investors in states with no income tax — Florida, for one — are taking the bait.

Bargains arise in credit cards

By Chet Currier
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — To the benefit of millions of American households, price competition seems to have established a beachhead in the once-inviolate world of credit cards.

Increasing numbers of banks and other financial institutions, along with big new competitors from corporate America, are cutting the rates they charge on card balances.

At the same time, people who use their cards mainly as a convenience rather than a source of revolving credit are finding more and more choices available without an annual fee.

Current studies show average credit-card interest rates in the 16 percent to 16.5 percent range, down about two percentage points from a year ago.

"It seems folks have woken up to the fact that carrying a card that charges 21 percent makes no sense when their savings earn only 3 percent," says 100 Highest Yields, a North Palm Beach, Fla., newsletter on consumer banking.

"Card interest rates are now at the lowest level in the industry's history," notes Ram Research Corp. of Frederick, Md. "The best news for consumers is the pricing collapse of bank credit cards is showing no signs of slowing."

Higher withholding could soften blow

By Pamela Yip
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — If you were one of those taxpayers who were expecting a refund but instead got a fat tax bill, prepare to face another painful situation this year.

You need to ensure that you don't end up owing Uncle Sam again next year by filling out a new withholding form and turning it in to your employer.

If you want to blame someone for your tax bill, blame former President George Bush, who tried to stimulate the economy and boost his re-election bid last year by having the government withhold less from workers' paychecks for income taxes. Workers who didn't adjust their withholding were blindsided this year by a tax bill or received slimmer refunds.

After you've got that out of your system, put your frustra-

Callable treasury bonds

Q. Why doesn't the Treasury issue bonds with a callable feature?
William H. O'Beirne, Brooklyn, N.Y.

A. Callable debt is redeemable by the issuer before the scheduled maturity date, with calls usually made when the issuer can save money by floating new debt at a lower interest rate. The federal government did sell callable bonds in the past and about two dozen issues are still outstanding. But it stopped selling them when it instituted the Strips program in the mid-1980s, a system that led to the separate trading of the principal and interest on its bonds.

"In a system like that, it's pretty inconvenient to have callable bonds," said Deborah Danker, Deputy Assistant Treasury Secretary for Federal Finance. "If the bonds could be called, an investor could never be sure that the interest payments would actually be made in later years."

From a broader perspective, the question relates to the fact that the government considers itself a large enough entity to self-insure. A call on a bond usually requires a higher interest rate — in effect, an insurance premium —that Washington chooses not to pay.

Broker-held securities

Q. What are the pros and cons of leaving your securities in the custody of a broker?
Mildred D. Mailick, Forest Hills, Queens, N.Y.

A. A big advantage of keeping securities in the custody of a brokerage firm is that you don't have to worry about safeguarding them or delivering them at the time of sale. There is also generally an automatic deposit of your interest and dividends into some type of interest-bearing money market account at the firm.

"The major disadvantage is that you become tied to the broker who sold the securities to you and whose commissions probably cannot be negotiated," said Kenneth Janke, president of the National Association of Investors Corp.

In addition, you cannot enter a company's dividend reinvestment plan when your stock is registered in the broker's name. And if the broker has financial difficulties — even with the insurance protection for customer assets that most firms have — there may be delays before you can reclaim your securities.

Your Own 401(k)?

Q. Is it possible for an employee to arrange a 401(k) plan on her own?
Gail Harrington, Larchmont, N.Y.

A. No. "The Internal Revenue Code restricts such arrangements to qualified pension, profit-sharing and stock bonus plans maintained by employers," said William J. Arnone, director of financial and retirement planning for Buck Consultants of New York.

Individuals may, of course, set up their own individual retirement plans, which allow tax-deferred investment earnings to accumulate as with a 401(k) savings plan. And self-employed people can establish a simplified employee pension, known as a SEP, which operates under the same basic rules as an IRA, or a Keogh plan, which operates like a 401(k) plan.

HIRE: Brokers make hunting for house easier

(From 1B)

That includes everything from locating property up for sale, to negotiating contract terms, arranging for home inspections or appraisals and obtaining mortgage financing.

The agents may charge a fee equal to 2 percent or 3 percent of the buyer's target purchase price, or hourly rates ranging from $60 to $100. Many, though, settle for a share of the sales commission agreed upon in the listing contract.

Barry Miller, president of Denver-based Buyer's Resource Inc., the nation's largest buyer-agency franchise, claims buyer brokers provide a wider selection of homes for sale since they can find properties not included in traditional sources like the Multiple Listing Service.

Miller said buyer-broker clients also pay on average 4 percent to 7 percent below what they would have paid had they worked with a traditional agent, who is motivated by getting a better price for the seller.

A survey conducted last year by U.S. Sprint substantiates that claim. The company found that 232 relocating employees who hired buyer brokers paid on average 91 percent of a home's list price, while those using traditional agents paid 96.5 percent.

"In traditional real estate (transactions), both agents ... must negotiate the highest price for the seller," said Miller, a pioneer in the buyer-broker movement. "In buyer brokering, our legal duty and our training is to negotiate the lowest price, best terms for the buyer."

Exclusive buyer agents like Miller are especially critical of so-called "dual agents," trained to represent both buyers and sellers.

"Have you ever heard of an attorney representing both the plaintiff and defendant in a lawsuit? It's the same thing," he said.

But Sharon Millett, who chaired the Realtors advisory group on agency disclosure, says agents avoid conflict of interest questions by explaining they can represent both sides in the same sale. She noted that most states require this type of disclosure.

"Whatever confidential information you know will not be used against the other party," said Millet, who runs Millet-Potvin Realty in Auburn, Maine, and has represented both buyers and sellers. "Our goal is to help the sellers sell and the buyers buy. The safeguards are all built in."

While Millet sees the advantanges of buyer brokering, she notes that services and fees vary. She advises consumers to take time in choosing a broker and to discuss compensation before making any commitment.

Buyer brokers may be especially helpful for first-time buyers or those with little knowledge of the real estate market.

Such was the case with the Klingelhofers. Attracted to the colorful Victorian-style homes in the San Francisco Bay area, they began house-hunting for their expanding family in the neighborhood where they had been renting. But they were quickly discouraged by the high prices.

Their hired broker suggested looking several miles south in the more affordable suburb of Redwood City. "We never would have bothered to look in that area," Mrs. Klingelhofer conceded.

WITHHOLD: Taxpayers need to file new W-4

(From 1B)

tion to practical use by picking up a new withholding form, called Form W-4, from your employer. It tells your employer how much money to take out of your paycheck for federal income taxes based on your filing status and how many personal allowances you claim. The more allowances you claim, the less money will be taken out for taxes.

The sooner you adjust your withholding for 1993 taxes the better, because you won't have as much money taken out to pay next year's income taxes.

But be careful about one thing. The W-4 form has a personal allowance worksheet that helps you calculate your withholding allowances for exemptions.

Although it's helpful, it doesn't always hit the mark.

"Be cautious about using the IRS worksheet for calculating your withholding allowance because that form doesn't always give you the correct computation for your withholding," said Sheila Root, president of the Houston chapter of the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants.

Remember that your withholding form is based just on wages, not on additional sources of income.

"Income from CDs (certificates of deposit), dividends from stocks, interest on bonds that aren't subject to withholding is where you get caught," said Ross Richardson, a partner at Linscomb & Williams, a Houston financial advisory firm.

If you're going to have those items as part of your financial portfolio, add that into your income when calculating your withholding or you'll come up short.

For example, if you missed $2,000 in investment income when figuring your withholding, you could be withholding too little.

Changes in your financial or personal situation also may affect the accuracy of your withholding. Items to consider include: Your wage income, such as an increase if you start working, your spouse starts to work outside your home or you get a second job. If you have more than one job, you can increase your withholding for one or more of the jobs.

Your itemized deductions, such as increased deductions if you buy a new home or run up large medical expenses.

Personal factors such as marriage, divorce, birth of a child or loss of an exemption.

To make sure you're getting the right amount of tax withheld, get IRS Publication 919, titled, "Is My Withholding Correct for 1993?" It'll help you compare the total tax to be withheld this year with the tax you can expect to figure on your return.

The publication also will help you determine how much additional withholding is needed each payday to avoid owing tax when you file your return.

Root has a suggestion on how to get around the worksheet: "Estimate what your income is going to be and estimate your expenses, calculate what that tax would be, based on your tax bracket," she said. "Determine your tax liability, divided by the number of pay periods during the year and that will tell you how much you need to have withheld."

If you follow this approach you can simply fill in the line on the form saying how much more you want withheld per paycheck, sign it and then turn it in to your employer.

CARDS: Consumers find more choices available

thinkable in the card business.

For instance, New York's Citibank, which has more than 30 million cards outstanding, is pushing its Visa card with a "private sale" offer to new customers of a 9.9 percent interest rate through Sept. 30.

"Even the smallest issuers continue to slash rates and fees from already attractive levels," Ram Research says in its CardTrak newsletter.

"About one-fourth of the nation's 13,000 credit unions offer Visa and-or MasterCards. Three thousand of these limited programs now offer rates under 15 percent and more than 2,000 charge no annual fee."

This environment, in which rates now can vary from as little as 7 percent to as much as 21 percent or more, promises large rewards for the diligent comparison shopper.

As a starting point in this mission, Ram Research recommends asking the issuer of any current cards you hold whether it is willing to waive annual fees or negotiate a lower interest rate.

"Many issuers now offer menu pricing or risk-based pricing," the firm observes. "You won't necessarily know unless you call."

You can inquire further at local institutions where you might already be a customer, as well as at faraway issuers bidding for your business through newspaper or magazine advertising or specialized publications.

Before you begin seriously shopping around, Ram recommends making sure that your file at credit reporting organizations is clean and free of errors.

"Narrow down your choices before applying," the firm also advises. "Each time you submit an application it will generate an inquiry in your credit file."

Ram also suggests investigating any alternatives such as gold cards, which typically offer higher credit limits and lower interest rates. "If your income exceeds $30,000 per year and you have good financial discipline, gold cards are true gems," the firm says.

Grandparents off hook for savings bond tax

By Bill Doyle

Q: You put me in orbit — a bad trip — with the column in which you quoted from Internal Revenue Service Publication 17, "Your Federal Income Tax," to explain the federal tax obligation on Series E and EE U.S. savings bond interest when a bond in co-ownership form is redeemed.

Doyle

We have purchased many EE bonds for our grandchildren. Each bond is in a child's name and Social Security number, with my husband or myself as co-owner. When college time rolls around and the bonds are cashed, the children will realize the bonds were gifts from their grandparents.

I feel very strongly that the grandchild who cashes the bond should pay tax on the interest. But according to IRS Publication 17, my husband and I should pay the tax because we purchased the co-ownership bond with our money. This is the most illogical tax law I have ever heard of. Don't you agree?

A: It's crazy. However, there are even more illogical tax laws and regulations on the books.

But take heart. You and your husband will not get hit with that tax unless each grandchild who redeems a bond goes through the convoluted process spelled out in the previous column.

When a grandchild cashes a bond, he or she will receive a Form 1099-INT showing the amount of interest. A copy goes to the IRS to feed into its computers. If the grandchild doesn't issue an identical 1099 to you and the IRS and go through other complicated paperwork, as he or she is supposed to do, the grandchild will pay the tax.

Horseplayers I have known would lay long odds the second 1099 is seldom issued.

Q: I am a retired businesswoman. Every time a client sent me a birth announcement, I sent an E or EE bond in co-ownership form — the child's name "or" a parent's name. Because a Social Security number is required, on the advice of the bank, I used my own.

I have not heard from some of these clients for many years. Why should I, as purchaser, be liable for income tax on the interest when a bond is cashed?

A: You're not. That inane tax rule applies only when the person who bought the bond is a co-owner. You bought each bond as a gift and named two other people as co-owners. You're off the tax hook.

However, there might be a hang-up when a gift bond is redeemed. At that point, the bank or other savings bond redemption agent is supposed to establish the identity of the person who cashes the gift bond and use that person's Social Security number on the Form 1099-INT.

If the redemption agent falls down on the job and your Social Security number is used, you will hear from the IRS. But you can square that away with a letter of explanation to the revenooers.

Q: We have been putting money away for our 3-year-old granddaughter in a savings account and in EE bonds. But, since the interest on those bonds has been reduced from 6 percent to 4 percent, I question if this is a good way to save. What do you suggest?

A: Keep buying the EEs. The 4 percent at which they are guaranteed to accrue interest is better than you can get in savings accounts and other rock-solid things.

That 4 percent is the minimum guaranteed rate for EEs issued since March 1. When held for five years or longer, EEs get either the guaranteed rate or a "market-based rate," whichever is higher.

The market-based rate, which changes every May 1 and Nov. 1, was 5.04 percent for the most recent semiannual period. It is expected to come down for the May-October period.

Q: How is the savings bond market-based rate calculated?

A: It's pegged at 85 percent of the average yield during the previous six-month period on U.S. Treasury securities with five years remaining to maturity.

Serbians to meet with EC envoy as sanctions loom

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — The leader of Bosnia's Serbs rebuffed a last-ditch attempt Sunday to bring his people back into the peace process and head off tougher sanctions on Serb-dominated Yugoslavia.

Radovan Karadzic again rejected the peace plan in a meeting with European Community chief negotiator David Owen. The self-styled Bosnian Serb parliament, which convened Sunday, was expected to support Karadzic's move.

The developments made it virtually certain that tougher U.N. sanctions would take effect at 6:01 a.m. (11:01 a.m. CDT) Tuesday on Yugoslavia, now made up of Serbia and Montenegro. Serbia is accused of backing the Bosnian Serb offensive, to help create a "Greater Serbia."

The sanctions include: freezing Yugoslav state and private funds in overseas banks; prohibiting Yugoslav ships from U.N. members' territory; detaining those ships, trains and aircraft already abroad; and blockading Yugoslav goods on the vital Danube River.

The United States and its Western European allies also planned to consult next week about the option of air strikes on Bosnian Serb positions if the Serbs continue to oppose the plan.

Karadzic was grim as he arrived in the northeastern Bosnian town of Bijelina to report to the Bosnian Serb assembly.

"If World War III erupts, it will be because of the Vance-Owen plan," he told reporters.

Still, in an hour-long speech to the assembly, Karadzic repeatedly warned of the serious consequences of rejecting the plan. His Serbian patrons, who have supplied food, fuel and arms to Bosnia's Serbs, appeared to have put strong pressure on him.

"We have to consider seriously the possibility of military intervention," Karadzic told deputies. "We are openly threatened, and there will be most serious pressure on our brothers in Yugoslavia if we don't sign."

"If we don't accept ... the people must be prepared to eat little. And we must switch to war economy," he said.

But the deputies appeared unimpressed by the threat of sanctions in subsequent speeches rejecting the plan.

In Belgrade, Owen appeared pessimistic the Serb assembly would relent.

"No agreement has been reached, and the decision of the parliament is predictable," he told The Associated Press.

The peace plan calls for Bosnia to be split along ethnic lines into 10 semi-autonomous provinces, with each ethnic group a majority in three of the provinces. They would share the 10th, which includes Sarajevo.

Bosnian Muslims and Croats already have signed.

Bosnian Serbs, however, want a map that would make the provinces under their control contiguous and connect them with Serbia and Serb-held areas of Croatia into a "Greater Serbia."

Karadzic said Owen offered no major concessions and demanded acceptance of terms calling for a multi-ethnic central Bosnian government — something the Serbs oppose.

In return, Owen offered only "minor" changes to the map the Serbs have rejected, Karadzic said.

Also present at the meeting with Owen were Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic, Yugoslav federal president Dobrica Cosic, and Momir Bulatovic, president of tiny Montenegro.

Sources close to the meeting said the others spent much of their time trying to convince Karadzic to accept the plan.

Owen stormed out of a meeting with Karadzic on Saturday but agreed to return to Belgrade on Sunday after giving Milosevic, the chief backer of Bosnian Serb fighters, time to exert pressure on Karadzic.

The Muslim-led Bosnian government says at least 134,000 people have died or are missing in the yearlong war.

Israel permits some deportees to return

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel will permit 30 Palestinian deportees to return from exile, apparently as part of a package of concessions to demonstrate Jerusalem's willingness to see progress in Mideast peace talks.

Also Sunday, Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin offered Palestinians a role in directing $75 million in investments toward the West Bank and Gaza Strip and said Israel was committed to exchanging land for peace.

His statements came on the eve of the negotiations that resume Tuesday in Washington after a four-month hiatus.

The Palestinians reluctantly agreed last week — under pressure from the PLO and other Arab countries — to return to the talks. The delegation walked out in December after Israel deported more than 400 alleged Muslim militants to Lebanon.

"I hope very much that the Palestinian delegation and the public in the territories will understand that a better offer may never by made by another Israeli government," Rabin said in an interview with Israel TV's Arabic-language service. The interview had Arabic subtitles.

Saeb Erakat, deputy leader of the Palestinian delegation, told The Associated Press the 30 deportees to be returned are among Palestinians expelled from the occupied territories from 1967 to 1987.

Erakat did not say how long the repatriation process would take.

He said the 30 Palestinians, all believed residing in Jordan, would be let back in 48 hours.

"This is according to an agreement reached with Israel to reschedule the return of all Palestinian deportees," Erakat said.

The Palestine Liberation Organization earlier listed 1,700 Palestinian expelled by Israel since 1967, when the Jewish state captured the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

In the television interview, Rabin offered Palestinian peace negotiators an immediate role in directing investments toward the West Bank and Gaza Strip. He said the negotiators could also begin running some parts of daily life before an autonomy agreement is reached.

The offer marks a departure from Israeli policy that discouraged investment in the occupied territories. Israel was reluctant to permit the building of industries in the West Bank and Gaza Strip that could compete with Israel.

"From our side, there is a readiness, already in this stage, to give the Palestinian delegation greater participation in investing large sums for creating jobs, improving infrastructure, (and in running) health, education," Rabin said.

The peace talks are to produce a framework for Palestinian autonomy as an interim settlement. At the start of the third year of autonomy, negotiations on the permanent status of the occupied lands are to begin.

Palestinians have demanded that Israel pledge now that it will withdraw from the occupied lands at the end of the autonomy period.

But on Sunday, Rabin promised the Palestinians a land-for-peace deal and assurred them it would not try to drag out the autonomy period.

Pope brings message of hope to Albania

SHKODRA, Albania (AP) — Pope John Paul II, in his first visit to a nation where religion was banned until two years ago, cited Europe's poorest country on Sunday as an example of ethnic tolerance in the Balkans.

"Don't degenerate into that intolerant and aggressive nationalism," John Paul urged, referring to the war in nearby Bosnia-Herzegovina.

John Paul said he was encouraging Albanians in a moral and material renewal but without forgetting the brutal, anti-religious dictatorship that ruled for nearly 50 years.

"Albania had plunged into an abyss from which it was a real miracle you could climb out without bloodshed," said the pope, speaking in the largest Roman Catholic church in the Balkans. It had been turned into a gymnasium by Communists during a 24-year ban on religion, and reopened last Christmas Eve.

Before returning to Rome late Sunday, the pope consecrated four bishops, one of whom had been condemned to death by the Communists on a charge of spying for the Vatican.

President Sali Berisha, welcoming the pope, said the daylong stop "touched the hearts of all Albanians, independently of their religion." Only about 10 percent of Albania's 3.2 million people are Catholics, with the majority Muslims.

The pope flew into the capital, Tirana. A 90-minute car ride along a narrow, bumpy road to this industrial city in the north gave him an opportunity to see the barren, brown hills, grazing herds of sheep and goats and network of beehive-shaped military pillboxes that dot the landscape.

Williams, a fourth-year guard from Baylor, sank his 78th straight free throw with 11:17 left in the third quarter after being fouled by John Stockton. After a moment's cheering, with fans and teammates on their feet, he swished the record-breaker to give him 79 in a row.

Basebrawl

NEW YORK — Gary Sheffield of San Diego and catcher Todd Hundley of New York were ejected from Sunday's game in the first inning after words between the two players resulted in a bench-clearing brawl.

Hundley thought Sheffield was trying to steal his signs to pitcher Sid Fernandez.

Sheffield, with the count 3-2 and one out, turned around and said something to Hundley, and took one step toward him. Hundley then shoved Sheffield and both benches and bullpens ran onto the field.

"I felt it was something that had to be done," Hundley said. "You get a guy peeking like that and it's something you're not going to tolerate. He pulled his bat back and took a look three or four times. It was so obvious."

Patrick Ewing (33) pulls down a rebound over Michael Jordan in the Knicks' 89-84 victory.

Postseason looms

By Chris Sheridan
AP Sports Writer

Sunday was supposed to be a day that mattered, a season-ending day featuring nationally televised games with playoff implications — Chicago vs. New York for the best record in the East, Detroit vs. New Jersey for the final spot in the East.

It turned into the exact opposite — a day of nine almost meaningless games, none with any influence on the opening round of the playoffs.

The playoff picture, or at least what was left of it, came into full focus on Saturday night. Indiana beat Miami to clinch to final Eastern berth, and Charlotte, New Jersey and Atlanta all learned their playoff seedings before midnight.

All the Western Conference seedings were determined by Friday night.

■ NBA Playoff Preview
■ NBA Roundup/4C

The first round of the playoffs gets underway Thursday night, and the action doesn't let up at least until mid-June. Here's a look ahead at the opening-round series, and how the teams did against each other in the regular season.

EASTERN CONFERENCE
New York vs. Indiana

The Knicks have the best conference record and homecourt advantage through the first three playoff rounds, and it looks like they'll make it to the second round fairly easily.

New York won the season series with Indiana three games to one, getting double-figure scoring from five players in each game. Patrick Ewing has a distinct advantage over Indiana center Rik Smits and the Pacers just don't have the bulk to match up with New York's front line.

Chicago vs. Atlanta

The big matchup in this series is between Michael Jordan and Dominique Wilkins, the top two scorers in the league. Wilkins outscored Jordan 34.8 to 32.8 in the teams' four matchups, but each team won two games. The key in the playoffs will be depth, and Chicago has the advantage in that area.

"You have to contain 'Nique, not let him get his 30, and keep Kevin Willis off the boards," Bulls forward Horace Grant said. "They're not a one-man show anymore."

Cleveland vs. New Jersey

In a matchup of two teams that ended the season going in opposite directions, Cleveland seems to have the advantage. The Cavaliers won 11 of their last 12, while the Nets lost 10 of their final 11 and

Patriots hope Bledsoe can stop bleeding

■ New England opts for Washington State junior Drew Bledsoe while Rick Mirer of Notre Dame goes to Seattle.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The New England Patriots went for the Troy Aikman clone to help rebuild their woeful franchise, passing up the guy from Notre Dame who reminds people of Joe Montana.

With the first pick in Sunday's NFL draft, Bill Parcells chose to begin rebuilding the Patriots with Drew Bledsoe, the 6-foot-5 strong-armed Washington State quarterback. He was taken over Rick Mirer, who went to Seattle with the second pick.

"In the final analysis, we thought Bledsoe had a little more ability to throw the ball effectively," said Parcells, the Patriots coach and general manager.

In choosing Bledsoe, Parcells went for the proven passer over

■ 1993 NFL Draft

Mirer, the potential star, who rarely showcased his passing ability in college because he played on a run-oriented team.

Like Aikman, Bledsoe joins a team that needs help fast. However, Parcells said he won't rush him into the starting job.

"I promise you I will not throw him to the wolves and he will not play until he's ready to play," Parcells said.

It was the first draft of the free agent era, and it showed.

As in the free agent market, there was a premium on offensive linemen — six were taken with the first 19 choices. There also were six defensive linemen and six defensive backs chosen in the first round.

Atlanta, Houston, Washington, Philadelphia, San Francisco and Indianapolis drafted specifically to fill holes lost by departing free agents. There were also seven trades — six swaps of draft position, and one that sent All-Pro linebacker Pat Swilling to Detroit from New Orleans.

That trade was a money saver for the Saints — a sign of the coming salary cap. They used the choice they got for Swilling to draft Willie Roaf, a 306-pound offensive tackle from Louisiana Tech, then traded up for Notre Dame tight end Irv Smith.

Smith was one of four Notre Dame players taken in the first round, one short of the record set by Southern Cal in 1968.

Parcells, in his first year as a chief executive after eight years as the New York Giants coach, had been coy until Sunday — suggesting the Patriots might take Mirer first or even trade the pick.

"We felt like we have to start somewhere and this is a good place to start," said Parcells, who left the broadcast booth to run a fi-

New Jersey's Scott Neidermayer takes out Mike Ramsey of Pittsburgh in the Devils' 4-1 win that snapped the Penguins' 21-game unbeaten streak.

Devils end Penguins' unbeaten streak, 4-1

Associated Press

■ NHL Playoffs

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — The Pittsburgh Penguins' NHL-record 14-game playoff winning streak was halted as New Jersey Devils averted a first-round sweep by defeating the two-time Stanley Cup champions 4-1 Sunday.

Stephane Richer, scoreless in the opening three games of the series, woke up the Devils' slumbering power play with goal and two assists, while goalie Chris Terreri made 30 saves in frustrating Mario Lemieux and company.

The Penguins, who had an overall 21-game (20-0-1) unbeaten streak, can still wrap up the best-of-7 series by winning Game 5 Monday night in Pittsburgh.

For the second straight game, the Devils forced the free-wheeling Penguins into a clutch-and-grab type of game that at times left Lemieux openly frustated. The NHL's leading scorer was so annoyed early in the second period, he ripped a stick out of the hands of John MacLean and tossed it into the corner. He later threw the Devils' forward to the ice after play stopped.

New Jersey, which came into the must-win game having converted on one of 18 power-play chances, connected on three of its first four chances

The Penguins and Lemieux actually helped get the Devils get going by taking two penalties in the opening 4:52, with Lemieux's tripping infraction at 4:52 giving New Jersey a two-man advantage for 53 seconds.

Thirty seconds later, Richer took a pass from Bruce Driver in the left faceoff circle and one-timed it by Tom Barrasso.

New Jersey eventually broke the game open by scoring twice after Jaromir Jagr was given a five-minute major and a game misconduct for a high-sticking penalty against Valeri Zelepukin with 2:16 left in the second period.

Defenseman Tommy Albelin stretched the lead to 2-0 with 9.4 seconds left in the period by one-timing a cross-ice pass by Richer past Barrasso from the right point.

Claude Lemieux connected at 1:52 of the third period with Richer and a lucky bounce helping to make it 3-0.

Lemieux added an empty-net goal with 17.8 seconds remaining.

DRAFT: '71 last big quarterback year

(From 1C)

nancially troubled team that went 2-14 last season.

The last time quarterbacks led off the draft was 1971, when Jim Plunkett, Archie Manning and Dan Pastorini went 1-2-3. This draft also marked the third time in the last four years an underclassman was No. 1 overall — Bledsoe, Steve Emtman last year and Jeff George in '90.

"I'm happy for Drew," said Mirer, the first Notre Dame quarterback taken in the first round since George Izo in 1960 — Montana was a third-rounder and Joe Theismann a fourth-rounder.

"I think he got what he wanted and I got what I wanted. Only one guy can be the top pick, and there's nothing wrong with being No. 2. I didn't really prefer one team over the other, but to be honest, I'd rather live west than east. I've never been a big fan of the East Coast."

The East-West theme was evident in the maneuvering that followed.

The New York Jets, with the third pick, suggested to Phoenix that they wanted Garrison Hearst, the Georgia running back, and got the Cards to swap places — from four to three. Phoenix gave the Jets running back Johnny Johnson, and took Hearst.

Then the Jets got the player they wanted anyway, linebacker Marvin Jones of Florida State.

Finances were obviously on the mind of the Saints.

They dealt Swilling, one of the league's best pass rushers, to Detroit for the Lions' No. 1 pick, the eighth overall. With it, they chose Roaf, who must fit under the salary cap that will total about $2 million for a team's rookies. The Saints also received a fourth-round pick in the deal.

A year ago, under the old system, the Saints matched the Lions' offer sheet to Swilling, paying him $1,725,000. If they didn't, they would have received two No. 1s in return.

"Pat Swilling has been a fine player for this organization for the past seven years and we wish him well," Saints president Jim Finks said. "This assures that our young linebackers and defensive ends will have open competition this year for potential starting positions."

The operative word is young.

Finks and officials of other teams believe that with a salary cap kicking in next year in the second year of free agency, there will be many high-quality players on the market for relatively low salaries. Meanwhile, they will break in draft choices immediately — Roaf may start on an aging offensive line and Smith should start immediately..

After the Jets took Jones, Cincinnati chose Alabama defensive end John Copeland and Tampa Bay went for the other Alabama defensive end, Eric Curry. Chicago chose wide receiver Curtis Conway of Southern Cal; the Saints took Roaf; and Atlanta took an even bigger tackle, Lincoln Kennedy of Washington, who dropped from 350 to 330 pounds in predraft workouts.

The Los Angeles Rams took fullback Jerome Bettis of Notre Dame; Denver took defensive end Dan Williams of Toledo; and the Los Angeles Raiders chose safety Patrick Bates of Texas A&M.

Denver and Houston traded up to get their picks — Denver from 14th to 11th in a trade with Cleveland; Houston from 19th to 13th in a deal with Philadelphia.

The Browns took center Steve Everitt of Michigan. Green Bay followed by choosing linebacker Wayne Simmons of Clemson; Indianapolis went for wide receiver Sean Dawkins of California; and cornerback Tom Carter of Notre Dame went to Washington.

Many of those early picks showed the impact of free agency.

Atlanta, which lost its starting guards under the new system, chose Kennedy rather than a needed defensive back and the Rams lost their fullback, Robert Delpino and replaced him with Bettis.

"I'm happy for Drew. I think he got what he wanted and I got what I wanted. Only one guy can be the top pick, and there's nothing wrong with being No. 2."

Rick Mirer

Carter was taken to replace the departed Martin Mayhew at corner for the Redskins; Houston needed an offensive lineman to replace Don Maggs, who signed with Denver, and the Colts had to have the departed Billy Brooks in mind when they chose Dawkins.

As during free agency, there was a premium on offensive linemen.

When Phoenix traded up with San Francisco to get the 18th pick of the draft, they took offensive tackle Ernest Dye of South Carolina. He was the fifth offensive lineman to be chosen of those first 18. Then Philadelphia took a sixth — Lester Holmes, a guard from Jackson State with No. 19

All of those came from maneuvering — the Oilers jumped over the Browns to grab offensive lineman Brad Hopkins of Illinois, then the Cards jumped over the Eagles to grab Dye, forcing Philadelphia to settle for Holmes. That was more free agency fallout — the Eagles lost right tackle Ron Heller and will try to replace him with Holmes.

New Orleans then moved up to choose tight end Irv Smith, the fourth Notre Damer to go and Minnesota took Ohio State running back Robert Smith. San Diego took cornerback Darrien Gordon of Stanford; Pittsburgh went for defensive back Deon Figures of Colorado and Philadelphia took another Colorado player, defensive lineman Leonard Renfro.

Miami then chose wide receiver O.J. McDuffie of Penn State and San Francisco took two defensive linemen — Dana Stubblefield of Kansas and Todd Kelly of Tennessee — to help fill the gaps created by the loss of free agents Pierce Holt and Tim Harris.

Buffalo then picked a sleeper, cornerback Thomas Smith of North Carolina. It was the third time in the last four years the Bills used their first-round choice on a defensive back.

Raven's three-run belt key for Angels

Staff report

EL PASO — Luis Raven's 395-foot fourth inning blast into the teeth of the wind gave the Midland Angels a 3-1 lead on the way to a 6-2 Texas League victory over the El Paso Diablos here Sunday night.

The Angels led by a narrow 3-2 margin heading into the ninth inning, but added three insurance runs keyed by a two-run double by Kevin Davis.

Davis extended his hitting streak to eight games, tying him with P.J. Forbes and Jorge Fabregas for the longest hitting streak of the season. Davis is hitting .324 with two home runs, including a grand slam, over that eight-game stretch and has six RBI in his last two games.

John Fritz pitched into the eighth inning to record his first decision of the year. Jose Musset came on to record his third save. Musset has all three of the Angels' saves this year.

The victory broke a three-game losing streak for the Angels, who now have a 3-4 record on the current road trip for an 8-9 record overall. The series with El Paso is now tied at 1-1.

Former Midland Angel Glenn Carter (2-1) took his first loss of the year, but pitched well over six innings. Raven did get his monster homer off of Carter in the fourth inning.

The two teams will play on consecutive days here through Wednesday before Midland returns to Angels Stadium at 7 p.m. Thursday against the Wichita Wranglers.

El Paso is now 13-4 on the season, but three of the Diablos' four losses have come at the hands of Midland.

Mediate wins on fourth playoff hole

Associated Press

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Rocco Mediate, nearly undone by a double-bogey with four holes left in regulation, birdied the fourth hole of a playoff with Steve Elkington on Sunday to win the $1.5 million Greater Greensboro Open.

In posting his second PGA victory, Mediate started the day four shots off the lead, marking the best come-from-behind win on the tour this season.

He made par saves on the second and third extra holes before sinking a 4-foot putt for the victory, worth $270,000.

Elkington, the 1990 GGO winner, forced the playoff with a 15-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole after he bogeyed Nos. 15 and 16.

The pair then headed back to the difficult, par-4 16th for the playoff as the winds continued to gust to 30 mph, making club selection troublesome all day.

■ Greensboro Open

Elkington saved a 4-foot par putt on the first playoff hole, while Mediate got out of the sand on the next par-3 to also save par.

Elkington then had a great opportunity to end the tournament on the 18th hole, landing his approach shot within 10 feet of the pin while Mediate had scrambled out of a fairway bunker and chipped past the hole by 6 feet.

But the Australian missed his putt left and Mediate found the center of the hole for another save. They returned to the 16th, where Mediate ended up winning.

Gil Morgan, Paul Azinger and Dudley Hart finished in a tie for third at 6-under 282.

Mediate, who carded a final-round 69 to finish 7-under-par, started several groups ahead of the leaders and posted a 4-under 32 on the front side of the Forest Oaks Country Club course.

He grabbed the lead at 9-under on the 11th hole with a birdie after hitting his 120-yard approach shot to within 4 feet.

But he missed good birdie opportunities on two of the next three holes before coming to the ill-fated 15th.

Mediate's drive landed on a downhill slope in the center of the fairway, too short to try to go for the green on the 554-yard uphill hole. He pulled out an iron in an attempt to lay up short of the greenside traps but hit the ball right behind a big tree.

Stockton takes victory

Seniors

FRISCO, Texas (AP) — Dave Stockton, playing bogey-free golf for the first time this week, shot a 6-under-par 66 Sunday and breezed past second-round leader Harold Henning to a four-stroke victory in the $500,000 Muratec Reunion Pro-Am.

His closing round on a wind-swept day was the lowest of the tournament and one stroke off the course record, shared by Gene Littler and Tom Shaw in 1991.

Stockton, 51, earned $75,000 in posting his first victory of the season and second since joining the Senior PGA Tour in 1991.

Henning, who began the day with a two-stroke lead, closed with a 72 and finished as one of only two players with a sub-par total in the 54-hole event.

Final-round scores improved by an average of four strokes per player as winds shifted from south to north and diminished from 40 mph the first two days to 20 mph during the final round.

Lee Trevino, the 1992 Senior Tour player of the year, closed with a 70 and tied for fourth place, his best finish in a Senior Tour event since thumb surgery last December.

But this was Stockton's day and he made the most of it with a six-birdie, no-bogey round that included a 363-yard drive at the par-5 seventh hole.

Stockton took the lead for keeps at No. 9, when he hit a pitching wedge approach to within 3 feet and sank the birdie putt. Henning, who had chipped to 8 feet, lipped out his birdie attempt.

NHL: Blues eliminate Hawks

(From 1C)

Blues 4, Blackhawks 3

ST. LOUIS — Craig Janney scored unassisted at 10:43 of overtime, giving the St. Louis Blues a victory over the Chicago Blackhawks and a sweep of their first-round playoff series.

The Blues outshot Chicago 6-3 in the extra period, and Blackhawks goalie Ed Belfour stopped three good scoring chances in the first two minutes. Included were two from point-blank range by Janney.

But on the game-winner, Belfour left the net to try to track down the puck and couldn't get back in time as Janney stopped a clearing effort and shot from the left circle.

After the game, Belfour slammed his stick twice on the crossbar and then pushed the net over in disgust.

The Blackhawks finally ended Blues goalie Curtis Joseph's shutout streak after almost three games — the drought ended after 174 minutes, 18 seconds — but it was small consolation for the Norris Division champions.

Kings 3, Flames 1

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Los Angeles rookie Warren Rychel scored on a rebound in the second period and Pat Conacher added an empty-net goal with six seconds remaining in the Kings' victory over the Calgary Flames. The Smythe Division semifinal playoff is tied at two games each.

Another rookie, goaltender Robb Stauber, made the most of his first start in the playoffs with several key saves for the Kings in the final period. Calgary outscored Los Angeles 14-6 in two straight high-scoring games, but Game 4 was a tight-checking game with plenty of pushing and shoving.

Maple Leafs 3, Red Wings 2

TORONTO — Dave Andreychuk's goal at 4:47 of the third period lifted the Toronto Maple Leafs to a victory over the Detroit Red Wings, tying their Norris Division playoff series at two games apiece.

Andreychuk outhustled the Red Wings for a loose puck, then swung to the side of the net and used his reach to score with his forehand on Detroit goalie Tim Cheveldae. It was Andreychuk's second goal of the game and fourth of the series. He scored twice in Toronto's 4-2 victory on Friday.

Canucks 3, Jets 1

WINNIPEG, Manitoba — Sergio Momesso scored what proved to be the game-winning goal and goaltender Kirk McLean made 29 saves as the Vancouver Canucks beat the Winnipeg Jets, moving within a game of closing out their first-round Smythe Division playoff series.

Momesso's goal at 3:18 of the second period gave Vancouver a 2-0 lead, more than enough for McLean.

COWBOYS: Jones tumbles

(From 1C)

and 4.28 speed in the 40, will be the Cowboys third down replacement for Kelvin Martin, who signed with Seattle. He'll also be the starting punt returner and take back kickoffs.

"From the first day of practice I can tell you who our punt returner is," Johnson said.

The 6-0, 228-pound Smith, who runs a 4.49 in the 40, will play outside linebacker and be a contributor on the special teams.

"We knew both players very well," Johnson said. "Williams is the most exciting kick returner I've ever been around. He has tremendous speed and was the fastest player at Miami. He offsets the loss of Kelvin Martin to free agency."

Johnson said Smith "is the fastest linebacker I've been around. He will also be an outstanding special teams player. Both these players will contribute to our team this year."

Dallas drafted 46th and 54th in the second round after trading its first round 29th pick to Green Bay.

Williams, who played high school football at Dallas Roosevelt, averaged 12 yards per punt return and will join the Cowboys kickoff returning corps with his 20.8 yards per try average.

Owner Jerry Jones said the both players had agreed to terms.

"We have an understanding as to the number of years and the type of the agreement," Jones said.

Williams said "I've been a Cowboys fans since I was a toddler. I was sweating it out. It felt like waiting for the electric chair.

"It's a privilege and an honor to be back with Jimmy again. He's not leaving me this time."

Williams also could be used as a running back in a pinch.

"I can do it all," Williams said.

Smith said playing for Johnson "will be like going home again. He knows me and I know him. It's a good situation."

Jones said by trading down Dallas "had more money to work with in the later rounds."

He also said teams were reluctant to get on the phone with the world champions.

"Some clubs were not interested in trading with us," Jones said. "It made this draft a challenge. It's been interesting."

Jones added, "we never felt we could get to the top of the draft (with a trade) for anything reasonable."

The Cowboys got a pre-draft downer when the Detroit Lions matched their $800,000 one-year offer to veteran quarterback Erik Kramer just before the midnight deadline. Dallas is looking for a backup to Troy Aikman because of the departure of Steve Beuerlein to Phoenix.

"It's unlikely we'll have a rookie as a backup to Troy so we'll look at another veteran quarterback," Jones said. "We certainly wanted Kramer. He would fit in well here."

It was the first time since 1980 the Cowboys didn't have a first round selection. The only other year Dallas didn't have a first round draft pick was 1967.

There was one other minor downer for the Cowboys.

Jones fell backwards off his chair at the podium as Williams walked into the room to talk about being drafted by Dallas.

"It's the hardest I've been hit since I've been here," Jones said.

The Cowboys took cornerback Mike Middleton of Indiana in the third round. Running back Derrick Lassic of Alabama and defensive lineman Ron Stone of Boston College both were selected in the fourth round.

OILERS: Barrow taken in 2nd and its third-round selection to the Eagles for their No. 13 spot in the first round.

"There was no mystery that we were looking at improving our offensive line," coach Jack Pardee said. "We were worried about five teams that were going for offensive linemen too.

"We might have slipped by and still gotten Hopkins but you also might find yourself back here next year looking at the same problem."

Houston added Miami linebacker Micheal Barrow in the second round to help new defensive coordinator Buddy Ryan bolster his depth at the position.

Hopkins was the third offensive lineman taken in the first round after New Orleans selected Willie Roaf of Louisiana Tech and Atlanta chose Washington's Lincoln Kennedy.

Roaf went first and we all thought he'd go first," Pardee said. "That's why New Orleans jumped 20 something spots to get him."

New Orleans moved up from No. 26 in a trade for Detroit's No. 8 pick in the first round.

The Oilers wanted to replace left tackle Don Maggs, a free agent loss to the Denver Broncos and they had considered moving all-pro center Bruce Matthews to left tackle.

Oilers line coach Bob Young doesn't think that will be necessary with the addition of Hopkins.

"He should start this year," Young said. "I may put Bruce out there for a few reps just to see what he does."

Young said he talked with Hopkins following the selection and told him to work on his upper body strength and his first step.

"He has a few technique problems that we'll have to work on," Young said.

The Oilers want Hopkins for his pass blocking skills but he was also adept at throwing key blocks on runs at Illinois. He knocked down linebacker Gary Caspar to clear quarterback Jason Verduzco for a touchdown in a 13-12 victory over Wisconsin.

"He's an outstanding run blocker," Oilers scout Glen Cumby said. "You look at film on him for eight games and his guy wouldn't make a play."

Hopkins said he'd fit into the Oilers' pass-oriented offense.

"Our style at Illinois was similar," Hopkins said. "My goal is to do what's expected of me as a No. 1 draft choice. If they expect me to start at left tackle then that's exactly what I intend to do."

Barrow had 131 total tackles for Miami last season and 13 tackles for 23 yards in losses. He broke up two passes and had two sacks.

"We looked at about 40 linebackers in the draft and he's the best one," Ryan said. "He makes plays that win football games."

Ryan considers Barrow a possible starter at middle linebacker should starter Al Smith, one of three Oilers transitional players, be lost to another team.

Salmon sparks Angels in 2-1 win

Associated Press

■ AL Roundup

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Scott Sanderson outpitched Roger Clemens and Tim Salmon snapped a 1-1 tie with a two-out homer in the seventh inning Sunday night as the California Angels edged Boston 2-1 for their sixth consecutive win.

Salmon, who had yet to hit a fair ball in five previous career at-bats against Clemens, powered a 2-0 pitch over the left-center fence for his fourth home run of the season. Salmon played for the Midland Angels in the 1991 season.

The win gave the Angels a sweep of the three-game series. Boston lost its fifth straight overall.

Sanderson (3-0) kept pace with Clemens (3-1) and pitched his way out of a jam in the seventh.

Joe Grahe, another former Midland player, finished up for his second save.

Rangers 6, Brewers 1

MILWAUKEE — Kenny Rogers pitched a three-hitter and Jose Canseco, again batting sixth in the lineup, drove in two more runs in leading the Texas Rangers over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Canseco's bases-loaded single in the seventh inning gave him 750 RBIs in 988 games. He is the first major leaguer to reach 750 RBIs in his first 1,000 games since Ted Williams in 1947.

Canseco drove in four runs Saturday in a 15-4 victory. It was his first game of the season batting sixth, a move that manager Kevin Kennedy said was temporary.

Ivan Rodriguez drove in three runs for Texas.

Rogers (2-1) struck out five and walked two for the first complete game of his career. He retired the final 16 batters.

Tigers 16, Twins 5

MINNEAPOLIS — Another day, another football score for the Detroit Tigers.

Chad Kreuter and Tony Phillips hit consecutive home runs to start an eight-run rally in the seventh inning and the Tigers went on rout the Minnesota Twins, completing a remarkable three-game sweep.

Detroit, which has won five in a row and 10 of 11, outscored the Twins 45-10 and outhomered them 11-2. It was the Tigers' first three-game sweep in Minnesota since August 1972.

The Tigers, who have twice scored 20 runs in a game this season, are scoring almost as much as the NFL's Detroit Lions, who averaged 17 points last season. The Tigers lead the majors with 8½ runs per game, boosted by their 12-4, 17-1 and 16-5 wins at the Metrodome.

Blue Jays 1, White Sox 0

TORONTO — Darrin Jackson hit his first American League home run in the eighth inning, giving Todd Stottlemyre and the Toronto Blue Jays a victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Jackson, acquired from San Diego during spring training for Derek Bell, connected with one out on a 2-0 pitch from Alex Fernandez (2-2).

Royals 3, Orioles 2

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Kevin Appier gave two runs in 8⅓ innings as the Kansas City Roals beat the Baltimore Orioles.

Appier (2-1) gave up six hits, while striking out seven and walking one. Jeff Montgomery got the final four outs for his fifth save. Ben McDonald (1-2) pitched five innings, walking four and striking out four.

Indians 6, Athletics 0

OAKLAND, Calif. — Jose Mesa combined with Derek Lilliquist on a three-hitter and the Cleveland Indians beat the slumping Oakland Athletics.

Felix Fermin had four hits and drove in two runs in sending the defending AL West champions to their eighth loss in nine games.

Yankees 10, Mariners 9

SEATTLE — Mike Stanley homered and drove in four runs and the New York Yankees outlasted the Seattle Mariners.

New York's Mike Witt, making his first major league start since June 13, 1991, lasted only four innings and gave up five runs on five hits.

Wallace wins third straight in Hanes 500

Associated Press

■ NASCAR

MARTINSVILLE, Va. — The wins just keep on coming for Rusty Wallace.

After three seasons of frustration and a total of only five race victories since winning the NASCAR Winston Cup championship in 1989, Wallace has now won four in eight starts this season.

He made it three in a row Sunday, overpowering the rest of the 34-car field to win the Hanes 500 on Martinsville Speedway's .526-mile oval.

Nobody else could stay to the current point leader, who led all but 90 of the 500 laps as he set a race record average of 79.090 mph on the way to his 25th career victory.

Wallace broke the record of 79.025 set in April 1989 by Darrell Waltrip, and was just shy of the track record of 79.185 set in September 1978 by Cale Yarborough.

That mark likely would have fallen except for two caution flags in the final 14 laps, the last brought out on lap 497 when Morgan Shepherd crashed hard in turn 4. Wallace took the checkered flag behind the pace car, traveling 35 mph.

"I can't hardly believe it," Wallace said after giving Pontiac its first victory at Martinsville since he won here in September 1986, "but the car was really that strong all day.

"Roger (team co-owner Roger Penske) was my spotter and he gave me some good advice all day, telling me to drive easy and save the brakes, things like that. But the car was just great. The handling was perfect and the engine was perfect."

The 36-year-old Wallace now has finished seven straight races in the top five, missing only in the season-opening Daytona 500 in which he charged from 34th to third before being eliminated in a spectacular crash that left him with stitches under his chin.

Wallace started fifth Sunday and was up to second by the ninth lap. He took the lead for the first time on lap 88 when he beat Hut Stricklin, who had led from the start, out of the pits during the first of eight caution periods in the race.

He lost the lead for only three more laps — once to Stricklin and twice to Davey Allison, both of whom led briefly during caution periods because they pitted in front of Wallace on pit road and were scored first.

All three times Wallace regained the lead when he left pit road after quick stops.

■ NBA Roundup

SAN ANTONIO — David Robinson, whose controversial tip-in forced overtime, had 25 points and 13 rebounds Sunday night as San Antonio beat Houston 119-117 and kept the Rockets from gaining homecourt advantage in a possible second-round series with Seattle.

Hakeem Olajuwon scored 38 points for the Rockets and outplayed Robinson most of the game, but was unable to prevent Houston from falling to a final record of 55-27, the same as Seattle.

Knicks 89, Bulls 84

NEW YORK — The New York Knicks matched their club record of 60 victories with their 20th consecutive win at Madison Square Garden, finishing the regular season by beating the Chicago Bulls.

Warriors 119, SuperSonics 109

OAKLAND, Calif. — Golden State played the spoiler role against Seattle on Sunday when Tim Hardaway's season-high 41 points and 18 assists led the Warriors.

Timberwolves 113, Jazz 111

MINNEAPOLIS — Micheal Williams set an NBA record for consecutive free throws and scored 29 points, leading the Minnesota Timberwolves to a victory over the Utah Jazz.

Williams broke Calvin Murphy's NBA record by making 10 straight, giving him 84 in a row.

Celtics 106, Bullets 94

LANDOVER, Md. — Robert Parish scored six points in a 12-0 third-quarter run that propelled Boston past the Washington Bullets in the Celtics' final tuneup before the playoffs.

Cavaliers 107, 76ers 103

RICHFIELD, Ohio — Terrell Brandon scored nine points in the last three minutes as the Cleveland Cavaliers closed the game with an 11-4 run and beat the Philadelphia 76ers.

Pistons 116, Nets 110

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Olden Polynice had a season-high 27 points and 13 rebounds as the Detroit Pistons finished their most disappointing season in a decade with a victory over the New Jersey Nets.

Clippers 123, Blazers 112

LOS ANGELES — Reserve forward Loy Vaught had a career-high 27 points and grabbed 13 rebounds as the Los Angeles Clippers climbed to the .500 mark with a victory over the Portland Trail Blazers in their final playoff tuneup.

Florida wins first series vs. Rockies

Associated Press

■ NL Roundup

DENVER — The Florida Marlins won two of three games against Colorado in the battle of the expansion teams, routing the Rockies 11-1 Sunday as Junior Felix hit a grand slam to highlight an eight-run fourth inning.

Ryan Bowen (2-1) gave up no runs and three hits in seven innings. Bob McClure and Trevor Hoffman finished the combined six-hitter.

Last season, Bowen was 0-7 for Houston before being sent to Class AAA Tucson.

Scott Aldred gave up seven runs and six hits in just two-thirds of an inning after relieving Bryn Smith (1-3) in the fourth. Jeff Conine hit a double and Alex Arias had two RBIs with a single in the inning.

On a 3-1 pitch, Felix homered over the left-field wall to clear the bases. It was the first grand slam for the Marlins (7-11) and the first major-league grand slam at Mile High Stadium.

Pirates 7, Astros 2

PITTSBURGH — Randy Tomlin pitched five-hit ball for eight innings in his strongest start this season and the Pittsburgh Pirates, who started the day under .500 for the first time in two years, beat the Houston Astros.

Andy Van Slyke's run-scoring single and losing pitcher Mark Portugal's throwing error keyed a three-run fifth inning as the Pirates avoided Houston's first three-game sweep in Pittsburgh since May 26-28, 1989.

Padres 9, Mets 8

NEW YORK — Reliever Anthony Young lost his 16th straight decision when Craig Shipley stole third base and continued home in the eighth inning on catcher Charlie O'Brien's throwing error as San Diego outlasted New York in a game marred by a bench-clearing brawl.

The Mets record for consecutive losses is 18 set by Roger Craig in 1963. The major-league record is 23 established by Clifton Curtis of the Boston Braves (1910-1911).

Cardinals 7, Braves 3

St. LOUIS — Omar Olivares pitched six strong innings as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Atlanta Braves and Greg Maddux.

Ozzie Smith and Todd Zeile each had three hits for the Cardinals.

Olivares (1-0) allowed two runs on five hits with five strikeouts and three walks. Lee Smith earned his seventh save this season and the 362nd of his career by striking out two batters to end the game.

Giants 4, Expos 1

MONTREAL — Bill Swift pitched seven strong innings and scored the go-ahead run as the San Francisco Giants beat Montreal to snap the Expos' six-game winning streak.

Swift (1-1) allowed four hits and one run. He struck out four and walked none. Rod Beck pitched the ninth for his sixth save.

Barry Bonds and Matt Williams each hit home runs for the Giants.

Phillies 5, Dodgers 2

PHILADELPHIA — Pete Incaviglia hit a two-run homer and drove in three runs as the Philadelphia Phillies defeated Los Angeles to sweep the three-game series and send the Dodgers to their sixth straight loss.

The Phillies improved to 13-4, tops in the major leagues. The 13 wins also represents their most victories in April since a 12-6 start in 1981. Philadelphia swept Los Angeles for the first time since July 1991.

Cubs 2, Reds 1

CHICAGO — Steve Buechele tripled home the tying run and scored on Jose Vizcaino's fourth straight single, capping a ninth-inning rally and giving the Chicago Cubs a victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

With one out, Buechele hit a line drive that center fielder Cesar Hernandez dove for and missed, and the ball rolled to the wall.

Tech wins second over UT

■ SWC Baseball

LUBBOCK (AP) — Freshman Clint Bryant's sacrifice fly in the 10th inning scored Jason Brooks, leading No. 15 Texas Tech to a 5-4 victory over No. 2 Texas and giving the Red Raiders' their first multiple-win season against UT.

Tech, which won Saturday's game 13-6, had never won more than one game in a year against Texas in the 27 years they've played. The Longhorns (43-10 overall, 10-5 in Southwest Conference play) won the opener 4-2.

The Red Raiders (39-12, 9-6) tied the game in the ninth when Mitch King raced home after catcher Mark Prather couldn't handle an outside fastball from loser Ryan Kjos (2-2, 0-1).

Bryant, who also had a homer, later drove in Brooks to give Travis Gage (3-0, 1-0) the victory.

Tech scored three runs in the first, but the Longhorns answered with four in the sixth. Two of those came on a Brooks Kieschnick homer.

■ SWC Golf

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — The No. 3 Texas Longhorns shot a steady final round of 290 Sunday for an 865 total to capture their fifth straight Southwest Conference Men's Golf Championship at the Pebble Creek Country Club.

The Longhorns won by 27 shots over second place Texas Christian, the largest margin of victory since Houston won the 1984 tournament by 43 shots.

Justin Leonard made it a clean sweep for Texas, capturing his third straight SWC medalist title by posting rounds of 70-70-73—213 for a 3-under total and a one shot victory over teammate Jean-Paul Hebert.

Leonard becomes the first player to win three straight individual titles since Ed White of Texas did it from 1933-35.

The real race in the team competition was for second place, as the No. 21 Texas Christian Horned Frogs made a late run, shooting 297-300--295—892, for a two-shot cushion over No. 17 Southern Methodist and No. 17 Houston.

PLAYOFFS: Spurs face Blazers

(From 1C)

have lost Kenny Anderson, Drazen Petrovic and Chris Dudley to injuries.

The season series was a 2-2 split, with no game decided by more than six points. A big factor in this series will be the injury to Anderson, which could allow Cavaliers point guard Mark Price to dominate backup Rumeal Robinson.

Boston vs. Charlotte

"Just two weeks ago we were hoping to get into the playoffs. Now we're hoping to make some noise," Hornets coach Allan Bristow said.

Charlotte could do just that if it can carry the momentum from a five-game, season-ending winning streak into the playoffs. Boston won the season series three games to one, but the first three games were played in the season's first 60 days.

WESTERN CONFERENCE

Phoenix vs. LA Lakers

This series shapes up as possibly the biggest mismatch of the playoffs. The Suns finished 43 games over .500, the Lakers were four games below. Phoenix has been waiting all year for a chance to prove its regular-season dominance was no fluke, the Lakers had to fight all season to qualify for the eighth playoff berth for a second straight year.

Phoenix swept the season series 5-0, winning by 10, 16, 28, 15 and 1.

Houston vs. LA Clippers

The Rockets swept the season series four games to none, with Hakeem Olajuwon posting a double-double in each game to average 21.3 points and 12.3 rebounds.

Not including its Sunday night game with San Antonio, Houston won 11 of its last 12 and 28 of its last 33 and has played extremely well since the season's midpoint. The Clippers (41-41) finished at .500 to qualify for the second straight year, but they will have plenty of trouble against a bigger, more talented opponent.

Seattle vs. Utah

Once again it's a matchup of two teams heading in opposite directions. The SuperSonics finished at 55-27, an eight-win improvement over 1991-92. The Jazz went in the exact opposite direction, dropping eight wins from its 55-27 record of last season.

Portland vs. San Antonio

The Trail Blazers have dropped six wins from last year, when they went to the NBA Finals and lost to Chicago, and Clyde Drexler has been slowed all year by hamstring problems. The Spurs, meanwhile, made one of the NBA's best turnarounds following the early-season firing of Jerry Tarkanian.

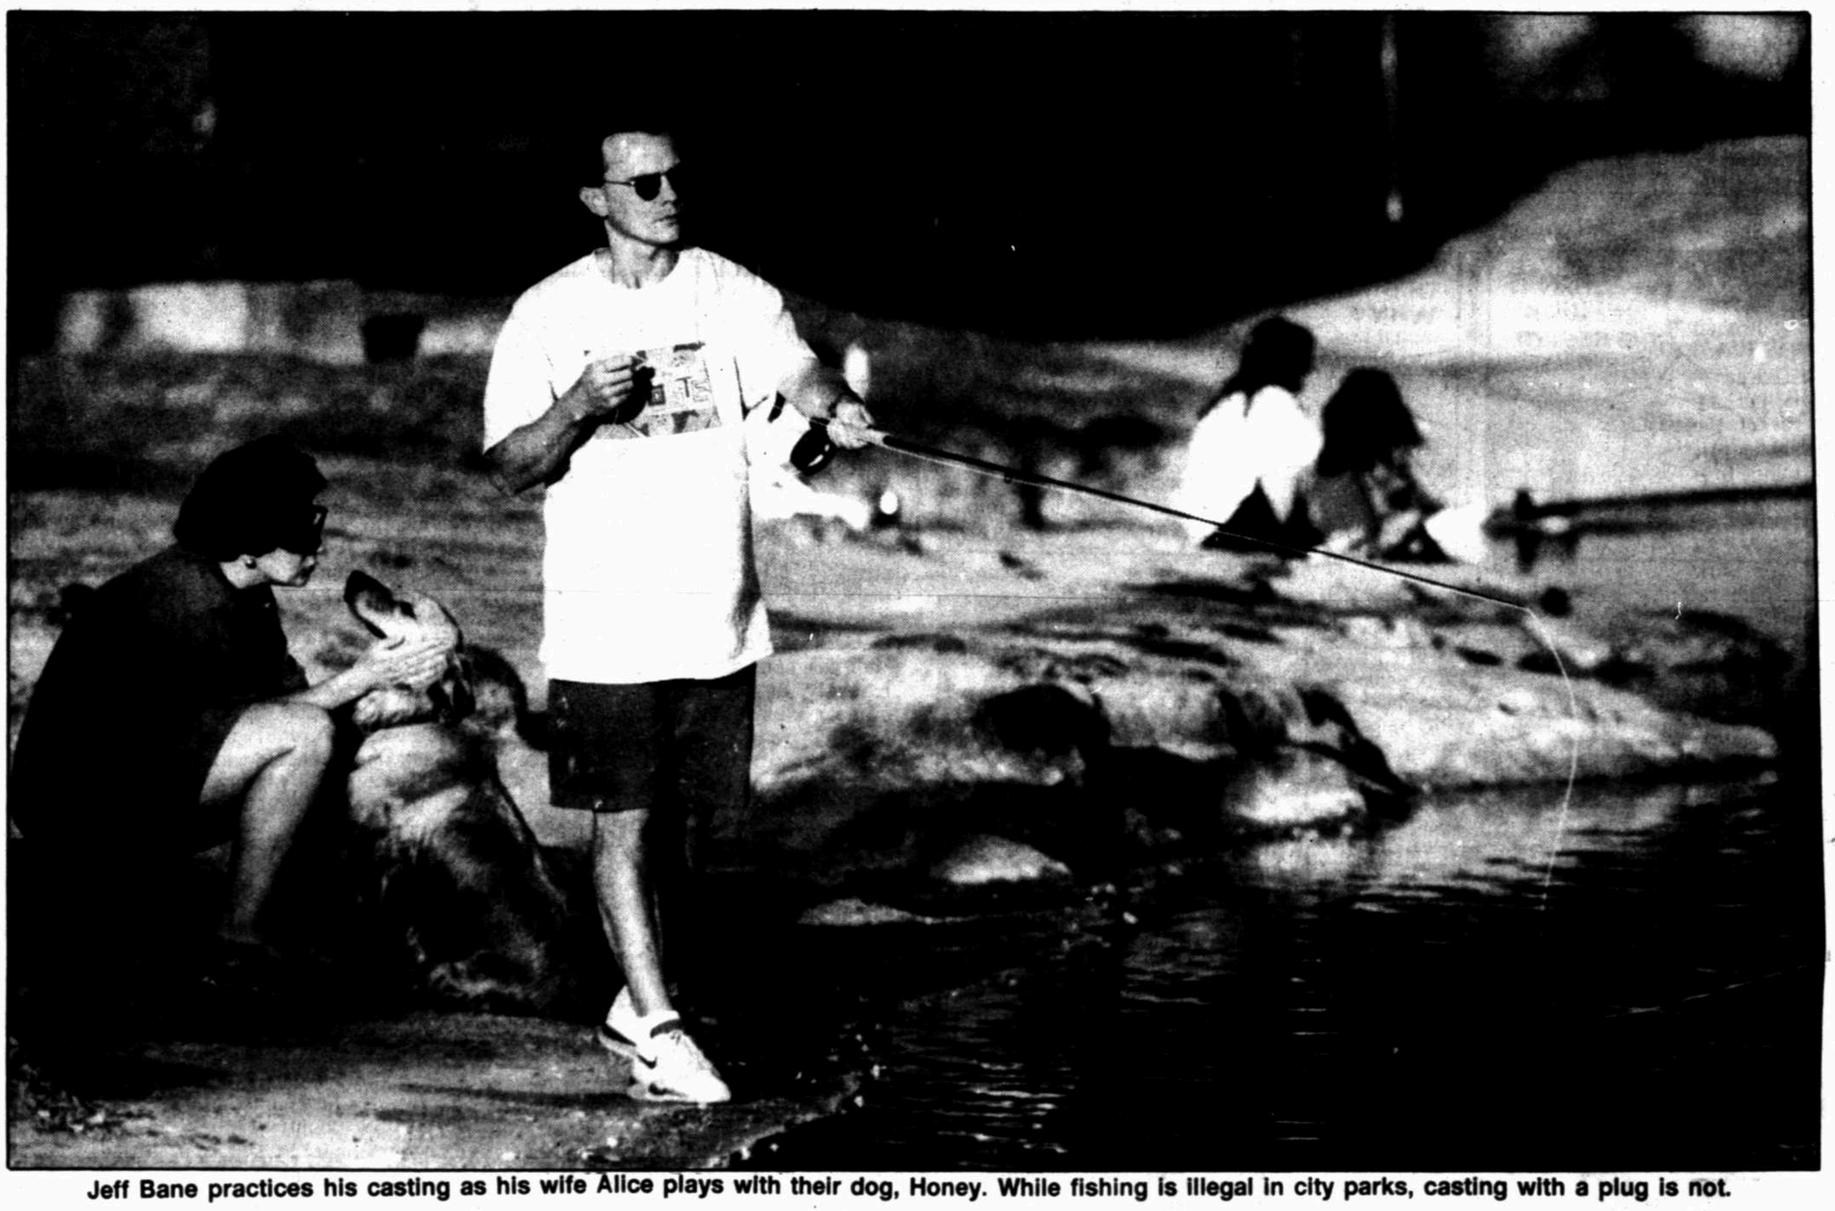
Elisha Hudson, 7, Schuqueitor Brown, 12, and Colby Coleman, 7, feed the Wadley-Barron ducks (right), including the new ducklings.



Jeff Bane practices his casting as his wife Alice plays with their dog, Honey. While fishing is illegal in city parks, casting with a plug is not.

ON WADLEY POND

The pond is eerily silent. It is the dead of night — two in the morning — and the cluster of afternoon pond-worshipers has dissipated until a lonely man is left napping on the shore.

Ducks rule the murky waters at Wadley-Barron Park, but a cornucopia of other mammals and fresh-water fauna roam the grounds as well.

In the dark of night — with just a flittering ray from a street light illuminating the pond — the ducks coast across the water with the stealth of professional thieves. Slight waves move slowly across the water and break its steady plain.

The park is an oddity in the barren confines of West Texas — largely due to the presence of water.

It lies mostly on the former eighth hole of the long-abandoned Midland Country Club golf course — and the contours of the eighth green still can be spotted next to the gazebo.

The city purchased the land in 1954 and built the park in honor of local merchant Addison Wadley and school board member J.H. Barron. Wadley-Barron Park was dedicated in 1956.

Wadley came to town in 1885 and died in 1971. In the interim, he became such good friends with Barron that he named his son Barron Wadley.

Today, the residents who enjoy the park — which is in dire need of several thousand dollars in drainage work — have long since forgotten its history.

For Lisa Kidwell and Sebastian Locker — a high school couple from a neighboring small town — the serene waters, filled with an abundance of aquatic life, are a breath of fresh air.

"We come here often. Mostly after school to get our minds away from class and our parents," Locker said. "In this part of the country, coming to this pond is like settling down next to Lake Michigan. Kind of sad really, but we like it."

Ms. Kidwell has an affinity for the turtles.

"They're so unusual. They're prehistoric animals in the modern day. I wish I could take one home," she said. "I love them."

Indeed, with the advent of spring, romance often fills the air as lovestruck couples stroll hand-in-hand along the shores of the duck pond.

In the morning, businessmen living in the area often begin their days with light jogs around the park.

Children, throughout the day, can be spotted feeding the tame ducks.

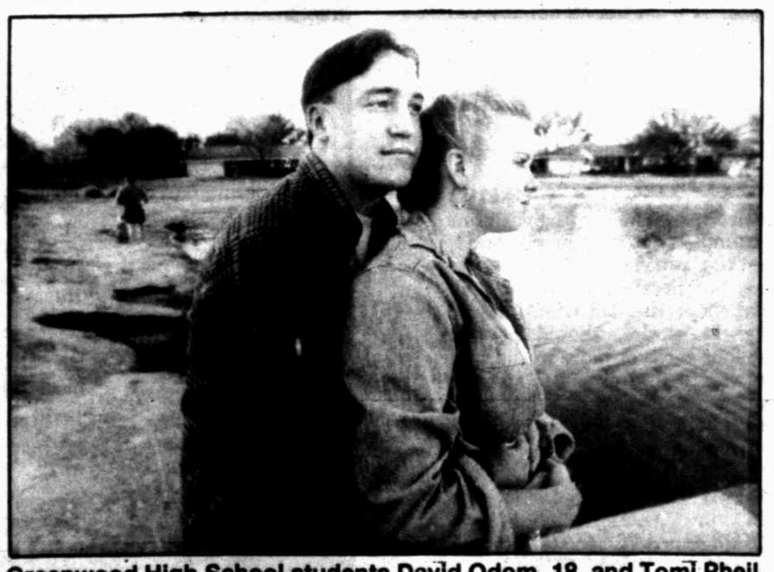
The ducks, meanwhile, are often seen strutting across the street with their ducklings close behind. They take duck-naps in neighborhood yards where their off-spring are hatched.

"These ducks always follow us around. I asked my mom if I could bring one home with us but she said we already have a dog," said 8-year-old Jessica Johnson.

Animal Control officials may wish more people would consider taking home a duck for a pet. Periodically, workers conduct round-ups to alleviate the often crowded conditions of the pond. Those ducks are then taken to the shelter to be adopted.

The ducks at the pond during the summer months are domestic birds that stay at the park all year. A large population of wild ducks recently left the confines of the pond and headed north. They — or other migratory birds like them — are expected to return this fall.

Story by DARREN J. WAGGONER Photos by JOE D. WILLIAMS



Greenwood High School students David Odom, 18, and Tomi Pheil, 16, share a quiet moment at the duckpond.

Nathan Carr, 14 months, is ready for the second leg of a bike ride to the pond with parents Bruce and Chrisann.

MONDAY, APRIL 26, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Take a break from tedious tasks and work on expanding your career horizons. The events of midsummer will strongly influence your financial plans. Both travel and partnerships enjoy highly favorable auspices. Good health depends on keeping your weight in check and exercising regularly. By late fall, the business climate is excellent for big deals. Your outgoing personality helps you get a special relationship into high gear. The year 1994 gets off to a wonderful start!

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: comedian Carol Burnett, ornithologist John James Audubon, author Anita Loos, architect I.M. Pei.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Needed information or items may be found at a distance or off the beaten track. A legal verdict gives food for thought. A brilliant new alliance brings quick profits.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Financial matters demand the lion's share of your attention now. Delays, excessive haste or oversights could jeopardize an important account. Let nothing escape your notice.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Do not take a money shortage lightly. Additional stress could cause a heated relationship to boil over. Now more than ever, you must act calm and confident.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): People around you are edgy — be tactful and patient. Financial success is attainable once VIPs see that you are your own person. Avoid a tug of war with your loved ones.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Certain friends are a financial drain; pay what you owe, but otherwise say "no." Seek more contact with the public — reaching out will give you wider influence. Avoid wearing your heart on your sleeve.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An open, heartfelt declaration can work wonders in romance. Whoever reaches out first will gain the most. Thoughts of prosperity return with a vengeance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An argument over money or romance could erupt without warning. Your calm and disciplined manner will put the fire out. A casual gathering of friends and family proves both fun and relaxing.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your personal magnetism wins you dynamic allies. You no longer stand alone and should win despite the odds. Distant activities look promising. Go with the flow and be willing to grow.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): New information discovered puts you in the know. The future takes on a rosy glow! It may be time to tie the knot. Your family and friends applaud your choice of partner.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Financial gains are linked to better communications or travel. Key issues fall under your control. A favorable response is guaranteed if you do not waver.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): When it comes to dollars and cents, trust your own instincts. Well-intentioned chums may offer advice, but you must decide what is right. Be careful how much information you share with others.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A letter or phone call expressing your desires will put an end to procrastination. Key people want to join your team. Welcome them if doing so will work to your advantage.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A52 ♡J532 ◇KJ52 ♣A7
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—This one is right out of the textbooks. You have a balanced, minimum opening bid with only three-card support for partner's suit and stoppers in the unbid suits. Bid one no trump.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ107643 ♡Q975 ◇Void ♣93
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 NT	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—This hand could deliver anywhere from 10 to 13 tricks, depending on partner's holding. For the moment, you need do no more than bid three spades, leaving the partnership with the maximum amount of room for exploration. No, that's not a weak bid—with nothing but long spades, you would either pass two no trump or bid four spades.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠10542 ♡J52 ◇J ♣AQJ102
Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What do you respond?
A.—You certianly want to be in game, but because of your unbalanced shape the had could play in better in spades, should partner have four cards or more in the suit. The way to find out is to use the Stayman Convention. Bid two clubs, which asks partner to show a four-card major.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AKQ82 ♡A72 ◇AQ105 ♣7
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 ♠	Pass	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—Two diamonds woefully understates the value of your hand and a jump to three diamonds shows a more distributional holding. The correct way to describe this powerhouse is to reopen the auction with a double. That's for takeout, but partner is allowed to convert to penalties by passing.

Q.5—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J1042 ♡K ◇1054 ♣J8743
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What action do you take?
A.—Reverse the spade and heart holdings and we would probably raise to two clubs. Here, however, we would opt for one spade, both for its preemptive value which makes it more difficult for the opponents to enter the auction and because, if partner has a good hand and spade fit, even game is possible. The hand should play well if partner raises and we do have the safety factor of being able to retreat to clubs.

Q.6—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠762 ♡K105 ◇832 ♣A985
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 NT	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—When you hold a working ace and king and partner has reversed, you have a very useful hand. In the modern style, the reverse is a one-round force and the only sign-off here is two no trump. Since partner is marked with five diamonds, we would take an encouraging preference to three diamonds.

Reba McEntire to play a wild Texan in Reiner's film 'North'

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Country singer Reba McEntire will play a wild Texan in "North," a new film by Rob Reiner that begins shooting in New York early next month.

McEntire

"I play an outlandish Texan called Ma Tex . . . a very funny character," McEntire said. "I enjoy acting and new challenges, so this is going to be a lot of fun for me."

Starring Bruce Willis and Kathy Bates, "North" is the story of a 12-year-old boy who searches the world for the perfect parents. The boy will be played by Elijah Wood, who stars in "Huck Finn."

McEntire appeared in "Tremors," a science fiction movie, and in the NBC miniseries "The Luck of the Draw: The Gambler Returns."

Filming of "North," which co-stars Pat Morita, begins May 3.

NEW YORK — Before he moved across the hall from Jerry Seinfeld as the twitchy, shock-haired Kramer, Michael Richards recalls how his life was different — really different.

"I was invisible," said Richards, whose "Seinfeld" sitcom antics led to audience shouts of "Kramer! Kramer!" during a recent appearance on "The Tonight Show."

What is it about Kramer that's connected with America's consciousness? The Yo Yo Ma thing? The Mary Hart thing? His golf game? The Cuban cigars?

"I can't tell you why the audience loves this character," Richards said in the May 13 issue of Rolling Stone. "Maybe it's the eccentricity. They enjoy his unpredictable nature. There's a certain madness there that they enjoy."

And how are things off-screen for Richards? "I'm a fallen man," he confessed. "I'm on a TV show every week. I'm rich, and I live in the city."

BRISBANE, Australia — Irish rock star Bob Geldof will sing on a cattle ranch to help farmers in the Australian outback who are suffering the worst spell of dry weather in 200 years.

Geldof, already on tour in Australia, will perform on May 29 along the banks of a river at a Bachelors and Spinsters Ball outside the rural Queensland town of Goondiwindi.

Such balls are highlights of outback social life, with revelers often traveling hundreds of miles to attend. More than 2,000 people are expected.

Many farmers in the region have been forced to slaughter livestock they can't feed. Many farms have been repossessed.

Geldof, former lead singer for the Boomtown Rats, helped raise money for African famine relief by organizing Live-Aid in 1985.

* * *

NEW YORK — Dana Carvey pulled no punches in his final celebrity impersonation as a regular on "Saturday Night Live," climbing into large white tubing to play Prince Charles as a tampon.

Carvey

The spoof was based on steamy published transcripts of secretly taped telephone calls between Britain's heir to the throne and his alleged mistress, Camilla Parker-Bowles.

The voice wasn't tough for Carvey, who has built his career with impersonations of former President Bush, Ross Perot and Johnny Carson.

"He's a little like William F. Buckley and Noel Coward put together," Carvey said in an interview in the May 13 issue of Rolling Stone. "But I'm less interested in accuracy than in abstracting a voice to the point of silliness."

Carvey said he'll likely return to the late-night comedy show for an occasional skit, but wants to focus on films, including a "Wayne's World" sequel.

"This is the end of an era for me," he said. "I had my run and it's time to move on."

* * *

NEW YORK — Mel Gibson and Michelle Pfeiffer made People magazine's annual list of the 50 most beautiful celebrities. But Cindy Crawford got the cover.

A close-up photo of former Miss America Vanessa Williams opens the May 3 issue's lengthy listing of the globe's most gorgeous people. She has built a singing career after being stripped of the 1983 title when Penthouse magazine published nude photos of her.

"I was in the middle, an all-American girl who might not have been Miss America, but certainly not what Penthoue portrayed either," said the 30-year-old Williams.

The list also includes recent Academy Award winner Emma Thompson, singer-actress Whitney Houston, actress Demi Moore, Dallas Cowboys quarterback Troy Aikman, actor Jean-Claude Van Damme, country singer Billy Ray Cyrus and actress Uma Thurman.

Famous offspring on the list included singer Nona Gaye, daughter of the late Marvin Gaye, and actor Ashley Hamilton, son of George Hamilton.

Older examples of beauty included Catherine Deneuve and Gregory Peck.

Congressman fasts for hunger committee

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Tony Hall hasn't eaten for three weeks.

His collar's loose. He's pale. He's 20 pounds lighter, and weak. The skin under his chin wobbles when he talks. He feels cold all the time and smells garlic everywhere.

And he says he feels good.

"After the first week you get like on the crest of a wave," he says. "You're over the agony of wanting food. You just ride it — you don't need food."

Hall, D-Ohio, stopped eating because he felt compelled to do something dramatic to make people think about those who never get enough to eat.

He used to be chairman of the House Select Committee on Hunger, which was disbanded April 1 as a way to show that Congress is willing to cut its own budget.

Hall lobbied intensely, offering to work with a smaller budget and arguing that, compared with $3 million spent by the Committee on Science, Space and Technology or $4.4 million spent by the Banking Committee, $431,000 was a small price to pay to try to save lives.

"I'm frustrated about what happened to this committee, but I'm more frustrated by the indifference and arrogance that we showed in ignoring the needy — as if we really don't care," Hall said. "This institution has lost its conscience."

These were the words of a 16-year veteran, someone trusted by leadership to represent it on the Rules Committee, which decides which amendments will get the attention of the full House.

House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., appeared irritated.

"To suggest that we have somehow lost our concern about these issues flies in the face of the most important advancement of social policy that has taken rise in this country in the last 25 years," Foley said.

Hall said he and Foley haven't spoken to each other in a month and a half.

An intermediary made the arrangements for Hall to address the Democratic caucus later this week. And an intermediary opened discussions with Foley about a possible task force to temporarily carry on the committee's work.

Monday began Hall's fourth week without food.

He said the deprivation has helped him empathize with sluggish, hollow-eyed children he's seen in the Third World.

"I know how they can go days without food, but I wonder, how do they do this? How do they walk? I walk a block and I am winded."

By fasting, "You can identify with that, and with the kid who goes to school and hasn't had proper nutrition." he said. "How can you learn when you're hungry?"

On Friday 40 entertainers, including Susan Sarandon, Dick Gregory, Rob Morrow and Jeff Bridges, announced they were going without food for a day in support of Hall.

The people who agitated for elimination of Hall's committee have no signs they've changed their minds about wiping out his committee.

Hall, 51, has worked on local and international hunger programs almost all his adult life.

Texas soldiers buried in national cemetery

SANTA FE (AP) — Draped with Confederate flags and sprinkled with the soil of their native Texas, 30 Confederate soldiers were buried Sunday.

Two pine caskets and a large steel vault were lowered into the ground at the Santa Fe National Cemetery.

A bugler played "Taps," a bagpiper played "Dixie" and Civil War re-enactors fired muskets and cannons as the remains of the soldiers were buried with full Confederate honors.

"These soldiers suffered all, sacrificed all, dared all, and died," said Sherry Davis, president of the Texas Division of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, at a brief graveside service.

About 150 authentically dressed Civil War re-enactors from several states took part in the ceremony.

It was the largest Civil War burial in this century, according to Museum of New Mexico Director Tom Livesay.

The members of the Texas Mounted Volunteers died on March 28, 1862, in a battle at Glorieta, a mountain pass about 15 miles southeast of Santa Fe. They were buried the next day in a mass grave that was not discovered until 1987.

Two of the 30 were positively identified: Pvt. Ebineezer Hanna Jr., at 17 the youngest of the casualties, and Pvt. J.S.L. Cotton, who was 20.

Another soldier — an officer found in a separate grave nearby — was identified as Maj. John S. Shropshire. His descendants buried his remains two years ago in Kentucky.

The battle of Glorieta Pass was considered a Union victory because Colorado volunteers burned a Confederate wagon train, forcing a retreat and thwarting the Confederacy's plan to take the Southwest.

The remains of Hanna and Cotton were buried in coffins, the 28 others in a steel vault. Members of the United Daughters of the Confederacy and the Sons of Confederate Veterans sprinkled the coffins and vault with dirt from Texas.

The coffin of Hanna, who had been elected company historian, contained a pen, writing paper and Texas bluebonnets, the state flower.

Horse-drawn carts took the vault and coffins from a downtown museum to the cemetery, accompanied by the sound of drums and a Civil War-era dirge played on a fife.

The procession also included mourners on foot, among them some descendants of Hanna.

"It's really neat to come back here and do this — to be able to be a part of it," said David Reid of Plano, Texas. Hanna was his great-great-great-uncle, said Reid, 32, a financial planner for Texas Instruments.

Reid's mother, brother, two sisters, wife and 8-month-old son were also in the funeral procession.

No descendant of Cotton could be located, Livesay said.

The crowd that watched the reburial ceremony included Civil War enthusiasts, descendants of Civil War soldiers, and the just plain curious.

"I'm a Vietnam veteran, and I have a lot of respect for soldiers — I don't care if he's an enemy or not," said Jack Allen Duran, a mortgage banker who said he came from Denver for the weekend specifically to watch the reburial.

The soldiers were eulogized in a service at Rosario Chapel, adjacent to the cemetery, as battle heroes and patriots.

"These men were noble, courageous, beautiful, loyal Confederate soldiers," said Peter Orlebeke of Dallas, commander of the Army of the Trans-Mississippi Department of the Sons of Confederate Veterans.

"God bless these valiant men," he added. "God bless the South."

Joy Baker, wife of U.S. senator, dies of cancer

HUNTSVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Joy Baker, the wife and daughter of U.S. senators, died at home after an 11-year battle with cancer. She was 64.

Mrs. Baker, wife of former Sen. Howard Baker Jr., died Saturday. She had been released from the Mayo Clinic in January, said Ron McMahan, a longtime family friend and former aide to the ex-senator.

"When it was determined that her illness was terminal, she decided she wanted to return to the family home in Huntsville rather than stay in a hospital," McMahan said.

Mrs. Baker served on the boards of the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, Ford's Theatre, Bradley University, Knoxville College and the Knoxville Symphony Society. She was awarded a Lincoln Medal in 1985 for her work for Ford's Theatre.

Born Feb. 10, 1929, in Pekin, Ill., Danice Joy Baker was an only child. Her father, the late Sen. Everett M. Dirksen, was elected to Congress when she was 3. Dirksen was elected to the Senate in 1950, and eventually became Senate majority leader.

She is survived by her husband, a daughter, Cynthia, and a son, Darek.

Mrs. Baker will be buried Tuesday at the First Presbyterian Church Cemetery after a church service.

DELIVERY

MOONLIGHTING!

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with responsible individuals

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!
- STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a distributor?

Depending on the size of distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!

How long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subsribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 a.m. Monday-Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or a family member to substitute a for them!

RESERVE YOUR DISTRIBUTORSHIP NOW!

DELIVERY

MOONLIGHTING!
The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with responsible individuals

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:
Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!
- STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a distributor?
Depending on the size of distributor ship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!

How long does it take?
The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subsribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?
6 a.m. Monday-Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or a family member to substitute a for them!

RESERVE YOUR DISTRIBUTORSHIP NOW!

BIRD SHELTERS

Seven assorted feeding shelters and houses are shown here. All will add a colorful touch to your yard . . . and they're designed just the way the birds like them. Each of the units pictured is easy to build when you use our full-size patterns. Just trace the patterns onto wood, saw them out and assemble. Illustrations showing the various stages of construction make the projects well suited for any amateur.
