Japs Report B-29 Attack

Yanks Drive Inland On Cebu As New Fleet Assaults Batter Home Islands

(By The Associated Press)

SAN FRANCISCO, March 27—Tokyo radio said southern Japan was attacked for the second time in 12 hours Tuesday by Superfortresses. The enemy said the second raid was made by 50 to 60 B-29s which dropped incendiaries and explosives for two hours and a half around midnight Tuesday (Tokyo time).

The report, unconfirmed immediately by Allied sources, was put out by Japanese Domei news agency and intercepted by the Federal Communications commission.

Headquarters of the 21st Bomber command at Guam previously had reported a raid by more than 200 Superforts around noon Tuesday (Japanese time) on Kyushu.

Two Cities Damaged

The time specified by Tokyo for the second raid would be 10 a. m. Tuesday, eastern war time.

The enemy broadcast said the second raid resulted in damage to the cities of Kokura and Moji on northern Kyushu. Kokura is a transportation center of more than 170,000 population and has a vast Army arsenal.

Northern Kyushu rims the south part of Japan's inland sea where the enemy home fleet was hard hit more than a week ago by carrier planes of Vice Adm. Marc A. Mitscher's fast task force.

The enemy broadcast claimed that Japanese defense units "achieved considerable war results" against the B-29s making the second strike.

Japs Destroy City As Yanks Advance

By RAY CRONIN

American invasion of Cebu, another major island of the Philippines, and new naval gun and carrier plane actions in the strategic Ryukyus immediately southwest of Japan's main islands, highlighted U. S. Army and Navy communiques late Tuesday.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur reported that doughboys of the Americal division invaded eastern Cebu at Talisay after naval and air bombardments and speedily shoved inland to within two and a half miles of Cebu, second largest Philippines city. Front dispatches said the Japanese were destroying the city with explosives and fire. Talisay is five miles

Navy Cuts Back Building Plans

WASHINGTON, March 27 (AP)—The Navy today cut back drastically its latest warship building program even as Fleet Admiral Ernest J. King said "no quick and easy victory (over Japan) can be taken for granted."

A $1,000,000,000 "insurance" construction program announced March 6 was slashed 75 per cent. This reduced a projected big new fleet of 84 warships of all categories totaling 636,860 tons to 12 escort carriers of 150,000 tons. Other phases of the Navy's overall building program were not affected.

Discussing Tankers

However, it was reported that the joint chiefs of staff, who decided upon the warship building cut, are questioning the Maritime commission on the need of building about 40 new tankers now planned for delivery this year and next.

Admiral King's note of caution was included in his annual report as fleet commander in chief, which also said that the war in the Pacific "today is ahead of our expectations of last year."

Although emphasizing that there has been no Pacific schedule "except to go as far and as fast as the means at hand would permit," the fleet admiral said the "very speed" of the advance on Tokyo "has created new production problems."

Conceived As "Insurance

Most of the ships involved in the program cut back today would not have been completed until next year or 1947. The Navy said the full project was conceived as "insurance" against the possibility of additional losses as the fleet closes in on Japan and the tempo of the war steps up. It was calculated that the program could be abandoned if progress of the war made it evident that the additional ships would not be needed.

The cut, decided upon by the joint chiefs of staff, was based on several factors. One was, of course, the present size of the fleet.

Another and possibly more compelling factor was the critical shortage of steel now hampering war production.

Latin Envoys Set Sudden Meeting

WASHINGTON, March 27. (AP)—A sudden meeting of Latin American ambassadors in Washington was called today to discuss Argentina's declaration of war against the Axis.

A related topic was the Argentine decision to adhere to the acts of the recent conference of inter-American nations at Mexico City.

It is possible the meeting marks the beginning of speedy consultations looking towards recognition of the Argentine government of General Edelmiro Farrell. Recognition would close the ranks of the hemisphere, split for almost a year by Argentina's stand heretofore.

It is known that once recognition has been granted, the United States is prepared to ask the other sponsoring nations to send an invitation to Argentina to the United Nations conference at San Francisco.

No Early Final Decision

Because only fragmentary reports of Argentina's actions have reached Washington thus far, it is doubted that a final decision will be taken immediately.

However, it is known that the western hemisphere diplomatic machinery is all set to roll when the complete returns of Argentina's decisions are in.

The Mexico City declaration on Argentina provided for a declaration of war and adherence to the United Nations pact, adherence to the Mexico resolutions, and implementation of these diplomatic commitments.

ARGENTINA DECLARES WAR ON JAPS, NAZIS

BUENOS AIRES, March 27. (AP)—Argentina's military government declared the existence of a state of war with the Axis nations today in a move frankly designed to end its diplomatic isolation.

The decree issued by the government stated that war was declared against Japan because of the attack on the United States at Pearl Harbor and against Germany because Germany was Japan's ally.

The decree as broadcast by the government radio also expressed the government's adherence to the Chapultepec acts in accordance with the invitation issued by the Mexico City conference of American republics.

To Protect Rights

It concluded with a statement that appropriate measures would be taken to supervise the activities of companies, individuals and organizations which might affect Argentina's relations with other American countries or threaten their peace.

The decision to declare war was the most difficult the administration of President Edelmiro Farrell has yet had to make. Three weeks of intensive discussion were required before conflicting views within the government and the armed forces could be resolved.

Reds Herding Germans Back Into Austria

By ROMNEY WHEELER
Associated Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Wednesday, March 28. — Armor-paced Russian forces plunged within 61 miles of Vienna's city limits, herding the Germans back upon the Austrian border now 23 miles away from Soviet units charging across the tableland of northwestern Hungary, Moscow announced last night.

Far to the north, other powerful Russian forces crashed into the center of fire-blackened Danzig and fought through the streets of the neighboring Polish port of Gdynia, the Soviet communique said.

The fall of these two vital Nazi naval bases on the Baltic appeared imminent. Their capture would give the Russians a psychological as well as a military triumph, for it was over Danzig and the adjacent Polish corridor that Adolf Hitler found a pretext for launching the second World war Sept. 1, 1939.

Two Armies Link Up

In German upper Silesia and adjacent Polish Silesia, Marshal Ivan I. Petrov's Fourth Ukraine Army linked up with the First Ukraine Army commanded by Marshal Ivan S. Konev, and the two massive forces lashed out together on an 80-mile-wide front against the Germans' Sudeten mountain positions.

Soviet units on the left flank of this front, which faces generally southward, won positions 14 miles northeast of Moravska-Ostrava, Czechoslovakia's third city guarding the northern route to Prague and already threatened Vienna.

After capturing the Polish city of Rybnik, 13 miles east of Ratibor, Soviet forces drove nine miles beyond that eight-way highway junction and took Loslau (Wodzislaw) for their closest approach to the Moravian gap.

40 Towns Captured

In all, the Russians captured more than 40 towns and villages in that area, including the important junction point of Zory (Sohrau), eight miles southeast of Rybnik.

On the other flank they took Strehlen, 20 miles below besieged Breslau. The entire drive toward Moravia threatened the entrapment of thousands of Germans deployed to the southeast along the now-breached Hron river in Slovakia.

Here Is Mileage Between Western Allies And Reds

(By The Associated Press)

Gen. Eisenhower said today that unconditional surrender would be imposed upon the Germans when the Russians and Western Allies were linked in Germany.

Here were the approximate distances between the Western Allies and the Russians today:

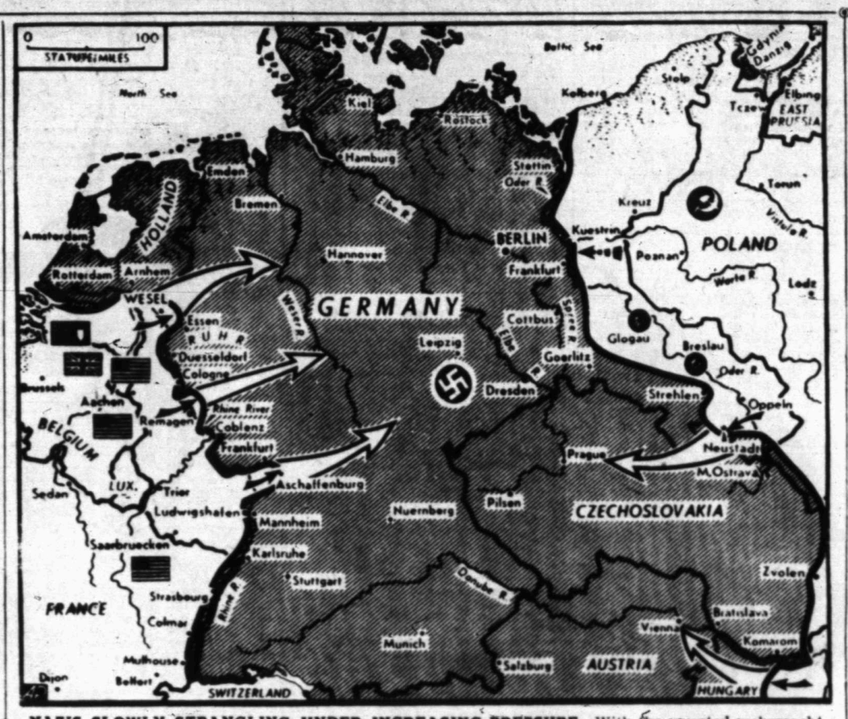

British Second Army—About 325 miles from east of Wesel to the First White Russian front on the Oder.)

U. S. Ninth Army—about 330 miles (from the Essen area to the First White Russian front on the Oder.)

U. S. First Army—about 280 miles (from the area just west of Wetzlar to the First Ukraine Army front on the Neisse.)

U. S. Third Army—about 245 miles (by German account, from the Lohr area to the first Ukraine Army front on the Neisse.)

U. S. Seventh Army—about 330 miles (from the Mannheim area to the Neisse front.)

NAZIS SLOWLY STRANGLING UNDER INCREASING PRESSURE—With the vaunted wehrmacht "whipped" in the field, according to General Eisenhower, inexorable and increasing pressure from west and east is slowly strangling a gasping Naziland. Solid arrows locate Allied drives in the west, with open arrows indicating probable thrusts into remaining German-held territory (shaded). Broken arrow on Eastern front indicates enemy reports of Russian pressure toward the heart of the Reich.

Ike Says Nazis Whipped But Not To Point Of Surrender

By EDWARD KENNEDY
Associated Press Staff Writer

PARIS, March 27—Gen. Eisenhower asserted today that the German Army "as a military force on the Western front is a whipped army" with its lines broken by one of war's greatest victories, but there was no hint that the enemy had been driven to the point of surrender.

"I am not writing off this war," he told a press conference on his return from the front. "No one knows what the German will do in his own country, and he is trying hard."

Warning against expecting any race for Berlin, the supreme commander said that despite the tremendous Allied victories in the Rhineland "that does not mean a front cannot be formed somewhere where our maintenance is stretched to the limit."

"My honest opinion," he continued, "is that there will be no negotiated unconditional surrender. There will be an imposed unconditional surrender.

"Between the Allies in the west and Russia, we will take over Germany. Whether the Germans know it or not, we will know it is unconditional surrender."

Eisenhower authorized only the direct quotation given in this dispatch.

Eisenhower said the day would come when he could tell correspondents that all organized resistance on the Western front was broken, but he was making no forecasts of when that would be.

Allied advances eastward will be limited by the ability to supply them, Eisenhower said. How far his armies already have gone, he could not say because, as he explained, he had been away from headquarters for three or four hours.

Need Rail Lines

While bridges are being thrown across the Rhine in 10 hours, it takes time to build railway bridges, and the lack of rail communications will for the present limit the eastward advance, Eisenhower said.

The Germans are expected to establish a new line along that limit. If they fall back into Bavaria, they probably will draw back their northern flank, he said, and if they stand along the sea in the north they probably will fold back the southern flank, fighting the usual tough delaying actions.

"I believe that, so far as he is able, the German will stand and fight wherever we find him, the general declared.

"The elimination of German troops west of the Rhine was one of the greatest victories of this or any other war."

Destroyed West Of Rhine

The Germans, he said, decided to stand west of the Rhine in the face of overwhelming Allied attacks and were destroyed. That, he added, was the greatest error since the enemy's Ardennes offensive last December and the German decision to stand and fight after the Allies broke out of the Normandy beachhead last summer.

Now the enemy was stripped of the power to form another strong, continuous line, and once the Allies build up strength beyond the Rhine, the march eastward will continue.

The loss of the three great industrial regions of Silesia, the Ruhr and Saar, Eisenhower said, would limit the time the Germans could wage organized warfare unless they could come up with new inventions not requiring heavy industry.

Eisenhower said that after

Nazis 'Surprised' At Drive, Say Rhine Front Is 'Shaken'

By RICHARD KASISCHKE
Associated Press Staff Writer

LONDON, March 27—The official German news agency acknowledged tonight that the German Army's Rhine front was "thoroughly shaken" and described Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's deep smash across the Reich's waist as "a surprising turn of developments."

DNB commentator Dr. Max Krull quoted "competent German circles," however, as saying "the Germans are not lacking reserves in the hinterland to build up a new defensive wall."

They Fear Patton

Krull declared that Patton's drive eastward which could lead to a juncture with a Russian push westward from Silesia, "points to other strategical objectives, one being the historic plan to separate northern and southern Germany through a line of the river Main."

Krull asserted Allied successes were being paid for "with tens of thousands of dead and other heavy losses."

The Transocean agency's correspondent, Franz Westhoff, reported the German defense ring on the middle Rhine had been "tensed to the breaking point" during the last few days by continuous attacks of superior tank and air forces and by a hurricane of American artillery.

Another report said, "the ancient university town of Heidelburg, which still is outside the battle zone, was heavily shelled from the left bank of the Rhine."

German soldiers along the west front were reported by the Luxembourg radio tonight to be "deserting in such numbers that German authorities are helpless to round them up."

The Luxembourg broadcast quoted Swiss sources on the wholesale desertions as the Nazi press and radio ordered "all stragglers" and cutoff officers and men to "report immediately to their respective authorities and take up again their duties in defense of the fatherland."

Capt. Ludwig Sertórious, Nazi radio commentator, said Lt. Gen. George S. Patton, jr.'s rampage

Beaten Nazis Can't Rally

Entire Front Aflame, Setting Off One Of History's Biggest Triumphs

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR
Associated Press Staff Writer

PARIS, Wednesday, March 28—Allied armies poured east in a torrent through smashed German lines yesterday, led by U. S. First Army tank forces knifing 27 more miles eastward.

The entire front blazed with the fires of victory as seven Allied armies pressed home what Gen. Eisenhower declared was one of the greatest triumphs of any war. A front dispatch said "the rout is under way."

The Rhineland battle, forever a black day in Prussian military history, had stripped the Germans of the power to make another successful stand although Eisenhower said they yet would form a temporary line.

But now one of those lines had been broken by the First Army's dash, which swept into Herborn and across the Dill river, even as the enemy tried to form a line there to repair the disasters of the Rhine.

Closing On Wetzlar

Twelve miles to the southeast, another First Army tank force was closing on Wetzlar, 57 miles beyond the Rhine.

News blackouts closed over these spearheads, just as they did over racing U. S. Third Army tank columns, which had shredded defenses of the river Main at many points southeast of Frankfurt and by enemy account were loose 225 miles southwest of Berlin.

On the north flank, the British Second Army broke completely through the enemy lines on the north German plain and dashed eastward almost unopposed under another security blackout.

The U. S. Seventh Army lashed out from its new bridgehead north of Mannheim, cut the Frankfurt-Mannheim super highway at a second point and was nearly 10 miles east of the Rhine. Widening the bridgehead to 19 miles, it may already have linked up with the Third Army's crossings southeast of Mainz.

The extent of the day's sensational advances could not be told but the enemy said U. S. Third Army columns were approaching Wuerzburg in Bavaria, 223 miles from Berlin, and had reached Lohr, 225 miles from the rubbled German capital.

The U. S. Ninth Army, which was the first to break out of the Wesel bridgehead, alone was striking the fire of stiff resistance but even here the enemy had been driven from Wehofen, the northern suburb of Duisburg, greatest river port in Europe.

Canadians after more than two days of toe-to-toe slugging struck a soft spot in their cross-Rhine positions and drove two miles west into Dornick, only three miles from the German city of Emmerich.

Eisenhower declared that the Germans "as a military force on the Western front are a whipped army" and predicted that the enemy ultimately would be beaten into unconditional surrender, although "darn hard fighting"

First Army Tanks Take Herborn, Crack River Line Before Nazis Can Set Up Stand On Dill

By HAL BOYLE
Associated Press Staff Writer

WITH THE U. S. FIRST ARMY, March 27—U. S. First Army tanks drove into Herborn 47 miles east of the Rhine today and cracked the Dill river line on which the Germans had planned to make their first stand after the rupture of the Rhine line.

The smashing drive into Herborn, which is 13 miles northwest of the confluence of the Dill and Lahn rivers at Wetzlar, put the far-ranging American armored column less than 240 miles from Berlin.

"There is no doubt we have broken the Nazis' Dill river line even before they could get it set," said Maj. Haynes Dugan of Shreveport, La.

Riding in scores of Sherman and light tanks, red-eyed Americans who have not slept for two nights and three days still were pushing on tonight, weary but eager to sweep ahead in one of the greatest armored marches in history.

"It really looks like we are in the clear at last," said Lt. Col. Andrew Barr of Urbana, Ill., formerly a Yale history professor and Securities Exchange commission member.

"The enemy is getting more and more disorganized. He doesn't know where to look for us next."

Security Blackout

Early tonight the First Army applied a security blackout on news of its eastward positions to prevent giving the enemy any information.

The German Army's own communications have collapsed in some areas, and enemy radio "feelers" have multiplied in efforts to gain information about the whereabouts of the Americans.

Maj. Dugan thus summed up the deterioration of enemy defenses in the eastward path of the First Army's sensational advances:

"Sunday, the first day, we met enemy mine fields that were thoroughly laid and guarded by anti-tank and machine guns. Yesterday the Jerries were putting out mines hastily wherever they could.

Nazis Too Busy Running

"Today, well, if we have run into any mine fields at all I haven't heard of them. The Germans haven't had a chance to plant them; they've been too busy trying to save their own skins."

Many German soldiers are changing to civilian clothing and moving back westward to their Rhineland homes along with swarms of French, Polish, Greek and Belgian war prisoners and slave laborers. There have been some scattered reports of some of these Germans laying mines behind the leading American tank elements in order to hamper supply columns, but Maj. Dugan said "The vast majority of German civilians are keeping out of the way as much as possible and doing what they are told."

Increase In Meat Output Announced

CHICAGO, March 27 (AP)—Federally inspected meat production increased about 10,000 pounds last week, reflecting a substantial upturn in the marketing and slaughter of hogs, the War Meat board reported today.

Total output for the week ended March 24 was 280,000,000 pounds, compared with 270,000,000 the preceding week and 351,000,000 pounds in the corresponding week a year ago. The statistics:

Cattle slaughter 265,000 head, same as the preceding week but 39,000 more than a year ago.

Calf slaughter 126,000 head, up 2,000 from the preceding week but 2,000 under a year ago.

Sheep slaughter, 384,000 head, 4,000 less than the preceding week but 41,000 greater than a year ago.

Hog slaughter 800,000 head, compared with 728,000 the preceding week and 1,520,000 a year ago.

Veteran Educator Soon To Retire After 36 Years With Lubbock's School System

By JEANE ENGLE
Avalanche Staff Writer

A TEACHER, educator and classroom leader, G. N. Atkinson, who has seen the Lubbock schools grow from an enrollment of 400 to 8,593, has announced he will retire at the end of this school year after 36 years here as teacher, principal, superintendent and book custodian.

Atkinson, whose work through the years is highly praised by former students and fellow teachers, has no plans for the future. "Giving up my work is the hardest thing I have ever done, but I guess we all have to retire some time," he lamented.

"I came to Lubbock in 1909, 36 years ago next September, and I taught history and math at the old Northside school which had eight rooms, two shacks and 10 teachers," he recalled. He had taught eight years in Burnet county and at Santa Anna before coming to Lubbock county.

After two or three years as high school math and history teacher, he began teaching English which remained his favorite subject through the years. "Why, I was the whole English department for several years."

He served as high school principal for eight or 10 years, and when M. M. Dupree, superintendent, died in 1925, Atkinson finished out the school year as superintendent.

Atkinson recalls that in 1910 the school moved from the Northside building to what is now the Central Ward, and the next move was in 1923 when the present Junior High school building was completed. Then in 1931 he began teaching in the new high school building.

The veteran teacher, who has been book custodian for the school the last three years, has served under seven superintendents—E. R. Haynes, J. K. Wester, Dupre, M. H. Duncan, Kenneth Oberholtzer, W. B. Irwin and R. W. Matthews.

Although Atkinson said he had "licked" many a student, he doubts that such punishment is very effective. Neither does he believe that students of today are more difficult to control in the classroom

School Faculty Named, New Salary Schedule Approved

TRUSTEES of Lubbock Independent School district, in their regular monthly business meeting last night, elected a 269-person faculty for the 1945-46 session and dug into schools treasury to approve a new salary schedule calling for a $200-annual increase "all along the line," plus a 10 per cent bonus for faculty members satisfactorially completing their contracts.

The increases under the new salary schedule, applying to special teachers as well as to principals and classroom instructors, will call for an added expenditure of approximately $55,347.29. Salaries during the current session will total $431,377.15.

The board passed until the April 24 meeting the re-setting of salaries of all other employes of the system. Clerks, maintenance men, etc., will share in the increased salary schedule in 1945-46, said the board's president, Dr. J. T. Hutchinson.

Especially elected for next year, to serve as orchestra director of Junior and Senior High schools was Miss Beverly Vaughan, currently at Wink. The local system has been without an orchestra director since the marriage two years ago of the former Miss Beulah Dunn.

Elected to serve for the balance of this year were Mrs. W. I. Pittman, Senior High; and Mrs. Jennie Terrell, Dupre. Resignations accepted included those of Mrs. John Belaska, Dupre; Mrs. J. C. Bateman, Junior High; and Mrs. Beatrice Shackelford, Senior High.

Compromise Plan For Control Of Manpower Squeaks Through House

By WILLIAM F. ARBOGAST
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, March 27 — Compromise manpower control legislation clothing War Mobilizer James F. Byrnes with sweeping powers over workers and their employers squeaked through the House today by a seven-vote margin.

A vote of 167 to 160 sent it to the Senate, where an even harder fight confronted it. That chamber is expected to take it up tomorrow.

Power Given Byrnes

The legislation gives Byrnes power to fix ceilings on employment, to freeze workers in their jobs and to regulate rehiring, with violations of his orders punishable by one year in jail and a fine of $10,000.

Backing the measure worked out by the Senate and House conferees during two weeks of give-and-take sessions were 139 Democrats, 27 Republicans and the lone American-Labor member.

The bill passed the House originally on February 1, providing for the induction, fine or imprisonment of draft-age men refusing to take or keep essential jobs at local draft board request.

Senate Plan Differs

On March 8 the Senate passed an entirely different measure, levying penalties on employers violating job ceilings fixed by the War Manpower commission and extending the bill's coverage to all working men and women, regardless of age.

Draft-board jurisdiction was left completely out of the compromise the Senate-House conferees wrote.

Administration was given to the director of war mobilization, with power for him to call upon other agencies to help enforce the law.

Opponents assailed the measure as the forerunner of enslavement of American workers and the antithesis of what American soldiers are fighting against throughout the world. It was, they said, anti-labor.

No Labor Interference

Backers argued that there was nothing coercive in the legislation, that it would not interfere with any of labor's rights or with the rights of anyone working in support of the war effort.

Texans in the House voted 14 to 2 today in favor of the compromise legislation.

Bitter Block By Block Fighting Features Yank Frankfurt Battle

By EDWARD D. BALL
And THOBURN WIANT
Associated Press Staff Writers

WITH THE U. S. SIXTH ARMORED DIVISION, In the Suburbs of Frankfurt, March 27 — The Americans are fighting their way block by block through Frankfurt-On-Main. Resistance is heavy and the going is slow.

The core of Frankfurt's defense is built around 3,000 Elite Guard fanatics augmented by hundreds of Nazi policemen, airraid wardens, railway workers, firemen and street sweepers.

Even before cleaning out the suburbs on the southern side of the river Main, doughboys swept across a partly-wrecked railway bridge into the city itself.

Hold Only Small Part

Tonight it was hard to say how much of Frankfurt the Americans held, but at most it was only a few blocks.

Five miles south of Frankfurt the Americans captured the Main airport—second largest in Germany. It formerly was a Zeppelin base, and a handsome book in the administration building listed passengers on early Zeppelin flights, including many Americans.

The skeletons of 50 burned German planes ringed the airport. Two Junkers 88s were left on the field, which is so big that little American artillery spotter Cubs looked like toys as they landed and took off.

Reports Are Denied

Stockholm reports heard here said the Germans were not defending Frankfurt. Actually, the city's defenders are fighting hard with everything from bazookas fired from basements to antiaircraft guns deflected and firing from parks. Eighty-eight millimeter artillery shells are coming from all directions.

The damaged bridge across the Main into the principal part of Frankfurt was seized yesterday, and infantry raced across in a hail of bullets and shells, gaining their bridgehead inside Germany's ninth largest city.

The Germans had succeeded in blowing up three bridges but the damaged fourth was captured by armored infantry under command of Lt. Col. Emory Lagrew of Lexington, Ky.

The central portion was damaged so that armor could not cross immediately, and the wall of machinegun fire thrown from the north seemed more than humans could penetrate.

But somehow the doughboys did it, crouching and running into the storm of lead after the southern end of the bridge had been grabbed by the 15th tank battalion.

The first Americans sprinting across were led by Lt. Everett Martin of Bryan, Texas. The second group across was headed by Lt. Wilmer Jones of Waynesburg, Ky.

Most of Fire Missed

Amazingly, the white-hot German fire missed most of the doughboys, but the enemy made up for this failure with a murderous artillery concentration on the southern end of the bridge, landing shells into the area from which the Americans were jumping off.

The German artillery fell continuously for six hours and sporadically throughout the night. The barrage was the worst some correspondents have seen in three years of war reporting.

Numerous correspondents were pinned down in cellars unable to leave to file their stories until today. Two press jeeps were riddled and the driver of one was slightly wounded, but miraculously no correspondents were hit.

82-YEAR-OLD ACTIVE

OPAL, Wyo., March 27. (AP) — There's a war on and 82-year-old Bill Graham of Slate Creek is determined to help prove it. With the aid of one other man, he has put 100 acres of land in shape for planting and is looking forward to carrying the project to harvest time. His wife, also in her 80's, helps by doing her own housework and washing—from a wheelchair.

Parents And Others Invited To Gather With Teen-Agers

"The 'teen-agers are in need of backing of civic organizations, parents and teachers," A. C. Hamilton, superintendent of the city department, said Tuesday in inviting parents and others interested to a meeting at 8 o'clock Friday night at the Corral, 'teen-age center at Sixteenth street and Avenue J.

With an attendance total of 7,757 from Oct. 31 to March 7, the Corral is filling a big need as a recreational center for many boys and girls, but "we should have larger attendance," Hamilton said.

"We want more attendance and we want more 'teen-agers to plan the programs," he said. "At the meeting Friday night, we hope to have enough 'teen-agers present to work out a program that will fit the needs of the majority of the boys and girls and have the backing of their parents."

"A year ago there was a crying need for a 'teen-age center such as the Corral. We have it now, but there is a danger of its dying unless more interest is shown."

Only a few 'teen-agers have attended two meetings held within the last week and program plans have been postponed each time. About 15 meeting Monday made suggestions that panel discussion on the Carrol be given before the Parent-Teacher association and that representatives from the Corral ask to present a discussion in assemby at Senior High school and make plans to ask others to be present Friday night.

Activities at th Corral include special social events, including parties and dances, tournaments in checkers, ping-pong and other games, amateur dramatics, educational movies and slide films, lectures, group music, hobby instruction, and others.

Miss Julia Wilbanks, director of the Corral, and Hamilton will meet with the group Friday night.

Hamilton also said parents, teachers, civic organizations and any others interested are urged to visit the Corral or the Community Center, youth center at Sixth street and Avenue B, at any time.

Livestock Show Is Planned At Snyder

SNYDER, March 27 (Special)—The Scurry county 4-H Club and FFA Livestock show will be held at the city tabernacle and show grounds here Saturday, it has been announced by Raymond King, county agricultural agent.

Seventeen classes are to be judged in the show and the following numbers of animals are entered: Eight dual purpose heifers, 41 swine, 19 dairy animals, 33 lambs and ewes, nine cross-bred calves, 12 beef females, and 42 beef calves.

W. L. Stangel, head of the department of animal husbandry at Texas Tech in Lubbock, will judge the show. Judging will begin at 10:30 a. m. and will be completed about 4:30 p. m., followed immediately by an auction. A parade is scheduled at 1:15 p. m.

Plans are also being made for a Labor Saving Device show in connection with the livestock show.

Show officials are Buford Browning, vocational agriculture teacher here, superintendent; E. D. Wilmeth, vocational agriculture teacher at Hermleigh, assistant superintendent, and King, secretary. Crairman of the livestock committee is J. O. Stimson, and chairman of the sales committee is Buster Cauble.

King added that approximately $500 in prize money, and ribbons for the first ten places in each class will be given. The show is sponsored by the Scurry county Chamber of Commerce and business men.

Bridges Captured Intact By Hoge

WITH U. S. THIRD ARMY, March 27 (AP)—Brig. Gen. William M. Hoge is making a habit of capturing important German bridges intact.

Hoge commanded the combat force which seized the Remagen bridge over the Rhine in a coup that gave the First Army its entry into the heart of Germany.

Now Hoge, transferred from the Ninth armored division to command of the famous Fourth armored division of the Third Army, has taken the Aschaffenburg bridge over the main river east of Frankfurt.

Builder of the Alaska highway, Hoge in his new command succeeds Maj. Gen. Hugh J. Gaffey of Austin, Tex., who has been promoted to a corps commandership.

Selective Service physical examinations have placed more than 4,000,000 men in 4-F as unqualified for military duty.

Before the war, the seal fur industry on the Pribilof Islands of Alaska maintained an annual production worth two to three million dollars.

Egypt was considered part of Asia until Ptolemy made the Isthmus of Suez and the Red Sea the boundary between Africa and Asia.

Winston Churchill, American novelist and playwright ("The Crisis," "The Unchartered Way") is not related to Great Britain's prime minister.

What Is Wrong When Prayer Fails?

Thirty years ago, in Forbidden Tibet, behind the highest mountains in the world, a young Englishman named Edwin J. Dingle found the answer to this question. A great mystic opened his eyes. A great change came over him. He realized the strange Power that Knowledge gives.

That Power, he says, can transform the life of anyone. Questions, whatever they are, can be answered. The problems of health, death, poverty and wrong, can be solved.

In his own case, he was brought back to splendid health. He acquired wealth, too, as well as world-wide professional recognition. Thirty years ago, he was sick as a man could be and live. Once his coffin was bought. Years of almost continuous tropical fevers, broken bones, near blindness, privation and danger had made a human wreck of him, physically and mentally.

He was about to be sent back to England to die, when a strange message came—"They are waiting for you in Tibet." He wants to tell the whole world what he learned there, under the guidance of the greatest mystic he ever encountered during his twenty-one years in the Far East. He wants everyone to experience the greater health and the Power, which there came to him.

Within ten years, he was able to retire to this country with a fortune. He had been honored by fellowships in the World's leading geographical societies, for his work as a geographer. And today, 30 years later, he is still so athletic, capable of so much work, so young in appearance, it is hard to believe he has lived so long.

As a first step in their progress toward the Power that Knowledge gives, Mr. Dingle wants to send to readers of this paper a 9000-word treatise. He says the time has come for it to be released to the Western World, and offers to send it, free of cost or obligation, to sincere readers of this notice. For your free copy, address The Institute of Mentalphysics, 213 South Hobart Blvd., Dept. R-678, Los Angeles 4, Calif. Readers are urged to write promptly, as only a limited number of the free books have been printed.—Adv.

THE MILKMAN

"HE always used to come around . . . Before the crack of dawn . . . In bright or rainy weather he . . . Could be depended on . . . He brought us butter, milk and eggs . . . And packages of cheese . . . And even as to quality . . . He never failed to please.

But now it is a different tale . . . And we are glad of course . . . If thrice a week we see his truck . . . Or gaze upon his horse . . . We get our milk but other things . . . For which our stomachs sigh . . . Require points and usually . . . Are very hard to buy . . . We really do appreciate . . . His service during war . . . But after it is over we . . . Will love him so much more.

FRENCH YOUTH WRITES

SEVEN years before the war, Bobby Carr, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Carr and at present a midshipman in school in Chicago, became a "pen pal" with a young French boy, one Pierre Latrille, after having seen his name in a magazine column. They wrote of the difference in peoples and customs of their native countries and of such matters as naturally interest boys. Since the war, Bobby had not heard of or from Pierre and many times he wondered if perhaps he had not been killed.

Recently, however, a letter came, bringing him up to date and giving a vivid description of France under the Nazi yoke. The letter was so interesting we borrowed it to share.

"The hardest time for everyone was winter," the young man wrote in part. "We had been through four winters without heating but this year it is still worse. In the room where I am writing the temperature is at the freezing point and my fingers are pretty numbed. But all this is nothing; there are no longer German soldiers in the streets.

Pierre's family moved to Orleans in 1940 because the government had asked that everyone who had nothing to do in Paris go to the country. They probably were fearing air raids on Paris, he explained and while the beautiful capital was submitted to a few minor bombings, Orleans got a lot of them. ("It was in fact nearly half destroyed with about 7,000 people buried alive or dead in their cellars under the ruins of their houses and nobody to dig them out.")

The family was rich enough to buy things from the black market and pay as high as ten dollars for a pound of butter, nine dollars for a chicken, fifty cents for an egg and five dollars for a pound of sugar. It cost them 20,000 francs a month for food, which is the equivalent of four hundred dollars in our money.

During the four years France was under Nazi domination Pierre was a student and like other young men he was a member of a resistance organization. He distributed nearly 800 copies of different underground papers each month, he noted in his letter; cut German telegraphic wires, made false indentification papers for those who needed them and sent several of his comrades to different maquis. He was arrested once but for lack of evidence was almost immediately released.

In 1943 young Pierre joined the rescue squads of the air raid protection, in reality branches of the resistance. He attended open military training each Sunday morning; secretly was taught how to handle all kinds of firearms and subsequently became a good shot with a pistol, a rifle and a submachine gun. After each allied raid near Paris the group would be called and sent to the blitzed areas and would begin digging the civilians from under their houses. After a shift of eight hours they would be relieved. It was then, Pierre wrote, that a certain number of them would mysteriously disappear for several hours, two or three at the utmost. They entered the German factories and set fire to everything they could. "We did a very good job in this way," he added.

FASHION NOTES

WE'RE betting: On prints remaining popular because their fresh, pretty outlines put a gay face on a war-torn world and because they are in good taste wherever they go.

On loyalty to black. Because it responds to everything you do and your flattery quickly brings it to life. Because it can always be depended upon to take you through one season and see you into the next.

On the bolero suit. Because it's sweet and demure.

On the bright scarf at the throat. Because it brings color to your face and flatters your throatline if it is pretty and hides it if it is not.

On checks. Because they are neat and trim.

On the continued popularity of the high heel. Because it makes a well dressed woman feel so elegant.

Programs For Tuesday Clubs Here Include Discussions Given By Members And Guests

Tuesday afternoon clubs reported business, social and program meetings.

Dr. J. William Davis, acting head of the Tech government department, said in his address on "Our Foreign Policy" for Athenaeum club, "Until now instead of having one policy we have had three policies and the one used in dealing with Europe was that of isolation. However, with the Dumbarton Oaks and San Francisco conferences our policies are being merged into one police which will be a guide as a keeper of peace."

The club met with Mrs. O. T. Williams, 2327 Twenty-seventh.

Misinterpretation Of Casual FDR Order Brings False Peace Report

WASHINGTON, March 27 (U.P.)—Misinterpretation of a casual remark by White House Press Secretary Jonathan Daniels today blossomed into a "peace rumor" that swept the nation.

The whole thing grew out of Daniels' disclosure that President Roosevelt recently advised Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius, jr., and other cabinet officers that American officials—except those officially designated—would be expected to stay away from next month's San Francisco security conference. Such officials, Daniels said the President felt, should stay on their jobs "at this critical time."

It Grows And Grows

Misinterpretations of this by some persons grew until some erroneous reports circulated that the cabinet had been ordered to stand by for big developments expected later today.

Thn began a torrent of telephone calls to the White House and to newspaper offices asking if the war in Europe had ended.

Daniels' remarks, however, dealt solely with the fact that the President had served notice on American diplomats abroad and officials in Washington that they were expected to remain at their work unless offcially designated to go to the United Nations conference.

It developed later that the President's note to Stettinius and the others was sent on March 16, and thus could have had nothing to do with immediate developments in the war situation.

To Remain at Posts

The message to Stettinius, Daniels said, pointed out the importance of all chiefs of missions (ambassadors and ministers) "remaining at their posts during this critical time."

A similar note went to other cabinet members, Daniels added.

Its purpose was chiefly to minimize the strain on travel facilities and hotel accommodations at San Francisco where, Daniels pointed out, the United States would play host to "people from all over the world." The President asked Stettinius and the other seven U. S. delegates to keep their staffs of experts and advisers at a minimum.

Daniels was asked why the message was sent just to cabinet members and diplomats. He replied that it was "not a matter of specifically singling out the cabinet, but we want to keep all officials there (San Francisco) at a minimum . . ."

Then a reporter asked if the President's message stemmed solely from the matter of travel and hotels or was it also because of "the world situation."

Daniels said that "so far as the ambassador and ministers in other countries are concerned it is felt at this time that they ought to be on their own jobs."

This reflected the general Washington attitude that the war in Europe had reached a stage where anything could happen. Whether it will happen in the near future or weeks hence, however, appeared to depend upon whether Hitler can maintain in the German Army and people the will to go on fighting.

News Briefs

Lt. Fred Earl Strickland, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Strickland of 2514 Twenty-second, has returned to the States from England where he served as a bombardier with the Eighth Air force for eight months. He arrived in Lubbock Sunday and will be here until April 15 when he reports to California. Lt. Strickland has also served in the Aleutians and the Pacific theater of war.

The cases of Oscar Freeman and F. A. Stephenson, on appeal from Lubbock county, are to be argued today in the court of criminal appeals at Austin. Jimmie Cunningham, Lubbock attorney, was in Austin to present arguments. The cases were tried last fall before G. V. Pardue, then county judge, who fined Stephenson $200 and costs, Freeman a year in jail and a $1,000 fine, both for possession of liquor for purpose of sale. While in Austin, Cunningham planned to work in behalf of proposed legislation to speed awards by the Industrial Accident board.

Reports of committees studying possibilities of establishing reception centers for migratory workers will be held in the county agent's office, 1320 Ave. Q, at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon, it has been announced by Jason O. Gordon, county agent. Also details of a program using prisoner of war labor will be studied, he said.

Cpl. George Basil Bragg, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Bragg, 2606 Thirtieth, returned to his base at Great Bend, Kas., Monday after a week's emergency furlough to attend the funeral of his grandmother, Mrs. M. P. Bragg. An aunt, Mrs. Emily Christner of Encinita, Calif., also returned to her home Monday.

Accumulated gas, caused by a pilot light going out, exploded Tuesday morning in the basement of the Lubbock General hospital and burned Hugh S. Templeton of 2405 Ave. T on the hands, face and body. He is the hospital engineer.

Kenneth Jeffreys, 11-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Jeffreys of 1322 Twenty-sixth, suffered a comminuted fracture of the right thigh when hit by a pickup truck near his home. He is in West Texas hospital for treatment.

In West Texas hospital for treatment of a fractured hip is Mrs. T. J. Head, 80, of Post. Mrs. Head, who is blind, fell down a stairway Monday night.

Recently completing his second tour of combat in the European area, Lt. Col. Robt. P. Riordan is to arrive here today for a visit with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Riordan of 2710 Twenty-seventh.

Mechanical Harvest Of Cotton Important

Dr. A. W. Young, head of the Texas Tech department of plant industry, told members of the Lubbock Lions club Tuesday noon in Hilton hotel, that mechanical harvesting of cotton, in which rapid strides have been made in this area in the past few years, stands as the breach between this money crop and its competition from other sources.

Cotton is here to stay, with its production of fiber, food and protein feed, and the lowering of its production costs through mechanical methods will continue to make it the number one crop of the nation, Dr. Young said. He cited statistics to show that it now represents 35 per cent of the annual field crop revenue of Texas and in Lubbock county alone it is valued at more than $8,000,000.

Defoliation by chemical methods is a benefit to mechanical harvesting and another way of lowering cotton's costs, he said.

Dr. Young was introduced by Paul Castleberry, program chairman. Awards for securing new members were presented to Dr. Sam Hitch, Noel Stalnaker, D. L. Webb and C. L. Minyard by Vernice Ford.

A brief meeting after the luncheon, called for the purpose of discussing formation of a new Lions club, ran into opposition from various members and no action was taken. It was announced that D. A. Skeen, Salt Lake City, international president, would be a visitor at next Tuesday's luncheon.

Canning Center May Be Opened April 4

Official opening date for the canning training center, set up in the old dairy manufacturing building on the Texas Tech campus, is tentitavely scheduled for April 4, according to Mrs. Gladys K. Holden, instructor in family life education, who will be in charge of the center.

Organized through the cooperation of the divisions of agriculture and home economics at Tech and equipped by the War Food Production Training program, the center will serve women of Lubbock and surrounding territory. Purposes of the program to be conducted at the center include increasing the amount of food conserved, facilitating canning foods from gardens and using improved methods for food conservation.

Senior students majoring in vocational home economics and vocational agriculture at Tech will profit by practical experience gained while working in the laboratory. Anne Segulia, senior home economics education major, will supervise canning processes during April and May, under the direction of Mrs. Holden.

Although facilities of the center are limited, the public is invited to work there. Each group must make appointments to use the center and prior to beginning work, preparation of food must be discussed, in order to save time and equipment, Mrs. Holden said.

Record Class Will Graduate From School

GALVESTON, March 27. (AP)—The largest graduating class in the history of the University of Texas School of Medicine will hold commencement exercises June 2, with Dr. W. H. Moursund, dean of Baylor Medical school, as principal speaker.

Diplomas will be awarded to 110 seniors, a large part of whom will be commissioned in the Army and Navy.

The board of regents of the University will hold its meeting at Galveston June 1 and 2. This is its first meeting here since the appointment of six new members to the board.

Von Rundstedt Said Placed Under Arrest

LONDON, March 27 (AP) — The Paris radio said today that "according to a radio station broadcasting in German" Field Marshal Von Rundstedt, former commander of Nazi forces on the western front, has been taken from his estate and placed under arrest.

Field Marshal Albert Kesserling, former commander of German forces in Italy, has reportedly succeeded Von Rundstedt as western front commander.

Needless Worry Over Cotton Is Deplored

"Needless worrying by farmers about the future of cotton was cited by Don. L. Jones, superintendent of the Texas Experiment sub-station here, at the luncheon of the Optimist club Tuesday in Lubbock hotel.

Speaking on "The Case Against Cotton," Jones said that although the rayon and nylon industries are predicting a great future for their products, "we in the cotton industry should not give up. That should stimulate us all the more."

The cotton problem is only one of the many problems in agriculture, he said, adding that "we should be smart enough to solve it. It can be solved by constructive thinking and a lot of fighting."

Jones was introduced by L. E. Parsons, program chairman. A visiting Optimist was C. H. Grandstaff of Tulsa, Okla. President M. L. Shepherd presided.

Relatives To Receive Seventeen Decorations At LAAF Saturday

Presentation of 17 medals and decorations to relatives of 12 Lubbock and South Plains veterans and heroes of the present conflict—six of the awards to be made posthumously—will highlight ceremonies at an all post review at Lubbock Army Air field at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

The decorations, including the presentation of two Silver Stars, the Soldier's Medal, nine Air Medals and four Oak Leaf Clusters, and the Bronze Star medal, will be presented to the next of kin of the soldiers to whom the awards were made for valorous and outstanding performances of duty in combat on the battlefields and in the skies over continental Europe.

Col. Howell M. Estes, jr., commanding officer at LAAF, will make the presentation of the awards to the parents and wives.

Largest Such Ceremony

The presentation will mark the largest such ceremony in the history of the field. Letters of invitation have been sent to all of the next of kin and all have indicated they would be present for the occasion.

In addition to the six awards being made posthumously, two will be made for soldiers missing in action and four for prisoners of war in Germany.

Those receiving the medals and their sons to whom the awards were made by the War department include:

John H. Overman of Meadow, who will receive the Silver Star posthumously awarded to his son, Sgt. William R. Overman of the infantry, for gallantry in action while serving as squad leader with an Infantry organization engaged in making an attack on the enemy.

Mr. and Mrs. Katie M. Moore of Crosbyton route B, who will receive the Silver Star posthumously awarded to their son, Pfc. W. R. Moore of the Infantry for gallantry in action while holding a light machine gun position during an enemy counter-attack.

Given Posthumously

Mrs. Margaret E. Plemons of 2622 Avenue K, Lubbock, who will be presented the Soldier's Medal and the Air Medal posthumously awarded to her husband, Sgt. James C. Plemons of the AAF, the Soldier's Medal for bravery and heroism displayed on a rescue mission, and the Air Medal for meritorious achievement while participating in long range patrol flights over the Pacific and Caribbean approaches to the Panama Canal.

Charlie E. Hobgood of 2101 Twenty-second street, Lubbock, who will be presented the Air Medal and One Oak Leaf Cluster awarded to his son, Sgt. John F. Hobgood, who is missing in action, for exceptionally meritorious achievement while participating in sustained bomber combat operations over Europe.

Dewitt T. Tipton of Kress, Star route, who will be presented with the Air Medal and one Oak Leaf Cluster, awarded to his son, Flight Officer L. C. Tipton, who is a prisoner of war in Germany, the awards for exceptionall meritorious achievement while participating in heavy bombardment missions in the air offensive against the enemy over Continental Europe.

Missing In Action

Mrs. Joseph M. Burleson of Meadow, who will receive the Air Medal and one Oak Leaf Cluster awarded to her son, Staff Sgt. James M. Burleson of the AAF, missing in action since Aug. 25, 1944, for exceptionally meritorious achievement while participating in sustained bomber combat operations over enemy occupied Continental Europe.

Mrs. Ruth P. Coleman of Friona route 2, who will be present with the Air Medal and one Oak Leaf Cluster, awarded to her son, Flight Officer James R. Coleman of the AAF, who is a prisoner of war in Germany, for participating in ten separate bomber combat missions over enemy occupied Europe.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Jenkins of Floydada, who will receive the Air Medal awarded to their son, Col. Daniel W. Jenkins of the AAF, who is a prisoner of war in Germany, for participating in a hazardous mission over the continent.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Donley of Petersburg route 1, who will be presented the Air Medal awarded to their son, Sgt. James K. Donley of the AAF, who is a prisoner of war, for his meritorious achievement in aerial flight while participating in sustained operational activities against the enemy.

Mrs. Olive M. Mitchell of Loop, who will be presented the Air Medal posthumously awarded to her son, Staff Sgt. Claude H. Mitchell of the AAF in recognition of meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flight in the Middle East theater.

Mr. Homer P. Teston of Ralls route 1, who will receive the Air Medal awarded to his son, Staff Sgt. Welton P. Teston of the AAF, the award being made posthumously for his part in five separate bomber missions over the continent.

And Mr. and Mrs. William E. Owens of Littlefield, route 2, who will receive the Bronze Star Medal posthumously awarded to their son, 1st. Lt. Alton L. Owens of the Chemical Warfare Service for meritorious service in support of active combat operations from June 6, 1944 to July 25, 1944.

Captured Nazi Says Hitler's Wad Shot

WITH THE U. S. THIRD ARMY, Across The Rhine, March 27 (AP)—Doughboys of Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's Third Army were heartened in their charge across the Rhine by some "inside" advice that the Germans had little artillery to throw at them.

Shortly before the crossing the Third Army captured Lt. Gen. Edwin Graf von Rothkirch Und Trach, the German general whose troops had surrounded Bastogne—unsuccessfully—in the Ardennes breakthrough.

En route to the rear, the general and the American officer escorting him were forced to hit the ditch when they came under a German artillery barrage.

As they lay there, the general tapped the American and said:

"Don't worry, there isn't much left."

Crawford Given Two-Year Term

LEVELLAND, March 27. (Special)—Debbs Crawford, 23, was convicted of burglary by a 72nd district jury that recommended two years in the penitentiary when it reported about 3:30 o'clock this afternoon to Judge Dan Blair. A. A. Barton was jury foreman.

Crawford, who faces several other state and federal charges, excepted and gave notice of appeal.

The Hockley indictment charged he burglarized Cole Brothers Wholesale Oil station here the night of May 2.

Arrested With Two Others

Arrested with two other men at Abilene, coupons equivalent to approximately 49,000 gallons of gasoline, approximately what had been taken from the station, were found in the car they were driving, said Burton S. Burks, district attorney who prosecuted. Some of the stamps were in sacks which had the Cole Brothers return address on them, it was related.

Crawford was adjudged innocent of state charges of automobile theft in a trial several days ago in Lubbock, where a similar indictment awaits trial.

Crawford had "only an hour to get here from Brownfield this morning," court officials said, referring to an incident that happened Monday night at Brownfield. "He was 20 minutes late."

(Arrested by John Woods, state highway patrolman of Brownfield, Crawford was charged with drunk driving and held in Brownfield overnight, according to George W. Neill, acting Terry county attorney who prepared the complaint and filed it in the court of County Judge C. L. Lincoln.

(Crawford, Neill said, pleaded guilty this morning and paid $50 fine and costs of $22.70, then left for his Levelland trial, in company with his attorneys, who had gone to Levelland and pleaded him guilty.)

Crawford was represented by the Lubbock law firm of Nelson & Brown.

More Recognition For Gen. Patton Urged

WASHINGTON, March 27 (AP)—A plea for greater recognition of Lt. Gen. George Patton was voiced in the House today by Rep. Rankin (D-Miss).

"In the list of nine men sent to the Senate for promotion to four-star generals Patton was left out in favor of some men who are virtually unknown," Rankin declared. "We ought to have greater appreciation of his abilities."

De Gaulle May Head French At Frisco

PARIS, March 27 (AP)—Reports that Gen. de Gaulle himself would head the French delegation to the world security conference in San Francisco next month, at least for the opening session, persisted in diplomatic quarters here today. De Gaulle was quoted as saying: "I cannot tell what I will do one month from now."

A foreign office official said that Syria and Lebanon would be invited to the conference as a result of French insistence that they be represented.

SPAAF Planned As Storage Base

Reactivation of South Plains Army Air field as a reserve storage base for the Army Air forces was officially announced Tuesday. The base, located several miles northeast of Lubbock, formerly an advanced glider pilot training school, will serve as a storage depot for new airplanes until they are needed on the fighting fronts.

Lt. Col. William N. Reagan, commanding officer with four stars on his campaign ribbons, said Tuesday that employment of the first 100 civilian mechanics who will work at SPAAF began yesterday. Indications are that in the future more than 100 mechanics will be needed at the station.

Staff To Number 20

Only military personnel at SPAAF will be a staff of 20 Air Forces officers who will start arriving here within the next day or two. First airplanes, several squadrons of B-25s, were due in this afternoon.

Transferred here from the Oklahoma City Technical Air Service command where for the past year he has been assistant chief of supply, Colonel Reagan already likes Lubbock. "What is more important," he grinned, "is that Mrs. Reagan likes it, too." They are temporarily making their home at Hotel Hilton.

Colonel Reagan, in civilian life a Shreveport oil man, originally went to Louisiana from California. He is a graduate of Stanford university.

Have Three Children

The Reagans have three children, two daughters and a son. The daughters, Patricia and Kathleen, are students at University of Oklahoma, Norman; the son, 1st. Lt. W. N. Reagan, jr., is a combat intelligence officer attached to the Eighth Air Force in England.

After overseas service in the Army Air Forces in World War I, Colonel Reagan, then a captain, returned to civil life. He volunteered upon outbreak of the current war and soon was overseas. His battle stars mark engagements in Africa, Sicily and Italy. He has been on domestic duty since October of 1943.

Colonel Reagan says the new SPAAF will be one of the most important points on the Technical Air Service Command, which has its headquarters at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio. Various types of aircraft will be stored at the station until needed in action.

Peace Rumors Sweep City And They Grow With Each Telling

Erroneous reports of the surrender of Germany swept over Lubbock Tuesday morning, with many different versions of the great "event" being passed around.

Rumors, not entirely unfounded, were based on a Blue Network news flash broadcast at 10:45 over station KFYO reporting President Roosevelt had asked his cabinet to stand by for impending news on the surrender of Germany. Not too many downtown business persons heard this news cast, but within a few minutes they learned latest reports via grapevine.

One office girl, upon hearing the news, slammed up the telephone receiver and dashed back to the next desk where she breathlessly reported the President had his cabinet behind closed doors where they were waiting for the Japs to surrender! A business man explained that FDR and cabinet members were in conference, discussing what to do with Germany, now that they had surrendered.

Germans Said In Washington

High-ranking German officials had arrived in Washington to collaborate with the President on peace terms, was a waitress' conception of the news flash.

Maybe all this is a subdued reaction of VE day news. In any event, the erroneous misinterpretation by a Blue Network news commentator of President Roosevelt's request that foreign diplomats not attend the San Francisco conference caused no little excitement in Lubbock—even lifted the civilian morale, momentarily.

Oklahoma Aggies Enter Cage Finals

NEW YORK, March 27 (AP) — The Oklahoma Aggies won their first National Collegiate A. A. basketball championship tonight, defeating New York university 49 to 45, with seven-foot Bob Kurland racking up 22 points before 18,034 fans at Madison Square Garden.

The New Yorkers had no answer to Kurland's height as the red-head from the Sooner state led the Aggies' offensive, fed his mates out of the pivot and controlled just about every rebound on both boards. He dropped in 15 points in the first half and added the others in the final period as the New Yorkers made a desperate effort to pull the game out by stopping the clock with substitutions in the last four minutes.

Cecil Hankins sent the Aggies into the lead one minute after the start of the game, and from there to the final whistle it was a battle royal with Kurland the difference in the two fives. The triumph was the Aggies' second of the year over the Violets since they whipped the New Yorkers by three points on the Garden floor in December.

The lead changed hands six times in the first half and was tied at 19-19 before Kurland and Hankins led the Aggies into a 26-21 lead at the intermission. The big boy continued his scoring pace at the start of the final half but when the Violets started guarding him with two men, Hankins took up the slack to rack up 15 points.

For his great performance Kurland was voted the outstanding player of the game.

The victory qualified the Aggies to meet De Paul for the mythical National Collegiate championship in a Red Cross benefit game at the Garden Thursday night.

Girls Volleyball Has Three Way Deadlock

The girls volleyball race in the Lubbock grade schools became tighter, while the boys race began to clear the picture as the results of games played Tuesday afternoon that put the girls race into a three way tie, and a four-way deadlock very likely.

The Bean Bronchos girls team were nosed out by the Wilson Wranglers, 39-35, for their first loss of the season, to tie these two clubs. Hunt Pioneers girls team romped to a 41-15 win over Guadalupe to move into the three-way tie. Central Ward could enter the same fold with a win later this week, having but one less win than the present leaders.

The Guadalupe boys took over undisputed leadership in the boys race, winning 31-23 over the Hunt Pioneers in a five minute overtime session. Both teams were undefeated prior to this meeting. The Bean boys won the other boys game, beating Wilson, 28-21.

Amarillo Boxers On College Fight Show

LAFAYETTE, La., March 27 (AP) The boxing teams of Louisiana State university and Southwestern Louisiana Institute, both leaders in pre-war days, will clash here at 8 p. m. tomorrow in a benefit show for the Red Cross war funds of Baton Rouge and Lafayette parishes.

Ten bouts will feature the card, including:

130-pound — Arturo Acosta of San Salvador, LSU, and Bill Sikes of Amarillo, Tex., SLI.

Heavyweights—John Humble of Ouachita parish, LSU, and Boyd Reynolds of Amarillo, Tex., SLI.

Blacks, Golds Top Track Meet

With Arthur Rampy stealing the show, the Lubbock Cowhands Blacks rolled to a top scoring position in the practice track meet Tuesday afternoon at Chapman field with a total of 72 4-5 points. The Golds finished in second place with 38 1-5 points.

The only out of town team to enter the meet was Frenship, which finished third with 27 points. The fourth team in the meet was the local Junior High club, totaling 13 points.

Rampy took both high and low hurdles, the shot put, ran a leg on the winning sprint relay, got seconds in the broad jump and discus to round out a very busy afternoon.

Trennon Stroud kept the Golds in the race by taking firsts in the 100-yard dash, the 440-yard dash, and coming in with second in the 220-yard dash.

Frenship hogged the spotlight in the distance events with Kinslow taking the half mile, while Owens took the mile with Kinslow running second. Frenship also won first in the 220-yard dash, with Penkert turning in the win.

The Blacks ruled the field in the other field events, with Dick Schmidt winning the pole vault, Jack Alderson the high jump and Joe Parham the broad jump.

The Junior High team came in for it's share of the glory in the discus, with Gene Ussery heaving the plate 107 feet, 9 inches to top the field against the high schoolers.

Cardinal Hopes Get Big Boost Tuesday

ST. LOUIS, March 27. (AP)—The World Champion St. Louis Cardinals received several good shots in the arm today.

Centerfielder Johnny Hopp notified President Sam Breadon he will report and play until called for induction. Rookie Infielder John Antonelli signed his contract and began workouts and George Dockins, promising lefthanded hurler who remained out of baseball last season, phoned Breadon he intends to join the club in camp here Thursday.

BUCKY WALTERS REPORTS

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., March 27 (AP)—Cincinnati Reds' stock took a bullish turn today with the unexpected arrival of Bucky Walters, long a mainstay of their pitching staff.

BROWNS TRIM TOLEDO

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo., March 27. (AP)—Presenting what may be their opening day lineup, the St. Louis Browns defeated the Toledo Mudhens, 6 to 5, today in the first nine inning exhibition game between the two clubs.

BROOKLYN PITCHER SIGNS

BEAR MOUNTAIN, N. Y., Mar. 27. (AP)—Les Webber, Brooklyn's chief relief pitcher last season, accepted terms today and will soon report. Unsigned players now are Dixie Walker, Barney Koch and Ernest Rudolph.

Senators Faced By Lots Of Ifs

FT. BELVOIR, Va., March 27—(AP) — Washington's chances of escaping from the American League cellar hinged today on a series of "if" situations.

Reading from right to left, Manager Ossie Bluege could see sunshine ahead only under the following conditions:

1. IF rookies George Binks, Walt Chipple and Fred Vaughn could hit big league pitching.

2. IF George Case recovered completely from a shoulder operation.

3. IF Harland Clift showed he still is capable of playing third base.

4. IF George Myatt could shift to shortstop.

5. IF Roger Wolff could snap his '44 pitching slump.

The most important problem confronting Bluege was finding a wallop in the batting order to replace Outfielder Stan Spence, now in the Navy.

Binks was purchased for cash and two players after hitting .374 with the pennant-winning Milwaukee Brewers of the American Association and is slated for right field.

Chipple was drafted from Montreal where he hit .290 and showed promise in spring drills while Vaughn, troubled by a heel operation, was counted the regular second sacker on his 1944 showing at Minneapolis, from whom the Senators brought him for $15,000.

Case's problem is one of the big ones as the fleet flychaser who was dethroned as base stealing champ by George Stirnweiss after a five-year reign, still has not tested his right arm under pressure. Indications are that Case will be okay.

Clift was given the third base job when camp opened but he hasn't arrived and Hillis Layne has been making the most of his chance. Clift stayed on his farm most of last year and then made a belated and unsuccessful comeback.

Braves Stage Rally, Beat Senators, 8-3

COLLEGE PARK, Md., March 27. (AP) — A six-run rally in the eighth inning gave the Boston Braves an 8 to 3 victory over the Washington Senators here today and sent the National Leaguers one game ahead in the inter-league series.

The Senators tried out two of their Cuban pitchers, Santiago Ullrich, who held the Braves to one run in five innings, and Luis Aloma, who was the victim of the National Leaguers' winning attack in the eighth frame.

Cowhand Coaches Given Promotions For Next Season

George Philbrick and Marlin R. "Shorty" Hayhurst, Lubbock Cowhand coaches during the past season were both given promotions for next year, it was announced Tuesday night by E. J. "Pinkey" Lowrey, athletic director of Lubbock schools.

Philbrick was named Tuesday to move up to the post of assistant coach to Dixie White, named head coach last week-end, on the Westerner squad. Hayhurst, at the same time, was named as head basketball coach of Lubbock High school, to take the post held the last two years by Dixie White.

Hayhurst will continue to coach Cowhands next season in football, with Curtis Barrett moving up from Junior High school to take over the other Cowhand team. Hayhurst will also continue as head track coach.

GIANTS ROOKIES WIN

BALTIMORE, March 27 (AP) — The New York Giants continued to give rookies a workout in defeating the Curtis Bay Coast Guard Cutters 8-5 today.

The only spark of an otherwise quiet game was a home run by Ernie Lombardi over the left field fence in that inning.

Tennis Playoffs To Name Singles Entry

Tennis playoffs will start today in the singles events to name the players to wear the colors of the Lubbock Westerners in the area playoffs in April. The doubles will be played off Thursday afternoon.

Seven boys are expected to fight it out for the honors of the boys division, with Herbert Hawkins, Davis Hester, David Rowland, Vern Bradley, Fred McDonald, Phil Bennett and Jerry Thrush battling for the singles crown.

In the girls division, Juanice Bagwell and Betty Jo Tyson are sure to battle for places, with maybe Margaret Hawkins entering the field.

Yesterday afternoon Shallowater's boys doubles team of J. B. Westbrook and Kenneth Lindsey invaded the Lubbock courts to win over Herbert Hawkins and Fred McDonald, 6-3, 8-6, then defeated David Rowland and Vern Bradley, 6-3, 6-4.

In a singles match, Dayid Hester defeated Bob Galey, 6-3, 6-1, in an all-Lubbock match.

Cage Rules Makers Make Seven Changes

NEW YORK, March 27. (AP)—The National Basketball committee of the United States and Canada today made seven minor changes in the basketball playing code and referred several other proposals to committees for experimentation.

The committee, representing the National Collegiate A. A., the National High School Federation, the Y.M.C.A., and Canadian basketball governing bodies, failed, however, to find a definite solution to problems arising from abuses of the free substitution rule which it passed a year ago.

In an effort to limit delaying tactics the rule calling for the cancellation of a time-out when the team that calls time sends a substitute into the game within 30 seconds was eliminated.

Other changes included liberalizing the rule on touching the basket by the offensive team, revision of the section on delaying the game, making a definite rule on "screenings" where various interpretations of existing rules had been followed, adoption of a definite set of signals for officials, a minor change in handling the ball after a goal is cancelled because of a violation and a modification of the rule on returning the ball to the back court.

The committee voted to hold its usual meeting next year and re-elected its slate of officers, headed by Chairman James W. St. Clair of Southern Methodist university.

BUCS CATCHER REPORTS

MUNICE, Ind., March 27. (AP)—Catcher Hank Camelli arrived at the Pittsburgh Pirates' training camp from his Milford, Mass., home today—and promptly smacked out a double to knock in a run during a practice game. The Regulars squelched the Yanigans 14-4.

KICK AWAY GAME

FORT WORTH, March 27 (AP) Captializing on 13 Frog errors, the Fort Worth Army Air Field Fliers swamped TCU 19-5 in a baseball game here this afternoon. It was the second straight defeat of the season for the Frogs and the opening tilt for the Fliers.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC

Buses are overburdened as never before. A crisis is near. With more men, tires and gas going to war, present service can barely be maintained. Each day brings greater loads. When you must travel locally, let this be your creed:

1. Do Not Ride in Rush Hours, except to and from your job.
2. Have Exact Fare Ready, saves time and fuss.
3. Move Back When Driver Asks, speeds your ride.

This simple creed will work wonders.

Millions In World Need Clothes

IN 1940 and 1941 the powerful armies of Germany and Japan swept like a swarm of locusts through Europe and the Orient, devouring whatever of value lay in their path. And according to available evidence, their pillage of textiles and clothing was particularly thorough.

The output of looms and mills in occupied countries was appropriated. Many persons, especially those with garments of some value, were left only what they were wearing. The passing years have reduced the great majority of people in the Balkans, Poland, Hungary and western Russia, in France, Belgium and Holland, and in the Philippines to a uniformly threadbare state.

Relief workers tell stories of families in Belgium and France which have only one shirt among all the members of both sexes. In Yugoslavia a death notice attracts crowds of shivering people offering fantastic prices for the clothing of the deceased. In Belgrade a woman offered "ample reward" for an old patched shoe that she had lost. From his inspection tour of Leyte, Brig.-Gen. Carlos P. Romulo reported that "the greatest need is clothing."

LIBERATION of many occupied lands has not remedied this situation, but it has made large-scale assistance possible. And so, during the month of April, the people of the United States will be asked to contribute 150,000,000 pounds of used and usable clothing for the destitute men, women and children of war-ravaged countries of Europe and Asia.

The collection will be made through the United Natonal Clothing Collection, of which Henry J. Kaiser is chairman. The organization is just what the name implies—united, in that it has the sponsorship and assistance of almost every foreign relief group in this country and many of our own charitable associations; national; in that it will function in this and every other community of the nation.

The collected apparel will be distributed, without cost or discrimination, to restore health and decency and self-respect to a vast number of the world's unfortunates. The latest compilation of reports indicates that in liberated Europe alone there are 30,000,000 almost literally naked, and 125,000,000 others in urgent need of clothes, shoes and bedding. So the goal is only for minimal needs.

IN HIS letter inviting Mr. Kaiser to head the organization, President Roosevelt wrote: "I feel assured that this appeal will receive the traditional generous response of the American people."

Throughout the years, Americans have responded to emergencies affecting their own or other people in an immediate, warm-hearted way that has made their generosity truly traditional. It is incredible that they should not respond with the same generosity to help relieve the victims of history's greatest disaster.

Two Freedoms Upheld

HOWEVER tough the problems that the San Francisco conference will have to wrestle with, the American public is at least assured that its own delegates will be free to speak their minds, and that its press will be free to report what goes on. That is an assurance that makes the problems seem somewhat less frightening.

These freedoms of speech and press, vital to democracy but new to world conferences, were promised the American delegation by President Roosevelt. They reflect his apparent desire for a sort of new international deal for this country—which isn't the same as an international New Deal—that is admirable and encouraging.

One likely result of this freedom of speech and action would be to let Senator Vandenberg, a delegate, press his plan for a check and review by the conference of the decisions reached at Dumbarton Oaks and Yalta. It is difficult to see anything but merit in his plan, though it probably will be opposed.

He shouldn't find much opposition among his American colleagues, since his plan is a blow at the "perfectionism" that Mr. Roosevelt and administration congressmen have decried.

It would subject the steps already taken to general, democratic examination. It would recognize the inescapable fact that any plans will have to be amended before they work smoothly. It would help to make perfection the eventual goal rather than a preliminary requirement to the world's efforts to organize for freedom, security and peace.

The One Minute Sermon

And I say unto you my friends, Be not afraid of them that kill the body, and after that have no more that they can do.

But I will forewarn you whom ye shall fear: Fear him, which after he hath killed hath power to cast into hell; yea, I say unto you, Fear him.

Are not five sparrows sold for two farthings, and not one of them is forgotten before God?

But even the very hairs of your head are all numbered. Fear not therefore: ye are of more value than many sparrows.—St. Luke 12; 4 through 7.

Believe It Or Not --- By Robert Ripley

A Song To Remember

By Willard Wiener

THE STORY: In 1832 Poland is still under the Russian yoke, her peasants are chained to a vicious feudal system and any demonstration for freedom is immediately put down by the soldeirs of the Czar. Frederic Chopin is 22, has gained distinction as a pianist in his home village of Zelazowa Wola and some celebrity as a composer, even in Warsaw. The night he is to play at Count Wodzinski's, Frederic and Josef Elsner attend a secret meeting of revolutionaries before the event. Frederic hears about the new "hangman" governor the Czar has just sent to Poland.

X

AT COUNT WODZINSKI'S

Izabela viewed the dinner-concert at Count Wodzinski's through the pantry door. She was wearing her new dress, of course. She pushed the door open a few inches and stood on tiptoe to get a better view. She had never seen such splendor.

—It was not to be described. The dazzle actually was too much for one pair of eyes. Everything, from the great tapestries to the smallest trinket, spoke proud value.

Count Wodzinski was a cold-eyed man of middle years and middle stature. He wore a uniform. He looked shorter than his average height, almost dwarfed, as he sat stiffly in the high-backed, gold-trimmed chair at the dining table, even though he sat on a pillow. Ladies and gentlemen in the richest dress sat elbow to elbow, chattering, prating, laughing, while flunkeys in gold and lace waited on the table and a young woman at the far end of the room raised her voice in song to the accompaniment of a piano and the clattering of dishes.

Izabela said: "Oh, Mamma, how elegant!"

Mamma Chopin said: "Be careful you don't open the door too far; they won't like it, then they won't let us even stand here."

—It was exactly as Jozef Elsner had said: they were in the pantry.

Nicolas Chopin took out his watch, returned it to his pocket, looked at it again and again returned it to his pocket. He shook his head. He called his wife's attention to the hour.

"Nicolas, what can we do?"

They could not imagine what was keeping Frederic and Professor Elsner. The minutes passed. It would soon be Frederic's turn to play. Mamma Chopin tried not to think about it but she could not help herself.

The Major Domo, tall, robust, fussy and petty, with a powdered wig and clothed in velvet and satin, ornamented with gilt braid from neck to knees, came in from the corridor.

"Not here yet?"

Nicolas Chopin bowed. "I'm sorry—"

"—You're sorry?"

Nicolas Chopin smiled a fawning smile. "I can tell you nothing—"

"—You have already told me nothing." The Major Domo waved his gold-headed cane close to Papa Chopin's nose. "Maestro Paganini plays next—then your son. I say nothing more. But if you know what's good for him — he'll be ready."

Flunkeys rudely pushed Papa and Mamma Chopin aside without apologies. A dozen lackeys were constantly on parade between the pantry and the dining hall, each carrying huge platters of roasts and delicacies so arranged as to sharpen the dullest appetite.

Exquisite music, at first faint, then louder, was heard above the talk and tinkling glasses and clinking silver.

Suddenly there was a flurry of excitement, and an angry voice said: "Can't you look where you're going?"

"—Tch, tch."

Jozef Elsner, it seemed, had almost toppled a lackey staggering under a heavy tray of foodstuffs.

"Frederic! Paganini!"

"Paganini!"

—Niccolo Paganini, the most celebrated violin virtuoso in Europe.

Frederic would have flung open the door wide but for a watchful flunkey who prevented him. He put his ear to a crack.

"Beautiful?" Izabela whispered.

"Exquisite."

The Major Domo appeared from nowhere. "Well, at last!" He coughed. "Be ready, please!"

Frederci crossed the room toward the elegant piano, scarcely noticed by the diners. He seemed not to be annoyed by the chatter or the noise of shifting plates and platters, or the tinkling of glassware.

—The idea of Poland being governed by a hangman! He could not get the thought out of his head. Who next would swing from the gallows? What new unconscionable terrors would this tyrant bring? Damn the hangman! Poland would be rid of hangmen!

But once at the piano, once his fingers touched the keys he was released from this world. The notes of his own Fantasi — Impromptu began to fill the room.

Frederic was in good form. Let others hammer away. Let others delight the world with their thumping. That was not for him. He had his own way. He would be content to play, to make the piano sing not howl. There were a thousand ways to go about it. He had his own way. Tonight he had the feel. He knew exactly what to say and how to say it.

He looked up and saw to his surprise that some of those at the table had actually put down their forks to observe him.

The Impromptu was finished, the last note struck.

They applauded. Not each and every one. That would have been too much. The applause nonetheless was respectable.

But Count Wodzinski's mouth was stuffed with food as he showed his face from the side of his high-backed, gold-trimmed chair.

"Encore!" he shouted. "Encore."

Japs 'Consolidating The Total Strength'

SAN FRANCISCO, March 27 (AP)—Warning that the war situation "is becoming more and more urgent," Premier Kuniaki Koiso was quoted by the Tokyo radio today as saying the government is "consolidating the total strength" of Japan for the defense of the empire.

"The enemy's air raids against our homeland are about to be intensified," warned the premier in the FCC recorded broadcast, "and the possibility of our homeland being turned into a battleground is not unexpected . . ."

Japan's vast "People's Volunteer army" being mobilized to meet the critical war situation will include "graduates of the elementary school of the national school who are over 14 years of age, men below 60, and women younger than 45," Tokyo radio said.

(This report clarifies earlier Japanese broadcasts that all students past the first grade would be mobilized — the first grade probably meaning the elementary school).

Looking At Life - - - - - - By Erich Brandeis

WHEN the time for writing today's column arrived, I didn't have a thought in my head.

So, naturally, I got peeved and like every married man who is peeved, I started to pick on my wife.

"Pretty easy for you," I said with a sneer, "just do a little housekeeping and then you're all done."

"Is that so?" said my wife. "If you think it's so easy why don't you try it for a day? Maybe you'll see which one of us has the easier job."

I laughed. "What a joke! All right, I'll take you up on your proposal. Today I'll do the housekeeping and you write the column."

"Suits me" she said and I went into the kitchen and she into the study.

Breakfast wasn't so bad. Anybody can dish out some apple sauce, toast a few slices of bread and boil four eggs.

BRANDEIS

Dishwashing wasn't so awful, either, particularly because I had served the breakfast on paper plates.

But my wife had reminded me sweetly:

"Don't forget, dear, today is laundry day. The man will be here about noon. So the beds will have to be stripped and changed and the laundry will have to be counted, and, by the way, please vacuum the bedroom floor. I always do that on Mondays. And you'd better get to the market early. You know how quickly everything is sold out. Don't ask me what I want for dinner. I just had my breakfast, and you know how hard it is to think of food on a full stomach."

Somehow those last words had a familiar ring to them. Seems to me that's what I usually tell my wife when she asks me what I want for dinner.

Well, I went at it with a vengeance. I never knew there were so many bedsheets on two beds, nor that bedsheets are that big. I never realized how distasteful it is to handle a lot of soiled linen or how difficult it is to make these confounded laundry lists.

At any rate, I got the bundle made up. Now for the vacuum cleaner. I took it up to the bedroom and looked.

"I guess I'd better make up the dinner menu first," I said to myself and went down into the kitchen again.

'How many points for pot roast?" I hollered up to my wife.

"Please don't disturb me dear, I'm writing," she called back.

(Those words, too, seemed strangely familiar).

WELL, I stalled around some more, and after two hours of housekeeping, I went to my study, where my wife was sitting at my typewriter, deeply engrossed in writing my column.

I looked over her shoulder and read:

"qwertyuiop asdfghjkl; zxcvbnm, .

"now is the time for all good men xxxxx"

"Pretty easy, isn't it?" I asked with a smile.

"Housekeeping is easy, too, isn't it?" she replied, also with a smile.

Well, she went back to her lasts and I went back to mine.

I told you the beginning that I didn't have a thought in my head. I have now. But there's no more space to tell you what it is.

House Stirs Up Battle

Lend-Lease Funds Involved

WASHINGTON
By Ray Tucker

THE House battle over use of lend-lease funds for postwar restoration disclosed such serious opposition within the Administration and on Capitol Hill that it has frightened President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill, at least temporarily. FDR has since shown a tendency to get tougher with our Allies, while the Britisher has protested that England does not seek postbellum "charity from our American friends."

The reduction in current shipments of food to Britain was ordered immediately after House adoption of an amendment specifically barring the President from drawing on the L-L account for anything except weapons of war. Almost simultaneously came the Roosevelt-Churchill demand that Moscow explain the meaning of its intervention in Rumania, and several quiet rebukes to General Charles de Gaulle.

TUCKER

It was also on the heels of this exhibition of Congressional restlessness that Mr. Churchill exalted the spirit of private enterprise, presumably in retort to suggestions that his country may go Socialistic after the conflict. In this same speech he disclaimed any desire to become the permanent beneficiary of grants from the USA.

WARNINGS: Although they cannot offer courtroom evidence, many foreign relations experts in Congress link the lend-lease flare-up with the new behavior of the two statesmen. Congressional friends of Lord Halifax have told the British Ambassador that the empire should start soon to pay cash for all civilian supplies.

They have warned him that the American people were beginning to resent the huge exports of food, in view of home shortages. Any ill feeling now, they said, may endanger Anglo-American relations at the peace table and afterward. It is understood that he relayed these warnings direct to Churchill.

The division regarding this question among FDR's top advisers became evident at closed-door sessions of the House Affairs committee. Besides three officials who had distributed lend-lease supplies and services overseas, such prominent members of the White House family as Secretary Henry L. Stimson and Leo T, Crowley, head of the Foreign Economic administration, declared against reliance on lend-lease money and mechanism for peacetime rehabilitation of foreign countries.

LEND-LEASE: The duel began at executive meetings of the House Foreign Affairs committee, where Chairman Sol Bloom presented an administration bill for extension of the Lend-Lease act. When GOP-ers John M. Vorys of Ohio and Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota asserted that this measure made the sky the limit in the use of these billions, they were shouted down by the Democrats.

The latter, however, indicated a vague willingness to compromise by accepting a Vorys-Mundt reservation. But they would not go so far as to agree to hearings on the proposal. The two Republicans met this move by releasing a statement of their demand to the gallery reporters, and the majority capitulated before hostile headlines. It was then that Messrs. Vorys and Mundt sprang their first surprise.

They called their witnesses from the administration camp. Their star performers were: James M. Landis, Dean of Harvard Law school, who recently quit as Minister of the American Economic Mission in Cairo; Philip D. Reed, Lend-Lease administrator in London until he returned to the General Electric company; W. S. Culbertson, who liquidated lend-lease affairs in North Africa.

All three spurned the idea that the emergency war account should be tapped for postwar purposes. They advised that such deals be negotiated on a straight, businesslike basis. Their unreported testimony is too critical of certain United Nations to be made public.

But when the committee voted on the bill, the Republicans were counted out in a strict partisan lineup. Next they framed a violent minority protest and threatened to carry the fight to the floor. It was then that higherups in the Administration took alarm. At a luncheon in the Speaker's dining-room on the occasion of Chairman Bloom's seventieth birthday, Mr. Crowley was placed between the Republicans from Ohio and South Dakota.

The celebrants engaged in some good-natured joshing over this seating arrangement. "You're wrong," said Mr. Vorys. "Crowley's my friend!" The Wisconsin banker smilingly agreed. After hurried consultations with the President and Secretary Stettinius, the FEA chief okayed the Republicans' prohibitory amendment and the revised program was accepted almost unanimously by the House.

WINNING THE WAR
By Albert Leman

A DISPATCH from Europe announces that Queen Wilhelmina has paid a visit to the three liberated provinces of her homeland.

The news comes as a surprise to Dutch officials in the United States. The original plan was that she wait until the entire country should be free. But six months have passed since Allied troops gained a foothold in the Netherlands and the people are anxious to see their sovereign again.

Even now the trip was a hazardous undertaking for the elderly woman. At the start of the war the Germans attempted to land paratroops on her palace in The Hague and kidnap her. The prompt arrival of an English warship foiled them.

LEMAN

BRAVERY: Hollanders arriving in New York by plane from overseas declare that she is more popular with her subjects than before the Nazi invasion.

Then, she was considered somewhat stodgy and aloof and she wore "awful hats." Now the royal family is idolized. No small measure of this liking is due to her son-in-law, Prince Bernhard of Lippe-Biesterfeld. Though of German blood he has been a tower of strength to his adopted country.

The stolid burghers are intrigued by his lively manner. He dashes around in a jeep. When correspondents interviewed him the other day, he perched nonchalantly on the edge of a table, swinging his legs and swapping jokes with the reporters. The House of Orange never unbent like that in the old days of pomp and ceremony.

But a democratic attitude alone would not have captured the public's fancy were he not a brave leader. When the Nazis broke into the Netherlands in 1940, Prince Bernard was on the Dutch front line, personally firing a machine gun for four days without rest until his unit retreated. Later he headed the official underground movement, one of the best-organized of all resistance groups on the Continent.

SUFFERING: The people in both the liberated and occupied sections of Holland live in agony—freedom is so near and yet so far.

A distinguished professor said to the writer, "I could look across the fields and see the spires of a church that stands opposite my home. Members of my family were there—only a couple of miles from where I stood.

"Yet I did not know whether or not they were alive or what new suffering was theirs. Just by accident I was in the town when our troops swept in. I could neither go to my loved ones nor take them with me. Tragic experiences like mine are known all through the border provinces."

The Dutch have had to endure more than their share of separations. In proportion to their population, an unusually large number of their countrymen are also cut off in the Jap-held East Indies.

No many years will have elapsed before munitions manufacturers again will be referred to as "merchants of death." (Wanna bet?)

Supplies Reach Front In 36 Hours Now . . .

Railway Battalion Does Great Job

By THOMAS L. STOKES
Special Correspondent

DEAUVILLE, France—A special train service for high priority supplies for the armies at the front operates now from Cherbourg, with a 36-hour schedule from shipside to front-line depots.

It is a through train for the front in France and Belgium, via Paris. It hauls freight cars, each carrying up to 20 tons of vital items. It must be unloaded within 12 hours. At Cherbourg it is loaded directly from Liberty and Victory ships, without the intermediate steps of unloading of the docks and then reloading on the train, as formerly.

STOKES

This train is operated by the 728th railway battalion, commanded by an experienced railroad man, Col. Carl D. Love of Louisville, Ky.

This is what might be called a de luxe train of its kind. But railroading in the Normandy area was not always de luxe, far from it. In the battle for this area the railroads were bombed, tangled, and twisted. Rolling stock was destroyed.

Trains Had To Move

The military railway service, commanded by Brig. Gen. Clarence L. Burpee of Jacksonville, Fla., plunged headlong into the job. It meant not only repairing tracks, yards and telephone lines, but rebuilding bridges, signal houses, railway stations, and the like.

But while all this was going on, the trains had to move. They did move—but how. Perhaps every American boy is born with the ambition to be a railroad engineer—at least those of my generation were. Some of them had a chance over here in those days for the invasion. Some day somebody may write a companion piece to "Casey Jones" about the GI at the throttle, the GI who may have been a curtain salesman, as one of them had been, or a soda jerker, or an amusement park ticket-taker. The five-man crew got a handful of K rations, jumped on the train, and away they went, knowing vaguely which way they were headed, but not knowing exactly how to stop. It was sort of a case of: "Coming—ready or not."

THERE was one crew which started for one place and landed somewhere else, quite an adventure. The amateur engineers drove ahead through blackouts, into midnight blackness, with no organized signal system. They plunged headlong into tunnels, not knowing whether they had been mined. They drove with head stuck out of the cab, with a prayer. A sharp lookout was necessary, for sometimes the track ended suddenly, and sometimes the bridge that was supposed to be there was not. Cigarettes, burning pieces of newspaper were makeshift signals.

Occasionally they were bombed. Their orders were to get through and they got through, somehow. They ehopped up broken crossties for fuel, or they stopped and scoured the countryside for wood, or hauled furniture from bombed-out houses along the way. For water, they worked many angles, getting it sometimes from local fire departments, sometimes from creeks, sometimes by shell craters, sometimes by organizing bucket brigades among French farmers to bring it from a lake or stream.

Some Lives Lost

Some lives were lost in collisions, and there were some bad ones. Once a train carrying high octane gas bumped headlong into another, with an earth-shattering explosion that rocked the whole countryside, in a jam that developed between Rambouillet and Maintenon. It was hit-and-miss railroading. A respectable engineer would never have permitted it.

THERE'S another epic of the boys at the wheel—the truck drivers. Trucks are not used out of the ports any more on anywhere near the scale of those early days, now that the railroads are in order and pipelines are available for carrying gasoline But they were the sole reliance for a time.

To follow the armies, they improvised the famous Red Ball highway out of Normandy. Eventually it stretched 500 miles, going and coming, with one-way traffic each way, carrying at its peak nearly 8000 tons of supplies, mostly wood and gasoline, from Normandy alone. It was dangerous work with the gasoline, as at Coutances, for instance, where a convoy of 13 two-thousand gallon trucks had to go through a flaming town to get gas to General Patton.

They made that flaming highway without a miss, a miracle.

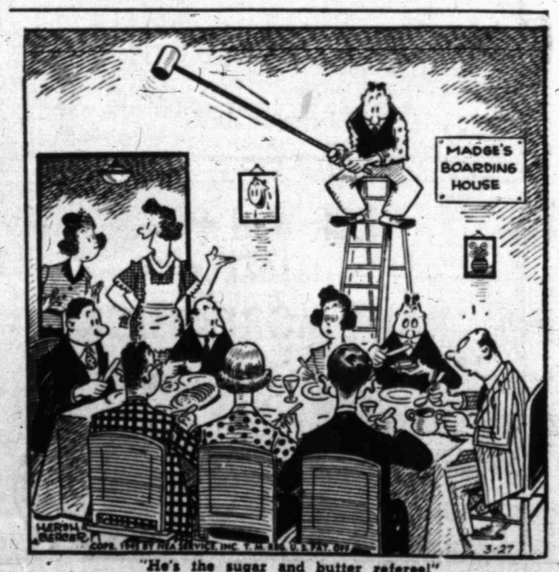

Their schedule called for 22 out of 24 hours operation, with only two hours for maintenance. One driver would sleep while the other was at the wheel, though often one driver would carry the cargo through.

The Red Ball highway ended its glorious career in mid-November last year. It it littered with the legend of unsung heroes, more than half of them negroes.

Gunner Says He Flew Missions In Cannon

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., March 27 (AP)—When friends ask S/Sgt. Ross C. Byles, 33, of Natchitoches, La., what he did overseas, he answers: "I flew 44 missions in a cannon with a plane mounted on it." Here for reassignment, he formerly served as a gunner aboard a B-25 Mitchell that had a 75mm cannon mounted in its nose.

STOCKS RALLY MODESTLY

NEW YORK, March 27 (AP) — Leading stocks enjoyed a modest rally in today's market after two of their worse sessions of the month.

The Associated Press 60-stock average was up .3 of a point at 59.3 following the Saturday-Monday reaction of 1.5 points. Of 953 issues registering, 474 were gains, 291 losers and 198 unchanged.

Western Pacific common and preferred jumped 1⅞ and 1, respectively, when directors voted four dividends on each stock.

Ahead were Santa Fe, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, Grumman Aircraft, American Can, Standard Oil (NJ), Eastern Air Lines and Goodyear. On the offside were Du Pont, Dow Chemical, United Aircraft and U. S. Gypsum.

Bonds steadied.

Forward curb leaners included Baldwin Locomotive warrants, Cities Service, Transwestern Oil and St. Regis Paper. Turnover here was 330,000 shares versus 390,000 yesterday.

NEW YORK FUTURES

NEW YORK, March 27 (AP)—The cotton futures market fluctuated nervously over a narrow range today as traders followed the good war news closely. Closing prices were 30 cents a bale lower to 15 cents higher.

Early losses of 35 cents a bale were registered on commission house liquidation. Following a modest rally, values again eased off towards the close.

There was moderate replacement buying in the new crop months selling at a discount of close to one cent a pound compared with spot May.

Futures closed 30 cents a bale lower to 15 cents higher.

Fire Destroys Mill And Stacked Feed

Fire destroyed a feed mill and a large amount of stacked feed Tuesday afternoon in 2600-block Ave. H and put more than 100 telephones out of order when it melted a telephone cable.

The sheet-iron building was falling in when fire fighting equipment arrived, according to Twitty. The blaze spread to each of more than a half-dozen stacks of bundle feed, doing heavy damage.

The fire apparently originated in milling equipment, the fire chief said.

Firemen also extinguished trash fires in two city garbage trucks, in 2400-block Seventh and at Tenth and Ave. V. Slight damage was reported in each case.

Russian Advances

swept up more than 200 cities, towns and hamlets.

Advancing eight miles northwest of captured Lovaszpatona, the Russians took Tet, 23½ miles from the Austrian border and less than 61 miles from Vienna's city limits. To the west, Kisber fell, further severing the southern communications of the outflanked Danube river bastion of Komarom (Komarno) and the vital communications hub of Gyor. With the capture of Acs, six miles southwest of Komarom and 16 miles northeast of Gyor, the Russians threatened the Nazi forces in both those defensive centers barring the Danube valley invasion route to Bratislava and Vienna.

By enemy account the First White Russian Army was pouring a "ceaseless stream" of men across the Oder, widening its offensive front in Berlin's forefield. The Russians were shelling a 40-mile stretch of this front northward from Frankfurt and had pushed into Nazi defenses at Genschmar, six miles northwest of captured Kuestrin and 34 miles from the Reich's imperiled capital, Berlin said. The Germans previously had placed the Russians 31 miles east of Berlin at Golzow, four miles south of Genschmar.

At Lower Raba River

According to the German communique the Third Ukraine Army has reached the lower Raba river which runs within 20 to 23 miles of the Austrian border and 60 to 65 miles of Vienna.

The point where the Russians reached the river was not disclosed.

A Berlin military spokesman said the Russian drive in Hungary "has assumed the proportions of a great offensive," and added: "The beginning of this battle, which looks promising for the Russians, has distinctly made Hungary a new center of gravity on the Eastern front.

Entire Western Front Aflame

still lay ahead.

The latest advances by the U. S. First Army put Lt. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges troops less than 250 miles from a junction with the Russian forces of the east, a junction that would blast all hope of organized resistance in southern Germany.

Hodges had at least five separate armored columns on the loose.

One of these columns, the Ninth Armored division, crossed the Lahn river at fallen Limburg and sped 20 miles down a super highway to within 12 miles of Frankfurt-On-The-Main, Germany's ninth largest city, which was being hammered by the Third Army.

Sixth Armored division infantry charged into the heart of Frankfurt after seizing a damaged railroad bridge in the face of blistering mortar and machinegun fire. Fighting also raged across the river Main in Hanau, 10 miles east of Frankfurt. The Third Army now controlled 30 miles of the Main's south bank from Mainz to Hanau.

Germans Are Sacked

Westward, the U. S. First and Third armies joined forces beyond the Rhine after the First Army captured Ehrenbreitstein, opposite Coblenz. The Germans in front of these two forces were being caught in a sack 45 miles long by the converging Americans at Frankfurt.

The British breakthrough came in an area northeast of where armor earlier in the day passed through the lines of infantry that had captured Bruenen, six miles northeast of Wesel.

As enemy resistance sagged all along Field Marshal Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's front, the U. S. Ninth Army deepened its Ruhr positions to 14 miles and was within two miles of the communications center of Dorsten, due north of the great arsenals of Essen.

Nazis Are "Surprised"

The official German news agency admitted that the Rhine front had been "thoroughly shaken" and described Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's deep smash as "a surprising turn of developments."

Another account said the First Army attack "has assumed such speed" that it was apparent the Americans intended "to go on non-stop until such moment when a new defense line or supply difficulties will call a halt to their tank spearheads."

Another enemy broadcast said the Allied smash had strained the German front forces "to the very limit of their endurance."

Menace Nuernberg

(A Blue network broadcast from Paris said Allied fighter pilots reported Third Army tanks were menacing Nuernberg, nearly 100 miles beyond the point where Lt. George S. Patton's forces were officially placed. Nuernberg was the site of the annual Nazi party congress).

A powerful armored column of the First Army swept another 22 miles northeast from the ancient city of Limburg, which was entered in Monday's sensational splurge, and was reported within two miles of Wetzlar, some 30 miles almost due north of Frankfurt.

Southeast Of Limburg

Another tank force spilled down a super military highway southeast from Limburg to within a dozen miles of a junction with Third Army forces fighting in Frankfurt. Wetzlar is approximately 235 airline miles from Berlin.

Lt. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges' roaring First Army tank forces registered gains as high as 27 miles during the day, maintaining constant pressure on the frantic and disorganized enemy. During Monday night Hodges' infantry first crossed a hastily-built bridge over the Lahr river at Limburg, and with the dawn his tanks began tearing along the superhighway toward Frankfurt.

First and Third Army troops were disclosed already to have linked up four miles south of Coblenz, far behind the plunging spearheads.

The advances were so swift that officers at American headquarters could only shake their heads and point vaguely to the east and say "they're somewhere out there."

Prisoners Stream Back

Thousands of prisoners overrun by First and Third armored columns streamed to the area, sometimes without a single guard. Bridges and roads to the east were jammed with supplies pouring in behind the rampaging armor and motorized infantry. The identities of the powerful armored divisions leading the breakthrough were concealed temporarily.

Only the American Ninth Army still was meeting stiff resistance as it fought savagely into the Ruhr east of Wesel. After being held for 15 hours, Lt. Gen. William H. Simpson's 30th division drove eastward two miles within two miles of Dorsten, which is 16 miles east of the Rhine at Wesel. The 79th division took Holton, at the edge of the Ruhr near Sterkrade, seven miles northwest of Essen.

British airbrone troops pushed to the outskirts of Brunen, five miles northeast of Wesel, while the American 17th Airborne smashed three miles to Grudenburg, six miles east of Wesel, and linked up firmly with the Ninth Army's 30th division.

British Second Loose

North of Brunen, British Second Army forces were reported smashing eastward almost unopposed, with censorship hiding their exact movements.

Lt. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's U. S. Seventh Army climaxed its long drive northward from the Mediterranean by making two crossings of the Rhine early Monday in the area north of Mannheim, it was disclosed. A firm bridgehead some 19 miles wide by four deep had been secured by noon Monday and six towns on the east bank had been cleared of Nazis.

There was no indication of the direction Patch's drive would take from the Rhine. At the northern end of the bridgehead Seventh Army troops held half the town of Gernsheim at last report. Lampertheim and Burstadt in the area across the river from Worms also were partly in American hands. Sandhofen, a mile north of Mannheim, was seized soon after Patch's troops crossed in rubber boats and amphibious vehicles.

Seizure Of Bridge

A field dispatch said that sheer guts and the brilliant leadership of Lt. Col. Embry Lagrew of Lexington, Ky., enabled doughboys of Patton's Sixth Armored infantry to seize the damaged rail bridge of Frankfurt and come to grips with Nazi troops holding the main city east of the river.

The structure was raked by deadly fire from entrenched enemy troops on the east bank, but Lagrew's men dashed across and gained a foothold and then stuck it out through a fierce artillery barrage until they were reinforced.

An aide of Propaganda Minister Goebbels told the German people that this was a week of highest decision and that it was futile to "look for a miracle from the outside."

Economic Center Of World Said Shifting To North America

The economic center of the world is shifting from the British Isles to North America and Canada is becoming the economic power of the Empire, second only to the United States, Hawthorne Daniel, author and lecturer, of New York City, declared in a talk to the Lubbock Knife and Fork club Tuesday night in the Hilton hotel.

Tracing the rise of the industrial revolution since its inception in 1781 and citing its influence on Great Britain, Germany and the United States, Daniel declared the present world conflict, a second act of World War I, is completing transfer of making the U. S. the greatest economic power in history.

Canada's Expansion

Canada's expansion is the most astonishing economic development in modern history and in time its trade, now leading the world along with Belgium in per capita, will surpass that of the mother country, he declared.

Few realized, even business men, that Canada was already a better customer for the U. S. than all of Latin-America before the war, he pointed out. Few people know that Canadian population has increased 60 per cent while the U. S. gained eight per cent and the population of the British Isles has remained static.

Russia And China

He also predicted that the industrial revolution in time may envelop the peoples of Russian and China and the time may come when we in America will have to pass on our economic leadership to these peoples as Britain has done to us.

The speaker was introduced by Mayor O. W. Ribble. President Durwood Bradley announced nominations for four new directors as follows: Mrs. O. L. Bird, S. L. Forrest, J. C. Reynolds, Dr. A. P. Barsh, Dr. R. C. Goodwin, Dr. W. M. Whyburn, Ruel Martin and Mrs. M. C. Overton.

Pacific Battles

southwest of the metropolis of 150,000 population.

Fleet Adm. Chester W. Nimitz' communique made no mention of an invasion of the Ryukyus, as claimed by the Japanese. He said carrier planes and warships continued their attacks on enemy forces, defense installations and coastal positions in the Ryukyus while naval search planes bombed shipping off Hachijo island, 150 miles south of Tokyo.

A Japanese imperial communique claimed that American forces landed on the Kerama islands, 15 miles west of Okinawa in the Ryukyus, last Sunday. It pictured Nippon ground forces as attacking furiously against the Yanks. It also claimed, without American confirmation, that five large U. S. warships were sunk, five seriously damaged and 154 planes shot down in the Ryukyus region.

The Japanese Domei agency was first to report the Yank landing on Cebu, in the central Philippines between American-held Leyte and Nippon-held Negros islands.

On Luzon Fronts

On Luzon fronts in the Philippines American doughboys further improved their positions. Opposition was stiff in the Balete pass region, gateway to the rich Cagayan district and again raided Formosa.

Navy, Army and Marine planes of the central Pacific command bombed Chichi, Marcus, Yap, Truk and Wake islands as well as the Palaus and the Marshalls.

The 20th U. S. Air force reported that "good to excellent" bombing results marked the Tuesday (Tokyo time) Superfortress raid on Japan's Kyushu island. Opposition was slight and none of the big planes was lost.

The large B-29 attacking force—possibly more than 200—hit the Omura aircraft plant and the big air depots at Tachiarai and Oita.

into Bavaria had made it impossible to tell where the front was.

Nazis In Conference

The anti-Nazi free German press service, which professes to have a direct pipeline to reliable informants in the Reich, said in Stockholm that Hitler conferred with closest party leaders at Berchtesgaden Sunday and that a further meeting was set for today at which "great decisions" could be expected.

Even while admitting the Germans were being hurled back on virtually the entire front, a German DNB military commentator warned the home front that Gen. Eisenhower still had not thrown in all of his forces and hinted at the possibility of further airborne operations.

Capital Group Here For Night

Two Republican Congressmen from Oregon and a group of U. S. Army Air corps officers and a Royal Air force air commodore stopped overnight in Lubbock en route to the west coast on an undisclosed mission.

They were: Cong. Lowell Stockman of the Second Oregon district, Cong. Harris Ellsworth of the Fourth Oregon district, Air Commodore Albert Frank Lang of the Royal Air force delegation in Washington, D. C., Lt. Col. Earl R. Thomas of the 4151st base unit of Red Bank, N. J., First Lt. F. B. DuBridge of Watson laboratories, Red Bank; Capt. James W. LaSalle and Capt. Leonard J. Yager, both of the Army Air base at Ft. Dix, N. J., and Maj. Marvin L. Hunt, headquarters Army Air forces, Washington, D. C.

Others Join Dinner

With them at dinner were Lt. Col. William N. Reagan, commanding officer of South Plains Army Air field, and M. D. Fanning of the chamber of commerce.

Congressman Stockman, 6 feet 6 inches and 260 pounds before he downed a steak the size of a catcher's mitt, referred newsmen to Colonel Thomas as "spokesman."

Colonel Thomas grinned and authorized the statement that the party was in Lubbock. And that was just about all.

Congressman Ellsworth, owner of the Rosebud, Ore., News Review and radio station KRNR, a pianist and a singer, matched the wheat-growing Representative Stockman.

"Colonel Thomas is spokesman."

Colonel Thomas had another grin ready.

Flew From Capital

"We flew here from Washington today, in a C-47. Stopped at Nashville for an hour's lunch. And now . . ."

You gathered the Colonel is a fighting man—even Air Commodore Lang and his restrained British sense of humor probably would tell you Colonel Thomas was more than deficient as a "spokesman."

The air commodore, incidentally, was a subject Colonel Thomas would discuss. The British officer (his rank is equivalent to a brigadier general in this country) has served with the Royal Air force 30 years; fought the Germans in World war I in an artillery observation plane and later in flying boats; has commanded through all stages, through squadrons, flights and stations; commanded a squadron of the first four-engine bombers that flew from England to Singapore and, despite his denial of it, is one of the more decorated officers in the RAF.

Both Laud Mahon

Both congressmen were "on the record" in praise of Cong. George Mahon of the 19th congressional district of Texas.

"George Mahon is one of the best liked and hardest working men in Congress," Cong. Stockman said. "He's the representative for you, all right, and I don't see how you could get along without him. He works all the time, apparently. More like him are needed. And that's a lot for a Republican to say about a Democrat."

Questions anent prosecution of the war effort brought deft parries and a collective smile.

"We've been flying all day and haven't heard anything," Colonel Thomas said.

No Inside Information

Congressman Ellsworth, a huge fellow himself but dwarfed by Stockman, kept the question from going back to committee.

"When we left Washington, Capitol Hill was surcharged with expectancy," he said. "We don't have any inside information on this war—no more than you. I can tell you that as another newspaperman. There is elation in the capital, of course, but it is no secret that news of victory in Europe will cause an immediate about-face to the Japanese war still confronting us."

The flight will be continued today.

Germans Whipped

reaching the Siegfried line last autumn, the Allies had their alternatives: to attempt to break through and cross the Rhine at a given point by a concentration of power, or to defeat the German army west of the Rhine.

The Supreme commander said he and many others favored the latter on the grounds that, with any sizeable German force left west of the Rhine, there always was the danger of disastrous counterattacks.

Asked whether the Germans now might not fall back on the west, preferring occupation by the Western powers to Russia, the general replied:

"I don't know who the Germans consider their worst enemy."

General Instructions

The general said all units had been instructed to seize any opportunity that came their way of getting across the Rhine, either by grabbing a bridge or using boats. The lucky seizure of the Ludendorff bridge at Remagen paid big dividends.

Price Hike For Pork Approved

WASHINGITON, March 27 (AP) The OPA today authorized the Army and Navy to pay higher prices for a number of pork items. —OPA said the action, effective immediately, was taken to enable the services "to get their share of meat for the soldiers and sailors and other members of the armed forces."

It will have no effect on retail prices for the general public.

The increases range from 25 cents to $1.50 per 100 pounds for the pork items specified.

The action follows complaints of some packers before the Senate Banking committee that pork ceiling prices on sales to government agencies prevented a profit.

Specific Increases

The increases:

Dressed hogs, 50 cents a hundred pounds, cured wiltshires, 75 cents a hundred; scaled wiltshires (frozen in sacks), 50 cents a hundred; overseas and export hams (long cure), and overseas bacon, $1 a hundred; pure pork sausage, $1.50 a hundred; and addition of 25 cents a hundred pounds for freezer shrinkage on sales of fresh or green wholesale pork cuts, including scalded wiltshires (frozen in sacks) sold frozen at frozen weights to war procurement agencies and to licensed ships suppliers and ship operators; and addition of 25 cents a hundred pounds for freezure shrinkage on sales of fresh or frozen dressed hogs sold frozen at frozen weights to war procurement agencies.

Blitzkreig War Turns On Stunned Nazis, Total Early Collapse Seen

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press War Analyst

Blitzkreig warfare is striking into the heart of stunned Germany from the west at a pace that foreshadows total and perhaps early enemy military collapse from the Alps to the North Sea.

Only in the north, where Field Marshal Montgomery's American-British-Canadian armies were bucking their way toward a decisive breakout, and in a Rhine gorge salient between the Main and the Lahn rivers caught in a two-Army American squeeze is there evidence of organized resistance.

SIMPSON

Elsewhere American tank columns are still running wild. As this was written advices placed American First and Third Ar y elements close to a junction north of Frankfurt that would turn the Main-Lahn salient into a death trap for the foe. Their meeting would weld the initial First and Third Army bridgeheads over the Rhine into a single vast eastward bulge already lapping at the great central plain of Germany.

Seventh Expands Base

Seventh Army comrades to the south are busy expanding their base line in Rhine crossings below Mannheim. They gained an east bank foothold 20 miles wide and four miles deep in the first surprise surge.

Back in Paris from a personal inspection of the roaring, fast-moving Allied attack front beyond the Rhine, General Eisenhower termed the German Army in the west whipped as a military force. Yet he warned that there was bitter fighting yet to do and that a front might be formed at some point where our maintenance is stretched to the limit.

It seemed clear that the supreme commander was taking no chances that his swift passage of the central Rhine and prompt and deep penetrations into inner Germany on the First and Third Army fronts should be risked by too narrow a base.

Right Flank of Third

Whilz there is some indication that the Seventh Army has also pushed across the river near the Karlsruhe corner, its only announced east-bank foothold below Mannheim is on the immediate right flant of the Third Army. It represents a 20-mile expension of the base of the developing major cross-Rhine bulge of the Allied victory drive that reaches from the Cologne area to Mannheim.

Once it is consolidated that vast bulge would be utterly beyond German hope of containing it.

Field reports from Marshal Montgomery's headquarters speak of impending breakouts into the Westphalian plain that would set tank columns thundering eastward there on the direct route to Berlin as well as in the south.

Tire Eligibles Are Listed In Groups

The Office of Price administration has prepared a preferential list of occupations for use in selecting persons to receive passenger car tires, the Lubbock district OPA announced Tuesday. The list was prepared in cooperation with the War Manpower commission and will be used in channeling the reduced quota of tires to persons whose transportation needs are regarded as most essential to the war effort.

Under the new plan the number of eligibles is not reduced but classified into four preference groups for the aid of local War Price and Rationing boards in issuing tire certificates.

Establishment of priority groups is necessary because allocations by the Rubber bureau of the War Production board amounted to only 1,000,000 passenger tires to civilians in the nation for the month of April, OPA said. This is less than 65 per cent of the 1,600,000 March quota and marks the first time since last May that the monthly quota has fallen below 1,500,000.

OPA added that, in accordance with regular tire eligibility standards, each individual tire applicant must establish his need for a tire even though he is rated in a high preference group.
