FERC favors decontrol

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission voted unanimously in principle Thursday to free all natural gas from price controls but stumbled over a key requirement for interstate pipelines.

The four-member commission told its staff to redraft provisions that would govern when pipelines must transport gas liberated from old price-controlled contracts.

The commissioners said they wanted a requirement on pipelines to transport such gas only for other pipelines, or the pipelines' own so-called "firm" customers.

The "firm" customer is one whose supply cannot be interrupted. Most local distribution utilities are firm customers; most non-utility industrial customers served directly by pipelines are not.

It was not immediately clear how long the redrafting would take.

The commission was acting on a request of Energy Secretary John Herrington to declare an above-market price a "just and reasonable" ceiling for all currently controlled "old" gas. This would be, in effect, a removal of price controls. Herrington has said the typical residential customer could save $45 a heating season through increased competition by well owners seeking markets for their gas, and the economy could benefit by $16 billion to $24 billion from bringing new supplies to market at lower prices.

Gas developed after 1978, so-called "new" gas, was freed from controls in 1985. Since then, contrary to many predictions, gas prices have declined.

Pre-1978 gas comes in 13 price categories or "vintages," ranging from $2.56 per thousand cubic feet for 1974-1978 gas down to 31 cents for the very oldest. Herrington's proposal would simply classify all pre-1978 gas in the $2.56 category, changing in step with inflation.

Current spot market prices for gas on the Gulf Coast are as low as $1.30 per thousand cubic feet.

The Justice Department told the commission it had ample authority to accept Herrington's proposal despite 32 years of setting prices according to costs.

Heavy rains both blessing, curse

From Staff Reports

Rain, which falls on the just and unjust, was a welcomed and needed sight to farmers and ranchers in the wake of a seven-month dry spell.

For many Midlanders, however, the heavy rains which fell Thursday night and early this morning meant flooded streets and basements and several stalled vehicles.

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal reported Midland officially received 2.54 inches of rain since Thursday with more expected today and tonight.

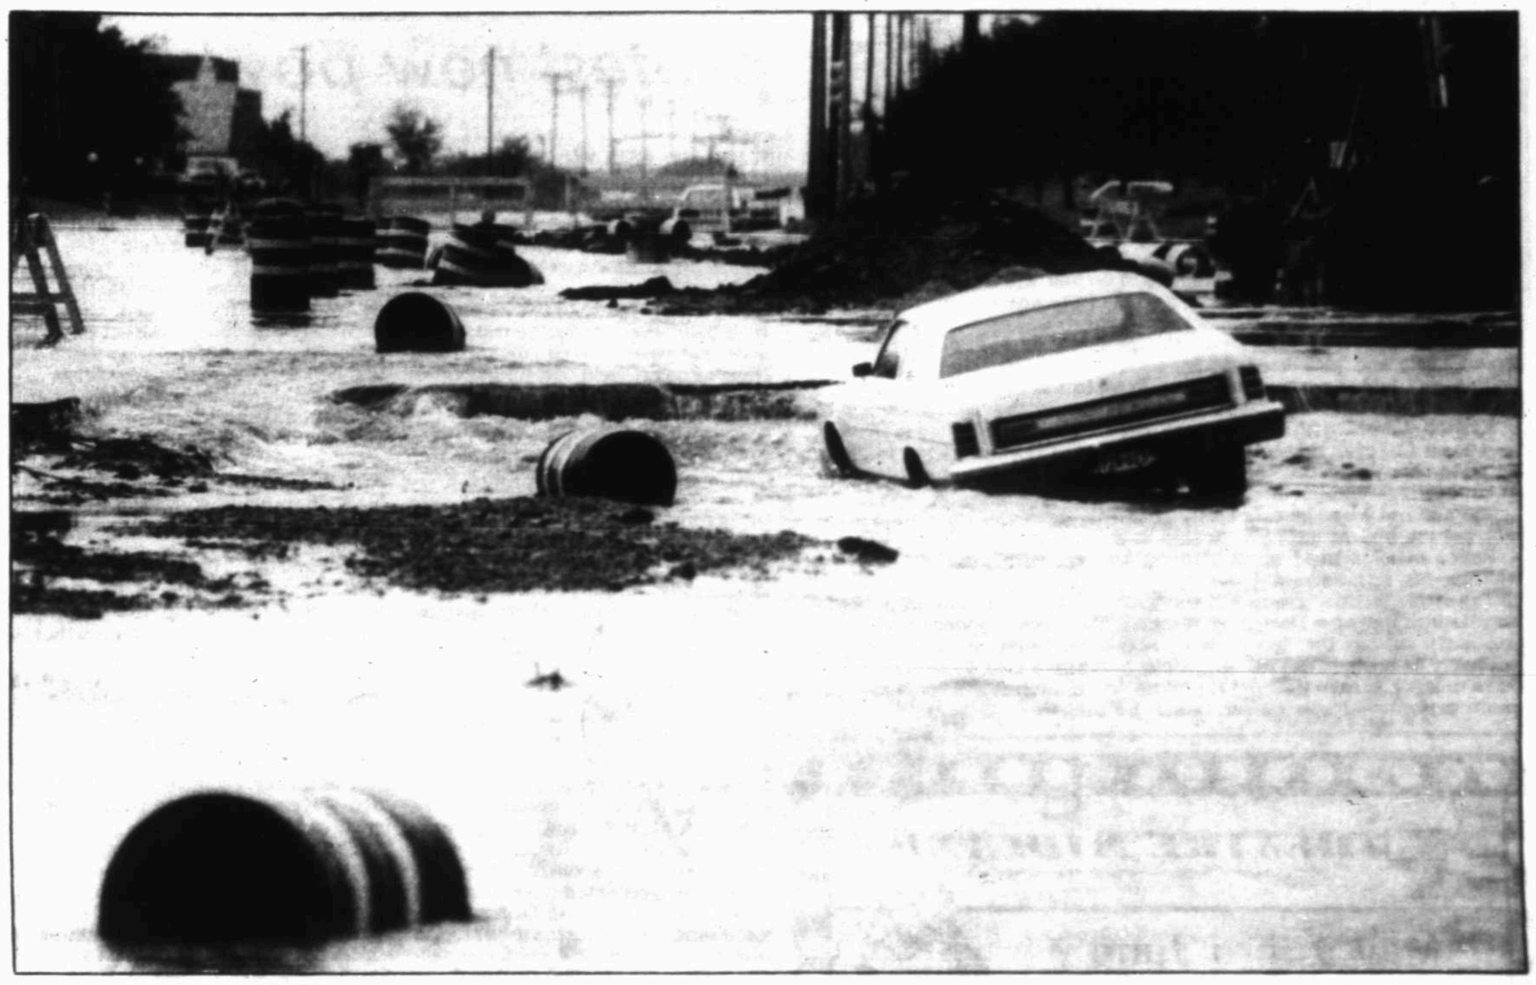

Elsewhere, residents reported as much 5¾ inches of rain fell in northwest Midland, 4¾ inches in the central part of the city and up to 5 inches in rural areas including Greenwood.

Forecasters said the precipitation resulted after a cool front moved through the Permian Basin late Thursday afternoon. An upper-level disturbance across northern New Mexico and southern Colorado combined with a subtropical jet stream located in the Big Bend area to pump in the moisture.

A flash flood warning was in effect until 11 a.m. for the Midland-Odessa area and a flash flood watch will continue through tonight as rain clouds are expected to redevelop later this afternoon.

A Midland Independent School District spokeswoman said many children arrived late for the last day of school because school buses were unable to travel in rural areas or through the flooded city streets.

Mattox sues DOE over waste site proposal

By GARY RASP
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Claiming the selection of a Panhandle site as a potential location for a high-level nuclear waste dump was politically motivated, Attorney General Jim Mattox Thursday filed suit against the U.S. Department of Energy.

Mattox filed the suit in the U.S. District Court of Appeals in the District of Columbia Thursday morning. The lawsuit claims DOE officials made up their minds to select a portion of Deaf Smith County as one of three candidates for the dump before they formally made the decision.

The energy department notified officials in Texas, Nevada and Washington Wednesday that sites in those states will be considered for the nation's first high-level nuclear waste repository. Sites in several other states were stricken from the running by Wednesday's announcement, a decision Mattox says was prompted by political motives.

The lawsuit claims that DOE depended upon flawed guidelines to choose the Texas location as a "finalist" in the site selection process. The suit urges the court to prohibit the energy department from continuing with that process until it develops new guidelines.

"From our perspective, they've been going through a charade because they've already made up their minds," Mattox said, adding that the department's guidelines for nominating the three sites were "seriously deficient, and that Wednesday's decision did not give sufficient attention to the Panhandle's agricultural economy and two aquifers in the area.

"And to make things worse," he said, "DOE has even misused those already-deficient guidelines."

Mattox said DOE's decision to halt action on the selection of a second waste repository reeked of politics.

"When the federal government can pull back from a second dump in the East it means to us they've got enough time to start this process over and look for the best site in the nation," he said.

Wednesday's decision paves the way for DOE will soon begin extensive geologic and hydrologic tests in each of the three nominated areas. Those tests, which involve the drilling of thousand-feet-deep shafts, will cost the department about $1 billion each Thursday, Mattox said he is fearful that once the government spends that much money on the sites, they will be reluctant to back away from their decision.

"We are concerned that once the feds spend that kind of money, they will be even less inclined to admit their mistakes and go back and do this right," the attorney general said.

Mattox had filed a similar suit against DOE, but the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals declined to hear the case because the nomination of three potential sites had been official. Now, Mattox says, his office can open fire on the department.

Californian held in tampering scheme

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 24-year-old man is accused of spiking cold, allergy and diet capsules with rat poison in an alleged scheme to make money on the stock market, the FBI said today.

Edward Arlen Marks of Temple City, Calif., became the first person charged with tampering in any of the spate of U.S. drug-tainting cases that have claimed at least nine lives since 1982. No one was injured as a result of the rat poison case.

Marks was scheduled to be arraigned before a U.S. magistrate in Los Angeles today on one count of tampering with consumer products, FBI spokesman Jim Neilson said.

Neilson said Marks was arrested in connection with 10 Contac, Dietac and Teldrin capsules containing rat poison that were found in Orlando, Fla., and Houston, Texas, on March 19 and 20. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration said the poison, a blood-thinner called warfarin, was sufficient to sicken, but not kill, anyone who took it.

The FBI is investigating a possible connection between Marks and other drug-tampering cases, officials said.

Marks was arrested in a parking lot at Los Angeles International Airport on Thursday, Neilson said. He had just returned from Boston, the spokesman said, but he declined to say what agents believe Marks was doing in that city.

On May 24, a U.S. magistrate in Orlando, Fla., issued an arrest warrant for Marks based on a complaint filed by the FBI, Neilson said.

According to Neilson, the affidavit alleges that a fingerprint taken from a tampered product in Orlando matched Marks' fingerprints. The spokesman declined to say why Marks' fingerprints were on file.

FBI spokesman Fred Reagan refused to comment on whether Marks had a previous arrest record, saying to do so would be prejudicial.

An unidentified agent claimed in the affidavit that Marks, using the name "Gary," called several news agencies and the manufacturer of the capsules, SmithKline Beckman Corp., from March 19 through 21.

In the telephone calls, the man identifying himself as Gary said he had poisoned capsules in St. Louis, Chicago and Orlando in what Neilson called a plot to force the manufacturer to withdraw its products from the market.

The tainted capsules found in Orlando had been scheduled to be shipped outside the state, primarily to California, Arizona, Utah, Colorado and Arkansas, he said.

Neilson said Marks bought special options on the stock of the products' manufacturer that would pay him if the stock dropped in value. Marks allegedly purchased 298 SmithKline options on March 18 and an additional 62 on March 19.

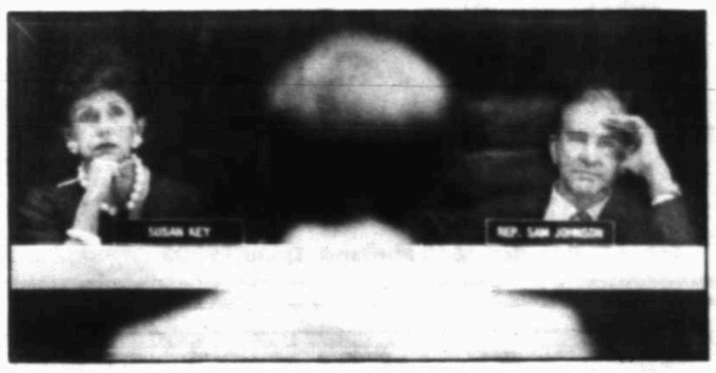

The discovery of the tampering prompted an $8 million recall by Philadelphia-based SmithKline, and a $900,000 reward was offered by the Proprietary Association, a group of drug manufacturers.

After the reward was posted, a caller telephoned Philadelphia television station WCAU and said: "This is Gary. Your $900,000 isn't enough. I'll take more." WCAU spokesman Martin Blair said at the time it was unclear if the caller was the same Gary who telephoned SmithKline.

Henry Wendt, president and chief executive officer of SmithKline, said today: "Obviously, we followed the matter closely and are deeply appreciative of the effort that has gone into the investigation."

Company spokesman Jeremy Heymesveld said Dietac will not be reintroduced, but Contac and Teldrin will be brought back in time for cold season. Both will be in an improved capsule with tamper-resistant features, with Contac also offered in a "caplet" and Teldrin offered in a tablet.

If convicted of tampering with consumer products, Marks would face a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison and a $50,000 fine, Neilson said. The maximum sentence would be 20 years in prison if anyone had been injured and a possible life imprisonment if anyone had died, the spokesman added.

Midlanders tell panel of ongoing victimization

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Jane Inskeep talked about the frustration of being excluded from the trial of her son's accused murderer — his wife.

Wanda Niblett talked about the embarrassment of having her name go public during an attempted sexual assault trial in which her former employer was convicted.

A rape victim's mother talked about her 13-year-old daughter being taunted, teased and beat up at school after her classmates learned about her assault through the "grapevine."

These three women are victims of crime who talked about their experiences Thursday to a panel from the Associated Texans Against Crime Task Force On Victims of Crime. State Rep. Sam Johnson and crime victim Susan Key heard testimony from local victims and law enforcement personnel.

Midland's hearing is the second of several to be held around the state through October. The first hearing was held in Tyler on May 8. Testimony from the hearings will be formulated into judicial reform recommendations to the 1987 Legislature. During the 1984 legislative session the group successfully had seven of its nine recommendations made into law.

Efforts to identify fingerprints continue after Austin poisoning

AUSTIN (AP) — As more stores yank Anacin-3 off their shelves, police tried today to identify partial fingerprints on nine capsules found in the bottle with a cyanide-laced pill that killed an Austin college student.

Kenneth Wayne Faries, 24, a University of Texas senior, died of cyanide poisoning that authorities linked to a bottle of Anacin-3 purchased at a Walgreen drug store.

Walgreen stores nationwide immediately pulled the capsules from their shelves, but state health officials said Thursday that tests on 2,697 capsules taken from 10 Austin Walgreen stores found no further trace of the poison.

Meanwhile, Rochester, N.Y.-based Wegmans Food Markets Inc. removed Anacin-3 capsules from its supermarkets' shelves Thursday, spokeswoman Mary Ellen Burris said.

Informing juries about the actual length criminals will serve and stopping appeals based on minor technical errors were among the laws enacted.

The major complaint to come out of two of the 12 hearings to be held through October is the early parole and parolees repeating crimes, Johnson said.

"Law enforcement people are telling us that their big problem was crime on the street, parolees and early release. We know that's a problem across the state. Everywhere we've been, we've heard the same story that crime's up," Johnson said.

Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre and Ector County District Attorney Eric Augesen said their offices see parolees sent back after serving five months on a five-year sentence.

"It doesn't do any good to take them off the street if we can't keep them off," Augesen said.

Schorre said, "As long as we allow the situation to continue, all the other good things seem meaningless if we're not getting length on incarceration.

"We need more prisons, that's all there is to it. I wish we could sugarcoat it. I know that doesn't go down well in the Legislature. We need more money in the justice system," he said.

Ms. Inskeep said she is bitter about the short sentence her daughter-in-law will probably serve for the June 1985 shooting of her son. Dorothy Sue Shaw Inskeep received a 20-year sentence in December for killing her husband Jerry Dale Inskeep, but she will probably end up being paroled after seven years, Ms. Inskeep said.

"Her ordeal will be over. She has something to look forward to. We have nothing to look forward to. I ended up feeling like we had done something wrong," Ms. Inskeep said.

Attempting to meet federal standards, the state is releasing more prisoners early. State prisons must reduce their populations of about 37,000 people to 34,000 by the end of the year. The prison populations must be further reduced to 30,000 by 1990. Johnson said the state claims it is not releasing any violent prisoners. However, Schorre said, "I've got an 11-year-old girl that was raped by a man on parole this past weekend. I would have a hard time convincing her family and her that he was not violent."

A major complaint among rape victims was the time it takes to go to trial, said Betty Crooker with the Midland Rape Crisis Center. On the average, six to eight months pass before a rape case is brought to trail, Crooker said.

One rape victim's mother said, "My real complaint is about the time it takes to go to court." The woman said the man who assaulted her daughter has not gone to trial because he jumped a $15,000 bond. The assault occurred April 1985.

Ms. Niblett, who successfully took former Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry to trial in April for attempted sexual assault, told about her embarrassment of the trial's publicity.

"This was a very hard thing for me to do and when it happened I did not want to tell anyone. He was a justice of the peace and I felt nobody would believe me," Ms. Niblett said.

Victims should be told about the publicity surrounding trials and about deals and plea bargains made afterward, Ms. Niblett said.

"I wasn't told my name was going to be in the paper. This was something I didn't feel comfortable talking to my mother about," she said.

Kristen Arnold with the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children said some domestic violence victims are not told how to press charges against their husbands and police are not consistent in their dealings with domestic violence calls.

"Sometimes we're getting really good responses and sometimes we're not getting any at all," Ms. Arnold said.

Police officers need more training to deal with domestic violence victims, Ms. Arnold said.

The crime victims' group will formulate public testimony into recommendations during a December seminar. Two recommendations involving early release for "good time" and a minimum prison term will probably be made to the 1987 Legislature, Johnson said. Prisoners should have to labor to earn time off for being "good," Johnson said. Money for more prisons will also be requested, he said.

Bus driver upset by girl's death

CHICAGO (AP) — A bus driver who refused to make a one-block detour to a hospital despite a passenger's pleas that her 9-year-old daughter had suffered a heart attack says he's "going through a lot of mental anguish" over the girl's death.

Nicole Hobson was pronounced dead at Children's Memorial Hospital early Thursday, after a passenger carried her the block to the emergency room.

"I feel real bad about the girl's death," said Ben Perry, 32, a Chicago Transit Authority driver for less than four months. "I'm going through a lot of mental anguish. I didn't know where they were going until I was almost there."

Transit Authority investigators were interviewing Perry, said CTA spokesman Bill Baxa, who refused to comment about reports that the driver has been suspended without pay.

Nicole, who had a pacemaker and was stricken while riding to the hospital with her mother late Wednesday, was pronounced dead in the emergency room 45 minutes later, said hospital spokesman David Dalton.

"It appears she suffered cardiac arrest (on the bus), and the doctors really couldn't say what would have happened if she'd got here earlier," Dalton said Thursday.

Late Thursday, CTA Chairman Michael Cardilli issued a statement, saying:

"Everyone at the CTA feels for the family.... Our hearts go out to them. It would be useless for us to try to justify or even respond when all the information is not in."

Dalton said an autopsy was being performed, "but even that won't provide us with an absolute idea of how crucial timing was."

Baxa said the CTA would issue a more detailed statement "when we feel we have a complete account" of what happened.

But the man who carried the girl to the hospital said the CTA has not contacted him.

"He (the driver) wasn't concerned about the kid or the mother or anything," said Ted Garrettson, 28. "All he was worried about was completing his...run."

Garrettson said Nicole and her mother, Mae Hobson, sat across from the driver and that he first heard Mrs. Hobson cry out about her daughter about six blocks from the hospital.

"The woman was sitting there screaming her baby was having a heart attack, she's got a pacemaker, and the bus driver was telling her, 'Get off the...bus, lady,'" Garrettson said.

Mrs. Hobson and Garrettson said in separate interviews that the driver made at least one stop between that point and the corner where they took the child off the bus.

"I asked the bus driver, would he keep straight a block to the hospital? He said he couldn't do it, he had to turn there," said Mrs. Hobson, 40. "And a gentleman from the back of the bus came up and offered his service, and he took my little girl, and we ran about a block to the hospital."

Robert Gaines, CTA communications director, said a computer printout of calls to the agency's emergency center indicated the driver made contact with his two-way radio when the incident began. Gaines said the driver apparently didn't stay on the line long enough to speak to anyone at the center.

"Regulations are clear," Gaines said. "The driver is supposed to report an illness or injury to the (emergency-center) dispatcher, who is supposed to decide what action to take."

Nicole suffered from a congenital defect that left a hole between two chambers of her heart, and the pacemaker was implanted April 23, said Dalton. Mrs. Hobson called the hospital Wednesday night to report Nicole's heart rate was considerably lower than the rate the device was programmed to maintain, Dalton said.

Doctors told her to bring the child to the hospital but didn't indicate there was an emergency, he said, adding there had been a previous drop in Nicole's heart rate.

South African women protest new powers

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — More than 100 white women fanned out through Johannesburg's affluent northern suburbs today to protest legislation that would give police broad new powers to contain racial unrest.

In protests timed to the commuter rush-hour, the women held up placards that read, "No to Uncontrolled Police Power," and "No to More Detentions, Less Protection."

The government says it needs the new powers to fight what it calls a communist-inspired revolution, but critics charge that the proposed security measures will not quell the unrest.

Today's protests were mounted by the Black Sash, the Johannesburg Democratic Action Committee and other white anti-apartheid groups. Security laws forbid outdoor demonstrations, but the women sidestepped the law by staying a few hundred yards apart.

Black Sash protests usually include only a few women, so the string of women demonstrating along main avenues into the city was a rare sight for commuters.

President P.W. Botha's government has run into strong protests against the new security proposals.

One bill presented to Parliament would enable Law and Order Minister Louis Le Grange to exercise whatever powers he considered necessary in any district declared an "unrest area."

Another measure, a proposed amendment to the wide-ranging Internal Security Act, would enable senior police officers to detain for 180 days anyone they consider has been or might be involved in disturbances. That compares with a 14-day limit now in place.

Under the existing act, the law and order minister has the power to order detention of up to a year and can renew it.

Deputy Information Minister Louis Nel issued a statement Thursday in which he said security forces needed new powers to enable the government to negotiate with black leaders "who must not be inhibited by threats of intimidation.

"It is grossly unfair to compare South Africa's position with that of any other country," he said. "No other Western nation at present experiences the revolutionary onslaught, planned by communist strategists ... making them (blacks) believe that revolution is the way to bring about peace and a just society."

The government says the outlawed African National Congress, the main black guerrilla organization fighting to overthrow the government, is communist-inspired.

Nel rejected widespread criticism that the security bills were an attempt to quell 20 months of anti-apartheid unrest by force rather than by negotiation.

But Helen Suzman, a legislator from the opposition Progressive Federal Party, told The Associated Press: "Whatever Mr. Nel says, the fact is that increasing powers taken over and over again by this government have done nothing to curb violence and unrest."

"The remedies lie in the rapid dismantling of apartheid and addressing the crux of the problem — political rights for blacks." Under apartheid, South Africa's 5 million whites dominate the nation's 24 million voteless blacks.

Meanwhile, in Johannesburg, about 35 students and staff members from the University of the Witwatersrand were arrested today while trying to march to a police station to protest the arrest of a black student. A second group of students headed toward the station, but was dispersed by police wielding whips. Several students were treated at the university health center.

More than 200 riot police entered the campus Thursday after a confrontation between moderate- and left-wing students.

Tutu says overthrow of government 'justified'

By R. GREGORY NOKES
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON — Bishop Desmond Tutu, winner of the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize, says blacks would be justified in attempting the violent overthrow of the white South African government if the outside world, including the United States, fails to impose tough economic sanctions.

The black South African cleric, who is Anglican bishop of Johannesburg, told a gathering here Thursday night he was not advocating violence, and personally would oppose it. But he went further than he had before by saying it would be justified.

"I have come to the conclusion that if the international community refuses to apply sanctions, then our people will have tried everything, and following the principles of the traditional doctrine of 'just war,' I would say it is justifiable to overthrow the system by violence," Tutu said.

"My last hope is the international community applying sanctions," Tutu said after a showing of a documentary film, "Witness to Apartheid," which was made with his assistance.

There were no meetings with administration officials scheduled in Tutu's overnight stay in Washington. He was scheduled to travel to Toronto today.

Tutu said he thought the Reagan administration was "out of step" with most Americans — the youth especially — who he argued would support tough economic sanctions.

"We're waiting for word from the manufacturer," she said. "We're checking the codes and expiration dates to see if they were those involved in the Texas incident."

And Patrick Mongillo, regional supervisor for Fay's Drug Co. Inc., said that all 23 New York-area Fay's drugstores have pulled products off their shelves.

He said it was possible that one store might have the matching lot number and expiration date of the Anacin-3 found in Austin, but that couldn't be confirmed.

Austin police Sgt. David Parkinson said partial fingerprints were found on nine of the 46 capsules from the bottle that killed Faries.

"We have not made positive comparison with any known print right now," Parkinson said Thurday, adding that he hoped the fingerprint checks would be completed by the end of today.

But as far as the city-wide Anacin-3 checks, "all of those tests are completed and the results were uniformly negative — no tampering and no poison," said Bob Henna, director of the food and drug division of the Texas Department of Health.

Henna said a U.S. Food and Drug Administration lab in Dallas tested the capsules Wednesday night and Thursday. Capsules taken from other Austin-area stores will be tested over the next few days, he said.

FDA spokesman Bill Grigg said the agency still was awaiting an analysis of the 46 remaining capsules found in Faries' apartment. Originally in police custody, that bottle now has been transferred to FDA and is being taken to the agency's Cincinnati laboratories for analysis, Grigg said.

Until all investigations are completed, Health Commissioner Robert Bernstein warned Texans to exercise caution with Anacin-3 capsules.

"Of course, we hope this is an isolated incident, but until all tests of the victim's body are done and our investigation is over, we must stress that each person must take the responsibility of double-checking the products they use," Bernstein said.

Does waste site issue have another side?

By MICHELLE LOCKE
Associated Press Writer

Texas Panhandle residents filed a legal challenge Thursday to a proposed federal nuclear waste dump and promised a fullfledged battle over a project they claim would undercut the region's thriving agricultural economy.

But some chamber of commerce officials contend opponents are overlooking the potential boon to area business.

Three groups and several individuals filed a petition for review, in the Washington, D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals, seeking to stop acquisition of land for the proposed site — one of three in the nation.

Feelings on the issue run high.

"We're talking about storing something that's going to last for 200 unborn generations," said Tonya Kleuskens, who heads a group called POWER, People Opposed to Wasted Energy Repository.

Ms. Kleuskens said she was not surprised by the administration's announcement Wednesday that Deaf Smith County in northwest Texas is one of three sites being considered for the nation's first high-level nuclear waste dump.

However, Larry Milner, president of the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce, said a study conducted by his group found the proposed site could inject from $600 million to $900 million into the area's economy.

Site opponents met Wednesday night in the small town of Vega, in Oldham County, to consider moving ahead with a lawsuit blocking acquisition of land for the proposed site, said Don Hancock, an advisor to several of the Panhandle anti-dump groups.

"The answer was yes and the lawsuit was filed Thursday morning," Hancock said. A petitions was filed because challenges to federal agency's decisions initially take the form of petitions.

Wayne Richardson, vice president of the Nuclear Waste Task Force, runs a large hybrid seed business and owns 640 acres within the proposed site boundaries.

He said the Panhandle should not be considered for the dump site because of the dependence on agriculture and because of its proximity to the Ogallala aquifer which serves eight states.

"No drinking water, no life," said Richardson, who lives to the southwest of Vega. "That's the worst that can happen, but it can happen."

However, Milner said problems with the proposed site stem from misconceptions, beginning with using the term "dump" to describe the site, technically known as a repository.

"No one wants a dump. Everyone wants a repository," Milner said. "The difference between a dump and a repository is a dump is like Love Canal. A repository is a highly regulated federal research-oriented type of project."

Richardson conceded the dump will bring money into the area, but called that a short-term benefit. In the long run the site will force food processors out of the area, he said.

He said the proposed site has stirred up hostile feelings in the Panhandle.

NASA orders replacement of communications satellite

WASHINGTON (AP) — NASA has ordered a replacement for the $250 million government communications satellite that was in the space shuttle Challenger cargo bay when the ship exploded last January.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said the Tracking and Data Relay Satellite and parts for a backup spacecraft being bought from TRW in Redondo Beach, Calif., are scheduled for delivery in five years. The value of the contract is yet to be negotiated with TRW.

The TDRS is the largest and most advanced communications satellite in the world, weighing 5,000 pounds and measuring 57 feet across its solar panels.

The satellite functions as a switchboard in orbit, able to track the space shuttle and relay television and telemetry signals. Its electronic relay system can handle as many as 300 million bits of information each second from up to 25 orbiting spacecraft simultaneously.

The space agency had planned to have three of the satellites on station, 22,300 miles above the Earth, three years ago, but bad luck intervened.

The first satellite was ejected properly from the shuttle's cargo bay on April 5, 1983, and was propelled higher by an attached rocket stage.

But the steering mechanism locked up during the second of two firings and the satellite began tumbling in a useless orbit.

Using a few thruster jets no bigger than thimbles, engineers slowly nudged the satellite into place over a two-month period. Since then it has provided coverage of half the Earth.

The second TDRS had been scheduled for launch in August 1983, but that was postponed because of the first failure. The satellite was put aboard the Challenger for a March 7, 1985, flight, but the flight was canceled when the TDRS in orbit experienced problems in its timing circuits.

TDRS-B next was loaded on the ill-fated Challenger flight. An underwater search continues off the Florida coast for the satellite's parts, some of which are highly secret. A portion of the TDRS is assigned to the military and contains scrambiers, decoders and encryption devices.

NASA considers getting a second TDRS into orbit so important that what was to have been a third, back-up satellite is scheduled to be the first payload when shuttles fly again.

When two satellites are in orbit, they can provide communications over 95 percent of the world and enable NASA to close down a global network of ground stations.

Investigators puzzled about source of fumes that made people sick

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Investigators remain puzzled about the source of chemical fumes that sent 50 people to hospitals and drove nearly 10,000 from classes, jobs and homes, emptying a four-block area.

People overcome by the fumes Thursday, including two police officers and six ambulance workers, were treated at hospitals for dizziness, shortness of breath, lightheadedness, and nausea, officials said. Eight remained hospitalized in stable condition today, hospital officials said.

John J. Higgins, regional environmental engineer of the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering, said investigators today would check sewers and drains and dig up soil around trees planted two weeks ago by workers who complained then of gassy odors.

After the fumes were first noticed and several people were overcome on the street, officials closed shops and a factory, evacuated more than 5,000 students, and ordered people from their homes in the midtown district.

By late afternoon, with Deputy Police Chief Robert P. Flanagan reporting the air back to normal, police removed barricades and allowed people to return to their homes and jobs.

About 3,500 students from three high schools and Springfield Technical Community College and about 1,500 pupils from three elementary schools got the rest of the day off, officials said.

No schoolchildren were reported felled by the fumes, but the youngsters were evacuated as a precaution, said school spokeswoman Carol W. Kinsley.

Higgins said the fumes could have been caused by someone pouring a toxic substance down a drain either deliberately or without knowing it was poisonous.

He discounted a deliberate act and said investigators would check the science laboratories in three nearby high schools to determine if any substances could have been disposed of improperly.

First word on the evacuation was that ammonia was responsible for fumes that sent people in stores and on the street to their knees in a faint. But health authorities said they had no definite information on the cause.

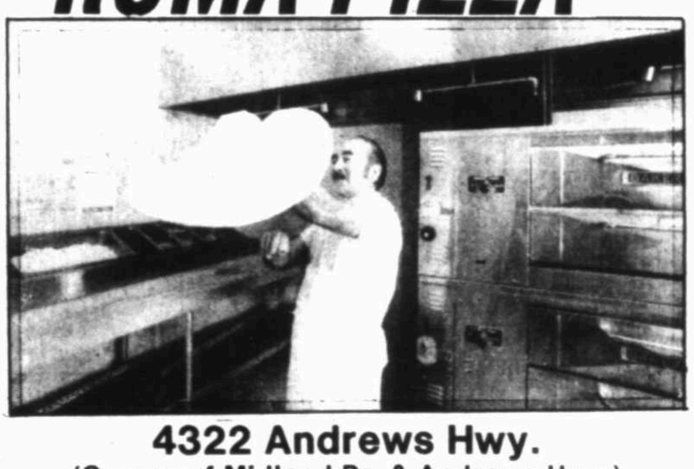

More than 100 shoppers were evacuated from Kavanagh Furniture Co. after the store owner's son and nephew fainted during a sale in the warehouse, store president Jack Nelen said.

The nephew, furniture salesman Luke Napolitan, said, "I was standing there with my pen in one hand and sales board in the other waiting for customers. Then I went out, and the next thing I remember seeing was my cousin, Tim, fall down cold."

Napolitan and another victim were reported in stable condition today at Baystate Medical Center, a nursing supervisor said. Six other people, held overnight at Mercy Hospital, were also listed in stable condition today, a nursing supervisor there said.

Emergency medical technician Pamela Bryant was overcome while attending to people who had collapsed in the furniture warehouse. "They were dropping right and left. I was taking somebody's pulse and then I was out," she said.

Things aren't quite cricket with English superstar

By MARCUS ELIASON

LONDON (AP) — The world of cricket, which still likes to think of itself as the repository of ancient English virtues, has been caught on a sticky wicket by a drug scandal involving one of its finest players.

The drama centers on 30-year-old Ian Botham, the strapping, outspoken superstar of English cricket, who caused much choking on port and cigars a week ago by admitting he had occasionally smoked marijuana.

Since then, the lurid Fleet Street headlines, thunderous editorials and aggrieved reactions from cricket's official custodians have divided the country into two camps: those who say he should be drummed out of competitive cricket, and those who see Botham as a victim of British society's regular paroxysms of finger-pointing moral outrage.

The affair reflects how deeply the real world is intruding into the white-flanneled, gentlemanly realm of cricket. The game that once gloried in its amateurism and standards of fair play has become a politicized, big-money sport in which a drug scandal perhaps was inevitable.

Botham's flamboyant style, his contempt for the news media and his self-promotion — he is one of only a few cricketers to employ a personal manager — make him a target, and his troubles had been building up for more than two years.

In March 1984, the Mail on Sunday, a London tabloid weekly, reported that Botham smoked marijuana. Botham denied it and sued the paper. Police subsequently raided his house and found a marijuana cigarette. He was fined $150.

A week ago, the first three pages of the Mail on Sunday were filled with an extraordinary "confession" by Botham that he had indeed "at various times in the past smoked pot."

He wrote that he did it to relieve the pressures of stardom, and claimed he had shared joints with police officers at parties and even with a vicar in church. He wouldn't do it again, he wrote, and hoped his admission would be a warning to youngsters to stay off drugs.

At the same time, he dropped his lawsuit against the paper.

The battle lines were drawn. The Test and County Cricket Board, which governs the game in England, announced Botham would be dropped from two matches against India this summer. It said his admissions could "bring cricket into disrepute."

"He has set a bad example," said the daily Today, "not just because he has smoked pot and lied, but because he has also shown himself to be selfish, arrogant and undisciplined, both on and off the field."

"He must not be allowed to get away with it," warned Denis Compton, 68, a cricket hero of yesteryear.

In the conservative Daily Telegraph, W.F. Deedes blamed the scandal on a general breakdown of discipline, pointing to England's dismal showing last winter in the West Indies, when it was trounced in all five international matches.

"Botham," wrote Deedes, "is a divisive character. Any decision made about him leads to cheers from one quarter, jeers from another."

The cheers, too, were plentiful, primarily from the liberal daily Guardian which said the affair had generated much "pompous, often hypocritical rubbish."

Among Botham's contemporaries, England batsman Graham Gooch declared: "What he does off the field is his own business." His county team, Somerset, said it stood by him.

Media critic Alan Rusbridger saw Botham as a pawn in Fleet Street's circulation wars, since he has a contract to write for the daily Sun and generally refuses to cooperate with other newspapers.

All agree that if the affair spells the end of Botham's career, it will be a cricketing tragedy. In a sport where players usually excel either as batsmen or bowlers, Botham is phenomenal at both. His attacking style draws huge crowds, and his powerful shoulders have racked up a string of records.

The Guardian, in an editorial, noted that Botham's critics tended to be elderly, retired cricketers, while his defenders were mostly his own age. Botham, it said, is "the one who best epitomizes the game in the 1980s," and told the Test and County Cricket Board to stop playing "custodians of a generation they know so little of."

Canada's Mounties face new problems

New York Times News Service

BROUGHTON ISLAND, Northwest Territories — One tense day last June, Cpl. Robert H. Peterson of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police faced down a drunken gunman.

Peterson, the sole law official in this desolate hamlet 60 miles north of the Arctic Circle, learned that two men had gotten drunk and stolen the local firetruck and were speeding around shooting at windows. When Peterson found the truck, stuck in a ditch, one man stepped out with a shotgun, took aim and announced, "I'm going to kill you."

The policeman drew his service revolver, but he did not fire it. For 15 minutes, while onlookers gathered, he tried to talk the gunman into surrendering.

At last another local man crept up behind the drunk and grabbed for his gun. Peterson rushed to subdue and handcuff him. Then, after Peterson had locked up the two drunks, he resumed more mundane patrol duties.

In Canada's north, the romance of the red-jacketed Mountie has collided with the new reality of problems more characteristic of cities, like joblessness, increased violence and alcohol and drug abuse.

There are 235 policemen to enforce law and order across Canada's Northwest Territories, which are one-third the size of the United States. Mounties no longer deliver babies, pull teeth, carry the mail and take the census, as they did in the old days, but they remain a vital link between the government and the indigenous Indians and Eskimos, or Inuit, as they call themselves.

"We've gone in and lived with them," said Robert H.D. Head, the chief superintendent of the mounted police in the Northwest Territories." "We're a part of them rather than apart from them and any success we've had is because of that."

Head, on his way to visit Peterson's one-man post, said the community relations programs devised by city police forces have been carried on by the Mounties since 1873.

"The problem we're facing now is that liquor and drugs have entered the scene," he said.

Increasingly, the Mounties, who volunteer for two-or three-year tours in the north, run into lawbreaking they expected to leave behind in the south.

Recently, narcotics became so prevalent at Cape Dorset, an Eskimo settlement on the Baffin Island coast, that an undercover agent was sent in disguised as a construction worker. Ten days later, uniformed policemen made 13 arrests for drug trafficking.

In Frobisher Bay, the largest town in the eastern Arctic, the police have seized marijuana, hashish and cocaine smuggled from Montreal. Inspector Donald H. Maas, whose 52-man subdivision in the Eastern Arctic is responsible for an area larger than Texas, said, "We've been successful in reducing the availability of drugs by 60 percent."

Some Mounties say that what they call a new disrespect for authority among the younger Eskimos is caused by television, which brings violent police dramas like "Miami Vice" by satellite to people who assume that such confrontations are the norm down south.

The police also feel despair about many younger lawbreakers, who don't mind being sent to the local detention center, where life is less crowded and more exciting than at home.

Broughton Island, a windswept mound of tundra across the ice-clogged Davis Strait from Greenland, typifies the plight of many northern settlements. The Eskimos hunted seals until a European ban on sealskins undercut the only real livelihood they knew. Now unemployment on Broughton Island is 80 percent and most of the 430 residents live on welfare. Alcoholism, drug abuse, wife-beating and vandalism bred by boredom have become familiar, policemen say.

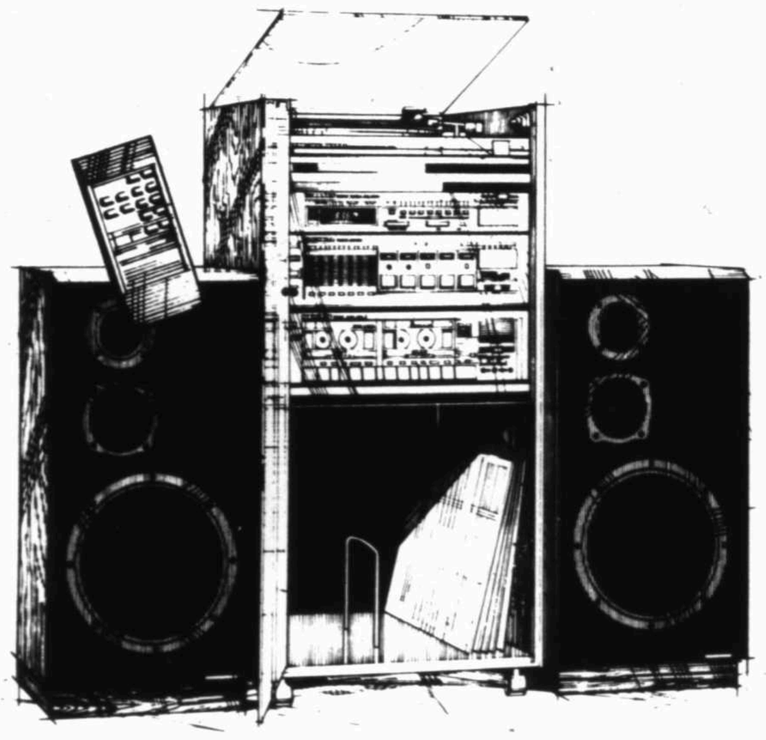

Ian Smith, the principal of the school for Broughton Island's children, said: "For us in the school, it's very difficult, because they have nothing to aim for. If they aim for anything, it means not living here."

Peterson, a husky 37-year-old native of New Brunswick, has worked more than eight years up north. "Here, when the phone rings, whatever it is, you have to do it," he said. "And you do it totally."

He goes to meet every plane that lands on the hamlet's airstrip, which is marked on the winter ice with scarlet dye. He transports children and elders in his pickup truck and helps with sports activities.

The riskiest task is being called to intervene in a family argument in the north, where nearly every family owns a hunting weapon.

Garbage power

There has been little fanfare nationally, but it appears that plain old odoriferous household garbage is achieving respectability as the fastest growing source of electrical energy from unconventional materials.

A report from a group called the Investor Responsibility Research Center indicates garbage is now providing 7 percent of the electricity obtainable from sources other than coal, oil or water power. This figure could rise to 46 percent when new conversion plants already on the drawing board are erected. And if all available garbage were burned, it is estimated, it could supply close to 3 percent of the nation's electrical needs.

That doesn't necessarily mean that garbage will reduce the need for alternate energy production sources, like nuclear energy, or that the increased yse if it will reduce dangers such as that encountered as a result of the Chernobyl nuclear disaster in the Soviet Union recently. But it still does offer a reasonable way of producing some of the energy a modern society needs.

A growing problem which is spurring the development of garbage conversion plants is the lack of landfill space for refuse — a situation which is creating garbage collection crises in many densely populated areas.

Many obstacles stand in the way of expansion of garbage conversion programs and one of these is the objection by communities and neighborhoods to having the plants built within their boundaries. The recent nuclear disaster in the Soviet Union, however, could well persuade some areas to reconsider their opposition.

It could be that the danger inherent in producing power from nuclear reactors might make the smell of garbage a little less objectionable.

Lamar Smith and oil

Lamar Smith's opponent in the 21st Congressional District Republican runoff recently stated that "the price of oil coming down" is "the greatest thing that's ever happened to the United States economy." This statement represents a gross misunderstanding of the long term effects low oil prices will have for the 21st District and the entire United States. Low prices will cause an ever increasing dependence upon foreign crude as consumption increases and exploration and production of domestic hydrocarbons decreases. This nation needs only recall the OPEC embargo to realize the effect a dependence upon foreign crude can have.

Lamar Smith understands the 21st District's most prominent industries — petroleum and agriculture. He understands the vital economic and strategic importance of these industries. Lamar will work to insure that the United States keeps the farmer and the oilman as strong, contributing and viable members of the United States economy.

Citizens of the 21st Congressional District have an obligation to themselves and the nation to send the most knowledgeable, dedicated and effective leadership to Washington. Lamar Smith can and will provide this leadership.

Archer and right to life

On June 7th Midlanders will go the the polls to select the Republican nominee for U.S. Congress. This election is so very important because of the extremely different philosophies of the two candidates.

One issue of primary concern to me is that of abortion. I share Van Archer's belief that unborn children deserve the right to live. Archer has been endorsed by the Texas Coalition for Life and the national Right to Life Committee. He needs and deserves our support.

His opponent Lamar Smith is for abortion on demand and does not believe that the unborn have any rights. For our future generations' sake I hope Midland will turn out the vote for Mr. Archer.

Gibson for West Texas

Not a single statewide elected officeholder is from West Texas. The only opportunity for a West Texan to fill a statewide office would be the election of Jay Gibson to the Texas Supreme Court.

We need someone with our viewpoints and our values providing input at the statewide level. At the present time, every major statewide issue is being decided by people from the other areas.

On June 7th, in the Democratic run-off, Jay Gibson will need our support. If we allow this opportunity to go by, we would only have ourselves to blame for not taking advantage of the opportunity to help a "fellow West Texan" get on the November ballot.

Jay Gibson was named by "Texas Monthly" as one of the "ten outstanding legislators", and he has proven over the years to be an effective State Representative for our West Texas area. A strong voter turnout in support of Jay Gibson is needed. Absentee balloting begins May 28th through June 3rd, with the run-off election set for June 7, 1986. Please join me in voting and encouraging others to vote for Jay Gibson — it is an effort we can be proud of.

MPD report appreciated

This taxpayer sincerely appreciates recent Midland city events relative to the police department.

I am not aware of any problems in our sheriff's department, but I believe that a study of it similar to the one of the police department would be healthy. The study cost should be a fractional amount of the $75,000 incurred by the city, based on the relative sizes of the two departments.

Perhaps the county could save a considerable amount of our tax money, and the sheriff's department operation be improved.

Von Raab accusations unjustifiable

WASHINGTON — Relations between the United States and Mexico have been badly strained by the recent accusations — both unwise and unprovable — made against Mexican officialdom by U.S. Customs Commissioner William von Raab.

Jack Anderson

At a Senate hearing, von Raab blurted out the charge that "massive" official corruption existed "way up and down the ladder" in Mexico, and suggested that this was the major reason the United States has been unable to solve its drug-traffic problems. Von Raab presented no proof of his charges.

We have criticized the Mexican government many times in the past, but von Raab's intemperate remarks were out of line and in some cases just plain wrong. We say this on the basis of information Dale Van Atta gathered on two recent trips to Mexico City, where he spoke with critics of the government as well as officials. He also received a special briefing from Drug Enforcement Administration sources.

The conflict has been building ever since DEA investigator Enrique Camarena was murdered in Mexico in February 1985, while he was working with Mexican drug agents. The investigation of the murder seemed slow, but Mexican police began to round up suspects.

U.S. frustration over the progress of the investigation led to a mid-April meeting in Cancun, Mexico. It was attended by Attorney General Edwin Meese, his Mexican counterpart and several other high officials from both countries. Von Raab didn't show up, but sent a subordinate. The meeting was amicable, and Meese expressed appreciation for Mexico's efforts to curb the drug traffic.

But Mexican officials were shocked to received a message from von Raab saying, as two Mexican cabinet officials described it, that as far as von Raab was concerned, all Mexican officials were corrupt, and were guilty until proven innocent. This not only smacks of racism, but it is demonstrably inaccurate.

Our own investigation over the last two years has made it clear that there are many Mexican officials who are not only honest, but who are diligently trying to curtail the drug traffic at considerable personal risk. As Mexican and U.S. sources point out, more than 150 Mexican drug enforcement officials have been killed since 1976. Thirty-four were killed in 1984 and 54 last year trying to keep drugs from entering the United States.

Senior Mexican officials repeatedly point out that if there were no lucrative U.S. markets for illegal drugs, and no corrupt officials on this side of the border, there would be few drug problems in Mexico. Finance Minister Jesus Silva Herzog said Mexico would not be a "diving board" for drugs if there were no "swimming pool" — the United States.

Silva Herzog was perturbed by von Raab's rhetorical shotgun blast at the Senate hearing. He recalled that his customs chief had asked von Raab for specifics on charges the U.S. official had made in an earlier telex, but that von Raab never responded.

Mexicans also resent the Washington myth that Mexico isn't bearing its share of the drug traffic burden. They note that as a percentage of the national budget, the Mexican justice department alone spends three times more on drug enforcement each year than the entire budget of the DEA.

As for U.S. complaints that Mexico has been is slow to investigate the Camarena murder, the Mexicans recall that it took the U.S. government two years to extradite the former Mexico City police chief on corruption charges. In 15 months, Mexican authorities have jailed most of the Camarena suspects.

In short, von Raab owes the Mexicans an apology.

WASHINGTON — Further poisoning the well for jailed freedom-fighter Eden Pastora, shadowy U.S. agents have told Costa Rica not to offer political asylum to the fabled anti-Sandinista guerrilla leader whose lieutenants were suborned to desert him and who then gave himself up for lack of ammunition, boots and clothes for his troops.

Robert Novak

Republicans with close White House ties believe but cannot prove that these agents are tied to local CIA operations, conceivably acting without Reagan administration approval. "It is not possible to prove," a highly-knowledgable insider told us, "but if not the CIA, who could do this?"

What can be stated as fact is that four of Pastora's top guerrilla lieutenants went to a safehouse in San Jose early this month. On or about May 9, each received $5,000 cash to desert Pastora's movement and join the United Nicaraguan Opposition (UNO). The payment was personally made by Alfonso Robelo, a key UNO leader.

That tightened the net on Commandante Zero, famed throughout Nicaragua for his role in overturning Anastazio Somoza and then defecting from the communist regime established by his revolutionary comrades. Deserted by four of his six commandantes (two refused to leave him) he turned himself in to Costa Rican authorities on May 16.

Yet, only weeks before that tragic series of events, Pastora had been promised by an unofficial U.S. negotiator that he would get immediate help. He was promised ammunition, boots, clothes and a secure communications system in exchange for this pledge: deliver his 2,000-plus guerrillas to an agreed Nicaraguan meeting place with UNO; cooperate with UNO leaders; accept a retired U.S. officer as military adviser to end his movement's organizational troubles.

Even though this arrangement is believed to have had the blessing of Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams, it was systematically subverted. Instead of getting what had been pledged, Pastora found his lieutenants suborned, his ability to keep going ruthlessly choked.

This repudiation of a patriot and a political pluralist on grounds that he was "independent" seemingly violates the Reagan doctrine of support to anti-communist movements.

Thus, at least temporarily blocked from asylum in Costa Rica, Pastora finds his movement killed by an unseen hand. A proposal here that he should travel in Europe as a modern-day Minuteman to explain the truth about Nicaragua's communist regime may also be dead. In the shrouded world of freedom fighters acting under the thumb of covert intelligence agents to advance the cause of democracy, Pastora has been hung out to dry.

Costa Rican authorities, urging him to seek asylum in Panama, say that is what the U.S. wants. "If they send him to Panama," an insider with wide experience in Central America told us, "they are sentencing him to death." The reason: Cuban agents are beginning to overrun Panama.

Here in March, Pastora's hand was warmly shaken by no less than Secretary of State George Shultz. That gesture was seen by U.S. admirers as showing Shultz's support for Pastora.

If so, Shultz has now been overruled by those shadowy on-the-scene U.S. agents who regard Pastora as a trouble-maker because he does not play by their rules — and possibly because they know he would not negotiate with the Sandinistas unless certain that they could be defeated militarily.

When we saw the anti-Somoza revolutionary leader at one of his jungle headquarters a year ago, the duplicity of Washington-connected political attacks against him was immediately plain. He had been charged with being a mere propagandist who operated only on the Costa Rican side of the border, with hints that he might be in cahoots with the old Sandinista comrades he deserted long ago.

The day we were there, wounded guerrillas were arriving by ramshackle boat in a camp with primitive medical facilities. The crisis he faced was vivid: no ammunition, food or clothing. He had already been frozen out by the CIA and victimized by grand-scale thievery when his Hughes 500C helicopter was stolen and flown to Costa Rica. It ended up with UNO. The bribe that financed the theft was $30,000.

Pastora's worsening crisis this spring resulted in a semi-private effort by retired Gen. John Singlaub, backed by congressional conservatives, to rehabilitate him both in the Nicaraguan jungles and with anti-Pastora UNO leaders and the CIA. Just before Easter, Singlaub went to Central America and reached the across-the-board agreement with Pastora. It was accepted by Abrams who, with other officials, believes Pastora's name alone is a priceless asset for the contras throughout Nicaragua.

But in the real world of the Reagan administration, policy operates according to no rules. Although the nominal victim in this tragedy is a single man, the real victim is one of Ronald Reagan's major principles.

CHARLEY REESE

Journalists just 'plain people' plying trade

A plumber who was irate about something I had written asked me, "What gives you the right to be a columnist?"

I told him no one had a right to be a columnist, but that I became one when my boss ordered me to start writing a column.

Charley Reese

"Well," he said, "I don't think it's fair that you get to spout off your opinions in a newspaper."

"Well," I replied, "I don't think it's fair that you know how to fix toilets when it takes me all day, $18 worth of tools I never knew existed, and three quarts of adrenalin to put on a new seat."

I am reporting this silly exchange because people should understand that journalists are just plain people engaged in business, just like plumbers. We are not part of the government. We're just folks and we have no more rights or privileges than any other citizen.

Some journalists, I fear, are making the same mistake physicians made: overselling their value. One reason physicians get sued is because they convinced the general public that they could fix just about anything that went wrong with them. When they fail, as sometimes they must, people who thought they were infallible decide their particular doctor was negligent. An infallible person can't, by definition, make a mistake; they can, however, be willfully negligent.

Some of the criticism directed at the American press is also a result of journalists raising public expectations to unrealistic heights. We are not primarily watchdogs of government, nor are we chivalrous defenders of the Constitution. We are simply engaged in the business of peddling information, a large part of which is designed to be entertaining. The public good we do is mainly a by-product of our main pursuit, which is constructing a salable product.

The word, news, does not mean important. It means simply whatever we think is interesting. What we think is interesting may or may not be important for people to know. The important point is that we don't approach our jobs with the criterion of "Let's tell people what they need to know" but rather, "Let's tell people something interesting."

We judge a news story basically by the same criteria that a fiction editor does: Does it contain drama? Will it make an emotional impact on the reader? Since the key element of drama is conflict we tend to look for conflict. A budget, being dull, is not news; conflict over a budget is. The nuts and bolts of the nuclear power industry is dull. Accidents or allegations of dangerous conditions are dramatic. Hence, the only aspect of the nuclear power industry in which we show an interest is the accidents and the confrontations with the industry's opponents.

This has been misinterpreted by some as demonstrating a bias against the nuclear industry when in fact it's just the nature of the news business. We aren't much interested in the normal functioning of anything, including government, for the very same reason no one writes soap operas about normal, happy families.

Arguing whether the press is liberal or conservative is also off the mark. A consumer of news should not want either, if by either label you mean a news organization that will allow its political philosophy to dictate its professional decisions. As a consumer of news, the right questions to ask are, "Is the news organization competent?" "Does it employ people who know enough about their subjects to report them accurately?" "Does it employ people who are committed to fairness and balance in reporting controversies?" "Does it employ people who have mature judgment based on experience?"

The American press, like any other human institution, can be improved and like any other human institution generally resists change and tends to be defensive and self-congratulatory. These warts should not obscure the fact, however, that without question, the American press is far ahead of every other nation's.

It would help keep the matter in perspective if both consumers of news and producers of news resisted the temptation to believe the sometimes over-zealous hype. We're just plain folks plying a trade, like the plumber and the carpenter.

NATION IN BRIEF

Men sets himself afire because wife leaving him

TORRANCE, Calif. (AP) — A man distraught that his wife was leaving him soaked himself with gasoline and set himself on fire in the couple's kitchen, authorities said.

Ching-Ming Ho, 33, of Cerritos suffered third degree burns over 75 percent of his body and was in critical condition Thursday at Torrance Memorial Medical Center's burn center, said hospital spokeswoman Carmela Welte.

Penny Lee Ho, 30, was in fair condition at the same hospital for second-degree burns she suffered on her face and hands trying to put out the flames, Miss Welte said.

Mrs. Ho, said she saw her husband briefly at the hospital. Unable to speak, he communicated to her by writing. "He told me if he lived he would love me once again," she said. "I told him I would stay with him forever."

Ho apparently tried the self-immolation because he was afraid his wife would leave him, said Dr. William Davies, who is treating Ho at the hospital.

"He is a Buddhist, and there is a great problem with saving face," Davies said. "If his wife wanted to leave, he didn't want to live."

Police to carry teddy bears

BOULDER, Colo. (LAT) — Police here soon will pack some new equipment: Teddy bears.

The police started the 'Boulder Buddy Bears Program" to help officers deal with frightened children in sexual-abuse cases, assaults or traffic accidents, Larry Wieda, crime prevention unit director, said Thursday.

Each patrol car will carry a teddy bear or two for officers to give to young victims.

Boulder police handled 116 cases of sexual abuse or assault against children last year and experiments with the toy giveaways proved successful, Wieda said.

"A child will grab and start talking to the bear, where he might not talk to a police officer," he said. "You can ask questions through the bear. It's amazing the answers you get."

Homeless shelter rejected

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Just days after Mickey Mouse joined the Hands Across America linkup on Disneyland's Main Street, the planning commission in the park's home city has rejected a proposed shelter for the homeless.

The shelter was rejected by planning commissioners Wednesday after about 100 residents expressed fears over the safety of their children, the possibility of transients near their homes and increases in crime.

Commission Chairwoman Charlene LaClaire said she would try to find another location for the shelter, which a Christian group hoped to put in a church.

"They don't want it in their neighborhoods," said Michael Elias, executive director of Christian Temporary Housing Facilities, Inc., which proposed the shelter. "They're all sitting across the country holding hands."

Christmas tree selected

MACDOEL, Calif. (AP) — U.S. Capitol landscape architect Paul Pincus has chosen a 110-foot-tall Shasta red fir growing in the Klamath National Forest as the Capitol Christmas tree.

Pincus chose the tree Wednesday from among six selected ahead of time by forest officials. It was the first time in 23 years that he has gone west of the Mississippi River for the tree.

The tree, commonly known as a silver tip, is estimated to be about 150 years old and measures 24 inches in diameter at the base. Only the top 60 feet will be used.

Marcos still being discussed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department says it is still discussing whether to ask former Philippines President Ferdinand E. Marcos and his entourage to reimburse the United States for thousands of dollars in personal expenses that they incurred in their early days of exile.

Philip Savitz, a departmental spokesman, said Thursday he did not know when the decision would be made.

A congressional report issued on Wednesday said Marcos and about 100 people who were brought to the United States on a U.S. Air Force transport in late February ran up a bill of more than $206,000 during a brief stop at a base in Guam and during a stay of several weeks at Hickam Field, Hawaii.

According to the report, it cost the United States $858,417 to bring Marcos and his party to the United States. The administration has justified the costs as the price of a peaceful transition from Marcos' rule to the current leadership of Philippines President Corazon Aquino.

Group marks JFK birthday

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Peace Corps volunteers, marking the 25th anniversary of the volunteer agency, laid a wreath at the Arlington National Cemetery grave of Peace Corps founder, former President John F. Kennedy.

Thursday would have been Kennedy's 69th birthday. He was assassinated in 1963.

Roger Landrum, president of the Returned Peace Corps Volunteers Washington, said the local group began the annual remembrance several years ago and now has 25 other groups of volunteers as co-sponsors.

U.S restricts Nicaraguan diplomats' travel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nicaraguan diplomats can no longer travel to the Los Angeles or San Francisco areas without permission from the United States government, State Department officials said.

The restrictions are in retaliation for similar actions taken by Nicaragua against U.S. officials traveling in the Latin American country, department officials said Thursday.

"One of the bases of diplomatic relations is reciprocity," said State Department spokesman Greg Lagana. "They just have to get permission before they go someplace."

U.S. diplomats in Nicaragua have been barred from traveling to the East Coast cities of Bluefields and Puerto Cabezas, State Department spokeswoman Sondra McCarty said.

"United States reciprocal travel restrictions were imposed as part of an ongoing review of our embassy's relationship with the Sandinista regime," Ms. McCarty said. "It does not indicate a change in emphasis or of policy."

She also said that on May 6, the Nicaraguans interfered with the travel of a U.S. military attache in Zelaya province, which she said "indicates that areas other than the two East Coast cities are restricted." As a result, the United States has asked the Nicaraguans to clarify their policy of restricting U.S. travel, she said.

"Once we have received this information of clarification, we will modify our restrictions accordingly," Ms. McCarty said.

Lagana said the restrictions apply to Nicaraguan diplomats at the country's embassy and its missions to the United Nations and the Organization of American States.

The U.S. expulsion of the two Nicaraguan diplomats, political counselor William Vigil and first secretary Miriam Hooker, followed by two months of Sandinista accusations that four American diplomats in Managua had been engaged in spy activities. All four Americans subsequently left Nicaragua.

Five people die in military chopper crash

STURGIS, S.D. (AP) — A military helicopter providing security for a ground convoy of Minuteman missile parts and maintenance workers crashed 30 miles from its base, killing five people and critically injuring one, authorities say.

Two crew members and four security personnel were aboard the HU-1 helicopter when it crashed Thursday afternoon east of Sturgis, said Airman 1st Class Ron Brown of the Ellsworth Air Force Base public affairs unit.

Five people were killed and a woman injured in the crash was in critical condition at Rapid City Regional Hospital, officials said. Victims' identities were not released.

"We got over there as fast as we could, across the prairie. There was absolutely nothing we could do," said Dave Heaton, who lives about a mile from the crash site and was one of the first people on the scene.

"By the time we got over there the main body of the helicopter was on fire," Heaton said. "The motor was thrown out in front about 150 feet, the rotor was off another 50, 75 feet, a little bit of tail section was off to the west about 100 feet and debris just scattered all over.

The HU-1, assigned to Detachment Two of the 37th Aerospace Rescue and Recovery Squadron at Ellsworth, was providing security for a convoy of missile maintenance workers and Minuteman parts headed for a silo, Brown said.

At Greenwood Independent School District, teachers who were to meet for a workday also reported having difficulties making it to school as many county roads were washed out, a school spokeswoman said.

Midland police Lt. Hank Norton said police had not closed any city streets, but warned drivers to avoid areas affected by the flooding.

Texas Electric Service Company employees were working to restore power to areas in northwest Midland this morning after a semi tractor-trailer knocked down two power lines in an attempt to avoid a collision with a stalled vehicle on Loop 250 near Midland Drive .

TESCO spokesman Stan Garrison said about 744 customers were without power during the 36-minute period while employees worked to repair the lines and the system's main feeder. Reports of other damage or injuries were unknown, according to police.

A sheriff's department spokesman said County Road 307 near Interstate 20 and County Road 1788 about a quarter of a mile south of State Highway 158 were washed out because of the rain. No weather-related accidents had been reported, however.

For area farmers, the overnight rainfall was a blessing in disguise.

"It's like the old-timers say," said Hoot Leonard, manager of the Midland Farmers Co-op, "We go from one extreme to the other" — from drought to heavy rainfall.

"So," he said, "nearly everybody has got enough (rain) to plant their cotton." The overnight rain filled in the dry spots, which the weekend rains missed, he said.

The co-op office and cotton gin, which is just off South Fairground Roads in far southeast Midland, gauged 3.81 inches of rainfall overnight and about a total of seven inches since the rains started last Saturday.

Midland County cotton farmer Vernon Chandler said his rain gauge measure 3.2 inches overnight and about 4.2 inches for the week.

"It's all right," he said of the rains. "Just right. There's no wind. No hail, either."

If there is a clearing of rain clouds and return of sunny weather, cotton planting should get under way next week, he said. He and his son, Brian, farm the home-place in the Warfield community south of Midland Regional Airport.

Chandler's other son, Kyle, who farms northeast of Stanton, reported eight inches of rain for the week and three to four inches of rainfall overnight.

Rain claims two games from Angels, Travelers

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Farmers and home owners must hate to see the Arkansas Travelers leave town. Perhaps the West Texas drought might be broken for good if Arkansas was in town for another seven days.

Thursday night the Midland Angels and Travelers were rained out again after a brief flirtation with trying to finish up a game last Monday that was lost to power failure in a light transformer.

Actually, the Angels had planned on playing a doubleheader with Arkansas Thursday, but that is now past history. Arkansas left town Thursday night and the two teams will not meet again this year, meaning that both games are lost this season and will not be made up.

The Angels were scheduled to leave Midland at 7:30 a.m. today for six games against Beaumont. They will return to Angels Stadium on June 6 for a 7:30 p.m. meeting with the San Antonio Dodgers.

The Travs and Angels got into the bottom of the third inning Thursday with Arkansas holding a 3-2 lead, but Midland had Mark McLemore perched at third base with only one out and Mike Madril at the plate when the rain hit around 6:40 p.m. A game can not be considered complete unless at least 4½ innings have been played.

So, Midland ended the series at Angels Stadium with a 3-2 edge over Arkansas, but seven games were scheduled, leaving two lost forever.

THE GAME started Thursday with the Travs holding a 2-0 lead from the half-inning of play last Monday when light failure stopped that action. Rain also came later that night.

Arkansas built a 3-0 lead Thursday when Tim Jones scored from third base on a bases loaded double play ball hit by Eddie Tanner, the Texas League's leading hitter.

Bird spots Boston 2-0 lead

NBA's MVP leads Celtics in runaway

BOSTON (AP) — Larry Bird celebrated his third consecutive regular-season Most Valuable Player award with a blue-ribbon playoff performance against the Houston Rockets Thursday night.

Bird scored 31 points on 12-for-19 shooting, including three-for-five from three-point range, as the Celtics took a 2-0 lead in the NBA championship series with a 117-95 victory Thursday. Once again, Boston put the game out of reach in the third quarter en route to winning its 40th consecutive home game since Dec. 6.

"When he plays, the world looks and listens," Boston Coach K.C. Jones said. "He's the epitome of what great ballplayers are about."

"No one is going to cover him with one man," Houston Coach Bill Fitch said. "He keeps getting better and better. When it starts, when he gets his rhythm, when he gets it going, he's in a world of his own."

The 90-degree temperatures in 57-year-old Boston Garden — that is not air conditioned — were reminiscent of another steamy night two years ago when the Los Angeles Lakers wilted in the heat and lost to the Celtics in the final series.

"I hope this was our last game here but you never know," Bird said. "It was really hot out there. The heat took a lot out of me, but you play on emotion. I feel the crowd didn't do their part in the first two series but in the last two games they've stayed alive."

But the atmosphere was no hotter than Bird's shooting hand, as he had the sellout crowd of 14,890 chanting "MVP, MVP" with each long-range basket.

"He's the best I've ever seen play," Houston's leading scorer, Akeem Olajuwon, said. "He can shoot from everywhere."

"Larry Bird gets my vote as the best total player of all time," Jones added.

The victory allowed the Celtics to maintain their homecourt advantage in the best-of-seven series, although the next three games are scheduled for Houston's Summit on Sunday, Tuesday and Thursday.

"We wanted to come out strong tonight," Kevin McHale, who followed Bird with 25 points, said. "We came out really fired up. Last year, the series was lost right here in the second game. We're thinking Game 3. If we get it, we know it will be hard for them to come back."

Last season, when the Celtics lost for only the second time in what is now 18 finals appearances, the lost to the Lakers in Game 2 and fell 4-2 in the series.

If Boston can win the next two, it will have its 16th title in 18 trips to the finals. With that sweep, the Celtics also would have the best regular-season-playoff record in NBA history. The 1971-72 Los Angeles Lakers were 69-13 in the regular season and 12-3 in the playoffs for the all-time best overall record of 81-16. The Celtics, 67-15 this season, would finish 15-1 with a sweep for a combined 82-16.

The Rockets had cut a 10-point halftime deficit to 64-56 early in the third quarter before Bird completed an 11-1 streak with a three-pointer and a long two-point jumper for a 75-57 margin. Boston outscored the Rockets 34-19 in the third quarter for a 94-69 lead. The Celtics continued to expand on that advantage for most of the rest of the game, leading by as many as 27 points in the fourth quarter.

Dennis Johnson added 18 for the Celtics. Olajuwon, who scored 33 points for Houston in its 112-100 loss in Game 1, paced the Rockets with 21.

Ralph Sampson, who had only two points in the opener, came back with 18 for Houston despite sustaining a cut under his left eye that required stitches in the second quarter.

The Rockets and Celtics met once before in the finals, in 1981, with Boston winning 4-2. It was the only trip to the championship series in the Rockets' 19-year history, the first four of which the team was located in San Diego.

Only four teams in NBA history came back from a 2-0 deficit to win a playoff series. Two of those comebacks came in the finals, with Boston beating the Lakers in seven games in 1969 and Portland rallying to win four straight against Philadelphia in 1977.

The Celtics started the game by hitting five of their first six shots, including a three-pointer by Bird that gave them an 11-4 lead.

Chap losses put end to title hopes

From Staff Reports

TYLER — Quarterfinal action Thursday at the National Junior College Athletic Association's men's national tennis tournament was rough on Midland College and, as a result, dashed all hopes of adding a second title to the one the women won last week.

"Right now, the best we can see is a possibility of a third place finish," said MC tennis coach Joe Williams.

Anderson of South Carolina did the biggest share of damage to the Chaps' title hopes, winning 2-of-3 singles matches in Thursday's play.

"The three losses sent title hopes down the drain," said Williams.

Midland College's top two players, Jean Roussell and Eric Lingg were the victims of Anderson's No. 1 and No. 2 players. Roussell dropped a 6-4, 7-5 decision to Maracio Silva while Lingg lost 7-6, 6-2 to David Jenkins.

MC No. 3 Emil Bijleveld kept it from being a clean sweep by Anderson, posting a 6-1, 6-3 victory over Tawn Harden.

In other singles action, the Chaps managed to send two other players into today's semifinal action.

At No. 4, Jos Warmoes defeated Michael Kenny of North Greenville, 6-0, 6-3 and No. 5 Herve Rousseau downed Aleja Porcella of Abrahani Baldwin, 6-4, 6-4.

In doubles competition, Roussell and rousseau teammed up to claim a fourth MC victory in the quarterfinals, beating Fahey-Anderson of Tyler, 7-6, 6-2.

Lingg-Warmoes were eliminated from doubles play by Holt-Freyman of Jefferson State, 6-2, 6-3.

All players who make it to the semifinal round are guaranteed NJCAA All-American honors.

The four Midland College victories did move the Chaps up in the team standings, but well off the pace of the leaders.

Jefferson State of Alabama and Anderson are tied for the lead with 32 points each while McLennan, a runnerup uo Midland in the Region V tournament, is alone in third place at 28.

Florida Junior College and North Greenville of South Carolina are tied for fifth at 26 followed by Midland College in sixth at 26, Miami-Dade South and Tyler tied for seventh at 24, Abraham Baldwin in ninth with 22, Wharton in 10th at 21 and Mesa in 11th with 20.

NJCAA tournament finals are scheduled for Saturday morning.

Top seeds gain fourth round

French Open

PARIS (AP) — Top seeds Ivan Lendl and Martina Navratilova advanced to the fourth round of the French Open tennis championships with straight-set victories today.

Lendl, from Czechoslovakia, beat Argentina's Christian Miniussi 6-1, 6-1, 6-2, while Navratilova, from the United States, defeated West German Claudia Porwick 6-3, 6-3.

"The matches have been easier than I expected," said Lendl, who, like Navratilova, has not lost a set so far.

Lendl, the French Open champion in 1984 and a finalist last year, had a good workout against Miniussi, who reached the main draw through a qualifying tournament last weekend. But Lendl's game was too strong for the 18-year-old from Buenos Aires.

Also advancing was the women's No. 7 seed, American Kathy Rinaldi. She posted a 6-1, 6-2 victory over another U.S. player, Roz Fairbanks.

And U.S. teen-ager Mary Joe Fernandez continued her surprising advance, beating England's Anne Hobbs 6-2, 6-0.

The string of upsets that eliminated four seeded players Thursday struck again in the first match today.

World junior champion Laura Garrone of Italy beat 10th-seeded Zina Garrison of the United States 6-2, 6-2.

"She is the best player I've beaten" said Garrone, 18, last year's junior women's champion at the French and U.S. Opens. "This is my most important victory."

Garrison, ranked 12th in the world, said Garrone played steady if unspectacular tennis and blamed her own mistakes for the loss.

"She didn't do anything to me," Garrison said. "She basically hit the ball back, and I missed."

Tigers tip Angels, 7-4

Sutton misses 298th victory

Associated Press

Rod Carew was gone and Reggie Jackson was not in the lineup. Still, Detroit left-hander Dave LaPoint had to face Don Sutton, who was trying to win his 298th career game.

"Every time you play the Angels it's like you're going against six Hall of Famers and three others trying to make it," said LaPoint, who held California hitless for five innings in the Detroit Tigers' 7-4 victory Thursday night.

LaPoint gave up an infield hit to Gary Pettis leading off the sixth and left the game after Dick Schofield hit a grand slam in the seventh that pulled the Angels within 6-4.

But reliever Willie Hernandez shut out California the rest of the way and LaPoint raised his record to 2-3, with both victories coming against the Angels.

Detroit's fifth straight triumph also helped erase LaPoint's memories of Anaheim Stadium. As a rookie with Milwaukee in late 1980, he got shelled in his only previous appearance there.

"That first time, I faced seven batters and got only one of them them out — Rod Carew," LaPoint recalled. "I was out of there before my wife could get to her seat."

Carew was released at the end of last season and Jackson, a left-handed batter, did not start against the left-handed LaPoint.

Lou Whitaker and Lance Parrish hit home runs and the Tigers pinned the loss on Don Sutton, 2-5.

LaPoint gave up five hits in his six-plus innings. Singles by George Hendrick and Rick Burleson and a walk to Bobby Grich set up Schofield's second career slam.

Hernandez took over after Schofield's fifth home run of the season and stopped the Angels on two hits the rest of the way for his seventh save.

Doubles by Dave Collins and Parrish made it 1-0 in the first inning and Whitaker led off the third with his fourth homer.

Tom Brookens' RBI forceout and a throwing error by Grich at second base allowed Detroit to make it 4-0 in the fourth against Sutton.

The Tigers added two runs in the seventh against Chuck Finley, who was making his major-league debut. Parrish walked and scored on a pinch-double by Brian Harper, who then came home on a single by Darnell Coles.

Parrish led off the ninth with his 200th career homer, his 10th this season. Parrish's blow came against Todd Fischer, who was also making his major-league debut.

American League

Yankees 2, Mariners 0

Dennis Rasmussen allowed three hits in 8 2-3 innings and Mike Pagliarulo drove in the game's only runs with a homer and a double as New York beat Seattle in the Kingdome.

The Yankees have won nine of their last 11 games, and have beaten Seattle in nine of the last 10 meetings.

Rasmussen, 5-1, did not give up a hit after Alvin Davis led off the fourth inning with a single. Rasmussen, bidding for his first major-league shutout, left the game after walking Davis with two outs in the ninth, and Dave Righetti got the final out for his 12th save.

Pagliarulo had an RBI double in the second off Milt Wilcox, 0-6, and led off the seventh with his ninth home run of the season.

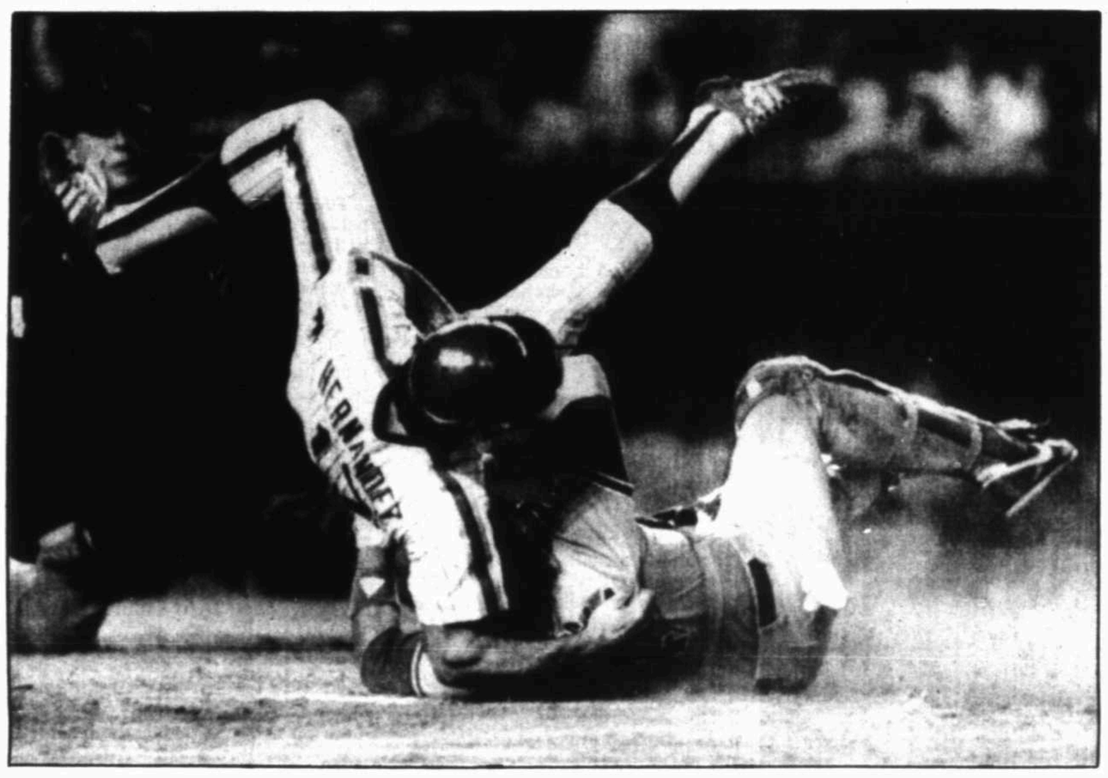

Orioles 8, A's 6

Larry Sheets drove in four runs with two homers, Cal Ripken added a two-run shot and reliever Brad Havens pitched 4 2-3 perfect innings as visiting Baltimore beat Oakland.

The Orioles won for the 15th time in their last 18 games and sent Oakland to its fifth straight loss.

Havens, 2-1, took over after the A's had ripped starter Ken Dixon. Jose Canseco's 14th homer, which raised his major league-leading RBI total to 44, and Carney Lansford's fifth home run, along with four Baltimore errors, helped Oakland take a 6-5 lead after three innings.

Don Aase worked the final two innings for his 12th save.

New York Met Keith Hernandez flips over Los Angeles catcher Mike Scioscia at the plate as he is tagged out in the seventh inning Thursday. Even without the run, the Mets won, 5-2.

Valenzuela has off night

Mets tag Dodger ace, 5-2

Associated Press

If Fernando Valenzuela was a little off his game, Manager Davey Johnson figured the New York Mets must be on theirs.

"I think it says something for our offense that we scored five runs off Valenzuela," the New York Mets manager said. "That's probably unheard of against him."

Indeed, in his last two starts, Valenzuela had pitched two-hit shutouts against Montreal and Philadelphia. He had won six of his last seven decisions and his last three starts.

Thursday night, however, he lost to former teammate Sid Fernandez as the Mets got game-breaking doubles from Ray Knight and Keith Hernandez to beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 5-2. Fernandez, 5-1, gave up both runs on four hits through eight innings, while Valenzuela, 7-3, yielded all five runs on six hits and an uncharacteristically high six walks in seven innings.

"Still, I thought Fernando pitched well enough to win," Dodgers Manager Tom Lasorda said. "But the Mets have a hell of a club. Everything they're doing now is right. Their pitching is good, starters and relievers."

The victory was New York's fifth in a row and gave the Mets a three-game sweep of the series with Los Angeles. In the two earlier victories, the Mets got complete-game victories from both Ron Darling and Dwight Gooden. Darling gave up one run and Gooden two as the Dodgers were held to five runs in the three games.

National League

"We're scoring more runs now than at the same time last year," said Dodgers catcher Mike Scioscia. "But the Mets have the toughest pitching staff in the league."

Although he would not admit it, Fernandez had to be particularly pleased with his performance against the Dodgers, who traded him to the Mets after the 1983 season for left-handed reliever Carlos Diaz and utilityman Bob Bailor.

"It's just another game," the soft-spoken Fernandez said. "It's no grudge match."

Johnson, however, knew how important the game was to Fernandez, 1-3 in his career against the Dodgers before Thursday night. "I think this is definitely a high spot for Sid," Johnson said. "To come in here and beat the Dodgers, especially against Valenzuela, it's something he'll remember for a while."

The Mets got a run in the second on George Foster's leadoff homer, his sixth of the season and fourth against the Dodgers. Los Angeles tied it 1-1 without a hit in the fourth. Mariano Duncan walked, stole second, went to third on a fly ball and scored on a groundout.

The Mets scored twice in the fourth. Knight doubled home a run and scored on a single by Tim Teufel to make it 3-1.

Mike Marshall homered to lead off the Dodgers fifth, extending his hitting streak to a career-high 15 games, but the Mets scored twice more in the seventh on a two-run double by Hernandez.

"We always get up for the Dodgers," Hernandez said. "They're a good team, and they bring out the best in us. They have as fine a pitching staff as there is. ... If I had to pick between their pitching staff and ours, I don't know which I'd pick."

Phillies 5, Giants 4

Slump-ridden Milt Thompson singled home Steve Jeltz with two outs in the ninth inning to give Philadelphia the win and a sweep of its three-game series with visiting San Francisco.

Jeltz walked with one out, went to second on Greg Gross' 100th career pinch-hit and to third on Jeff Stone's fly to center before Thompson, hitless in his previous four at-bats in the game, singled up the middle off Greg Minton, 2-3.

Glenn Wilson rallied the Phillies from a 3-0 deficit with a three-run homer in the fourth inning.

Don Carman, 2-0, the fourth Philadelphia pitcher, pitched three shutout innings for the win.

J-Mets edge Gators to win eighth straight

Associated Press

Jeff McKnight's game-winning RBI single gave Jackson a 7-6 victory over Beaumont in the nightcap of a Texas League doubleheader, earning the Mets their eighth straight win and first place in the league's Eastern Division.

The Mets also won the opener, 5-3. And in other TL action Thursday night, San Antonio came from behind to edge Shreveport 5-4.

The Arkansas-Midland doubleheader was postponed because of rain, and inclement weather forced the cancellation of the Tulsa-El Paso contest.

In Jackson, McKnight went 4-4 in the nightcap, hitting two doubles and another single before his game-winner in the bottom of the eighth.

Texas League

Jim Adamczak, 1-5, entered the game in the sixth inning and picked up the win in relief, giving him his first victory. The Gators' Joe Bitker, 3-3, was credited with the loss.

In the opener, Beaumont's Mike Devutch hit a two-run homer to highlight the Gators' scoring. They led 3-0 after the top of the second inning, but the Mets rallied to score two in the bottom of the second and three more in the fourth.

Wray Bergendahl, 3-2, struck out five while picking up the win. Joe Bitker, 3-3, absorbed the loss.

After a day off Friday, the Mets will take their 27-19 record to Tulsa. Beaumont falls to 24-26.

In Shreveport, the Captains led 3-0 after the first inning and scored another run in the fourth on an RBI single by Angel Escobar.

San Antonio got onto the scoreboard in the third inning with an RBI single from Gray Newsom, and Chris Chapman's two-run double in the seventh brought the Dodgers within one run of a tie, 4-3.

San Antonio scored two more runs in ninth, the winning run a bases-loaded walk. San Antonio got 11 walks from four Shreveport pitchers, although Scott Medvin, 3-3, recorded the loss as the Captains fell to 25-23.

Kevin Devine, 2-0, pitched the win as San Antonio increased to 21-28.

USFL uses Jets to help prove case against NFL

NEW YORK (AP) — The USFL has begun its campaign to prove that the NFL violated antitrust laws by holding out the promise that the New York Jets would return from New Jersey in order to block a USFL franchise from playing in New York City.

The 4-year-old league began that campaign Wednesday when it called Vincent Tese, head of New York's Urban Development Corporation, as the first witness in its "New York Conspiracy" part of its $1.5 billion antitrust suit. But Harvey Myerson, the USFL's attorney, was not permitted by U.S. District Judge Peter K. Leisure to continue with questions that attempted to link NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle to Tese's dealings with the Jets.

Tese outlined six months of negotiations with the Jets, who moved to Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J. after the 1983 season. He added that in one meeting and several telephone calls, Hess had given him reason for optimisim about the Jets' return. But Tese said that last January, after the UDC designated Donald Trump, owner of the USFL's New Jersey Generals as the builder of the proposed stadium in New York, Hess began to turn cooler about the deal.

"I called Mr. Hess and told him we'd gone with the Trump Organization," Tese said. "I told him we had the structure of a deal that made great economic sense and I suggested we set up a meeting.

"He said he didn't want to come over, that he wanted me to put it in writing. I said that I was somewhat flabbergasted about negotiating in writing. I said that he's a businessman and I've been a businessman and I believe in going eyeball to eyeball."

Tese said he eventually met with Hess and became convinced there would be no deal, particularly after a letter from Tese that objected to Trump's plans to build a stadium in which a percentage of the seats would be sold on a condominium basis. Later, Tese said, he decided that Hess had never really contemplated returning and that he told that to New York Gov. Mario Cuomo.

"I think I said to him that in retrospect I dont think he (Hess) ever planned to make a deal," Tese said.

But when Myerson asked "If you had learned that there had been an understanding or agreement with Commissioner Rozelle..." NFL attorney Robert Fiske objected. Leisure sustained the objection on the basis that it was hearsay.

Earlier Thursday, Jack Donlan, executive director of the NFL Management Council, wound up seven hours on the witness stand.

Donlan continued to deny any anticompetitive intent in the two "smoking guns" that Myerson had put in his hand. He said:

— The presentation to 60 NFL executives by Prof. Michael Porter of the Harvard Business School was designed only to help NFL executives compete in the salary war then going on. Myerson contends that the Feb. 29, 1984 presentation was part of a grand scheme to "conquer" the USFL.

— His 1983 memo titled "Spending the USFL Dollar" contained ideas designed to save money for both leagues. Donlan also said the memo, which suggests that the NFL bid for lower-priced USFL players to force the new league to pay them more, was never circulated outside the Management Council offices after he was told it was impractical.

UNLV defeats Australia, 87-78

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Freddie Banks scored 13 of his 15 points in the second half as the University of Nevada-Las Vegas defeated Australia 87-78 Thursday in an exhibition basketball game.

The victory evened the Runnin' Rebels mark at 1-1. Australia won Wednesday night, 100-95.

Jarvis Basnight added 18 points for UNLV and Armon Gilliam grabbed 12 rebounds.

Australia was led by Calvin Bruton, a former American who recently became a naturalised citizen. Bruton shot an impressive 72 percent from the floor to finish with 19 points.

Format change okay, Keep CWS in Omaha

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Miami baseball coach Ron Frazier says his 1985 College World Series championship was worth about $6,500 to his school, a paycheck that could increase dramatically under a Final Four tournament proposal to begin in 1988.

The eight coaches playing in the 1986 NCAA college baseball championship agreed Thursday that money would be a factor in changing the current eight-team, double-elimination tournament to a four-team, single-elimination event. The plan is expected to bring a big-money television contract to the NCAA.

"I think if there is a good chance for the schools to increase revenues, they'll go ahead with it," Frazier said during the CWS kickoff news conference.

But he and other coaches said it would disappointing if a Final Four change meant leaving Omaha, home of the College World Series for 37 consecutive years.

Frazier also said it would be disappointing if the change meant losing ESPN, the cable sports network that has televised the CWS and regular season college baseball for several years.

"I'd hate to see college baseball break away from such a fine tradition and a tradition this city has upheld with so much pride," Loyola Marymount coach Dave Snow said.

ARIZONA COACH Jerry Kindall said there were aspects of the Final Four plan that he liked, including an expansion of the regional tournament field to 48 teams, standardized six-team regionals and a four-team final. Currently some regionals have six and some four teams.

But Kindall said he doesn't like the single-elimination prospects for a Final Four.

Oklahoma State coach Gary Ward and Indiana State coach Bob Warn said they put their trust in the NCAA Executive Committee to make such a move only in the best interest of the schools. That committee took the Final Four suggestion from the NCAA Baseball Committee and made some changes, according to Florida State coach Mike Martin, who is a member of the baseball committee.

Skip Bertman, head coach of LSU, said he would hate to see the tradition of the Omaha tournament broken. But he said what disturbed him most about the Executive Committee plan was a lack of apparent input from baseball coaches.

Martin said the potential for revenue was impressive under a Final Four in which television networks could determine when a championship game would be played. A double-elimination format doesn't provide for that, he said.

John Winkin, Maine's head coach was delayed in route to Omaha and did not attend the news conference.

The 1986 CWS begins Friday with LSU, 54-12, meeting Loyola, 49-13, at 4:10 p.m. CDT. Maine, 41-21, faces Arizona, 45-18, at 7:10 p.m. In Saturday's first-round games, Miami, 46-15, meets Oklahoma State, 54-13, at 4:10 p.m., followed by Indiana State, 48-19, against Florida State, 57-11.

THE PLAYER who beat Lendl in the finals a year ago, Sweden's Mats Wilander, almost had an early exit Thursday.

Wilander, seeded second, needed more than four hours and every trick in his repertoire to beat unseeded American Aaron Krickstein 6-1, 3-6, 5-7, 6-3, 6-4 in a classic clay court match.

"A few times I felt lucky," Wilander said. "He was the one who was doing things I was fighting harder. That's how I won."

Willander outscored Krickstein 165-164.

"It's a tough one to lose," said the 18-year-old from Grosse Point, Mich., ranked No. 36 in the world.

Stefan Edberg, the fifth seed from Sweden, headed the list of big-name losers Thursday. He was beaten 6-7, 7-5, 6-3, 2-6, 6-4 by another Swede, Mikael Pernfors, who won two NCAA men's singles championships at the University of Georgia. Pernfors was down 1-5 in the second set before starting his comeback.

Mary Joe Fernandez, 15 years old and a straight-A student at Carrollton High school in Miami, Fla., defeated No. 14 Andrea Temesvari of Hungary, 5-7, 6-2, 6-3.

"I was thrilled," said Fernandez, who turned professional just four months ago and is ranked 50th in the world.

Mercedes Paz of Argentina, beat No. 8 Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria, 5-7, 7-6, 7-5.

And as the day neared an end, Claudio Panatta of Italy, squandered six match points before beating 10th-seeded Thierry Tulasne of France, 0-6, 3-6, 6-2, 6-4, 6-4.

Panatta's brother, Adriano, won the French Open in 1976.

That more than doubled the number of seeds eliminated so far in the two-week tournament, from three to seven.

MOST OF the seeded players had little trouble advancing Thursday, led by women's No. 2 Chris Evert Lloyd, and West Germany's No. 3 seeds, Boris Becker and Steffi Graf.

Lloyd won her third consecutive straight-set match and said she was pleased with most aspects of her game.

"I've been happy with my serve. I've been happy with my groundstrokes," she said. "I just need to be tested a little more."

Coming up for her in the fourth round is ninth-seeded Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina, who defeated countrywoman Ivanna Madruga-Osses 6-3, 6-3. Sabatini also hasn't lost a set.

Nor has Graf, the 16-year-old who won her 23rd consecutive match 6-2, 6-1 over Marcella Mesker of the Netherlands.

"If it's all going to be like this, I won't complain," Graf said. She plays unseeded Pam Casale of the United States in Round 4.

Becker lost his first set of the tournament but beat Yugoslavia's Bruno Oresar 6-0, 6-0, 6-7, 6-3.

ANGELS

But McLemore tripled in two runs in the bottom of the third to narrow the margin to 3-2 and looked certian to tie the game. But the rain came and all statistics were wiped out, including McLemore's two-run triple.

The two lost games could figure heavily in the first half Texas League race. Going into Thursday's washed out doubleheader, Midland trailed El Paso by 1½ games in the West Division while Arkansas held a meager ½-game margin over Jackson in the East. A sweep or double loss by either team could have been very important.

It will be interesting to see if the Angels lose the first half race by 1½ games or less. That's when Midlanders will remember the week when it rained in the Permian Basin.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: New opportunities and rewards stem from your past efforts. A special project produces tangible results sooner than expected. Acquaintances find you eccentric but wonderful company. Tone down the flamboyant aspects of your personality when dealing with conservative business associates. The ideal romantic partner will share your interest in the offbeat. Your generous and tolerant attitude makes you an understanding and deeply loved parent.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: box-office champ Clint Eastwood, actress Sharon Gless of "Cagney & Lacey," football's Joe Namath, Brooke Shields, super lawyer Edward Bennett Williams, Prince Rainier of Monaco, Rev. Norman Vincent Peale, singer Johnny Paycheck.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Be prepared to sign an agreement that will benefit the entire family. Pursuing your short-term goals will produce the best results. A close friendship could turn romantic.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): New partnerships prove beneficial. An old wound is finally healed. Intimate gatherings at home are favored over an evening on the town. Good nutrition is linked to good health.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Avoid someone who creates negative situations. A busy but productive weekend lies ahead. Children will bring you joy if you open your heart to them.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Travel leads to an important romantic decision. Make a date with the apple of your eye. Be objective about an idea that starts with a parent or child. You will feel more relaxed.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your fears are unfounded. Get together with people you haven't seen for a while. Share an idea and watch it grow into something very special. A tempestuous romance excites you. Avoid impulsive promises.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Stick to a family tradition when making weekend plans. Consult an expert if uncertain about a financial matter. Your relationship with mate is more stable than in the past.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Budget worries will fade if you keep spending to a minimum. Sensible eating habits and adequate rest are essential for good health. Encourage mate to be practical.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You feel like a new person after spending some time outdoors. A fishing or backpacking trip could set the stage for happy romance. Avoid someone who spends a lot of time complaining.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You now see a longtime relationship in a new light. Guard against theft and deception. Writing a letter could change your life. An excellent day for real estate transactions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Flexibility will lighten your load at work and at home. Lean on someone who is loyal and trustworthy. Enliven your weekend by seeking out the unusual. Do more socializing. Extend invitations.

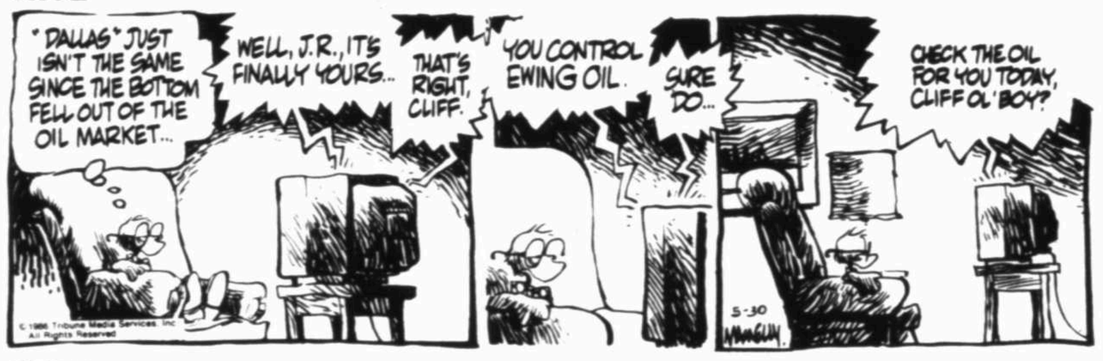

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Someone could make a false promise. Creative activities make your leisure time more interesting. Romance takes an important step forward. Travel proves educational and profitable.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Children change your plans for the weekend, making it far more interesting! A phone call or letter brings good cheer. Forget an old resentment and get on with more important things.

1 ♡	Pass	1 NT	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Nine of ♠.

It is all very well to know that every card tells a story. You have to learn to read the book.

We do not envy North's plight at his third turn. He had started to describe his distribution, but he had not yet shown his strength. He eventually decided that, although his shape was not ideal, a rebid of two no trump gave a reasonably accurate picture of his holding. South had just enough to go on to game.

West led the top of his spade sequence, and a natural play for declarer would be allow that to run round to his hand. That would guarantee three tricks in the suit and seven overall. The only place then to look for the two extra tricks would be in the club suit.

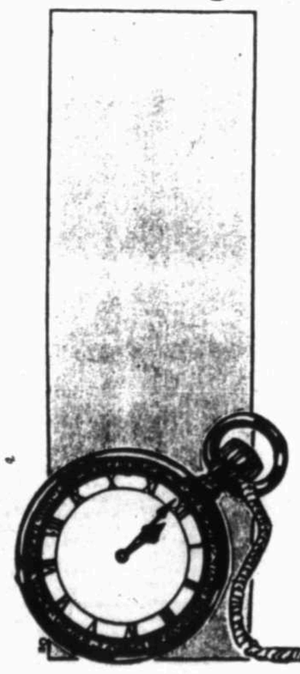

That, however, would require not only a successful finesse in the suit, but a 4-3 break as well. Such a combination is considerably against the odds.

The opening lead almost surely marked East for the queen of spades. If that were so, a more promising line presented itself. The diamond suit could be set up if it broke 3-3, or 4-2 with one hand having a doubleton honor.

Declarer won the king of spades at trick one, cashed the ace of diamonds and came to hand with the king of hearts to lead a low diamond! East's king won, but he could do declarer no harm. His heart return was won on the table and a spade was led to the jack. When that held, it was all over but the shouting. Declarer continued with the jack of diamonds to the queen, and he still had the ace of spades as an entry to get back to his hand to cash the long diamonds. Declarer ended up with an overtrick.

Iacocca embarrassed about statue

Iacocca

NEW YORK (AP) — Chrysler chairman Lee Iacocca, who led efforts to restore the Statue of Liberty, says he was red-faced when he realized he hadn't visited the monument since he was a child.

Iacocca said despite numerous trips to New York City, he never even took either of his daughters to the statue, and that he only returned to the site in 1982, after President Reagan asked him to lead the restoration efforts.

"The answer was simple and it was embarrassing," Iacocca wrote in Sunday's Parade magazine. "The Statue of Liberty didn't mean the same thing to me that it did to my father."

Iacocca said his father, an immigrant from Italy, took him to the statue when he was 5 years old.

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Singer Jimmy Buffett and artist Robert Wyland have unveiled a life-size wall painting of a manatee and its baby to make people aware of the endangered marine mammal.

Buffett, chairman of Florida's Save the Manatee Committee, said Orlando International Airport was chosen for the 8-by-14-foot painting because more than 1 million passengers a month pass through the terminal.

"We're trying to make people aware of the plight of the manatee, which represents the quality of life in Florida," Buffett said.

Wyland, 30, considered one of the nation's foremost environmental artists, spent two weeks on the painting, which he valued at $100,000.

PARIS (AP) — Chris Evert Lloyd says Life magazine misquoted her when it reported she had said that she and Martina Navratilova laugh at the chances of other players replacing them at the top of women's tennis.

"I definitely didn't say that," Lloyd said Thursday at the French Open.

The article, in the June issue of Life, quotes Lloyd in a photo caption as saying: "Other girls say they're going to replace us at the top, but we just laugh."

Asked about the comment at a news conference, Lloyd replied: "I was misquoted a lot.... Martina and I don't laugh at the other girls."

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Readers of "Beetle Bailey" in the Lexington Herald-Leader had to look elsewhere for the comic strip Thursday after an editor decided it was sexist and pulled it from the paper.

"I would not run a strip if it was racist or poked fun of blacks, Poles or Jews," said Joel Rawson, executive editor of the newspaper. "And I sure won't run one if I think it's sexist."

In Thursday's strip, Sgt. Snorkel asked Capt. Scabbard why the personnel office sent Sgt. Lugg, a woman, to his office. The captain replied, with Sgt. Lugg in view, "The only time I've talked with them was to request an overseas assignment. I asked them to send me abroad."

Pam Ryer, of King Features Syndicate in New York, said there had been no calls from readers that the strip had been pulled from other newspapers. King Features handles the distribution of Beetle Bailey.

WASHINGTON (LAT) — The young man with what was believed to be a thick Russian accent showed up Thursday at the Bethesda, Md., offices of publisher Adler & Adler clutching the June issue of the Armed Forces Journal. He identified himself as being from the Soviet Embassy working in the area of military affairs and said he wanted to see a copy of the book "American Can Win" by Sen. Gary Hart and William Lind that had been reviewed in the Armed Forces Journal he was carrying.

He pointed out to the publishing company owner Jim Adler that he had had a difficult time finding his firm. Adler said Thursday he asked the man why he didn't go to a book store. The man said he didn't know he could get the book in a book store. He offered to buy one and Adler directed him to a nearby bookstore.

WASHINGTON (LAT) — If you think you've seen Sylvester Stallone and his wife Brigitte Nielsen around town this weekend, you're probably right. The athletic Stallone and his equally athletic wife will be in town for the 18th Annual District of Columbia Special Olympics Spring Chapter Games at Gallaudet College. To kickoff the games, Stallone and Ms. Nielsen will lead area law enforcement personnel in a torch run from the steps of the Capitol to the college.

On Saturday, Stallone, himself a polo player, will throw out the first ball at the International All-Star Polo Benefit Polo Match at the Potomac Polo Club. Stallone's father, Frank Stallone, also a polo player, is a member of the club. The Saturday match, which brings in the highest-scoring polo players from all over the world, is part of a weekend, including a ball Friday night at the Department of Agriculture patio to benefit the Washington Hospital Center Research Foundation for Spinal Cord Injury.

WASHINGTON (LAT) — Jeff Stein, former editor of the City Paper and the Washington Weekly, has his new magazine, "fathers" ready for June publication, just in time for Father's Day. The cover is an old style color tinted black-and-white photograph of the country's first father, President Reagan as seen by his son Ron Jr. And it's not a "Daddy Dearest" episode. Stein says Reagan as a father comes off much like Reagan as president — a nice guy. One piece of advice to his son: "He told me it was a mistake to sleep with a woman you wouldn't want to be seen walking down the street with."

FARMINGTON, Conn. (AP) — John G. Martin, who introduced vodka to the American public, died Thursday. He was 80.

Martin was president of G.F. Heublein and Brothers, based in Hartford, Conn., in 1939 when the company acquired rights to Smirnoff Vodka. Heublein promoted vodka as a mixer for cocktails, developing such drinks as the Moscow Mule, the Bloody Mary, the Screwdriver and the Vodka Gimlet. Martin was chairman of the company from 1961 until he retired in 1966. Heublein was acquired by R.J. Reynolds Industries Inc. in 1982.

WASHINGTON (AP) — H. Arnold Karo, a former director of the U.S. Coast and Geodetic Survey, died May 23 of respiratory failure. He was 82.

Karo was transferred from the Survey to the Army Air Force during World War II, when he was commanding officer of the Air Force Aeronautical Chart Center in St. Louis. Karo directed the Survey, which provides coastal maps and charts for the nation, from 1955 to 1965. He was also deputy administrator of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's predecessor agency, the Environmental Science Services Administration, from 1965 until his retirement in 1967.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lurene Tuttle, an actress whose radio and television career spanned a half century, died Wednesday. She was 79.

Miss Tuttle began her radio career in the 1930s on such comedy classics as "Duffy's Tavern" and "The Great Gildersleeve." She played "Junior's mother" on Red Skelton's radio series and Sam Spade's secretary on "Sam Spade" in the 1940s. Miss Tuttle's television credits included "Life With Father" in 1953, the first live color series originating from Hollywood.

Couples ties course record with 64

Kemper Open

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — Fred Couples, who won the Kemper Open three years ago, would like to play himself out of a personal slump this week on the Congressional Country Club course.

The way he played Thursday, he just may be doing that.

"I told my caddy I need one good round or one good shot to get back my confidence," said Couples who shot a 64 to take the first-round lead of the $500,000 tournament. "I haven't had much confidence lately."

After his round, which tied the course record at the 7,173-yard, par-72 suburban Washington country club, Couples said jokingly, "I don't know who played for me today. It's been a while since I've had anything like this to be excited about.

"That was one of the best rounds I've played on the tour, putting-wise," he said. "It really felt good to play well for a change."

However, 57 other players shot par or better on what normally is a tough Congressional course, but which is playing a lot shorter this year because of the lack of rain in the nation's capital.

Three strokes behind Couples are relative unknowns Tom Sieckmann, Charles Bolling, and Larry Mize, who almost won the Kemper last year, eventually losing to Bill Glasson.

"It would be an especially big thrill to win this week after I let it get away last year," Mize said of his round of 67. "It was a disappointing loss last year but you have to go on. If I let it bother me me, I'd be in trouble."

Four players are at 68: Leonard Thompson, Davil Ogrin, Dennis Trixler and Mike Reid.

One stroke behind them are Bob Eastwood, Tommy Valentine, Billy Pierot and Vance Heafner.

Dao Forsman, Rick Dalpos, Bobby Wadkins, Dan Halldorson, John Adamas, J. C. Snead and Andrew Magee all shot 70.

The tournament lost some of its glitter on Wednesday when the tour's leading money winner, Andy Bean, dropped out because of a bad back. On Thursday, the tour's fourth leading money winner and two-time champion this year, Calvin Peete, dropped out because of problems with a bad knee.

Of the top five money winners, only No. 2 Greg Norman, a former Kemper winner, remained in the field. He shot par 72.

Florida, Miami of Florida gain NCAA women's tie

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Junior Page Dunlap shot a 3-under-par 70 Thursday to help defending champion Florida take a share of the lead at the midway point of the 5th NCAA women's golf championship at Ohio State University's Scarlet course.

The Gators and first-round leader Miami of Florida stood at 6-over-par 590 after two rounds on the 6,100-yard layout. Southern California vaulted from sixth place to third with the day's best round, a 1-under-par 291. The Trojans have a 596 total midway through the 72-hole event.

Florida, No. 1 in the NCAA's computer rankings, compiled a 1-over-par 293 total Thursday. Miami, which won the 1984 crown, had a 296 total for the day.

Miami Coach Lela Cannon played down the two Florida teams' rivalry.

"We just play the golf course," Cannon said. "I don't think our rivalry extends to the point that exists between the universities. I do think it says something for the state of Florida and its golf."

Dunlap's round lifted her into the lead for medalist honors at 3-under-par 143, one stroke ahead of Miami's Joy McAvoy and South Florida's Laurel Kean.

Garbacz shoots 65, hoping for first victory

LPGA

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Lori Garbacz is in an unfamiliar place — atop the leaderboard.

Garbacz, a non-winner in her eight years on the women's professional tour, registered a 7-under-par 65 Thursday and took the lead after the first round of the $300,000 LPGA Championship.

The 27-year-old Garbacz attacked the Grizzly Course at the Jack Nicklaus Sports Center with seven birdies and 11 pars.

"I don't think anybody is more surprised by my 65 than I am," Garbacz, 34th on the money list entering the tournament, said. "I haven't been hitting the ball well. But here I just tried to keep it in the fairway off the tee. ... I didn't really make any mistakes and that's why I shot a 65."

Garbacz, a traditionally slow starter, was asked when she last led a tournament.

"I can't remember," she said. "Whenever I break 74, I feel like I could win. I'm that bad of a first-round player. When I teed off this morning, I just was thinking about making the cut."

All but eight of the 27 subpar rounds on the first day of the tournament that offers a top prize of $45,000 were completed before a downpour that suspended play for more than an hour.

"(The course) is not going to get any easier," Garbacz said. "When I started my morning round (at 9:10 a.m.), there were no spike marks, the greens were holding and the fairways were immaculate."

One shot behind Garbacz, at 6-under-par 66, was Ayako Okamoto, winner of the Elizabeth Arden tournament earlier this year.

At 67 was Pat Bradley, who credited the mild weather and soft greens for her lofty position on the leader board.

"I've been here before when everything was bone dry and the greens were as hard as a rock. But I certainly didn't get that feeling today," she said.

Bradley, who leads the Ladies Professional Golf Association in money earned this year with $226,149, said she was in a prime position to make a run at her fourth major title.

Verplank's second 68 snaps NCAA men's tie

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Oklahoma State's Scott Verplank shot another 4-under-par 68 Thursday to break a three-way tie and claim the lead in the second round of the NCAA Division I men's golf championship.

Verplank finished the second round with an 8-under-par 136 to lift Oklahoma State out of fourth place into first place with a 3-under-par 573. He had scored 68 Wednesday on the par-72, 7,079-yard Bermuda Run Country Club couse.

Second and four strokes down was Doug Martin, who shot 68 but whose 140 second-round total wasn't enough to keep Oklahoma in first place. Oklahoma fell to second with 575.

Also lagging were Wake Forest's Tim Straub, who had tied for first on Wednesday but who shot 77 Thursday to finish the round with 145. Wake Forest was third with par 576.

Wednesday's other leader, Brad Clark of Clemson, scored 80 to finish the round with 4-over-par 148.

Verplank, who had no bogeys Thursday, birdied the par 4-second hole with a 7-iron and a 4-foot putt, then the par-5 fourth hole with a 4-iron and a 30-foot double putt.

After firing a birdie the par-4 fifth with an 8-iron and a 5-foot putt, he made par-4 on the seventh when he missed a 6-foot putt, finishing the front nine with a 3-under 33.

Verplank also lost birdies to make par-4 on the 13th and 14th holes when he missed putts of 8 to 10 feet, but he came back on the 15th with another birdie.

Martin had 20-foot birdie putts on the first and eighth holes, but bogeyed the seventh to finish the front nine at 1-under 35.

He shot a 4-foot birdie putt on the 10th, a 2-foot birdie putt on the 12th and a 3-foot birdie putt on the 13th but lipped the hole with a 12-foot putt to make par-4 on the 15th. He completed a 12-foot putt to make par-5 on the 17th.

UT basketball inks McLennan's Russell

AUSTIN (AP) — Baxter Russell, a former basketball player at Austin Crockett, has signed to play for the Texas Longhorns.

Russell, 6-foot-4, started at guard for McLennan Community College in Waco last season. He averaged 11 points, 3.8 assists and three rebounds a game.

McLennan Coach Ken DeWeese said, "His best asset is that he can play well defensively and he's a great passer. I think they'll appreciate his defensive ability."

NFL investigating Pats' gambling charges

BOSTON (AP) — New England wide receiver Irving Fryar, the subject of an investigation by the National Football League, has denied allegations that he gambled on football games.

"This is straight out of left field," Fryar told The Boston Herald in an interview published today. "I'm going to take a lie detector test to prove it.

"The whole truth is I don't know anything about this. That's the whole truth and nothing but the truth. I never, ever, never gambled on games."

Fryar said he planned to go to Dallas Monday to take a polygraph test arranged by his agent, Sherwood Blount.

"He's setting it up with one of the best polygraphers in Dallas. I'll make sure all the reporters are there to see the results so they can put the fact I'm innocent on the front page," Fryar said.

"I just want to put an end to this once and for all. Taking a lie detector test sems to be the best way of doing that. I shouldn't have to, but my reputation and my family's is at stake. If that's what it takes to clear my name, that's what I'll have to do."

Joe Browne, an NFL spokesman, confirmed Thursday the league was investigating allegations that Fryar and other members of the team bet on football games last season "in the same fashion as we routinely review rumors of this type."

New England Coach Raymond Berry declined to discuss the investigation, which was reported in The Boston Globe on Thursday, saying, "I don't think it's appropriate."

In a prepared statement, the Patriots said "it is important to point out that in speaking with league officials, they stressed that no other Patriot player is under investigation concerning this rumor."

The statement also emphasized that "there is and continues to be no hard evidence that Irving Fryar has gambled on a pro football game. The only fact is that the league is checking out this unsubstantiated rumor, as we asked them to do."

The statement also said, "It is tragic that a newspaper takes what is an unsubstiantiated rumor — and nothing more than that — and puts it out for public display — and in doing so, ruin a person's name."

Patriots General Manager Patrick Sullivan said, "As far as we're concerned, it's an unsubstantiated rumor."

Warriors' owner denies Mullin trade

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — New Golden State Warriors' owner Jim Fitzgerald has denied a report the team is considering trading Chris Mullin, last year's No. 1 draft pick.

"It's just hogwash, as far as I'm concerned," Fitzgerald told The Oakland Tribune in a telephone interview from his home at Janesville, Wis. "It's all news to me."

Fitzgerald said he heard the report broadcast by CBS during halftime of Thursday night's telecast of the NBA playoff game between the Boston Celtics and the Houston Rockets.

Cowboys hire CFL's Ackles as veep-pro personnel

DALLAS (AP) — Bob Ackles, the general manager of the British Columbia Lions of the Canadian Football League, has been hired as vice president-pro personnel for the NFL's Dallas Cowboys.

In the newly created position, Ackles, 47, will be in charge of evaluating and scouting pro talent, team spokesman Doug Todd said Thursday.

"It's obviously a great thrill for me to be able to work with such an organization as the Dallas Cowboys," Ackles said. "I've been in football for 33 years and I'm leaving probably the best football job in Canada, but the opportunity with the Cowboys is a great one and I'm looking forward to the challenge."

Ackles began his career in the CFL as a water boy with the Lions and worked his way up to general manager of the club, which last year won its first Grey Cup title in 21 years.

"I feel extremely fortunate and it was worth the wait to be able to find a person of Bob Ackles' background and experience for our pro personnel position," said Tex Schramm, the team's president and general manager. "He will bring a fresh outlook to our club in the pro personnel area.

"It's also very important that he has many friends in the NFL."

Nelson album 'new arrangements' of some of his old songs

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Ricky Nelson, who was killed in a plane crash New Year's Eve, has more records on the market now than he did during the final years of his life.

There are at least two albums: "All My Best," a collection of 17 of his greatest hits, and "Memphis Sessions," 10 songs he had recorded in 1978; most were never released.

There also are two singles and a videocassette featuring the rock 'n' roll singing idol who grew up on television in "The Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet."

The videocassette "In Concert" was taped a year ago at the Universal Amphitheatre in Los Angeles. Also out are two single releases, "You Know What I Mean" and "Dream Lover."

Nelson, 45, whose singing career spanned four decades, died with six others when a private DC-3 caught fire, crashed and burned in De Kalb, Texas. The plane was en route from Guntersville, Ala., to Dallas when it crashed about 50 feet short of an airport runway while attempting to make an emergency landing.

Nelson rerecorded the hits about a year ago for "All My Best" and produced the album himself. It is being marketed primarily through television offers.

"There are some new arrangements but they sound close to the old versions," said Andy McKie, director of national publicity for MCA Records in Los Angeles. "It's Ricky Nelson the way he played them in 1985."

The album includes such Nelson hits as "Travelin' Man," "Hello Mary Lou," "Poor Little Fool," "Garden Party," "Fools Rush In," "Stood Up," "It's Late," "Young World" and "Lonesome Town."

For the other album, which includes "That's Alright Mama" and "Dream Lover," Epic Records found master tapes of Nelson's 1978 Memphis recordings in their vaults in Nashville and Los Angeles. Officials spent two months locating the tapes and updating the music by adding drums and electric guitar to the tracks.

"We talked to people who knew him and listened to his old records," said Steve Buckingham, who produced the album. "We went back to what he used to be and tried to stay faithful to the old Ricky Nelson sound.

"Basically, it's Ricky Nelson with a rhythm section."

Other cuts on the LP include "True Love Ways," "It's All Over Now" and "Rave On."

Elvis Presley also had a hit with "That's Alright Mama." Bobby Darin's recording of "Dream Lover" was a hit and Bobby Womack had a hit with "It's All Over Now." "Rave On" was a hit for Buddy Holly and "True Love Ways" was a country music hit by Mickey Gilley.

Buckingham said Nelson recorded so many songs that had been previously cut by other artists because he didn't know what to record once he went into the studio.

"From what I was told, he didn't know what to cut and once he was there he picked up the guitar and fooled around and someone said, 'Why don't you cut that?' One thing lead to another. I understand his plan was to do basic rock 'n' roll," he said.

Epic Records did not speed up the release of the album so it could capitalize on Nelson's memory, Buckingham said.

"We could have gone in the week after the crash and rushed it out but we would not have been proud of it," he said. "We wanted to make it so that we would not be ashamed to put it out.

"It's delicate ground. We wanted not to take advantage of an unfortunate situation."

Nelson's last albums had been "Playing to Win" in 1981 and "Intakes" in 1977.

Buckingham said he's not sure why the 1978 recordings were never all released. "As best as I can piece together, it was recorded in Memphis and then just sat around," he said.

Although his career had been on the decline in recent years, Nelson was one of the most popular entertainers in the 1950s and '60s. He and his brother, David, appeared with their parents on the television series, which is still seen on some cable TV systems.

In 1957, at age 17, Nelson performed "Teenager's Romance" and "I'm Walkin'" on the show and they became his first million sellers.

Dollar jumps

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose sharply in early trading today, supported by expectations of improved U.S. economic performance. Gold bullion was holding steady at around $343.

Traders attributed the dollar's advance to Thursday's report by the U.S. Commerce Department of an unexpectedly strong 1.5 percent rise the April Index of Leading Indicators, the government's main measure of future economic activity.

An improvement in economic performance could keep U.S. interest rates from falling and possibly drive them higher, making dollar-denominated investments more attractive.

Midmorning dollar rates compared with levels in Europe late Thursday:

—2.311 West German marks, up from 2.2932

—1.9153 Swiss francs, up from 1.89875

—7.365 French francs, up from 7.3025

—2.595 Dutch guilders, up from 2.578

—1,582.50 Italian lire, up from 1,572

—1.3805 Canadian dollars, up from 1.37535

The British pound fell to $1.4825 from $1.4925.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 172.05 Japanese yen, up from 169.70 yen. It was the first time the dollar has reached the 172-yen level for more than a month. Later, in London, the dollar advanced further, to 173.425 yen.

Gold steady

Gold bullion edged up in London in light trading. The city's five biggest bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price of $343.35 a troy ounce, up from $342.50.

In Zurich, gold was quoted at a bid of $343.25, down from $343.50.

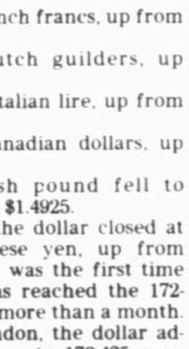

Earlier, in Hong Kong, the metal rose to a closing bid of $342.97, from $342.49.

Silver was bid in London at $5.23, up from $5.19.

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Crude oil prices slumped to the mid-$14 range on the world oil market on Thursday, their lowest level in three weeks.

The June futures contracts for West Texas Intermediate crude oil fell 29 cents, to $14.54 a barrel, on the New York Mercantile Exchange, and dropped by 15 cents, to $14.45, on the open market.

The West Texas futures price was the lowest since May 6, when it closed at $14.32 a barrel. It reached a three-month high of $17.16 a barrel on May 19.

Petroleum products showed a mixed record on the futures exchange. Heating oil prices rose slightly to close at 42 cents a gallon. On the other hand, prices of leaded and unleaded gasoline contracts each fell by nearly 2 cents, both finishing at 50 cents a gallon.

Oil analysts said the market was depressed by industry statistics showing a rise in inventories of gasoline and crude oil for the second consecutive week. This has had a bearish effect on the market because thus far the demand for gasoline has fallen short of early expectations.

Nauman Barakat, an oil analyst with Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co., said the American Petroleum Institute statistics indicate "that perhaps gasoline demand is not going to be as strong as originally projected." He added, "Refiners may have overbuilt their stocks."

Further, Barakat said that 5 million barrels of crude oil, drawn by the expectations of a strong demand for gasoline, were on their way to ports in the United States.

He said their arrival "could really have a disastrous effect on prices if the current situation continues."

Barakat also said that Saudi Arabia's recent increase in its production to 5 million barrels a day had contributed to the market's continuing slide.

Analysts said the Saudi increase had been undertaken to compensate for their drop in production to 3.6 million barrels a day earlier this month while the country renegotiated its netback contracts for Asia.

Peter C. Beutel, assistant director of Rudolf Wolff Futures Inc., agreed, saying: "There's some nervousness now about gasoline demand. There's been no upward velocity in the demand for weeks, despite logical reasons for it."

Coffee futures fell sharply on the Coffee, Sugar, and Cocoa Exchange in New York, settling from 4 cents-a-pound lower to nearly 12 cents lower on contracts with limits.

"There was a lot of weak sentiment because Brazil is reviewing its export policy," said Sandra Kaul, an analyst with Shearson Lehman Brothers.

Shell Oil Co. workers clear away dirt from the 24-inch crude oil pipeline ruptured by equipment in southwest Travis County Tuesday. The ruptured line gushed an estimated 1,400 barrels of crude into a wooded area at a site 10 to 15 miles north of the proposed route of the controversial All-American Pipeline Co. project.

Economy stronger

Indicators forecast good times

By The Associated Press

President Reagan says a strong reading on the government's main economic forecasting gauge is a signal of good times ahead, but the bond market reacted to robust economic statistics with a slump that pushed interest rates higher.

The Commerce Department said Thursday its Index of Leading Indicators rose by 1.5 percent in April, the strongest monthly gain in nearly three years.

At the same time, the Labor Department said business productivity — the efficiency with which the nation produces goods and services — soared by 3.6 percent in the first quarter from the previous three months.

The government said the rise in productivity indicated a recovery from the sharp decline in productivity at the end of last year.

In a speech to the National Association of Manufacturers, President Reagan welcomed the economic news.

But the bond market was not as receptive. Interest rates moved higher in the credit markets, on the perception, according to analysts, that a robust economy will drive up demand for credit, pushing interest rates — the price of credit — higher.

The trend intensified after the Federal Reserve Board said the nation's basic money supply rose $2.8 billion in mid-May, more than double what many analysts had predicted. This raised fears of renewed inflation, which could force interest rates even higher.

On Wall Street, the stock market rose to record highs for the second straight session, as traders apparently decided to concentrate on the prospects that the economic reports raised for improved business activity and corporate profits in the second half of the year, analysts said.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which closed at a record high on Wednesday, gained 4.07 on Thursday to 1,882.35.

In another report, the National Association of Purchasing Management said its composite index was up to 54.4 percent in May from 48.7 percent in April. A reading of above 50 percent indicates that the economy is in an expanding phase, below 50 percent indicates it is declining.

Justice recommends end to oil pipeline controls

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department on Thursday urged an end to federal regulation of more than 100 of the nation's interstate oil pipelines, saying competition in the industry would remain vigorous and that consumers would not be harmed by deregulation.

In a 155-page report, the department did say that because of anti-competitive concerns, the Trans Alaskan Pipeline System plus at least five, and possibly up to 11, lines shipping refined petroleum products should continue to undergo federal regulation.

All crude oil pipelines in the contiguous 48 states can be deregulated safely, Douglas H. Ginsburg, assistant attorney general in charge of the antitrust division, said in a statement. The Trans Alaskan Pipeline is the nation's largest crude oil pipeline.

Cleanup begins in Texas pipeline spill

AUSTIN (AP) — Removal of contaminated soil began Thursday after an underground oil pipeline spewed about 1,400 barrels of crude oil into a wooded area, officials said.

The line ruptured after being punctured by earth-moving equipment during road construction.

The accident in southwest Travis County sent oil gushing 30 feet into the air, stained trees and sprayed oil over about two acres, authorities said.

By Wednesday afternoon, workers had cleaned up most of the oil at the site on the edge of the Edwards Aquifer recharge zone about Slaughter Creek is about 600 yards from the pipe, but the oil did not get into the creek, officials said.

Texas Water Commission officials said they did not know if any oil might get into the aquifer, a water-bearing rock formation that is a major source of drinking water in the area.

"There is no way of telling right now about any potential contamination," said Max Woodfin, the commission's environmental coordinator.

The spill occurred Tuesday evening when an earth-mover put a gash one foot long and eight inches wide in the pipeline, according to officials of the Shell Pipeline Corp., which operates the pipeline.

Texas Eastern to move Canadian gas to New York

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston-based Texas Eastern Corp. will start moving Canadian natural gas into New York if the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission approves the agreement, company officials said.

Units of Texas Eastern and Consolidated Natural Gas Co., based in Pittsburgh, formed a joint partnership for transportation of Canadian natural gas supplies to the northeastern United States.

In the agreement, Texas Eastern and Consolidated each will own 50 percent of the new company, to be called the Canadian Gateway Pipeline System, Young said.

Construction of the system, which is estimated to cost $240 million, eventually will provide transportation of up to 400 million cubic feet of natural gas daily to the New York City area, Young said.

With an initial investment of $80 million, the project could begin moving up to 100 million cubic feet of gas as early as November 1987, Young said.

The agreement represents a restructuring of a dissolved Niagara Interstate project, said Howard Homeyer, Texas Eastern senior vice president of transportation.

Milpark, Mustang Mud sign marketing pact

From Staff Reports

Milpark, one of the largest drilling fluids companies in the United States, and Mustang Mud, one of the oldest and best known mud companies in the Permian Basin, have signed a long-term agreement making Mustang Mud the authorized supplier of Milpark drilling fluids products.

Mustang Mud, Inc., will distribute Milpark drilling fluids products throughout the Permian Basin, providing inventory, warehousing, distribution, and field rig-up.

Milpark will provide all programming, on-site engineering, quality control, technical back up and laboratory service.

The agreement between the two companies makes available to Permian Basin operators and contractors a large line of drilling fluids products and services available from a single source.

Milpark was formed in November, 1985, when Milchem, Inc. and Newpark Drilling Fluids formed a partnership to merge their wellsite expertise, research capabilities, field laboratories, product lines, technology, and personnel.

Mustang Mud, Inc., formed in 1954, by its founder and president, Bob Duke, has been continuously serving the greater Permian Basin for more than 30 years.

Facing life when employment benefits are gone

Oil depression brings hard times to Louisiana

By SCOTT McCARTNEY
Associated Press Writer

HOUMA, La. (AP) — Out of work, out of money and out of luck, Ludjere Hebert sucked up his considerable Cajun pride and did what he prayed he'd never have to do: applied for unemployment benefits so he could feed his family.

No check came for six weeks.

Bill Coker's April 10 unemployment check totaled $2, and the note attached said the 38-year-old Shreveport pipefitter had exhausted his benefits.

"Come back in September is what they told me," Coker said. "By September, I may have completely gone under."

As the oil industry has dried up, Louisiana has gained the unwelcome distinction of the nation's highest jobless rate at 13.1 percent. The state's unemployment offices have been flooded with hardship cases, and officials say the system is being stretched beyond its limits.

About 178,356 of Louisiana's 258,300 unemployed workers, nearly 70 percent, receive no unemployment checks because their benefits have expired, they don't meet strict eligibility requirements or the checks are delayed in the crush of applications, state officials say.

"We have people calling up in a panic because their unemployment is running out and prospects for jobs these days are dim," said John Gianforte, director of the Family Crisis Center in Shreveport.

"People say, 'My God! There is nothing.'"

What's more, the state has been forced to borrow $545 million from the federal government at 9.96 percent annual interest to keep paying unemployment insurance claims.

"We have not had normal conditions in Louisiana since 1979," said Allen Johnson, a spokesman for the state Department of Labor.

Unemployment is 10 percent or higher in 62 of Louisiana's 64 parishes and is above 18 percent in 16 oil-dependent parishes — approaching what economists consider levels equivalent to those in the Depression of the 1930s, Johnson said.

Some help may come next month, Johnson said, when the depressed conditions automatically trigger a federal emergency program of extended benefits.

"There's a ton of (unemployed) people out there and a lot of them flat can't find any kind of work. The general statement that people out of work don't want to work just isn't true," said Tom Bourg, another labor department spokesman.

Since benefits are legislated by state and federal law, officials have little latitude in helping those in need, Bourg said. In Louisiana, the limit is $205 a week for 26 weeks in a 12-month period.

"It's an insurance program. We have to be fair to both sides — the workers and the employers who pay into the fund," he said. "The fact that a person may need the money — we sympathize with that very much. But we have to follow the guidelines. We are the steward of the employers' money."

Long lines and delays are the rule these days in state unemployment compensation offices, officials say. The number of new claims is up by more than 16 percent.

"We're overworked," said Glenn LeBlanc, a labor market analyst in Lafayette. "And the slide is not finished, either."

Hebert, 35, was laid off from an electrical supply company and was unable to find another job in this oil-dependent city near the Gulf Coast, where the unemployment rate is 14.3 percent, the 13th highest rate among U.S. cities.

A burly man with a stubble-covered face, Hebert comes from a long line of French Cajun stock. "The Cajuns," he said, "are survivors. They live off the land."

But with children aged 11 and 3, he found himself in the unemployment lines.

"They said they had to determine if I was eligible," he said, a process that took six weeks. "It was rough. Even necessities look like luxuries now."

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Mitchell reports 389 barrel strike

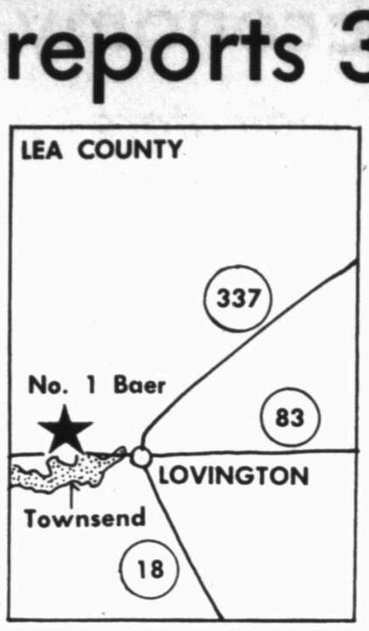

From Staff Reports

Lea County, New Mexico gained a Strawn discovery south of the Townsend field.

MITCHELL ENERGY CORP. potentialed the No. 1 Baer to flow 389 barrels of crude, 1.06 Mmcfd and no water on a 36/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 200 psi. Production is from perforations 11,594 to 11,660 ft., no treatment reported.

Permitted as a 12,000 ft. wildcat, the well reached a total depth of 11,867 ft. and was plugged back to 11,788 ft., with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 11,865 ft. Pay was topped at 11,594 ft.

Location is 1,900 ft. from north and 1,650 ft. from west lines of Section 32, T15s, R35e.

Eddy wildcat yields 1.18 Mmcfd discovery

An Atoka gas discovery has been reported in the Red Lake field of Eddy County.

HONDO OIL & GAS CO. potentialed the No. 1 Mann Federal for a calculated absolute open flow of 1.18 Mmcfd from perforations 9,251 to 9,256 ft. on various chokes. The producing zone was acidized with 1,000 gallons of 7.5 percent NeFe acid and fractured with 19,375 gallons of frac and 28,500 lbs. sand.

The discovery was drilled to a total depth of 9,811 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 9,480 ft.

On ground elevation of 3,653.3 ft., formation tops include the Grayburg at 1,002 ft., San Andres at 1,248, Abo at 5,380, Wolfcamp at 6,224, Cisco at 7,500, Canyon at 8,720, Strawn at 8,964, Atoka at 9,164, Morrow at 9,520, and the Barnett at 9,680 ft. Pay was topped at 9,251 ft.

Location is 1,880 ft. from north and 2,130 ft. from west lines of Section 9, T18s, R27e.

Lea field producer flows 532 barrels oil

TEXACO PRODUCING, INC. has completed a very strong Strawn producer in the Northeast Lovington field of Lea County with completion of the No. 2 H.T. Montieth.

On potential test, the well flowed 532 barrels of 43.7 gravity crude, 597 Mcfd and 17 barrels of water on an unreported choke. Production is from perforations 11,392 to 11,413 ft., which had been acidized with 2,800 gallons of 20 percent NeFe acid. Gas-oil ratio is 1,122:1.

Drilled to a total depth of 11,550 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 11,500 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 3,805 ft., include Anhydrite at 2,245 ft., Salt at 2,300, Yates at 3,230, Queen at 4,130, San Andres at 4,955, Glorieta at 6,320, Paddock at 6,415, Blinebry at 6,980, Tubb at 7,750, Drinkard at 6,875, Abo at 8,415, Wolfcamp at 9,615, Pennsylvanian at 10,000, Cisco at 10,335, Canyon at 10,755, and the Strawn at 11,225 ft. Pay was topped at 11,392 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from south and 510 ft. from east lines of Section 20, T16s, R37e.

Morrow discovery tested for 626 Mcfd

Eddy County also gained a Morrow discovery as POGO PRODUCING CO. potentialed the No. 1 Federal Neff.

The well was tested for a calculated absolute open flow of 626 Mcfd on various chokes with a flowing tubing pressure of 4,205 psi. Production is from perforations 14,460 to 14,723 ft., which had been acidized with 6,000 gallons of acid.

Pogo planned the well was a 15,200 ft. wildcat, drilling it to a total depth of 15,026 ft. A five inch liner was hung from 11,531 to 14,998 ft. and the well was plugged back to 14,965 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 3,567 ft., include the Rustler at 750 ft., Salado at 2,326, Castile at 3,885, Delaware at 4,518, Bell Canyon at 4,589, Cherry Canyon at 5,412, Brushy Canyon at 7,100, Bone Spring at 8,403, Second Bone Spring at 10,178, Third Bone Spring at 11,335, Wolfcamp at 11,680, Strawn at 13,188, Atoka at 13,382, and the Morrow at 13,934 ft. Pay was topped at 14,460 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from north and 1,980 ft. from west lines of Section 25, T22s, R31e.

Glasscock producer flows 151 barrels oil

GWR OPERATING CO. added a Strawn producer in the Saint Lawrence field of Glasscock County with completion of the No. 1-C Hoelscher.

The well was potentialed to flow 151 barrels of 44.6 gravity crude, 919 Mcfd and 78 barrels of water on a 14/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 815 psi. Production is from perforations 9,979 to 10,022 ft., which had been acidized with 1,500 gallons of 15 percent acid. Gas-oil ratio is 6,086:1.

Drilled to a total depth of 11,050 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 10,962 ft.

On ground elevation of 2,696 ft., formation tops include the Yates at 1,975, Clearfork at 5,650, Spraberry at 6,165, Wichita-Albany at 7,393, Strawn at 9,976, Devonian at 10,588, and the Fusselman at 11,006 ft. Pay was topped at 9,979 ft.

Location is 810 ft. from north and 660 ft. from east lines of Section 46, Block 35, T-4-S, T&P survey, four miles northwest of Saint Lawrence.

OIL & GAS DIGEST

Kirby announces Garza County completion

HOUSTON (SWN) Kirby Exploration Co., Inc. announced that its wholly owned oil and gas subsidiary, Kirby Exploration Co. of Texas, has completed the Kirkpatrick No. 304, a development well in the newly-designated Kirkpatrick, South field in Garza County, Texas. The well, which is completed in the Ellenburger Formation below 8,357 feet, is flowing 180 barrels of oil and 75,000 cubic feet of gas per day on a 14/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 600 psi. The Kirkpatrick No. 304 well, in which Kirby has a 100 percent working interst, subject to a production payment payable out of one-third of net profits, was drilled to a total depth of 8,464 feet.

Mesa unitholders to vote on Pioneer purchase

AMARILLO (SWN) — T. Boone Pickens, Jr., general partner of Mesa Limited Partnership, announced that a meeting of partnership unitholders will be held on June 24, to consider and vote upon the acquisition of the assets and assumption of the liabilities of Pioneer Corp. in exchange for Preference A units of the partnership.

The close of business on May 7, is the record date for the determination of unitholders and shareholders entitled to vote at the meetings. A special meeting of Pioneer shareholders will also be held on June 24, to consider and vote on the transactions. Proxy materials have been mailed to partnership unitholders and pioneer shareholders.

Upon approval by both partnership unitholders and Pioneer shareholders, the transaction is expected to become effective on June 30.

Tenneco, Universal reach farm-out agreement

TULSA — (SWN) Universal Energy Corp. subsidiary, ORS Development Corp., announces that it has reached an agreement in principle with Tenneco Oil Co. to farm-out 260 acres of Tenneco's lease holdings in the White Wolf Field in California's San Joaquin Valley. This acreage is known to have sands containing approximately 28 million barrels of heavy oil in-place. Attempts have been made in the past to produce this oil through the use of steam injection thermal techniques, but these attempts proved impractical because of certain reservoir characteristics that impede the effectiveness of the steam injection process.

ORS intends to stimulate production on this acreage using its electromagnetic well stimulation process, which is either unaffected or helped by the reservoir factors that defeated steam injection. As much as 25 percent of the in-place reserves on this acreage may prove economically recoverable using electromagnetic methods. Drilling of the first well by ORS is expected to begin this summer. The companies expect activity in California to increase.

Buyer grabs 4 percent of Tidewater stock

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — A 743,500-share block of Tidewater Inc., representing about 4 percent of the oil services company's outstanding common stock, was purchased by an unknown buyer Tuesday on the New York Stock Exchange.

The shares were traded at $7.50 each, up $1.50. The stock closed at $7, up 50 cents on the day on total volume of about 800,000 shares.

Bill Conery, Tidewater's public relations director, said the company did not know who was buying the stock. He said it could be an individual or a group.

"Someone's buying that many shares, but we don't know who," he said.

The shares were crossed by Morgan Stanley & Co.

At the end of Tidewater's fiscal year — March 31, 1986 — Conery said the company reported having 19.5 million shares of common stock and 300,000 shares of convertible adjustable preferred stock.

EPNG gets FERC okay on gas transportation

EL PASO (SWN) El Paso Natural Gas Co. announced that the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission in Washington, D.C. has approved, with conditions, the rates, terms, and provisions applicable to El Paso's transportation of gas for others through its interstate pipeline system under the FERC's Order No. 436 "open access" non-discriminatory transportation program.

On January 17, 1986, El Paso initiated Order No. 436 open access transportation on behalf of local distribution customers and intra-state pipelines and has since transported more than one billion cubic feet of natural gas on certain days through its system.

"If review of the FERC's written order indicates that the conditions of approval set by the FERC today are acceptable to El Paso, El Paso will become the first interstate pipeline in the United States to render open access transportation under fully approved rates and conditions," El Paso's spokesman said. "These rates, terms and conditions will govern both existing and future open access transportation services on the El Paso system, including those rendered directly for end users under an Order No. 436 blanket certificate which El Paso will request from the FERC in the near future."

Mutual funds with 12b-1 plans are not all same

By BILL DOYLE

Q. You have been telling readers not to invest in mutual funds with 12b-1 plans for a number of years. I guess I didn't pay much attention to your warnings. Now, I realize I should have. Recently, two magazines said to steer clear of such funds.

My financial advisor has put my investment into a mutual fund with a 12b-1 plan. What's in it for him? Should I redeem my shares of that fund and start over?

A. It's impossible to say exactly "what's in it" for your advisor, because the details of 12b-1 plans vary widely among different mutual funds which have those infamous arrangements.

The odds are long, however, that the 12b-1 plan of the fund the advisor put you into will provide him with fat commissions.

Doyle

The really outrageous thing about 12b-1 plans is that the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission allows some mutual funds with such plans to promote themselves as "no-load" funds — because there is no commission charge taken out of investors' money at the time they buy shares. But, each year after that, money is taken out of the fund's assets and paid to investment advisors, brokers and other sellers of the funds' shares.

This is best described as a "hidden commission" scheme. Annual 12b-1 charges can be as high as 1.25 percent and can cut into the value of each shareholder's investment.

For example, if you invested $10,000 in that mutual fund, the 12b-1 plan can cost you $125.50 a year. And it's a continuing cost — year in and year out — in addition to the fund's operating expenses. All mutual funds, like other companies, have operating expenses.

You'll save expenses by redeeming the shares of the fund you now hold and investing in a true no-load fund. There are many such funds — with no commission at the time of purchase, no 12b-1 plan and no redemption fee.

Q. Because of fears about terrorism, fewer Americans will go to Europe this summer. Will this reduction in tourist dollars in European countries make international mutual funds risky investments?

A. I'd count that as unlikely. As the term implies, international mutual funds invests in foreign stocks. The major thing that moves the value of foreign stocks is the rise and/or fall of our dollar.

When the U.S. dollar declines against overseas currencies, the values of foreign stocks go up. Because that's been the trend for more than a year, international mutual funds have done quite well. Without going to far out on a limb, I have to say there's no indication our dollar is going to shoot up in foreign exchange dealings in the near future.

* * *

Q. How can I find out if a mutual fund in which I am considering investing is a load or no-load fund, has a 12b-1 plan or a redemption fee? I get a smile when you describe a redemption fee as a "rear-end load — a kick in the investor's rump."

A. Read that mutual fund's prospectus — very carefully. A prospectus is a disclosure document, in which pertinent information must be revealed. Sometimes, getting all details of costs is a "hard study."

* * *

Q. I purchased two eight-year, 8 percent, $21,000 certificates of deposit on June 1, 1978. Interest checks are mailed every three months. For years, the checks were OK, varying with 90, 91 and 92-day quarters. I keep careful records.

Last summer, I received a notice stating, "Accounts receiving quarterly interest will receive their interest credit on the last day of the quarter. Interest checks will continue to be mailed prior to month-end and will include interest earned through the 25th day of the month. The interest cycle for these accounts will end on the 25th, rather than the quarter-end."

As a result, my check for the third quarter of 1985 was "short" five days' interest. I expected that missing interest to be added to my fourth quarter check. It wasn't. Is that money lost forever?

A. It shouldn't be. That missing five days' interest should be added to the final check you receive when the CDs mature June 1. Assuming that happens, you'll receive your full 8 percent interest for the eight-year term of those CDs.

If that doesn't happen, demand that money from the S&L. If you get no results, contact the regulatory authorities.

By shortening an interest cycle crediting procedure, that S&L used one of the methods some depository institutions employ to hang on to customers' money. Your CD contract, no doubt, permitted that ploy.

PIPELINE

Lear Petroleum joins in spot gas curtailments

Excluding the Trans Alaskan, the lines recommended for deregulation account for about 71 percent of the output of all other pipelines.

The five pipelines that definitely would remain under a regulatory umbrella carry about 26 percent of the output of all pipelines, again excluding the Trans Alaskan line.

"The department recommends that only those pipelines competing in highly concentrated markets warrant continued regulation," said the study by economists and attorneys in the Justice Department's antitrust division.

The study said "oil pipelines face significant competition in most markets," but that "there are at least five, and perhaps as many as 11, pipelines with significant market power that should remain regulated."

The report also concluded that newly built crude oil pipelines should not come under federal regulation.

"At the time that construction of a new pipeline first becomes economically feasible, it is reasonable to assume that there will be a large number of firms capable of building ... thus ensuring competitive conditions at this time," it said.

The director of an oil-buying cooperative disagreed.

"The whole trend of the oil industry generally is a consolidation with fewer players and less competition," said Jason Adkins, head of Buyers Up, a cooperative oil-buying group founded by consumer advocate Ralph Nader. "If you deregulate the pipeline industry, you're playing into that potential problem of limited competition. Consolidation is going to hurt the consumer every step of the way."

Rep. Phil Sharp, D-Ind., chairman of the fossil fuels subcommittee of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, said the panel would "carefully consider" any move by the Reagan administration toward deregulation.

The five lines that would continue under federal regulation and the arguments given in the report for urging continuing it:

—Colonial, a line running from Houston to New York, has only one other competitor in nearly a dozen Southern markets, and in three other markets in the South is a monopoly.

—Williams, a network shipping throughout the Midwest, has limited competition in much of Iowa.

—A Chevron line from Salt Lake to Spokane, has a monopoly in Pocatello-Idaho Falls and Boise, Idaho.

—Southern Pacific has a monopoly in Phoenix and Tucson, and is the only supply facility in the Reno, Nev., market.

From Staff & Wire Reports

Lear Petroleum Corp., special general partner of Lear Petroleum Partners, L.P. today became the forth oil company to announce curtailment of gas production as a result of soft prices, and analysts are predicting the trend will grow.

The partnership said that it would shut-in approximately 20 percent of its recent production. The wells have been providing gas on a spot basis to various markets around the country.

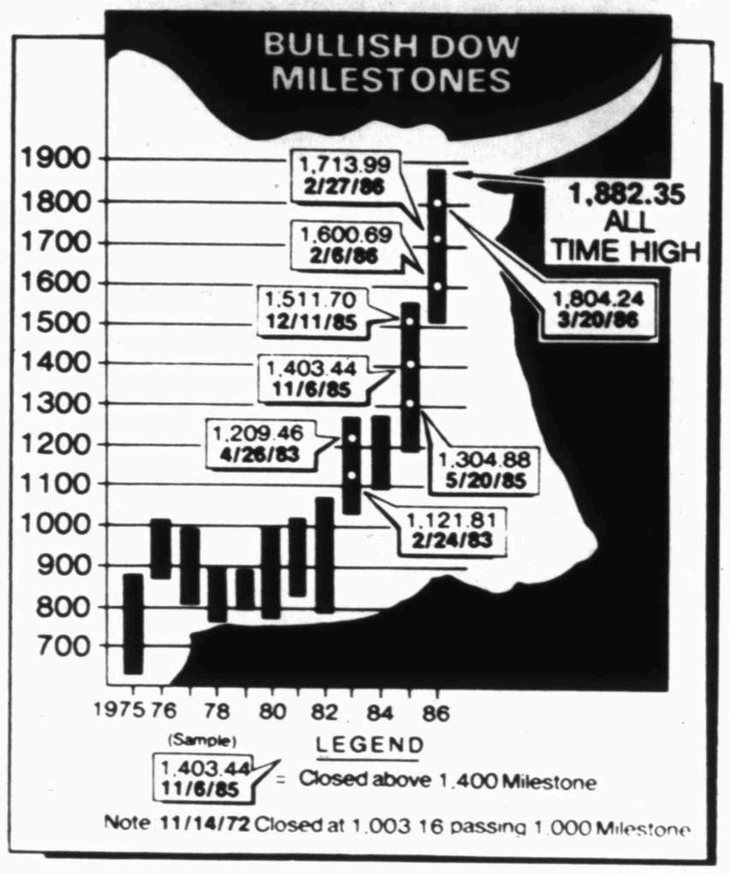

As these markets have continued to require lower-priced supplies, wellhead prices for the spot market gas serving them have declined to the $1.50 per Mcf range.

J.T. Williams, president and chief executive officer of Lear Petroleum Corp., "the Partnership felt that it was prudent to hold these reserves off the market until spot market prices for natural gas improve."

At today's rate of drilling activity the domestic industry's reserve replacement, on an annualized basis, could be as low as one-fourth of its current natural gas production. Williams said, "based upon recent levels of natural gas consumption, declining deliverability will result in the elimination of the current gas surplus, potentially creating some localized natural gas shortages as early as this winter. As spot natural gas prices improve, the Partnership plans to resume production of these reserves."

George Mitchell, chairman and president of Mitchell Energy, Houston, announced yesterday that his firm would remove a substantial amount of its natural gas from the spot market, "because prices have fallen unrealistically low and it doesn't make sense to sell our assets at this price." He said the firm would also remove 600 barrels of crude oil and condensate from the market.

Coastal Corp. and Pennzoil announced earlier in the week that they would withdraw natural gas from the spot market because of low prices.

Volkswagen recalls Audis

DETROIT (AP) — Volkswagen of America Inc. announced a voluntary recall Thursday of about 132,000 Audi 5000s from the 1984-86 model years to reposition the vehicles' brake and accelerator pedals.

General Motors Corp., meanwhile, recalled 98,000 vehicles to inspect headlight switches for defects.

Volkswagen's move was criticized by an automotive safety group that accused Volkswagen of blaming sudden acceleration problems associated with the cars on drivers instead of a mechanical defect.

Audi owners will be notified by letter that the cars' pedals would be modified to provide more foot room and "reduce the likelihood that drivers may inadvertently depress the accelerator pedal rather than the brake pedal," Volkswagen said in a statement.

The pedal modifications will be free of charge, the statement said.

Illinois Attorney General Neil Hartigan asked the federal government Thursday to recall the Audi 5000S automobiles from model years 1978 through 1986 because of acceleration problems.

Hartigan said there have been at least 400 accidents and 140 injuries nationwide in which the car suddenly accelerates after the driver shifts from park into drive or reverse.

Technical defects were not responsible for reported incidents of sudden acceleration by the Audis, Volkswagen said.

"Our investigation into reported instances of unintended acceleration shows that user familiarity, seat adjustment, foot position, driving habits and specific behavior at the time of the incident account for all but one of these instances," the statement said.

But the private Center for Auto Safety in Washington, D.C., called the recall a smokescreen aimed at appeasing government investigators and was "based on the company's belief that sudden acceleration accidents are due to defective drivers, not defective cars."

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Texas Instruments, Japanese firm sign pact

DALLAS (AP) — A three-year agreement with a Japanese company to distribute an artificial intelligence computer may open up the market for related products, say executives of Texas Instruments Inc.

The Century Research Center Corp., a unit of C. Itoh & Co. Ltd, will distribute TI's Explorer work station, a computer that has become the focal point of TI's growing emphasis on artificial intelligence products, officials said.

TI officials declined to disclose sales or shipment projections, but said the agreement creates opportunities to market other artificial intelligence-related computer products, said Wally Rhines, president of TI's Data Systems Group.

"Japan is an important market for TI's artificial intelligence products," Rhines said. "We believe the relationship with C. Itoh will further TI's objective of being a world leader in artificial intelligence."

TI officials said the market for those products could exceed $6 billion during the next five years and the agreement with C. Itoh could be an early route into that market.

Justice officials back pending airline mergers

DALLAS (AP) — The U.S. Justice Department's support of two pending airline mergers could speed up their approval, federal officials said.

Earlier this month, the department withdrew its objections to Texas Air's $670 million acquisition of Eastern, and on late Tuesday attorneys requested expedited approval..

A Department of Transportation counsel also urged approval of Northwest Airlines Inc.'s acquisition of Republic Airlines Inc. They say that the merger would not create a monopoly but instead would form a stronger domestic and international airline.

The transportation department is scheduled to begin full hearings on the case June 10 and reach a final decision on Aug. 31. Expedited procedures could speed the process "considerably," a department spokesman told the Dallas Morning News.

Russell Billiot, the 36-year-old captain of an offshore oil rig supply boat, applied for benefits when he was laid off. He was told it would take at least a month to decide whether he was eligible and that he should come back every week to report his status.

"I told them I was going to quit applying. Them little statements they make can't feed my family," Billiot said.

Coker, a pipefitter who's done jobs at oil refineries, found steady work for only six months in the last three years. He's worked a day here, a day there, and says he's never turned down a job. Unemployment in Shreveport is about 13 percent.

In the past, either his $205 weekly check was extended when he reached 26 weeks, or he was able to find enough work here and there to stretch the benefits over 12 months. Now there's no work, and no extension.

"A new calendar year for my unemployment starts in September," he said. "I'm trying to mow lawns, but that's sometimes only $25 a week. What am I going to do until September?"

Coker has sold his boat and gun cabinet and is trying to sell his car to keep making the payments on his 3-bedroom, 1½-bath brick house on Green Acres Road. He's also circulated petitions to draw attention to the plight of the unemployed.

"These people are the forgotten," Coker said. "I'm one of the forgotten."

At Shreveport's Family Crisis Center, Gianforte is scrambling to find ways to hire more counselors to field the increase in telephone calls.

Japanese shun foreign firms

TOKYO (AP) — Foreign firms doing business here find it difficult to lure bright young employees away from Japanese companies, even through enticements of higher pay and greater authority.

Most Japanese, foreign firms have found, shun what is considered the risk of going to work for a foreign boss, preferring instead the so-called lifetime employment system that has prevailed in Japan since after World War II.

"After 26 years' business here, we often cannot find people we need in our Tokyo office," says Ayako Kega, a spokeswoman for General Electric Japan Ltd.

"The pool of Japanese white-collar workers who change jobs is very small. Foreign firms are competing to win a limited number of experienced Japanese who go from one foreign firm to another."

Under the lifetime employment system, employees of large corporations are guaranteed jobs until retirement, a steady and predictable rise in income, and position and social acceptance within the company family.

A recent Ministry of Labor survey on employment attitudes found that the number of Japanese who thought about changing jobs last year had increased only 0.7 percent over a five-year period, to about 6 percent of the work force.

Job security, company loyalty and a fear of being stigmatized were cited in interviews as among the reasons Japanese are more reluctant than workers in many other industrialized societies to move from company to company as part of career advancement.

"Employees have always wanted to be assured of their jobs," said Fumiaki Saito, an official of the Labor Ministry's Employment Policy Department.

Ms. Kega said Japanese "basically think a foreign company easily closes a Tokyo office and lays off employees whenever business declines."

Tamio Kubota, 38, an assistant manager of Dai-Ichi Kangyo Bank, Japan's biggest bank, said he was offered jobs by American banks while studying business administration at Yale University's Business School in 1977-79 on an in-company scholarship.

"I believed it was my duty to go back to my employer, who paid tuition and all the expenses for the two years," he said.

"Besides, working for a foreign establishment means becoming an employee required only for their East Asian department, doesn't it? They wouldn't take you seriously as a candidate for the future board of directors."

Other recruitment experts point out that although young Japanese are more mobile than in the past, a stigma still is attached to switching jobs.

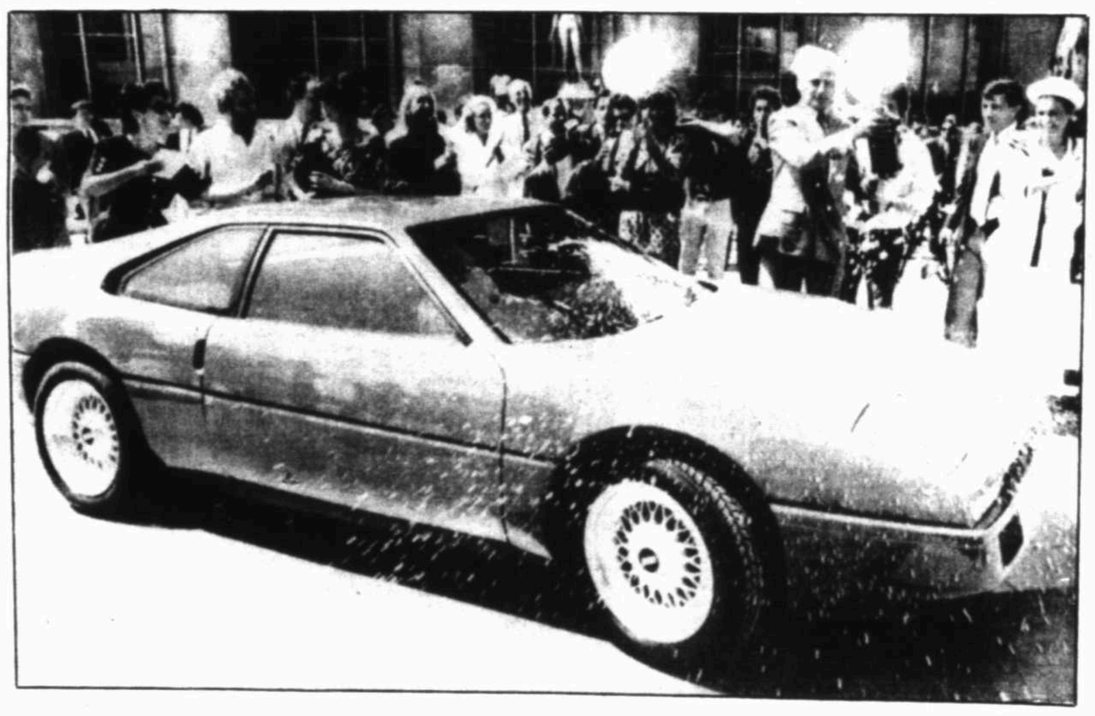

"When someone left the bank, we used to say he must have been fired because he stole money," said Hiroshi Kamada of the Dai-Ichi Bank.

An official of Nissan Motor Co. said the company, Japan's second-largest automaker, expects employees to stay until they retire. He said "tenshoku," the Japanese word for changing jobs, is still "almost a taboo."

Kazuki Danbara of the U.S.-based security firm Drexel Burnham Lambert (Asia) Ltd. said his company has placed ads, used "headhunters" and adopted Japanese-style company assistance systems for its Japanese staff, "but it's not an easy task to find Japanese for our office."

The Labor Ministry's Saito said this tendency may be changing as a surplus of college-educated young people see fewer chances of advancing through normal company hierarchies.

"Figures do not show it, but I can perceive a gradual change in the employment system," Saito said, adding, "the pace looks very very slow."

Antitrust suit adds fuel to dispute over commercial companies owning banks

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — A $100 million private antitrust suit filed against Sears, Roebuck & Co.'s savings bank has added fuel to a growing dispute here between the Federal Reserve Board and the Treasury Department as to whether commercial companies, other than bank holding companies, should be permitted to own banks.

The dispute, which pits George D. Gould, the Treasury under secretary for finance, against the Fed's chairman, Paul A. Volcker, underlines a deep rift between the Fed's desire for cautious, slow banking deregulation and the Reagan administration's support of more aggressive change.

The Sears suit, filed by a California developer, also comes while certain key members of Congress are seeking to make some of the most significant changes in banking law since the Depression.

In the court case filed late last year Larry D. Hunts, of San Diego, has charged that Sears Savings Bank required him to install Sears Kenmore appliances and use other Sears services in a 161-unit condominium project financed by the bank. The developer charges that cheaper and better appliances and services were available from other sources, but that he was forced by the bank to use Sears products anyway.

Sears denies the charges, and said: "Mr. Hunts is simply another active and sophisticated litigant who would like to get some money somehow out of Sears. The material allegations of his complaint are not true."

Many bankers, who face tough new competition from retailers such as Sears, say that they are concerned by tie-in arrangements of the kind at issue in the Sears suit.

"I think the charges against Sears, if accurate, raise some very probing questions," said Kenneth Guenther, executive vice president of the Independent Bankers Association. "Banks are supposed to be impartial allocaters of credit. But Sears is saying, 'We'll give you credit if you buy our appliances.' That doesn't seem impartial to me."

Though the courts have yet to rule on the merits of the case brought by Hunts, the case's key issue — a parent company's use of its banking subsidiary's financial clout for its own ends — has worried Volcker for years. He has expressed the fear that such tie-ins can blur a bank's impartial judgment on what is a good credit risk and potentially endanger the nation's banking system by exposing it to excessive risk.

"We're not concerned about Sears, per se, owning a bank," said one Fed official, who asked not to be named. "We're concerned when a lot of little companies own banks and own them simply to get access to unlimited credit."

On the other hand, Gould, a former Wall Street executive who has been considered effective in his few months as head of the Treasury's banking team, contends that the joining of banking and commerce can be accomplished with no added risk to the banking system.

He has told Congress and banking groups that effective barriers can be erected, through careful legislation, that would insulate a bank's operations from undue influence of its parent company. He has also pointed out that commercial companies could bring new, much needed capital to both the banking and the savings and loan industry.

The Association of Reserve City Bankers, which represents 150 of the country's largest banking concerns, has suggested that in cases where banks are owned by unregulated commercial companies, all payment transactions — ranging from checking accounts to lines of credit — between the parent and depository affiliate be prohibited.

For obvious reasons, Sears has mounted a major lobbying effort to get Congress to break down the division between commerce and banking. The giant retailer contends that banks and thrift institutions have been placed at a competitive disadvantage by increased innovation and competition from other unregulated financial service companies.

Midland High School valedictorian Paige Black, left, and salutatorian Alicia Thompson, anxiously await graduation ceremonies tonight at Chaparral Center. Commencement is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m.

Four top students optimistic about future

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

They overcame the pressures of stereotypes, academics and adolescence. They excelled despite the competition and look to the future with optimism.

Tonight, Midland's top four scholars — who are all females — will address their fellow classmates during commencement ceremonies, saying farewell to the Class of 1986 and proposing a challenge for the future.

Midland High School valedictorian Paige Black, daughter of Sarilyn and William R. Black, 28 Suffolk, is especially optimisitc.

"My grandmother just died, but she was always optimistic. It's been a problem for me in my life so one of my goals is to live like her," she said.

Miss Black said she strived throughout her high school career to to best she could be, but never felt pressure to succeed.

"I guess I instilled the goals I have in myself," she said. "It started in the ninth grade when I decided I was going to be valedictorian."

Looking back on her success, Miss Black said she wants to be recognized as someone who accomplished her goals through hard work.

She doesn't mind admiration, but she discourages the thought that underclassmen might look to her as a role model. "I think heroes are dangerous. When you try to be like someone else, you're not yourself," she said.

To incoming sophomores, Miss Black advises they get involved and take advantage of programs in which they excel.

"At Midland High School, you can excel at what you're good at. The most important thing is to get involved. If you just study, you become bored very quickly, but you can't sluff-off your first two years either."

Salutatorian Alicia Thompson, daughter of Craig Thompson, 2509 Terrace, looks to past Midland High School graduating classes in order to envision her own future.

"The more things change, the more things stay the same," she said. "We're going out to some place we don't know much about. But if we can look to our predecessors and their successes, it'll help us to look at the future optimistically."

Miss Thompson said she knows she can be successful if she works hard.

"I definitely put a lot of pressure on myself," she said. "Being salutatorian means a lot to me.

To MHS underclassmen, Miss Thompson urges they keep faith in themselves. "Enjoy high school while you can. Set you goals early and strive as hard as you can to reach them. You can do anything you want to do with a little hard work," she said.

At Lee High School, Belle Chen, daughter of Tu Kao and Shu Mein Chen, 4300 Merrill Court, said too often in today's society, people become pessimistic about mankind and fearful of human nature. "Yes, man sometimes does evil things, and now, with such a technologically advanced society, he possesses a greater capacity to destroy.

"By the same token, however, man is also developing profoundly beneficial accomplishments that are upstaged by the notoriety from man-made cataclysmic occurrences," she said. "We must keep in mind that the vast majority of the human race will survive and even flourish because most men are primarily concerned with the day-to-day business of living."

In retrospect, Miss Chen said being named valedictorian of the Class of '86 at Lee High School is something that happened by accident.

"I think I'd be egotisical to say that I'm the smartest person in my class because it's not true," she said.

To her fellow classmates she says "Now that we have reached this important juncture, we should apply the following remark to our future whatever we may face in the coming years, let us enjoy life to the fullest and as our calss song suggests, 'go all the way.'"

Salutatorian Tricia Brown, daughter of Dale and Rita Brown, 3625 Hyde Park, reflects on her experiences at LHS realizing that it was not what grade she made on a trig test, how many parties she was invited to, or what honors she received, but the people — the friendships — the relationships that have made a lasting impression on her.

"Ultimately, our success will be measured, not in terms of our bank accounts, the positions we hold in our businesses, or our status on the social ladder, but in terms of our relationships," she said.

She said the encounters she has with people will be her memories. "I've thought about being salutatorian for a long time and my parents have taught me to do the best that I can."

In the end, however, she said the friendships she made are the most important memory she has of her high school career. "When it all comes down to the end, that's what is going to count for all of us."

To the future graduating classes of Lee High School, Miss Brown suggests they look for those lasting memories. "Give it your best. Give it all you've got and treat others as you, yourself, would like to be treated."

Area farmers may be able to get loans

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

West Texas farmers and ranchers who were beset by the 1985 drought may be eligible for emergency loans through the Farmers Home Administration (FmHA).

"Funds can be used for essential operating and living costs," according to Ronnal E. Bruton, FmHA county supervisor in Big Spring.

Those farmers and ranchers who suffered from the "adverse weather conditions" in 1985 may contact Bruton and his staff in Room 220 of the Federal Building in Big Spring or by calling his office at 267-1102 until Jan. 15, 1987.

To be eligible for the emergency loans, farmers "must have suffered" at least a 30 percent loss of production on their 1985 crop, Bruton said.

"If they can still get credit at the bank," said Mattie Norwood, FmHA county office assistant, "we can't take them. They have to be ineligible for credit." Credit may be denied elsewhere due to outstanding loans or lack of collateral. "Economics really doesn't have anything to do with it," she said of the "disaster-stricken" counties. "Weather itself is what determines the emergency."

Ms. Norwood said that FmHA should have plenty of low-interest funds to loan farmers and ranchers.

"So far, Congress has never cut us short on emergency funds," Ms. Norwood said. "As far as I know, there is plenty of money. There is supposed to be. They haven't told us that there is any limit."

The emergency loans are based strictly on the 1985 crop-livestock yield as affected by adverse weather and are not based on 1986 or current weather conditions.

"Luckily," Ms. Norwood said, "we've got a rain (recently). And it's going to help. We've got a lot of Midland County farmers that we service."

Hoot Leonard, manager of the Midland Farmers Co-op, noted that FmHA loans traditionally offer low-interest rates and longer pay-outs than do commercial banking and lending institutions.

"The banks are supposed to turn you down," Leonard said. "A lot of farmers are having to return to FmHA financing."

In making loans, FmHA usually takes liens on the farmers' crops and may take liens — if available — on equipment and land.

"Nearly everybody's equipment is tied up," Leonard noted.

Cotton farmer Vernon Chandler has used FmHA loans in the past, but "I haven't borrowed from them for a long time."

Chandler said the FmHA loans will "help a little, I guess. It used to be the best place to borrow. It wasn't much hassle." However, from what he "reads and hears," Chandler said the FmHA has "tightened down on the rules. You have to be in such good shape, you don't need it," he quipped.

"It'll help a whole lot," he said of the loans.

And he alluded to the economic plight of farmers. "The bankers would have to be crazy to loan us (farmers) money now, anyhow."

Nell Thames of the FmHA office in Big Spring noted that "very few farmers these days can operate out of their hip pocket." And if they can borrow money from banks, then the FmHA cannot assist them.

"We are a last-resort-type agency," Ms. Thames said. "We are a last-ditch effort to keep farmers in business." The operating loans include "everything it takes to get the crops in the ground and get them out."

While some farmers and ranchers may be considering securing FmHA loans, others may be nominated for the FmHA committee in helping with the processing of FmHA loans.

"Farmers in these (disaster) counties, serving on the committee, can play an important role by assisting in the processing of loan applications and reviews," said Bruton. Nominating petitions are to be submitted to the FmHA office in Big Spring by June 10, he said.

Midland County farmers also were eligible for FmHA loans last year.

The FmHA is a credit agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture and is authorized to provide disaster loans.

Study: ECISD could lose 600 students

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The "Triangular Study," initiated by the Ector County School District to determine if, as persistent rumors have indicated, there will be a "mass exodus" from Ector County when school is out, shows the school system could lose as many a 600 students in the 1986-87 school year.

The study is based on questionnaires sent home to parents that asked whether students would be enrolling in an ECISD school this fall, if they would be moving, or they were uncertain at the time the questionnaire was filled out.

According to Chuck Hornung, ECISD information director, more than 80 percent of the questionnaires were returned.

The three-part study concluded "there will be some movement out of the district during the summer months but it is not projected to be very large."

Hornung and Wayne Milligan, director of research and evaluation, said the study was initiated in an effort to determine whether rumors of a mass exodus — perhaps as many as 20,000 people from the area because of economic conditions —were true. Such an emigration, they said, would have a severe impact on the school system regarding teaching positions and classroom requirements.

The survey indicated "the student loss will be district-wide and does not severely affect any single campus."

A summary of the study, concluded only last Friday, indicated the "worst case scenario" would be the loss of 1,000 students, which would represent some 460 to 475 families. However, a more conservative scenario, Milligan and Hornung said, "tends to favor" probable estimates of a student loss in the 600-student range, which would equate to an emigration of 240 to 360 families.

This estimates would be consistent with statistical information developed from Texas Electric Service Co., Southwestern Bell Telephone, the City of Odessa Water Department and several companies involved in the moving industry.

Texas Electric Service residential disconnections, inside and outside the city limits, in the first four months of this year totalled 460. Southwestern Bell disconnections totalled 680, which broke down to 578 residential and 102 business telephones. The difference between readouts (turn offs) and turn-ons of water service in the City of Odessa was 101. The local cable television company, from January through April, lost an average of 100 subscribers per month.

As part of the study, ECISD officials contacted four moving and storage companies. "At the present time," Hornung and Milligan concluded, "they have 20-25 contracts for the rest of May and 40-45 for June. Less than 10 contracts are scheduled for July. These figures are for Odessa only, with Midland being slightly higher," they said.

"Three of the four companies," the report stated, "felt the estimate of 15-20,000 people (moving out) was for the immediate surrounding areas of Midland, Odessa, Andrews, Crane, Monahans, etc."

The ECISD study conclusions appear to coincide with those of Midland Realtor C. Neill Moore, who told the Reporter-Telegram Tuesday, "There is no indication of a drastic exodus from Midland as soon as

Report shows Odessans favor prison

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A survey by a committee appointed by the Greater Odessa Area Chamber of Commerce to determine local attitudes on possibly locating a state prison facility in the area shows a significant majority favor a Texas Department of Corrections (TDC) unit that would house "non-violent prisoners."

The lengthy report accepted by chamber board members during their regular monthly meeting Thursday included the results of surveys of sheriffs and police chiefs in areas where prison units are located, of the chamber membership and a telephone poll of 517 randomly selected Odessa households.

The survey was commissioned after the chamber initiated a last-minute effort in July 1985 to obtain location of a new TDC in the Odessa area. The TDC selected Palestine as the site for the new facility.

The 10-member study committee, headed by attorney Cynthia Clack, included Ector County Sheriff Bob Brookshire, Police Chief Alan Stewart and seven other prominent Odessans.

The telephone survey showed more than two-thirds of the residents believed that, given current economic conditions, a prison would be good for Odessa. More than half said location of a prison would be good for the area regardless of economic conditions. Eighty percent of the 517 community members surveyed didn't feel local crime rates would increase if a prison were located in the area and more than half of those polled did not feel Odessa would become a less attractive place to live if a prison unit were located in the area.

The response of 259 chamber members returning the questionnaire was even more favorable in all categories, with "strongest support indicated for a prison if it were located at least five miles outside the city limits, if it did not house violent or dangerous prisoners and if it would not create any undue expense or burdens on city taxes or services."

Five of seven police chiefs contacted in cities where prison units are located said they did not feel "the presence of a prison placed any undue burden on local law enforcement." Three of the five did indicate "there were some minor misdemeanors attributed to friends and relatives visiting or living in their community because of the prison." However, none of those surveyed indicated that the crime rate had increased since the location of the prison in their area.

Six of seven county sheriffs contacted saw no increase in crime while the seventh said the increase "was a low five percent." Responding to questions about crimes attributable to prsion employees, five indicated there was none, while two said "yes," but they also observed "this would be expected with any large employer moving to the area."

Four chamber executives contacted in cities where prisons are located stated "the overall presence of a prison in their community had a benefit." Commenting on the positive aspects of a prison in the area, they cited as the main beneift, "the economic stability that the prison provides and the payroll impacts..."

The committee report noted that "the only negative aspect mentioned was that property was non-taxable and did not contribute to local property tax revenues."

None of the chamber executives viewed their cities as "a prison town" and all indicated that they would welcome another facility in their area, the committee report stated.

Judge sets stage for possible Minor appeal

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — District Judge Tryon Lewis Thursday set the stage for a possible appeal of last Friday's Whistleblower trial jury decision that denied former Mayor John Minor attorney's fees and punitive damages in his lawsuit against the city and several former and present elected officials.

Minor's suit, filed in December 1983, alleged former Mayor Bob Bryant, two former and three present city council members fired him from his nearly $30,000 a year Municipal Court administrator job because he filed misdemeanor criminal charges against City Manager John Harrison and Fiscal Services Director Frank Muser that led to their arrest Aug. 31, 1983. Harrison was charged with official misconduct and Muser with official oppression in connection with the transfer of the City Marshal's office from Minor's control to that of the police department.

The jury deliberated about four hours and found in Minor's favor on 12 of 14 special issues, but against the former mayor on two issues that would have awarded him $19,000 in attorney fees and $55,000 in punitive damages.

Jurors found that Minor had a reasonable belief that Harrison and Muser had acted illegally in transferring the City Marshal's office and that he made a "good faith" report of the alleged crime to a proper law enforcement authority. However, jurors found that, while the city council acted with malice in firing Minor, he was not fired because he reported crimes allegedly committed by his superiors.

One of Minor's attorneys, Bill Roberts of Midland, Thursday, in filing the motion to disregard the special motions that denied Minor cash awards, contended jurors fully intended for Minor to receive attorney fees and punitive damages but did not understand the two issues because the wording was clouded. Lewis denied the argument and approved the take-nothing judgment prepared by Jim O'Leary, who represented the City of Odessa in the dispute.

Following Thursday's hearing, Roberts said Minor has 10 days to ask for a new trial and, failing that, to file an appeal in the case. Minor said that, while he fully believes the jury intended that he receive damages against the city, he does not know if he'll file an appeal because of the cost involved.

MMH patient days declining, figures indicate

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

The average number of patient days at Midland Memorial Hospital are declining due to the Permian Basin's poor economy, Vice President of Finance Ron Peterson told the hospital's board of trustees and directors Thursday.

"We are experiencing the decline the oil industry has been experiencing in the past few months," Peterson said.

During April, patients stayed an average length of 4,091 days at the hospital. Average length of stays are calculated by dividing the days a patient stays in the hospital by the number of patients that come into the hospital. This figure was 555 days under budget, Peterson said. The year-to-date 30,624 days are 568 days below budget.

The declining number of patient days is causing the hospital to consider budget cuts, said Harold Rubin, senior vice president.

Payroll costs are the hospital's biggest expense, Rubin said. However, officials are hoping attrition will help cut payroll costs and no layoffs are being considered, he said. As some positions are vacated the hospital will not fill them.

The administration is also asking employees to take voluntary time off and leave early when they are done with their work, Rubin said.

Use of supplies are also being monitored. "To minimize expenditures, we make sure we don't have more stock on hand then we might need during this period," Rubin said.

Despite the expected cuts, Rubin said patient care will not be compromised.

"Our bottom line is that we will not compromise quality care. Patient care cannot be compromised in any way," he said.

The length of patient days are decreasing because physicians are becoming more aware of cost containment needs, Rubin said.

Days are decreasing as physicians attempt to meet Medicare's strict mandates on the number of days it will reimburse a hospital for.

"Physicians are becoming more cost conscious and are trying to get patients out quicker," Rubin said.

Improved technology has also decreased the number of days a patient needs to stay in the hospital, Rubin said. Many patients now take advantage of "same day surgery" and no longer have to stay overnight.

While average patient days are decreasing the hospital is seeing an increase in Medicare and Medicaid patient days. The Medicare 1,246 patient days during April are 149 days under the budget. But so far this year the 10,246 Medicare days have exceeded the budget by 503 days and are 765 days over last year's figures. Medicare provides medical benefits to patients over 65 years of age.

Medicaid patient days of 90 were under budget by 35 days for April. However the year-to-date 1,214 patient days are in excess of the budget by 745 days and are 698 days over last year's figures. Medicaid provides medical treatment for the poor.

Gross patient revenues are under budget by $301,810. The gross patient revenues for April were $3,643,920.

Salaries and wages exceeded the budget by $2,011 while employee benefits went $18,474 over budget.

Report: Schools haven't spent about $780 million

By GARY RASP
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A report released Thursday detailing Texas colleges and universities' unspent funds might sop up some of the "gravy" state Comptroller Bob Bullock once claimed institutions were hiding from lawmakers.

Wayne Roberts, senior budget examiner for the Legislative Budget Board, summarized portions of his report to a special House subcommittee Thursday afternoon. Houston Rep. Mike Toomey, chairman of the panel, called the meeting to determine how much money the 44 schools have to use at their own discretion.

Roberts told the committee that as of Aug. 31, 1985, universities had on hand approximately $780 million in unspent funds, not including gifts or donations. The University of Texas and Texas A&M University systems control about 55 percent of the total.

In March 1985, Bullock accused state universities of amassing a $2.2 billion, unaccountable "gravy bowl" in local funds. The comptroller emphasized that the universities had done nothing illegal, but he said the state would benefit from closer scrutiny of what he called laundering of local funds.

"It's high time that the budget writers of Texas look to see how that money is spent," he said then.

Roberts said the institutions spend the money on items such as professors' salaries and remodeling dormitories and physicians' fees. The state's medical institutions collect a majority of the unobligated funds, the report indicated.

When asked if universities were abusing their control of the money, Roberts said, "I can't off the top of my head think of any instances of inappropriate uses."

The University of Texas of the Permian Basin had collected about $235,000 in local funds at the end of the past fiscal year, 29.3 percent more than lawmakers expected it would have, the report said.

The study shows that the state's colleges and universities had collected $1.7 billion in local funds by the end of 1985. That money came from several types of fees, parking fines, athletic events, concert tickets, dormitory rentals and a variety of other sources. Lawmakers do not control those revenues, and institutions can spend much of the money as they see fit.

After Roberts' presentation, Toomey said, "It's just a way to know where we stand, there's been a lot of confusion over local funds, and I would like to see us clear the air."

Rep. Wilhelmina Delco of Austin, chairwoman of the House Higher Education Committee, said, "It is perfectly clear there have been no abuses or misuses of the money." But Rep. Steve Wolens of Dallas seemed to adopt Bullock's earlier position when he said, "I think it's an abuse when they hide the ball."

Lawmakers are looking at these local funds as a potential source of revenue to offset an anticipated $1.3 billion budget shortfall. "I think the state should decide what it wants institutions to do," Ms. Delco said.

"The question ought to be, 'What is the best use of the money?' It's not a matter of right or wrong."

Pilots will have chance to play airborne poker

From Staff Reports

West Texas pilots will have a chance to play airborne poker this Sunday, when the Purple Sage Chapter of Ninety-Nines Inc., an international group of women aviators, sponsors its Second Annual Open Fly-in Poker Rally.

The rally will begin at 10 a.m. at Andrews County Airport. From there, additional cards will be dealt at stops along the route: Hobbs-Lea County Airport at 11:30 a.m., Pecos Municipal Airport at 1 p.m., Monahans Hurd Memorial Airport at 2:30 p.m., and Schlemeyer Air Field at Odessa at 4 p.m., according to Priscilla "Prissa" Barbee, chairwoman of the Purple Sage chapter of the Ninety-Nines Inc. Sunday lunch will be provided for free by the Pecos Chamber of Commerce at 1 p.m. at Pecos Municipal Airport.

At Tommy Dempsey's aircraft hangar on the southwest end of Schlemeyer Air Field, the Ninety-Nines will award prizes for the best poker hands and best spot landing.

Entry fee for the rally will be $10 per hand or $25 for three hands.

The poker rally "involves no gambling of any kind," Ms. Barbee said, and is just for "fun" and for a "worthwhile cause" — to benefit the West Texas Chapter of AirLifeLine Inc. of Texas, a non-profit mercy-flight organization. AirLifeLine pilots fly ailing passengers and life-saving organs for free.

The rally is open to men and women pilots and their passengers.

Those interested in more information about the Ninety-Nines may contact Ms. Barbee at 366-2626 in Odessa or Joann Price at 683-9260 in Midland.

Chambers present resolutions commending coalition

From Staff Reports

The presidents of the Midland and Odessa Chambers of Commerce met with media representatives at the Airport Executel to present resolutions jointly drafted by executive committees to commend members of the Media Coalition for their efforts in contributing newspaper space, radio and television time to promoting cooperation and the image of the Midland-Odessa areas.

The resolutions were presented jointly by Midland Chamber President Joan Baskin and Odessa Chamber President John Landgraf.

"Each chamber felt the responsibility to recognize the media's outstanding contribution to our community," said Mrs. Baskin. Noting that area media had contributed about $1 million worth of advertising to the initial Bridge Company "Better Together" campaign and has pledged nearly $1 million to the current "People With Character — Fueling Progress in the Petroplex" campaign. Landgraf and Mrs. Baskin said, "These outstanding corporate citizens have set a new standard of media service and support. I know of no other community in the nation with a group making this kind of contribution. Each community member owes the media a tremendous 'Thank You,' " the two chamber presidents said.

The latest campaign was kicked off in April with simultaneous rallies in each city. Landgraf and Mrs. Baskin noted that "locally, residents are hearing and seeing postive messages of economic growth and reinforcement of the need for positive thinking in difficult times."

They noted that, as a result of media efforts, "Newspapers, such as the New York Times and Los Angeles Times, have carried positive stories about the Permian Basin and its people. Listeners nationwide," they said, "have heard Paul Harvey speak about the great things happening in Midland/Odessa. National news networks have recognized the group's efforts as a bold new step in community cooperation and positive action," they said.

Female murder suspect facing trial for third time

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — The retrial of a 19-year-old woman on a charge of murder in the alleged May 9, 1983 shooting death of a 69-year-old woman continued in 244th District Court today before Judge Joe Connally.

This the third time Amber Benavides, 16 at the time Alice Odessa Blackwell was fatally shot, has faced trial. Connally, who presided over the earlier trials, declared a mistrial in the first trial and sentenced her to 25 years in prison after jurors found her guilty as charged in the second trial. The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals overturned the conviction and ordered a new trial.

Assistant District Attorney Rod Price rested the state's case late Thursday afternoon after entering Ms. Benavides' confession into the court record.

Attorney Bill Bowden, who was expected to call three or four defense witnesses this morning, has represented Ms. Benavides in all three trials. Bowden has continued to claim that her rights under the Texas Criminal Code relating to the handling of juveniles were violated by law enforcement officers and the confession she signed admitting to the killing of the elderly woman was illegaly obtained and should be set aside.

In her confession, Ms. Benavides admitted shooting Mrs. Blackwell several times, ignoring the woman's pleas for help as she lay in her home wounded, and stealing two television sets and the woman's car.

The young woman remains in the Ector County jail without bond pending the outcome of the current trial.

Two men charged with arson

From Staff Reports

Two men were charged with arson Thursday following three early morning fires, according to a police department spokesman.

Eldon Ray Truex, 44, 2512 Hicks, and Arlie Leron Currie, 39, of rural Midland, remained in Midland County Jail in lieu of $100,000 each.

According to reports, the first structure fire occurred about 1:30 a.m. Thursday at the Hide Away Lounge, 1205 Rankin Highway. Eddie Lee Henson, 1300 S. McKenzie, reported the fire was set in the back entrance. The club was moderately damaged by the fire, reports said.

The second structure fire occurred about 2 a.m. Thursday at the Star Lite Lounge, 1915 Garden City Highway. The club's back entrance was moderately damaged and there was smoke damage throughout the building. The origin of the fire also was at the club's back entrance, said fire department reports.

The final fire occurred about 2:30 a.m. Thursday at a vacant house used for storage at 810 S. Baird. One bedroom of the house and its contents were heavily damaged by the fire, according to reports. Officials said the fire started in one of the bedrooms.

Gasoline was used to start all the fires, according to reports.

Arson is a Class B felony and carries a prison sentence of up to 25 years.

Odessan hospitalized after accident

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 55-year-old Odessa woman remains in serious condition at Medical Center Hospital following a two-vehicle accident Thursday at Farm-to-Market Road 1882 and State Highway 191, according to a Department of Public Safety spokesman.

Juanita Waldrip was northbound on FM 1182 about 11:10 a.m. when her 1981 Ford collided with a 1984 Cadillac driven by Margaret Franklin, also of Odessa, DPS reports said.

Ms. Waldrip suffered eye injuries and possible lacerations and chest injuries. She was not wearing a seatbelt, according to reports.

Woman says glass found in soup

GEORGETOWN (AP) — A Campbell Soup Inc. official says the company will investigate a Georgetown woman's report that she nearly swallowed a piece of glass contained in a spoonful of soup.

Robin Ruscelli, 26, said she spit out the glass from a mouthful of Campbell's Alphabet Vegetable Soup Made With Beef Stock, which she had purchased at an H.E.B. store on May 21.

Ms. Ruscelli said the clear glass measured about two inches in length and was smooth on both sides but sharp on the ends.

"I was chewing and I felt this crunching and I had a slight sharp feeling in my throat," she said of Wednesday's incident.

"And I felt this long thing. I pulled it out and I nearly had a heart attack," she said. "I bit part of it. I'm not injured, but I was so scared."

PRISON

The report summary concluded with the observation that "other states have also dealt with the issue of correctional facilities. Florida, in particular, recently completed a study which they commissioned in order to determine the socio-economic impacts of state prison-siting on the local community." A summary of the results of this study is included in the report, which is available at the Greater Odessa Area Chamber of Commerce office.

Chamber President John Landgraf, saying no action would be taken until late summer or early fall, complimented Ms. Clack and committee members on the scope and quality of the study.

Landgraf observed that TDC has announced no plans for a new prison facility recently, but indicated the board will probably approve preparation of an on-going effort that would allow Odessa to mount a strong campaign the next time a planned prison facility site is announced.

Midland Chamber of Commerce President Joan Baskin, who met earlier Thursday with Landgraf, said the Midland Chamber had initiated no comparable effort due to lack of support indicated on the part of members.

Hugh Reed sits in his Republic of Texas restaurant in Denton. Drapes made of Texas flags have been taken down after a county judge said they were a desecration of the state flag.

Jurors to decide fate of restaurant curtains

DENTON (AP) — A grand jury is expected to settle a dispute over whether a restaurant's drapes made out of the state standard are a desecration of the Lone Star banner.

Republic of Texas restaurant owner Hugh Reed says the curtains are part of his penchant for Texas lore, such as the live longhorn friends gave him for his 40th birthday.

But county Court-at-Law Judge Hollis Godfrey disagrees.

"They took flags of Texas and made them into curtains for eight windows. They are folded over and sewed, hanging on curtain rods," he said.

Desecration of a venerated object such as the flag is a Class A misdemeanor punishable by up to one year in jail and a $2,000 fine.

Reed's attorney, Bob Eames, said his client considers the restaurant and its decor a tribute to the state.

"He certainly never had any intention of dishonoring the state or the Texas flag. We're talking about a man whose friends gave him a real, live Longhorn steer for his 40th birthday in recognition of his devotion."

State law defines desecrating the flag as intentionally or knowingly defacing or damaging a flag in a manner seriously offensive to any likely to see the act, said Denton District Attorney Jerry Cobb.

Cobb said he will ask a Denton County grand jury to settle the matter.

IRS checks mistakenly mailed unsigned

STATE

AUSTIN (AP) — About 14,000 taxpayers, mostly in Kansas, have received income tax refund checks that are not signed by the Internal Revenue Service's regional director.

The unsigned checks resulted from a malfunctioning U.S. Treasury department machine in Austin, officials said Thursday.

The machine stamps IRS Regional Director Gordon P. Hickam's signature on the refund checks at a rate of about 15,000 every 45 minutes.

The machine was out of whack for about 45 minutes late last week, according to Eugene Sides of Austin, deputy regional manager for the U.S. Department of Treasury's financial management service.

"This type of thing would normally be caught. It could have been caught through quality control procedures, but they got out," he said.

The unsigned checks, mailed last Friday, will be honored by banks, according to Sides.

Bob Branson, an IRS spokesman here, said Hickam confirmed that about 14,000 checks went out without signatures.

Treasury Department spokesman Jim LaForest in Washington said the agency, which writes 800 million checks a year, occassionally had problems with the check-signing machines.

"This has happened from time-to-time. But the checks are perfectly good. Someone who received one should just take it to the bank and the bank will process it," he said.

The Treasury Department has notified the Federal Reserve Bank of the serial numbers and date — May 23 — of the unsigned checks, according to LaForest.

"It was a print malfunction. Sometimes the ink will run out and fade. We don't really know why it happens," he said. "Fourteen thousand is a fair amount. It's happened before for 100 at a time. Everybody knows what to do about it."

Sides said he did not know the specific problem that caused the machine to malfunction.

"From what I can tell it started working on its own again. Machines can be temperamental, like people," he said.

IRS and Treasury Department officials were eager to place the blame with the Treasury Department. The IRS regional service center in Austin was heavily criticized last year for delays in mailing refund checks.

"It was a local foul-up at the regional financial center of the Treasury Department," Branson said of the unsigned checks.

James Manuszak, an IRS spokesman in Wichita, Kan., reading from a release, said, "This is not the IRS' fault."

"We do not want it to come in the headline that the IRS screwed up," he said.

LaForest said, "We want the credit for this mistake. We're the people who crank out the checks."

Lawmakers to discuss state's budget crisis

AUSTIN (AP) — Members of the Texas House converged on Austin today for a rare, one-day meeting to discuss the state's budget crisis.

Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said he wanted the 149 lawmakers to hear first-hand where the state is in coping with a projected $1.3 billion shortfall.

"The main thing we want to do is get an overall analysis of where we are at this time, so we can start making preparations ahead of time for the next session," Lewis said.

Lewis said the Legislature that meets in January may have to deal with the shortfall and other spending constraints.

"It would be unwise for us to go into January without any preparation as long as we're having budget problems," he said.

The speaker also said he hoped lawmakers would get an update on House Bill 72, the sweeping 1984 public school reform law which has generated considerable controversy since taking effect.

On the eve of the House meeting, Gov. Mark White said he sees no need to expand the state's sales tax base.

"I don't think it's necessary at this time," White told his weekly news conference, voicing the expectation that budget cuts he requested from state agencies will prove effective.

Last February, state Comptroller Bob Bullock projected that plunging oil prices would leave state government $1.3 billion short of the money appropriated for the 1986-87 fiscal years.

Earlier this week, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby suggested that the sales tax base could be broadened by including under the 4¼ percent levy some items now exempt. Hobby said exemptions should be retained for food and medicine.

But White said his executive order urging 13 percent spending cuts by the approximately 200 state agencies is working.

White noted a report from the Texas Education Agency, saying the agency will require $140 million less than had been anticipated. Officials say attendance figures for public schools have been running less than projected.

"I assure you we'll have — assuming the current revenues — adequate monies to meet our budgetary needs," White said.

"I want to make certain we explore every alternative before any suggestion would be made of new taxes," he said.

Mattox says he's getting 'harrassing' calls at home

AUSTIN (AP) — The leader of a Tarrant County church home ordered closed by a state judge says his followers are calling Attorney General Jim Mattox at home — at all hours — to register their protests.

Mattox said the calls begin at about 1 a.m. and continue all night.

The callers talk about "all manners of things," according to Mattox.

"Everything from preaching mini-sermons to saying very insulting things toward me and my family and my staff, uttering an assortment of veiled threats all the way from being political to being physical," he said of the calls.

Some of the callers identify themselves as supporters of Pastor W.N. Otwell of the Community Baptist Church in Forest Hill, near Fort Worth, Mattox said.

A state judge has ordered the church's boys home closed because it does not have a state license. Mattox's office filed the suit to close the home.

Otwell confirmed Thursday that "some of our people are calling," Mattox.

"It's not harassment. How can it be harassment when someone can help you and all you are doing is knocking on their door and asking for relief? That's pleading. And anytime you have to do it it is proper. These people can't get to Jim Mattox during the day," Otwell said.

Justice denies report that court asked bar to halt probe

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Chief Justice John Hill Thursday denied a report in a San Antonio newspaper that the Texas Supreme Court asked the State Bar to help stop an ongoing public investigation of alleged official misconduct involving high court members.

"The writer of the story never contacted me," Hill said Thursday night. "It's absolutely false."

The Express-News reported Thursday that Charles L. Smith of San Antonio, State Bar president, claimed he refused Hill's plea to urge the House Committee on Judicial Affairs to refer its probe of alleged misconduct to the Texas Commission on Judicial Conduct.

The newspaper reported that at a recent meeting in Austin of the Supreme Court and the State Bar executive committee, Hill asked for the bar's support in placing the ongoing investigation in the hands of the judicial conduct commission.

Thursday night, Smith told The Associated Press that the newspaper report had misconstrued Hill's request that the executive committee support his proposal for legislation and a constitutional amendment to end the system of selecting judges by popular vote, replacing it with a system of appointing judges who would be subject to retention or rejection by voters.

According to the newspaper, Smith said he told the seven Supreme Court members present at the meeting he did not believe the State Bar should take a stand in the judicial selection controversy.

The newspaper said the bar president said he personally favors Hill's proposal for a merit system of selecting judges.

"But it would be very divisive for the State Bar of Texas, a governmental agency, to propose it as part of a legislative program," Smith was quoted as saying. "I would hope that the bar does not get involved, but would encourage individual members of the State Bar to do so."

According to Thursday's newspaper report, Smith said he also believes that judicial misconduct allegations should be investigated by the Commission on Judicial Conduct, and not aired publicly until they are verified.

But he said he will not so testify before the House Committee on Judicial Affairs committee, nor will he write a letter to the chairman, state Rep. Frank Tejeda of San Antonio, stating his opinion.

"It would give the appearance that I was speaking as an agent for the Supreme Court," Smith was quoted as saying. "It would not be effective; it would not be productive."

Thursday night, Smith said the newspaper report had taken the comment in which he said that he "wasn't going to testify before the House or write letters or anything" as being a rejection of an effort to get the bar to intervene.

The Tejeda committee will hold its fourth meeting in Austin on June 18, the eve of the opening of the annual convention of the State Bar of Texas in Houston.

The panel heard public testimony at two of the three hearings, including testimony from three former briefing attorneys for the Supreme Court.

Robber angered when he learns teacher only has $3

ARLINGTON (AP) — An armed man held a class of 26 elementary school students at gunpoint after being surprised while robbing a teacher of $3, police say.

No one was hurt in the 2:40 p.m. incident Thursday at Speer Elementary School, which ended when the man fled, police said.

The man approached the teacher while she was alone in her music classroom in an auxiliary building, said Arlington school district spokeswoman Rosemary Travis.

He became angry upon discovering the teacher had only $3 in cash in her purse, police spokesman Jim Willett said.

"She told him, 'Well, what do you expect? I'm a teacher,' " Willett said.

During the robbery, the teacher's sixth-grade choir students filed in for class. The man warned them to do as he said or he would hurt them, police said.

"He told them to face the wall, and as the last girl filed in, he bolted," Ms. Travis said.

Soldier to get Purple Heart

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A soldier who was burned in the terrorist bombing of a West Berlin discotheque will be presented the Purple Heart, officials say.

Spec. 4 David Jackson will be awarded the medal as soon as orders, which were mailed Thursday from Washington, are received, said a spokesman from Brooke Army Medical Center, where he is being treated.

Jackson is in satisfactory condition with second- and third-degree burns over 70 percent of his body, wounds inflicted during the April 5 bombing, hospital officials say.

Maj. Bruce Bell, an Army spokesman in the Pentagon, said Jackson will join 38 other Army soldiers and two members of the Air Force who earlier received Purple Hearts for wounds sustained in the La Belle disco bombing that injured 63 Americans and 167 others.

The attack led to the April 14 U.S. air strike on Libya.

Grocer shot to death

DEKALB (AP) — A 74-year-old woman who operated a small grocery was found shot to death Thursday in a small kitchen area in the rear of the store, authorities said.

Eva May Jackson apparently died from a single gunshot wound to the forehead, Bowie County Chief Deputy Raymond Calhoun said.

"We did discover some money scattered inside the house," Calhoun said, "and that might indicate robbery was not the motive. But we haven't ruled out robbery. The money discovery clouds the motive issue."

Ms. Jackson was the owner of L.A. May Grocery, which was adjacent to her residence in rural Bowie County about six miles south of DeKalb. The small store usually was open for business by 6 a.m.

Neighbors, who knew Ms. Jackson's work schedule, were concerned when the business displayed a "closed" sign on its door about 7 a.m. Thursday. The neighbors then discovered the front door of her residence ajar.

Killer gets death sentence

FORT WORTH (AP) — Troy Dale Farris has been sentenced to death for killing a Tarrant County sheriff's deputy in December 1983.

Jurors set that punishment Thursday for the 25-year-old Farris after seven hours of deliberations that spanned two days. The same jury returned a guilty verdict on a capital murder charge Saturday.

Farris was accused of slaying deputy Clark Rosenbalm Jr. on Dec. 4, 1983.

Under Texas law, an appeal of the death penalty is automatic, and the state and federal appeals process usually takes several years.

Burglar returns booty

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — An apologetic burglar returned part of the booty he took from a woman's home and even left behind a note saying how sorry he was, police say.

But the second thoughts went only so far — the thief left three plastic bags filled with the woman's belongings on her front porch, but none of the $2,300 worth of jewelry she says was taken was inside.

A note attached to one of the bags said the intruder "was sorry and stupid for doing something like that," police said Thursday.

Lawmaker passes TECAT

AUSTIN (AP) — State Rep. David Hudson, D-Tyler, on Thursday released results showing he passed the reading and writing portions of the basic skills test for educators.

Hudson said he took the test April 12, the first date a certified teacher who is not teaching could take the test.

"When I took the test, I predicted that the overwhelming majority of teachers would pass the test and that I would pass the test. Both of these predictions have come true," Hudson said in a statement.

Future bleak where floods roared through farms

AGRICULTURE

By GIRARD STEICHEN

ONEGO, W.Va. (AP) — There'll be no spring planting for Denton Kisamore this year. A river now runs where he harvested corn and hay a few short months ago.

When the North Fork River roared over its banks in November during the most destructive floods in state history, it carved a new channel straight through Kisamore's land, carrying the topsoil northward toward neighboring counties.

"I didn't know I was worth anything until the flood," Kisamore said recently, looking over a pile of rocks and debris that was once his barnyard. "I didn't know I had anything until I found out what it would cost to replace it."

Behind him, the now-placid North Fork winds its way around boulders and rocks where his fields once lay. The water also took much of his machinery and wrecked his barn, silo and fences, he said.

"I just don't know what I'm going to do," he said. "There's nothing left. I couldn't make a decent living before and I don't know what I can do now."

Kisamore is among scores of farmers in Pendleton County, in the eastern part of the state, who were devastated by the November floods. In all, the floods did more than $1 billion damage in West Virginia and neighboring sections of Virginia.

Al Stewart, district conservationist for the U.S. Soil Conservation Service, says the destruction was too great for many farmers to recover.

"A lot of these farmers are realizing right now just how much they lost," he said. "I don't think some of them realized just how bad it was until they walked out to see about the spring planting."

He said more than 2,000 acres of once-valuable cropland in the county are useless. In addition, flood damage will cut productivity in half on 40 percent of the land in the county, Stewart said.

Channel restoration and a massive effort to clear rocks from fields have saved some farmers from ruin, Stewart said. But for those like Kisamore, he said, the future is bleak.

The force of the flood waters was so great in Kisamore's area that an average of four to five feet of soil was swept away, Stewart said.

"Everything's gone," he said. "Not just topsoil...everything right down to the rock. Nothing is going to grow there."

While Kisamore's plight is one of the severest in the county, other farmers have been able to fight their way back into production.

Ben Adamson, who helps run a family dairy farm along the South Fork north of Franklin, said flood damage was extensive but not enough to shut him down permanently.

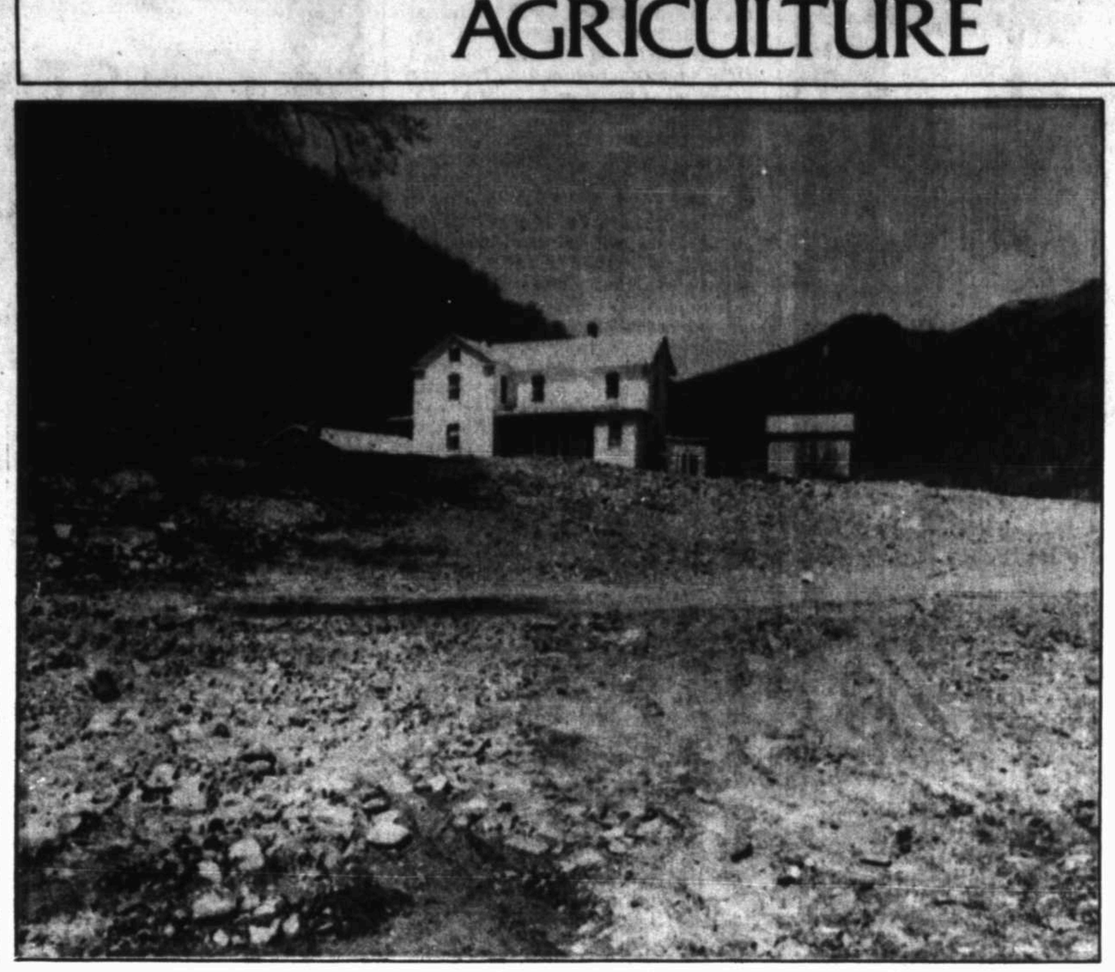

"We had a modern dairy operation here before the flood," Adamson said. "It'll take five years to get back where we were."

Flood waters cut a swath through the Adamsons' bottomland fields and surrounding barns. Adamson said three silos were destroyed and equipment was damaged.

Large rock piles, neatly stacked and ready to be hauled away, dot the field next to the dairy barns. But half of the field remains covered with rocks and debris.

"We won't be planting any corn there," Adamson said.

Kisamore said he'll stay on the farm and raise a few cattle if he can keep his part-time job as a rural mail carrier.

With the topsoil washed away from his land, Denton Kisamore's house sits amid rock-strewn fields. Kisamore is among dozens of farmers in Pendleton County, West Virginia, who were devastated by flooding last November.

Over-watering one of worst things home gardener can do

It is safe to say in most areas of Texas that successful gardening depends upon a good source of water. Although gardens can be grown "dryland," a garden's chance of success is enhanced greatly if a water faucet is nearby.

To many folks one of the most enjoyable aspects of home gardening is watering. It can be quite enjoyable to see a vegetable garden respond to a drink during the heat of mid-summer. Despite the fact that watering the garden is a great deal of fun, it can often be associated with many of the problems that occur. Many things, such as poor yields, poor quality, poor fertility, bitter fruit, sunscald, disease problems, and a dozen other things can be related to poor and improper watering.

Many home gardeners enjoy watering their gardens after a hard day's work. Gardening is used as a form of relaxation or for its therapeutic value. So it is not unusual that many home gardens may be watered two, three, or more times a week. Unfortunately, this is one of the worst things a gardener can do, since it can result in poor root development which is followed by a less than successful home garden. Light, frequent waterings have a tendency to cause a concentration of roots in the top inch or two of garden soil. This underdeveloped root system does not pose any serious problem early in the season when the plants are relatively young and sufficient moisture is usually available. As the season progresses and moisture becomes and less and less available, the limited root systems results in the need for frequent watering. Consequently, the home gardener is forced to water several times a week just to keep plants from severely wilting, thus resulting in inefficient nutrient uptake and the common occurence of diseases. These problems can be prevented by adequate early and midseason watering.

Water the garden not by looking at the plants, but rather by examining the garden soil. Look at the surface of the soil and if it appears dry, then scratch the surface to the depth of about an inch to determine if moisture is present. If the soil appears relatively dry, then watering is necessary. If sufficient moisture is available an inch beneath the soil, then wait a couple of days. Another point to consider is the type of garden soil. Obviously a light, sandy soil that drains well will require more frequent watering than will a heavy soil which holds water. This simply means you will need to check a sandy soil more often than you will a heavy soil.

How much to water is another mystery that confronts home gardeners. The general rule of thumb is when you water, really soak the garden soil. The amount must be determined for each and every garden. Use enough water until the garden seems to be well watered, then dig down and if the soil is wet to a depth of six inches, then adequate moisture has been applied. If aftering digging down three or four inches the soil is relatively dry, then additional water should is needed. After doing this several times, the gardener will learn by experience when adequate water has been used. Usually an inch or two of water applied once a week will sufficiently water most vegetable gardens in Texas.

There are many types of drip systems available for today's gardener. Some systems are small water-releasing mechanisms call emitters which drip a certain amount of water when a certain water pressure is supplied. Many of these systems are prepackaged and allow little versatility of adaptation to the various sizes and shapes of Texas gardens. However, there are several systems available that can easily be adapted to almost any garden size and situation. The most commonly available system has small holes in plastic tubes which allow the water to come out in small amounts. The tube is placed along the row so that the root zone is moistened by the dripping water.

Once the drip irrigation system is in place and operating, the question always arises as to how long it should be utilized for optimum plant growth. This will vary with the plants grown and the season of the year, but a general recommendation is to operate the system three hours a day on alternating days of the week. Of course, when rainfall is adequate, it will not be necessary to water with the drip system for several days.

Study: Farmers more likely to die of some cancers than city dwellers

URBANA, Ill. (AP) — Farmers in rural counties are far more likely to die of certain types of cancer than people who live in a more urban setting, a University of Illinois study suggests.

Researcher Don Buesching examined cancer mortality rates in three Illinois counties — JoDaviess, Carroll and Winnebago — from 1973 through 1980, and found they were up to five times higher among farmers.

Buesching said the death rate for farmers who develop cancer may be higher because medical care is inconvenient or too expensive for them and they are exposed to cancer-causing substances by farm chemicals and animals.

"There's a lot of speculation but not too many answers," said Buesching, now a market analyst at Rockford Memorial Hospital.

The highest mortality rates were from leukemia and prostate cancer among farmers in JoDaviess and Carroll counties. Buesching said 4.9 times as many farmers died from leukemia and 4.7 times as many died from prostate cancer.

The death rate for cancer of the lymph system among farmers in JoDaviess and Carroll counties was 3.7 times as high.

The control group was the entire population of Winnebago County, which is classified as metropolitan and includes Rockford. Buesching said the other two counties are considered non-metropolitan and medically under-served.

However, even farmers in Winnebago County had a higher death rate from all three types of cancer than the control group, he said.

"Farmers do use health services at a lower rate than the rest of the population," said Buesching.

He said it may be more difficult for them to leave the farm, particularly during busy seasons, to travel to distant medical facilities.

In addition, those farmers in rural counties may be less likely to be employed part-time — or have wives employed — by companies with good medical insurance.

"We hear a lot about the economic plight of farmers but now is not the time to neglect your health," said Buesching, noting that cure rates for cancers are linked to early detection and treatment.

Buesching also found that the total cancer mortality rate was 2.5 times higher for the rural farmers and 1.5 times higher for the Winnebago County farmers, while rural nonfarmers had a death rate lower than the control group.

Another theory for elevated cancer rates among farmers is their environment, he said. Buesching said the rates increased as the use of chemicals on the farm rose dramatically.

Farmers also may be exposed to cancer-causing viruses carried by the livestock they handle, he said.

Other studies also have documented higher cancer mortality rates among farmers, said Buesching, however no cause-effect relationship has been established scientifically.

"You have to start scratching your head and saying, 'Maybe there is something here.' But, now we need to move on and find out why it's happening."

Insect stings can cause three levels of reaction in people

Spring weather can mean danger for Texans who get bitten or stung by insects.

Insects cause a number of injuries to people each year when outdoor activities increase. The worst offenders are bees, wasps and yellow-jackets. The great peril from insect-people encounters is allergic reactions. Insect bites kill at least nine more Americans than do snake bites.

People have different reactions to insect venoms and allergic reactions are classified by the severity of one's body reaction.

There are at least three levels of reactions insect venoms and stings can cause: slight reactions, including itching, inflammation of the skin or anxiety; moderate reactions, including swelling, abdominal pain or nausea; and severe reactions, including difficulty in breathing or swelling, hoarsness or confusion.

Most severe would probably be shock reaction that causes a drop in blood pressure, collapse or unconsciousness. Moderate and severe reactions from an insect bite or sting are enough cause to see a doctor. Capture the offending insect if possible to help the doctor in providing treatment.

To reduce contact with venomous insects, do not walk around in the yard barefooted; avoid wearing sweet smelling colognes or perfumes; keep ripened fruits, watermelons, soft drinks or other sweet-smelling materials covered when outdoors and avoid mowing lawns or working in flower beds when bees or wasps are active. Insects are less active in the early morning hours.

Remain still if a stinging insect is near. Brush it off if it attacks but don't slap it to prevent a sting. If attacked by a swarm of wasps, yellow-jackets, hornets or bees, leave the area immediately while protecting the face, hands and arms.

Among the variety of venoms produced by insects are those producing blisters, caused by stinging caterpillars, centipedes and blister beetles; those attacking the central nervous system, produced by scorpions, black widow spiders, bees, wasps, yellow-jackets and hornets; those destroying skin tissue, produced by fire ants, wheel bug, brown recluse spiders, mites, scorpions, chiggers, bees, wasps, yellow-jackets and hornets; those preventing blood from clotting, caused by fleas, lice, mites, ticks, biting flies and true bugs.

Illinois buys alcohol-burning tractors

URBANA, Ill. (AP) — The only clue that the bright orange tractors are unique — the first of their kind in the nation — are labels noting they burn pure fuel alcohol.

That alcohol is made from corn, and that's why farmer Fred Werts is smiling. He and fellow corn growers have persuaded Illinois officials to buy the tractors — and they helped pay for them — in an effort to show that the nation's huge corn supply can be put to use as fuel as well as food.

"It's fantastic — a big, big milestone," Werts said recently. "If there's one thing I can't stand, it's someone who says it can't be done."

The state's Department of Transportation purchased eight Ford alcohol-burning tractors to mow roadsides. The University of Illinois has acquired one to test on its farms.

Illinois farmers, through their contributions to the Corn Growers Association, put up $24,000 to help pay for the tractors and provided 2,000 gallons of fuel alcohol. They hope the state and university tests will show that it's practical to operate tractors on alcohol.

They are the only nine tractors in the country manufactured specifically to burn alcohol, Werts said, although he himself has converted one of his traditional tractors to run on the farm-grown fuel.

But Ford is no newcomer to alcohol power. After extensive testing, the company began mass producing alcohol-fueled tractors in 1985 in Brazil, an oil-short country with enough sugar cane to produce alcohol for fuel.

Bikini people want to return to their Pacific island

EDITOR'S NOTE: For 40 years they have lived as exiles on tiny Pacific islands, their homeland a poisoned paradise. As the leaders of the Bikini evacuees put it in a letter to President Reagan, "We want our dignity back and our dignity is our land."

By HOWARD GRAVES

BIKINI, Marshall Islands (AP) — One day in March four decades ago, 167 men, women and children were loaded into U.S. Navy boats and taken away from the only home they had ever known, Bikini Island in the Pacific.

It was the dawn of the Atomic Age and the United States government was about to begin testing nuclear weapons in the isolation of Bikini Atoll's lagoon.

Bikini would become synonymous with devastation.

Between 1946 and 1958, 23 nuclear bombs were detonated in the pristine setting about 2,100 miles southwest of Hawaii in the Marshall Islands. Radioactive fallout contaminated the 2½-mile-long, quarter-mile-wide, Bikini Island, leaving it a poisoned paradise.

But ever since they were evacuated on March 7, 1946, the Bikinians, now numbering nearly 1,300, have longed to go home to what they remember as an idyllic island of white coral beaches and azure waters.

A year ago the Bikinians won an out-of-court settlement that commits the U.S. government to cleanse their island of the contaminated soil. Scientists say it can be done for upwards of $50 million over a period of several years.

THE REAGAN administration and Congress say they favor moving the Bikinians back to their homeland and making the island livable again.

But, says Washington attorney Jonathan M. Weisgall, who is handling the Bikinians' case, "No one has provided any money yet."

"There is no doubt that they've been denied access to their homeland," says Larry L. Morgan, spokesman for the Department of Interior's Office of Territorial and International Affairs, which has authority over the Bikinians' affairs.

However, Morgan says, "Most of them have never lived on Bikini. The most that they know is what has been told them by their elders."

Morgan visited the island for the first time late last year, as did his boss, Assistant Interior Secretary Richard T. Montoya.

In a 1982 letter to President Reagan, Bikini leaders said, "We want to go back home and be Bikinians more than anything in the world. We want our dignity back and our dignity is our land. Our land is our life; to lose one is to lose the other."

Bikini is the northernmost atoll in the Marshall Islands, an archipelago formed by coral formations built from submerged volcanic peaks. The Marshalls' 29 atolls and five single islands are scattered over 375,000 square miles of the Pacific Ocean — an area about 1⅛ times the size of Texas. But there is less than 70 square miles of dry land, about one-twentieth the area of Rhode Island.

The first nuclear test in Bikini Atoll, code-named Operation Crossroads, involved 42,000 military and civilian personnel, 242 ships, 156 airplanes, 25,000 radiation devices and 5,400 experimental rats, goats and pigs.

ONE BOMB was dropped from a plane into the center of 84 ships in the lagoon, which is 25 miles long and about 11 miles wide.

In a second test, the bomb was suspended beneath a ship and detonated electronically.

In 1954 came a test called Operation Bravo. At 14.5 mega-tons, it was the largest nuclear test in United States history. 'Bravo" left a crater 1½ miles wide and 480-feet deep in the lagoon. Three tiny islands were vaporized.

"That brought Bikini back into the headlines," Weisgall says. Radioactive fallout drifted eastward and contaminated several hundred Marshallese on two other atolls. The crew of a Japanese fishing boat also was hit by the radioactive dust.

In 1968, President Lyndon B. Johnson said Bikini again was livable and about 145 islanders moved back the next year.

However, they were moved out again in 1978 when tests showed their internal radiation levels exceeded federal standards, Weisgall says.

Since then, no one has lived on Bikini Island.

The Bikinians' odyssey 40 years ago first took them 125 miles east to Rongerik Atoll.

Lore Kessibuki, one of about 100 evacuated Bikinians still living, recalls, "When the Americans came to talk with us some of our people said, 'Let's not give up our island.' But we did what the Americans said. As we were leaving they were very happy with us."

"DURING THE two years on Rongerik we faced starvation," says the 77-year-ol,d one-time Bikini magistrate, or mayor, and author of Bikini's anthem. "The Americans left us with K-rations. They lasted about a month. We fought each other. The words the Americans told us on Bikini were lies. They said they would care for us. One woman died. My father got so weak he couldn't stand or walk. Flesh hung from bodies. The elders laid around and felt sorrow."

When their plight was discovered, the Bikinians were sent to Kwajalein Island, where they lived in tents for about six months.

Then they were relocated on Kili Island, a 200-acre speck of land about 425 miles south of Bikini Atoll.

About 550 of the nearly 1,277 Bikinians live on Kili, where winter ocean storms wash waves over the narrow strip of land.

AP Laserphoto

This is an aerial view of Bikini Island in the Pacific Ocean. Forty years ago 167 men, women and children were taken from the only home they had known. They were moved so the United States could test nuclear weapons in the isolation of the lagoon.

An additional 200 live on Ejit, another tiny island near Majuro, the Marshalls' capital. About 300 live in Majuro, and the remaining Bikinians are scattered elsewhere in the Marshalls, a part of the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, also known as Micronesia.

At Kili there is no lagoon. There is very little fishing because of the lack of sheltered waters. Most food is imported on the once-a-week commercial air flight from Majuro or by government ship.

On both Kili and Ejit islands, 15 to 20 people live in dwellings designed for less than half that many. There are no indoor toilets or plumbing.

There is little to do on Kili except go to church or walk around the island. Alcoholic beverages are forbidden.

ONE MAN imported a small truck he uses as a taxi. He charges 60 cents per person for a ride up and down the island or to the air strip.

There is an eight-man police force, and anyone who gets out of line is handcuffed to a coconut tree under the tropical sun.

There is an elementary school, but the nearest high school is in Majuro.

The U.S. government provides Bikinians on Kili with Department of Agriculture canned food. Fresh fish, a staple in the Bikinians' diet, is imported.

At 4.6 percent a year, the Bikinians birthrate is among the world's highest. Weisgall says at least half of the Bikinian population is under 16 years of age.

Their income is from interest off two trust funds totaling $6 million which Congress provided in the 1970s.

Weisgall says that amounts to about $600,000 yearly, or about $39 monthly for each eligible Bikinian. In 1980, Congress gave them a one-time, $1.4 million payment.

Morgan says that since 1964 the U.S. government has spent $46.3 million in studies and for support of Bikinians. That includes a $20.6 million resettlement trust fund.

UNDER RECENTLY passed legislation, the Bikinians are to receive $75 million in nuclear claims compensation over a 15-year period. Of the $5 million annual payment, Weisgall says $2.6 million will be put in trust. The remaining $2.4 million will be apportioned to the eligible Bikinians.

Last July, 17 Bikini men, including Kessibuki and another elder, Kilon Bauno, believed to be about 90,returned to Bikini Island to watch scientists' experiments trying to rid the soil of radiation.

The soil and water specialists have determined there is no threat of external radiation on either Bikini or Eneu Island, about four miles away.

They said there is danger from Bikini's contaminated soil and brackish water, but Eneu could be resettled at any time because the soil is safe and fresh rainwater could be captured.

The scientists believe that through fertilizer, especially heavy doses of potassium, the radioactivity could be drawn out of the Bikini soil and crops could be grown.

At one time, scientists felt 10 to 12 inches of top soil would have to be stripped from the land. Weisgall says that would be expensive and time consuming.

"They are going to have to use fertilizer, in any event, if the Bikinians want to grow crops," Weisgall says. "The use of potassium would be cheaper, environmentally beneficial and they wouldn't have to wait eight to 12 years to return. They might be able to get back in three to five years if they choose that route. It is their decision."

The Bikini Atoll Rehabilitation Committee is an independent group formed by Congress in 1982 and given $3.8 million to spend to find a way to clean the island. The five-member committee, chaired by Dr. Henry I. Kohn, professor emeritus of radiation biology at Harvard Medical School, works with field teams from the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory in Livermore, Calif., headed by Dr. William L. Robison.

IN A REPORT to Congress in November, the committee said the Bikini population could reach 1,600 by 1990 and 2,500 by the year 2000.

"Overcrowding on Kili and Ejit is already intense," the report said. "Early relief is needed and the Bikini people face the need to make decisions on alternative or additional temporary settlement locations well before Bikini Island is available for resettlement."

The report also said the Bikinians "have been somewhat suspicious of BARC and especially work and statements by scientists in government laboratories."

Some of that distrust evaporated after the Bikinians' July visit to the island and other visits to Lawrence Livermore Laboratories, in California, to watch scientists analyze soil samples from the island.

"From what I heard and watched on Bikini I was amazed and surprised," Kessibuki said through an interpreter. "I'm so happy that I came. There isn't any other country in the world that can be as smart as the United States. I think there will be positive results."

Bauno, also speaking through an interpreter, said, "I don't understand any of these tests. The only thing I understand is that our island was used for atomic tests and it is poisoned."

"Don't any of you forget us," Kessibuki said.

Too many people volunteer to help with Asian Games, 1988 Olympics

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The Seoul Asian Games Organizing Committee has a problem many nations' official sports bodies would envy, says Dr. Lee Ha-woo, vice president and secretary general of SAGOC. There are too many enthusiastic volunteers who want to donate their time and effort.

Volunteers are required in 213 different kinds of work during the Games, including interpreters, guides, cooks, clerks, medical staff and technical workers.

A nationwide campaign was launched in October 1985 to encourage the public to help with the Asian Games, from Sept. 20 through Oct. 5 this year, and with the 1988 Olympics, also to be held in Seoul. Within six weeks, an army of volunteers numbering more than 110,000 had come forward.

A massive initial screening showed that 99.7 percent of the volunteers were suited for the jobs, but SAGOC requires only 16,893 helpers for the Games.

It is a happy dilemma for the organizers, who gladly admit they underestimated the people's zeal and enthusiasm.

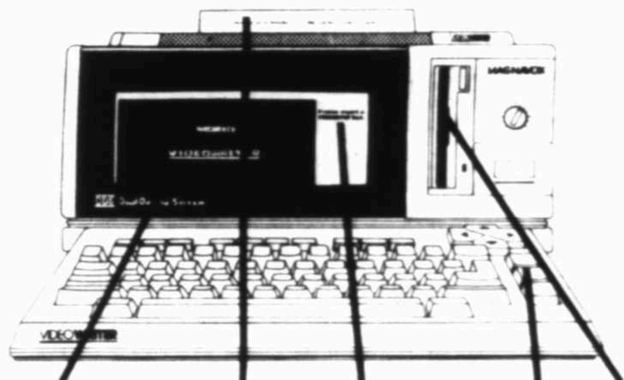

"The only sad part is having to turn volunteers away," said Lee, who is also secretary general of the Seoul Olympic Organizing Committee.

Other government bodies, such as the Seoul city government, have been asked to employ the volunteers for Asian Games-related community work during the period they will be taking place.

The unsuccessful candidates are also promised preference as volunteers for the Olympics. The Olympics committee estimates that some 78,000 volunteers will be needed for the 24th Olympiad.

COPING WITH JOB LOSS

Losing job a stressful experience

By JIM MAY and MARTI VERMILLION

May

Vermillion

DEAR COPING: I am a geologist who who has recently lost my job. I knew it was coming and I hadn't slept well for almost six months, ever since the price of oil started dropping so much. When I was finally let go, I stopped worrying and right now feel relieved that it's over. My wife seems much more worried now, however, and acts as if I should be, should I? — RMS, Midland.

DEAR RMS: Anticipation of joblessness can create significant stress well before termination actually occurs. During the Great Depression, it was found that professionals who expected to lose their jobs exhibited much lower morale than those who had already been terminated. The unemployment experience varies through time. The common experience of professionals out of work three months or less is for stress to be quite high, then drop considerably for those unemployed seven to nine months, but increasing again for those out of work between one and two years.

During the first stage of joblessness, research has identified a sequence: shock, relief and relaxation. Although the initial impact of job loss is typically one of shock, as in your case, this often rapidly gives way to a reduction of the stress built up during the preceding period of anticipation and uncertainty. Some people protect themselves from feelings of shame by keeping their job loss a secret from their neighbors and, in some cases, even from their spouses.

It is not uncommon for many of those experiencing sudden unemployment to treat it as if it were a vacation, thereby maintaining their idea that finding other employment will not be difficult. Some even use time to take a vacation they always wanted to take and never had time for.

This period of relief and relaxation generally seems to last from one to two months. During this time, unemployed professionals often describe themselves as confident and hopeful of finding work as soon as they feel ready to look for it and maintain a normal relationship with their family and friends. However, considerable bitterness toward their former employer is often reported at this stage. It would appear that severance pay and unemployment insurance are a real help during this period. Most people do go ahead and start their job search immediately, but the relief stage may be diminished considerably by perceived poor employment opportunities.

Those professionals who are reemployed during this stage report that their unemployment experience was very disturbing to them but they felt that within six months they would be back to normal again. They are still high in self-esteem and life satisfaction and some even see the job loss experience as an opportunity for change. Research also shows that under their generally calm exterior, however, the job loss experience still affects them. Those in this stage, even though reemployed, exhibit the highest levels of resentment toward their former employer about what happened. This seems to stem from a sense of betrayal or the violation of the emotional contract with their employer.

In general, this first stage — relief — is one of relatively low stress even though after the first few weeks most unemployed professionals do exhibit considerable anxiousness about the future. Interestingly enough, in this stage the unemployed usually receive the least amount of social support when compared to those who have been out of work for longer periods of time.

As noted by your question, there are at least two paradoxes at work here. You are experiencing relief at a time when others may logically — "logically" to them — think that you should be feeling real stress. Research also suggests that neither the husband nor the wife openly air their concerns during this stage, but greater openness is exactly what is required to deal with the pent-up feelings of resentment and anxiety.

We would strongly encourage you and your wife to sit down as a family and begin to try to share your feelings with each other and begin to try to share your feelings with each other. Please don't try to "solve" this problem by yourself, instead use the strength that comes from both of you working on a shared problem.

Jim May, director of the Family Wellness Center, has undergraduate and graduate degrees in engineering and presently is a doctoral student in marriage and family therapy at Texas Tech. Marti Vermillion, a Family Wellness Center Staff member, has degrees in family studies and is a doctoral student in family studies at Texas Tech.

ASK DR. RUTH

Wife bored

Dr. RUTH WESTHEIMER

Q. We've been married 18 months, and I am so bored. We never go anywhere, and I am only 21. I don't even want or enjoy sex with him any more, and he tries hard. This other guy is so exciting, though so far we only hug and kiss, but I know we'll go farther unless we stop meeting. What can I do?

A. I'm worried because you don't say you want to save your marriage, or that you love your husband, or that you have anything you hold to in life, or any direction you want to take, or that you want to avoid what you seem to believe is your fate. Your question implies that you feel helpless in the grip of forces that move you about. You have only a vague despair about what is happening to your marriage and yourself.

I would say not to meet the other man again, if you can get up enough will to avoid it, and to get to some social service agency for counseling.

You need help in setting some goals for yourself, so that life does not push you this way and that. So that life is not your marriage doing things to you, or your hard-striving husband failing to arouse or please you, or the other guy drawing you to him in a way that dismays you, but one that you can't resist.

Instead of feeling such helplessness, you should have the sense of yourself being in charge of your marriage, of your being responsible for your sex life, of your recognizing the attractiveness of outside men but still deciding your own actions.

At present you have no sense of yourself as a force, but only as inert matter, a slave to other forces, a victim. Get that professional guidance, learn some awareness of yourself as a human individual, a will, a force. This is important because otherwise things will control you, probably to your harm.

Q. We've only been married a few weeks, and my wife foolishly told her mom that we sleep nude. Of course the old lady was outraged. This would all blow over except that I know these ideas of her mom's sink into my wife's head and upset her and interfere with us. How can I overcome this?

A. First, don't over-emphasize it. The chances are that her mother's ideas will leave your wife's head as easily as they went in, or almost. A young person often needs a few years after growing up to realize that Mom will not be giving out kisses and cookies for every new idea her daughter expresses, nor for every new thing she does. It takes a while to accept this disagreement and not be upset by it.

As more years pass, the daughter often becomes more and more the mother's parent, and learns not only that she has to steer her own course but, at the end, to manage a mother who has become a rather difficult child. This is not always the case, but it's a known pattern.

Say to your wife, "Honey, I am sure your mother doesn't tell you what really went on in her bedroom when she was your age. Don't trouble her about how we act in private. Only we can really understand it."

Executives say attitude vital to career success

Associated Press

Talent and luck are not enough to climb the ladder of success — you need the right attitude to reach top altitude in your career.

A group of 27 corporate executives revealed what they have learned about how to succeed in business by really trying in the June issue of Cosmopolitan, offering some do's and don'ts on how to press for success. Among them:

"I look for good old-fashioned work habits — punctuality, willingness to work overtime when you have to or to travel when asked, reasonable-to-low demands for time off," said Elaine H. Bond, senior vice president, Chase Manhattan Bank.

James E. Preston, president and CEO, Avon Division, Avon Products, advised:

"No boss likes to be surprised. Have you heard the saying, 'Bring me your troubles early, and you have a partner in finding a solution. Bring me a disaster late, and you've got a judge'? I'm not critical of people who have problems, but I sure have no time for people who try to cover up or delay while things worsen."

Ruth S. Block, executive vice president, Equitable Life Assurance Society of the U.S., stressed the importance of communications skills, saying: "Even more important than having great ideas is the ability to communicate them both in writing and on your feet."

Beatrice Coleman, president, Maidenform Inc., had some advice specifically for women.

"Women are often told to be aggressive, but aggression is not the way to get anywhere — unless you disguise it," she said. "People who are right in there fighting all the time with a chip on their shoulder just don't get as far as those who mask their aggressive feelings."

More advice aimed at women came from M. Jacqueline McCurdy, vice president, industry relations, Joseph E. Seagram and Sons Inc.

"The one thing that's always turned me off," she said, "is when a woman comes in and says, 'You've got to help me, you're a woman, you understand.' If a person wants to succeed, she's got to realize she is a businessperson and will be accepted only as such."

The executive advice was summed up in the article into these do's and don'ts of career success.

Do:

- Find out as much as you can about your industry, not just your job.
- Accept blame if you make a mistake. Don't be defensive or point a finger at others to protect yourself.
- Ask for what you want — promotions, raises, responsibility — rather than expecting your boss to read your mind.
- Mind your manners on the job, use common courtesy with superiors and inferiors, and don't adopt an overly masculine air to "compensate" for being a woman.
- Come up with ideas, solutions to problems, ways to do things better. Show you care about your job and aren't just putting in time.

Don'ts:

- Don't be overaggressive. No one likes pushy people.
- Don't take yourself too seriously, or you may lose your sense of humor about your own foibles and wind up defensive and resentful.
- Don't seem a know-it-all. Bosses find this trait supremely annoying.
- Beware of too-restrictive mentors. Someone higher up can look out for you and teach you, but in time your fortunes become too tied to theirs and you don't get credit for your own work.
- Don't imitate your role model's personality. Be yourself.

Food additives add up to bucks

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Manufacturing those obscure chemical ingredients listed in the smallest of type on food labels is a booming industry.

A recent study found that sales of the biochemicals used in foods will exceed $4.5 billion by 1989, up from the 1985 level of $3.9 billion.

The forecast, by the New York-based research company of Frost & Sullivan Inc., found that the largest segment of the market is the high-fructose corn sweeteners primarily used in soft drinks.

That segment alone totaled $2.4 billion in sales last year.

In fact, between 1980 and 1984, the amount of corn sweeteners used in soft drinks came close to doubling, from 4.4 billion pounds to 8.6 billion pounds.

The sharp increase parallels the switch many beverage companies made from cane and beet sugar to corn sweeteners in drink formulas.

Coca-Cola Inc. was the first major soft drink company to begin phasing out sugar in its beverage line in favor of the less costly corn-based substance.

Betty Crocker gets dress-for-success make over

NEW YORK (AP) — Betty Crocker turns 65 this year, but she doesn't look a day over 35 in her new dress-for-success suit and hoop earrings.

The latest makeover, her seventh, has turned the fictitious homespun housewife into a middle-aged yuppie.

"It's about time they changed her look," said Faith Popcorn, a New York market consultant who had criticized the old look. "She's been a little too grandmotherly looking. She's got to look more like the woman she's talking to."

General Mills hopes the new Betty will attract a young consumer — but not alienate the older ones who remember her as the stern homemaker of the past.

Ms. Popcorn, advertising experts and consumers all advised the company on Betty's new look.

"We wanted a certain fashionableness about her; not too dowdy, not too trendy, since she's going to be around for six to 10 years," said Marcia Copeland, a General Mills spokesman.

The updated Betty Crocker portrait, painted by Harriet Pertchik of Roslyn, and the sixth edition of Betty Crocker's Cookbook was unveiled May 23 at the National Book Sellers Convention in New Orleans.

"She looks like somebody you feel you know, which makes her approachable to the consumer," says Mrs. Pertchik, who also has updated the pictures of Nabisco's Blue Bonnet Sue and Quaker Oats' Mama Celeste.

She said she modeled the new Betty on three women, including her 25-year-old daughter, but is quick to note, "She's absolutely a fictitious person."

The cookbook, which has sold 22 million copies since 1950, represents changes in food trends, said Mrs. Copeland. "So we thought it was time for a fresher, more contemporary Betty as well," she said.

The Betty Crocker name adorns 140 General Mills products, representing millions of dollars in sales. But her face has gradually been replaced with the corporate red-spoon logo on packaging. The new picture will primarily appear on the cookbook and in advertising, company officials said.

Betty is not the only corporate symbol to be modernized. Campbell Soup's pudgy kids have gotten taller, trimmer and more athletic over the years and Aunt Jemima has lost weight.

Betty Crocker was born in 1921 as the pen name of a male company employee who figured housewives would have more confidence if they thought a woman was answering their inquiries.

"Betty" was chosen as a friendly-sounding name, and "Crocker" was chosen to honor a company director who had just retired.

In 1936 Betty got a face to go with the name, complete with pursed lips, a hard stare and graying hair. She got friendlier over the years but never dropped her reserved prim look.

With the latest makeover, the company is expecting to receive a flood of consumer letters.

"People always want to know the secret of getting younger every few years like Betty Crocker has," said Mrs. Copeland. "Plus, there will probably be a few marriage proposals."

AP Laserphotos

Betty Crocker, the mythical first lady of the kitchen, has let down her hair and gotten younger in her newest portrait, above. The General Mills corporate symbol has been changed from a homespun housewife into a yuppie. The portraits at right show Betty Crocker through her ages.

'Receipts' printed

Copley News Service

The first American cookbook to draw on housewives' "receipt books," handed down through generations, was published in 1714. Its editor was Mary Kettilby, who criticized French cuisine as "messes" but did include a few simple French dishes.

Peach production plummets

AUSTIN, Texas (UPI) — Warm winter weather coupled with a March freeze will cause a 50 percent reduction in Texas' 1986 peach harvest, and fruit that is available will be expensive, the state Department of Agriculture said.

"When you see Texas peaches, buy them," said Paulette Schwartz, the agency's promotional marketing director. "Flavor and juiciness will be excellent, but it looks like production statewide will be down by half or more."

Texas normally produces about 1 million bushels of peaches a year, but the 1986 harvest could be as low as 542,000 bushels, the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service estimated.

Peach production in Gillespie County, the state's largest peach producer, is expected to drop by as much as 75 percent, state officials said.

Warm winter weather is being blamed for reducing peach blooms and preventing a healthy crop of fruit from setting. A March freeze in East Texas probably will reduce peach prospects further.

Flo Demel, manager of Gillespie County Fruit Growers Inc., said he expects only 10 percent of the normal crop from the 15 Hill Country growers that he represents.

"If we have 5,000 bushels, we'll be doing good," Demel said.

Consumers can expect to pay more for Texas peaches because of the shortage. Some retailers in Fredericksburg were charging $1.39 per pound when the season opened, while an Austin food market was charging $1.69 per pound. Pick-your-own prices will average between $6 and $7 per half bushel.

DEAR ABBY

Girl worried about friend's drinking

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a 12-year-old girl who has a friend my age who drinks her mother's liquor when her mother isn't home. I will call this friend Betty. I like Betty, and tried to tell her to stop because I know that liquor isn't good for kids, but she doesn't listen to me.

I got worried about Betty, so I told my mother, and asked her to tell Betty's mother. This was a couple of months ago, and so far Betty is still drinking her mother's liquor.

What should I do? I hate to be a snitch, but I know that Betty is drinking a few swallows a couple of times a day. — BETTY'S FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: You are a very wise girl to realize that Betty's mother must be told. Urge your mother to tell her. And if she doesn't, you should confide in another adult — your school counselor or principal — but do not let it go. It's not "snitching" — it's making Betty's mother aware that her daughter has a serious problem. There are kids your age who are alcoholics, and they can be helped.

DEAR ABBY: Will you please do us mothers a favor and ask your readers — especially married children — how long they feel their mothers should stay when they visit two or three times a year?

I have six married children — all living about 1,500 miles away — and I enjoy seeing them and my grandchildren. I am not a demanding houseguest. I don't need my own room — I can sleep on a cot or sofa. I don't expect to be entertained 24 hours a day, and don't mind staying with my grandchildren while my children go out for a night on the town. I enjoy my morning newspaper and coffee, game shows on TV, reading a good book, movies, cards, TV dinners or an inexpensive restaurant.

Recently, I heard through the grapevine that some — not all, but some — of my children think I overstay my welcome. Abby, I spend three to five weeks among six kids in three cities in the same state — so I don't stay a week at a time with any one son or daughter. I spend three or four days, then leave and come back again. Most of my children have a guest room. I am really no trouble at all. So why did it get back to me that I am overstaying my welcome? — PERPLEXED MOTHER

DEAR PERPLEXED: First, don't buy anything from a "grapevine" — communicate directly with each of your children. Ask how long they want you to stay. Obviously someone thought you were overstaying your welcome. Find out who it is, then shorten your visits with that family until they beg you to stay or hide your suitcases.

First recipients commemorate 40th anniversary of CARE packages

NEW YORK (AP) — Scores of early "CARE package" recipients who are now living in the United States have responded to a bid by the international aid and development organization to help commemorate its 40th anniversary.

"We have been trying to get in touch with as many of these people as we can, so they may share their reminiscences and memories of CARE packages," said Dr. Philip Johnston, executive director. "It's a wonderful way to begin CARE's fifth decade."

The anniversary formally began on May 11, a date marking exactly 40 years since the first packages were delivered to Le Havre, France. Concerned Americans had formed a cooperative of 22 agencies to consolidate their efforts to help rehabilitate victims of World War II in Europe.

Georges Seizer, now a jeweler in Towson, Md., remembers being in Nice, France, in August 1946, after having been released the previous year from Auschwitz concentration camp.

"I received a notice to come to the CARE office in Nice to pick up a package addressed to me personally," he recalls. "I can remember how much I enjoyed the canned meats, jellies and cheeses. I never learned who sent the package to me, but it helped so much at a time when I really needed it."

The original "10-in-1" package had been designed by the U.S. government to feed 10 soldiers for one day. It weighed abut 49 pounds and contained such items as canned meat, stews and hashes, cereal and biscuits, jams and puddings, vegetables, candy, sugar, cocoa, coffee and beverage powders, evaporated milk, butter and cheese.

It also contained chewing gum, cigarettes, can openers, toilet tissue, paper towels and soap.

Gladys Davidson Weinberg of Columbia, Mo., responded to CARE's search with an account of her experiences 40 years ago.

"I am writing to tell you I was among the first recipients of CARE packages — though not for myself. In 1946 I was employed in the U.S. Embassy in Athens, Greece. A friend in the United States who wanted to help the Greeks, but knew no one there personally, used to send CARE packages to me and I would dole them out to people I knew were in need."

Margot Mertens of Woodstock, Vt., recently sent a $15 check to CARE with her letter. She wrote: "I am 71 years old and have not a single relative in the world. The whole family and friends, and myself, were in Nazi concentration camps. I'm the only one who survived and YOU helped me. A CARE package came to me in Germany with food and some warm socks."

Ms. Mertens said she had never found out who had paid for the package. "Three weeks later I had a room with a bed but nothing else. Then a second package arrived with some basic food and warm material. It was a beginning. You helped me make that beginning."

Upon hearing about the 40th anniversary, the Rev. Alfred J. Lilienthal, pastor of the Church of the Nazarene in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., wrote: "I was in Vienna, Austria, 40 years ago and my family received CARE packages, much to our joy and surprise. Unpacking all those goodies and tasting things which we had not had for years lingers in my memory."

Gradually CARE developed other packages to accommodate the diets of specific countries. A British-styled parcel contained cans of beefsteak and kidneys, welsh rarebit, tea and a liver loaf, among other items. Kosher packages included veal, mackerel and beef. An Italian package included four pounds of spaghetti.

"We received CARE packages while living in East Germany in the late 1940s," recalls Eva Hoffman of Stevensville, Mich. "It put food on our table when otherwise we would have had to go hungry. Some food was not familiar to us. For instance, we had never heard of sweet potatoes before and didn't know how to prepare them. But we ate them because we were hungry. Today they are a favorite dish of mine."

Nationally known master chef Tell Erhardt says his entry into the culinary profession was due largely to the influence of the CARE package. "I was always hungry as I was growing up in post-World War II Germany. I used to watch my mother create meals from the contents of CARE packages." It was then, he said, that he learned some of the cooking techniques that he still uses at his Philadelphia catering service.

By 1951 CARE had sent 7 million packages into Europe and some Asian countries.

Midlanders earn top medallion

Three local girls have earned the highest award given by Camp Fire, the Wohelo Medallion. The recipients are Shannon Casbeer, daughter of Tommy and Elizabeth Casbeer, Jennifer Long, daughter of John and Jane Long, and Penny Woolard, daughter of Royce and Jerry Woolard.

They are the first members in the 22-year history of the Petro Plains Council history to be given the medallion. It takes four years, including volunteer work, to earn the award.

Miss Casbeer worked with senior citizens and the MS Society, Miss Long served with the hospital auxiliary and Miss Woolard worked with the Developmental Disabilities Center. The three volunteered a total of more than 1,500 hours.

Summer jobs sought

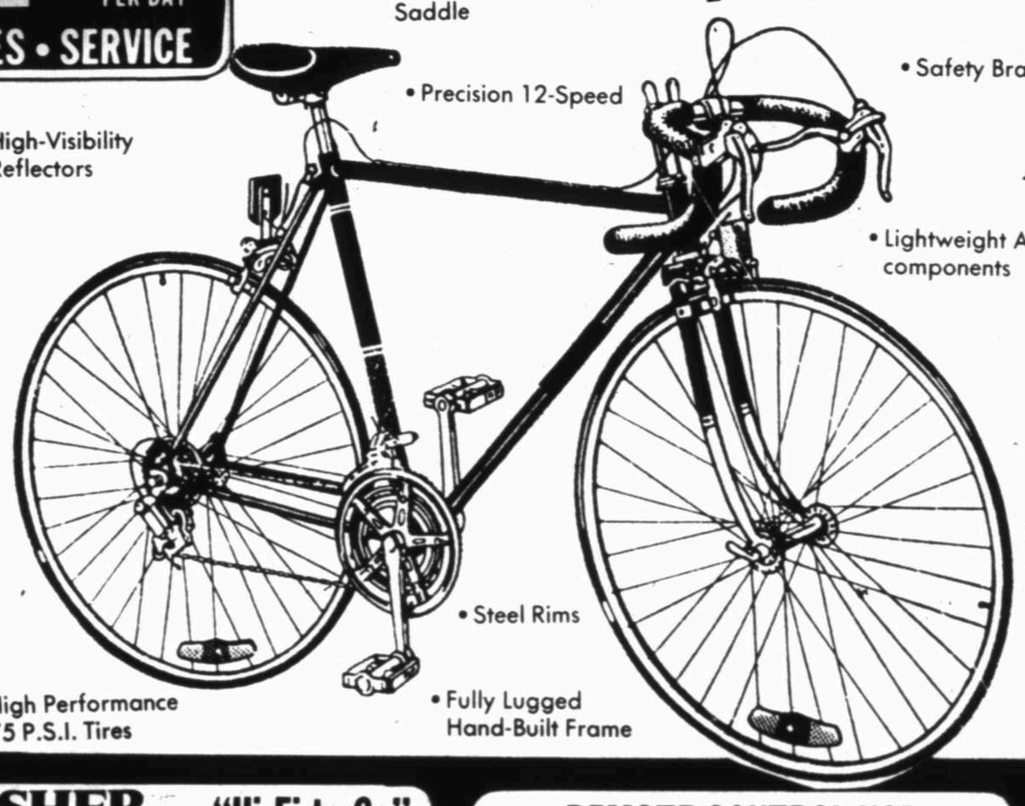

NEW YORK (AP) — Planners of the New York City Partnership's Summer Jobs program hope to generate 35,000 jobs for the city's low-income youngsters.

The summer employment effort, led by Coopers & Lybrand — an accounting and consulting firm — has enlisted the support of several notable New Yorkers who will attend neighborhood events and tape public service announcements on behalf of the program.

They hope to encourage employers to make summer jobs available for youths.

Time to quit asking machines to make media decisions

Computers don't have all the answers. Cost per thousand is not a magic talisman.

You have to factor in some imponderables, because what do machines know about human emotions like trust and believability? Asked in which medium they found the advertising most believable, more consumers said "newspapers" than the other four major media combined:*

Gale says Chernobyl death toll now at 23

By CAROL J. WILLIAMS

MOSCOW (AP) — A U.S. bone marrow specialist said the death toll from the Chernobyl nuclear accident has reached 23, and that he plans a trip to the Ukraine to examine more victims and devise a program of care "for the rest of their lives."

In a telephone interview late Thursday, Dr. Robert P. Gale said about 55 people exposed to radiation following the accident at the Chernobyl atomic power plant are hospitalized in Moscow in serious condition, and that 14 of them are critical cases.

"We expect to see a few more, but not many more fatalities," said Gale, who is in Moscow to help Soviet doctors treat people exposed to radiation as a result of the April 26 accident.

Meanwhile, Radio Moscow reported early today that the "intact reactors" of the four-reactor power station, 80 miles north of Kiev, will be back on line by the end of the year.

Earlier reports had said the No. 1 and No. 2 reactors at Chernobyl would be restarted this year, but made no reference to plans for the No. 3 reactor, also said to be undamaged but housed in a building adjacent to the No. 4 unit, which exploded and caught fire.

National newspapers continued to focus today on humanitarian aid being offered to accident victims by Soviets, such as the benefit concert planned tonight at a Moscow stadium by Soviet rock and pop music performers.

Gale said he plans to leave for the northern Ukraine Sunday night to visit Kiev, the Ukrainian capital, as well as the Chernobyl area.

Asked whether he would be going to the damaged power station itself or to other areas within the evacuated zone extending 18 miles from the plant, Gale said he had not been given an exact itinerary, but that he expected to at least be allowed to check radiation victims in Kiev hospitals.

"Apparently 1,000 individuals at least initially were seriously examined for possible exposure to radiation in the Chernobyl area," Gale said.

Soviet medical workers "selected a group of approximately 300 people considered more serious than the others, who were felt not to be at immediate risk," he said.

Gale said about 250 of those 300 patients were sent to Moscow, but that about 50 remain in Kiev hospitals, some apparently because they were too ill to travel.

Earlier Thursday in Cologne, West Germany, Soviet physician Dr. Yevgeny Chazov had issued a statement putting the number of dead in the Chernobyl disaster at 21.

Chazov, a prominent heart specialist, was attending a conference of the International Physicians for the Prevention of Nuclear War, of which he is co-president with Dr. Bernard Lown of the United States. The antiwar group won 1985 Nobel Peace Prize.

Gale said his trip to the Ukraine would also be aimed at gathering information for a report on the Chernobyl accident and its long-term health consequences.

Gale said he hoped his report would be approved by both the U.S. National Institutes of Health and the Soviet Academy of Sciences. He said he also plans to develop long-term health care plans for Chernobyl victims.

"We will be following these people for the rest of their lives," Gale said.

Of the 250 patients brought to Moscow, Gale said, 35 were diagnosed as critically ill from radiation exposure, including two women.

Twenty-one from the critical list have died, including at least one woman, Gale said. The other two victims died in the power plant explosion and fire, he said.

Gale said the outlook for the patients in serious condition is good, although he said they will always be at higher risk of developing cancer or blood complications.

The 40-year-old bone marrow specialist from Los Angeles assisted Soviet doctors in bone marrow transplants, which were performed on 19 of the critically injured Chernobyl victims.

Chazov said Thursday that the transplants had not proven very effective. He indicated that 11 of the fatalities Soviet officials have reported to date were people who had received bone marrow.

Heavy doses of radiation can destroy the marrow, causing death unless it is restored quickly.

Cousteau begins study of relations to waters

By ELAINE GANLEY

PARIS (AP) — Jacques-Yves Cousteau, now 75 years old, has embarked on a five-year project to study the rapport between humans and the waters around them.

Cousteau

"Instead of just being ecologists, we are becoming sociologists," he told a recent meeting of the Anglo-American Press Association in Paris.

"The quality of the water (determines) in large measure the quality of life...(and) man can save or destroy life," he said.

Using the famed Calypso, his floating laboratory since 1951, and the Alcyone, an experimental boat powered by a wind turbine and with no sails, Cousteau and a 150-member crew have already begun plying the waters from the Caribbean to China.

The project is called "Ecotech."

The Calypso so far has visited Haiti and Cuba in the Caribbean. After undergoing repairs in Miami, it will go on to New Zealand, Australia, New Guinea, China and Indonesia before touring Africa.

The Alcyone, launched by Cousteau three years ago, will go to the Far East, the Red Sea and possibly the Persian Gulf.

Cousteau described Haiti as overpopulated and "beyond salvation." He said his studies indicated its environment has been abused and its soil eroded, with an irreversible desertification over half the country due to the felling of forests mainly for firewood.

Nearby Cuba, on the other hand, is a rare example of good management, at least of its water system, Cousteau said.

"What struck us...is that we realized this is the only place in the Caribbean where marine life abounds."

Cousteau said he had numerous interviews with Fidel Castro, the Cuban leader whom he described as "a man impassioned by ecology."

"He has (managed to) increase fishing and at the same time increased the stock. No other country does this."

Cousteau stressed that he did not attribute Cuba's success to its Marxist philosophy but to "the man, his will" to protect the water.

For Cousteau, politics and ecology do not mix. He maintained that only a mass popular movement can save the world environment from increasing deterioration.

"Ecology must be the flag of all nations," he said, contending that it was a mistake to politicize environmental issues so that the outcome depends on a handful of elected officials.

Asked if he felt optimistic about the future of humans and their Earth, he said that logically he must be a pessimist.

"But I'm optimistic by nature because I have faith. And it's not necessary to believe you'll succeed in order to fight."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Britain condemns Argentina

LONDON (AP) — Britain condemned its Falkland Islands War foe Argentina for attacking Taiwanese fishing trawlers near the South Atlantic archipelago, and said it had called for an end to harassment of the vessels earlier this week.

The Argentine government said the coast guard cutter Prefecto Derbes fired on the trawlers, one of which was set ablaze and abandoned, after they were found operating within the 200-mile fishing limit the South American country claims.

A Taiwan fisheries official in the Falklands said one of the 22 crewmen from the Chiann-Der 3, the trawler set afire, was killed in the Wednesday incident and three others injured.

Argentina said one crew member died, apparently of a heart attack, and that another was missing.

A second Taiwanese trawler also came under attack from the Prefecto Derbes Wednesday, suffering a wrecked mast and radio room but managing to escape. A third trawler also was chased by the Argentine cutter, but eluded it.

Shultz sees NATO opposition

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz is encountering widespread opposition from NATO allies to the tentative U.S. plan to disregard SALT II limits by the end of the year, according to sources at a NATO foreign ministers meeting.

Shultz defended President Reagan's decision, announced earlier this week, in a lengthy closed-door meeting Thursday that participants said was characterized by "great frankness" — meaning there was broad disagreement.

So far as could be determined, none of the United States' 15 NATO partners endorsed Reagan's view that SALT II should be scrapped by the end of the year unless the Soviet Union takes "constructive steps" toward ending the treaty violations he claims the Soviets have systematically committed.

Several officials who attended the session said Shultz's colleagues were impressed by his presentation, but he apparently won no backing.

Reliance on U.S. opposed

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile said today that the government supports the retention of U.S. military bases in the Philippines, but does not intend to rely forever on America for its defense.

The two large American bases in the Philippines, Clark Air Base and Subic Naval Base, are vital to a balance of power in Asia and the Pacific, and would enable America to protect sealanes in the Indian Ocean and Persian Gulf regions, Enrile told foreign diplomats at a breakfast meeting.

"It is the clear intention of the Philippine government to give meaningful support to this objective, even as our respective governments have concurred that our security alliance is purely defensive in nature," he said.

Enrile indicated that how long American military bases remain welcome in the Philippines depends on how soon his country can rely on itself for its defense and how soon Southeast Asia can attain its goal of becoming a neutral zone.

Quake rattles Mexico City

MEXICO CITY (AP) — An earthquake measuring 6.0 on the Richter scale shook the capital but caused no damage or injuries, officials say.

The National Autonomous University of Mexico's seismological station said the Thursday quake's epicenter was 242 miles southeast of Mexico City in the Pacific Ocean off the coasts of Guerrero and Oaxaca states.

A report on the quake said it was felt at 2:31 p.m. — 3:31 p.m. CDT — at an intensity of 3 degrees on the Mercali scale and was felt "weakly" in the southern city of Oaxaca, 293 miles (491 kms) south of Mexico City.

The government news agency Notimex described the earth movement as a "light tremor."

Bonner labels it blackmail

LONDON (AP) — Yelena Bonner today accused the Soviet Union of trying to blackmail the West into keeping silent over the condition of her husband, exiled Soviet dissident Andrei D. Sakharov.

Mrs. Bonner, 62, who has been abroad nearly six months for medical treatment, met with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher for a half-hour and then spoke to reporters while arm-in-arm with the British prime minister.

She was asked her reaction to British news reports from Moscow quoting Viktor Louis, a Soviet journalist who often relays information from the Kremlin, as saying that Mrs. Bonner's remarks while in the West were jeopardizing Sakharov's chances of having his exile ended.

The physicist, winner of the 1975 Nobel Peace Prize, was banished to internal exile in the closed city of Gorky, 250 miles east of Moscow, in January 1980 after he denounced the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

Mrs. Bonner was exiled at Gorky in 1984 after being convicted of anti-Soviet slander.

Soviets name new ministers

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union has appointed two new deputy foreign ministers, Anatoly Adamishin and Vladimir Petrovsky, the official news agency Tass said.

The separate one-sentence announcements Thursday gave no indication whether the posts are new, or if some of the eight other deputy foreign ministers had been replaced.

Western reference books indicate that Adamishin, 51, has served as a member of the Foreign Ministry's collegium since 1979. Collegium members are a rank below deputy minister in the government structure.

Petrovsky, 53, served as head of the ministry's international organizations department for the past seven years.

Waldheim papers published

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — A Belgrade magazine is publishing German army documents purportedly signed by Kurt Waldheim that deal with shooting hostages and with the order of battle in the Balkans during World War II.

The documents, however, bear the German initials f.d.R. (fuer die Richtigkeit, which means "for the correctness"), an indication that Waldheim, as he has claimed, signed them only to vouch for their authenticity.

The biweekly Duga, in an edition scheduled to appear this weekend, also quoted from what it said was a postwar Yugoslav State Commission ruling and explanation of why it named Waldheim as a war criminal.

Waldheim, a former U.N. secretary general, is running for president of Austria in a June 8 election. He has acknowledged serving in the Balkans, but denies any wrongdoing or any knowledge of war crimes.

Heavy storms hit Nicaragua

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Heavy storms have been lashing Nicaragua's western coast for the past three days, causing an estimated $5 million in damage, authorities said Thursday.

One freighter ran aground and nine smaller vessels sank, but there were no immediate reports of casualties.

The Transportation Ministry said in a press bulletin a 13,000-ton freighter loaded with laminated steel products ran aground because of heavy seas near the port of San Juan del Sur, 94 miles southwest of Managua.

A fishing vessel and eight barges also there and in other southern ports; and a navy coast-guard and three other trawlers were damaged, the ministry said.

Popular Turkish leader trying political comeback

By EMEL ANIL

SANLIURFA, Turkey (AP) — Suleyman Demirel, six times premier and twice ousted by the military, is attempting a political comeback in Turkey's countryside, cheered lustily by farm people.

As he made his way recently through this southeastern province on the Syrian border, people slaughtered dozens of camels, sheep and calves in a sacrificial thanksgiving.

"I missed you," Demirel shouted to the crowd.

"We missed you," the crowd shouted back.

Although he is running for no specific office, Demirel is out to prove he still is a political force, after having been deposed by the military in 1971 and 1980.

After the military takeover Sept. 12, 1980, triggered by political violence and an economic crisis, all political parties were banned. Turkey's constitution, promulgated in 1982 by the generals ruling at the time, barred 100 top politicians from active politics for 10 years, until 1992.

Demirel, 61, and former Premier Bulent Ecevit, 60, were among them and neither can formally join or lead a party or seek elective office until the ban expires.

However, Turkey's single house Parliament, elected in 1983 with the restoration of civilian government, recently lifted a military-imposed ban on public speaking by the former politicians.

Demirel, who is linked to the True Path Party, took to the roads of Anatolia soon after, ending a five-year exile from politics. Ecevit also has resumed political activity; his wife, Rahsan, heads the newly formed Democratic Left Party.

Demirel toured the countryside in a caravan of cars, vans, trucks and buses, under the slogan "Turkey Without Prohibitions," which appeared with his picture on signs, coat lapels, trees and car windows.

"We shall wage a legitimate struggle for changes in laws," Demirel told a news conference here. "With the (political) bans, Turkey does not look good, at home or abroad."

For the bans to be lifted, a three-fourths parliamentary majority is needed to amend the constitution.

But President Kenan Evren, who led the 1980 military coup and has remained in the nation's top post, has vowed to use his full powers to prevent such a constitutional change.

Encyclical attacks atheist, Marxist philosophies

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II, in the fifth encyclical of his papacy, today lashed out at atheism and Marxism, saying philosophies that reserve no place for God are really the "death of man."

In the 141-page document, the pontiff also condemned what he described as increasing signs of death in the modern world, including poverty and famine, terrorism, the danger of nuclear self-destruction, abortion and euthanasia.

The encyclical, entitled in Latin "Dominum et Vivificantem" (The Lord, the Giver of Life), is devoted to the Holy Spirit, the third member of the Holy Trinity, along with the Father and the Son.

An encyclical is the most authoritative form of papal letter, informing the Roman Catholic Church and its members of matters of importance. The Vatican, which provided an official English-language version, said the pope wrote the original in his native Polish.

Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro said the document reflects the pontiff's long-held personal views.

"It reflects his idea of sin, not only in social-political terms but on a spiritual level, and how Christians should deal with it as the church charts its course for the third millenium," Navarro said.

In the document, John Paul discussed the meaning and the role of the Holy Spirit as Christianity prepares to celebrate the 2,000th anniversary of the birth of Jesus.

The pope said in the introduction that the main purpose of the document is to develop in the church the awareness "that it is compelled by the Holy Spirit to do its part toward the full realization of the will of God, who has established Christ as the source of salvation for the whole world."

The encyclical blamed the troubles of the world on "the evil of disobedience" to God through "man's claim to become an independent and exclusive source for deciding about good and evil."

"We see this confirmed in the modern age, when the atheistic ideologies seek to root out religion on the grounds that religion causes the radical 'alienation' of man,'" John Paul wrote.

"Hence a process of thought and historic-sociological practice in which the rejection of God has reached the point of declaring his 'death' — an absurdity both in concept and expression," the pope said.

But the notion of the "death of God," John Paul said, is more a threat to humanity than anything else.

"The ideology of the 'death of God' easily demonstrates in its effects that...it is the ideology of the 'death of man,'" the pontiff wrote.

He attacked Marxism for opposing religion "as a kind of idealistic illusion to be fought with the most suitable means and methods according to circumstances of time and place, in order to eliminate it from society and from man's very heart."

The pope said materialism is "still recognized as the essential core" of Marxism and is the result of "the systematic and logical development" of man's resistance to God.

Therefore, he said, Christians "cannot but reject" Marxism as anti-religious materialism. The pope said materialism has placed God "in a state of suspicion" and challenges man to become the adversary of God.

That is in line with consistent warnings by the pope and the Vatican against Marxist elements in liberation theology, a movement spearheaded by Catholic priests and nuns who are seek social equality in developing countries.

The pope said the Christians, through prayer and the intercession of the Holy Spirit, should deal with "the signs and symptoms of death" he said have become particularly frequent.

Another main theme of the document is Christian unity. The Holy Spirit is described as "the one who points out ways leading to the union of Christians."

Noting that the past thousand years have seen the emergence of "the great separation between Christians," the pope urged all who believe in Christ to "strive to conform their thinking and action to the will of the Holy Spirit."

He endorsed Pope Paul VI's call in 1973 for a "new study and devotion to the Holy Spirit," and highlights the importance of this study for the ecumenical movement.

Jonh Paul's previous encyclicals were "Redeemer of Man" (1979), "Riches in Mercy" (1980), "On Human Work" (1981) and "Apostles of the Slavs" (1985).

The latest document is the third papal encyclical in 100 years on the Holy Spirit. The previous ones were issued by Leo XIII in 1897 and Pius XII in 1943.

Today, the Audi 5000S becomes even easier to handle. $298 a month*.

The Audi 5000S sedan's ability to negotiate roadways crisply and efficiently is certainly one reason to admire it. That you can negotiate a lease of just $298 a month on this fine European luxury sedan is all the more reason to acquire it.

Performance aside, this 1986 Audi 5000S sedan comes with many standard features that increase comfort without altering the lease price. Electronic climate control, cruise control, power windows and door locks, AM/FM stereo cassette, and automatic transmission make this limited time offer a tempting invitation to unlimited driving pleasure.

A closer look will prove what words cannot. Come in for a test drive and complete lease details. Program ends May 31, 1986. And drive away in an Audi 5000S sedan at a lease price that is, well, easy to handle.

*This offer is available only from a participating Audi Leasing dealer through May 31, 1986 as a 60-month, closed-end lease. No purchase option. No down payment is required. First month $298 payment and $300 security deposit are required in advance. Monthly payments are based on manufacturer's suggested retail price and special lease terms extended by VCI Leasing. Total lease payments $17,880.00 plus 10¢ per mile over 75,000. Registration, local fees, tax, options additional.
