Mobil ready to take aim at U.S. Steel

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — With its takeover bid for Marathon Oil Co. near collapse and U.S. Steel Corp. zeroing in, Mobil Corp. threatened to turn around and take a big bite out of the giant steelmaker.

If the nation's No. 2 oil company follows through on its threat Wednesday to buy up to 25 percent of the stock of the nation's biggest steelmaker, analysts say, Mobil could use those shares as a bargaining tool to acquire Marathon if U.S. Steel won the takeover fight.

Mobil's takeover attempt was dealt another blow Wednesday when a federal judge in Cleveland denied its request that he reconsider his order blocking Mobil's bid for Marathon.

That ruling, coupled with a recent series of Mobil failures and U.S. Steel victories in courtroom skirmishes, gave the steelmaker a clear edge in the lengthy battle for control of Marathon, the nation's 17th-largest oil company.

Marathon management favors U.S. Steel's $6.3 billion offer, although it is smaller than the $6.5 billion bid being pressed by Mobil. Marathon's management fears the company will be absorbed by Mobil and moved from its headquarters at Findlay, Ohio.

Mobil announced Wednesday it had filed reports with the Federal Trade Commission and the Justice Department that would allow it to buy as much as 25 percent of U.S. Steel's outstanding stock on the open market or through other means.

Mobil said it would be free to buy U.S. Steel shares after a 30-day waiting period that expires Jan. 8. If either the FTC or the Justice Department asked for additional information from Mobil, the stock purchases would be delayed an additional 20 days after Mobil supplied the information.

Although Mobil did not say explicitly that it would buy any U.S. Steel shares, the suggestion evoked a strong reaction from U.S. Steel.

From its headquarters in Pittsburgh, U.S. Steel said only an hour after learning of Mobil's filing of the report that it considered the action was "intended to coerce" U.S. Steel to abandon its bid for Marathon.

While stressing that it intended to proceed with its offer for Marathon, U.S. Steel advised investors "not to be misled by Mobil's reckless action."

Two weeks ago Mobil disclosed it held about 450,000 U.S. Steel shares, or less than 1 percent of the steelmaker's estimated 90 million outstanding shares.

By buying a larger stake in U.S. Steel, Mobil won't necessarily seek to gain control of the nation's largest steelmaker, industry analysts said. Instead, Mobil might try to force U.S. Steel to swap Marathon's business for U.S. Steel shares.

Mobil's main interest in Marathon is its vast domestic oil reserves. Marathon owns a 48.7 percent interest in the big Yates oilfield in west Texas, which ranks as the second-largest American oilfield behind Alaska's Prudhoe Bay field.

U.S. Steel will be free to start buying Marathon shares Tuesday.

In addition to the restraining order against it in Cleveland, Mobil faces the FTC's announced threat to sue Mobil on antitrust grounds. The commission said Tuesday it had decided to try to block Mobil and said it would file its suit by today, most likely in federal court in Cleveland.

Meanwhile, Mobil is awaiting word from the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati on whether it will be granted an expedited hearing of its appeal of a federal court ruling in Columbus, Ohio. That ruling freed U.S. Steel to start buying Marathon shares as early as Dec. 15.

City police and Emergency Medical Technicians work on 25-year-old Leo Brooks, a transient from Asland, Ohio, who was injured when he apparently tried to hop a train near the intersection of Main and Front streets about 4 p.m. Wednesday. He suffered head, leg, neck and foot injuries and was reported in fair condition this morning at John Sealy Hospital in Galveston, where he was transferred following emergency treatment at Midland Memorial Hospital.

Inflation hits 'new plateau'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Inflation at the wholesale level will register its smallest gain in three years when all the numbers for 1981 are tallied, private analysts predict.

"We're in for continuing good news on inflation," said Allen Sinai, vice president and senior economist for Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass. "We will have the lowest inflation rate in wholesale prices since 1977."

He added that inflation has fallen to a "new plateau" that he expects to last well into 1982.

He and other analysts estimate wholesale inflation, as measured by the Labor Department's Producer Price Index for finished goods, will run around 7 percent for the year as a whole, not far off the 6.9 percent of 1977.

It was 11.8 percent last year and 12.8 percent in 1979, the Labor Department said.

The analysts delivered their assessments after the Labor Department reported Wednesday that wholesale inflation ran at a seasonally adjusted rate of 6.3 percent in November.

That brought the seasonally adjusted annual rate for the first 11 months of the year to 7.4 percent, department officials said.

Donald Ratajczak, director of Georgia State University's Economic Forecasting Project, concurred, predicting a yearly figure of 7 percent to 7.1 percent.

Ratajczak noted that the major improvement in the measure has come in the farming sector where bumper crops have brought down food prices.

"Farmers have really taken their lumps (this year) while the rest of us have benefitted," he said.

The effect of a sluggish — and now contracting — economy also has played a part in dampening prices, the analysts said.

The Labor Department's new report said the Producer Price Index for finished goods rose a seasonally adjusted 0.5 percent in November, compared with a 0.6 percent gain in the previous month. The November increase works out to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 6.3 percent, department officials said.

Last month's increase was attributed partly to higher prices for natural gas and gasoline which more than made up for a 0.5 percent fall in food prices.

Energy prices as a whole went up a stiff 0.9 percent, the sharpest rise since April, the report said. Home heating oil costs continued declining, it said.

All the increases are adjusted for seasonal variations.

In all, the unadjusted Producer Price Index stood at 274.5 in November, meaning that goods costing $10 at wholesale in 1967 would have cost $27.45 last month.

Libyan threat: Has furor been fueled by 'hype' handling?

By RONALD J. OSTROW
and ROBERT C. TOTH
The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Knowledgeable U.S. officials agree that intelligence reports of a plot by Libyan strongman Moammar Khadafy to assassinate President Reagan and others were serious enough to justify stepped-up security precautions, but doubts and questions continue to swirl around Washington.

Was the evidence strong enough to justify a direct public accusation against Khadafy, some high-ranking U.S. officials ask? Has the furor — fueled by leaks and ill-considered statements by some high officials — taken on a life of its own and gotten out of hand?

Some U.S. officials with direct knowledge of the evidence say it is much less conclusive than the public has been led to believe, though these officials agree that the intelligence reports of an assassination plot were sufficient grounds for stepping up security precautions.

Some of these officials, none of whom would speak for direct quotation, say the administration may have blown the matter far out of proportion — whether accidentally or deliberately — with its almost unprecedented public comments on a matter that traditionally would have remained a well-guarded secret.

Indeed, the public way the furor has been handled has led some U.S. officials to suggest that it has been orchestrated for some larger purpose, such as setting the stage for economic or other sanctions against Libya — sanctions that were under consideration by some administration officials well before the assassination case broke.

The Los Angeles Times attempted without success to resolve the contradictions that have come to the surface in the past two days, contacting official and unofficial sources. But knowledgeabl eofficials refused to discuss the questions in detail and the widespread suspicion remains.

Typical of the skeptics is a high official with direct knowledge of the case who said Wednesday that the intelligence information Reagan and others count as evidence is nowhere near as conclusive as the public has been led to believe.

"Who is putting this out, and why? Those are the questions that should be answered," the official said, insisting the evidence could not accurately be described as "corroborated" or "convincing."

Reagan himself may have begun to feel things have gone too far, even though he was one of those who told reporters this week that the United States has evidence against Khadafy.

At a budget review session in the White House Cabinet Room Tuesday afternoon, Reagan talked about the story as being overblown and, in a joking reference to a Wild West shootout, he said to Vice President George Bush:

"George, I don't know about you, but I'm ready to call Khadafy and tell him I'll meet him over on the Mall and we'll settle this thing."

Bush and about a dozen other administration officials joined Reagan in laughing about what a senior White House aide who was present called "the hype" or exaggeration given to the assassination story.

"Regardless of what evidence we might have about the assassination plot, I think we can be criticized for the way we've handled this thing," the same aide said. "We haven't handled it in a very sophisticated way. It should have been low key all the way."

That assessment corresponds closely with the view of other knowledgeable officials outside the White House, although they continue to refuse to speak for direct quotation.

All those involved in the case agree that the threat is credible enough to justify the stepped-up security precautions that have become so obvious here.

The evidence, officials say, consists of statements by a single new informant coupled with "pieces" of intelligence collected over an extended period of time from other sources that make the informant's statements appear plausible but do not directly corroborate them.

Under such circumstances, skeptical officials suggsted, it was prudent to take extra security precautions, but whatever the evidence against Khafafy, it did not justify stirring alarm with direct public accusations against Khadafy.

Midlanders find attempt 'disgusting'

'It's a joke' to offer strikers non-existent federal jobs

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Midland's Professional Air Traffic Controllers Barry Vaughn and Richard "Ski" Szczawinski are disgusted with President Reagan's peacemaking attempt Wednesday lifting the three-year ban on the controllers seeking government employment.

"It's a joke," Szczawinski said this morning, agreeing with PATCO President Richard Poli's statement that the Reagan's announcement is "a cruel hoax on both the fired controllers and the American taxpayers."

According to The Associated Press, Poli claimed the offer was "a sheer folly" to believe many controllers will find federal jobs.

"There's only one federal job we can do and that's in the tower," Vaughn, president of Local 428, said. "I can't see myself seeking employment for the government again in any capacity."

Vaughn, fired along with 11,500 other PATCO members by Reagan in August, is working in real estate. He said he cannot understand how Reagan can offer controllers other government jobs when the President has stated that government employees will be laid off in accordance with the budget cuts.

"It's going to cost billions to rebuild the air traffic control system," he said. "Why spend more money to train fired controllers to do some other government job when it would seem more rational to allow them to go back to the job they are trained and proficient in?"

But, AP stated that Drew Lewis, transportation secretary, said it would jeopardize air safety to allow any of the fired controllers to return to the tower.

"Air traffic controllers are very professional in nature and would not jeopardize air safety," Vaughn said, adding that there would not be any friction between PATCO members and the 9,300 controllers and supervisors who stayed in the towers.

"We didn't go on strike to get another job," Szczawinski, who is working in a video arcade, said. "We went on strike because of the conditions in the tower."

He added he did not know if he wanted to be a controller anymore.

"We tried everything we could to educate the public and Congress about the air traffic controllers' working conditions and we just kept running into a brick wall. I'm fed up," Szczawinski said.

Many of Midland's PATCO members are going to school or working.

"Our cluster are back in school to complete their education so they can get a good job," Vaughn said, adding that three members are in oil-related business "making comparable wages if not more" than they were as controllers.

Vaughn said other occupations of the fired controllers include auto sales, insurance, real estate and one member is entering school as a premedical major.

"We are clearly disappointed," AFL-CIO spokesman Rex Hardesty said of Reagan's decision to waive the 3-year ban on government work for the 11,500 dismissed controllers.

Ron Newcomb, a fired controller from Auburn, Wash., now working as a bartender, called Reagan's action "a meaningless, symbolic gesture" that will provide little help since there are few government jobs available.

Newcomb's comments were echoed by many of the controllers, who were fired last August after they participated in an illegal strike.

"There are no other jobs in the federal government available. I wouldn't envision a big rush...for applications," said David Pentz, a fired controller from Canton, Mich., who now works at a bowling alley.

Donald Devine, director of the Office of Personnel Management, said if controllers do get jobs, their pension and other benefits would be carried over from the time they went on strike Aug. 3.

Three-car accident kills two

A Midland woman and an Odessa man are dead following a three-vehicle traffic accident on U.S. Highway 80 shortly after 10 p.m. Wednesday.

Pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine were 60-year-old Lyle Edward Meadows of Odessa and 25-year-old Rebecca Bohannon Jennings of 1301 S. Midland Drive.

Not injured in the crash was James Lindsey, no age or street address available, of Midland.

According to the Department of Public Safety, the accident occurred at 10:20 p.m. Wednesday about seven-tenths of a mile west of Midland when Meadows' westbound 1981 Chevrolet collided with Ms. Jennings' eastbound 1977 Pontiac headon in the eastbound lane of the highway.

Her car came to rest in the middle of the eastbound lane, facing west, and was then struck headon again by Lindsey's eastbound 1978 Dodge pickup truck.

Both bodies were taken to Thomas Funeral Home, where arrrangements are pending.

Summer 'homes' sought for teachers

American Host Foundation looks to Midland area

The American Host Foundation, which places European teachers in the United States as guests of American families for a couple of weeks, is trying to place several English-speaking European teachers in the Midland area this summer.

During the past 20 years, the American Host Foundation has arranged for more than 12,000 teachers to spend a month in the United States living as the guests of two or three American host families.

More than 35,000 host families have had teachers in their homes for one or two weeks.

Tom and Frances Murphy, California teachers and now co-presidents of the American Host Foundation, had planned to travel to Europe in 1961 in order to write a study of European and American educational methods, observe classroom procedures and interview teachers and administrators.

According to a brochure put out by the American Host Foundation, the Murphys were surprised at the distorted images of America being passed on in the classrooms by European teachers.

"They weren't deliberately anti-American," Murphy said, "just gross misconceptions gleaned from films, TV, the sensational press, and so on. We tried to explain to these teachers that the United States isn't at all the way they pictured it, and we suggested that they come and see for themselves."

The group tours that were within the budgets of most of the European teachers were too brief and limited to be of much value in erasing the misconceptions and the teachers who could afford to spend a few weeks in America were "more likely to return with nothing more substantial than a collection of superficial tourist impressions," stated the brochure.

As a result, the Murphys asked friends if they would put up an overseas teacher for a week or two that summer.

Within a few months, the Murphys had matched almost 100 European teachers with host families in the United States.

The brochure states that the Host Family should treat the visitor as any other guest in the household and provide room, meals with the family, introductions to friends and neighbors and the opportunity to visit local places of interest.

According to the brochure, "The astonishing variety of individual activities — ranging from Wolfgang Hertel's slipping out for a pre-breakfast soccer workout with Milpitas, Calif., youngsters to Madeleine Drouet's two-day private plane excursion to New Mexico horse races — is left entirely to the interests and invention of guests and hosts."

The Murphys handle the six-week long task of matching the guests with the host volunteers.

In addition to the completed application forms and questionnaires, the Murphys use the impressions gained from interviews with applicant teachers and the contacts of staff and volunteers with prospective hosts to match the teachers with the host families. They also rely upon concrete clues such as age, interests, leisure-time activities and hobbies.

During 1962, 1963 and 1964, the work of the foundation was financed through the Murphys' savings. In 1965, with the financial help of DeWitt Wallace of "Reader's Digest" and a few other businessmen, an office was opened in New York City and the Murphys began to devote their full time to the program.

The foundation was chartered in August 1962 by the State of California as a non-profit corporation and was granted tax-exempt status by the Internal Revenue Service in January 1964 under Section 501 (c) (3) of the Internal Reevenue Code.

Presently, the Murphys and a secretary are the only paid employees of the foundation.

For more information about becoming a host family, contact Tom or Frances Murphy at 12747 Brookhurst St., Garden Grove, Calif., 92640, or call (714) 537-5711.

Regents to meet on UTPB campus

ODESSA — Approval of an endowed professorship in music and expanded use of UTPB's student housing area will be among the agenda items affecting The University of Texas of the Permian Basin when The University of Texas System Board of Regents convenes on campus today and Friday.

The endowed professorship, if approved, will be the second for UTPB. The gift of $100,000 from a donor who does not wish to be named at this time would provide an endowment, the income of which would be used as part-time support of a full professor in music and/or for expenses in the music program.

UTPB's first endowed professorship came in early 1980 as the result of a $100,000 contribution from J. Conrad Dunagan for an endowed professorship in history.

The proposal to expand the use of the student housing area on campus calls for allowing students, faculty and staff who own mobile housing units to park in spaces available in the student housing complex.

Vice President for Business Affairs William Watts said the proposal was designed to ease some of the problem of housing shortages in the Midland and Odessa areas for university students and personnel.

If approved, students, faculty and staff wanting to rent space for their mobile homes may do so for $75 per month. Contracts will be available through the student housing office.

Regents are also expected to approve several routine items, including a $10,000 gift to the endowment fund campaign and approval of several grants and contracts on behalf of the university.

The $10,000 gift is the most recent addition to the UTPB Scholarship Endowment Fund Campaign, which recently reached its goal of $150,000, matching a $150,000 gift from an anonymous donor. The income from the endowment will provide scholarships to UTPB students in the years to come.

Among the grants and contracts to be approved is a contract between Ector County and UTPB which provides mobile classrooms for use at the Ector County Youth Center. The youth center cooperates with the university to provide students with internships and learning activities.

Another similar agreement allows two of UTPB's mobile classrooms for use at The University of Texas Health Center at Tyler. The health center, in exchange, will provide UTPB with assistance in the form of computer programming and documentation needed to computerize the UTPB payroll.

A grant from the U.S. Department of Education to UTPB will provide funds in the amount of $1,200 to support the College Library Resources program. Under direction of Dick L. Chappell, dean of instructional services, the grant allows for acquisition of supplemental books, films and special library materials.

Also on the docket is approval of a list of textbooks written by UTPB faculty to be used in classes on campus.

Among these are books by Dr. James Olson, associate professor and chairman of psychology; Dr. Alan Marks, assistant professor of psychology; Dr. Robert Rothstein, professor of pedagogical studies and mass communication; Dr. J. Edwin Becht, professor of transportation, logistics and resource management and dean of the College of Management; Dr. James Nickel, professor and chairman of mathematics and computer science; Dr. Paul Hodges, associate professor of economics; Dr. Thomas Dynneson, associate profesor of pedagogical studies; and Dr. Douglas Hale, associate professor of mathematics.

Lee, Midland students in All-Region band

ODESSA — Thirty-eight students from Lee High School and 17 from Midland High School were selected as members of the All-Region band in tryouts held recently at Permian High School.

These students, along with other members of the All-Region band from Odessa High, Permian High, San Angelo and Big Spring, will present a concert Jan. 31 at Lee High School. J.R. McEntyre, music coordinator for the Ector County Independent School District, will conduct the symphonic band, and Rodney Klett of Georgetown will conduct the concert band. Randy Storie and Mark Nelson, band directors at Lee High, will organize the clinic and concert.

Students selected from Lee High School were Stacy Swann, piccolo; Sandy Henson, Carol Neal, Allison Milner, Carol Scott and Suzanne Johnston, flute; Melody Stewart, b-flat clarinet; Margaret McCright, e-flat clarinet; Suzanne Buford, bass clarinet, Donna Greer, oboe; Clay Turner, bassoon; Teri McCollum and Julie Gallagher, alto saxophone; Chip Chapman, tenor saxophone; Robert Rumbelow, Anthony Jones, Bob Scott, Burt Stovall, Celia Hobbs and Wes Coles, cornet; Doreen McGookey, Bryan Porsch and Tanya Olson, french horn; Tim Green and Rodney Mack, Trombone; Barry Friemel, Clay Porsch, Kirby Still, Eddie Reed and Marc Hickman; baritone; Lynn Bowen, Jim Lee and Bryan Pfile, tuba; Pam Dunn, Mylea Newbrough, Eddie Najar and Martha Reyes, percussion I and II; and Paul Christensen, timpani.

Students selected from Midland High School are Carolyn Mitchell, piccolo; Leslie Fort, Elaine Reese, Karen Green and Ann Geddes, flute; Marta McNabb, Ginger Rains and Kim Watson, clarinet; Steve Baskin, Oboe; Keith Cofer, cornet; Susan Baker, french horn; Shawn McCarter, Emily Goodfellow, Ted Bernard and Kevin Locklar, trombone; John Dalton, tuba; and Wade Frost, percussion I.

Lee High School students who placed high enough in their section to advance to the Pre-Area tryouts at Permian High School Dec. 14, were Sandy Henson and Carol Neal, flute.

City Council PTA meets

The Midland City Council PTA held its general meeting at Goddard Junior High School Monday afternoon.

Membership certificates were awarded to schools reaching a 10 percent increase in membership and achieving a 100 percent faculty participation and 100 percent membership average daily attendance.

Dr. Joseph P. Baressi Jr., MISD deputy superintendent, spoke briefly on the Midland school district's junior high level curriculum.

The Goddard Junior High seventh grade girls choir and seventh and eighth grade mixed choir presented the program under the direction of Carol Hall, choir director.

The next general meeting of the Midland City Council PTA will be in February at Jane Long Elementary School.

Doctor's knowledge helped diagnosis

Dear Dr. Solomon: My son had been having a good deal of pain around his midsection, and he finally agreed to see a doctor. Within a few minutes the doctor said he probably had a ruptured appendix, and that's exactly what it was. My son was operated on and is now fine.

What puzzled me is all the publicity about newfangled equipment and space age technology. Doesn't my son's experience show that it is the doctor's ability that really counts? — Tony, San Francisco

Dear Tony: Far be it from me to minimize the importance of the physician's training and experience in treating patients; no piece of machinery can substitute for the human mind. Yet there are many things that doctors can do today with their sophisticated equipment that were not possible years ago. Organ transplantation is just one example.

In regard to your specific experience, however, when it comes to acute abdominal pain, a diagnosis can usually be made on the basis of the patient's history and symptoms — for example, answers to questions such as where did the pain start, and does it feel better when you eat.

The best combination for the patient, of course, is the physician who combines his or her training and experience with the knowledge of when to use the sophisticated laboratory tests and technology that are now available.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I haven't seen anything in the papers lately about laetrile. Does this mean that it is no longer being studied to see whether it is of value in the treatment of cancer? — Bette, St. Paul, Minn.

Dear Bette: Studies of laetrile for the treatment of cancer were conducted by the National Cancer Institute. The agency concluded that laetrile did not extend the lives of the patients or improve their symptoms. While some people may continue to insist that laetrile is effective, the medical community has generally discarded it.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My granddaughter is a nurse, and she has recommended a medicine I can buy in the drugstore that will get rid of warts. I know she has my best interests at heart, but I'd like your opinion before I use anything like that. Can warts be removed by putting some medicine on them? — Mrs. H.L., Los Angeles

Dear Mrs. L.: The Food and Drug Administration reports that an advisory panel found only one of 10 ingredients it studied — salicylic acid — was safe and effective for the removal of warts. Despite this approval, however, I would recommend that anyone with a medical problem, such as diabetes, check with his or her doctor before using an over-the-counter preparation.

In addition to the completed application forms and questionnaires, the Murphys use the impressions gained from interviews with applicant teachers and the contacts of staff and volunteers with prospective hosts to match the teachers with the host families. They also rely upon concrete clues such as age, interests, leisure-time activities and hobbies.

During 1962, 1963 and 1964, the work of the foundation was financed through the Murphys' savings. In 1965, with the financial help of DeWitt Wallace of "Reader's Digest" and a few other businessmen, an office was opened in New York City and the Murphys began to devote their full time to the program.

The foundation was chartered in August 1962 by the State of California as a non-profit corporation and was granted tax-exempt status by the Internal Revenue Service in January 1964 under Section 501 (c) (3) of the Internal Reevenue Code.

Presently, the Murphys and a secretary are the only paid employees of the foundation.

Regents to meet on UTPB campus

ODESSA — Approval of an endowed professorship in music and expanded use of UTPB's student housing area will be among the agenda items affecting The University of Texas of the Permian Basin when The University of Texas System Board of Regents convenes on campus today and Friday.

The endowed professorship, if approved, will be the second for UTPB. The gift of $100,000 from a donor who does not wish to be named at this time would provide an endowment, the income of which would be used as part-time support of a full professor in music and/or for expenses in the music program.

UTPB's first endowed professorship came in early 1980 as the result of a $100,000 contribution from J. Conrad Dunagan for an endowed professorship in history.

The proposal to expand the use of the student housing area on campus calls for allowing students, faculty and staff who own mobile housing units to park in spaces available in the student housing complex.

Vice President for Business Affairs William Watts said the proposal was designed to ease some of the problem of housing shortages in the Midland and Odessa areas for university students and personnel.

If approved, students, faculty and staff wanting to rent space for their mobile homes may do so for $75 per month. Contracts will be available through the student housing office.

Regents are also expected to approve several routine items, including a $10,000 gift to the endowment fund campaign and approval of several grants and contracts on behalf of the university.

The $10,000 gift is the most recent addition to the UTPB Scholarship Endowment Fund Campaign, which recently reached its goal of $150,000, matching a $150,000 gift from an anonymous donor. The income from the endowment will provide scholarships to UTPB students in the years to come.

Among the grants and contracts to be approved is a contract between Ector County and UTPB which provides mobile classrooms for use at the Ector County Youth Center. The youth center cooperates with the university to provide students with internships and learning activities.

Another similar agreement allows two of UTPB's mobile classrooms for use at The University of Texas Health Center at Tyler. The health center, in exchange, will provide UTPB with assistance in the form of computer programming and documentation needed to computerize the UTPB payroll.

A grant from the U.S. Department of Education to UTPB will provide funds in the amount of $1,200 to support the College Library Resources program. Under direction of Dick L. Chappell, dean of instructional services, the grant allows for acquisition of supplemental books, films and special library materials.

Also on the docket is approval of a list of textbooks written by UTPB faculty to be used in classes on campus.

Among these are books by Dr. James Olson, associate professor and chairman of psychology; Dr. Alan Marks, assistant professor of psychology; Dr. Robert Rothstein, professor of pedagogical studies and mass communication; Dr. J. Edwin Becht, professor of transportation, logistics and resource management and dean of the College of Management; Dr. James Nickel, professor and chairman of mathematics and computer science; Dr. Paul Hodges, associate professor of economics; Dr. Thomas Dynneson, associate profesor of pedagogical studies; and Dr. Douglas Hale, associate professor of mathematics.

Lee, Midland students in All-Region band

ODESSA — Thirty-eight students from Lee High School and 17 from Midland High School were selected as members of the All-Region band in tryouts held recently at Permian High School.

These students, along with other members of the All-Region band from Odessa High, Permian High, San Angelo and Big Spring, will present a concert Jan. 31 at Lee High School. J.R. McEntyre, music coordinator for the Ector County Independent School District, will conduct the symphonic band, and Rodney Klett of Georgetown will conduct the concert band. Randy Storie and Mark Nelson, band directors at Lee High, will organize the clinic and concert.

Students selected from Lee High School were Stacy Swann, piccolo; Sandy Henson, Carol Neal, Allison Milner, Carol Scott and Suzanne Johnston, flute; Melody Stewart, b-flat clarinet; Margaret McCright, e-flat clarinet; Suzanne Buford, bass clarinet, Donna Greer, oboe; Clay Turner, bassoon; Teri McCollum and Julie Gallagher, alto saxophone; Chip Chapman, tenor saxophone; Robert Rumbelow, Anthony Jones, Bob Scott, Burt Stovall, Celia Hobbs and Wes Coles, cornet; Doreen McGookey, Bryan Porsch and Tanya Olson, french horn; Tim Green and Rodney Mack, Trombone; Barry Friemel, Clay Porsch, Kirby Still, Eddie Reed and Marc Hickman, baritone; Lynn Bowen, Jim Lee and Bryan Pfile, tuba; Pam Dunn, Mylea Newbrough, Eddie Najar and Martha Reyes, percussion I and II; and Paul Christensen, timpani.

Students selected from Midland High School are Carolyn Mitchell, piccolo; Leslie Fort, Elaine Reese, Karen Green and Ann Geddes, flute; Marta McNabb, Ginger Rains and Kim Watson, clarinet; Steve Baskin, Oboe; Keith Cofer, cornet; Susan Baker, french horn; Shawn McCarter, Emily Goodfellow, Ted Bernard and Kevin Locklar, trombone; John Dalton, tuba; and Wade Frost, percussion I.

Lee High School students who placed high enough in their section to advance to the Pre-Area tryouts at Permian High School Dec. 14, were Sandy Henson and Carol Neal, flute.

City Council PTA meets

The Midland City Council PTA held its general meeting at Goddard Junior High School Monday afternoon.

Membership certificates were awarded to schools reaching a 10 percent increase in membership and achieving a 100 percent faculty participation and 100 percent membership average daily attendance.

Dr. Joseph P. Baressi Jr., MISD deputy superintendent, spoke briefly on the Midland school district's junior high level curriculum.

The Goddard Junior High seventh grade girls choir and seventh and eighth grade mixed choir presented the program under the direction of Carol Hall, choir director.

The next general meeting of the Midland City Council PTA will be in February at Jane Long Elementary School.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Doctor's knowledge helped diagnosis

Dear Dr. Solomon: My son had been having a good deal of pain around his midsection, and he finally agreed to see a doctor. Within a few minutes the doctor said he probably had a ruptured appendix, and that's exactly what it was. My son was operated on and is now fine.

What puzzled me is all the publicity about newfangled equipment and space age technology. Doesn't my son's experience show that it is the doctor's ability that really counts? — Tony, San Francisco

Dear Tony: Far be it from me to minimize the importance of the physician's training and experience in treating patients; no piece of machinery can substitute for the human mind. Yet there are many things that doctors can do today with their sophisticated equipment that were not possible years ago. Organ transplantation is just one example.

In regard to your specific experience, however, when it comes to acute abdominal pain, a diagnosis can usually be made on the basis of the patient's history and symptoms — for example, answers to questions such as where did the pain start, and does it feel better when you eat.

The best combination for the patient, of course, is the physician who combines his or her training and experience with the knowledge of when to use the sophisticated laboratory tests and technology that are now available.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I haven't seen anything in the papers lately about laetrile. Does this mean that it is no longer being studied to see whether it is of value in the treatment of cancer? — Bette, St. Paul, Minn.

Dear Bette: Studies of laetrile for the treatment of cancer were conducted by the National Cancer Institute. The agency concluded that laetrile did not extend the lives of the patients or improve their symptoms. While some people may continue to insist that laetrile is effective, the medical community has generally discarded it.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My granddaughter is a nurse, and she has recommended a medicine I can buy in the drugstore that will get rid of warts. I know she has my best interests at heart, but I'd like your opinion before I use anything like that. Can warts be removed by putting some medicine on them? — Mrs. H.L., Los Angeles

Dear Mrs. L.: The Food and Drug Administration reports that an advisory panel found only one of 10 ingredients it studied — salicylic acid — was safe and effective for the removal of warts. Despite this approval, however, I would recommend that anyone with a medical problem, such as diabetes, check with his or her doctor before using an over-the-counter preparation.

Fair skies to break through

Although a traffic advisory was issued early this morning for dense fog, Midland and the surrounding area should see fair skies through tonight. It will become partly cloudy on Friday.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, it will be a little warmer through Friday with the mercury dropping into the lower 40s tonight and climbing once again into the middle 70s on Friday.

Today's southwesterly winds at 10-15 mph will decrease to 5-10 mph tonight. Winds will be variable 5-10 mph on Friday.

Wednesday's high of 70 was 11 degrees cooler than the record high of 81 set for that date in 1970. The overnight low of 38 was 23 degrees warmer than the record low of 15 set in 1978.

Voter changes deadline near

Deadline for corrections or changes on voter registration information is Tuesday, according to Midland County voter registrar Janeice Builta.

In the near future the office will be mailing out new voter registration certificates which will be valid from March 1, 1982, through Feb. 29, 1984.

Ms. Builta stressed the importance of notifying the registar's office should the address of a voter change.

"If (the new registration certificates) cannot be delivered by the postman at the address shown," said Ms. Builta, "they will be returned to this office and your name will then be deleted from the current voting list of qualified registered voters. By the Texas election laws no voter registration certificate can be forwarded to another address."

Ms. Builta said that persons who are not registered to vote in Midland County should come to the voter registrar's office to do so.

She noted that the reverse side of the 1980-82 voter registration certificate gives instructions in case of address change or change of name due to divorce or marriage.

Voter registration corrections can be made by writing P.O. Box 712, Midland 79702 or calling 682-9481, extension 391.

Klondike man dies in wreck

LAMESA — A Klondike man was killed and two other area residents were injured in a two-vehicle collision about 10 miles south of Lamesa Wednesday morning.

Ralph Arredondo, 17, of Klondike, was pronounced dead at the scene by Dawson County Justice of the Peace Fred Vera. His body was taken to the Branon Funeral Home in Lamesa.

The accident occurred at 9:45 a.m. when an eastbound 1980 Oldsmobile driven by Jim Bob Beam, 16, of Lamesa, on State Highway 828 collided with a northbound 1979 Chevrolet pickup driven by Roy Wayne Cooper, 26, of Tarzan, on S.H. 137.

Beam was taken to Lubbock Methodist Hospital where he remained in critical condition this morning with head injuries.

Cooper was treated and released at the Dawson County Medical Arts Hospital in Lamesa.

Police investigate bomb threat

An undetermined amount of cash was taken in a reported convenience store holdup early this morning.

A clerk at the 7-Eleven Store at 2111 W. Wall Ave. told officers two men entered the store about 2:15 a.m. today, brandished small caliber automatic pistols and fled after taking the money.

One of the men was described as black, about 5 feet, 11 inches tall and weighing 140 pounds. He wore a dark brown ski mask and a dark brown jacket. The other man was a 30-year-old Mexican about 5 feet, 11 inches tall and weighing 130 pounds. He was wearing a cowboy hat and a light brown jacket.

Two suspects in the robbery of a 64-year-old Midland woman early Monday night are in custody following their arrest in Andrews later that night.

Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry set bond of $25,000 Wednesday on 19-year-old Robert Schmitt and 24-year-old Dean Platz, both transients from Pennsylvania.

They were arrested by Andrews County deputies after a witness to the robbery provided police with a detailed description of the getaway car. The woman told officers she was knocked to the ground and her purse taken by a man as she was walking in an alley next to the public library on West Pecos Street about 6 p.m. Monday.

The man fled in a waiting car. The purse contained $60 in cash and and several credit cards. The suspects were held overnight Monday in Andrews and transferred to Midland Tuesday.

Police Roundup

Police today are investigating a bomb threat Wednesday afternoon that resulted in evacuation of the Texas Employment Commission office at 501 N. Loraine.

Office manager Ed Miller told officers a woman called the office about 3:50 p.m. Wednesday and demanded $10,000 in cash. She hung up abruptly, then called back a minute or so later and said a bomb would go off in 10 minutes. A search by police, however, failed to turn up any bombs.

New book says Burger discussed cases

Ehrlichman says Nixon, Mitchell involved in discussions

By FRED BARBASH
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Chief Justice Warren E. Burger of the Supreme Court openly discussed "issues before the court" with President Nixon, Attorney General John N. Mitchell and Nixon aide Joh D. Ehrlichman in the White House, according to galley proofs of Ehrlichman's memoirs.

Ehrlichman says the discussions occurred on several occasions and, according to notes he says he kept, included the subject of school busing at a time when the government was involved in busing cases before the court. It is considered improper for a judge or justice to discuss pending issues outside the judicial process.

Ehrlichman also says that Burger was so eager to become chief justice in 1969 that he "was even willing to create another vacancy when Nixon wanted one" by agreeing to step down before Nixon left office.

'IF BURGER WAS confirmed as chief justice he would serve for a time and then step down, Nixon told me a few days prior to Burger's confirmation," Ehrlichman writes. "The president said he had Burger's promise that Burger would retire before Nixon did so that Nixon could then appoint another, younger chief justice to carry the Nixon mandate far beyond the Burger and Nixon years."

Burger said Wednesday through a spokesman that he would not comment on the Ehrlichman allegations. "In answer to your query, the general practice here is not to respond to allegations, espeially where former litigants are involved, and that will be done in this case, too," said Barrett McGurn, court spokesman.

But former attorney general Mitchell Wednesday disputed the allegations, saying he recalled no meeting at which Supreme Court issues were discussed. "I can't conceive of the chief justice over at the White House discussing cases before the court. Certainly I was not a party to it," Mitchell said.

HE ALSO SAID EHRLICHMAN was the one who proposed asking Burger to step down before Nixon left office, and that the idea was never communicated to Burger. "It was a cute idea Ehrlichman came up with," Mitchell said.

The comments about Burger are contained in a chapter of "Witness To Power," Ehrlichman's recounting of the workings of government during the Nixon administration. The book is scheduled for publication in March or April, and bound galley proofs were circulated to a number of reviewers. The Post obtained a copy independently.

Ehrlichman declined comment on any aspect of the book. But Michael Korda, editor-in-chief at Simon and Shuster, the publisher, said "nothing substantive" will be changed.

NIXON'S OFFICE SAID the former president would have no comment.

Ehrlichman, Nixon's former domestic adviser, was convicted of involvement in the Watergate scandal and served a prison term in part for falsely testifying before a grand jury.

The Ehrlichman galley proofs present a particularly unflattering portrait of the chief justice, whose vote in the Watergate tapes case helped bring down the administration and send Ehrlichman and others to prison.

If Burger had contacts with the Nixon White House, he would not have been the first Supreme Court justice to maintain such a line of communication. Former justice Abe Fortas was said to have had regular contact with President Lyndon B. Johnson, and the late Justice William O. Douglas communicated with presidents during his tenure on the court.

In the galley proofs, Ehrlichman describes Burger as "a man with aggrandizing tendencies." He says Burger repeatedly pressed the White House to support him in efforts to give an annual televised "State of the Judiciary" speech before Congress.

"WE WERE NOT ABOUT to sponsor the Warren Burger Show on prime time," Ehrlichman writes. "Burger tried to sell his idea all over the city of Washington without success."

Ehrlichman says Burger also tried unsuccessfully to secure the use of presidential airplanes for his travels, including a trip to Europe.

"Burger did not permit minor disappointments over speeches or airplanes to impair his friendship with the president," Ehrlichman writes. "As an aspect of this campaign he sent a steady stream of notes and letters to Nixon, many of them through my office."

In turn, "The president and John Mitchell made a constant effort to keep in touch with Burger. The president had a notion that Burger's decisions on cases before the court were not always worked out with sufficient clarity," Ehrlichman says.

"ON SEVERAL OCCASIONS Nixon, Mitchell and I openly discussed with the chief justice the pros and cons of issues before the court." Citing his notes of a meeting of Dec. 18, 1970, Ehrlichman describes one such discussion. (Nixon's White House logs confirm that the president had breakfast on Dec. 18 with Burger, Mitchell and Ehrlichman.)

Alcohol plan accepted by planning commission

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

The goals and objectives of the 1982-84 Regional Alcohol Plan were unanimously accepted by the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission Board of Directors Wednesday in its regular monthly meeting at Midland Air Terminal.

Cathy Clayton, regional alcohol service director, reported to the board that the overall alcohol plan was a "joint effort with input from concerned citizens who attended a goals and objectives meeting in September."

THE GOALS INCLUDE providing information and education on alcohol and alcohol abuse in the Permian Basin, providing education and training for service providers in the region, expanding the development and implementation of alternative programs providing early identification, treatment and rehabilitation for employees, rehabilitation programs for those who come in contact with the criminal justice system, providing continuous treatment and rehabilitation services for persons with alcohol problems and increasing the effectiveness of alcoholism services through ongoing planning, coordination and technical assistance.

Priority objectives to implement these goals also were accepted by the board. These include detoxification services, counseling, treatment, education and inservice training programs throughout the Permian Basin, Ms. Clayton said.

Ernie Crawford, executive director, was given authorization by the board to submit an application to the Texas Commission on Alcoholism for continuation of funding of the Regional Alcoholism Authority.

IN OTHER BOARD NEWS, the directors accepted the review and comments of the Regional Development Review Committee on a West Texas Opportunities Inc. grant application to the Urban Mass Transportation Administration for $34,440 to be matched with $8,610 in local funds. The money is intended to be used to purchase one five- to nine-passenger station wagon and one 10- to 16-passenger vehicle equipped with a wheelchair lift.

Jerry Tschauner, director of planning, said these vehicles will be used to expand existing transportation services in Upton and Martin counties for the elderly and physically handicapped.

The directors also accepted and approved the PBRPC 1981 fiscal year audit report prepared by Elms, Farris and Company. The board also decided to nominate a committee to appoint officers of the PBRPC board for 1982.

Watt calls for reduced subsidies for agribusiness

By PAUL TAYLOR
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Interior Secretary James G. Watt said Wednesday that large agribusiness firms should have unlimited access to federal irrigation water, but he called for their subsidies to be substantially reduced.

In the Reagan administration's first official pronouncment on the long-simmering issue of irrigation policy, Watt told a congressional panel that the 160-acre limitation contained in the Reclamation Act of 1902 was "outmoded" and created "artificial restraint" on farm ownership. The limitation has been systematically violated over the years.

WATT PROPOSED THAT any farming operation be allowed to lease federally owned water to irrigate an unlimited acreage, so long as it pays the full cost of the water for all over the first 960 acres, which under present law is federally subsidized. The difference between the full and subsidized price can exceed a ratio of 10 to 1.

Under the Reclamation Act, subsidized irrigation water is being provided to about 47,000 farms totaling about 12 million acres in 17 Western states, turning them from desert

According to the galley proofs: "The president pointed out to the chief justice the enormous importance of the 'school cases' before the court. They discussed the issues of forced integration of the schools, the relative merits of 'tracking' and desegregation in northern schools and the president's intention to 'set the course' for the country."

Ehrlichman referred to the president's comments as "lobbying."

At that time the court was considering Swann vs. Charlotte-Mecklenburg Board of Education, a school busing case and one of the most important school desegregation cases since Brown vs. Board of Education in 1954.

The Nixon administration and Mitchell's Justice Department were involved as "friends of the court" arguing for minimal busing.

IN LEGAL TERMINOLOGY, discussion of pending issues outside the confines of the judicial process and without the presence of other parties to a case is called ex parte communication. The American Bar Association's Code of Judicial Conduct says that, except as authorized by law, no judge should "initiate or consider ex parte or other communications concerning a pending or impending proceeding."

It bars communications not only between a judge and a party to a case but between a judge and any person not authorized to participate in the decision-making process.

The code of conduct also says judges should not "convey or permit others to convey the impresion that they are in a special position to influence him."

Ehrlichman devotes considerable attention to the way Burger was chosen for the court after the retirement in 1969 of Chief Justice Earl Warren. Burger was then a judge on the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

Man charged with robbery

One of two men who allegedly held up four other men at knifepoint early Tuesday morning has been formally charged with two counts of aggravated robbery.

Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry set bond of $100,000 on Robert M. Lewis, 39, of 308 S. Clay. Lewis is accused of robbing four men in their room at the Holiday Inn, 3904 W. Wall Ave., about midnight Monday after one of the men answered a knock on the door.

Lewis was apprehended after a car reported taken in the robbery overturned at the intersection of Lamesa Road and East Front Street during a high speed police chase about 6:45 a.m. Tuesday. Officers said they spotted the car and pursued it when the driver refused to stop.

The second suspect in the holdup is being sought. Rodeo equipment and a gun were among the $8,000 worth of items taken.

Budget cuts affecting mine safety?

By BILL PROCHNAU
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A United Mine Workers spokesman charged Wednesday that Reagan administration budget cuts are reducing safety levels and the number of federal mine inspections in coal mines. The charges were made in the wake of three coal-mine accidents that killed 24 miners in just the past week.

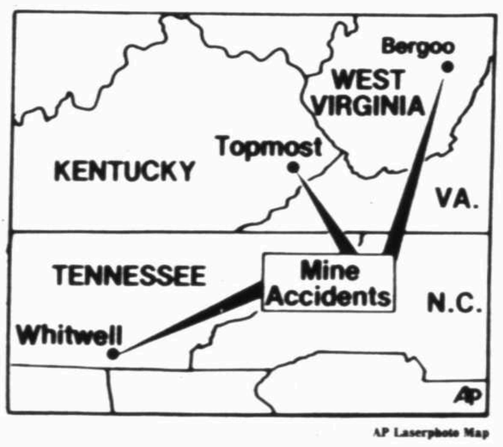
"We just feel that the present attitude in the Reagan administration toward mine safety is not strong enough," Danny Davidson, the UMW deputy director for safety, said.

In its September budget proposal the Labor Department recommended eliminating 150 of 1,629 federal coal inspectors. Ford B. Ford, assistant secretary of labor for mine safety and health, strongly defended the cutbacks. Ford said 72 inspections had been conducted in the past three years at the Topmost, Ky., mine in which eight were killed Monday.

"Generally, there may have been fewer inspections in the past year," Ford said, "but I just don't find a diminution of safety."

Meanwhile, attorneys for the Council of Southern Mountains, Inc., a citizens' group that includes Appalachian miners and their widows, asked the House Education and Labor Committee for a congressional investigation of the effect of the budget cuts on mine safety.

The attorneys charged the mine owners with a "patten of violations" of mine-safety regulations that "show a need for more rather than less (federal) enforcement."



AP Laserphoto Map

Three major mining accidents have taken place in recent days, with 24 coal miners killed. Thirteen were killed Tuesday in Whitwell, Tenn.; eight died Monday in Topmost, Ky.; and three died in a cave-in at Bergoo, W.Va., last week.

The three accidents appeared to have different causes. Although investigations still were under way Wednesday, only the latest tragedy appeared to have been caused by a methane gas explosion, one of the more common risks in coal-mine disasters.

Federal safety officials said workers at the Tennessee Consolidated Coal Co.'s mine near Palmer, Tenn., had just punched through the wall of an old shaft when an explosion rocked the mine Tuesday, killing 13. Investigators were attempting to determine Wednesday whether methane gas had accumulated in the unused shaft, which had been closed for seven years.

At Topmost, Ky., where eight men were killed Monday after an explosion so violent it sent a shower of mud and water 300 yards out of the mouth of the mine, federal investigators were looking into the possibility that the miners accidently set off dynamite. Doctors said the men died of smoke inhalation.

Dr. George Nichols, Kentucky state medical examiner, said cigarettes and lighters were found on the bodies of three of the miners. "That is a distinct no-no in an underground mine," Nichols said. The doctor said there was no indication the lighters had been used but their presence "indicates things were pretty loose there, both with the workers and with management."

Last Thursday three miners were killed when rock and slate fell from the roof of a mine in Bergoo, W.Va.

The Tennessee accident was the worst in that state's history in 70 years. One of 17 survivors, who rode small rail cars to safety, said the mine started "shaking a little bit" and he "knew they had hit gas and it exploded." The miner declined to be identified.

Olmstead finally gets Naval diploma

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Michael Olmstead, the only midshipman court-martialed at the Naval Academy in almost 60 years, has been given his degree and his commission as a Navy officer.

Graduation day for Olmstead came five months late, and it almost didn't come at all.

A panel of officers that convicted him of involuntary manslaughter in the death of his roommate in an automobile accident recommended that he be dismissed from the Navy.

But Vice Adm. William P. Lawrence, at that time academy superintendent, decided in August that Olmstead deserved a second chance because of his unblemished prior record as a midshipman.

As one of his final acts before leaving Annapolis, Lawrence allowed Olmstead to stay in the Navy and at the academy for a four-month probationary period.

Lawrence's successor, Vice dm. Edward C. Waller, approved Olmstead's graduation and his commissioning as an ensign when he completed the probation last week. Olmstead was finally commissioned last Friday.

The charges against Olmstead grew out of a 1980 automobile accident in which his roommate, Scott Thomas, was killed. His court-martial was the first involving a midshipman since 1922.

Auto workers union to permit renegotiation

By DONALD WOUTAT
Los Angeles Times

DETROIT — The United Auto Workers union, bowing to the sharp deterioration of the U.S. automobile industry, agreed Wednesday to permit the renegotiation of its labor contracts with struggling car manufacturers.

The action by the union's leadership, which reverses a long-standing policy, is likely to set up some fierce intraunion political struggles, and leaves the outcome for the troubled auto companies far from clear.

BUT THE UAW has removed a major obstacle to the industry's demand for labor-cost relief. Auto executives call that an essential step to compete with cars from Japan and begin restoring the financial health of the battered U.S. manufacturers.

The most likely potential beneficiaries, at least initially, appear to be American Motors Corp. and International Harvester Co. But the union's action applies to all its members' employers, including Ford Motor Co. and General Motors Corp.

Specifically, the union's executive board rescinded a blanket policy against reopening national labor contracts before their normal expiration dates, which, in the case of the Big Three auto makers, is next Sept. 14.

THAT ALLOWS each of the union's company councils, made up of elected local union officials, to decide on their own whether a particular company's fiscal condition requires relief.

Any renegotiated labor contract must then be approved in a vote by the rank-and-file workers, which might be the toughest obstacle of all for the companies.

Union President Douglas Fraser, signaling the differing receptions that various companies are likely to get, told reporters, "Each situation is different. We reached a conclusion that because of the deterioration of the economy, it was no longer satisfactory to have a rigid policy. Therefore, we could do one thing in Harvester and another in American Motors and another in Ford and GM."

Ford and GM responded cautiously to the union's action. Alfred S. Warren, GM'ss vice president for industrial relations, called it "welcome news. We hope the GM Council will respond in a positive manner."

A GM spokesman added, "We're waiting to hear from them. If they could get here at one o'clock in the afternoon, I think we'd be ready to sit down and talk."

Peter Pestillo, Ford's vice president for labor relations, said, "We applaud this step — if it produces a new labor agreement."

The union's reversal of policy comes after a near collapse of automobile sales this fall, further plant closings and another surge in worker layoffs, The apparent new recession has choked off what the company had hoped would be a recovery from the slump that began two-and-a-half years ago.

Blue-collar auto industry layoffs surged to 194,000 last week, or 27 percent of the industry's hourly work force. This is the 24th consecutive month in which long-term layoffs have exceeded 150,000.

THE UAW previously broke with its contract policy at Chrysler Corp. two years ago, when Congress demanded union aid in return for the government's $1.5 billion Chrysler loan guarantee program to save the company from bankruptcy.

Since then, the union has twice agreed to further Chrysler concessions, including a wage freeze, that now total more than $1 billion of relief. Fraser has said Chrysler will get no more help, and the company has said it won't even ask.

'Freeway Killer' withdraws story of injuries

By GENE BLAKE
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Accused Freeway Killer William G. Bonin has withdrawn his initial claim that injuries he received in a Los Angeles Criminal Courts Building holding cell resulted from a fall, his attorney said Wednesday.

Attorney William Charvet said Bonin, 34, charged with the murders of 12 young men and boys, now refuses to make any statement about how he suffered a broken nose, two black eyes and a possible concussion, shortly before his trial was to have resumed Tuesday.

However, mounting evidence suggests that he was beaten by one of his two cellmates, John W. Stinson, 28, a convicted murderer and reputed member of the Aryan Brotherhood, a prison-spawned outlaw gang.

A DEPUTY SHERIFF who was one of the first on the scene after the incident in the 14th floor holding cell said he noticed that Stinson's knuckles were bruised. The deputy, who requested that he not be identified, said there was a lump on Bonin's forehead, and "it looked like Stinson had tried to put him through the wall."

Deputy District Attorney Steve Sowders, who obtained Stinson's murder conviction, said that during the penalty phase of his trial there was testimony that Stinson had been involved in four prior instances of jail misconduct.

Stinson was convicted of the March 28, 1979, murder of Alfred Armijo, 28, in connection with a drug transaction in Long Beach, Calif. He is scheduled to be sentenced Monday and could receive life in prison without possibility of parole.

STINSON'S attorneys could not be reached for comment. Attorneys for the other inmate in the holding cell with Bonin at the time, accused Hillside Strangler, Angelo Buono, 47, said he claims he was dozing and does not know how Bonin was injured.

A sheriff's department spokesman said detectives of the Jail Investigations Unit had no comment.

Bonin, listed in good condition, is due back in Los Angeles County Superior Court Judge William B. Keene's court Thursday for arguments in his trial.

LOS ANGELES — Pornogrphic film star John C. Holmes was charged Wednesday with four counts of murder and one count of attempted murder in the slayings of four persons last summer in a home in the bucolic Laurel Canyon area of Los Angeles.

The Los Angeles County district attorney's office said it may seek the death penalty because the crime involved multiple murders and was allegedly committed during a burglary.

Even as Holmes was led into court, where his arraignment was continued until Dec. 22, Los Angeles homicide detectives pressed their investigation into the quadruple murder.

BUT ONE OF HOLMES' longtime friends and producers said Wednesday that Holmes told her by telephone he was not cooperating with police, despite the arrest of a second suspect just five days after Holmes was taken into custody in Miami Beach, Fla..

Holmes, who has reportedly expressed fear for his life, said, "Please tell everybody I'm not talking. No matter what people say out there, I'm not talking," erotic-film producer Julia St. Vincent quoted him as saying Wednesday.

St. Vincent said Holmes telephoned her four times from the jail cell where he is being held without bail.

Police Chief Daryl F. Gates told reporters Monday that Holmes has answered some but not all of investigators' questions.

The bodyguard of Los Angeles nightclub owner Adel (Eddie Nash) Nasrallah on Tuesday night became the second suspect to be arrested in the slaying. Gregory Diles, 33, was booked on suspicion of murder and was being held without bail.

Formal charges have not been filed against Diles and a spokesman for the district attorney said he did not know if police will seek a murder complaint.

LAST AUGUST, HOLMES' estranged wife, Sharon, told the Los Angeles Times that her husband telephoned her shortly before the July 1 murders and expressed fear.

"There are good guys, bad guys and the in-between and they are all out for me, one way or the other," she quoted him as saying. She said Holmes told her, "I've dug a hole and it's going to be hard to get out of."

"He was very, very nervous and agitated," she said. "He said he was into things he was worried about and didn't want to come near the house for fear that something might happen."

Police have theorized that the murders were in retaliation for a June 29 armed robbery of Nasrallah and Diles at Nasrallah's expensive home.

Four people were slain at the Laurel Canyon home not far from Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.'s house. They were William DeVerell, 42; Joy Audrey Miller, 46; Barbara Richardson, 22; and Ronald Launius, 37.

Launius' wife, Susan, 25, was beaten and left for dead, but survived and is in protective custody at an undisclosed location.

U.S. takes tough stand in tuna issue

By BENJAMIN SHORE
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — Mexico has stalemated negotiations for a multilateral tuna fishing agreement in the eastern Pacific Ocean in order to force economically pressed American tuna boats to switch to Mexican registration, the U.S. State Department charged Tuesday.

In the first public statement of the Reagan administration's position, Theodore G. Kronmiller, deputy assistant secretary of state for oceans and fisheries affairs, told a Senate subcommittee studying U.S. ocean policy that the United States must maintain a tough stance with Mexico in the talks.

"Mexico insists that it be guaranteed a very large share of the allowable catch in the region, a share that is notably disproportionate to the capabilities of the Mexican (fishing) fleet," Kronmiller said.

"The Mexican goal in the negotiations is to conclude an agreement which would be of great advantage to the Mexican tuna fleet and at the same time make it more difficult for the U.S. fleet to operate economically and thus drive our vessels to Mexican registration."

TUNA FISHING IN THE Western Pacific has been in turmoil for the past decade as various coastal nations in Central and South America claimed jurisdiction over resources within 200 miles of their coasts.

But because tuna are highly migratory, the U.S. government refuses to acknowledge such territorial claims and has urged fishing and coastal nations for the past five years to negotiate an agreement providing equitable access to tuna.

Meanwhile, American tuna fishermen continue to be seized by the navy gunboats of Mexico and other coastal nations inside their 200-mile limits.

Although U.S. law provides reimbursement for the substantial fines and confiscation of nets and catches, and bars the importation of fish products from nations enforcing the 200-mile limit against tuna fishermen, the U.S. fleet still suffers substantial economic losses.

By switching to Mexican registration, the boats would be barred from selling their catch to U.S. canners, but they could sell the fish elsewhere and not risk losing their expensive, sophisticated ships for failure to pay off bank loans.

"WITHOUT THE EMBARGO sanction and the compensation programs," Kronmiller said, "the coastal states with whom we must negotiate would be convinced that if they simply had the patience to wait, a negotiated settlement would go their way, since the U.S. government would not in the long run stand behind our industry. ...

"Without these legal protections, the U.S. tuna fleet would soon decide that there is no future in attempting to operate on a commercially viable basis under the U.S. flag."

Kronmiller reminded the Senate subcommittee that without the assurance of reimbursement by the U.S. government when they are seized and fined, American tuna fishermen would be compelled to buy licenses from each coastal nation to fish inside the 200-mile limit.

But to underscore the Reagan administration's view of Mexico's long-range strategy against the U.S. tuna fleet, Kronmiller pointed out that Mexico refuses to sell licenses to U.S. vessels, "despite the great abundance of tuna off its coast."

THE MEXICAN EMBASSY HERE declined immediate comment. A spokesman said the embassy had not yet seen Kronmiller's statement.

The Reagan administration is maintaining the position taken by the Carter administration in regards to insisting on an international agreement exempting tuna from each nation's — including the United States' — claims to offshore resources jurisdiction.

The government also insists that only through international agreement can the highly valuable tuna species be subjected to conservation measures that will assure their continued supply.

"Our mandate (from Congress) is to negotiate international agreements to ensure the effective conservation and management of tuna and to secure access for U.S. fishermen to the stocks wherever they migrate beyond a narrow belt of coastal waters," Kronmiller said.

Although the United States, Mexico and other Latin American countries have accepted the concept of international conservation agreements, the Latin American coastal states still refuse to let American boats fish in their waters because they hope eventually to force the U.S. fleet to switch registration, he said.

The family has asked that memorials be directed to a favorite charity.

Europeans doubt 'good faith' arms negotiations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Europeans are deeply skeptical that the United States and the Soviet Union will negotiate arms reduction in good faith, according to newly released public opinion polls taken in October.

The opinion polls, taken shortly before President Reagan's Nov. 18 arms reduction speech, also showed that European confidence in U.S. ability to deal responsibly with world problems "had slipped ... with skeptics equaling those with confidence in the U.S. on that score."

The late October polls were commissioned by the U.S. International Communications Agency in six NATO countries: West Germany, Great Britain, Norway, Italy, France and the Netherlands. An ICA offical said Wednesday that about 1,000 people were interviewed in each of the six countries.

The agency said an analysis of the opinion polls, taken "at the height of European anti-nuclear campaigns," suggests the major themes of Reagan's arms control speech "addressed concerns prevalent in European public opinion."

ICA gave this summary of the results:

—"While more perceived the U.S. than the USSR as serious about arms control negotiations, as many or more saw neither superpower making a sincere effort.

—"Widespread doubt existed that arms reduction talks will succeed prior to scheduled deployment of U.S. intermediate-range nuclear missiles in Europe. Only among the Italians did optimism prevail."

—"There was no broad recognition that the Soviets actually have a sizable edge over the U.S. in intermediate-range nuclear missiles in Europe. This is consistent with the fact that sizable majorities did not know or incorrectly thought that there are NATO nuclear missiles deployed in their countries capable of hitting the USSR.

—"Most Europeans preferred rough military equivalence for the U.S. and the USSR but tended not to believe either superpower is pursuing that goal."

One ICA official said no U.S. polling results are available on European public opinion in the aftermath of the speech.

In his speech, Reagan offered to cancel the planned deployment of 572 Pershing II and ground-launched cruise missiles in Europe if the Soviets dismantle their force of some 600 SS-20, SS-5 and SS-4 medium-range missiles aimed at West European targets.

In its initial reaction, the Soviet Union rejected the offer. Some Soviet commentators labled it as propaganda aimed more at defusing the European peace movement than serious arms control. The Reagan administration insists the offer was made in good faith and many West European leaders hailed it as a welcome peace initiative.

Rights group: Friends affect positions

LONDON (AP) — Amnesty International called today for an end to worldwide hypocrisy about human rights, charging that nations tend to take a charitable view of violations committed by their friends.

In its annual report, the London-based human rights organization said it is dismayed "by a tendency among governments to regard certain abuses as more acceptable when committed by friends than by enemies."

In the introduction to the 426-page report covering 117 countries in the year that ended last April, Amnesty said: "This hypocrisy about human rights must end."

The Nobel Prize-winning organization said few countries admit to holding prisoners of conscience, but many argue they are protecting security or public order.

"Some offer their own interpretations of international standards (of human rights), claiming for example that freedom of expression does not include the right to advocate communism, or alternatively, to agitate against communism," it said.

The review of political imprisonment, torture and executions ranged over political killings in El Salvador to reports of increased arbitrary arrests and restrictions in China, where, it said, human rights deteriorated markedly during the year.

The United States was listed both for retaining capital punishment and for alleged misconduct by FBI officials to secure convictions of radical black and other minority leaders.

Amnesty has urged Washington to set up an inquiry centering on the 1972 trial of Black Panther leader Elmer Pratt and the 1976 trial of American Indian Movement leader Richard Marshall, both sentenced to life terms for murder.

In Latin America, Amnesty singled out El Salvador and Bolivia for political killings which it said were carried out mainly by government troops. But it listed half a dozen other nations, including Argentina, where thousands of people have "disappeared" after being abducted by security forces.

Widespread human rights abuses continued in Africa — black and white-ruled, the report said. It noted, however, that five countries —, Swaziland, Angola, Cameroon, the Central African Republic and Ghana — released signifigant numbers of political detainees during the year.

In the Soviet Union, the report said, "severe repression of all forms of dissent continued," with 220 known arrests of dissidents, including 30 committed to psychiatric hospitals.

PUBLIC NOTICE

Texas Electric Service Company, in accordance with the rules of the Public Utility Commission of Texas, hereby gives notice of intent to amend its fuel cost factor tariff schedule to establish a procedure for regulatory approval of certain fuel related expenses prior to those expenses being included in the fuel cost factor portion of monthly bills for electric service. # Changing the news

The Associated Press, of which The Reporter-Telegram is a member, is once again involved in the process of determining the top 10 news stories of the year. There always is a bit of a shock when one sees the list of potential "winners." Highlights of the year — both the good and the bad, along with the unbelievable have their most dramatic impact on a reader that way, rather than being diluted throughout the year.

1981 has been no exception; reading over the list of the year's top stories, one cannot help but realize man's inhumanity to man. During the past year, though, that seems especially true.

Of the 38 potential "top" news stories of the past year, as suggested by the AP, nearly half — 16 — involved violent acts or disaster — assassination, attempted assassination, murder, rioting, terrorism, bombings and the like. The list is not a pretty one, with events ranging from the assassination attempt on President Ronald Reagan, to the shooting of Pope John Paul II and the assassination of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

There has been a rising crescendo of voices in recent years that claim the news media is concerned only with spectacular or sensational news, that not enough "good news" is reported. There may be some validity to that claim, but it is not the fault of the media.

In our society news is the reflection — the mirror image, if you will — of the world around us. To say that we do not like the image we see is to say that we do not like ourselves. If only news classified as good was printed or broadcast, the world would not magically become a better place in which to live; human nature would stay the same and violence would remain, simply sugar-coated for those who refuse to see the evil side of mankind.

Those of us involved in the assimilation and dissemination of the news do not condone the darker side of man's nature any more than those who claim we dwell too heavily on "bad news." We simply collect and report the news; news determines its own value to society.

The news events of 1981 do bring a message for mankind: There is entirely too much violence in our world today and not enough of that which is good and humane. It is up to mankind to direct his own course for the future. 1981 has not been a normal year because of the prevalence of violence and death. It's up to all of us to see that 1982 is changed for the betterment of mankind.

A storm of brewing

Now that federal revenuers are leaving the ridges and hollows of the Appalachians and the Great Smoky Mountains, there's folk predicting a run on copper tubing and kettles.

What has happened is the government is closing down the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. Most of the bureau's work had to do with illegal firearms. But it also sent agents into the pine and sweetgum forests looking for illegal stills turning out "white lightning."

There hasn't been much bootleg activity in recent years because of stiff penalties handed down by the federal government and the availability of legal liquor in formerly dry areas. But there are those who say bonded booze doesn't measure up to good moonshine. A slug of white lightning will curl your hair and start your feet to jigging, some claim.

Unemployment in the states of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Virginia and Tennessee also is a factor. "If people with a history of moonshining can't get legitimate jobs, they resurrect their stills," says John Wright, director of enforcement for the Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Division.

Illegal whiskey making in the eastern mountains of the United States dates back to the 1794 Whiskey Rebellion in Pennsylvania. Farmers made whiskey because they could ship it to market a lot easier than bulky loads of grain.

They objected to the tax and that started the age old battles between revenuers and the hillbilly still tenders.

Now, with the revenue agents leaving the hills, white lightning may strike again.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

ABSCAM's nets caught honest men, too

WASHINGTON — During the ABSCAM operation, members of Congress were conned by the FBI into taking bribes and engaging in corrupt business deals. That much has been made clear in all the ABSCAM ballyhoo.

Jack Anderson

What has escaped public attention, however, is the fact that legitimate businessmen were also conned by the FBI's operatives. What's worse, these honest businessmen were victimized for personal profit by the con artists who were enlisted by the FBI to entrap congressmen.

Here's the story of just one company, Intersea Fisheries, which was put out of business by ABSCAM. The FBI recklessly ruined this perfectly legitimate business enterprise to protect its phony ABSCAM cover.

The California-based firm numbered among its directors the respected shipbuilder Don Vaughn and Jean Michel Cousteau, son of the prestigious undersea explorer Jacques Cousteau.

Intersea Fisheries was suckered into the ABSCAM trap by the FBI's con men — and was given no help at all when it asked the FBI for information that might have extricated it from the trap.

The FBI preferred to let Intersea Fisheries go down the drain, rather than stop its corrupt hirelings from working their private scam on the company.

From interviews and a sworn deposition, my associate Indy Badhwar has pieced together the con game devised by an FBI lackey named Joseph Meltzer.

In February 1979, Denver accountant Richard Stanczyk was retained by a client to check out Intersea as an investment opportunity. Stanczyk, a former Internal Revenue Service investigator, was to be ruined by the FBI's little game.

He gave Intersea high marks, largely on the basis that an outfit called Abdul Enterprises was going to finance the company's venture to build three tuna boats. Unknown to Stanczyk, Abdul Enterprises was the FBI's phony ABSCAM corporation. It wasn't about to provide financing.

Stanczyk signed on as a consultant to Intersea; his job was to bring investors into the project until the Arab money from Abdul Enterprises materialized. There was, of course, no such money. But Meltzer, the FBI's pet con man, received thousands of dollars in commissions.

As part of its scheme to lend legitimacy to Abdul Enterprises, the FBI had arranged for a vice president of Chase Manhattan to lie about the spurious Arab company's assets. When Intersea called Chase Manhattan, the inquiring official was assured that the money was there.

Another legitimate broker, Kai Gulve, was roped in on the project. Reassured by meetings with the FBI's Arab "sheiks," Gulve spent $50,000 of his own money traveling in this country and in Europe promoting the Intersea deal.

Stanczyk and Gulve grew suspicious about Meltzer and his "Arabs" after months of runaround. They relayed their doubts to the FBI's San Diego office. But the FBI did nothing to warn Intersea that it should back off from any dealings with Abdul Enterprises. Instead, the complaints were referred to Meltzer, the FBI con man.

On Halloween night 1979, FBI agents swooped down on Intersea's headquarters and carted off 27 cartons of the firm's files. Apparently, this was another protective measure to keep the businessmen's suspicions about Abdul Enterprises from leaking out.

But an agent answered the company's telephone, telling callers that the firm's employees were under arrest. Foreign business interests, including the Matsui Corporation of Japan, were scared away by statements that Intersea was under investigation by the FBI.

The truth was that no Intersea official was arrested nor charged with a crime, for the simple reason that they had done nothing except rely on FBI lies.

Stanczyk, the accountant who was hornswoggled by the FBI, lost more than $200,000, his business, his clients and his marriage. He contemplated suicide. The other consultant, Gulve, also lost his business, and some $900,000 in commissions.

The FBI's reckless disregard for the consequences of its zealous pursuit of potentially corrupt politicians left a legitimate company — and its innocent executives — in ruins.

HEADHUNTER'S HUBRIS: President Reagan's longtime personal secretary, Helene von Damm, has ruffled Republican feathers both inside and outside the White House since she took over as director of presidential personnel recently.

The White House personnel office is headed by amiable E. Pendleton James, a Reagan insider who lacks any overwhelming energy or ability; until a few weeks ago, the real job of finding GOP stalwarts for appointive positions was handled by John Harrington. But he was given a top Pentagon post, and von Damm stepped into his shoes.

Outspoken and ambitious, von Damm has infuriated some White House staffers and Republican pols by her abrasive technique. They claim she's picking personal favorites, and they cite Albert "Dapper" O'Neil of Boston as a case in point.

O'Neil, a 61-year-old member of the Boston City Council, is being pushed by von Damm for the job of U.S. marshal in Beantown. Though he headed Democrats for Reagan in Massachusetts, O'Neil is regarded by many Republicans as less experienced and less deserving than other candidates for the patronage plum. Yet with the enthusiastic backing of his friend von Damm, the brassy O'Neil now has the inside track for the appointment.

GEORGE F. WILL

'Chariots of Fire' presents an end for the cynical age

WASHINGTON — You can not go around making movies about every act of Scottish stubbornness. There is not enough celluloid. But some Britons have made a dandy movie about one such act, and the popularity of the movie is a reason for thinking, against ample evidence, that all is not lost in the field of popular entertainment. 'Tis the season for grasping at straws, so I choose to celebrate the commercial success of a movie about Eric Liddell.

George F. Will

"Chariots of Fire" concerns two British sprinters, Liddell and Harold Abrahams, en route to the 1924 Olympics. Abrahams, a Cambridge undergraduate, was the son of a Lithuanian Jew who prospered in Britain. Abrahams saw running for his nation as a route to social acceptance.

Liddell, the son of Scottish missionaries, was born in China (where he died in a Japanese internment camp in 1945). His sister believed the Olympics were a worldly distraction, an unworthy reason for delaying his departure for China.

He, however, argued: "God made me for a purpose, but He also made me fast." He believed it would be an act of devotion to develop his gift — perhaps even an impiety not to do so. However, on the eve of the Olympics he learned that his heat in the 100 meters was scheduled for a Sunday, and he refused to run on the Sabbath.

Sandy Koufax of the Dodgers, like Hank Greenberg of the Tigers before him, would not play in the World Series on Yom Kippur. But the Olympics generate nationalist passions, and Liddell was denounced as a traitor to his country and subjected to extraordinary pressures.

At one point in the movie, Liddell is ushered into the less-than-majestic presence of the Prince of Wales, and there lectured on his duty to run on Sunday. The prince who would later abdicate for Mrs. Simpson was not just an unconvincing moral tutor. He was (in the words the Kaiser — the prince's relative — used to describe a minister of the prince's great-grandmother, Victoria) an unmitigated noodle. But not even a mitigated noodle would have availed against Liddell. I shall not reveal the outcome, but be assured it will not cast a pall over your Christmas.

I have said my share (and perhaps a lot of other persons' shares) of hard things about the coarsening glop that comprises so much popular entertainment. It is, therefore, an agreeable conjunction of duty and pleasure to note that this year there have been some movies that sensitive persons could see without wincing.

Such is the virtuosity of moviemakers nowadays that they could please the eye with 100 minutes of film about the joys and tribulations of a cauliflower. But there are movies for the mind, too.

Someone has said that you can date the beginning of the decline of the West from when we began calling movies "films" and accepted the axiom that foreign films are always better. But foreigners are making better movies — better than most American movies, and better than the angst-in-Milan variety (black coffee, black turtlenecks, black moods) — that made it so tiresome keeping culturally current in the 1950s and 1960s. Today's best are "Stevie" (British) and "Gallipoli" and "Breaker Morant" (Australian).

The producer of "Chariots of Fire" says he was looking for a story like "A Man for All Seasons," about someone like Thomas More who does something inexpedient. The title is drawn from Blake:

Bring me my Bow of burning gold:
Bring me my Arrows of desire:
Bring me my Spear: O clouds unfold!
Bring me my Chariot of fire.

It is from "Young Men of the New Age." The arts can not bring on a new age, but a noble character stirringly portrayed can shape the characters of those who are stirred.

A recent biographer of Liddell notes that a poet as Scottish as a thistle (Burns) said that a simple man is "a problem that puzzles the devil." Sancta simplicitas — sacred simplicity — can be so monochromatic that it provokes sympathy for the devil.

Conceivably Liddell was (to use the scientifically correct term) a goodie-two-shoes. He may have been less than ideal as a dinner partner, or on other occasions when effervescence was more looked for than solidness. And surely some leveling researcher has discovered hypocrisy or other secret sin. No, all who knew him said otherwise. So we must face the awkward fact that he was as he is portrayed in "Chariots of Fire": heroic.

That is awkward because if one can not believe in universal clay-footedness, there goes the creed of a cynical age.

ART BUCHWALD

Richard Allen needs to be forgotten!

Richard Allen has been cleared of any wrongdoing with regard to the $1,000 he accepted from the Japanese Magazine "Sim-bu-No" for an interview given by Mrs. Nancy Reagan. The Justice department has decided there is no reason to go any further on the matter, and has accepted Mr. Allen's explanation that he took the envelope stuffed with cash, gave it to his secretary, and then forgot about it, until the money popped up eight months later in a safe in Mr. Allen's office.

Art Buchwald

Since the Justice Department is satisfied, I'm satisfied with the outcome of the investigation. But Trenchant, who works down the hall from me, still thinks Allen should go as the president's National Security Adviser.

Trenchant said, "He was cleared of wrongdoing, but not of being absent-minded. Nobody wants a guy as National Security Adviser who forgets?"

"Everyone forgets," I said.

"Yeh, but when the president's National Security Adviser forgets it could mean the end of the world. Suppose the president calls up Allen some night and says, 'Is it Honduras or Nicaragua we're supposed to send helicopter gunships to?' and Allen says, 'I forget.' How do you think the president would feel?"

"He probably wouldn't sleep too well," I said. "But just because Allen forgot about the $1,000 from a Japanese magazine doesn't mean he forgets everything."

"Oh, no. What about the charges that he forgot to list the clients he represented when he had a consulting business before he went into the government. Allen claims a White House lawyer told him he didn't have to list them. Then he was asked the name of the lawyer and he said, 'I forgot his name.'

"Nobody can be expected to remember every lawyer's name in the White House," I said.

"The National Security Adviser to the president is supposed to have everything on the tip of his tongue. That's why he has immediate access to the president. Let's say the president is planning on building an airfield in the Middle East. He doesn't know whether to put it in North Yemen or South Yemen."

"What difference does it make?"

"North Yemen happens to be our client, and South Yemen is being supplied by the Soviets," Trenchant said. "Suppose Allen has forgotten this and he tells the president 'South Yemen,' because he has it mixed up with South Korea. We might build an airfield for Soviet planes."

"That's ridiculous. I know for a fact that Allen has a large map on the wall of his office and our friends are marked in green and our enemies in red. He'd never get the two Yemens mixed up."

"Okay, let's take the worst case situation any National Security Adviser has to deal with. One day the president calls up Allen and says, 'Where is the button I have to push in case the balloon goes up?' Allen says, 'I think I gave it to my secretary on the day after Inauguration.' And the president says, 'I have to know where it is right now.' Allen starts looking all over the office for it, but can't find it. His secretary doesn't remember Allen giving it to her. Allen calls up his Japanese friends and asks them if, by mistake, he gave it to them when they interviewed Nancy Reagan. They say 'No, we gave you two Seiko watches, but you didn't give us a button in return.'"

"It could never happen," I told Trenchant.

"Let me continue. The only other person who knows where the button is is Secretary of State Al Haig. Allen calls up Haig and asks where he kept the button when he worked in the White House. But Haig is suspicious, because he thinks this is just another ploy in the guerrilla war the White House is waging against him. So he gives Allen a lot of doubletalk, which Haig is very good at.

"So you're saying the president should not take back Allen even if he's cleared on all the charges?" I said.

"I'm not saying he should be fired, but he should be put in some non-sensitive job like the Office of Management and Budget, where if you forget something it doesn't hurt anybody."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, Dec. 10, the 344th day of 1981. There are 21 days remaining in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Dec. 10, 1936, Britain's King Edward VIII abdicated, assuming the title of Duke of Windsor.

On this date:

In 1898, the Treaty of Paris was signed, ending the Spanish-American War.

In 1967, the world's first commercial thermonuclear explosion took place in New Mexico with its goal to aid in the recovery of natural gas from underground deposits.

And in 1968, U.S. and North Vietnamese negotiators in Paris failed to break a deadlock on conditions for starting the Vietnam peace talks.

Ten years ago: The Senate confirmed Nixon appointee William Rehnquist as Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

Five years ago: Two men accused of kidnapping Seagrams heir Samuel Bronfman II were acquitted of the kidnap charge but convicted of extortion.

One year ago: The U.S. and its NATO allies said they would respond with possible economic and diplomatic sanctions in the event of Soviet intervention in Poland.

Fish manure good substitute

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government scientist says fish manure could be a substitute for nitrogen applied by farmers on corn and other crops.

The Agriculture Department says the research so far has involved trout farming in Idaho. But the findings raise possibilities for catfish farming, which is a major enterprise in parts of the South.

About 95 percent of all rainbow trout served in U.S. restaurants comes from trout farmers in south-central Idaho. Last year, they produced more than 26 million pounds of trout.

In a new issue of Agricultural Research issued Wednesday, officials described experiments conducted by J. Hamilton Smith, a soil scientist in the department's Agricultural Research Service.

"Trout are an excellent food source," the report said. "Besides being nutritious, they are efficient, producing one pound of food for every two pounds of feed consumed, more efficient than chickens."

Unfortunately, it added, a third of their feed also results in waste. Last year, Idaho trout farms produced about 17 million pounds of fish manure.

"Traditionally, fish manure has rarely if ever been used," the report said. "After a period of accumulation, it has been swept from the bottoms of raceways and flushed downstream."

Smith said the Snake River Conservation Center, Kimberly, Idaho, had been studying the use of waste water from sugarbeet and potato processing plants when he learned of the trout farmers' problem and decided to test trout manure as a fertilizer.

A commercial fishery provided the fertilizer by pumping the trout manure into a settling pond, where it allowed the waste to dry.

Enough was obtained to provide fertilizer rates of 175, 450 and 700 pounds of nitrogen per acre on plots of corn. After the first year of tests.

Smith estimated that it will take "roughly two to three pounds of fish manure nitrogen to equal the results of one pound of nitrogen in commercial fertilizers."

The report said Smith plans to continue the tests for at least two more years to determine how much useable nitrogen can be expected from fish manure and how much manure will be needed for such crops as corn and sugarbeets.

Senate OK of four-year farm package forecast

By MARLENE CIMONS
The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — After weeks of disagreements among Senate-House conferees, the Senate is expected to approve an $11.04 billion four-year compromise farm bill today or Friday. The measure is supported by the Reagan administration, but may encounter some resistance in the House.

The conference report approved Tuesday provides for legislation pared down from the $16.6 billion House version — which the administration had said was too high — and closer to the $10.6 billion version approved by the Senate. Administration officials had indicated they would oppose any measure that exceeded the Senate bill by more than $500 million.

"We strongly support the conference report and are actively working for its final passage," Randy Russell, assistant to Secretry of Agriculture John R. Block, said Wednesday. "This bill is acceptable from our standpoint and from the standpoint of the White House."

It may be less acceptable, however, to the Democratic-controlled House.

Some House members are said to be concerned that the legislation will result in higher consumer prices for peanuts and sugar. Others, including Democratic Whip Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., are unhappy at what they consider inadequate support and target-price levels for dairy and grain producers. Foley, a former House Agriculture Committee chairman, refused to sign the conference report. He is not, however, expected to work against passage of the bill.

"He has spent his whole life in Congress supporting agriculture legislation," said a House Agriculture Committee aide who asked not to be identified. "He is not likely to undermine an agriculture bill now. But it is unclear whether he will vote for it.

"There is nothing in this bill to encourage urban or suburban members to vote for it," the staff member said. "The only people with an interest in passing this conference report are those who come from agricultural areas — and the administration. The administration will have to marshal a majority of Republicans to support it. And Republicans, over the years, have opposed farm programs. It should be very interesting."

Adoption of the conference report followed a month of often-deadlocked negotiations. Conferees had tentatively agreed to an $11.3 billion package before Thanksgiving, but the administration insisted that it be trimmed.

"Secretary Block said he couldn't accept that figure," said John Cozart, a spokesman for the Senate Agriculture Committee. "He felt it would cost too much in the later years of the bill."

Among the areas most in contention were support programs for dairy, wheat and feed grains, sugar, wool and peanuts. The administration had previously agreed not to oppose a sugar program, in exchange for congressional support for its budget proposals. The House version of the bill did not have a sugar provision, but House conferees adopted a modified version of the Senate sugar provision.

The conference report provides for target prices slightly higher than those in the Senate bill for wheat, corn, barley, sorghum, cotton and rice. Target prices are set at the beginning of a crop year. Farmers who participate in government set-aside programs or other acreage-reduction programs are guaranteed target-price payments. If the national market price falls below the target price, farmers are paid the difference.

Most wheat planted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Planting of the winter wheat crop is "virtually finished" except for some acreage in the South and in California, according to the latest government assessment.

The Joint Agricultural Weather Facility — operated by the departments of Agricuture and Commerce — said Tuesday that rains in the week of Nov. 30-Dec. 6 helped but that some areas of the Southeast need more moisture.

Kansas wheat was in "good to excellent" condition, although there were scattered reports of leaf rust, the report said.

In the major cotton states, about 77 percent of the crop was harvested by Dec. 6, compared to 83 percent at this time last year, the report said.

"Unseasonably mild weather continued across the northern states and over the Great Plains, with normal to slightly below-normal temperatures dominant in the East and West," it said.

Governors limited in federal policy role

BY ROBERT THOMPSON
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — Despite the fire and brimstone of their rhetoric, the nation's governors are "tragically irrelevant" when it comes to determining federal policy that affects the states, says Richard Lamm, who has guided burgeoning Colorado since 1975.

His comment is both caustic and correct.

Although the 50 governors may constitute the most effective and able body of political leadership in the nation, the governors are largely ignored by the White House and Congress on tax and spending matters that heavily impact their states.

THEU ARE INVITED to the White House to meet with presidents and presidential aides. They have the privilege of testifying before congressional committees. They constantly plead the cause of the states.

But, as Lamm noted, the National Governors' Association tends to be "irrelevant and toothless" in shaping programs. He made his comment to a group of reporters a few days ago as he and other governors prepared to talk with President Reagan's chief lieutenants about cutbacks in federal funds for the states.

The remark was prompted by the assertion of Vermont's Richard Snelling, chairman of the National Governors' Association, that Reaganomics is leading toward "an economic Bay of Pigs."

Although Lamm, a 46-year-old mainstream Democrat, does not agree totally with the assessment of Snelling, a conservative Republican, he understands and sypathizes with the troubles faced in older states which have not enjoyed a boom similar to Colorado's.

He also has hope that the governors will be able to resurrect the power they once wielded in American politics. "The day of the governor has come and gone — and is coming back again," said Lamm.

But, for the moment, the governors are feeling the pain and are not quite certain how to alleviate it. The problem, as Lamm sees it, is that Reagan,as president, is doing what Reagan did as governor: shifting responsibilities back to the local level without providing the funds to support those responsibilties.

AT A CONFERENCE IN New Orleans two weeks ago, Republican governors gallantly and loyally joined in a resolution supporting Reagan's policies. But, individually and privately, they bemoaned what his New Federalism is doing to them.

The goal of the New Federalism, as defined by Reagan, was to establish a strong partnership between the federal government and the state governents. That objective was to be accomplished by sending money back to the states in block grants unfettered by oppressive regulations.

But severe budget cuts have reduced the flow of money from Washington to the state capitals. The new federalism has only compounded problems already faced by the governors. Funds for an assortment of state and local activities have been reduced. High interest rates and declining revenues make it difficult for states to borrow. The nation's infrastructure of roads, bridges, sewers and water projects is imperiled by lack of federal funds. Urban decay seems destined to increase rather than diminish.

Most governors — Democrats and Republicans alike — favor some cutback in federal spending and seek greater freedom in the way federal money is used at the local level. But they also need the resources to provide the services that Americans have come to expect of state government.

IRONICALLY, THE NEGATIVE impact of Reagan's new federalism is being felt in northern, midwestern and western states which are governed predominately by able Republicans — such as William Milliken of Michigan, James Rhodes of Ohio, Richard Thornburgh of Pennsylvania, Victor Atiyeh of Oregon, John Spellman of Washington, James Thompson of Illinois, Al Quie of Minnesota and, of course, Snelling of Vermont.

They — along with such Democratic governors as Lamm, Bruce Babbit of Arizona, Jerry Brown of California, Robert Graham of Florida, James Hunt of North Carolina, Scott Matheson of Utah, George Busbee of Georgia and Jay Rockefeller of West Virginia — are an impressive lot.

IF YOU ARE a married woman — a housewife, mother or corporate executive — but still yearn to be a beauty queen, your opportunity may be at hand.

Mrs. America, the only major pageant that doesn't discriminate against our country's 51 million married women, is now accepting applications for its state pageants, the first hurdle en route to qualifying for the 1982 Mrs. America finals to be televised nationally from the Las Vegas Hilton on May 7.

In order to participate in the sixth annual event, candidates must be United States citizens, a minimum of 18 years old and must be married as of the date of entry. Contestants are judged on beauty, poise and personality, and all finalists compete in swimsuits and evening gown.

The winner will receive a new automobile, a complete wardrobe of fashions and jewelry and a year of travel, personal appearances and cash prizes.

Applications for the 1982 competition are available at over 1,200 hair and beauty salons operated by Glemby International throughout the country. For more information on state pageants and the Mrs. America program, contact Mrs. America Pageant Headquarters, Two Thousand One Wilshire Blvd., Santa Monica, Calif. 90403.

Last year, over 10,000 married women applied to the Mrs. America Pageant. The 50 finalists ranged in age from 22 to 46 (the average was 30.2), were married an average of 8.3 years, and had an average of 1.8 children...

Here's the answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — Several years ago I put up a wooden fence on one side of our house. It came out fine, but I remember the difficulty I had with getting the fence posts exactly the right height. Someone told me to stretch string across the tops of each set of two posts and then to use a level to be sure the string was absolutely straight. This was easier said than done because the string was inclined to sag when a level was held on it. Is there some way to avoid that trouble this time, since I am about to erect a similar fence on the other side of the house?

A. — Using a level was the right idea, but apparently you used a regular level when you should have used what is called a line level. A line level is a type made specifically for hanging on a string or cord stretched between two points. However, you will still get a sag in the line if you don't tie it very tightly.

Q. — We bought a house several months ago. It is very well constructed, even having real plaster walls, which we insisted on before it was built. To our dismay, two of the walls have cracks in them. The builder says this is due to the settling of the house and that he will fix them when he is sure the settling has stopped. Is he misleading me?

A. — No. He is right. Cracks in walls sometimes are due to settling. If the cracks are repaired too soon, new ones may appear in a short time. The usual procedure to determine when the settling has ended is to place small marks at the ends of the cracks. Keep an eye on the cracks and see whether they get longer and go past the marks. If they do, hold up the repairs a while. If there is no movement of the cracks for about 30 days, the chances are the settling is over, although there is no guarantee they will not occur again some time in the future.

Grits and jalapenos? Those are two of the ingredients that go into Mitchell Morris's "Grits Casserole".

Mitch, who is Assistant Controller at Clayco, Inc. says "I started cooking in college because I hated cafeteria food...I learned how to cook chicken enchiladas in a crock pot."

Mitch says he began cooking more after he and his wife, Doreen, married because he got home from work more than an hour before she did. "It was a matter of being hungry!...And another thing was we got about four cookbooks when we got married."

Mitch, his wife Doreen and their daughter, Skye, moved to Midland from Hobbs, N.M., this summer. They attend Crestview Baptist Church and are members of the Midland YMCA.

GRITS CASSEROLE

1 cup grits
4 cups water
1 teaspoon salt

Boil grits in water until thick, about 10 minutes. Add the following to the hot grits:

1 stick butter
1 16-oz. jar of jalapeno cheese
2 eggs with enough milk to make 1 cup

Bake in greased 9x13-inch cake pan for 50 minutes at 300 degrees F. uncovered. Sprinkle with grated cheese and bake an additional 10 minutes.

Holiday baking: Mini-fruitcakes

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

DEAR CECILY: My grandchildren all like home cooking. Along with the holiday cookies I always bake at this time of year, I'd like to try making some fruitcakes in small muffin pans. Have you a recipe to pass along? — GRANDMA.

DEAR GRANDMA: A recipe for fruitcakes baked in small muffin pans just came across my desk and it may appeal to you. Because nowadays so many cooks like to use various grains along with white flour in baking, this recipe was updated to include nutritious oats. — C.B.

MINI-FRUITCAKES

1 cup water
1 cup quick-cooking oats
1 and 1-3rd cups all- purpose flour
¾ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon allspice
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ cup firmly packed dark brown sugar
4-ounce carton diced mixed candied fruit
¾ cup ready-to-use mincemeat
¾ cup coarsely chopped walnuts
2 large eggs
1-3rd cup vegetable oil
2 teaspoons vanilla
Glaze, if desired: 3 tablespoons apple jelly

Thoroughly grease or insert paper baking cups into 18 muffin-pan cups (each 2½ by 1 inch).

In a small saucepan bring the water just to the boil; remove from heat and stir in the oats. Cover and let stand 20 minutes.

On wax paper thoroughly stir together the flour, baking soda, salt, allspice and cinnamon; stir in the brown sugar.

In a large bowl stir together the candied fruit, mincemeat and nuts; add the flour mixture, stirring well.

In a medium bowl beat the eggs until foamy; stir in the oats, oil and vanilla; add to the fruit mixture, mixing just until dry ingredients are moistened. Turn batter, by scant ¼-cupfuls, into prepared muffin-pan cups. Bake in a preheated 300-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — about 50 minutes. Cool 10 minutes; remove from pans. If you want to glaze the fruitcakes, melt the apple jelly and spread over their tops.

Makes 18.

Canadians are better insured

Total life insurance in force in Canada at the start of 1981 was about $431.2 billion, up 13 percent in a year. Canadians' life insurance equaled 168 percent of their national income, compared with 151 percent in the United States.

DEAR ABBY

Nagging wife becomes name-dropping widow

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Thanks a lot for telling my mother-in-law that she is entitled to use her dead husband's name forever. She refused to sleep with this man for the last 20 years of his life, then she nagged him to death. I never heard her call him anything but "that s.o.b." the whole time she lived with him. And now that he is gone, she insists on being called "Mrs. John Smith."

My husband is John Smith Jr., and his mother still goes by Mrs. John Smith. I wish she would use her given name so people wouldn't get us mixed up, because I am Mrs. John Smith, too.

Abby, why don't you tell these widows to get on with their own lives and quit hanging on to the past? They just sit around and suck up the Social Security money and wait to die. What a waste! — NO NAMES OR TOWN, PLEASE

DEAR NO: Regardless of your personal feelings about your mother-in-law, the fact is, a woman is entitled to use her late husband's name as long as she lives — unless she marries again.

DEAR ABBY: This is to thank you for your Thanksgiving Day column. It gave me the strength to make it through another day.

I am in the Army, stationed in South Korea, and I find it hard to be thankful for anything while I am unwillingly separated from my dear wife and two children.

I am under constant pressure from my buddies to go out with the local "girls," and I'm criticized because I won't. I am in a race with myself to see if I end up in a hospital from too much alcohol or from a nervous breakdown.

I volunteered to work today to keep my mind off the fact that it's a holiday. After reading you today, I realized that as homesick and blue as I am, lots of people have it worse. Thank you. — THANKSGIVING IN KOREA

DEAR THANKSGIVING: Hang in there. Your letter made my day. If you'll permit me a little unsolicited advice: Stay away from the bottle. One drink is too many and a hundred isn't enough. Write home every day, keep busy, stay out of trouble and, yes, pray. And before you know it, you'll be home with your family. God love you.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend recently bought a new car. It's really beautiful and he keeps it in perfect condition. The problem is that he is afraid to park it anywhere for fear it will be stolen.

When we go out together, he drives my car if we have to park it somewhere. When we use his car, I have to sit in it while he does his errands. Abby, this doesn't make any sense to me. Why have a nice car if you can't take it anywhere? No neighborhood is safe. Cars are stolen in broad daylight — even out of parking lots! He said that at his place of work three of his co-workers have had their cars stolen in the last two weeks!

What is a person supposed to do nowadays when nothing is safe from thieves? Don't suggest any burglar alarms — a real pro knows how to deactivate most of them. — FED UP

DEAR FED: Has your boyfriend considered getting a Doberman pinscher or a German shepherd? The dog need not be vicious. All it has to do is sit in the car.

DEAR ABBY: In response to "Sleepy-Time Gal," who discovered on her honeymoon that her 27-year-old, 6-foot husband was afraid of the dark, I learned the hard way to have a healthy fear of the dark.

My mother-in-law, visiting my home, fell down the stairs and broke her leg while trying to find the bathroom in the dark. My best friend stubbed her big toe on a chair leg and broke it (her big toe) on the same errand in her own home in the dark. My neighbor caught her foot in the blanket kicked off the bed by her husband and broke her collarbone.

There is a big difference between a child's fear of darkness and an adult's respect for the fact that people don't have cat's eyes.

We have a small night-light in every room and hallway of our home. It's good insurance against accidents. — MRS. G.M.

DEAR MRS. M.: Thanks for an illuminating suggestion. A reader from Ormond Beach, Fla., offers yet another theory on the fear of darkness:

DEAR ABBY: Tell "Sleepy-Time Gal" her hubby is probably not afraid of the dark. He just wants the bathroom light on to know where it is because he can't remember whose bedroom he is in. If he is 6 feet, very sweet and enjoys cuddling, he has probably been in quite a few. — A.M. MOORE

Book aimed at teaching kids to cook

By SUSAN OKULA
Associated Press Writer

AVON, Conn. (AP) — When Strom Scherie's 9-year-old daughter, Valerie, wanted to learn to cook two years ago, her mother visited a few book stores to find a cookbook for children.

She didn't find much, and what she found she didn't like. Some books used too much honey, which she says has no nutritional value. Others called for commercially produced mixes, and she didn't like that either.

"I couldn't find anything for her, and I just felt that was really a pity," said Miss Scherie, whose married name is Scherie Del Moral.

Now, she has published her first book, "Stuffin' Muffin: Muffin Pan Cooking For Kids." It contains about 30 basic recipes (and dozens of variations) with names like Egg N' Apple Anytime and Fresh Mushroom in a Toast Basket.

The recipes, all created by Miss Scherie, contain no sugar, salt, honey or artificial ingredients. The 42-year-old Miami native believes the book will encourage kids to eat right and teach them good nutrition.

All the book's recipes are created in a muffin pan, although not all of the recipes are for muffins.

That idea, too, sprang from Valerie. Miss Scherie says her daughter once used the pans for "everything but baking." That included banging on them, making mud pies in them and once floating baby toads down a stream in them.

"But then one day she came to me with this deal that if I agreed to teach her to cook, let her cook, I wouldn't have to look for my muffin pans again, she said in a recent interview.

So mother and daughter first made muffins in the muffin pans. Then Valerie wondered why they couldn't make other things. And so came the beginnings of such recipes as Plain 'N Fancy Meat Loaf and Perfect Pears L'Orange.

Miss Scherie says cooking in a muffin pan has many advantages for kids. A muffin pan is easy for kids to handle. It prevents overeating because the portions are recognizable. The servings are attractive, so kids learn the art of food presentation. Also, muffin-sized portions are easy to freeze.

Try Potato Puffs with hamburgers

POTATO PUFFS

We've never tasted better.
1¼ pounds potatoes (3 to 4 medium)
2 tablespoons butter, at room temperature
4 large eggs, separated
¼ cup commercial sour cream
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon sugar
Nutmeg to taste
Vegetable shortening for deep frying

In a saucepan boil potatoes in their skins until tender. Drain; return potatoes to saucepan and shake over low heat to dry; remove skins and discard. Rice potatoes into a medium mixing bowl and with a spoon beat in the butter, egg yolks, sour cream, salt, sugar and nutmeg. Beat egg whites until stiff and fold in. Drop by heaping tablespoonfuls, without crowding, into shortening heated to 350 degrees; fry, turning once, until puffed and golden brown. Drain on brown paper and keep hot in a warm oven until all puffs are fried. Serve at once. Makes 21 — 4 or 5 servings.

Turn everyday hamburger into an exotic feast with Teriyaki Burgers

The hamburger, that famous, money-saving mainstay of the American diet, has appeared on more tables, in more forms, than almost any other dish. And now this economical plain-meat pattie becomes an exotic feast with Teriyaki Burgers.

Cooked in a microwave oven on a browning grill, Teriyaki Burgers transforms the all-American hamburger into an Oriental delight. The burger begins with a mixture of ground beef, green pepper, exotic spices and a secret ingredient — quick or old fashioned oats. The wholegrain oats, another money-wise kitchen maintstay, help keep the natural juices in during the cooking and provide nutrition of seven B vitamins, vitamin E and nine minerals.

Serve with the special Sweet 'N Sour Sauce and include other complimentary foods like potato or macaroni salad and a tall glass of iced tea. Every member of your family will enjoy this exotic way to serve hamburgers. Try Teriyaki Burgers real soon!

TERIYAKI BURGERS
Sweet 'N Sour Sauce

One 8-oz. can pineapple slices
1 tbsp. cornstarch
¼ cup sugar
¼ cup vinegar
2 tblsp. soy sauce
2 tblsp. catsup

Burgers
½ cup chopped green pepper
1 egg
2 tblsp. soy sauce
2 tblsp. catsup
½ tsp. garlic powder
¼ tsp. ginger
1/8 tsp. pepper
6 thin tomato slices
12 thin green pepper strips
1-1½ pounds ground beef
¾ cup quick or old fashioned oats, uncooked

For Sweet N' Sour Sauce, drain pineapple, reserving ¼ cup liquid. Combine liquid and cornstarch in 2-cup glass measure; stir in sugar, vinegar, soy sauce and catsup. Cook at HIGH about 3 minutes or until thickened, stirring after each minute of cooking.

For Burgers, preheat microwave oven browning grill at HIGH for 8 minutes. Mix together all ingredients except tomato and green pepper strips. Shape to form six 3½-inch patties; place on preheated grill. Cook at HIGH 3 to 4 minutes on each side. Top each burger with 1 tomato slice, ½ pineapple slice, 2 green pepper strips and about 1 tblsp. Sweet N' Sour Sauce. Continue cooking at HIGH 2 to 3 minutes. Serve with any remaining Sweet N' Sour Sauce. Makes 6 servings.

Soup Lorraine is as hearty and flavorful as its name suggests. This fish and broccoli soup can be a gourmet appetizer or elegant meal. Fish is more expensive than it used to be, but rice, at just three cents per half-cup serving makes it affordable as well as appetizing.

Soup Lorraine: A delicious whole meal soup

Each of the many regions of France has its own special foods. Some areas have gained more renown than others, but each is worthy of note. Lorraine is known for the high quality of cuisine and the heartiness of the dishes.

Perhaps best known is Quiche Lorraine, that mouth-watering creation of eggs, cream and lean bacon that is baked in a flaky crust. They are famous for soup, too.

More and more, we are appreciating soup as a whole meal. And Soup Lorraine is one you won't want to miss. It is creamy and rich in the style of Lorraine and tastes better than you can imagine. Featured are fish fillets and chopped broccoli in a shrimp and cream base. A dash of sherry is the final touch. It turns into a complete meal with the addition of an attractive scoop of rice on top. Rice adds a graceful note that no other carbohydrate could.

Geographically, Lorraine is surrounded by the French wine-growing areas of Champagne and Alsace and Germany's Mosel region. So this soup could be served with wine...sherry or any white wine would be appropriate.

SOUP LORRAINE

1 can (10¾ oz.) condensed cream of shrimp soup
1 soup can water
2 chicken bouillon cubes
1 package (10 oz.) frozen chopped broccoli
½ tsp. salt
½ tsp. seasoned pepper
1 pound white fish fillets, cut in 1½-inch pieces
1 cup Half-and-Half (cream and milk)
¼ cup dry sherry
3 cups hot cooked rice

Combine soup, water and bouillon cubes; heat to boiling. Add broccoli, seasonings and fish. Reduce the heat, cover, and simmer 10 minutes or until fish flakes easily with a fork. Stir ½ cup of soup into Half-and-Half and return all to soup. Add sherry. Heat but do not boil. Serve in soup bowls and top with mounds of fluffy rice. Makes 6 cups or 6 servings.

Each serving provides: 252 calories, 2 meat exchanges, 1 bread exchange, 1½ fat exchange, ½ vegetable exchange, some milk.

Wassail: The traditional holiday drink

Some like it hot. Some like it cold. But traditionally, Wassail is served hot. In early England, Wassail was a toast made to one's health or for good luck when offering a cup of wine. It was served most often at festive occasions, particularly Christmas.

Over time, variations have evolved. The earliest version contained either wine or ale and was flavored with spices. Modern recipes vary considerably, but they are generally a combination of fruit juices subtly flavored with cinnamon sticks and whole cloves.

While it is by no means only for Christmas, Wassail is still considered by many to be especially for the holidays. Serve it after trimming the tree, before Christmas Eve church services, or for any of the many activities planned during the Christmas holidays.

This tart and savory version features apple, pineapple and orange juice frozen concentrates along with frozen lemon juice from concentrate. It is a simple recipe that can be ready to serve in about 15 minutes.

For the perfect accompaniment, have on hand a batch of Coffee Cookie Squares. Soft and tender, these cookies just might become a family favorite year round. They, too, are quick to make and are an excellent way to use the last of the breakfast coffee.

WASSAIL

1 can (12 oz.) frozen concentrated apple juice, reconstituted
1 can (6 oz.) frozen concentrated pineapple juice, reconstituted
1 bottle (7½ oz.) 100 percent pure lemon juice from concentrate 1½ cups reconstituted orange juice
1 stick whole cinnamon
1 tsp. whole cloves
¾ cup sugar or honey to taste

Combine ingredients and bring to a simmer. Strain and serve hot. Makes 32 servings (about ½ cup each).

COFFEE COOKIE SQUARES

½ cup butter or margarine softened
1 cup brown sugar
1 egg, slightly beaten
1½ cups all-purpose flour
½ tsp. baking powder
½ tsp. baking soda
½ tsp. ground cinnamon
¼ tsp. salt
½ cup hot brewed coffee
½ cup raisins or chopped nuts

Cream butter and sugar until light and fluffy. Beat in eggs. Add sifted dry ingredients alternately with coffee, beating after each addition until smooth. Add raisins or nuts and spread in greased 5-inch x 10-inch 1-inch pan. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 15 to 20 minutes. While still hot, spread with glaze. Cool, cut into squares.

GLAZE

Mix until smooth 1 cup confectioner's sugar, 1 tsp. softened butter and 3 tblsp. brewed coffee to make a rather thin mixture.

Thank goodness for delicious Coconut Squares

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Judging from the number of shops in New York City selling nothing but cookies, there's a cookie craze going on in this land. In the 1896 first edition of Fannie Farmer's cookbook there were only about a dozen recipes for them. But gradually their number grew. When, in 1931, Irma Rombauer wrote her first edition of "The Joy of Cooking," she included dozens of cookie recipes.

By now, on my own shelves, there are at least twenty-four cookbooks devoted to nothing but these specialties. And interestingly enough, each book includes recipes for cookies made with coconut.

Fannie Farmer had her rolled Coconut Creams. Mrs. Rombauer her Coconut Drop Cakes. What I have to offer is a brand new recipe for Coconut Squares. Between this bar cookie's layer of a pastry-like base and a coconut meringue you spread raspberry preserves or ginger marmalade. My preference is for the latter, but some of my tasters prefer the preserves. Take your choice. If you bake these squares for the holidays, coconut fanciers are bound to give thanks for them.

COCONUT SQUARES

1¼ cups all-purpose flour
½ cup butter
3 tablespoons (about) cold water
2 large eggs
½ cup sugar
7-ounce package or can flaked coconut
1-3rd cup raspberry preserves or ginger marmalade

In a medium bowl with a pastry blender cut the butter into the flour until the butter is the size of large peas. Sprinkle with a small amount of the water at a time, mixing lightly until all particles are moistened and cling together when pressed into a ball. Press into an ungreased 9 by 9 by 1¾-inch pan. Bake in a preheated 425-degree oven until lightly browned — 20 minutes. Turn oven control to 375 degrees.

Meanwhile beat the eggs until thickened and lemon color; gradually beat in the sugar and continue beating until thick and ivory color. Fold in coconut.

Spread preserves over the baked pastry, leaving a ¼-inch space around the edges. Carefully spread coconut mixture over preserves. Bake in the 375-degree oven until golden — 25 minutes. Cool on a wire rack and cut into squares.

Entertain with All Occasion Punch

The active lifestyles of today's Americans have forced more and more people to look for easy and quick methods of meal planning and preparation. The same is true in party planning and entertaining.

Increasing numbers of busy customers, who are hard-pressed to find the time to plan and prepare for social events, seek quick and simple recipes that are both delicious to eat and attractive to serve at any time — whether bridal shower, or birthday party or open house.

One such recipe is All Occasion Punch, a basic not-too-sweet punch that can be made by simply mixing and stirring. It starts with a chilled five-fruit beverage that is further flavored by freshly-brewed orange and spice flavored tea. Available in the convenient Pure-Pak carton, the five-fruit beverage is a unique blend of orange, grapefruit, tangerine, lemon and lime juices. Reconstituted frozen pineapple juice from concentrate adds a slightly tropical note and sparkling mineral water gives it a light, bubbly sensation.

A pleasant accompaniment for the punch is Lively Angel Food Cake. This recipe is a breeze to make. Its base is a white angel food cake mix that calls for the five-fruit beverage instead of water and a light glaze also made with the five-fruit beverage giving it a delightful citrus flavor that is a natural complement to the punch.

ALL OCCASION PUNCH

2 cups boiling water
4 single-serve orange and spice flavored tea bags
1 cup granulated sugar
1 carton (64 oz.) five-fruit beverage
1½ cups reconstituted frozen concentrated pineapple juice, chilled
1 bottle (23 oz.) sparkling mineral water, chilled

Pour boiling water over tea; cover and let stand 5 minutes. Remove tea bags; add sugar and stir until sugar dissolves. Stir in five-fruit beverage and pineapple juice. Chill until serving time. To serve, pour over ice ring or block of ice in punch bowl. Just before serving, add the mineral water.

Makes 30 servings (about ½ cup each).

LIVELY ANGEL FOOD CAKE

1 carton (16. oz.) white angel food cake mix
1⅓ cups five-fruit beverage

Citrus Glaze

⅓ cup butter or margarine
2 cups confectioner's sugar
2 to 4 tblsp. five-fruit beverage

Prepare cake mix according to package directions, except substitute the five-fruit beverage for the water. Bake and cool as directed. Remove from pan and drizzle with the glaze.

Glaze: Melt butter or margarine in small saucepan. Remove from heat and stir in confectioner's sugar. Add the five-fruit beverage, one tblsp. at a time, until glaze is of desired consistency.

Lemon Mounds are thrifty and tasty

LEMON MOUNDS

We've used thrifty cereal rather than nuts to give these cookies a crunchy exterior.

½ cup butter, at room temperature
3-ounce package cream cheese, at room temperature
½ cup sugar
Grated rind of 1 lemon (about 1 teaspoon)
1 cup fork-stirred all-purpose flour
½ cup (about) cornflake crumbs (medium-fine)

In a medium bowl cream the butter, cream cheese, sugar and lemon rind. Gradually stir in the flour until blended. Chill, covered, until firm enough to handle. Using a level tablespoon for each, roll into balls; roll in cornflake crumbs. Place, 2 inches apart, on ungreased cookie sheets. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until golden — 15 minutes. With a metal spatula, remove to wire rack to cool completely. Store in a tightly covered container between sheets of plastic or wax paper. Makes 26.

Mushroom dishes are always festive and elegant. The wild rice ring is filled with mushrooms and artichoke hearts in a delicate sauce.

Impressive mushrooms — they're always special

Often when people are asked for advice on what to serve that's impressive, they'll say "Make something with mushrooms...they're always special." It's true, there's something about mushrooms that give people the idea you've gone to a lot of fuss. Actually, all you've done is rinsed the mushrooms in cool water, patted them dry with paper towels and they're ready to use.

In the elegant recipe below mushrooms are combined with artichoke hearts in a wild rice ring. You can make the mushroom and artichoke "filling" ahead, if you like, and reheat it when you're ready to serve the rice ring. The vegetables are in a delicate sauce flavored with chicken broth and lemon and given a nice rosy color with paprika.

MUSHROOM AND ARTICHOKES IN WILD RICE RING

12 ounces fresh mushrooms
4 tblsp. butter or margarine, divided
1 can (8½ oz.) whole artichoke hearts
3 tblsp. flour
1 cup chicken broth
½ cup water
1 tsp. paprika
½ tsp. lemon peel
Pinch ground black pepper
1 tsp. lemon juice

Rinse, pat dry and cut mushrooms in halves (makes about 4 cups). In a large skillet melt 2 tblsp. of the butter. Add mushrooms; saute until golden, about 5 minutes. Remove with a slotted spoon and set aside. Drain artichokes, reserving ¾ cup of the liquid; cut artichokes into quarters; set aside. Melt remaining 2 tblsp. butter; mix in flour, Stir constantly over low heat for one minute. Gradually stir in chicken broth, water and liquid drained from artichokes. Cook and stir until thickened, about 3 minutes. Mix in paprika, lemon peel, black pepper, lemon juice and reserved artichokes and mushrooms. Cook and stir until vegetables are hot, about 2 minutes. Spoon mixture into Wild Rice Ring. Yield: About 3½ cups.

WILD RICE RING

6 chicken bouillon cubes
6½ cups boiling water
⅓ cup wild rice (uncooked)
1⅓ cups regular cooking rice (uncooked)
½ cup butter or margarine, melted

Grease a 5-cup ring mold. In a medium sauce pot dissolve bouillon cubes in boiling water. Add wild rice; simmer, covered, for 25 minutes. Add rice; simmer, until rice is tender, about 20 minutes, stirring occasionally; drain if necessary. Mix in butter. Spoon into prepared ring mold; press down with back of spoon. Set aside for 2 minutes. Invert onto serving platter. Yield: 6 to 8 portions.

DILLED MUSHROOMS A LA DIJON

1½ pounds fresh mushrooms
4 tblsp. butter or margarine, divided
3 tblsp. flour
1 cup chicken broth
1 cup milk
3 tblsp. chopped fresh dill
5 tsp. Dijon mustard
1/8 tsp. sugar

Rinse, pat dry and slice mushrooms (makes about 8 cups). In a large skillet melt 2 tblsp. of the butter. Add mushrooms; saute until golden, about 5 minutes. Remove with a slotted spoon and set aside. Melt remaining 2 tblsp. butter; mix in flour. Stir constantly over low heat for one minute. Gradually stir in chicken broth and milk. Cook and stir until thickened, about 3 minutes. Mix in dill, mustard, sugar and reserved mushrooms. Cook and stir until mushrooms are hot and flavors are blended, about 2 minutes. Yield: 6 to 8 portions.

Selecting the right wine to go with holiday meals

By NATHAN CHROMAN
Special to The Los Angeles Times

One of the virtues of turkey is that it does not mind being mated with either red or white wine. Truly sweet wines may not do, but those slightly sweet bottles surely will be accepted so that all palates, young and old, should be pleased.

For many, the holiday is that happy and rare opportunity to trot out the best mature bottles from the family wine cellar.

But what about turkey lovers whose financial state may confine them to that simple under-$5 bottle available in most wine shops and markets throughout the country.

On that note, I called my nearby friendly wine shopkeeper for advice. Price and general distribution were our prime considerations, rather than concentration on expensive French or California bottles that leave the frustrated shopper broke and aggravated at the futility of not finding the perfect boutique bottle.

Another consideration was to select a variety of wines calculated to satisfy many tastes. In most homes, diners from three generations, with different tastes, are likely to challenge the shopping and diplomacy of even the most skillful and knowledgeable of hosts. Because our selection is price-oriented, two or three selections may be affordable so as to keep family peace.

An excellent starting wine is Trefethen White Riesling 1980 (Napa Valley); an aromatic, fruity wine in a pleasant generous style. It has a nice in-depth finish that should make it with a variety of Thanksgiving meal starters.

A good bet at $3.50 is Beaulieu Vineyard's Chablis 1979. Full flavored and not overdone with fruitiness, the wine has good viscosity and a dry finish that should do reasonably well with turkey. It has 6 percent Chardonnay grapes.

Gallo's Gewurztraminer at about $3.75 (non-vintage) may not please a Gewurz freak but it has adequate Gewurz character in a style that should make it good with turkey.

Sweeter is Charles Krug's Chenin Blanc (non-vintage, about $5.50), perhaps the forerunner of all California Chenin Blancs.

Le Fleuron, Phelps 1979, at about $4.75 is indeed a good buy. It is well made, aromatic with an explosive Gewurzmuscat nose, very clean and drinks most generously.

A notable selection is Chateau St. Jean, Vin Blanc 1980, at about $4.50. It contains 28 percent Gewurztraminer and 28 percent White Riesling with the Gewurz showing trough more in the flavor. Slightly sweet, it is pleasant, clean, full, round and well made.

Rose lovers should look no farther than Caymus, 1979, Estate Bottled Oeil de Perdrix (eye of the partridge), which has an interesting crisp, dry and tart finish, perhaps showing a little astringency. The tab for this one is about $4.75.

Red wine fanciers will find it easy to pick up a last-minute bottle of Monterey Vineyard's Classic Red 1980. At about $4.19 it is a sensible buy with plenty of flavor.

Zinfandel also should be considered, especially Ridge's 1979 (about $6) from the +usi Vineyard of San Luis Obispo, Calif. It has a deep color and an intense raspberry Zinfandel nose in a softer, spicy yet elegant style that is still new to Ridge.

Best red bet of all is the newly released Louis Martini Vineyard Cabernet Sauvignon, 1978. A super-buy at about $5.30; this is a good young varietal that will benefit from age but actually drinks extremely well now. It is softer, more complex than the others and should develop more.

I suppose I would be remiss without mentioning two decent but harder-to-find boutique buys. A good white wine turkey companion, Turner Vineyard's Sauvignon Blanc 1980, may be one of California's best white wine buys at about $3.75. The wine is outstanding with good viscosity and a barrel-fermented taste.

A red wine that makes sense is Diamond Oaks 1979 Napa Valley Red Table Wine at about $4 a bottle. The wine drinks well with ample flavor derived from a nice mix of Cabernet Sauvignon and Merlot.

A sip of sweet dessert wine should finish a trkey feast nicely. Two old standbys, Christian Brothers Chateau La Salle and Papagni's Moscato de Angelo, are uniquely qualified and inexpensive, at about $3.49 and $4.25, respectively.

THE ART OF LIVING

Ways to simplify your life

By MARTIN E. MARTY
(Special From Reader's Digest)

As pope from 1958 until 1963, Pope John XXIII was driven by one grand and simple idea: peace. He was a reconciler. Catholics had stood apart from Jews for 19 centuries; but when Jewish leaders visited John he did not quote intricate doctrines to overcome the distance. He simply acted out the Bible story of a man separated from his family. John reached out to his visitors and said: "I am Joseph your brother."

All truly deep people have at the core of their being the genius to be simple, or to know how to seek simplicity. The inner and outer aspects of their lives match; there is something nearly transparent about them. They may keep the secret of their existence private, but they are so uncluttered by any self-importance within and so unthreatened from without that they have what one philosopher called a certain "availability"; they are ready to be at the disposal of others.

Part of genius is simplicity, in the sense of oneness of life, of united force. We sense an affinity between Albert Einstein's admiration of child-like simplicity and his own powers of wonder and concentration. We sense a connection as well between simplicity and profundity.

Albert Schweitzer was musician, philosopher, historian, physician; but his profundity lay in one simple idea - the focus of his years of service in Africa: reverence for life.

Successful living is a journey toward simplicity and a triumph over confusion. Many use the term @spirituality@ to describe the route for this journey. Some cherish a spirituality of ecstasy. Like the prophets and mystics, they find their center in God. They reach a sudden enlightenment that reorders their lives.

Others experience a spirituality of agony, on the more barren landscape of loneliness and doubt. But it, too, can give clarity to life.

In all these lifestyle approaches, the common thread is the genius to be simple. Even when genius explains itself, there is force, there is unity, in an underlying simplicity of thought. Karl Barth, the Swiss theologian was one who saw clearly during the Nazi era. The world could not corrupt his faith.

Asked years later by an American audience to summarize the gist of his enormous books on theology, the learned man charmed them by quoting from a Sunday-school song: "Jesus loves me, this I know, for the Bible tells me so."

What assets await those who achieve this inner grace? French mystic Francois Fenelon wrote:

"When we are truly in this interior simplicity our whole appearance is franker, more natural. This true simplicity makes us conscious of a certain openness, gentleness, innocence, gaiety and serenity."

People who despair because their calendars are so crowded and their duties demanding have to put a premium on simplicity.

Some find a way by clearing a special room and a certain hour in which they can strip away what really matters in their lives from all the things they have to take very, very seriously - but in the end not TOO seriously.

The guides on this journey advise others to follow suit. Some find examples through reading; the religious may do it through meditation and prayer; the thoughtful often keep journals of their soul's journey.

In Western culture more people claim to find simplicity in the life of Jesus of Nazareth than in any other figure. People first followed him because they saw in Jesus a life covered in five words: "He went about doing good." Those who admire a modern such as Mohandas Gandhi know that the great Hindu leader was a cunning politician who upset empires, but they see how he focused his life on people he called "the last, the least, the lowest and the lost."

The lives of such leaders offer clues - not codes - for the simple way. Each individual has to discover and nurture the appropriate path for himself. Searchers often band together for the journey. Some have tried communes, only to find them complicated. Others have found both freedom and communion in congregations, clubs or causes.

Sooner or later, the searchers learn to live in harmony with nature. But the genius of simplicity has to do with more than the material world, so the seekers have to prune and sort ideas until only the lasting ones survive. And at this point they learn to be suspicious of simplicity. The advice of English philosopher Alfred North Whitehead to natural scientists is well placed for all thinkers: "Seek simplicity and distrust it."

Simplicity does not call for anyone to turn back to the good old days, or even back to nature. True simplicity demands neither commune nor cult. For most of us, it will mean life in the company of others who can judge us and nudge us.

In community we can follow the trajectory of our belief and develop the simple core of our being.

VEGETABLE PICKLES

1 quart white vinegar
1¾ cups sugar
¼ cup salt
2 teaspoons mustard seed
½ teaspoon fennel seed
½ teaspoon instant minced garlic
1 bay leaf
1½-pound head cauliflower, cut into flowerets (about 5 cups)
1½ pounds (3 large) zucchini, unpared and cut into ¼-inch wide slices
½ pound (3 large) carrots, pared and cut into ¼-inch wide diagonal slices (about 2 cups)

In a large saucepot, quickly bring to a boil the vinegar, sugar, salt, mustard seed, fennel seed, garlic and bay leaf; simmer, covered, for 15 minutes. Add cauliflowerets; simmer, covered, until tender-crisp — 4 minutes; remove with a slotted spoon to a large container. Add the zucchini and cook the same way, but for 2 minutes; remove to the container. Add carrots and cook the same way, but for 5 minutes. Pour carrots and liquid over other vegetables. # El Torito Chimichangas: Mexican deep-fried burritos

By BARBARA HANSEN
(c) 1981, Los Angeles Times

The deep-fried burritos called chimichangas are at their best in southern Arizona, where they are made with paper-thin flour tortillas. When fried, these delicate tortillas become crisp and flaky like fine pastry.

Julian Tovar, executive chef of the El Torito Mexican restaurant who was born in Phoenix, recalls how his mother made the super-thin tortillas by hand. For the restaurants, he uses thin factory-made tortillas about 12 or 13 inches in diameter.

The filling is a mixture of cubed pork and beef, tomatoes, chiles, onions and a variety of seasonings including cilantro, cumin and oregano.

The tortilla should not be overloaded with filling and should be folded into a tight, secure packet so that it will not unroll as it is fried, Tovar said. When placed in the deep fat, the Chimichangas should be weighed down evenly so they won't float and unroll.

Another key to success is frying the Chimichangas in lard, which cooks them faster and better than oil, Tovar said.

EL TORITO CHIMICHANGAS

Lard
2 pounds pork butt, cut in 1-2 -inch cubes
2 pounds beef brisket, cut in 1-2 -inch cubes
1 pound onion, chopped
1 tablespoon salt
1 tablespoon garlic powder
1 1-2 teaspoon black pepper
1 teaspoon ground cumin
1-2 bay leaf
3-4 teaspoon oregano
2-3 cup canned tomatoes, crushed
2-3 cup canned tomato sauce
1 pound California chiles, seeded and diced
1 or 2 serrano chiles
1-4 cup cilantro leaves
3-4 cup water
1-2 pound tomatoes, sliced
1 tablespoon chicken stock base
1 teaspoon MSG
1 3-4 teaspoons Maggi seasoning
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
1-2 cup flour
12-inch flour tortillas
Avocado Sauce
Tomato slices
Sour cream
Leafy lettuce
Fresh chopped slsa
Parsley sprigs

Heat 2 tablespoons lard in Dutch oven. Add meat and brown slowly. Add onion and cook until tender. Cover and continue to cook over moderate heat until meat is tender, about 45 minutes. Watch to see that juices do not cook away. If necessary, add a small quantity of water to keep meat from sticking

In bowl, combine salt, garlic powder, pepper, cumin, bay leaf and oregano. Add seasonings to meat as it cooks. Add crushed tomatoes and tomato sauce and cook 5 minutes longer.

Add diced chiles to meat. Place serrano chile in deep hot lard for a few minutes, then combine with cilantro and water in blender and blend until pureed. Add chiles, sliced tomatoes, chicken stock base, MSG, Maggi, and Worcestershire to meat mixture and cook 5 minutes.

Heat 1-4 cup lard in saucepan. Stir in flour until smooth. Drain off liquid from meat mixture and stir into flour mixture. When sauce has thickened, return to meat mixture and cook, stirring, until blended.

TO MAKE CHIMICHANGAS, HEAT LARD ⅛ TO ⅛ ⅛+¼ INCHES DEEP IN SKILLET. Place 1-2 cup meat mixture in center of each flour tortilla. Fold in sides, then roll to top. Place chimichanga seam side down in hot lard. Press down with spatula to keep from unrolling. Fry 2 to 3 minutes, until tortilla is crisp and lightly browned, turning to brown both sides. Drain on paper towels.

To serve Chimichangas, place on dinner plate. Spoon Avocado Sauce over one end, and a little meat mixture over the other. Place a tomato slice in center and top with sour cream. If desired, place some leafy lettuce on plate in front of chimichanga, top with a fresh chopped salsa and tuck in a few parsley sprigs. Makes about 10 cups meat mixture, enough for 20 chimichangas.

Note: To make a fresh salsa, chop and combine tomato, a little onion, cilantro and serrano chile to taste. Season with a dash of lime juice, oregano, salt and pepper.

Avocado Sauce

1 avocado
1 large tomatillo
1 green onion, chopped
1 small jalapeno chile
2 tablespoons chopped cilantro
1-2 cup water
2 tablespoons so7r cream
1-2 teaspoon salt
1-4 teaspoon white pepper
1-4 teaspoon granulated garlic

Peel avocado and slice into blender. Remove papery husk from tomatillo, wash and place into blender. Add green onion, chile, cilantro, water, sour cream, salt, white pepper and garlic. Blend thoroughly.

Overcooked spaghetti has fewer calories

By DONNA LEE
Hearst Feature Service

If your spaghetti is as limp as a wet noodle, it may not be chic but at least it's lower in calories. If you know how long to cook it, you can eat more of it.

It's considered more fashionable to serve spaghetti al dente, or just barely cooked, so it still offers resistance to the teeth when you bite it.

But the longer you cook spaghetti or macaroni, the more water they absorb, and water has no calories. Water swells the pasta, making it look like more.

One cup (130 grams) of cooked macaroni or spaghetti is 64 percent water when cooked to the al dente stage. It has 190 calories.

At the more tender stage, one cup of cooked spaghetti is 73 percent water and weighs 10 grams more. And it has 155 calories. So you can choose whether to be chic and serve slightly firm spaghetti, or to serve it soggy and save 35 calories per cup.

You ate more than half a ton of food last year if you ate like most Americans. The average person consumed 1,402 pounds of food in 1980, reports the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

In 20 years, annual consumption of frozen orange juice nearly doubled, from 4.6 pounds per person to 9.1. Beef consuption rose from 64.3 to 78.1 pounds a year. (That, however, is a drop from the record 95.7 pounds per person in 1976.)

Chicken consumption increased 87 percent in 20 years, rising to 51 pounds last year. The biggest gainer was cheese, going to 18 pounds per person, an increase of 116 percent.

Some foods lost ground. Potatoes dropped from 80 to 44 pounds per person. Egg consumption dropped from 42 to 35 pounds per person and milk decreased from 290 pounds to 243 pounds. Other losers were fresh peaches (down 38 percent) and sugar (down 12 percent).

And, although food costs have gone up, up, up, the USDA said that food prices rose less than other items in the budget.

'T' is for tempura

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Sachiko Komoto, who lives in the United States, writes and illustrates children's books published in Japan.

Mrs. Komoto specializes in animal stories. In her Japanese ABC book ("Ieuno No Yta"), for example, the pages devoted to the letter "T" are illustrated by a mother pig serving a platter of Tempura (deep-fried seafood and vegetables) to her family of three piglets.

When we saw Mrs. Komoto's delightful illustration, we asked her whether she ever served tempura to her family. Indeed she does, and here is an adaptation of the recipe she uses. Tried in our kitchen, we found it absolutely delicious.

SACHIKO'S TEMPURA

½ pound skinless fish fillets, such as flounder or sole, cut in 2-inch pieces
½ pound sea scallops, cut in half if large
¼ pound (4 large) shrimp, shelled and deveined with tails left on
1 sweet potato (½ pound), peeled and cut in ¼-inch-wide slices
1 Spanish onion (about ¾ pound), cut in ¼-inch-wide slices without separating into rings
1 large green pepper, cut in ½-inch wide strips
Batter, recipe follows
1 quart (about) corn oil
Bottled Tempura Sauce

With paper toweling dry seafood and vegetables thoroughly.

Make Batter.

Pour corn oil into a heavy 3-quart saucepan or deep fryer, filling no more than 1-3rd full. Over medium heat, heat to 375 degrees (or use an electric deep-fat fryer).

Dip seafood pieces, one at a time, into Batter and fry a few at a time, turning once, until pale gold — 2 to 3 minutes. Drain on brown paper or paper towels. Dip vegetables, one at a time, into batter and fry a few at a time, turning once, until golden — 1 to 2 minutes. Drain on brown paper or paper towels. Serve with Tempura Sauce. Makes 4 servings.

Batter: In a medium bowl stir together 2-3rds cup all-purpose flour, 3 tablespoons cornstarch and ½ teaspoon salt. In a small bowl beat together 2 large eggs and ¾ cup cold water until blended; add to flour mixture and stir just until moistened — batter will be lumpy. Do not stir batter again.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

No-slip bottle grip

DEAR HELOISE:

Necessity was the mother and desperation the father of this hint.

When I took a large water jug out of my refrigerator, it slipped out of my hand, breaking on the newly waxed tile floor — and with company on the way.

It took what seemed forever to mop up all the water and pick up all the shards of glass.

I decided then and there that a safer bottle was needed. My solution was to circle the bottle at the spot where you usually grab the container with two inches of rubberbands.

This idea is superbly adaptable for anything slippery and it's great for butterfingers like me who need all the help we can get! — Alice Vitali

+ + +

Great! Especially for little hands that are forever reaching for that pickle or jelly jar. But, when possible, store things in smaller containers or plastic bottles.

It's sure easier to refill something several times, than to grieve over a messy floor or injured foot. — Heloise

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

Dear Heloise: My son always tells me to reverse the charges when I call him and his family.

When I called recently, my young granddaughter answered the phone and the operator asked her if she would accept the charges.

She called out to her dad, and said, "You better come, somebody wants to press charges!"

COMB CLEANING

Dear Heloise: Some time ago you had a helpful hint about cleaning hairbrushes and combs. It really worked terrific.

I can't remember what it was for the life of me, and I'd sure appreciate your reprinting it. — Lucy Carroll

+ + +

Your question comes up so often it's one of hundreds I've answered in my new book, "Help! from Heloise" (Arbor House, $14.95) which is now available at bookshops and public libraries.

A little ammonia diluted in water makes a quick and easy cleaner or you can spray your combs and brushes with some foam bathroom cleaner and get great results.

Just let them set awhile, then rinse. Sure cleans them in a jiff! — Heloise

Hot dogs and haute cuisine

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

Back in the 17th century, an Englishman named John Evelyn wrote a treatise hailing mustard, which he claimed strengthened the memory and revived the spirits.

Evelyn was on the right track, if possibly for the wrong reason. Over the years this incomparable condiment has steadily climbed in popularity. It is especially favored in the United States, where sales reached 23.3 million gallons in 1980, with the help of the hot dog. This partnership has an interesting origin.

The prepared yellow mustard we see at ball parks and in restaurants throughout the country was pioneered back in 1904 by two spice traders, the brothers George and Francis French. Its debut coincided with the invention of the hot dog at the St. Louis Exposition that same year.

Mustard is of Asiatic origin and goes far back in history. The Chinese, who pioneered so many foods and spices, used mustard thousands of years ago. Eventually it spread to the West.

Pythagoras, the Greek philosopher who lived in the 6th century B.C., has long been associated with the study of geometry. But in his day he was also known for recommending mustard as an antidote for scorpion bites.

More than a century later, Hippocrates, recognized as the father of medicine, used mustard to treat ailments, both internally and externally.

Mustard was also gaining fame as a seasoning and the ancient Greeks and Romans used it in cooking, much as we do today.

France's King Louis XI liked mustard so much he carried a pot of it along when invited out to dinner.

Vasco da Gama, the famous Portuguese navigator, was also a mustard buff and included it in his provisions when he sailed from Lisbon on his first voyage around the Cape of Good Hope.

Americans may slather hot dogs and sandwiches with mustard, but it is also a key ingredient in many gourmet dishes and dressings, as in the following sauce recipe.

1 egg yolk, cooked hard
1 raw egg yolk
2 teaspoons prepared yellow mustard
2 tablespoons dry white wine
Pinch of tarragon
1 tablespoon capers, bottled in vinegar and salt solution
Salt and pepper to taste
1 cup heavy cream, whipped

Crumble hard-cooked egg yolk and combine with raw yolk, mustard, white wine, tarragon, capers, salt and pepper. Blend thoroughly. Fold into the whipped cream. Serve immediately. Makes about 2 cups. Good with fish, seafood, meats and vegetables.

The clothing connection

By ERMA BOMBECK

There is no one on the face of this earth for whom I feel more compassion than the mothers of children who are on half-day sessions at school.

My neighbor, Iris, went through an entire year of this schedule and we almost lost her. We all went over one day and literally dragged her from the utility room and set her down in the living room.

"Where are we?" she mumbled numbly.

"In your living room," we said gently.

"I've never been here before," she said. "Of course you have, it's the room right off your kitchen and utility room. Remember?"

"All I remember is in September I went into the kitchen and the utility room and I've been there ever since. Rinsing breakfast plates, putting them in the sink, clearing the table, starting the washer . . . "

"It's all right," we said. "Don't dwell on it."

" . . . and then picking up the pajamas and washing them, and making beds and it's lunchtime again and the kids are home and it's time to pick up the school clothes and wash them, and set the table and get lunch and rinse the plates and do the dishes and clear and it's dinnertime and I set the table and pick up the play clothes and wash them and get dinner and clear the table and rinse the dishes and start the washer . . . did I say that before?"

My kids went through it and it was a period that I paranoically refer to as the "Clothing Connection." It was like a game. Every time they moved ahead two spaces, they passed Go and went directly to the closet. My five-year-old once set a record for changing clothes. Within a 14-hour period, he changed clothes nine times. He had an outfit for eating breakfast, going to school, running through the house, using the phone, eating lunch, answering the door, riding his bike, weighing himself, and one that he wore because there was nothing clean left to wear.

I couldn't walk through a room without encountering a pile of his clothes.

I'll never forget poor Iris if I live to be a hundred . . . her hands shriveled from hand washes, her sinuses filled with laundry bleach, her brain fogged by lint. "When does it all end?" she said. "All this washing and ironing?"

No matter how it's spelled, tomato ketchup's a favorite

NEW YORK (AP) — The average American consumes 47 ounces, or nearly three pounds, of tomato ketchup a year, reports the National Food Processors Association, which adds that more than a million tons of tomatoes go into processing the product annually.

The year Americans got their first taste of processed tomato "catsup" was 1876. The bottles of those days were sealed with corks, which were then dipped in wax to make the contents airtight, according to the Closure Manufacturers Association, whose members make the modern twist-on metal resealable caps found on ketchup bottles today.

Ketchup originally came from the Orient, where it was called "ketsiap," "koechiap," or "kechap." Today there is still confusion about the spelling, with some dictionaries preferring ketchup, others catsup. The Oriental variety of ketsiap was made from a brine of pickled or fermented fish and was used as an all-purpose seasoning, researchers at the Closure group say.

In the 17th and 18th centuries, English seafaring traders (some sources say Dutch) brought the ketsiap sauces home from the Far East and tried to duplicate the flavor in their homeland. By 1841 the condiment was a favorite in England.

Later, in the 19th century, Maine sea captains circling the globe in clipper ships also acquired a taste for this flavorsome Oriental product and brought the knowledge of it to U.S. shores.

In those early days many of the exotic Eastern ingredients were not available here. So mushrooms, grapes, cucumbers, currants, blueberries, gooseberries, plums, oysters, lobsters and walnuts went into the homemade ketchup bottle. English and American cookbooks of the 18th and 19th centuries would commonly list as many as a dozen ketchup recipes.

The ketchup then was used as a condiment with various meats — the hamburger, as it is known today, had not yet evolved — and was also used as a key ingredient in sauces and gravies. It was more like today's Worcestershire than today's ketchup.

Tomato was actually a latecomer as a ketchup flavor because it was thought to be poisonous before the 1820s, the researchers point out.

No one knows who was the first to incorporate the tomato into ketchup, or how tomatoes evolved as the condiment's main ingredient, but as American ketchup became uniformly a tomato product, the other varieties seemed to vanish.

Today more than 97 percent of all American households use ketchup, with approximately 650 million bottles of tomato ketchup sold each year.

A group of scientists from the Washington, D.C. community protest in front of the Soviet Embassy in Washington Wednesday on behalf of Professor Andrei Sakharov, who, the KGB told his daughter-in-law, Liza Alexeyeva, has just ended a hunger strike begun with his wife, Yelena Bonner, 17 days ago. Alexeyeva, who wishes to join her husband in the United States, was told by Soviet officials that she would be able to do so, but says she does not believe them or the reports that her father has ended his hunger strike.

Alexeyeva says KGB is lying

By STEVEN R. HURST
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Andrei Sakharov's daughter-in-law said today the KGB had lied to her Wednesday when it told her the physicist's hunger strike had ended and she would be allowed to join her husband in the United States.

"It's all a bluff," Liza Alexeyeva, 26, said after leaving Soviet secret police headquarters today. "I can't believe anything they say anymore. I'm not going there again."

Speaking with reporters in Sakharov's Moscow apartment, Miss Alexeyeva said KGB agent Alexander Baranov told her Wednesday she had been granted permission to emigrate and that Sakharov and his wife, Yelena Bonner, abandoned their 17-day-old fast on learning the news.

"As a member of the KGB, I can tell you permission was granted yesterday for you to leave," she quoted him as saying, adding he threatened to delay her departure if she had further contacts with foreigners.

Since then however, she has made three telephone calls to officials at OVIR, the agency that handles foreign visas, and was told they knew nothing of a visa for her, Miss Alexeyeva said.

During their second meeting today, Baranov failed to provide evidence the Sakharovs had ended their fast and refused to tell her of the couple's whereabouts or the state of their health, Miss Alexeyeva said.

"They have been using me to give credence to their story," she charged. "Sakharov announced the hunger strike and only Sakharov can call it off."

The KGB summoned Miss Alexeyeva for a second interview today to grant her permission to visit the Sakharovs in Gorky next Monday. But Miss Alexeyeva said she did not believe their promise, noting that the secret police had detained her last Saturday when she tried to make the trip.

Sakharov, 60, who won the 1975 Nobel Peace Prize for his work in human rights, was exiled to Gorky, 250 miles east of Moscow, in January 1980 to restrict his access to foreign reporters.

He and his 58-year-old wife began a hunger strike Nov. 22 to pressure the government to allow Miss Alexeyeva to join Mrs. Bonner's son by a previous marriage in the United States. The son, Alexei Semyonov, 25, married her by proxy in Montana last June. The Kremlin does not recognize the marriage and claims Semyonov is still married to another Soviet woman.

Sakharov said in a letter last week he had lost 17.6 pounds in the first 10 days of the strike and his wife had lost 15.4 pounds. The government newspaper Izvestia reported Friday they couple had been hospitalized, and it was believed their fast had been ended by forced feeding.

Semyonov, a graduate student at Brandeis University near Boston, told a news conference in Washington:

"I personally feel very much better than I did yesterday, but the whole problem is not over and is not solved. The KGB does not always keep its promises."

He also said he doubted that the Sakharovs had ended their hunger strike.

"I doubt very much that my mother and father would believe a message from the KGB," he said.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said President Reagan was "gratified" Miss Alexeyeva was granted permission to emigrate and "pleased" that the hunger strike had ended.

Political tension increases in Poland

By DAN FISHER
Los Angeles Times

WARSAW, Poland — Lech Walesa and a half dozen other top Solidarity union leaders met for four hours Wednesday with the Roman Catholic primate of Poland, Archbishop Jozef Glemp, apparently as part of a church effort to decrease political tensions here.

There were reports that Glemp is trying to arrange a second "domestic summit" meeting, possibly with Welesa and Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, the premier and Communist Party leader.

However, a prominent lay Catholic official who met with both Glemp and Jaruzelski on Wednesday said later that "given the situation in the country, any such meeting in the nearest future is extremely unlikely."

Janusz Zablocki, a member of Parliament as well as head of the Polish Social Union, added that "there is little cause for optimism, though there is still some room for hope." Zablocki refused to disclose the purpose of his high-level meetings Wednesday.

Glemp's forceful attempts to intervene underline the seriousness with which the latest phase of the Polish crisis is viewed here.

It was learned Tuesday that Glemp had sent a letter to members of the Polish Parliament urging them to reject a party demand that the government be given special powers to cope with civil and labor protests. "The church expresses deep concern and alarm that adoption by the Sejm (Parliament) of the mentioned bill would disturb internal peace, would break the threats of agreement established with such difficulty, and would cause a great social conflict," according to a text of the letter released by Solidarity on Wednesday.

The independent union responded to the party's call for special powers legislation by threatening a nationwide general strike if the authorities attempt to use such powers. The position, adopted by the union's executive committee and its regional leaders last week, is to be submitted to Soldarity's ruling National Commission on Friday. The commission is also expected to take a stand on whether to cooperate with the government under its proposed "front of national accord."

House wants Libyan restrictions

By BARTON REPPERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite administration objections, the House is overwhelmingly urging President Reagan to consider a cutoff of oil imports from Libya to put "political and economic pressure" on the regime of Col. Moammar Khadafy.

The Libyan oil import provision was included in a $5.7 billion foreign aid bill approved by the House on a 222-184 vote Wednesday.

The authorization bill also permits resumption of U.S. military and economic assistance to strategically vital Pakistan.

REAGAN had mounted a lobbying effort to drum up GOP backing for the aid legislation, which he called "the minimum necessary" to maintain U.S. credibility and commitments around the globe.

This drive paid off when 97 House Republicans joined 125 Democrats in voting for the measure, while 86 GOP members and 98 Democrats voted against it.

The outcome contrasted with the vote on last year's House foreign aid authorization bill, which was opposed by a sizable majority, 82-58, of Republican members voting.

Shortly before the House finished seven hours of debate on the aid bill, it adopted an amendment offered by Rep. Clement J. Zablocki, D-Wis., to trim the authorization for the current fiscal year from $6.027 billion to Reagan's request of $5.727 billion.

THE BILL now goes to a conference committee to iron out differences with a similar aid bill passed by the Senate in October.

The House amendment on Libya, sponsored by Rep. Edward J. Markey, D-Mass., was adopted 356-46 despite administration objections.

Rep. William Broomfield, R-Mich., quoted a letter from Deputy Secretary of State William P. Clark that said "all options are being reviewed" with regard to Libya and "we believe it is imperative that the president's hands not be tied."

The administration is maintaining that Khadafy has sent hit teams to kill Reagan and high U.S. officials. Khadafy has denied the allegations.

The amendment approved by the House condemns Libyan support of international terrorism and declares that Reagan "should conduct an immediate review of concrete steps the United States could take, individually and in concert with its allies, to bring economic and political pressure on Libya."

THIS STUDY should be completed within six months and should include "the possibility of tariffs on or prohibitions against the import of crude oil from Libya," the amendment stated.

The Pakistan amendment, adopted by voice vote, would allow U.S. aid to resume while providing for an aid cutoff if the Southwest Asian nation develops atomic weapons.

The administration, concerned about the potential threat posed by Soviet troops in neighboring Afghanistan, is seeking to bolster Pakistan with a six-year, $3.2 billion package of military and economic aid.

Sponsored by Rep. Stephen J. Solarz, D-N.Y., the House amendment was aimed at replacing a restriction under which U.S. assistance was suspended in 1979 because of Pakistan's apparent drive to achieve nuclear capability.

If Pakistan acquires an atomic bomb or actually explodes one, the new language would terminate all U.S. aid to the country unless the president requests a waiver. Congress could then veto any such waiver request by a majority vote of both houses.

The House defeated 258-155 a move by Rep. Dan Lungren, R-Calif., to keep the Peace Corps a part of the volunteer agency ACTION. That left intact a section of the bill re-establishing the Peace Corps as an independent agency.

BENEFITS OF THE 1981 INVESTMENT TAX CREDIT

The investment tax credit offers a business which buys or leases a new truck before the end of 1981 the opportunity to reduce this year's income tax.

The investment tax credit can accomplish the following:
- Lower the Federal income tax liability for your business this year.
- Make the price tag look smaller after you check out the tax savings.

Any business that uses a truck in its operation is eligible. A new truck acquired this year can reduce your tax liability for 1981 as follows:
- Investment tax credit of 6% for all light duty trucks depreciated for three years.
- Investment tax credit of 10% for all large trucks (600 series and higher) depreciated for five years.

This has the practical effect of reducing the purchase price, depending on the truck, either 6% or 10%.

Vehicles disposed of prior to the three or five year depreciation periods will be subject to investment tax credit recapture; however, for every period of more than one year the property is held in service, 2% of the credit will be retained.

FOR EXAMPLE:

Light Duty Trucks

If the business keeps the new truck more than one year and less than two years, it will be required to rebate the government 4% of the 6% credit claimed.

If a business keeps the new truck more than two years and less than three years, it will be required to rebate the government 2% of the 6% credit claimed.

Large Trucks

If a business keeps the new truck more than three years and less than four years, it will be required to rebate the government 4% of the 10% credit claimed.

If a business keeps the new truck more than four years and less than five years, it will be required to rebate the government 2% of the 10% credit claimed.

1981 Advantages OVER 1980
- The investment tax credit recoverable time is shorter and the repayment to the government is smaller if the truck is removed from service earlier than the normal 3 and 5 years required under the new law.

EXAMPLES OF HOW THE INVESTMENT TAX CREDIT WORKS

Light Duty Trucks
- Assume the Federal income tax liability for your business in 1981 is $12,000.
- Assume your business purchases an $8,000 light truck during the year.
- Assuming your business depreciates the truck for three years, you may credit 6% of the price paid for the truck or $480 against $12,000 income tax liability for 1981.
- You would then owe the government $12,000 minus $480 or a total of $11,520.

Large Trucks
- Assume the Federal income tax liability for your business in 1981 is $25,000.
- Assume your business purchases an $18,000 large truck during the year.
- Assuming your business depreciates the truck for five years, you may credit 10% of the price paid for the truck or $1,800 against your $25,000 income tax liability for 1981.
- You would then owe the government $25,000 minus $1,800 or a total of $23,200.

The investment tax credit information outlined here is incomplete. A business that is interested in obtaining investment tax credit information should consult its tax advisor.

China, India may end hostilities

By MICHAEL PARKS
Los Angeles Times

PEKING — After more than two decades of hostilities Chian and India are starting talks here Thursday to resolve their bitter differences.

Indian Foreign Secretary Eric Gonsalves will open the talks with Han Nianlong, China's vice foreign minister for Asian relations, on their disputed 2,500 mile border, which led to the month-long Sino-Indian war in 1962.

Although no immediate resolution is expected by either side, the progress made in this week's session, and a later round of talks in New Delhi, will determine how soon Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi will take up her invitation to visit China, diplomatic sources said.

While the border is the focus of the new talks — the first negotiations Peking and New Delhi have held on it since the war — they will have a much wider impact, according to diplomats involved.

On China's part, the talks represent an acceptance that India is non-aligned and not a Soviet satellite on its perimeter. Deng Xiaoping, China's Communist Party vice chairman, taking the initiative last spring to get the talks started, declared, "India is no longer a Soviet client state."

For New Delhi, it means a retreat from Mrs. Gandhi's assertion only a year ago that China had "hegemonist aims" throughout Asia and an end to prolonged Indian diplomatic efforts to block China's ascendancy to a leadership position in the Third World.

"Sino-India tensions have colored relations in Asia within the Third World as a whole for a very long time, and now that Delhi and Peking are talking to each other — that's significant in itself — we hope there will be a more cooperative atmosphere throughout," a senior Asian ambassador here said. "The Sino-India feud, and that is what it has been, has been very divisive for countries tending to side with one or the other."

Not far in the background, however, is the Soviet Union, which began developing close ties with India in the 1950s, even as its relations with China were souring.

Moscow has touted Soviet-Indian ties, bolstered by a 10-year-old friendship and mutual assistance treaty, as a model for its relations with other developing countries, and the Kremlin has counted on India as a mainstay of its proposed "Asian collective system," which would encircle China if accepted by other Asians.

The Soviet Union has expressed its concern over the "use the Chinese might make of the talks," its way of saying that Peking may try to drive a wedge between Moscow and New Delhi, according to diplomats here.

But the Gandhi government frankly sees the opportunity as too important to pass up because of the prospect of resolving the difficult border dispute after almost 25 years. China claims 37,500 square miles of territory now held by India, mostly its northeastern Arunachal Pradesh area, and China occupies 14,500 square miles of territory claimed by India that Chinese troops took in 1962 in the Ladakh region of the Himalayas at the western end of their border.

Although fewer than 100,000 people live in the two areas, they are of strategic importance to both countries — and probably of even greater political significance to them.

Deng has proposed that each side simply keep what it now holds and make the present line of control the agreed border. India has rejected that and will insist again in the talks that China pull back in Ladakh.

So great was India's humiliation in the 1962 war that no government in New Delhi dare present a settlement for approval without significant Chinese concessions, according to India political analysts. Still on the books is a resolution by the Indian parliament to recover every inch of territory lost in 1962. The Gandhi government, in fact, is proceeding with the negotiations without firm knowledge of what it can sell short of a maximum settlement, Indian sources acknowledged.

U.N. agency awarded Nobel

By ERIK A. WOLD
Associated Press Writer

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Poul Hartling, the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, today accepted the 1981 Nobel Peace Prize on behalf of his office and the 10 million refugees it cares for around the world.

Hartling, a former prime minister of Denmark, will receive a check for the equivalent of $220,000 on Friday before giving the traditional Nobel Lecture.

He said on his arrival here Wednesday night that he has earmarked the money for a special refugee project, which he is expected to disclose later today.

The award was the second for the refugee organization, headquartered in Geneva. It won its first Peace Prize in 1955, in recognition of its aid to European refugees after World War II and as an inspiration to continue its task.

Professor John Sanness, outgoing chairman of the Norwegian Nobel Committee, told Hartling in presenting the Nobel gold medal and diploma that the choice of the UNHCR was in recognition of the agency's work since 1955.

In a speech prepared for delivery at the ceremony, Sanness stressed that the award was meant, as it was 26 years ago, to urge the UNHCR to continue "its good offices as an arbitrator and go-between in relations between governments with different interests to safeguard."

The International Red Cross is the only other world body that has won the Nobel Peace Prize more than once.

The award ceremony, in Oslo's University Festival Hall, came on the annual Human Rights Day, which also is the anniversary of the death of Alfred Nobel, the Swedish inventor of dynamite who initiated the Nobel prizes. The other four original Nobel prizes and the Nobel Memorial Prize in Economics, adopted by the Swedish Central Bank, were being presented today in Stockholm.

Sanness said the high commissioner and his 1,600-member staff in Geneva and in 80 countries "have consideration for the refugees themselves and their fate as the one and only guiding principle."

The number of refugees in the world is growing steadily. Conservative estimates indicate there are now 14 million to 18 million people who have fled their home countries, including 2 million from Afghanistan alone.

Sanness said the task of the UNHCR remains the same as it has been since the office was established 30 years ago: to defend the fundamental rights of refugees and help them become self-supporting.

"We all live in a world community not only consisting of states, but a world community of men and women — many of them stateless," Sanness said.

Mitterand insists reforms be dealt with 'at good pace'

By EDWARD CODY
The Washington Post

PARIS — French President Francois Mitterrand declared Wednesday night that his Socialist reforms must be carried out "at a good pace" despite complaints from French businessmen and some reticence within his own government.

Mitterrand, speaking in a live television conversation with two journalists, said Prime Minister Pierre Mauroy must not slow down application of the Socialist platform of nationalizations, tax reforms and other substantial changes. Mitterrand said slowing the pace of change would violate the mandate he said was conferred on him by the French people in last spring's elections.

The Socialist leader also disclosed for the first time that he has been suffering from still-unexplained pains in his back and legs since August. But he discounted published reports that he is seriously ill and said a complete medical report on his health would be published Dec. 15.

His remarks on the economy represented an indirect endorsement of Mauroy's position in a public debate that flared up last week between the prime minister and Finance Minister Jacques Delors, who urged a "pause" in announcing reforms to give the French economy time to digest those already under way.

Mauroy had quickly responded to Delors, saying he planned to forge ahead full speed. Their public exchanges brought to the surface a debate long simmering within Mitterrand's 6-month-old government over the economy's ability to absorb swift change without serious disruption.

Mitterrand, responding to a question on the controversy, first said his role was not to arbitrate, and underlined his esteem and "personal friendship" for Delors, an economist and high adviser to previous governments. Then, in terms similar to those used by Mauroy in refuting Delors earlier, he added:

"Those who chose us want change. And for change, there must be reforms. And these reforms must go forward at a good pace, reasonably, but at a good pace, and without stopping."

The president, speaking in a book-lined room in the Elysee Palace for just under an hour, emphasized the government's decision to carry out major reforms by decree in the coming months to avoid the delays of parliamentary debate with a right-wing opposition eager to throw up procedural obstacles.

"Stopping while it (the Socialist program) has not even been voted in yet would seem stupid to me," he added. "And in any case, we would not be respecting the contract we signed with French citizens, or at least the majority of them."

He declared that the very business concerns that prompted Delors' call for a pause should instead be met with swift execution of the entire Socialist program so "the rules of the game" will be settled and clear. Confusion over Socialist measures to stimulate the economy has been a major business complaint and Wednesday night's television appearance — the first of its kind for Mitterrand as president — was designed in part to calm such worries.

In a clear warning that complaining would not dissuade him, he added: "I am not trying to reassure business leaders. I am explaining my policies to them."

Mitterrand sat stiffly before his two questioners, whom he chose personally, according to reports in the French press. Although he appeared to be in good health, he acknowledged publicly for the first time that he is suffering from an ailment beyond the lumbago long known to bother him occasionally.

Press reports disclosed last month that Mitterrand underwent a thorough medical examination at a Paris hospital under an assumed name, entering through a side door in secret and acknowledging the exam only after it had been reported. This led to a round of speculation on his health, along with reminders of former President Georges Pompidou's decline and eventual death in office while the state of his health was withheld from the Fench public.

Sixth man reported caught in Seychelles

By JAMES R. PEIPERT
Associated Press Writer

VICTORIA, Seychelles (AP) — An alleged mercenary — wet, tired and hungry after two weeks in the bush — was captured today by police, the government said.

He was the sixth man reported seized since the abortive Nov. 25 coup attempt against the leftist government of this Indian Ocean archipelago.

Antonio Beaudoin, the information director, identified the suspect as Jeremiah Curen, 57.

"I understand he was very hungry when they (police) found him," Beaudoin said.

The official spoke to reporters in the courtyard of the Victoria central police station as the man identified as Puren was being questioned within.

A group of reporters happened to be at the station when the man, with thinning hair and a small beard, was brought in, his hands manacled in front of him, and led to an interrogation room.

"I am not at (my) best," the man told reporters. "I spent 14 days in the bush."

Puren was spotted in the dense jungle behind the nation's international airport at Pointe Larue on the main island of Mahe and police from the nearby Cascade station arrested him about 15 minutes later, Beaudoin said.

He was wearing a pair of blue shorts, a reddish-brown shirt and pair of desert boots without socks when reporters saw him. He was still damp from the heavy tropical rain that lasted throughout the night and into today.

Beaudoin said Puren was the first suspect captured here who was known to have arrived Nov. 25 aboard a Royal Swazi flight with more than 40 other mercenaries.

The government earlier announced the capture of five other men it said were mercenaries sent here in advance of the main party. One other man is said to be at large.

West Bank tension continues to grow

By WILLIAM CLAIBORNE
The Washington Post

RAMALLAH, Occupied West Bank — Tensions in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip continued to rise Wednesday as Israeli security forces raided a girls' school here and arrested about 200 students for conducting an illegal demonstration. Army troops in Gaza welded shut the doors of 200 Arab shops in retaliation for a commercial strike.

The protests, along with scattered incidents throughout the West Bank and Gaza Strip, marked the beginning of a second month of virtually daily disturbances by Palestinians opposed to the imposition of a new civilian administration in the occupied territories' military government.

Staff members of the Ramallah Women's Training Center here, which is operated by the U.N. Relief and Works Agency, said Israeli soldiers burst into the school Wednesday morning after students raised a Palestinian flag and chanted nationalistic slogans.

In a statement, the school administration alleged that the Israeli soldiers were preceded by two civilians carrying cameras and claiming to be British photographers. The statement said that, when the students noticed the men had weapons under their coats and surrounded them, the "cameramen" threw tear gas grenades and called in army troops positioned outside. The army immediately closed the approaches to the school.

School officials also charged that Israeli soldiers wrecked the school's kitchen and cafeteria, breaking windows and throwing food at the students. They said some students and the school's administrative director, Annan Anati, were beaten, and that the principal, Assia Habbash, was arrested along with 250 students.

A spokesman for the Israeli army command said "about 200" students were taken to military government headquarters for questioning but that most were expected to be released without being charged. The army spokesman denied that soldiers beat students or wrecked the cafeteria and said he had no information about civilians posing as cameramen.

Nearby, at the Kalendia refugee camp, two soldiers whose car was stoned opened fire, the army spokesman confirmed. Stoning incidents were also reported in Nablus and near Bethlehem, and Palestinians conducted a sit-in protest at Bethlehem's city hall.

Irrigation battle pits giants against families

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — The bitter struggle over water in the arid West erupted again Tuesday as spokesmen for small farmers and large agribusiness confronted each other over proposals to update a 1902 law which determines who should receive federally subsidized irrigation water.

The battle pits giant conglomerates and absentee landowners against small family farmers who are unable to buy federally irrigated land because it is controlled by large corporations.

The question facing Congress is who should benefit from the $11.5 billion worth of dams and irrigation systems built by the federal government in the 17 western states.

THE ORIGINAL ACT, which authorized massive irrigation programs in order to develop and settle the dry West, was designed to promote family homesteads. To do this, it limited to 160 acres the amount of federally irrigated land a farmer could own, and required owners to live on their land.

However, decades of non-enforcement of the acreage and residency requirements by the Interior Department have allowed the landowners to acquire more irrigated land.

Gordon E. Nelson of the Farm-Water Alliance said the only place in the United States where acreage limitation laws have been diligently enforced is in the San Joaquin Valley of California.

Testifying before a hearing of the House Subcommittee on Water and Power Resources, Nelson insisted that outside the valley, particularly in the northern tier of western states, enforcement of acreage limitation laws has been lax or non-existent.

NELSON, THE organization's coordinator, contended that in most instances this was done with the implicit approval of the government.

One of the sponsors of some five bills dealing with the 79-year-old statute, Rep. Charles J. Pashayan, R-Calif., said Congress must update the old law because it isn't modern enough to face up to a major water crisis that is facing the nation.

"This nation faces a potential water crisis that is more dangerous than the recent oil crisis," Pashayan warned. His bill calls, among other things, for increasing the amount of federally irrigated land a small farmer can own and for removal of residency requirements.

A spokesman for the Sierra Club charged that a measure sponsored by Rep. Manuel Lujan, R-N.M., "is a social welfare program for a few California growers, since it repeals the residency requirement of the 1902 act and exempts the Corps of Engineers projects from the law.

THE BILL WOULD expand the 160 acre limit, allowing farms up to 960 acres to get the subsidized water.

Rose McCullough, speaking for the Sierra Club, told the panel her organization would support a water pricing bill sponsored by Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., whose northern California district includes the strategic San Joaquin delta region, if it includes "a realistic interest rate."

Miller is the author of "The Water Pricing Reform Act," which would drastically reduce water subsidies — some $5 billion in 1976 — to federal irrigation customers, requiring them to pay the true cost.

It would also require water beneficiaries to repay the interest on federal loans used to fund the water projects. The original 1902 reclamation act did not require repayment of interest for irrigation costs, nor full repayment of interest costs even on municipal or industrial projects.

Miller would require recalculation of water prices every year and points frequently to the most controversial current contract which gives California's wetlands water district nearly a million acre feet of water at $57.50 an acre foot until the year 2007.

THE CONGRESSMAN has argued that the unrealistically low prices not only cheat taxpayers but cheapen the water itself — so that much of it is wasted.

McCullough complained that billions of dollars have been spent on programs that have failed to solve the west's scant supply of water.

"In some ways they have exacerbated the situation. The West has been developed beyond its capacity to sustain the developments that have occured," she added.

She said her organization favors any legislation that would recover the true full cost of any water development project, including interest at the prevailing market level from those benefited by the project and an effective water conservation program by all users of reclamation water.

John Specht, president of the National Water Resources Association, urged adoption of legislation allowing ownership of 1,600 acres for water eligibility, elimination of residency law, and granting large corporate giants exemptions to own or lease lands in excess of the entitlements, provided they are willing to pay for the water for additional lands.

George Proctor, representing Oregon Gov. Victor Atiyeh, said the state is deeply concerned with the prompt and equitable resolution of the controversy over acreage limitations.

Ski falls can lead to injuries

By JOSEPH CAREY
Hearst Feature Service

On a crisp, pristine morning early this winter you are standing at the top of a ski trial ready for that first exhilarating run of the season.

You push off and within seconds are whizzing down the slope. Suddenly, you hit a bump lose your balance, twist forward and fall.

Your bindings don't release. A torn knee ligament is the result. Months of rehabilitation may lie ahead.

Injuries such as this occur two to three times per 1,000 ski days.

But in theory, they shouldn't occur at all because nearly every one can be prevented.

Injuries are linked to physical conditioning, age of the skier, years of experience, equipment and, the design and conditions of the ski course itself

SINCE THE 1960s, ski injuries have migrated up the leg. Ankle breaks and sprains used to be more common. Now knee and lower leg injuries are more frequent.

"Changes are due mostly to changes in bindings and the ski boot -- from soft leather to the larger, stiff boot," says Laurence Young, head of the aerospace division at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and researcher of ski accident trends and changes.

"It's safer to ski on weekdays when there are fewer people; crowding leads to a 20-25 percent increase in the injury rate," Young says.

Knee injuries top the list and comprise 26 percent of the total. Next come lower leg, 17 percent; ankle, 15 percent; and shoulder, eight percent. The remaining 33 percent occur to the thumb, head, face, thigh and other body parts.

A STUDY conducted by Young looked at over 2,500 ski injuries at 11 major American ski resorts between 1975 and 1978. Information was gathered through a nine-page questionnaire distributed to injured skirs by ski patrol members.

"The dominant current problem in skiing, that of twisting falls leading to ligament problems or other injuries of the knee, is apparently not well prevented by most bindings in use during this 1975-1978 study."

He recommends that skiers pay close attention to bindings both when they are set and on the slopes. Bindings can tighten 5-10 percent when slush under the boot freezes when the skier travels up to the top of a run.

In addition to equipment, Dr. Michael Drew, an orthopedic surgeon offers this advice to prevent injuries:

Warm up before going out on the slopes. Stretch the lower extremities, hamstring muscle and achilles tendon before putting physical stress on them.

Courtesy is remedy for bad business

By ROBERT E. THOMPSON
Hearst Feature Service

Washington — Douglas W. Spangler of the Catholic University of America has a remedy for improved business that is as old and as simple as castor oil and the mustard plaster.

An important way to improve the "sickness" of bad business, says Spangler, is to return to old fashioned "common courtesy" — although he concedes that courtesy no longer is common to American society.

Spangler associate vice president for university relations, specifically prescribes use of the "10 CC's" formula, which breaks down into 10 rules of common courtesy that businesses can apply to their daily activities and to all employees, from the clerk to the chief exeutive.

"Businesses are killing themselves in so many ways because they don't instill in their employees the need for little daily courtesies," says Spangler. "We need to go 'back to the basics' just as many school systems have found that the 'new wave' of learning and behavior has not worked."

Spangler's 10 basics include small rules of conduct by which big businesses are judged. They include:

1. Return telephone calls. Spangler contends that "the unreturned phone call seems to be reaching epidemic proportions."

2. Answer letters. "And do it in a reasonable time," says Spangler.

3. Avoid putting people on hold. Spangler advises, "if a switchboard is overworked, then the company should hire some more people."

4. Revive the words, "Please, Thank you and Pardon me." Spangler notes that "in some stores, these words are long dead...sometimes you hear more customers saying 'thanks' than you do the clerks."

5. Don't engage in slovenly speech. Spangler makes a telling point: "If people only realized the impact of the way they said things, there would b a speech renaissance."

6. Keep your word. "The company that fulfills its commitments," says Spangler, "is the one that stands out."

7. Be on time. Spangler comments: "One of the most epidemic and grossest discourtesies of our time is the tendency of people to be not only late but also to be unapologetic for being late."

8. Meet deadlines. This rule is not only for individuals in the news media. Spangler explains the missing the deadline on a project "can kill many companies trying to please clients."

9. Be Honest. Enough said.

10. Be Civil. "Somehow, people should work at being civil even when they don't feel like it," says Spangler.

He concludes: "We are becoming an increasingly depersonalized society, and the company that pays some attention to individuals may be the company that survives in these times. Besides, these points apply to the chief executive just as much as to everyone else in organizations, and really more so."

You may now kiss the preacher

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — After the wedding the bride kissed the man who performed the marriage.

It wasn't unusual because the justice of the peace who presided over the marriage also was the groom.

Avram Patt, 31, said he and his wife Marilyn, 32, of Plainfield said they wanted the wedding "small and simple," so Patt read the vows, asked all the questions and then said, "I do."

Two people who happened to drop in on Patt that day "ended up being the witnesses," he said.

Apartment living causes anxieties

By BERNARD D. KAPLAN
Hearst Feature Service

PARIS — European doctors are paying more and more attention to what appears to be a new malady of civilization — apartment house neurosis, otherwise known as high-rise anxiety.

Its apparent symptoms range from sleeplessness and claustrophobia to indigestion and hives.

Dr. Francois St.Vincent of Paris's Boucicault Hospital explained that "high rise living" was a wholly new experience that produced unforeseen physical and emotional side effects.

"Individuals moved from single family dwellings to units housing scores, sometimes hundreds, of families," he said. "They found the abrupt loss of privacy and the need to adjust instantaneously to a new form of living simply too much for their nervous systems."

A few years ago, he recalled, a housewife in her 30s came to him complaining that her hair suddenly had begun falling out. The problem ultimately was traced to the fact she, her husband and two small children had moved recently into a 10th-floor apartment in a Paris suburb.

"She previously had spent all her life in what we French call a 'pavillon,' a small detached house with a garden," he explained. "Living 10 floors up, she developed all types of neurotic tensions. She was afraid her children would be crushed in the elevator. She had nightmares of the building collapsing. She imagined that the neighbors — physically closer than any previous neighbors, but more aloof — were whispering about her."

Dr. St. Vincent said it was obvious that the only sure cure for her was to return to the kind of dwelling she was accustomed to.

"As soon as her husband understood and agreed to move," he added, "her hair began growing in and she recovered."

He emphasized that this was not an extreme case. There had been instances of total mental breakdown and suicides stemming from the stresses provoked by inhabiting a high-rise, he said.

"Multi-storied dwellings more than three or four floors high were nearly unknown in Europe before the 1950s. Even now most people, even in urban areas, have never lived in one. So it's a cultural and psychological shock for them when they suddenly find themselves having to cope with what amounts to an entirely new set of rules."

The postwar boom lured millions to Western Europe's cities and sent land prices skyrocketing. That led to the widespread introduction of high-rises in countries like France, Britain and West Germany. Owning a house of one's own has remained the preferred dream of most Europeans, but one that fewer are able to fulfil.

Bringing home the bacon

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — That old saying about bringing home the bacon has new meaning for Hank Thomas: a business associate sent him a $400 check printed on the flank of a month-old piglet.

Thomas, president of Northern Nevada Title Co., promptly took the wriggling porker to the bank, where the carefully detailed check, printed in three colors, was stamped, canceled and traded for cash.

The payment Monday was from Steve Griggs of Carson City Mortgage for an escrow-closing.

Chaps, Lee in doubleheader tonight

MC faces Amarillo, Lee tangles with Kermit

A lot of activities are scheduled tonight when the Midland College Chaparral basketball team plays its final home game of the fall season against the powerful Amarillo College Badgers.

There will be a doubleheader tonight at Chaparral Center as the Midland Lee boys' team hosts the Kermit Yellojackets in a 6 p.m. contest. It also is being billed as Midland "Elementary School Night," with students from all local elementary schools being admitted free to both games.

At halftime of the Midland College-Amarillo College conest, the Chaps will give away five special Midland College autographed basketballs. And as a special gift, the elementary school with the most students attending the game will be awarded season passes for Midland College basketball games for all the school's students, faculty, administration and staff.

And, of course, there will also be the popular halftime McDonald's shooting conest with food prizes for contestants. One person at the game will have a chance to take a single shot from mid-court that could win a trip anywhere in the 48 continental United States for two persons.

Attention, however, will be focussed on the Chaps in their attempt to grab off another conference victory and the Lee Rebels. At this time last year, the Chaps were undefeated, ranked number one in the nation and rolling toward their best season ever.

This year, the Chaps have regrouped after losing three straight in the Barton County Classic in Great Bend, Kan., and dropping the final contest in the Amarillo Classic to the host Amarillo squad, 70-64. They got some revenge by dropping Barton County in the finale of the Chaparral Classic last week to take the championship crown 90-85.

In fact, the Chaps are gleefully going around playing spoiler this year. They defeated South Plains at Chap Center in their conference opener. South Plains came in with a 10-1 record and the one loss was a forfeit in the finals of a tournament in Arizona. Then they disposed of a much-improved Laredo Junior College squad in the second game of the Chap Classic, when the Laredo Palominos were undefeated.

At last count, Amarillo College was still undefeated and highly ranked under new coach Mark Nixon, who moved to Amarillo after bringing Clarendon College back to respectability the past two seasons.

Concluding a tough fall campaign, the Chaps will journey to Hobbs Saturday night, Dec. 12, for still another conference contest againt the always dangerous New Mexico Junior College Thunderbirds.

MC coach Jerry Stone said at the start of the season that his squad of just two sophomores and 11 freshmen needed a lot of seasoning to be competitive. He also declared that, if the younger players came along as he expected, they would be right in the thick of the conerence race in January and February, when they have the ABC Classic in Big Spring as a tune-up and then jump into 14 straight conference games in seven weeks.

Lee enters the game with Kermit with a 6-2 season record and a two-game winning streak. Andre Van Buren has the hot hand for the Rebels recently with back-to-back games of 38 and 24 points. He is averaging 20.6 points per game while Alvin Dunson is averaging 15 and Randy Pepper 13.3 per outing.

Kermit will bring a 4-2 record into the game, including a championship in the Crane tournament. Kermit lost to Monahans, 76-68, Tuesday. Due to the football playoffs, Kermit is still missing two of four returning lettermen in 6-4 David Armstrong and 5-5 Eugene Muniz. Also out for football is a 6-4 transfer, so Kermit will be missing two postmen against Lee. Leading scorer Barry Kimball, 6-2, has had the flu all week.

Johnson ends hold out; inks with Bucks

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Marques Johnson, the Milwaukee Bucks' star forward who has been a holdout this season, signed a contract today and returned to the National Basketball Association team.

Johnson, who led the Bucks in scoring last season for the third straight year, with an average of 20.8 points per game, reached agreement on an eight-year contract.

TERMS WERE not disclosed, but Don Nelson, the Bucks' coach and director of player personnel, had said earlier during negotiations that the team was offering Johnson $8 million over that period of time.

Johnson, 25, had two years remaining on the six-year contract he signed when he joined the Bucks in 1977.

John Steinmiller, the Bucks' vice president-business operations, said a tentative agreement was reached Sunday in Los Angeles and reviewed Monday and Tuesday before the actual signing today.

"We are very pleased that Marques has rejoined the club and that he will continue to contribute to our quest for an NBA world championship," Nelson said. "We have maintained a good pace in Marques' absence, but his return to the team provides us with the outstanding talent that we know he possesses and that we have missed without him. All of us are extremely happy that a positive solution was reached."

NELSON SAID at a news conference at which the announcement was made that he had been under some strain during training camp when it was not known whether Johnson would report but, after that, "I put him out of my mind and we tried to win as many games as we could" without him.

The Bucks lead the NBA's Central Division with a 12-6 record, 2½ games ahead of second-place Indiana.

Both Steinmiller and Johnson said they felt the negotiating process had been done with "integrity" and "dignity."

"We feel there are no wounds open," Steinmiller said.

"There are not any wounds as far as I'm concerned," Johnson said.

Johnson said he remained in good shape by running several miles a day and playing some basketball, and anticipated he could return to top condition within two or three weeks.

The former UCLA star, a member of the Bruins' 1975 NCAA championship team, has averaged 21.7 points per game and 8.1 rebounds in his four seasons with the Bucks.

JOHNSON WAS assisted in negotiations by Willie Naulls, a close friend who also graduated from UCLA.

He said he would be fined a fraction of this season's salary for each game he missed.

Johnson said the Bucks "handled my absence extremely well" and he believes his return will make the team "just that much stronger."

Marques Johnson is all smiles at a news conference where it was announced that he had signed an eight-year pact and had rejoined the Milwaukee Bucks. Johnson had been a holdout for 18 games of the NBA season in a contract dispute.

NU dreams of national title

NEW YORK (AP) — Anything being possible in college football these days, Tom Osborne, coach of the fourth-ranked Nebraska Cornhuskers, hasn't given up hope of a national championship.

"It depends on the mind-set of the pollsters, and there are as many different mind-sets as there are pollsters," Osborne said Wednesday during an NBC-TV luncheon to publicize the Jan.1 Orange Bowl match between Nebraska's Big Eight champs and the No.1-ranked Clemson Tigers, the Atlantic Coast Conference kings.

The loser, of course, won't have to worry about the national championship. If Clemson wins, the final Associated Poll probably will be a foregone conclusion. If Nebraska wins — and if No.10 Pitt should beat No.2 Georgia in the Sugar Bowl and No.6 Texas defeats No.3 Alabama in the Orange Bowl — things would be wide open like never before.

"You can't get there without a good defensive team," he said. "Our defense has continued to get better since Penn State ran up and down the field on us early in the season, and Clemson has an outstanding defensive team, definitely the best we will have played this year. I don't know that there'll be a whole lot of points scored.

UT's Sims a finalist for Lombardi Trophy

HOUSTON (AP) — University of Texas defensive tackle Kenneth Sims started the 1981 season hoping opponents would block him straight up and finished it prematurely with a broken ankle.

Between those two points, Sims earned first team All-American status, helped the Longhorns to advance to the Cotton Bowl New Year's Day against Alabama, was runner-up for the Outland Trophy and is a finalist for the Lombardi Award, to be named tonight.

"At the start of the season, I told the coach that I hoped they played me straight up blocking," Sims said. "He told me 'These guys aren't stupid' and sure enough they weren't. They put two men on me and one hit me from behind."

Despite his special attention throughout the season, Sims earned Associated Press first team All-America honors for the second straight year and was runner-up to David Rimington, a junior center from Nebraska, in the Outland voting for the nation's outstanding interior lineman.

One of four finalists will receive the Lombardi Award, symbolic of the nation's top collegiate lineman of 1981. The other finalists are defensive end Billy Ray Smith of Arkansas, linebacker Bob Crable of Notre Dame and guard Sean Farrell of Penn State.

Sims suffered a broken ankle against Texas Christian and won't be able to play against Alabama.

Sims says the double teaming tactics started during his junior year. In one game, Sims said he complained to the official on every play that he was being held.

"The official said, 'I'll tell you No.77, you're killing the guy, I've got to give him something,'" Sims said.

Football TV dispute in federal court today

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The next round in the television dispute between the National Collegiate Athletic Association and the College Football Association will be held in federal court here today.

The latest issue involves a request by attorneys for the University of Oklahoma and the University of Georgia Athletic Association to certify the other 59 members of the CFA as parties to their suit against the NCAA.

Andy Coats of Oklahoma City, an attorney for OU and Georgia, said the class-action request, if granted, would give the other schools the same protection as that provided by the court to OU and Georgia.

OU and Georgia filed suit against the NCAA, asking a ruling on who owns the property rights to televised college football games, and seeking protection if the CFA schols decided to go through with a football television contract with NBC.

After a hearing in October, federal Judge Luther Eubanks issued a temporary restraining order barring the NCAA from making any threats or taking disciplinary action against OU and Georgia while ther suit is pending.

"If this is certifed as a class-action case, the other schools would be eligible for the same protection as OU and Georgia," Coats said.

Some CFA officials believe such a ruling would give its members a greater sense of security if they should decide to go through with the four-year, $180 million contract with NBC. They must make that decision by next Monday.

"I suppose it might, but not much," said Coats, "because the protection would evaporate if we don't win the suit."

James D. Fellers of Oklahoma City, one of the NCAA's attorneys, said the NCAA will oppose the class-action request on several grounds, including that they do not know how many of the other CFA schools really have the same contentions and grievances as OU and Georgia.

"We think the class-action request is a little premature," Fellers said. "If they want to intervene, they can."

The CFA board has voted to help finance the suit.

Trade activity heating up at baseball meeting

Yankees continue revolving manager policy

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. — The San Diego Padres appeared to be on the verge last (Wednesday) night of completing a blockbuster, multi-player trade with St. Louis involving star shortstops Ozzie Smith and Garry Templeton.

There were indications the largest transaction of baseball's current winter meetings here would send Smith and right-hander Steve Mura to the Cardinals for Templeton, right-handed power-hitting outfielder Sixto Lezcano and a pitcher, possibly right-handed reliever Mark Littell.

THE TRADE, parts of which have been under discussion since last summer, is believed to have gained the tentative approval of both sides during several meetings general managers Jack McKeon of the Padres and Whitey Herzog of the Cardinals held yesterday (Wednesday). Neither would confirm nor deny they have an agreement.

Templeton, suspended for making obscene gestures to fans in St. Louis last season, has four years left on a $650,000-a-year contract. The 25-year-old switch hitter batted .288 and asked Herzog to trade him to San Diego last summer.

Lezcano, who also demanded a trade, has two seasons remaining on a $450,000-a-year agreement. The 28-year-old Puerto Rican had five homers and a .266 average while mending from a wrist injury.

The Padres put Smith on the trade bloc several weeks ago after his agent reportedly presented management two contract options. One was said to be a 25-year proposal worth more than $31 million, the other for one season at $800,000 to $1 million.

Smith, a 26-year-old switch hitter who has won Gold Glove awards at his position the last two seasons, was paid $300,000 this year while averaging .222 and stealing 22 bases.

Mura, 26, has been sought by several major league teams this week, although he had a disappointing 5-14 record with a 4.27 earned-run average last season.

THE FORMER Tulane star is believed to have earned between $100,000 and $125,000 this year.

The Padres came here looking for a right-handed reliever and a right-handed power hitter. They would be taking a calculated risk if they acquire Littell, because of his arm problems in recent years. He was 1-3 with two saves and a 4.39 ERA in 1981.

An announcement of the trade could be made today (Thursday) or could be delayed until the Padres have had an opportunity to give Templeton a medical examination.

McKeon admitted yesterday the Padres said no last June when the Cardinals offered to trade Templeton for Smith, even up.

Mura's departure would weaken the San Diego rotation, consisting of Juan Eichelberger (8-8), Chris Welsh (6-7) and Rick Wise (4-8).

IN OTHER developments:

The New York Yankees announced they've hired Gene Michaels, the man they fired last summer, as their manager for 1983-84-85. On Tuesday, it had been announced Bob Lemon would return next year for his final season at the Yankee helm.

There were several trades, none of them particularly significant.

World champion Los Angeles strengthened its bench by dealing discontented right-hander Rick Sutcliffe and minor league second baseman Jack Perconte to Cleveland for infielder-outfielder Jorge Orta, 31, and two minor leaguers — pitcher Larry White and catcher Jack Fimple.

Orta, who bats left, averaged .272 with five homers for the Indians. White was 10-12 at Chattanooga, Fimple batted .288 and hit 10 homers at Waterloo, Sutcliffe had a 2-2 record with the Dodgers and Perconte batted .346 at Albuquerque, stealing 45 bases.

The San Francisco Giants sent outfielder Larry Herndon, 28, to Detroit for left-handers Dan Schatzader, 27, and Mike Chris, 24. Herndon had five homers, drove in 41 runs, stole 15 bases and batted .288 this year. Schatzader was 6-8 with an inflated 6.06 ERA with the Tigers. Chris was 2-2 and 6.46 with Evansville.

The Indians also acquired right-hander Scott Munninghoff (5-6 record at Oklahoma City) from Philadelphia, completing the Nov. 19 Bo Diaz trade.

Seattle sent third baseman-outfielder Dan Meyer (.262 average, 3 homers) to Oakland for right-hander Rich Bordi, 22. Bordi, who stands 6-7, had a 9-11 record with Tacoma.

The Yankees received a young catcher, Mike Lebo (.232 average at Kinston), completing a recent trade that sent third baseman Aurelio Rodriguez to Toronto. The Yankees also sent 20-year-old right-hander Freddie Toliver (5-3 at Greensboro) to Cincinnati, completing the Ken Griffey trade.

St. Louis purchased two right-handers, Eric Rasmussen and Vicente Romo, from Mexican League teams and assigned them to Louisville. Rasmussen was 12-6 with a 2.30 ERA at Yucatan, Romo was 16-6 with a 1.40 ERA at Coatzacoalcos.

Houston traded outfielder Gary Woods (.209 average) to the Cubs for outfielder Jim Tracy (.238 average).

THE YANKEES also completed the deal in which they acquired outfielder Ken Griffey from Cincinnati by sending pitcher Freddie Toliver to the Reds.

The Reds dealt Griffey because the outfielder was going to test the free agent market. When the deal was made, the Yankees gave Cincinnati minor-league pitcher Brian Ryder.

Toliver, a 6-foot-1 right-hander who began his career in 1979 at Oneonta of the New York Penn League, had a 5-3 record at Greensboro of the Carolina League this year.

In the deal, Oakland received outfielder Rusty McNealy and pitcher Tim Hallgren.

The Mariners announced that Thomas had been assigned to Salt Lake of the Pacific Coast League.

Thomas, 28, was 12-8 with a 3.05 earned run average at Tacoma last season. McNealy, 23, batted .322 with 63 stolen bases at San Jose. Hallgren, 22, was 7-1 with a 2.21 ERA, also at San Jose, and 2-3 with Reynosa of the Mexican League.

Free-agent second baseman Jerry Remy, meanwhile, was expected to re-sign by today with the Boston Red Sox once final details of a five-year contract are worked out.

Remy, a Massachusetts native, appeared to be headed to the Oakland A's or Chicago Cubs.

But Jerry Kapstein, Remy's agent, worked late Tuesday night on the contract sent to his office by Red Sox treasurer John Harrington.

Davis Cup finals start today

CINCINNATI (AP) — If Argentinian Captain Carlos Junquet has his wish, Jose Luis Clerc will get the pairing today against John McEnroe in the first-round singles match of the Davis Cup tennis finals.

Junquet believes that Clerc, a right-handed player ranked fifth in the world, stands the best chance of beating the left-handed American. The finals between Argentina and the United States begin Friday with two singles matches.

Argentina's other singles player, No. 6-ranked Guillermo Vilas, is a left-hander and has a more difficult time handling McEnroe's serves, Junquet said. Pairings for the two opening singles matches were to be decided today.

mount" surface at the Coliseum on Wednesday. The Argentinians whipped the Americans 4-1 last year on their favorite clay surface, but will have to contend with a medium-fast synthetic surface this weekend.

Although Junquet would prefer clay, he thinks his team can adjust to the faster surface.

"Vilas and Clerc have practiced all this time — about two months — on Supreme Court," Junquet said. "I think they know now how to move well on Supreme Court."

Both Clerc and Vilas beat McEnroe in their Davis Cup matches last year, and hold winning records against him over their careers. Clerc is 3-2 and Vilas 6-5 against the New Yorker.

However, all three of Clerc's victories over McEnroe were on clay, and both losses were indoors. And Vilas is 1-2 against McEnroe on synthetic surfaces.

Olympic skier to receive award

NEW YORK (AP) — Jimmy Heuga, who in 1964 became the first U.S. male skier to win an Olympic medal and then six years later learned he had multiple sclerosis, will be honored at a dinner Dec. 17.

Heuga won a silver medal on the slalom course at Innsbruck, Austria, at age 20. In 1970, after suffering periods of blurred vision and poor balance over several years, he was diagnosed as having multiple sclerosis.

He later designed a physical fitness program which was aimed at helping him regain endurance, strength and coordination.

John Carmony qualifies for Boston Marathon

Midland's John Carmony turned in a 2:49.15 in the 12th Annual Dallas White Rock Marathon held over the weekend. Carmony's time qualified him for the Boston Marathon next April. He is planning to run in the it.

Other Midlanders running in the Dallas Marathon were Rick Ricketts (3:04.15), Layton Duer (3:15), Bob Heuse (3:15) and first-time marathon runners Ralph Arrell (3:07.08) and Chuck Chamberlin (3:32.02).

Pastorini gets starting nod

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Dan Pastorini will start at quarterback for the Los Angeles Rams in their National Football League game against the Atlanta Falcons Monday night, Coach Ray Malavasi announced Wednesday.

Pastorini, who signed with the Rams Sept.25, has made three starts for the Rams and completed 45 of 109 passes for 506 yards and two touchdowns. He has been intercepted 11 times.

Pastorini was moved ahead of Pat Haden as the Rams' starter prior to Los Angeles' game against New Orleans Nov.8. But Haden regained the job with an outstanding second-half performance against San Francisco Nov.22.

However, Haden suffered a knee injury last Sunday during the Rams' 10-7 loss to the New York Giants and underwent arthroscopic surgery on his right knee Tuesday.

Farmer doesn't believe sanctions will hurt powerful UCLA program

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's wait until next year for the UCLA basketball team as far as postseason competition is concerned, but Coach Larry Farmer doesn't believe sanctions imposed by the NCAA will hurt the Bruins' powerful program.

"I really don't think it's going to affect recruiting now or in the future," said Farmer. "Our players are very disappointed, but they still have goals. We have 27 games to play."

Farmer appeared at a news conference on campus Wednesday along with Chancellor Charles E. Young and Athletic Director Bob Fischer to discuss the NCAA's actions, which were announced a day earlier.

Young agreed with Farmer, saying: "It would be my opinion that it will have no specific impact on recruiting because it only deals with one year."

The NCAA, citing numerous violations, put the UCLA basketball team on two years probation and banned the Bruins from postseason competition following the current season. The university will be eligible to compete in tournaments following the 1982-83 campaign.

The current team, tabbed as one of the country's best prior to the season, has gotten off to a slow start, splitting its first four games. The Bruins are ranked 17th in this week's Associated Press poll.

"I'd like to believe this matter has nothing to do with our performance on the basketball court," said Farmer. "The problems we've had so far have to do with how we've played."

Farmer said that the actions should make other schools wary about committing violations.

"I would think a lot of programs would start cleaning up their acts," said Farmer "If they'll penalize UCLA, nobody's immune."

Was he embarrassed by the situation?

"I really can't have my head down or be ashamed, because there's nothing for me to be ashamed about," said Farmer, who was selected to coach the Bruins when Larry Brown left for the New Jersey Nets of the National Basketball Association last spring. "I'm sad, but it's done with, it's all over now. Let's get on with the future.

"The rules are fair in that everybody has to live by the same rules. Regardless of how nitpicky they might have been, the NCAA found we broke the rules. This is something that none of us are happy about or proud of."

UCLA won 10 NCAA championships under Coach John Wooden from 1964 through 1975. The earliest violation cited by the NCAA occurred in 1977.

NHL leaders discuss Rockies

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The National Hockey League's Board of Governors ended a two-day meeting Wednesday, and a seven-man committee to study the financially troubled Colorado Rockies met immediately afterwards.

"Peter Gilbert, the Colorado owner, participated fully," said NHL President John Ziegler. "He repeated his interest in moving to the Meadowlands."

THE NEW Meadowlands Arena at East Rutherford, N.J. is being considered by at least four NHL clubs — the New York Rangers, the Rockies, the Vancouver Canucks and the Chicago Black Hawks — as a possible home. But, because it is within the Rangers' territorial limits, they must make a decision before anyone else can act.

Ziegler said he and Toronto lawyer Bob Sedgwick, vice-chairman of the Board of Governors, were co-chairmen of the Colorado study committee, which also has Gordon Gund, vice-chairman of the Minnesota North Stars; Barry Shenkarow, governor of the Winnipeg Jets, and club presidents Emile Francis of the St. Louis Blues, Marcel Aubut of the Quebec Nordiques and Seymour Knox of the Buffalo Sabres.

"The committee was charged to meet with Mr. Gilbert, review the problems he has in Colorado and assess what help might be provided," Ziegler said. "One option is to do nothing, of course.

"Another is to find a purchaser or a partner for Mr. Gilbert for continued operations in Denver. Another option is to find someone who eventually might want to operate it elsewhere."

Gilbert also has mentioned Hamilton, Ontario, and Ottawa as possible homes for the Rockies.

ZIEGLER SAID the Colorado committee was not looking first to a transfer of the club, which would require a unanimous vote of the governors.

"What we're really looking for is other ownership or a partner," he said.

Ziegler said a second meeting of the committee had not been scheduled and the group had no deadline for reaching its conclusions, "although there are practical deadlines because Mr. Gilbert has expressed some immediate concerns, and we're working on it."

He said he believed the committee would have a report ready by the end of this season.

Ziegler repeated his belief that "excluding the Rangers, I still think the chances of an NHL team in the Meadowlands next season are less than even."

The Rangers, seeking financial relief from their rental and union agreements at Madison Square Garden, have not indicated when they would make a decision on playing home games at the Meadowlands, a right they have under the terms of their franchise because it is within a 50-mile radius of New York.

"We never promised New Jersey anything," Ziegler said. "Being a lawyer, I know you can dream up all sorts of lawsuits, but unless they had a partner like Mr.Gilbert I don't believe they'd stand much of a chance of winning. And even then you'd have to use your imagination on their chances.

WITH RESPECT to the collective bargaining agreement with the players association, Ziegler said he agreed with Alan Eagleson, the executive director of the players association, that negotiations could not be concluded before June. The players have announced their intention to terminate the equalization clause of that agreement on Sept, 15, 1982.

"I believe the annual meeting of the players association during the first week in June," said Ziegler, "is a better bet" for reaching an agreement.

The Calgary Flames confirmed they expect to move into their new arena by next December. The Flames currently play in the 7,234 seat Stampede Corral, a building far short of NHL attendance specifications.

Ainge, Daly make successful debuts

By The Associated Press

Danny Ainge and Chuck Daly have made successful debuts in the National Basketball Association, although in each case it took a little longer than the principals might have preferred.

After lengthy legal hassles over his contractural commitments to baseball's Toronto Blue Jays, Ainge played his first National Basketball Association game Wednesday night.

Ainge scored just two points but handled the ball well, helping the Boston Celtics beat the New Jersey Nets 109-100. He played 10½ minutes, primarily because Boston guard Tiny Archibald was hurt.

Daly, meanwhile, was a winner in his first game as an NBA head coach, leading the Cleveland Cavaliers to a 112-108 victory over the Atlanta Hawks in overtime.

Celtics 109, Nets 100

Larry Bird scored 30 points and Gerald Henderson, making a rare start, hit for a career-high 27 to lead Boston over New Jersey.

The Celtics trailed by as many as 11 points in the first quarter but went in front 57-53 at the half as Kevin McHale came off the bench and scored 10 points in a 34-point second quarter. Bird enabled the Celtics to pull away to a 92-79 third quarter lead as he scored 14 points.

The Nets were led by Otis Birdsong with 28 points and Buck Williams with 20.

Cavaliers 112, Hawks 108

Mike Mitchell scored 27 points and James Edwards added 23 for the Cavaliers, who had lost eight in a row and 12 of 13 before Daly, formerly an assistant with Philadelphia, was hired to replace Don Delaney as coach.

Atlanta led 96-93 when Cleveland's Roger Phegley tossed in a three-point shot with three seconds left in regulation time. Atlanta's Eddie Johnson then missed on a close-range shot at the buzzer. Atlanta grabbed a 103-99 advantage in the extra period, but Phegley, Mitchell and Bill Laimbeer combined for four field goals to give Cleveland a 107-103 lead with 1:06 remaining. Atlanta's Dan Roundfield led all scorers with 33 points.

Bucks 89, Rockets 83

Junior Bridgeman scored Milwaukee's final four points to seal the victory over Houston, as the Bucks welcomed back All-Star forward Marques Johnson.

Johnson ended a contract holdout earlier Wednesday, then played about 15 minutes, scoring seven points and committing three fouls.

Sidney Moncrief scored 20 points for Milwaukee. Moses Malone of Houston also had 20, while teammate Mike for the Bucks.

Pacers 113, Jazz 77

Indiana Coach Jack McKinney may have summed it up best when he said: "It was simply a good NBA team having an 'up' game and another NBA team having a 'down' game."

The Pacers blew the Jazz away on a 16-point run that gave them a 45-19 lead with 6:12 left before the half. They led at intermisson 59-34.

Indiana, with Johnny Davis' 16 points heading six players in double figures, held the NBA's leading scorer, Adrian Dantley, to six points. It was the first time since the 1979-80 season that Dantley has scored fewer than 10 points in a game.

76ers 137, Nuggets 109

Julius Erving scored 27 points and Darryl Dawkins added 19 as Philadelphia handed Denver its sixth loss in a row.

Spurs 110, SuperSonics 99

Twenty-five points by George Gervin and 21 by his backcourt mate Johnny Moore paced the Spurs over the SuperSonics, who got a game-high 28 points from center Jack Sikma.

San Antonio never trailed after Gene Banks' three-point play with 10:44 to go in the second quarter. Seattle pulled to within three points at the start of the final quarter on a three-pointer by Fred Brown, a layup by James Donaldson and a jumper by Wally Walker. But Moore then broke loose for 10 points to quell the Seattle rally.

Kings 113, Mavericks 109

The Kings rallied from a three-point deficit with 21 seconds left in regulation time to tie at 102-102 and won it with the help of four points each in overtime by Phil Ford and Mike Woodson.

Dallas missed four foul shots in the extra period.

Kansas City's Cliff Robinson had a game-high 25 points, while Rolando Blackman led Dallas with a career-high 23.

Warriors 134, Suns 127

Golden State outscored the Suns 10-3 in the second extra period, with Bernard King scoring four of his 45 points in the decisive overtime.

Newman tops Stanton's All-District grid choices

District 5-AA runner-up Stanton placed five players in six positions on the loop's first team All-District club.

The Buffs beat out district champions Plains with the highest number of players on the team. The Cowboys placed three players in six spots on the elite squad.

Third place Seagraves had three players named to five spots on the honor team.

Stanton's representatives selected were led by senior running back Kevin Newman. Newman finished the 1981 season with 1,570 yards rushing on 279 carries for a 5.6 average. He also recorded 13 touchdowns for the Buffaloes.

Also named to the elite team from Stanton were junior tackle Scott Church, senior guard George Lewis and senior center Fabian Villa.

Lewis, one of the top Buffs tacklers with 164 stops, was also named to the first-team defensive unit. Rounding out Stanton's first-team selections is defensive back Tommy Esparza. Esparza, a junior, led the Buffs in pass interceptions with six.

Stanton had four juniors named to the second team. Church was honored as the second team punter and kicker while Esparza was selected as an offensive end.

Stacy Spinks was selected as a second-team linebacker and Marizo Iaquaniello, in only his second year of football, won a berth as a defensive back.

Rams owe taxes

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Orange County officials say they will seize equipment of the Los Angeles Rams if the National Football League club fails to come up with what it says is nearly $650,000 due in back taxes.

The county also might foreclose on some Rams' property if the team doesn't pay some portion of the bill or offer a plan to pay by Monday.

Soc-Hers grab third place

LUBBOCK — Beth Field rifled a shot from 30 yards out to give Midland the only score in the final game of the West Texas Women's Soccer Association tournament here last weekend. The goal was the ninth in five games for the Southland Royalty Soc-Hers and locked up a third place finish in the 19-team tournament.

Midland lost their opener to the Huff and Puffs 2-0, but rallied for third place as the defense shutout the final four teams and produced nine goals offensively.

Southland Royalty was the only team not from Lubbock to receive an invitation to the WTWSA tournament. The team was formed by coach Jim Hawthorne two weeks before the tournament. All women on the team play in the Midland Independent Adult Soccer League.

Other Royalty players to score in the final four games were Shayne Bell, Kathy Ehnot, Linda Gomez and Linda Wilson while assists came from Curly Woodcock, Helen Barr, Kathy Davis, Field and Mary Bradford.

The Soc-Hers are planning a Midland tournament in early 1982. Teams wishing to enter should contact Hawthorne at 683-5096 or 683-3476.

Prepare boat properly for long winter storage

The season's over. The last fish has been netted, the final slalom wake cut across the lake. Now winter's on its way and it's time to get the family rig ready for storage.

An hour or two spent getting your outboard in shape for its long winter's "nap" will return its dividend come spring, when the ice is out, and the fish are running, and you motor's ready to go, instead of the shop.

FIRST, RECOMMEND experts at OMC, treat the fuel left in the tank with a conditioner. It stabilizes the fuel up to a year, and prevents gum and varnish deposits from entering the fuel system. Then there is no need to drain the fuel from your engine and tank. After the conditioner has been added, run the engine (in the water or with an accessory flush kit) to make sure the conditioner you use is designed from marine use. Automotive conditioners and additives can do more harm than good.

Next, the powerhead has to be protected against the corrosion that frequently results from winter's abrupt chanes in temperature and humidity. Remove the motor and the carburetor air silencer cover. With the engine running spray an outboard brand engine tuner through the carburetor intake. This will help romove gum, carbon deposits and varnish from rings, pistons and parts. Then disconnect the fuel line and spray rust preventative oil into the carburetor air inakes until the engine begins to smoke heavily. Now shut the engine off and replace the silencer cover. (Note: this should be done quickly, because with the fuel line disconnected, the motor is running only on the fuel in the carburetor system...usually about two minutes worth of running time at most).

REMOVE THE spark plugs and inject rust preventative oil into the plug holes. Crank the engine a few times to make sure the oil is spread inside the powerhead. And while the spark plugs are out, clean them and make sure they're gapped to manufacturer's specifications. Put the plugs back in, but leave the spark plug leads disconnected.

Disconnect its terminals and remove the battery from the boat. Be sure the battery is fully charged then store it in a cool, dry place.

Drain and refill the gearcase with the specified lubricant. Lubricate the rest of the outboard as recommended in the owner's manuel.

This also is a good time to check the prop. After a busy season of boating, a prop has a way of picking up small nicks and bends that rob a lot of the boat's performance. Check with your dealer. Some props can be repaired. But you may opt for one of the newer propellers on the market designed to improve the performance and efficiency of your outboard.

Finally, cover the rig with a tarp or heavy-duty plastic, even if it's being stored inside. A winer's worth of dirt and grime is hard to get rid of in the spring. If you store your motor and tank inside, play it safe and pick a spot free of open flames or sparking devices like pilot lights and appliances. Also disconnect the fuel hose from the tank whenever possible and wrap the hose around the top of the tank. This will trap the fuel in the tank and keep the dirt from enering the fuel hose fittings.

Taking a little time in the fall to get that motor ready for winter will mean you'll be one of the first boatmen back on the water when the warm weather returns.

Old timers not awed by youngsters

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

The mind-boggling statistics of the modern football player, both college and pro, hold no awe for the celebrated "Mr. Inside" and "Mr. Outside" of Army's championship teams of the 1940s.

"Nobody paid any attention to statistics when we played," said Felix (Doc) Blanchard, three-time All-American and Heisman Trophy winner in 1945. "I don't remember any reference to how many yards or how many touchdowns we made as individuals."

"Today we read about a player such as Marcus Allen (Southern California) running for more than 2,000 yards a season and Jim McMahon (Brigham Young U.) passing for 4,000 yards," said Glenn Davis, also a three-time All-America and Heisman winner in 1946.

"That sounds amazing until you note that Allen carried the ball more than 400 times and McMahon passed almost every time he got the ball."

"You're talking about handling the ball 40 or 50 times a game. Doc there," pointing to his old teammate, "he — like me — carried the ball maybe only 15 times a game but he also was blocking, tackling on defense, punting and kicking off."

"AND GLENN," added Blanchard, "he'd get off on a 40-yard run and, almost before he could catch his breath, would be blocking for me or playing safety on defense. There wasn't any time to rest."

Blanchard, "Mr. Inside," and Davis, "Mr. Outside," are a couple of the more illustrious relics of a long-lost era of the game — the period of the two-way player.

Blanchard and Davis won the Heisman on successive years on the great Earl Blaik-coached teams of 1943-46 that won two national titles. Blanchard never played in a losing college game. Davis was a member of the 1943 team that bowed to Notre Dame.

Both men were the sports heroes of their day, eclipsing everybody in the pro ranks. In the 1940s, the Army-Navy and Army-Notre Dame games were equivalent to today's Super Bowl.

Ali confident for fight Friday

NASSAU, Bahamas (AP) — "I had a bad night and they ran me out of the country," Muhammad Ali said Wednesday, talking about his one-sided loss to Larry Holmes last year and his scheduled fight Friday night against Trevor Berbick.

"I had to come to a black country to get a license," said Ali.

The former three-time heavyweight champion, who was stopped after 10 rounds by Holmes at Las Vegas, did get a boxing license in South Carolina last summer, but this Caribbean island got Ali's last venture into the ring.

The Nevada State Athletic Commission, in the wake of the loss to Holmes, was considering suspending Ali's license, when Ali voluntarily surrendered it.

Last January, the Hawaii state attorney general's office ruled that by the time the state's boxing commission could a special meeting on Ali's license request, he would be over the 38-year age limit for fighting in the state.

So, Ali, who will be 40 Jan. 17, finds himself at this stop on the cruise ship trail for a fight against a former maitre 'd on a cruise ship.

Ali exhibited a sharp left jab and hook in a four-round workout Tuesday against Tony Coster, who said he has not fought professionally or as an amateur.

Berbick, a 27-year-old native of Jamaica who lives in Nova Scotia, has been training in Freeport, Bahamas.

apple computer

If you've been waiting for just the right reason to investigate Apple personal computers, we at Computer Technology Associates would like to suggest one. There is no better gift for the whole family!

And right now we're poised, primed, and ready to show you exactly how the Apple can do such things as help with a child's education, balance the books, provide counsel on investments, or just plain entertain your family with its intriguing computer games.

We're also ready to explain how, as you gain experience and your uses grow, the Apple has the power to grow right along with you. To the point where you could soon be expanding your system and adding a wide array of fascinating accessories.

We have the accessories, too - for Apple and the other fine computers we feature. And we have an outstanding selection of games and other software, plus books, for the computer enthusiasts on your Christmas list.

Come see how easy it is to choose and use a personal computer at CTA: your logical computer source. Better hurry, though. With the holidays upon us, there may not be many Apples left for the picking.

Former Brigham Young All-American Danny Ainge, left, is shown in his NBA debut as a Boston Celtics as he looks around New Jersey Nets Len Elmore during Wednesday night action in Boston. Ainge, who was activated earlier Wednesday, had been the center of a bitter dispute between the Celtics and baseball's Toronto Blue Jays.

OU resumes grid workouts

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — After a 10-day practice layoff, the Oklahoma Sooners resumed workouts Wednesday afternoon at Owen Field in preparation for their Sun Bowl game with the University of Houston Dec. 26 in El Paso.

The Sooners used the 90-minute practice session primarily as a refresher course with emphasis on polishing their plays and formations against the basic Houston offenses and defenses.

The Sooner injury situation has improved considerably since a rash of late regular-season injuries.

Starting fullback Stanley Wilson, who missed the Oklahoma State contest with cracked ribs, returned to practice and will play in the Sun Bowl. Senior quarterback Darrell Shepard has recovered from a sore knee and also worked out Wednesday.

Barnett says King promised 'she would take care of me'

LOS ANGELES — Marilyn Barnett, former lover of tennis champion Billie Jean King, testified Wednesday that King told her repeatedly "she would always take care of me" and in 1973 told her to "go find myself a beach house."

Barnett, King's former hairdresser and personal secretary, has sued King under the state's "Marvin" ruling for lifetime support and for ownership of the Malibu house in which she has lived for the last seven years. Named for actor Lee Marvin who was sued by his longtime roommate Michele Triola Marvin, th state Supreme Court ruling provides for division of property by unmarried couples who live together if some support agreement exists.

BUT BARNETT took the witness stand before Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Julius M. Title to defend herself against eviction proceedings by King and her husband, larry, who want to sell the house.

King has acknowledged her homosexual relationship with Barnett, which ended in 1978, but denied she ever agreed to give her the house or to support her.

King and her husband both testified Wednesay that Barnett never had any formal claim to the house.

But Barnett, dressed in a floor-length gray flannel suit and walking with the aid of a cane because of injuries suffered n a fall at the house, insisted both Kings intended the property to be hers.

WHILE SHE traveled with King as $100-a-month personal secretary in September 1973, Barnett said, King suddenly told her to "go find myself a beach house."

Barnett said she engaged a realtor and that Larry King went to look at one house she selected, telling her the guest apartment would be a good place for her to live.

"Billie told me not to worry about it, that she would straighten Larry out," she related.

Later, she said, "Billie told me she had talked to Larry and that Larry agreed and understood that the beach property would be mine."

She said she never asked the Kings to transfer the title to her because: "I wasn't concerned about that. She bought the house for me. I trusted her."

When Mrs. King first tried to hire her as a personal secretary in May 1973, Barnett said she balked at quitting her job as a successful hairdresser, her only means of support.

"She said not to worry about giving up my work," Barnett said, "that she would take care of me financially."

The promise was repeated several times, Barnett said, including when King was hospitalized for knee surgery and concerned that her own career might end.

Oilers to trade Earl?

HOUSTON (AP) — Earl Campbell says he doesn't believe denials by the Houston Oilers that he will be traded at the end of the National Football League season.

"I'm expecting the worst," Campbell said. "Pro football is a business and players don't have a lot to say about what goes on. It's one of those things that I might be driving on my ranch in Tyler this winter and hear on the radio, 'Bulletin, Earl Campbell has been traded.'"

Since the Oilers fell from playoff contention, speculation has mounted that Campbell will be put on the trading block while he still has "trade value." But Coach Ed Biles and the Oilers front office have insisted he will stay with the team.

The Buck fund: A battle over $25 million a year

By PHILIP HAGER
Los Angeles Times

SAN FRANCISCO — When a wealthy widow named Beryl H. Buck died in 1975, she left behind $7 million in oil stock for "care for the needy" of suburban Marin County, her home for years.

But then came the oil embargo. And when the stock finally was sold, its value had leaped to nearly $300 million — 40 times its worth at Mrs. Buck's death — and all destined for a community with a national reputation for affluence and trendy, laid-back life styles.

Now, perhaps inevitably, a bitter battle has broken out over the Buck fund, involving charitable groups, county officials and the foundation that administers the fund — with the courts and the state attorney general looking on as referees.

The complainers are quick to note that the fund has provided $6,000 to the Bolinas Community Bio Dynamic-French Intensive Garden School; $114,600 to the Point Reyes Bird Observatory, $403,064 to an organization helping reduce stress among children of the divorced, $5,000 to help re-create a 16th-century Italian wedding celebration at Dominican College, and $5,000 to a group producing "a dramatic dialogue depicting the history of women in the United States."

Twenty-eight non-profit Bay Area organizations, charging that "need" is being equated with "desire" in Marin, are trying to "break" the Buck trust's Marin-only limitation. They claim they are entitled to some of the money to spend on what they see as more pressing needs of the poor outside wealthy Marin.

"THIS IS AN embarrassment," said attorney Robert Gnaizda of Public Advocates Inc, representing the organizations. "We believe this is a perverse, foolish and uncharitable view of what to do with $300 million."

The Marin County Board of Supervisors is complaining that county government is being short-changed, receiving only $1.6 million of the $18.3 million it sought from the San Francisco Foundation, the fund's manager.

County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney says the foundation is "biased against government applications" for the money, and that its staff has "little or no knowledge of local governmental procedures, fiscal restraints and responsibilities."

The San Francisco Foundation defends the programs it is supporting in Marin as meeting Mrs. Buck's instructions to use her money for "the needy . . . and for other non-profit charitable, religious or educational purposes." The foundation emphasizes it is legally bound by Mrs. Buck's wishes — and that first priority will go to privately funded programs and projects, not government agencies looking to replace lost tax revenue.

"WE MANAGE OVER 100 different trusts," said Martin Paley, the foundation's director. "We feel a deep obligation to people who left these monies to manage them in the fashion they expected."

Paley acknowledges that Marin suffers from a national image of affluence. "From our experience, that's not accurate," he said. "There are needs and interests and problems in Marin that warrant attention, and there are some extraordinarily responsible people there trying to address those problems."

The state attorney general's office takes the position that the Marin-only provisions of Mrs. Buck's will can be modified — but only when charitable spending reaches "saturation" in the county. But that point hasn't been reached, the attorney general says.

"We feel obliged to enforce the law, and the law protects the express wishes of people who die and leave money for specific trust purposes," said Deputy Attorney General Carole Ritts Kornblum. "You can't just disregard what Mrs. Buck said . . . and, by and large, what's been spent there in Marin has been 99 percent beyond reproach."

THE WHOLE MATTER now is before Marin Superior Court Judge Henry Broderick. Both Public Advocates, representing the non-Marin organizations as well as a group of Marin residents, and the Marin supervisors have filed formal objections to the way the Buck fund is being administered. A hearing is expected this month.

The most far-ranging attack is being made by Public Advocates, representing such potential recipients as the Asian Law Caucus, the Berkeley Women's Refuge, the Chinatown Housing and Health Research Project, the Glide Memorial Methodist Church, Mission Media Arts, and the Oakland Citizens Committee for Urban Renewal.

These groups want all of Marin County's judges to disqualify themselves on the grounds of conflict of interest and urge that a special referee be appointed to review the dispute.

THE GROUPS contend that had Mrs. Buck known what the trust could produce, she would have provided for charity outside of Marin County. They criticize the foundation for being overly generous with Marin grant applicants, noting that the foundation's average grant (from all trusts) to Bay Area area recipients is $18,000 — compared to $89,000 for Marin — and that the foundation rejects four of five applications throughout the area while approving three of every four applications from Marin.

In its defense, the foundation says that the $13.4 million it spent last fiscal year in Marin County assisted projects performing worthwhile tasks involving education, environment, health and social services, as well as projects that "enhance the appreciation of life" through the arts, culture and humanities.

Among other things, it has aided in the construction of more than 700 units of low-income housing; assisted in an economic development program for Marin City, a largely black community of 1,200, most on low incomes, and provided support to a wide range of groups helping senior citizens, rape victims, and disabled persons, among others.

Would the foundation agree to modification of the Buck will's provisions should the courts find that "saturation" had been reached in Marin County?

THE FOUNDATION'S director, Paley, concedes that it could. But he added that "there is no evidence at this point to support (that finding) and we see nothing in the foreseeable future that would warrant deviation from the terms of the trust."

"If we found we had more money available than there are good projects, we'd be the first to suggest the money be used elsewhere," said Paley. "But at present, the dollar value of good projects far outweihs the dollars available."

Two cars wound up in a precarious position after an accident on the innerstretch of Chicago's Lake Shore Drive. Police said they weren't sure how it happened, but they said it started when the driver of the car on the left exited a building garage.

FBI to probe Donovan

Investigation in the area of kickbacks

By GEORGE LARDNER JR.
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The FBI has started a new investigation of Secretary of Labor Raymond J. Donovan as a result of fresh allegations concerning his conduct as a New Jersey construction company executive.

"It's in the ... area of kickbacks," one source said of the inquiry.

The investigation amounts to a "preliminary inquiry" under the Ethics in Government Act and is geared toward determining whether a special prosecutor should be appointed to continue pursuing the case.

Under the act, the attorney general must conduct a preliminary investigation whenever he receives "specific information" that any high-ranking federal officer or campaign official designated by the statute has violated any federal criminal law other than a petty offense.

FBI agents reportedly started work within the last 10 days and have been conducting interviews in the New York-New Jersey area.

THE JUSTICE DEPARTMENT refused all comment, both when asked if new allegations concerning Donovan were under investigation and if the department was considering appointment of a special prosecutor.

"We aren't going to get in the business of commenting on special prosecutors," said department spokesman Tom DeCair. "We rarely, if ever, comment on investigations."

Donovan was not available for comment.

The inquiry at this point is "not meant to be thorough" and is expected to be concluded shortly, well within the 90-day limit prescribed by the ethics in government law.

"It's a reasonably specific allegation," one source reported. "We're not talking about hundreds of thousands of dollars here."

Before his Senate confirmation last February, Donovan was under intensive FBI investigation concerning more than a dozen allegations that he and his New Jersey construction company had links to organized crime.

Donovan weathered the storm, assailing his chief accuser as "murdering slime" and protesting that his nomination had been clouded by an unfair presumption of guilt that he called "the New Jersey syndrome." He declared that the accusations were "unfounded, scurrilous (and) groundless."

THE FBI REPORTED IT WAS unable to corroborate any of the reports despite more than 100 interviews and lengthy inspection of corporate records at Donovan's firm, the Schiavone Construction Co. of Secaucus, N.J.

There were some post-confirmation complaints by Democratic members of the Senate Labor Committee that the bureau's investigation had some major shortcomings, but the grumbling dissipated after a committee staff review.

The current investigation was triggered, sources said, when a new informant stepped forward. Officials evidently concluded they could not ignore the latest assertions.

Administration had behind scenes role at aging conference

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration mounted a behind-the-scenes operation aimed at influencing last week's White House Conference on Aging according to delegates who say were enlisted to serve as "whips" during conference debates.

This contradicts denials from top officials of the Department of Health and Human Services that neither its employees nor conference staff members had anything to do with such a plan.

But several delegates listed as whips or deputy whips on documents leaked by a conference staff member acknowledged that they got instructions from Marlyne Lipfert, an aide to Rick Davis, director of Delegate Services for the conference.

The source of the leak, who asked not to be identified, said the political operation was under the direction of Paul J. Manafort, who directed the Reagan campaign in the South last year.

But interviews with nearly two dozen conference delegates and staff members suggest the operation failed to help the president since the nearly 2,300 delegates approved some 600 overwhelmingly liberal recommendations for boosting benefits for the elderly.

David Newhall III, chief of staff to HHS Secretary Richard S. Schweiker, said through an aide Wednesday he stands by his earlier denials that any department or White House employees had anything to do with the political operation.

NEWHALL DESCRIBED MANAFORT as an unpaid volunteer who handled conference logistics.

Manafort did not return repeated phone calls. His consulting firm said he was out of town.

His partner, Charley Black, said friends in the White House enlisted Manafort's help. Black said it was not unusual for Manafort to volunteer his time, although "we're not in business for charitable purposes."

Manafort showed up at conference offices Oct. 2, the day Schweiker replaced David A. Rust as executive director. Rust had clashed with Republican National Committee leaders — who said they feared the conference was going to prove an embarassment to Reagan — and had balked at giving the RNC a delegate list to conduct what turned out to be a controversial poll of delegates' political views.

Davis, a speechwriter on loan from Human Development Services in HHS and a former Republican campaign worker, did not respond to phone calls.

Ms. Lipfert said she had no comment.

Several whips said Ms. Lipfert contacted them in advance about a meeting with Manafort Saturday night, Nov. 28, a day before the first conference event.

Fred McComb of Minneapolis, who is Minnesota's GOP vice chairman, said he conferred with Ms. Lipfert when he arrived at the Sheraton-Washington Hotel on Nov. 28.

"SHE WAS WONDERING WHO might agree philosophyclly with the administration and we talked about a couple of them. As a matter of fact, I probably gave her a couple of those on the favorable list," said McComb, who was whip for a committee on the government's role in helping the elderly.

Clark named district judge

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov. Bill Clements Wednesday named James Harold Clack, Andrews, as judge of the 109th District Court.

Clack, 53, is an attorney with the G. Bert Smith Jr. law firm.

He attended Texas Western College and received a law degree from St. Mary's University School of Law in San Antonio.

Clack replaces Judge Ken Spencer of Crane, who is retiring.

Hearing held for new bank

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Hearing was held Wednesday by a State Banking Board examiner on the unopposed application for charter of Midland American Bank, proposed for the southwest corner of Midland Drive and FM 868.

Hearing examiner O.A. Cassity said the board likely will consider the application at a voting session in January.

Proposed directors, all of Midland, are Dick Bench, 405 Gihls Tower West; Clyde C. Brown, 3323 Windsor; Harriett P. Faudree, 2001 Winfield; N.C. McCulloch, Route 5, Box 775; and Margaret White, Route 1, Box 103.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, December 11, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Actresses Marie Windsor, Rita Moreno and Anne Heywood share this birthday with you, and so do Christina Onassis and petite singer Brenda Lee. This is also the day in 1936 when Britain's King Edward VIII abdicated the throne to marry American divorcee Wallis Warfield Simpson. Some very attractive-sounding business propositions could be loaded with risk. A well-disciplined approach is the key to success. Be discerning when choosing your friends, partners and associates. Romance will be filled with excitement and happy surprises. Do not be embarrassed to let mate see the depth of your feelings.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A promising day for dealing with customers or clients. Indecision can slow you down. Study materials carefully and then move forward with confidence. Romance comes out from behind a cloud.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Concentrate on finishing correspondence so you can ask for some extra time off to do your Christmas shopping. Heed warning signals. Do not let your feelings override your common sense.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You now have time to sit down, think and plan for the coming year. Employment affairs show signs of improvement. Be sure you give full value for the money you are paid.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): New doors will open for those who are creative. Be yourself when around influential people. Stick to your principles. The emphasis is on choosing what is worthwhile and discarding the useless.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A fine time for resolving personal or professional problems. Teamwork is favored. Avoid being secretive about your plans. Take a closer look at monetary affairs. Complete neglected chores.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Choose your words carefully. People who work behind the scenes like your style. Get agreements in writing. A romance that died could come to life again.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You can do a lot to repair broken relationships now. Put aside old grievances. Relatives can be helpful in business. Travel will bring the results you have been hoping for.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Go ahead with your plans to further a pet project. Influential people will be helpful. Agreements can be finalized. Give older relative tender loving care. The results will warm your heart!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You hit your stride early in the day and end the week on a very positive and productive note. Firm up holiday plans. You can enjoy a relaxing evening with loved one.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your confidence receives a big boost. Dark clouds no longer hover over the romantic horizon. A new personal relationship brings joy. You can find some real bargains if shopping today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Face up to your responsibilities and your personal relationships will improve. Consider the well-being of all family members when making decisions. Give correspondence special attention.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You gain maximum benefits from what you accomplish today. Your independent attitude serves you well. Be content to wait until next year for spectacular results from your work.

Opening lead: Six of ♠.

Bridge is as much a war of nerves as a game of skill. Until you learn to put maximum pressure on an opponent, your effectiveness at the game will be limited.

South held almost enough for a jump rebid. However, he decided that unless his partner could bid again game was out of reach, so he took the conservative course. North's raise to game was beyond reproach, especially since his partner was marked on the bidding with a six-card suit.

West led a low club. East topped dummy's king with the ace, cashed the queen and shifted to a trump. Declarer won and drew two more rounds of trumps to clear the suit. Now he was faced with the problem of avoiding two diamond losers.

Technically, it might be correct to take the diamond finesse. Even if it loses, declarer can still get home by dropping the jack of diamonds next and establishing the ten. As the cards lie, it is obvious that the line would fail.

Instead, declarer selected a line which was perhaps mathematically not as good, but which stood a better chance of revealing which defender held the king of diamonds. He crossed to the king of spades and led a low diamond from the table!

If East held the jack of diamonds and not the king, he might not realize the need to go up with the jack. And if East held the king of diamonds, he might not have the strength of character to duck smoothly when the low diamond is unexpectedly led.

At the table, East did not have the poise to play low in tempo. He hesitated a while, thereby giving away the position, before electing to win the king. That resolved declarer's problem, and he claimed the rest of the tricks.

Man falls from plane; Hangs on for dear life

By SAMUEL A. SCHREINER, JR.
Special from Reader's Digest

It was perfect for flying: clear sky, light wind. At 11 a.m. that December morning, pilot James F. Tobin, 34, eased the throttle forward and the Army U-21, a twin-engine Beechcraft, roared down the runway and lifted into the air. Tobin and his co-pilot Robert Pierce, 33 — civil-service airmen employed by the Army — were flying crated weapons from Morristown (N.J.) Airport to the Aberdeen Proving Ground in Maryland. It was a routine 50-minute run, but it was also Tobin's first day on a new job, his first flight with Pierce, and Pierce's first duty assignment at the controls of a U-21 cargo carrier.

As Tobin nosed the plane upward, a warning light flashed red on the instrument panel. "Cargo door," Tobin realized. He looked back at the door but it was closed.

A former Army captain with 12 years flying experience, including a helicopter hitch in Vietnam, Tobin was used to minor malfunctions. He told Pierce to take the controls. "I'd better go have a look," Tobin said.

Tobin knew the handle at the top of the door canted at a certain angle if it was locked. He could see that the handle's angle was not right, so he began to check the locking pins on either side of the door lock.

"Whoosh!" The 220-mile-per-hour wind created by the plane's speed flung the door outward and downward on its lower hinges, and Tobin somersaulted into the whistling emptiness. "My God, I'm flying," he thought, as his body momentarily rode the slipstream of the plane.

Then almost instantly his left hand grasped a nylon cable on the aircraft's steps, which are attached to the cargo door. The raging cold wind spun his body against a metal brace, Tobin's rib cage took the full force of the blow, but he held on tightly.

Inside the plane, Pierce was still getting the feel of the controls when he heard a sound like a car window opening on a crowded throughway. He glanced over his shoulder and saw a patch of sky where the cargo door had been. No Tobin.

Pierce checked the instrument panel, then looked back over his shoulder. Out the open door he could see a foot. "Is that really Jim out there? Somehow he's holding on!" Instinctively he cut the plane's speed in half.

Desperately holding on, Tobin felt a strange sense of detachment. Then he could feel the plane slowing. With the wind pressure reduced, Tobin mustered every ounce of strength he could and swung his feet against the fuselage, steadying himself.

Head bobbing in the wind, he watched his feet inch slowly along the side of the plane until his left foot hooked itself in the corner of the door jamb. With his hand on the cable, he now had two tentative holds on life. Already, Tobin's muscles were beginning to ache.

Looking out the window, Pierce could see Tobin's face and part of his body. Pierce radioed the New York Air Route Traffic Control Center in Islip, Long Island. "This is Army 882," he said. "I have an emergency. I've got to descend immediately."

At 11:15 a.m., David Schaller was sitting in front of a radar screen at the huge New York center. Back and forth over the radio, Schaller talked with Pierce. The pilot suggested landing at Somerset, N.J., to the east. Schaller considered the possibilities available and knew that 882 would have to make a turn to reach Somerset. Then Pierce recalled another airport, closer and to the west: "I'm going into Solberg-Hunterdon. See if you can get an ambulance standing by down there."

Tobin felt the plane slowly turn and begin to descend. Hanging on was harder now. He couldn't get his right leg hooked into the door, so the leg and lower part of his body were taking the full force of the wind.

Now something began filling his mouth and clogging his throat. Upside down, he felt as though part of his insides were forcing their way into his mouth. "Dear God," he thought, "I've ripped something inside!"

He forced himself to concentrate on the one thing in life he most treasured: his family. He thought of his two boys, seven-year-old Jimmy and four-year-old Chris. "What'll Christmas be for them if they lose their father?" And Colleen. He couldn't bear to think of her trying to cope with Christmas alone.

Back at the center, Schaller had cleared the way for Pierce to descend. And in the cockpit, Pierce's instruments told him he was dropping at the rate of a thousand feet a minute. Every few seconds, he glanced back to see that Tobin was still there.

Suddenly there was the field. When the flaps came down, the turbulent air they created was like an explosion — bouncing the foot Jim Tobin had hooked in the door. Squinting, he watched the runway rush up to meet him. Fearing his head would hit first, he tried to hitch his body up. With a final effort, Tobin cocked his head at the sharpest angle he could. Then the wheels touched and his head had cleared the runway.

Finally, the plane rolled to a stop. With some help, Bob Pierce eased Tobin to the ground. He was shivering, moaning, muttering about his arm, but he was alright and miraculously in one piece. His injuries included a broken arm, a black eye, lacerations from flying rocks and torn cartilage in the rib cage.

Outwardly, Jim Tobin's life now looks very much unchanged. But inwardly, he's a different man. "When God didn't let me go, I was sure he had something in mind for me," Tobin says, "and now I think I know what it was — learning to really appreciate living."

Oil producers plan 11 wildcats, Runnels find completed

Also, a Runnels County Jennings (Pennsylvanian oil) discovery has been completed.

HALE RE-ENTRY

Hanson Corp., Midland, will re-enter and deepen to 10,500 feet the No. 1 Earhart, five miles northeast of Abernathy.

The wildcat was drilled by Southern Minerals Corp. as the No. 1 Earhart, and plugged and abandoned at 8,508 feet in Sept. 1951.

It is 1,980 feet from the north, and 660 feet from the east line of section 68, block A-4, EL&RR survey.

HOCKLEY WILDCAT

The No. 1-19 Nelson will be drilled by the Banam Corp., Midland, five miles southeast of Smyer.

The scheduled 11,500-foot project is 467 feet from the north, and 467 feet from the east line of labor 19, league 3, Jones CSL survey.

LOVING VENTURE

ATAPCO, Midland, will drill the No. 2-4 Lineberry, a 20,000-foot wildcat, 11 northeast of Mentone.

The venture is 1,850 feet from the south, and 2,400 feet from the west line of section 4, block 29, Public School Lands survey.

PECOS PROJECT

Amarex Inc., Oklahoma City, will drill the No. 1 University 10-23, 14 miles east of Fort Stockton.

The 22,800-foot project is 1,320 feet from the south, and 1,320 feet from the west line of section 10, block 23, University Lands survey.

The drillsite is approximately 3,000 feet north of production in the Cunningham Ranch, North (Pennsylvanian gas) field, which produces from an average depth of 17,916 feet. The field was discovered in March 1979.

WARD SEARCHER

Gulf Oil Corp., Midland, will drill a 7,150-foot wildcat, 10 miles northwest of Pyote.

Designated the No. 4 University 18-29, the location is 467 feet from the south, and west line of section 29, block 18, University Lands survey.

It will drilled as a southwest twin to David Fasken's No. 1 Humble-University, dry and abandoned Sept. 10, 1966, at 5,208 feet.

RUNNELS TESTS

Dome Oils Inc., Denver, has staked two 4,700-foot deeper pool wildcats, five miles southwest of Winters.

The No. 12 Rufus Allen "B" is 1,780 feet from the middle south line, and 2,080 feet from the middle east line of section 44, block 63, HT&B survey.

The No. 12 Rufus Allen "E" is located 1,530 feet from the most easterly north, and 4,460 feet from the most easterly west line of the same section.

Dividend Production Co., Abilene, will drill the No. 1-3 Herring as a 5,500-foot wildcat, 12 miles west of Ballinger.

****

The No. 2 Kennedy has been staked by Energy Administrative Service Inc., Dallas, six miles west of Winters.

The scheduled 4,800-foot test is located 467 feet from the north, and 1,600 feet from the east line of tract 13, John L. Lynch No. 442 survey and is one mile south of 4,469-foot Goen production in the Dorman field.

Ridgeway Oil Exploration & Development Inc., Dallas, has staked a 4,500-foot wildcat, six miles northeast of Miles.

The No. 1 Schwertner is 990 feet from the north, and 1,320 feet from the east line of section 94, T&NO survey.

It is 1 5/8 miles southwest of 4,558-foot Dog Bend oil production in the Miles, North field.

STONEWALL TESTS

The site is one mile northwest of 6,130-foot Caddo production in the Gloria Gay field.

Designated the No. 2 Druesedow "A", the location is 3,886 feet from the south, and 2,446 feet from the west line of secion 32, BBB&C survey, abstact A-45.

It is 4,000 feet southeast of 5,985-foot Bend Conglomerate (Pennsylvanian) oil production in the Corsica field.

RUNNELS DISCOVERY

A Jennings (Pennsylvanian) oil discovery has been completed by Cambrian Oil Inc., Odessa, two miles southwest of Hatchell.

The No. 1 Azelle flowed 76 barrels of 44.1 gravity oil in 24 hours through a 10/64 inch choke from perforations between 4,085 and 4,089 feet.

The well is bottomed at 5,100 feet, with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 4,228 feet.

The wellsite is in section 167, ETRR survey.

Parliamentary quagmire stalls Alaska pipeline bill

By WILLIAM KRONHOLM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite approval by both houses of Congress, the $43 billion financing package for the Alaska natural gas pipeline is caught in a parliamentary quagmire, and critics say it still could be defeated — by Congress or the courts.

The House thought it gave final approval to the package Wednesday on a 233-173 vote, sending it to the White House. But opponents raised technical objections, threatened a filibuster, and threw the House action into an unusual legal limbo.

They said an obscure federal law prohibited the House from taking a final technical step needed to send the bill to President Reagan.

A frustrated House Rules Committee voted 13-1 Wednesday night to let the House vote on the identical Senate bill. But that action was called "patently illegal" by two chief opponents, Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, and Rep. Richard Ottinger, D-N.Y.

They said the Rules Committee decision violated a special federal law enacted in 1976 to cover pipeline actions, and any further House vote would lead to court suits over the vote's legality.

Rep. Tom Corcoran, R-Ill., who first raised the technical objections, said a day's delay may allow critics to rally opposition to defeat the measure on the House floor.

"The more time that's been given to this issue, we find the members of Congress increasingly find this to be a bad idea," Corcoran said late Wednesday night. "We have to pick up 30 votes, roughly. I think the chances of doing that are good."

The package, proposed by President Reagan in October, is designed to attract billions of dollars in private construction loans for the 4,800-mile pipeline, intended to bring Alaskan natural gas to the lower 48 states.

Financiers have been reluctant to back the project, saying it is too large and more assurances are needed to ensure a return on their investment.

The package would waive antitrust and pricing laws to shift much of the financial risk from lenders to consumers.

Under a controversial pre-billing section of the package, consumers may have to start paying off billions of dollars in construction loans before the pipeline is completed — even if it is abandoned. Opposition to the package is billed as an attempt to save the consumer from the oil companies.

Mobil attacks U.S. Steel

By MARTHA M. HAMILTON
(c) 1981, The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Mobil Corp., in a tough bidding war with U.S. Steel to acquire Marathon Oil, Wednesday told the Federal Trade Commission it plans to purchase up to 25 percent of the stock of the steel company.

The nation's second largest oil company said it was seeking clearance to buy up to slightly more than 22 million shares of the nation's largest steel company.

U.S. Steel immediately denounced the action as an attempt to "coerce U.S. Steel into abandoning its acquisition of Marathon Oil" and warned investors "not to be misled by Mobil's reckless action." Marathon shareholders, who have overwhelmingly tendered their shares to U.S. Steel, have until midnight Monday to withdraw them.

At the approximately $30 a share at which U.S. Steel last was trading, Mobil's announced plan to purchase of 25 percent of the steel maker's stock would cost only about $669 million — a relatively small amount compared with the $6.5 billion offer Mobil has made for Marathon. The price of U.S. Steel stock is likely to rise as a result of the announcement, however.

The purpose in seeking substantial control of U.S. Steel would be to wring Marathon's oil and gas reserves from the steel company if it wins control of Marathon. The reserves are at the heart of Mobil's bid for Marathon which has been blocked by antitrust concerns over possible reduced competition if the refining, marketing and transportation operations of the two companies were combined.

The FTC, which said Tuesday it would seek an injunction against Mobil's takeover of Marathon as originally proposed, will have to review Mobil's proposed large bloc purchase of U.S. Steel for possible antitrust implications. The commission or the antitrust division of the Department of Justice have a 30-day period in which to review the proposed purchase before Mobil may act. If either antitrust agency requests more information or documentation, the request triggers a second 20-day waiting period following compliance.

There was no trading in U.S. Steel stock Wednesday on the New York Stock Exchange in anticipation of an announcement effecting its price. The announcement by Mobil came shortly after closing.

The announcement, foreshadowed last month when Mobil announced that it had purchased 450,000 shares of U.S. Steel, and speculation that Mobil would try to swallow U.S. Steel were greeted with scepticism by several oil and steel industry analysts who likened it to chain rattling.

Oil companies remaining in Libya

By KAREN TUMULTY
(c) 1981, Los Angeles Times

Despite growing political tensions between the United States and Libya, none of the U.S. oil companies remaining in Libya appears ready to follow Exxon Corp.'s lead in pulling out of the North African nation.

Most of the oil companies have been operating at sharply reduced levels in Libya, but the high price of Libya's oil, rather than its unstable political climate, has remained their principal source of discontent.

Exxon announced last month that it would discontinue its Libyan operations. A spokesman refused to comment Wednesday on the progress of that move or to disclose how many Exxon employees and their families remain in Libya.

Mobil Corp. said shortly after the Exxon announcement that it was considering such a move, and a company spokesman said Wednesday that it was "continuing discussions" of the possibility. However, he said, the company has no immediate plans to alter its operations. Mobil's Libyan oil purchases have fallen to "practically nothing" from 30,000 barrels a day a year ago.

But other companies are showing no such hesitancy about continuing to do business in Libya. Conoco Inc. Vice President Jack Marshall said his company is discussing increasing its purchases of Libyan oil.

Similarly, a Marathon Oil Co. spokesman said the firm plans to buy 4 million barrels of oil from Libya during the fourth quarter.

The figure is much lower than levels of a year ago but is higher than in recent months, when Marathon was exporting only th3 insignificant amounts being paid to it as royalty for its oil production in Libya.

The new purchases would be unaffected by any boycott of U.S. imports of Libyan oil because Marathon, like other U.S. oil companies, sells the bulk of its Libyan oil in its European market.

Court upholds damages decision

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Supreme Court Wednesday found no reversible error in lower court decisions denying damages to a man injured while working on a Winkler County oil well.

Kenneth Barnett sued Houston Natural Gas Corporation and HNG Oil Company, a subsidiary, to recover damages for personal injuries he suffered Feb. 24, 1976, while working for Devonian Well Service, Inc.

Barnett received workers' compensation payments, but sued the two companies as owners of the well.

A Winkler County trial court, however, granted a summary judgement against Barnett stating the two-year statute of limitations for bringing the suit had expired before Barnett initiated action against HNG Oil Company, the true owner of the well.

Barnett had filed suit against the parent corporation prior to the expiration of the statute of limitations, but the court ruled that Houston Natural Gas never owned or operated the well.

The El Paso Court of Appeals upheld that decision and the Supreme Court refused to grant a writ of error sought by Barnett.

American writer Reed memorialied by Soviets

By DAVID MINTHORN
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — The short, stormy life of writer John Reed, an American buried as a Communist hero on Red Square, is coming to the screen in separate Soviet and American films.

The films retelling Reed's adventures in the Russian and Mexican revolutions star Franco Nero in the Soviet version and Warren Beatty in his own American production.

Beatty's film, "Reds," follows Reed and his feminist wife Louise Bryant (played by Diane Keaton) through Greenwich Village, World War I in Europe and the 1917 Russian Revolution. It already has opened, and is due in most American theaters by Christmas.

The three-part Soviet production, set for release next year, has the advantage of being filmed on location in Leningrad, Moscow and Mexico.

"I'm sure Warren asked to film here, too, but they turned him down," said American actress Sydne Rome, who plays Miss Bryant in the Soviet version.

Reed is lionized by the Soviet government for his eyewitness book about the Bolshevik uprising in Petrograd (now Leningrad). "Ten Days That Shook the World" includes a dramatic chapter on the storming of the Winter Palace there by the Red Guards.

"The Russians regard Reed as their own hero, and (director Sergei) Bondarchuk has wanted to film his life for a long time," Miss Rome said.

She said it was "just a coincidence" that the Soviet and American films are coming out at the same time, and the Soviet production is not intended to compete with Beatty's film.

"The John Reed story is perfect for a romantic lead, and Warren is playing him as a romantic hero. The Russian film will be more of a documentary," she said.

ENTERTAINMENT

A native of Portland, Ore., and a graduate of Harvard, Reed went to Russia to cover the overthrow of the czarist government after stints as a war correspondent in Eastern Europe and Mexico.

He was befriended by Vladimir I. Lenin after the Bolsheviks seized power and worked as a propagandist for the new communist government.

Reed died of typhus in 1920 in Moscow shortly before his 33rd birthday and was buried at the foot of the Kremlin wall on Red Square, an honor reserved for communist heroes.

His writings are studied by Soviet schoolchildren, some Soviet streets have been named in his honor, and he is prominently mentioned in museums dedicated to the Soviet revolution.

"History has connected for all time the name of the American John Reed with the October Revolution and Lenin," the journal of the Soviet party central committee said in a 1978 eulogy, praising him as "a heroic fighter in the Leninist guard of the planet."

An advocate-journalist who sided with leftist causes from his early days as a reporter in New York, Reed developed a clear, direct writing style which used the techniques of fiction for vivid descriptive reports.

Of his famous account of the October Revolution, Reed wrote, "In the struggle my sympathies were not neutral. But in telling the story of those great days I have tried to see events with the eye of a conscientious reporter, interested in setting down the truth."

The first film in the Soviet series, "Mexico in Flames," depicts Reed's four-month stint in 1913-14 covering the Mexican civil war with Pancho Villa and other revolutionary figures. Mexican and Italian film crews worked on location with the Soviets.

'Reds' is a masterpiece

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

REDS is a masterwork from Warren Beatty, who can now nose-thumb those who predicted another "Heaven's Gate." You can't blame doubters who wondered why he would spend $35 million on a movie about a pioneering American communist. But Beatty appears to have had a vision about John Reed, the Harvard-educated journalist who became obsessed — and later disillusioned — by the Russian Revolution. The least appealing element of the film is the political dogma, which approaches an overload in the second half. Of greater appeal is the human story of Reed and his fiercely independent mistress-wife, Louise Bryant, superlatively played by Diane Keaton.

'A Christmas Carol' at Theatre Midland

The popular Charles Dickens classic, "A Christmas Carol," will be performed at Theatre Midland Dec. 17-20 at 7:30 p.m. with an additional performance at 2:30 p.m. Dec. 20th.

MC offers two musical performances

Midland College's Fine Arts Division has scheduled two free musical presentations this coming week.

The Midland College Community Band will give a concert Sunday at 8 p.m. A Faculty Recital will be given at 8 p.m. Dec. 17 featuring vocal musical director Dr. Michael Jordan and adjunct voice instructor soprano Janice Archer, with a special appearance by The Thouvenel String Quartet.

Both performances will be in the recital hall of the Allison Fine Arts Building.

The 28-member MC Community Band, conducted by Dan Green, has scheduled a program of secular and religious Christmas music for its final concert of the fall term.

For the Dec. 17th vocal concert, Jordan, baritone, will open the program with "Kantate #56" by Bach, accompanied by The Thouvenel String Quartet. Other numbers to be presented by Jordan, accompanied by Dr. Betty Morris, piano instructor, will be "Apres un Reve" and "En Priere" by Faure and "Songs and Proverbs of William Blake" by Britten. Following intermission, Jordan will present three compositions, "Alles Endet Was Entstehet," "Anakreons Grab" and "Verborgenheit," by Wolf.

Christmas Pops is Tuesday

The Midland-Odessa Symphony and Chorale will perform its Cabaret Christmas Pops Saturday in Odessa and Tuesday in Midland at the Midland Center, corner of Wall Avenue and Main Street.

The evening's entertainment, which follows a Boston Pops format, will include wine and cheeses catered by Oliver's. The symphony will be directed by Dr. Thomas Hohstadt and the chorale by Dr. Stan Engebretson.

Tickets for the event are $7.50 plus an optional $6.50 snack ticket which should be purchased in advance. Reservations may be made by calling 563-0921. Seating is limited to 800.

2 out of 3 smokers choose MERIT low tar/good taste combination over leading higher tar brands.

MERIT Clear Choice In New Tests.

In impartial new tests where brand identity was concealed, the overwhelming majority of smokers reported MERIT taste equal to—or better than—leading higher tar brands.

Moreover, when tar levels were revealed, 2 out of 3 chose the MERIT combination of low tar and good taste.

MERIT Switch Clicks.

In the second part of this extensive new study, former higher tar smokers report MERIT is an easy switch, that they didn't give up taste in switching, and that MERIT is the best-tasting low tar they've ever tried.

Year after year, in study after study, MERIT remains unbeaten. The proven taste alternative to higher tar smoking—is MERIT.

Class would turn into circus teacher says

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas' creation statute will turn classrooms into circuses, with pupils trying to catch teachers disobeying it, a school official says.

"If you implement the law, students would have ample opportunity to catch the teacher doing wrong," Dennis Glasgow, science director for Little Rock schools, said Wednesday during the third day of the U.S. District Court trial of a lawsuit challenging the law.

"In that kind of circus atmosphere, they'll lose respect for teachers, teachers will lose respect for themselves. It will be very degrading," he said.

Glasgow said the law requires schools to give creation the same legitimacy as evolution.

Glasgow testified before Judge William Overton. The American Civil Liberties Union filed the lawsuit May 27 for a group of scientists, educators and clergymen. The ACLU says the law, which requires public schools to teach both the theory of evolution and the theory of creation-science if either is taught, is vague and violates academic freedom and the constitutional requirement for separation of church and state.

WITH GLASGOW'S TESTIMONY, the ACLU began to focus on education problems after its earlier witnesses — prominent religious scholars and some of the world's best-known scientists — said the law's creation concept is religious and without a scientific footing.

The state, which says the view is scientific and not religious, will begin presenting its evidence when the ACLU has finished.

Passed in March, the Balanced Treatment for Creation-Science and Evolution-Science Act applies to schools in September, but is impossible to implement, Glasgow said. It allows only scientific evidence, but there is none for creation, and forbids religious writings, which is the basis for the creation concept, he said.

Overton, citing the phrase "sudden creation" in the law's six-point definition of the acceptable creation concept, asked Glasgow if he knew how that could be implemented without reference to a creator. "No," Glasgow answered.

Melee breaks out after police shoot black

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A black neighborhood was at an uneasy calm today after the shooting of a black teen-ager by a white policeman triggered three hours of rock-and-brick throwing, officials said.

At the height of the melee, which broke out Wednesday evening five blocks north of the University of Florida campus, about 60 police officers in riot gear were called in to quell the disturbance, said police Lt. Don Dean.

CARS WERE damaged by thrown rocks and bricks, and a 16-year-old girl suffered facial cuts when a brick was thrown through a car window.

By 9 p.m., police, reinforced by a special weapons and tactics team from the Alachua County sheriff's office and campus police, had sealed off the area. Police said the area was secure a half hour later, Dean said.

"We are at this time keeping a vigil in the area," he said. Eight police cruisers patrolled the outskirts of the neighborhood, blocking the area to outside traffic, he said.

Columbus Williams, 16, was shot following the attempted arrest of four men by two undercover officers after an aborted drug deal Wednesday, Dean said.

WILLIAMS WAS listed in satisfactory and stable condition at Alachua General Hospital after spending two hours in surgery. Hospital President Edward Peddie said he was "alert and talking to us when he was brought in," adding that the bullet entered the youth's body through the right abdomen and lodged in his chest.

No charges have been filed against Williams.

Dean said officer Ernest Bridges and another white policeman, Drayton McDaniel, were in civilian clothes as they walked through the neighborhood and four men allegedly offered to sell the drugs.

The officers made the purchase. "I believe it was marijuana, but I'm not certain," Dean said. Afterwards, they identified themselves and the four men ran, with police chasing them on foot, he said.

DEAN SAID THE officers overtook the suspects and Williams wrested Bridges' .357-Magnum revolver from him, creating a "life-threatening situation" and forcing Bridges to pull a second gun and shoot.

"(Bridges) wasn't in any danger," said Joseph Bryant, an insurance agent who lives about a block from where the shooting took place.

"WILLIAMS WAS lying on his stomach. He was physcally helpless. He was lying on a curb," Bryant added. "He wasn't even moving. He wasn't even in a fleeing position. The police just stood over him and shot him."

Another eyewitness, 21-year-old Sharon Alexander said: "He was getting up. Boom! He shot him."

A crowd of 35 to 50 black youths gathered at dusk as police officers gathered at site of the shooting to mark with chalk the spot wher Williams had been wounded that afternoon.

Nuclear guards fired for smoking pot

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Twenty-four security guards at the Surry nuclear power station have been disciplined for violations of company rules related to the use of illegal drugs, Virginia Electric & Power Co. says.

Three security officers resigned under pressure or were fired Wednesday for smoking marijuana while on their way to work at the Surry plant and 10 others were dismissed or resigned for refusing to cooperate in an investigation and for lying to company officials, Vepco said in a news release.

Six other security officers were suspended without pay for smoking marijuana off-duty or because they knew marijuana was being smoked by security officers off-duty, but failed to report it to company officials, the utility said.

Vepco said the disciplinary actions grew out of a probe the utility conducted into allegations by unspecified individuals that a number of security officers at Surry had smoked marijuana while on their way to work or while off-duty.

HOW TO EARN UP TO $2,000 INTEREST AT THE DROP OF A HAT.

★ Introducing a financial first. From First Savings & Loan Association of Midland. The All Saver's Certificate, a fully insured savings plan that earns up to $1,000 tax-free interest on individual returns or $2,000 tax-free interest if you file a joint return.

★ Now for the first time, Uncle Sam will not only fully insure your savings plan, he'll give you a tax break on it as well. Here's how it works: to equal an assumed tax-exempt yield of 12½%, a taxable investment would have to earn 17.86% if your family income is $25,000 and your tax bracket is 30%.

| IF YOUR FAMILY INCOME IS: | YOUR TAX BRACKET PROBABLY IS: | THE INTEREST RATE YOU'D HAVE TO RECEIVE TO NET 12.5% AFTER FEDERAL INCOME TAX IS: |
|---|---|---|
| $50,000 | 50% | 25% |
| $35,000 | 40% | 20.83% |
| $25,000 | 30% | 17.86% |
| $20,000 | 25% | 16.67% |

Figures above are approximate and based on 1981 tax tables. Interest rate on 12.5% is an assumed average investment yield on the All Saver's Certificate. Actual rate is 70% of the average investment yield on one-year treasury bills at date of purchase.

★ You can see why the All Saver's Certificate is a savings break-through. But you may not see it for long. The program begins October 1, 1981 and ends December 31, 1982. So hurry to First Savings and Loan Association of Midland and purchase your All Saver's Certificates.

Syndicated columnist Jack Anderson, appearing on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" show, displays composite sketches of what he said were five members of an alleged assassination squad dispatched by Libya to the United States. Anderson's office said that the sketches were part of a packet sent by the Customs Service to border patrol and customs stations around the country.

Greece vetoes NATO communique

By HENRY GOTTLIEB
Associated Press Writer

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Greece carried its feud with NATO ally Turkey into the winter meeting of the Western foreign ministers today after blocking the defense ministers' communique because they would not brand the Turks potential aggressors.

It was the first time since NATO was formed in 1949 that the defense ministers failed to issue a closing statement.

Turkish Defense Minister Umit Haluk Bayulken called the Greek position "absurd and preposterous."

"To seek security guarantees by a member against another member of the alliance is an incredible proposition," he told a news conference today. "The alliance is based on the assumption that the members are united against a common threat.

"It has consistently been the Turkish position to resolve these differences (with Greece) through negotiations."

U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and the other defense ministers of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization on Wednesday rejected a demand by Greek Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou for a statement guaranteeing his country against any aggression by Turkey.

The two neighbors have been NATO's eastern defense anchor since 1952, but their traditional, centuries-old hatred has been revived in recent years by rivalry for control of Cyprus and the Aegean Sea.

Greece withdrew from participation in NATO's military activities in 1974, after the Turkish invasion of Cyprus. The United States got it to return in 1980, but the election of the anti-American, anti-NATO Papandreou in October reversed the trend.

Papandreou, who is also Greece's defense minister, told the other NATO defense ministers at the start of their semi-annual meeting Tuesday he was considering a "process of disengagement from agreements that are prejudicial."

NATO Secretary-General Joseph Luns said he wanted the final communique summing up the two-day meeting to include "the guarantee that the eastern frontier of Greece (with Turkey) would be protected against aggression."

Luns said Turkish representatives gave Papandreou that assurance verbally but "objected to a text which would indicate that in some way the alliance thought Turkey would be capable of attacking Greece, or that Turkey would have the intention of doing so."

He said he and representatives of Italy, Norway and Britain proposed a text "which would in a general way reflect the position of the alliance that it was inconceivable that countries of the alliance would aggress against each other." However, Papandreou refused to accept that and then vetoed the rest of the communique.

Luns told a news conference Papandreou would raise the issue today with Turkish Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen.

The secretary-general read a lengthy declaration calling for NATO solidarity against Soviet military buildups and welcoming the opening of U.S.-Soviet negotiations in Geneva to limit the deployment of nuclear missiles in Europe. The U.S. ambassador to NATO, William Tapley Bennett Jr., said the statement was the communique the defense ministers would have issued if Papandreou had not vetoed it.

During the election campaign last fall that brought him and his Socialist Party to power, Papandreou demanded better terms for permitting U.S. bases in Greece, for Greece's continued participation in NATO's military activities and guarantees against Turkish aggression.

Papandreou met Wednesday with Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., and State Department spokesman Dean Fischer said they had a "valuable, substantive and productive" talk. He refused to give any details.

Libyan 'hit team' still causes much concern

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan scheduled his third meeting of the week with national security advisers today amid reports that an alleged assassination squad dispatched by Libya is now in Mexico.

Although deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said it would be wrong to assume that Libya was the topic of today's meeting, other sources indicated it would be discussed.

Meanwhile, syndicated columnist Jack Anderson, appearing on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" today, showed what he said were composite sketches of five members of the alleged assassination squad.

A spokeswoman for Anderson, Vicki Warren, said later that the sketches were part of a packet of information sent by the Customs Service to customs and border patrol stations around the country.

Anderson identified the five, who, he said, use a variety of aliases, as Ahmed Jooma, Ali Chafic, Ahmat Abass, Ibrahim El Haya and Luitz Schewesman.

The columnist said Jooma and El Haya are Iranians; Chafic, a Lebanese; Abass, a Palestinian; and Schewesman, a German.

Anderson said there are nine others in the alleged "hit team," but no sketches of them have been made. He identified them as Nabib Berry, Mohamed Shams-e-Din, Soulaymane Hassan, Omar Sabruhui, Feysal Fouad, Abou Ali, Choumaly Saleh, Husayni Hassan and Saleh Hassan.

The columnist said the alleged assassination squad had orders, in his words, "to shoot Reagan or the highest available American official."

CBS News Wednesday night quoted unidentified congressional sources as saying an alleged five-member terrorist team — which the Reagan administration says was formed by Libya to kill the president and other high-ranking U.S. officials — is in Mexico. Speakes declined to discuss the CBS report.

Previous reports have said the alleged hit team was believed to have been in Canada and to have entered the United States.

CBS also quoted congressioinal sources as saying, "U.S. intelligence reports indicate that the members of the alleged hit team have had previous contacts with the Weather Underground terrorist organization here in the United States."

The network said it had been told that the informant who reportedly alerted U.S. intelligence officials to the alleged plot was being interviewed by psychiatrists outside the United States and had passed several polygraph examinations.

At least one person who gave information about the alleged hit team has passed a lie detector test, an administration source told The Associated Press.

According to CBS, Capitol Hill sources are increasingly concerned about skepticism expressed in the news media about reports of the hit team. It quoted one official as saying there probably would be "some development" in the next few days that will convince everyone the threat is real.

After meeting Wednesday with Reagan, Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., said: "I'm concerned there is a responsibility to take these threats seriously (and) have a high level of concern. I'm also convinced the president is responding to them in a careful and prudent way and appropriately."

Leaks of information about the alleged hit team were criticized Wednesday by Vice President George Bush, while a spokesman for Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. said Haig was "outraged" by reports of possible U.S. action against Libya.

Red Brigade's 'grandma' sentenced

GENOA, Italy (AP) — A Genoa court today convicted Caterina Picasso, the 74-year-old "grandmother" of the Red Brigades, on terrorism-related charges and sentenced her to 40 months in prison.

The woman, dubbed by the Italian press as "nonna mitra," or "machine gun grandma," was tried along with 47 other alleged members of Italy's most feared urban guerrilla gang on charges of belonging to an armed band, illegal possession of arms and conspiring to carry out terrorist raids.

The court convicted 44 of them, sentencing them to prison terms ranging from 2½ to 8½ years. Four of the defendants were acquitted because of insufficient evidence.

Only five defendants were in the courtroom when the sentences were announced. Mrs. Picasso and the others chose not to attend the trial, as is their right under Italian law. Sixteen of the defendants were tried in absentia.

Nitze briefs NATO foreign ministers

The briefing was closed to the public, and there was no immediate report on what Nitze said. There is widespread interest within the alliance on the negotiations that began Nov. 30. Their outcome will affect the deployment of 572 U.S. medium-range nuclear missiles in five NATO countries beginning in 1983.

Nitze was introduced by Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., who is seeking reaffirmation of the alliance's 1979 decision to deploy U.S.-made cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in Europe to counter the Kremlin's SS-20 missiles pointed at Western Europe from Western Russia.

Canadian Foreign Minister Mark Macguigan opened the two-day foreign ministers' meeting today by stressing to the 15 North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies the importance of maintaining their deterrent to possible Soviet aggression.

Quake caused no death

MOSCOW (AP) — The series of earthquakes that demolished or seriously damaged more than 2,000 buildings in Soviet Azerbaijan early this month caused no casualties, the official Tass news agency said today.

On Wednesday, the government newspaper Izvestia said that the quakes, more than 20 of them occurring "in a short period of time," had caused widespread damage but that there was no word on casualties.

Ex-Allende secretary dies

BERLIN (AP) — Osvaldo Puccio, private secretary to the late Chilean Marxist President Salvador Allende, has died in East Berlin, the official ADN news agency reported today.

It said Puccio died Tuesday and was honored in a ceremony today attended by representatives of various leftist Chilean exile groups. The report did not give the cause of death.

FRESH CHRISTMAS TREES AND WREATHS SHIPPED DIRECT FROM THE VIRGINIA PLANTATION
You can have (or send to your friends) a Christmas Tree so fresh that it caresses your face with its soft foliage. The fresh needles will stay on the tree. We have shipped trees and wreaths to Texas friends for years.
The tree will be a groomed white pine just under six feet tall. It will be cut, wrapped in a net sleeve to protect it and shipped by UPS on the date you specify. The beautiful wreaths are pine, with cones and a big red bow—approximately 19" in diameter.
Delivered prices: Trees $29.95 Wreaths $17.50
