19 involved in possible lawsuit against city

Nineteen people, the majority of them minors, notified city hall Thursday of their intentions to file civil claims for unreasonable search.

Seventeen minors and two juveniles were cited for possession of alcohol when city police officers broke up a drinking party last month.

Two adults were cited for making alcohol available to a minor.

According to police reports, officers responded to a call at 12:36 a.m. from a parent who complained that his minor son had returned home intoxicated after attending a beer party at 705 Cedar Street.

"Responding officers observed numerous minors with alcohol. Minors fled out of the yard or into the residence," said See SUIT, page 6

Loraine health clinic opens

Grand opening ceremonies for the Loraine health clinic were held Wednesday, June 26.

The Family Medical Associates began service in Loraine Tuesday and The Heart of West Texas Home Health began service Monday, July 1.

The clinic will be manned by Lorrin Scott, P.A. two days a week and Dr. Dee Roach one day a week. Mary Alice Lewis will be the office assistant.

The clinic will be open Tuesday, 2 to 5 p.m.; Wednesday and Thursday, 9:30 to noon. Home Health will be open from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m.

These initial office hours are flexible and can be expanded or changed later, depending on demand, said Wendell Alford, hospital administrator for the Mitchell County Hospital.

The hours can be coordinated with senior citizen activities, he said.

Cloud seeding program is without pilot

No cloud seeding has occurred over Mitchell County this year, according to a spokesperson for the Colorado River Municipal Water District.

The weather modification program has been without a pilot to fly cloud seeding missions since May when the pilot left to work for a new cloud seeding program in San Angelo, said Martha Hamilton, CRMWD spokesperson.

The district hopes to have the program back in operation soon, she said, but it's difficult to find experienced pilots with cloud seeding expertise.

Cloud seeding is a process of weather modification that takes advantage of every cloud. However, during a drought there are fewer opportunities, said Ray Jones, CRMWD meteorologist.

"This is not drought relief. It's water management," said Ray. "It doesn't and can't stop a drought." Cloud seeding doesn't produce rain, explained Hamilton.

"All we do is try to get more out of the rain clouds that are there," said Hamilton.

City chosen as site for state tire program

Colorado City was one of four temporary sites selected to store used tires, the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission announced this week.

The site is 1.5 miles west of the city, northwest of the intersection of I-20 and FM 3525, said TNRCC Assistant to the Executive Director Ed Clark.

It is located on 50 acres of Texas Department of Criminal Justice land.

The site is one of four established in West Texas where used tires will be temporarily stored as part of a plan to ensure that tires are picked up on a regular basis in this region of the state, said Clark.

Other West Texas sites include El Paso, Midland and Pampa. The were jointly selected by the TNRCC, General Land Office and TDCJ.

Tracking dogs play an important role in TDCJ system

Forget the movie version of dogs tracking an escaped convict. "That's not the way it really is," said "80 John" Wallace Unit Warden Rodney Cooper and Kennel Sergeant Carson Bennett.

In the movies, there's always a scene where the dogs are given a shirt to sniff that belongs to the person they're tracking and if the person escaping has a "good guy" role, he often loses the dogs by crossing a creek.

Reality is different, say those who are involved in tracking humans.

For one thing, dogs track human scents in general, rather than the specific scent of one man. Kennelmen and law enforcement people follow behind on horses, not only to be able to keep up with the racing dogs but also so the dogs can focus on the scent of the person they're hunting.

Secondly, if an escaping person crosses a body of water, the dogs simply cross to the other side until they pick up the trail once again.

And, although TDCJ's canine corps can help a community search for a lost child if asked, their primary purpose is to help guard prisoners or hunt those who have escaped from a prison facility. They also help other law enforcement agencies when needed. While some highway patrol and sheriff's offices have dogs trained to sniff out drugs, tracking a person requires canines with different training and skills.

Tracking dogs play an important role in the TDCJ system. Since the "80 John" Wallace Unit opened here two years ago, the 26 dogs in the kennel have been used for the unit's one escape and they've helped other law enforcement agencies on five different occasions.

The real life experiences of the unit's dogs and dog handlers contain dramatic episodes that are every bit as interesting as the movie cliches.

The dogs were used to track the two prisoners who escaped the Wallace Unit in March 1995. The inmates were apprehended in Oklahoma after only twenty three hours of freedom. After the incident when prison officials learned the route the escapees had taken, they found that the dogs had been on target. Tracking three men in Irion County last year was one of the best examples of the advantages of tracking dogs and the difficulties they encounter.

Heat-seeking helicopters had been brought in to locate three men who had run after 500 pounds of marijuana had been found in the back of their pickup by a sheriff's deputy.

Customs and border patrol people were brought to help search. By the time the unit was called and the dogs arrived, the track was already five hours old.

Across fields, under fences, the dogs were hot on the trail when they came across an unfortunate See DOGS, page 6

WALLACE UNIT KENNEL SERGEANT Carson Bennett and inmate Green, wearing protective clothing, demonstrate how tracking dogs are trained to be aggressive. The 102 pound dog, Big Friendly, stirs up the dust in the kennel yard as he obeys a command to attack.

THIS in THAT

By Sheila Plagens
Greetings to everyone!

Charlie McCollum told me a story the other day and I would like to pass it along to you...

She raised a female boattail grackle bird named Addie B. from a baby, which has now grown up, and bonded to Charlie.

Addie B. sleeps in a bird cage in the back bedroom (because of the cats). If Jay and Charlie don't let her in, she stands at the patio door and makes a "parrot-like" noise. Then around 6 a.m., the bird squawks to be let outside.

The other day Charlie went out and called Addie B. The bird was sitting in a tree in my backyard, almost a block away. Addie B. answered with a chirp and headed for home. The bird swooped down and landed on Charlie's foot and opened her mouth for her food.

All of this was seen by a man mowing the yard across the street from Charlie—wonder what he was thinking?

Leola Anderson's family thinks alike. Last Thursday was her birthday. Knowing she likes to fish, she received two "nice" fish baskets. When asked if she had caught any fish, she said no, but she had plenty of fishing gear when the opportunity presents itself.

Another happy anniversary to Tom and Debby Carlock (July 8)!

Walt and Bonnie Burroughs are busy these days doing remodeling work on the old Perry's building downtown. They purchased the building from the Berman estate and are planning a recreation facility for kids and adults. They are also considering a downtown coffee shop. I know a lot of folks would appreciate a place to get a cup of coffee or a light quick lunch.

Charlie Stigen of Lake Colorado City spent the weekend of June 28 and 29 in North Dakota for his 48-year high school reunion. Charlie and Juanita will spend this weekend in Alpine visiting their daughter and enjoying the holiday festivities there.

John Del Real happened to be in Ranger Sunday morning and was able to help a fellow Colorado Citian. Our own John Martinez and family were coming back from a weekend in the metroplex and were having trouble with their truck.

John M. wanted to say a big thanks to John D. for the help—or else they would still be stranded.

Kathy Watson made a delicious meal for her husband, Paul, last Thursday night—the only problem was he didn't eat it! They stayed on the golf course 'til late and then Paul had to return to the power plant. Paul is manager of the TU power plant. Since he didn't eat dinner Thursday, he said he would have it for lunch Friday. The last time I talked with Kathy, she wasn't sure if he would have "Chicken and Broccoli Stuffed Manicotti" for lunch or a bologna sandwich.

Kathy said when she stays off the golf course long enough to cook, somebody better eat it!

By the way, Susan Goodman, thanks for the lunch! It was great!

Happy anniversary to Landus and Diana Finley (July 4)!

Have a safe and happy 4th of July!

Blood drive set

A community blood drive will be held in Colorado City Wednesday, July 10 from 2:30-7:30 p.m. at the Community Center. The drive is sponsored by the Tumbleweed Lioness Club and will be conducted by United Blood Services of San Angelo.

"We couldn't be happier about coming to Colorado City," said Angie Tyson, UBS Community Relations Representative. "This is a very critical time for blood donations, and we know we can count on Colorado City to support area patients wholeheartedly."

Tyson said the blood supply in June bordered on the critical stage, so extra effort must be made to avoid the situation in July.

"Many of our donors are so busy with summer activities they tend to put donating blood on the back burner," Tyson explained. "Unfortunately, the need for blood is as pressing as always, if not more so, in the summer months. Illnesses, accidents and surgeries don't go on vacation."

UBS needs approximately 300 units a week to adequately service more than 20 hospitals across West Texas.

Since the last blood drive, UBS has given 52 units of blood and there were only 44 units donated. This shows why there is such a shortage.

Donors are asked to bring proper identification, such as a driver's licence, social security card or UBS blood donor card. Donors are also asked to know the name of any medication they are currently taking.

Heritage House will be open during Trade Days

An exhibit of home decor will be featured at the Heritage House during the Railroad Trade Days July 20 and 21.

The Heart of West Texas Museum Director Beth Swindle met with museum volunteers last week to discuss museum plans. The first big project will be preparing a temporary exhibit at the Heritage House for visitors to the Railroad, Swindle said.

China, crystal, quilts and other home decor items from the museum's collection will be featured.

The Heritage House was the first brick home constructed in Colorado City. The restored home, complete with period furnishings, has been open by appointment only.

Swindle said she encourages local residents, many of whom have never toured the Heritage House, to take advantage of the opportunity to see the historical home.

CHIEF LONE WOLF

Baseball!!! Truly, nothing is more American than baseball, apple pie and the Fourth of July! Back in the 1920s, Westbrook's baseball team had gone to play Coahoma and when those two teams met, the fur flew.

The late Truman Henderson, who played for Westbrook, once told us about a bitterly played game between those two teams. In the past, there had always been a 50/50 split on gate receipts. But for this All-American holiday, Coahoma approached Westbrook manager Leroy Gressett as his team put on their uniforms.

"How about a 60/40 split for this game," Gressett was asked. "Well," Henderson continued his story, "that made Leroy mad. He brawl and they thought they had it settled and then the fighting started again. That ended the ball game."

Game called, 3-3 tie, Westbrook and Coahoma. Henderson said that was the last meeting between the two teams.

Truman Henderson was a pretty fair country baseball player himself. He played (shortstop) for a number of local teams, plus teams in Midland, Odessa and Big Spring.

"We didn't have no coaching. We just played ball," he stated. "[We] knew the game pretty good."

One of the teams Henderson played for was the Colorado Fire Department. (If you want to slip a glance at him, he's second from said, 'Gosh darn, we'll just play you winner take all!' And that's exactly what those Coahoma rascals thought he would say.

THE COLORADO FIRE DEPARTMENT TEAM, PHOTO TAKEN IN THE 1920s. Note shadow of the photographer in the foreground. Also, barely visible in the background is the current house.

This picture was taken at the baseball field north of the refinery, where Browne Brothers Manufacturing is now located.

"That's what we wanted," the men from Howard County laughed. And the battle was on. Tip Gressett, brother of Leroy, took the mound for Westbrook and he was unhittable. Unfortunately, Westbrook wasn't exactly clobbering the ball, either. Finally, late in the game the Mitchell County team pushed across one run. That was good enough to win the game. Final score: Westbrook-1, Coahoma 0.

Naturally, the loss didn't set too well with Coahoma, as we shall soon see. But they handed over the gate receipts and Westbrook not only had won the game, but also the money.

Henderson says he doesn't recall any problem getting the money. "I don't reckon we had any trouble," he said. "Leroy got it."

No doubt there were ill feelings between the two teams, nonetheless. Eventually the two teams met again. This would be their last meeting on the baseball diamond. The game was played in Westbrook and with feelings running high, the action rocked along into the eighth inning. Tie game, 3-3, as Coahoma's Cab Clark came to bat.

"The umpire called strike one on him," Henderson remembered. Clark didn't like the call. "He jumped out of the box and kicked dirt around. Then the next pitch was called strike two.

"Clark pulled his cap off and went for the umpire (who was calling balls and strikes from behind the mound). They had a pretty good the right, front row, in the accompanying picture.)

Henderson says the team had pin-striped uniforms and large crowds turned out to see the games. "Good crowds," he nodded, "because we didn't charge anything. We'd pass the hat around and sometimes we'd get enough money to buy balls and bats."

The Fire Department team was pretty salty, according to Henderson. One of their main opponents was the Col Tex Refinery team, which he conceded was "pretty good."

"But they couldn't beat us. (Pause) Oh, they might have beat us once or twice."

Meanwhile, over in Loraine there was another formidable team. Their pitcher was Harvey Muns who is still remembered today by oldtimers. They say he was the best hurler in Mitchell County.

However, for religious reasons, Muns was against playing baseball on Sundays. Despite his strong feelings, he relented and played one particular sabbath in Big Spring. Muns was his usual outstanding self, mowing down the opponents inning after inning. But somewhere along the way Big Spring managed to shove across three runs. Meanwhile, the Big Spring pitcher was no slouch and he held his opponents to only two runs. And that's the way the game ended, 3-2, with Harvey Muns the losing pitcher.

"You can't win on Sunday," Henderson remembers Muns telling him.

Next week, a look at the Col Tex baseball team.

Hospital merger takes steps towards finalization

During a news conference July 1, representatives from St. Mary Hospital and Lubbock Methodist Hospital System signed a definitive agreement for the proposed merger of the two entities.

The agreement outlines the details of the proposed merger, including mission and values, consolidation of assets and operations, proceedings, governance, implementation of the merger process and consent by both parties to conduct due diligence.

The agreement was officially signed by Charley O. Trimble, St. Mary president and chief executive officer; Paul Viviano, St. Joseph Health System senior vice president and chief operating officer; and Alan B. White, chairman of Lubbock Methodist Hospital System.

"This is not a Methodist Hospital or St. Mary Hospital deal," said Trimble. "We believe it is a community issue that will have longterm effects on the local economy and quality of health care that we offer."

A letter of intent to pursue a merger of the two health care systems was signed January 29, 1996. The new locally owned corporation will be named Methodist/St. Mary Health System.

"In the last couple of years, the landscape for health care has changed with managed care coming on the scene. The ability for any of us to do business like we have over the last 15 years is going away," said White. "With that scenario in mind, late October Methodist and St. Mary representatives sat down to discuss ways we could come together to continue providing quality health care in an economically viable fashion."

"In the long run, this merger will have many positive effects on the region," Trimble said. "Ten percent of the net income of the new entity will be given back to the community through outreach programs which address the needs of the poor and underserved."

With the signing of the definitive agreement, the next step is to file the proposal with the Federal Trade Commission and Texas Attorney General's Office.

"If the process continues to go smoothly, we anticipate a final agreement by the end of the year," said White.

CLOUDS

From the records of the Colorado River Municipal Water District

Cloud seeding increased rain by 23% last year

growing cumulus clouds where silver iodide flares are ignited in the region of an updraft, allowing the silver iodide to be carried higher in the clouds as the seeded cloud grows.

Flares of silver iodide are dropped through clouds, shot from the ground or fed into updrafts from beneath—the method practiced locally.

Massive rain clouds are candidates for seeding. Without the aid of cloud seeding, some moisture would stay contained within the cloud, said Jones.

Research indicates that this retained moisture would have never fallen to the ground as rain without the prompting of the injected silver iodide, according to a CRMWD newsletter.

This reasoning supports the general consensus that cloud seeding doesn't steal rain from other counties, because without seeding the cloud, it wouldn't have fallen at all.

The CRMWD's weather modification program targets Mitchell, Scurry, Howard and Borden counties for cloud seeding.

According to the CRMWD meteorologist in the April issue of "The Windmill", the district's newsletter, counties located downwind from the target area such as Garza, Kent, Fisher, and Nolan have actually benefited from the cloud seeding.

A 23 percent increase in precipitation occurred last year because of cloud seeding, according to the Colorado River Municipal Water District.

The CRMWD compiles data on its cloud seeding program and annually publishes a report on the findings. The report focuses on two indicators for success—area cotton yields and rainfall in adjacent counties where seeding doesn't occur.

The statistical analysis for the weather modification-rain-enhancement program for 1995 suggests a 23 percent increase in precipitation since the district began its weather modification program.

A total of 22 cloud seeding missions were flown last year over the target areas of Mitchell, Scurry, Howard and Borden counties.

Cloud seeding occurred from May through October last year. The largest number of missions was flown in May when rainfall was above normal in the target area.

Excerpts from the report that mentions areas of Mitchell County include:

•On May 23 there was mid level cloudiness with warm conditions area wide and cloud seeding was done in Mitchell County at 5 p.m. as severe thunderstorms formed in the Big Spring area.

•On May 26, cloud seeding began at 2:39 p.m. in Sterling and Mitchell counties, generally north and northwest of Sterling City. Cloud seeding was halted that evening as severe thunderstorms occurred and many areas received over an inch of rain from the system.

•The following day a massive thunderstorm moved through

San Angelo causing a tornado, baseball sized hail and 100 mph winds.

On May 29, the aircraft began seeding 10 miles southwest of Colorado City at 10:29 a.m. According to the report, "inflow areas in this region were weak, so the aircraft returned to base."

Tornado warnings halted cloud seeding on May 31 as tornadoes were reported in Sweetwater and north of Snyder.

•By 6:30 p.m. on June 28, thunderstorms with cloud tops near 42,000 feet, began to build to the west, into the target area, southeast of Colorado City. Cloud seeding began at 7:14 p.m., 15 miles east of Big Spring as cloud tops in this area grew 45,000 feet. Seeding then continued from 20 miles northwest of Lake Spence to 15 miles northwest of Sterling City to 20 miles northeast of Big Spring as maximum cloud tops remained near 45,000 feet, 20 miles north of Sterling City.

•On July 2, the aircraft flew to an area 10 miles southeast of Colorado City, where cloud tops were growing rapidly to 47,000 feet. The pilot reported a funnel cloud in between Colorado City and Roscoe, as tornado warnings were issued, so the mission was canceled.

•On July 15, cloud seeding began at 6:11 p.m., generally near south and east of Colorado City, and ended at 6:21 p.m., on weak thunderstorms with cloud tops near 38,000 feet in that area. Updrafts were weak and short lived with cloud bases near 10,000 feet, so the aircraft returned to base after a brief mission.

•On July 31, Tropical Storm Dean moved into Southeast Texas and was moving west toward West Texas. By 2:30 p.m., moderate thunderstorms from Snyder to Colorado City with tops near 25,000 feet were moving southwest. Cloud seeding began just east of Lake Thomas and ended just north of Lake Thomas as moderate showers fell.

•On August 3, widely scattered thunderstorms with cloud tops near 28,000 feet formed near and south of Colorado City. The aircraft was launched to the area. Upon arrival, these storms had quickly dissipated, so no seeding occurred.

•On August 26, a strong thunderstorm with cloud tops growing to 45,000 feet formed near and south of Colorado City and moved west southwest at 15 mph. Due to aircraft problems, this possible cloud seeding opportunity was missed.

•On August 31, cloud seeding began just northwest of Roscoe on strong thunderstorms with cloud tops near 35,000 feet in the extreme eastern portion of the target area.

•On September 9, cloud seeding was performed southwest of Colorado City as cloud tops grew to 35,000 feet. The pilot reported the gust front moving rapidly ahead of the rain areas while inflow decreased, so the mission was halted at 9:07 a.m.

•The only significant rain to occur in October or November was on October 2. On October 2, cloud seeding was performed at 8:22 a.m. over and just east of Lake Thomas.

obstacle. A porcupine put them out of commission and another pack of dogs had to be brought in.

Authorities were notified the next morning that a citizen had spotted the wanted men. Footprints were found in the area where they had been seen and the dogs picked up the scent from that point. They found two of the men about 40 minutes later, said Sgt. Bennett, and the third, who had gone in another direction, was found about 15 minutes later.

Despite the technology of the helicopters, it was the dogs, with their training and ability to go where men and even horses are unable to maneuver, that made the difference.

"All the training and working with the dogs really pays off when you get a call and then the dogs do well and they get the man," said Bennett.

Sgt. Bennett, Assistant Officer Douglas Krone and two inmates train and work with the dogs every day. Kennel duty is one of the few jobs at the prison which is not assigned, said the warden. The volunteer kennelmen, often referred to as dog boys, have to enjoy working with the dogs and have a natural aptitude for the job.

Although some dogs have been given to the kennel by other law enforcement agencies, most are conceived, born and bred at the unit. They're taught to trust and obey their handlers from the moment they're born.

Bennett explained that a dog boy is assigned to a litter of puppies. Even before they're born, the handler works with the mother dog, rubbing her stomach and is there for the birth. A dog bonds with its handler just as it does the mother dog. By the time the puppies are weaned and ready for training, they follow the handler around the kennel yard as they do their animal mother.

To learn to track, "they start with 25 yards. Next day they go 35 and then they run with a whole pack," said Bennett. "By the time they're six to seven months old, we hope they're running a two mile track that's already an hour head start."

Local landowners let them run the dogs on their property. They practice day and night in all kinds of weather conditions.

"Any kind of weather we have in West Texas so they'll know," said Bennett. "People run off in all kinds of weather and at all times of the day and night."

Unlike many other states which require tracking dogs to be on a leash, dogs in the Texas prison system are allowed to run free. Horses are an important part of the coordinated effort to track a person, enabling dog handlers and searchers to keep up with the racing dogs. The dog handlers and prison officials coordinating the search, the horses and a carefully chosen pack of eight to ten dogs become a team when they're tracking.

The dogs must all be team players, said the warden, and putting together a pack has similarities to putting together a football team. The dogs play different positions with each possessing specific traits that are vital to the success of the hunt.

Some dogs, usually bloodhounds, have especially sensitive noses and have displayed exceptional tracking skills.

Others are "talkers", they communicate the situation—if they've picked up a scent, if the escapees are located, etc.

Others are especially aggressive and guarantee that a man won't run any further. They'll attack on command and if an inmate tries to harm the dogs.

At the Wallace Unit kennel, the dog named "Big Friendly", weighs 102 pounds. Although he's the biggest dog in the pen he's far from being the meanest. "Big George" will grin at you through the cage and "Champ" will crawl up a tree.

"He thinks he's part coon himself," said Bennett. "Little Annie, she gets to running and digging."

The separate personalities and skills come together when they run as a pack.

"When we're running a pack and the younger ones start playing, the older dogs let them know they need to get back to work," Bennett explained.

The practice at the unit kennel goes on day after day so the dogs and their handlers will be ready for the phone call, that can come at any time, requesting their assistance.

"We've covered lots of miles with these dogs," said Sgt. Bennett. "But there'll probably be plenty more."

The participants earn points for placing in the different competitions and they have to earn at least one point to compete in the finals in Clovis, N.M. later in the year, explained Windi Fuller, chamber of commerce director.

There are seven age groups for boys and girls and the events include barrels, poles, goat tying, breakway roping, chute dogging, ribbon roping, team roping, calf and steer riding, calf roping, steer stopping, bull, bareback and saddle bronc riding.

Chaney, Smith place at state 4-H Round-up

By Mary McMullen
CEA-FCS

Local 4-H members were among 2,500 outstanding youth from across the state who competed in the 1996 Texas 4-H Round Up at Texas A&M University.

Round Up, the biggest 4-H event held each year, gives 4-H members an opportunity to gain educational experiences that support 4-H projects, demonstrate skills and practice leadership at the state level. Outstanding 4-H members compete in 44 contests, displaying their speaking abilities, decision-making skills and talents.

This year, in addition to competition, participants learned the value of helping others through "Three Days of Sharing." Rallies were held to motivate young people about community service and to present collected goods such as canned food to recipients.

The Mitchell County 4-H Horse Bowl team was made up of Alyssa Finley, Josh Griffin and Laurie Miller. County Adult 4-H Leaders who accompanied the Horse Bowl contestants were Debra and Lee Roy Miller.

The Texas 4-H Fashion Show also took place during Round Up. More than 100 contestants exhibited their knowledge and skills in purchasing, construction and modeling techniques. Contestants competed for plaques, Savings Bonds and scholarships.

Mitchell County 4-H was represented by Angela Chaney and Hayley Smith. Hayley was the first place state winner in the construction-dressy category and Angela was the third place state winner in the construction-formal category. Peggy Smith was the 4-H clothing leader attending Round Up and Mary McMullen was the county agent advisor for the event.

STATE 4-H FASHION SHOW WINNER HAYLEY SMITH won first place in the construction-dressy category. The fashion show was part of the Texas 4-H Round Up held at Texas A&M University.

STATE 4-H FASHION SHOW WINNER ANGELA CHANEY was awarded third place in the construction-formal category. The fashion show was part of the Texas 4-H Round Up held at Texas A&M University.

1996 9- and 10-Year-Old All Stars at Lone Star Field in Abilene

All-Stars defeat S'water

The Colorado City All-Stars (9- and 10-year-olds) defeated Sweetwater 5-4 Monday night at Lone Star Field in Abilene in the first game of the Little League All-Star playoff area tournament. The game was tied 4-4 after six innings of regulation.

Colorado City scored the winning run in the bottom of the seventh on an Ian Ritchey double to right center field that scored Cole Ratliff from third base to clinch the victory.

Ratliff had reached base on a walk.

A strong pitching performance by Jacobie Russell held Sweetwater in check most of the night. Russell struck out 13, walked one and gave up only six hits in six innings. Cole Ratliff pitched the final inning, fanning three and giving up only one hit to help shut down Sweetwater.

Mike Ratliff, manager, was very pleased with the victory. "We played together as a team very good," he said.

The All-Stars will play Eastland Wednesday night, July 3 at 8 p.m. in Abilene at Lone Star Field.

Boating safety courses available

The Boating Trades Association of Texas (BTAT) has called for a crackdown on water safety offenders through increased law enforcement efforts at the local, regional and state level, combined with an increased emphasis on boater education.

Classroom courses taught by Texas Parks and Wildlife game wardens and volunteer instructors, the U.S. Power Squadrons and the Coast Guard Auxiliary and a video-based course provided by BOATCLUB, Inc. are currently certified by TPWD. Those who pass are eligible to receive a Texas Safe Boating certificate, which can mean a savings on many boat insurance policies in Texas.

Copies of the Digest of the Texas Water Safety Act, along with information on boater education courses, may be obtained by calling TPWD at 1-800-792-1112, by contacting a TPWD regional office or any BTAT boat dealer.

Ms. Nanny contest open to ladies 65 and over

The World Championship Boer Goat Cookoff committee has announced a "Ms. Nanny" contest for ladies over the age of 65.

Ms. Nanny will reign over the Second Annual Boer Goat Festival August 1, 2, and 3 in Loraine. Contestants need to return their applications by June 28.

Every lady who enters the contest will ride in the parade planned for Saturday morning. Following the parade, contestants will be interviewed and asked to tell a story of a life experience.

Ms. Nanny will win a $300 donation to the charity of her choice. The first runner-up will receive a certificate enabling her to donate $200 to the charity of her choice and the second runner-up will be able to name a charity for a $100 donation.

The idea to hold a Miss Nanny contest came from nannies who were cherished members of a family and cared for the children—"kids".

"At a boer goat cookoff, we have lots of 'kids'. Plus we wanted a way to honor all the special older women in our area," said Linton Ray Webb, an event organizer.

"Everyone who enters will be treated like royalty," said Maz Webb.

She encouraged people to urge their mothers to enter or fill out an entry form for a special lady and a boer goat committee member will notify the potential candidate.

Homeowners could lose out in electricity war

Giving big industrial facilities access to cheaper electricity could result in sharply higher electric rates for homeowners and small businesses over the next eight-10 years, according to a study released last week.

The study, "The Potential Economic Impacts of Retail Competition in the Electric Utility Industry in Texas," was conducted by Texas Perspectives, Inc., and MGT of America, Inc., for member companies of the Association of Electric Companies of Texas (AECT).

Retail competition, commonly referred to as "retail wheeling," would allow individual customers to choose their own electricity suppliers. The proposed system is in contrast to the current system, under which customers receive service from a single local utility that is obligated to serve all customers within its geographic territory.

According to the study, the typical Texas household using 1,000 kilowatt-hours (kWh) of electricity a month could see an increase of roughly $13 on their monthly electric bills in the first year if retail competition was introduced. Bills would continue to increase, the study projects until after five years, when the average residential customer would pay nearly $30 a month or more for electricity.

"Our analysis indicates that the immediate introduction of retail competition in the electric utility industry would produce clear-cut winners and losers," said John Hockenyo, managing director of Texas Perspectives, Inc., an Austin-based economic consulting firm.

"The largest industries likely would see a decrease in rates right away if they were permitted to shop around for their electricity," Hockenyo added. "But the smaller users, namely residents and small businesses, would likely have to pick up the tab in the short run with sharply higher rates."

The study used government projections of electricity costs and the experience of other recently deregulated industries including telecommunications to develop a forecast of electricity prices by customer class under retail wheeling.

"We found that the largest customers would reap the benefits of competition first, because they would be the most profitable to potential new service providers," Hockenyo said. "Basically, these benefits would be paid for by customers who don't use the thousands of kilowatts the largest customers use."

The study also found that changes in technology and growing competition at the wholesale level are holding increases in electricity prices below the rate of inflation, a trend that is expected to continue.

Today, Texas' large industrial customers on average pay 4.3 cents per kWh. That price ranks well below the national average of 4.7 cents per kWh which means that there is not the imperative other states have that are searching for any methods to lower energy costs.

Hockenyo said the introduction of retail competition within Texas' electric utility industry also would have a negative effect on the state's economy for a number of years.

"In terms of the economy as a whole, the benefits of expected lower prices for industrial customers do not offset the reduction in disposable income for consumers due to higher residential rates," Hockenyo said.

The study showed that retail wheeling would put the Texas employment base 30,000 to 50,000 jobs below its expected level for the next several years, he added. "It would be well beyond 10 years before retail competition would have a net positive effect on the economy," Hockenyo said. "In the interim, the state would see an overall reduction in personal income, retail sales, tax revenues and economic output."

Curtis Seidlits, president of the AECT, said the state's electric utilities recognize that their industry is more competitive.

"We supported legislation last session to open up the wholesale electricity market to competition," Seidlits said. "We believe this study provides strong evidence that it is inappropriate to rush into retail wheeling before the benefits of wholesale competition are fully realized."

"We just want to make sure that the transition to a more competitive market is handled properly, so that everyone is treated fairly," Seidlits said. "That includes all our customers, not just a select few, and our shareholders."

Smith to head 23 county MHMR operation

Shelley Smith

Mental health services will be changing in West Texas and a Coahoma woman, wife of a Mitchell County rancher, will be at the head of those changes. Shelley Smith, the wife of farmer/rancher Russell Erwin, has been named chief executive officer for the 23-county West Texas Centers for Mental Health and Mental Retardation. The couple live in Coahoma.

The West Texas Centers will be a nonprofit organization contracted by the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation to provide community mental health and mental retardation services within 23 counties, including Mitchell County.

The West Texas Centers will provide the same services now available but will be governed by a nine-member board of trustees. State officials expect the transition process to be complete by March 1997.

Smith developed the concept of a West Texas MHMR Center, according to a former superintendent of the Big Spring State Hospital, Robert von Rosenberg, who recommended her for the chief executive position.

"We do not anticipate major changes at the local program level. Our mission is that the service delivery continues as is and that the staff providing the services will continue," Smith said.

1996 is 28th anniversary of nat'l. fair housing law

This year marks the 28th anniversary of the National Fair Housing Law. To promote fair housing policies, the West Central Texas Council of Governments encourages potential homeowners and renters to be aware of their rights.

Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1968, as amended, prohibits discrimination against any person on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, age, handicap, familial status or national origin in the sale or rental of units in the housing market.

For more information on fair housing or to report possible fair housing discrimination, call the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development's toll-free hotline at 1-800-669-9777.

Dear Editor!

I am Fedor Iskhakov, an exchange student who've been in Colorado City for almost a year since last August. By the time you read this letter I'm going to be at home. I'm coming Friday morning from Abilene.

I wanted to say, that this year turned out to be pretty successful for me and I've learned a lot about everyday American life. And I suppose this is the main purpose of my program—to go back and teach people in Russia some good things from here, to change them a little bit and make two greatest nations of the world closer to each other. I feel like I'm a little bridge between our countries and I'm happy to be one.

I've enjoyed this year very much too. I found a lot of friends, and I have to say that every single person I met in America was very nice and friendly to me. I think that's real good. It tells me that times of Cold War passed over and we are good friends and companions back again. This is very good sign.

In the end I'd like to thank all people I know for thinking of me, for loving me, for always wishing me very best. Thank you my hosts—Marcia and Charles Batchelor and Vesta and Curt Shaw, my representative D'Dee Morris. Thank you all for the wonderful year and for the useful experience. Bye.

The reduction in time is from 12 to four hours. These new intervals will be recognized under the Workers Protection Standard for handlers and workers.

The pesticides are VectoBac, Biocot, Cutlass, Garlic, Checkmate, Britz Supreme, Nolo-Bait, Dipel, Navodor, Raven, ProGibb, Off-Short-O, Growers 455, Mycostop, Xentari, Javelin, BMP, Release, Ally, JMS-Oil, Foray, Thuricide, Finesse, GibGro, Saf-T-Oil, Sunspray, Biobit, Condor, Ornamec, Roundup, Confirm and 455-Oil.

If you have any questions about restricted entry intervals, look on the label of the pesticide that you are using. If you cannot find the interval, call the manufacturer of the product (their number will be on the label as well).

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Letter to the Editor:

In response to Mrs. Free's letter, I would like to openly reply with the following.

First of all, we are all understanding of her loss of her mother's things and the violation that she must feel and some of the frustrations. But in every form of business, be it private or public, there are always policies and procedures which must be followed before accusations can be made against people with possible prosecution to follow. In this particular case, there were two agencies involved and a multi-disciplinary team approach was put forth to resolve this alleged crime.

It is too bad that Mrs. Free has had what she feels to be less than satisfactory interactions with the Colorado City Police Department, previously. But to single out two officers and to call them incompetent is inexcusable just because they didn't go looking for stolen antiques in antique stores on taxpayers' limited time and money—items, incidentally, they wouldn't have been able to identify. Also, the remark about the officers' days off—does she think that because she has missing articles that police officers shouldn't have a day off? How self-serving.

If Mrs. Free has a problem with the way the Colorado City Police Department handles their protocol, then that's a matter for her, the chief, the city manager and the city council. But don't be berating in public the police officers who were just following the rules.

I happen to know one of the police officers extremely well. He has devoted much time, heart and money to being the only thing he ever wanted to be—a police officer. His extensive and continuing training, his willingness to be a part of the team that serves your community, and most important of all, his concern for the people of his community, Colorado City, Texas.

Incompetent? Not by anyone's measuring stick.

Mrs. Free also refers to the amount of money that these police officers receive monthly. Surely she jests! Those are more of the facts that she needs to correct. For all of the men and women in law enforcement, and our prison employees also, who on a daily basis face hate, degradations and violence, the likes of which most of us cannot even possibly imagine, are never paid too much or enough!

Every time a police officer deals with a gang of teenagers, enters the terrors of domestic violence or stops an unknown vehicle for violations, never knowing what he might find, that police officer puts his or her life on the line for all of us.

And so for you, Mrs. Free, to be so petty is inappropriate and unjust. If you have what you feel to be a valid complaint, then take it through the proper channels and perhaps make a difference for your community instead of eating out the hearts of young officers who, in spite of your attitude, still care about you and your family.

And incidentally, Mrs. Free, there is not a day or night go by that I do not pray for the safety, wisdom and the courage of all law enforcement personnel, and my son, to deal with people like you who have no comprehension of what law enforcement is really all about, and it's not hunting around in antique stores.

Twins' language expressed in their art and inner relationship

By KAREN ROOP
Texas Dept. of Mental Health and Mental Retardation

Identical twins Sherrell and Errell Jordan have never driven on the information highway. Unlike most 33-year-old men, they do not cruise the Net or close deals via FAX.

In fact, until recently neither twin had ever uttered a recognizable word. But the Jordan brothers are proving that communication is an art of many forms, not all of which readily lend themselves to scientific scrutiny.

When computer talk leaves off, the strange language of Sherrell and Errell begins.

The twins' first challenge to science came with their premature birth in 1963.

Sherrell and Errell weighed three pounds and had a diagnosis of microcephaly, a condition in which the head is abnormally small. Like most people with this condition, the twins also were diagnosed as having mental retardation.

After five weeks at the hospital, the Jordan brothers went home and, as expected, developed slowly. While other children progressed from words to sentences, Sherrell and Errell spoke in grunts and sounds understood only by each other.

According to their mother, Barbara Triem, the grunts were not always necessary.

"For their first 11 to 12 years, Errell and Sherrell functioned as a unit. They don't do it as much as when they were younger, but they seem to communicate through some sort of intuition," she said.

This connection between the two brothers continues at Brenham State School, a state facility for people with mental retardation where Sherrell and Errell have lived since 1974.

Jim Lather, the school's admissions coordinator and a speech/language pathologist, has had many opportunities to witness what he calls the Jordans' "symbiotic relationship." He attributes the twins' ability to communicate to an "inner language that allows them to see images, to see the whole."

By all accounts, Sherrell and Errell share an uncanny gift for reaching joint decisions.

At the state school they live in separate cottages. Although they might not see or "talk" to each other during the course of a day, at a mysteriously agreed upon time and place, they will meet, wearing identical clothing.

Triem said that this frequently occurs in her visits to the state school.

"No one will have told them I was coming, but I'll arrive and my boys will be walking towards me from two different directions, and they'll be in the same shirts."

As perplexing as twin telepathy is another condition apparently shared by Errell and Sherrell: autism. Although never officially diagnosed as having the syndrome, the twins have long exhibited its characteristics and behaviors.

Like approximately two thirds of the population with autism, they have IQ scores that are below average. They are essentially nonverbal and, to varying degrees, they are socially withdrawn.

Moreover, the Jordans have artistic skills that link them to savants, a rare subset of people with autism. These individuals, typified by Dustin Hoffman's character in "Rain Man," exhibit remarkable talent within narrow areas.

Some scholars have argued that savant skills develop as compensation for the disabilities of autism.

This might be the case of the Jordans, who, despite an absence of normal communication skills, have drawn pictures that speak clearly to the members of their family, state school staff and others outside the twins' immediate environment.

As children, both Errell and Sherrell created finger puppets that, according to Triem, "showed up in vases, in flowerpots—everywhere in the house."

At first, the figures were vague forms, but when the twins began to fashion eyeglasses out of twist ties for them, it was clear that the scraps of paper were people.

Later the puppets became even more detailed.

"Without even looking, Sherrell would put bold strokes of color across a sheet of paper, crumple it up and create a complex figure of a man in a cape," Jim Lather reported.

Although Sherrell now rarely does art, his brother continues to prove himself an able designer and artist.

Errell often presents family members and state school staff with Hanna-Barbera-inspired cartoons, some of which are incorporated into the holiday graphics he routinely does for the school's Volunteer Services Council.

A participant in a number of shows and competitions, he placed first in the ARC/Texas Art-Design contest and once won "Best of Show" at the Washington County Fair Art Show.

And he has designed his own "communication book," a collection of pictures of everyday experiences and objects.

By pointing to such illustrations, people who have developmental disabilities and are nonverbal can make their needs known.

But communication books are typically staff- or factory-made—rarely are they produced by the individuals themselves.

With his book, Errell has slowly begun to speak in intelligible phrases. Triem described an instance that showed how much can be said in a few words and lines if we will only listen.

"While I was driving one day with Errell, a hymn was played on the radio. 'Church song,' Errell said and then pointed to the church he had drawn.

In a recent art class, Errell Jordan demonstrated his artistic prowess by creating a series of rapid-fire drawings of rabbits, George Washington, Abraham Lincoln and anything else that caught his fancy.

Sherrell sat beside his brother, not drawing but printing his name in letters that grew cramped as they neared the end of each sheet of paper.

single word "Sherrell" floated to the floor, perhaps to remind us of what both Jordans know: language, like art, begins with self-expression.

Lorraine News

By BESSIE ANN VAUGHN
Greetings from Lorraine. Happy 4th of July and Happy birthday America.

God bless America this Independence Day. Let freedom ring to her, we pray.
The flags wave high and banners unfurl, America means freedom to the rest of the world. Aliens still come chancing their fate. Some haters of America spit projectiles of hate. They burn Old Glory on a funeral pyre. Thank God millions work to put out the fire. Let us lift her up where she belongs. And sing this clear message in song:
"God bless America, Land that we love. Stand beside her and guide her always."

We in Lorraine are proud to have the Lorraine branch of the Mitchell County clinic ready and waiting to help when our need arises.

The open house last Wednesday was a huge success. The building and all its medical equipment is new-looking and up to today's standards.

Dr. Roach and Dr. Gross will both be spending some time there, Home Health five days a week.

Off ice hours are Tuesdays from 2-5 p.m. and Wednesdays from 9:30 a.m.-12 noon.

Shug and Pat Bowlin from Midland spent last Sunday with Lela Bowlin.

We send our condolences to Bro. James Merrell and his wife, Edna. Edna's sister, Ann, from Eufala, Ala. was killed in an accident this past week.

Visiting in the home of Royce and Margaret Mahon last Saturday were Eldon and Nova Lee Mahon, Ft. Worth; Bryan and Mary Nell, San Angelo; Gordon and Melba Mahon from Lubbock and Melba Mahon Rickman, also from Lubbock.

Visiting with Effie Wheeler and Jimmie Jacks this week have been Bruce Nichols and son Robbie from Denver, Colo., Bryan Nichols and his friend Christina Gangle from Overland Park, Kan. and Jeanine Nichols, along with her daughter, Heather Ralph.

Karen, David and Lisa Chapman and friend Mike Begg of Midland visited with Karen's father, Nari and Joan Long this past Sunday.

Lisa and Mike practiced their calf roping as the pair will be participating in the High Plains Rodeo Saturday night in Colorado City.

Gus Armstrong went by Lorraine Manor to visit with Jack Richey and took him outdoors for a nice long drive in town and in the country. He said Jack was doing well and we are pleased to hear that.

Gus had been "batching" for a few days while Iva was in Grandbury visiting family members.

It sounded to me like he had been eating high on the hog, for when I called him he had just polished off some sausage for breakfast.

Next year the Lorraine school class of 1947 will observe and celebrate their 50th class reunion.

Merlin Bruce and his wife have worked hard and long on getting names and addresses together to send invitations.

They are lacking five classmates' addresses. Please help if you have any knowledge of their whereabouts:

Helen Reynolds, Carl Latham, Jessie Caviness, Alfred Carter and Francis Kidd Hudman.

You may call or write me, Bessie Ann Vaughn, a classmate. (915) 737-2751 or Box 117, Lorraine, Texas 79532.

I spoke with Julia Bennett recently and she reports that they are still signing up cooks for the big Boer Goat Cook-Off in early August.

Several booths of arts and crafts have signed on, ready and waiting.

There is still time to take on food booths, etc. Please call Julia for more information at 737-2403.

Irene Hester writes that she is blessed with good health and will come out this way when the weather gets cooler.

She wishes to thank Adele Cranfill and other good friends who made inquiries and expressed their concern.

This is good news. We are always happy to see her smiling face in Lorraine.

We can't overlook Robert and Bess Miller from Austin, who also come to visit when the weather is cooler. Hopefully they will this year, as well.

Mr. and Mrs. Ruben Garza gave a birthday party for their daughter, Peggy (Pat) Garza and invited Irma Romero to spend the weekend with them.

Irma Romero reports having a new grandbaby, Andrew J. Roman, born to her daughter Felicia and her husband Robby on June 26.

Irma went to visit the new baby. Later she also did some visiting with an older granddaughter. Parents are Mr. and Mrs. Michael Padron of Odessa.

City Secretary Christene Britton reports that the next city council meeting will be held on July 12.

Richburg Reunion
On June 29, 1996 75 descendants of the late John and Mollie Richburg met in the Lorraine Senior Center for their annual reunion. This has been an annual affair since 1959.

Only seven of the original 16 were present. Blanche Pendergrass of Temple City, Calif. was unable to attend this year.

The group visited and had a lot to report since the last reunion.

There were a lot of pictures made after a bounteous meal was served and there was an auction of items that family members had made.

Those present were from Hart, Plainview, Petersburg, Lubbock, Amarillo, Abilene, Sweetwater, Roscoe, Lorraine, Midland, Tuscola, Snyder, Ackerly, Mineral Wells, Bracketville, Lockney.

Other states represented were Oklahoma, Kansas, Colorado and Alaska.

Senior Center News
Last Wednesday June 24 the Stanton Sorehead Band came to the Lorraine Center to play for us. They have a terrific band. The members range in age from 65 to 85 years of age.

If you didn't hear them you missed some great entertainment. We hope they will make a return visit.

Also on June 24, the birthdays for the month of June were observed and a turkey and dressing dinner was enjoyed by everyone.

Dela Matejosky's name was drawn from the pot to win the beautiful afghan. Thanks again, Bertie Coleson, for your donation of the afghan.

Recent visitors have been Helen Nevis and Shirley McPaul. Elbert Spann brought his brother and sister-in-law to the center Monday. They were from Staten Island, N.Y. Leora came also, of course, and Johnny Edwards from Colorado City also visited with us, plus all the clinic associates from Colorado City.

It is good to see Eva Wells coming back down to the center. She has been recuperating from surgery and is getting stronger now.

F.C.E. News
Our annual July party will be held at the Lorraine Center July 13th. Dinner will be served at 6 o'clock with musical entertainment following the meal. Meat, drinks and paper goods will be furnished. You may bring guests along, and please bring a covered dish.

The next regular meeting will be held in August on the 21st.

Texas wages and salaries to be surveyed

The fifth annual Texas Wage & Salary Survey is now underway as The Quorum Group, a Texas-based consulting firm, collects pay data through July and the 1996 survey is scheduled for publication in early October.

This comprehensive survey covers more than 100 positions common to most businesses throughout Texas," said John Brau, marketing director for The Quorum Group. "The 1995 survey had more than 140 participating employers reporting on jobs covering almost 24,000 employees from a diversified group of Texas businesses."

The submission kit has been redesigned to simplify completion of data. Quorum also offers the option of submitting data on a computer diskette and is working on additional economical submission methods, including E-mail file transfer.

Participating businesses will receive the survey report at a discounted price. "We are trying to make the survey attractive to the widest range of companies so they can and will participate," Brau said.

For information on participating, contact The Quorum Group at (713) 393-1100 or by FAX at (713) 393-3100.

 The Family of Edward Morren wishes to express our most sincere appreciation for the calls, cards, flowers, food, prayers and expressions of love and friendship that we received in the past weeks. A very special thanks for the Mitchell County Hospital nurses and other personnel for their loving care during dad's last days, and for the use of the Hospice facilities. The First Baptist Church ladies prepared a delicious lunch for the family for which we were so grateful. Dad's biggest asset was his friends, so many, of all ages, more than could ever be named.
