Coming Sunday

Stressful jobs

Labor Day was designed to give workers a break from the everyday stress of their jobs. But not all jobs are as stressful as others, as Midlanders will tell in Sunday's Local section.

DWI victims

Cynthia Grubb of the Mothers Against Drunk Drivers tells in Sunday's "Speaking Out," how victims of DWI can fight back.

Fantasy world

The 1984 World Exposition has transformed New Orleans' harbor district into a colorful fantasy world within the long-established city of sin. Read about the fair in Sunday's Travel section.

Candidates' aides agree on one debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — High-ranking aides to President Reagan and Democratic nominee Walter F. Mondale agreed Friday that the White House rivals will meet in at least one debate, but said large differences over details remain.

White House chief of staff James A. Baker III emerged from a 90-minute meeting with Mondale campaign chairman James A. Johnson and said they had agreed to one presidential debate "and have not foreclosed the opportunity for more."

"We have some substantial differences," Johnson said. "Vice President Mondale wants substantially more debating than President Reagan."

Johnson said he proposed six debates be held, while Baker agreed firmly to only one. "We are not just willing but pleased to agree to one debate and have not foreclosed the opportunity for more," Baker said.

The Reagan aide said no dates had been set but that he wants a debate "not too close to Election Day so there is undue impact on the voters' decision."

He said the question of whether or not there will be a debate between Vice President George Bush and Democratic vice presidential nominee Geraldine A. Ferraro is unsettled.

"The question of a vice presidential debate is still being debated," Baker said. "There is a possibility of a vice presidential debate. The vice president himself will have to decide whether or not to debate."

Baker and Johnson spoke to reporters on a street corner in downtown Washington after emerging from their meeting in the law office of Dean Burch, a long-time adviser to Bush.

Johnson said he proposed separate debates on such topics as national security, foreign affairs, the economy and deficits, the general economy and the environment.

"We're quite far apart on our views," Johnson said. "We had a number of debates in mind. We want to start early and end late."

Baker said he did not like the idea of six debates and quoted Reagan, who has said that six debates would bore the American public.

"It would deflect from the record of the two candidates," Baker said. "The president thinks actions speak louder than words."

Baker said also that Reagan has a significant lead in public-opinion polls and that the White House has been receiving calls from people who advise Reagan not to debate. "But the president believes in debate," he said.

Both Baker and Johnson said the question of which organization would sponsor the debates was not discussed.

Baker said the two campaigns would continue their discussions and that there would probably be another meeting next week at a time to be set.

He said the Republicans proposed a format similar to the debates of the 1976 and 1980 campaigns, which "worked well for the public."

"But there is a long way to go to complete negotiations," he said.

Teachers' strikes may extend to seven states

The Associated Press

Strikes by teachers in seven states could keep nearly 200,000 schoolchildren at home next week as more than 5,000 educators in Michigan threatened to join 425 others on the picket line Tuesday, the traditional start of classes there.

And in San Francisco, where 62,600 students were scheduled to begin classes Tuesday, Mayor Dianne Feinstein, appealed to teachers to report to work despite an unresolved dispute over pay.

Some 275 teachers in Pennsylvania voted Thursday to go on strike next week. A strike by 75 teachers in South Fayette Township has already idled 1,175 students.

Nearly 4,000 other teachers in Illinois, Washington, Louisiana, Indiana and Rhode Island voted to strike this week, extending summer vacation for more than 71,000 students.

"This is appalling," said Hugh Jarvis, president of the Michigan Federation of Teachers, which represents teachers in eight of the 28 districts where new strikes are threatened in Michigan.

Many districts were holding up settlements with demands for pay freezes and contract concessions, Jarvis said. He said bargaining would continue over the weekend.

The larger Michigan Education Association, which had strikes under way in five districts, said 28 additional districts, with 5,519 teachers and more than 113,000 students, could be struck Tuesday.

Association President Larry Chunovich said 117 school districts remained without teacher contracts.

In Pennsylvania, 275 teachers in New Castle, north of Pittsburgh, voted to go on strike Tuesday, when 4,500 students were scheduled to begin school. A strike by 75 teachers in South Fayette Township has already idled 1,175 students.

Meanwhile, in Illinois, talks continued Friday in Rockford, the state's second largest district, where 29,500 students were out of class because of a salary dispute. More than 3,000 teachers are on strike in nine of the state's districts.

Negotiations with a state mediator Friday failed to end a 2-day-old strike by 377 teachers in Longview, Wash., where 7,100 students were due to begin classes Tuesday.

"We remain hopeful as long as they are at the bargaining table," said Jeff Cloutier, a representative of the Washington Education Association, said of talks with the school district's bargainers.

Louisiana Superintendent of Education Tom Clausen toured near-empty schools in St. John the Baptist Parish schools, while teachers told the school board's budget committee that $550,000 could be made available for teacher raises by trimming the fat from other items.

Some 700 school employees, including more than 300 teachers, have kept most of the district's 6,200 students home. Clausen said he was concerned about whether the few students attending class were receiving hot meals.

Negotiations Friday with officials of the Liberty-Perry School Corp. in Selma, Ind., failed to end the four-day walkout by 85 teachers. Classes have continued with substitute teachers.

Astronauts play celestial Frisbee

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Discovery's astronauts played a celestial game of Frisbee on Friday, flinging a military communications satellite out of the space shuttle's cargo bay like a flying saucer.

'It proves the physics of Frisbees works up here as well as it does on the ground," said astronaut Richard Mullane, after a spring sent the 15,200-pound satellite spinning away, 184 miles above central Africa.

The successful deployment made the score two down, one to go, for the shuttle astronauts. They plan to launch their third satellite this morning.

"It was a beautiful sight, seeing it against the background of the Earth," said Mullane. He and the five others aboard the new shuttle were on the second of their six days in space.

There was little conversation between spacecraft and ground but while the ship was beaming down television pictures of the cockpit, Judy Resnik floated up to the camera and held up a hand-lettered sign that said "Hi, Dad." Her father lives in Akron, Ohio.

And commander Henry W. Hartsfield commented at one point that, as the ship passed over Africa "we saw a goodly number of fires down there." There was no elaboration.

Flight director Randy Stone said the shuttle is doing well and "the crew is doing outstanding." There were a few problems with the ship, he said, but they were "nitpicky things" like a sensor that didn't work, an antenna that sounded failure alarms, and some housekeeping items.

In a report before going to sleep, the astronauts added other complaints to the list: a camera that jammed, hydrogen gas bubbles in their drinking water and a dirty cabin.

"I just got through cleaning the cabin fan filter," Hartsfield said. "It was pretty interesting. There were... little pieces of trash on the screens and I also peeled off about three, three-eighth inch bolts, one nut and there was a safety pin in there that I couldn't capture."

Mission control said those are the usual things that crop up on a new ship when it gets into space.

Charles Walker, the industry engineer who is on board to manufacture a hormone, had some problems when a device that was supposed to remove only gas was also was allowing liquid to pass through. He installed a spare and set to work.

But other technical malfunctions caused the machine to turn off intermittently and mission control called its first nine hours of operation "a mixed bag" of drug-making operations. Walker asked technicians on the ground to help him troubleshoot the failures overnight.

While Mullane and Steve Hawley were busy with the satellite launch, Ms. Resnik used the camera on the shuttle's robot arm to check Discovery's exterior for any damage to its tiles and insulating blanket by Thursday's launch. She said she found none.

Even the shuttle's toilet, which has malfunctioned on each of the 11 previous flights, seemed to be OK.

"I assume it's working well," said Stone. "It's not something we talk about unless it breaks."

Hughes Communications Services Inc. paid NASA $17 million to carry the satellite into space. Called Leasat, the satellite is the first of four that will be leased to the Navy by Hughes for $16.7 million for each of five years.

Leasat, the first satellite built exclusively for launch on the space shuttle, was ejected from the cargo bay with a maneuver similar to the wrist snap when throwing a Frisbee flying disc. In fact, Hughes obtained permission from the Wham-O Corp. to call this the "Frisbee launch," using Wham-O's trademark name for its saucer-like toy.

Siblings married over 50 years

SHERMAN (AP) — Charlie and Jennie Flowers Reynolds of Bells have a big, loving family. Very big, very loving.

Now that five of their children have passed the 50-year mark in their marriages, golden observances now replace Christmas as the time for big family celebrations.

The most recent was last weekend. Roy and Felmer Fannie Reynolds Ayres of Bells kept up the unusual family tradition when they observed their 50th anniversary last weekend at Antioch Baptist Church.

The Reynolds' sons, Dallas Elmer, Delmer Z., Lelmer C. and Zelmer Van had all celebrated theirs.

The first wedding of the siblings was on June 2, 1931, when Delmer married Nellie Marie Helms in Durant, Okla.

Following them to the altar on Jan. 19, 1932, were Zelmer Van Reynolds and Louise Cole, who were married in Woodville, Okla.

On Dec. 17, 1933, Dallas Elmer Reynolds and Elizabeth Ford were married at Antioch Baptist Church.

The next wedding took place just a month later when Lelmer C. Reynolds and Alice French were married Jan. 21, 1934, in the bride's home.

Then, on Aug. 24, 1934, Felmer Fannie, the only daughter, married Roy Ayres in the Methodist parsonage in Whitewright.

Zelmer Van and Louise celebrated their 50th anniversary in 1982.

"When we married, I was 13 and Van was 16," Louise Reynolds said. "Both families thought we were too young, so we eloped to Woodville. Delmer and Nellie went with us. By the time we came home, things had settled down and we just kind of grew up together."

Lelmer and Alice Reynolds observed their 50th anniversary in January. Immediately following their 1934 wedding, they caught the interurban in Sherman and rode to College Station, where he enrolled in Texas A&M University.

"We both worked to put him through college," she recalled, adding "and I got the best-looking Reynolds boy!"

Dovie Halliburton, daughter of Delmer and Nellie Reynolds, observed: "This has always been a very close, loving family. The parents, children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren get together once a year. In previous years, it's been at Christmas time. The last few years, the occasions have been these golden anniversaries."

"This has always been a very close, loving family. The parents, children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren get together once a year."

Mendoza sentence 11 years

Lawyer disappointed with verdict

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Joe Mendoza was sentenced Friday to 11 years in prison for the fatal shooting of Johnny Moreno.

Mendoza, 27, had been found guilty of voluntary manslaughter early Friday morning by the nine-woman, three-man jury, which spent 9½ hours deliberating before delivering its verdict at 2:05 a.m.

70th District Court Judge Gene Ater then recessed the court until Friday afternoon, when Mendoza's punishment was decided after another 1½ hours of deliberation.

Mendoza's lawyer, Cliff Hardwick, said his client would file an appeal.

Hardwick had asked for probation on the grounds that Mendoza had no previous felony convictions. But the jury opted for an 11-year sentence, of which Mendoza would have to serve at least a third before becoming eligible for parole. Voluntary manslaughter carries a maximum penalty of 20 years and a $10,000 fine.

Hardwick said he was disappointed with the sentence meted out to his client.

"I was extremely confident we were going to get probation," he said. "We all expected four not guilties. We were, of course, pleased that we got three of them, and obviously voluntary manslaughter was better than murder."

Mendoza and his brother, David Mendoza, 34, were charged with the June 23 murders of Moreno, 18, and Ronald Don Lopez, 19, near the Mendoza home on Autumn Avenue in south Odessa. Joe Mendoza admitted killing both men but claimed self defense.

The jury found him not guilty of murdering Lopez, and David Mendoza was acquitted of both charges.

Joe Mendoza is free on bond pending his appeal.

Minnesota craftsman's concertinas 'finest' on the market

NEW ULM, Minn. (AP) — The tiny workshop cluttered with small machinery, pieces of instruments and piles of sheet music about five feet tall seems an unlikely place for the birth of three-fourths of the concertinas used in dance bands across the country.

But it is indeed the shop of Christy Hensel, who has spent the last 29 years making concertinas that are regarded by many players as the finest on today's market.

A 10-year waiting list and $3,500 price tag for a new Hensel concertina attest to the quality. And Hensel boasts that his first concertina originally sold for $575 is now worth at least $4,000.

He claims about 75 percent of dance band musicians playing concertinas use a Hensel, and that an equal percentage of all recorded concertina work is done with one of his instruments.

"I'm not stretching that either," said the 61-year-old craftsman. "I'll tell you that — that's the truth."

Hensel estimated he has made about 300 concertinas since he got into the manufacturing business. He now produces about 15 instruments each year, a pace that keeps the waiting list growing faster than his customer list.

"I never will get caught up with my waiting list," Hensel said, showing one of his patented dimpled grins. "I'll tell you what — the tight money is not bothering the Hensel concertina business any."

Before entering the business of making concertinas, Hensel spent a good deal of time going about the business of making music, as he still does.

Reared on a farm near Wanda, 40 miles west of New Ulm, he was given his first instrument (a button accordion) when he was 12. He graduated to a double-reed concertina in 1939 and by 1941 had purchased a triple-reed concertina once owned by the king of polka, Whoopee John.

The list of bands the Wanda farm boy served duty in is lengthy, with perhaps the most widely known group being the Six Fat Dutchmen. It was while playing with the Dutchmen at Rochester's Pla-Mor Ballroom, Hensel related, that he met his wife of 22 years, Valera.

His first taste of building concertinas came a few years later when he tore the triple reed instrument apart to add a fourth reed. The workings of the instrument fascinated Hensel, and in 1953, "I took the big chance," draining his pocketbook to purchase equipment and concertina parts from the floundering Patek and Pearl Queen Co. in Chicago.

He finally produced the first Hensel concertina in 1955, taking the best elements of the Patek and Pearl Queen and complementing them with some of his own modifications. The result was one of the easiest-playing, richest-sounding concertinas ever produced.

All work on a Hensel concertina is done by hand off design plans developed by Hensel. Hensel does his own metal work, while his brother-in-law produces the wood framing, maple reed blocks and basswood keyboards edged in birch. The intricate exterior design is engraved elsewhere.

Hensel's magic touch is added in assembly of the parts and making of what he calls the "Hensel-shaped" reed. Since it is the rush of air vibrating reeds that produces a concertina's tone, quality reeds are essential.

"I know what it takes to make it play," he said. "That's all my trade secret. Nobody else can duplicate that."

When he isn't busy building concertinas, Hensel is usually found doing repair work, entertaining visitors to his shop or playing in a band himself. Retirement, he said, is something he isn't planning for "until the toes go up."

Attorneys argue against power line

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas lawyers for Episcopal Church members and landowners' groups argued Friday that the federal government can't make a state agency approve a power line that might threaten the health and safety of Texans.

Lawyers for utility companies, however, told the Public Utility Commission it could not override a federal order to build the line but could only direct its route.

A utility lawyer conceded that the PUC could probably order a line buried in the ground, but that would be so costly it would not be practical.

The PUC's authority was questioned at a public hearing on a proposal to build a $141.2 million direct current line that would cross six counties.

Public response to the line intensified last year when an unprecedented letter-writing campaign was generated by the Rt. Rev. Maurice Benitz of Houston, an Episcopal bishop who noted that the line would cut through the church's Camp Allen in Grimes County.

More than 1,700 people protested the project in writing.

PUC Chairman Philip Ricketts said Friday that because of the complexities of the case and "significant questions in my mind," the PUC would delay a decision for a week.

Later, however, the commission recessed the case for two weeks, until Sept. 14, when it said it would rule without hearing any additional oral arguments.

Those wanting to submit briefs were given until Sept. 10 to get them in.

Bill Woolsey, representing Central Power & Light Co., said Friday he had toured the camp at the PUC's request and acknowledged that it was "lovely spot" but said "majestic" trees would for the most part block the towers and power line from sight.

"To me, at least, it wouldn't make any difference whether the line was there or not," Woolsey said.

The proposed 153-mile power line is a joint project of CP&L, Houston Lighting and Power Co. and Southwestern Electric Power Co. The 400,000-volt line would stretch from six miles north of Huntsville to the South Texas Nuclear Project near Bay City.

The utilities' application was filed in February 1983, but emotions remained high Friday as a standing-room only crowd of more than 200, many of whom got up before dawn to make the trip to Austin, listened to hours of arguments.

Woolsey was asked if the companies might consider switching to an alternating current line, which would reduce air ions (electrically charged atoms), and he said, "The possibility is nil."

He said the order of the Federal Energy Regulatory Agency (FERC) is the result of a settlement to hook up Texas electric utilities with the rest of the nation. The PUC was told the line would take two years to build and that the federal deadline is January 1987.

Woolsey said the transmission line would save CP&L ratepayers over $1 billion in the next 15 years,

Guidelines set for gator hunt

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — Experienced hunters such as Sidney Dupuy and novices like Andrew Selbst lined up to buy alligator hunting licences Friday, one week prior to the first legal alligator season in Texas since the reptile was placed on the endangered species list in 1969.

Dupuy and Selbst were among a group of hunters and landowners who attended one of several orientation sessions conducted at the J.D. Murphree Wildlife Management Area to outline the strict guidelines for catching, skinning and selling the valuable hides.

Dupuy, 53, of La Belle, will harvest about 200 of the 780 alligators that the Texas Parks and Wildlife will allow to be taken in the brief season that begins Sept. 7 and ends Sept. 23.

Selbst, 25, of Houston, has never hunted alligators but purchased a license in hopes of getting a hide.

"I want an alligator brief case, it's that simple," Selbst said. "I'll maybe make some boots and a purse for my mom."

It's a business for Dupuy however. He was awarded the contract to harvest alligators from the Murphree sanctuary near here. He is returning to a business he enjoyed for about 15 years before the alligator population became depleted in the early 1960s.

"They (hides) were selling for about $5.75 per foot back then but now it's probably going to be between $15 and $18 this year," said Dupuy, an oilfield contractor.

Extensive alligator harvesting almost caused its extinction in the state and led to its protection by the state in 1969. Tougher federal standards were enacted en 1973.

Texas Parks and Wildlife officials say however that the alligator population has increased to over 100,000 and is becoming a nuisance in some areas.

The limited hunt will cover portions of 10 southeast Texas counties: Brazoria, Calhoun, Chambers, Colorado, Fort Bend, Jefferson, Liberty, Matagorda, Orange and Victoria.

Game Warden B.J. Heitman of Beaumont cautioned that there could be some misundersanding about where alligators can be hunted.

"Alligators can only be taken legally from private landowners," Heitman said. "Some people seem to think they can buy a license and go catch an alligator on the bayou."

Kirby Brown, director of the Murphree sanctuary, said landowners were being issued tags for distribution to licenced hunters.

Alligators under four feet long cannot be harvested, Brown said, and must be released.

Brown said the recommended method for catching alligators was with a large stainless steel hook attached to a 300-pound test line.

Instructions call for the hook to be embedded into a "fist-sized" piece of meat and elevated above the water line. Alligators swallow the bait and the hook catches in the reptile's stomach.

After the alligator is hooked, it can be shot, Brown said.

"You've heard reports that a hooked alligator can be led around like a tame dog but don't believe it," Brown said. "Make sure the alligator is dead before you pull it into a boat or onto land."

Jefferson County Judge Richard LeBlanc said part of the pressure for having an alligator season was the nuisance factor.

"The primary pressure is from the people who have had their hunting dogs eaten and other nuisances," LeBlanc said.

Brown said the hunting season would not alleviate the nuisance complaints.

"We have landowners with problems, but basically we felt it was time to open the alligator population to a harvest," Brown said.

"We wanted to start with a conservative harvest. We feel we could safely take about eight percent of the present population and we are only taking four percent."

Bell withdraws request for measured service, asks for price study

AUSTIN (AP) — Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. pulled back its controversial request for local measured service Friday, asking instead for an in-depth study of its prices.

Larry J. Alexander, Bell vice president for public relations, said the company had withdrawn its application filed earlier with the Public Utility Commission and set for public hearing Sept. 24.

"That's great," said Jim Boyle, state public utility counsel, who has fought the request along with the Texas Municipal League and several consumer groups. "I'm glad to see they realize their proposal is flawed."

Bell wanted the Public Utility Commission to allow measured service as an option to its flat-rate billing for local service. Under the proposal, customers would be billed according to the time of day, duration and distance of their calls.

Alexander also announced that the company plans to form an advisory panel representing Texas consumers and other organizations to make an in-depth study of pricing of local telephone service and other customer issues.

Alexander said the American Association of Retired Persons and the League of United Latin-American Citizens already have agreed to appoint someone to serve on the panel. He said other leaders and experts would be asked to join the panel in coming weeks.

"This request (to withdraw the application) does not mean Southwestern Bell is backing away from the difficult issue of how we price our service," Alexander said.

"Today, providing local exchange service is our primary business, and the rate we charge must now cover the costs — if we are to keep providing the kind of dependable service customers deserve. But more importantly, we must offer rate options that meet customer needs," he said.

Dale Johnson, a spokesman for Southwestern Bell, said the decision to withdraw the measured service application was affected by a series of public hearings the company held across Texas.

"We got some support, but also some people have overall concerns about local measured service," Johnson said. "First, because it is new in Texas, and second because some opponents put out some misleading information."

Battle raging over sale of strays for testing

DALLAS (AP) — Animal lovers and research lab operators are battling over whether the city should continue to sell stray dogs for use as experimental test subjects.

Animal lovers say it is cruel to consign one-time pets to potentially painful experiments. Lab operators say they save millions by using strays instead of animals bred for research.

The Dallas Animal Shelter Advisory Committee has now entered the fray and is expected to make a recommendation to the City Council.

About 2,000 abandoned dogs are sold by the city every year. Dr. Carl Severance, acting director of the city animal control division, said the city made about $35,000 on animal sales last year.

He said only animals deemed poor adoption prospects are sold to labs.

But animal lovers doubt that.

"Common sense tells you they (the labs) aren't going to take a skinny, sickly dog," said Yvonne McDonald, a member of the advisory board and president of the Dallas County Humane Society.

Severance said the shelter has been selling strays to labs for at least 14 years. He also said he has reviewed the labs where strays are used and found the labs take steps "to minimize the animals' exposure to pain."

Mrs. McDonald says the practice should be stopped.

"It's wrong to take an animal that has been gently raised as a pet and subject it to lab tests," she said.

Almost 80 percent of the city's strays were bought by Southwestern Medical Center.

Dr. Stephen Pakes, director of animal resources at Southwestern, said the animals are not mistreated and that purchasing laboratory-bred dogs would be too expensive.

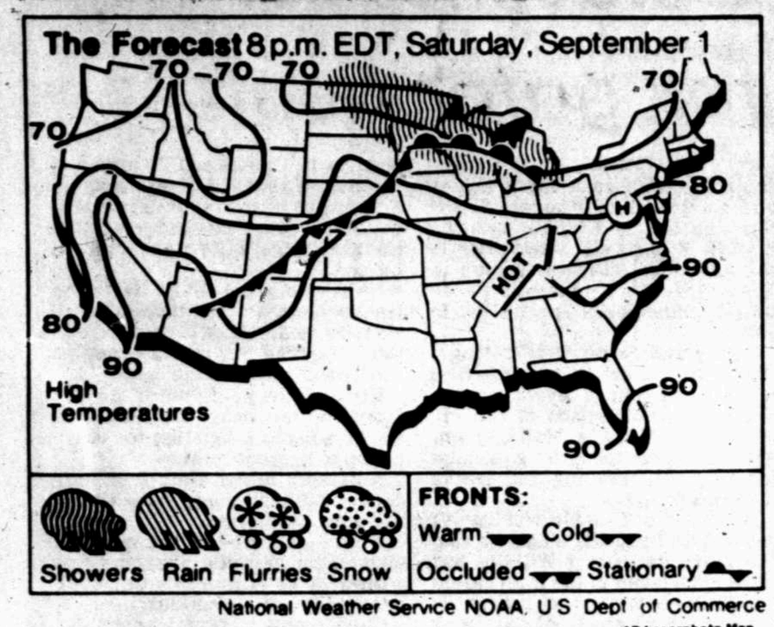
WEATHER SUMMARY



National Weather Service NOAA, U.S. Dept. of Commerce
AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts showers for today for the Dakotas and east to the Great Lakes region.

Today may be windy, rainy; Sunday to be fair

Students who plan to celebrate their first weekend away from the classroom may want to consider indoor activities.

If predictions by the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport hold true, today will be characterized by showers and gusty winds. Forecasters are calling for isolated afternoon thundershowers, highs in the lower 90s and gusty southeast winds of 10 to 20 mph.

A 20 percent chance of thundershowers will continue through tonight, with lows in the upper 60s anticipated.

On the bright side, however, Sunday is expected to be fair and slightly cooler, with highs near 90.

Friday's high was 93, 11 degrees below the record high for that date — 104 set in 1952. Three years later a record low of 56 was set, 10 degrees below today's overnight low of 66.

STATE

Scattered thundershowers hits parts of South Texas Friday and temperatures in other parts of the state dropped several degrees in the afternoon.

The mercury dropped 5 or 6 degrees in West Texas from Thursday afternoon readings as clouds got a little thicker. Temperatures there were in the upper 80s. Readings over Central Texas were in the mid 90s and in the Coastal Plains near 90.

A light gulf breeze of Thursday had gained a little more strength Friday, the National Weather Service said.

The most noticeable change during the weekend was expected today as an extensive area of showers from the Florida Panhandle to the Yucatan Peninsula approaches the Texas coast.

Widely scattered showers forecast over the southern half of the state will be more numerous and locally heavy over the Coastal Plains, the weather service said.

NATION

A heat wave rolled through the central Plains on Friday, dashing hopes that the summer's scorching temperatures there had ended, while summer-long readings well over 100 were blamed for an insect invastion in desert regions of Southern California.

Showers brought relief to firefighters in Montana, where range and forest fires had blackened 250,000 acres since last weekend, and dampened most of northern Oregon, where two inches of rain fell near Bates and Baker.

The season's third tropical storm, Cesar, formed in the Atlantic Ocean off Canada, while the first, Arthur, 200 miles east of Antigua, was downgraded to a tropical depression as its winds dropped to less than 35 mph.

Tropical storm Bertha, meanwhile, was moving west-northwest about 850 miles east of Barbados. Bertha was expected to strengthen, while the other two storms appeared to be waning, the National Weather Service said.

Neil Frank, director of the National Hurricane Center in Miami, warned waterfront residents of Long Beach Island, N.J., Friday that many homes could crumble if a hurricane struck the New Jersey coast.

The Midwest and Northeast enjoyed mild temperatures, with readings in the 70s from New England to the Ohio Valley and in the 60s in the upper Midwest.

Skies were mostly sunny in the South, except for thunderstorms over the Texas coast. Temperatures were mostly in the 90s. Along the West Coast, readings ranged from the 60s in Washington to the 80s in California shore areas.

EPA accused of 'intellectual fraud'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's largest supplier of lead gasoline additives accused the Environmental Protection Agency on Friday of "intellectual fraud" in documenting its conclusion that lead in gasoline ought to be greatly reduced.

The agency ignored its own scientific advisers in putting confidence in some research reports showing behavorial changes and IQ deficits in children with low concentrations of lead in their blood, said Lawrence E. Blanchard Jr., vice chairman of Ethyl Corp.

"If we had presented such inconsistent and anomalous data, EPA would have had a tizzy," Blanchard said.

Blanchard presented Ethyl's case on the second day of hearings on the agency's proposal to reduce the permissible amount of lead in gasoline by 91 percent in 1986, possibly later, and to ban it altogether by 1995.

Lead compounds are the cheapest way to increase the octane rating of gasoline and have been used since the mid-1920s.

But lead is a poison, and in high concentrations causes various diseases, including mental retardation in children. It also renders catalytic converters, installed in cars since 1975 to reduce other pollution, ineffective.

People can ingest lead by breathing or in their diet. Children in inner-city neighborhoods where homes and apartments used lead-based paint are particularly at risk because they often suffer from a disorder called pica that makes them chew on paint chips.

An Italian study estimated that 11 percent to 25 percent of lead in blood comes from inhaling it. EPA believes the figure could be as high as 50 percent.

The studies Blanchard criticized involve blood concentrations around or below 30 micrograms per deciliter, or 10 millionths of a fluid ounce per quart. Ethyl and others previously have criticized them as not adequately taking into account all possible variables.

"The most glaring example of their intellectual fraud is in the story of the blood enzyme PN-y-5," Blanchard said.

Dr. William N. Valentine of the University of California at Los Angeles did find that low levels of blood lead inhibited the activity of the enzyme. After EPA cited his work, he wrote to object, saying his results had not demonstrated any harm to health because the body's reserves of the enzyme are so large.

While not mentioning the enzyme study specifically, Lester Grant, head of the EPA's environmental criteria and assessment office, said in responding to Blanchard, "If these studies (concerning concentrations below 30 micrograms) did not exist at all, we still would be sufficiently concerned about levels above 30 micrograms to proceed with a (gasoline) phasedown."

Grant said researchers have responded to the advisers' technical criticisms of their work and have reached substantially the same conclusions.

Blanchard charged that the EPA might actually hurt the nation's health by reducing lead in gasoline, because refiners will have to add substantial amounts of other compounds to keep up the octane rating of their product.

Those other compounds will include benzene, which causes leukemia in humans, and other suspected causes of cancer.

Leaded gasoline costs less than unleaded, by 5 cents to 10 cents per gallon, because gasoline stations often use leaded gasoline as a "loss leader," priced below cost, to lure customers.

Blanchard said the EPA's proposed rule raised a "fairness issue" in that it "will take out of the pockets of the owners of old cars $3 billion a year. And all that cost is to keep some fool from misfueling his new car."

The EPA has concluded, however, that the economy would save about $750 million a year from lower medical costs of lead-poisoned children and reduced maintenance of cars and their lower pollution from low-lead gasoline.

Protester against Central America policies

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A lone demonstrator holding a sign proclaiming "El Salvador is Spanish for Viet Nam" stood outside Midland Center Friday protesting United States involvement in Central America while U.S. Congressman Tom Loeffler addressed Midland Jaycees inside.

Mike Gray, 32, a self-proclaimed local activist, said despite Midland's staid reputation and a few catcalls directed his way, the noon demonstration on Wall Avenue was not uncomfortable.

"One person is not very threatening," he said.

"I'm here primarily because because Tom Loeffler is in there," the Midland independent landscaper said. "I'm not attacking Tom Loeffler. I'm attacking our policies in Central America, which he supports."

After being involved in Central America since Teddy Roosevelt took San Juan Hill in 1898, it is time for the United States to withdraw, he said. "I feel the Marines haven't fixed anything down there.

"We installed Somoza in power and the Carter administration deposed him. We installed the Sandinistas and now we are trying to depose the Sandinistas."

Gray, who received local publicity in August when he demonstrated at the Pantex Nuclear Weapons Assembly Plant near Amarillo and the Republican National Convention in Dallas, said he felt the Reagan administration is "increasing our war-like stance in Central America.

"I think Loeffler is a party man and he's just going along with the powers that be. But I think he really believes this. He must — a man of conscience wouldn't vote like this."

The Reagan administration continues to defend U.S. involvement by contending the Sandinistas are providing arms from Nicaragua to El Salvador, but "they offer us no proof," Gray said. "Another dictatorship is the only solution our government has offered."

Gray likened the situation in El Salvador to the role of U.S. advisers and increased involvement in Vietnam. "It's been less than 11 years since we pulled out of Vietnam and I don't think we should forget."

As part of the Campaign for Peace with Justice in Central America, Gray said he supports four proposed steps:

— Stop all military aid to and intervention in El Salvador, Honduras and Guatemala;

— Stop U.S. covert operations and all other destabilization activity aganst Nicaragua;

— Vigorously support a negotiated political solution between all parties involved in the conflict in El Salvador and support the Mexico/Venezuela peace initiative which calls for talks between the U.S. and Nicaragua and between Honduras and Nicaragua;

— And grant temporary asylum to Central American refugees in the United States until they can safely return to their homelands.

Since Stacy Merkt was arrested for smuggling refugees across the border late last spring, Gray said there has been a 10 percent increase in calls of support to the Sanctuary Project, presently a network of 144 churches across the nation which provide sanctuary for political refugees.

Some local Bell companies introducing 'equal access'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Local Bell telephone companies across the country prepared to introduce "equal access" in selected exchanges today, giving hundreds of thousands of consumers their first taste of true competition in long-distance phone service.

Executives with the Bell companies generally reported the process was going smoothly and that their firms would make the cutovers scheduled for 12:01 a.m. today without any problem.

The process of providing telephone customers with equal access, in the works for more than two years, is considered one of the biggest benefits of the antitrust settlement that broke up the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. In simplest terms, equal access means that a long-distance call can be placed as easily through a company such as MCI Communications or GTE-Sprint as via AT&T.

Once a local telephone office is converted to equal access, its customers no longer need a tone-generating phone nor do they have to dial up to 12 extra digits to use an AT&T competitor. Customers are then asked to "pre-subscribe" — or select the long-distance phone company of their choice.

Once a customer makes his choice, every time he dials a long-distance phone call in the normal fashion — 1-plus-area code-plus-number — that call is automatically routed to the proper company. If a customer does not exercise his right to sign up with a long-distance company, his long-distance calls will continue to be routed automatically to AT&T.

DEBATES

Scott Widmeyer, deputy press secretary to Mondale, said the campaign has received invitations from 25 potential sponsors, including the television networks.

Sandy Risser, an official of the League of Women Voters which sponsored the 1976 and 1980 debates, said her organization has submitted a proposal to the two campaigns that it sponsor a series of up to four debates,.

"We think realistically that they might accept a series of three debates, two presidential and one vice presidential," said Ms. Risser, who is the league's assistant director for public affairs.

The debates are important, she said, because they give voters a chance to listen to candidates address issues and answer questions that concern them.

"It's part of the public education process," Ms. Risser said. "It's an extension of what you read in the newspaper and the 60-second spots you see on network news."

The Labor Day weekend, traditionally the formal start of the presidential campaign season, will see the Republican and Democratic tickets on the road.

Reagan will fly to California on Sunday for appearances in Anaheim and San Jose on Monday. He will be in Salt Lake City, Utah, on Tuesday and Chicago on Wednesday.

Bush will begin a Southern swing Sunday in Norfolk, Va., with stops later in the week in Houston, New Orleans and Paducah and Lexington, Ky.

Mondale and Ms. Ferraro will march in Labor Day parades in New York City and Merrill, Wis., then fly to Long Beach, Calif. The presidential nominee will stay aboard the former ocean liner Queen Mary that night, while his running mate continues on to San Diego.

The Mondale-Ferraro ticket was endorsed Friday by the 1.7 million-member National Education Association, the nation's largest teacher union. NEA President Mary Hatwood Futrell told a Washington news conference that the Democratic nominees "are committed to equity and excellence in education, to improving the quality of life for all Americans and to securing world peace."

By contrast, she said, Reagan "has already said that if re-elected, he will resume his effort to slash education funding and try to pass tuition tax credits, vouchers and other measures that would undermine the public schools."

SHUTTLE

The cylindrical satellite, resting horizontally in the cargo bay to use as little space as possible, was held down by locking pins at four contact points. Mullane and Hawley sent commands to retract the pins and an explosive device released a spring that imparted a slight rotation — to keep the satellite steady and prevent any one side from overheating in the sun.

The astronauts almost had to postpone the Leasat launch after the temperature on one of its battery packs climbed to 86 degrees Fahrenheit, just shy of the 90-degree "red line" limit.

"If the temperature goes above 90 degrees, you are no-go for deploy," Mission Control told the astronauts. Discovery's position would then have been shifted so the satellite could be moved from the sun side to the shadow side of the vehicle to cool it down.

A series of payload rocket firings over the next two days is to elevate Leasat to a stationary outpost 22,300 miles up. The first of those burns, 45 minutes after ejection, was good, the astronauts reported.

The other two satellites in the record load carried aboard Discovery are spun for stability and launched straight up out of the cargo bay with attached rocket motors called "Payload Assist Modules" — PAMs for short. Two PAM-launched satellites ejected from the shuttle Challenger last February went into useless orbits.

STRIKES

Rhode Island Education Commissioner J. Troy Earhart on Friday ordered the Exeter-West Greenwich School Committee to find money to pay teachers a 7 percent raise provided for in their contract.

The school committee, which maintains that the funds are not available, has asked a state court judge to order 56 striking teachers back to work. A hearing is scheduled for Tuesday. Some 960 students are affected by the strike.

In San Francisco, Ms. Feinstein met with school board members Thursday to discuss funding for teacher pay raises. She asked teachers to show up for work as scheduled Tuesday.

Robbery occurs in bank snack bar

From Staff Reports

Midland police have no suspects in an armed robbery that occurred about 5 p.m. Friday in the lobby of ClayDesta National Bank.

Stolen from the Kiosch snack bar was about $350 in cash, according to a detective. The female attendant told police that a 6-foot black male wearing a green T-shirt and jeans held her up as she was preparing to close. The woman said he was armed, but was unable to say what type of weapon was used.

A burglary of a Midland business is also under investigation. According to reports, 14 cases of beer and a case of Coca-Cola were stolen from Eddie's Bar, 403 N. Lamesa, between 9 p.m. Thursday and 8 a.m. Friday. Burglars apparently kicked in the front door to gain entry. The loss totaled $150 and damage to the door was estimted at $75.

Burner ignites apartment fire

From Staff Reports

A fire that caused heavy damage to a Midland apartment apparently was ignited by a kitchen range burner that had been left unattended, Central Fire Department reported.

Five units responded to the blaze, which broke out shortly after 8 a.m. Friday at Village Manor Apartment No. 72, 2928 W. Louisiana. The apartment was occupied by Jessie and Vickie Howard.

Firefighters were on the scene for more than 1½ hours, using 1,500 gallons to extinguish the fire. There was heavy damage to the kitchen and dining area and heavy smoke and heat damage throughout, reports state.

Answer man for U.S. air piracies doesn't respond well to 'Hi, Jack'

ATLANTA (AP) — Jack Barker, the answer man for most U.S. air piracies for the last two decades, tells even his close friends to use a formal greeting when they call him at the office.

"It became a joke, my name being what it is," said Barker, the Federal Aviation Administration public affairs officer for the Southeast. "My friends know never to say 'Hi, Jack' to me over the phone unless there is one."

Of the 134 hijackings of commercial and private airplanes recorded in the United States between 1961 and 1983, 107 ended up in Cuba, which is within the FAA's southeastern region.

As the agency's spokesman for the last 18 years, the job of telling the public what happens with the hijacked aircraft falls to Barker, a 22-year veteran of government public relations.

"When a hijacking occurs, a telephone network is activated and all the proper people are on it," Barker said.

In addition to notifying the FBI and the State Department, FAA controllers handling the hijacked aircraft call Barker, or his assistant, Roger S. Myers. Barker or Myers, in turn, call news media organizations in the appropriate areas to inform them of the details.

"Ninety percent of my work is over the telephone," Barker said. "There are people I've known for years that I've never seen."

From his office decorated with prints of various aircraft and cartoons along the "Hi, Jack" theme, the 54-year-old Barker juggles several telephone lines as he watches airplanes take off and land at nearby Hartsfield Atlanta International Airport.

"I'm the source of news in anything that happens in aviation in the eight southeastern states, the Caribbean and Central and South America," he said. "Hijackings, wherever they start, mostly go to Cuba and they end up going through this region to get there. By virtue of that, I'm the one who puts out the information."

He said he doesn't always tell everything he knows about a hijacking.

The FAA and the FBI don't want potential air pirates to learn how they handle negotiations in a hijacking, nor do they want hijackers listening to public radio or watching television to learn of police movements, Barker said.

"We're concerned with putting out correct information without jeopardizing the safety of the passengers," he said. "While the airplane is in the air, the main goal of everybody is to let that plane land safely.

"Most all of the hijackings have been routine air traffic procedures. They always are treated as an emergency, of course, but it's been routine in that there was no problem getting it to the destination safely."

Since the first rash of hijackings started in 1968, the FAA has taken a number of steps to stop people with political or personal motives from commandeering airplanes.

"Every time the hijackings started, we'd find a way to stop them," Barker said. "But then they'd find a way to thwart" the preventive measures.

In 1973, the FAA required all American airports to screen passengers for weapons and, a year later, the FAA required airports to X-ray carry-on luggage.

That stopped air piracy for several years, until hijackers learned they could sneak flammable liquids on board and threaten to blow up the plane.

Two things combined to stop the spurt of hijackings involving flammable liquids: the FAA instituted security procedures to help screen successfully for potential fire bombs and Cuba started sentencing hijackers to prison terms.

Although Cuba sentenced the first hijacker in 1980, Barker said it took a while to convince potential air pirates of the dangers.

"If the hijackers were unsuccessful and caught, they got prison sentences in the United States. If they were successful, they got sentences in Cuba," Barker said. "But they didn't believe us, so the hijackings continued."

Eventually, however, the futility of the crime apparently dawned on potential air pirates and the number of hijackings have dwindled, with only a handful occurring in the last 12 months.

Scientists look at quasars to measure continental drift

EDITOR'S NOTE — In 1912, German meteorologist Alfred Wegener was widely hooted when he suggested that the seven continents are actually afloat, drifting about the globe. But today, scientists are using ingenious techniques to measure just how far they move each year.

By DANIEL Q. HANEY

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Scientists are looking at quasars 6,000,000,000,000,000,000,000 (six sextillion) miles away so they can figure out to the inch how far Sweden is from Massachusetts.

It's a roundabout but ingenious way of measuring the speed of continental drift — the outward effect of ponderous inner forces that shape the Earth. The idea is to see whether the trip from Boston to Oslo is a thumb's width farther this year than it was last.

Geologists have been reasonably certain for the past two decades that the seven continents float about the surface of the globe. They can tell how far — and how fast — the continents separate in 1,000 centuries. Anything more precise than that, though, is just a guess.

Over the eons, the continents separate at a rate of an inch or two a year. But do they creep along steadily, year after year? Or do they stop a while and then jump apart in spurts? And what makes them move?

Scientists at the Harvard-Smithsonian Center for Astrophysics in Cambridge hope that excruciatingly precise measurements of radio waves from quasars and other far-off orbs will help them answer these questions.

ESSENTIALLY, THEY record how long it takes radio waves from space to reach antennas in Sweden and the United States. Then they keep track of the difference between the two. If this difference changes, it means the antennas are no longer the same distance apart. Make these measurements long enough, they reason, and they'll know how fast the continents are rafting away from each other.

Astronomer Irwin Shapiro, the director of the astrophysics center, thought up this technique almost 18 years ago. Convincing people it would work, however, took time. The project is finally under way as part of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's crustal dynamics project. But the data are just beginning to pile up.

"I would say we can measure distances between different points on the Earth now with an uncertainty in one day's observations of three centimeters," Shapiro says. "That's an inch or so. To try to detect a motion of a couple of inches a year, it's necessary to look for several years before one can really be sure that one is detecting a motion and not just systematic errors in the measurements."

Now, with two years of these measurements, Shapiro says they may be close to the first direct observation of continental drift. But he isn't quite sure.

"There seems to be something there," he says. "But it might be nothing. We really need a couple of more years of data collecting before we can say anything with reliability."

MEASURING THE width of the Atlantic Ocean when both shores are, presumably, creeping away from each other is no easy assignment. In fact, everything on the Earth is probably moving. So the most obvious problem is finding a stationary benchmark to use as a starting point for the measurements.

That's where the edge of the universe comes in handy. The spheres out there are so far away that they look like they're standing still, even though they're really not.

The astronomers are taping the position of the continents from quasars and other mysterious heavenly bodies that send out enormous amounts of radio energy. They are about one billion light years away, and a light year is 5.88 trillion miles. A very long way indeed.

"They are so far away that we can't detect their motion at all," says Shapiro. "As far as we're concerned, they are fixed in the sky. They give us fixed markers."

Their faint radio waves are collected by large, dish-shaped antennas on Earth. Even though they look different, these antennas work a lot like optical telescopes that gather light waves. Light and radio waves are both forms of electromagnetic radiation.

One of the astronomers' cleverest tricks is hooking several of these radio telescopes into globe-spanning networks. Widely separated telescopes working together can produce a far sharper picture than one telescope standing alone. The farther apart they are, the better than can focus on a skyward body.

USING THIS technique — called very long baseline interferometry, or VLBI — astronomers can produce images 1,000 times sharper than with optical telescopes.

How sharp is that? Imagine standing in Boston and watching someone hold a penny in the air in Los Angeles, says Shapiro. With VLBI, you could make out Abe Lincoln's nose on the penny.

For the continental drift experiments, the scientists record the arrival of radio waves at the Chalmers Institute of Technology observatory in Onsala, Sweden. And they compare that, over time, with radio waves observed at the Haystack Observatory in Westford, Mass., at California Institute of Technology's Owens Valley Radio Observatory and at Harvard University's radio antenna at Fort Davis.

The scientists must make sure that the different telescopes are making their observations at precisely the same time. For this, they use hydrogen maser clocks, which are accurate to within a billionth of a second a day.

In a day's work, the astronomers look at two dozen different radio sources across the sky. Then, using reasonably simple algebra, they can figure out the distance between the antennas.

Gunmen slay four family members of ex-NFL player Kermit Alexander

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The mother, sister and two nephews of National Football League star Kermit Alexander were slain Friday by two gunmen who walked into the family bungalow and opened fire, police and neighbors said. Two others survived.

"They didn't say anything. They just came in shooting," said a 13-year-old boy who escaped by hiding in a closet, according to a neighbor who took him into his home after the shootings.

The other survivor, the son of the older slain woman, told the neighbor that he tried to grab one of the gunmen, who punched him as the assailant fled. The neighbor asked not to be identified.

Los Angeles police Lt. Dan Cooke identified the dead as two boys aged 9 and 13, a 24-year-old woman and a woman in her 50s.

He said they were relatives of Alexander, an All-American halfback in 1962 at the University of California at Los Angeles who played 10 years in the NFL.

Neighbors said the older woman was the grandmother, the other woman her daughter and the two boys the sons of the younger woman.

Kermit Alexander

No names were immediately released. Neighbors said several other people lived in the home, but no others were home during the 8:20 a.m. attack.

Barbara Driver, who lives across the street, said she heard the gunfire and saw two men dash from the home in south-central Los Angeles.

"I heard 'pop pop pop pop pop,' and I said to myself, 'That doesn't sound like backfire; that sounds like a gun," she said.

"They killed my grandmother and my cousins," the 13-year-old boy cried as he emerged from the home, said Arveal Barnett, a next-door neighbor who had run inside the home and seen three of the dead.

"I heard the shots, then I heard things falling," said Mrs. Barnett. "I saw one male leave then another one. I ran over (to the home.)"

Mrs. Barnett said she saw the dead boys on one bed and "the daughter was on another bed with the covers partly over her head. (The grandmother) was in the kitchen on the floor, and the pans had fallen on top of her."

Mrs. Driver described one of the victims as having a "very holy family, she was a very Christian lady" who attended a nearby Roman Catholic church.

Habitual shoplifter tells judge radio transmitter made him do it

CHICAGO (AP) — A 30-year-old man with 37 shoplifting convictions had a straight-faced explanation in his 38th case: he said doctors secretly implanted a radio transmitter in his neck and the device "distorts my ability to do the right thing."

It was a new judge, but an old story for LePonds Shaffer — guilty.

"He is certainly consistent," said Jeremiah Lynch, an assistant Cook County state's attorney who has heard the transmitter story, as well as several other creative defenses employed by Shaffer through the years.

"But he knows what he's doing. He'll be out on the streets again, and they'll arrest him again," he said.

Indeed, Shaffer been sent to prison just once while stringing together shoplifting arrests with supreme consistency.

With the exception of June 1982, Shaffer had been arrested at least once every month from May 1979 through May 1983.

His first arrest for retail theft came in 1972, according to Lynch, and almost every one of his 60 subsequent arrests have been at stores in the Michigan Avenue and Loop business districts.

Shaffer's latest arrest was Nov. 21, when he was charged with stealing four pairs of slacks off the discount rack at a State Street store. When he appeared in court Thursday, Shaffer opened his defense by blaming the arrest on a radio transmitter allegedly sewn into his neck by surgeons at Cook County Hospital who treated a cold he caught during one of his stays in the county jail.

Judge Arthur Cieslik took over the questioning: "What does this transmitter do to you?"

"It distorts my ability," Shaffer said, "to do the right thing."

"But your career is retail theft?" Cieslik asked.

"My background shows that," Shaffer replied. "That's no secret."

"And you are good at what you do?"

"Well, I wasn't very good this time. But it seems I was arrested before the fact."

Store security guards had testified otherwise, but Shaffer continued, "Your honor, I hadn't even left the men's department. I didn't want to cause a disturbance in a rich folk's store.

"They said I resisted arrest," he continued. "I've got too much finesse to do that."

We're willing to pay up to $50,000 for your kid.

There are probably days when you would gladly give your kid away.

Especially when you start thinking about the cost of college tuition.

But before you commit any desperate acts, why not enter Apple's $50,000 Scholarship Sweepstakes.*

They're giving away $50,000 towards the cost of a higher education. Good at any institution that'll take it.

Of course there are hundreds of other prizes, too. Including five $5,000 cash prizes.

Or you could win an Apple® IIc Personal Computer — an educational opportunity in itself. It's a compact version of the Apple IIe, the leading computer used in schools. So it can access the world's largest library of educational software.

If you're lucky enough to be the grand prize winner, you could even take home an additional $10,000. Simply make sure you answer the five questions on your entry form correctly. (Never mind what they are, just answer "true" to everything.)

In any case, there's no purchase necessary. But the contest ends October 12th. So stop by and see us before then for details.

We'll give you lots of friendly computer advice. Some free Apple back-to-school bookcovers. And all the details on how to get 50 grand for your kid.

American couple picks up pieces of Vietnamese family

NACOGDOCHES, Texas (AP) — Luong Van Leo's quest for freedom is over. He said he would be free or die trying. It was death and not freedom that befell Luong, his wife and three daughters.

His three sons and their sponsoring family, John and Donna Gambino, got word this month that all five died at sea attempting to flee communist Vietnam.

The boys and the Gambinos got a telegram several months ago saying the escape was planned for June 6.

AP Laserphoto

Donna and John Gambino, center, of Nacogdoches, Texas, pose with their own and their sponsoring family from Vietnam. The three boys Bihn Van Leo's, far left, Bach, third from right, and Bao, right, left Vietnam in July 1983 aboard a 4-foot boat carrying 68 people.

A telephone call several weeks later ended their anxious waiting, and the dreams of the boys — Bao, 16; Bach, 14; and Bihn,11 — of being reunited with their parents and sisters.

"Bao is angry. But his anger is at the communists who caused the situation in Vietnam to be intolerable. He understands why it happened. But he is having a hard time accepting the death of his sisters. They were so young," said Gambino, preacher at the Pioneer Park Church of Christ in Nacogdoches, and a longtime friend of Luong, whom he met during the war in Vietnam.

The girls, Trang, 9; Houng, 11; and Nguyet, 15, starved, according to the report received by their brothers. Houng was the twin of the youngest son, Bihn.

Luong and his family left Vietnam on June 6 as planned. Survivors of the trip later said the boat, carrying 82 people, lost its motor the fifth day. For the next 20 days, the tiny boat was violently tossed about as it encountered storm after storm. The boat was headed for Malaysia but storms and the loss of the motor caused the boat to drift toward the Philippines.

On July 7, a Filipino fishing vessel stopped to help the 14 survivors. The Luong family were not among them. Sixty-eight people had died on the trip, from starvation, dehydration and exposure.

"We always knew there was the possiblity they would die in their escape attempt. But that intangible thing called hope kept us believing things would work out for the best. When July came and we hadn't heard from them, I guess I knew they were probably dead. But I held onto hope and prayed they had made it to some deserted island in the ocean. There's a fine line between not facing the truth and hope," said Gambino.

On Aug. 1, a friend who had come on an earlier boat with the boys called Bao from California with word the family members had died. A few days later, another call came from the Philippines to confirm the tragic news from survivors of the boat voyage.

The three boys left Vietnam in July 1983 aboard a 40-foot boat carrying 68 people. Two days out, they were picked up by a U.S. Navy vessel and taken to a refugee camp in the Philippines. Gambino's name and telephone number were sewn into Bao's shirt. The captain of the vessel let Gambino know the boys were safe.

Gambino was expecting the whole family. He and his wife, parents of three young children aged 5, 3, and 18 months, shifted gears and prepared to care for the boys until the rest of the family arrived. On Feb.8, the boys arrived at the Houston airport.

Gambino got a letter from Luong acknowledging the telegram he had sent confirming the boys' safe arrival. In part, the letter read, "Freedom is reserved for everyone living in the world. I have told John for a long time: 'Free or Dead.' I can't live without freedom. You and your friends are luckier than I. My children will follow your good examples and I hope my sons will become the useful men to serve for the human beings."

Gambino and Luong had become close friends when Gambino was stationed in Vietnam in the late 1960s, and Luong was interpreter for his military advisory team.

Since the fall of Vietnam in 1975, Gambino's contact with Luong had been sporadic, oftentimes using go-betweens in Canada.

Libya frees men which British government says were hostages

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Libya freed two of eight Britons the British government claims were seized as hostages for Libyan terror suspects awaiting trial in England.

George Bush and Douglas Ledingham met with reporters shortly after they were freed at about 9 p.m. Friday. Both appeared in good health and said they had been treated well. They said they planned to fly to London on Sunday.

The two were released into the custody of two British members of the European Parliament, Alf Lomas and Richard Balfe.

"It feels good, very good," Bush said. He was wearing the same striped shirt and tan trousers he had on when he was arrested on March 18 "because I had had a drink," he said. Consumption of alcohol is tightly restricted in this Moslem country.

Justice Minister Muftah Quiba said the men were pardoned of all crimes but would not say what the crimes were. British officials have said the eight were not formally charged.

"Brother (Moammar) Khadafy has done this as a good will gesture. We hope our people in your country will be able to have the same wish to be free come true," Ali Houdiri, a member of Libya's Foreign Affairs Committee, told reporters.

British officials had said they believed the eight Britons were being held hostage for five Libyans awaiting trial in Britain on charges stemming from a terror-bombing campaign last March in London and Manchester. Police say the bombs were aimed at anti-Khadafy Libyan exiles.

Earlier, British Forcign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe had ruled out a swap of the Libyans charged in Britain for the Britons held in Libya.

Bush, a 45-year-old oil worker from London, said he had appeared in court for drinking and had paid a fine. He had an exit visa and expected to leave the country when for no apparent reason the court turned him over to security police.

Shamir, Peres continue to work on power-sharing agreement

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Labor leader Shimon Peres failed to work out the details of a power-sharing agreement on Friday, but they said they hoped to remove the final obstacles by early next week.

However, Peres — designated to be prime minister by President Chaim Herzog after July 23 elections — was threatened with a split in his party if he made a deal with Shamir's Likud bloc.

A threatened walkout by the six members of Labor's left-wing Mapam faction could change the narrow balance of power between Labor and Likud, and leave Peres scrambling to find enough support among smaller parties to restore his numerical advantage.

Labor won 44 seats in the election and Likud won 41 seats. Neither had the necessary majority in the 120-seat Parliament.

Mapam accused Peres of making too many ideological concessions to appease the right-wing Likud.

Shamir and Peres met for two hours Friday and discussed arrangements that would allow their ideologically divided parties to govern together. They said their meeting focused on the division of power in a joint Cabinet and on a few unresolved policy issues.

An agreement between the two sides would allow a new Cabinet to deal with issues that have been in abeyance since the beginning of the election campaign in spring.

Among those problems are an inflation rate that may be as high as 400 percent for the year, plummeting foreign currency reserves and the continuing occupation of southern Lebanon.

There is also an ideological chasm over the occupied West Bank. Likud wants to keep the West Bank permanently in Israeli hands, saying it is part of Israel's biblical heritage and strategically necessary to defend the eastern border.

Israeli news media said an outline of the power-sharing agreement was already complete. Reports said Peres would be prime minister for the first half of a 50-month term, and that Shamir would take over for the second half.

Reports said Labor would hold the Cabinet's defense portfolio for the full term and that Likud would control the slightly less powerful Finance Ministry. The 24 Cabinet seats would be apportioned equally between the two sides, the reports said.

Yossi Ahimeir, a spokesman for Shamir, said before Friday's meeting that those reports were premature. He said Shamir had not conceded that Peres should be prime minister first.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, left, and Prime Minister-designate Shimon Peres are meeting to discuss a new national government.

Peres told reporters the job was his because Herzog appointed him to form a government. "According to our law, the man who is entrusted to form a government should head it," he said.

Both sides said issues such as how to launch a peace initiative with Jordan were not immediate problems. They said wanted a joint government that could lead the nation on matters of broad agreement such as the economy and a withdrawal from Lebanon.

Labor has said absorption of the 1.3 million West Bank Palestinians would destroy the Jewish character of Israel, and it wants to return the most populated parts of the territory to Jordan as part of a peace settlement.

The two sides have sidestepped that wider issue, but they still differed over Likud's demand to continue building Jewish settlements in the West Bank and Labor's proposal to freeze new construction.

Israeli armed forces radio has reported that the two sides have agreed that new Jewish settlements in the West Bank would be approved by a simple majority vote in the Cabinet. Labor had called for a two-thirds vote.

Gromyko may meet with Shultz in U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko is expected to attend the U.N. General Assembly meeting in late September in New York, where he probably will meet with Secretary of State George P. Shultz, a State Department spokesman said Friday.

U.S. officials previously had said that if Gromyko attended the opening of the annual U.N. session, Shultz would want to meet with him. Gromyko canceled a trip to the United Nations last fall as a result of the outcry over the Soviet downing of a South Korean airliner on Sept. 1, 1983.

State Department spokesman John Hughes said "preliminary arrangements" for a Gromyko visit are being made even though Moscow has not confirmed that he will go to New York.

There also has been speculation that a meeting might be arranged between Gromyko and President Reagan, who will be in New York to address the U.N. session. But officials said it was too early to say whether such a meeting is in the works.

Any decision on a Reagan-Gromyko meeting will not be made until after a Shultz meeting with Gromyko, one official said.

Gromyko routinely attends the fall U.N. General Assembly meetings, as do U.S. secretaries of state and foreign ministers of most member nations.

State Department calls for resuming Arab-Israeli settlement negotiations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department observed the second anniversary of President Reagan's Middle East peace initiative Friday by calling for a speedy resumption of negotiations on achieving an Arab-Israeli settlement.

Department spokesman John Hughes said the United States is convinced the initiative remains valid and can point the way to a lasting agreement acceptable to all parties.

The main element of the proposal was the creation of a system of Palestinian self-rule in the West Bank and Gaza Strip in association with Jordan. The initiative has foundered thus far because of a lack of interest on the part of Israel and Jordan and other factors.

A statement read by Hughes said the failure of the parties to accept the proposals has not lessened U.S. confidence in their validity.

Friday's statement said the proposal represents "fair and balanced positions" on key issues that the negotiating parties will have to resolve.

Workers appeal to other unions for help

EL PASO (AP) — Unions in Mexico and Arizona have been asked to help an El Paso-Juarez farm workers union that has vowed to continue its strike against New Mexico chili farmers.

Esteban Posada, president of the Border Farm Workers Union, said his union has appealed to the Arizona Farm Workers Union and a teacher's union in nearby Juarez, Mexico, for aid.

"May the strike continue, be it until Thursday or February," said Posada.

The union called its strike early Monday to demand a 100 percent pay increase and better working conditions.

Joaquin Lira of the Arizona Farm Workers Union said his group is trying to collect money for the striking El Paso area workers.

The border workers union and the Arizona Farm Workers Union are part of the Federation of American Workers, an independent labor association formed last month by six organizations of farm and industrial workers in California, Arizona, Colorado, Texas and Mexico.

The strikers also have asked for help from an insurgent coalition of Juarez political groups.

Roberto Diaz Molina, a member of the Democratic Teachers Force, said the teachers organization; the Popular Defense Committee, an urban squatters organization, and students from the Escobar Brothers Agricultural School are "providing all the help that we can, concentrating more than anything on letting it be known that the problem exists, telling people that they should go" to strike demonstrations.

During the first three days of the strike, strikers were able to postpone for hours the departure of buses taking workers to the fields.

Police warned demonstrators Thursday morning that they would be arrested if they blocked the vehicles.

"We're not fooling around anymore," said police Lt. G.A. Drollinger. "It's dangerous to them, it's dangerous to us."

The warning was given by two plainclothes police officers who gave strikers two minutes to clear an intersection where the demonstrators were blocking a bus operated by labor contractor Jesus Manuel Ochoa.

The crowd broke up and the bus drove off.

Only about 40 people were at the demonstration early Thursday, compared with about 300 who had been there Tuesday morning when a bus was blocked from leaving for about 2½ hours.

There is a great deal of dispute over how much the farm workers actually make and about their working conditions.

The workers want clean water and restrooms provided in the fields. Some contractors say they are already providing these amenities.

Union members says there are cases where laborers have earned less than the minimum wage of $3.35 an hour.

But labor contractors, targets of the strike, say the workers can make much more than the minimum wage. And the contractors say they have not received an increase from the growers during the past decade.

An El Paso Times reporter discovered by watching workers in a field near Deming, N.M., that workers can earn anywhere from $13.30 to $64.75 for a 5½-hour stint in the chili field. That would make the hourly wage range from $2.42 an hour to $11.77 an hour. Seven newcomers to the field did earn less than $3.35 an hour, the reporter said.

The minimum wage law only applies to seasonal workers who have labored 13 weeks or more in agriculture in the previous year.

The workers also demanding that the pickup time be no earlier than 5 a.m.

Store manager killed

DALLAS (AP) — The manager of a Baskin-Robbins ice cream parlor in north Dallas was found fatally wounded in the store's walk-in freezer, the apparent victim of a robber, police said.

Billy Lawrence Franklin, 47, was found by two customers at about 11:30 a.m. Thursday. He had been shot once in the right ear and once in the chest. He died about 45 minutes later at nearby Medical City Hospital.

Police said empty moneybags were found next to an open safe in the storeroom's floor. An alarm on the cash register was still ringing when police arrived.

Homicide investigator Paul Lachnitt said investigators are looking into a possible connection with an armed robbery in a north Dallas bar Wednesday.

Inmate stabbed over radio

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A Texas prison inmate stabbed during an argument about a radio was in good condition at a Galveston hospital Friday, a prison spokesman said.

Jesse Fowler, 32, serving a 20-year sentence for theft, was stabed once in the shoulder and once in the ribs during a scuffle late Thursday at the Texas Department of Corrections' Ellis 1 Unit, said prison spokesman Phil Guthrie.

Fowler was stabbed with a homemade knife as he and another inmate were being taken to the unit's infirmary, Guthrie said. He was taken to John Sealy Hospital in Galveston for treatment.

Airlines to match low fare

DALLAS (AP) — Midway's Airline's promotional, $118 round-trip fare between Dallas and Chicago will be matched by American Airlines, Braniff Inc. and Delta Air Lines, company officials said.

Chicago-based Midway began offering the fare on Tuesday.

American was the first to match the Midway fare, the Dallas Times Herald said. Delta and Braniff reacted to American's offer, the newspaper said.

Man has heat stroke

FORT WORTH (AP) — An 87-year-old Fort Worth man was admitted to Harris Hospital with heat stroke after he was found delirious in a closed room where paramedics said the temperature was 110 degrees.

Roy Fricks was listed in fair condition Friday in the neurological intensive care unit, a hospital spokesman said.

Paramedics said his home was closed and the air conditioners were turned off Thursday, when the high temperature was 99 degrees. Only a small fan was running the bedroom where Fricks was found by family members.

Appraisals protested

HOUSTON (AP) — Nearly 22,500 Harris County taxpayers are protesting their 1984 property appraisals, and 40 percent of those who own property have yet to be notified of their appraisals.

But Harris County officials said they had feared that even more people would protest the new valuations.

About 720,000 of 1.2 million appraisals countywide, the first since a 1982 state revision law, have been mailed to county property owners. County officials said they planned to mail condominium owners their appraisals this weekend.

Union seeks injunction

The Associated Press

The Texas State Employees Union, following a meeting this week with state prison director Raymond Procunier, said Friday it will be going to court to seek a temporary injunction against the prison system's grievance procedure.

Deputy charged with sexual abuse

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A complaint phoned in to a child abuse hotline has led to the arrest of a 20-year veteran of the sheriff's department on charges of child sexual abuse.

Lt. Alvin Johnson, 50, was free on $15,000 bond Friday after he surrendered Thursday at the Bexar County Jail. He had been sought in a warrant issued earlier Thursday in connection with an incident that allegedly occurred in May 1983.

Johnson is charged with aggravated sexual abuse of a child, a first-degree felony. It carries a maximum penalty of life in prison.

Sheriff Joe Neaves said he was shocked at Johnson's arrest.

"It's hard to believe. He's been here since 1964 and something like this turns up. It caught me by surprise."

Johnson, who was a lieutenant in the criminal investigator's division, resigned from the sheriff's department Wednesday, listing personal business reasons for leaving the force.

He asked that his resignation become effective Sept. 15.

A warrant for Johnson's arrest was issued after the alleged victim of the crime reported him to a child abuse hotline in Austin set up by the Texas Department of Human Resources.

Police Lt. Jack Summey said Thursday the alleged victim told police she and another girl were taken to a motel May 20, 1983, by a man who forced them to pose nude and in sexually explicit positions for photographs.

The girl said the man, who was a friend of her family, paid both girls $20 and took them to lunch after the incident.

Summey said the investigation had turned up none of the alleged photographs.

Assistant District Attorney Ed Coffey said the girl called the hotline after she viewed a television program dealing with sexual abuse of children.

"At this point, the investigation is far from complete," he said, "but we thought there was sufficient evidence to seek an arrest warrant in the case."

Rice infallible if directions followed

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I know that yours is not a cooking column, but you once printed a piece about how some people never follow a recipe and then wonder why they have failures. Along with that piece you gave a recipe for Infallible Rice. I used to make it and it was delicious. Now I can't find the recipe, and I'm going crazy looking for it.

Please save my sanity, Abby, and run it again. — MONA D. IN LOS ANGELES

DEAR MONA: Stop looking. Here it is:

DEAR ABBY: I'm considered a good cook, and I don't mind giving out my recipe to anyone who wants it. My gripe is the person who doesn't follow the instructions and then complains because it didn't turn out like mine.

For example, take this simple recipe I have used for over 20 years and have given to countless guests:

Infallible Rice

1 medium onion, minced
2 tablespoons butter
1 cup long-grain, raw white rice
2 cups hot chicken broth

Saute onion in butter until transparent. Combine onion, rice and hot broth. Bring to a boil on top of range. Cover and place in 325-degree oven for 20 minutes. Serve and listen to the compliments.

Simple enough? Well, you ain't heard nuthin' yet. I have had people complain that theirs wasn't like mine. Upon questioning them, I learned why. Here are a few reasons:

1. Used instant rice.
2. Used another shortening, not butter.
3. Left out the onion.
4. Failed to cover the rice while baking.
5. Used water instead of broth.
6. Allowed rice to boil for some time before placing in oven.
7. Let broth cool before using.
8. Baked for 40 minutes.
9. Liked onions, so added second onion.

Now I ask you! Why can't some people just follow instructions? — RESIGNED

DEAR RESIGNED: For some people, instructions are something they read carefully after a failure to find out what they did wrong.

DEAR ABBY: I am going to be married in three months to a wonderful man. He lives out of state and has spent a lot of time and money driving in so we can be together. He knows all my friends and he even knows all the relatives in my large family by name.

The problem: I have never met his parents or any of his relatives or friends. He once told me that he never liked living at home and has been on his own since he was 18. I never fully understood the reason for this because he never talked about it.

Last year when I told him that I would like to meet his family, he said that we came from "two different worlds." I opened up my world to him, but so far he hasn't opened up his world to me.

He asked me to marry him, so I assume he has chosen to live in my world, but he won't even let me visit in his. (I can't imagine what could be so terrible in his world, can you?) He has all the good qualities a woman could want in a husband and I love him very much.

Should I let sleeping dogs lie? Or will this eat at me forever? — TWO DIFFERENT WORLDS

DEAR DIFFERENT WORLDS: Sleeping dogs must eventually awaken, so if you plan to spend the rest of your life with this wonderful man, you had better clear up the mystery of "his world" before you marry him.

He's probably not very proud of his world and prefers to keep it from you, but if that's the case, he should be man enough to say so. His refusal to explain it is unfair to you.

DEAR ABBY: I am enclosing something I came across a while back in the Catholic Digest. It was written by a 9-year-old third-grade girl, and it made me smile.

I hope you think it's worth passing along to your readers. — ILLINOIS GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: It's well worth it, and here it is:

What is a Grandmother

A grandmother is a lady who has no children of her own, so she likes other people's little girls. A grandfather is a man grandmother. He goes for walks with the boys, and they talk about fishing and tractors and things like that.

Grandmas don't have to do anything except be there. They're old, so they shouldn't play hard or run. It is enough if they drive us to the market where the pretend horse is and have lots of dimes ready.

Or, if they take us for walks, they should slow down past things like pretty leaves or caterpillars. They should never, ever say, "Hurry up."

Usually they are fat, but not too fat to tie kids' shoes. They wear glasses and funny underwear. They can take their teeth and gums off.

It is better if they don't typewrite, or play cards except with us. They don't have to be smart, only answer questions like why dogs hate cats and how come God isn't married. They don't talk baby talk like visitors do, because it is hard to understand. When they read to us, they don't skip or mind if it is the same story again.

Everybody should try to have one, especially if you don't have television, because grandmas are the only grown-ups who have got time.

DEAR ABBY: What is your opinion of a wife who insists that each time I take a shower I wipe down the walls and glass doors in the shower?

Frankly, if it weren't for co-workers and customers, I wouldn't shower at all. — HENPECKED IN WISCONSIN

DEAR HENPECKED: Somebody has to tidy up, so why not the person who made the mess?

And since you shower only out of consideration to co-workers and customers, it's obvious why your wife doesn't feel like doing anything for you.

Artist designs elaborate robes for Micronesian judges

AGANA, Guam (AP) — Judges for the Federated States of Micronesia Supreme Court will look a little different from their United States counterparts.

Guam artist-papermaker Barbara Boertzel has designed a blue-black judicial robe, complete with a 5-inch-wide neckpiece.

The garments will be worn by Chief Justices Edward King and Richard Benson, and perhaps other judges and justices in the Micronesian states.

The robes resemble those worn in traditional African ceremonies but fall "somewhat in a star point," their designer said in an interview.

Her design is centered around the basic Micronesian symbol of a star point. The neckpiece is about 3 yards long, worn over the shoulders and joined in the back with a woven diamond-shaped piece — the four points symbolizing the joining of the FSM's four states.

The neckpiece is bordered in yellow and blue — yellow representing the color of turmeric, which Micronesians rub on their bodies during ceremonies, and blue representing the ocean.

Cubs outlast San Antonio in slugfest

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

Cubs 15, Dodgers 12.

Years from now if historians look back at the final game of August in the 1984 Texas League season, that's the only numbers that will really count.

But for 784 amazed fans, many of whom never witnessed the finale, it was a Cub comeback that will be long remembered.

This was Texas League baseball. The Cubs, suffering through a disappointing year, exploded in the ginal two innings for 11 runs, with eight coming in the ninth to erase a 12-7 San Antonio lead and win the game, 15-12. Darrin Jackson, who had been hitless all night in the nearly four-hour marathon, provided the winning runs with a towering three-run blast to left.

Even more bizarre is the fact that the winning Cub pitcher was Joe Henderson.

Henderson started the game at third base, but as the runs mounted he wound up on the mound for the first time since playing junior college ball four years ago.

"I guess I've seen just about everything now," said Cub manager George Enright afterwards.

No kidding. The Cubs alternately looked in control, then waxed, then like heroes in earning their third straight win over the Dodgers. Midland and San Antonio tee up again tonight at 7:30 at Cubs Stadium in the season finale.

For Henderson, the victory was a personal favor. Henderson had made a pair of errors at third, and had two wild pitches while on the mound when the relief staff turned into arsonists. After starter Troy Chestnut was pulled in the fifth with the score tied, David Rosenhaun got into trouble.

Rosenhaun lasted long enough to surrender the lead to San Antonio to make it 7-4.

On came Jeff Moscaret, who fanned the side in order in the seventh and pitched two innings of scoreless, one-hit relief.

Enright might have left Moscaret in, but in the bottom of the ninth down three, he went to David Denton as a pinch hitter. The substitution was perfect, as Denton smashed a three-run pinch homer to tie the game up after eight.

Bulldogs show offensive bite

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

It's getting hard to figure out what Midland High is going to do this year. With two starters and one letterman back in the receiving corps, the Bulldog passing game looked to be even more potent than last year.

However, Friday night in the Bulldogs' scrimmage game against Lubbock Coronado at Memorial Stadium, it was the running game that carried Midland High to a 19-14 victory, a running game that amassed 316 yards and two touchdowns, 200 yards more than the aerial corps accounted for in the 432-yard total MHS offensive output.

The scrimmage format gave each team a 20-play series for first and second units for two cycles. The second time the second teams were given the ball, the play count was cut to 15 for approximately 75 offensive plays per team. If a team had used up its 20 plays but was inside the opposing 30, play was extended until the drive was stopped or a touchdown scored.

After the Coronado and MHS first units failed to score on their first possessions, the Mustangs opened the game's scoring on the final play of the second team's first series.

Jeff Fleenor, who found good holes throughout most of the game as he led all running backs with 94 yards, capped a 12-play, 65-yard drive with a two yard run. Kicker Todd Fisher made it 7-0 with his extra point.

Midland High's second unit countered the touchdown midway through its first possession when Mike Stanton busted a trap play up the middle for 30 yards. The TD was set up by a 22-yard pass from Jeff Alsup to Bobby Williams to the 30. Alsup missed the tying extra point kick.

CORONADO'S FIRST unit came back on the field for its 20 plays and once again the Bulldog defense kept it from breaking into the endzone. In fact, Mustang first teamers didn't cross the Midland High 30-yard line all night, a statistic the Bulldogs' new head coach Doug McCutchen was very pleased with.

"First off, they never got inside our 30," said McCutchen after making a quick check with his assistant coaches. "We're extremely pleased with our defense. We knew the defense had a possibility of doing good but they performed better than we thought they would. It's not to say that we don't have a ways to go, we do. We were just pleased with their efforts."

Trailing 7-6, the Bulldog first unit came back on the field and picked up the running game where it left off. Jake Madrid carried the ball twice for 22 yards, Mark Johnson pouned out 12 on his only carry and Keith Byrd came up with 22 on two carries, the second of which went 20 yards for a touchdown to cap an eight-play, 65-yard drive. Williams booted the PAT for a 13-7 MHS lead.

Maintaining possession of the ball, the Bulldogs tried to find their stalling aerial attack. Junior quarterback Matt Marcum was finding the open receivers and on at least six occasions hit them with perfect passes only to see the ball bounce off incomplete off their hands.

Finally, several plays after a 48-yard completion to tight Darrell Davis was called back for clipping, the Bulldogs found the long-range pass they were looking for.

Rebuilding Rebels show 'Potential'

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

ANDREWS — "Potential" is the key word that came out of Midland Lee's 4-1 scrimmage victory over the Class 4A Andrews Mustangs here Friday night.

You can't say that the Rebels hit on all cylinders, but then again, enough was shown to say that there is "potential" on hand.

Lee's offensive and defensive attack was kind of like firing a machine gun with every other bullet being a blank.

"It's hard to tell how we stand," said new Lee head football coach Jack Tayrien. "We did some good things, but we didn't always have intensity. We made some alignment mistakes and had some people in wrong positions. We ran to the ball well on defense and hit will. I'm pleased with the effort our kids gave, but we still have a way to go."

Andrews coach David Visentine, who has been in the hospital with a gall bladder uprising, said, "Lee is as quick as they were last year at this time. They'll have a good ball club. I don't think there is any question about that."

Visentine was a little disappointed with his own team's defensive play.

"We just didn't play good defensive football. We had some breakdowns on defense and that cost us. Still, I'm pleased with some of the things we did offensively. We're not there yet."

Offensively, Lee was paced by guess who? None other than Walter Jones and Tyrone Thurman. Thurman scored three touchdowns and Jones the other. Jones had 164 yards rushing, pounding out an average of 13.8 yards per carry. His TD was a 70-yard romp that was made possible by a crushing block by Thurman on the Andrews cornerback.

No one has told Thurman that he weighs less than 150 pounds. He blocks like 250 and had at least three gems in the game. Thurman also scored on runs of seven, two and six yards and had 75 yards rushing on nine carries and two pass completions for another 13 yards.

Lee's passing game did not look sharp. So, what else is new. They went to the state finals last year without a passing attack. Starting quarterback Dirk Bergoon did complete two of four efforts for 13 yards, but did toss an interception. Both passes were screen efforts to Thurman, one for 15 yards and the other for a minus-two. Bergoon was intercepted by Jeff Tidwell. Tuey Rankin was 0-for-2 in the air.

When Andrews hurt Lee, it was usually with a pass. Two Mustang quarterbacks completed five of 14 passes for 75 yards and there was one interception by Earl Davis. Andrews' Danny Neighbors hit three of seven for 55 yards and sophomore Louis Clay, who used to play at Midland Goddard, hit two of seven for 20 yards and gave up the interception.

Lee's first unit scored first in the scrimmage by moving 65 yards. Thurman's seven-yard run ended it. Andrews tied the score at 1-1 after holding Lee's second unit scoreless. Chris Upton's 30-yard run set up Tidwell's 15-yard TD gallop against Lee's first defensive unit. That drive was the biggest Lee disappointment of the night.

Ruben Salcido's 40-yard run was the biggest gainer of the night for the Mustangs.

But Lee seemed to control the latter part of the scrimmage, which was a good sign since Andrews has had more time on the field this season and one scrimmage already under their belt.

Jones broke off runs of 20, 32 and 70 yards on the night while Thurman tossed in a 25-yard gainer as his top effort. Gary Powell also had a run of 31 yards.

Defensively, tackle John Wurster, cornerback Chris Embrey and linebacker Donnie Rivas stood out for the Rebels.

The future of Rebel football may be in good hands since the junior varsity produced a solid 4-1 decision over the Mustang JV. Chris Alexander scored twice, both on runs of 15 yards. Rodney Johnson had a 65-yard TD scamper and Cory Ellis an eight-yard run. Andrews' score came at the end of the scrimmage when Eddie Gonzales had a 40-yard interception return.

Lee now goes back to work for one final week. From here on out everything counts in the record book.

Lee meets Lubbock Coronado at Memorial Stadium at 8 p.m. Friday. Lee defeated Coronado 38-7 last year, and has not lost to the Mustangs in the current series.

Lee is hoping that won't change after this Friday.

Not all are dancing in their living rooms

Questions serious readers ask and solemn answers:

Q—When Howard Cosell recently announced he would not do Monday Night Football on ABC this fall, it is said there was dancing in the living rooms across the land. Howard contributed so much to the game, isn't there anyone who is sad to see the end of an era?

A—I understand Jack Buck and Hank Stram are taking it pretty hard.

Q—What do you think of the USFL's pending plans to switch from a spring football season to a fall season in 1985?

A—The fans will never buy it. They've been programmed to spring football and you just can't change fans' habits when the mercenaries defy tradition.

Q—There is some talk of the Olympics being thrown open to all athletes, amateur or pro, in an attempt to make the Games more honest?

A—Yes, I'm afraid there's a foreign element seeking to throw the Games open to all athletes and it's aimed at the U.S. dominance in basketball. They reason if the U.S. uses NBA players, it might give them a better chance. The college kids are too tough. This is the same bunch that is also trying to lower the basket two feet for international competition. Some people will do anything to win.

Q—In a story on Jim Kern's return to the minors, you said it was once one of the treats for the loyal minor league fan to watch former major leaguers finish out their careers in the minors and then you gave some examples...where did you find those players? I never heard of any of them.

A—I realize now that some of the players named were not as well known as I believed. However, better examples might be: Bob Uhle, Beaumont; Woody Jenson, Montreal; John Dickshot, Jersey City; Carden Gillenwater, Rochester; Lynn "Line Drive" Nelson, Buffalo; Earl Whitehill, Buffalo; Phil Weintraub, Los Angeles; Louis W. Berger, Seattle; Earl Caldwell, Milwaukee; Kemp Wicker, Rochester...These names might be more familiar to fans....if they are old enough.

A—Some of the Texas League games at Cubs Stadium this season have been pretty long. Is there such a thing as a curfew on games in the Texas League?

A—Certainly. League officials have long been reluctant to let games drag on endlessly and have a rule to prevent such marathons. It says right in the book, "No inning shall begin after sunrise or breakfast is served, if it's a cloudy day.

Q—The Chicago Cubs once had a shortstop named Lenny Merullo who couldn't field, couldn't hit and lacked speed. How did he get into the Chicago Cubs' Hall of Fame?

A—I think he made three errors in one inning, but you've got it wrong, I think it was the Hall of Shame.

Back in the 1950's, the Chicago Cubs had wheeless monuments in left and right field named Hank Sauer and Ralph Kiner. Who was the panting centerfielder who played between these two defensive pillars?

Friday's Answer: Joe McCarthy was the first man to manage a World Series team in each league, guiding the 1929 Chicago Cubs who lost to the Philadelphia Athletics, and the 1932 New York Yankees who swept the Cubs.

National tourney begins at Hogan

From Staff Reports

Midland Dorland's quest for a national title got off to a shakey start Friday night despite two Pam Harper inside-the-park grand slam homers as the Rinky Dinks dropped a 11-10 decision to Cayce of Columbia, S.C. at Hogan Park's newly dedicated Bill Williams Complex.

The loss doesn't eliminate Dorland from the 48-team, National Amatuer Softball Association Women's Class A Slow Pitch Softball Tournament, but puts them in the do-or-die loser's bracket. One more loss and the Rinky Dinks will be forced to the sidelines. Their next game will be today at 8 p.m. against a team to be named later.

Trailing 3-1 in the top of the third inning, Harper connected for her first grand slam to put Midland on top 5-3. Dorland increased the margin to 10-3 in the fourth only to allow Cayce back in the game in the bottom of the fourth and fifth innings with three and fours runs respectively. Cayce scored the eventual game winner in the bottom of the eighth.

Dorland's Liz Watson added a third home run for the Rinky Dinks while Teresa Williams and Brenda Carr hit four-baggers for Cayce.

Also in first round action, R.W. Peete of Lorain, Ohio posted a 7-4 victory over IMCC of Carlsbad, N.M.; Air Met of Ansonia, Conn., downed Prismatics of Seattle, 6-1; and Frost Cutlery of Chatanooga, Tenn. defeated K.F. Industral of Stillwater, Okla, 7-3.

In the second round, Acceptance Associates of Norristown, Pa. edged Arena Cafe of Lynn, Mass. 3-1; Houston Chance ripped Daisy Delight of Jefferson City, Mo. 17-7; Alexandria, La. slipped by Tri-Arc of Salt Lake City, 10-8; and State Farm of Mansfield, La. bombed Vikings of Long Island, Y.Y., 12-2.

R.W. PETE had a 7-0 shutout going through six innings of play but had to close the door on IMCC in the seventh as IMCC picked up its four runs.

R.W. Pete got a home run from Karen Boyle while Rosalyn Gonzales connected for one for IMCC.

Murphy hit beats Cubs for Braves

From Wire Reports

National League

ATLANTA — Dale Murphy singled past a pulled-in infield with one out in the ninth to plate the deciding run as Atlanta beat Chicago, 3-2.

Murphy's hit came off reliever Lee Smith, 0-5, and scored Albert Hall who had singled and stolen second. Paul Runge singled but Hall was forced to stop at third and Brad Komminsk drew a walk to load the bases for Murphy.

The victory went to reliever Donnie Moore, 3-3, who worked the final 1 2-3 innings.

The Braves gained a 2-2 tie in the second when Bruce Benedict singled and scored on Hall's double to left.

Ryne Sandberg belted his 18th home run of the year in the first and Ron Cey drilled his 23rd into the left field seats in the second.The two homers gave the Cubs a 35-5 advantage over the Braves in that category over the last two seasons.

The Braves collected four hits off Steve Trout in the first, but managed only one run — their first earned tally against Trout this season in 24 2-3 innings.

Expos 5, Dodgers 2

MONTREAL — Dan Schatzeder gave up three hits in eight innings and Miguel Dilone's run-scoring single started a three-run third inning as the Montreal Expos handed the Dodgers to their sixth straight loss, 5-2.

The Expos trailed 1-0 in the third when Tim Raines walked and stole his 59th base of the season. Dilone followed with his single into left field.

After Andre Dawson was hit on the helmet by a pitch from Orel Hershiser, 9-8, Dodger third baseman Candy Maldonado made a two-base throwing error on Gary Carter's grounder, allowing Dilone to score. Dawson, who went to third on the play, made it 3-1 by scoring on Dan Driessen's groundout.

Pirates 6, Reds 2

CINCINNATI — Tony Pena blasted two three-run homers to give the Pittsburgh Pirates a 6-2 win over the Cincinnati Reds.

John Candelaria, 12-10, pitched seven innings while Don Robinson pitched the final two innings for his eighth save.

It was the third time Pena had hit two home runs in a game and the RBI total was a career-high for him. Both homers came off Joe Price, 6-11, the loser.

The Pirates made it 3-1 in the fourth inning on Pena's 11th home run, scoring Johnny Ray and Jim Morrison. In the sixth, Pena homered again with Ray and Morrison on.

It was the Pittsburgh's first victory in Cincinnati this season.

Cardinals 7, Astros 5

ST. LOUIS — David Green's sacrifice fly broke a fifth-inning tie, and Darrell Porter followed with a two-run double as St. Louis beat Houston, 7-5, for its fourth straight.

Lonnie Smith belted a grand-slam home run, the second of his career, to establish a 4-1 lead for St. Louis in the opening inning. Neil Allen, 8-5, afterward quelled a Houston uprising that produced a 4-4 tie an inning later and outdueled Nolan Ryan, 11-9, for the victory.

Before leaving, the 37-year-old Ryan recorded six strikeouts to increase his career total to 3,854, one more than Steve Carlton on baseball's all-time list.

Allen pitched 5 2-3 innings before giving way to Bruce Sutter in the eighth. The save was the 36th for Sutter, which moved him one ahead of Kansas City's Dan Quisenberry for the major league lead.

Padres 5-0, Mets 1-4

NEW YORK — Hubie Brooks' 14th home run of the season and Mookie Wilson's two-run double sparked a three-run seventh and Bruce Berenyi pitched seven shutouts innings to give the New York Mets a 4-0 victory over the San Diego Padres for a split of Friday's twi-night double-header.

The Padres won the opener 5-1, but New York gained a half-game on the Chicago Cubs, who lost to Atlanta, to move to 5½ games of the lead in the National League East.

Brooks led off the seventh with his homer to left-center. Ray Knight followed with a single to right and two outs later moved to second on a single to left by Junior Ortiz, who pinch hit for Berenyi. Jose Oquendo ran for Knight and Wilson followed with his two-run double to left.

Berenyi, 10-13, pitched seven innings, allowed only four hits and struck out six and walked three. Reliever Jesse Orosco gave up one hit over the final two innings.

Dave Dravecky, 8-7, hurled six innings in the defeat, allowing one run, striking out one and walking one.

New York took a 1-0 lead in the second inning on a double to right by George Foster, an infield out and a fielding error by San Diego shortstop Tim Flannery on Knight's groundball.

Wilson dropped pinch hitter Kurt Bevacqua's fly ball to centerfield allowing the Padres to score two unearned runs en route to their victory in the opener.

Carmelo Martinez singled to left with one out in the eighth inning and pinch runner Bobby Brown stole second and continued to third on a throwing error by New York catcher Ron Hodges. Luis Salazar singled to right to score Brown. Salazar then stole second and one out later Garry Templeton was walked intentionally and Bevacqua followed with his fly ball that Wilson dropped allowing Salazar and Templeton to score.

Giants 6, Phillies 5

PHILADELPHIA — Pinch-hitter Brad Wellman's two-out, bases-loaded double in the eighth capped a four-run rally as the San Francisco Giants beat Philadelphia, 6-5.

The Giants entered the inning trailing 3-2 when with one out Jeff Leonard singled and Bob Brenly walked. Pinch-hitter Dusty Baker also walked and after Al Holland relieved starter Jerry Koosman, 14-11, Johnny LeMaster bunted safely to tie the score and one out later, Wellman lined a double to left-center to clear the bases.

The Giants' Bill Laskey, 7-11, gave up only five hits in seven innings—none after the leadoff batter in the third.

Angler shot on eve of bass cheating trial

TYLER (AP) — A prize-winning fisherman died of a shotgun blast to the head the day before he was to appear before a federal grand jury investigating cheating at high-stakes bass tournaments, a federal prosecuter said.

The body of Danny Ray Davis, who won $75,000 in prize money last year, was found Tuesday at a private lake in Grand Prairie.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Chris Harrison in Tyler told the Longview News-Journal that Davis had been subpoenaed to testify before the grand jury at 9 a.m. on Wednesday.

The grand jury is investigating allegations that winning bass in Texas fishing tournaments were imported from Florida, stashed in lakes and then retrieved to claim prize money.

In the past few years, the prize money in bass tournaments has become lavish. Now many tournaments pay $50,000 or even $100,000.

A shotgun, which authorities said belonged to Davis, was found near the 34-year-old fisherman's body. According to the Dallas County Medical Examiner's office, which has not made a ruling in the case, Davis was shot in the head.

Quoting sources close to the investigation, the newspaper said Davis had been cooperating with federal authorities and had been interviewed several times.

Grand Prairie police said federal marshals have inquired about Davis' death.

The newspaper said authorities are on the verge of netting a three-state cheating ring and the grand jury could return indictments as early as the next month.

As many as eight individuals, some with criminal records, are targets of the investigation, the News-Journal said.

The investigation has focused on Texas tournaments, but the News-Journal said authorites believe cheating schemes of this magnitude are nationwide.

The Dallas Times Herald reported Friday that the probe began last year after Davis won $50,000 in a Labor Day weekend tournament in Texarkana.

McEnroe demolishes young Swede

U.S. Open

NEW YORK (AP) — Top-seeded John McEnroe delivered a masterful lesson Friday night, crushing Sweden's young Stefan Edberg and moving into the third round of the U.S. Open.

It was Edberg, the winner last year of all four Grand Slam junior boys titles, who was the pupil in the $2.55 million tournament at the National Tennis Center. And the lesson he was given was devastating.

McEnroe, in charge from the very beginning, crushed his 18-year-old opponent 6-2, 6-0, 6-1.

Also advancing into the third round in the men's singles was defending champion Jimmy Connors, the No. 3 seed who was a 6-3, 6-3, 6-2 winner over Brian Gottfried.

But sixth-seeded Jimmy Arias of Buffalo, N.Y., and No. 11 Juan Aguilera of Spain were upset on the hardcourts of America's premier tennis event.

Also ousted was Kathy Jordan, the No. 5 seed in the women's singles. A semifinalist at Wimbledon earlier this year, she was eliminated by Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia 6-3, 6-3.

Gene Mayer, once ranked in the top five in the world, toppled Arias 6-4, 6-2, 6-3 and was joined in the third round by his brother, Sandy Mayer, who halted the dreams of qualifier Kelvin Belcher 6-3, 7-6, 6-3.

Aguilera fell to Robert Green of Brookline, Mass. Green is making his first appearance in the main draw of a Grand Slam tournament after qualifying.

Another qualifier reaching the third round was Kevin Moir, who advanced when fellow South African Kevin Curren was forced to withdraw with a sprained ankle, while Sweden's Joakim Nystrom, seeded 16th, defeated Ramesh Krishnan of India 7-5, 6-3, 7-6.

In the women's singles, Czechoslovakia's Helena Sukova upset Jordan 6-3, 6-3; 14-year-old Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina ousted Kim Shaefer and Peanut Louie eliminated veteran Virginia Wade of Great Britain.

But Pam Shriver, the No. 4 seed, advanced with an easy 6-3, 6-2 victory over fellow American Wendy White; No. 13 Wendy Turnbull of Australia stopped Grace Kim 6-1, 7-5; No. 8 Claudia Kohde-Kilsch of West Germany moved into the third round with a 6-4, 6-2 victory over Kathy Rinaldi; No. 9 Lisa Bonder defeated Debbie Spence 5-7, 7-5, 6-3; and No. 15 Barbara Potter stopped Sandy Collins 6-3, 7-6.

Always on the attack, Connors never let Gottfried get into the match as he rolled out to a 3-1 lead in the opening set. And the crowd roared its approval on one point when both players went to the net, trading volleys.

When Connors finally ending the rapid-fire rally, the two players immediately began fencing with their rackets.

In the middle set, Connors lost his serve for the only time in the match. But he was up a break at the time and broke Gottfried again in the eighth game en route to going up two sets to none.

The left-hander opened the third set by breaking Gottfried's service again, and it was just a matter of time before Connors rolled into the third round where he will meet France's Henri Leconte.

Gene Mayer said he was not surprised with his victory over Arias because of the surface.

"Jimmy is probably better on clay than hardcourts, but he has proven himself on all surfaces," Mayer said. "On clay it is harder to be aggressive, and so that is probably his best surface. All others might favor me a bit more."

Jordan said her loss came about because "she (Sukova) played a lot better today ... It was just her day today and not mine," said the Wimbledon semifinalist.

NFL players call airline unsafe

HOUSTON (AP) — Some 71 National Football League players signed a full-page national newspaper ad published Friday accusing Continental Airlines of being unsafe.

But the Houston-based airline, operating under protection of a federal bankruptcy court for nearly a year, said the ad in USA Today is part of a 10-month-long campaign by the striking Air Line Pilots Association to discredit the carrier.

"I'd like to point out that NFL players are not the best safety experts in the airline industry," Mike Cinelli, a Continental spokesman, said Friday.

The full-page advertisement, headlined "NFL Pros Won't Fly The New Continental," cost the union $22,706, USA Today spokeswoman Marlene Rose said.

The players were concerned that Continental managers "care more about money than safety,"the ad said.

"Many of the old pros have been locked out, and rookie captains and flight attendants have been hired at cut-rate wages to take their place," it read.

Among the players' signatures in the ad is that of Franco Harris, the veteran Pittsburgh Steelers running back who was cut by the team in a salary dispute. Another signature belongs to former Steeler quarterback Terry Bradshaw, who retired to become a football broadcaster.

Jerry Baldwin, a spokesman for the association, said the players themselves "are members of organized labor and when the player representatives were contacted by our people, they were only too happy to add their names to the long list of names of labor organizations" critical of Continental.

But Cinelli said at least three players, Darrin Nelson, Ted Brown and Joe Senser, all with the Minnesota Vikings, "vehemently deny" that they supported the allegations by the pilots group and objected to their names being used in the ad.

Cinelli said the airline was investigating whether other players named in the ad did not give permission for use of their names.

Vikings spokeswoman Katie Hogan confirmed the three players' sentiments and said it was likely that their complaints would be forwarded to the National Football League Players Association.

Officials of the players organization could not be reached. A telephone recording indicated its office in Washington was not staffed Friday.

A league spokesman in New York, Pete Abitante, said the use of a player's name in such ads would be "a personal decision" and that the league itself was not involved.

The airline, once the nation's eighth-largest, filed for reorganization under federal bankruptcy laws Sept. 24, shut for four days and returned to the skies as a discount carrier after slashing its routes, work force and salaries.

A WEEK later, union-represented pilots went on strike, but the airline has continued to fly and subsequently has restored its route system as pilots ignored picket lines and others were hired.

In June, a federal bankruptcy judge in Houston allowed the airline to abrogate its contract with the pilots.

GOLF—Jerry Anderson shot a six-under-par 66 Friday and held a three-shot lead after the second round of the Swiss Open European Masters. Anderson had a 36-hole score of 129. Hubert Green, Sandy Lyle and Bernhard Langer tied for the low second-round score with 65s...

BOXING—Bobby Czyz, No. 2 contender in the super middleweight division of the IBF with a 24-1 , pleaded innocent to charges he burglarized the home of a Bloomingdale, N.J. woman and assaulted her. The 22-year-old Czyz, of Wanaque, N.J., was charged on Aug. 3 with burglary and attempted aggravated sexual assault. A grand jury indicted Czyz two weeks later on charges of burglary and aggravated assault...

Paul Gonzales, the light flyweight champion of the 1984 Olympics, won his gold medal by fighting four boupswith a broken right hand. A break in a bone on the back of Gonzales' hand was revealed in An X-ray taken this Week, said Al Stankie, the policeman who manages the young fighter from East Los Angeles...

GENERAL— Western New Mexico University's football and men's basketball teams have been suspended from participating in post-season games for a year because of eligibility infractions. The NAIA also placed all other WNMU sports on probation. That probation ruling would mean those programs still would be able to advance to post-season play and are eligible for any of the NAIA's sponsored tournaments. The NAIA ruling came after investigating reports of an ineligible football and basketball player at WNMU last school year...

CUBS

But it appeared the Cubs were to be denied. San Antonio riddled Ron Kaufman for five ugly runs in the ninth. Kaufman lasted a mere third of a frame, but Enright was strapped for help since Jim Boudreau had thrown 60 pitches Thursday and was tired.

The usual mop-up man for blowouts is catcher Don Hyman, but even Hyman wasn't around since he had been called up to triple A Friday morning.

So Enright pulled a rabbit out of the hat in Henderson. He got the first man to strike out, then allowed a hit, but retired the last man to end the Dodger ninth.

So entering the ninth down five runs, the fans massed the exits. Today, they'll look twice at the sports section. Jeff Jones started the rally with a lead-off homer. The Dodger staff also gassed the flames, as Bill Scudder exited a batter later when Danny Norman singled.

Mike Cunningham entered the game for San Antonio, and was truly rotten. Cunningham got no one out, but gave up hits to Gary Varsho and Henderson with a walk to birthday boy Antonio Cordova in between.

Exit Cunningham, enter Jose Torres. Torres had a chance to put a dent into the Cub rally, but pitcher Scott Johnson, inserted in left field and not an outstanding hitter, laced a single to shallow left that plated Varsho and Cordova.

Mike Brumley got on but Paul Noce hit into a fielder's choice to set up Jackson's heroic blast.

Henderson had greatly helped his cause by keeping things alive with his ninth-inning hit. "We just haven't been able to put it together this year. We've been giving away those type games all year."

Tonight, the Cubs hope for another rousing sendoff at a fan appreciation night promotion.

TL playoffs to begin

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — The best of seven championship series in the Texas Baseball League begins Monday with Western Division champion Beaumont at Eastern Division champion Jackson.

The TL went to a split season in 1976 and, for the first time, one team won both halves in the Western Division and another team won both halves in the Eastern Division.

The second game of the series is Tuesday in Jackson. Wednesday is a travel day and the next three games begin Thursday in Beaumont. Sept. 9 is another travel date and the final two games, if needed, are Sept. 10-11 at Jackson.

Outlook good for everyone but the doves

AUSTIN (AP) — Dove shooting should be particularly good around water holes due to dry conditions in much of Texas, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department said of the Saturday opening date for north and central regions of Texas.

"There's lots of sunflower seed and dove weed, and the dry weather should concentrate them around the water holes," Jim Cox, public information specialist for the department, said Friday.

The north Texas zone mourning dove season runs from Sept. 1 to Nov. 9 and the central zone from Sept.1 to Oct. 30.

Both north and cental zones have a second season Jan. 5-14.

The south zone shooting begins Sept. 20.

In addition, the white-wing dove season opens Saturday and Sunday for a restricted area of the Rio Grande Valley and will be open again Sept. 8 and 9 in the same area.

The wildlife department conducted a survey during the second week of August on 225 roadside routes, officials said, concluding that the most doves were located within 100 miles either side of a line running from Wichita Falls to McAllen.

The white-winged dove population is good in the lower Rio Grande Valley. While the birds are more scattered, fanning out farther from the river, they are more numerous, officials said.

Chicago White Sox shortstop Scott Fletcher is about to make tag on Blue Jays' Dave Collins, stealing second, but can't find the ball.

Florida in path of Hurricane

Associated Press

Can the Miami Hurricanes blow up a storm twice in one week?

College football's defending national champions are the only team to win a game this season — 20-18 over No. 1-ranked Auburn in last Monday's Kickoff Classic — and the 10th-ranked Hurricanes will try to make it two straight tonight against No. 17 Florida in Tampa.

Like most intrastate rivalries, this one needs no hype, but there are a couple of interesting sidelights.

Miami quarterback Bernie Kosar, then a redshirt freshman, made his debut in last year's game, won by Florida 28-3 before the Hurricanes reeled off 11 consecutive victories en route to the national title. This time, Kosar is "a seasoned veteran who has it all," according to Florida Coach Charley Pell, and it is the Gators who are going with an unknown redshirt freshman quarterback, Kerwin Bell.

And a year ago, although the Hurricanes didn't know it at the time, they were about to lose Coach Howard Schnellenberger in June. The Florida camp was stunned last weekend when Pell announced his resignation effective at the end of the season, the result of a 20-month NCAA probe of the Gators' football program.

College Football

"It sure adds something (to this game), as if it didn't have enough," says Jimmy Johnson, who succeeded Schnellenberger. "We are two good teams with a good rivalry. That's enough, I think."

With Auburn's unexpected demise, the race for No. 1 already is wide open. And since most Top Twenty teams won't get under way for another week or two, it would not be surprising for Miami to vault right back to the top if its defeats Florida.

Besides Miami and Florida, only four other members of the Associated Press Top Twenty will be in action. Third-ranked Pitt entertains Brigham Young, whose 11-game winning streak is second nationally to Miami's 12 straight; No. 4 Clemson plays hosts to Appalachian State, 19th-ranked Boston College entertains Western Carolina in a night game and No. 20 Florida State is at home against East Carolina under the lights.

Florida leads the series with Miami 24-21 and has won both previous games played at a neutral site — 23-14 in Jacksonville in 1959 and 14-10 in Orlando in 1976.

There are two schools of thought as to which team has the advantage since Miami has played a game and Florida hasn't.

"They (Florida) really don't know where their mistakes are going to come from," says defensive end Julio Cortes of Miami.

But Johnson says he "felt better about the Auburn game than Florida because we knew what Auburn would do. We know that Florida has running backs, so we can assume they will concentrate on a running game. We knew that before the quarterback got hurt (projected starter Dale Dorminey went down Tuesday with a knee injury). It hasn't changed. We don't know if the new quarterback can throw, but we didn't know if the other one could."

Another interesting tidbit — Galen Hall, Florida's new offensive coordinator, was on the Oklahoma staff with Johnson from 1970-72 and coached against him the last five years when Johnson was head coach at Oklahoma State.

"This summer, I was at a coaching clinic in Orlando and ran into Galen," Johnson recalls. "I asked him about his quarterbacks. He rattled off a bunch of names, but I remember he said the best of the lot might be a walk-on named Kerwin Bell."

BYU-Pitt matches two of the winningest programs in the nation. Over the last five years, Nebraska is No. 1 at 51-6-0, BYU second with 50-7-0 and Pitt third at 47-7-1.

TORONTO — Rance Mulliniks and George Bell belted home runs as Dave Stieb pitched a four-hitter to give Toronto a 7-0 win over Minnesota.

Stieb, 14-5, who struck out 11 in beating the Twins 2-1 last Sunday, went the distance for the ninth time this season. He struck out 10 and walked two.

The Jays chased Twins starter Bobby Castillo, 2-1, after 1 2-3 innings with a run in the first and two more in the second.

Damaso Garcia started the Toronto first with an infield single, stole second and went to third on catcher Tim Laudner's errant throw. Dave Collins brought the run home with a fly.

CLEVELAND — Dwight Evans' three-run homer highlighted a four-run ninth that gave Boston an 8-7 win over Cleveland. It was Evans' second homer of the night and 26th of the season.

Reliever Ernie Camacho, 4-9, retired the first batter and then gave up singles to Marty Barrett, pinch-hitter Rick Miller and Wade Boggs. Barrett scored on Boggs' hit. Evans then lined his home run over the right center-field fence to give Boston its sixth victory in seven games.

Bob Stanley pitched the last two innings to raise his record to 8-10 despite yielding George Vukovich's tie-breaking three-run homer, his sixth, in the eighth inning.

Rangers 7, Brewers 6

ARLINGTON — Buddy Bell's grand slam with two out in the ninth inning capped a six-run rally and lifted the Texas Rangers to a 7-6 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers Friday night.

Bell's seventh homer, his seventh, came off reliever Pete Ladd, 4-9. The four runs were unearned.

Pete O'Brien led off the ninth with a single and George Wright followed with another to chase Jack Lazorko. Rick Waits came in and gave up single to pinch-hitter Marv Foley to load the bases and a two-run single to pinch hitter Billy Sample.

Ladd relieved Waits, struck out pinch-hitter Alan Bannister and got Mickey Rivers to foul out. The Brewers appeared to have won when Gary Ward grounded to shortstop, but Robin Yount bobbled the ball for an error, loading the bases for Bell.

McLaughlin, 1-1, the fourth Ranger pitcher, pitched the ninth to pick up the victory. Starter Moose Haas, 8-10, gave up a run on four hits.

CHICAGO — Willie Wilson tripled and scored the tie-breaking run on Dane Iorg's sacrifice fly in the seventh to lead Charlie Leibrandt and Kansas City over Chicago, 3-1.

The triumph lifted the Royals within two games of the Minnesota.

It also gave the Royals a 67-67 record, who reached the .500 level for only the second time this season.

Wilson opened the seventh with his triple off Richard Dotson, 13-11.

Thomas' jabs way to WBC heavy title

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Pinklon Thomas used a stinging left jab to keep champion Tim Witherspoon away and score a majority 12-round decision Friday night to capture the World Boxing Council heavyweight title.

Thomas was favored on two of the ringside judges' cards, while the other judge had the lackluster fighter scored even.

The undefeated Thomas scored points with the left jab he continually flicked in Witherspoon's face as the champion battled unsucessfully to fight inside.

Thomas, ranked third by the WBC going into the fight, was able to control the early rounds but Witherspoon became more aggressive after the middle rounds in an effort to pull the fight out.

Judge Duane Ford had Thomas ahead 116-112 and judge Dalby Shirley also favored Thomas, 115-112. Judge Hal Miller scored it 114-114. The Associated Press had Thomas winning 115-113.

Neither fighter was able to hurt the other in the bout, which was marked long periods of inactivity with both Witherspoon and Thomas standing flat-footed in the center of the ring.

Thomas seemed content to use his jab to score points and keep Witherspoon from getting inside. Witherspoon tried several times to get inside, but Thomas would just back away and fend off the champion with jabs to the face.

The victory raised Thomas' record to 25-0-1, while Witherspoon fell to 18-2. Both fighters are 26-years-old and from Philadelphia.

Witherspoon, who was defending the title for the first time since winning it in a 12-round decision last March over Greg Page, seemed unable to solve Thomas' style early in the fight and far fewer punches than the challenger.

Ashford, Moses easy winners in Rome track

ROME (AP) — Sergey Bubka set a world record in the pole vault Friday night, clearing 19 feet, 5¾ inches, and U.S. Olympic gold medalists Evelyn Ashford and Edwin Moses easily won their events at the Golden Gala international track meet.

U.S. Olympians Valerie Brico-Hooks and Kirk Baptiste also were winners.

Bubka broke the mark just minutes after Thierry Vigneron of France set a world record by breaking the Soviet's previous standard. Vigneron had cleared 19-4¾, breaking the 19-4¼ mark Bubka set earlier this year.

Bubka, the 1983 world champion in Helsinki, had dominated the event this season, cracking the world record three times and carrying it to 19-4¼.

The Soviet vaulter had just missed his first try at 19-4¾, knocking down the bar with his left wrist, when Vigneron moved in.

The French star has a habit of breaking world records in Rome. He cleared 19-1⅛ last year at the Golden Gala, a world record at the time.

Ashford dominated the women's 100 meters in 10.93 seconds and Moses celebrated his 29th birthday by posting his 109th consecutive victory in the 400-meter hurdles with a time of 48.01.

Ashford was never near the world record of 10.76 she clocked in Zurich last week and said she had hoped to do better.

"I had a strong finish, but a slow start," she said. "I feel fit and I have a strong morale after my world record and my victory over Marlies Goehr (of East Germany)."

Moses won with one of his slowest times this year. He ran the event in 47.32 in Koblenz, West Germany on Wednesday and holds the world record at 47.02.

Moses said "too much traveling" over the past two weeks has slowed him down.

"When you move from one meet to another you can run into some bad days," he said. "I had a good race on my birthday last year, but I guess you can't always have things your way."

Brisco-Hooks, who won three gold medals at Los Angeles, won the women's 200 meters in 22.82 and Baptiste won the men's 100 meters in 10.16 seconds.

Chicago flushed over light win

CHICAGO (AP) — Still flush with victory after the forces of daylight at Wrigley Field prevailed over major league baseball's desire for profit, Alderman Bernie Hansen sat back in his chair Friday and contemplated next year.

"What fight? ... What lights?"

"There will be no lights at Wrigley Field in the foreseeable future," Hansen said one day after baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn offered to restructure the National League playoffs and World Series should Wrigley Field's inhabitants, the Chicago Cubs, find their way into postseason play for the first time in 39 years.

In announcing his decision regarding the only major-league ballpark without lights, Kuhn also said, "The Cubs' involvement in the divisional race has built excitement, and that's great for their fans. But for the future, baseball must promptly find a clear-cut solution to the lights situation."

Kuhn conceded the stumbling block that caused baseball owners to give up designs on putting up temporary lights at Wrigley Field — and rebate "millions" to the two networks that will telecast the games — were state and local laws aimed at preventing night games there.

Hansen, who cosponsored the 1983 city ordinance effectively banning the lights, said he wasn't worried about baseball's search for a "clear-cut solution" in the future and didn't consider it a threat — implied or otherwise.

"What fight? ... What lights," Hansen said, chuckling. "Honestly, I would hope that during the course of the winter, anything that will affect this community will be brought up in a timely fashion. There will be, I guarantee this, no rush to judgment.

"It is my firm opinion there is no way around this ordinance. I don't want to get into this, but even if there was some way around it, there are plenty of things ... nasty maybe, but very practical things ... this community could do," Hansen continued. "And I'd stand behind them."

One Way to Keep Cool

Chicago White Sox fan finds a way to keep cool on warm night.

It's like Randy was never gone

DALLAS (AP) — Randy White may have been fishing while his teammates were sweating out training camp, but now they say it seems like the star defensive tackle never left the team.

White sat out training camp because of a contract dispute, but signed Monday. He started working out with the team this week, preparing to start in the lineup in next Monday's season opener against Los Angeles.

"It was great having him back in the huddle," middle linebacker Bob Breuing said. "It didn't take long for him to get back into it. It was like he never left."

White was somewhat sore Thursday after Wednesday's session, but it didn't seem to bother him.

"That first hit felt it like it would the first day of training camp," White said. "It doesn't change. I don't know how much I can play against the Rams. I really have no idea. But I feel pretty good."

White ended his 40-day holdout by signing a five-year contract. Coach Tom Landry announced he will start against the Rams.

"I missed being at training camp. I know everyone thinks that's a lie, but I missed it," White said. "You need training camp for your conditioning and recognition. Every year you start over and learn again.

"You take the thing you do well and try to maintain them. You get out there every day and get a feel for it," he said.

Too many negatives made Tony D bum risk

The rap against Anthony Drew Dorsett was all-inclusive: he was too little, too light, too famous. The NFL would make, you might say, short work of him. He would be out of the game or practicing holds for field goals within two years.

He had even won the Heisman Trophy. The ultimate no-no. It's bad enough to have all those other drawbacks but if there's anything that ticks off the thousand or so pro football players who didn't win the Heisman Trophy, it's the one who did. Consider Archie Griffin. He won two Heismans. And has been buried under a cloud of tacklers ever since.

Besides, the Dallas Cowboys were "America's Team." Eleven John Waynes. Captain America himself at the controls, Roger Staubach. The coach was Wyatt Earp and Wild Bill Hickok rolled into one. The team in the ten-gallon hat. Who needed a runt from Pittsburgh?

TONY DORSETT was used to it. As a skinny urchin in Aliquippa, Pa., he was old enough to play midget football but not big enough. He had to change school districts to suit up and borrow a friend's height and weight chart. He was the one on the field whose helmet came down to his nose. He ran so fast they couldn't see the rest of him.

When it came time to go to college, Notre Dame laughed. The scout, Tom Pagna, told the coach, Ara Parseghian: "He'll never make it. If you hit him, he'll disintegrate."

The University of Pittsburgh took a chance, figuring he'd be good at running back punts. But the 5-11, 155-pound Dorsett became college football's most devastating offense. He set or tied 14 NCAA records, including most yards (6,082) in a career, most touchdowns and most coaches-scared-to-death. He won the Heisman in a landslide (701-73 in votes over the runner-up, Ricky Bell).

THE UNCONVINCED remained. That year (1977), two pro teams had the first picks, Tampa and Seattle. Neither wanted Tony Dorsett. Tampa, picking first, chose Heisman runner-up Bell. He wasn't better than Dorsett, just bigger. Seattle didn't want him at all. They traded his draft rights to Dallas for a lot of bigger guys. No one remembers who they were. Just that they were bigger.

The Dallas Cowboys were not so much a team as a state of mind. The players weren't born, they were cloned. Like their coach, they are meticulous, cerebral, precise, engineered, tooled and refined, not just given a football and cleats.

When the scouts said of Dorsett, "He can't run over anybody," they didn't realize that the Cowboys don't want to run over anybody. They prefer to leave you standing there in your underwear while they lateral off your wallet. The Cowboys are masters of the clean getaway. They're the athletic version of the hit-and-run accident, not the mud slide.

DORSETT was perfect for the Cowboys and they for him. He understood his role perfectly. It was to do a disappearing act. Tony's job was not to bump into people. It was to make them think he wasn't there. He did this better than anybody in football. As a rival coach, George Allen, once said: "It don't matter how big or little he is if you can't catch him." Another coach, whose players had as little luck, cracked: "Tony Dorsett? What's he look like? What's his number? Send us a picture. My players haven't got a square look at him yet but we've only been here about four years."

Tony Dorsett became America's Player. He was a Tom and Jerry cartoon in cleats. Four quarters of huffing, puffing, blue-bearded giants slipping and sliding and making holes in the ground with their configurations as they dove for No. 33 at places he had just left with a football.

They said he couldn't last, that someone on those giant lines would mistake him for an empty helmet down there and screw his head off – but that was 10,416 yard and 61 touchdowns ago. That was two Super Bowls and several team and league rushing records ago. That was 120 league games ago.

Tony Dorsett's secret seems to be he's the most superbly equipped survivalist of all time. First of all, there's the speed. Although he's bulked up all the way to 183 pounds, he can still disappear with the football faster than a brother-in-law when the check comes. Then, there's the eyesight. It's not only better than 20/20, it is so good that Tony says he can see things before they happen. "I can tell what somebody's going to do before he does it," he insists. Coach Tom Landry explains that Dorsett "sees flashes."

IF THAT all seems eerie, it fits in with the view of many impartial observers that Tony Dorsett is the only man in pro football, if not the universe, who is not only getting better, he is getting younger. Even his voice is getting higher. Every season, reporters go to training camp at Thousand Oaks expecting to see wrinkles and gray hairs creeping into his countenance, see him donning glasses to read the menu and creaking as he gets up from the table. But Tony Dorsett doesn't look an hour older than when he went out for the Pitt frosh. He looks like the halfback's kid brother, as if he came to get autographs.

He's a Hall-of-Fame player, but when he comes to get his plaque one day they may ask him if he's Tony Dorsett's son. And labels are so hard to shake, he may never get his chance in broadcasting. If he asks why, the networks may explain tersely: "You're too little, kid."

Anyone knows that a guy who has 60 touchdowns and 10,000 yards has got to be 6-11, 240, white-haired, limping and wearing bifocals.

Book provides 'inside scoop' to nation's colleges

NEW YORK (AP) — The social event of the year at the University of Alaska is "Cheapo Sleezo Night." Carnegie-Mellon leads the nation in computer nerds. Radical politics lives at University of Wisconsin, while sex is all but dead at Oral Roberts.

Other college guides may be content with stodgy facts like grade-point averages and the number of books in the school library. But not "Lisa Birnbach's College Book," a wise-cracking, occasionally X-rated guide to 186 college campuses she has visited over the last 2½ years.

The 27-year-old author, who edited the best-selling "Official Preppy Handbook" four years ago, claims her latest book offers the "inside scoop" on the things students really care about: favorite drinks (beer at the University of Alabama and most other campuses, the "Cape Codder" of cranberry juice and vodka at Smith College), best parties, the drug and alcohol situation, and the sex scene for both straights and gays — among other factors.

The book's publication date is September 24.

Ms. Birnbach's guide lapses into seriousness often enough to serve a real purpose for the college bound. In discussing availability of parking, the quality of dorms and food and whether liberal arts is valued on various campuses, the book may help some students find the right school.

In addition to essays on each campus, a table lists most popular major (political science at Wellesley, business at University of Nebraska), famous alumni, best and worst dorms, best pizza, and the political climate.

There are also several broad essays on campus life. On sex: "In accordance with the born-again conservatism sweeping our country's colleges, sex — real sex — doing it before the engagement ring has been sized, has fallen off somewhat."

Another essay, "Mondo Granola: Whatever Happened to Hippies," answers that question with a look at Reed College in Oregon, and Beloit College in Wisconsin. Says one Beloit English professor: "Lots of people stay here forever. They sleep on Indian mounds."

In a "List of Lists" near the end of the 515-page paperback volume, Ms. Birnbach bestows laurels and darts.

Bennington College in Vermont, she found, has the best food, University of Hawaii the worst. The "greatest looking campus" was the University of Washington. Runner-up: Cornell.

Brown University, Ms. Birnbach's alma mater, is rated — with maybe a smidgen of bias — as "most popular."

The "cutest students" are to be found at University of California at Santa Barbara and Arizona State University, says the guide. The ugliest coeds are supposedly at the University of Alaska, and the worst-looking males are at the University of Pennsylvania and Indiana University.

"I'm speechless," responded Susan Hays, an Indiana spokeswoman. "I frankly think there are a lot of cute guys on campus, and I wish I were 30 years younger."

Rated most promiscuous campus: Boston University. Least: Oral Roberts.

Boston U spokeswoman Roxanne Hurley took the review in stride: "According to Webster's Dictionary," she said, "the word 'promiscuous has three definitions. The first, 'composed of all sorts of persons and things' certainly applies to the university. The second, 'not restricted to one class, sort or person,' we proudly agree is applicable to BU. The definition having to do with sexual habits doesn't apply to BU, but if Ms. Birnbach has first-hand research or other evidence to support her claim we'll certainly listen to her."

Texas A&M University tied with Princeton as having the most school spirit, to which Aggie spokesman Lane Stephenson drawled: "I don't know how Princeton got up there, do you?"

Campuses with least school spirit, said Ms. Birnbach, were Emory University in Atlanta and the State University of New York in Albany.

Smith College was rated "best groomed," but spokeswoman Ann Shanahan was less than thrilled with the accolade: "That's a pretty innocuous way to be rated. I'm not unhappy that we're best at something, but I think there are more important things that we're best at."

To its mild chagrin, University of Miami, a school working hard to shake its sun-and-fun image, was still dubbed best party school.

C.S. Lewis, a longtime agnostic, finally came to faith in Christ. On the night he believed that Jesus was the son of God he says it was not an emotional experience but "more like when a man, after long sleep, still lying motionless in bed, becomes aware that he is now awake". And he says he was "suprised by joy" at what Jesus could do in his life.

Discover that joy with us.

At seven-forty in our town you could always find a dozen families down by the depot. It made the evening — just seeing the Queen roar by. That's what we called her, although the timetable with proper formality announced her as the "Queen of the Valley." And that she was! Every living soul thrilled to her whistle as she flashed by the grade crossings.

Why has train-watching become a forgotten fun? Did the trains change too much? Or did the people?

If there were a Queen due at seven-forty tonight, would we all be too busy to care?

There are several places in our town where sophistication and indifference haven't taken their toll . . . where simplicity is appreciated . . . where truth is treasured. Our churches!

They are serving the spiritual needs of modern society. And keeping a lot of old-fashioned values from becoming forgotten.

Black woman ministers with enthusiasm

BRENHAM (AP) — Though her dreams of becoming the first black woman bishop in her church were dashed when Leontine Kelley was named to that leadership role in the United Methodist Church, the Rev. Sarah G. Johnson is still going to minister with the same pace-setting enthusiasm as before.

"It was always my dream to become the first black woman bishop," says the pastor of Mount Zion United Methodist Church. "My late husband always told me I would be. But if I couldn't be, there is nobody I'd rather see it be than Leontine."

Mrs. Johnson says Bishop Kelly has had much more national exposure than she, so it was only expected that she would be the first.

"I still have a little further to go," says Mrs. Johnson.

But she has made monumental strides in the churches she has served and points out that is what is important.

She is also pastor of the Pleasant Grove Methodist Church here and two other churches in what is called the Brenham Circuit — Jackson Chapel Methodist Church in Bellville and Richard Grove Methodist Church at Racoon Bend. She has served this circuit since 1981.

At Mount Zion one of her achievements of which she is most proud is the recent completion of a new fellowship hall. Three years ago when the church was celebrating its anniversary, the congregational gathering was held under a funeral tent on the church lawn.

The Rev. Sarah G. Johnson

"That's when I knew we had to have a fellowship hall," says Mrs. Johnson, as she points from the parsonage toward the new annex to her church. "And after three years we finally have it."

The native of Shreveport, La., who grew up in Houston, calls herself "the trail boss," leading her congregation to accomplish anything it decides to accomplish.

Her natural determination to get things done has always received support from either her mother or her husband.

"My mother is my greatest critic," says Mrs. Johnson. "She always says, 'Keep it (her sermon) short and spicy. Then you can be glad twice — glad you got up and glad you sat down.'"

Her mother, Celia Ann Jones, 86, still gives her the inspiration that she also once received from her husband, James, who was also a Methodist minister.

The couple had even worked together at times, before he died in January 1983, after serving 14 years in the ministry.

Before coming to Brenham, the couple had served the Northwest Circuit, which included churches in the northwest Houston area — Hempstead, Hockley, San Felipe. The church at San Felipe, near Sealy, where she built a new facility while serving there, is the second oldest Methodist church in Texas, she says.

Her calling to the ministry came in 1971 but she wasn't ordained until 1977. In 1979 she received her master of divinity degree from Perkins School of Theology at Southern Methodist University. She received her doctorate in 1983 from International Seminary in Plymouth, Fla.

Until 1975 she worked for the Catholic Diocese of Galveston-Houston in her area of expertise then — nutrition and food preparation.

For several years after leaving Prairie View A&M University, where she was working on her bachelor of science degree in biology, she was in food services.

"I left school because I wasn't sure that was what I wanted," she recalls. (She did finish her degree requirement eight years ago.) "My father wanted me to be a nurse. I wanted to travel. I wanted to do my own thing."

That included being a certified dietician.

She moved to California, then Alaska, then back to California and eventually back to Texas where she met her husband.

"I continued cooking, particularly catering to what we call soul cooking," she said. "I even owned my own business at one time."

After returning to Texas she says she began "simmering down" and getting involved with her husband's work.

Her eyes fill with admiration and tears as she speaks about her late husband who was not only her spouse but also her friend, her supporter and her challenger, she says.

Late-night searches through volume after volumne to find the answer to a theological question posed by one to the other were not uncommon and kept their wits and knowledge sharpened, she says.

Vatican archbishop falls from grace

By JOHN WINN MILLER

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Just two years ago Archbishop Paul C. Marcinkus was considered the most powerful American in the Vatican. He had the ear of the pope, two influential posts and appeared certain to be named a cardinal.

Then in June 1982 a Milanese banker died under mysterious circumstances in London; he was found hanging from a bridge.

The death triggered Italy's worst postwar financial scandal, cost the Vatican more than $250 million and unleashed a rash of allegations and investigations that still dog Marcinkus and the Vatican bank he heads.

It also put the brakes on the once meteoric career of the son of poor Lithuanian immigrants, although he is still holding on to his jobs.

"Nothing has been proven about mismanagement...Therefore the pope is reluctant to slap him down," said a high-ranking prelate, who is connected to Vatican finances.

Rather than give credence to a lot of allegations and draw publicity by firing or demoting him outright, Vatican officials have "applied the typical Roman solution," the archbishop said.

First Marcinkus, a native of Cicero, Ill., was stripped of his role as papal bodyguard and advance man on all foreign trips. There was no formal announcement or explanation; he just didn't show up when Pope John Paul II went to Spain in October 1982.

HIS TITLES as president of the Vatican bank and pro-president, or mayor, of the Vatican city-state haven't changed. But the power structure has.

"Now Marcinkus is in effect second in command. He is manager instead of president," said the prelate, who commented on condition that he not be identified.

Once Marcinkus answered only to the pope for the way he ran the Vatican bank, a full-service bank, ostensibly mainly for religious orders, officially known as the Institute for Religious Works.

But in late 1982 the Vatican appointed a permanent board of four international financiers to oversee the bank and report to Cardinal Agostino Casaroli, the Vatican's secretary of state.

"For the bank, Casaroli now has the main role," said the prelate.

A similar maneuver was carried out for the Vatican City job, where Marcinkus has been in charge of the day-to-day operations of the 108 acre city-state since 1981.

The job was traditionally held by a cardinal, putting Marcinkus in line for a promotion.

But in a major reshuffling of the Vatican bureaucracy in April, Pope John Paul appointed a special committee headed by a cardinal to oversee the city's administration. That commission also reports to Casaroli.

"I BECAME A priest to serve my people. If I can't do it here I'll do it somewhere else," Marcinkus said in a recent conversation at his Vatican bank office just below the papal apartment. "My life here has been very profitable, very rewarding."

The 62-year-old archbishop, however, said he did not want to go into detail about his problems "because now is not the time...I don't want to get people angry."

"Some people may disagree with the way I do things," he said with a shrug of his broad shoulders.

Alternating between cigarettes and a pipe, the towering, bald archbishop complained that a lot of the things he does are misunderstood, particularly by the press.

"What hurts is when they accuse me of something and don't know anything about me," he said.

"I'd say that 99.9 percent of my life has been an open book. Perhaps that's my problem. Maybe I'm too frank."

But what has caused the problem is his secretive dealings in the world of Italian high finance.

By the time Marcinkus became president of the bank in 1971, Italian financier Michele Sindona was already the Vatican's top financial adviser.

The Vatican reportedly lost millions of dollars when Sindona's empire collapsed in 1974. Last July, the lay managing director of the Vatican bank, Luigi Meninni, was convicted and sentenced to seven years in prison for his involvement in the failure of Sindona's Banca Privata.

MENNINI IS still at the bank while his case is being appealed. Sindona is serving a 25-year sentence in New York for his involvement in the collapse of his Franklin National Bank.

Another Vatican financial adviser was Roberto Calvi, president of the Milan-based Banco Ambrosiano, Italy's largest private bank.

The Vatican bank became one of his biggest customers and stockholders. Marcinkus even sat on the board of directors of one of its subsidiaries, Banco Ambrosiano Overseas Ltd. in the Bahamas.

Investigators later discovered that he had funneled more than $1.2 billion to dummy companies in Latin America that were controlled by the Vatican, whether it knew it or not.

As his debts mounted and creditor banks began pressuring for repayment, Calvi turned to Marcinkus for help.

In September 1981, the archbishop wrote Calvi what bankers call letters of comfort saying that the Vatican controlled the dummy companies and was aware of their debts. At the same time, Calvi gave Marcinkus another letter releasing the Vatican from any financial responsibility for the companies.

Calvi was apparently able to use the letters of comfort to keep his empire afloat a little longer.

BUT ON JUNE 18, 1982, Calvi was found hanging by the neck under a bridge in London. A coroner's jury said that it could not decide whether he was murdered or committed suicide.

When bank examiners discovered the huge loans and that the money was unrecoverable, the government liquidated Banco Ambrosiano. Where the money went is still a mystery, although most was believed used by Calvi to gain control of the Banco Ambrosiano and finance a buying spree of Italian companies.

The examiners also discovered the Vatican's involvement and Marcinkus' letters of comfort, which led Italian officials to demand that the Vatican take responsibility for some of the bad debts. They called the second, absolving letter worthless.

The Vatican finally admitted it did own the companies but insisted it did not administer them and was the victim of a "hidden project" by Calvi. It also said that the letters of comfort were not binding.

After months of negotiations, however, the Vatican agreed to pay nearly $250 million to foreign creditors of Banco Ambrosiano as a "good faith" gesture which in no way implied responsibility.

But it remains for courts to decide whether the Vatican bank was a victim, as it claims, or a willing partner in Calvi's schemes.

MARCINKUS, Mennini and the Vatican bank's chief accountant, Pellegrino de Strobel, were given judicial warning letters that they are under investigation for the collapse of Banco Ambrosiano.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Crestview Baptist to host Sunday school convention

A Texas Baptist Regional Sunday School Convention will be conducted at Crestview Baptist Church Sept. 17.

The Midland convention is one of 41 being conducted across the state by the Baptist General Convention of Texas Sunday School Division to help strengthen work in local Sunday schools. "Reach 5 in '85" is the theme for the convention which will launch the last year of "8.5 by '85," the Southern Baptist convention's effort to have 8.5 million persons enrolled in Sunday School by Sept. 30, 1985.

Featured speaker will be Winfred Moore, pastor of First Baptist Church, Amarillo, and president of the BGCT.

Age-group and general officers' conferences will be held in addition to a variety of special-interest conferences from which to choose. Also, the Midland conference will feature a conference for persons who attend Spanish-speaking congregations.

The convention will be conducted from 1:30 to 4:15 p.m. and from 6:45 to 9:15 p.m. For more information contact the BGCT, Sunday School Division, 511 N. Akard St., Dallas, Texas, 75201-3355, or call 1-214-741-1991.

Witnesses to gather

Jehovah's Witnesses from Midland will be convening with members of 10 other West Texas congregations at the Pecos County Civic Center, Fort Stockton, the first part of this month.

Neal Baker, a spokesman for the local congregation, said more than 1,000 are expected to attend this two-day session of Bible instruction and fellowship.

"Our program theme is 'Repudiate Ungodliness and Worldly Desires,' based on the Bible text at Titus 2:12," Baker said. "This Scripture encourages Christians to reject the ways of the world and to live with soundness of mind amid the present system of things."

The principal address of the assembly will be delivered by a representative of the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society from the world headquarters of Jehovah's Witnesses in Brooklyn, N.Y. His subject will be "War at Armageddon — Is it Near? What Will it Mean?"

Methodists host Round-up

Ruth Lutrick is the special speaker for the Round-up of United Methodist Women of First United Methodist Church being held Wednesday.

She will report on the General Conference in Baltimore, Md., and the United Methodist Mission in Haiti, which she and her husband, the Rev. Charles Lutrick of First UMC, attended.

Frances Walker, president of UMW of First UMC, will preside at a meeting of the Readers Club and at the general meeting at 10:30 a.m. A book exchange will be held in conjunction with the Readers Club at 10 a.m.

Madeline Boadle of Big Spring, who is district president, will be the special guest.

A price of $1.50 will be charged for lunch.

St. Paul to show films

"Building the Family of God," a four-part film series, is being shown at St. Paul United Methodist Church, 4501 Thomason Drive, beginning Sunday.

Produced by the Moody Institute of Science, a ministry of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, these films feature Dr. John MacArthur Jr. in a presentation on the process of spiritual discipline. Each film is 44 minutes long. All will be shown at 7 p.m.

The series includes "Producing Reproducers," Sunday; "Spiritual Parenting," Sept. 9; "Marks of a Disciple," Sept. 16; and "Perfecting the Family," Sept. 23.

There is no admission charge. The public is invited to attend.

'AerobiRhythms' offered

First Baptist Church is offering "AerobiRhythms" beginning Tuesday in the church's Activities Building.

The morning session will be held Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. beginning Wednesday. Cost is $18 for the six-week session.

The evening session will be offered Tuesday and Thursday from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. beginning Tuesday. Cost is $8 for the four-week session.

Child care will be provided in the Activities Building. For more information or to sign up call 682-7669.

Quakers undertake drive to increase membership

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Depopulated by deaths, a modest birth rate and the loss of some younger adherents, the nation's oldest body of Quakers is undertaking something once considered virtual heresy: a membership drive.

The Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of the Society of Friends, which has shrunk by 25 percent over the past 25 years to 13,000 members, is trying to reach potential members through radio spots, print advertising — even the Yellow Pages.

"We've been hiding our light under a bushel," said Richard Bansen, associate secretary of the society, founded by William Penn in 1682 as a Holy Experiment in religious toleration, pacifism and enlightened government.

The five-year membership drive will be the first for the society, which is still the nation's largest but is less than half the size of the 30,000-member community Penn had organized by 1700.

A special effort will be made to attract blacks and other minorities to Philadelphia's predominantly white, upper-middle-class Quaker community, said General Secretary Samuel Caldwell.

No more than about 100 Philadelphia Quakers are from minority groups. Unlike some other U.S. and foreign communities, the Philadelphia society has no black or Hispanic meetinghouses, Caldwell said.

Some Quaker sects are evangelistic and actively seek converts, but Philadelphia's more traditional meetinghouses have long felt proselytizing was uncomfortably close to arm twisting.

Christian leaders speak against moving embassy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leaders of 20 national Christian bodies have urged the White House to stand firm against shifting the U.S. embassy in Israel from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem.

They met with National Security Advisor Robert C. McFarlane, voicing support for President Reagan's opposition to legislation introduced in both houses of Congress for such a move.

The religious leaders said it would be highly detrimental to the peace efforts in the Middle East, and would alter the "international status of Jerusalem as a holy city to all three great monotheistic faiths" — Judaism, Christianity and Islam.

Perfection lives in Utopia

Utopia, from Greek words meaning "not a place," was an imaginary island described by Sir Thomas More (1516) in a book of the same name as having a perfect political and social system.

At seven-forty in our town you could always find a dozen families down by the depot. It made the evening — just seeing the Queen roar by. That's what we called her, although the timetable with proper formality announced her as the "Queen of the Valley." And that she was! Every living soul thrilled to her whistle as she flashed by the grade crossings.

Why has train-watching become a forgotten fun? Did the trains change too much? Or did the people?

If there were a Queen due at seven-forty tonight, would we all be too busy to care?

There are several places in our town where sophistication and indifference haven't taken their toll . . . where simplicity is appreciated . . . where truth is treasured. Our churches!

They are serving the spiritual needs of modern society. And keeping a lot of old-fashioned values from becoming forgotten.

Black woman ministers with enthusiasm

BRENHAM (AP) — Though her dreams of becoming the first black woman bishop in her church were dashed when Leontine Kelley was named to that leadership role in the United Methodist Church, the Rev. Sarah G. Johnson is still going to minister with the same pace-setting enthusiasm as before.

"It was always my dream to become the first black woman bishop," says the pastor of Mount Zion United Methodist Church. "My late husband always told me I would be. But if I couldn't be, there is nobody I'd rather see it be than Leontine."

Mrs. Johnson says Bishop Kelly has had much more national exposure than she, so it was only expected that she would be the first.

"I still have a little further to go," says Mrs. Johnson.

But she has made monumental strides in the churches she has served and points out that is what is important.

She is also pastor of the Pleasant Grove Methodist Church here and two other churches in what is called the Brenham Circuit — Jackson Chapel Methodist Church in Bellville and Richard Grove Methodist Church at Racoon Bend. She has served this circuit since 1981.

At Mount Zion one of her achievements of which she is most proud is the recent completion of a new fellowship hall. Three years ago when the church was celebrating its anniversary, the congregational gathering was held under a funeral tent on the church lawn.

The Rev. Sarah G. Johnson

"That's when I knew we had to have a fellowship hall," says Mrs. Johnson, as she points from the parsonage toward the new annex to her church. "And after three years we finally have it."

The native of Shreveport, La., who grew up in Houston, calls herself "the trail boss," leading her congregation to accomplish anything it decides to accomplish.

Her natural determination to get things done has always received support from either her mother or her husband.

"My mother is my greatest critic," says Mrs. Johnson. "She always says, 'Keep it (her sermon) short and spicy. Then you can be glad twice — glad you got up and glad you sat down.'"

Her mother, Celia Ann Jones, 86, still gives her the inspiration that she also once received from her husband, James, who was also a Methodist minister.

The couple had even worked together at times, before he died in January 1983, after serving 14 years in the ministry.

Before coming to Brenham, the couple had served the Northwest Circuit, which included churches in the northwest Houston area — Hempstead, Hockley, San Felipe. The church at San Felipe, near Sealy, where she built a new facility while serving there, is the second oldest Methodist church in Texas, she says.

Her calling to the ministry came in 1971 but she wasn't ordained until 1977. In 1979 she received her master of divinity degree from Perkins School of Theology at Southern Methodist University. She received her doctorate in 1983 from International Seminary in Plymouth, Fla.

Until 1975 she worked for the Catholic Diocese of Galveston-Houston in her area of expertise then — nutrition and food preparation.

For several years after leaving Prairie View A&M University, where she was working on her bachelor of science degree in biology, she was in food services.

"I left school because I wasn't sure that was what I wanted," she recalls. (She did finish her degree requirement eight years ago.) "My father wanted me to be a nurse. I wanted to travel. I wanted to do my own thing."

That included being a certified dietician.

She moved to California, then Alaska, then back to California and eventually back to Texas where she met her husband.

"I continued cooking, particularly catering to what we call soul cooking," she said. "I even owned my own business at one time."

After returning to Texas she says she began "simmering down" and getting involved with her husband's work.

Her eyes fill with admiration and tears as she speaks about her late husband who was not only her spouse but also her friend, her supporter and her challenger, she says.

Late-night searches through volume after volumne to find the answer to a theological question posed by one to the other were not uncommon and kept their wits and knowledge sharpened, she says.

Vatican archbishop falls from grace

By JOHN WINN MILLER

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Just two years ago Archbishop Paul C. Marcinkus was considered the most powerful American in the Vatican. He had the ear of the pope, two influential posts and appeared certain to be named a cardinal.

Then in June 1982 a Milanese banker died under mysterious circumstances in London; he was found hanging from a bridge.

The death triggered Italy's worst postwar financial scandal, cost the Vatican more than $250 million and unleashed a rash of allegations and investigations that still dog Marcinkus and the Vatican bank he heads.

It also put the brakes on the once meteoric career of the son of poor Lithuanian immigrants, although he is still holding on to his jobs.

"Nothing has been proven about mismanagement...Therefore the pope is reluctant to slap him down," said a high-ranking prelate, who is connected to Vatican finances.

Rather than give credence to a lot of allegations and draw publicity by firing or demoting him outright, Vatican officials have "applied the typical Roman solution," the archbishop said.

First Marcinkus, a native of Cicero, Ill., was stripped of his role as papal bodyguard and advance man on all foreign trips. There was no formal announcement or explanation; he just didn't show up when Pope John Paul II went to Spain in October 1982.

HIS TITLES as president of the Vatican bank and pro-president, or mayor, of the Vatican city-state haven't changed. But the power structure has.

"Now Marcinkus is in effect second in command. He is manager instead of president," said the prelate, who commented on condition that he not be identified.

Once Marcinkus answered only to the pope for the way he ran the Vatican bank, a full-service bank, ostensibly mainly for religious orders, officially known as the Institute for Religious Works.

But in late 1982 the Vatican appointed a permanent board of four international financiers to oversee the bank and report to Cardinal Agostino Casaroli, the Vatican's secretary of state.

"For the bank, Casaroli now has the main role," said the prelate.

A similar maneuver was carried out for the Vatican City job, where Marcinkus has been in charge of the day-to-day operations of the 108 acre city-state since 1981.

The job was traditionally held by a cardinal, putting Marcinkus in line for a promotion.

But in a major reshuffling of the Vatican bureaucracy in April, Pope John Paul appointed a special committee headed by a cardinal to oversee the city's administration. That commission also reports to Casaroli.

"I BECAME A priest to serve my people. If I can't do it here I'll do it somewhere else," Marcinkus said in a recent conversation at his Vatican bank office just below the papal apartment. "My life here has been very profitable, very rewarding."

The 62-year-old archbishop, however, said he did not want to go into detail about his problems. "because now is not the time...I don't want to get people angry."

"Some people may disagree with the way I do things," he said with a shrug of his broad shoulders.

Alternating between cigarettes and a pipe, the towering, bald archbishop complained that a lot of the things he does are misunderstood, particularly by the press.

"What hurts is when they accuse me of something and don't know anything about me," he said.

"I'd say that 99.9 percent of my life has been an open book. Perhaps that's my problem. Maybe I'm too frank."

But what has caused the problem is his secretive dealings in the world of Italian high finance.

By the time Marcinkus became president of the bank in 1971, Italian financier Michele Sindona was already the Vatican's top financial adviser.

The Vatican reportedly lost millions of dollars when Sindona's empire collapsed in 1974. Last July, the lay managing director of the Vatican bank, Luigi Meninni, was convicted and sentenced to seven years in prison for his involvement in the failure of Sindona's Banca Privata.

MENNINI IS still at the bank while his case is being appealed. Sindona is serving a 25-year sentence in New York for his involvement in the collapse of his Franklin National Bank.

Another Vatican financial adviser was Roberto Calvi, president of the Milan-based Banco Ambrosiano, Italy's largest private bank.

The Vatican bank became one of his biggest customers and stockholders. Marcinkus even sat on the board of directors of one of its subsidiaries, Banco Ambrosiano Overseas Ltd. in the Bahamas.

Investigators later discovered that he had funneled more than $1.2 billion to dummy companies in Latin America that were controlled by the Vatican, whether it knew it or not.

As his debts mounted and creditor banks began pressuring for repayment, Calvi turned to Marcinkus for help.

In September 1981, the archbishop wrote Calvi what bankers call letters of comfort saying that the Vatican controlled the dummy companies and was aware of their debts. At the same time, Calvi gave Marcinkus another letter releasing the Vatican from any financial responsibility for the companies.

Calvi was apparently able to use the letters of comfort to keep his empire afloat a little longer.

BUT ON JUNE 18, 1982, Calvi was found hanging by the neck under a bridge in London. A coroner's jury said that it could not decide whether he was murdered or committed suicide.

When bank examiners discovered the huge loans and that the money was unrecoverable, the government liquidated Banco Ambrosiano. Where the money went is still a mystery, although most was believed used by Calvi to gain control of the Banco Ambrosiano and finance a buying spree of Italian companies.

The examiners also discovered the Vatican's involvement and Marcinkus' letters of comfort, which led Italian officials to demand that the Vatican take responsibility for some of the bad debts. They called the second, absolving letter worthless.

The Vatican finally admitted it did own the companies but insisted it did not administer them and was the victim of a "hidden project" by Calvi. It also said that the letters of comfort were not binding.

After months of negotiations, however, the Vatican agreed to pay nearly $250 million to foreign creditors of Banco Ambrosiano as a "good faith" gesture which in no way implied responsibility.

But it remains for courts to decide whether the Vatican bank was a victim, as it claims, or a willing partner in Calvi's schemes.

MARCINKUS, Mennini and the Vatican bank's chief accountant, Pellegrino de Strobel, were given judicial warning letters that they are under investigation for the collapse of Banco Ambrosiano.

Crestview Baptist to host Sunday school convention

A Texas Baptist Regional Sunday School Convention will be conducted at Crestview Baptist Church Sept. 17.

The Midland convention is one of 41 being conducted across the state by the Baptist General Convention of Texas Sunday School Division to help strengthen work in local Sunday schools. "Reach 5 in '85" is the theme for the convention which will launch the last year of "8.5 by '85," the Southern Baptist convention's effort to have 8.5 million persons enrolled in Sunday School by Sept. 30, 1985.

Featured speaker will be Winfred Moore, pastor of First Baptist Church, Amarillo, and president of the BGCT.

Age-group and general officers' conferences will be held in addition to a variety of special-interest conferences from which to choose. Also, the Midland conference will feature a conference for persons who attend Spanish-speaking congregations.

The convention will be conducted from 1:30 to 4:15 p.m. and from 6:45 to 9:15 p.m. For more information contact the BGCT, Sunday School Division, 511 N. Akard St., Dallas, Texas, 75201-3355, or call 1-214-741-1991.

Witnesses to gather

Jehovah's Witnesses from Midland will be convening with members of 10 other West Texas congregations at the Pecos County Civic Center, Fort Stockton, the first part of this month.

Neal Baker, a spokesman for the local congregation, said more than 1,000 are expected to attend this two-day session of Bible instruction and fellowship.

"Our program theme is 'Repudiate Ungodliness and Worldly Desires,' based on the Bible text at Titus 2:12," Baker said. "This Scripture encourages Christians to reject the ways of the world and to live with soundness of mind amid the present system of things."

The principal address of the assembly will be delivered by a representative of the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society from the world headquarters of Jehovah's Witnesses in Brooklyn, N.Y. His subject will be "War at Armageddon — Is it Near? What Will it Mean?"

Methodists host Round-up

Ruth Lutrick is the special speaker for the Round-up of United Methodist Women of First United Methodist Church being held Wednesday.

She will report on the General Conference in Baltimore, Md., and the United Methodist Mission in Haiti, which she and her husband, the Rev. Charles Lutrick of First UMC, attended.

Frances Walker, president of UMW of First UMC, will preside at a meeting of the Readers Club and at the general meeting at 10:30 a.m. A book exchange will be held in conjunction with the Readers Club at 10 a.m.

Madeline Boadle of Big Spring, who is district president, will be the special guest.

A price of $1.50 will be charged for lunch.

St. Paul to show films

"Building the Family of God," a four-part film series, is being shown at St. Paul United Methodist Church, 4501 Thomason Drive, beginning Sunday.

Produced by the Moody Institute of Science, a ministry of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, these films feature Dr. John MacArthur Jr. in a presentation on the process of spiritual discipline. Each film is 44 minutes long. All will be shown at 7 p.m.

The series includes "Producing Reproducers," Sunday; "Spiritual Parenting," Sept. 9; "Marks of a Disciple," Sept. 16; and "Perfecting the Family," Sept. 23.

There is no admission charge. The public is invited to attend.

'AerobiRhythms' offered

First Baptist Church is offering "AerobiRhythms" beginning Tuesday in the church's Activities Building.

The morning session will be held Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. beginning Wednesday. Cost is $18 for the six-week session.

The evening session will be offered Tuesday and Thursday from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. beginning Tuesday. Cost is $8 for the four-week session.

Child care will be provided in the Activities Building. For more information or to sign up call 682-7669.

Quakers undertake drive to increase membership

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Depopulated by deaths, a modest birth rate and the loss of some younger adherents, the nation's oldest body of Quakers is undertaking something once considered virtual heresy: a membership drive.

The Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of the Society of Friends, which has shrunk by 25 percent over the past 25 years to 13,000 members, is trying to reach potential members through radio spots, print advertising — even the Yellow Pages.

"We've been hiding our light under a bushel," said Richard Bansen, associate secretary of the society, founded by William Penn in 1682 as a Holy Experiment in religious toleration, pacifism and enlightened government.

The five-year membership drive will be the first for the society, which is still the nation's largest but is less than half the size of the 30,000-member community Penn had organized by 1700.

A special effort will be made to attract blacks and other minorities to Philadelphia's predominantly white, upper-middle-class Quaker community, said General Secretary Samuel Caldwell.

No more than about 100 Philadelphia Quakers are from minority groups. Unlike some other U.S. and foreign communities, the Philadelphia society has no black or Hispanic meetinghouses, Caldwell said.

Some Quaker sects are evangelistic and actively seek converts, but Philadelphia's more traditional meetinghouses have long felt proselytizing was uncomfortably close to arm twisting.

Christian leaders speak against moving embassy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leaders of 20 national Christian bodies have urged the White House to stand firm against shifting the U.S. embassy in Israel from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem.

They met with National Security Advisor Robert C. McFarlane, voicing support for President Reagan's opposition to legislation introduced in both houses of Congress for such a move.

The religious leaders said it would be highly detrimental to the peace efforts in the Middle East, and would alter the "international status of Jerusalem as a holy city to all three great monotheistic faiths" — Judaism, Christianity and Islam.

Perfection lives in Utopia

Utopia, from Greek words meaning "not a place," was an imaginary island described by Sir Thomas More (1516) in a book of the same name as having a perfect political and social system.

What connects missing anchovies to price of grain?

By TOM JORY

NEW YORK (AP) — Once there was a connection between missing anchovies and the price of grain, and Adam Smith knew about it.

Smith — not the 18th century British economist, but George J.W. Goodman, the American writer who borrowed the name in 1966 — probably didn't discover the relationship, and certainly wasn't the only one aware of it. But it does illustrate the way he thinks.

Smith described the chain of unlikely circumstances involving Peruvian fishermen, European cattlemen, American grain dealers and the Russians in "Paper Money," the most recent of his three best-sellers on global economics.

Now, he's taking his unique brand of journalism to television in a weekly series called "Adam Smith's Money World," and, he says, it's not easy.

"It's hard, because you have to convert what is abstract information into something that is visual," Smith said. "And everything I think of they tell me can't be done.

"I'll tell you what they told me: 'What you just said cost $30,000. Think of something else.'"

ENTERTAINMENT

The weekly, half-hour series premieres Sunday night on many public television stations.

Goodman, a Harvard graduate and Rhodes Scholar, wrote a novel instead of a Ph.D. thesis that was published as "The Bubble Makers." He worked on Wall Street, first as a magazine editor, then as a securities analyst and fund manager, and continued to write fiction.

He took his pseudonym — and we'll call him that from now on — for a column in the New Yorker magazine that first appeared in 1966.

"Adam Smith's Money World" is his first up-to-the-neck involvement in TV, and he says the objective of the show will be to keep the focus as current as possible.

"I used a phrase in 'Supermoney' that's quite old now," he said, referring to the book he wrote in 1972. "It came from the days when the British owned almost everything, including Moscow Power & Light. They would get these reports from all over the world on the weekend, and ask themselves, 'What do we do Monday morning?'

"I want the show to have that feeling," he said. "We will try to give the people information to start the new week. What can you do with what you now know?"

That's the basis for what Smith calls a "Big Picture-What If?" format. Each program will begin with a background piece explaining and updating the issue, followed by a studio discussion on the same topic: "What if the economic boom turns to bust?" Or, "What if the price of oil falls to $15 a barrel?"

The "Big Picture" portion of the program will try to illustrate the abstraction.

"That's the hard part," Smith said, "because these are the kinds of things that will make your eyes glaze over. If you give them the option of watching the Olympics or watching the deficit, most people will take the Olympics. I would.

Former teen heartthrob ready for comeback trail

By YARDENA ARAR

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Troy Donahue, the pouty-faced teen heartthrob of the Kennedy era, has been down the comeback trail before. But this time he's making the trip on the wagon.

"This is the first thing I've done sober," Donahue says matter-of-factly about his role as a sleazy, salon-tanned salesman in "Grandview, U.S.A."

It's also the first part of any consequence Donahue has played for some time now, and probably his biggest break since his cameo in 1974's "The Godfather, Part II." In that he appeared briefly as Talia Shire's spineless boyfriend, a character who bore Donahue's own real name — Merle Johnson.

It's been 25 years since "A Summer Place" made Donahue a hot commodity, a Warner Bros. contract player who was the studio's top fanmail draw.

At 49, he's still tall, lean, blond and striking. But his hairline is receding, his tanned good looks are more rugged than smooth and he's all but unrecognizable as the golden boy of "Parrish," "Susan Slade," "Palm Springs Weekend" and the TV detective series, "Surfside 6."

Maybe it's just as well, for Donahue recalls those roles with distaste. He still is bitter at Warner Bros. for using him as "fodder" in a string of vacuous, pretty boy parts — a stereotype that left him high and dry when playboys went out and antiheros came in during the late '60s.

"I think that to have a reputation as an actor, you have to have some decent roles," Donahue said over lunch at the Burbank Studios commissary. "I think I did a good job with what I had to do, but the roles to begin with were laughed at, so the person playing these roles sometimes is maligned."

Donahue's troubles didn't end there. Although he never made a fortune as a contract player, he lived the expensive life of a Hollywood star — "which is very easy to do, when you have a name."

He also was becoming an alcoholic and drug user, habits that did not help his acting.

"When you work and you drink and you use, there is this terror, this underlying terror that exists and more or less suffocates your performance," he said. "You may get through it, but it's not to the level or the pitch that has any quality."

By the end of the '60s, Donahue's life was a shambles. He lost his fancy home, and two marriages — one to actress Suzanne Pleshette — had failed. Two more would later end in divorce.

He moved to New York and back again. There were periodic acting parts — as a drug addict on "The Secret Storm" soap opera, a Charles Manson figure in "Sweet Saviour," the "Godfather II" part. But his earnings went for drugs and alcohol, and in between he bummed off friends or movie buffs.

Things came to a head after his fourth marriage ended in 1981. By then, pancreatitis stemming from his drinking was sending Donahue to hospitals an average of once a year.

"I realized that I was going to die, and I was dying — or worse than that, I might live the way I was living for the rest of my life," Donahue said. "I guess there was that light that some of us feel that we see — and I choose to think it's God — that said 'You have a choice, you don't have to live this way for the rest of your life.'"

So he joined an alcoholics' self-help group, and hasn't had a drink for more than two years. He said he doesn't find it hard to talk about his alcoholism — "it's part of the catharsis and it helps in the recovery."

Donahue is cautiously optimistic that his work in "Grandview, U.S.A." will spark a professional recovery. The film, about people involved with a demolition derby in the midwest, isn't one of the summer's blockbusters, but Donahue plays his supporting comic role with gusto.

"This shows that I'm a versatile actor, so maybe people will take a chance on me," he said. "I hope that this opens a lot of new doors for me. Possibly it will. There are no guarantees."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Israeli army to ban traffic across Lebanese checkpoint

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — In an effort to prevent weapons smuggling, the Israeli army will ban all vehicle traffic from north to south Lebanon beginning Sunday, military sources said.

The sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said Friday that no trucks will be allowed to pass the Israeli checkpoint at Bater-al-Chouf, the primary crossing into the Israeli-held south.

Under the new rules, the trucks will have to unload on the northern side of the checkpoint, and after a security check the merchandise will be put on trucks on the other side of the barrier, the sources said. South Lebanon is dependent on imports from the north, having hardly any industry of its own.

Andropov son ambassador

MOSCOW (AP) — Igor Andropov, son of late Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov, has been appointed Soviet ambassador to Greece, Tass said Friday.

Tass said Andropov would replace current Ambassador Vladimir Kaboshkin, who has retired.

Born in 1941, Andropov holds a history degree and worked for the prestigious U.S.A. and Canada Institute from 1970-74 before joining the Foreign Ministry as a senior instructor at its diplomatic academy, Tass said.

Mines wound soldiers

MELLRICHSTADT, West Germany (AP) — Two East German soldiers were seriously wounded Friday when a land mine exploded at their feet on the heavily fortified communist border, West German police said.

Bavarian border police spokesman Klaus Papenfuss said the two soldiers were probing for the deadly devices about 50 yards from the West German frontier when one went off.

Communist border patrols have been spotted digging up old mines and replacing them with new ones in the area where the accident occurred, about 50 miles north of the West German city of Wuerzburg.

East Germany reinforces its frontier with automatic shooting devices, armed guards, attack dogs, heat sensors and barbed wire as well as mines.

Airport bomb kills women, children

Afghan tribal chief defects

(Tribal chief) Khel "worked for the Russians. Two months ago I told him he would be killed if he didn't leave Afghanistan. Even now, I think he works for the KGB."
—Abdul Haq, guerrilla leader

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Afghanistan's official radio said an explosion at the Kabul international airport Friday killed several women and children and wounded "a number" of other people. It blamed rebels fighting Afghanistan's Marxist government for the blast at the main terminal building.

In another development, an Afhan tribal chieftain who had collaborated with the government defected and crossed into Pakistan with hundreds of armed followers. Reports on the number of men the chieftain brought with him ranged from 400 to 3,000, but it was one of the largest mass defections since the Soviet Union sent some 100,000 soldiers into Afghanistan in December 1979 to help fight the anti-communist rebels.

Radio Afghanistan gave no specific figures on casualties from the airport blast, but said all of those killed were women and children who were among the travelers and relatives gathered in the terminal.

Kabul's airport also is a major base for Soviet warplanes, and Western diplomats serving in the Afghan capital have reported several attacks at the airport during the past month.

The brief announcement on the state-run radio, monitored here, made no mention of damage to the terminal building. While it said all of those killed were women and children, it did not say if there were any men among the wounded nor did it say it say if any of the victims were Afghan or Soviet military personel.

None of the guerrilla groups fighting President Babrak Karmal's regime asserted responsibility for the blast.

There are frequent bombings in Kabul, according to Western diplomats there, but they say the government media rarely reports them, usually announcing only those thaf inflict severe casualties and damage.

Rebel leaders in Peshawar, Pakistan, near the Khyber Pass border crossing, identified the tribal chief who defected as Ghulam Hassan Khan Karo Khel. They said he crossed into Pakistan Wednesday and was being guarded at a secret location in Peshawar.

One guerrilla leader, Abdul Haq, suggested Khel had switched sides because he had been warned he would be killed if he continued to collaborate with Karmal's government and the Soviets.

Haq, who lives in Peshawar but commands guerrillas operating in the Kabul area, said in a telephone interview that Khel "worked for the Russians. Two months ago I told him he would be killed if he didn't leave Afghanistan. Even now, I think he works for the KGB," the Soviet secret police.

He called Khel a "thoroughly bad man."

An Afghan professor living in exile in Peshawar said Khel "is a big fish. It's a coup to get him and this number of people, nearly all of whom carried their weapons with them."

Other guerrilla leaders said Khel, a major landowner, received money from Karmal's government to have his follower protect electric power facilities in the Kabul area.

One reason for the conflicting reports on the number of armed men who entered Pakistan with Khel was that some brought their families along.

Guerrilla leaders in Peshawar discounted earlier reports that Khel was the security chief for Kabul's eastern and southeastern districts, and said they did not believe he had been part of the Karmal administration.

They said Khel was in the care of the Gailani Islamic group headed by spiritual leader Sayed Ahmed Gailani.

Azim Nasser Zia, a spokesman in Islamabad for the Gailani group, said Khel "really is quite somebody."

Statue of Aquino taken to his grave

MANILA (AP) — A motorcade of 50 cars escorted a statue of slain opposition leader Benigno Aquino to his grave on Friday, one year after his burial, as a thousand youths held a boisterous but peaceful anti-government march through downtown Manila.

The Aquino statue was taken in the back of a pickup truck at the head of the 19-mile caravan to the rural cemetery where Aquino was buried. About 200 people went to the grave to hear a Roman Catholic Mass with Aquino's widow, his mother and a younger brother.

Aquino family members said they planned Sept. 11 to take the statue on an 80-mile trek from Aquino's hometown of Tarlac, north of Manila, to the Manila airport where he died. Sept. 11 is the birthday of President Ferdinand Marcos, whom members of Aquino's family blame for the opposition leader's assassination.

In downtown Manila, soldiers stood clear of the crowd as the youths joined workers' groups for songs, speeches and chants in front of the city's central post office. City officials had issued a permit for the rally.

The youths filled Manila's busy Quiapo Boulevard with chants of "Marcos, Hitler, dictator, puppet," but a chain of 12 youths kept marchers from approaching Marcos' palace nearby.

Student leader Elmer Mercado told the downtown rally that youth groups plan to boycott classes and "paralyze the city" on Sept. 21, to mark the day Marcos declared martial law in 1972. Marcos lifted it in 1981 but retained most of his powers.

About 500,000 people rallied against Marcos in Manila last week on the first anniversary of the Aug. 21, 1983 assassination.

Marcos' opponents blame the president and the military for the murder. The government says an alleged communist agent Ronaldo Galman killed Aquino as he stepped off a plane from three years' voluntary U.S. exile. Aquino's family says soldiers shot the opposition leader, then killed Galman as a scapegoat.

In a related development, the major opposition party criticized a fact-finding board for delaying its report on the assassination of Aquino.

Salvador H. Laurel, president of the United Nationalist Democratic Organization, challenged the board to "come out with the whole and unvarnished truth about the dastardly assassination."

Sikh athlete from India seeks asylum

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Sikh javelin thrower on the Indian team at the Los Angeles Olympics announced on Friday that he is seeking political asylum in the United States because he fears persecution if he returns to India.

Gurtej Singh Dhaliwal, 24, told reporters that Hindu oppression of adherents of the Sikh religion in India has been growing for the past three years, but that he has concentrated on sports and stayed out of politics.

Dhaliwal said his decision to seek asylum had been "very difficult" and that he was concerned about the effect on his family and friends. He said his parents and two younger sisters are still living in a village in Punjab.

The bearded Dhaliwal, wearing a Sikh turban and his team blue blazer, said he expected to be jailed if he returns to India.

"The events of the last few months have made life impossible for Sikh youth," Dhaliwal said. "Each one of them is suspected of terrorism."

Suspects are detained indefinitely even though a court might acquit them of any wrongdoing, he said. "Religious persecution is widespread against Sikhs," and they are forced to violate the rules of their religion.

He said he had visited the Sikhs' Golden Temple in Amritsar after the Indian army stormed the complex June 6.

"It hurt him very much what he saw there," said Ganga Singh Dhillon, a spokesman for the Sikh community in the United States who translated for Dhaliwal.

"As a condition for being on the Olympic squad to represent India, I was told that I will have to cut my hair, presumably to improve my performance," Dhaliwal said. "There is no connection between the two things."

He agreed to the demands of his Hindu coaches because "I looked at the Olympics as a chance to escape from the tyranny of the Indian government," Dhaliwal said.

"It deeply hurt me and affected my performance at the Olympics," he said.

He said he held the Indian record of 76.74 meters (251 feet 9 inches) in the javelin, but that he had failed to place in the Olympics. The winning distance in Los Angeles was 86.76 meters (284 feet 8 inches).

Dhillon said Sikh men regard cutting their hair as a violation of one of the fundamentals of their faith.

Actress Priscilla Barnes once posed nude for Penthouse

Barnes

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Priscilla Barnes, who says she was "at an emotional low point" when she posed nude for Penthouse magazine, has lost a round to have the pictures barred from republication.

U.S. District Judge James D. Ideman on Thursday dissolved a court order barring Penthouse from publishing the photographs of the star of TV's "Three's Company" until a lawsuit is settled.

A Penthouse attorney had promised the magazine would not publish the photos until Miss Barnes' suit to prevent publication was settled. Ideman is scheduled to begin hearing the case Sept. 25.

The photographs originally appeared in a 1976 issue of the magazine, but without her real name.

Miss Barnes signed a release to have the photos published only under an alias, and objected to the magazine running the pictures again using her real name.

The magazine filed suit to prevent her from blocking publication, and the matter is scheduled to go to trial Sept. 25.

John

LONDON (AP) — One of Elton John's pianos was withdrawn from Sotheby's rock 'n' roll auction Friday when bids failed to match expectations stemming from the previous day's high prices for Beatles' memorabilia.

The sale was a hit with buyers, but a flop for Sotheby's auction house as some items went for less than half their expected prices.

The biggest surprise was one of Elton John's pianos painted sky blue and decorated with clouds and flowers. It was expected to sell for up to $5,900 but was withdrawn after bids reached only $3,150.

On Thursday, Beatles fans paid $271,000 for a variety of memorabilia, including $20,865 for a guitar owned by the late John Lennon, double the estimate.

Turner

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Singer Tina Turner, back on the rock 'n' roll charts at age 44 with her hit "What's Love Got To Do With It," says she's still singing because "I've had my kids and I'm still in great shape."

The first three concerts of her North American tour, beginning Friday in Los Angeles, were sold out.

The tawny-haired singer divorced her husband and mentor, Ike, eight years ago, bringing an end to one of the most electrifying musical acts in show business.

In part, she said, the split came because she was unhappy doing "groovy" songs with a rhythm-and-blues tempo.

"Everyone wanted me to do R&B," she recalled in an interview published this week. "I didn't want to do R&B...I can still rock, age has nothing to do with it. Forty-four is just a number.

NEW YORK (AP) — Fashion model Jerry Hall says she doesn't think her daughter, now 6 months old, will be affected by the fact that Miss Hall and the baby's father, rock star Mick Jagger, are not married.

But Miss Hall says she still would like to tie the knot with him.

"I'd like to (get married) one day. We talk about it. But he had a difficult marriage and divorce" with model Bianca Jagger, Miss Hall said Friday on the ABC-TV program "Good Morning America."

"I don't know, we're very, very happy as we are," Miss Hall said, adding she did not think an unmarried lifestyle "affects children if they're brought up in a normal environment with happy, healthy attitudes."

Dr Pepper cans adorned with Arabic

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Puzzled local fans of Dr Pepper can rest assured — the Arabic writing on their soft drink cans isn't part of a contest or a foreign plot. It's simply the ingredients.

The cans began appearing two weeks ago, prompting hundreds of calls to Southern Mississippi Bottling Co. of Jackson, which distributes Dr Pepper and other soft drinks.

Bill Brown, vice president of Southern Mississippi Bottling, couldn't translate the message, or explain it.

"I think it's Arabic. Or Saudi Arabian. How do I know?"

One downtown snack shop cashier, 70-year-old Emma Rogers, said she's had many questions from her customers, who've been puzzling over the cans since they started appearing two weeks ago in the tiny snack shop.

"We've got regular customers. We don't have too many strangers, and I'm afraid we don't have any customers that could read that," she said.

She confided that she has heard rumors that the squiggles on each container are part of an illegal foreign plot, because that's what a Coca-Cola delivery man told her.

But Brown and other officials at Southern Mississippi Bottling say there is no foreign plot: The cans and their contents came by truck from a canning plant in Reserve, La.

Bobby Carol, manager of the SMB Manufacturing plant in Reserve, said the foreign tops were stuck on a small group of cans made last month when the company ran out of domestic lids.

"I don't know why we had them. I think a few years ago, the plant might have had a foreign contract."

When the plant machines spit out the cans, they were packed up and shipped out to Mississippi, Carol said.

Carol said he had no idea just what the Arabic writing meant. But Abdel Naser, a Jordanian engineering student who speaks fluent Arabic, concluded "Some of the words I don't know what they mean in English, but this has on it, 'carbonated water, sugar, caramel coloring.'"

Southern Mississippi Bottling Purchasing Agent J.C. Slater said he had been getting daily calls from people asking, 'what does it say,' or, 'can we drink it?' he said.

But Slater said he has had to disappoint customers who have called in hopes that the Arabic letters might translate into Dr Pepper prizes.

"One lady from Hazlehurst called me long distance and asked if she'd won something."

Off-Broadway theater gets ready to open

NEW YORK (AP) — Mitchell Maxwell and Alan Schuster looked for 18 months before they found what they wanted — a crumbling tin can factory on a quiet Greenwich Village street.

Now, more than $2 million later, the structure with a red stucco facade has been transformed into the Minetta Lane Theater, the first new off-Broadway theater to be built in New York in more than 50 years.

It opens Sept. 6, with "Balm in Gilead," Lanford Wilson's 27-character epic about the down-and-out in a seedy Upper West Side coffee shop.

The Minetta Lane is probably the only theater off-Broadway that can accommodate such a large production, according to Maxwell, a one-time actor, director and restaurant owner.

And it could be the beginning of a new trend toward larger off-Broadway houses. Hit off-Broadway shows can now command a top ticket price of $35, which is what "Little Shop of Horrors," off-Broadway's biggest musical smash is charging for weekend performances.

But production costs are also climbing. "Balm in Gilead" is capitalized at $450,000, a huge amount to earn back at the tiny Circle Rep where the drama started last May. And the only way "Balm" can ever pay back its costs is to play a large off-Broadway theater.

Most off-Broadway houses are tiny, usually 199 seats or less, narrow, buildings with limited facilities that depend on the good will of the audience and the popularity of the play to survive.

Maxwell and Schuster hope to change that with the 415-seat Minetta Lane, and plan to expand their operations to include other off-Broadway theaters. They are partners in an outfit called M-Square Entertainment Inc.

"I run the theater operation. He raises the money, and we make the aesthetic decisions jointly," said Schuster, who grew up in construction. His father was a contractor. M-Square also owns the Orpheum Theater, an old vaudeville house on the Lower East Side that Schuster renovated and turned into a thriving off-Broadway house.

It's not easy building anything in Manhattan, and before a shovel of dirt was turned, the two men hurdled a maze of public hearings that had them running from the local community board to the Board of Standard and Appeals and finally to the Board of Estimates.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Society chronicler and conservationist Cleveland Amory, Jimmy Connors, the Pittsburgh Steelers' longtime quarterback, Terry Bradshaw, actress Linda Purl and baseball's lovable Marv Throneberry share your birthday. A previously rejected idea or invention finds acceptance now. The financial picture looks rosy. A change in attitude helps you resolve a family or business dispute. Go ahead and form a partnership with someone whose talents compliment your own! Travel is favored in December and January. A new twist in romance makes love more fulfilling. Be less critical and more supportive of those closest to your heart. A young person thrives on encouragement.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Travel and social events enjoy favorable influences. Take advantage of unusual opportunities. Be careful how you spend money. Postpone a romantic encounter.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Family members may not agree with your plans. Display your artistic talents to best advantage. Socialize more if you have been out of circulation. Money spent on moving is a wise investment.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You are happy to putter around the house today. Avoid going to extremes. Keep the lid on hurtful information. Turn on the charm and you can clear up a misunderstanding with a neighbor.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A great day to pursue quiet pleasures. You are delighted by the way a relationship is changing. Music soothes frazzled nerves. Family members of all ages enjoy a picnic.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Travel enjoys favorable influences. Listen to advice but follow your own intuition. The social whirl could produce a new romantic partner. Another Leo holds special appeal! Dress glamorously for a date.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Dealings with friends and relatives take up most of your day. Clean out closets before buying new clothes. Soft-pedal differences of opinion with family members.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A sermon gives you new insights into an old problem. Teamwork is the answer to domestic chores. Together, you and loved one can get a lot done.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): After weighing all of the pros and cons, you are ready to make a major domestic decision. Romance progresses nicely. Newspaper ads provide valuable leads for those who are job-hunting.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Accentuate the positive in your personal relationships. A sudden invitation brings delight, especially if you can take the whole family along. Good news improves romance. Limit your spending.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Travel plans could be altered at the last minute. Someone may try to play on your sympathies. Write letters. An unexpected visitor asks an important question.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Romance is in the spotlight. Do not gloss over your domestic responsibilities. A financial situation requires careful review. Your friends and relatives approve your choice of mate.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Weigh what you hear carefully. Avoid emotional showdowns. Confusion over travel arrangements will disappear. Casual social gatherings are favored over formal events.

POSITIVE THINKING

'Bombard' people with your prayers

By DR. NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

Peale

Not long ago staying at a hotel I came down to the cofee shop for breakfast and, when the waiter came to take my order, I prefaced it by telling him, "I'm on a diet."

"That's too bad," he said sympathetically.

"Please bring me a little glass of orange juice," I ordered. "Then one poached egg and black coffee. No cream. No sugar."

The waiter looked at me. "Why?" he asked.

Then he grinned and went away, coming back presently with a huge glass of orange juice, two eggs, bacon and even fried potatoes, along with an order of toast.

"I didn't order that," I complained.

"I know you didn't," he answered, "but I brought it to you anyway."

"Why did you do that? I'm trying to reduce."

"Because you work very hard and need strength," he told me, "you need vitality. You have a job to do. And I like you."

"Well, I like you too," I replied, "but why are you taking such good care of my health?"

"Do you remember," he asked, "a speech you made at a convention dinner in this hotel about eight months ago?"

I remembered.

"That night," he went on, "I was waiting tables at the dinner. You talked bout 'bombarding' people with prayers. You said that if there was anybody you weren't getting along with, it would help to 'shoot' prayers at them. I'd never heard about shooting prayers at people; I'd always directed mine only to God. At first, it seemed a funny idea to me, but I kept thinking about it, became interested, and finally tried your suggestion.

"You see," he went on, "I have a brother. He was just about the meanest man you could ever meet and we'd fought for years. Then I started bombarding him with those prayers you told about. And what do you know? We get along pretty good now. That plan worked."

As he talked, I became so interested I forgot about my diet and ate every bit of that big breakfast. This pleased him and when I rose to go he gave me a hearty handshake and said, "Thanks a lot. It sure does work."

And it does indeed. Surround with prayers the people you don't seem to get along with and after awhile you'll notice a difference. Send out good will and good will strongly tends to return.

The first difference you'll notice will be in yourself. Doing this kind of thing makes you more outgoing, and people like outgoing folk. They become conscious that you love people and are trying to help them and that you believe in them.

You can almost see yourself flow out. And, as you flow out, others will flow in toward you in friendliness. Life comes to you instead of flowing away from you.

Of course, you have to give up ill will. And negative attitudes can cancel out your prayers. You will have to try to genuinely like people, then concentrate your mind on a positive attitude of good will. The sincere and friendly spirit which you send out will come right back to you. Practice this technique and you will have no trouble getting along with people.

Norfolk busing dispute still simmering

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Nelson and Earlean White, with five children in the Norfolk school system, want court-ordered busing to end. They support neighborhood schools.

Mrs. White said she wants her children to attend nearby schools rather than ride a bus for 45 minutes to attend school near the Norfolk Naval Base.

She said she disagrees with other blacks who fear that, if busing ended, children attending nearly all-black schools would not have the same opportunities as white students.

"We should not allow the past to hinder us from moving forward in the future," she said. "In 1984, it's just not like it was in the '60s."

The Rev. Luther M. Ferebee, one of 22 blacks who filed a lawsuit against the Norfolk school board's plan to re-institute neighborhood elementary schools, said that if his children and grandchildren attended neighborhood schools, "I know they're not going to get the best."

TWO OF HIS grandchildren ride a bus about 20 minutes to reach their schools, he said.

The Whites, who led a small band of black parents supporting neighborhood schools, and Ferebee are on opposite sides of three-year-long controversy.

Norfolk began busing its elementary students in 1971 under a federal court-ordered school desegregation plan. A decade later, the school board elected to take a second look at busing.

After a 15-month study, the board voted 5-2 in February 1983 to adopt a system of 35 neighborhood elementary schools, 10 of which would be more than 95 percent black. Six schools are more than 70 percent white. Students at the city's nine junior high schools and five high schools would continue to be bused. The plan, which would affect 20,000 students, was scheduled to take effect next month.

Ruling last month on Ferebee's suit, U.S. District Judge John A. MacKenzie upheld the constitutionality of the board's plan. The board, however, agreed to delay implementation utnil September 1985, while opponents pursued an appeal of the MacKenzie's decision.

Experts disagreed whether last month's court decision, if it stands, could signal a return to neighborhood schools in cities across the country.

GARY ORFIELD, a University of Chicago political science and education professor who has studied busing, said the decision could cause a rush to the courts by other cities that want to abandon busing.

"If it were sustained on the grounds that you've got a declining white population, that would cover almost every city in the United States," he said.

School board chairman Thomas G. Johnson Jr., who drafted the plan, said he didn't know how much of a precedent the Norfolk case would create, since the city's school system was declared free of discrimination in 1975.

Comparisons between the Norfolk case and other cities are hard to make because "each school system is different," said Mark A. Smylie at Vanderbilt University's Institute for Public Policy Studies, which has kept track of school desegregation cases.

In arguing for the neighborhood school plan, board members said busing was costly and had caused white middle-class families to leave the city for nearby Virginia Beach and Chesapeake, thus gradually resegregating the school system. They also acknowledged that the Reagan administration's opposition to busing helped convince them that it was a good time to re-appraise busing.

Although MacKenzie said it was appropriate to consider Norfolk's declining white population in the busing case, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled in a 1974 Detroit busing dispute that "white flight is irrelevant," Orfield said.

WHITES DON'T leave cities because of school busing, but because the suburbs have more housing, lower taxes and less crime, he said.

When busing began in 1971, the city's school population of nearly 57,000 was 57 percent white and 43 percent black. By 1983, the school system had 35,500 students, 58 percent of them black and 42 percent white.

Peafowl enjoy good life on Texas farm

DENTON, Texas (AP) — The unpretentious house nestled in the trees on the highway between Denton and Decatur doesn't attract much attention, except occasionally when a Sunday-driving city slicker fantasizes about how nice it would be to live the idyllic country life.

But in the summer, Pearl Pitts causes some second looks when she puts out her sign advertising "Peafowl for Sale."

"It's my hobby," says Mrs. Pitts, 73, who's been raising the exotic birds for 10 years. "I sell some, too. A lot of people passing by see the sign and stop."

Most of the buyers are country folk with ample room for the bird to roam around, but the clientele includes some urbanites too. Mrs. Pitts says most people are interested in the birds because of their beauty.

"They buy them because they're so pretty," she says, with a note of pride in her voice. "They say they're good to eat too," she says teasingly.

Things have changed quite a lot on this stretch of Highway 380 since the Pittses built their house more than 30 years ago. They own 700 acres of the grassy, rolling land, and their son and his family live across the highway. But in the shady, fragrant pasture behind the house, Mrs. Pitts and her birds share a different world all their own.

Two peacocks and 10 peahens enjoy the good life in the lush field. One of the peacocks is of a rare white breed and the other is of the more commonn colored variety. The peahens are colored, but some of them have tufts of white in their feathers.

When the regal peacocks fan their tail feathers, it's not just for the benefit of the eyes of admiring human beings. The showy feathers serve much the same purpose as flashy hot rods do for teen-age boys. When the peacock struts his stuff, he's trying to attract the attention of that cute little peahen across the field.

"They're showing off and want the hens to see them," says Mrs. Pitts.

The birds mate for three months in the spring. Ater the mating season, their tail feathers fall out until the next season. Each December, they start to grow the feathers again in preparation for another spring mating season.

The peacocks are much more colorful and showy than the peahens. "Once in a while the hens will spread their tails, but not very often," says Mrs. Pitts.

When the birds are mating, they signal their intentions by making a loud, shrieking sound. Mrs. Pitts says the noise bothers some people, but she doesn't even notice it anymore.

"Sometimes it sounds like they're yelling, 'Help!' 'Help'," she says.

The peacocks are very territory-conscious and guard their respective domains zealously.

"Each one has a certain place where he stands to call the hens," says Mrs. Pitts. "They have territories and will fight each other just like jealous men.

"The colored one is older, and he whups the white one," she says with a chuckle.

When the peahens are laying, the light brown eggs, about twice the size of chicken eggs, are hidden away in a dark, cool cabinet in the house. When the spring laying period is over, the eggs are put back with the hens, who will sit on them until they hatch.

About a third of the newborns are of the all-white variety, and others will have some white mixed in with the colors. "They look kind of like baby turkeys," Mrs. Pitts says.

A station wagon that has seen quite a few days of service transports Mrs. Pitts over the bumps, holes and knee-high grass in the back pasture.

Court: Credit cards can't be revoked unless customers told

WASHINGTON (AP) — American Express cannot cancel customers' credit cards without notifying them in advance, a three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals ruled Friday.

The panel overturned a decision by U.S. District Judge Harold H. Greene who had rejected the complaint of Oscar Gray, an attorney who learned his card had been canceled when he tried to pay for a wedding anniversary dinner that he and his wife had just eaten in a Washington restaurant.

The restaurant informed Gray that American Express had refused to accept the charges for the meal and had instructed the restaurant to confiscate and destroy his card.

Gray later learned that his account had been canceled because of a dispute over the payment of airplane tickets he purchased with his credit card.

In a 19-page opinion written by Judge Abner J. Mikva with Judges Malcolm Richard Wilkey and Robert H. Bork concurring, the panel said, "The surge in the use of credit cards, the 'plastic money' of our society, has been so quick that the law has had difficulty keeping pace."

Mikva wrote that the first serious effort by Congress to regulate the relationship between a credit cardholder and the issuing company did not come until 1974, with passage of the Fair Credit Billing Act.

"We hold that the District Court was too swift to conclude that the act offers no protection to Gray and further hold that longstanding principles of contract law afford Gray substantial rights," the panel said.

The panel ordered the case returned to the lower court for further proceedings.

American Express had argued that its agreement with customers empowers the company to cancel a credit card without notice and without cause. Gray challenged the "without notice" provision.

The appeals court said the notice provision was unenforceable, even though the lower court said it was.

"The card can be revoked without cause and without any waiting period, but it cannot be revoked for transactions that already have occurred," the appeals panel said.

The judges said American Express argues that if the customer agreements are not upheld, the credit card business will suffer great risk.

"We think they protest too much," Mikva wrote. "Within the limits of state and federal statutes, credit cards can still be canceled without cause and without notice. But the cancellation can affect only transactions which have not occurred before the cancellation is communicated to the cardholder.

"In practical terms, American Express will have to make an effort to communicate its cancellation decision to the cardholder," the court said. "The effort may be as informal as a phone call or a telegram."

Investigators try to determine if bomber's air bags inflated

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Air Force investigators tried to determine Friday whether air bags inflated to soften the landing of an ejection capsule when a B-1A bomber crashed in the Mojave Desert, killing the co-pilot.

"I have people looking at this right at this moment. I can't answer that now," Maj. Gen. Gordon E. Williams, president of an accident investigating board, said of the air bag, which is supposed to inflate under the capsule before impact.

A Rockwell International official who spoke on condition he not be identified said there were three to five air bags under the pod. Rockwell is the prime contractor for the B-1.

Williams, commander of the Air Force Inspection and Safety Center at Norton Air Force Base, Calif., appeared at a news conference with Maj. Gen. Peter W. Odgers, commander of the Flight Test Center at Edwards.

But the officers avoided answering most questions about what may have caused Wednesday's crash of the prototype B-1A, 10 miles northeast of here.

Both two-star generals refused to confirm or deny a CBS News report based on information from Pentagon sources that the plane apparently stalled at 3,500 feet and 207 mph before the crash.

"I don't know who these sources are," Williams said. "We are in the very initial stages of this investigation...and haven't gone through any of that. At this point, I'm not prepared to say that is an accurate account of what went on."

Just before the crash, the B-1A was preparing to perform "stability and control tests" at an altitude of 3,500 feet and a speed of 180 knots with its slats and flaps extended and one outboard engine out of its four engines idling, Odgers said. But he added that "to our knowledge," the plane had not reached that point. Actual speed and altitude weren't known, he said.

Williams declined to confirm or deny the CBS report that the pilot of an F-111 chase plane radioed to the B-1 that its nose was pointed too high. He acknowledged the Air Force has more information than it wanted to release at this point.

He said investigators will listen to all tape-recordings of air-to-ground, ground-to-air and air-to-air communications among the B-1A flight controllers and the F-111 chase plane, but he would not say what they have heard on those tapes so far.

"To take any isolated incident out of context would only be misleading ...To make a judgment at this early time would be inappropriate and is liable to be wrong," Williams said.

Pentagon officials said Wednesday the plane was conducting tests at "extremely low altitude," but Odgers said test pilots do not consider 3,500 feet to be low altitude.

"That's not close to the ground for a B-1 profile," Odgers said.

Williams said he has selected members of his investigation board, including himself, a brigadier general as deputy, an investigating officer, a logistics officer, a B-1-qualified test pilot, a test engineer, a safety specialist, a doctor and a "life-support systems officer" who will examine the ejection capsule. Other B-1s being tested have individual ejection seats, not capsules.

He said all board members have visited the crash site.

Investigators soon will interview "everybody involved" but their testimony will be unsworn and confidential because "we want to know exactly what happened...We want that testimony to be uninhibited," Williams said.

He said they will take sworn statements during a second investigation.

Williams said investigators will write a two-part report, and factual data in the first part will be released, but the second part, consisting of "mostly analysis," will contain privileged information and will not be released.

Williams said such investigations usually take about a month.

The capsule had been tested and certified in parachute-deployment and ejection tests in 1974 and 1975, Odgers said.

He said it was designed to be "survivable" at zero altitude and 50 knots. In low-speed flight, the ejection capsule deploys three main parachutes, and Williams indicated all three chutes had deployed.

"This particular flight was not a hazardous flight," Odgers said.

Williams said he didn't know if the dead co-pilot wore his helmet when the pod ejected.

A memorial service for co-pilot T.D. "Doug" Benefield, chief test pilot for Rockwell International's B-1 program, is scheduled for Saturday in Lancaster. An autopsy was being conducted Friday.

The pilot, Maj. Richard V. Reynolds, and flight engineer Otto Waniczek Jr., remained in fair condition at Antelope Valley Medical Center, Lancaster.

Odgers said Reynolds, 35, of Hoquiam, Wash., suffered a "very serious spinal compression," and Waniczek, 30, of Seattle, suffered a collapsed lung caused by a blow to the chest.

San Bernardino County Deputy Coroner Nelson Alexander said results of an autopsy Friday would not be made public until Tuesday.

"We're just now getting ready to start," he said. "We don't want to give out anything and then have somebody say something different. ...We want to go over what we've got."

He acknowledged that the holiday weekend would interfere with the process.

New vaccine will be administered to combat outbreak of hepatitis

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — A clinic set up to combat a local hepatitis epidemic will begin inoculating drug addicts soon, the first time a new vaccine has been used in an outbreak of the deadly disease, health officials said Friday.

The clinic will be able to begin administering the drug as early as mid-September because the Merck Sharp & Dohme pharmaceutical company has donated the vaccine, Heptavex B, Worcester health director Walter G. Irvine said. Operations will begin by Oct. 1 at the latest, he said.

Drug addicts and their sexual partners will be the clinic's main targets because the drug users' poor health puts them at greatest risk, Irvine said.

"It's never been tried before," Irvine said. "This is all new ground. We don't know what the response from that population will be."

The vaccine, which has been on the market for two years, will be used against a newly discovered virus that scientists believe is behind the epidemic of hepatitis B in this central Massachusetts city. Worcester has recorded the highest hepatitis mortality rate, with six people dead among 83 persons affected since last year, according to the national Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

Irvine said more cases of hepatitis B were reported this week but have not yet been counted.

Dr. Ludwig A. Lettau, a CDC epidemiologist investigating the outbreak, confirmed the clinic would be the first to use the vaccine in an "outbreak situation." He said it would also be the first time a hepatitis vaccination program has been aimed at "needle users."

About 70 percent of the Worcester cases to date have been drug users or their sexual contacts, Irvine said.

Graham will again preach in U.S.S.R.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham, saying he "sensed a deep spiritual hunger" in the officially atheist Soviet Union during his first visit in 1982, said Friday he had accepted invitations to return later this month.

"I agonized over this decision as much as any of my entire ministry, but after much prayer I feel God has opened a rather remarkable and historic door in the Soviet Union for me to proclaim the Gospel of Jesus Christ," Graham said in a prepared statement. His visit is scheduled for Sept. 9-21.

Graham is in Europe, and Don Bailey, a spokesman for the Minneapolis-based Billy Graham Evangelistic Association, released the statement in Charlotte, the preacher's birthplace.

Graham was criticized after his 1982 trip to the Soviet Union when he spoke at a conference on world peace and suggested that there is more religious freedom in the Soviet Union than Americans had been led to believe.

This time, Graham said, he will visit Moscow, Leningrad, Tallinn and Novosibirsk at the invitation of the All-Union Council of Evangelical Christians-Baptists of the Soviet Union and the Russian Orthodox Church.

Bailey said the 65-year-old evangelist's doctors have strongly urged him to cut back on his schedule because of fatigue and a mild attack of phlebitis. Also, some people have said tension between the American and Soviet governments might make this visit more difficult, Bailey said.

But Graham said that during his first visit he "sensed a deep spiritual hunger on the part of many people of all ages."

"This will be my primary purpose in going — to preach the Gospel of Jesus Christ."
