Only the south wall of Cross Roads School (top) was standing after a tornado dipped down on it Thursday night, June 3. The substantial brick building had been converted into a residence, but was unoccupied. Dr. J. M. Orr was the owner. Only a few feet from the rubble, two tractors were untouched, as seen at center. At bottom, the debris from the school roof and partitions was picked up and deposited in a compact area. The school is in the background. This was unlike some of the other farms, where remains of buildings were scattered over a half-mile radius.

Tornados, High Wind and Hail Damage Crops, Property in Area

Three times Thursday night, June 3, tornado funnels dipped in the Wellington area, and with hail, high wind and pounding rain cut a strip of destruction through the county's heartland.

Wheat fields, just ready to yield the best crop in recent years, were flattened and thousands of acres of young cotton was covered with silt.

But no one was injured and there was no loss of livestock reported.

Electric power went off about 8:30 p.m. and shortly after that, Johnny Cagle of the Fire Department, on cloud watch duty, sighted a tornado funnel that had passed immediately over Wellington and to the east. The Fire Department emergency car, with its loud and undulating siren, drove through Wellington to give the storm warning.

Another twister was sighted later, and shortly after 10 p.m. twin funnels were sighted north of town, bringing another warning to the city.

Patients at St. Joseph's Hospital were moved into the halls as a precautionary measure, and the National Guard unit sent its emergency unit to provide power until the hospital's generator could be put in use. There were no critically ill patients, Sister Adele, administrator, said.

Water poured out of fields and across Highway 83 for approximately three miles north of Wellington.

Most of the damaged buildings were barns and smaller buildings.

Law enforcement officers, Sheriff John Rainey, Deputy Troy Marsh and Police Chief Donald Nunneley, patrolled the area most of the night. Marsh removed 14 persons from cars stranded in high water on Highway 83 north, and others were taken out by motorists lucky enough to go through. Other cars were stranded by high water on Highway 203 near Cross Roads.

Residents of the area said there was more water on the highway than they could remember at any previous storm.

Most of the Flats in the northeast part of town was flooded and residents were forced out of storm cellars.

Rainfall at Wellington amounted to 1.78 inches Thursday night, but in other sections of the county as much as 7 and 8 inches was measured.

Most of the property damage was confined to the area around Wellington, but a strip on both sides of Salt Fork extending across the county from west to east suffered crop loss.

There has been no estimate of property loss or damage to the wheat crop.

The brick Cross Roads school building two miles north and two west of Wellington was destroyed, with only the south wall left standing. Only feet away, two tractors were untouched. This building was converted into a residence a few years ago.

G. B. Hopper, two miles east, was one of the few to receive major damage to his home. A north porch was ripped off, leaving a gaping hole in the gable through which water poured in the house. Hopper also lost a large barn and he said he had considerable damage to equipment.

Farther east on Highway 203, a large barn on Mrs. Bob Bowen's farm caved in, as did a machine shed when a tree fell on it.

A large hay barn on the Bob Glenn farm in the same area was blown down.

Four buildings were destroyed at the Panfork Baptist Encampment 10 miles northeast of Wellington.

Dan Henard reported a hay barn and other buildings destroyed on his ranch in the same vicinity. All those living in the area had fences, lots, cattle feeders and equipment to wash away.

Horace Small, west of Highway 83 in that area, said water poured into his cellar, although it was under a double garage and on high ground, until he and his wife were forced to leave. He also lost cattle feeders and fences, along with his wheat crop.

Heart Attack

Quinton Brewer, Young Business Leader, Dies

A heart attack suffered as he sat in a doctor's office here took the life of Quinton Brewer, young Wellington business leader and member of the City Council. His death came at 12:30 p.m. Thursday, June 3. The family home is 1602 Childress Street.

That morning he had worked with his cattle at his farm east of Wellington. Not feeling well when he returned, he went for medical help. He was 41 years old.

With his brother-in-law, Lucien Bearden, he was owner of B&B Electric, an electrical contracting and appliance business they established in the late 1940s and developed into a major firm of its type in the southeastern Panhandle.

He continued his farming and livestock operations and had other business interests and investments in Wellington.

Mr. Brewer was elected to the City Council in April 1959 and re-elected three times, the last being in April of this year.

In him, a progressive outlook was coupled with his abiding faith in the future of his native town, Wellington, and out of this came the constructive civic and area work so effective in recent years.

He was a member of the Chamber of Commerce and served on various committees, and he was one of those who helped to form the Builders Club. Again, he was a member of its committees.

Other organizations in which he was active included the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Rotary Club, Band Parents Club, and Little League Baseball.

He was a member of First Methodist Church.

Quinton Virgil Brewer was born here Oct. 8, 1923, the son of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Brewer. He was graduated from Wellington high school in 1940.

He was a veteran of World War II.

On May 11, 1947, he was married to Miss Yvonne Shields.

In tribute to his memory, one of the largest crowds in the town's history attended his funeral services which were conducted at 2 p.m. Sunday at First Methodist Church. An estimated 150 persons were unable to get inside the church. The Rev. Ellis Todd, pastor, officiated.

Portrait Unveiled

Area Lawyers, Friends Honor Judge Gribble at Presentation

A portrait in oils of the late Judge Luther Gribble was presented to Collingsworth County in a brief program of tribute to his memory. This was held Tuesday morning at 9:45 a.m. in the District courtroom where Judge Gribble presided as judge of the 100th district for 20 years.

The portrait was presented by the Collingsworth County Bar Association and the Wellington State Bank.

C. A. Williams of Childress, dean of the 100th district lawyers, spoke in tribute to the Wellington jurist. He reminded that on many occasions, at that very hour, 10 a.m., and in that courtroom, Judge Gribble had opened court.

His 20-year tenure on the bench was longer than any of his predecessors in the 100th district, the area lawyers and Collingsworth residents were told. Earlier, as a practicing lawyer, he was regarded as an advocate at the bar ever faithful to the interest of his clients, and it was in these years that his qualities as a trial judge emerged.

"Not all lawyers possess the qualities of a successful trial judge," Mr. Williams said. They must have a high degree of patience. They must have an understanding of the rights of the people that are at stake and they must possess a judicial temperament, he continued.

"Judge Gribble had the ability to hear a case and get to the cardinal issues, to say 'This is the law as it applies to the case, and this is my verdict,'" said Mr. Williams.

In 1946, Governor Coke Stevenson appointed Judge Gribble as presiding judge of the 9th Administrative Judicial District which is made up of more than 40 counties in the Panhandle and West Texas.

Present for the ceremony on Tuesday morning were the two judges who succeeded him, Judge Charles Reynolds of Childress, of the 100th district, and Judge Victor Lindsey of Lubbock of the 9th Administrative Judicial District.

R. F. Curry, almost a life-long friend of Judge Gribble, gave the invocation that opened the ceremony. Paul Spillman, vice president for Collingsworth County of the 100th District Bar Association, was master of ceremonies, and also unveiled the portrait. The benediction was given by the Rev. Ellis Todd.

Planting Season Here

Guar Geared to Area Type Farm Operation

The demand for guar is still there and growing. Herbert Partridge, representative of the guar division of General Mills said on a visit to Wellington last week.

The planting season is here for this combination cash-crop and soil builder, and will continue through June 30, although crops planted later have been grown successfully, it was pointed out.

Partridge represents one of the two buyers of guar beans represented in the county. The other is Stein Hall, Inc.

The moisture is generally better in all areas this season, especially here, he said, and there is growing interest in planting guar on diverted feed grain acres.

The foundation seed department of Texas A&M has released two new varieties to certified seed growers and these will be available for 1966 commercial plantings, Partridge said.

These are the Hall and Mills varieties. Hall is rated a higher producer even than Brooks, grown commercially for the first time in 1964, and now the highest producing of all varieties.

Mills is a different plant variety and is early maturing. For farmers planning to grow guar for the first time, Partridge pointed out that it is a warm weather crop with a growing season ranging from 125 to 140 days for maturity.

Although adequate moisture is needed, the Tessel, Groehler, and new Brooks varieties can halt growth or maturity when moisture is short for a period of time and again progress when moisture becomes available to the plant.

Guar is planted similar to grain sorghums with properly calibrated planting plates or planted with a standard grain drill, plugged for proper row spacing.

Guar is a legume and it is important to inoculate the seed at planting time with specific guar inoculant or Nitragin "Formula E" inoculant.

It is definitely a row crop and fields should be kept clean by cultivating.

Dry-land guar fields should be planted in standard 40-inch rows at a seeding rate of only 5 or 6 pounds per acre. Level out furrows and leave plant row on a slight ridge by cultivating.

For irrigated guar production deep subsoil moisture at planting time is a top recommendation. Heavy pre-irrigation assures maximum production and fewer subsequent irrigations. Row spacings from 16 to 21 inches are generally recommended and at a rate of 10 to 12 pounds per acre. Irrigated guar does well on bed type plantings using 12 inch row-spacing on the bed and allowing 28 inch row spacing across the furrow, also at 10 to 12 pounds per acre.

Fertilizing is best determined on the basis of soil sample analysis. However, phosphate applications carry a general recommendation for legume crops. On worn out fields a balanced fertilizer is recommended.

The crop combines well with any standard combine, and the mature plant stands well in the field without shattering. All guar grown here has been on dry land fields, and production of the Brooks variety was above 1100 pounds per acre last season. The standard varieties yielded from 500 to 700 pounds.

Additional information is available from the seed buyers here, Singley Mill, representing General Mills, or Warrick Feed Store, representative of Stein Hall Co.

This is the Month to Put Guar in Our Cropping Program

In our concern for getting a cotton crop up and growing, we must not lose sight of the effort being made to expand that summer legume cash crop, guar, in this area.

The planting time is here, but because of the nature of guar, seeding can continue through the month, and many crops planted later have matured successfully.

It has been said before, but it will bear repeating that besides its value as a cash crop, its soil building qualities make it important in our future.

Unlike some of the other major crops, the supply is not going to exceed the demand in the foreseeable future, and the price is stable. Because of the limited areas of the world in which it will grow, there is a growing export demand for guar and it is not likely to grow smaller either.

Word was received here only last week that two new varieties will be available for 1966 planting, Hall and Mills. Both are regarded as higher producers than anything yet on the market and one, Mills, is earlier maturing.

But even with the varieties now generally available, Guar is a good crop for any Collingsworth farmer.

CROSSROADS REPORT

Dear Editor:

News is that Vice President Humphrey is heading up a task force to prod businessmen into putting lots of 16- to 21-year-olds on their payrolls during this summer's loafing break.

My semi-free enterprise neighbor says he has done considerable youth-hiring for years without any government arm-twisting, but admits he has been guilty of practicing some discrimination.

Says he reckons he does need guidance, or he is apt to go on favoring the neat kids who want to work, and discriminating against insolent imitation beatles.

My clear-conscience neighbor notes that the Internal Revenue men pay nice cash rewards to people who squeal on any friends or loved ones they see holding out on Uncle Samuel.

Of course, this is part of the extremely efficient system that is used to guard the federalized dollar on its trip through our hands to the Treasury.

But he thinks that after it gets to Washington, Uncle's money is still in considerable danger, so there had ought to be rewards paid also to dutiful citizens who will tattle good and loud when they see it being wasted.

A young college riot leader says he's against the Profit System, which lets one man benefit from another man's work.

My politician-keeper neighbor reckons this boy wants to keep all that he labors to get and, being opposed to workers getting exploited, he naturally wouldn't dream of taking a nickel that somebody else has worked for.

Neighbor says it would be

July 1 Deadline to Apply for New Wheat

July 1 is the deadline for "new wheat farm" applications.

Farmers who wish to be considered for a "new wheat farm" allotment for 1966 on a farm which does not have a 1965 wheat allotment should get in touch with the ASCS county office during the next few weeks. W. C. Harwell, chairman of the agricultural stabilization and conservation county committee, said today. Such farmers have until July 1 to file applications for such an allotment.

Producers eligible to file such applications are those with a farm for which no wheat allotment has been established, who have no interest in the wheat allotment on any other farm, and where the farmer expects to receive more than 50 percent of his income from the farm. The chairman emphasized that formal application for a "new farm" wheat allotment is made by filing a written application on a form provided for that purpose—at the ASCS county office prior to the July 1 deadline.

Which noble effort to make more people self-sustaining has been ridiculed by some non-dishwashers, on the grounds that learning to wash dishes hadn't ought to take 24 weeks.

But my no-chump neighbor says that depends on how much built-in resistance a trainee has. Says his wife hasn't been able to teach him the fine art of dishwashing in 24 years. D. E. SCOTT.

Three County Youths Attend Boys State

AUSTIN.—The American Legion Boys State commenced today as 750 high school boys from throughout the state began registration, Lewis W. Emerich, state commander of the American Legion, has announced.

Among those registering from Collingsworth County were Danny White of Wellington, Ken Baxter of Dozier and Don Morris of Quail, who were sponsored by Frank King American Legion Post, and civic clubs.

Upon arrival at The University of Texas campus, each citizen was assigned to one of two political parties — Longhorn or Pioneer. Each citizen then functions as a member of his party; he attends its conventions, caucuses and votes in its primary.

In Boys State, the American Legion provides the type of program where the young citizen has the opportunity to learn for himself that his government is just what he makes it. The boy "learns to do by doing."

Highlight of Boys State will be a trip to the Capitol on Friday morning, where each elect Boys State official will be given an opportunity to serve in his respective office for a day, followed by the Governor's Ball Friday evening.

Outstanding speakers scheduled to appear are Department Commander Lewis W. Emerich of Houston; Bill Ellington, assistant football coach at The University of Texas; G. Ward Moody, past department adjutant of Austin; American Legion Auxiliary President Mrs. Joe L. Matthews of Fort Worth; Zolzie Steakley, associate justice of the Supreme Court of Texas; H. Roe Bartle of Kansas City, Mo.; Homer Garrison Jr., director of the Department of Public Safety; Robert W. Calvert, chief justice of the Supreme Court of Texas; Tom Creighton, president pro tempore of the Texas Senate; and Waggoner Carr, attorney general of Texas.

Boys State enrollment this year brings the total to 11,156 junior high school boys who have attended since 1940, when Boys State was first inaugurated in Texas.

As Rural Electric power the looms at Anadarko

Producing jobs and goods for a growing America is one of the problems high on our nation's agenda.

Helping develop new industries that will produce jobs and goods is one of the primary goals of the nation's consumer-owned rural electric systems.

Less than two years ago the members of the Caddo Electric Cooperative in Binger, Oklahoma, started work with the Area Redevelopment Administration and local leaders to develop industry that would give work to unemployed Indians, some of whom had never had jobs lasting longer than three months. The first result was a carpet mill in Anadarko, Oklahoma, that today has a $650,000 annual payroll, employs 153 people, is the area's third largest employer and is still expanding.

The success of this venture led to the establishment, with the help of the Harmon County Electric Association, a rural electric, of a gypsum plant in the nearby town of Duke, Oklahoma. Soon the gypsum company will employ 200 people with an annual payroll of more than $1,200,000.

New industries springing up all over the country, with the help of local rural electric, mean purchasing power and business in the billions spread across the country. Wholesalers, merchants, transportation and warehouse companies, farmers and professional people—all share in the wealth created by people at work.

Yes, when carpets roll from the looms in Anadarko, everybody benefits.

SALT FORK SOIL CONSERVATION DISTRICT NEWS

IRRIGATION WATER MANAGEMENT

Irrigation farmers of the Salt Fork Soil Conservation District will be working toward the proper management of their irrigation water for the next few months. Improved water application can be obtained by installing underground irrigation pipe, sprinkler irrigation systems, land-leveling, or other practices.

The utmost in proper irrigation water management is efficiently applying irrigation water in accordance with the crop and the characteristics of the soil and topography under a planned farm irrigation system where all necessary control structures have been installed and all operation improvements have been made.

The purpose is to apply irrigation water in amounts and at the time it is needed to secure efficient use of available water without waste or significant erosion, uniform stands of crops, uniform growth of crops, and optimum crop production under existing conditions or in other words to get the greatest return from each dollar spent on irrigation and at the same time conserve soil and water.

For further information or technical assistance, contact your local Soil Conservation Service assisting the Salt Fork Soil Conservation District.

Many New Food Products Revealed

Many new food and non-food products on the market present a challenging if somewhat confusing choice, for today's consumers. A recent nationwide analysis of chain, voluntary and cooperative supermarkets disclosed that since 1959, some 3,200 new items were offered in retail stores.

During the same period 2,100 other items were discontinued. Thus the overall increase was at the rate of approximately 220 items each year, Mrs. Gwen Clyatt, A&M Cooperative Extension Service consumer information specialist, says.

NEWS LETTER from Congressman WALTER ROGERS

As I noted in this newsletter recently, the spectre of starvation haunts much of the world while here in the United States we are so abundantly blessed as to face problems of an opposite kind — problems created by food surpluses.

The less developed parts of the world, now containing 2.2 billion of the world's 3.1 billion people, are having an extremely difficult time keeping food production at a rate in pace with their growing populations.

Many countries are losing in the effort and no solution is in sight. An increasingly larger part of their population increase is being sustained by commodities shipped from the developed areas of the world, particularly the United States and Canada. In the years to come, it is not likely that this trend will be reversed. We may anticipate continuing increases in U.S. agricultural exports and, I am convinced, the day will yet come when our own increased requirements and those of greatly expanded foreign markets will make maximum use of our American farmers' productive capacity.

Part of the challenge to agriculture is to insure that we possess a strong and powerful agricultural economy on into the future. That means we must preserve strength throughout rural America, strength from the farmsteads on through the clusters of homes we in the Panhandle call "communities", through the towns and regional city centers.

Agriculture ties the web of America beyond the great industrial cities; when agriculture is damaged, all else in rural America is hurt. It is unfortunately true that not all Americans are aware of the problems faced in agriculture, of increasing pressures on the farmers from the cost-price squeeze; shifting population away from the farms and smaller cities and towns, leaving economic distress on main street; continued drought in some sections of the Plains; the decline of rural area representation in Congress and in State legislatures because patterns are being realigned through "reapportionment" to reflect the new urban population concentrations.

Reapportionment is an issue again being fought in Congress, as those of us who see the growing threat to rural strength exert our best efforts in support of a Constitutional amendment to permit at least one house of two-house State legislatures to be organized on factors other than population.

The full effects of Congressional district reapportionment have not been felt in the House of Representatives. The 90th Congress, to be sworn in January, 1967, will present — regardless of party alignment — a massive majority of urban-oriented House members.

Now, with reapportionment planned but not yet in effect in many States (as in Texas), the strategy favoring enactment of farm legislation requires that all farm proposals be combined in one legislative package, tied up in an "omnibus" farm bill drafted with the widest possible appeal to as many groups, on and off the farm, as possible.

This package approach being taken this year to farm legislation is the reason that no farm bill has as yet been reported by the House Agriculture Committee. The bill won't be ready for debate by the full House of Representatives until the committee has finished shaping the cotton program section of the bill.

Then the House will debate it, and the city members, who now outnumber their rural counterparts in a ratio of about seven to three, will provide sufficient support of the bill to pass. The "omnibus" approach is the 1965 strategy. What will be required in 1967 with even heavier city representation is anybody's guess, but this much is certain: All of us interested in the future of rural America must repeat and repeat again, in any quarter where we can find an audience, that American agriculture and the rural economy it sustains must not be damaged further.

As I have told farm groups coming to Washington recently in the interests of agricultural legislation, it is absolutely essential that all elements interested in a strong agriculture speak to Congress and to the rest of the country with a united voice.

There are, as there have always been, interests ready to ravage rural America to their own selfish ends. Only unit of approach can assure against their success.

Price Outlook Remains Good

Texas pork producers can look forward to good hog prices for the remaining months of 1965, says Extension Economist John G. McHaney.

Hog numbers in the U.S. were down 9 percent on Jan. 1, 1965, from a year ago. In Texas, they were down 24 percent, he said.

The more favorable prices and improved outlook for the months ahead could encourage an expansion in farrowings, but if this happens, he added, prices and slaughter supplies probably would not be affected until late this year or early in 1966.

Deck's DIDACTICS

—By Deskins Wells

Wind and water and hail provided the weather menu for the past few days. Some farmers suffered intensive damage to their wheat crop; but fortunately a considerable portion of the better wheat was located in parts of the area that was not affected by the hail. Worst damage was on row crop land where erosion and flooding was extensive. There are more surface lakes between Wellington and Quail than anyone can remember. Many of these will go down in a short time, but it is estimated that there will be no planting done in parts of some of the fields this summer.

Louise and I had a front row seat at a good part of the Thursday night performance. We were in Perryton and decided to drive home about 6:30 in the evening. The storm warnings were out; but the clouds did not look too angry at the time we left. There was a heavy bank to the northwest and another to the southeast; but it was clear in between and we thought we might slide right between the two massive formations. That is exactly what we did until we were about 5 miles south of Canadian where the cloud from the southeast caught us. The rain and wind came from the east first, then from the west and later the north and it made this shift three times between Canadian and Wellington.

We encountered our first water across the highway in the Twitty valley a few miles north of Shamrock. We hit flood water again in more depth and for longer distances in the flat country north of Lutie; but the worst water was the three mile strip immediately north of town and on Highway 83 adjoining the city limits. We arrived at our house just before people started emerging from their cellars.

Perhaps you may wonder why we did not stop at some of the towns between Canadian and Wellington. We did. We stopped at Wheeler, Twitty and Shamrock; but each time we halted the rain ceased also and after a few minutes we would start out again only to be overtaken by the storm a short distance out of town. It even quit raining as we turned at 9th street to drive into the city limits of Wellington.

Grocers are moaning over the prices they are having to charge for fresh fruits and vegetables. They blame the increase in prices on the government decision to end the braco program. Millions of dollars worth of food is rotting in the fields. One Californian secured some old work clothes and worked in the fields for a week. He said that the native American workers who were employed to pick fruit and vegetables simply had no intention of turning in an honest days work.

Ted O'Neil, our annual correspondent from the Steiner Valley Ranch at Whitney seems to be well satisfied with the present increase in cattle prices. He writes:

This has really been a wet winter and spring for Hill county, and the middle and lower Brazos River bottoms. I can't remember a year of the past 12 when we had more winter grazing from oats and barley. The native grass pastures were very productive too since this was an extra mild winter for this area. We had a fairly dry March and April, but then the bottom fell out. We had about 15 inches of rain in a two week period, and some of it fell pretty fast. The Brazos River has really been on a rampage, and it jumped the elevation of Lake Whitney 10 feet in about 5 days. Believe me it takes lots of water to do that. The rains in this area have really made the grass come, and unlike the past two years there is no shortage of tank water. Many people in this area depend on earthen tanks for livestock water, and last year many had to sell out or haul water. There will be no problem like that this year. Farmers and people with grain to harvest are sure looking for some open weather, but so far no luck.

The price and demand for cattle seems to be improving every day. I sold two truck loads of cattle last week to a feeder in Iowa. He was down in this country trying to get 5,000 head together, and was having a tough time finding them. He was also contracting a good many calves for fall delivery. This time last year you never saw anyone like that. I don't get back to Wellington very often, but guess it will always be home to me.

We will vote on eleven Constitutional amendments this year and fourteen more in 1966. Those to be voted on this year are:

First election, September 7 on the proposal to increase size of the state senate from 31 to 39 members.

Ten amendments to be voted on November 2 would:

- Extend to four years the terms of governor and other statewide elected officials now limited to two-year terms;

- Increase state representatives' terms from two to four years;

- Permit full state participation in federal medicare programs;

- Authorize the Legislature to set salaries of the lieutenant governor and speaker;

- Set up an $85,000,000 student loan fund;

- Authorize $200,000,000 more in veterans land bonds;

- Require district and appellate court judges to retire at 75 and set up a system for removal for misconduct;

- Expand the investment authority of the public school retirement system;

- Increase the state property tax from 42 to 47 cents and allocate the extra 5 cents to college buildings;

- Exempt from the property tax locally a hospital which spends as much as $1,500,000 a year on care of indigents.

Fair Store Observes 25th Birthday Here

The Fair Store, women's ready-to-wear and specialty shop, is observing its twenty-fifth anniversary in Wellington, under the ownership of George Shadid and his two sisters, Miss Rose Shadid and Miss Marie Shadid.

"We are showing our appreciation to the people of the Wellington area with our twenty-fifth anniversary sale," said the owners.

"It has been a pleasure to make our home here over this quarter century, just as it has been a pleasure to serve the fine people of the area."

The Shadids came here from Mangum, Okla., and they are members of a family long active in mercantile business and the professions in western Oklahoma.

George Shadid, John Shadid, and Miss Rose Shadid came first and opened The Fair, at first a general dry goods store. John Shadid served in World War II, and upon returning went into business for himself in Memphis.

Marie Shadid came here about 1947, after having owned a shop in Childress and working in Oklahoma City and Lawton.

Gradually the Fair owners began to stress women's ready-to-wear and other departments were closed out. The transition was completed about 10 years ago.

Parents of this trio were the late Mr. and Mrs. N. Shadid, who were born in Lebanon. They lived first in Illinois, then came to Oklahoma, where Mr. Shadid filed on land near Brinkman. In the early 1920s he and his brother, the late E. A. Shadid opened a dry goods store in Mangum and the family moved there. Mr. and Mrs. N. Shadid also made Wellington their home during the latter years of their lives.

While The Fair is operated almost altogether by the Shadid family, two Wellington women work when they are needed, Mrs. Joe Terry and Mrs. Pat Kimbro.

CB Club Members Do Emergency Storm Work

Collingsworth's Citizen Band Radio Club members went on full scale emergency duty with the approach of tornado clouds Thursday evening, June 3, and a minute by minute report on conditions was given from over much of the affected area.

Before the evening ended, members had also rescued one man stranded in a trailer and found hotel rooms for travelers.

Dee Coleman, president of the club, operated the base unit much of the evening to receive incoming reports from CB members. He passed the information to Buster Hughes, operating at the Fire Station, who co-ordinated CB and police band reports.

When electric power went off Coleman and member Pat Glenn began a patrol along US 83 in town and found a motorist who had become ill and was parked at Lucky Corner. A hotel room downtown was located for him.

All motel rooms along the highway had filled up early.

Several other motorists were directed to rooms.
